And let's be honest here, Men have no hope in hell of getting alimony off their wife even if they did live up a biological standard that's easier for her to attain in this. Men should not consent to being economically marginalized. Alimony then, is a marriage tax for men only; a subsidy for women only, if you will. In an age of "partnerships" it does not deserve to exist. Otherwise, in the eyes of the law, Men will always be working to economically marginalize themselves by being responsible, in short: Men should not be punished for being responsible.

Of course, some of will you argue that women have a need for alimony, so I'll demolish that argument in several steps:

Firstly, women lost the right to alimony the instant they wanted equality,

Secondly, why do you want to encourage dependency? Alimony undermines the willpower to become self-sufficient and self-reliant, and such a thing is hardly good for a grown adult.

Thirdly, it gives her incentive to break up a marriage; it's unacceptable for any state to provide economic incentives for divorce, and economically marginalize Men in the process.

Moving onto more detailed arguments, a common claim is that women forfeit forgoing a career in favour of staying at home, and raising a family, entitles them to alimony. Were we to flip the coin over to see the other side, I could say that men compromise their parenting relationship by working full time and should be paid by their ex-wife to make up for it, to which I would probably be shouted down with a herd like chorus of "you made a choice, you can't have it both ways" which is my point exactly.

Fred Hayward, in his article "A patriarchy ruled by women?" writes, "A wife's control over her husband's body is so extreme that we invented "alimony." (Alimony is the requirement that a man's body continue to serve the needs of the woman even after their marital contract has officially ended and she no longer has an expectation, let alone a requirement, to lift a finger for him for the rest of her life.)"

Moving on to the ERA (equal rights amendment) that was narrowly defeated, one of the more interesting comments made by main-steam women's advocates is that alimony would have been gotten rid of since it's gender discrimination against men, even women's advocates admit alimony is inherently sexist, how much more justification do you need to get rid of it? After all, if women were forced to pay men after divorce for doing nothing do you seriously think this would still be legal in this day and age? The double standard here is unbelievable. Don't believe me? To quote:

"We can refuse to support an Equal Rights Amendment which would have (1) thrown away protective labour legislation, (2) made it more difficult for a woman to get "alimony" (3) made women eligible for the draft."

Robin Morgan, Going Too Far 1970

In Conclusion:

I remember watching Ally Mcbeal and hearing one woman say she was "riding the alimony pony" with a grin on her face. There you have it, not only is she mocking him for the forced labour she would never do, she's also mocking him for being helpless. Now tell me how many laws force women to support men (here's a hint: none) and now tell me do you seriously want men to always be at a slave like disadvantage? To finish, I would like to say, that if the roles were reversed do you think the nearest woman would stand for it? I doubt it, so why should the nearest man?

(Second Last Note: John Gotti, an infamous crimelord, was taken to court by his wife for not supporting her (In terms of money I imagine) it's against the law to not support your wife, but there are no laws forcing the nearest wife to support their husband....)

(Final Note: Alimony based on the "common law" right of a wife to be supported by her husband, but there is no equal law for a husband to be supported by his wife. What a surprise....)

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/18/0227212.shtml

Men Are Violent; Men are Careless

Scott · 21 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal sent in two male-bashing articles, the first one a very serious attack on masculinity by equating it with violence. Judy Mann claims that our current idea of manhood is "toxic to men and lethal to women," and equates the Taliban with "ultra-masculinists." Please take a moment to respond: letters@washpost.com. The second article, this one from the UK Telegraph, is a bit less threatening, but still bashes men by perpetuating the stereotype that men are careless gift shoppers, and by extension more selfish or morally flawed than women.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/20/1430244.shtml

Detainees In Recent Immigration Sweeps Are Male

Scott · 21 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Tony writes "This article raises some questions about the recent detainees. "Post-9/11, federal law enforcement is on its highest level of alert," said Dan Nelson, a Justice Department spokesman, "We are extremely vigilant in our enforcement of U.S. law." The strange part is that while they are vigilant the ONLY people being rounded up are men. While the racial profiling aspect of the roundups has been discussed it is strange no one has mentioned the obvious gender bias in this crack down." While most terrorists in the past have been men, it's not going to be long before a woman commits an attack making use of this bias.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/20/2121249.shtml

Bush Administration Pledges Tax Dollars For Afghan Women, Children

Nightmist · 21 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

In an excellent example of what happens when only one side of an issue gets all the media attention, the Bush administration has pledged U.S. tax dollars for the relief of Afghan women and children who suffered under the Taliban. Never mind, apparently, the young boys who were conscripted and the men who were murdered.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/20/1618223.shtml

Men Win Discrimination Settlement at Ford

Scott · 21 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

DaveW and Neil Steyskal both sent in articles about the recent settlement announcement in a Ford discrimination suit against white males. Dave's link is here and Neil's link is here. To sum it up from Dave's article, " The lawsuits challenged the automaker's management evaluation system, which the plaintiffs, current and former employees, alleged was unfairly biased against older, white male employees." The class action suit was settled for $10.5 million.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/21/1547217.shtml

Seasonal Affective Disorder More Pronounced in Men

Scott · 21 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Tony writes "The article at this page discusses a research article about weather related depression, usually referred to as the winter-blues, that found men have greater disparity than women. Maybe this is ONE of the reasons that men are more likely to commit suicide during the winter season."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/21/1550216.shtml

Dealing With a Controlling Spouse

Nightmist · 22 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Laughter is the best medicine, right? Here, AskMen.com's "Doc Love" gives a man married to a controlling woman advice on keeping his sense of humor, and eliminating the problem at the same time. One lesson I take from this is that, when we can, we should try to deal with our problems in good humor. Catch more flies with honey?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/20/219214.shtml

Chicago Mother Guilty of Murdering 3 Children

Scott · 22 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

AFG writes "The Chicago Sun-Times ran a story about a mother who has been found guilty of murdering her 3 children. The jury in the case decided to reject her pleas of insanity, and by doing so, has allowed for her to possibly face the death penalty." The woman killed her children to "get back" at her husband, who was having an affair. Thanks also to DaveW and an Anon User for submitting this story.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/22/0225223.shtml

Men "Responsible" for Most Genetic Mutations

Scott · 22 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Tony sent in this article from Wired Magazine and writes "While the article is scientific and logical I just find the opening paragraph highly insulting: "It figures. Men are responsible for the majority of human genetic mutations, according to a landmark publication in the scientific journal Nature." Amazing how easy it is to open an article with male bashing." The title of the article is also, "Human Mutations: Blame Men." Can't we even get away from gender politics when writing science articles?Source: Wired Magazine

Title: Human Mutations: Blame Men

Author: Kristen Philipkoski

Date: February 12, 2001

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/22/0232254.shtml

Dad's Love is Equally Important as Mom's

Scott · 22 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Rand T. submitted this article which announces a recent psychological study which found that a father's love and affection is just as important as a mother's love. This is something that pro-father advocates have known from the start, and you'd like to think that it is common knowledge. But considering the way dads are treated in the family courts and in many families, it's good to have some research to back it up.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/22/0238212.shtml

MANN Feature: Men's "Silent Health Crisis" Cries Out for Men's Health Act

Scott · 22 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks, the only regularly published male columnist in the US who writes about gender issues from a perspective unapologetically sympathetic to men, wrote an excellent article about men's health and the need for an Office of Men's Health. We're running this as our newest feature article, but it was also printed in the Los Angeles Daily Journal and San Francisco Daily Journal. In it, Glenn points out the most glaring gender health funding disparities, the need for more advocacy to encourage men to pay more attention to their health needs, and that an Office of Men's Health need not "compete" with the Office of Women's Health, but the two can work together to increase the number of men and women living healthy lives. Check out the Read More section for his article.

Men's "Silent Health Crisis" Cries Out for Men's Health Act

By Glenn J. Sacks, Glennjsacks@cs.com

The formation of the federal Office on Women's Health (OWH) a decade ago has brought immeasurable benefit to American women through its numerous outreach and awareness campaigns. Ten years later, health advocates are asking for a similar office for men.

The need for an Office of Men's Health is acute, and the evidence that men's health is being ignored can't be ignored. According to the Centers for Disease Control, adjusting for age, men lead in all of the 10 most common causes of death in the United States, and women live on average six years longer than men.

Indicative of what activists call men's "silent health crisis" is the way research and outreach on prostate cancer, which is as likely to kill the average American man as breast cancer is to kill the average woman, has been underfunded. Prostate cancer is the most frequently diagnosed cancer in men, accounting for 36% of all cancer cases. An estimated 180,000 men will be newly diagnosed this year, and 37,000 will die.

However, the federal government spends four times as much on breast cancer research as prostate cancer research, and the money raised by private charities for breast cancer is estimated to outnumber that for prostate cancer 20 to 1. Commendably, women's health advocates led the campaign for the breast cancer postage stamp, which has raised over $25 million for breast cancer research since 1998. Unfortunately, a bill proposing a similar stamp for prostate cancer research, introduced in Congress in 1999, was unsuccessful.

Jean Bonhomme, an Atlanta physician and founder of the National Black Men's Health Network, says men's ignorance about prostate cancer is a major problem and "many men are dying unnecessarily from completely preventable and treatable causes."

In a 1995 survey, 90% of the men questioned didn't even know where the prostate is located. In another survey, offered a choice of answers, only 37% of men knew that the correct function of the prostate gland is to maintain healthy sperm. Two out of every five men over 50--who should be getting a prostate exam every single year--have never been screened for prostate cancer.

Men's inattention to their own health needs goes far beyond prostate cancer. According to San Francisco area physician Jim Eichel:

"Surveys show that men are 30 percent less likely than women to visit a doctor [not counting women's prenatal visits], only half as likely to have a regular physician, and significantly less likely to have check-ups and obtain preventive screening tests for serious diseases. It is difficult for me as a primary care practitioner to intervene--if a man won't come to see me, there's no way I can help him."

Last Valentine's Day, the Men's Health Act was introduced in Congress by Representatives Randy "Duke" Cunningham (R-CA), himself a prostate cancer survivor, and Jim McDermott (D-WA). Since then the bill, which mandates that the Secretary of Health and Human Services establish an Office of Men's Health to "coordinate and promote the status of men's health in the United States," has drawn considerable support across party and gender lines. The bill currently has 82 sponsors, including California representatives Howard "Buck" McKeon, a conservative, and Barbara Lee, a liberal. The bill currently resides with the Subcommittee on Health of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, and is one of many which has been temporarily pushed aside in the aftermath of the September 11 terrorist attack.

Part of the reason a Men's Office of Health has been so long in coming is the common but nonetheless false perception that the government and the scientific community have paid more attention to men's health than to women's. In 1990 Senator Barbara Mikulski (D-MD) made national headlines by citing the fact that women-specific health research comprised only 14% of the budget of the National Institute of Health (NIH). She called it "blatant discrimination" and led the successful campaign for the creation of the OWH. What Mikulski and many in the media who publicized Mikulski's claims didn't understand was that only 6.5% of the NIH's budget went to male-specific research--the vast majority of the NIH's research was gender neutral.

Today the disparity between men's and women's NIH research has grown from 2 to 1 in favor of women to 2.5 to 1. The ratio of female to male enrollments in studies, and in gender specific studies, which slightly favored women before the creation of the Office of Women's Health, by the late 1990s had grown to favor women three to two and three to one respectively. At the time the Office of Women's Health was formed and even more so today, more money was spent on women's medical research and issues than on men's at every level of government.

Megan Smith, the Director of Project Development for the Men's Health Network in Washington, DC, stresses that the purpose of the proposed Office of Men's Health is not to compete with the Women's Office, but to work with it.

"Many in the scientific community are moving away from the boilerplate, gender-neutral approach to research," she says. "The trend now is toward a gendered approach, which they believe will benefit both men and women. The Men' Health Act can make important contributions, which is why it has received significant support from many women in the health field. The Office of Men's Health should have been formed 10 years ago. It needs to be formed now, for everyone's benefit."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/22/1639253.shtml

More Letter Writer Successes

Scott · 23 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal sent in a couple of links to recent responses to anti-male articles in the news. The Dallas Morning News printed two letters from folks from England you might recognize - Raymond Cuttill and Alan Carr, responding to the Peacemaker Role Seems More Natural for Women article. There was also a letter printed in the Washington Post protesting Judy Mann's anti-male article claiming that masculinity is a "culture of violence." Bravo, guys!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/22/1713242.shtml

Men Being Pushed Out of Australian Workplace

Nightmist · 23 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

This article in The Age focuses on a disturbing Australian trend in which men are being pushed out of the workplace in favor of women. As more and more factory jobs disappear, men are having a difficult time competing with women for jobs in which prejudiced employers feel that women are better-suited (jobs with "people skills," in other words). The author, in the end, justifies the failure of many unemployed men to find work as a fitting comeuppance for Australia's "wage gap." She doesn't see the fallacy in her own logic, however, as even she points out that women are working more part-time jobs than are men.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/22/177249.shtml

New Book Exposes American Media Bias

Scott · 23 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Ragtime sent in this UK Telegraph article a while ago, which I'm just getting around to posting now. It's about the new book Bias: A CBS Insider Exposes How the Media Distort the News, which claims that all of the major American media outlets have a strongly liberal bias and intentionally make conservatives or liberal cause opponents look bad. This certainly resonates with my observations of the media, but the fact that Goldberg is an "insider" and quotes people directly discussing this bias makes the material all the more interesting. Source: The Telegraph [UK newspaper]

Title: America's TV liberals 'twist stories to fit their own agenda'

Author: Unknown

Date: December 7, 2001

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/23/0511258.shtml

MANN/iFeminists Chat: Reproductive Technology

Scott · 23 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Don't forget, tonight there will be an on-line chat at the iFeminists.com chat room where guest Gordon Pusch, a computational biologist, will discuss genetics and reproductive technology. The discussion will also inevitably focus on how this technology will affect men's and women's reproductive rights. The chat starts at 9:30 PM EST on 12/23. See you there!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/23/1427254.shtml

The Disturbing Truth About Child Support Collections

Scott · 23 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Mike Geanoulis from the NCFC-NH group wrote an excellent editorial which was printed in Foster's Daily Democrat. Mike's article exposes the bureaucratic inefficiency of the child support collection system, and that despite news reports claiming that the agency is collecting more and more money, the percentage collected per case is actually staying the same, or getting worse. This combined with the fact that child support collection is inextricably linked with a father's access to his children, suggests that the system is doing nothing to help children and families in its current state, and is in need of reform.
Source: Foster's Daily Democrat [newspaper]

Title: Child support collections: Another side of the story

Author: Michael Geanoulis

Date: December 21, 2001

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/23/0455204.shtml

Ames Vending Machines Sell Boy-Bashing Stickers

Scott · 24 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Cheddah wrote in to inform everyone that at Ames department stores, (a popular retail chain in the Northeast) the vending machines found in the store or the entryway have recently included stickers that bash boys. See the Read More section below for Cheddah's description of this (including a photo) and where to write in protest. It's bad enough that children see men mocked on TV continually, but to market stickers like this to their peers? It's disturbing to think that these kids are being "trained" early on to accept male bashing as a fact of life.

Cheddah writes:

I recently went into an Ames department store with my niece. Inside the entrance of this major chain (located throughout the Northeast) is a vending machine intended to attract children. Inside of this machine they sell stickers. Most of the stickers are child friendly, except (approximately 20% of the display) is devoted to anti-boy stickers.

The stickers literally read as follows:

- Boys are Aliens
- Boys are brainless
- Boys lie
- Not interested (in boys)
- Boys cheat
- I make boys cry
- Boys are weird

Here is a photo:

[image]

There were no stickers stating the same sentiments toward girls. This is highly sexist and sends the wrong message to young children, and attempts to instill misandric ideologies at a young age.

The display used to have "girl-power" stickers, and now these have been replaced with "boy-bashing" stickers (I knew this coming?) I also do not think that this change occurred by chance, as I feel someone internal to Ames is part of a larger agenda.

To add insult to injury, these ?boy bashing? stickers were placed next to the only American flag stickers available at the store. As we all understand, patriotic decals have become popular since the Sept 11th terrorist attacks.

It is very strange that the same people (liberals and feminists) that rant and rave over anything that remotely implies anything sexist, do not even think twice about blatant displays of sexism that I?m sure that they would justify as benign ?name calling? because it has the correct political alignment.

Everyday that these stickers remain visible to children, is a loss for gender equity.

There is a cultural war being waged on America?s male youth, let?s do our part in stopping the misandry.

Here is contact information concerning Ames sexist anti-boy mechandising. Please contact Ames and express your disapproval.

Ames Department Stores, Inc.

2418 Main Street

Rocky Hill, CT 06067

Phone: (860) 257-5078

Fax: (860) 257-2168

E-mail:

amesinetfeedback@ameshome.com

InvestorRelations@ameshome.com

Corporate Governance:

Joseph R. Ettore

Chairman and Chief Executive Officer

Denis T. Lemire

President and Chief Operating Officer

Rolando de Aguiar

Senior Executive Vice President, Chief Financial and Administrative Officer

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/23/2017253.shtml

Men's Groups Challenge DV Reference Book

Scott · 24 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Ragtime also sent in this article earlier this month about how men's groups in the Toronto area are challenging a "standard reference book" used by domestic violence advocates which is full of the typical feminist myths regarding DV. The challenge has caused quite a stir, and it will be interesting to see what it results in. Source: The Ottawa Citizen [Canadian newspaper]

Title: Men challenge 'bible' of violence against women

Author: Dave Brown

Date: December 4, 2001

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/23/0519214.shtml

Terminally Ill Boy Asks for Sex as Dying Request

Scott · 24 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

donaldcameron1 writes "In an article in Canadian newspaper The National Post we are informed of the honored last request of a dying young man for sex with a woman. I'm ambivalent about this and wonder if I (one) would respond differently if this was a female adolescent making the request. Do we as a group have an elucidated opinion?" This is an interesting and unusual dilemma, what do you think?Source: The National Post [Canadian newspaper]

Title: Australians debate ethics of dying boy's wish for sex

Author: Benjamin Errett

Date: December 22, 2001

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/24/1716226.shtml

Men and Heroism

Scott · 24 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Shawn Larsen writes "The Carnegie Hero Fund Commission presented awards to 24 individuals today for recent acts of heroism. 23 of the 24 recipients are boys and men. More information can be found here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/24/1820219.shtml

Feedback Concerning Ames Stores' Misandry

Scott · 24 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

James Soucy writes "The following is a letter I sent by both snail and e-mail in reply to Cheddah's submission concerning the boy-bashing products sold at Ames department stores. I strongly urge all those who partake of this website and others like it to do likewise whenever such an injustice occurs for the following reason: IT WORKS. There really is strength in numbers, guys. So SPEAK UP and be heard! It took me a whole of two minutes to compose and send this response, and I'm only getting faster with each one. You can too. Happy Holidays to all!" Click Read More to view James' letter, and feel free to post your own in the comments section of this story and the previous Ames one.

Joseph R. Ettore

Chairman and Chief Executive Officer

Ames Department Stores, Inc.

2418 Main Street

Rocky Hill, CT 06067

Dear Mr. Ettore:

It was on the Mensactivism.org website that I was informed that Ames Department stores are selling from vending machines stickers which state the following:

- Boys are Aliens
- Boys are brainless
- Boys lie
- Not interested (in boys)
- Boys cheat
- I make boys cry
- Boys are weird

I was stunned that any business would partake of such malice—for malice it is—toward children (of either gender). I do not believe for a minute that Ames would sell a similar product denigrating girls, even if such existed, which it certainly doesn't. Living in the Northeast, I have made considerable purchases from Ames Stores; however, given this showcase of blatant animosity towards children, and boys in particular, I will not only be taking my business elsewhere in the future - I will be urging all others to do the same.

If you have any questions, please feel free to contact me at anytime.

Thank you very much.

James E. Soucy

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/24/1726203.shtml

Is Religion's History Misogynistic?

Scott · 25 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal pointed me to this story in the L.A. Times which expounds upon the popular notion that religions throughout history have been based on misogyny and "masculine insecurity." I would claim that religions and historic traditions were based on certain sex role separations for reasons of survival, not hatred, and that these roles weren't always fair or friendly to men, either. Comment to: letters@latimes.com.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/24/1810240.shtml

China Court Throws Out Country's First Sexual Harassment Lawsuit

Nightmist · 25 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

This story details China's first ever sexual harassment lawsuit, filed by a woman who claimed that her boss repeatedly groped her and propositioned her for sex. The court ruled that it was difficult to obtain direct evidence in the case and to confirm independently the alleged victim's story. In addition, it noted that there was no law on sexual harassment in China, the official Xinhua news agency reported. While sexual harassment is wrong, the Chinese court was correct in its decision in this case. And although women's "issues" groups have been pushing for stricter policies and laws which take alleged female victims at their word (much like America), the court recognized that, in the end, it was his word against hers, and not proven.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/24/198245.shtml

Shopping: It's Not Just a Woman Thing

Nightmist · 25 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Here is a special column I wrote for the holiday editions of both MANN and ifeminists.com. Although I do explore the serious issues of stereotypes and bigotry toward men these days, it is my hope that you will read this column and chuckle a bit, too, at my recent holiday shopping escapade. Happy holidays to each and every one of you.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/21/1933223.shtml

Year-End DesertLight Journal

Scott · 25 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy Schuett released her final DesertLight Journal of the year today, this issue focusing on holiday greetings and a review of this year's events. The MANN admin team submitted a short piece for this issue which can also be read in the Read More section below. Merry Christmas everyone!

2001 has definitely been an exciting and promising year for the men's movement. From young Clayton Giles' hunger strike and bike trip across Canada and to Washington, D.C, to the publication of "Spreading Misandry: The Teaching of Contempt for Men in Popular Culture," to the outcry over the Boulder Public Library's male bashing art exhibit "Hung out to dry" and more, there has been a lot of activity and increasing media coverage of men's issues.

The Mensactivism.org community has also grown by leaps and bounds, particularly with the announcement that the Individualist Feminist movement, headed by Wendy McElroy, and Mensactivism.org are going to work on more joint projects in the future. The fact that more and more women are joining our movement (including the efforts of Trudy Schuett herself!) are signs that we have a lot to look forward to in 2002. And while we still need to promote men's groups and help awaken more men to the sexism that is silently destroying their lives, no one can deny that it is only when men and women work together with trust and respect for each other that justice for everyone will be achieved.

There are so many people we'd like to thank for their efforts and support that to do so would fill up many pages. So, to keep it short, we'd like to thank every single person who has visited Mensactivism.org this year and wish you all Happy Holidays!

Let's make 2002 at least as good as 2001 for men's rights!

Sincerely,

Scott Garman, scott@mensactivism.org

James Hanback, nightmist@mensactivism.org

Adam Hartney, adam@mensactivism.org

The Mensactivism.org Admin Team

http://www.mensactivism.org

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/24/1953228.shtml

Random Acts of Kindness

Nightmist · 25 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy explores the spirit of this holiday in her latest column, "Random Acts of Kindness." She also tells the tale of how she was attacked in a letter by a mainstream feminist after her last column, which advocated good will toward men. And now we see why it is so important for us to let Wendy know we support her, and to speak up against wrongs, even when some might consider it "whining."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/25/1653229.shtml

Book Reading Group in Progress

Scott · 26 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

During the last MANN on-line chat, we discussed starting a group book reading project to help educate activists about the issues and encourage people to buy and read books on or related to men's rights. The first book we decided on reading is Christina Hoff Sommer's book Who Stole Feminism?: How Women Have Betrayed Women. If you received a gift certificate to a book store recently (or even if you didn't), you might want to pick up a copy of this book and join our discussions on it. Click Read More below for details on our reading schedule and what to do to join us.

Who Stole Feminism is about 275 pages long and consists of twelve chapters. Our reading schedule is to cover 3-4 chapters each week, and have an ongoing discussion of the book via an e-mail list which is being set up right now on Mensactivism.org (I'll announce how to subscribe to it before January 1). When the mailing list is started the plan is that participants will have read the first four chapters by January 1, so you might want to buy the book now or check it out at your local library (if they have a copy).

To anyone who hasn't read WSF, it's a great book, and exposes a ton of significant feminist myths that have permeated our culture (including the infamous "1 in 4 women are raped while in college" lie). While the book focuses more on debunking bad feminist studies than on men's rights, the research exposed in this book is part of what I might call the "baseline literacy" that pro-male activists need to be informed about to promote men's issues most effectively (Warren Farrell's Myth of Male Power is the other seminal book, IMHO).

Where to buy the book? Well, it's up to you, but I'd strongly advise against Barnes & Noble, since they have been lobbied by us but refuse to create a separate book section for Men's Studies books in their retail stores. Borders Books, on the other hand, has a Men's Studies book section and should be encouraged for it. Apparently they are now owned by Amazon.com. But these are simply suggestions for you to consider.

Anyone is welcome to join this book reading group, male or female. I'll be posting this announcement both on MANN and the iFeminists.com bulletin board. We hope you'll join us!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/24/2046248.shtml

More Men Outliving Women?

Scott · 26 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Tony submitted this CNN article and writes *"Before anyone gets excited that men might be catching up to women should read this article. Widowers 65+ number about 2 million but widows number 8.5 million. A huge disparity still exists. This article discusses a few reasons why being the surviving spouse is more difficult for men. And it has a heart touching story of a widower."*Source: CNN

Title: Census: More men outliving their wives

Author: Unknown (AP article)

Date: December 16, 2001

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/24/1823237.shtml

Debtor's Prison Is Alive And Well For Non-Custodial Fathers

Nightmist · 26 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

This horrifying article from the Fatherhood Coalition's Web site details Massachusettes efforts to put non-custodial parents (namely fathers) in prison for not paying up to 40 percent of their wages to the custodial parent. The story goes on to describe some of the civil rights violations of due process forced upon non-custodial fathers. For robbery, aggravated assault, homicide -- and perhaps even flying airplanes into buildings -- defendants are assumed innocent until proven guilty, provided legal counsel at taxpayer expense, and given every consideration to guarantee that their civil rights aren't violated in the process of ascertaining their guilt. Non-custodial fathers should be so lucky.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/26/1618200.shtml

Bush Administration Apologizes For Censorship of Christina Hoff Sommers

Nightmist · 26 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

I received an e-mail today from Charles Curie, who is the newly appointed administrator of the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration. The e-mail was in regard to my complaint about the treatment of Christina Hoff Sommers when she was invited to speak at a conference discussing the value of the "Girl Power" and "Boy Talk" programs. Hoff Sommers questioned the value of these programs, was shouted off the stage, and told to "shut the fuck up, bitch" by one Dr. Jay Wade, a professor who teaches a class in "listening skills." Mr. Curie was most apologetic, and has apologized to Hoff Sommers as well. Read his message to me by clicking Read More below.

Dear Mr. Hanback:

I am writing in response to your e-mail to President Bush, Health and Human Services (HHS) Secretary Tommy G. Thompson, Alvera Stern, Ruth Sanchez-Way, and me regarding a meeting convened by the Center for Substance Abuse Prevention.

As the Bush Administration's newly appointed Administrator of the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) in HHS, I was appalled to learn about the disrespectful manner in which a guest of SAMHSA's Center for Substance Abuse Prevention (CSAP) was treated in a federally sponsored forum. No one should ever be censored or silenced as was Dr. Christina Hoff Sommers. Immediately after learning of the situation, I personally communicated my apology to Dr. Sommers and conveyed my conviction that SAMHSA values open and honest dialogue among people of diverse opinions.

I have made it clear to the staff involved in the incident that I expect them to treat all guests with dignity and respect, and ensure comity among meeting participants. Corrective action is being taken in this case. I will not tolerate disrespect of ideas, opinions, or values in the conduct of SAMHSA activities.

Sincerely,

Charles G. Curie, M.A., A.C.S.W.

Administrator, Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/26/1922242.shtml

The Men's Movement Gets More Press

Scott · 27 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Larry writes "Men's News Daily points to a pair of articles, one at Scotsman.com and one in The Economist, which comment on the rising visibility of the men's movement. Both tend to characterize men's issues as confused whining. Both take heart in what they interpret as "encouraging" signs of self-doubt in men. These writers seem to believe the proper goal of society for the last thirty years has been to break that damnable male quality of autonomy and self-containment. Apparently they think society has finally succeeded." Also thanks to an Anon User who sent in the Scotsman article.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/26/1945208.shtml

Egypt Stops Flogging Men in Prison

Scott · 27 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

An Anonymous User sent in this link to a Reuters story which briefly mentions that the practice of flogging men in prison will no longer be used, due to a vote by the Egyptian Parliament. The article did mention that women were never flogged in prisons in the first place, which I thought was interesting.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/27/159200.shtml

Follow-up on Smith Colleges' Discrimination Suit

Scott · 27 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Another Anonymous User sent in this article from the Boston Globe that goes into more detail about the Smith College coach who was fired so that they could have a woman coach. The discrimination here becomes very clear despite everything that coach Babyak did for the teams and the school. Source: The Boston Globe [newspaper]

Title: Smith bias case brought justice, ex-coach says

Author: Ralph Ranalli

Date: December 20, 2001

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/27/1519242.shtml

BC Johnny Hart Father Bashing

Scott · 27 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

stevenjones sent in a BC comic strip from 12/22 that he found pretty insulting to fathers. It mocks "deadbeat dads" and anyone who might have any compassion for them. Unfortunately, there is no direct link to the strip - you must first click here and then select the Dec. 22 strip from the menu under the Archive section.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/27/1921251.shtml

Boy Dies Saving Family From Fire

Scott · 28 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

donaldcameron1 writes "The left-wing feminist rag, The Toronto Daily Star, plunks this heroic tragedy into a shared article Hero teen dies saving relatives from blaze about two fires in the Toronto area, damming the boy's heroics with faint praise. Yes, [his story] does get first billing in the article, but it gets about the same coverage as a different fire in which personal injuries to two other (anonymous) men occurred. The boy even went back into that fire repeatedly."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/27/201251.shtml

Sacks Writes About Elder Abuse, Interviewed on Radio

Scott · 28 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks, the only regularly published male columnist in the US who writes about gender issues from a perspective unapologetically sympathetic to men, takes on the issue of domestic violence against elderly men in his latest column. It's a good read on a topic that gets little attention in today's domestic violence news stories. Glenn was also interviewed on talk radio station KABC in Los Angeles, and a streaming audio version of his interview can be heard here in MP3 format.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/27/1945240.shtml

Avoiding Divorce

Scott · 28 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal writes "Here's a helpful article by a woman who does workshops on avoiding divorce: Michell Weiner-Davis. She also has two books out concentrating on how one person can often save a relationship without first convincing his partner to work on it."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/28/039231.shtml

"Hung Out to Dry" Critiqued in University Newspaper

Scott · 28 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy directed me to Will Shurley's school newspaper article about the male-bashing art exhibit formerly displayed in the Boulder, Colorado public library. Shurley, from Baylor University, is the first college student I'm aware of who has confronted the "hung out to dry" art exhibit and domestic violence against men in a campus newspaper. He should be praised highly for his efforts. Why not drop him a line at Will_Shurley@baylor.edu and say hello?
Source: The Baylor Lariat [Baylor University newspaper]

Title: Display in Colorado library slants spousal abuse problem

Author: Will Shurley

Date: November 16, 2001

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/28/0246202.shtml

Point/Counterpoint on DV Against Men

Scott · 28 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

An Anonymous Reader submitted this letter from AngryHarry.com which is in response to this letter in the Irish Times about domestic violence against men. The Irish Times letter attempts to debunk all research on women's violence, which Karl takes them to task on. Of course, Karl's letter wasn't printed, as it is very long, but was an important rebuttal that people here may have an interest in reading.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/28/037205.shtml

Sex Predator Sentencing Law Now Applies To More Crimes

Nightmist · 29 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Some time ago, MANN posted an article about a new sexual predator law which intended to keep people convicted of sexual crimes locked up longer than their actual sentences. According to this story in the Des Moines Register, this law is now being used to keep people who have been convicted of other crimes behind bars beyond their sentences. The following problems now arise: if we're going to ingore sentencing, why have it at all? Does this mean that anyone can now be locked up indefinitely for any offense? What happened to "he paid his debt to society?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/27/2034203.shtml

Eve's Seed

Scott · 29 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

An Anonymous User writes "Robert McElvaine of Millsaps University wrote a book called "Eve's Seed," where he states that women invented agriculture and men are jealous because of it. Just the childish cartoon on the book's website, www.evesseed.com, is proof of male-bashing. A part of the song "Margaritaville" plays in the background, which states "...but I know, it's my own damn fault." The explanation of the book's content reveals more male-bashing. McElvaine's e-mail address is mcelvrs@millsaps.edu."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/28/2118217.shtml

Interview with a Domestic Violence Shelter Activist

Scott · 29 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Remo writes "This interview in Feminista! is with a long-time veteran of domestic violence shelters. Note the implicit misandric assumptions. Also the statement near the end that the shelters are but a way-station for a larger political goal. And lastly, note the corrupting influence of money. Let's hope the men's movement doesn't make the same mistakes."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/28/2036258.shtml

Remember Innocent Men in Jail

Scott · 30 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

AFG writes "This commentary from the Washington Times discusses the epidemic of various men in jail for crimes they did not commit. In particular, it informs us about the way in which governmental and judicial authorities often ignore new evidence or employ "snitches" in order to ensure a conviction or keep a man behind bars. It also talks briefly about feminist lawyers who use the courts to "act out sex grudges"" Also thanks to an Anonymous User who sent in this link.Source: The Washington Times

Title: System of injustices

Author: Paul Craig Roberts

Date: December 26, 2001

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/29/2156212.shtml

Judy Mann Resigns from The Washington Post

Scott · 30 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

An Anonymous User writes, "On Dec. 19, Judy Mann wrote a column in the Washington Post that stereotyped and vilified men. Many of us wrote letters to the editor. On Dec. 22, the Post "Free for All" section ran a letter from a Markus Garlauskas that characterized Mann's column as "an anti-male message of hate." On Friday, Judy Mann resigned her position at the Post. I don't know whether or not we can take full credit for her resignation, but I do believe that we did make a difference to stop anti-male bigotry." Apparently, Judy couldn't help but make a few final snide remarks about men in her last article (see paragraph 3, in particular). Good riddance.Source: The Washington Post [newspaper]

Title: A Farewell Wish: That Women Will Be Heard

Author: Judy Mann

Date: December 28, 2001

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/30/0326236.shtml

Saudi Men Flogged for Harassing Women

Scott · 30 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

The same Anon User who sent in the news that Egypt has banned the flogging of male prisoners also discovered this Reuters article which states that 137 Saudi Arabian and five foreign young men were flogged for "harassing women." I have no idea what they mean by harassment, whether it was inappropriate touching or possibly rape, but even Amnesty International believes this to be a grave human rights violation of these men, as reported in the article.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/30/0341252.shtml

Old-man Bashing

Scott · 30 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Douglas Rome submitted this article from the UK Guardian. It describes the increasing derision people are expressing for older men, and as Douglas writes, *"This article is especially interesting in that it's by a radical feminist who's shown no previous sympathy for men's plight: I think they're becoming worried, at last, over the molten fury of the men's movement about what Karpf describes as sexism hiding behind feminism."*Source: The Guardian [UK newspaper]

Title: Old man blues

Author: Anne Karpf

Date: December 22, 2001

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/30/048252.shtml

CNN Interviews Gloria Steinem On-line

Scott · 31 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

John May sent in this chat transcript from CNN where gender feminist leader Gloria Steinem is interviewed. The main topic of the discussion is women's rights in Afghanistan, but it's always a good idea to keep tabs on what Steinem is up to.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/30/0335230.shtml

MANN Book Discussion: Who Stole Feminism?

Scott · 31 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

As promised, I have set up an e-mail list to be used for the book reading group. If you haven't heard, Mensactivism.org has set up a "book club" of sorts - every couple of months, people who want to participate will decide on a book to be read, and then form a reading schedule for the book. The mailing list will be a place to discuss the contents of the book and other related issues (please note that is not a general purpose list, so please keep discussions on-topic!). The first book we are reading is Christina Hoff-Sommers' Who Stole Feminism?, and we are reading 3-4 chapters each week. To join, click here and fill out the web form. All are welcome.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/30/2236249.shtml

Balanced Review of Spreading Misandry

Scott · 31 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Margaret Wente wrote a balanced review of Spreading Misandry: The Teaching of Contempt for Men in Popular Culture for the Globe and Mail. I say it's balanced because she offers some criticism for the book as well. Overall, she definitely feels this book is needed, though she finds it to overstate the problem at times. Speaking of this book, I think it's time that I ordered a copy myself. Thanks to an Anonymous User who sent this review our way. Source: The Globe and Mail [Canadian newspaper]

Title: Bashing the male-bashers

Author: Margaret Wente

Date: December 29, 2001

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/30/2319226.shtml

Letter Urges Prosecution of False Accusers of Child Abuse

Scott · 31 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

Gordon Finley, a Professor of Psychology at Florida International University, gave us permission to reprint a letter which was published in the Miami Herald on 12/28. Prof. Finley responds to an article on the rising numbers of child abuse and neglect deaths, and points out that the social workers dealing with these cases would be more effective if we confronted the problem of false accusations, which comprise a sizable proportion of their caseloads. Go to the Read More section to view his letter.

Reduce False Abuse Reports

Re: the Dec. 23 Miami Herald front page article, "Florida child deaths resulting from neglect or abuse rising"

Childrens' deaths at the hands of adults are unacceptable to anyone. One guaranteed way to reduce these deaths is to reduce the false-abuse caseload of Department of Children & Families workers. Not only are caseworkers overburdened by false claims, which keep them from doing what they should be doing, but we are wasting vast sums of scarce tax dollars that could better be spent on a host of worthy needs.

One guaranteed way to reduce false-abuse claims is to prosecute those who file them. All fathers' advocacy groups list among their highest concerns the escalating rate of false-abuse allegations filed by mothers and mothers' lawyers against fathers before, during and after child-custody disputes as a means to win custody. This is a dirty little secret whose time for exposure has come.

Guilty also are state attorneys who virtually never prosecute mothers or lawyers for these crimes. The costs are paid by society (in taxes), fathers and children.

Children who go through the false-abuse inquisition are not the same afterward, nor is their relationship to their father the same. The emotional damage is severe and long lasting. To put this in perspective, 50 percent of first marriages end in divorce, another 17 percent end in permanent separation. It doesn't take a large percentage of malicious mothers and unscrupulous lawyers to generate a huge false-abuse complaint caseload and the deadly consequences outlined in the article.

Gordon E. Finley

Professor of Psychology

Florida International University

Miami

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/31/0432256.shtml

Reebok Bashes Men in Commercials

Scott · 31 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

equalitarian62 writes, "I finally plugged my TV in again in order to see what new male-bashing commercials were airing. I didn't have to wait long. Reebok had two commercials featuring men acting like fools, with the theme music being "This is a Man's World." In one of these commercials, a man walks into a gym full of fit women, and trips and stumbles over the exercise equipment. At the end he is rescued from a machine by one of these strong women, and the message "It's a Woman's World" flashes on the screen. I think that this is once again a highly offensive way of selling products. I'll be sure not to buy anything from Reebok in the future. Apparently these misandristic ads are part of a new campaign called "It's a Woman's World." Click here for more info." Also thanks to Adam S. for notifying us of this. Nightmist's Note: You can screen the insulting ads (as well as a "behind the scenes" explanation of them) here. Click Read More for Reebok contact info.

Reebok contact information

Nightmist's note: I was unable to find electronic contact information for Reebok. However, you may send their corporate office snail mail to the address below:

Reebok International Ltd.

PO Box 1060

Ronks, PA 17573

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/31/0559227.shtml

Two Reviews of Zubaty's What Men Know That Women Don't

Scott · 31 December 2001 · Archived copy · Original

I've received two book reviews for Rich Zubaty's excellent book, What Men Know That Women Don't. You can view them in the Read More section, and the book can be bought at this site, in either electronic form (so you can download it immediately), or in print. Many thanks to J. Steven Svoboda and Ssargon for the reviews!

Review by J. Steven Svoboda, arc@post.harvard.edu

What Men Know That Women Don't. By Rich Zubaty. Preface by Bill Kauth. 547 pp. College Station, Texas and Kaunakakai, Hawaii: Virtualbookworm.com and Zubaty Publishing, 2000. $24 paper. $12 CD or ebook. Downloadable at www.virtualbookworm.com. 877-376-4955.

Rich Zubaty has updated and completely rewritten his classic "Surviving the Feminization of America." Controversial even within the ranks of men's rights activists, the original 1993 edition of "Surviving" sparked a lot of admiration for the author's rambling, tell-it-like-it-is style, not to mention the brilliance of his insights. But for many, "Surviving" also set off perhaps equal levels of denigration for its frequent flaming putdowns of females and perhaps for its sheer ball-busting uniqueness. Almost anyone could find something to dislike about "Surviving." Conservatives hated its clearly stated opposition to corporations and the evils they have spawned in society (about which Zubaty says more in his 2001 book, "The Corporate Cult," also available at the same locations given above and to be reviewed by me in the next issue). Liberals hated with equal vigor the book's attacks on the federal government ("useful for building interstate highways and keeping Cuba from invading us, and as far as I can tell that's just about it") and felt discomfort over Zubaty's evidently more than trace levels of misogyny and anti-Semitism.

I can't think of a men's movement book I have read which has made a stronger impression on me. Here are some of the ideas Zubaty proposes, attempts to justify, and explores in this book. Women are more materialistic than men, he writes, stressing the word's etymology from the Latin "mater," and they are also more analytical than males. Correspondingly, despite common misconceptions, men are more spiritual (and more intuitive) than women, as well as more skilled in relationships, and we need to regenerate a male-flavored spirituality if we are to save this planet before it is really too late. One of the biggest problems today is men and women have swapped mental roles, and neither of us does particularly well at playing the other's role.

Zubaty has a true poet's way with the pithy apothegm. "Women have more emotions, men have deeper feelings." "'Equality' is meaningless. Is a bee equal to a sparrow? The term is meaningless. And anyway, feminism was never honestly about Equality. Feminism was about MORE STUFF FOR WOMEN. Women don't want to mine coal or get drafted into war. That's too much Equality for them." "Men are not the oppressors of women. The simple proof of that is that Women are not oppressed." "Our male models are reconstituted women. They are the men women like, not the men God likes." "Men's intution is to women's intuition as the night sky full of galaxies is to a flashlight. The flashlight looks brighter because it is closer, but that is just an illusion."

Another of the author's knacks is synthesizing data in revealing ways. In the last decade, the number of working men who earn only a poverty wage has increased 100%. Five percent of the people and 75% of the lawyers live and work in the United States. Are we attempting to litigate values? Are we trying to pass laws to enforce morals? Zubaty makes a convincing case that we are doing exactly that. Why, if we get married in a church, don't we get divorced there as well? "Do you think it is any coincidence that the rise of compulsory education has marched in lock step with the Industrial Revolution?" Men's brains are 15% larger than women's, about twice the average body size difference; it may not be coincidence that women are more prone to emotional, manipulative responses which presumably are generated by the more primitive portions of the brain. Zubaty provides a pithy four-page summary of brain differences between men and women. Perhaps most to the point: "It amazes me to hear Americans mock Third World dwellers without for a second understanding that these people have more food laying around in their own backyard than they could eat in a year." Zubaty has both the skill and the guts to build a case that women are the cause of war. I may not be in FULL agreement but I am in full admiration of his chutzpah, not to mention panache.

The feminization of America and indeed, of the world, which became the title of this book's first edition, can be so profound that we can miss it if we don't have a friend like Zubaty to point it out to us. "Our priests wear gowns, our judges wear robes, and our ex- wives wear jeans." This process may be the most powerful of society's many statements that the masculine is losing its importance. Zubaty draws a pointed analogy between the "decay and dissolution" he has observed in Native Americans with whom he has lived and developments in North America and Europe. "What we are seeing on the reservation is a speeded up version of what Western society has done to all men--killed off the visionaries and turned the rest into a bunch of alcoholic businessmen." Ouch.

Zubaty does at times halfheartedly suggest that all "real men" stop going to work so that the women have to learn how to use shovels and drive garbage trucks. Not a bad idea. And, noting that "men who have not been fathers are vastly less complete individuals than women who never became mothers," Zubaty very sensibly proposes that fathers receive automatic custody of half the children from their marriage as a first step towards reducing divorce and curing a whole range of other problems. I can also sign on to Zubaty's "flake tax" for all childless men and women over the age of 30. Generally, though, "What Men Know" is short on explicit, detailed solutions to the overwhelming problems the author deftly sketches, but he can hardly be blamed for this. Frankly, the resolution to these issues may not exist, at least not yet. Zubaty's function is to alert us that the emperor has no clothes so we can start preparing to accelerate his departure and hopefully begin to think about who we will put in his place and how we will ensure that the same things don't continue to go wrong under the new regime.

It's time for some more Zubatyisms. Regarding our feminized education system, the author acerbically notes, "School is the place you go to learn all the things that are exactly the opposite of what you need to know to succeed in life." "If I tell my kids, 'I happened upon a moment of Buddha consciousness standing on a street corner,' my son will say, 'What's Buddha consciousness?' and my daughter will say 'What street corner?'" "Yes, you have an equal right to fix your own toilet. Go do it." Like it or not, "ALL the major accomplishments of civilization spring from the obsessions of men the sociologists now disdain as 'workaholics.'" "Civilized women don't like war, but they DO like washing machines.... Don't tell me women will give up their washing machines to make life easier for their 'sisters' in poor countries. The sun will ice over before that happens."

These words that flow so nicely point toward some disturbing conclusions. Zubaty can be hard to take, because he can help us to realize, not to put too fine a point on it, how hard life today sucks. He assembles a convincing claim that computers are the most feminizing force in society today, and notes, "We don't need more education. We need more spirituality."

Zubaty notes the great lengths to which Nature has gone to produce the male. "[U]ntil around 1840, females lived 10% shorter lives than men... Is there any doubt who is profiting from the Industrial Revolution?... Our men are going the way of the African elephant. It isn't that we are not hardy. The problem is that our habitat is being destroyed.... There is scarcely a real man left alive." This series of powerful metaphors contains the crux of the matter. Not simply our literal habitat is being eliminated, but also our symbolic habitat, in that our past understanding and appreciation of men's evolutionarily invaluable role is being lost. Most admirably, Zubaty it at his best in some pithy pages where he discusses male spirituality and men's role in the universe. "Our job is not to get along with the Goddess. Our job is to fuck the Goddess." And to be "the patron saints of foolishness," capable of providing "poetry and fascination and risk-taking." "Men were designed to disrupt women," thereby creating human life. Zubaty will similarly disrupt you as reader, and will also similarly help give birth to new ideas and some new thought patterns inside you.

"What Men Know" is at least as good as "Surviving." Longtime activist and New Warrior cofounder Bill Kauth has added a suitably seat-of-the-pants preface. Sure, you will always be able to find ten things to strongly dislike about the book. But the real point should be: I can't think of ANY book you are likely to read with as many original ideas.

You don't even have to like Zubaty's authorial voice for his books to be must-reads, because they will get you thinking either way, and that's the author's ultimate goal. I suspect he would much prefer to have three people read his book and hate it as to have two people read his book and love it, as long as the readers in either case will think about the ideas presented and pursue actions in their own lives related to their conclusions. Sprint, don't run, to your feminized computer, and download Rich Zubaty's stunning, unique, depressing, hilarious, infuriating, delightful, but above all, must-read book. If you only buy one book this year, make it "What Men Know That Women Don't." Your life, and that of those who love you and those whom you love, not to mention that of your society, may depend on it.

Review by Ssargon:

When I read this book it made me feel more secure about my place in the world. I'm 22 years old and this book really explained a lot that I've thought about since I left the political involvement that I had as a teenager.

The book talks about how women make themselves unhappy by confusing security and peace with the need for material possessions. I tells men what they must do for the world to be a better place. The blame isn't really on either women or men, but on the corporate culture that controls our lives and the feminists that follow it (to quote from the book: "Feminists are corporate whores").

It also talks about the injustice that men face when they divorce (or are forced to divorce) when there are children involved. It then goes on to dispell the myth that men aren't spiritual and caring in their relationships.

Zubaty tells his own story and he is NOT afraid to be angry, which I think is a very good thing. The book is well worth reading by anyone who doesn't automatically take the feminist view of society for granted.

/Ssargon

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/31/0616240.shtml

Ames Strives To Remove Boy-Bashing Stickers

Nightmist · 1 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

napnip received a response from Ames Department Stores after he e-mailed them about the vending machines inside those stores containing boy bashing stickers ("Boys Are Aliens," "Boys Are Brainless," "I Make Boys Cry," among others). Store officials point out that they do not stock the vending machines themselves, but have asked the company which does to remove the offending stickers. You can read the e-mail to napnip by clicking Read more below. Here again, we see proof that our activism works.

napnip's e-mail to Ames

Dear Ames:

Is it your policy to sell blatantly sexist stickers which bash boys and young males? (Like in the attached picture.)

Do you sell similar stickers bashing girls?

Don't you think you owe the public, and boys in general, a public apology?

And, Ames' reply

Thank you for taking the time to write to Ames. Your message was forwarded to my attention. Feedback from our customers is very important to us.

As you might imagine, Ames was equally stunned to find that the vending machines in our stores contained stickers like you describe. These machines are contracted through an outside company and we were not aware that they contained such disturbing statements. We have immediately requested that all of these stickers be removed from the machines. This process should be completed within the next week. We will continuously follow up and monitor the situation. We sincerely apologize for this situation and truly appreciate it being bought to our attention.

Sincerely,

Stephanie Liebl

Ames, Customer Relations

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/31/1730245.shtml

Thanks for Such a Great Year!

Scott · 1 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

As the founder of Mensactivism.org, I'd like to take a few moments to thank the people who have made this site such a success this year, and more than I ever expected it to be. Click Read More below to read some notes on the history of MANN, the people who have brought us to our current point, and the top five comment posters. Let the good times roll...

When it all started....

Most people don't know that when I started MANN in May of 2000, I was almost certain that it was going to be a flop, and I thought of it mainly as an exercise in learning some web and database administration skills. I figured I would maintain interest in it for no more than six months at the most. But I was definitely wrong - an entire user community sprung up around this site and has kept it going the whole time. Since then I've suffered through network outages, a web server port block from my ISP during the "Code Red" worm crisis, hundreds of attempted break-ins, and many lost hours of sleep queuing news stories and customizing the site's interface (anyone remember when logged in users would get a message like "This page was generated by a team of stealth ninjas" at the top of the main page?). I've also had a blast while doing all of this, and the effort has always been more than worthwhile.

This site is only here because you are.

One of the reasons why Mensactivism.org is different from other web sites is that it is almost completely user-driven. Users send in news stories. Users write editorials. Users participate in the on-line chats. Users post comments and agree, debate, troll (!), and inform one another. Somehow this web engine has combined the features of an e-mail list, web message board, and portal site in a way that appeals to you folks, and keeps you coming back. You are the most important part of this site, and if you've contributed content in any form to it, it's just as much the result of your efforts as it is of myself and the other admins.

I would like to thank everyone who visits this site regularly, who posts productive comments, who submits news stories, who has written an original article that has been posted here, has made a financial donation to the site, or any combination of the above. Each of you is living proof that the efforts of an individual can have a significant impact, and you have helped shape the direction of this site and even the men's movement itself.

Admins keep this site running smoothly...

A very special thanks to James Hanback (aka Nightmist) and Adam Hartney, "Adam," who have made a special dedication of their time to help ensure Mensactivism.org is updated frequently with the best selection of user submissions available, for helping to reduce the impact of trolls and divisive infighting, and sharing the workload of maintaining the content of MANN.

Nightmist has devoted an immense amount of time to MANN, was the stimulus for our relationship with Wendy McElroy and iFeminists.com, and on top of that posts more comments here than I do!

Adam, too has posted dozens of articles here, and written a couple of his own. As our only Admin from the UK, Adam's input is very useful and a great help to us.

Thomas will be coming on board as an admin starting very soon, and I'd like to thank him for offering his help to us.

Brad isn't an admin, but he did send us some nice graphics for our news topics. Likewise, Tom Parker spruced up our main banner logo.

Thanks guys!

The Top Five Commentors

The following is a list of the top five MANN comment posters to date. I originally wanted to list the top five news submitters, but the database apparently doesn't keep track of the number of stories submitted, though it does keep track of the number of comments. One person, by far, posted the greatest number of comments on MANN. Anonymous User led the pack by a wide margin with more than 107,000 posts. What a dedicated guy! Ok, seriously though, here are the others:

1. Thomas
2. frank h
3. BusterB
4. Claire4Liberty
5. Hawth

(I've excluded Nightmist from the list since he's an admin, though he would have taken the #1 spot here if I had included him)

While the quantity of posts doesn't mean everything, these people are undoubtably familiar names to most readers, and I'd like to thank them for being such active participants on our comment boards.

I'm a bit uncomfortable singling people out here because there are so many others that deserve praise too. You know who you are, and again, I thank you for your efforts. It has been a wonderful year. Please accept my heartfelt gratitude for everything you've done.

Sincerely,

Scott Garman

Founder and Site Admin

PS - Happy New Year!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/31/2031235.shtml

Mona Charen: Hooray for Men

Scott · 1 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Stan Gaver writes "Columnist Mona Charen has a great article about the latest male heroes who confronted the "shoe bomber" on AA flight 63. Her closing is particularly enheartening: "God bless our men, who've taken so much undeserved abuse for decades, yet never stopped being men and gentlemen."" Thanks also to krob4399 for sending this link in, too.Source: TownHall.com

Title: Hooray for men

Author: Mona Charen

Date: December 31, 2001

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/01/12/31/2146225.shtml

MANN Chat: What to Do in 2002?

Scott · 1 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This Wednesday's on-line chat will be a discussion about what worked for us in 2001 and how to apply these strategies to promote men's rights and fight male bashing in the new year that has begun. Stop by our chat page at 9:30 PM EST on 1/2/02, say hello to everyone, and share your New Year's Resolutions regarding activism! I'll also be looking for a volunteer to help me maintain the Media Watch page, which I think will become a more important and utilized resource of this site in future. See you there!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/01/0349248.shtml

You Can't Force Diversity

Nightmist · 1 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

In her latest column, ifeminist and friend of MANN Wendy McElroy describes how the efforts of American government to force "diversification" is not the same thing as promoting equality. While she does criticize the men's movement for claiming that the recent Ford discrimination lawsuit and the Jim Babyak lawsuit are victories, she has a point that government needs to stay out of the diversification business.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/01/1754220.shtml

NOW Wants To Steer 9/11 Recovery Funds Away From Victims

Nightmist · 2 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This story, which appeared in the Dec. 27 Washington Post details NOW's efforts (via a "Women at Ground Zero" video) to derail federal attempts to assist the victims and cities in recovery by diverting funding earmarked for recovery to encourage more women to enter the rescue fields. Apparently, NOW is upset that only 25 of the 11,000-some-odd firefighters in New York are female, and it doesn't matter to them that women make their own career choices. It's also worth pointing out that images of men in the media got a boost from the emergency workers responses to the 9/11 outrages. Perhaps NOW simply can't stand positive images of men?
Update: My apologies to Neil Steyskal for not mentioning him earlier. He also submitted this story.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/01/2129240.shtml

Misandry Is A Real Word

Scott · 2 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "The letter copied below is one that I submitted to the Times Of Trenton and it was published today. There's nothing really remarkable about it, except that it does include use of the word "misandry." When submitting the letter, I made a point of asking that the word be left intact. (I covered her last name in this submission; it was not covered as such in the newspaper.)" Click Read More to view frank's letter.

In her letter of December 14, 2001, Kathryn A* clearly demonstrates her contempt for men and all things masculine. In her attempt to grab the moral high ground, she associates men with gorillas and she is convinced that one woman can do more good than a thousand men. She says that men regard war as a hobby, an entertainment, and implies that women never engage in war or even approve of it, a myth quickly deflated after a brief inspection of the biographies of the following notable women: Queen Victoria; Indira Ghandi; Prime Minister Golda Meir; Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher; and every female member of Congress who voted in favor of Operations Desert Storm or Enduring Freedom. This is exactly this kind of misandrist bigotry that enrages Afghan women like Farida, a 30-year-old Afghan mother of two. Farida and her constituents are furious with the trashing of Afghan men that is implicit in the current outcry on the plight of Afghan women. (See Mary McGrory, December 2, 2001.)

There is no doubt that Afghan men, women, and children have suffered immensely at the hands of the Taliban, and that women's suffering has been particularly acute. Clearly, their needs must be met. But A* would have us believe that men are the enemy. They are not. The enemy in Afghanistan is the Taliban and their distortion of the Koran. The needs of every citizen of Afghanistan must be represented equally, including women, but allocating a given number of seats to females does not guarantee that. What Afghanistan does not need is the kind of misandrist politics espoused by the likes of Gloria Steinem, Catherine McKinnon, Andrea Dworkin, and, it would appear, Kathryn A*.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/02/1631228.shtml

Ann Landers on a Roll

Scott · 3 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal sent in two recent letters from Ann Lander's advice column. One of which addresses the taboo subject of "deadbeat mothers," and the other from a man who reminds people of the problems that non-custodial parents (mostly fathers) face which are not prioritized the way child support payment is.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/02/2240219.shtml

Spreading Misandry Out of Stock Everywhere

Scott · 3 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

After hearing about the problems some people are having ordering the book Spreading Misandry, I contacted Katherine Young, one of the book's co-authors. She wrote, "Yes, the book is out of print. It was released only in November 2001 and six weeks later was sold out. It has had enormous media and print attention in Canada, which was a surprise to everyone.The press is reprinting it. I've just called them to see when it will be available again. I know they are trying to turn it around fast but the holidays have intervened. When I get the news I'll let you know." I guess we should be glad that this book is selling so fast. Maybe the publishers will realize there is a market for books on men's issues that they hadn't realized before.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/03/1413217.shtml

Post Column on Poor Men

Scott · 3 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal submitted this article from the Washington Post that addresses the issues that low-income men face. It even points out that child support payments should be reduced when a man's income declines, and suggests that arrearages should be forgiven if they can become consistent in paying current support. Read it, this is a rare article. Source: The Washington Post [newspaper]

Title: Welfare: What About The Men?

Authors: Harry Holzer And Paul Offner

Date: January 3, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/03/1424210.shtml

Modern Day Man-Killing Witch?

Scott · 3 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

DaveW submitted this UK Independent article and writes "Authorities use insurance fraud laws to prosecute this modern-day, man-killing witch." This story confirms again that women who murder their husbands often use subversive methods rather than direct ones. Also, do you see the term "domestic violence" anywhere in this article? Source: The Independent [UK newspaper]

Title: 'Witch' is charged over death of three partners

Author: Rupert Cornwell

Date: January 3, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/03/1431200.shtml

Army Training "Too Tough for Women"

Scott · 4 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

An Anonymous User sent us this link to a BBC story about the results of an Army study which is to be published in the Journal of the Royal Society of Medicine. In 1998, the British Army ended the double standards for training men and women and the results were predictable: women trainee's likelihood of being injured increased dramatically, while men's stayed about the same. "women are now eight times more likely than the male recruits to be discharged with an overuse injury...the findings point to a serious conflict between equal opportunity law and health and safety legislation."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/03/1443212.shtml

Men's News Daily Launches Daily Audio News Briefs

Scott · 4 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Mike LaSalle writes "Comrades - Men's News Daily is now carrying a daily audio news digest called MND News Briefs. Please take a listen and let me know what you all think! My intention is to focus on the current men's news topics of that day and do a quick audio overview of those stories-- maybe two minutes total. Links to the full story text can be found on my web site. The audio is in mp3 format - playable by the usual streaming audio players. Happy New Year!" Nice idea, Mike!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/03/1444241.shtml

Bush Administration to Close Parts of Women's Bureau?

Scott · 4 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "I'm submitting this link, which is the links page of a website maintained by a woman named Trish Wilson. She's mounting her own pro-feminist, anti-father campaign to stop the Bush administration from closing several offices fo the Women's Bureau at the Department of Labor. Other topics she's written on are of "interest" as well. As Sun Tzu says: know thine enemy as thyself. I found this page by following a link from at Men's News Daily. A proper response from us might be to send some letters to Dubya in SUPPORT of closing those offices."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/03/150203.shtml

Posthumously Conceived Children Have Inheritance Rights

Nightmist · 4 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This article on Yahoo! News is interesting because not only does it affirm that children conceived through artifical means after their father's death have inheritance rights, but it also stipulates that the mother must prove 1) that the dead man is the child's genetic father, and 2) that the dead man had agreed to conceive and support the child prior to his death. Although posthumous conception is a touchy subject, the court's decision in this case sounds fair to me.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/03/2233239.shtml

Ames Follows Through; Removes Boy-Bashing Stickers

Scott · 5 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

cheddah reports that his local Ames department store has indeed removed the boy-bashing stickers from its vending machines, as promised. A sincere thank you, cheddah, for starting this whole thing and to everyone who wrote to Ames in protest!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/04/2116211.shtml

Review of Don't Sweat the Small Stuff for Men

Scott · 5 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Jason Leatherman wrote a good review of Richard Carlson's Don't Sweat the Small Stuff for Men. I think there's a strong tendency in the men's movement to stress out about many of the things we see every day (I know I do), so a book of this nature is most welcome. Click Read More below to read Jason's review.

Don't Sweat the Small Stuff for Men

Book Review by Jason Leatherman

Don't Sweat the Small Stuff for Men

by Richard Carlson, Ph.D.

Hyperion Books, NY, 2001

Men are an underrepresented group in the self-improvement section of most bookstores. Of course, men don't read such books as often as women do, so this policy is just good business. However, this makes me wonder why Richard Carlson decided to write this book. I feel it was not so much to make money, but to deliver a book that he thinks will benefit men.

As it states on the back cover, Don't Sweat the Small Stuff for Men concentrates on helping men reduce stress, and gain more peace and joy in their lives. This book is an excellent tool for doing so. It is divided into 100 essays, each a short lesson describing a different life strategy. It's a small book, but this format guarantees a high level of content for a book this size.

This is not a book that you'll want to plow through in a day or two. Instead, read two or three lessons each morning, and try them on during the day. And as is the case for any self-improvement book, to make a lasting change you need to review it again and again, so you don't fall back into the old patterns.

There is some repetition among the lessons. For example, several lessons have to do with being less serious, keeping perspective, and staying present. However, if you stick to the 2-3 lessons a day plan, this won't matter. The author repeats the material that he feels is most important, so as you work through the book, you'll be continuously reminded of its central message.

This is not a self-improvement book that promises a plan for grand achievement. It doesn't play to some masculine ideal. Instead, it's simply human. The author wants men to be feel free to live, not just feel pressured to achieve.

The author also doesn't fall into the pattern of trying to define what a real man is. I've read a couple other books "for men," to find them full of statements such as "A man does not X," or "A real man must Y." It's common for men to say a nd write such things, for they think that if they're defining what a real man is, then they must be one, themselves. Instead, Dr. Carlson clearly values all men, wherever they may be, and simply makes suggestions that he believes will help them live richer lives.

As mentioned, the lessons touch upon priorities, handling stress, being less serious, keeping perspective, and staying present. However, I believe it's the more singular lessons that give the book its real value. Some of my favorite lessons follow.

In "Learn About Life from Golf," Dr. Carlson uses golf to create a refreshing perspective on life. "When you're playing effectively, you're completely absorbed in the moment. You're fully present. ... You're relaxed, yet focused. You're having fun. While you're focused on the ball, you're nevertheless aware of the beauty that surrounds you."

"Spend Time with Your Buddies" is an important lesson for men. There are real benefits for men to maintaining a group of friends, and being active with them. Unfortunately, it's easy for men to let other priorities eliminate time for friend ship. Or, they may think that a wife or girlfriend will satisfy all of their needs. This is unrealistic and unhealthy.

"Let Go of the Past" is a simple and powerful lesson for both men and women. It may seem obvious, but how easy is it?
Dr. Carlson gives some tools to help: "Seeing our past as memory -- as thoughts carried through time (nothing more or less ) -- is an extremely powerful insight." So seeing the past as a memory, not as a part of you, will help you shake it loose so you can act, uninhibited, in the present.

At $11.95, the book is a great value if you're the type who can read helpful advice and put it into practice.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/04/226231.shtml

New Legal Breakthrough for C4M?

Scott · 5 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Jim Castelli sent in a summary of a recent ruling by the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court (SJC) on the paternity status of posthumously conceived children. Jim claims that the court's ruling is actually an important breakthrough in legalizing men's reproductive rights. Click Read More for his letter, which was also submitted to The Boston Globe.In the just decided case of Lauren Woodward vs Commissioner of Social Security, Docket No. SJC 08490, the SJC has unintentionally given the issue of "Choice For Men" the language and rationale which has long been overdue.

In an article appearing in The Boston Globe on January 3, 2002 (Those conceived posthumously can be legal heirs), the Supreme Judicial Court has decided that a mother can collect social security benefits for herself and her two children even though the twins were conceived through artificial insemination after the death of their father. The court ruled, however, that to be entitled to the dead man's money, the mother must prove 1) that the dead man is genetically/biologically the father of the children 2) the parents - "both of them" - agreed to the conception 3) the parent - "the deceased father" - agreed to support the children.

In an article appearing in The Boston Globe on April 25, 2001 (SJC says fatherhood goes past DNA test), this same SJC decided that a young boy who had been deceived into believing he was the father of a child must continue to pay child support when 1) he did not agree to the conception, 2) DNA tests proved that he was not the "genetic father," and 3) he did not agree to continue supporting a child that was not his own.

Let's see, if you are a dead man a woman must prove 1) that a child is yours, 2) you both agreed that the child should be born, and 3) you "both" agreed to support it. If you are are alive, a woman can force you to pay child support for 1) a child that is not yours, 2) a child you did not "choose" to have conceived 3) a child you do not want to support. In Massachusetts, apparently, dead men have a more rights than living men over their reproductive choices.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/05/0624202.shtml

Old Man Dies Alone: Estate To the People Who Ignored Him

Scott · 5 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

jaxom writes *"The problem of elderly women living alone, dying, and then not being discovered has mostly been eliminated. Elderly men still die alone, as this story shows. Interestingly, the deceased has left an estate, rumoured to be large, to the people of Prince Rupert: The very people who ignored him."*Source: The National Post [Canadian newspaper]

Title: Prince Rupert aghast over an unnoticed death

Author: Mark Hume

Date: January 4, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/05/0627255.shtml

The Importance of Father Love

Scott · 6 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

David Compas writes "I just learned of this Journal article yesterday via a talk radio program. The article is, "The Importance of Father Love: History and Contemporary Evidence". Most of us will need to utilize an inter-library loan service to retrieve the full article. The summary states: "...the influence of father love on offspring's development is as great as and occasionally greater than the influence of mother love." Will this kind of information ever make the mainstream press?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/05/0630239.shtml

A "New Model of Masculinity"

Scott · 6 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal and cheddah both submitted this story. Cheddah writes, "Here is an interesting story from one of Boston's leading misandrists, Ellen Goodman of the Boston Globe. She complains about women's interest in "Kate & Leopold" where a man is depicted as having virtue and honor. Ellen seems disappointed that the media has allowed men to be portrayed as masculine heroes that "protect us (women) ... from powerful men." It is disappointing that anytime this woman rants over men, the Boston Globe and Boston.com put her articles in high profile spots."Source: The Boston Globe [newspaper]

Title: A new model of masculinity

Author: Ellen Goodman

Date: January 3, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/05/0635228.shtml

MANN/iFemists Chat: Prostitution

Scott · 6 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tonight's joint Mensactivism.org/iFeminists.com chat will be on the controversial topic of prostitution. To my understanding, Wendy McElroy's views are that prostitution in general is not demeaning or oppressive of women, but there are many other issues to discuss as well. Join us at the iFeminists.com chat room at 9:00 PM EST tonight (1/6) for what is sure to be a lively discussion/debate!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/06/1810221.shtml

Rape Acquittal Tactics

Scott · 6 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "This story is a reflective on the William Kennedy Smith rape trial and acquittal in 1991. I don't remember much about the trial, but based on what I read here, the acquittal seems justified. However, what I really want to point out is that the defense used an interesting tactic to "...get around [rape shield] laws "by using ordinary language" that contingently constructs, rather than merely reflects," issues of consent, force and sexual history..." I submit this because it seems to me that this is the dawn of the new assault by the feminists on the due process afforded men accused of rape. This is something we ought to watch and react to if it happens. Perhaps we ought to take some pre-emptive action and write, including a copy of this and any current articles on false accusations, to legislators at the state level."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/06/184231.shtml

Woman 'Slapped On Wrist' After Abducting Child From Father

Nightmist · 7 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This story in the Chicago Daily News once again highlights the fact that women are, often, given lighter sentences than men for similar crimes. In this case, a woman who abducted her child from the father 10 years ago was sentenced to probation for it. Ever though everyone agreed the crime was "horrible," the father agreed to the sentence because he wanted the long, drawn out legal proceedings over. The kidnapper had accused the father of child abuse and absconded with his little girl in 1991. Standing in court, in an anguished voice and bordering on tears, Reichart read a statement condemning his ex-wife as being a "pathological liar."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/06/1931253.shtml

Men's Safety Not so Important for TTC

Scott · 7 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

AFG sent in this story and writes *"For the last little while, the Toronto Transit Commission has had a "request stop" program for women on buses in between 9pm and 5am. This safety initiative (scroll down on the web page) allows for a woman to request to be let off a bus in between designated stops. While such a program is helpful, men are not given the same option, despite the fact that, in many ways, they are more likely to be the victims of violence/assault."*Source: The City of Toronto Web Site [Canada]

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/07/0623250.shtml

Disappearing Acts

Adam · 7 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I found this article a while ago, it's an opinion piece by Debra Dickerson on the state of affairs between black men and women, and it's brutally honest. To tell the truth, it did seem that she blames the nearest man, but she seems to take it back. There are some conflicting messages here, but perhaps that's because she's speaking from the heart? I don't know - read it and decide for yourself.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/07/0043200.shtml

L.A. Times Claims Child Support System Successful

Scott · 7 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Angelucci writes *"In this article, the L.A. Times says that California's new child support collection program is a success because a study shows that it "more than doubled the average amount brought in" and because it fostered "cooperation" between father's rights groups and child support advocates." The author does use gender-neutral language. But he only quotes from state officials and a child support advocacy group, never from a men's rights group. Had the author consulted and quoted a men's rights group, then we might also have read about things like biased custody and support awards, excessive enforcement, the system's failure to enforce visitation and ensure that support is spent on the children, or how custodial mothers receive higher support awards than custodial fathers even when all other factors are equal. Please write to the editor at letters@latimes.com."*Source: The L.A. Times [newspaper]

Title: Reformed Child Support System Termed a Success

Author: Greg Krikorian

Date: January 5, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/07/1535236.shtml

J.C. Penny Demeans Fathers With "One Day Sale" Ad

Scott · 8 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

equalitarian62 writes, "J. C. Penney has a TV commercial for its "One Day Only Sale." This ad shows a man that has been left alone with his young son. The man appears to be overwhelmed as the household falls apart, and he wonders when his wife will be coming home to sort things out. Meanwhile, his wife is having a terrific time at the sale. The ad ends with the message "Don't worry Dad, it's only one day." I find this ad to be demeaning to men and fathers in that it portrays them as incompetent at running a household and caring for children." Go to the Read More section of this story to view equalitarian62's letter and contact info for J.C. Penny.To the staff at J. C. Penney,

I am writing in regard to your TV commercial about your "One Day Only Sale." This ad shows a man that has been left alone with his young son. The man appears to be overwhelmed as the household falls apart, and he wonders when his wife will be coming home to sort things out. Meanwhile, his wife is having a terrific time at the sale. The ad ends with the message "Don't worry Dad, it's only one day."

I find this ad to be demeaning to men and fathers in that it portrays them as incompetent at running a household and caring for children. It should be brought to your attention that anti-male ads such as these are being criticized on several websites (which are viewed by thousands of people each day). Men have become tired of negative portrayals of males in the media, and even some women are starting to speak out against this (it isn't particularly flattering to them either).

It is strongly recommended that you find an alternative approach to selling products, which is not insulting to men. Companies cannot afford to alienate half the population, particularly during a time of recession. While I have been a loyal J. C. Penney customer up until now, I am considering shopping elsewhere (and closing my account) if this particular type of advertising does not cease.

To contact J. C. Penney, please send an email using the following web address:

http://www.jcpenneyeservices.com/csrv/frm_generalinquiries.asp

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/07/2017220.shtml

Editorial's Sole Purpose is to Bash Men

Scott · 8 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

ronn sent in this short editorial from the Roanoke Times. The author, Harriet Hodges, claims that "Women gentle the human impulse... [the savagery of] little boys...is tamed and channeled....Boys grown entirely among males learn arrogance and cruelty." How any respectable newspaper could justify printing this trash is beyond me.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/07/2039251.shtml

UK Police Doubt Guilt of Alleged Child Abusers

Scott · 8 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Douglas Rome sent the following UK Guardian article our way, which reports that "Terry Grange, Chief Constable of Dyfed Powys...admitted that some recent police inquiries into alleged abuse in care homes may have made mistakes - an admission that could open the way to a flood of successful appeals. Readers not from Britain should be aware that fear of paedophiles has been near hysterical proportions in this country as of late, and this admission could be the critical opportunity that many men falsely accused of child abuse need to vindicate themselves.Source: The Guardian [UK newspaper]

Title: Police doubt guilt of child abusers

Author: David Rose

Date: January 6, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/08/0245238.shtml

Potential Improvement for Prostatitis Treatment

Scott · 8 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Bill wrote in about some important medical information for men who are starting to have problems with their prostate. He reports that there is a technique that some doctors should be aware of that can improve the treatment of routine prostatitis (inflammation of the prostate). If you are experiencing this problem, consider talking to your doctor about the following. Click Read More below to view Bill's letter. I don't know how much you know about prostates so bear with me if you already know this stuff. One of the most common prostate problems for men is prostatitis (inflammation of the prostate). Most doctors believe it is due to infection so they just start prescribing antibiotics, which certainly makes sense. But these antibiotics can cost a fortune (I'm taking Cipro; $193 for a 3 week supply!!!) and they aren't always the correct antibiotic needed. So it becomes hit and miss, try an antibiotic, doesn't work, try a different one. Also, some doctors will actually encourage patients to have sex (i.e. ejaculate) thereby decreasing pressure on the prostate by decreasing the amount of fluid in it. And there are men who, for any number of reasons, may have a problem with this.

The doctor at www.prostate-usa.com has devised a system (tested on numerous men in the Phillipines) where he actually massages the prostate via the anus. It sounds bizarre, I know, but this is not the first time I've heard of this. He massages it to the point where some fluid actually comes out the penis which gives the patient a little relief and then in a lab detects specifically what bacteria exist in the fluid and prescribes the antibiotic based on the type of bacteria. Sounds novel indeed but it may have potential and God knows prostatitis is a common and recurring problem in men in their 40's. It happens so often to truck drivers they've nicknamed it "truck drivers' disease". Of course for the record I'm not a medical professional or anything like that, so take this advice as you see fit.

Bill

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/08/0259212.shtml

McElroy Exposes NOW's Grab For WTC Recovery Funding

Nightmist · 8 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Friend of MANN and ifeminist Wendy McElroy's latest Fox News Column is now available online. This week, McElroy delves into the National Organization for Women's attempt to redirect funds earmarked for the World Trade Center recovery effort to other purposes. Amusingly, McElroy points out the lack of common sense behind everything NOW has said or done related to the 9/11 tragedy so far: [NOW President Kim] Gandy then explained the proper political response to the war on terrorism: Demand justice for the women of Afghanistan, advocate the right of women soldiers to have abortions abroad, speak out for gay and transgender soldiers.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/08/067241.shtml

ERA Making a Comeback?

Scott · 8 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal sent in a link to an article in the Fairfax Journal, which reports that a couple of Northern Virginia legislators are proposing to revive the Equal Rights Amendment. Many men's activists have mixed views on the ERA, but from my understanding, if it passed, the ERA would put an end to allowing women to have rights without the corresponding responsibilities. Nightmist's Update: The story has moved hereSource: The Fairfax Journal [newspaper]

Title: Equal rights debate returns

Author: Michael Neibauer

Date: January 5, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/08/0346246.shtml

Women Fined for Returning After Getting Protective Orders

Scott · 9 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

DaveW writes "This story, about a judge fining women who get protective orders, but later return to their alleged abusers, may indicate the beginning of a trend to curb the misuse of protective orders." I'm definitely in favor of policies which encourage people to stop and think before filing a protective order, considering how often they get carelessly used these days.Source: The Lexington Herald-Leader [newspaper]

Title: Judge fines women who return to their alleged abusers

Author: John Cheves

Date: January 3, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/08/0354255.shtml

Sex Offenders to be Tracked by Satellite

Scott · 9 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

donaldcameron1 sent in this very disturbing article from Canada's National Post and writes "I contend that this is the another step on the path to controlling the movement and lives in general of most men." The article states that a system is being tested whereby sex offenders, when released from prison, will be forced to wear an electronic ankle bracelet which can report their physical position using the Global Positioning System. Click Read More to view Donald's letter to the editor, and consider writing in about this as well.This is my letter to the editor although my reactionary style may preclude it from publication.

This is a crazy idea.

How does this device prevent a child from being molested? Most convicted child molesters are men; women, in this country, don't even get jailed for kidnapping their children. This practice will not only make room in the prisons for more men, but also will make jailing men more palatable.

First we start with child molesters, then we herald the whole experiment as a great success (even though it won't be - we can't even do water sampling properly). Then in the great celebration of its success we quietly add violent offenders - you know the ones, the men who allegedly slap, hit, or even yell at women or children, as they will be the most applauded and easiest to force it on. Then we cite the ever soaring costs of imprisoning these men and make wearing these devices a mandatory part of restraining orders. Remember now, the woman who complains does not need to prove her case, the burden of proof is on the man to show his innocence.

This is nothing more than a pilot project in the general Canadian push for ever greater control on the movement of men and ever greater control over their lives, period.

If Canada really doesn't like or trust its males, why not just screen them out in the first trimester and go with genetic engineering of pregnancy instead?
You don't want or need us and prostitution is illegal, so hell...just get it over with. We just won't call it Nazism, it will be our little secret.

Source: The National Post [Canadian newspaper]

Title: Ont. to be first province to introduce satellite monitoring of sex offenders

Author: Ross Marowits

Date: January 7, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/08/048221.shtml

Michael Jordan's Wife Files For Divorce

Nightmist · 9 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This story from sportsillustrated.cnn.com reports that famed basketball player Michael Jordan's wife has filed for divorce. Citing "irreconcilable differences," she wants the house, the children, and half of everything else (the vast majority of which were built from Jordan's basketball career, no doubt). ...Jordan cited a desire to spend more time with his family when he retired from the Bulls the first time in October 1994 and again in January 1999. Perhaps now he is being punished for returning to the game?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/08/2128235.shtml

Murderous Mom Avoids Jail

Scott · 9 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

jaxom submitted this story from the UK Independent and writes *""A young mother suffering from depression avoided jail yesterday despite killing her baby daughter in a jealous rage by tossing her from the window of a second-floor flat." Can anyone imagine a similar judgment for a father who killed a baby?"*Source: The Independent [UK newspaper]

Title: Mother who killed baby avoids jail term

Author: Paul Peachey

Date: January 5, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/09/0456224.shtml

Using Sexual Harassment as a Weapon

Scott · 9 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Remo writes *"This article is from a Japanese newspaper, and it deals with the abuse of Japan's new laws on harassment in the workplace. I wonder why they didn't look at the U.S. first, and see an example of how NOT to write these laws?"*Source: Mainichi News [Japanese newspaper]

Title: Fellas feeling the backlash of sexual harassment across their butts

Author: Ryann Connell

Date: December 28, 2001

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/09/050244.shtml

New DesertLight Journal Released

Scott · 9 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The first 2002 issue of the DesertLight Journal is out, and is sure to enjoy the same success that it had in 2001. Click here for the latest edition, which covers news including an Australian community radio program run for fathers by fathers, more domestic violence services in Canada for men, the formation of an international coalition to restore family rights, and much more.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/09/141246.shtml

Afghan Men Devastated

Scott · 10 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal submitted this New York Times article (free registration required) and writes "The NY Times has a feature article on the mental and physical devastation of Afghan men after decades of war." From the article: " Afghanistan is a nation with 24 million people but only three psychiatric hospitals and eight psychiatrists to serve them. It has virtually no ability to treat its enormous population of mentally ill war victims, according to the World Health Organization, which estimates the mentally ill population at two million." Source: The New York Times [newspaper]

Title: Ravaged Psyches in a Generation of Fighting

Author: C. J. Chivers

Date: January 9, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/09/1436234.shtml

Abortions Hard to Come By for Women Soldiers Abroad

Scott · 10 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Hawth writes *"In this recent commentary found at SF Gate, Joan Ryan expresses concern for U.S. women soldiers wanting abortions. The procedure may be banned in certain countries, or performed in poor conditions, thus necessitating women soldiers to be sent home for the procedure - at their own expense. Ryan seems to have trouble with the idea that women soldiers may lack certain freedoms they enjoy as civilians."*Source: The San Fransisco Chronicle [newspaper]

Title: She defends freedoms she can't exercise

Author: Joan Ryan

Date: December 18, 2001

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/09/1429211.shtml

The Founder Of Masculism?

Adam · 10 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

A while ago, I was doing a search on masculism over at Google out of boredom, when I found this e-mail from Terry Daly, a man who claims to be the "sole founder of masculism and leader of the masculist movement." and also says "I want to clear up the confusion which exists in America about the genesis of the men's movement terms 'masculist' and 'masculism', and about the precise nature of what constitutes (and does not constitute) the masculist manifesto."
What a big claim, huh? Have a read anyway and see what you think.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/10/0149255.shtml

Roanoke Man Demands New Trial After Girl Recants Accusations

Nightmist · 10 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

While looking for letters in response to Harriet Hodges' recent male bashing editiorial, I came across a story about a man who has spent two years in jail and is asking for a new trial after a 13-year-old girl has recanted her accusation that the man molested her while he was living with her and her mother. This story in the Roanoke Times gives the full details. Aleck J. Carpitcher was convicted solely on the testimony of his girlfriend's 11-year-old daughter, who later said she fabricated a story about Carpitcher's abusing her because she wanted him out of the house they all shared. ... "I did not know that he would get in so much trouble or that he would have to spend the rest of his life in prison. ... I felt like everything backfired, and now I am trying to make things right." Scott's note: Thanks also to Neil Steyskal for sending in the story as well.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/09/229240.shtml

Dateline, Katie Couric Solicit Opinion from IWF

Scott · 11 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steven Jones writes "Tuesday, January 8th, NBC Dateline did a story on Post Partum depression and the Andrea Yates case. Katie "the castrator" Couric was the commentator. When it came time to interview a feminist for the official women's view something shocking happened. Katie did not interview Kim Gandy of NOW or anyone from NOW. Katic interviewed Nancy Pftonhauer, the president of the Independent Women's Forum. I was blown away. NBC's summary of their story is here. I e-mailed Dateline and congratulated them on their decision to interview the IWF instead of NOW. I hope they do that more often." I wonder how much this has to do with the publication of the book Bias?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/10/1239211.shtml

Wife Who Identified Husband as Terrorist Indicted

Scott · 11 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "A Houston woman was indicted recently on charges of making false statements to the FBI after she told agents that her husband was a terrorist who received an e-mail before the New York attacks that included macabre images of a skull, an airplane, and the World Trade Center. Go to this page to read the details." Steven Jones also sent in this article - thanks!Source: Houston Chronicle [newspaper]

Title: Wife who identified husband as terrorist indicted

Author: Rosanna Ruiz

Date: January 10, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/10/2056244.shtml

Girl Drivers Catching Up With Boys in Car Wrecks

Scott · 11 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve Jones writes "Girls are having nearly as many wrecks as boys now and insurance companies are acknowledging the trend. Shirley Muldowney, female drag racer, says in the article that she thinks girls now are just as bad drivers as boys when it comes to being overly aggressive and wreckless. The article is here" Thanks also to Neil Steyskal for sending in this USA Today article on the same story.Source: USA Today [newspaper]

Title: Girls' driving takes a bad turn 16-year-olds speeding and crashing more, and paying more for insurance

Author: Earle Eldridge

Date: January 7, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/10/212251.shtml

Morally Bankrupt Family Law Court Responsible for Father's Suicide

Scott · 11 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Mike LaSalle writes "I received the following email from Lowell Jaks of ANCPR, who has perfectly summarized the ugly unspoken truth behind this "Family Law" abomination: "I'm sure there are many on this list who know exactly how this man felt...The combination of factors: 1) destruction of your family, 2) the forced separation from your children, and 3) being forced to pay the other party for the "privilege" of not having to raise your children anymore, is devastating to anyone who has had this happen. It was too much for Derrick K. Miller. He is now dead."" Thanks also to ronn and Luek for submitting the article.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/10/217208.shtml

U.S. Deporting Only Males from Arab Nations

Scott · 11 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steven Jones writes "The Federal government is deporting 6000 Arab males in response to the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. But not one female. [Some believe that] Islam calls for believers to strike out at non-believers. It does not say that only male Muslims should do this. While [some believe] Christianity says to "turn the other cheek," Islam calls for "an eye for an eye" which is the reason violent attacks on seemingly innocent people are considered justified. We may very well see women being recruited for further attacks in the future. But for now, the story of the mass male deportation is here." I added the qualifiers in brackets because I know many religious followers both faiths find these interpretations debatable.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/10/2117240.shtml

Easier Vasectomies with Ultrasound

Scott · 11 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal submitted this article from the New Scientist about a new method for performing vasectomies. Currently only performed on dogs, the system uses blasts of ultrasound to heat the vas deferens, closing it off without having to perform any minor surgery. This method could also be very useful in developing countries where sterilized equipment is hard to come by. But Neil asks, "are they reversible?" The article doesn't mention this. Source: New Scientist [magazine]

Title: Ultrasound used for blood-free vasectomies

Author: Ian Sample

Date: January 9, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/11/1439231.shtml

Masculophobia

Scott · 12 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

LadyRivka writes "This article describes the cultural phenomenon known as "masculophobia", or fear of the masculine or of men. The author contends that this fear exists not only in women, but in men who buy into feminist stereotypes and/or "typical" male gender roles." I read this on the NCFM e-mail list a while back, and it is a great essay. Definitely a keeper.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/11/1441235.shtml

Sex Profiling Letter Printed

Scott · 12 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal had a letter printed in the Dallas Morning News in response to the recent decision to deport Arabic men. The letter can be read here. Thanks, Neil!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/11/1444220.shtml

Canadian University Teacher Degrades Men

Scott · 12 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

zerostress writes "Here is another example on how sexist and degrading comments are routinely uttered against men in our society by member of its intelligensia. This article from the site of Ski Canada tells how a woman professor at the University of Manitoba, Terri Fuglem, said Tuesday that women who frequent the downtown area will be at risk from "testosterone"-driven males if a new entertainment complex is built in Winnipeg."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/11/1447253.shtml

MANN/iFeminists Chat: Roe v. Wade

Scott · 12 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy writes, "Join us this Sunday (1/13) at 9:00 p.m. EST in the jointly sponsored ifeminists.com/mensactivism.org chat room where we will be discussing the upcoming 29th anniversary of Roe v. Wade, the U.S. Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion nationwide. Has it been a "success," or a moral travesty? I have extreme reservations about the Court decision that built reproductive rights on shifting sand and some ifeminists are actively pro-life. We'd like to hear from men as well who are too often left out of the abortion dialogue."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/09/1352206.shtml

MANN Feature: The Price of Fatherhood

Scott · 12 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Our newest feature article, again by columnist Glenn Sacks (we would definitely have this guy on payroll, if we had a payroll), covers the issues of fatherhood, the risks that men take for the sake of their families, and refutes the idea that mothers are the only ones that make sacrifices for their children. Sacks' writing comes from his own experiences as both a construction worker and as a full-time father, and this unique perspective is very useful to apply to this topic. See the Read More section below for another knockout article by Glenn Sacks, which was also printed in both the San Fransisco Daily Journal and Los Angeles Daily Journal. ronn and tparker also deserve credit for submitting this story to us.

The Price of Fatherhood - a Father's Reply to Ann Crittenden's 'Mothers Manifesto'

By Glenn J. Sacks, Glennjsacks@cs.com

Reprinted with permission from the author

Ann Crittenden's popular The Price of Motherhood: Why Motherhood is the Most Important--And Least Valued--Job in America, released in paperback this week, has become the first feminist classic of the new millennium. Crittenden's "mothers' manifesto" is an expose of the so-called "mommy tax," which can include reduced job opportunities and salary for mothers, as well as a lack of appreciation, often from working women themselves.

However, if there is a woman paying the "mommy tax" by sacrificing her earning power to be at home full-time or part-time, there has to be a man in the household supporting the family and, by so doing, paying the "daddy tax." Crittenden, by defining "privilege" and "sacrifice" only in terms of pay and career status, sees disadvantages only for mothers and not for fathers. But what about the price of fatherhood?

The average American father works 51 hours a week. While nearly half of American mothers with children under the age of six do not work full time, even those who do average only a 41 hour work week. American men work the longest hours of any workers (male or female) in the industrialized world. Men work 90% of the overtime hours in the US, and are more likely to work nights and weekends, to travel for work, and to have long commutes. All of these deprive fathers of valuable time with their children.

In addition, men do our society's most hazardous and demanding jobs, in large part because the higher pay allows them to better provide for their families. Nearly 100,000 American workers died from job-related injuries over the past decade and a half, 95% of them men. There were over 100 million workplace injuries in the US between 1976 and 1999, again the overwhelming majority of them suffered by men.

Men dominate in all stress-related diseases, including a two to one lead in heart disease. In fact, Gloria Steinem once cited this in advising men to support women's careers, saying, "Men--support feminism! You have nothing to lose but your coronaries!"

Less time with their children, long work days and work weeks, job hazards and job stress--all of these are the daddy tax. I know, because I've paid it. As the main provider for my family, I worked 60 hour, six day weeks far from home, sometimes at hazardous construction jobs. I missed my young son so badly that many times, arriving home from work late at night, I would carry him around the house on my shoulder, even though he was asleep. My fatherhood was the hollow, joyless fatherhood many men endure--all the burdens of supporting children drained of the pleasure of actually being with them. At times it seemed the only interaction I had with my son was disciplining him, the one parenting job which has not so generously always been reserved for fathers.

One day I was so disheartened over the situation that I walked off my job, pulled my son out of his kindergarten class, took him to the toy store, bought him a race car set, and spent the rest of the day playing with him.

Fortunately, it didn't cost me my job.

Even more fortunate is that, unlike many men and fathers, I haven't been financially trapped in a hazardous job--what men's advocate Warren Farrell calls the "glass cellar of male disposability." A construction job I worked at when I was young illustrates well the untold cost of fatherhood which many men pay.

I worked at a nuclear power plant in the South. Every morning we strapped on our tool belts and hard hats, and made the long climb up the rebar skeletal frame of the building. Once we were 50 feet up, we hooked our hook belts around the rebar and then leaned back to work, with most of our weight on that hook belt. Leaving aside the blistering heat, the difficult reaches, and the danger of someone else's tools falling on you, the reality was that your life--minute by minute, hour after hour, day after day--was dependent upon that hook belt.

One day a journeyman electrician called to me to climb down and help him. He had a rope in one hand and his tool box in the other. We walked over to a large room filled with immense electrical panels. He told me to stand 10 feet behind him and hold the rope. I had no idea why, but I did as I was told. He then made the other part of the rope into a harness, put it on, and said "I'm gonna work on these wires, and some of them are live. If I hit the wrong one and start to fry, you pull me out."

I thought he was joking.

He wasn't.

He began to work and every once in a while he would take a tool he was done with and throw it at my feet, saying "hey--you awake? I got three kids to feed and they ain't gonna go barefoot 'cause you aren't payin' attention."

"No, no, I'm here," I protested. "Why don't they turn off the power so you can do this without being in danger?"

"Company won't do it. Too expensive."

"More expensive than your life?"

"To them."

"How come you don't just tell them 'no?' "

"Can't. Got kids to feed."

"You could do something else. Go to college."

"No money for it--got kids, a wife, a mortgage. Wait 'till you get married and have kids--you'll see."

Lunch time was often the time for "scare the new guy" on workplace injuries and safety. Every man had a horror story to tell, either about what happened to him or what happened to his buddy. The guy who shot his nailgun into a knot in wood and the nail glanced off and nailed his hand to the wall--just before his ladder came out from under him. The guy who sliced his fingers off with a saw and stepped on one as he tried to pick them up one by one. The guy who repaired power lines and hit a live wire while working 20 feet up and is only alive today because his buddy kicked him off the pole.

Fortunately for me, with the exception of bangs and bruises and falling off of a ladder a couple times, the closest I've come to a serious injury was when I shot myself in the hand with a nailgun--fortunately for me, a thin finishing nail. Later I did carpentry jobs as a side business, but luckily I no longer have to hang off the side of buildings or do other hazardous jobs. Most of my carpentry skills now are applied toward building my kids a bunk bed or a lemonade stand. But whenever I hear middle-class feminists like Crittenden tell us of her woes as a woman (and Crittenden, who uses herself as an example of motherly victimhood, tells us plenty of her personal woes), I think of those men and of the sacrifices they make to provide for their families and to give them safety and security--safety and security that they themselves will probably never have.

My life changed dramatically when my second child was born--I switched from the traditional father role to the traditional mother role. Now my wife enthusiastically pursues her new career and I've cut my work schedule back to care for our daughter during the day. I do all the cooking (and we never eat out or take in), the dishes, the shopping, the chauffeuring, the laundry, and the errands. Exactly as Crittenden did, I pursue my freelance writing career at home, in between my household duties. Crittenden is deeply bitter about this "sacrifice," but I consider myself to be quite lucky.

Which is better, paying the mommy tax or paying the daddy tax? There are advantages and disadvantages to both. It depends upon the jobs and personalities of those involved. For me, being at home with my young daughter has been the greatest, most fulfilling experience of my life, and I'll always be grateful to my wife for allowing me the opportunity. All of the "firsts" that I missed with my son--the first words, the first steps--I've been able to enjoy with my daughter, as well as countless other magical, irreplaceable moments. And there's nothing better in the world than when my little daughter walks up to me, puts her hand on my shoulder and says "every night I go sleepies right here." I have no desire to return to a demanding work schedule and be away from my kids. Given a choice, I'd rather pay the mommy tax.

Crittenden has several worthwhile suggestions on how to reduce the mommy tax, including universal preschool, a year's paid leave after the birth of each child, and full benefits for part-time work. I'm not sure how practical these ideas are, but I'm certainly interested, since they could help mothers as well as fathers and children. But how dare she, and other feminists, claim that the burden of children falls only on mothers? Yes, Ms. Crittenden, there is a mommy tax, but the daddy tax is just as large.

Glenn J. Sacks is the only regularly published male columnist in the US who writes about gender issues from a perspective unapologetically sympathetic to men. Glenn writes a regular column for the Los Angeles Daily Journal and the San Francisco Daily Journal. His columns have also appeared in the San Francisco Chronicle, the Los Angeles Times, the Salt Lake City Tribune, the Los Angeles Daily News, and the Philadelphia Inquirer.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/11/1650213.shtml

Gender Terrorism

Scott · 12 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes *"I picked this up from Men's News Daily, and I'm surprised that someone else has not already submitted it. Margery Landry should go down in history as the first gender terrorist. Notice the arrogant, "you ain't got nuthin on me!" look on her face. What will be REALLY sickening is if she gets away with her crime, especially after she was identified by her victim."*Source: The Washington Post [newspaper]

Title: Wife's Friend Charged in Md. Shooting

Author: Phuong Ly

Date: January 9, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/12/185244.shtml

Follow-up Article About the Suicide of Mr. Derrick

Scott · 13 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "Journalist Glenn Sacks has written and posted an article about the high rate of male suicides based on the tragic death of Mr. Miller on the courthouse steps January 8th." Thanks also to ronn for submitting this link from the Union Tribune, which published Sacks' article. This definitely is a topic that should get people's attention and get them to start asking why this is becoming such a trend. How can people continue to ignore the suicide of men and fathers?Source: The Union Tribune [newspaper]

Title: America's suicide epidemic worsens

Author: Glenn Sacks

Date: January 11, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/12/1810221.shtml

The White Ribbon

Scott · 13 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

ronn sent in this article from Canada's Independent magazine. The editorial is an interesting reflection on the white ribbon campaign currently going on in Canada to protest the Marc Lepine shooting, and the dynamics surrounding gender, violence, and perception. Stephen Roney points out the fallacies and hypocrisies of presuming that violence against women is more important than other forms of violence, and makes several observations about current events which tie into this theme. Source: The Independent [Canadian magazine]

Title: Spare us the white ribbon attack: we surrender

Author: Stephen Roney

Date: January 7, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/13/0321235.shtml

9 YO Girl Charged With Sexual Assault

Scott · 13 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "Here is a budding neo-feminist breaking gender barriers once the domain of males: "The elementary school student (9 years old) sic was charged last week with fourth-degree sexual assault, a misdemeanor, and three counts of risk of injury to a minor, a felony, said Manchester police Sgt. John Maston."" This isn't something you see reported on very often, and it's encouraging to hear that the police seem to be taking this seriously.Source: The Boston Globe [newspaper]

Title: Girl, 9, charged with sexual assault

Author: Unknown [AP story]

Date: January 11, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/13/0339221.shtml

Issues with Female Cadets at VMI

Scott · 13 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

DaveW writes "This editorial in The Women's Quarterly of the Independent Women's Forum thoughtfully discusses some the issues involved in the Supreme-Court-forced introduction of female cadets at Virginia Military Institute."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/13/0342214.shtml

Advice to Fathers: Avoid Court When Possible

Scott · 14 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

ronn pointed us to this story from the Ottawa Citizen. Dave Brown writes about the experiences of fathers in the family court system, and finds that for most fathers, you're better off avoiding going to court when it's at all possible: "The best way to deal with the legal industry is to avoid it. It should not be regarded as a justice system. It is an industry that provides incomes for its insiders and, as an industry, its raw material is us." Until the family courts regain a semblance of fairness, I have to admit that he's right.Source: The Ottawa Citizen [Canadian newspaper]

Title: Avoiding court is best defence

Author: Dave Brown

Date: January 12, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/14/1547204.shtml

L.A. Times Ignoring Abused Men, Again

Scott · 15 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Angelucci writes *"The Los Angeles Times printed a long, front page article that focuses on the question of whether a child should stay at home when a mother is abused by a father - not one word about mothers abusing fathers and whether the kids should stay home in that situation. I'm so sick of this that I called the news editor, who surprisingly called back saying "you have a point" and said he'd speak to the editors. It would be nice if he heard from others too. You can leave him a message by calling 213-237-7000 and asking for news editor Dean Bachi. Also, the reader's representative is at 877-554-4000, and the editor's email is letters@latimes.com. Thanks!"*Source: The Los Angeles Times [newspaper]

Title: Deciding if a Child Is Safe

Author: Carla Rivera

Date: January 14, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/14/195247.shtml

It's Time For The Media To Focus On Causes of Male Suicide

Nightmist · 15 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Although I know quite a bit has been written lately about the San Diego suicide of Derrick K. Miller, I felt that something from a media perspective needed to be added to the discussion. As a police reporter for a newspaper in Franklin, Tenn., I covered all kinds of horrifying stories, including one which is remarkably similar to Miller's. Here are my thoughts on how the media should follow up on Miller's story. This column will also appear on ifeminists.com. Special thanks to Wendy McElroy for continuing to run my column.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/13/0445212.shtml

NY Wants Taxpayers to Pay For Women's Personal Choices

Nightmist · 15 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy's latest column warns New York against incoming Mayor Michael Bloomberg's efforts to get taxpayers to fund abortion training for medical residents. Is this, once again, government suggesting that women may make choices without taking responsibility for their actions? McElroy says: I believe the pro-life side has won the abortion debate in North America precisely because pro-choice advocates insist on tax funding, in one form or another, for abortions. That position is both morally insupportable and legally imprudent.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/15/0342223.shtml

$50k per Month Child Support Payments

Scott · 16 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

DanCurry writes "With what is already the highest child support award in the state of California, it's still not enough for this struggling mother. Lisa Bonder Kerkorian is currently seeking a monthly payment of $320k. Listing outrageous monthly expenses such as $144k for travel, $4,300 for food and $7,000 for charities. This clearly shows what her true objective is, taking all his money, not just what the child needs. Though this may seem extreme, many divorce cases, especially those of the poor, equal a complete transfer of income from the father to the mother." Update: I have removed in incorrect mathematical statement from the summary. Also thanks to Deacon for sending in this link on the same story.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/15/1220258.shtml

Ontario Tracking False Rape Accusations

Nightmist · 16 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This story from equityfeminism.com details Ontario's efforts at tracking incidents of false accusations of rape. It would be an interesting experiment to deploy a computerized system like this in several U.S. states and see if rates of false allegations are similar to those in Canada. At the very least, it would be good to have solid numbers rather than just speculation on the false sexual assault allegations in the United States.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/15/2010228.shtml

Glenn Sacks to Appear on KABC Los Angeles

Scott · 16 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks will be an in-studio guest on the Al Rantel Show on KABC 790 AM in Los Angeles this Thursday (1/17) at 8 PM. Glenn and Al will be discussing Glenn's recent column on the tragic courthouse suicide of distraught father Derrick Miller and the epidemic of male suicide in America. Anybody who would like to call in to the show to talk to Glenn and Al may do so at 1-800-222-KABC. You can listen to the show on the web at this site.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/15/1959254.shtml

Gender Studies: The Sexuality of Terrorism

Nightmist · 16 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Just when we thought it couldn't get any worse. First, Judy Mann blames men for terrorism. Other feminist writers soon follow suit. Now The Dept. of Women's Studies at California State University is offering a course titled "The Sexuality of Terrorism," according to this story from Pacific Research Institute. Most people never imagined that terrorism had anything to do with sexuality, but that's not what those who study women think. But according to their materials, it would be more accurate to say that terrorism has a nationality, one that sounds a lot like American.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/15/2016202.shtml

Chat Tonight: Men's Health - What are you Doing About Your Own?

Scott · 16 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tonight's (1/16) MANN on-line chat will be held on a topic related more to "personal activism," namely taking care of your own health. I know that as an advocate for men's health, I've sometimes neglected my own, or at least not prioritized it as I should, and I'm working on eliminating that contradiction. Nightmist will be hosting the chat, which starts at 9:30 PM EST at the MANN on-line chat page. Join us for an informal discussion on men's health in general and what you can do to better take care of your own.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/16/1327206.shtml

Guys Read: A Literacy Program for Boys

Scott · 16 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I almost fell over in my local independent bookstore the other day, when I saw a table display in the children's book section called Guys Read. Jon Scieszka is promoting literacy and boys' issues in general with his GuysRead.com web site, suggesting books that young boys will enjoy and offering information to readers about why boys' literacy is such an urgent issue. Update: Jon's e-mail is guysread@aol.com. Why not send him a note of thanks?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/16/037226.shtml

James Q. Wilson on the Decline of Marriage

Scott · 16 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

We have a ton of messages submitted by the tireless Neil Steyskal which have yet to be posted, this one being from over a week ago. We are going to catch up with you, Neil! :) Anyway, the article is about the decline of marriage and is by noted author James Q. Wilson. Wilson believes that the decline of stable marriages is largely due to state benefits to single mothers (including, but not limited to, welfare policy) and cultural changes such as the rise of individualism, the loss of stigma related to illegitimacy and divorce, among others. Wilson also admits that there is little we can do to change the culture other than making our own decisions differently. The article is long and in-depth, and can be read here.
Source: City Journal [magazine]

Title: Why We Don't Marry

Author: James Q. Wilson

Date: Winter 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/16/041215.shtml

Working Dads Get No Sympathy (Surprised?)

Adam · 17 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

According to this article, dads can expect no sympathy from anyone for their troubles and the discrimination they face. To quote, "More than a quarter of Australian fathers believe they are expected to sacrifice time with their children to put in more hours at work, but their female co-workers are not sympathetic, a survey has found." Where's sensitivity when a man needs it? There's never been a greater need for it, in my opinion.Source: The Sydney Morning Herald [Australian newspaper]

Title: No kidding, working dads whinge and get scant sympathy from mothers

Author: Karen Ingram

Date: January 15, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/16/0315214.shtml

NOW Spinoff Wants 9/11 Money

Scott · 17 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

thrudd sent in this Fox News story and writes "A women's rights group is demanding a share of the $11 billion in federal disaster relief for the 9/11 terror attacks, saying it wants the money for affirmative action programs to help more women break into traditionally male fields like firefighting, construction and policing." Perhaps Wendy's recent article on this is drawing others at Fox to report on the issue? Source: Fox News

Title: Women's Group to Congress: Give Us 9/11 Money or See You in Court

Author: Catherine Donaldson-Evans

Date: January 15, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/16/1340245.shtml

Single Dad Gets Recognition and Praise

Scott · 17 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve Burke sent in a wonderful article from New Hampshire's Union Leader. It's about a single father and what he's done for his daughter, who needed two heart transplants before she was even three years old. The dad's dedication is praised several times, and it's clear that this is a guy who has really turned his life around for the better. It's amazing enough to see such a positive article on fatherhood, but this one is one of the best. Source: The Union Leader [newspaper]

Title: Double heart transplant gives girl, 2, shot at life

Author: Carol Robidoux

Date: January 14, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/16/1448223.shtml

The New Male Bashers

Nightmist · 17 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal sent in this column from WorldNetDaily about a new generation of female pop stars, all of them resentful and hateful toward men. The latest is Brandy, singer and star of UPN Network's defunct sitcom dud "Moesha." Her latest single, "What About Us?" plays out on a soon-to-be released video of Brandy lamenting a failed relationship, while standing on a hill. But, according to MTV News' Shaheem Reid, the hill is made of men. Nice messages they're sending to our youth. Fortunately, the columnist is also female, and she displays a significant amount of disgust at the hatred.Source: WorldNetDaily.com [web site]

Title: Pop princesses' jihad on men

Author: Debbie Schlussel

Date: January 15, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/16/2214232.shtml

Rape-Hunting Nurses Approved In Court, But Limited

Nightmist · 17 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal sent in this story from the Washington Post about Virginia's decision to allow SANE (Sexual Assault Nurse Examiner) testimony in sex criminal trials. Although the courts will allow the testimony about the physical attributes of the victim's injuries, they have barred SANE nurses from testifying whether those injuries were caused by a sexual assault. *In issuing its ruling, the court ordered a new trial for a Fairfax County man convicted of rape in 1999, saying that the jury heard improper testimony from a SANE nurse called by the prosecution. Eduardo V. Velazquez was found guilty of assaulting a 15-year-old girl.*Source: The Washington Post [newspaper]

Title: Nurses' Testimony Limited in Rape Cases

Author: Carol Morello

Date: January 13, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/16/2218257.shtml

Wonder of Boys Author Releases Wonder of Girls

Nightmist · 18 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal submitted this USA Today story about Michael Gurian's new book The Wonder of Girls. In the article, Gurian is credited with launching the "Boy Movement" after his previous book, The Wonder of Boys, drew attention to the shortchanging boys get in reading and writing versus the special attention girls get in math and science. In this book, Gurian challenges the gender feminist vision of girlhood: Feminism ignores scientific explanations for young girls' dilemmas, he says, in favor of saying the culture "socializes" them. He sums up his central message: "Female biology has to be more important than feminist ideology."
Source: USA Today [newspaper]

Title: 'Wonder' dad nurtures a debate Girls should be taught that the best things in life are bonding, loving, being loved, author says

Author: Karen S. Peterson

Date: January 15, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/16/2225223.shtml

Afghan Bias Campaign Phase II to Begin

Scott · 18 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Men's Health America campaign to lobby the media to include news about the brutalization of Afghan men is about to enter phase II. A special thanks to everyone who participated in the first phase, it was a great success, and many letters were published in leading newspapers around the world. Click Read More for an announcement about phase II.

Dear Activist:

On January 21, we will be re-launching the Afghan Men grass-roots campaign.

Why should we be concerned about the plight of males in far-away Afghanistan? There are two reasons:

1. Civilian Afghan men have been subjected to some of the worst human rights violations over the past decade.

These abuses include forced labor, involuntary conscription, torture, and widespread killings. These men were not targeted because they were engaged in any illegal activities. They were targeted specifically because they were MEN. And 750,000 other Afghan men have been killed or maimed by land-mines, often while trying to earn money to support their families.

These abuses have been summarized in several Special Reports compiled by Men's Health America.

2. Feminists are exploiting the situation in Afghanistan in order to impose a quota system on the new Afghan government.

According to a recent article by Wendy McElroy, "Boss Tweed" Feminism, [December 11, 2001] feminists are using euphemistic phrases such as including the voices of women in government in order to push a feminist utopia on post-Taliban Afghanistan.

This top-down strategy worked in Kosovo, where the parliament now functions under a UN-mandated quota system that required that one-third of all candidates in the 2001 election were female. A similar tactic was also used in Argentina, which dramatically increased the number of women who have been elected into government.

If Afghanistan goes the way of Kosovo and Argentina, then what countries will be next?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/18/0135202.shtml

Women Are Pigs Too

Nightmist · 18 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

If turn-about is fair play, then this article on AskMen.com is playing fairest of them all. Challenging the common feminist-perpetuated notion that "men are pigs," Curt Smith points out the ways in which women, in general, are just as swine-like. I want people to better understand that men and women are more alike than they think when it comes to sex and sins of the flesh. Oink, oink!Source: AskMen.com [web site]

Title: All Women Are Pigs

Author: Curt Smith

Date: Unknown

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/16/2310236.shtml

Parenting Rights Bill Pending

Scott · 18 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Thomas writes "Colorado Majority Whip Bill Sinclair has proposed a bill that, if passed, will eliminate some of the gross injustices of the family law juggernaut. To see a summary of the bill, click here. Unfortunately, you'll then have to scroll down and use the link to "House Bill 02-1190" [Due to frames]. The bill requires a presumption of equally shared parenting, to be overruled only in extenuating circumstances. It also contains a clause for - get this - a change in primary custody if the non-custodial parent is victimized by a false allegation on the part of the custodial parent. In addition, it increases the standard for certain allegations from the vague and much abused "preponderance of evidence" to a more stringent "clear and convincing.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/17/1925223.shtml

National ID Proposal Could Track Fathers

Scott · 18 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Electronic Frontier Foundation recently released an action alert including information about two proposals that have implications for fathers. The American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators is recommending that driver's licenses be modified to be used as a National ID card, and are promoting a Driver Record Information Verification System, which would track all sorts of personal data on people to be shared by state and federal agencies. This centralized database will be certain to track fathers and child support payers, if not immediately than in the future. Click here for contact info for the AAMVA, a sample letter, and more background info.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/18/0450214.shtml

Angry Divorced Fathers Flood KABC Radio Phone Lines During Glenn Sacks' Appearance

Scott · 18 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Calls from angry divorced fathers flooded KABC Los Angeles radio phone lines during Glenn Sacks' two-hour appearance on the Al Rantel Show Thursday night. Glenn and Al discussed Glenn's column on the dramatic courthouse suicide of distraught San Diego father Derrick Miller, and the discrimination which men routinely face in family court.
To listen to the full show (minus news and commercials), go to Glenn's website at GlennJSacks.com. To contact KABC's Al Rantel with comments, e-mail him at Alrantel@aol.com. To contact Glenn Sacks, e-mail him at GlennJSacks@cs.com.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/18/178209.shtml

Family Oriented Men and International Men's Network Unite

Scott · 19 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

JimBWarrior has announced a recent merger between his group, Family Oriented Men, and the International Men's Network. As such, they have a new web site, which can be seen here. I think it's great to see more co-operation between groups in the men's movement. As more people work together, our effectiveness increases.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/18/1552210.shtml

Cathy Young on Rape Shield Laws

Scott · 19 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal sent us Cathy Young's latest column in Reason magazine. In it, Young makes some important observations about rape shield laws, and the problem of achieving justice when potentially important and relevant evidence is barred from the courtroom. She argues that rape shield laws were enacted when there were abusive practices involving prejudice against the alleged victim, but now the pendulum has swung too far in the other direction. Source: Reason [magazine]

Title: Excluded Evidence: The dark side of rape shield laws

Author: Cathy Young

Date: February 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/18/1610242.shtml

MANN/iFeminists Chat: Divorce and Suicide

Scott · 19 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This Sunday's (1/20) joint MANN/iFeminists.com chat will be on whether the law is morally responsible for the suicides of fathers who seem to be arbitrarily denied access to their children. The recent protest/suicide of Derrick Miller has temporarily, at least, brought some attention to this problem. What should be done? What are also the implications for the children, the women, society? Join us at 9:00 PM EST at the iFeminists.com chat room.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/16/0248242.shtml

Supreme Court Refuses to Hear Case of Man Forced to Pay for Child Not His Own

Scott · 19 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Thomas writes "This article describes the recent refusal by the US Supreme Court to hear the case of a man forced to pay child support for children born by his then-wife as a result of her cheating on him. For now, at least, this all-too-common, monstrous injustice must be fought on a state-by-state basis." Ouch. This is a major loss for the cause of men's reproductive rights.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/18/1954251.shtml

The Wrestlers Have Balls

Nightmist · 20 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal submitted this story from USA Today about a group of college wrestling advocates who are taking the Education Department to task (in court) over the destruction of men's sports by Title IX. The suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Washington, alleges that the Education Department's interpretation of the law has wrongly prompted colleges to bring their athletic programs into compliance by eliminating men's teams and scholarships. An Anonymous User also submitted this story from jsonline.com.

Source: USA Today [Newspaper]

Title: College wrestlers take on Title IX: Lawsuit charges discrimination

Author: Gary Mihoces

Date: January 17, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/18/2048230.shtml

Abuse Letter Printed in LA Times

Nightmist · 20 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The LA Times printed Shawn Larsen's letter regarding the Times recent article which spoke of abuse of women and children but ignored men. Thanks to Neil Steyskal for this submission, and thanks to the rest of you who wrote the LA Times. Scott's update: Shawn Larsen himself wrote in to tell us about this success. Great work, Shawn!

Source: LA Times [newspaper]

Title: Child Abuse

Author: Shawn Larsen

Date: January 18, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/18/2055251.shtml

Men Need More Domestic Violence Services

Scott · 20 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc writes, *"The LA Times printed my article addressing male victims of domestic violence. They left out the Fiebert bibliography and a few other things, but it's still progress. I'm working on getting them to do a story on the topic in the near future, and it looks promising. But meanwhile there may be responses that misleadingly attack my facts and figures, so a few positive responses sent to letters@latimes.com would be nice. Thanks!"*Source: The Los Angeles Times [newspaper]

Title: Expand Outreach and Shelter to Include Males

Author: Marc Angelucci

Date: January 19, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/19/1930202.shtml

Does More Sex Lead To Greater Risk of Prostate Cancer?

Nightmist · 20 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal writes "It appears that sex with more partners increases the risk of [prostate] cancer. However the quantity of sex with one parter, or alone, does not increase risk." The story is here This Spectator article was apparently generated after an anti-pornography advocate wrote to the paper hinting that increased sexual activity among men has led to an increase in prostate cancer.

Source: The Spectator [Newspaper]

Title: The wages of sex

Author: Robert Baker

Date: January 19, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/18/211225.shtml

Gender-Neutral Public Nudity Laws

Scott · 20 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes *"Admittedly, [this is] not the most important topic we'll ever discuss here. This article in the Bangor [Maine] Daily News reviews a Bangor judge's odd belief that a public nudity law might only apply to men. Aside from interest generated by the weirdness factor, no one else seems to think the judge is making sense."*Source: Bangor Daily News [newspaper]

Title: Female streakers' case puts public indecency law to test

Author: Renee Ordway

Date: January 18, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/19/1952252.shtml

Sanford, ME Teacher Ruined by Accusations

Scott · 20 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

An Anonymous User sent in a Foster's article about an elementary school teacher who was accused of "improperly touching" one of his 11 year-old students, who he apparently had frequent contact with outside of class, as she lived a few houses down from him. I read an update on this story which I can't find on Foster's site which said that the judge declared a mistrial and the accused teacher cannot be tried again. Note that there were never any formal sexual harassment or assault charges filed against the man, nor is it ever clear that the girl once told him she felt uncomfortable with any of his physical contact. Still, I have to wonder how much common sense the guy has making any physical contact at all with his students, especially in this day and age. Update: The news story of the mistrial can be read here.Source: Foster's Daily Democrat [newspaper]

Title: Testimony begins in assault trial of former Sanford teacher

Author: Unknown [AP story]

Date: January 16, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/19/221250.shtml

Man Forced to Pay CS Despite His Non-Paternity

Scott · 21 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Brian Smith writes "This an an article from the Lewiston, ME Sun Journal newspaper, about a man who must pay child support after a paternity test positively concluded he was not the father." He is still being forced to pay, and DHS is denying him visitation rights because he's "not the father." While the Supreme Court might not be of much help anymore, perhaps this man should try to establish a state court decision on Maine?Source: The Sun Journal [newspaper]

Title: State seeks child support from man who is not father

Author: Bonnie Washuk

Date: January 19, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/19/1959253.shtml

Washington Post Prints Men's Health Articles

Scott · 21 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

nagzi writes "The Washington Post has this article about the upcoming Men's Health Bill. Also, there are three articles dealing with Prostate Cancer. Facts about prostate Cancer (VERY short on facts), Prostate Cancer (filled with some interesting info), and Tackling a Man's Disease (a Female Urologist Crusades Against Prostate Cancer)."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/19/223218.shtml

The End Of Pregnancy?

Adam · 21 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I've found this UK Guardian article claiming that "Within a generation there will be probably be mass use of artificial wombs to grow babies". You're probably wondering why I posted this, the main reason is to counter all those claims that the nearest man is "redundant" and "biologically useless" by showing the other side of the coin, as it were. While the technology is still a few years off, the article makes for an informative and perhaps un-nerving read. That said, do read it, as it pays to be in the know.Source: The Guardian (UK Newspaper)

Title: The end of pregnancy

Author: Jeremy Rifkin

Date: January 17, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/21/0043215.shtml

MensHour Jan 2002 Program(me)

Scott · 21 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I'm again late in announcing this, but the streaming audio program MensHour has had a new release this month. This episode is a kind of year-in-review, with contributions from several people involved in the men's movement, including Karl from AngryHarry.com, Philip Cook, author of Abused Men, Trudy W. Schuett of the DesertLight Journal, Jim Bailey from Family Oriented Men, and several others. You can listen to the program here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/21/145234.shtml

Three Boys Face Pornography Charges, Girl Does Not

Nightmist · 21 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This story in the Sun-Sentinel once again highlights how boys and girls (and men and women) are treated differently when it comes to criminal activity. Four youths (three boys and one girl) produced a pornographic video starring themselves. All four were set to benefit financially from its production. The three boys are now likely to face child pornography charges. The girl will not be charged. "You can't pick and choose who you're going to charge when you have more than one child involved," Lerman said. "It shows the way society treats boys and girls. The boys are punished but the girls have to be protected."

Source: Sun-Sentinel [newspaper]

Title: High school sex video spurs debate over charges

Date: January 18, 2002

Author: Kevin Krause

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/21/0115202.shtml

Man Freed From Child Support He Does Not Owe

Nightmist · 22 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This stunning victory for a man who was sued for $12,303 in back child support, even though he was not the father of the child, is heartening. The Washington Times reports that a 4-3 vote in the Maryland Court of Appeals released Nicholas Todd Walter from the payments. "Without paternity, there is no legal duty; without a legal duty, there can be no financial obligation," according to the judgment written by Lynne A. Battaglia, former U.S. attorney for Maryland who was appointed to the court last year. The ruling reverses a 1994 decision by the state's highest court that a man who agreed to pay child support, but later discovered he was not the biological father, must continue to pay. Scott's note: Thanks also to Neil Steyskal for submitting this story.

Source: Washington Times [newspaper]

Title: Court frees man from child-support order

Author: Arlo Wagner

Date: January 20, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/21/1613257.shtml

Massachusetts Under Pressure To Revamp Support Law

Nightmist · 22 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "[This] article... is about the push in Massachusetts to revise the child support and custody statutes to make them more equitable. There are some interesting statements in the piece made to the Chief Justice (a female) sic by a Father's Rights advocate, Mark Charalambous about non-custodial parents (males mostly) being at the breaking point and threatening social upheaval and unrest. Let's watch this one." Interestingly, the Boston lawyers in this piece are arguing for more child support, even in light of the recent suicide of Derrick Miller, who was ordered to pay out 82 percent of his monthly income to his wife (who made twice as much as he in one month).

Source: Massachusetts News [newspaper]

Title: Fathers See Rift Among Lawyers

Author: Unknown

Date: January 15, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/21/1922234.shtml

In Praise of Good Men, and Hobbits

Scott · 22 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal sent us this interesting review of The Fellowship of the Ring. In it, Marian Coombs talks about the masculine camaraderie that the Fellowship exhibits, and the importance of this movie as a cultural event. I have a friend who also thinks the greatest part of the book and the movie was the male friendships and how they were portrayed. Did anyone else see it and get the same impression?
Source: The Washington Times [newspaper]

Title: Men behaving sublimely

Author: Marian Kester Coombs

Date: January 20, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/22/041206.shtml

Sex Good for Aging Men's Hearts

Scott · 22 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal submitted this short article from the New York Post which dispels the myth that older men can die of a heart attack during sex. It even goes so far as to say that frequent sex is good for your heart as you get older. What a relief!Source: The New York Post [newspaper]

Title: SEX HELPS OLDER HEARTS: STUDY

Author: Unknown

Date: January 18, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/22/046205.shtml

Black Men and Lynching

Scott · 22 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Bill Kuhl sent in a short essay on his thoughts regarding a recent NPR program about the new book, At the Hands of Persons Unknown: The Lynching of Black America. While the book wasn't written from a men's issues stance, Bill's comments point out that there is a strong connection between the lynching of blacks and men's issues. Read More for his submission...

Black Men and Their Historical Plight:
A New Book on Lynchings

The January 21, 2002 edition of NPR's Fresh Air with Terry Gross, the Peabody Award-winning weekday magazine of contemporary arts and issues, aired an interview with the author of a new book on the history of lynching.

Philip Dray's tome, At the Hands of Persons Unknown: The Lynching of Black America, chronicles the history and dynamics of lynchings from Reconstruction to the modern day. You might be asking yourself, What does this have to do with men's issues?

First of all, I've never heard of a woman being lynched, and if Dray knows of such an incident, he didn't mention it on the air. In response to Gross' questions, the author elaborated on the history of legislative attempts to put an end to lynchings. He stated that, by and large, federal laws to put an end to this barbaric custom failed; anti-lynching advocates never managed to get passed a law to stop, specifically, lynchings. I couldn't help but wonder if they wouldn't have had far less difficulty had one out of every 10 lynching victims been female. For the record, lynchings stopped for a variety of reasons, one of which was that Nazis and Fascists in Europe publicized lynchings in America as a way of saying, Look at how you treat your people. (or your Black men, I should say)

Another gender angle to Dray's book is that often lynchings were the result of knee-jerk reactions by white men to protect white women. A very common accusation against the eventual victim was that he had threatened or frightened a white woman in a sexual way. In some cases, the accusation was rape. And, as Dray stated, an accusation of rape was sure to cause a lynch mob to form. Dray's book also brings out some interesting insights on the plight of black men in their efforts to avoid being lynched.
He stated that Black parents wouldn't want to teach their sons to be particularly ambitious or bold because this might attract the attention of a lynch mob. He also mentioned that Black families frequently felt forced to move because of the threat of lynchings. And having to be so transient must have placed another burden on Black fathers/husbands, that of finding work in a new community. I'm aware that Dray's book is not written from a men's issues angle. But it's also notable that February is Black History Month. And, thinking of Black History gives me pause.

It leaves me to wonder how the men's movement might be more amenable to Black men and include them in the cause of men's rights as we know it.

Bill Kuhl

At the Hands of Persons Unknown

The Lynching of Black America

Philip Dray

History - Americas | Random House | Hardcover | January 2002 | $35.00 | 0-375-50324-2

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/22/1419203.shtml

More on Massachusetts Fathers

Scott · 23 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

AFG writes *"This article discusses the battle being waged by Massachusetts dads in the courts and in the state legislature. In particular, it talks about the many reforms that father's rights groups are trying to get politicians to enact, while meeting considerable resistance from feminists. Some fo the demands are as follows: "We'd like to see the legislature enact shared parenting legislation like S813 from Sen. Stephen Brewer and/or H2546 from Rep. Scott Brown. We also need restraining order reform like S952 or S953, which would protect good, honest and innocent men and fathers and their families from state persecution, political correctness, judicial sophistry, bad laws and people of low character who use the system for vicious and vindictive reasons.""*Source: The Massachusetts News [newspaper]

Title: Fathers Face Uphill Battle for Equality in Commonwealth

Author: Curt Lovelace

Date: January 16, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/22/2131237.shtml

Dad's fight for Kids Blocked at Every Turn

Scott · 23 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Garth sent in this article from the Vancouver Province and writes "Take a loving father, an alcoholic and drug addicted ex-wife, and the British Columbia Children's Ministry. Watch as the Ministry does everything possible to keep the kids away from Dad." The article details this man's struggle for custody of his children. It's good to see his story in print - the more the public is made aware of how often this kind of thing happens, the more likely we are to create change based on outrageous cases such as his.Source: The Vancouver Province [Canadian newspaper]

Title: Dad's fight for kids blocked at every turn

Author: Kathy Tait

Date: January 20, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/23/046246.shtml

Editorial on Title IX

Scott · 23 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal submitted this USA Today article critical of Title IX. " When college administrators cut men's programs, they rarely add women's sports. Getting equal numbers of athletes, in other words, "living by a quota," is all that matters." The article states that in the past six years, more than 350 men's athletic programs have been cut. Mike Moyer, the author, is the director of the National Wrestling Coaches Association.
Source: USA Today [newspaper]

Title: Law hurts men, women

Author: Mike Moyer

Date: January 21, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/23/0414228.shtml

DesertLight Journal - Jan. 23

Scott · 23 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

A new DesertLight Journal issue has been released, which includes news about a Maryland paternity fraud court case, a college which is getting a dialogue going between the women's programs and men's programs administrators, and further progress on the International Men's Network, which recently added groups such as Family Oriented Men and Live Beat Dads - Scotland to its umbrella. You can read the latest DLJ at this link.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/23/1445256.shtml

No "Official" Chat Tonight

Scott · 24 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Due to various reasons, it has been decided that the MANN on-line chats will be held on the first and third Wednesday nights of every month. Topics will be announced 1-2 days before the scheduled chats. Thus there will be no official chat this evening. If you still want to meet an chew the fat with other men's activists, you can still stop by the chat room every week, but there's no guarantee that anyone else will be there.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/23/2011219.shtml

New DV Center To Open In Nashville; Serves Both Sexes

Nightmist · 24 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This story in the Nashville Scene reports on the opening of the Mary Parrish Center for Victims of Domestic and Sexual Violence, coming Feb. 14. According to the article, victims of abuse face more bureaucratic red tape than assistance in Nashville, and this center hopes to change that. The author alludes that the center assists both women and men. A woman--or man, for that matter--who finally musters the courage to seek protection from their abuser is always in for a rude awakening when she or he encounters the city's Byzantine bureaucracy. But the new center's opening is expected to mitigate such procedural red tape for Nashville victims, many of whom face life or death situations.

Source: Nashville Scene [newspaper]

Title: A Place to Run From Home

Author: Liz Murray Garrigan

Date: January 24, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/23/0428238.shtml

Geena Pushes Title IX

Scott · 24 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal also sent in this link to a USA Today story and writes "Geena Davis is being used to push Title IX even after USA Today showed that it has devastated men's teams. Comment to: editor@usatoday.com." It's one thing to promote girls' interest in sports, but another to encourage discrimination accusations with "quizzes" on Title IX compliance and promoting a destructive double standard. Source: USA Today [newspaper]

Title: Gender equity is Geena's new target

Author: Janet Kornblum

Date: January 22, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/23/1452213.shtml

Red Lobster Ad Portrays Men as Buffoons

Scott · 24 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Bledso writes "This is yet another classic example of the male buffoon advertising style that plagues us. The Red Lobster commercial can be viewed here. There is also a nauseating writeup that sings its praises here. Some guy acts like a fool as his significant other, not surprisingly, rolls her eyes with disgust. Same old nonsense. Although I'm not a fan of this type of "buffoon" advertising, if they are going to use it, they should at least be "inclusive" and allow women to join men and be free of their "state of invisibility" with regard to idiot characterizations. I hear no cry for equal representation in this arena."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/24/1157200.shtml

Woman Jailed for False Allegation of Rape

Scott · 24 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

AFG sent us this story from the UK Telegraph and writes "Recently, there has been discussion on this site concerning false allegations of rape. One gender feminist has posted that "women don't lie about rape". Well, here is another case that totally disproves her claim." The motive for the accusation was that the woman was upset for "having had an affair for the first time." The woman was sentenced for six months in jail for the false accusation.Source: The Times [UK newspaper]

Title: Prison for chatroom woman who lied about rape

Author: Richard Savill

Date: January 19, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/24/1935241.shtml

DNA Testing of Men Aged 12-40 to Find Rapist in Scotland

Scott · 25 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Am I the only one to be disturbed by this story? Testing of boys as young as 12? Is there any better way to prepare children for the notion that just by being born male, they are simply rapists-in-waiting? Aside from the implications for the children, what about the adults? If I refuse because I know I didn't do it and resent the implication, doesn't that put me under a cloud of suspicion? Or does everyone take the view that if you've done nothing wrong, you've got nothing to fear?" This is going TOO FAR. Men should be in open revolt for something like this. "Detectives are asking every male aged between 12 and 40 and living within 300 metres of the scene of the assault to take part in the screening." I've been told that this is a huge story on Scotland right now. Please, Scottish activists, don't let this happen!Source: Scotland Today [UK newspaper]

Title: DNA tests underway to identify man who raped teenager

Author: Unknown

Date: January 24, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/24/1953240.shtml

Tennessee Making Joint Custody The Law?

Nightmist · 25 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

A bill in the Tennessee House of Representatives (filed for introduction on Monday) proposes to make joint custody of children the law in Tennessee, rather than creating a primary caregiver and visitation for the other parent. This PDF explains the details of the amendment. At its base, the bill says that joint custody should be the default judgment unless one parent is abusive. If a preponderance of evidence contrary to the abuse claims is not presented (guilty until proven innocent), primary custody will be given to the other parent.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/24/1950230.shtml

NH Bill to Require Men to Register for Draft to Obtain Driver's Licenses

Scott · 25 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve Burke submitted this story from Foster's Daily Democrat, describing a NH Senate bill that, if passed, will require men to sign consent forms when obtaining drivers licenses to be automatically registered with Selective Service upon turning 18. As the article states, so much for the "Live Free or Die" slogan. It's hard for me not to editorialize more on this here, so I'll refrain from further comment.Source: Foster's Daily Democrat [newspaper]

Title: Bill would require men to register for draft to get driver’s license

Author: Norma Love

Date: January 24, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/25/0223255.shtml

Female Teacher Rapes Underage Boy

Scott · 25 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes *"This article is significant because of the way the state of New Jersey seems to bend over backwards to make the sentence as easy as possible for the female rapist. Ever notice that when boys are statutorily raped by females such as in this case it is rarely referred to as "rape" in the media? It is always, "endangering the welfare of a child" as in the recent Paula Poundstone whitewash or "aggravated(sic)sexual assault." This article illustrates the misandrous double standard when it comes to female sexual predators. They are viewed as having a mental illness whereas male offenders are moral bankrupts who should be put away for at least 20+ years."*Source: The Record [newspaper]

Title: Clifton teacher admits sex assault on boy, 13

Author: Nicole Gaudiano

Date: January 18, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/25/1410213.shtml

Feminist Utopia Says Men's Health Is Being Ignored

Nightmist · 25 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This article from Feminist Utopia attacks the gender feminist policies which have led to more funding for breast cancer research than prostate cancer research. It also provides a table of facts about various cancers and the differences in mortality for men and women. While I was collecting information to present here I happened to notice something else... men are infected with cancers that make up the majority of cancer victims at higher rates than women are. I will not speculate why that is, there is plenty of information available for you to investigate on your own. But it is a point worth making notice of.

Source: Feminist Utopia [Web site]

Title: Gender and Cancer

Author: Unknown

Date: Unknown

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/25/1654258.shtml

MHA Campaign Underway

Scott · 26 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Men's Health Campaign to stop the media silence on the brutalization of Afghan men is currently in Phase II. If you aren't on the MHA mailing list, join here. There are currently four critical messages that need to be read: introduction, MHA Special Report Facts, MHA and NCFM Join Forces, and 9 Out of 10 Landmine Victims are Male. Let's make Phase II of this campaign just as successful as the first!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/26/036236.shtml

Sacks: In Defense of Michael Jordan

Scott · 26 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks wrote another knockout article on the topic of Michael Jordan's divorce, which was initiated by his wife. The way the article opens is great - it really shows the double standard at play here. As Sacks writes, "In discussing relationships, American society has taken the immense complexity and difficulty of marriage and family life and reduced it to one simple rule--when in doubt, blame the man." Sacks points out several media stories on the divorce which prove this point. His article is also being featured on the ifeminists.com web site. Thanks goes out to ronn for submitting this as well.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/26/146218.shtml

My Reward, My Punishment...My Son

Scott · 26 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

ronn submitted this article from Fathermag.com. It's an essay on what I believe is the typical experience of divorced fathers, and is a good introduction to what father's rights is all about in that respect. For married dads that haven't gone through this yet, he points out that you are only "one decision" away from being in his shoes. The truth of this is often hard to swallow, but needs to be acknowledged. All dads are vulnerable, and they need to realize this and start supporting men's rights. Source: Fathermag.com [web site]

Title: My Reward, My Punishment...My Son

Author: Steven Manchester

Date: Unknown

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/26/1640236.shtml

Female PhysEd Teacher Alleged to Have Statutorily Raped Three Boys

Scott · 27 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

zensmile writes "It is ironic that television always portrays men as the sexual protagonists in television shows involving schools. Here is a real life story about a woman who is the wrongdoer." The woman was quoted as saying to police about one of the accusers, "If he had been older I would certainly have had a relationship with him." Apparently this woman isn't particularly bright, either. The boys were 14 or 15 years-old when this allegedly happened. Thanks also to AFG for sending us this article on the same story.Source: The Times [UK newspaper]

Title: PE mistress 'lured boys into sex at parties'

Author: Michael Horsnell

Date: January 22, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/26/1718223.shtml

Russian Mothers to be Freed from Prisons

Scott · 27 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

AFG sent in this story and writes "This is disgusting. Reuters (via Men's News Daily) reports that ALL mothers in Russian prisons will be granted pardons - no matter how serious their crimes. There is no mention of similar amnesty for male prisoners; in fact, the article does not even mention men at all." Thanks also to rparent32 who sent us this link on the same story.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/26/1725208.shtml

Women's Managerial Pay Gap Widens?

Scott · 27 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

An Anonymous User sent in this article and writes "The wage gap between female managers and their male counterparts was even greater in 2000 than it had been five years earlier, according to a congressional study of 10 industries. Of course the headline was presented in an alarming regard, despite the the fact that women increased 29% in managerial positions, and outpaced men's earnings in three industries. The article does not make any distinction to hours worked (or God forbid productivity factors) but does relate family as a contributing factor. I'd like to see the data from this research, and find out who conducted the analysis of data." Neil Steyskal also sent in this Washington Post article on the same topic. Source: The Boston Globe [newspaper]

Title: Women earnings compared to men dropped from 1995-2000

Author: Nedra Pickler

Date: January 24, 2002

Source: The Washington Post [newspaper]

Title: Male-Female Salary Gap Growing, Study Says

Author: Shannon Henry

Date: January 24, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/27/0429252.shtml

Estrogen Imbalance Could Be Hazardous To Men's Health

Scott · 27 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes *"Here is another article about using the clinically unproven postpartum depression syndrome as a defense in a murder case. What is odd about this particular story is that the victims's parents are defending the perpetrator! They do not want her prosecuted. Maybe postpartum depression is contagious, like watching someone yawn then you automatically yawn too. Go figure!"*Source: The Washington Post [newspaper]

Title: Fairfax Woman Free on Bond in Husband's Death

Author: Tom Jackman

Date: January 23, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/27/1718244.shtml

No "Official" MANN/iFeminists Chat Tonight

Scott · 27 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy and I have both been inordinately busy in the past week, and it was decided that we would not come up with any particular topic for tonight's joint chat, which is held at the iFeminists chat room. So if you want to drop by and talk it up, about just about anything, feel free to do so. The chat normally begins at 9 PM EST.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/27/1917209.shtml

Pay Gap Activism Continues

Scott · 28 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal sent us this article from Newsweek and writes *"Eleanor Clift is pushing the story about the pay gap widening. She slants it to imply that discrimination against women is increasing. But the feminists are smart enough to avoid making that claim explicit. It would look pretty silly. Still, this study will clearly provoke a lot of agitation, and probably some new laws. Let's hope someone objective can get at the study's details."*Source: Newsweek [magazine]

Title: The Mellow Side of John Dingell

Author: Eleanor Clift

Date: January 25, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/27/1723232.shtml

Media Watch Page Updated

Scott · 28 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Nightmist has been helping out by taking over the maintenance of the Media Watch page, which will now be updated more regularly. If you find a commercial or ad which you feel is particularly pro- or anti-male, please drop us a line at admin@mensactivism.org and we will look into adding it. And a special thanks to Nightmist for taking over this project!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/28/0148244.shtml

Why Dads Matter

Adam · 28 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Warren Farrell has written a new article on fatherhood based on his findings in Father and Child Reunion. He makes quite a good case that nearly all of us have missed the start of the "silent revolution" involving fatherhood, and that the much unnoticed contributions and sacrifices fathers make. It's part 1 of 2 articles, so can someone keep an eye on the site and inform us when the next part is written? It would be greatly appreciated.Source: www.dadmag.com [web site]

Title: Why Dads Matter

Author: Warren Farrell

Date: Unknown

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/27/2340238.shtml

Now is the Time - Help Our Afghan Brothers

Scott · 28 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Men's Health America campaign to expose the plight of Afghan men is now in full swing. Click here for info on lobbying the director of Amnesty International to stop neglecting the human rights violations of Afghan men. This recent posting also includes the e-mail addresses of other AI officials. Our voice is stronger in numbers - please take a moment to help and increase our volume!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/28/0532219.shtml

Terrorism Isn't Male After All

Nightmist · 28 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This story from Lycos News provides the prime example needed to refute gender feminist claims that terrorism is male. A Palenstinian woman apparently blew up herself and another in a terrorist attack in Israel. Surprisingly, the news article does not make a big deal out of the fact that the terrorist was a woman, except for this: If confirmed, it would be the first suicide bombing carried out by a woman in Israel. It was the first fatal bombing carried out by a woman in a 16-month Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation. Israeli officials also say they've heard rumblings about more women terrorists. Update: Also thanks to frank h for submitting the Yahoo! version of this story and aurora for submitting the Fox News version.

Source: Lycos News [Web site]

Title: Woman Bomber Kills Israeli, Self

Author: Jeffrey Heller

Date: January 27, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/27/2319254.shtml

I Held A Masculist Workshop And Lived

Adam · 28 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Here's an interesting article about the "fun" a man had trying to hold a masculist workshop and promote men's issues at the same time. He gives some handy tips on what to do and what to expect, and he made some converts for our good cause at the same time. So, have a read of the article to get the full story.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/27/2344249.shtml

MTV Bashes Men

Scott · 29 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "MTV's TRL (Total Request Live) ran an episode this week called "Ass-Kicking Chicks" featuring 10 of the most popular female acts in music. Videos of the artists were shown and the artists were interviewed, and they talked about how unfair life is for women. Male-bashing was of course the central theme of the show. Just when I thought it couldn't get any worse the two hostesses wrapped up the show by thanking all the women featured and finished with a comment for men..."and thanks for men for being so much lamer than we are" said the one while the other followed with "losers!" and put her hand in the shape of an L on her forehead. I figured they might take it back or add a "just kidding," but they didn't. That was the final send-off. I don't have a link for the show or MTV but I'm sure there is one."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/28/2342210.shtml

Wendy McElroy Comments on Male Suicide and Father's Rights

Nightmist · 29 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy's increasingly popular Fox News column this week relates the story of Derrick Miller (who committed suicide on the steps of the San Diego courthouse recently) and discusses its relationship to father's rights. If a similar rise in female suicides was occurring, a public crusade would demand a remedy. Yet the extraordinarily high rate of male suicide is rarely discussed. Wendy also quotes my Jan. 15 column on the subject. blush Fair warning as well: this column may give you chills.

Source: Fox News [Web site]

Title: Are father's rights a factor in male suicide?

Author: Wendy McElroy

Date: January 29, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/28/2324226.shtml

Thankfully, Feminism Hasn't Destroyed All Masculine Men

Scott · 29 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tom Campbell and Will Johnson both submitted this article by Phyllis Schafly. In it, Schafly outlines the danger of feminism trying to eliminate masculine men, and our good fortune that we still have some left when they are needed in the war on terrorism. While Schafly is obviously using the double standard of chivalry, she does seem to appreciate men and criticizes how feminism has demonized and marginalized men and masculinity.Source: TownHall.com [web site]

Title: Feminism meets terrorism

Author: Phyllis Schafly

Date: January 23, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/29/1717202.shtml

Sommers: Women's Studies Not an Academic Discipline

Scott · 29 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

tparker writes "Christina Hoff Sommers is going to be speaking at the Yale Political Union on Monday, 01/28/02, on the topic of Women's Studies. I don't know if this is a debate format or what. Sure would like to hear the results. The URL of the announcement is here." I bet the feathers are going to fly today!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/29/1720209.shtml

Anti-Male Junk Science

Scott · 30 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

DanCurry writes "As if we weren't already bombarded with male-bashing in the media, Judicial System and Politics. Enter stage left, more junk science to show our natural inferiority to females, is peering it's ugly head once again. This report, from Michigan State University, laden with contradictions, tries to characterize the increased birth of boys as a defect caused by contamination from pollutants and futher links this to birth defects. At best, the report is inconclusive and should have never seen the printing press as it only serves as ammunition in the ever growing acceptance of male-bashing and female superiority."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/29/1342232.shtml

Women And Why We Leave Them

Nightmist · 30 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

If political incorrectness is what you're looking for, this article may be it. Dennis Neder on AskMen.com ventures into uncharted territory by revealing many of the reasons men give up on relationships. After perusing the list, I will say that I've experienced more than one of them.

Source: AskMen.com [Web site]

Title: Reasons We Dump Women

Author: Dennis W. Neder

Date: January 28, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/28/1940209.shtml

Proposed DV Bill Could Criminalize Men

Scott · 30 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble sent us this link and writes "Mississippi Senate Bill 2460 requires a principal aggressor to be arrested, and this sounds nice on the surface. However, it is an example of how super-fems have an agenda to pass laws that will criminalize males. If this law is passed, it will not matter if a female is highly aggressive and violent due to drugs or alcohol. What will happen is that there will be many men that must resort to a use of a defensive force to prevent personal injury...The male will undoubtedly be labeled and prosecuted as the primary aggressor. This is an example of an illegal law that violates current self-defense laws." I also favor "initial aggressor" (who started attacking first) arrests rather than "primary aggressor" ones because police can be very biased to view men as more dangerous than women. Source: The Clarion-Ledger [newspaper]

Title: Domestic-abuse bills advance at Capitol

Author: Clay Harden

Date: January 29, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/30/0439242.shtml

Men Are To Blame For Abortion?

Nightmist · 30 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal sent in this column from townhall.com which attempts to lay the "blame" for abortions on men. According to the article, most women who get abortions are doing so under pressure from husbands or boyfriends, and not because they are choosing to do so. Bunk? You decide.

Source: www.townhall.com [Web site]

Title: Fathers Play Big Role in Abortion Decision, Experts Say

Author: Unknown

Date: Unknown

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/30/1648233.shtml

Congress Considering Forced Military Training For Men 18-22

Nightmist · 30 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal submitted this story from WorldNetDaily. Apparently, a bill went to Congress' Armed Services Committee (without a co-sponsor) in December which would require all U.S. men ages 18-22 to go through military training for "homeland defense." According to the article, a draft today would be dramatically different than the draft of Vietnam and there would be fewer reasons to excuse a man from service.

Source: WorldNetDaily [Web site]

Title: Congress considers new kind of draft

Author: Jon Dougherty

Date: January 25, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/30/1657222.shtml

Feminists After USA Today on Title IX

Nightmist · 31 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal submitted this letter from a feminist lawyer in USA Today and writes "The feminists are attacking USA Today for its criticism of Title IX: Reply to: editor@usatoday.com. The letter's author, in fact, is pretty smug, calling women's sports and discrimination against men's sports (which she denies exists) "the winning team."

Source: USA Today [newspaper]

Title: Title IX support sends winning message

Author: Marcia D. Greenberger [letter to the editor]

Date: Unknown

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/30/174239.shtml

The Other Side of the Pay-Gap Story

Nightmist · 31 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal submitted this story from National Review, which explores reasons why women in managerial positions may make less than their male counterparts. Before we spend more of the taxpayers' money, we might consider some explanations other than "discrimination" for the continuing gender gap in earnings.

Source: National Review [Web site]

Title: Pride and Prejudice

Author: Ann Marlowe

Date: Unknown

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/30/177258.shtml

USA Today Acknowledges Women Are Capable of Terrorism

Nightmist · 31 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal submitted this column by Patricia Pearson in USA Today. Pearson points out that: Contrary to initial media reports, this was not the first time a Palestinian woman has proved capable of terrorist violence. Far from it. She also warns that likely victims of terrorism should watch out for the use by terrorists of the "least likely suspects." Namely, women.

Source: USA Today [newspaper]

Title: Hard to imagine a female bad guy? Think again.

Author: Patricia Pearson

Date: January 30, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/30/1743208.shtml

Men's News Daily Mentioned in Washington Times

Scott · 31 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Men's News Daily received an full-length article in Wednesday's Washington Times, which can be read here. Apparently MND has set its sights on surpassing the Drudge Report as the premier conservative men's issues news web site. Even more significantly, I think this is the first time I know of that a "men's rights" web site has received such attention in the print media. This is a noteworthy event.Source: The Washington Post [newspaper]

Title: Men's site vows to outdo Drudge

Author: Jennifer Harper

Date: January 30, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/31/0225251.shtml

MHA Campaign Continues to Advocate for Afghan Men

Scott · 31 January 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Two recent posts to the Men's Health America mailing list outline new developments in the campaign to advocate for Afghan men's human rights. This post includes a sample letter that you can use to send to your national Congress members to remind them of the invisible plight of Afghan men. In another development, Amnesty International has been sending a standard form letter to people who have been writing in during this campaign, defending their double standards. Is this something that should go without response? It's up to you to decide.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/31/0232200.shtml

Valentine's Singles Event Cancelled Because Men Not Interested

Nightmist · 1 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This interesting story on ananova.com reports on a Valentine's Day singles night which attracted the interest of about 500 women, but only two men. The organizer attributes it to "men taking themselves too seriously these days." Perhaps men are also more wary of dating these days as well?

Source: ananova.com [Web site]

Title: Valentine singles night cancelled due to lack of interest from men

Author: Unknown

Date: January 30, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/31/1728227.shtml

Larry Elder: No Sympathy For Deadbeat Dads

Nightmist · 1 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This column on WorldNetDaily is Larry Elder's take on apparently recent shifts in attitudes in some media toward so-called "deadbeat" dads. Elder thinks that people focusing on this issue are calling for a "welfare state" and absolution from responsibilities. Of course, then there are those men who are ordered to pay 200% of their income in child support. You can e-mail Elder here. Scott's note: Thanks also to Neil Steyskal for sending this in.

Source: WorldNetDaily [Web site]

Title: Deadbeat dads: Victims?

Author: Larry Elder

Date: January 30, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/01/31/1629249.shtml

"Boyfriend Training Kit" Now in Bookstores

Scott · 1 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SunCat writes "Bookstores now carry a boyfriend training kit. It is a brown paper pouch, with "stars" to rate your boyfriend's performance. Warren Farrell fans should note that the package is labled DISPOSABLE. File this under "misandry does not exist." :-(" The package supposedly contains "all you need to knock your boyfriend into shape...With such a comprehensive guide, you'll never have to follow his rules again."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/01/0254234.shtml

Woman "Accidentally" Stabs Boyfriend, Killing Him

Scott · 1 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dave Compas sent us this article and writes "Men, this is one more for the record book, and another woman attempting to escape responsibility for her actions. Check out this story from the Sacramento Bee! She "accidentally" stabbed her man to death!" That is one freaky photo of her, too.Source: The Sacramento Bee [newspaper]

Title: Sacramento County woman arrested in boyfriend's death

Author: Unknown (Bee Metro Staff)

Date: January 31, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/01/0258205.shtml

CyberMan Books to Launch Feb. 14

Scott · 1 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "The DesertLight Journal and the British radio show, The Men's Hour, announced they will join forces to form cyberManbooks.com. The new e-book publisher will target a primarily male audience with new books, as well as classics. Set to launch on February 14, cyberManbooks is unique in the world of e-publishing. Unlike other publishers that provide little or no help for new writers, choosing instead to promote and assist proven authors, cyberMan will encourage and help new writers from the time their work is accepted for publication. This new concept in publishing will connect authors worldwide to assist each other in their promotional efforts, and give readers free access to contact cyberMan authors. In addition to providing quality e-books, cyberManbooks.com will give websurfers access to a variety of online information for writers and readers, including research resources and learning tools."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/01/034236.shtml

Sacks Challenges Larry Elder to Debate on "Deadbeat Dads"

Scott · 2 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks has challenged columnist and talk show host Larry Elder to "rumble on 'Deadbeat dads: Victims?' in studio, mano a mano." Sacks, who has appeared on dozens of radio and TV talk shows, including at Elder's KABC radio in Los Angeles, noted that Elder's column "has caused an uproar within the Fathers' Rights movement, and given the reaction we received when I was on Al Rantel's show a few weeks ago, I'm sure we'll have plenty of callers and listeners." To let Larry (AKA the "Sage from South Central") know you're interested in the proposed debate, e-mail him at the_sage@larryelder.com. Glenn can be reached through his website at GlennJSacks.com.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/02/034211.shtml

MANN News Submission Guidelines

Scott · 2 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

As MANN has grown over the past several months, we have reached the point where we are consistently flooded with news submissions, and can't post them all. We've been having a hard time picking and choosing which stories will be posted and which won't, and to try to help organize things better, we've come up with the following News Submission Guidelines that will help us post more stories with greater speed and efficiency. Please take a moment to read this, and thank you all for such incredible participation with this web site and community!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/02/0310205.shtml

Dilbert Cartoon Series on the "Man Hating Boss"

Scott · 2 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

shouting writes "Dilbert has been featuring the "Man Hating Boss" for the past few days." The series started on January 29, and can be seen here. Click the following days on the calendar you see on that page to view the other ones.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/02/1411243.shtml

MANN/iFeminists Chat: Science Fiction and Gender

Scott · 2 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This Sunday's joint MANN/iFeminists chat will feature special guest L. Neil Smith, a noted author of Science Fiction. We'll be discussing how men and women are portrayed in Sci-Fi, particularly in cases where men are depicted as heroes, and women as villains. It seems that in Science Fiction, authors are more willing to turn the popular stereotypes on their heads. The chat will begin on Sunday, 2/3, at 9:00 PM EST at the iFeminists chat room. See you there!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/02/0259204.shtml

Two Women's Groups Call for an End to Co-Ed Combat Forces

Scott · 2 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

garypc and DaveW but sent in this article from WorldNetDaily. garypc writes "This is an interesting commentary about US military policy. It discusses the pros and cons of what role women should play in the military." and DaveW quoted a line from the article saying, "Any claim that women are equal to men in combat settings is utterly irrational." This could be seen as either a step forward for those of us who are tired of PC decisions damaging our armed forces' strength, or also as a step backward for those of us who more strongly feel that women's rights must come with equal responsibilities. Update: Thanks also to Neil Steyskal for sending this link on the same story. Source: WorldNetDaily.com [web site]

Title: Women slam armed forces' PC policies

Author: Jon Dougherty

Date: February 1, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/02/147233.shtml

The Super Bowl Sunday Battering Myth

Scott · 3 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

ronn submitted this link and sent us the following quotations, which are appropriate to keep in mind this weekend: "We know that on Super bowl Sunday, for the last 10 years, that I've been keeping data, that there's an increase in the number of women who are seriously hurt, who call battered women shelter's and who use the police." -Lenore Walker, Denver psychologist and author of The Battered Woman, Good Morning America, (1/23/93). "You think maybe we have one of these myth things here?…You know, I hate this. I've devoted 14 years of my life trying to bring to the public's attention the very serious problem of battered women. And when people make crazy statements like this, the credibility of the whole cause can go right out the window." -Michael Lindsey, Denver psychotherapist and authority on Battered Women, The Washington Post (1/31/93)."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/02/1451219.shtml

New Bible to Reduce Use of Male Refrences

Scott · 3 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Lionheart writes "I just finished watching ABC News this evening and they ran a story stating the International Bible Society is going to ommit the word "man" and replace it with "person" and also the word "sons or son" and replace it with "children!" Can you believe it! Has anyone else heard this story yet? The story can also be found on FoxNews here." Update: ronn also submitted this story on the same topic.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/03/0044216.shtml

Ford Advert Ruled Offensive

Adam · 3 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

What is with Ford? If they're not pulling a "terrorised by tolerance" stunt (See Part 1 and Part 2 here), they're being pulled into court again for an advert condoning violence against men. Luckily, the case was won by J. Kirby Inwood, a Canadian men's advocate. To finish off, I found an archive of documents detailing Ford's hiring policies. I would advise you to check the archive, as this seems to go a lot deeper than you'd think.Source: The National Post [Canadian newspaper]

Title: Ford's abducted-clerk ad offensive, panel says

Author: Gavin Mackenzie

Date: January 29, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/03/040239.shtml

Forced Fatherhood In The UK

Adam · 3 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I've found a very disturbing article about how the law can destroy the nearest man financially and emotionally when he becomes a dad. When you read the article, you'll start to see just how criminalized fatherhood is the West, and how the only option seems to be abstaining from relationships. The only real advice the article gives to the nearest man (unintentionally) is to not marry, as that seems to be how family courts make a large cut of their money. Of course, with comments in the article such as "Another important aspect of parenthood is financial provision for the mother," it's too easy to lose your cool.Source: The Independent [UK newspaper]

Title: A model example of single motherhood?

Author: Penny Lewis

Date: January 28, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/03/045212.shtml

"Deadbeat" Dad Actually "Dead-Broke"

Nightmist · 4 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal sent in this story from the New York Times (free registration required to read). The story is a feature about a man who is obligated to pay $899 a month in current and back child support.... The only job he says he can find is a part-time one at a Denver recreation center that pays $600 a month. When he does the math, Mr. Stribling said, he feels as if he is drowning. According to the story, Stribling is responsible for creating his own situation, but the judge created the payment problem by considering Stribling's "earning potential" and not his actual income.

Source: New York Times [newspaper]

Title: 'Dead Broke' Dads' Child-Support Struggle

Author: Blaine Harden

Date: January 29, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/03/0612206.shtml

N.O.W. and Fathers for Equal Rights Working Together for Divorce Court Reform

Scott · 4 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "This article in the Ann Arbor News reports an odd partnership.
I can't tell if this is a good thing or not! I'm still shaking my head and saying, "Huh?"" While I'm all for men's and women's groups working together on common goals, this one is a big surprise, and I'm suspicious. We'll see how it turns out.Source: The Ann Arbor News [newspaper]

Title: NOW, divorced dads unite for kids

Author: Liz Cobbs

Date: January 28, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/03/1924252.shtml

Short Firewoman Sues for Discrimination

Scott · 4 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Captain Pistachio writes "In this article a woman too short to do her job as a firewoman claimed sex discrimination after she was taken off active duty." The fire dept. continued to employ her part-time as a trainer, but would not her, at 5'1" to be a firefighter. Unless you can show me a 5'1" male firefighter, I don't believe this is legitimate discrimination.Source: The Telegraph [UK newspaper]

Title: Tiny firewoman sues her brigade

Author: Thomas Penny

Date: January 30, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/03/1934255.shtml

Media Humanizes Female Terrorists, More Women Volunteer

Nightmist · 4 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

An Anonymous User sent in this story from boston.com and writes: "
It is interesting that this article tries to humanize this female terrorist. I have not seen this done before for a terrorist."
Indeed the article does seem to attempt to make excuses for the woman's acts. Another interesting story in the Washington Times describes how more Palestinian women--apparently inspired by their sister--are volunteerign for terrorist campaigns.

Source: boston.com [Web site] / Associated Press

Title: Palestinian woman bomber was a paramedic who had been injured in clashes

Author: Hadeel Wahdan

Date: January 30, 2002

Source: Washington Times [newspaper]

Title: Women volunteer for attacks

Author: Inigo Gilmore

Date: February 3, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/03/2018227.shtml

Boys Can't be Raped?

Scott · 4 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

alphamale writes *"This article recently appeared in the Globe & Mail. It considers the question: "what if Amy Gehring was a man?" While the Globe article started off in a positive way, questioning what our reaction would have been had Amy been Tony, the article soon exposed the fictitious female double-standard. The author contends that had Amy been a man the whole situation would naturally been different because if the victim's had been girls they never would have wanted sex. I am tired of these lame female chauvinist lies, but read the article for yourself and decide."*Source: The Globe and Mail [Canadian newspaper]

Title: What if the schoolmistress were a man ...

Author: Margaret Wente

Date: February 2, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/04/1359201.shtml

Judge Vilified as Victim Hater

Scott · 5 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original warble writes *"This article is about a female judge who is actually starting to get it. She is Judge Megan Lake Thornton in Fayette County, KY, and she is sending women to jail when they violate their own restraining orders. As usual the super-fems are spouting their hatred of judges that hold women accountable for their actions. It further reports on how the super-fems are seeking to reinforce the female victim status, and reports on how the super-fems vilify the judge as a victim hater."*Source: The Wall Street Journal [newspaper]

Title: Beating the System: Feminists howl at a Kentucky judge's approach to domestic violence.

Author: Collin Levey

Date: February 1, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/04/1540236.shtml

"Dead Broke" Dads Get More Press

Nightmist · 5 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This article in the notoriously misandrist Christian Science Monitor picks up on the problems so-called "deadbeat" dads are facing, and some of the protest surrounding the treatment of fathers in family court. Such aggressive pursuit of child-support dollars has not been without its problems - or critics. And perhaps surprisingly, the list of critics now includes more child-welfare advocates.

Source: Christian Science Monitor

Title: 'Deadbeat' dads - or just 'dead broke'?

Author: Silja J. A. Talvi

January 4, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/04/2129252.shtml

Sacks: The Cost of Ignoring Female Abusers

Scott · 5 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "In this article, a statement by Dr Caro says it all: ""I was ashamed. I was embarrassed," he testified recently during the penalty phase of Socorro Caro's trial..." Until the public permits men to come forward, women will continue to commit acts of domestic violence with near impunity. Again, notice the complete absence of media coverage in the major networks. If this were a man, we would hear of the violence almost daily."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/04/2116258.shtml

Radicals Vandalize UNH Fraternity House with "We Rape" Graffiti

Scott · 5 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The New Hampshire, the school newspaper at UNH, reported today that on last Thursday morning the slogan "We Rape" was painted on two sides of the Sigma Nu fraternity house. The actions came shortly after a civil lawsuit was announced against the fraternity by a female student who alleges to have been raped in the frat house last year. However, the criminal case was dropped, because DNA evidence exonerated one of the accused and was inconclusive about the second accused man. Not only that, but a University judicial hearing (which is a "kangaroo court" baised against men in cases like this) also found the two accused men "not responsible." Update: Foster's also has this story on the vandalism, including a photo of it.Source: The New Hampshire [UNH school newspaper]

Title: Sigma Nu in Spotlight

Author: Justin Norton

Date: February 5, 2002

Source2: Foster's Daily Democrat [newspaper]

Title: UNH fraternity hit by vandalism

Author: Sean Goodwin

Date: January 31, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/05/1321252.shtml

More Women Terrorists Found

Scott · 5 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original warble writes *"In this LA Times story we find that more female (and male) terrorist have been rounded up in Singapore. This is proof that female involvement in terrorist activities is not isolated to a single woman in Palestine. However, the mention of the word "women" is almost accidental. In effect, the LA Times implies that a female can be a member of a terrorist group plotting to destroy U.S. targets, and yet they are not part of the criminal activities."*Source: The Los Angeles Times [newspaper]

Title: Singapore's 'Osama' May Have Targeted U.S. Interests

Author: Richard C. Paddock

Date: February 5, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/05/1326207.shtml

Media Celebrates Amy Gehrig's Acquittal

Scott · 5 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

alphamale writes *"While this article was once again chosen from the Globe & Mail, I would like to point out that every major news site in Canada, as their top story, ran with the "Amy is innocent" headline. I'm too shocked, depressed and appalled to comment. Read the story for yourself. Something has to be done about this. If Amy had been a man, there would be protest marches in every major city in the Western Hemisphere. Well, okay, maybe not every major city, but there sure as heck would be a huge outcry in the media. Come guys, are we just going to sit back and let women like Amy go free? For how many decades are we going to allow women to not be held accountable for their actions? We need to "take back the day!""*Source: The Globe and Mail [Canadian newspaper]

Title: Canadian teacher acquitted in British sex case

Author: Alan Freeman

Date: February 4, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/05/1333249.shtml

The Evolution of the Child Support Collection Racket

Scott · 6 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes *"This article by Richard Green, M.D. explains how and why the corrupt child support collections racket became a corrupt racket over the years since the late 1980's. It proves the old adage, "The road to hell is paved with good intentions." A must read and archive article for future reference."*Source: RightTurns.com [web site]

Title: Limit Federal Child Support Enforcement to Welfare Cases

Author: Richard Green, M.D.

Date: February 1, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/05/1337213.shtml

MANN Chat: Male Role Models and Mentoring

Scott · 6 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tonight's offical Mensactivism.org on-line chat will be held on the topic of mentoring and role models for young men. More and more young men these days are growing up without fathers, and what kind of male role models do they have? This discussion will focus on how fatherless young men will affect the men's movement, what we can do to help promote good role models for them, and ideas on how to get directly involved in mentoring men yourself. Join us at 9:30 PM EST tonight, 2/6, in the MANN chat room.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/06/1350228.shtml

Men To Be Cited For Women Baring Breasts

Nightmist · 6 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This story in the Houston Chronicle details Houston's efforts to cut down on Mardi Gras revelry this year by citing any woman who bares her breasts and any man who holds a topless woman on his shoulders for disorderly conduct. Apparently, the police believe women's bare breasts are responsible for starting riots. My question: why cite the men? It's the women who are baring their breasts.

Source: Houston Chronicle [newspaper]

Title:
Women told to keep their shirts on

Author: Associated Press

Date: February 3, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/05/1613229.shtml

U.S. Air Force Explains Fitness Test Standards

Nightmist · 6 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Captain Pistachio submitted this article from U.S. Air Force News and writes "With all the recent articles about male/female double standards in the military I thought this might be Illuminating." The article is two years old, but it is enlightening because it states that men and women have the same standards for crunches (based on age instead of gender), but that women have lower standards for push-ups (based on age and gender).

Source: U.S. Air Force Online News [Web site]

Title: Air Force announces changes to fitness test

Author: Unknown

Date: May 24, 2000

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/06/036227.shtml

Birds Are Better Men Than Humans

Nightmist · 7 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Bledso writes "This is another condescending article that would never have been printed if the genders were reversed. Notice the wonderful credentials of the first "expert". the article lashes out at human men quite a bit because, apparently, the Australian bowerbird must keep a clean nest, have sharp feathers, and be sensitive to attract a mate. The "expert on human and animal behavior" claims human males are incapable of sensitivity, among other things.

Source: healthscout.com [Web site]

Title: The Sensitive Bird Gets All the Girls

Author: Jennie L. Phipps

Date: Unknown

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/06/0310235.shtml

When the Babes Beat Up the Boys

Nightmist · 7 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

ronn submitted this story from AlterNet, which examines current media violence against men by women and wonders: "What are these women so angry about?" Michelle Goldberg attempts to point out the hypocrisy of women wanting to be sexual predators and punishing men for the same thing. This new wave of violence against men is no longer about empowered heroines protecting the world from metaphorical rapists and pillagers. This is about raw, crazy, Fatal Attraction-style vengeance. But in this era of the swinging single girl, of hook ups and friendly fucks and Sex and the City, what exactly are women getting revenge for?

Source: AlterNet [Web site]

Title: When the Babes Beat Up the Boys

Author: Michelle Goldberg

Date: January 31, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/06/2153251.shtml

Fatherhood Coalition Urges Resistance to MA Child Support Guidelines

Scott · 7 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Adam sent us this press release from the MA Fatherhood Coalition and writes "This has been coming for some time now, and if anything, it's going to take much courage for this to come together and be effective. By participating, men basically say goodbye to their old lives and hello to being a criminal, or at least to having a criminal record where there was none before. The feminist campaign to criminalize all men is underway at full steam. In my opinion, this shows the time for making drastic changes is well past, and is upon us." It's important to note that this group has tried legal means to have the support guidelines changed, and the new CS guidelines were not changed in favor of the testimony of over a hundred fathers and supporters during public hearings last year on changing the guidelines.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/06/2225227.shtml

"Deadbeat Dads" Used to Promote National ID System

Scott · 7 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Del Parker submitted this article from TooGoodReports, which discusses the federal government's use of databases to track details about the lives of its citizens. So why is this related to men's issues? Well, the key argument being put forth to promote these systems is that they will be used to track "deadbeat dads." It's always nice to have a scapegoat that everyone hates in order to implement freedom-usurping surveillance systems, and apparently "deadbeat dads" seem to be a universal group that lawmakers can target.Source: TooGoodReports.com [web site]

Title: Too Late To Stop National ID

Author: Roger F. Gay

Date: November 29, 2001

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/06/2252237.shtml

Book Discussion of Patai's Heterophobia

Scott · 7 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Will Johnson writes "Daphne Patai has written an excellent expose of the Sexual Harassment Industry created by academic feminists for the express purposes of proving "male wickedness" and "women's victimhood", "bringing men to heel", driving a wedge between men and women, and in the end "dismantling heterosexuality." iFeminists.com will begin a discussion of Heterophobia: Sexual Harassment and the Future of Feminism on Wednesday, February 20 at the iFeminists Writers and Writing forum. A longer description of the book and discussion schedule are found here. A good review of the book was written by Brian Carnell. Finally, click here to read an interview with the author Daphne Patai."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/07/1624219.shtml

DNA Clears Another Man Convicted of Rape

Nightmist · 8 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

It's happened again. This story in the L.A. Times reports on Bruce Godschalk, who was imprisoned 15 years ago for allegedly raping two different women. DNA testing on samples from the rape kit and Godschalk have exonerated him. But [the prosecutor] said he would not release Godschalk immediately, maintaining the samples may not be from the rapist and that he cannot discount Godschalk's taped confession. Godschalk's advocates say the evidence more than points to his innocence.

Source: L.A. Times [newspaper]

Title: Lawyers: DNA Clears Convicted Rapist

Author: Tina Moore

Date: February 5, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/07/1734235.shtml

Doc Love: Men, Stand Up For Yourselves In Personal Relationships

Nightmist · 8 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This dating advice column on AskMen.com examines the problem of "marital fraud," and how men have become easy pushovers for women in the dating game. One reader writes in with this horror story: Fifteen months after buying a house (of which I was the sole mortgage holder), six years of marriage, and two toddlers, I arrived home from work one day, only to be arrested on phony domestic abuse charges. (In my state, this is the only way she could have me removed from the home). This was done with the full support (both emotional and financial) of a meddling mother-in-law. And with the prospect of a fairly large divorce settlement dancing in her head, she was even quoted by mutual friends as being "better off financially without me than with me!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/07/235229.shtml

Male-Friendly Relationship Improvement

Scott · 8 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dr. Scott Haltzman will be hosting a presentation on Valentine's Day next week, at the Providence, RI Marriott hotel. His talk is titled, "Give Cupid a Chance: Five Relationship-Boosting Ways to Shoot Love's Arrow Back Into the Heart of Your Marriage." Dr. Haltzman is a Clinical Assistant Professor at Brown and runs the SecretsofMarriedMen.com web site. He has a very pro-male perspective, and best of all, the presentation is free! Look here for more info on how to pre-register.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/08/0249204.shtml

Yukon Court Narrows Definition of Harassment

Scott · 8 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

donaldcameron1 submitted this article from the National Post regarding a recent Appeals Court decision in the Yukon about what constitutes harassment. The court claimed that "an "objective" standard must be met so the "words convey a threat of serious bodily harm to a reasonable person," rather than someone simply feeling afraid. This is good news, since it makes it much harder for a woman to make a false harassment claim against a man by inventing perceived threats. After all, just the existence of men today seems to threaten women, or at least the radical feminists would like us to think so.Source: The National Post [Canadian newspaper]

Title: Yukon court narrows definition of harassment

Author: Sarah Schmidt

Date: February 1, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/08/1352211.shtml

Judge Flips Coin to Decide Which Parent Kids Stay with for Christmas

Scott · 8 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Ganglion42 sent in this story which states that a family court judge flipped a coin to decide which parent would have their children over Christmas. Ganglion42 writes "Finally! A judge who does something where she can't be accused of bias!" In a situation where both parents have an equally good case for visitation, I don't mind this much at all, given that other options are generally so biased against men. Source: The Detroit Free Press [newspaper]

Title: Controversy follows coin flip by judge

Author: David Ashenfelter

Date: February 4, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/08/141217.shtml

The Child Protection System Turning Against Parents

Scott · 9 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes *"In this Fox News article, we hear of yet more stories of false allegations, seizures of children, the denial of all constitutional rights, and other effects of that the feminist have when legislatures pass their brand of child protection laws. With the new laws, the CPS has successfully created a "...Soviet-style snitch network." That network consists of every public institution where we find children. It is a tragedy that America fails to realize that good families are having their children seized simply because a man changes a diaper in a park."*Source: Fox News [web site]

Title: Parental Rights Under Microscope as Accusations of Child Abuse Mount

Author: Robin Wallace

Date: February 7, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/08/144240.shtml

Woman Organizes Austin Bare Breast Protest

Nightmist · 9 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The citing of women for baring their breasts and men for shouldering women who bare their breasts has incited a Texas woman to organize a protest, according to this story on Fox News. Although the story is more about a woman's right to bare her breasts than anything else, the protest organizer made several interesting comments about men: "I'm not any kind of topless dancer or porn star," Estes said. "It's not a sexual issue. It's just insulting that they say men can't control themselves in the presence of a bare breast." She also points out that it is drunkeness which causes fights, not breasts.

Source: Fox News [Web site]

Title: Texas Woman Organizing Bare Breast Protest for Mardi Gras

Author: Unknown (Associated Press)

Date: February 8, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/08/169237.shtml

Sacks Successful on the Radio Again

Scott · 9 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Calls from divorced fathers flooded NewsTalk 550 KFYI (Phoenix) radio phone lines during Glenn Sacks' two-hour appearance on the Charles Goyette Show on Tuesday, February 5. Glenn and Charles discussed the discrimination which men routinely face in family court. Callers shared their horror stories about Move Away Moms, blocked visitation, false accusations, parental alienation syndrome, and the struggle of divorced dads to remain fathers to their children. To listen to the entire show (minus news and commercials) go to Glenn's website here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/08/1913219.shtml

DesertLight Journal - Feb. 6 Issue Out

Scott · 9 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy Schuett's popular DesertLight Journal has released a new edition, which can be read at the usual spot. Announcements in this issue include the upcoming launch of male-friendly e-publisher cyberManbooks, progress on a Commission for Men in Los Angeles county, Tom Smith's (AUM) take on the men's movement, and more. Enjoy!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/08/1926239.shtml

Piney Woods School Hopes to "Save The Males"

Nightmist · 9 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I stumbled across this Web page while looking for information on Warren Farrell's "Save the Males" article. Apparently, Piney Woods is a predominantly black private school which has a program titled "Save the Males" geared specifically for the needs of their male students. More information about the school itself is available here. Perhaps more schools should follow Piney Woods' example? The male council's purpose is to Retain students who are close to academic and/or personal failure and enhance their academic and personal achievements. The council also provides young men with good male mentors.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/08/1629246.shtml

Volksgaren Project Needs Your Help

Scott · 9 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Greg writes, "The Volksgaren Project works with abused people. We fund our work by selling the Volksgaren Journal which looks cognitively at recovery after another person's abuse. The journal is gender inclusive and aims to provide solid information to all. A current project is using Canadian Human Rights law to change Health Canada's policy on Family Violence. They use a gender-feminist viewpoint which results in harm to men and to children. We need people to subscribe so that we may hire experts to show that Health Canada are misinforming the public, resulting in real harm to innocent people. Our web site is here. There is a lot more information on our site!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/08/1947228.shtml

Girls Becoming Pimps, Committee Says They're Victims

Nightmist · 10 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

AFG writes "This article from the CBC reports that there is a new development with regard to the Saskatoon prostitution scene: An increasing number of teenage girls are forcing other girls to work for them as prostitutes. Thus, it seems that, in this instance, prostitution can no longer be blamed entirely on males. But of course, the other side appears in the article as well -- the side that says that these female pimps are victims and should be treated as such." Law enforcement appears to want to hold the girls accountable for their actions.

Source: CBC News [Web site]

Title: Saskatoon police say teenage girls now pimps

Author: CBC News Online Staff

Date: January 30, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/09/1750257.shtml

Hierarchies Are Male, Right? ...Right?

Nightmist · 10 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

bledso writes "This is a very interesting article about how men and women approach group activity. According to this article, it appears we may behave in a more similar manner than we thought, our timing is just a little different." In fact, Mast's research seems to bear out what some of us see in life every day, and her research appears to hold up what some other researchers have determined about hierarchies of late.

Source: ABC News [Web site]

Title: He, She Hierarchies

Author: Lee Dye

Date: February 6, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/09/1758216.shtml

MANN/iFeminists Chat: Norma Jean Almodovar

Scott · 10 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tonight's jointly sponsored MANN/iFeminists on-line chat will have special guest Norma Jean Almodovar. NJ is an ex-call girl, sex workers' rights activist and author of From Cop to Call Girl. She has fascinating slants on sex, prostitution and the legal system. Join us tonight (2/10) starting at 9 PM Eastern Time in the iFeminists.com chat room.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/10/1310235.shtml

Eight Teen Girls Charged With Attempted Murder of Counselor

Nightmist · 10 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This horrifying story in The Journal News details how eight girls in Cottage 12 attacked their counselor. The counselor was punched, kicked, stomped and scratched by the girls before "they doused her with rubbing alcohol and set it on fire," Alagno said. "They continued to beat her and then doused her face with chlorine bleach." They also cut her hair with scissors, beat her with a telephone and kicked her down two flights of steps, according to the charges read in court last night. The girls were giggling as they entered the courtroom. So far, one person said "without making excuses" said that they suffer emotional problems.

Source: The Journal News [newspaper]

Title: Counselor beaten, set on fire; teen girls arrested

Author: Richard Liebson, Shawn Cohen and Kristoffer A. Garin

Date: February 9, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/09/1813242.shtml

City Bans Clothed Public Erections

Nightmist · 10 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Like Tennessee and Mississippi before it, another nudity ordinance has banned clothed "visibly turgid" genitals in public, in essence banning manhood. The town officials say it won't apply to normal occurences, but it's up to them to decide what is or is not a normal erection. "This is not meant to be a tricky term, or give our police officers difficulty in enforcing the law," said Kerstetter. Before the vote, Supervisor Dennis Sharrow suggested removing the word "covered" from the ordinance. Kerstetter said the inclusion of covered male genitals in legal definitions of nudity has been upheld by the Supreme Court.

Source: Press Enterprise [newspaper]

Title: Locust passes nudity ordinance

Author: Jonathan Evans

Date: February 9, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/10/0224223.shtml

Men Are Redundant for Reproduction? So Are Women

Nightmist · 10 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This story in the Guardian Unlimited claims that the invention of an artificial womb has become reality. Scientists have created prototypes made out of cells extracted from women's bodies. Embryos successfully attached themselves to the walls of these laboratory wombs and began to grow. However, experiments had to be terminated after a few days to comply with in-vitro fertilisation (IVF) regulations. Interestingly, those concerned with ethics have already scheduled a conference in Oklahoma next week. 'There are going to be real problems,' said organiser Dr Scott Gelfand, of Oklahoma State University. 'Some feminists even say artificial wombs mean men could eliminate women from the planet and still perpetuate our species. That's a bit alarmist. Nevertheless, this subject clearly raises strong feelings.'

Source: Guardian Unlimited [newspaper]

Title: Men redundant? Now we don't need women either

Author: Robin McKie

Date: February 10, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/10/1844224.shtml

Domestic Abuse in Scotland

Scott · 11 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "There is a heavy duty rotation on Scottish TV of a government sponsored advert which claims that 1 in 5 women will be a victim of domestic abuse. On looking for this "recent study" I came across this page on the Scottish Executive's web site. It summarises a recent open forum on domestic abuse and reports this exchange on the subject of abused men: "A query was raised about the proposed research into abused men. Care needed to be taken with the questions to ensure a proper picture. Some men may be subject to retaliation from women they have abused. Care should also be taken as to whom should be given the contract. Academics may not have a proper knowledge of the issue. ANSWER - The Minister promised a tight specification and monitoring." It concerns me greatly that at the highest level of Parliament, there is such ignorance and dogma implicit in the research strategy. The delegate list is interesting too."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/11/141235.shtml

WorldWoman News Claims Newspapers are Male Shaped

Scott · 11 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "This site claims the following:
"Newspapers are male shaped. They are testosterone fueled, knee-jerk, confrontational, short term, pompous and status conscious. They are also punchy, strong, uncompromising and incisive. And they reflect the direction in which the editor wants to move. Usually, that editor is a man."" This seems like the definition of a feminist "knee-jerk" reaction if you ask me. What's most disconcerting is that this kind of posturing is sure to sell the paper to her target audience.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/11/148255.shtml

Georgia Passes Paternity Fraud Bill

Scott · 12 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

In an incredible victory, Georgia's Senate passed a bill giving men recourse in the event of paternity fraud. This means that when a divorced man takes a DNA test and is proven not to be the father of a child, he is not obligated to pay child support for that child. This common sense law was a long and difficult struggle, but in the end, the efforts paid off. For example, in the GA Senate, the bill passed with a 90% vote in favor of it. You can read a press release about the victory on PaternityFraud.com.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/11/1433204.shtml

Wendy McElroy: Take Back Valentine's Day

Nightmist · 12 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

In her latest column on Fox News, Wendy McElroy closely examines how gender (anti-male) feminists have attempted to take over and destroy Valentine's Day with V-Day (the V stands for Vagina, Violence [against women by men], and Victory) on college campuses. Among other "celebrations" is usually the presentation of Eve Ensler's male-bashing and child abuse-celebrating play The Vagina Monologues. In McElroy's words: Since 1998, V-Day events have been sponsored on university campuses across America. The stated purpose is to raise awareness. In reality, V-Day embodies the same double standard and dishonesty that has characterized most feminist pronouncements for decades.

Source: Fox News/ifeminists.com [Web sites]

Title: Take Back Valentine's Day!

Author: Wendy McElroy

Date: February 11, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/12/0312221.shtml

Boycott Ford For Discrimination Against Men

Nightmist · 12 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

My latest column, which should also appear later today on Wendy McElroy's ifeminists.com, examines the blatant discrimination against men (particularly white men) exercised recently by Ford Motor Co., toward both its employees and its buying public (via a male bashing commercial). Although Ford recently settled the lawsuit brought against it by employees, and pulled the ad campaign from most of its Canadian market, it'll take more than lawsuits and complaints to an advertising panel to change the company's ways.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/11/165238.shtml

UNH Student Creates Stop Hating Men Campus Group

Scott · 12 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Scott Garman (now why does that name sound familiar?) is apparently fed up with the way men at the University of New Hampshire were being treated, particularly after the vandalism of a fraternity house by radicals who want to portray men as rapists. His goals with the newly found Stop Hating Men group are to bring men and women from the University community together to speak out against male bashing at UNH. The organization has a web site which can be seen here.Source: The New Hampshire [UNH school newspaper]

Title: Students want to change male stereotypes at UNH [letters section]

Author: Scott Garman

Date: February 12, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/12/0427223.shtml

Marathon Chat for cyberMan Launch

Scott · 13 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "Celebrate V-Day our way! CyberManbooks.com is holding its Grand Opening Thursday, February 14th. Drop by http://www.cyberManbooks.com for the marathon chat! Meet cyberMan authors Dave Bates, Bernard Chapin, and Hareendran Kallinkeel, and talk to Raymond Cuttill and Trudy Schuett, publishers and owners of cyberManbooks.com. Find out about the first-ever international man-friendly publisher, and chat with our homies all over the world." Click Read More below to view the schedule of the chat for various time zones.Time Zone Chat Information:

LA/Vancouver 4 a.m. to 9 p.m.

New York/Toronto 7 a.m. to 10 p.m.

London 12 noon to 3 a.m.

Amsterdam 1 p.m. to 4 a.m.

Cape Town 2 p.m. to 5 a. m.

New Delhi 5:30 p.m. to 8:30 a.m.

Singapore 8 p.m. to 11 a.m.

Tokyo 9 p.m. to12 p.m.

Sydney 11 p.m. to 2 p.m.

Auckland 1 a.m. Friday to 4 p.m.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/12/125216.shtml

Georgia Proposes Another Father-Friendly Bill

Scott · 13 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wayne writes "It looks like the State of Georgia sees the massive injustices heaped upon men and is ACTING to correct some of the problems. Georgians for Child Support Reform Supports House Bill 672 because: The current child support guidelines result in excessive and inappropriate awards leaving all but the very wealthy with little left to support themselves. The incomes and child costs of BOTH parents are part of the proposed new guideline. Child-related tax benefits are shared with both parents as part of House Bill 672.
House Bill 672 would replace the current guidelines that use only the one parent's income. Through fair and equitable child support awards, children will no longer be treated as a financial prize by either parent. www.gachildsupport.org."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/12/128252.shtml

February Men's Hour Now Available

Scott · 13 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "It contains segments with Trudy W. Schuett about the DesertLight Journal and cyberManbooks.com (the new men's publisher) and Raymond Cuttill about cyberManbooks.com. It also has an item about women terrorists. It's at www.menshour.com or to go direct to the February programme: here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/13/1236214.shtml

Amy Gehring Admits Having Sex with Pupil

Scott · 13 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Douglas Rome, alphamale
, and warble all submitted news about the recent confession of Amy Gehring in media interviews, after her trial ended where she was acquitted. warble writes "This article quotes Amy Gehring as "…having sex with a 16-year-old pupil, saying she felt "quite stupid for all of the things I did". Where are the feminists on this issue? Worse, Ms. Gehring was previously "identified as a "risk" to children, but still allowed to work in another school." This would not have happened if this teacher were a male." She has a lot of nerve for confessing this after the trial. Could she really feel bad about the situation, or is she mocking the judicial system and gloating that she got away with it? Source: BBC News [UK news network]

Title: Gehring admits sex with pupil

Author: Unknown

Date: February 12, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/13/1246202.shtml

Men's Family Life Related to Stroke Risk

Scott · 14 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Matthew writes "This article from Yahoo! news talks about a recent study from Israel that shows that mens risk of stroke is reduced if they have a happy family life. Men were also less likely to have a stroke if they had fewer financial concerns."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/13/2245253.shtml

Armenian-American Fraternity Brought Together by Fathers

Scott · 14 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

donaldcameron1 writes "This article from Business Wire is wonderful example of just how important children have always been to their fathers, and how important fathers are to their children.
Specifically: "The Armenian-American TREX Fraternity was founded in Fresno during the 1920's. Inspired by hatred, prejudice and ignorance, the group was founded as a social club by Armenian fathers whose children weren't being invited to school events. They formed their own social club to fill the void. The fraternity now boasts 1,000 members and 15 chapters statewide, with 70 members in the Orange County chapter." I have e-mailed, the Armenian National Committee of America for a more appropriate link to The Armenian-American TREX Fraternity but have not received it yet."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/14/0049243.shtml

Union Leader Coverage of Stop Hating Men

Scott · 14 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Josh Adams from the Union Leader interviewed me and wrote an article on the formation of Stop Hating Men at UNH. I feel the article was a bit more confrontational or "SHM vs. SHARPP" than I would have liked, but as we all know, the media thrives on conflict. The article was very good in other ways, though. Click here to read it. Source: The Union Leader [newspaper]

Title: UNH student wants to fight men-bashing

Author: Josh Adams

Date: February 14, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/14/1610234.shtml

New Site Offers Support for Male DV Victims

Scott · 15 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

George Rolph writes "Man2Man is a new site (January 2002) for male victims of female perpetrated domestic violence. We offer support for male victims and list helplines that are available for men. We need funds so if you can help, please do."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/14/1623210.shtml

Dean Tong to Appear on KABC-AM 790

Scott · 15 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dean Tong writes "For those father's/men's rightsters who reside in the Los Angeles area, I'll be on KABC-AM 790 w/Al Rantel next Wednesday February 20th at 9 p.m. PST. We'll be discussing the evolution of false/unfounded child abuse and domestic violence claims. In addition, I'll comment on the Danielle Van Dam kidnapping case."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/14/1612205.shtml

UK Family Court Judges Responding to Protests

Scott · 15 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The UK Guardian has an article here which reports that family court judges are beginning to educate people about the problems divorce causes in an attempt to be more equitable and reduce the number of fathers who picket in front of their homes. This kind of court reform is very powerful coming from inside the system itself, and proves that men's voices can no longer be ignored so callously.Source: The Guardian [UK newspaper]

Title: What about the kids?

Author: Clare Dyer

Date: February 13, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/15/1519226.shtml

Sacks Discusses "Who is Expected to Pay for Dates?"

Scott · 15 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks discussed his Valentine's Day article, Should Men Still Be Expected to Pay for Dates? on St. Louis radio Thursday. Callers male and female agreed that it is time for change and that men and women need to start splitting the check. Glenn was on the George Noory Show on KTRS AM 550. Audio of the show will be available on Glenn's website soon.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/15/1523223.shtml

It's Time to Address the Needs of Boys

Scott · 16 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

ronn submitted this story from the UK Times which is an excellent article on boys' issues. Libby Purves confronts stereotypes about boys and explains what they need but are not getting from society today: boys need challenge, boys need men, and boys need love and respect. Purves ends the article with an appropriate remark: "if we let the Lost Boys proliferate, their wasted lives and sadness will haunt us all...Berating them as thugs or tittering at them as sex maniacs is not the answer."Source: The Times [UK newspaper]

Title: Time to move beyond 'boys will be boys'

Author: Libby Purves

Date: February 12, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/15/2239200.shtml

Proposed Contracts to Solve Office-Relationship Harassment Suits?

Scott · 16 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Deacon sent us this article from Fox News and writes "In an effort to prevent sexual harassment lawsuits stemming from failed office relationships, employment lawyers in Pittsburgh are creating contracts that prevent workers involved in a failed relationship with a co-worker to press harassment suits. However, that also means that all office relationships are documented."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/15/2242201.shtml

Will Men Take The Pill?

Adam · 16 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Get a load of this, it's a BBC Talking Point article asking will men take the pill? It would have made for quite a good discussion, if man hating and hypocrisy didn't run rife through it. Anyway, Here's another article saying most men "would take the pill" given the chance. Y'know, when I was a kid, I never imagined giving the nearest man a say in family planning would be such a bitterly fought thing, did you?Source: BBC [UK News Network]

Title: Will men take the pill?

Author: Unknown

Date: April 16, 1999

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/16/005231.shtml

Title IX Only Applies One-way?

Scott · 17 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Subversive pointed us to this article from the Detroit Free Press. It tells the story of a male high school cheerleader who is currently banned from participating in certain competitions. He has an attorney who is considering filing a Title IX lawsuit. Subersive writes *"Manchester High School (Michigan) sophomore Andrew Coutts said, "I think this is unfair. Girls are allowed to be on the wrestling and football teams, but boys can't do cheerleading. I want to be treated fairly.""*Source: The Detroit Free Press [newspaper]

Title: GENDER EQUITY IN CHEERLEADING: BANNED BOY ASKS FOR A C-H-A-N-C-E

Author: Maryanne George

Date: February 13, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/16/216217.shtml

Someone Had to Do it: The Penis Monologues

Scott · 17 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Independent Women's Forum reports that a group of students at Penn State have created "The Penis Monologues" as a counterpart to the Vagina Monologues. "'The Penis Monologues' celebrate penises. It's all penis, all the time." In other news from the IWF, SheThinks.org is promoting a Take Back the Date initiative to remind people that Valentine's Day is about romance, not violence. They have an interesting PDF of an ad they placed in various school newspapers that can be downloaded here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/17/0146239.shtml

The "A" Team Combats False Accusations

Scott · 17 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Luek submitted this link and writes "I just found this excellent "pro-male" legal services site by Trial Consultant Kenneth R. Pangborn, that has some very good general information for men explaining just what legal ramifications you will face if ever falsely accused of rape, harassment, child or spousal abuse. And most important, how to fight back! One good point that is brought out on this site is that men tend to trivialize and downplay any false accusation brought against them and presume that the "system" has build-in safety mechanisms that will automatically vindicate them. Nothing could be farther from the truth! With misandry-focused legislation like the infamous "VAWA ACT" becoming the social trend, it is best to dust off the old adages: "To be forewarned is to be forearmed." "Knowledge is power, so get empowered!""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/17/1630211.shtml

Every Child Needs a Father

Scott · 17 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Ellen Makkai wrote an article for WorldNetDaily which explains the need for fathers in the lives of children, and the risks people take when they voluntarily have children without father involvement. What I found most disturbing in the article was a quote of a 1999 N.O.W. legislative report which said, "There is very little in the way of scientific evidence that supports the assertions about the consequences of 'fatherlessness' and about the need for father involvement ... in fact, the evidence is heavily weighted in the opposite direction. Makkai then goes on to debunk this idea with the rest of her article. She definitely deserves some e-mails of support for this. Source: WorldNetDaily [web site]

Title: Every child needs a father

Author: Ellen Makkai

Date: February 16, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/17/195236.shtml

Errors in Child Abuse Cases

Scott · 18 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dean Tong had an article printed in NewsMax which discusses mistaken cases of child abuse. Tong gives a few examples of mistakes made in these cases that put innocent men and women behind bars, and he believes that these mistakes are becoming dangerously common. "What we don't know in alleged child physical and sexual abuse cases is coming back to haunt us. Social workers, police officers, therapists, guardians-ad-litem, lawyers, judges, teachers and legislators need a wake-up call that all is not well in America's child protection system. And the errors committed are hurting the very individuals we are trying to save from harm, our children!"
Source: NewsMax.com [web site]

Title: To Err Is Human, Especially in Child Abuse Cases

Author: Dean Tong

Date: February 17, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/18/0137240.shtml

The Unity Wall: A Place to Tell Your Story About Unjust Child Support

Scott · 18 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

ronn sent us a press release regarding a web site called the Unity Wall. "The Unity Wall, an online, interactive Memorial Wall has been released as a testimonial to those who have been hurt by the current unfair child support laws. It resembles a simple wall of granite with names inscribed on its surface. Each name is a hyperlink to a web page written by that person, telling their own story of the pain these laws have caused them. The Unity Wall contains the names of fathers who have lost custody of their children only to find themselves victims of a divorce industry that profits from of their suffering." You can submit your story to the Unity Wall, which I encourage people to do.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/18/0147259.shtml

Cathy Young Speaks Out Against V-Day

Scott · 18 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Cathy Young has joined Wendy McElroy in denouncing the attempts to change Valentine's Day into a day of remembering violence against women (known as "V-Day"). Young's Boston Globe story explains how the Vagina Monologues and similar events are sexist and paternalistic with their focus on violence against women, and how they contribute to an atmosphere of distrust and antagonism between the sexes. Source: The Boston Globe [newspaper]

Title: It's Valentine's Day, not Victim's Day

Author: Cathy Young

Date: February 18, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/18/1725215.shtml

Australian Attorney Guilty of Making False Rape Accusations

Scott · 19 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

It's always upsetting when someone makes a false accusation of rape, but it's really disturbing when attorneys are caught doing so. This was the case with a young Australian lawyer, whose name is not being released, who pleaded guilty to making six false reports to the police, which included two occasions of her impersonating a child making a rape accusation against a man. "The woman...claimed that a mental condition triggered by memories of sexual abuse as a child had caused her to make the false reports." Fortunately, the Victorian Supreme Court ruled that her law certification should be revoked. The story can be read here.
Source: The Mercury [Australian newspaper]

Title: Fake rape claims end career

Author: Unknown

Date: February 19, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/18/1720250.shtml

Yates Trial Begins, Lawyer Claims She Didn't Know What She Was Doing

Nightmist · 19 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

In case you've been living under a rock, here's a story about the infamous Andrea Yates (mother who drowned her five children in the family bathtub). Her trial has started. According to her lawyer, she didn't understand the wrongfulness of her actions when she murdered her kids. It should be remembered that Yates herself called police and her husband to report her own crime. The jury is made up of eight women and four men. In an attempt to show that Yates knew what she was doing, the prosecution pointed out that she complied with instructions from police who arrived at her home, made contact with them and had no problem understanding directions. Yates also apparently admitted to officers that she had been considering killing her children for two years "because they weren't developing correctly."

Source: CNN [Web site]

Title: Mother accused of killing her 5 children goes on trial

Author: Unknown

Date: February 18, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/19/058259.shtml

Wendy McElroy Examines The Wage Gap Myth

Nightmist · 19 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy this week in her Fox News column tackles the most recent outbreak of the wage gap myth, and rightly criticizes media which latched onto the statistics as an indicator that women are facing sexism in salary. But National Review columnist Betsy Hart took the time to examine the study commissioned by Reps. Carolyn Maloney, D-N.Y., and John Dingell, D-MI. She found it to be a "biased and highly-emotionalized reinterpretation" that the "creative" staff of Maloney and Dingell had imposed upon otherwise straightforward data. In this column, McElroy also quotes Hart's interview with Maloney, who shockingly admits her interpretation of the data was a deceit designed to keep the "right" from stopping money on such studies. McElroy explains the importance of examining statistics (especially as reported by the media) and not blindly accepting them as fact.

Source: Fox News [Web site]

Title: Reading Between the Numbers

Author: Wendy McElroy

Date: February 18, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/19/0542255.shtml

Another DNA Witch Hunt in Scotland

Scott · 19 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "This story shows that the precedent in Scotland to mass test hundreds of innocent men has been accepted. I despair that this seems now to be an accepted practice in such a short time. You will note that this time, the DNA testing is thrown into the story almost as an aside. I would urge all the affected men to resist this process. Also, what will now happen with the growing DNA "bank"?" Source: Scotland Today [UK newspaper]

Title: Killer of partially disabled woman branded a coward

Author: Unknown

Date: February 19, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/19/198249.shtml

Abuse of Protective Orders

Scott · 20 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal writes *"The Washington Post has printed a highly irresponsible editorial advocating the expansion of so-called protective orders in Maryland. These orders are widely abused to gain an advantage in divorce cases. The supposed due process they afford is a naked sham because the orders are issued almost automatically. A moment's reflection will make it obvious that there is no way to show when a domestic violence claim is a lie, whether for profit or just malice. Comment to: letters@washpost.com."*Source: The Washington Post [newspaper]

Title: A Vote Against Violence

Author: Unknown

Date: February 19, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/19/1822238.shtml

Book Discussion on Patai's Heterophobia

Scott · 20 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy has announced that there will be a book discussion on Daphne Patai's Heterophobia starting up tomorrow at iFeminists.com. Her iFeminists bulletin board announcement can be read here. Note that she will be giving away free books to random participants, so why not check it out? As Wendy writes, "Reading the book is a definite plus ;-), but lurkers are welcome."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/19/1945208.shtml

MANN Chat: Paternity Fraud Successes and Setbacks

Scott · 20 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tonight's Mensactivism.org on-line chat will be on the recent passage of a Georgia bill which will outlaw paternity fraud, giving men the right to stop paying child support for children that they were tricked into believing where their own. We'll be discussing overall issues related to men's reproductive rights and invariably many unrelated topics too (as usual, :). Join us at 9:30 PM EST tonight (2/20) in the MANN chat room.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/20/0230251.shtml

Of Men, Divorce, and Suicide

Nightmist · 20 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Intrigued by Wendy McElroy's column on male suicide a few weeks ago, the Toronoto Star decided to take its own look at the rate of male suicide and divorce in Canada. McElroy herself is quoted in the piece, and the men's movement is mentioned prominently. The author also interviewed men who have considered suicide in response to unfair child support payments. "There has been very little research to find out how alienated men feel after a complicated divorce and after losing custody in courts. But when you go through the research that's there, you come across story after story about men who wrote notes about their divorces or were clutching court orders while they committed suicide," says McElroy, whose anthology Liberty For Women: Freedom And Feminism For The 21st Century, will be published this year. We should extend both the Toronto Star and Wendy our thanks for continuing to shed light on this issue.

Source: Toronto Star [newspaper]

Title: Men, divorce and suicide

Author: San Grewal

Date: February 15, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/19/2245252.shtml

Glenn Sacks on V-Day, Choice for Men

Scott · 20 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks wrote an article about V-Day, Eve Ensler's V-Day: For Women, Afghanistan is Everywhere, which debunks many of the statistics commonly used in the campaign. This is one incredibly useful resource to have handy. Also, tonight Glenn will discuss his recent column Shouldn't Men Have a Choice, Too? on the Stacy Taylor Show, on KOGO 600 in San Diego, starting at 8 PM PST. His talk will coincide with tonight's MANN chat on reproductive rights, so if anyone in the San Diego area can log in and let us know how he's doing in real-time, that would be great!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/20/1653254.shtml

Using Music to Heal and Rebuild

Scott · 21 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Michael Skinner is an artist who has dealt with severe physical and sexual abuse as a child, as well as PTSD and depression as an adult. Yet he uses his music as a means to heal and rebuild himself and others who share his experiences. Mike recently created a web site to promote his music, his advocacy, and to be a resource to provide information and help regarding the issues and concerns around childhood sexual abuse and the long term effects of this abuse. The various resources and links listed will help lead to other resources, especially for males, as this is a subject most are uncomfortable discussing. Sadly, it is a distasteful subject that has caused severe damage and harm to many in all walks of life.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/20/0248215.shtml

Nerve Fault Linked to Domestic Abuse?

Scott · 21 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

ronn submitted this article from BBC News. The article talks about a small-scale study which found that domestic abusers had a problem with the response of the vagal nerve when stressed. This problem would then imply that those who suffer from it would have less control over aggression. The authors of the study were careful to point out that the results were not conclusive, probably because a finding like this would have nothing to do with abuse stemming from the oppressive hegemony of men over women. I also find it curious that the study didn't include women, and whether women could have this disorder in similar numbers as men. Source: BBC News [UK news network]

Title: Nerve fault linked to domestic abuse

Author: Unknown

Date: February 16, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/21/0133210.shtml

Ritalin Racketeers

Adam · 21 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Here are some very non-PC links about Ritalin and ADD/ADHD. To start with, here's Part 1 and Part 2 of an interview with Peter Breggin, who's most well known for his anti-Ritalin stance. He also has a web site with some very interesting things to tell about psychiatric drugs such as Ritalin, Prozac, Adderall and many others, so I would advise you to have a good look. Lastly, here's an interview with Fred Baughman, who spent 35 years as a child neurologist, with some interesting comments. He also has a web site.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/21/0027221.shtml

Lifetime TV Spreads Anti-Male Propaganda

Scott · 21 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

JohnnyMan writes "Lifetime TV is of course the TV channel "for women" and it often carries the usual feminist propaganda against men. However, this week they are bumping up that propaganda. They have already started the attack against men with a whole evening of movies (Three in a row - Sun 17th Feb) with the usual feminist themes. The theme of these movies is always the same: Women are victims and men are evil villains. To go along with the movies are TV commercials telling women that they are victims of rape and domestic violence. Sunday Feb 17th on Lifetime TV was certainly the most intense man-hatred I have seen on TV for a long time. Please call your cable company and complain about lifetime's anti-masculine activity." JohnnyMan's comments continue - click Read More below.This is of course a feminist designed attack on Valentines Day.
(Feminists also ran anti-masculine commercials on A+E TV on Sunday night [coincidence?] - presumably funded with money from the VAWA).
Lifetime has named this week: "To love, honor and deceive week".
The week is to be topped off by a "documentary" on women being the victims of DV - no doubt with the usual lies and tricks - this weekend.
This propaganda will almost certainly increase false accusations against men - as it always has, and will also cause a flare up of man-hatred in the women who watch this channel.

The intensity of this anti-masculine activity is reminiscent of the eighties and early nineties when TV man-hatred was at its peak and these movies were common. However, the interjecting of commercials in the breaks is a new propaganda trick. The titles of the movies and a description of Lifetime's dedication to V-Day are on their site at: lifetimetv.com. I have asked my cable company to remove this offensive channel. Let's demand an end to this blatant man-hatred.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/21/0158254.shtml

Electronic Shackles for Men Accused of DV

Scott · 22 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

ronn sent us this Ottawa Citizen story which includes suggestions from a coroner's jury report from a domestic homicide/suicide case: "Men should be electronically shackled with a global positioning device when they are accused of violence against a woman, and their names should automatically go into a database of abusers without waiting for a conviction." Apparently most of the Toronto newspapers has responded positively to this news, according to Dave Brown. Brown is also the the same writer who told us about Bill 117, which would transfer the property of those accused of domestic violence to the alleged victim, before a trial is held. What on earth is going on in Canada?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/21/0148248.shtml

Paternity Fraud Bill Introduced in California!

Scott · 22 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Angelucci writes *"California Assemblyman Rod Wright, who represents the Los Angeles area and has written a letter of support for a County Commission for Men, just introduced Assembly Bill 2240, an anti-Paternity Fraud Bill that would, among other things, protect a man from being forced to financially support a child that is not his. The L.A. chapter of the National Coalition of Free Men had a part in writing the bill and will team up with the Northern CA chapter to support it. Read the bill for yourself and, if you live in CA, submit a comment to the author. And be sure not to miss the amendment to section 7574(a), which adds the following to the list of groups who must be consulted about the voluntary paternity declaration form: "father's rights advocacy groups"!"*

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/22/1651212.shtml

Article on Female Forms of Aggression

Scott · 23 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

garypc writes *"The New York Times Magazine has an excellent article about how young females are just as aggressive as young males, but that they are aggressive in a different way called "relational aggression." I felt it gave a very fair minded insight into how young males are not more malicious than than young females. It brings a reasonable voice to the discussion of gender differences."*Source: The New York Times Magazine

Title: Girls Just Want to Be Mean

Author: Margaret Talbot

Date: February 24, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/23/1640209.shtml

Man Stabbed After Failing to Propose

Scott · 23 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

ronn sent us this disturbing story where a man was stabbed below the ear by his girlfriend when he didn't propose to her on Valentine's Day, as she was expecting. ""The suspect wanted the victim to marry her and he was not at that point in the relationship at the time. So, she allegedly stabbed him right below the right ear lobe," said Sgt. Robert Douglas of the Oklahoma City Police Department."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/23/1719257.shtml

False Alarm

Scott · 24 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

After extensive investigation into the suspicious network activity on Mensactivism.org today, I have determined that our intrusion detection systems found a false positive. So there's no need to worry - the "cyber grrrl 3l337" hackers from N.O.W. haven't gotten us yet. :) Still, I have taken additional precautions and will be monitoring the server closely for further suspicious activity over the short-term future.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/24/022252.shtml

Murder Charges Dismissed for Louisville Woman

Scott · 24 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

ronn submitted this story about a woman who stabbed her two year-old son about 30 times with a butcher knife, killing him. However, the murder charges have been dropped after four psychiatrists found the woman to be mentally ill, with a rare disorder called Addison's disease. I did some searches on the internet for Addison's web sites and found that while depression can be one of the symptoms of the disease, it is not generally considered to be the cause of severe mental problems. The woman was sentenced to "up to" 360 days in a mental health program.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/24/0248213.shtml

Feb. 20 DesertLight Journal

Scott · 24 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Click here to check out the latest DesertLight Journal e-zine. This one includes news of a new group to combat false child abuse accusations, important news about the cyberManbooks e-publisher, the Unity Wall, which offers and outlet for people to tell their stories about unjust child support, and more. Trudy Schuett also announced that the DLJ web site is visited by people in 30 countries. Keep up the great work, Trudy!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/24/0346257.shtml

Glenn Sacks on the Radio

Scott · 25 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks is getting some serious airtime to discuss his latest controversial article, Shouldn't Men Have a Choice, Too? Glenn will appear on the show In the Heat of the Night on KLSX 97.1 FM (Los Angeles) at 10 PM PST this Sunday (2/24). Listen to the show live at this link. Then he will appear on The Dave Taylor Show on CHQR AM 770 in Calgary, Alberta, Canada. The show will be at 1 PM PST on Monday, February 25. You can listen live here. Finally, Glenn will once again appear on the Al Rantel Show (KABC AM 790 in Los Angeles) on Friday, March 1 at 7 PM PST.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/24/148225.shtml

Prostate Cancer Research "10 Years Behind" Breast Cancer Research

Scott · 25 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Men's Health America mailing list included this article from the California Press Democrat, which mentioned that prostate cancer research is ten years behind breast cancer research. Talk about a great quote to make use of! Also, this post from the British Medical Journal discusses men's health but perpetuated the notion that medical research used to ignore women.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/24/1924218.shtml

Maximum Exposure: Men are Stupid

Scott · 25 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "The TV show Maximum Exposure aired a show last night focused entirely on the stupidity of males. Lines such as "we're so stupid, it's a miracle women even let us get near them," "if these guys don't make you feel superior, compare yourself to the morons on our list," and "if you still ain't convinced men are IQ-challenged, stay with us" were said throughout and were far too numerous to keep track of. The show aired in Richmond on TV Channel 6 (web site, phone # (804) 254-3600 General Manager - Mark Pimental), which is a CBS-affiliate. Needless to say, the show would never have aired the same show with the genders revered. I am contacting Channel 6 myself and think it would be great if we all held WTVR and CBS accountable for what they are allowing to be broadcast on their networks."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/25/0122209.shtml

Advertising Standards Canada

Scott · 26 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

bledso submitted a link to the Canadian Advertising Standards organization. The site is very useful for activists and includes information on how to submit a complaint about an advertisement and includes reports about advertisement complaints. Our friends from Canada will find this to be some very useful information. Bookmark this site!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/25/0125244.shtml

McElroy: NOW Used Yates For Political Gain

Nightmist · 26 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy's latest Fox News column examines the National Organization for Women's (now played-down) support of Andrea Yates, mother who drowned her five children in a bathtub. McElroy points out that NOW wanted to use the case to point the finger at men, who, in NOW's opinion, keep women locked up and tied down to homes and families. McElroy also explores other examples of NOW's attempts to politicize criminal acts.

Source: Fox News [web site]

Title: NOW distances itself from Yates

Author: Wendy McElroy

Date: February 25, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/26/0057253.shtml

It's Time To Vanquish Paternity Fraud

Nightmist · 26 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

My latest column, which will also be available as a guest editorial on Wendy McElroy's ifeminists.com, examines a recent case of Kafkaesque paternity fraud and points to some hope on the horizon in the form of new state legislation to deal with these types of problems.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/25/0013232.shtml

DV Protection Law Goes Too Far

Scott · 27 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Live Free or Die sent us this link and writes *"A blind, wheelchair-bound man was arrested by New Hampshire police for violating a restraining order - when he called his ex-wife on the phone. I really doubt a blind man in a wheelchair can be that much of a threat, and the police agreed. But they were forced to arrest him (and take him via ambulance to jail where they refused to hold him for liability reasons) because of the zero-tolerance domestic violence laws. The police would like to have "more discretion" on whether to arrest in cases like this."*Source: The Union Leader [newspaper]

Title: State domestic violence law puts police in bind

Author: Unknown [AP story]

Date: February 25, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/26/2331235.shtml

MANN is Looking for Movie Reviewers

Scott · 27 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Mensactivism.org is looking for volunteer movie reviewers, to analyze new movies from a masculist perspective. We currently have one person who is willing to write regular reviews if we can find at least a couple more. If you're regular moviegoer, this could be a fun activism project. Note that we're looking for in-depth reviews, not just a review of a few sentences. Post on the comment board here or e-mail admin@mensactivism.org if this interests you.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/27/0510248.shtml

Exploiting Deprived Children for Entertainment

Scott · 27 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

ronn pointed us to this article by the Ottawa Citizen's Dave Brown. Brown laments the exploitation of children and fathers on talk shows, particularly those which feature "Who's the daddy?" themes. I have to agree - this kind of voyeurism is degrading, it exploits children, and it almost never sympathetically treats fathers who were tricked into parenthood. That these kinds of talk shows exist says a lot about our screwed up priorities. Source: The Ottawa Citizen [Canadian newspaper]

Title: Exploiting deprived children for entertainment is sickening

Author: Dave Brown

Date: February 22, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/27/0523259.shtml

Allegedly Date-raped Man Forced To Pay Child Support

Nightmist · 27 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This story on azcentral.com reports on a man who has been ordered to pay child support for a baby conceived through forced sex. According to the man, he was drugged and date-raped by the child's mother, who then sued him for child support. The baby, a boy, was born March 3, 1998, and paternity actions initially were brought against two men, court records said. Blood tests determined the man ordered to pay child support was the father.

Source: azcentral.com [web site]

Title: Man's date-rape defense doesn't win case

Author: Robert Imrie (Associated Press)

Date: February 26, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/27/0631252.shtml

NOW Endorses the Book Stupid White Men

Nightmist · 28 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

John Knouten submitted this media review from the National Organization for Women. The first review is of the book Stupid White Men by Michael Moore. The book is largely critical of the Bush administration, but Moore also takes some shots at men in general, much to the delight of NOW. One chapter in particular should warm the hearts of feminists. "The End of Men" details the havoc that men have wreaked on women, government and the planet. Moore bravely tells it like it is where domestic violence is concerned and he even encourages men to get active in helping end the wage gap between women and men! And yet NOW insists their movement is not anti-male. Click Read More below for contact information.

Source: National Organization for Women [web site]

Title: Feminist Media Round-Up: The Good, The Bad and The Ugly

Author: Lisa Bennett

Date: February 22, 2002

Contacts

Lisa Bennett may be reached at NOW's communications office.

Michael Moore may be reached via his publisher, Regan Books, a division of HarperCollins.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/27/1954233.shtml

GA Senators Against Paternity Fraud Bill

Scott · 28 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original warble writes "Earlier I asked the question, what legislators in Georgia voted against the right of a man to be free from paternity fraud? I have found the answer to that question at this URL.

I believe there were five Democrats in the Senate that opposed HB369. Five Democrats chose not to vote and one Republican also abstained. If we use the logic that one is either for or against men's rights, then eleven Senators oppose men's rights. Perhaps somebody in GA can call them and inform us why these legislators oppose this bill. Just click on the name next to red "N" to get their phone number. I would like to know. In total that means that about 20% of the Senators oppose men's rights legislation in GA."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/28/0031237.shtml

N.O.W. Targets Garman as "Radical Right"

Scott · 28 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve pointed out to me that N.O.W. has included a quote from me (out of context as it is) on their "Scary Quotes: Hair-Raisers from the Radical Right" web page. Click here and check the third quote on the list. I actually didn't say this at the Senate hearing, it was something I spoke of when interviewed about Stop Hating Men. The quote in context is, "'Men as a class have never had much power,'...Sure, certain men have had power, but so have certain women." Although I'm sure this doesn't change it from being the same heresy from N.O.W.'s point of view. :)

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/28/1311243.shtml

Proposed Virginia Marital Rape Law

Scott · 28 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "The Richmond Times Dispatch reported in an article that there are bills under consideration in the Virginia House of Delegates that would give married women "the ability to charge rape without having to prove they no longer live with their husband or without having to prove a serious bodily injury." When opponents complained that changing the law could cause women in divorce cases to file false charges of rape as leverage for securing more child support and alimony, supporters of the bill "scoffed at that argument, explaining the change was a matter of fairness." The bill's sponsors are Del. Terie L. Suit in the House and state Sen. Thomas K. Norment. If you live in Virginia you can find who your representatives are at: this link."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/28/0037219.shtml

Mass. Gov. Swift Denies Freedom For Innocent Man

Nightmist · 28 February 2002 · Archived copy · Original

ronn sent in this column from the Washington Times, which relates the story of Gerald Amirault, a man who, along with his sister and mother, was convicted on fraudulent child abuse charges 16 years ago. In spite of the unanimous recommendation of the Governor's Board of Pardons to free Amirault, Mass. Gov. Jane Swift has chosen not to do so, apparently for fear of election backlash. The column's author suggests that Swift's re-election campaign is more important to her than justice.

Source: Washington Times [newspaper]

Title: Still the witch trial state

Author: Paul Craig Roberts

Date: February 25, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/27/2153206.shtml

Low Testosterone Causes Emotional Instability

Scott · 1 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

sjones writes "Scientists have just discovered that low levels of testosterone in men causes emotional problems just like it does in women. In the process of reporting this the media made fun of the men, saying that the research "has an amusing side" and that testosterone does not solve the problem of men's inability to wash dishes. The story is here." One has to wonder if they reported this as a health article or just for laughs. Thanks also to Serge for submitting this BBC article, which has more details about the study.Source: BBC [UK news network]

Title: Moody men blame their hormones

Author: Unknown

Date: February 27, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/28/1746237.shtml

Web Site Provides Overview of Male Rape

Nightmist · 1 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I found this link to callrape.com while I was surfing ifeminists.com this morning. This site provides an overview about the rape of males and attempts to dispell some myths surrounding it. There's also a history of male rape and some words about the "aggression vs. sexual desire" debate. MYTH: The majority of male rape occurs in prison. FACT: A study of incarcerated and non-incarcerated male rape victims in Tennessee concluded that the similarities between these two groups would suggest that the sexual assault of men may not be due to conditions unique to a prison, and that all men are potential victims (Lipscomb et al., 1992).

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/28/1749209.shtml

Woman Suicide Bomber/Terrorist

Scott · 1 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User sent us this Boston Globe article and writes "[This is] yet another example of how terrorism isn't only performed by men." Thanks also to SJones for sending us this link, and to Rams for sending us this one. It's a sad fact that terrorism, like all violence, isn't a gender issue.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/28/1752203.shtml

MANN Upgrade This Weekend

Scott · 1 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Men's Activism News Network will be unavailable this weekend due to a major server software upgrade. The outage will begin early Saturday morning and the site should be back up by Sunday evening. We apologize for any inconvenience this may cause, but we intend to offer some cool new features with the upgrade, including an apache file compression module that should increase the download speed of MANN for most users, regardless of your internet connection speed.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/27/0514257.shtml

New "Rape Test" from France

Scott · 1 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

JM writes *"Out of France comes a new test (already starting to be used) that, in the words of an influential science magazine, will "prove rape". It does not prove rape. What it really shows is that a woman has had sex with a man from a certain biological group - NOT a certain individual - up to a week or so after sex. It does this by detecting Y-chromosomes. This test only determines that sex has taken place. The rape aspect is still totally dependent on whether the sex was consensual. It looks very much as though this test could be used as a "plan B" to prosecute men - guilty or innocent - when it has been shown that no sperm are present."*Source: New Scientist [magazine]

Title: Test can prove rape days later

Author: Anil Ananthaswamy

Date: February 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/28/1927244.shtml

Sunday's mensactivism.org/ifeminists.com chat

Nightmist · 1 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This Sunday (3/3), the jointly sponsored mensactivism.org and ifeminists.com chat will feature a question and answer session about writing as activism. The featured answer-woman and answer-man will be Wendy McElroy and myself. While Wendy can answer specific questions about writing as a widely published columnist/activist, I will answer questions from the newspaper perspective related to getting your op-ed or letters to the editor in print. Join us at 9p.m. EST on Sunday in the ifeminists.com chat room.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/02/28/1846254.shtml

Ok...We're Back!

Scott · 4 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The upgrade of Mensactivism.org this weekend went surprisingly well - there were no unexpected problems or delays, except for a temporary DNS issue. As I'm now way behind in a ton of my other commitments, things will get back to normal at a fairly slow rate. The apache compression module hasn't been installed yet, and probably won't be until this weekend. The new moderation system will also become more visible as the week goes on. We'll do our best to get up to date on our current submissions bin, and thanks to everyone for your patience!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/04/1446219.shtml

Man Dies From Pain of Castration

Scott · 4 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes *"A transvestite castrated his/her husband, apparently out of anger, and the husband is reported to have died from the pain of the castration itself. The article is here. This is the second time I have read a news article in which a medical professional said a man may actually die from the pain of an injury to his testicles. The first was the case of the woman who bit off the testicle of a drunken man who sat on her."*Source: The Arizona Republic [newspaper]

Title: Transsexual gets 11 years for castration death

Author: Unknown [AP article]

Date: February 27, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/04/1449229.shtml

Fathers Can Raise School Performance of Children

Scott · 4 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

dominic7 sent us this BBC article and writes "[This is] interesting. It's frustrating to keep on seeing study after study prove that the inclusion of fathers in their children's upbringing is important, yet see these studies ignored by the "powers that be"." One notable thing about this article is that it also acknowledged that even divorced dads have an important impact on their children's educational success, something I wish many family court judges would take note of. Source: BBC [UK news network]

Title: Fathers can raise school results

Author: Unknown

Date: February 28, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/04/1454230.shtml

Swift Accuses Her Critics of Gender Bias

Scott · 4 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User sent us this story from the Boston Globe and writes "Poor Jane Swift is playing the "gender card" claiming that powerful men are trying to undermine her next run for MA Governor. She knows that the Massachusetts press will eat this ploy up and and cast doubt on any man that runs against her now. Shameless... The poll at the end of the article shows that she has very low voter support. Maybe she should stick with the issues..." I do hope MA voters will show Swift and others that this kind of politics will not be supported. Source: The Boston Globe [newspaper]

Title: Swift accuses her critics of gender bias

Author: Stephanie Ebbert and Frank Phillips

Date: March 1, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/04/229211.shtml

The Yates Defense Strikes Again, For Women Only

Nightmist · 5 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Another woman is being let off easy after committing the murder of her two infants, according to this story from Nashville's WSMV NBC affiliate. Her excuse is not postpartum depression, but another "rare" form of mental illness. Similarly, an "angry" Cincinnatti woman will not be indicted on assault charges after she shot a man in the groin. The man was alleged to have assaulted her son, but had not yet been tried or convicted. The grand jury cited "emotional distress" as their excuse for not indicting her. And, in a final act of judicial hypocrisy, an 8-year-old Ann Arbor boy has been charged with felonious assault for pointing a toy gun at his classmates.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/04/1525252.shtml

GA Child Support Guidelines Declared Unconstitutional

Scott · 5 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "Why it takes a woman to get this kind of ruling is beyond me. See the ruling at this press release. I am dumbfounded that a woman is able to get these guidelines proven to be illegal while men's cries were largely ignored. It is stunning and demonstrates how biased and cruel the judicial system is in its treatment of men. This challenge cannot possibly be the first challenge to the oppressive and illegal requirements of the child support laws throughout the U.S." While I understand the double standard at work here, I think we should still celebrate this ruling as a great step forward.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/04/2215212.shtml

Comment Moderation and Metamoderation

Scott · 5 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Since the questions are starting to roll in about the comment moderation system, which is in the process of being enabled, I'd like to direct people to some documentation about the system. Unfortunately, I don't have the time this week to rewrite the docs and make them specific to this site, so instead I will point you to Slashdot's Comments and Moderation FAQ. It's long and complex, but worth reading. I'm sure people will still have questions, so feel free to ask them under this story, and I'll do my best to answer them.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/05/1659238.shtml

Debra Saunders On Andrea Yates

Adam · 5 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Here we go again, jumping straight in the fray of hypocrisy and heresy on the subject of Andrea Yates. At least this article points out the double standards involved, although she wants Russell Yates imprisoned as well (can anybody say fall guy?), but I think you people can read between the lines. While the article is questionable in places, it looks like the Andrea Yates story will be making debate for quite some time.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/04/2250205.shtml

Sacks on Shared Parenting

Scott · 5 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks wrote a great piece on shared parenting in support of a proposed Tennessee bill that would make shared physical custody the default for divorcing parents. "Advocates of the bill emphasize that it will lower the divorce rate, since parents won't be rewarded by the courts for being the first one to terminate a struggling relationship. In addition, they say, it encourages cooperation and even reconciliation because each parent knows that, barring proof of abuse, they will not be able to drive the other parent out of their children's lives." I hope activists in TN are organizing well in support of this bill, which will help many fathers, but most of all, children.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/05/2111229.shtml

McElroy: Can The Identity Politics, Men Have Opinions Too

Nightmist · 5 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy's latest Fox News column explores the core problem many of us see with mainstream feminism: "you're not a woman, so you just can't understand." McElroy examines identity politics in all activism, and points out that men and women, although different, do have common ground, and each should value the opinion of the other, The parallel in feminism is that, although a man does not experience womanhood, he nevertheless understands injustice. Depending on his life experiences, a man may empathize with a rape victim more deeply than many women do. Moreover, like the doctor, men can have perspectives on "women's issues" which are valuable precisely because they are different. And "womanhood" is not so fragile as to be damaged by listening to the opinions of men.

Source: Fox News [web site]

Title: Identity Politics Dismisses Shared Humanity

Author: Wendy McElroy

Date: March 4, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/04/2326202.shtml

Judge Halts Sexist Army Policy on Promotion

Nightmist · 6 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This article in the Washington Post reports that a federal judge has struck down the U.S. Army's equal opportunity policy, which appears to have promoted women and minorities at the expense of white male officers. The Army's written direction to promotion boards that urges them to consider the "past personal or institutional discrimination" faced by women and minorities is unconstitutional because the policy does not order the board also to consider possible discrimination against white men, the judge found. This sounds like an important victory for Lt. Col. Raymond Saunders, who has fought this battle for the past three years.

Source: Washington Post [newspaper]

Title: Judge Halts An Army Policy on Promotion

Author: Neely Tucker

Date: March 5, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/05/166253.shtml

Berlin Opens Battered Men's Shelter

Scott · 6 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "Berlin is opening the first battered men's shelter in Germany. I found the article in Yahoo! Oddly Enough, which shows what they think of violence against men and men's issues in general. The article is here." The "Oddly Enough" section is reserved for "fringe" news stories, and it does say a lot about the public perception of abused men that this story was placed in this section.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/06/0320221.shtml

New Law Creates Felony for Domestic Assault in MA

Scott · 6 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

CJ submitted this story and writes *"It's a slippery slope in MA for people accused of domestic violence. It is now a felony for aggravated assault, which sounds like a good idea, but in MA there are so many laws that view domestic issues in a 'a priori' (before the facts) manner that I feel that this is one step closer to martial law and will be used as new weapon to wreck havoc with men's freedom. Jane Swift is shameless in her attempts to stay in office... how long now before a shove turns into aggravated assault is in the eye of the vindictive family courts that are over-run with radical feminists."*Source: The Boston Globe [newspaper]

Title: New law creates felony for aggravated assault

Author: Unknown [AP article]

Date: March 4, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/06/0323258.shtml

Goodman Acknowledges Double Standard in Yates Case

Scott · 6 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal sent us this Boston Globe editorial and writes "The Yates case is a good platform for pointing out the post-divorce psychosis that affects many men. Maybe creating this new term will raise the consciousness of reporters who find excuses for women's violence, but not for men's. In this column, Ellen Goodman comes close to recognizing this pattern." I almost fell of my chair when I read this editorial from Goodman. I've known her to be a misandrist belittler of men's rights in the Globe for as long as I can remember. Source: The Boston Globe [newspaper]

Title: Mothers and madness

Author: Ellen Goodman

Date: February 28, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/06/1513242.shtml

MANN Chat: Identity Politics

Thomas · 6 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

In tonight's Mensactivism.org on-line chat we will discuss identity politics, which holds that only members of a particular group, such as women, can understand issues of importance to that group. (For an overview and critique of this political tactic, see Wendy McElroy's recent Foxnews.com column.) Join us at 9:30 PM EST tonight (3/6) in the MANN chat room.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/06/1920211.shtml

International Men's Day

Scott · 7 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

ronn sent us this link to an editorial by Mike LaSalle of Men's News Daily. LaSalle feels that "International Women's Day," March 8, has been co-opted by radical feminists to pursue their agenda and that a counterbalance is needed - an International Men's Day. LaSalle announces that this weekend, MND will restore some balance to the rampant statistical manipulations and misinformation that radical feminists have used to advance their agenda on days such as International Women's Day. Keep an eye on Mike's site.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/06/217201.shtml

Hefty Re-running Male Bashing TV Ad

Scott · 7 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

disclaimer writes "The Hefty trash bag ad bashing men is back on the air for another run. I saw the 'men are trash' Hefty ad on the evening of Tuesday, March 5th on CBS. Even though we wrote letters of complaint about the commercial, it appears that Hefty didn't listen. I thought that those who wrote Hefty should know that Hefty has turned a deaf ear to us." Perhaps they need another reminder?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/06/2110208.shtml

Canadian Judge Backs Away From Upside-Down DV Laws

Scott · 7 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Uberganger writes "This is an article from The Ottawa Citizen, found via divorceport.com, written by Dave Brown, the Citizen's senior editor. It describes how Judge Jean-Francois Gosselin 'stepped away' from a preposterous DV case because the definition of violence is now too wide. The case ended with no further action, and crown prosecutors are now 'expected to exercise greater discretion'. It's a welcome touch of sanity in Canada's demented DV landscape." Thanks also to ronn for submitting this article.Source: The Ottawa Citizen [Canadian newspaper]

Title: Judge takes a stand against flawed domestic violence system

Author: Dave Brown

Date: March 2, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/07/1632240.shtml

NCFC-NH Activist Meeting

Scott · 8 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This Sunday, March 13 the New Hampshire chapter of the National Congress for Fathers and Children will be meeting in the Newington Town Hall starting at 7 PM. Among the agenda items are updates on the status of the NH Men's Commission Bill, as well as other pending bills related to ex-parte restraining orders, shared parenting, child support, and no-fault divorce reform. For more info contact Mike Genoulis at: geancfc@juno.com.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/06/2118213.shtml

GoMemphis.com: Go After Those Deadbeats!

Nightmist · 8 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Time to raid the accounts of NCPs in Tennessee. This person is so ignorant of the true amount owed and where it actually goes it's appalling. No need to worry about the life of the [non-custodial parent], just raid raid raid. Please write this editor so that wrongs can be righted." In fact, the author of this editorial advocates the same backward beliefs about child support collection which have recently led other states to re-examine their systems. You may contact the editor here.

Source: GoMemphis.com [Web site]

Title: Editorial: Pursuing child support collection to the limit

Author: Unknown/Staff

Date: February 28, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/07/2229255.shtml

More Divorce Subsidies for Women

Scott · 8 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal writes "The IRS rules currently contain at least six incentives for women to divorce their husbands. For example, he is taxed on child support even though she has the use of the money. Now, the national debate on pensions and Social Security reform is providing feminists with the opening to establish even more divorce incentives. Here's one."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/08/0318212.shtml

"Take Our Daughters To Work Day" Is Sexist

Nightmist · 8 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This story in the Press Democrat reports on Joe Manthey, a men's rights advocate who has filed a lawsuit against his county board of supervisors for their support of the sexist, misandrist holiday for girls known as "Take Our Daughters To Work Day." The problem is that the local government is supporting this sexism with public funds. Manthey's attorney, Chris Ferry of Pleasant Hill, said public agencies cannot put on any event that excludes participation based on gender. "Nothing is more rewarding to a child than to see their mother or father do well in public and be recognized," Ferry said. "The way the county has this event set up, it is being denied to boys. You can't do that. It's discrimination." Contact the Press Democrat to show your support for Mantheny here

Source: Press Democrat [newspaper]

Title: Male activist sues over 'daughters at work' days

Author: Tom Chorneau

Date: March 5, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/08/1652213.shtml

El Dildo Bandito Headed to Court

Scott · 8 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Rocky Mountain News reports here that Bob Rowan, the man who took down the male bashing art exhibit "Hung out to dry" from the Boulder, CO public library, is headed to trial. The artist who created the work, Susanne Walker, insists on pressing criminal tampering charges against him despite the fact that Rowan has received incredible public support for his actions. The article doesn't exactly paint Rowan as a saint, but it is fairly balanced quoting several people from both sides of the dispute. Source: The Rocky Mountain News [newspaper]

Title: Ceramic penis case headed for trial

Author: Owen S. Good

Date: March 8, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/08/2025206.shtml

Women Lawyers Want to Work 20% Fewer Hours to Raise Children

Scott · 9 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

gte910h writes "This is a editorial by Karen Selick of the Independent Women's Forum. It denounces a recent proposal in Canada to make women lawyers who are raising children be allowed to bill 20% fewer hours then other lawyers at a firm while being paid the same." And how about fathers who are raising children? Anyone who can't see the double standard in this must be blind. The title of this article, "Equal Pay for Less Work" also makes a very common sense argument against this. Source: The Independent Women's Forum [web site]

Title: Dispatch: Equal Pay for Less Work

Author: Karen Selick

Date: Unknown

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/09/1630243.shtml

Male Gymnast Limited by Double Standards

Scott · 9 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Foster's Daily Democrat reports here that high school gymnast Ryan Chandler can't compete for points in state competitions because he's male, and there isn't sufficient participation in gymnastics by males to create a separate category for them. Chandler's coach Karla Underwood is quoted as saying, "I think it's ridiculous...If it was the opposite way something would surely be done. We've been trying to get something done but nobody will listen." Coach Underwood also explains that while men do have some advantage in gymnastics due to their strength, women also have advantages over men in terms of flexibility and that the scale of the equipment is geared toward smaller women. Many thanks to Rams for sending this story our way.

Source: Foster's Daily Democrat [newspaper]

Title: Noble gymnast competes, but officially doesn't count in the eyes of the MPA

Author: Mark Quirk

Date: February 5, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/09/191236.shtml

MANN Movie Reviewers E-mail List

Scott · 10 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I have set up an e-mail list for people who would like to write movie reviews for Mensactivism.org. A few people e-mailed me personally stating that they wanted to join the list, and I have subscribed them. But if you haven't received the mailing list welcome message and still want to join up, click here and enter your e-mail address in the subscription form.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/09/2038227.shtml

In Defense of Russell Yates

Nightmist · 11 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks submitted his latest column, which also today ran in the Houston Chronicle. Sacks points out that the harsh criticisms mainstream (largely female) press have heaped upon Mr. Yates may be unwarranted. What these and others forget is that it's hard to make the right decision when you don't have a lot of options. According to Andrea Yates' brother, Andrew Kennedy, Russell Yates "did his best....He trusted the doctors and he did everything they said to do. He made sure she took her medication."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/11/1759250.shtml

NJ Law Still Enforces Child Support by Proven Non-Bio Men

Scott · 12 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Ox
sent us this article from Law.com regarding paternity fraud, where men are still forced to pay child support for children that have been proven not their own via DNA testing. The article includes a fairly technical legal background of the common law which has led to this situation, and is a good read to understand why things have become so messed up in the legal system with regard to paternity these days. Source: Law.com [web site]

Title: In Child-Support Cases, DNA and Paternity Don't Go Hand in Hand

Author: Jim Edwards

Date: March 11, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/11/2122251.shtml

iFeminism: A Women's Movement Friendly To Men

Nightmist · 12 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy's latest Fox News column explores some of the most-often-asked questions she encounters about individualist feminism, like what is it? And how can a feminist movement not be anti-male? Here are Wendy's answers. Wendy has consistently demonstrated to mensactivism.org that she firmly believes in men's equal rights. A "welcome" sign for men must be posted on the door of feminism. They are fathers, mates, sons, friends and neighbors. It is folly to "solve" a human problem without consulting and co-operating with one-half of the species.

Source: Fox News/ifeminists.com

Title: 21st Century Feminism

Author: Wendy McElroy

Date: March 11, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/11/2259235.shtml

Gender Double Standards in Justice Hurt Everyone

Nightmist · 12 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

My latest column, which will also appear today on Wendy McElroy's ifeminists.com, examines the recent cases of Chante Mallard (who allowed a homeless man to die while trapped in her broken windshield), Andrea Yates (who drowned her five children), and Jaymie Hutchins (who shot an alleged child abuser in the groin). Apparently, the justice systems of the United States consider these women less culpable for their criminal acts than Tommy Davis, an 8-year-old Ann Arbor boy, who pulled a toy gun on three of his peers.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/10/0424230.shtml

Yates Guilty of Capital Murder

Nightmist · 13 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This story from Yahoo! News reports that the Texas jury in the trial of Andrea Yates has found her guilty of capital murder. Now that the guilty verdict has been returned, the jurors face the task of deciding Yates' sentence, whether it be the death penalty (what the prosecutors are fighting for) or life in prison.

Source: Reuters

Title: Texas Mother Found Guilty of Capital Murder

Author: Unknown/Reuters staff

Date: March 12, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/12/2340203.shtml

More Misandry in Massachusetts

Scott · 13 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "This is another article about the infamous sex abuse case of Gerald Amirault who was refused parole by the unelected Governor Jane Swift. The usually stern parole board recommended that Amirault be paroled, and his two female codefendants had already been released from prison some time ago. What makes this story uniquely bizarre is that the same Governor Swift who went against the recommendation of her own parole board for the release of Gerald Amirault, just last year issued a full pardon to five women who were convicted and executed during the Salem witch trials in 1692! For an even more in-depth insight on just how toxically misandric Massachusetts has become under the MS-rule of Governor Swift, check out the web site of The Father's Coalition of Massachusetts. It is not for the faint hearted."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/12/1812249.shtml

Glenn Sacks To Appear in Two Radio Broadcasts

Nightmist · 13 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks has informed us that he will be appearing on the Al Rantel show tonight to discuss his most recent column "In Defense of Russell Yates." The show may be heard on KABC-AM 790 in Los Angeles and starts at 7 p.m. PST. Sacks will also appear on the Sterling Show on 610 WTVN-AM in Columbus, Ohio, on Monday, March 18 at 9 p.m. EST to discuss the same column. Update: Glenn is also appearing on KLBJ-AM 590 in Austin, Texas today (3/13) at 1:20 p.m. CST.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/13/1625256.shtml

Stuart Miller On Marital Rape

Adam · 13 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Stuart Miller, a father's advocate, has written a controversial article on marital rape discussing some problems with the entire concept. As he says, "Contrary to popular propaganda, we do not live in a patriarchal society. Rather, we live in a paternalistic society where we bend over backwards to protect women and children to such an extent that it overshadows our own common sense." Throughout the article he points out this kind of thinking for the problem it is, and how it's not good for society in general.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/13/0040207.shtml

MANN to Slow Down for Two Weeks

Scott · 14 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

There comes a time every so often in an activist's career to take things easy for a while. Such is the case here at MANN. It has been decided that we will be running this site in "degraded mode" for the next two weeks, so I can get a handle on academics and enjoy my Spring Break, and the other admins can take it easy for a while and recharge our batteries. Expect updates to this site to be less frequent than usual (probably no more than 2 new stories posted per day) and e-mail responses to be delayed more than usual until Monday, March 25. This kind of downtime is sorely needed for us to catch our breath and prevent the onset of burnout, which would definitely not be cool. I'm certain that we'll be back in form better than before after this break. I'd encourage everyone to do the same on a regular basis to keep our motivation and insight maintained for the long haul.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/12/0211204.shtml

Domestic Violence, Male Victims, and the Presumption of Guilt

Nightmist · 14 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Peter submitted this column from the Ottawa Citizen. In it, a couple takes the unusual step of asking the columnist (Dave Brown) to be their go-between for communication because government-forced restraining orders prevent them from communicating directly. They say they have been forcibly separated by "warriors in the war against violence towards women." I also found this report linked to from ifeminists.com about the ongoing silence on male victims of domestic violence.

Source: Ottawa Citizen [newspaper]

Title: Couple stymied by presumption of guilt in domestic violence cases

Author: Dave Brown

Date: March 13, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/14/1527235.shtml

California Bill to force Draft Registration

Scott · 15 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

AFG writes "This article from the L.A. Times discusses a recent Bill in California that threatens young men with the refusal of a driver's permit if they do not register for the draft. One critic of the Bill argued the following: "Young people have the right to make a choice,"..."our Constitution allows for dissent and protest.... This bill fundamentally attacks the premise upon which this nation was founded." Personally, I cannot believe that young men are still discriminated against in this manner." They're doing the same thing in New Hampshire, too. Ungh. Source: The Los Angeles Times [newspaper]

Title: Bill Designed to Force Draft Registration

Author: Carl Ingram

Date: March 13, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/15/163222.shtml

Sacks: If The Genes Don't Fit, You Must Acquit

Nightmist · 15 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks submitted his most recent column, which also ran in the LA Daily News. In it, Sacks examines California's recent Paternity Justice Act and notes: Paternity fraud victims' stories often provoke disbelief. For example, four years ago Air Force Master Sergeant Ray Jackson was divorced by his wife. Soon afterwards, he discovered that the three children born during their marriage had, in fact, been the product of three different extramarital affairs. Jackson's ex-wife has disappeared with the children, and Jackson is still paying half his income to support children who aren't his and whom he'll probably never be allowed to see.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/15/1915242.shtml

Yates Gets Life in Prison, Eligible For Parole in 40 Years

Nightmist · 16 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This story on CNN.com details the jury's sentence handed down on Andrea Yates today. Yates was convicted earlier this week of capital murder in the June drowning deaths of her children. Prosecutors were seeking the death penalty. "This crime is of horrific proportions," prosecutor Kaylynn Williford said during closing arguments Friday morning. "This crime is a crime of the ultimate betrayal -- the betrayal of a mother to her children."

Source: CNN.com [web site]

Title: Yates sentenced to life in prison

Author: Unknown/CNN staff

Date: March 15, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/15/2044238.shtml

Irish Man Who Protested Family Court Cleared of Charges

Nightmist · 16 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This story in Ireland's Longford Leader reports that an unnamed Irish man who chained himself to a seat in Carrick-on-Shannon court house in protest against Ireland's discriminatory family law system was cleared of public disorder charges. The man who cannot be named for legal reasons and in order to protect the identity of his spouse and children was charged with a breach of the peace at Carrick court house when he refused to leave the court room when requested by Judge Deery. The man chained himself to a seat and attempted to read out a statement outlining alleged discrimination against men within the Family Law court. The gentleman was also supported by a throng of other protestors outside court.

Source: Longford Leader [newspaper]

Title: Protesters support father in his stance against Family Court

Author: Unknown/Staff

Date: March 16, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/16/200224.shtml

Ms Attempts to Subject Boys to "Work Day" Reprogramming

Nightmist · 17 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This article from the Clare Booth Policy Institute examines Ms. magazine's recent "change of heart" concerning "Take Our Daughters To Work Day" and its name change to "Take Our Daughters And Sons To Work Day." Ms plans to adopt the change next year. This was, perhaps, in response to male advocate Joe Manthey's civil rights lawsuit against the Sonoma County Board of Supervisors. Manthey contends that government support of this holiday discriminates against boys. Manthey is correct in that assumption. However, the Ms. Foundation's plans are now doubly detrimental. It offers boys no benefits and subjects them to the same feminist propaganda girls have had to endure.

Source: Clare Booth Policy Institute

Title: Take Our Daughters and Sons to Work Day®:
Now Subjecting Boys to Feminist Propaganda and Reprograming Them Through Gender Sensitivity

Author: Lisa De Pasquale

Date: March 15, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/16/204245.shtml

Tennessee Shared Parenting Bill Under Attack

Nightmist · 17 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

On tonight's episode of "Your Legal Rights," which airs on Saturday nights on Nashville's 1510 WLAC-AM, a representative of the Tennessee Women's Political Caucas called in to complain about the state's proposed "Shared Parenting Bill," which would make joint custody the "default" judgement in child custody cases. Although the bill is sponsored by a feminist, the caller disparaged Dads Against Discrimination and father's rights groups in general for bills like this one. She and the hosts disparaged the group for seeking equal rights for men. The TWPC representative is scheduled to be a guest on the show next Saturday night to discuss the bill, which both hosts (Charles Galbreath and Fletcher Long) admitted they knew absolutely nothing about, yet were entirely willing to deride. You can listen to "Your Legal Rights" live on the Internet, Saturday nights at 7 p.m. CST. I encourage anyone interested in supporting this bill to call the show and point out the flaws of this TWPC representative's arguments.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/17/0257233.shtml

Men Can Be Victims of Stalkers Too

Nightmist · 18 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This article in the Nashville Scene is more than a year old, but I think it's important to consider as some folks take on more public roles in men's rights issues. The article details the experiences of one male victim of stalking, and makes it pretty plain that anyone can become someone else's obsession, even in Internet forums like this one. According to Seema Zeya, senior program director of the Stalking Resource Center at the National Center for Victims of Crime, men are often too ashamed to report their stalkers. "We haven't gotten a lot of calls from male stalking victims," she says. "They're usually not really comfortable because they feel embarrassed and they're afraid that they won't be taken seriously. Unfortunately, they often are not taken seriously when they do report the crimes. Also, men have complained to us that there are not any support groups in their area for male victims of stalking crimes." Let's hope that's changing.

Source: Nashville Scene [newspaper]

Title: No Escape: One stalking victim's distressing, disturbing story

Author: Rebekah Gleaves

Date: January 25, 2001

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/18/083226.shtml

Joe Manthey Interview Today on the Dan Curry Show

Nightmist · 18 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

DanCurry writes "Joe Manthey will be on the Dan Curry Show Monday, March 18, at 6 p.m. PST to discuss the civil rights lawsuit against the Sonoma County Board of Supervisors on "Take your Daughters to work" day. Some question have arisen as to whether this is the right path to pursue. Don't miss this opportunity to voice your opinion." Some people have wondered aloud whether Manthey's lawsuit prompted Ms magazine to recently change the program to "Take Our Daughters and Sons to Work Day."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/18/1747238.shtml

Dave Brown: Debtors' Prisons Return

Scott · 19 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "The Ottawa Citizen has run an article detailing how men are being thrown into debtors prisons in the name of feminism and crushing those 'dead beat dads.' The article is here." The author of this article is, once again, Dave Brown. Brown continues to confront issues that no one else wants to address, and he deserves a lot of support for the flak he must take on a continual basis. His e-mail is: dbrown@thecitizen.southam.ca.Souce: The Ottawa Citizen [Canadian newspaper]

Title: The booming return of debtors' prisons

Author: Dave Brown

Date: March 16, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/19/0422253.shtml

Office of Men's Health Resource Center

Scott · 19 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The campaign to establish a national Office of Men's Health now has a new web site advocating it, which can be seen here. Note the link towards the bottom of the page where you can send off an e-mail of support for HR 632 to your Representatives and Senators. It only takes a minute to do! The Media Fact Sheet on their site also provides some useful stats that can be referenced when advocating for men's health.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/19/0428232.shtml

March Men's Hour is Out

Scott · 20 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "The March Men's Hour is out. Our answer to the sexist BBC's claim that the woman's hour has general appeal and therefore there's no need for a men's hour. It includes Barry Worrall (Cheltenham Group and UK Men's Movement) about the destruction of marriage and how the judges are making up law, Rape Trials (Calls for anonymity for rape suspects ignored in spite of suicides by men later proved innocent) and Women's History Month. It's at www.menshour.com."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/19/1942243.shtml

Mucking Around with the Database...

Scott · 20 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I'll be trying to fix the slash database early in the morning of Wednesday, and the site may become unstable or disappear for a bit. I'll be attempting to fix the broken moderation system so that comments can be rated correctly, which if you haven't noticed, isn't working as it's supposed to. I'll delete this posting when the work is done, whether it succeeds or not.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/20/053240.shtml

Boys' Eating Disorders Unfold

Scott · 20 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Bill Kuhl sent us this article and writes, "Today's St. Louis Post-Dispatch has a good article on boys and eating disorders. About the first third or so of the article talks about how boys are not recognized as potentially having the disease and it follows the travails of one boy to get help. Apparently he had to be driven from St. Louis to Iowa to get inpatient treatment that accepts boys." Source: The St. Louis Post-Dispatch [newspaper]

Title: Boys' eating disorders unfold; insurers hold off on coverage

Author: Cynthia Billhartz

Date: March 19, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/20/038208.shtml

Gloria Steinem and the CIA

Scott · 20 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

An Anonymous User writes, "There's an amazing article over here by Henry Makow, Ph.D. Makow claims that Gloria Steinem (a la "a woman needs a man like a fish needs a bicycle" fame) has strong ties to the CIA, and that certain spook organizations are responsible for the success of feminism and other liberal movements in the last century. I thought the article was kinda soaked in conspiracy theories, but if Steinem was involved with the CIA, we had better find out more about it."Source: TooGoodReports.com [web site]

Title: Gloria Steinem: How The CIA Used Feminism To Destabilize Society

Author: Henry Makow

Date: March 18, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/20/0457212.shtml

Back (Yes, Again)

Scott · 22 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

MANN is back, once again. I had to restore the database from backup tapes after I had hosed the system on Wednesday, so things are in the state they were in as of Wednesday morning at about 2 AM, including queued stories. All of that, and moderation still isn't quite working right. Ack...

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/21/202253.shtml

Misandric Governor Swift Drops Out Of Race

Scott · 22 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "Well, here is some good news! The misandric unelected female Governor of Massachusetts, Jane Swift is bowing out of the Governor's race.
What is significant here is that she was banking heavily on the femmunist voting block and their pressure groups to get elected. This tactic did not work in an ultra liberal state such as Massachusetts. This needs to be monitored as a political bellwether on how the men's movement is gaining status and how the election of the new Governor will affect the deplorable situation in the family court system in that unhappy state. I think it is a very good sign."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/21/1955205.shtml

Raising Money to Publicize Warren Farrell's Latest Book

Scott · 22 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Angelucci writes "I am passing this message on from Larry Hellmann of the National Congress for Fathers and Children. He is trying to raise some money to publicize Father & Child Reunion. Given the cowardly lies that gender feminists have been spreading about Warren to effectively shut him up, I think this is a worthwhile effort and I will contribute a couple hundred to it." Click Read More below to view the announcement.
If there is a thread of unification among us in the National Congress for Fathers and Children, it is our unique awareness of the tears, the fears, the despair of fathers sitting we meet daily pouring out their souls stripped of their very reason for being because their family has been destroyed, their children have been stolen from them, their support has been reduced to money. We have seen a loving dads transformed into criminals of society by child support orders they cannot maintain. We have seen fathers become walking dead because they are being denied merely to be what they are: fathers. We have all seen some version of what haunts my mind: a Father shot and killed in front of his children as he tried to implement his child visitation orders. If I am preaching to the choir it is because the voices of our choir have often not only gone unheard but, worse, been rejected and derided.

One of the most important events in recent years in the advance of Fatherhood information is the publication of Warren Farrell's latest book Father and Child Reunion (2001). Its combination of readability, balance and documentation makes it the best single resource to help a judge, the legislature make the transition from "mother knows best" to "both parents are best".

I am personally aware of Warren's work on this book from 1992 - ten years ago. I am personally aware of Warren's willingness to give up the world's best publisher (Simon & Schuster) and a hefty advance rather than cave to their demands to drop out the material on the dangers of father-absence and why children with dads do so well. The result is a book that ultimately got published but with a bank account that got wiped-out.

This Father's Day is our last opportunity to get out to the media the voice of our choir: the message of Father and Child Reunion. As President of NCFC, I have made a commitment with a publicist who guarantees radio show appearances for Warren Farrell to promote Father and Child Reunion and the work of NCFC specifically in the top twenty five markets, and in syndicated shows. The first commitment came from the publicist: reducing the fee from $7500 to $5500.

Tarcher Putnam, the publisher, has also committed to another printing of the book if this printing sells out. Our commitment is the $5,500.00. This is something we can do. We can help make the difference we want to make. It is my personal promise that every cent raised will go 100% into the project. Not a dime will be spent on administration. I further promise that for every $100.00 contribution or more, I will send an autographed copy (by Warren, not me!) of Father and Child Reunion to either for the donor or his/her Father.

In order to set up the project and gear up to the effort the publicist is asking for a 50% deposit by March 19.

We can do this. We can make it worthwhile for publishers to publish our message and impossible for the media to ignore what is published. Let's do it. Please make out your check to: National Congress for Fathers and Children and note the check to the Father's Day Project

Attention: Larry Hellmann

550 W. Vista Way

Vista, CA 92083

Direct Phone: (760) 758-0268

Larry Hellmann, President

National Congress for Fathers and Children

9454 Wilshire Blvd., Suite 907

Beverly Hills, CA 90212

Direct Phone: (760) 758-0268

www.ncfc.net

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/21/208248.shtml

A Man Is Battered Every 14 Seconds

Nightmist · 22 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This commentary in the Washington Times seems to be the author's mea culpa for ignoring male victims of domestic violence in a previous column. He had reported that a woman is battered every 15 seconds, but completely failed to mention the male statistic, which was in the very same study. This rousing omission was not lost on my readers. Shortly after the commentary ran, letters streamed — poured — into our office documenting acts of domestic violence committed against men. The accounts were tied together by a common theme: the reluctance of men to come forward, for fear of being emasculated. The author also admits he purposefully neglected to mention male victims as a result of his adherence to "longstanding cultural myths." It's good to see this kind of admission of neglect in print. Williams is a nationally syndicated columnist.

Source: Washington Times [newspaper]

Title: Notes on husband abuse

Author: Armstrong Williams

Date: March 22, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/22/1855255.shtml

History Channel Smears Men

Scott · 23 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Ouzinki writes "Did anyone else witness the "teach BOYS early" advertising segment on the History Channel on the night of 3-20-02? It was in a commercial spot about 7:30 PM (Alaska time), and featured a bit that showed women and children as the only victims of violence. The final segment of the commercial stated "in order to stop violence against Women, TEACH BOYS EARLY" (emphasis mine). I've seen this particularly disgusting advertisement on the History Channel once before, but couldn't remember the date/time. I checked my watch this time 'round, and upon going to thier web site, found no email link to express my displeasure. Does anyone have an email address to anyone that counts at History Channel? This abomination must be stopped."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/23/188237.shtml

Study: "Women beat men in web browsing"

Scott · 24 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

An Anonymous User writes, "If you want to see an example of statistical semantics to fit a particular agenda, then read this BBC article which features the title "Women beat men in web browsing". The basis for this claim is that women use their time online more "purposefully" - the examples being "shopping, organising travel, banking, and sending e-greeting cards" (!). Men's lack of "purposeful" use of the web include "browsing, reading content and downloading software"."Source: BBC [UK News Network]

Title: Women beat men in web browsing

Author: Unknown

Date: March 21, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/23/1818208.shtml

Woman Murders Boyfriend After Several Attempts

Scott · 24 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "A woman repeatedly tried to murder her boyfriend. She finally succeeded and, big surprise, she now claims to be the 'real' victim. Why she was never arrested for domestic violence for her previous attempts is not explained, nor why she was not in jail for attempted murder. The story, in which he is called her 'partner,' is here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/24/1518258.shtml

Men's Health Week Goes International

Scott · 24 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Men's Health America writes, "National Men?s Health Week, an effort to highlight the needs and disparities of men?s health, has now gone international. Beginning this year, Men?s Health America will describe Men?s Health Week as ?International Men?s Health Week.? Men?s health organizations in the United States, Canada, England, and Australia will be participating in the event. The international scope of men?s health was highlighted this past November, when the First World Congress on Men's Health was convened in Vienna, Austria. The dates of this year?s International Men?s Health Week will be June 10-16. These dates are designed to culminate in Father?s Day on June 16."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/24/1523213.shtml

Cathy Young Blasts Men's Activists for Supporting Russell Yates

Scott · 25 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

In what's sure to be a controversial article for the men's movement, Cathy Young criticized men's activists and specific leaders in the men's movement for supporting Russell Yates and claiming that he is not responsible for his wife's murder of their children. The Boston Globe article can be read here. Young doesn't deny that the media blame put on Russell Yates was at times unfair, but she firmly believes that Mr. Yates is morally culpable for this tragedy.Source: The Boston Globe [newspaper]

Title: Yates children's father shares in guilt for deaths

Author: Cathy Young

Date: March 25, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/25/1522258.shtml

More Progress on the "Male Pill"

Scott · 26 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal writes *"Since the most severe risks for men derive from having children (paternity fraud, divorce, child support, etc.), this report about the development of a contraceptive for men is extremely important. I hope we can find ways to promote its rapid completion and distribution."*Source: The Age [Austrailian newspaper]

Title: Australian scientists develop male pill

Author: David Wroe

Date: March 25, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/25/2346253.shtml

Light Dawns on the Media's Ignorance of Male DV Victims

Nightmist · 26 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

My latest column, which will also appear today on Wendy McElroy's ifeminists.com points out the hypocrisy of Western media when covering the issue of domestic violence, and how they ignore male victims even when the evidence is in their own faces. Drawing on nationally syndicated columnist Armstrong Williams' recent admission of his own cultural bias, I feel it is time for all media to examine their own cultural biases when reporting on domestic violence. It shouldn't be a gender issue.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/24/2230203.shtml

Gloria Steinem: Men Are Evil

Nightmist · 27 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This story on NewsMax describes gender feminist icon Gloria Steinem's latest hate-rant against men. She spoke at a YWCA charity event, where she blamed masculinity for everything from pedophilia in the Catholic Church, to Nazism, to the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11. Anyone know where one may write to Steinem so we may impart to her what a misandrist bigot she is?

Source: NewsMax [web site]

Title: Steinem Blames White Male Dominance for Church Sex Scandal, 9-11

Author: Unknown

Date: March 25, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/26/2043215.shtml

Schlussel Blasts Steinem For Sexist Comments

Nightmist · 28 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Conservative columnist Debbie Schlussel wrote this column about our favorite misandrist Gloria Steinem, who recently claimed at a YWCA charity event that masculinity is responsible for all the evil in the world. Yup, that's the solution to terrorism against Americans-let's give our boys Barbies, pearls, and china patterns. Everyone knows that would have prevented attacks on the WTC. And created some real macho firemen and policemen to rescue the victims.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/27/2021246.shtml

Against Military Conscription

Adam · 28 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Congressman Ron Paul has written an interesting article Against Military Conscription arguing that conscription violates the principles of democracy, among other common sense ideas. The only problem I have with this article is the fact he puts a gender-neutral spin on the draft, which I feel is quite misleading. Having said that, men's advocates should take notice of the arguments within, as most of them are quite good but easily understated, for example: "A military draft also appears to contradict the constitutional prohibition of involuntary servitude."Source: LewRockwell.com [web site]

Title: Against Military Conscription

Author: Ron Paul

Date: March 23, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/26/1037206.shtml

Dear Abby Prints Philip Cook Letter

Scott · 29 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Angelucci writes "Dear Abby on March 22nd printed a letter by Phil Cook of Stop Abuse For Everyone and she responded by admitting that domestic violence in not a gender issue but a human issue and that female-to-male violence is an "ugly, often ignored problem."" This is a good sign that the truth about domestic violence against men is starting to enter common knowledge.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/29/0125251.shtml

Kerkorkian to Pay $324k/Month for Child That is Not His

Scott · 29 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Garth writes *"These two stories (one, two), describe the Kerkorkian child support battle. Lisa Bonder Kerkorkian is asking for $324,000 a month to support their 4 year old daughter. It has been shown, however, that she faked the DNA paternity test. Unfortunately, the husband signed a paternity document, which of course nullifies the fact that the girl is not his daughter. Also of note, he must pay half his wife's legal bill because she only has 12 million dollars, whereas he has 6.5 billion."*Source: The National Post [Canadian newspaper]

Title: Kerkorian's former wife faked DNA paternity test

Author: Araminta Wordsworth

Date: March 26, 2002

Source: The National Post [Canadian newspaper]

Title: Wife's child support claims total US$324,000 a month

Author: Araminta Wordsworth

Date: March 26, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/29/0128255.shtml

Cheaters Exploits DV Against Men

Scott · 29 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "On March 23 at midnight, KCAL channel 9 aired an episode of Cheaters that I believe glorifies and condones violence against men. The name of the couple was Christian & Bret. It was about Bret being a cheating husband. What was disturbing were the three distinct alleged physical assaults on Bret by Christian. In addition, there was a police response where Bret was seeking protection from the DV. Cheaters helped Christian avoid arrest. The host pointed out that Bret wanted protection and was asking the police to have his wife arrested for DV. Further, Christian repeatedly brought into question the issue of child neglect. She was claiming that the child was suffering for want of formula. Clearly, the Child Protection Services should have been called and Christian arrested. However, I believe that the host of Cheaters.com obstructed justice. You can voice your protest at Cheeters.com, and you can write or call KCAL channel 9 in Los Angeles to voice your dismay at KCAL."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/29/0130242.shtml

Interesting Men's Health Report

Scott · 30 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tony writes "There is a new report out about mens health. I have not read it all (its very long at 80+ pages) but from the opening pages it seems very good, acknowledging "Men's health is greatly ignored,.." You can click here to download the PDF file." The title of the report is In Their Own Right: Addressing the Sexual and Reproductive Health Needs of American Men, and it is published by the Alan Guttmacher Institute.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/29/0136258.shtml

Maureen Dowd's Misandrist Rantings

Scott · 30 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Equalitarian62 writes *"It appears that the misandrist Maureen Dowd has written another anti-male editorial, (free NYT registration required) this time about Catholic priests. Dowd writes: "The vow of celibacy serves as a magnet for men running away from sexual feelings they are ashamed of. And the allegedly celibate society these men enter retards their sexual development, funneling their impulses in inappropriate directions." I believe that nuns take a similar vow. Would Dowd have described them in a similar fashion?"*Source: The New York Times [newspaper]

Title: Rome Fiddles, We Burn

Author: Maureen Dowd

Date: March 27, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/30/0444222.shtml

Gerald Reynolds Appointed to Education Office

Scott · 31 March 2002 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes *"[President Bush] had appointed Gerald Reynolds to the Department of Education's Office if Civil Rights, the office responsible for enforcing Title IX and all of the draconian measures that have resulted in less-than-acceptable education for boys and the destruction of many boy's sports programs in high schools and colleges. Though Sen. Ted Kennedy was doing his best to block Reynold's nomination through parliamentary maneuvering, the President has appointed Reynolds in a recess appointment. The article is here. We need to write to Mr. Reynolds and keep him advised of the continuing assault on boys in education and scholastic & collegiate sports."*Source: National Review Online [web site]

Title: Reynolds Wrap

Author: John J. Miller

Date: March 29, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/03/31/1549231.shtml

Getting To Batterers While They Are Young

Scott · 1 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "The current anti-violence TV, radio and newspaper campaign that is specifically directed at young males to sensitize them early on about their supposed innate inclination to abuse defenseless and innocent females in their lives is being promoted by an organization in San Francisco, California called "The Family Violence Prevention Fund." Their website is here. This project was previously discussed and critiqued in this forum a couple of days ago. I just sent them an e-mail voicing my concern about their one sided and misandrous approach to resolving this very serious problem of domestic violence."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/01/1723233.shtml

Will NH Have a State Men's Commission?

Scott · 2 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

New Hampshire is inching closer and closer to passing a bill which would establish a state Men's Commission, to study and advocate solutions to issues which negatively impact men as a gender. A full Senate vote on this bill is due any time now, and much of the reason I've been so negligent with Mensactivism.org lately is that I've been very caught up in doing local activism to help promote this bill. An article I wrote for the UNH school newspaper has been adapted for MANN and appears in the Read More section below. If you're a NH resident, please take a moment and write a letter in support of the bill. If you're not a NH resident, you can still write in support of the bill, and let NH Senators know that the country is eagerly hoping to see the success of a state Men's Commission.

Proposed Bill to Establish State Men's Commission

For more than thirty years, New Hampshire has had a Women's Commission to investigate and advocate for women's issues. This commission has done much to help bring public attention to the problems that women face and has promoted opportunities for women to realize their potential. Now, a bill has been introduced in our state that would do the same for men. HB 587, to establish a New Hampshire Men's Commission, is currently making its way through the NH legislature, and would help bring attention to men's issues which have remained invisible for too long. The staggering suicide rates of men, fatherlessness, domestic violence against men, and double standards which harm men as well as women are just a few of a number of issues that have too often been ignored in the current dialogue on gender. The Men's Commission would help show another side of the coin in gender issues, and improve equal rights for both men and women.

Last year, a legislative study committee issued a report outlining men's issues and status in New Hampshire. The report, which can be downloaded here in Adobe PDF format, examines several critical issues mentioned above and explains the need for a state commission to study and advocate for the needs of men. The results of the report conclusively show that despite some people's perceptions, men have serious problems and issues related to their gender roles and expectations which we have a responsibility to address. Did you know that men die, on average, 10 years earlier than women in NH? That fatherlessness is one of the primary determining factors of violence and antisocial behavior among young men? Or that men on average are doing much worse than women academically (and the trend continues to get worse) in education?

It's time that issues such as these received attention from a state commission, which can collect data locally and encourage action to correct these problems. HB 587 has also received significant legislative support, passing by a wide margin in the House, and was recommended for passage in the Senate just recently by the Internal Affairs Committee. This support is an encouraging sign that men's problems are slowly being acknowledged and understood as serious, legitimate issues. And furthermore, that we can advocate for men's issues without negatively impacting the gains that women have made over the years.

If you believe in equal rights for both men and women, please write to your NH Senators in support of HB 587. This is an opportunity to make a difference for gender equality and justice. We have included a sample letter for you to follow if you'd like, but please keep in mind that individualized letters get more attention from Senators.

Dear Senator,

I am writing to express my support for HB 587, to establish a state Men's Commission in New Hampshire. I believe in equality for both men and women and feel that a state Men's Commission would help address many men's issues that are important not only for men, but also for the women and children in men's lives. We have had a state Women's Commission for more than thirty years, and it's time that we also acknowledged that men have problems and issues that are important. HB 587 would help by collecting data and advocating for men's issues in the state, including problems such as men's high suicide rate, fatherlessness and its social costs, and men's declining educational status. These are all issues we can address without impacting the gains women have made over the years, and a state Men's Commission would be a great step forward for equality and the improvement of both men's and women's lives. Please vote for this bill.

Sincerely,

Contact info for the NH Senate follows. E-mail addresses are included when they exist. Note that half of the Senators don't have public e-mail addresses. A good strategy for sending e-mail to those without addresses is to send your message to Tammy Wright, the Senate clerk, and ask her to print the message out and deliver it to the Senator's mailbox. Tammy Wright's contact information is:

```
Senate Office  271-2111 Senate Clerk's Office  271-3420 tammy.wright@leg.state.nh.us
```

NH Senators with e-mail:	NH Senators without e-mail:
Edward (Ned) Gordon PO Box 112 Bristol, NH 03222-0112 susanduncan@leg.state.nh.us	Harold Burns PO Box 10 Whitefield, NH 03598-0010
Clifton Below 25 Perley Ave Lebanon, NH 03766-1816 cbelow@tpk.net	George Disnard PO Box 1476 Claremont, NH 03743-1476
Katherine (Katie) Wheeler 27 Mill Road Durham, NH 03824-3006 katieww@aol.com	Sheila Roberge 83 Olde Lantern Rd Bedford, NH 03110-4816
Thomas Eaton 27 Pheasant Hill Rd Keene, NH 03431-4339 senate10@juno.com	Deborah Pignatelli 22 Appletree Green Nashua, NH 03062-2252
Robert Flanders PO Box 1 Antrim, NH 03440-0001 flandersrb@aol.com	Gary Francoeur 23 Woodcrest Drive Hudson, NH 03051-3421
Mark Fernald 243 Spring Hill Rd Sharon, NH 03458-7308 fernalds@monad.net	John (Jack) Barnes PO Box 362 Raymond, NH 03077-0362
Burt Cohen PO Box 208 New Castle, NH 03854-0208 burtc@nh.ultranet.com	Daniel O'Neil PO Box 4206 Manchester, NH 03108-4206
Carl Johnson 42 Dale Rd Meredith, NH 03253-6802 carljean@worldpath.net	Russell Prescott 8 Farm Rd Kingston, NH 03848-3121
Theodore Gatsas 582 Chestnut St Manchester, NH 03104-6052 t.gatsas@leg.state.nh.us	Lou D'Allesandro 332 St. James Avenue Manchester, NH 03102

And whatever you do, keep your letters positive! The opponents of this bill have made many attempts to have this portrayed as a "women vs. men" issue, which they know will frighten off many people from voting for the bill and angering the women's lobby. Trying to humilate or shame Senators into voting for this bill is something that has already been tried and has backfired tremendously, so please don't make the same mistake.

If New Hampshire establishes a state Men's Commission, it would serve as a template for many other states to do the same. I have already expressed my willingness in front of the Senate Internal Affairs Committee to volunteer part-time on this commission should the bill pass. Please help make this vision come true!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/02/1754259.shtml

Confronting Woman-Bashing in the Men's Movement

Nightmist · 3 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Men's issues columnist Glenn Sacks has written this column, in which he profiles the "woman bashers" of the men's movement and warns against the men's and father's movement becoming too much like their enemies. It is said "choose your enemies carefully, for someday you'll resemble them." The men's and fathers' movement is gaining in strength and slowly making progress. However, there is a disturbing fringe element whose woman-bashing very much resembles the vicious man-bashing which men and fathers have endured for the past three decades. It is important that men's and fathers' activists confront this fringe rather than turn a blind eye to it. Glenn also submitted this column about a new study which has found that women's studies is full of misrepresentations and myths.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/02/1711259.shtml

MANN Chat: Expanding the Men's Movement

Scott · 3 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tonight's Mensactivism.org on-line chat will be on the topic of what we can do individually to help increase the numbers of participants in the men's movement. What kinds of outreach are appropriate and effective? How can we mix various techniques in order to bring a broad spectrum of men into the movement? How about younger men, in high school or college? And what about women - what kinds of reasons do they decide to speak out for men's rights? Stop by our chat room tonight at 9:30 PM EST and help us answer these questions.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/03/1332211.shtml

Few Men in College, Women Suffer

Scott · 3 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original shawn writes *"This article is about the shortage of men in college. In particular, it discusses the disparity between the number of black men and black women on campus. Of course, the article isn't about the obstacles and issues that prevent African American and other men from obtaining a higher education. No. It seems that women are the real victims of this educational shortfall because they can't find enough men to date. This article is interesting because: 1) it illustrates how the news media exclusively focuses on women even when it's clear that men are the ones with the problem; 2) it's another indication that women are reluctant to consider less educated men who do not have good jobs."*Source: Savannah Morning News [newspaper]

Title: Black women bemoan shortage of black men in college

Author: Megan Scott

Date: March 31, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/02/1823255.shtml

Comic Treats Domestic Violence as a Joke

Scott · 4 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes, "Something's been nagging at me. Lynn Johnston's For Better or For Worse comic depicts a guy being beaten up by two girls (one of whom is one of the main characters). Admittedly he was being a cad and dating both of them, but I don't think violence should be tolerated regardless. Am I being too alarmist by submitting this? No matter how I look at it it seems like Johnston's saying Domestic Violence is okay as long as the person is bad." Or male - does anyone really think she would depict two men beating up a woman that was two-timing them?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/04/0216219.shtml

Spreading Misandry's Spreading Popularity

Scott · 4 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

nagzi writes "Those of us in Canada should tune into Bravo! on Thursday night at 7:30pm EST. On BookTV they will be talking with one of the authors, Katherine K. Young, of "Spreading Misandry." This book is getting a lot of attention, and its seems like mostly positive at that. Unfortunately Chapaters is still sold out. :("

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/04/140252.shtml

Men's Issues In Israel

Adam · 4 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

While browsing a men's web ring, I came across this site about Men's Issues In Israel and I found it to be interesting, to say the least. While some of you might find it a bit "personal" I think it's worth finding out what men's issues are like in other countries. There's some more stuff at the Prisoners Of Zion webpage if you're still interested. It's a pity there's not more masculist sites focusing on men's issues in specific countries.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/03/2134234.shtml

U.N Activities on CEDAW

Scott · 4 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes *"I submit this because it is useful for us to be aware of what's going on in the international arena on "women's rights" and because the Bush administration has done something (small though it may be) to tame the American representation thereto. We could all agree that CEDAW has no reason to exist, but then again, it DOES exist and the U.S. needs to pay attention. In the world of women's rights, I'm afraid the world, lead by the women of the European Union, is against us. Mighty steep odds, I'd say. I guess they better go get help!! :-)"*Source: NationalReview.com [web site]

Title: Our Girl at the U.N.

Author: Kate O'Beirne

Date: March 21, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/04/0220222.shtml

One Father's Struggle for Custody Despite False Accusations

Scott · 5 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Ron Herbert writes "This article looks at the plight of a BC man who was finally awarded custody of his daughter, although he had to spend years dealing with the courts and a vindictive ex-wife. Although I'm glad he has been reunited with his child, I'm convinced that if a father had made false allegations against his ex-wife and violated court orders, he wouldn't have evaded [consequences]."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/04/1346243.shtml

Sacks, Angelucci to Appear on Radio Shows

Nightmist · 5 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Men's issues columnist Glenn Sacks and Marc Angelucci of Stop Abuse for Everyone (SAFE) will discuss domestic violence against men and Glenn's latest column, "Domestic Assault on Baseball Player is no Laughing Matter" on the Al Rantel Show at 7 pm PST on Friday, 4/5. The show can be found on KABC AM 790 in Los Angeles. This sounds like an important opportunity to showcase the double-standards regarding domestic violence against women and domestic violence against men. Update: Glenn will also be appearing on "Feminazi Radio" with Susan Smith-Harmon today at 4 pm CST on WGNU AM 920 in St. Louis. Glenn and Susan will be discussing Glenn's latest column, "Domestic Assault on Baseball Player is no Laughing Matter."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/05/042256.shtml

Kitaen Charged With Spousal Abuse and Battery

Nightmist · 5 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Subversive writes "Actress Tawny Kitaen, wife of Cleveland Indians pitcher Chuck Finley, was arrested for spousal abuse and battery. They were having an argument as they drove home from dinner when "she kicked him in the thigh, in the leg, in the arm, she grabbed his ear and twisted it. At one point, her high-heel shoe was on top of his foot pressing the accelerator to the ground." Remarkably, police arrested Kitaen after noticing abrasions and scrapes on the 39-year-old Finley. Perhaps there is an opportunity here to bring light to the fact Finley was actually rather lucky, as many battered husbands who call the police to report the abuse end up quite unfairly being the person arrested." This is the story Glenn Sacks and Marc Angelucci will be discussing tonight on the radio.

Source: Yahoo! News/Associated Press

Title: Finley's' Wife Charged With Abuse

Author: Unknown/AP Staff

Date: April 4, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/05/1631232.shtml

Fathers Are Important for Infants' Emotional Development

Scott · 6 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This article in the Salt Lake Tribute discusses a study showing that fathers have a positive effect on the stress level of young children. ""Society tends to stress the importance of mothers over fathers, especially in caring for infants," said Marissa Diener, assistant professor of Family and Consumer Studies, who conducted the research. "This study shows that fathers are important for infants' emotional development."" Unfortunately, it seemed that the article bent over backwards to assure its readers that mothers are "still No. 1," to an extent that I found a bit much. Yet it still promotes important information about the need for fathers from a very early age.Source: The Salt Lake Tribune [newspaper]

Title: U. Study Says Dads Are Important, Too

Author: Ashley E. Broughton

Date: April 5, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/06/0333248.shtml

Male Victims of Domestic Abuse Flood KABC Lines

Nightmist · 6 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Men's issues columnist Glenn Sacks reports that KABC Phone lines were jammed with abused men seeking to tell their stories on the Al Rantel Show on KABC 790 AM Los Angeles on Friday 4/5. Rantel, Sacks, and Marc Angelucci of Stop Abuse for Everyone (SAFE) discussed Glenn's latest column "Domestic Assault on Baseball Player is no Laughing Matter" and the prevalence of domestic violence against men. Earlier in the day Glenn appeared on "Feminazi Radio" with Susan Smith-Harmon on WGNU AM 920 in St. Louis. Again, male DV victims shared their stories of domestic abuse and judicial discrimination against men. On Thursday, Glenn made a short appearance on the Larry Elder Show on KABC AM 790 in Los Angeles. Larry discussed the domestic assault upon baseball player Chuck Finley and covered domestic violence against men comprehensively and without compromise.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/06/1434229.shtml

Single Women Make $1.02 For Single Men's $1

Nightmist · 7 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This article on the Arizona Republic Web site claims that women in general are paid less than men, but adds that a new study conducted by the Employment Policy Foundation says that full-time women who have never married, do not have children, and live alone make about two cents more than their male counterparts in the same boat. The study's author, economist Ron Bird, says the findings are important because they show that lower pay is a result of family choices rather than gender discrimination. Bird's theory is that employers are not responsible for the lower pay.

Source: The Arizona Republic [newspaper]

Title: Some women earn more

Author: Unknown/Gannett News Service

Date: April 04, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/07/0242203.shtml

MANN/ifeminists.com Chat Gets New Moderator

Nightmist · 8 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Sorry for the really late notice, but tonight's mensactivism.org/ifeminists.com is taking place at 8 p.m. EDT in the ifeminists.com chat room. Tonight, meet Sunni Marivillosa, who will be taking over the chat reigns from Wendy McElroy on the Sunday night chats. Considering it's after 8 p.m., the chat is already in progress. Please stop by and say "hello."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/08/012235.shtml

Comment Rating System Now Working!

Scott · 8 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Mensactivism.org "comment rating/moderation system" has been broken for a long time, and I finally got around to fixing it tonight. I'd like to take a moment to explain the system as best I can in a few words so that people don't jump to misleading conclusions about the system. Please click Read More below to view my two-minute tutorial...

The Slash web engine which runs this site includes a "comment moderation" system which tries to balance the free speech rights of comment posters without allowing loopholes for trolls and flame posters to sabotage the comment boards. The system, while not perfect, is extremely effective, as is evidenced by its use on the popular Slashdot web site, which receives thousands of comment posts each day.

I find the term "comment moderation" for this system to be a bit misleading, because the normal use of the term "moderation" is when you have a human being checking and approving or rejecting the content of messages manually. Rather, this is more of a comment rating system that through the use of rating thresholds, effectively filters comments based on the score they receive by the administrators and other users.

That's right, it's not just admins who have the power to rate comments. Users, on a somewhat random basis, are allowed a certain number of "moderation points" each day with which they can "mod up" or "mod down" comments, on a scale of -1 to 3. By default, posts by an Anonymous User get a score of 0, and users start with a score of 1 or 2, depending on how many karma points they have. Karma points are obtained by submitting news stories to MANN that get posted, or if comments that you post are frequently modded up. The more karma points you have, the more likely it is you will get automatically chosen to receive moderation points on a certain day.

By default, each user (including people without accounts) have their default Comment Threshold set to 0. That is, they will see all Anon User and registered user comments unless those comments are moderated down to -1. Anyone can chose to change their threshold to -1 to see posts that were modded down to that level, but most posts that are scored so low are offtopic, troll, or flame posts that many of us don't want to waste our time with anyway.

It's very important to understand that by modding down a comment to -1, you're not deleting the post, but you are making it invisible by default for most users. This is what is meant by balancing the free speech rights of users without keeping us open to sabotage by people who want to distract us from the work we're doing in the men's movement. Anyone can now rant and rave all they want, but now people have the ability to mod them down to -1 and make their ravings irrelevent to the rest of us.

I wish I had more time to explain this tonight, but I don't. Please post your questions or concerns here and I'll try to answer them as best I can. Slashdot has an FAQ guide for comments and moderation that many people should take the time to read, even though it's long.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/08/0129223.shtml

CBS' 48 Hours Misandric Program on Domestic Violence

Scott · 8 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "CBS ran a program recently about men who abuse women on 48 Hours. They titled it "Living With The Enemy" and it made me sick. Two stories were done in which the women who were allegedly abused were clearly lying about many important details and the men they accused were ultimately destroyed. CBS presented the women as 'victims' even before the trials, clearly showing their sexist view that a man and only a man can abuse and is guilty as soon as he is accused. The weblink to the program is here. The program originally aired early last year, but apparently the misandric pigs at CBS felt it was so good that they needed to spew it one more time. On CBS's webpage there is a transcript from a chat session that took place immediately following the original showing of the program. It is incredibly offensive and misandric, but it needs to be seen. This is the level of ignorance and anti-male hatred we are up against."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/08/006247.shtml

Hate my Father? No Ma'am!

Scott · 8 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks submitted a great article as a feature submission for MANN. In it, he talks about the willingness for young men to say, "don't blame me for women's oppression - blame my father or grandfather," and how the examples of Glenn's own father and grandfather only prove that men's sacrifices and burdens are not recognized today. If ever there were an anthem for the men's and fathers' movement, this piece has got to be it. Read More below to view his essay.

Hate My Father? No Ma'am!

By Glenn Sacks, Glennjsacks@cs.com

www.glennsacks.com

Reprinted with the permission of She Thinks, a publication of the Independent Women's Forum.

The university professor began the first class of the semester by announcing that she was an "anti-imperialist, anti-heterosexist Marxist-feminist." She read us the famous quote from Robin Morgan, the leading feminist and former editor of Ms. Magazine, who said "kill your fathers, not your mothers." Seeing the students' shocked faces, she added "Kill is too strong. Hate your fathers, not your mothers." I guess she was a moderate.

One of the male students in the class, obviously feeling chastised, said the defense I've heard young men say hundreds of times--"don't blame us for what happened to women in the past--blame our fathers and grandfathers."

I've ruminated darkly over those words many times, and when thinking of my father and grandfather, I can't help but be struck by the special burdens they shouldered as men, because they were men, and how these special burdens have now become a blank space in our history.

Hate my grandfather? My grandfather was a milkman. A young immigrant who enlisted to fight in World War I out of gratitude to the country which had allowed him to escape Russian Czarist tyranny. A man who, wounded in the decisive Battle of the Argonne Forest in 1918, received the Purple Heart and the French Croix de Guerre. A tender father who stayed up half the night stroking the fevered brow of his sickly youngest daughter--a "daddy's girl"--before going to work at three in the morning. A man who put his safety and even his life on the line during the violent union strikes and battles of the 1930s, because he believed that workers have the right to decent wages and living conditions.

Hate my father? The man who worked six days a week for 25 years yet somehow always had time to spend with me? Who never once let me down? Who worked 12 hour days when my sister and I were young so he could ensure that we would be provided for? Who recalls sadly as he looks at his little granddaughter that he doesn't even remember what we looked like at that age, because he was rarely able to be home?

The successful feminist re-writing of the pre-feminist past as a virtual dark ages where men lived like nobles and women were their serfs is at the core of the "hate your father" idea. Tens of millions of (male) blue collar workers--who put their bodies on the line in the coal mines and steel mills so their wives and children could live in safety and comfort--have been turned into oppressors. Their wives and children, for whom these men sacrificed so much, have been turned into their victims.

Edited out of our history are the tragedies of millions of American men who were killed or maimed on what early trade unionists called the "battlefield of labor." The miners who died in cave-ins, explosions, or of black lung disease. The sailors and fisherman who died at sea. The oil refinery workers killed in explosions. The factory workers killed in industrial accidents. The construction workers who died carving train tracks and then highways through majestic mountain cliffs or the scorching desert. The construction workers who died building our bridges, dams, high rises, stadiums and apartments.

All of them have been forgotten, in part because there is no natural constituency which would like to remember them--the right generally does not dwell on yesterday's struggling blue collar workers and heroic union men, and the left is beholden to the feminists, for whom any mention of men as special contributors or as victims is strictly forbidden.

The only credit left for men is the military, and even this has been partially hijacked. We now speak of "the men and women who fought and died in our wars" as if even one percent of our military casualties were ever suffered by women, or as if women were ever conscripted the way men were.

Feminists once excoriated our society--correctly--for ignoring the massive, hidden contributions of women in child rearing and house work. They asked new and important questions like "Who cooked the last supper?" and, even better, "Who washed the dishes afterwards?" But we have now come full circle--men's special and unique contributions (hazardous jobs, long work hours, long commutes, time away from the family, etc.) are ignored, and any reference to them as a male burden is "sexism."

I thought of this recently when I took my young son to a large model train exhibition, one rich in 1940s and 1950s Americana. Looking at the huge displays of trains cutting through mountain peaks, of bridges and railroad trusses towering hundreds of feet above canyons and rivers, of towns and their factories and coal mines, of the sheer industrial might of the old America, I felt torn inside. I know that this was a world where many Americans were terribly mistreated--blacks, Latinos, some women, and often the working-class and the poor. Yet I couldn't also help but feel a tug of nostalgia as I looked at a world which men--through their ingenuity, strength, and raw physical courage--had carved out of wilderness. Men of my generation have endured relentless criticism, and even the best of us must struggle just to attain the moral status automatically granted to women. Yet in this older world, it seems, there was respect for men and the special sacrifices they made.

And perhaps someday, the professor's dictum "hate your father" aside, there will be some respect for the sacrifices my father and grandfather made, the uniquely male sacrifices they made. Hate my father? No ma'am!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/07/2353237.shtml

A Politician is Charged with DV

Scott · 8 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes *"We finally have an example of a Democratic politician that was subjected to DV. He has filed charges against his wife for domestic assault, and he claims that his wife provoked him to slap her by her assault. Clearly, he was a victim of DV. The story can be found here. I will be interested to have you guys help me learn if this State (Maryland) has primary aggressor laws. It will also be interesting to learn if this four-term Democrat voted in favor of those laws. I am wondering if we should make a lot of noise over this event. What do you think? Also of note is that the Legislative Woman's Caucus is affording him special treatment by failing to condemn him directly as they would a male in the general public."*Source: The Baltimore Sun [newspaper]

Title: Lawmaker accused of hitting wife files charges

Author: Tim Craig

Date: April 4, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/08/0010210.shtml

Men's Hour April Programme Now Out

Scott · 9 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "The Men's Hour April programme is now out including: an interview with Steven Stevenson who ran a masculist workshop in Australia and lived, news of Tawny Kitaen, the actress arrested for domestic violence, news of a New Jersey improvement in child support for men, events in London this month, Dr Bill Thompson, a lecturer and expert witness recently raided by the police, infanticide, the BBC and Andrea Yates. It's at www.menshour.com."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/08/0255220.shtml

A Male Victim and a Female Abuser Speak Out On Domestic Violence

Nightmist · 9 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

My latest column is a Part II to "Broken Silence," my column two weeks ago about a mainstream columnist's admission that he purposefully ignored studies on male victims of domestic violence in favor of reporting on females. In Part II, I have suspended my normal editorializing in favor of allowing a male victim of domestic violence and a female who once committed domestic violence against her boyfriend to tell their stories on the issue of male victims. The column will also run today on Wendy McElroy's ifeminists.com. In addition to the two main sources, you're going to find some useful information herein from some other names you should easily recognize if you've been perusing this site (or men's issues in California and the Arizona desert) for a while.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/06/0423247.shtml

Man Ordered to Support 29-year-old Son

Nightmist · 9 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Italian justice system has taken a great leap backward in child support law. It recently ordered a man to financially support his 29-year-old son (who holds a law degree) until that son can "find the career he wants." The judges said parents' duty of maintenance did not expire when their children reached adulthood, but continued unchanged until they could prove either that their children had reached economic independence or had failed to do so through culpable inertia. An adult son who refused work that did not reflect his training, abilities and personal interests could not be held to blame, they said. Apparently, the son owns a home and maintains a diverse investment portfolio in addition to his father's support.

Source: The Sydney Morning Herald

Title: Father to pay child support for son aged 29

Author: Unknown/Staff

Date: April 8, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/08/1513209.shtml

Reuters Health: Men Are Abused As Often As Women

Scott · 10 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Angelucci writes *"Reuters Health printed a short article announcing the results of UK Researcher John Archer's meta-analysis which found that women physically abuse intimate partners as often as men do, but that men usually just take it and don't seek help. The complete report appeared in the 2/02 issue of the Psychological Bulletin, published by the American Psychological Association. There is simply no way they can discredit this. Maybe we should send this to 48 hours?"*

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/09/1814215.shtml

Men Never Do Their Share of Housework? Not so!

Nightmist · 10 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks has turned out yet another column, in which he examines a study which confirms that men do, indeed, do their "fair share" of housework, in spite of the old media and feminist myth that women are forced into housework slavery. Sacks looks at the matter of percentages. The recently released study shows that women do an average of 27 hours of housework a week, compared to 16 hours a week for men. Balanced against this, however, is the study's less-publicized finding that the average man spends 14 hours a week more on the job than the average woman. Thus men's overall contribution to the household is actually slightly higher than women's.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/10/0533221.shtml

Audio of Sacks, Angelucci KABC Appearance Now Available

Nightmist · 10 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Men's issues columnist Glenn Sacks and Marc Angelucci of Stop Abuse For Everyone appeared on KABC's Al Rantel show last week to discuss Glenn's column on the domestic abuse of a baseball pitcher by his wife (both celebrities). The audio of that show is now available at Glenn's Web site. The issue of domestic violence against men seems to be getting more and more press lately. Glenn and Marc deserve praise for getting the message out there on the airwaves.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/10/174223.shtml

NH Senate Passes Men's Commission Bill - Updated

Scott · 11 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I've just found out that the NH Senate passed HB 587, to establish a NH Men's Commission! The vote was 13-10. Getting a roll call vote was essential on passing this bill, as we suspect there were a few people who changed their vote when they knew they would be held personally accountable for it. I'll provide more details in the next day or two. Update: The NH Union Leader printed this article today offering some more details about the passage of the bill.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/11/0037201.shtml

Study: Male Circumcision Healthy...For Women

Nightmist · 11 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This article on MSNBC.com claims that the New England Journal of Medicine has published a new study which purports that men with foreskin intact are more likely to carry a virus which could contribute to cervical cancer in their partners. The study conducted in five countries found HPV in nearly 20 percent of uncircumcised men, but fewer than 6 percent of all circumcised men. For women, their chance of developing cervical cancer was at least 58 percent lower if their current partner was circumcised, even if the partner had a history of multiple partners. So while the "it's healthy for men" argument may no longer hold water for circumcising boys, apparently "it's healthy for women" will.

Source: MSNBC.com [web site]

Title: Circumcision may curb cancer rates

Author: MSNBC News Services

Date: April 10, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/11/1226246.shtml

Gender Death Gap Narrowing

Scott · 12 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I received this information from the Men's Health America list: "In 1920, the lifespan gender gap was only 1 year. Over the next several decades, the gap steadily widened, and reached a 7.8 year disparity in 1975. Then, the gap begin to shrink. Now, according to a recent report from the National Center for Health Statistics (NCHS), the gap has narrowed to 5.5 years. On average, American women live 79.4 years, while men live 73.9 years. The greatest disparity affects Black males, who only live 67.8 years. The NCHS explains the improvement in male life expectancy by reductions in male deaths from heart disease, stroke, cancer, suicide, and homicide. The first three causes of death are closely linked to cigarette smoking patterns. Despite these improvements, men still have a long way to go until they achieve gender equity in healthcare services, research, and health status."Source: National Center for Health Statistics: United States Life Tables, 1999. National Vital Statistics Reports, Vol. 50, No. 6, March 21, 2002.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/12/0052254.shtml

Hypocrisy in the Church: Only Men Molest?

Scott · 12 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

fritzc77 writes " When I saw this article in print, it incensed me. It is about nuns serving in a church rocked by molestation scandals. The gender focus, of course, is on men. But if it is true that women abuse as much as men, shouldn't it also hold true, that nuns are just as capable of sexual abuse as priests? That we haven't heard about them doesn't mean it isn't happening. But you would never know that from the story. Please note the misandrist comment from one of the nuns: "men are men."
Here is the link to the article (free reg. required)."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/12/1024201.shtml

"Boys to Blame for Girls' Academic Woes"

Scott · 13 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Ron Herbert submitted this National Post article and writes "What I found disturbing about this article was the glaring omission of boys' lagging academic performance in school. Talk about a case of the "elephant in the room" syndrome!" The researchers explain that boys are less emotionally invested in relationships, so their grades are not affected by having a girlfriend. Perhaps the social pressure on boys to perform well could have something to do with this as well? Or maybe the fact that so many boys are doing so badly, they're not sacrificing academics for the sake of their relationships, but some other time that they give up (ie sports or recreation)? The researchers seem quick to jump to stereotypical conclusions, and yet I don't see much evidence they used to back this up.Source: The National Post [Canadian newspaper]

Title: Boys to blame for girls' academic woes

Author: Adrian Humphreys

Date: April 12, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/13/184211.shtml

NCFC-NH Meeting

Scott · 13 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This Sunday, April 14, the NH Chapter of the National Congress for Fathers and Children will be meeting to discuss various activism projects they're working on, including planning the next steps for the NH Men's Commission bill, which could hit the Senate Finance Committee as soon as Monday. Other issues to be discussed are laws related to no-fault divorce, shared parenting, and child support. The meeting will be held at the Newington Town Hall starting at 7 PM. For more info and directions contact Mike Genoulis at: geancfc@juno.com.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/13/189247.shtml

Foster's Daily Democrat Slams Men's Commission

Scott · 14 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Today's Foster's Daily Democrat, a seacoast NH-area newspaper, slammed the proposed NH Men's Commission in its editorial section today. "So, why do men need a commission? Frankly, the idea is absurd. The status of men in New Hampshire is that they're doing just fine. And most men would agree with that." Maybe we should demonstrate that quite a few men don't agree with this editorial. Mail to: letters@fosters.com. Note also that Foster's printed this news story on the bill Friday.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/14/015249.shtml

Tonight's iFeminists/Mensactivism Chat: Women Abusers

Nightmist · 14 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tonight's mensactivism.org/ifeminists.com chat will feature yours truly as the "guest" this week. We'll be discussing my recent column on male victims and female perpetrators of domestic violence. Specifically, we'll focus on some little-discussed areas of female perpetrators. Why do they do it? How do they get away with it? What can we do to help their victims and change the cultural bias against male victims? Chat starts at 9 p.m. EDT in the ifeminists.com chat room. Please join us.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/09/2038212.shtml

The POW Pages

Adam · 15 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Given the way things have been around here, I think we could do with some humour. So I had a look around the web and I happened to find The POW Pages which is a collection of satirical articles on "Being the ideological Ms.-adventures of Colleen Hyphenated-Lastname, president of the Propaganda Organization for Women, who personifies the traits of paranoia, delusions, megalomania, bigotry, greed, and intellectual dishonesty, yet still makes more sense than Andrea Dworkin." Hmmm, how can one refuse a look? That being said, there is still the feeling that somehow, somewhere, these things were really said....

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/14/2043249.shtml

"Road Maps to Health" for Men

Scott · 15 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve sent us this story from ABCNews, about a workplace program for men which focuses on men's health, and particularly getting men more comfortable talking about health issues and going to see a doctor. The article provides several examples of men who had gone through great lengths to avoid seeing a doctor, and the unique problem we have in getting men to seek medical attention for themselves. Foster's Daily Democrat also printed a story on this today, which can be read here.Source: ABC News

Title: Men Get Road Maps to Health

Author: Unknown [AP article]

Date: April 14, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/15/1055249.shtml

Son of Confest Masculist Workshop

Adam · 15 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

A while ago, I brought you a story about a guy called Steven Stevenson, a man who Held A Masculist Workshop And Lived and guess what? He did it again. I guess you can't keep a good man down, eh? Anyway, I think you'll want to read Son of Confest Masculist Workshop to find out how his second excursion went.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/14/2047209.shtml

Boys: The New Underclass in American Schools

Nightmist · 15 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks takes on American school systems in his newest column, which examines how boys are disciplined more often than girls and are less likely to receive a quality education comparatively. Boys at all levels are far more likely than girls to be disciplined, suspended, held back, or expelled. By high school the typical boy is a year and a half behind the typical girl in reading and writing, and is less likely to graduate high school, go to college, or graduate college than a typical girl. Boys are three times as likely to receive a diagnosis of attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder as girls, four times as likely to commit suicide, and far more likely to fall victim to teen drug or alcohol abuse.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/15/0344218.shtml

Yukon Minister of Women's Issues May Resign After Blasting Gender Feminism

Nightmist · 16 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch submitted this story from White Horse Star. Apparently, the Yukon Minister of Women (Sue Edelman) sent out an e-mail in March in which she used the term "feminazis" to describe gender feminists/radical feminists and lamented the way radical feminism took over what was originally an equality movement. Radicals are demanding her resignation, and she has offered it to the prime minister. I certainly do not agree that men are responsible for all the woes of the world. I don't think my son should be held responsible for all the batterers in the world, and the men who use crude language. Edelman has both a son and a daughter and seems particularly offended by the anti-male slant of gender feminism. She might be an important person to keep in the position of minister of women's issues as long as such a position exists. If anyone has contact information for Edelman, please post it.

Source: White Horse Star [newspaper]

Title: Premier weighs minister's offer to quit

Author: Jason Small

Date: April 12, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/15/1651223.shtml

L.A. Times Covers CA Paternity Fraud Bill

Scott · 16 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Angelucci writes *"The L.A. Times printed a front page story about the paternity fraud bill in California. The story gives some of the basic arguments on both sides, but as one might predict the author didn't quote any of the men's rights groups who helped write the bill, namely the National Coalition of Free Men (L.A. chapter) and the Alliance for Non-Custodial Parents' Rights. Maybe some letters (letters@latimes.com) would help."*Source: The Los Angeles Times [newspaper]

Title: DNA Shakes Up Child Support Law

Author: Nicholas Riccardi

Date: April 15, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/16/0017255.shtml

False Accuser Won't Be Charged

Nightmist · 16 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch submitted this article from the Ottawa Citizen. According to the story, Cathy Fordham, who falsely accused Jamie Nelson, 35, of raping her, also allegedly falsely accused several other men. Nelson was exonerated after 3.5 years in prison. But... Mr. Nelson's [false accusations] complaint was investigated by Ottawa police Sgt. Garry Granger. Sgt. Granger's report was finished in January, and was forwarded to the Ottawa Crown attorney's office to determine if charges should be laid. However, in the meantime, Mr. Nelson filed a civil suit against the police, investigating officer Sgt. Robert Kerr, the Crown attorney who prosecuted him, Mark Moors, Ontario's Attorney General's office, and Ms. Fordham, 31. Because an Ottawa Crown attorney was named in the suit, Sgt. Granger's report was forwarded to the Belleville Crown's office to avoid a conflict of interest.

Source: Ottawa Citizen [newspaper]

Title: False accuser won't be charged

Author: Unknown/Ottawa Citizen Staff

Date: April 15, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/16/0156256.shtml

One NH Democrat's Objections to the Men's Commission

Nightmist · 16 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "Sen. Katherine Wheeler, D-Durham claims, "Men are not suffering the kind of institutional discrimination women did. I'm sorry you feel put upon, but it's not institutional discrimination..." This callus statement demonstrates that many women in positions of power do not believe there is a real crisis for men. It does not matter that suicide rates have dramatically risen. For her, that is an acceptable condition. This article outlines some of the objections by democrats to the commission for men. It is truly an indication of ignorance, on the part of Ms. Wheeler, to claim there is no institutional discrimination against men. Ms. Wheeler just doesn't get it." It has certainly been interesting to see from where the objections to the commission have emerged so far.

Source: Union Leader [newspaper]

Title: Senate OK's panel to study needs of men

Author: Tom Fahey

Date: April 11, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/16/0449218.shtml

Maxim Women: We Make Better Men

Nightmist · 16 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Unfortunately, today everything has to get filtered though a women's perspective. Read this article and see what you think... "Guys are given a bad rap. They are sensitive and caring and all this stuff, but it's just a matter of semantics. If you ask a guy `Do you care about your relationship?' he'll say no. But if you say `Do you want to have more sex?' Yes. `Do you want to fight less?' Yes. It's semantics. We are just giving men the room to be who they are," she adds." It is important to remember that men are also individuals. Note: This was the 2,000th story posted to Mensactivism.org!

Source: Boston Globe

Title: The women of Maxim

Author: Hayley Kaufman

Date: April 11, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/16/0453240.shtml

MANN Chat: Establishing a State Men's Commission

Scott · 16 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wednesday night's on-line chat will be on the topic of establishing a state men's commission. I'll be there to discuss the process that led up to this bill, and will try to answer any questions as best I can. I've invited members of the NH NCFC activism group to join the chat and help answer questions and be available as contacts to people who are interested in trying the same in their own states. Stop by the MANN chat room on 4/17 at 9:30 PM EST and say hello!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/16/1933254.shtml

Court Rules She Who SLAPPs First Wins

Nightmist · 17 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Subversive writes "After the relationship between Sean Fabre and his girlfriend, Amalia Walton, soured and Walton placed a restraining order against Fabre, he countersued her for 'abuse of process,' claiming that she filed it for vengeance, not for protection. On Friday the Massachusetts Supreme Court ruled that under existing anti-SLAPP laws, alleged abusers who are the subjects of restraining orders should not be able to 'easily retaliate' with civil lawsuits against their accusers. Alleged abuse victims will now be able to quickly end any civil litigation filed by the target of a restraining order unless that person could prove there is a 'substantial basis' that the restraining order was 'devoid of any reasonable factual support.' This suggests to me that battered men in Massachusetts who have also been falsely accused of domestic violence may have to look to other means than the legal system in order to protect themselves--what a terrible decision!

Source: Boston.com/Associated Press

Title: State's high court extends protections for abuse victims

Author: Associated Press

Date: April 13, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/16/0456240.shtml

Edelman Resigns Under Pressure; Her Defense Provokes Laughter

Nightmist · 17 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch submitted this article from White Horse Star in the apparently ongoing controversy over remarks about the radical women's movement by Yukon minister of women's issues Sue Edelman. Apparently, Edelman had already resigned as of Friday, several days prior to the initial posting of her story here. What is more unfortunate is that she has publicly apologized for her anti-radical-feminist remarks in her e-mail (Edelman had referred to radical feminists as "feminazis" in an e-mail titled "women's movement dying"). Statements made in her defense by the prime minister during the public statement were laughed at by black T-shirt wearing feminists, some of whom surrounded Edelman's husband in the audience.

Source: White Horse Star [newspaper]

Title: Defence of Edelman provokes laughter

Author: Jason Small

Date: April 16, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/17/1333215.shtml

Montreal Lawyer: Stop Divorcing Like Druken Fools

Nightmist · 17 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Ottawa Citizen's Dave Brown examines the "sorry state of divorce" in Canada in his latest column. At issue in divorce law are the words "custody" and "access," which critics say should be replaced by "shared parenting." What makes that difficult was probably best shown by Senator Anne Cools when she read a judgment from a worried judge who had just given custody to a woman who was leaving Canada with two children to live with a new love. He said he wasn't comfortable but felt he had no choice but to give custody "to a woman who is shackled by her own discontent." Father's child-support payments were set and she waived spousal support. She later returned to sue for and get spousal support.

Source: The Ottawa Citizen [newspaper]

Title: Drawing attention to the sorry state of divorce laws in Canada

Author: Dave Brown

Date: April 12, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/16/1638226.shtml

Governor Grants Parole to Husband-Murderer

Nightmist · 17 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This article on Fox News is--once again--proof that there are different standards for men and women in the justice system. Gov. Gray Davis has granted parole to Cheryl Sellers based on the parole board's findings that she "suffered from battered woman syndrome," the convenient illness which routinely absolves women of murder. Davis said a threat the man had made against Seller's daughter sparked the violence. His decision means Sellers will be released in September 2003, the date set by the board. One wonders if men would be given the same consideration.

Source: Fox News [web site]

Title: Calif. Gov. Grants Parole to Woman Convicted of Murdering Husband

Author: Associated Press

Date: April 11, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/16/1726225.shtml

Fosters Bombarded with Letters Supporting Men's Commission

Scott · 17 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

In an encouraging show of support, people from the Seacoast area of NH and beyond bombarded Foster's Daily Democrat with letters supporting the proposed Men's Commission and taking the editor writer to task for slamming the commission. Their efforts can be seen here. Kudos to everyone who had their letter printed, and to anyone else who wrote in but wasn't recognized.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/17/1936235.shtml

Masculist Anthology Bites The Dust

Nightmist · 18 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Well, folks, it's been months upon months since I announced my effort to pull together an anthology of "masculist" literature, commentary, and art. I am saddened to announce that the project appears to now be officially dead. I have been unable to generate enough interest among men's activists for submissions to fill an entire volume, although the submissions I did receive were of very high quality. At one point, I even had a couple of celebrity authors in the mix. Although this project is dead (unless someone else wants to take it up as their own), I do have another one in the works which may generate more interest, or at least will come closer to actual manifestation. :) I appreciate the work of all those who submitted, and I am sorry I can't be the one to get them into print.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/16/2143210.shtml

CDC Makes Recommendations for Preventing Suicide

Nightmist · 18 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This fact sheet on the Centers for Disease Control Web site tackles an issue persistently in the front of my mind: the prevention of suicide, especially by the young white males who are most likely to commit it. Many of us have seen this CDC fact sheet before, but because of the significant lack of study the issue of male suicide receives from the medical profession--and the fact that men are four times more likely than women to successfully commit it--I thought it was worth posting here. Also, a good beginning resource for male sufferers of depression may be found on this site, the work of our friend Steve Imparl.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/18/121250.shtml

Sacks Takes Dowd To Task on Male Responsibility For 'Baby Bust'

Nightmist · 18 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Syndicated misandrist Maureen Dowd recently wrote that men's "intimidation" by high-powered modern women is the reason for a rise in the childless rate for 35-year-old career women. Apparently, we men are to blame for both baby booms (raging hormones) and baby busts (intimidation by powerful women). In this column, men's issues columnist Glenn Sacks takes Dowd to task on those theories, providing evidence that the career woman's childless rate is a result of her own choices, and that women (like men) cannot have their cake and eat it, too.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/17/2033234.shtml

Finley Files For Divorce From Kitaen After Domestic Violence Incident

Nightmist · 18 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

nosecow writes "[Chuck] Finley files divorce papers against Tawny Kitaen, stating he is "fearful that (Kitaen)...will harm herself or will harm others, including me or including my children". The complete article appears here on espn.com." Kitaen is alleged to have kicked Finley, scratched him, and twisted his ear while they were driving home from dinner recently. Police noticed Finley's scars and arrested Kitaen on abuse charges. Finley has obtained temporary custody of his children.

Source: ESPN.com [web site]

Title: Finley obtains temporary custody of children

Author: Associated Press

Date: April 17, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/18/1658249.shtml

Giuliani's Estanged Wife Wants $1 million in Tax-Free Support

Nightmist · 18 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Former New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani's estranged wife wants $1 million per year to support herself and her two children. But... That's about $950,000 more than Giuliani is willing to pay. Giuliani, 57, now pays a court-ordered $1,800 a month and half of all the living expenses for television journalist Donna Hanover and the children. He has offered to double that amount, Raoul Felder, Giuliani's attorney, said at a divorce hearing Tuesday.

Source: SignonSanDiego.com [web site]

Title: Giuliani's estranged wife seeking $1 million a year tax-free in support

Author: Associated Press

Date: April 17, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/18/226245.shtml

Mallard Fillmore Addresses Ritalin Abuse on Boys in Comic Strip

Scott · 19 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Mallard Fillmore (a syndicated comic strip that runs in the Boston Globe) ran a series of comic strips that address the abuse of Ritalin on boys in grade school. The strip calls the problem "NEBS" (Normal Eight year old Boy Syndrome). The importance of this strip is that it reaches a large audience of people who may be unaware of this issue."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/19/0135220.shtml

CA Paternity Fraud Bill Supported in Public Hearing

Scott · 19 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "California legislators were flooded with paternity fraud victims in a public hearing on April 16, 2002. The story can be found here . Despite the fact that some committee members tried to kill the bill using "...questioning from a couple of the Assembly members, the bill emerged from the hearing alive and well. The committee decided it needed more time to study the bill, and postponed the hearing for two weeks." This bill is a no-brainer. Anybody who opposes the bill is clearly against men's rights. This turnout demonstrates the growing influence and power of the men's movement. Good job!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/19/0138210.shtml

International Men's Day - November 19

Scott · 19 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Harrack Balramsingh writes "The International Men's Day Committee is calling on organizations and individuals around the world to join with them in celebrating International Men's Day (IMD) on November 19. The objectives of celebrating an International Men's Day include improving gender relations, promoting gender equality, producing responsible males and highlighting positive male role models. The IMD first started in Trinidad and Tobago in 1999. It is hoped that the day would eventually be recognized worldwide. Please join with us in observing this Men's Day."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/19/0139229.shtml

Father Arrested For Failing To Protect Son From Step-mother

Nightmist · 19 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

As Richard Henn sat by his 6-year-old son's hospital bedside recently, police entered and put him under arrest for "failing to protect" his son from the boy's step-mother, a former sheriff's deputy who body-slammed the child so hard he went into convulsions. This story in the Denver Post reveals that Henn was actually in another room, giving his 4-month-old daughter a bath when he heard the commotion. In court documents, Richard Henn told investigators he heard Kevin's body hitting the floor and said his wife threw the boy down. Gail Henn apologized to Kevin as he lay unconscious and convulsing on the floor, according to police statements. The couple had argued in the past about physical punishment, the father told police. Henn's bond was set at $20,000. Same as his wife, who is currently out of jail on that amount.

Source: Denver Post [newspaper]

Title: Hospitalized child's dad arrested

Author: Kieran Nicholson and Marilyn Robinson

Date: April 14, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/19/1136259.shtml

Most Popular Weed Killer Turns Male Frogs Into Females

Scott · 20 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "A recent study found that the most popular weedkiller in the United States turns male frogs into female frogs. The effects on humans has not been studied, but amphibians are considered particularly important in that they show effects before mammals. The story is here." I'm sure I'm not alone in being concerned about the fact that a lot of the chemicals used in agriculture today seem to disrupt hormonal balances in living things. Note: According to this Fox News article, the study appears to be junk science.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/19/1819237.shtml

Fathers Lose Custody Either Way

Thomas · 21 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

As this article reports, in a recent UK court decision, a father lost custody of his children even though he had been the stay at home parent. Rather than considering the actual roles the parents had played in raising the children, in handing down the decision Lord Justice Thorpe stated that the court could not ignore the "realities" of the "very different" traditional functions of men and women. This sends a strong message to prospective and current fathers.

Source: The Telegraph

Title: Custody ruling deals a blow to house husbands

Author: Matt Born

Date: April 19, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/21/219247.shtml

Woman Sentenced to One Day for Attempted Murder of Husband

Scott · 22 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

jaxom submitted this disturbing story and writes "A federal appelate court ruling allows judges to consider "a woman's desperation" as a mitigating factor in severe domestic violence.
This case involves an estranged wife using the children as bait; "She told him her van had broken down, stranding her and their two daughters, and asked him to pick up the girls."
When he arrives, she starts shooting; "When he got out of his car and ducked into the bushes, she searched him out with her headlights and shot him again. She hit him in the head with the gun several times before he hit her in the face and escaped."
Because a gun was involved, the wife was sentenced to five years. But for the actual behavior, battery and attempted murder, the wife received a sentence of ONE DAY.
*The U.S. District Judge's decision was based on "her depression and desperate fear that her husband would take away the children in their impending divorce.""*Source: Sacramento Bee [newspaper]

Title: Appeals court revisits wife's sentence

Author: Claire Cooper

Date: April 18, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/21/2259249.shtml

NH Rep: "Men of New Hampshire are overlooked"

Scott · 23 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

New Hampshire Representative David Bickford, a sponsor of HB 587, to establish a Commission on the Status of Men, had a superb article printed in Foster's Daily Democrat today, which can be read here. Rep. Bickford outlines many of the problems facing NH men and the institutional bias we've been dealing with for many years. It's an excellent overview of what we've been trying to educate people about in promoting this bill. Source: Foster's Daily Democrat [newspaper]

Title: Men of New Hampshire are overlooked

Author: David Bickford

Date: April 22, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/23/0344203.shtml

Sex, Equality, And Kidding Ourselves

Scott · 23 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Philalethes writes "Most of the stories posted on MANN document the insanity of our times, but few consider the background: how did we get here, and why? This article is not an in-depth analysis, but it's a good start, and raises some serious questions worth considering: Today men are accountable for their behavior. Women are not. The lack of accountability, seldom clearly recognized, is the bedrock of much of today's feminist misbehavior, influence, and politics."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/23/1525252.shtml

Heart of the Matter Returns!

Scott · 23 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "There is a new "Heart of the Matter" editorial at the DLJ website, Entitled "What Have They Done with Mother's Day?" it's about the new concept of Mother's Day for women and their daughters. Looks like women with sons no longer count, in a new twist of feminist 'logic.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/23/1527222.shtml

Good Portrayals Of Fathers In Advertising

Thomas · 24 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Here's a bit of good news about the portrayal of men. One of the things that I like about the article is the statement regarding the testing of one ad, "The spot tested well with dads, but it tested even better with moms." This sort of thing must drive the genfems, especially many Women's Studies types, absolutely nuts. Despite decades of "Kill your father" types of indoctrination, many women still see the involvement of men with their children as a positive thing.Source: National Post [newspaper]

Title: Father figures more prominent in ad campaigns

Author: Susan Heinrich

Date: April 22, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/23/1659216.shtml

HB 587 Passes NH Senate 18-5

Scott · 24 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Today, the NH Senate re-voted on HB 587, to establish a state Commission on the Status of Men. The re-vote was required since the bill was modified in the Senate Finance Committee to correct a few formal errors. There was an attempt to amend the bill to change the name of the commission, which failed. The final vote was 18-5 in favor of the bill, a big improvement over the previous 13-10 vote. Next, the bill goes to NH Governor Jeanne Shaheen to be signed into law. I have informal knowledge that she has expressed her willingness to sign the bill. Folks, this is really going to happen! I'm more excited than I can express in words right now...

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/24/222224.shtml

A Ray of Delight

Thomas · 25 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This I found simply wonderful. What more can I say?Source: Men's News Daily

Title: Restoring Testosterone

Author: Barbara Sumner Burstyn

Date: April 25, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/25/0227235.shtml

Take Our Sons to Work Day a "New" Feminist Idea

Scott · 25 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

crescentluna writes "This article covers how feminists are dissenting in opinion over the Ms. Foundation's incredibly original idea of taking "our sons and daughters to work day." Several different feminist prospectives are here, including the "conservative feminist" view that women's financial disparity lies in their family choices, not in discrimination. Men apparently don't care about the issue."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/25/1819256.shtml

More Info on NH Men's Commission

Scott · 26 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This Foster's story offers more details about the outcome of yesterday's Senate vote to establish a Commission on the Status of Men in NH. It includes the final vote broken down by Senator, the last minute attempt to amend the bill to make it a "health and welfare of men" commission, which thankfully failed, and how the commission will be set up. "The commission would consist of seven members appointed by the governor and council, with at least one member invited from the University System of New Hampshire. While the bill does not have any state money, it authorizes the commission to accept donations or grants to further its duties."Source: Foster's Daily Democrat [newspaper]

Title: Senate OKs panel to study status of men

Author: Dan Tuohy

Date: April 25, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/25/1824241.shtml

MANN Shut Down - We'll Be Back May 18

Scott · 27 April 2002 · Archived copy · Original

It is with deep regret that I must announce a temporary shut down of Mensactivism.org until I can get a handle on my life. In the past month you've certainly noticed that MANN has not been updated or maintained as diligently as it has in the past, and the reason for that is due to a serious level of over-commitment that I put myself into for the first five months of 2002. I'm not going to offer any heartbreaking story about this, I simply made an error of judgment where I thought I could make it through this time crunch but it's just more than I can handle now. I take full responsibility for getting myself into this mess. Right now I must devote as many resources as possible to academics. My last final exam will be on May 17, and once that is done with I expect to be able to resume running this site in a manner it deserves, rather than the half-hearted way it's been limping along for the past month or so.

In the meantime, I'd highly recommend you check out Men's News Daily, a great site run by Mike LaSalle whose news coverage on men's issues is excellent. I even understand he has a web forum for related discussions that was added recently. In any case, I hope this isn't too much of a let-down for people, and I promise this shutdown will only be temporary. The time I'll be spending will be an investment in the amount of time I'll be able to devote to this site over the summer.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/04/27/0335206.shtml

The Hiatus is Over...

Scott · 19 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Well, folks, I'm back, and I'm ready to start making things happen again with Mensactivism.org. I'd like to sincerely thank everyone who took this temporary outage in stride - I didn't receive one angry or impatient e-mail from anyone - and let you all know that my final projects and exams went much, much better than they would have if had I not taken some time off. Now that my life has returned to a reasonable pace, I'm ready to start some new projects for MANN! That's right - due to some strong collaboration between myself and Mike LaSalle from Men's News Daily, I'd like to take advantage of the opportunity to focus MANN more strongly on the activism side of things, and let MND does what it does best, which is to provide news stories and commentary for the movement. Read on for more details about this plan...

Since Mensactivism.org first appeared on the internet in June of 2000, a significant activist community has grown around the site and I've met many people I consider to be true brothers and sisters in the struggle for men's rights. These are people who are willing to put action behind their words, and make things happen. It is for these people that I have worked hard to make MANN as useful as possible. Now, I have some new ideas on how to make this web site even more useful to the folks "down in the trenches" working for the sake of men's rights and dignity.

Providing news and commentary on issues related to men's issues has so far been a large part of what Mensactivism.org has been about. Reading about outrageous violations of men's rights and the incomprehensible double standards in law have provided "fuel for the fire" which has helped motivate people to action. Now, a new web site has come up which has done an incredibly effective job of tracking news stories on men's issues, and it's not going away any time soon. Men's News Daily is the site I'm talking about, of course. I knew Mike LaSalle's site was great asset to the movement from the start, and would like to help promote it for what it does best - providing news and commentary on men's issues of interest to us. With the advent of MND, MANN is now able to focus even more strongly on tracking activism projects that are the lifeblood of making social progress toward a fair and just society.

Over the summer, MANN will undergo a change in philosophy and content to bring it even more in-line with our name - Men's Activism. Men's News Daily will keep us informed about daily events in the movement, and Mensactivism.org will provide a means of channeling our energy into projects that will have a direct impact on the state of men's rights in the world. The change will be gradual, and you will see frequent announcements as progress toward this shift occurs.

Mensactivism.org will continue to be run by the Slash web engine, and will help facilitate cooperation and coordination among activist individuals and groups. With more of my time freed from tracking news stories, I will be better able to cater this site to the needs of activists. Also, I intend to expand the scope of activism on this site to include not only men's rights issues, but also certain civil liberties issues related to free speech and the rights of internet users. These issues should be just as important to us, because they threaten the effectiveness of internet-based collaboration and the formation of fledgling social movements. If you have ideas on what would help you make the most out of your activism, please let me know. I look forward to the new opportunities that lie ahead of us!

- Scott

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/19/0037216.shtml

Free Speech...for Feminists Only!

Scott · 19 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

nazgul writes "My wife is a student at the University of South Carolina, in the Women's Studies graduate program. While this leads to no end of, shall we say, "spirited" conversation over dinner, there is very little free discussion in the classrooms she attends. Her seminar course has an actual gag order for dissenting opinions in effect, under the auspices of "Guidelines for Classroom Discussion". The Foundation for Individual Rights in Education has accepted the case and is pursuing it now. Please disseminate this story to as many news outlets as possible, and write to the University to correct this injustice. You can read about it at this link."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/19/0039214.shtml

"Reverse" Sexual Harassment?

Scott · 20 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "I came across this article about the "Street Harassment Project" that also includes a number of responses and commentary by readers. In terms of activism projects, perhaps we could attend one of their "events" and see how "sensitive" they are. I'm convinced that these women need to be educated as to how their mode of dress inflicts harassment on men, and perhaps they ought to be challenged. Since they apparently arm them selves with spray paint, one should be properly attired in protective glasses and disposable clothing, carrying a small amount of paint thinner and cotton balls, and properly armed with pepper spray.

In the right place and at the right time, I certainly do enjoy the female form. But in the workplace, at school, or on the street, scantily-clad women are an annoyance and an unnecessary distraction. Unfortunately, after several hundred thousand years of evolution, I find it difficult to restrict my attentiveness to the "appropriate" moments. I find that ALL of the men with whom I've discussed this, no matter how "prudish" they may be, feel the same way.

It's time to push back, guys. We don't need burkas, but longer, looser skirts and looser sweaters are definitely indicated."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/20/183258.shtml

Brief Debate In Physician's Weekly: Is Medical Research Shortchanging Men?

Scott · 21 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Angelucci writes *"Jean Bonhomme of the Black Men's Health Network briefly debates Phyllis Greenberger of the Society for Women's Health Research in this point/counterpoint in the Physician's Weekly. It's pretty clear to me who won. Bonhomme gives far more accurate facts, Greenberger repeats the already-debunked myth that women were exluded from medical testing, and Greenberger changes the issue to be whether the female-specific research indirectly benefits men rather than whether the research overall is shortganging men by underaddressing men's health in favor of women's health."*Source: Physician's Weekly [magazine]

Title: Is Medical Research Shortchanging Men?

Author: Jean Bonhomme and Phyllis Greenberger

Date: May 6, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/20/186258.shtml

Mission Success! HB587 Signed Into Law in NH

Scott · 21 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

New Hampshire will now be the first state in the nation to have a Commission on the Status of Men. All of the hard work and close calls on this bill paid off, and Governor Jeanne Shaheen of NH signed HB 587 today. It was briefly mentioned in this Foster's Daily Democrat article. The commission will be established by July 1. Click here for the text of the bill itself. Now excuse me while I go celebrate.... Source: Foster's Daily Democrat [newspaper]

Title: Shaheen signs shoreland protections, emergency powers bills

Author: Norma Love

Date: May 20, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/21/001220.shtml

CA Paternity Justice Act - AB2240

Scott · 21 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "For all those interested, the amended version of the Paternity Justice Act can be found here: AB2240. Basically, everything is intact except for the right of men to have equal representation on the format of the paternity declaration form. Currently, the feminists have representation by law and male activists are excluded. Does any body know of a case law where this type of discrimination was disputed and won in the favor of males? If so please let me know. It would be best if the laws were challenged in CA but any other state will be helpful."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/21/1751203.shtml

NCFM Forum to Coincide with NOW Conference

Scott · 22 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

On June 21, the Twin Cities Chapter of the National Coalition of Free Men will be hosting a forum in Saint Paul, MN. The forum is scheduled to coincide with the National Organization of Women's national conference, and NCFM has Warren Farrell, Trudy Schuett, and Wendy McElroy as speakers. The forum is free and open to the public, and media are encouraged to cover the event. This is the closest thing I know of to a "men's rights conference" in the U.S. Learn more here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/21/2021206.shtml

Banning a Father's Right to Equal Paternity Knowledge

Scott · 22 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "In today's hostile environment [toward men], it is not surprising that governments would seek to ban home DNA testing. They are trying to claim that the father should have no right to privately check his child's DNA. I checked and found that a home DNA test costs $250-$500. DNA testing is the only means that a father can use to determine paternity. It removes the requirement to rely only the word of a potentially unfaithful wife. Only the mother can know if she has been unfaithful and have knowledge of any doubt. For the male, there is only belief in the mother's word in the absence of a DNA test. All males have the right to an equal knowledge of paternity, and DNA testing provides the only mechanism whereby a man can enjoy that absolute right. If ever there was a time for men to organize and protect their rights, this is it. The article can be found at the following link: Banning DNA Testing By Father. I would suggest sending emails to the Human Genetics Commission at hgcpressoffice@westminster.com."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/22/1454215.shtml

Sacks on Stay at Home Dads

Scott · 22 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks' latest column came out this morning in Newsday of New York, and can be read on Glenn's web site here. Sacks discusses the issue of stay at home dads and the benefits to both men and women if we dropped the stereotypes about men who decide that fathering is more important to them than their careers. Sacks knows what he's talking about in this article, since he's a stay at home dad himself, and finds in immensely rewarding. Sacks is also hosting (along with Father's Rights activist Dianna Thompson) a webcast on Men's News Daily every Tuesday evening at 6 pm PST.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/22/1459202.shtml

Lincoln Navigator Ad Mocks Man

Scott · 23 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Deacon writes, "The latest commercial for the Lincoln Navigator (a Ford company) markets the power running boards feature of the car. The commercial starts with a man and a woman walking towards the car, and they both notice a large puddle underneath it. Then the man chivalrously takes off his jacket and lays it on the puddle so the woman can climb into the car without getting her shoes wet, but instead the woman pushes a button on her keychain remote, and the power running boards slide out from under the car. She climbs up and into the car with a smirk on her face while the man stands outside, obviously chastised." Contact info for Lincoln is in the Read More section of this story. Lincoln Motors 16800 Executive Plaza Dr.

P.O. Box 6248

Dearborn, MI 48121

1-800-521-4140

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/23/2038229.shtml

Web Site Focuses on Male Depression

Scott · 24 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve Imparl has been hard at work on the new web site maledepression.com, which provides resources for people wanting to learn about depression in men. For too long, men's depression has been masked and hidden in our society. We tend to think of it in terms of its symptoms, such as alcoholism or the suicide epidemic among men. Steve's site is a much needed resource to help remove the myths about depression in men and educate us about this taboo subject.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/23/2031227.shtml

The Surprises Never End...

Scott · 25 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I've finally got the old hardware setup working with MANN, so the web site will continue to run until the replacement motherboard and CPU come in late next week. I'll post more info about what actually happened (for those of you who are interested in such things), but right now I have a bunch of non-computer related things I need to take care of. Note: Many thanks to David Decker, Jerry Vrooman, and Anonymous who made donations to help defray the cost of the hardware failure.Okay, so here's the story for all you unix/linux geeks out there who want to know why this took so long... :)

After discovering that my motherboard and CPU bit the dust (apparently from heat damage), I figured it would be a simple procedure to use an older CPU/motherboard combo I had laying around (which is going to be used as part of a father's day gift for my dad - keep it quiet!) for a week until the replacement parts come in.

Well, the burned-out system was an AMD Athlon (K7) architecture and had a kernel optimized for the K7, meaning that it tries to do things that only the K7 and newer processors can do. The temporary system is an AMD K6 (no, I don't support Intel) which can not handle many of the K7 instructions. So, I knew going into this that I needed to boot the system with a different kernel.

This is where the surprises started. By using a rescue disk, it was easy enough to boot using a new kernel, but the system would immediately hang after loading the kernel. After doing some usenet searches, I found that I was using a buggy kernel version. I met with more success using a different version, which started detecting the hardware on startup but hung just before init (the mother of all processes in Unix) started. I was stumped at that point, and wasted a lot of time trying different kernels and initrd versions.

Eventually, I posted my problem to a local linux user group mailing list and announced it on the MANN downtime page, and was fortunate enough that David Hill read about it. He pointed me to a usenet post reminding me that recent releases of Redhat come with an optimized glibc library, and that I was likely using a glibc version that was optimized for the K7. Thus there was no way I could boot the system unless I replaced all of glibc by hand (not a fun possibility) or stick my hard drive into another K7 machine and then boot it up fine and replace the RPMs with pre-K7 versions. I was lazy, had some machines at work that would do the trick, and opted for the latter choice. I was then able to stick the disk back in the server and everything came up fine. In the process I also read a ton of documentation about bootloaders and the unix boot process. So it wasn't a total waste of time.

It was, however, a waste of more than $200 that I had to shell out to get replacement parts (including a more reputable CPU heatsink and fan). I really don't feel comfortable openly asking for money, but donations at this time would be appreciated more than ever.

And for all you sysadmins out there, beware of architecture-optimized software packages (especially the main system libraries)! It's a good idea in many ways, but it can have consequences in hardware emergencies like this.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/25/1842224.shtml

Enough a Dangerous Movie for Men

Scott · 27 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

By now I'm sure many of you have heard of (or maybe even seen) the new movie Enough, starring Jennifer Lopez. The more I think about this movie, the more concerned I become. In case you don't know about it, the plot goes like this: Lopez plays a waitress who marries a wealthy husband (Mitch), who quickly becomes abusive to her. She flees with their daughter and is stalked and harassed by him, finds that the police won't help her, so she turns to vigilante justice. She trains to fight Mitch and throughout the movie runs the theme/slogan, "self defense is not murder," which should have a chilling effect to those of us who know how effective the battered woman's defense is in court. As reviewer Glenn Whip puts it, "Enough" is...offensive in the way it exploits the hot-button issue of domestic abuse for cheap thrills." And it's also dangerous in how it perpetuates a one-sided and antagonistic view of domestic violence and men. The question I put to you is, what can be done to effectively counter this kind of propaganda, which has now even been embraced by the multi-million dollar movie industry?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/27/037201.shtml

Don't Forget the Meaning of Memorial Day

Scott · 27 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Mensactivism.org would like to take a moment to remember those who have made the ultimate sacrifice for our freedoms. Although we'll hear a lot of politically correct talk about the "men and women" who died in war, the overwhelming majority of them were men. Memorial Day should be inclusive of women but not to the point that we forget that men have shouldered and continue to carry the burden of dying for our ideals and way of life.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/27/1717241.shtml

Zohrab on Media Censorship About Marc Lepine

Scott · 28 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Peter Zohrab from the New Zealand Equality Party sent in an article about the now-infamous Marc Lepine, a young man who went on a shooting rampage to kill feminists at a Canadian University in 1989. Zohrab believes that the media is censoring information about Marc's motives, and points to an allegedly leaked suicide letter from Lepine that has been suppressed. While no one can condone the mass murders by Lepine, Zohrab is willing to ask questions about his motives that few others have done. Read More below for his article.

Media Censors Extremist Protest Against Media Censorship

Copyright 2002 Peter Douglas Zohrab. Reprinted with permission from the author. This essay only represents the views of its author and is in no way representative of the views of Mensactivism.org, its administrators, or other users of this web site.

The Men's Movement has reacted defensively to the actions of mass-murderer Marc Lepine - concentrating on pointing out that most men are not like him. That is a fair point, but the act of stating it is just a reaction to the lying Feminist propaganda which called him a misogynist - a woman-hater.

I bet you don't know he wasn't a misogynist - because you have been conned by the media (as usual). In fact, he was a Men's Rights activist (albeit an extremist one), and one of the things he was protesting about was media censorship - and the way the media censored the facts surrounding his action retrospectively justifies some sort of protest action by him, at least !

If you go to http://www.howdyneighbor.com/one-in-ten/FEMINISTmassacre.html#letter you will see the suicide note allegedly left by Marc Lepine. I don't know, of course, if it is genuine or whether it has been altered in any way, but it rings true to me.

In the note, from which it is clear that he is against Feminists -- not against women -- he clearly states that he is protesting against various issues which are aspects of Feminist sexism:

1. They want to retain the advantages of being women while trying to grab those of the men. That is a very serious and valid issue, especially as Feminism is taught as God's Truth in education systems and propounded as God's Truth by the United Nations, governments, and the mass media. Has the media covering Marc Lepine dealt with those issues ? Of course not -- the media are not the solution, but the problem.

2. Sexism in the Olympic Games (he could have mentioned professional and amateur sports in general), where men and women compete in separate competitions for the simple reason that it suits women for that to happen. If something suits women, it happens. If something suits men, it's banned on the grounds of "Gender Equity".

3. Feminists always try to misrepresent men every time they can. Since Feminists virtually control information in western societies, that is a serious issue. His statement may be a slight exaggeration, but has the media dealt with it ? Of course not -- they have been too busy misrepresenting Marc Lepine !

4. Military sexism. Feminists have the vote, are a majority of the electorate, vote in governments that declare war, only the men are conscripted, and after the war the Feminists reinvent history by insisting that women made an equal contribution to the war effort. Women may serve in the military as volunteers (i.e. if they happen to want to), but no modern country has ever drafted them to serve in the front-line (i.e. over-riding their wishes) on the same basis as men.

The write-ups on Marc Lepine concentrate on character-assassination. They take things out of context, in the same way that fathers are slandered in the divorce/family court, in order to deprive them of custody or access. I could go through the slanders one-by-one, but one example will have to do, for now:

The Montreal Gazette (January 16, 1990) reports that Marc Lepine's former roommate, Erik Cossette, claimed that Lepine made "sexist remarks" about women. Eventually, the article does give some evidence for this claim: It states that Cossette claims that Mark Lepine thought that women didn't have the strength to be police officers.

Is that a "sexist remark" ? If you say that women don't have the strength to compete in the men's section of a weightlifting competition, is that also a sexist remark ? It is obviously a true remark, but is it a "sexist" remark ? How would you know ? I guess you'd have to go and ask a Feminist, because it seems to me that, in practice, a "sexist" remark is one that a Feminist doesn't like ! I have been working to change that - see my book, "Sex, Lies & Feminism".

In my opinion, what is sexist here is the fact that we have a separate men's and women's sections in weightlifting competitions, and that men can't get into police forces if they only meet the physical standards that allow women to become police officers ! I wrote and asked the Montreal Police if they operated this sexist recruitment policy, but they evaded my question.

So Marc Lepine was not only not sexist, as the media stated - he was actually fighting sexism !

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/27/2253207.shtml

Male Bashing E-cards from e-greetings.com

Scott · 28 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

David Alloway writes "The Website e-greetings.com is full of male bashing e-cards. Go to this site for just one example. If you sent a card advocating killing a woman, what would happen?" It looks like e-greetings is owned by the Microsoft Network. Anyone have contact info for them? This particular card is blatant and pure misandry, one that I had hoped was discontinued after Hallmark used it during the early '90's.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/28/0121233.shtml

Oklahoma Pushing Sexual Mutilation Law for Sex Offenders

Scott · 29 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes *"The Oklahoma state senate and house have passed a bill mandating chemical and surgical castration of convicted sex offenders. Of course this will not be applied to women, such as those who rape boys because [these women are portrayed as] the "real" victims. Furthermore it is a blatant violation of the prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment. Once it is accepted as acceptable punishment for the feminist-defined sex crimes how long before it is applied to the others, such as domestic violence and failure to pay child support? The governor has yet to sign the bill. Contact him and let him know how you feel about it. The article is here."*Source: CNN

Title: Okla. lawmakers back chemical castration

Author: Unknown [AP article]

Date: May 25, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/28/2124253.shtml

CA Assembly Rushes to Vote on Sabotaged Paternity Fraud Bill

Scott · 30 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original warble writes "In less than one week, the CA Assembly has moved a mutilated form of the paternity fraud bill from the Committee of Judiciary to the floor and voted. This is unheard of. Normally it takes weeks to get a bill to be voted on and out of the assembly. Worse, there was very little opposition to the original form of AB2240. Yet the Committee of Judiciary amended the bill to accommodate every bogus argument that the opposition presented. They even waited weeks for the opposition to form a weak attack on the original bill. These political tricks and maneuvers demonstrate the power that radical feminists wield in the CA legislature. You can examine the bill and it's history at the following link: AB2240 We will have to organize and move quickly to oppose the amendments in the Senate. No doubt that the opposition has close ties with the feminist there also."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/30/178250.shtml

Harvard Increases Standards of Evidence in Rape and Other Cases

Scott · 31 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

scott sager pointed me to this article by Cathy Young in Reason Magazine. Young reports that Harvard is increasing the standards of evidence in order to open administrative investigations for various offenses, including rape. Harvard is the last place I thought this would start, but could this be a signal that the tide could be changing at colleges and universities? We can certainly hope.Source: Reason [magazine]

Title: Unwanted Sex: A turning tide on date rape

Author: Cathy Young

Date: May 14, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/30/1719234.shtml

MANN Downtime Tonight

Scott · 31 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I expect the replacement motherboard and CPU to come in today, so Mensactivism.org will be unavailable during the upgrade process this evening, which will probably start at around 7 PM and end late in the evening.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/31/1324208.shtml

Sacks Analyzes Tawny Kitaen DV Accusation

Scott · 31 May 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks wrote another great article on domestic violence, this one covering the issue of false accusations of DV made against men in custody disputes. In this case, Chuck Finley successfully had Kitaen charged with domestic violence with ample evidence of the attack on his body. But shortly after he was awarded temporary custody of their children, Kitaen struck back with unsubstantiated claims of being a victim of domestic violence too. Sacks uses this as an opportunity to expose the issue of false accusations during divorce and custody battles, and how common this kind of scenario really is.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/05/31/1912231.shtml

On-line Chat About Father's Rights, Includes Mediator Ken Gregg

Scott · 1 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy writes, "This Sunday June 2nd, at 9:00 p.m. EST, join professional mediator Ken Gregg in the co-sponsored feminists/mensactivism chat room to explore father's rights in abortion, adoption and custody. Gregg is a staunch advocate for the rights of men in matters of divorce and children, with many years of experience in dealing with the realities of "the system." The chat is free, easy, and friendly. Wendy McElroy is the hostess. Men are most cordially invited."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/01/1742227.shtml

Sexual Abuse of Males: Research and Statistics

Scott · 2 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve sent in a link to this site, which is the most comprehensive and up to date web site I know of on the subject of sexual abuse of men, particularly boys. It includes dozens of references, information on articles and books on the subject, and even a special section on abuse perpetrated by females. Please take a moment to check it out and send a note of thanks to the author for creating such a site.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/02/0415211.shtml

Why Johnny Won't Read

Scott · 3 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal sent us this Washington Post article and writes "Here's a guy that has developed methods to make reading attractive to boys. With boys falling further and further behind in school, and with the percentage of male college student dropping fast, this is a program that's vitally important." Scieszka, of course, is the main impetus behind the guysread.com web site. It's good to see he's getting some attention from the media about this issue. Source: The Washington Post [newspaper]

Title: Why Johnny Won't Read

Author: Jon Scieszka

Date: June 2, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/03/0330238.shtml

Catholic Nuns Accused of Sexually Molesting Boys

Scott · 4 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes *"With all the focus on the Catholic church sexual abuse scandal these days, it is not surprising to hear feminists claim that the church breeds pedophilia in men. Unfortunately for the feminists, it appears to breed it in nuns as well, as this Boston Herald story explains."*Source: The Boston Herald [newspaper]

Title: Years later, some charge sexual abuse by nuns

Author: Robin Washington

Date: June 3, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/04/1627220.shtml

MND Radio Program on Father's Rights

Scott · 4 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Men's issues columnist Glenn Sacks and fathers' rights activist Dianna Thompson discuss how the child support enforcement system turns military reservists who answer their country's call into criminals and "deadbeat dads" who are subject to arrest upon their return to the US.
Also discussed are Australian men's "marriage strike" and Canadian Senator Anne Cools' bombshell pro-father address in Washington, DC.
The show is tonight (Tuesday, 6/4) from 6-7 PST and will repeat throughout the evening. For more information or to listen, go to Men's News Daily.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/04/1636230.shtml

McElroy Honors Fathers and Father's Rights with Article

Scott · 4 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy wrote for her FoxNews column this week about the importance of fatherhood, and the struggles that dads face in the face of a radical feminism which seeks to eliminate the need for men. She also mentions the NCFM rally which coincides with an N.O.W. conference later this month. Thank you, Wendy.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/04/1650233.shtml

Class Action Lawsuit Legit?

Scott · 4 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Based on some email I received I went to the Indiana Civil Rights Council to read about a potential class action lawsuit challenging child support and the concept of "non-custodial" parents. Does anyone know anything about the organization or its officers?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/04/1634220.shtml

CEDAW, Again

Scott · 5 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "Folks, a dangerous UN treaty is getting new attention. The Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) is an absolute attack on men and masculinity worldwide. A Senate hearing is scheduled for June 13 to consider ratifying it. Radical feminists are visiting Senators to convince them to vote for it. The UN committee overseeing the enforcement of CEDAW has: Reprimanded Belarus for celebrating Mother's Day, Told China to "decriminalize prostitution," Complained about Mexico's "lack of access ... to easy and swift abortion," Told Armenia to "combat the traditional stereotype of women in the noble role of mother." Please urge your senator to VOTE NO on CEDAW."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/04/1625254.shtml

Critic Blasts IWF, Promotes Myths

Scott · 5 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Bledso writes *"My local paper, The Albany Times Union, recently ran this opinion column by Martha Ezzard who is a columnist for the Atlanta Journal-Constitution. She expresses some harsh criticism of the IWF and declares feminism an "unfinished revolution". She covers quite a broad spectrum of the usual myths. The Times Union has been a staunch supporter of this type of rhetoric and I think they really deserve an onslaught of rebuttals. I've tried to write them numerous times, but they simply ignore me. Unfortunately, there aren't many strong voices in my neck of the woods. Let's make ourselves known!"*Source: Albany Times Union [newspaper]

Title: Feminist movement far from finish line

Author: Martha Ezzard

Date: June 2, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/04/1623242.shtml

Ad Council's DV Prevention Program

Scott · 5 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

bledso writes, "The Ad Council's Domestic Violence Prevention program looks as if it exclusively blames men for domestic violence: "Adults have an important role to play in the fight against domestic violence. The objective of the campaign is to engage men and have them speak to pre-teen/teen boys about how women should be treated. By influencing the attitudes and behaviors of young boys, adults can prevent violence towards women and girls. Through TV, print and radio ads, men are encouraged to learn about the role they can play in putting an end to domestic violence." *This page presents some interesting statistics. It also tells us that George Perlov (info@adcouncil.org) can be contacted for more details. George may need some details from us.*"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/05/1740218.shtml

Challenging Government MS-information

Scott · 6 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "According to a New York Times article [free reg. required], a little-known amendment called the Data Quality Act allows anyone to challenge the accuracy of online information provided by the US Federal Government. From the article: "The law, which takes full effect on Oct. 1, creates a system under which anyone could point out errors in documents; if an error is confirmed, an agency would have to remove the data from government Web sites and publications." *This could have interesting implications for feminist-inspired "information" about gender issues."*Source: The New York Times [newspaper]

Title: Questions About Online Data

Author: Rebecca Fairley Raney

Date: June 3, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/04/1934251.shtml

Oklahoma Governor Vetoes Male-only Castration Bill

Scott · 6 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "The governor of Oklahoma showed some rare integrity by vetoing the feminist bill mandating surgical castration for male-only sex offenders on their first conviction. He needs our support because he'll sure catch hell for doing the right thing.

And the message board associated with this story is filled with idiots demanding worse treatment, so step up and speak out.

The story is here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/06/2144240.shtml

Lands' End Bashes Men in Recent Catalog

Scott · 7 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Equalitarian62 writes, "There is a story titled "When Rosie Rolled 'Em Up" (by Charles Hirshberg) in the June Lands' End catalog. Instead of simply describing the contribution of women to the war effort (which in itself was commendable), this story goes on to portray men as bigoted and lecherous. As I couldn't find a link to the full story at the Lands' End site, I will summarize the anti-male parts here." Read on for the full submission.The story describes the experience of a young woman who is hired as a welder at a shipyard in California. She encounters a man at the Union Hall who repeatedly tells her that they don't hire women or blacks. She gets hired anyway. The instructor at the welding class is described as a "little goat bearded man who thought that teaching girls to weld was the funniest thing ever." When a supervisor gets "fresh" with a female coworker, the coworker clobbers him with her "stinger." And when her father finds out that she is earning more that him, he gets mad and tells her to either quit or leave the house (neither of which happens). At the end, the young woman's mother gives her the moral that "them men needs us a lot more than they're willing to admit."

I'm not sure why it was necessary to put a gender-feminist twist on a Norman Rockwell character that was originally intended to portray the contributions of women during World War II. While the contributions of several thousand women were valuable in their own right, it was the 16 million men who served overseas that bore the brunt of the sacrifice during the war. Over 400,000 of them died, and many more were injured. Surely this generation of men deserves better than to be portrayed as boorish and prejudiced, based on the actions of a minority of individuals.

I have received the Lands' End catalog for several years now, but will cancel it if I see anything more like this. It isn't necessary to market clothing to women by putting men down in this way.

If you want to contact Lands' End about this story, their web address is:

www.landsend.com

"You don't build women up by tearing men down"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/06/2150235.shtml

Maryland Judicial Equality Committee Seeks Volunteers

Scott · 7 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Scott writes, "I am helping to form an new group in Maryland for the express purpose of lobbying the legislature and raising the issues of gender discrimination in the court system during this election cycle in November 2002. It is my belief that we need to approach the issue as a matter of Civil Rights versus Father's Rights. By taking the approach of equal treatment under the Law we will also be drawing in women to uphold a basic cause which they themselves have benefited. Discrimination is discrimination, no matter who is the object of it. I am sure you are appalled as I am when anyone is discriminated against for whatever the reason whether it be race, age, nationality, ethnicity, religion or gender. The reasons given for the preferential treatment of certain groups range from the subtle to the outrageous, this is done by using people's fear and ignorance to fan hatred using stereotypes." Read on for the remainder of Dan's announcement.Most of you are aware of the disturbing behavior being carried out under the guise of victimization. I would like you to consider if they can do this to any man, then who is next? No one should be singled out for discrimination by the State, regardless of the excuses used, including victimization. President Lincoln said "A house divided against itself cannot stand." http://www.historyplace.com/lincoln/divided.htm When the State discriminates, we the people are clearly divided.

I have been in contact with delegates of the House State Judiciary Committee. Due to the recent upheaval concerning Judge Thompson, certain delegates and lawyers have become aware that there is a problem in Montgomery County and Maryland in general with gender discrimination and the undue influence of special interest groups in the court system.

Acceptance of the problem is the first step in coming to a solution. However, the delegates, like us need to have a cohesive organization that will support them in their legislative process. They are ready to introduce legislation, however, they will need the organized lobbying support to pass the bills. I am seeking volunteers to help staff the committee, work with legal and non-legal concerned citizens. I strongly believe we have a singular opportunity this year to make a difference for our children and everyone who is affected by discrimination.

The Committee is seeking people to begin speaking out against the undo influence of special interest groups in the judicial process. Of equal concern is exposing and limiting further attempts by special interests groups insisting upon greater rights and preferential treatment for individuals of their group at the expense of everyone else's rights. The basic premise being, one person or group can not have more rights and privileges with equity without taking those rights and privileges from another. That special interest groups insisting upon this course of action are attempting to circumvent one of the foundation stones of the legal system, "equal treatment under the law" as stated in the 14th Amendment of the Constitution.

I think we can all agree that on the part of judges,it is far easier to make a bad decision than to take the effort to make a good one. Judge Thompson is a perfect example of this. The judge made the effort in Mr. Thornett's case to see that a reasonable standard of justice was applied and then was castigated for it by certain lawyers whose political views demanded that anyone of certain physical characteristics be considered guilty regardless of the motive of the accuser. In fact, Judge Thompson's record in granting protective orders bears out the consistency of his conscience in handling the law, while other judges barely bothered to do so. This is in direct contrast to the prevailing legal thought of how judges grant Ex Parte' requests for protective orders. Most judges base their decision on two presumptions, one the accuser is truthfully making a request and therefore the accused is probably guilty. Two, is the ability of the accused to commit the act, where a man is accused, he automatically is presumed to be guilty on the basis of his physical characteristic and stereotype of having the physical strength to abuse. Based on these two presumptions, no corrobating evidence or witnesses are needed. To my knowledge the Judge Thompson has denied 12% of all requested protective orders. A certain political interest group, of which these lawyers are members, brought charges against Judge Thompson because he did not meet the political correctness they demanded in application of the law.

As a group the Committee would get legislators to sponsor legislation to correct the abuses we see in the legal system, would inform the community about the need of a fair and impartial legal system and gain the necessary political support to bring about that change. More importantly, this is an opportunity to sponsor seminars for judges and other officials in the legal system to act as a counterpoint to those special interest groups who push their agenda at the expense of everyone's civil rights.

Personally Since 1998, I have come across a number of men in my situation that were falsely accused by their spouses in order to gain an advantage in the divorce process. Having attended Anger Management at the Abused Person's Program, I found out from speaking with many men in the class that apparently men are being systematically removed from their homes on a routine basis for reasons similar to myself. There is an epidemic of abuse charges and because of precedence they are all settled in the same manner.

As I began to search for answers of how this could happen, I discovered that the problem is not isolated to Montgomery County but is also a nationwide problem. The recent problems that Judge Thompson encountered with the local chapter of NOW bringing charges against him, leads me to believe that the time is right for bringing the issue of Equality Under the Law and the inappropriate influence of special interest groups to the public light. What happened to Judge Thompson is a direct result of his challenging the notion that someone is guilty when they are accused. As an example, 76% of domestic violence cases result in a finding against the accused, how does that compare to percentage of people accused in a criminal case? I believe the percentage is significantly less. How is it that when the police and prosecutor are involved in a criminal case with all the resources of the State at their disposal that the rate of conviction is lower than in a domestic violence case when they are not involved? This is precisely why Judge Thompson was attacked for his decisions. He recognizes that there is a motive involved when making an accusation. Particularly with married men, the motive is also monetary, not just revenge or hate. Guilt by accusation is Napoleonic Law not English Law.

Having attempted to raise the issue with the State Judiciary Committees in the Maryland Legislature for the last few years with little interest on their part has brought me to the firm conclusion that as one person, my voice does not count. However, what I have learned is that when a group of concerned citizens who are willing band together to bring the issues to the public as an organization, then and only then will people in the legislature listen and act. There are delegates who are willing to act, however, without the political force of a group, they themselves have little power to push the issue. If we will work together then we can make a difference.

As a founding member of the committee, you and others would have the ability to bring about positive change. The committee will become what you make of it. In the end, I believe everyone would benefit from having a level playing field, countering the special interest groups and applying pressure to abusive officials as the way to accomplish this goal.

One voice is not enough. Spin colors perception and perception colors reality. Whose voice will win out? Can we afford to keep silent?

Dan Scott

Maryland Judicial Equality Committee

http://www.geocities.com/fightbigotry2002/index

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/06/2157253.shtml

Celebrate Men's Health Week!

Scott · 7 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I received this news from Men's Health America: "Men's Health Week starts June 9, and runs through Father's Day. The 2002 observance of Men's Health Week will be devoted to the theme of International Men's Health. The reason for the international focus this year is simple: men's health has become global in scope. Men's health is making giant strides in Australia, England, Canada, the United States, and elsewhere. The World Congress on Men´s Health will take place in Vienna, Austria from October 25-27, 2002. And there is a second reason: There are threats to men's health that are looming on the international horizon. And if ignored, these forces could thwart efforts at the national and local levels to achieve gender equality in health. To celebrate Men's Health Week, Men's Health America will post a series of four Special Reports, beginning tomorrow. Then we will ask you to take action to promote men's health. Because men have a right to life."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/07/0013233.shtml

Are Women Who Study Cosmotology Victims of Career Choice Coercion by Schools?

Scott · 7 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "Here is another example of dangerous feminist victimology turned into bountiful lawsuits. Based on this study done by National Women's Law Center, boys that feel like they were stereotyped into a "male" vocational choice, and females who feel like they were stereotyped into a "female" vocational choice, may be able to sue their school system for failing to persuade the boys into child care vocations and the girls into welding and construction vocations... Title IX will be the pry-bar for this sham."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/07/1636203.shtml

Zohrab on Media Bias

Scott · 8 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Peter Zorhab from the NZ Equality Party sent in another article on media bias. In this piece, he focuses more broadly on the influece of left-wing politics and the struggle men's issues has in getting airtime in this environment. Whether your politics are left or right, his points provoke a lot of thought on this issue.

Left-Wing Media Bias

Copyright 2002 by Peter Douglas Zohrab (zohrab@xtra.co.nz)

Reprinted with permission from the author

The Problem

How can it be that someone like Peter Mulhern can pen the following words:

"The biases of the elite media are too well documented to make good column fodder. Most journalists have a tribal attachment to the Democrat Party that transcends even ideology" (
http://nj.npri.org/nj99/11/media.htm
),

while (as at 18 May 2002) the page
http://www.cultsock.ndirect.co.uk/MUHome/cshtml/index.html
(on a Media Studies site) treats media bias as if only right-wing media bias existed ? Surely they live in different worlds ?

The media and education systems (the Media-University Complex) in Western countries have the ideological cohesiveness and mass coverage to create "reality", and then to go out and "discover" it, to research it, and to report it. They create reality by seeking out left-wing, Feminist, and ethnic etc. extremists and giving them the same, or more, coverage as/than mainstream organizations, and refusing to give first-person coverage (fair interviews) to right-wing extremists, Pro-Life activists, and Men's/Fathers' groups, etc.. Over time, this moves the criterion of "mainstream" inexorably to the left.

Meanwhile, the real reality is simmering away below the surface of reported events. On the rare occasions when it attempts to burst out into public consciousness (e.g. when the Right are doing well in the polls), the media do their best to sweep it back under the carpet by means of scare-mongering, libel, and selective reporting. It is really only talk-back radio and the Internet that give people the freedom to bypass Left-Wing media censorship and propaganda.

The media are frequently attacked by "Right-Wing" critics -- not for the bias of the owners of the media (which is relatively minor in scale), but for the bias of the media workers (journalists, in particular). For example, in 2002 media coverage of French Right-Wing politician Jean-Marie Le Pen and the Dutch political assassinee, Forteyn, most journalists were blatantly and openly one-sided, as if the media were a left-wing political party (which, in practice, they are). The media see right-wing extremism as the problem, whereas in fact left-wing media bias forces moderate Right-Wingers into extremism, because the media prevents them from having equal access to the public.

Right-Wing populists are bound to be critical of media bias, because they attract most of it - names such as Rush Limbaugh and Richard Nixon, in the USA, and Robert Muldoon and Winston Peters, in New Zealand, spring to my mind immediately. The website http://www.mrc.org is solely given over to the publicizing of Left-Wing media bias. The webpage
http://nj.npri.org/nj99/11/media.htm,
referring to an event involving Lyndon Johnson that was "news" to me, states:

"Nothing Richard Nixon was ever accused of in connection with Watergate posed as great a threat to the integrity of the American political process as the crime Lyndon Johnson committed in James Reston's presence. But Johnson was a Democrat. He could rely on Reston to ignore his crime. He could also rely on Newsweek to continue ignoring it 35 years later."

Though the Fathers' Movement is, at long last, starting to get a little bit of media coverage, any activist in the broader Men's Movement can testify to anti-male, Feminist bias in the media. See http://members.tripod.com/peterzohrab/marclepi.html
, for example.

Media Power

People often say things like "Knowledge is Power" or "Information is Power," but they seldom seem to realize this applies to politics as well as to everything else. The Media - particularly before the advent of the Internet - controlled information. This seems to have gone to their heads, in many cases. Some media people have acquired star status, which is an indication of their power over people's minds. They are not aware of their own bias.

The news media are very powerful, as Goebbels knew. He was aware of the need to conceal the "art" of the media professional from the audience by using historical analogies rather than making blatant political propaganda. Similarly, the modern western media propagandizes by choosing what to cover and what questions to ask, rather than by being blatantly biased in the presentation of what it does cover - usually, at any rate. The problem for politically incorrect causes such as Men's Rights has been how to get covered at all.

The Sociology Problem

There is a standard, Left-Wing bias that prevails in Universities, but I will not discuss that topic here - except with reference to the field of Sociology. See my book, "Sex, Lies & Feminism" (http://members.tripod.com/peterzohrab/contents.html) for further details.

The problem of Left-Wing media bias is best understood as pertaining to the field of the Sociology of the Media. However, Sociology is itself known to be a Left-Wing bastion - so much so that I once received an email from a man, asking me about Men's Rights, and apologizing for the fact that he was a Sociology student and therefore likely to be hostile to Men's Rights !

For example, a quick search of the World Wide Web for "Sociology of the Media" (or something similar) yielded the following top results:

- The City University, London, which showed no sign of any interest in the sociology of media personnel in their extensive course-offering;
- The "Equality Studies Centre" of University College Dublin, which has a course on "Sociology of the Media and Equality", taught by a woman, amidst a raft of other optional courses, which are virtually all taught by women, and include "gender", "sexualities", and "women" - but not "men", needless to say;
- The personal page of a female lecturer at the University of New Brunswick, who has so far taught "Sociology of the Media" along with "Introduction to Women's Studies";
- Hope College, which gave no detailed information;
-

New School University, which has a course "Fundamentals of Sociology of Media", which refers to the media as being "a constitutive element in the power structure of capitalist societies", but shows no sign of investigating the role of the employees of media entities;

- A University of Essex gateway to resources about the Sociology of the Media;
- The University of New Brunswick, which does not give much information about the content of courses;
- The University of Limerick, which has a course on "Sociology of the Media", which includes "media representation of women" (but probably not "media representation of men") as one of its topics.

None of these show evidence of any interest in researching the role of the workers in the media industry or men, as such. Their focus seems usually to be on the owners of the media, as capitalists (i.e. from a Leftist perspective), on the effects of the media on Society, and/or on Feminist perspectives on the media.

Conclusion

Far from being mere observers and reporters, the media are powerful and active players in the political process. One example is the well-known Feminist author, Susan Faludi. According to Laura Taflinger,

"Faludi thinks a journalist's job is to create social change by educating people and taking the time to investigate things. A journalist needs to be passionate about a cause, she says." (http://www.dnai.com/~ljtaflin/FEMJOUR/faludi.html)

Since they control the actual perception of political reality of billions of people, the media have to choose between tidying up their act and becoming increasingly a target of political violence.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/07/2157228.shtml

On-line Chat with Bettina Greaves

Scott · 8 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This Sunday's (6/9) jointly sponsored MANN/iFeminists on-line chat will feature guest Bettina Greaves. Bettina is a free-market scholar, an expert on Ludwig von Mises, a witness to decades of classical liberal history... Come to ask wide ranging questions. Join us at this link around 9 PM EDT.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/04/202223.shtml

U.S. Army Funds Domestic Abuse Study On Women Only

Scott · 8 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "According to this article the United States Army used our tax dollars to hire feminists at Johns Hopkins to do a study on how badly women, and ONLY women, are affected by being victims of domestic abuse. The article not only promotes the myth of female victimhood and male guilt, but even provides a link to the National Crime Prevention Council, which further promotes the feminist lie by stating among other things that 4 million women are abused each year by husbands and boyfriends (no mention of lesbian partners) while no mention is made of male victims of domestic abuse at all."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/08/2126229.shtml

Upcoming Constitutional Challenge to CA Custody/Child Support Laws

Scott · 9 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

jigme writes, "A Constitutional Challenge directly attacking the Child Support Laws practices, policies and procedures in the State of California will be held at the San Francisco Superior Court, Friday, June 14th, 2002 at 12 Noon at 400 McAllister Street in San Francisco. This Challenge is going all the way up to the United States Supreme Court. The main Constitutional Challenge will be joined by more than 50 Fathers by JOINDER and/or Intervention. We clearly see the whole system as a fraud and will be holding a news conference with the mainstream media as well as having 1000 fathers protest at this event. If you would endeavor to participate, please call us at 925-363-5470 or 925-449-8436. E-mail livebeatdad2(at)msn.com or petedclark(at)hotmail.com or jigcho(at)webtv.net.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/06/0135218.shtml

Men's Health Special Report Focuses on Global Issues

Scott · 9 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

A special report on the status of men's health worldwide was released by Men's Health America. This report focused on the longevity of men and women, and find that the lower status of men's health is a worldwide problem. Go here to read the report and learn just how pervasive the neglect of men's lives has become. And if you haven't already subscribed to the MHA announcement list, it is highly recommended.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/09/1511253.shtml

Men's Hour June Programme Released

Scott · 9 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "Due to delays and illness the June programme is finally out. It includes news about London protests in April. An interview with Richard Pitchers about the Californian Constitutional Challenge (Friday June 14th 12pm at Supreme Court, San Francisco) and news of the NCFM event later in June (Friday June 21st 7pm, Minneapolis). There will also be a special update programme on Sunday 16th June 9pm BST, 4pm EDT, about the NCFM event."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/09/153246.shtml

Global Male-Only DNA Database Grows

Scott · 10 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Robex writes *"This article from the BBC shows that the UK (and Scotland in particular) is not the only country pressing ahead with a male-only DNA database. It seems that it's quite prevalent in Australia too, but has rightly been condemned by various civil liberties groups. Again, I would urge all men who ever find themselves subject to such a "request" to resist."*Source: BBC [UK news network]

Title: DNA tests to find backpacker's killer

Author: Unknown

Date: June 9, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/09/1513220.shtml

Sex Bias in Treating Heart Disease Refuted

Scott · 11 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tom Campbell writes *"This is a link to an article in the Annals of Internal Medicine that looked at the treatment of heart disease in men and in women. There have been many articles in the medical literature that have purported to prove that women are discriminated against in receiving healthcare, in spite of women's overall greater longevity. These authors took a closer look, and found that when matched for severity, there was no difference in how men and women were treated for coronary heart disease."*Source: Annals of Internal Medicine [medical journal]

Title: Sex Differences in Access to Coronary Revascularization after Cardiac Catheterization: Importance of Detailed Clinical Data

Author: WA Ghali, PD Faris, PD Galbraith, CM Norris, MJ Curtis, LD Saunders, V Dzavik, LB Mitchell, and ML Knudtson

Date: May 21, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/11/1629259.shtml

Glenn Sacks Hits the Airwaves Again

Scott · 11 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This page lists a series of upcoming radio programs that men's issues writer Glenn Sacks will be a guest on. Sacks' upcoming Father's Day column, "American Fathers Get a Bad Rap" will be his main topic, and is sure to be of interest to activists.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/11/194249.shtml

A Man's Right To Choose

Adam · 16 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I've just found a superb article outlining what choice for men is, and best of all is that it's written from a moral viewpoint which is quite hard to refute. While some of you might think this is old news, bear in mind the article makes for an excellent introduction to C4M that is written to appeal to a universal audience, and is well worth bookmarking to put in discussions and the like. The article was taken from the Alabama Family Rights Association page.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/16/017228.shtml

Happy Father's Day!

Scott · 16 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I know this site has not been updated in the past few days, and it's been because I've had a lot of things to do to prepare for Father's Day and some other family events this weekend. I ended up spending the day with my dad yesterday, and it was a lot of fun - we put together a computer for him out of some spare parts I was able to dig up (including the backup server MANN used during that hardware failure). Anyways, I hope others are having a great Father's Day weekend, whether it will be spent being with your dad, honoring his memory, participating in activism, or whatever you find is most appropriate. If you're in the southeastern NH area and want to celebrate the passage of the Men's Commission bill and men's issues in general, the NCFC-NH group is having a very informal meeting tonight at the Town Hall in Newington, NH starting at about 7 PM.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/16/1542234.shtml

The Myth of the Deadbeat Dad

Adam · 16 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Stephen Baskerville has done it again, this time getting published in the June issue of Liberty, exposing the family courts to a wider audience of reader. I don't really have much left to say, apart from click this link which will lead you to the article which from the Alliance for Non-Custodial Parents Rights and the article is a PDF (Adobe Acrobat) file to view.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/16/0153203.shtml

On-line Chat About Realities of Pornography Industry

Scott · 17 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tonight, Sunday the 16th, at 9:00 p.m. EDT join Wendy McElroy and "Mason" in the free ifeminists/mensactivism chat room to discuss the realities of the pornography industry. Wendy has done a lot of research in this area and this is a rare opportunity to speak with "Mason", who I assume is a person who works or has worked in pornography. Is pornography really exploitation of women? Men? Join this chat and find out.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/16/2228237.shtml

Giving Women Land the Path to Solve World Hunger?

Scott · 17 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

crescentluna submitted this story and writes "Apparently at the World Food Summit the idea of giving women equal property rights as men will end world hunger. Not quite sure if this is an issue for men's rights, it might be just the article but it doesn't seem to show any direct evidence between increased women's property rights and less instances of hunger, and this whole talk of 'if today children continue to be fed, it is because of women' is a little one-sided."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/17/1632204.shtml

Harvard Stalling Gender and Education Center, Angering Jane Fonda

Scott · 17 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

CJ sent us this Boston Globe article and writes "Last March actress Jane Fonda announced that she was donating $12.5 million to Harvard University to fund a Center on Gender and Education. Now, many say that Fonda is displeased at the pace with which Harvard has made use of her gift and is seriously considering withholding the $6 million balance."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/17/1634232.shtml

New Zealand Men's Rights Group Changes Name

Scott · 18 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This is just an announcement that the New Zealand Equality Party has now changed it's name to the New Zealand Equality Education Foundation, to help focus more on their purpose of educational outreach about gender equality. If you're interested in more info about this group, contact Peter Zorhab at zohrab@xtra.co.nz.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/18/0229209.shtml

Men's Rights and Federal Judgeships

Scott · 18 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "Here is a key area where the femmunists maintain their social agenda at the expense of men's rights. They are the force presently behind the logjam in getting Bushes Federal judgeships nominated by the Senate. It would behoove us to contact our Senators to let them know that the the femmunists are no longer the only game in town and this is an election year. Tell them to support pro men's rights judges. You need to get those letters, e-mails and faxes to your Senators out now!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/18/0233211.shtml

Taking Stock in Title IX

Scott · 20 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

CJ sent in this Boston Globe article and writes "Women's sports advocates admonish the wrestling coaches and their supporters for targeting the wrong group with their lawsuit. They say it's bloated football programs that eat up the athletic budgets, not the new softball or women's soccer programs. Yet these same "advocates" fail to recognize that men's programs are getting cut despite student interest and participation levels in order to meet Title IX requirements. Also, there are more programs than just wrestling that have been cut. Like at UNH, the baseball program was cut while students were actively involved to meet this ridiculous sexist standard."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/20/008252.shtml

NCFM Conference to Include Webcast

Scott · 20 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I thought I'd break this news, it's pretty cool. The NCFM-sponsored forum which will be happening on Friday in St. Paul is probably going to be broadcast live on the internet. I'm not sure if it will be just audio or both audio + video, but I promise to deliver details on how to tune in on the broadcast as soon as I hear further details from Ray Cuttill. Since this forum is intended to coincide with the N.O.W. conference going on in the same city that day, this event could have some very significant effects if the media gives it good coverage. Update: Check out the Men's Hour site for updates as the time gets closer to the event.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/20/0012235.shtml

No Simple Solution to Spousal Abuse

Scott · 20 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Mark writes "While this editorial, from the Vancouver Sun, seems to have a slight slant towards women, it takes an interesting look at some of the issues around spousal abuse, including the use of it as a tool in divorce and custody, and socio-economic issues. While it looks at these things in the light of the current political state of British Columbia, a lot of what is said can be viewed quite broadly."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/20/032225.shtml

NCFM Forum Webcast

Scott · 21 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The NCFM conference happening today (Friday, 2/21) will in fact be broadcast live on the internet. Raymond Cuttill from the Men's Hour is sponsoring the broadcast, which should begin at 7 PM Central Time and can be listened to via this Live365.com link (note that the link probably won't work until that time). Check it out!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/21/0422241.shtml

Status on CA Paternity Justice Act (AB2240)

Scott · 21 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "Currently, the CA Senate Committee of Judiciary is working on AB2240 (Stop Paternity Fraud). They are clearly friendlier to our side of the argument when compared to the Assembly Committee of Judiciary. For example, they have amended the act to permit a male victim of paternity fraud to receive compensation for damages....from the bio dad. Unfortunately, the female is still able to get a generous income from child support if she defrauds a wealthy man. Worse, the judiciary has absolute discretion in choosing to hear a DNA case. That means that the majority of victims will be ignored. This level of discretion needs to be removed. Also, they need to be encouraged to modify the declaration of paternity form. This will allow the mother to have an option of checking a box for being uncertain. There is also the option of the state requiring every male to have a DNA test to prove paternity. Now is the time to write to the committee with your suggestions for amendments. Don't wait because they are moving on this bill now. The contact information for the judiciary can be found here: Senate Committee of Judiciary. Write to them now - today - and let them know this fight is not over and that we want justice!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/21/1142239.shtml

The Devolution of Fatherhood

Scott · 23 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dan-Lynch writes "I saw this article on Men's News Daily. I think the topic of how father's are portrayed on television is worth discussing, as television is probably accredited to influencing in large our views and opinions. If the television industry standardizes the father's role we should definitely question the images that are projected."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/23/0143248.shtml

Canadian Women Have Sole Right to Name Children

Scott · 23 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

BusterB writes "The audacity of the Ontario court is astounding. The judges' claim (unanimous no less) is that the law as it stands clearly gives mothers the final say on whether to even acknowledge the father on the birth certificate, let alone name the child. There may be a Supreme Court appeal, but the Ontario court is held in high regard in Canada. Well, at least there was a dissenting opinion in the B.C. court, but notice that it was just a "dissenting opinion," not a victory for fathers. This is the same "justice" system that has struck down laws right, left, and centre when those laws infringe on the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Someone explain to me just exactly why kiddie porn distributors' Charter rights are more important than fathers' Charter rights? Go figure."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/23/0145224.shtml

On-line Chat About NCFM Conference

Scott · 23 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tonight, Sunday the 23rd, 9:00 p.m. EDT, join the free online ifeminists/mensactivism chat where Trudy Schuett, father's rights activist, and Wendy McElroy will discuss their participation in the path-breaking counter-NOW conference on June 21st. Trudy's speech during the conference has been transcribed and can be read here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/23/1715243.shtml

Males Still Fleeing US Schools

Thomas · 25 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Washington Post reports on the continuing decline of male enrollment in US colleges and universities. It's interesting that they admit that the problem can no longer be "shrugged off." One has to question the sincerity of many of the people who are currently examining this crisis. There are still a few areas where women don't outnumber men and Jocelyn Samuels, vice president of the National Women's Law Center, states, "The job is not yet done." Also, note that the article does not mention the hardships that this development portends for men. Rather it comments on the fact that "the lack of marriable men is a hot topic of conversation among black women. They can't see it now, but that is going to happen for white women in the future."
Source: Washington Post

Title: Degrees of Separation: Gender Gap Among College Graduates Has Educators Wondering Where the Men Are

Author: Michael A. Fletcher

Date: June 25, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/25/1950209.shtml

N.O.W. Launches Misleading "Family Court Report 2002"

Scott · 26 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks writes, "NOW launched an assault today on the Fathers' Rights movement with the publication of its new "Family Court Report 2002." Many fathers' rights groups are named in the report, including the ACFC and the NCFC. The John Knight/Fathers Manifesto fiasco is used against us, as well as the Warren Farrell/incest nonsense. It's getting a lot of publicity here. I suggest you download and take a good look at the report--if we do not fight this it will serve to kill much of the progress we have made in educating the public on anti-father family court discrimination."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/25/2121249.shtml

NCFM ContraCon Summary

Scott · 26 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "The signs are put away, the speakers have gone home, but St. Paul Minnesota and the men's movement will never be the same! Read the commentary on how it all went at Men's News Daily." Update: Wendy McElroy has made a transcript available of the on-line chat that happened last Sunday, which can be viewed here. Wendy's speech at the NCFM event can be read here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/25/2126216.shtml

Men Refusing to Commit to Marriage

Thomas · 26 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This article in the Washington Post covers a report by researchers Barbara Dafoe Whitehead and David Popenoe, directors of the National Marriage Project at Rutgers University. While men are described as "phobic," the article does quote some of men's reasons for avoiding marriage. Two examples include, "An ex-wife will 'take you for all you've got' and 'men have more to lose financially than women.'" Whitehead called the work, which was based on interviews with only 60 single men, a "pilot study" and called for a nationally representative examination of the situation.Source: The Washington Times

Title: Wedded bliss not a priority for U.S. bachelors

Author: Cheryl Wetzstein

Date: June 26, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/26/1731256.shtml

Trudy Schuett Speech at NCFM Forum

Thomas · 26 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Here is the text of Trudy Schuett's speech to the recent NCFM forum. It's great to see Trudy point out that the seeds of anti-male hate have resided in feminism for a long time. This fact debunks the claim that early, second-wave feminism was a purely benevolent movement. I also loved her statement, "We didn't realize that feminism, by its own nature, cannot be about equity. It's right there in the word. The word isn't equalitarianism, it's feminism. The word itself suggests concentrating on women -- that they should be elevated in recognition, somehow. That can only be lopsided and unnatural."

Thanks for all the hard work and devotion, Trudy.Source: DesertLight Journal

Author: Trudy Schuett

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/26/1755238.shtml

Thompson and Sacks Fire Back at N.O.W.

Scott · 26 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dianna Thompson of the American Coalition for Fathers and Children derided the National Organization for Women's new Family Court Report 2002 in the Los Angeles Times today (free reg. required), noting that the report was a "self-selecting survey among NOW constituents" and not objective research. Thompson also noted that US census data showed that women are granted custody 80% of the time and that "fathers have very small chances of getting even dual custody." Also, men's issues columnist Glenn Sacks blasted NOW. on KTRS AM 550 in St. Louis today, advising listeners that NOW's recently released report is a fraud designed to create the false impression that family courts are biased against women.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/26/1833205.shtml

Governor of Virginia Has Never Heard of Paternity Fraud

Scott · 28 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Mark writes "Governor Mark Warner was on AM 1140 today in Richmond, Virginia taking calls from the listening audience. I called to see if he has or knows of any plans in the Virginia legislature to pass Paternity Fraud laws similar to those in other states. After explaining it to the screener I was put on hold for a few minutes. Eventually the screener came back and said that he will save me the time because the governor NEVER HEARD OF PATERNITY FRAUD, but claims he (Governor Warner) did say that "Fraud is Fraud."
Perhaps he never did hear of it. If that is the case, I would love to inform him of it. Does anyone have or know of any god draft letters for politicians? I like to think that he wasn't dodging because he knew that it would be hard to defend why such laws shouldn't be passed."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/27/2255251.shtml

Feminist Changes Mind About Boys In School?

Scott · 28 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dan-Lynch writes "Carol Gilligan, at one time an advocate for "girl power" in schools is now singing a different tune about how boys are doing in school (poorly of course). I submitted this National Post article (found on Men's News Daily) because it just rings of the old saying, "the fox guarding the chicken coup"."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/27/2258214.shtml

San Francisco Protects Female Prostitution; Degrades Male 'Customers'

Scott · 28 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "The city of San Francisco is using a feminist program run by a group called 'SAGE' which defines prostitution to be male exploitation of females and encourages the arrest of male customers while providing (at tax payer expense) protection and services for the prostitutes themselves. On Court TV a program showed police actually watching the hookers to make sure their tricks went well and they weren't hurt while conducting business. Sometimes they'd harass the women, but never did they arrest any. Male customers, on the other hand, were arrested, booked, and forced to pay hundreds of dollars to go through a special 're-education camp' where feminists screamed at them and blatantly sexually harassed them with demeaning criticisms of their male genitalia. According to the SAGE website, many other cities have adopted this state-run prostitution racket after San Francisco did."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/27/233218.shtml

Woman Not Charged for Shooting Husband in Groin

Scott · 29 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "According to the June 23rd issue of News of the Weird Susan Winkler, 44, of Green Bay, Wisconsin, claims she accidently shot her husband in the groin with a shotgun. Police charged her with reckless endangerment, which is the standard charge for firing a weapon within the city limits without hitting anyone. No charges were filed for the shooting and sexual mutilation of her husband."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/29/1513236.shtml

John Leo on CEDAW

Scott · 30 June 2002 · Archived copy · Original

frank h sent us a link to John Leo's recent article on CEDAW, which appeared in U.S. News and World Report, among other periodicals and web sites. Leo explains that the dangers of CEDAW are that "it bristles with contempt for family, motherhood, religion and tradition" and will "impose "gender studies" on the schools and feminist-approved textbooks on students." It's encouraging to see the flaws of CEDAW exposed in the media, which has so far been avoiding covering the treaty for as long as possible.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/06/30/1830224.shtml

Colorado Wildfire: Blame It On A Man

Thomas · 1 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This article covers Terry Barton, the woman who finally admitted to starting the worst wildfire in Colorado history. In a ploy reminiscent of the NOW's stand on Russell Yates, Stephanie Howard, a Forest Service wildlife biologist states of Barton's husband, "He didn't know how to love her. He had a drinking problem. He had just a huge amount of issues with trying to deal with loving someone, loving his daughters . . . He was a very difficult man to live with."

Prosecutor Dave Conner asked, "You're not suggesting that John Barton caused Terry Barton to set this fire, are you? Or are you?"

Howard replied, "Indirectly, I am, yes."
Source: Rocky Mountain News

Author: Karen Abbott

Title: "Barton bail OK'd, set at $600,000: Forest Service worker pleads not guilty to Hayman Fire charges

Date: June 21, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/01/1628228.shtml

Gender-inclusive Personal Resources

Scott · 1 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy recently told me about this web page, which aims to create a list of personal resources that are gender-inclusive. The list is currently a bit sparse, but there is an attempt to include info on domestic violence and sexual assault resources which don't exclude men. Many of you might know of some resources for men that could be added - SAFE is one of the ones I have in mind - so feel free to let the webmaster, Kirsten Tynan, know about them: ktynan@seds.lpl.arizona.edu.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/01/205256.shtml

Thompson and Sacks Demolish Recent NOW Study

Scott · 2 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Men's issues columnist Glenn Sacks and Dianna Thompson, the executive director of the American Coalition for Fathers and Children, demolish NOW's new study on family court gender bias on their upcoming nationwide MND radio show. Sacks and Thompson expose the NOW report's sham methodology, ludicrous claims, and pervasive anti-male bigotry. They also detail how advocates for equal rights for fathers are effectively fighting NOW's report in the media. The show can be heard nationwide on MND Radio every Tuesday night from 6-7PM PST and is immediately available for archive replay. For more information or to listen, click here. To read NOW's report, go to California NOW's website.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/01/2010236.shtml

McElroy Refutes NOW Study, Accepts Challenge

Scott · 3 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy has stirred the pot with her rebuttal to the National Organization of Women's "Family Court Report" which claims family courts are corrupt and overwhelmingly biased against women. McElroy's article, which appeared on the Fox News web site, has ruffled a few feathers in the CA Chapter of NOW, to say the least. There is talk that McElroy will personally debate the authors of the study - more details will be made available as they are confirmed.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/03/157241.shtml

Should False Accusers Be Named (And Prosecuted)?

Thomas · 3 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This article dares to raise the question of whether false accusers should be named. Among other important points, the article states, "The woman claimed Hann... forced himself on her as she was in an alcoholic daze, and suggested he may have used the date rape drug Rohypnol... But forensic tests found no evidence of semen on her, no drug traces in her blood or the glass she drank from in Hann's apartment, and a blood alcohol content just below the legal driving limit."

Not only will this woman probably never see the inside of a courtroom, after being charged with making a false accusation, even her name may never be revealed.Source: The Australian

Title: Name snooker star's accuser: MP

Date: July 03, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/03/1632236.shtml

Blaming Men For The Crimes Of Women

Thomas · 3 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This essay by Glenn Sacks covers a matter that we've recently discussed, but I think it's worth giving Glenn a prominent spot in this case. It's more of the same: A woman commits a crime, an effort begins to determine which man or men can be blamed.Source: Men's News Daily

Title: Colorado Arsonist Terry Barton's Smart Strategy: When in Trouble, Blame a Man

Author: Glenn J. Sacks

Date: July 3, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/03/1639250.shtml

MensMovement.org Launches Today

Scott · 4 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "www.MensMovement.org starts on July 4th and is intended to be a resource for men and men's studies. This will include links to men's websites including men's groups/father's groups. The men's studies part will be about sources of online information about studies relating to men's issues. It should become a resource for any man looking up any men's issues to find websites, men's groups and information about the issue. Users can submit links automatically"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/04/1649236.shtml

MSNHatesMen.com Also Launches Today

Scott · 4 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "www.MSNHatesMen.com starts 4th July. It is an antidote to the male bashing ecards on MSN. Including the ecard about hearing men whining there are 4 cards on MSN that are blatantly anti-male. There are no ecards that are blatantly anti-female. There are 4 ecards on MSNHatesMen, equivalent female bashing ecards. If MSN withdraws the male bashing ecard, we'll withdraw the female bashing ecard. MSN also has a women's section but no men's section."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/04/1651223.shtml

Let's Show Our Support for Wendy McElroy

Scott · 5 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "Wendy McElroy has apparently been drawing some blood among the NOW gang, as evidenced by their latest invective here. Wendy has been an ardent supporter of men's rights and one of few who have been willing to speak out AND who have a forum from which to do so. She needs our support as we need hers. Now would be the time to write to the folks at Fox AND to the LA Times, the Sacremento Bee, and whatever the big papers in San Francisco are. This is clearly an organized attack designed to discredit Wendy in the same manner in which Warren Farrell and others have been attacked. We cannot let it succeed."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/05/1353228.shtml

Sacks and Thompson Explain Apparent "Marriage Strike" by Men

Scott · 5 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wayne submitted Glenn Sacks' and Dianna Thompson's latest article, which appeared in the Philadelphia Inquirer, and comments: "Since i was divorced 15 years ago I too have been on an absolute [marriage] strike...Any man who gets married needs a full frontal lobotomy." Sacks' article discusses the possible reasons behind a growing trend of men forgoing marriage. Source: The Philadelphia Inquirer [newspaper]

Title: A 'marriage strike' emerges as men decide not to risk loss

Authors: Glenn Sacks and Dianna Thompson

Date: July 05, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/05/1639213.shtml

NOW Family Court Report -- Revealing the Feminist Agenda

Scott · 5 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "My editorial entitled, "NOW Family Court Report -- Revealing the Feminist Agenda" now appears at the Sierra Times. Here's an excerpt... I've been aware of this agenda for some time, yet have hesitated to speak out publicly about any specific organization. I felt that sooner or later, their arrogance and disregard for reality would lead one of them to do something that so clearly and publicly revealed their anti-male hate agenda, that no spin on the part of any hired PR girl could explain it away..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/05/1641200.shtml

DNA Experts Needed for Paternity Fraud Hearing in CA

Scott · 6 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "My friends, in the state of CA we have the most powerful group of radical feminists in the world. Currently, I have information that they are marshaling their forces to testify against the Paternity Justice Act (AB2240) in California on August 6, 2002. They intend to use their trickery to try and disprove genetic testing as a reliable means of determining paternity. For example, I have been told that they intend to testify that paternity testing is unreliable due to the practice of organ transplants. It is their intent to use rare examples of a person having multiple organs for an organ transplant to prove that DNA testing is an unreliable mechanism of establishing paternity. We must fight this lie with every genetic expert possible. This is especially important because CA legislation tends to set trends for the rest of the nation. Therefore, I am issuing a call for any DNA experts to appear before the CA Committee of Judiciary to explain to them why such feminist lies are wrong or misleading. The testimony of these experts will have a dramatic impact on a man's right to be free of paternity fraud. Your testimony as a single expert will make a literal difference in men's rights for the entire planet. We need your help!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/06/1655221.shtml

Too Few Men Becoming Doctors in UK

Scott · 6 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Serge sent us this BBC article and excerpts from the article: "Too few men are training to become doctors, the British Medical Association's annual meeting was told on Wednesday...For the first time ever, more women than men graduated from medical schools...Six out of ten present students are women, according to figures, and some are worried that medicine may become overly-dominated by women in the future...[Stephen Sanders] said that just as it had been wrong in the past when the profession was male-dominated, it was equally wrong that the pendulum should swing too far the other way. "

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/06/1659233.shtml

Will Lance Armstrong Do It Again?

Scott · 7 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

With the Tour de France ongoing, I thought it would be worthwhile to post news that Lance Armstrong has won the prologue and will be wearing the yellow jersey early on in the bike race. Armstrong, of course, is a survivor of testicular cancer and is responsible for a lot of awareness regarding this men's health issue, not to mention the Lance Armstrong Foundation. Let's all hope the best for Armstrong, who has won the last three Tours in a row. Will he make a fourth? Either way, he's a great role model for men and a spokesman for cancer.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/07/0231259.shtml

Young Cites Sentencing Bias in Criminal Courts

Scott · 7 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Cathy Young's column in the July issue of Reason magazine examines the issue of gender bias in criminal sentencing, particularly for murder. Young's analysis, as always, attempts to achieve a balance - she criticizes some of Warren Farrell's outline of women-only defenses in criminal cases - but she clearly agrees that there is a substantial bias in courts which obtains more lenient sentences for women. It's definitely a must-read article.
Source: Reason [magazine]

Title: License to Kill

Author: Cathy Young

Date: July 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/07/186222.shtml

ILO: Forced Labor by Men Acceptable

Scott · 7 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tony writes "While this is not recent news it is current news since the the International Labor Union has not changed its policy as of yet. A letter written to the convention in 2001 highlights some of the issues that are still very relevant to male rights around the world.
",... the ILO's Forced Labour Convention designates one group and one group only as legitimate targets for forced labour: these same adult able-bodied men. Article 11 of the Convention states that "Only adult able-bodied males who are of an apparent age of not less than 18 and not more than 45 years may be called upon for forced or compulsory labour," so long as "they are physically fit for the work required and for the conditions under which it is to be carried out" and "the number of adult able-bodied men indispensable for family and social life" is allowed to remain in communities targeted for forced labour. In addition, the ILO states that both the forced labour involved in military conscription and the use of prison labour are acceptable under the terms of the Convention. Both of these institutions, of course, target males close to 100 percent of the time."
Here is the article and other case studies of international targeting of men for gender specific mass murder."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/07/189222.shtml

Special Ed Gender Gap Stirs Worry

Scott · 8 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

CJ sent us this Boston Globe story about the prevalence of boys in special education and emotional disability programs. The article is well researched and discusses the fact that the gender gap in these programs is directly related to how vague the "disability" is defined and that we are taking too many active young men and labelling them as disabled rather than dealing with the shortcomings our educational system has with regard to teaching boys. Source: The Boston Globe [newspaper]

Title: Special ed gender gap stirs worry

Authors: Anand Vaishnav and Bill Dedman

Date: July 8, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/08/1823226.shtml

Don't Imprison Parents (Ooops! Make That Mothers)

Thomas · 9 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Cherie Booth, the wife of British Prime Minister Tony Blair, is apparently about to propose that mothers be sentenced far more leniently than others for given crimes. Her idea is that, if mothers are imprisoned, there is a negative impact on their families. The effect on families of the imprisoning of fathers is, of course, given no such consideration. Maybe the UK should just imprison the children's fathers for the crimes of the mothers.Source: Times Online

Title: Booth call for curb on jailing mothers

Author: Frances Gibb

Date: July 08, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/08/2232232.shtml

Attacks on McElroy Continue, Worsen

Scott · 9 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

In Wendy McElroy's latest FoxNews column, we get more of an idea of how low some radical feminists are willing to stoop to attack prominent supporters of men's rights. The CA NOW Report controversy is looking to become one of the most prominent events highlighting men's rights and how misinformation is being spread by anti-male feminists in recent history - so if you've been waiting for a time to write something to your local newspaper, the time is now. Let's try to heap as much media and public attention on this battle as possible.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/09/0520231.shtml

NCFM Chapter Files Lawsuit for Lack of Men's Commission

Scott · 10 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

My jaw dropped as I was forwarded the following press release by Marc Angelucci from the Los Angeles chapter of the National Coalition of Free Men. They have taken the bold step in filing suit against L.A. County for refusing to establish a men's commission, while a women's commission exists. Suits are also to be filed in Orange county and San Bernardino for discrimination against men in domestic violence shelters. Read More below for the whole story. And get involved in this if you can!

NCFM SUES COUNTY FOR LACK OF COMMISSION FOR MEN

On July 11th, 2002, the National Coalition of Free Men, Los Angeles chapter, will file a lawsuit against L.A. County for refusing to create a commission for men, as they have created for women.

“A commission for men can be just as successful as the commission for women has been, and there’s a dire need for it,” says Marc Angelucci, a mental health attorney and president of NCFM L.A. “Men vastly outnumber women in suicides, dropouts, homelessness, incarcerations and job casualties. Men have lots of issues as men, but their issues are ignored even by male politicians.”

In a letter to Supervisor Yvonne Burke dated June 6, 2001, L.A. County’s Chief Executive Office opposed NCFM’s proposal for a commission for men, claiming “there is insufficient data available to substantiate that men are being denied basic human rights due to discrimination.”

“Not true,” says Angelucci. “Men face routine discrimination in family courts, criminal sentences, draft registration, prostate cancer funding, domestic violence services and more. They get denied access to their kids due to judicial bias, false accusations or blocked visitation. Then they’re labeled ‘deadbeat dads’ and dragged through a vicious and hostile system.”

New Hampshire recently formed a statewide commission for men.
http://www.gencourt.state.nh.us/legislation/2002/HB0587.html

Other supporters of a commission for men include:

State Assemblyman Rod Wright

June Dunbar, Commissioner, L.A. County Commission for Women

Martin Fiebert, Ph.D, professor of psychology, Cal State Long Beach

Herb Goldberg, Ph.D., professor of psychology, Cal State L.A.

William Comanor, Ph.D., professor of economics & health, UCLA

Jean Bonhomme, M.D., National Black Men’s Health Network

Warren Farrell, Ph.D., author and former NOW director

Karen DeCrow, Esq., former president of NOW

NCFM will also file suits against the counties of Orange, L.A. and San Bernardino for discriminating against men in domestic violence shelters.

PRESS CONFERENCE: July 11th, 1pm, County Courthouse steps, Grand Ave.

CONTACT: Marc Angelucci; Angelucci2000@alumni.law.ucla.edu

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/09/2354229.shtml

More Proof that Our Letters Count

Scott · 10 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This article from the Canadian press mentions the recent revocation of a Budwieser beer ad which showed women slapping their boyfriends for looking at other women. Due to "a handful" of complaints, the ad was pulled, as was a Chrysler ad in 1999 which had the same theme. The article describes the ad as being "pulled", but then says that it will still be run after 11 PM. Still, it's definitely worthwhile to keep track of progress such as this that we can build on.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/10/0032206.shtml

New Circumcision Research and News

Scott · 10 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

J. Steven Svoboda sent in a couple of interesting press releases on the topic of circumcision. The releases are fairly heavily formatted so I will simply make them downloadable in their native MS Word format. The first one outlines a study in the Journal of Health Psychology which shows that circumcision can be the cause of certain psychological problems, including Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. The second release announces that the state of Arizona has become the seventh state to bar Medicaid funding for infant circumcision, with other states likely to follow.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/10/0150214.shtml

Progressive Insurance Runs Painful Anti-Male TV Ad

Scott · 10 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "Progressive Insurance has begun running an ad in which an angry ex-girlfriend or ex-wife is depicted as creating a voo doo doll of her ex and then injuring him in various ways. At the end of the commercial she uses pliers on his genitals and we are shown him making a horrible face for the last shot. Apparently this insurance company thinks sexual abuse of males is a good way to sell insurance. Unless they hear otherwise from us this will likely continue."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/10/1949225.shtml

New from David Reiser

Scott · 12 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "The popular DLJ columnist is back, this time with a modernized version of "Medea." Far from being heavy or obscure, this David Reiser treatment of the story is readable, while being no less heart-searing than the original.

As you may know, the most famous version of Medea is the Greek tragedy by Euripides, the dramatization of an event that has probably happened many, many times. In the Euripides version, Medea murders her children in front of their father, Jason (of Jason and the Argonauts fame). He had left her for a woman with greater wealth, power, youth, and beauty; not four attributes likely to endear him to Medea. Medea quickly realizes that the only way she can adequately achieve revenge against Jason is by murdering the children. One by one, they line up obediently, kneel at her feet, and allow her to slit their throats, as their father is forced to watch."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/12/0333248.shtml

Sacks Demolishes NOW's Family Court Report

Scott · 12 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The latest article of Glenn Sacks is sure to put him on the highest ranking of N.O.W's hit list. In it, Sacks exposes fundamental flaws in the survey which the report was based on - not the least of which includes the fact that the survey respondents were all women (it's kind of hard to conclude that courts would be biased against men when men aren't even asked). Sacks' article was printed in the Los Angeles Daily Journal and the San Fransisco Daily Journal, and I'm sure will result in a lot of scrutiny of NOW's report for the foreseeable future. The men's movement owes a debt of gratitude for Sacks for writing such a courageous, well researched article.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/12/0423258.shtml

Standing Up To Feminism

Thomas · 12 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

William "Hootie" Johnson, chairman of Augusta National Golf Club, home to the annual Masters tournament, has dared to stand up to the feminists. Martha Burk, chair of the National Council of Women's Organizations, has contacted Johnson, in a manner that he found "both offensive and coercive," to demand that the all-male golf club admit women. Johnson has refused to submit. Burk has threatened to contact sponsors. If this takes place, perhaps we should contact the same sponsors and go out of our way to purchase their products.Source: The Nando Times

Title: Standing up to feminism

Author: Betsy Hart

Date: July 12, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/12/1559229.shtml

Another Nail In Fathers' Coffins

Thomas · 12 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks and Dianna Thompson describe the injustice of a new anti-father device imposed by the courts. In her recent decision, Judge E. Chouteau Merrill determined that virtual visitation by computer link is an appropriate replacement for true visitation, where a man might actually be able to hug his children.Source: MensNewsDaily.com

Title: No virtue in 'virtual visitation' rights

Authors: Glenn J. Sacks and Dianna Thompson

Date: July 12, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/12/1820249.shtml

Wendy McElroy Under Implied Threat of Lawsuit

Scott · 12 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

According to this discussion thread on ifeminists.com, Wendy McElroy is possibly being threatened with lawsuits for "ridiculing" the CA NOW Family Court Report 2002. According to McElroy herself, "I have been told to cease "ridiculing" the CA NOW report and associated feminists. Monetary compensation has been "demanded." But the actual filing of a lawsuit has not occurred." This only suggests to me that these people know their lies are being exposed and they will take any desperate action to silence the truth.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/12/1842219.shtml

Assemblyman Rod Wright Responds to Critics of Anti Paternity Fraud Bill

Scott · 13 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc writes "California Assemblyman Rod Wright, who authored the anti paternity fraud bill AB2240, defended his bill in an editorial in the Sacramento Bee. He introduces what appear to be some new terms: 'deeppocket paternity,' 'revenge paternity,' and 'convenience paternity' (along with honest mistakes).

Note: feminists successfully diluted AB2240 to give judges total discretion. We (NCFM LA) still support the bill but we oppose the discretionary language because it allows bias and inconsistency. Some of us will drive to Sacramento from L.A. to testify at the 8/6 hearing. Anyone who wants to join us should email me."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/12/1950204.shtml

More on the "Marriage Boycott"

Thomas · 13 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Stephen Baskerville, Ph.D., political science teacher at Howard University, gives his take on the growing marriage boycott by men. Doctor Baskerville states, "men themselves express a weightier explanation of why they fear marriage: For many men, starting a family is a one-way ticket to jail, and even worse." How sad and how true. He also states, "Portraying marriage as a man's ball-and-chain used to be a joke. Now, it is a political problem." I would add that it is also a societal problem that is accompanied by a dangerous rate of population collapse.Source: MensNewsDaily.com

Title: Men Boycott Marriage

Author: Stephen Baskerville, Ph.D.

Date: July 12, 2002.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/12/1832208.shtml

"If Men Have All the Power..." Released in 2nd Ed, Paperback

Scott · 14 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Jack Kammer's If Men Have All the Power, How Come Women Make the Rules? book has just been released in a second edition. The book can be downloaded here for free, but also has been released in paperback form. I've personally found this book to be one of the few that can really open the eyes to someone new to the idea of men's rights. The aphoristic style of the book seems very effective this way, and I'd highly recommend it. Why not pick up a few copies of this book in paperback and give them out to people?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/14/1439223.shtml

Mass News Runs Series on Wellesley College

Scott · 14 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dan-Lynch writes "This is a series run by the Massachusetts News on Wellesley's Campus ethics, among other things. You may remember Gilligan and her "girls are disadvantaged" mantra, well this series covers some interesting insights on that as well as a few other topics, including "Wellesley's attack on boys, straight women and men." I highly recommend the read and passing it on, as it covers a great deal of men's concerns from domestic violence to the feminization of males. A very full body of issues in a short piece."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/14/1443204.shtml

Missing Link to NOW's Support of NAFCJ

Scott · 15 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "This report states, "Richards stated that Cindy Ross was the California director of her group, while Vicky Pierce was its Georgia director. In her email, she also said that Pierce had recently become the Cobb County president of NOW." This email cited in this news release could be the link that ties CA NOW into the potential defamation of property and libel cases that seem to be on the horizon. Notice also that Richards is reported to have "...blasted the leaders of the Father's Rights Movement, calling them "a pack of liars" bent on inflicting their ex-mates with "every single injustice they false(ly) claim to be inflicted on them." In my opinion, we know who Richard's is calling a pack of liars. All we have to do is reference the CA NOW report."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/14/1934202.shtml

Getting Ready for DV Awareness Month 2002

Scott · 15 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy Schuett writes, "Preparation for the Domestic Violence Awareness campaign in October is just getting underway, and I wanted to alert those with an interest in the program. As you're probably aware, last year's campaign was sidetracked due to saturation media coverage of the 9/11 disaster pretty much into the Xmas shopping season. This year will be different, especially considering recent events relating to challenges to the feminist ideology in many areas. This year we will also be expanding to include other countries as well as the US, and hard-copy publications to get the information on as many websites, to as many people as possible." Read More below for the rest of her announcement.Here's the basic plan so far: we'll be asking for the cooperation of as many men's groups, orgs, and websites as we can reach. We intend to set up a website, most likely a section of mine, as a basic resource for information for the media and general public. It will contain links to such orgs as provide services for men, as well as the basic facts&figures and other information. Most of the informational articles have already been put together, fortunately. We will also feature bio/press kit material for those experts who want to make themselves available to appear on media, along with links to their websites if they have one. Those experts who do not have a website, and would like to make themselves available, are welcome to participate. We can add their info with the others, no problem.

Websites for groups, etc, will be asked to feature an as-yet-to be-designed logo on their website linking to this info site. (We need a volunteer to design one!) They will get a link back from the site and mention as supporters in any news releases sent.

Over the course of this week, I will be contacting as many of the hard-copy publications as I have e-mail addies for, asking them to feature the logo on their website, and encouraging them to cover the issue, if possible. I'm aware this may be problematic for monthlies, since they've likely got their October issues planned, but they may be open to the website logo. I will need info on these publications, so anyone who knows of any publication with a targeted male audience, please send me the contact info! These need not be 'issues' publications - hunting, fishing, trucks, cars, professional orgs, fraternal orgs -- any kind of male-oriented publication will do. These need not be large national or international publications, either. The sooner I have contact info, the sooner I can start asking!

I'll keep everyone informed as much as possible, as time goes on. We've got Steve VanValkenburg on board again, and will be looking for volunteers from Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the UK to help us with contact info for local media, down the road when we send news releases. We also need experts from those countries so we can promote them! (We will most likely have the cooperation of AMEN in Ireland, so that's at least one other country covered.) Later phases of the project will include pre-written letters for sending as letters to the editor, legislators, and etecetera. There will be plenty of opportunities for orgs and their members to help promote awareness, while not costing any of them much, in terms of time or money. My background is in publicity for small private charities, and so I look at everything in terms of what we can get for free.

If anyone has questions or suggestions, drop me an e-mail!

Trudy Schuett, dsrtlite@mindspring.com

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/15/1722247.shtml

McElroy and Schuett Respond To Latest Anti-Fathers' Rights Tirade

Thomas · 15 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

In this essay, Wendy McElroy, responds to an email sent to her by Liz Richards of NAFCJ. Just noting the difference in writing styles was an eye opener for me. Wendy sure has Liz outclassed.

And in this essay, Trudy Schuett responds to the same rant.

I don't know what statement I love most in all this, Liz Richards' "You will be so sorry you have been promoting the cause of a ring of sociopath, deadbeat, and violent abusers," Wendy's "As for the content of Ms. Richards' email to me... To a large extent, I'm not sure what she is talking about," or Trudy's "there is a need to speak to women, and those men who bought the feminist line and thought by going along with it they were doing something positive for the world... those who styled themselves as feminist leaders years ago, who claimed to speak for women and improve their position in society, were not worthy of the trust bestowed on them."Source: Men's News Daily

Authors: Wendy McElroy and Trudy Schuett

Titles: "Primary Source Document: Do Your Homework or Pay Up !!!" and "Trudy Schuett Responds to "Do Your Homework Or Pay Up!!!"

Date: July 15, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/15/1916236.shtml

MSNHatesMen.com Still Not Working

Scott · 16 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "MSNHatesMen.com, the ecard site conceived as an antidote to the male-bashing ecards at MSN is still not up. Claims by hostonce.com that the problem has been fixed turn out to be wishful thinking or only temporary. Hostonce.com is either the most incompetent webhosting company ever or lying. Alternatives are being considered. MSNHatesMen will live!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/16/018246.shtml

Men's Hour July Programme is Here!

Scott · 16 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "The July Programme is out and contains news about a Wiltshire, England protest in July; an interview with author Bernard Chapin about his book, education and feminism; news of two websites; news of the NCFM conference in June and items about men boycotting marriage, viruses, and does everyone know you're in the Men's Movement? The Mens' Hour is at www.menshour.com"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/16/011200.shtml

Progressive Insurance Ad Edited...But Still No Improvement

Scott · 16 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Mark Thundercloud writes "Progressive Insurance has now edited its anti-male commercial. It now leaves out all the other forms of torture inflicted on the ex-boyfriend/husband by the ex-girlfriend/wife except the part where she uses the pliers on his genitals! This is obviously an in-your-face response to show contempt for those of us who have contacted Progressive to voice our objections and to show their contempt of men in general! So... What do we do now?" Update: Links to view the ad in RealVideo format can be found in the comments section. See comments #16 and #17, in particular.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/16/1822245.shtml

Child Support Enforcement Act

Scott · 17 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

John S. sent us this link to a press release regarding a new bill in congress - the Child Support Enforcement Act. The bill would allow custodial parents to deduct unpaid portions of child support, and for delinquent parents to add the unpaid support into their income. As John writes, "Child support is not tax deductible in the first place so all of the man's income is already taxed. Are they proposing adding it on again for clear double taxation? I don't get it." I'm sure John is not alone with this sentiment.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/16/2121240.shtml

MANN Chat: Informal Discussion on Anything

Scott · 17 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I apologize for announcing this so late, I wasn't sure if I'd have other commitments tonight. I'd like to try to revive the MANN on-line chats again, and will be holding one this evening starting at 9:30 PM EST in the MANN chat room. Join us and talk about whatever you like, there's no formal topic for discussion this evening. I would also like to hear from anyone who would like to volunteer to coordinate and host the chats.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/17/1855211.shtml

Genocide and Gendercide in Rwanda

Scott · 18 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tony writes *"Here is a recent article in a peer reviewed journal that examines the targeted murder of males in Rwanda. [note: this article is available in the free sample issue (same title as subject heading) offered at the site. registration is required but free.] I will let the introduction speak for itself, "*The aspect of gender in the Rwandan genocide is perhaps more extraordinarily intricate and multifaceted than in any genocide in history. The claim is a bold one, but it can be sustained by considering the combination of factors specfic to the events in Rwanda between April and July, 1994: the enormous stress that traditional gender roles, especially masculine ones, were under when the genocide erupted; the prominence of women in perpetrating the genocide (a historically unprecedented feature, in terms of the scale and directness of the involvement); the bluntness of the genocidaires' appeals to gendered expectations and aspirations, again including women as active agents of the slaughter;" In the conclusion, the author and editor of the magazine confront feminists with their lack of attention on male victims. This article not only shows the atrocities that are occurring around the world against men but also I believe shows that male issues and rights are slowly gaining worldwide attention."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/18/0333206.shtml

New, Limited Bumper Sticker Design

Scott · 19 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

In my latest order for a batch of Mensactivism.org bumper stickers, I also purchased a very small quantity (20) of a different sticker, which has a message that I feel is important and related to men's rights (esp. with regard to the falsely accused). The sticker reads, "America Means Civil Liberties: Patriotism is Defending Them." You can see exactly what they look like here. There is no ad for MANN on the sticker, and I'm selling them for $4 each. I know they're not cheap but they're not cheap to buy in such low quantities. If you'd like one please e-mail me at scott@mensactivism.org for more info.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/18/0338233.shtml

ManRights Reference Desk

Scott · 19 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tom Parker's extensive resource of men's issues information, known as the ManRights Reference Desk, has moved to a new address. Check it out here and I'd recommend bookmarking it - there's a lot of stuff to keep one reading!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/19/0351251.shtml

Men's Health Act Introduced in Senate

Scott · 19 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Equalitarian62 sent us a link to this message on the Men's Health America mailing list, which announces that the Men's Health Act has been introduced in the Senate. "This exciting development means that a bill to establish an Office of Men's Health has been introduced in both chambers of Congress. The Senate version of the Men's Health Act was assigned bill number S. 2616, and has now been referred to the Senate Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions ("HELP") for further consideration. The Senate bill matches H.R. 632, which was introduced in the House of Representatives last year. If you never got the chance to write to your legislators in support of the MHA, now's a great time to do so!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/19/0355233.shtml

Thoughts on the Direction of the Men's Movement

Scott · 20 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Ray sent in an interesting essay for men's activists to consider: "I have been surfing the net for some time searching for the reasons for the unprovoked physical batterings, the sexual discrimination, the false police report(s), the hatred that I and other men have experienced. The decade of the 90's saw a great escalation of all of the above for many men, not only in America, but throughout the world. I have seen with my own eyes the change from a time when a query on the subject of domestic violence brought only responses from the virulent radical feminists to a time when the truth about the actual statistical dimensions of domestic violence are begining to be known (we're still not seeing the complete/real story). I am witnessing a time when slowly, more and more web sites are popping up like hunted animals, cautiously sticking their heads out of their holes lest some savage predator seize on them and rip ther entrails out. Such is the nature of the territory surrounding the truth about the issues the "MEN'S MOVEMENT" struggles just to cope with day by day." Read More to continue...

You've come a long way Mr., but there's no gaurantee that the ray of hope at the end of the tunnel isn't just another light on the front end of the train of radical feminism waiting to flatten you and your wallet again.

It is understandable that with this degreee of acrimony being exhibited toward the entire male population of the world that I notice a significant level of vulgarity and profanity on some "men's web sites," and although I respect that this too can be protected speech under the U.S. constitution, I have to ask myself some tough questions:

1. Is there a code of ethics in the MEN'S MOVEMENT that promotes a higher degree of professional behavior/speech than that which we have seen being used to vilify the nobility of men, or are we just reacting to course behavior with course behavior? Are we content to just brawl like fish wives? "Are we conceeding the high ground (moral or otherwise) when dispationate well reasoned discourse disintegrates into vulgarity and profanity? Are men so frustrated and disempowered that some are left only with the option to vent through profane and vulgar avenues of communications?

2. Is the above shortcoming due to a lack of leadership in the MEN'S MOVEMENT? I'm not inviting any radical feminist visualizations of head butting contests (my neck is still sore from the last one I was baited into, impressing the worthiness of my superior genetic material to male challengers and available females). ...just kidding. Civilized men (& women) now routinely practice the ability to cooperate and make unselfish reasoned decisions that are respectful of the human rights of all men, women and children.

In conclusion, in addition to posting news articles, where people write in to men's web sites and comment on a story when it breaks, why not seize the initiative and write our own relevent stories for discussion that are born out of the unaddressed issues in the MEN'S MOVEMENT (and there are many) that need confronting and discussing? Instead of reacting to the news of others I encourage the MEN'S MOVEMENT to research, to dig deeper, to be journalistically proactive and create our own stories around the issues that burn inside us, and then present them. There is an old proverb (thousands of years old) that says, "as iron sharpens iron so one man sharpens another." Welcoming the thoughtful input of the masses to discuss the issues that affect us as men is a mighty tool in the hands of the MEN'S MOVEMENT for insight and positive direction, and should be employed to its fullest. The pen is mightier than the sword, and I for one am ready to start slingin' some ink.

Ray

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/20/130208.shtml

She-Spies: An Excuse to Air Abuse of Men?

Scott · 20 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Mark Thundercloud writes "Everyone should keep an eye on a new TV show that is about to debut, called "SHE-SPIES". Though I've only seen the previews, this thing looks like yet another "women being sadistically violent towards men" shows. If it's anything like it's predecessors, you can be sure it will feature tons of women beating up men, grabbing and kicking testicles, as well as the "men put in S&M type bondage by the women", scenarios, that is becomeing more and more frequent in TV and movies these days. It premires saturday July, 20 2002, on NBC. I'm not sure of the exact time. Be forewarned, they are cloaking this with the lable that it is a "spoof," so any criticism will be hard pressed to stick."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/20/134201.shtml

A Good Move for Mens' Literacy

Scott · 22 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Mark writes "According to a Vancouver Sun article, a book club specifically for men is now being established at the Vancouver Public Library. The title, "Reading group closes the book on allowing women" is unfortunate as it appears to place a negative spin on the subject, but given mens' typically lower academic performances than women these days this club is both welcome and needed."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/22/1733209.shtml

Australia to Make Secret Paternity Testing Illegal

Adam · 22 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Bad News for fathers in Australia - it appears that secret paternity testing is to become a criminal offence. Yep, that's right: if you're a man who wants to know, you'll soon be a criminal unless you do it "their way". What is their way? According to this article, the rumored recommendations are: "FORCE fathers to get the mother's consent to do a test. MAKE it illegal to steal DNA for a test. ORDER mandatory counselling for families seeking a test. IMPOSE a code of practice for private testing laboratories." I guess it's like the old saying, the truth will set you free, I imagine that's why they want to keep the nearest man ignorant?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/22/013255.shtml

Sex-Ploytation Moves to a New Web Site

Scott · 23 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The web site for Matthew Fitzgerald's book Sex-Ploytation has changed, and the new site can be found here. The book is an interesting continuation/variation of Esther Vilar's The Manipulated Man, so if you enjoyed that book, be sure to check out this one.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/23/0434220.shtml

Scott Erickson Arrested for Domestic Violence After Being Bit

Scott · 23 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

bledso submitted this ESPN story and writes "Why is this man being arrested? Why is his girlfriend going free? If the roles had been reversed and he was throwing things in the apartment and refusing to leave, he would likely be arrested on some sort of "presenting a physical threat" charge. What if she were a large woman or trained in the martial arts and was able to remove him from the apartment as he bit her, then drag him to the elevator, and send him to the lobby? Would she not be cheered as a "strong woman"? Yet the man is arrested and virtually convicted in the press, and therefore, by much of the public. Men deserve the right to defend themselves and their environment just as much as women do, it's time we actually see that reflected in both law enforcement and the media."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/23/0458259.shtml

Thompson and Sacks Discuss Child Support Enforcement Act

Scott · 23 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Child Support Enforcement Act, introduced last week by House Policy Chairman Christopher Cox (R-CA) and Senator Barbara Boxer (D-CA), is the latest salvo in the war against "deadbeat dads." Thompson and Sacks will explain how the bill lies upon a foundation of illusions, and will discuss their upcoming column "Child Support Enforcement Act Substitutes Political Grandstanding for Leadership" on their MND radio show. The show will air tonight (7/23/02) at 6PM PST and repeat hourly for 24 hours. Previous shows are archived and available. To listen, or for more information, click here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/23/1718249.shtml

NH Men's Commission Update

Scott · 24 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I thought I would give everyone an update on the "status" of the New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men. While the commission will consist of seven members, with one spot reserved for a member from the NH University system, there have been a lot of applicants for the commission (possibly two dozen or so). The names of those nominated by Governor Shaheen will be released on August 14, at which time the governor's council will invite feedback from the public on the nominees. The final approval of the commission nominees will take place two or more weeks later. The public feedback period will be a critical time when NH residents can show support for candidates they believe are pro-male, and discourage the appointment of those who may be applying in order to sabotage the commission's goals.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/23/1645242.shtml

It's So Much Fun, When Women Commit Rape

Thomas · 24 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This one sure bugged me.

More than one woman-journalist thinks statutory rape is acceptable or even wonderful, when women commit it against boys. In this review of Tadpole, entertainment writer, Christy Lemire, pays lips service to equality and opposition to the sexual abuse of male children by saying, "Somehow — and admittedly, this sounds hypocritical — it's OK when Diane's flirty friends slip their business cards to Oscar over afternoon tea." After that, though, she goes on to say, "two old friends have a brief heart-to-heart in Central Park about the morality of the affair — then the movie returns to laughing about it." She also says, "Diane (Bebe Neuwirth), recognizes something intriguing about this young man, and has no qualms about seducing him when he's had too much to drink." And Ms. Lemire describes the movie as, "a pleasant surprise — it's funny and sharp, sweet and poignant."

Perhaps we should contact Bebe Neuwirth to let her know how cute and wonderful it is when she rapes drunk boys. We might also contact the article's author, Christy Lemire, to let her know that, as long as she pays lip service to recognizing the hypocrisy, the raping of boys by women really is "funny and sharp, sweet and poignant."

Someone correct me if I'm wrong, but I think the authorities in Nazi Germany often turned their backs, when German gentiles raped Jews.Source: Yahoo! News

Title: At the Movies: 'Tadpole'

Author: Christy Lemire, AP Entertainment Writer

Date: July 18, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/24/199228.shtml

"Militant Men" Threatened

Scott · 25 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

bernee writes "In the Australian State of Victoria, men who have had the not uncommon run in with the family Court and have lost access to their children, homes etc and have their very livelihood threatened by Child Support Agencies have formed a group called "Blackshirts." This group engages in 'guerilla' tactics to get their message across. They have been threatened with prosecution by the government if they don't desist in their protests. The full story and other links are here. There is also a facility for feedback on the articles and topic."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/25/055249.shtml

Bulimia Now an Excuse for Shooting Boyfriends

Scott · 25 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This article from New Hampshire's Union Leader shocked me. It's about a woman who emptied a revolver at her boyfriend, hitting him once in the leg, and who in the end received a suspended sentence. The defense's main strategy was to claim that her condition of bulimia caused mental instability. I don't think that changes the fact she would have killed this guy if she had experience with aiming handguns. But we definitely have to blame the man in this case too, who pleaded, "That woman has been punished enough. . .Let her go free" to the judge. Sheesh.
Source: The Union Leader [newspaper]

Title: Woman escapes prison for boyfriend's shooting

Author: Nancy Meersman

Date: July 25, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/25/1540259.shtml

An All Too Common Story

Scott · 25 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Ronn submitted Henry Makow's latest article, NWO Tyranny: Men are Being Kicked in the Teeth, which outlines the all too common story of a man who begins to struggle being a provider for his family, whose wife gets fed up with him, brings false accusations against him, and divorces him and takes his children away. With so many men seeing this fate, it's frustrating that so few will heed the warning before it's too late. But this story must be told again and again until people listen.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/25/1559224.shtml

Is the Progressive insurance Ad Gone?

Scott · 26 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Mark Thundercloud. writes "I haven't seen the anti-male Progressive Insurance commercial in about a week or so. Does anybody know whether that abominbale thing has been taken off the air, or not? Did we win?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/26/1122222.shtml

"Blackshirts" Support Fascism

Scott · 26 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Another story in Australia's The Age offers more information about the "blackshirts," a group of men who are aggressively protesting they way they are treated by the family court system by publicly shaming vindictive ex-wives and using other controversial methods, which some claim is harassment. According to a spokesman for the group, the blackshirts support fascism, and claim that the Nazi's weren't fascists. To me, this is a big disappointment, and I hope the public does not make an association with the men's movement and this radical group.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/26/1619244.shtml

Anthology of Men's Thoughts Published: It's a Dick Thing

Scott · 26 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Don Koberg sent us a press release about a new compilation of men's writings, entitled It's a Dick Thing: Secret Thoughts of Silent Men. The book was contributed to by thirty-three men and covers all kinds of perspectives related to maleness. "When silent men speak to confess, advise, laugh, question, brag a bit, and repair, anything is possible. The silence of the male is herewith broken." The press release is downloadable in MS Word format.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/26/1142242.shtml

Man Killed; Woman Set Free on 30k Bail

Scott · 27 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Ray writes "Now, from MND, another sensational story of domestic violence from the category of: "I don't need no stinking steam roller." A man is run over, flat as a pancake, dead as a doornail and this is no "Road Runner" cartoon. Now, here's the shocker: $30,000.00 [bail] and she's back out on the street. I guess when a woman kills her husband she's no longer a threat to society, since in this case, the only one she had to kill is now laid out on the slab. Way to go Ms. you really showed that cheating man. We can't wait to see the rest of the circus." The woman has been charged with first degree murder. His daughter watched him die. $30k bail?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/27/1713206.shtml

Male Mortality Bigger Problem than Cancer

Scott · 27 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Raindrop writes "If you could make male mortality rates the same as female rates, you would do more good than curing cancer.', according to a New Scientist report on male mortality rates." What a great sound bite - I'd highly recommend using that one with politicians. The study spanned 20 countries again confirms the urgency of the "death gap" issue. Source: New Scientist [magazine]

Title: Men die young - even if old

Author: Betsy Mason

Date: July 25, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/27/2141251.shtml

Attack on Boys/Men in Academia

Scott · 28 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Josh writes "This story focuses on the attack on boys in Academia, exposing the lies about girls being shortchanged, the elimination of recess from public schools, and other such things." I believe we may have linked to a similar story recently from the Massachusetts News, but even if so, the information this article provides could be very useful in educating people on men's rights issues that boys and young men face.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/27/2145202.shtml

MHA Special Report on Male Longevity

Scott · 28 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Men's Health America released a special report on male longevity (or the lack thereof) which can be read here. Some interesting facts from the report: " The World Health Report, published every year by the World Health Organization (WHO), is the most authoritative source of information on life expectancy and mortality patterns in every country around the world...The rate of suicide is almost universally higher among men compared to women by an aggregate ratio of 3.5 to 1... The lifespan gender gap exists in almost every country in the world. The disparity ranges from 3.8 years in Israel to a disturbing 15.4 years in the Russian Federation."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/28/0345240.shtml

Review of What Men Know That Women Don't

Adam · 28 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Here's a review of Rich Zubaty's book What Men Know That Women Don't and it's well worth reading. While the reviewer writes from a Christian viewpoint, don't let that put you off, as the review gives a in-depth look at Zubaty's writings far more than most. I think I'll leave at that and let you judge for yourself.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/28/0219232.shtml

Education Trends Harming Men

Adam · 28 July 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Mike Medved has written an article about the problems men and boys have when it comes to education in America. Of course, this is a western problem, but there's nothing wrong with localizing your efforts. Anyway, he's quite aware of the double standards here, and in my opinion takes a hard line stance in defense of the nearest man, which is much needed.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/07/28/0221216.shtml

Data Restored; MANN Back to Normal (I Hope!)

Scott · 3 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Once again Mensactivism.org has overcome another technical glitch, and it appears that I was able to utilize partial backups to recover data up until the night of the crash. If anything is acting odd, let me know. For now, I'm just glad things appear to be working at all! :)

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/03/0413233.shtml

Attorneys Petition American Bar Association President

Scott · 3 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc writes "This is a petition some of us sent to Robert Hirshon, president of the American Bar Asociation, about their misleading info on male victims. I've been telling them about this for almost two years now and they still aren't doing anything. If you have a moment you may want to write to Robert Hirshon at rhirshon@dwmlaw.com and explain why the ABA should be more fair to male victims." Read More below to view the petition.
July 27, 2002

Robert Hirshon, President American Bar Association
rhirshon@dwmlaw.com

Re: ABA's Misinformation About Male Domestic Violence Victims

Dear Mr. Hirshon:

We are writing to express concern that the ABA may be misleading the public with outdated, inaccurate information about male domestic violence victims.

The ABA website states that males account for only 5-10% of domestic violence victims. The Department of Justice (DOJ) figures that it cites, however, are dated 1994. (http://www.abanet.org/domviol/stats.html.)

More recent DOJ figures show that: "Approximately 1.5 million women and 834,732 men are raped and/or physically assaulted by an intimate partner annually in the United States." (http://www.ncjrs.org/txtfiles1/nij/181867.txt.) That makes men 39% of victims, not 5-10%.

Dr. Martin Fiebert of California State University compiled 130 studies showing that both sexes initiate the violence at about equal rates. (http://www.csulb.edu/~mfiebert/assault.htm.) "Contrary to the claim that women only hit in self-defense, we found that women were as likely to initiate the violence as were men," explains leading expert Richard Gelles in his 1999 article, "The Missing Persons of Domestic Violence: Male Victims."

Male victims rarely seek help due to social stigmas and a lack of outreach to them. As a result the violence often escalates. Part of getting men to seek help involves helping them realize they are not alone. The misinformation on your website is therefore of particular concern to us.

We would hope that the ABA's domestic violence committee is not purposefully selecting outdated sources in order to lower the number of male victims. In any case, we wish to bring this to your attention and we kindly ask that you correct it. Thank you.

Marc Angelucci, Esq.
Los Angeles, CA
Angelucci2000@alumni.law.ucla.edu

Steven Imparl, Esq.
Chicago, IL
SImparl@aol.com

Professor John Rooney, J.D.
Cooley Law School
Lansing, MI
rooneyj@cooley.edu

J. Steven Svoboda, Esq.
Berkeley, CA
arc@post.harvard.edu

Geoff Graybill, Esq.
Sacramento, CA
GeoffG50@aol.com

Mike Oddenino, Esq.
Los Angeles, CA
oddlaw@pacbell.net

David R. Burroughs
ABA Student Member
North East, MD
dburroughs@zoominternet.net

Professor Stephen Baskerville, Ph.D.
Howard University
Washington, D.C.
baskerville@starpower.net

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/03/1848226.shtml

Questioning the Public Funding of Women's Studies Programs

Scott · 4 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Ray writes "This article is linked through ifeminists.com to the IWF, and is as relevant to issues affecting men as any all-male topic. Should taxpayer dollars be used to fund college level Women's Studies programs that are used to support an anti-male/radical feminist agenda? Are the distortions taught in the Women's Studies programs actually traumatizing otherwise healthy females more than the fallacy they preach of; ie man as patriarchal oppressor? It appears this article from the Independent Women's Forum speaks volumes about where the vitriolic rhetoric against men in America is spawned, hatched, and nurtured, but you be the judge."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/04/1930238.shtml

New Study Again Confirms Egalitarian Nature of DV

Scott · 5 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

A new study has been done on domestic violence which focuses on DV among college students. Included among the study's authors is Dr. Murray Straus, and the University of New Hampshire was one of the schools where data samples were taken. The results came out as all of the Sociological studies have shown; that assaults are committed by women and men at about equal rates. In some cases, women were even more likely to be the aggressor than men. Foster's Daily Democrat reports on the study here. Update: Foster's has printed another story on the study today. Second Update: The Concord Monitor printed a must-read article on the study, too. Source: Foster's Daily Democrat [newspaper]

Title: UNH study: Men, women equally violent with partners

Author: Unknown [AP article]

Date: July 30, 2002

Source: Foster's Daily Democrat [newspaper]
Title: UNH study find college women often aggressors

Author: Unknown [AP article]

Date: August 5, 2002

Source: The Concord Monitor [newspaper]
Title: Women steamed over violence study

Author: Kristina Eddy

Date: August 5, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/05/0423232.shtml

What is the Men's Movement? and Updates on MSNHatesMen

Scott · 6 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "I saw a need for a brief overview of the issues, and it's up at the DLJ website here." Raymond Cuttill also writes "MSNHatesMen is sort of running. Firstly it is not on MSNHatesMen.com as the site has moved, but the upload etc. won't be working for a while, so it's being hosted at menshour.com for the time being. So far only 1 ecard is available. It's "Women are always whining...". It isn't as fancy as the MSN one but it makes it's point. To send an ecard go to this link. As the site says, it's not about hating women, it's about challenging the hating of men. Sauce for the gander."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/06/0349258.shtml

"Birds of Prey" - Another Male Bashing (Literally) TV Series

Scott · 7 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Thundercloud writes "Here is yet another "Heads-up."
After having to endure the new show "SHE-SPIES" (and many others like it), yet another "girls beat-up the guys" (and love it) series has been spotted on my radar. This one is called "BIRDS OF PREY." It is based on the DC Comics characters "Black canary" and "Oracle." It's to debut this fall (September, I think). Once more the previews show, what else, women beating the holy hell out of men (and my guess is the men will probably get masochistic pleasure from it, as in MOST of these types of TV shows and movies). Apparently abusing men sells (to a mostly female audience)."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/07/0513255.shtml

CA Paternity Justice Act - AB2240

Scott · 7 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "On Tuesday, August 6, 2002 the California Senate Committee of Judiciary held a hearing on AB2240. Several men's activist groups appeared, including NCFC, and NCFM, LA. Monday, they lobbied the CA Senate in favor of AB2240, in an effort to discern the arguments presented by the opposition. The effort is directed at moving the bill out of committee onto the floor. As usual, the opposition is forwarding frivolous arguments, trying to dilute the bill, or simply stop it in committee. Currently, the bill has been completely feminized and yet they are still trying to oppose it. The lobbying efforts are aimed at trying to get amendments that eliminate absolute judicial discretion, hold women responsible for paternity fraud instead of rewarding them with money from the richest man, modifications to the declaration of paternity form so that women can choose to declare that they require paternity testing, and elimination of the three-year time limit while moving the bill out of committee. Therefore, your letters in support of the bill are appreciated. To read the bill go to "Bill Information" and enter AB2240. To send an email to the committee go the following link: CA Senate Committee of Judiciary"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/07/0516238.shtml

CA Gov. Davis Denies Early Parole to Two Female Murderers

Scott · 7 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "Governor Davis of California denied early parole to two predatory females who killed their boyfriend and husband respectively and who of course used the 'abuse excuse' to get public and political sympathy. This is very encouraging, since the paroles were considered foregone conclusions by the feminist lobbyists who were ram-rodding these two paroles through. If you live in California, give Governor Davis an e-mail pat on the back for having integrity and doing the right thing. Good for you Governor Davis!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/07/0519246.shtml

Stanford Professor Blames Child Abuse/Abductions on Men

Brad · 7 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "In the Aug. 5 edition of the San Francisco Chronicle, Carol Delaney, an associate professor at Stanford, literally blames all men for recent crimes against children." Contact information and other letters may be found at the Desert Light Journal. Update: Men's News Daily includes an interesting exchange between men's activists and the office of the Provost at Stanford - check it out.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/07/1318242.shtml

UK Addresses the Father/Son/Education Relationship

Brad · 8 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Robex writes "Here is a start in the UK at addressing the chronic underperformance of boys at school in the UK."

> The government hopes that by allowing fathers to take more time off work to spend educational time with their sons, boys' performance at school may improve. The scheme is being targeted at boys rather than girls as boys are more likely to underachieve at school. In September the fathers will be offered one paid hour to spend with their 11 to 14-year-old sons.

One hour is not much, but it's a start. You can have your say on this at the the BBC website which is running a Talking Point on it."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/07/1328214.shtml

Journalist Suggests Posting the Names of Men Acquitted of Sex Crimes on Internet

Scott · 8 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

fritzc77 writes "This CNN story by Julie Hilden now suggests putting the names the men ACQUITTED, or simply accused of sex crimes, on the internet. Nowhere in the article does it seem to mention that such men might be innocent." Thanks also to John Knouten for submitting this story.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/08/1857242.shtml

McElroy Writes About Circumcision

Scott · 9 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy's recent column delved into the topic of male circumcision, and the gender double standards we have as a culture regarding genital mutilation. She gives a basic overview of the arguments about it and provides many links to groups opposing the practice, and briefly discusses the growing legal debate on the legitimacy of infant circumcision of males. This is an issue that received surprisingly little attention from individualist and equity feminists.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/08/2231228.shtml

Gender Quotas in Business

Brad · 9 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The BBC News reports on a recent proposal in Norway that "would compel both state owned and listed private companies to appoint women to at least 40% of boardroom places could become law by 2005."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/08/2240217.shtml

Two New Sacks/Thompson Articles - CSEA and Choice for Men

Scott · 9 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

We're a bit behind in posting the two most recent articles by the powerhouse duo Glenn Sacks and Dianna Thompson. In case you missed them, here's a summary. In this article, Sacks and Thompson explain how the Child Support Enforcement Act is truly an act of "political grandstanding," using "dead beat dads" as scapegoats for oppressive new legislation. Included with their criticism of the bill are constructive suggestions Sacks and Thompson have for improving the system, so that children do receive needed financial support from non-paying parents. The second article is on the subject of male reproductive rights, or as I like to say, the lack thereof. The double standards here of course are also devastating for men, who have no say in the abortion decision or legal recourse when tricked into paternity. A recent PA court case where a father requested the ability to stop an abortion is the starting point for this article.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/09/0315259.shtml

Deadbeat Moms

Brad · 9 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Agraitear points out a recent FoxNews article.

> "Single dads are sick and tired of being labeled "deadbeats" when it comes to paying child support. And data suggest they have good reason to be upset.
>
> The percentage of "deadbeat" moms is actually higher than that of dads who won't pay, even though mothers are more consistently awarded custody of children by the courts."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/09/1457228.shtml

TN Child Support Guidelines Ruled Unconstitutional

Scott · 10 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

In Tennessee, a state appeals court has ruled that the current child support guidelines are unconstitutional:

> "The three-judge panel said the state failed to give a Memphis father credit for the expenses of raising two children in his marriage when it decided how much he should pay to support a third child born of a previous liaison. The state contended offspring who were not part of a child support order could not be counted. The appeals court panel said that violated the children's constitutional rights of equal protection."

Be sure to check out the article, since it explains the issue being debated in much better detail. The ruling is great news for fathers who were being forced to support some children at the expense of others. Source: The Tennessean [newspaper]

Title: Guide to figure child support is ruled unconstitutional

Author: Duncan Mansfield

Date: August 10, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/10/2139229.shtml

New Updates to MaleDepression.com

Scott · 12 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve Imparl's web site devoted to depression in men has received some new material recently worth noting. Included in the updates are a radio interview about depression, several new articles and commentary, a mother's story about her son's suicide, and more. The site also has a moderated bulletin board and an e-mail list for receiving update announcements to the site.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/12/0240201.shtml

Sacks: Erickson's Arrest an Example of Men "Guilty Until Proven Innocent" in DV

Scott · 12 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks' latest article takes the example of baseball pitcher Scott Erickson's recent arrest as an opportunity to expose the "guilty until proven innocent" approach for men used by police during domestic calls. Sacks then gives an overview of how this came to be, including the way police are trained by DV advocates who use the "95%" myth and other propaganda to influence arrest statistics. The end result is that men are unwilling to report DV in fear that they will be arrested, and can't defend themselves for the same reason. This article appeared in the Los Angeles Daily Journal and the San Francisco Daily Journal.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/12/1347227.shtml

Progressive "Progresses" with Anti-male TV Ad

Scott · 12 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Thundercloud writes "It's baaaaaack! After laying low for about a month, Progressive Insurance has begun re-airing their extremely anti-male commercial, in which a vindictive ex-wife uses Progressive's on-line voodoo doll to castrate her ex-husband with a pair of pliers. Apparently, Progressive believed if they simply took the ad off temporarily and then put it back on at a later date, no one would notice! Well, I've noticed!
Despite MANY letters of protest, these misandrists have chosen to ignore present and potential customers simply because they feel the need to put forth an anti-male, political message. It seems presenting hate speech is more important to them than loyal customers. I say we attack them once again, this time more forcefully. Email them, spam them, contact the networks that run this abomination of an ad. Whatever it takes to make Progressive Insurance comply."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/12/1338232.shtml

Cathy Young on Men's Reproductive Rights

Scott · 12 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Cathy Young wrote one of the most forthright articles I've seen from her to date on the Choice for Men issue. In this Boston Globe article, Young clearly outlines the double standard men have to deal with in reproduction, and agrees that in normal circumstances, men should have the right to be notified of an abortion and have legal resource to avoid paternity fraud. Young is doubtful that the C4M movement will succeed in this age, but recent events show that paternity fraud is finally becoming an issue that politicians are aware of. Source: The Boston Globe [newspaper]

Title: Reproductive rights for men?

Author: Cathy Young

Date: August 12, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/12/1934220.shtml

A Celebration of Male Bashing: MaleBasher.com

Scott · 13 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The web site is www.malebasher.com. Need I say more? Update: I've fixed the link, sorry about that.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/13/0252208.shtml

Update on NH Men's Commission: The Delays Continue...

Scott · 13 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I found out just recently that the New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men's applicant list, which was due to be publicly released on Wednesday, is being pushed back and will not be released until Aug. 28. The public input period would then open and the governor's council would make the final vote on Sept. 12. The delays are frustrating, but there is nothing that can be done other than to wait and see.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/13/1458237.shtml

McElroy Opposes CEDAW

Scott · 13 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Ouzinki submitted Wendy McElroy's latest FoxNews column where she voices her opposition to CEDAW, and writes "As a frightening follow-up, consider this line from the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW): .."It affirms women's rights to acquire, change or retain their nationality and the nationality of their children".. What a wonderful recipe - grab the kids, leave the country, and change their nationality. Not much chance of a father regaining custody of a child who's a foreign national, is there? I'm a grand father six times over, and still married, more than a third of a century to the same woman. In other words, I'm probably not going to be personally affected; but this scares the Hell out of me anyway! Time for a congressional letter/email writing deluge perhaps?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/13/1943239.shtml

MANN Chat: Electing Male-Friendly Politicians

Scott · 14 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

It is with great pleasure and gratitude that I'd like to announce that the MANN on-line chats will resume, hosted by both Steve Imparl and Scott Haltzman. The next chat will be held this Wednesday night, starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the usual location. However, there will be discussion on possibly moving the regular day, so if you'd like the chats to be on a different night, feel free to post a comment on that. The topic for this chat will be electing male-friendly politicians in this fall's elections. Do you know of some candidates in your state or region that would be good or not-so-good choices? Join the chat and let others know about it!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/13/2035231.shtml

AB2240 Moves Out of Committee

Scott · 14 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "It is with pleasure that I'm announcing that AB2240 has moved out of the CA Judiciary Committee and will hit the Finance Committee next week. The primary source of opposition came from two opponents. They were Senator Keuhl and CA NOW. I was stunned that Keuhl actually resorted to arguments similar to arguments used to institutionally discriminate against women 100 years ago. Basically, she stated that she agreed that it is unfair for men to be required to care for another man's children. Then she claimed that it was justified to intentionally harm the man and his biological children because it protects the interest of a single child. Further, she specifically stated on the record that she didn't care about the father's biological children in a paternity fraud matters. She was only interested in the single child in question. I was also stunned (IMHO) that Keuhl was implying that any man could be the father of a fatherless child and that biology doesn't matter. Yea, sure Keuhl...let's have [Bill] Gates be the father of all children where the biological father is unknown because he is rich! In addition, CA NOW specifically stated that they oppose the Paternity Justice Act in ANY FORM! They literally implied (IMHO) that they don't support providing a man that is a victim of paternity fraud with any remedy at law no matter how damaging it is to the biological children of a father or a man. I'll be ordering the transcripts of the testimony because it illustrates the literal bigotry of the opposition. Then we'll get the exact quotes posted for the whole world to view the bigotry of CA NOW and Senator Keuhl. Kudos goes to NCFM, LA for their tireless lobbying efforts of the committee!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/14/0334219.shtml

Possible Loophole in Paternity Law?

Scott · 14 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

incredibletulkas writes "I believe that there is a viable loophole in paternity law to ensure fairness in men's reproductive rights; this is the "Last Clear Chance" doctrine of common law, which provides that, regardless of who was at fault, the person who had the last clear chance to prevent in incident from occurring is ultimately responsible if they fail to do so.
Since, under current law, a woman obviously has the last clear chance to prevent a pregnancy from coming to term (i.e. she can prevent it later than the man can), then she is wholly responsible for the outcome. Likewise, since the right to life of the unborn is considered a religious issue only, then under the First Amendment the law is precluded from permitting one person's religious preferences from being forced upon another person, which would be the case if a woman used her religious-based refusal to obtain an abortion to force the man to pay for her resulting child.
Therefore, if a man informs the woman outright that he does not wish to participate in any pregnancy at a time of the pregnancy when abortion is legal, then the woman, by act of omission, is wholly responsible for the ensuing child.
I am not a lawyer, but this seems like a reasonable interpretation of existing law, and I invite any legal persons to scrutinize it." I thought this was an insightful idea, and wonder if it could work. Comments from the legal community are especially welcome.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/14/1618238.shtml

Peripheral Parenting Presumption

Brad · 15 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "Kathleen Parker discusses the recent case of the father who went to court to demand his right to be a father. She says that if women can choose abortion without input from the father then they should not be able to demand child support. "

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/15/1334209.shtml

Murray Straus on the Radio

Scott · 15 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dr. Murray Straus was featured on NH Public Radio's program The Exchange, and the archive of the program can be found on this page. During the interview, Straus makes it clear that he believes including women's violence in DV advocacy is needed today, and that separate shelters and services for men and women are a good idea. He also states that women are seven times more likely to be injured in DV scenarios than men, which I'm sure is going to be controversial among men's activists. Overall I think he did very well in debating Scott Hampton, a very vocal and articulate women's advocate, and the callers (generally) did not devolve into a victimhood contest.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/15/1425206.shtml

Child Custody and the Glass Ceiling for Men

Scott · 16 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Ray writes "I found this article linked through Men's News Daily. Half way through this article I had to scroll back to the top, because I couldn't believe a woman could be saying these things. It's just my opinion, but I think some brother, father, son, or husband in her life may have taken a real hit at the hands of the unjust laws, that unfairly target men in child custody struggles. Fasten your seatbelts please, when this lady writes about the unjust treatment of fathers she turns on the afterburners."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/16/1118213.shtml

Man Fought for Custody Before Ex-wife Killed Son

Scott · 16 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Gonzo Kid submitted this Yahoo! News story about a 5 year-old boy who died after being left in a truck on a hot day by his mother. In addition, the child was allegedly being starved by his mother for the last four months before he died. The father of the boy, who is divorced, expressed anger that he was not given custody of the child during the divorce proceedings. On top of all this, the woman's daughter was taken away after she was accused of beating her. It's a frustrating story.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/16/1834250.shtml

Blackshirts on the Move in Australia

Scott · 19 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Smoking Drive writes "An article in the Sydney Morning Herald (Sydney's premier broadsheet) says that the Blackshirts are now on the move from the state of Victoria, setting up branches in neighbouring NSW. Not only is the article of interest but there is a table of information at the end which is quite male-positive." While Mensactivism.org has no official position on the Blackshirts, we will continue to track news on the group, since their activity is based on the lack of men's and father's rights.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/19/0318215.shtml

New Men's Hour Includes NCFM Anti-NOW Soundtrack

Scott · 19 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "The Men's Hour August programme is out, and is over 3 hours long, including news about August protests in England, and the soundtrack from the NCFM, anti-NOW event on June 21st in St. Paul, Minnesota. The event called "Gender Feminism and the Voice Not Heard: Has America Gone Deaf In One Ear?" It includes Warren Farrell, Trudy W. Schuett, Wendy McElroy, Dianna Thompson and Deborah Watkins. Our next programme will be released on Sunday, 15th September"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/19/0319248.shtml

Original Sponsor of NH Men's Commission Bill Needs Campaign Help

Scott · 19 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Due to recent redistricting, New Hampshire state Rep. David Bickford is faced with a challenging campaign to be re-elected to the NH House this fall, with five new towns added to his district. Rep. Bickford is the original sponsor of HB 587, which passed and will establish a NH Commission on the Status of Men, the first such commission in the country. I know David personally, and have been involved in the activity here in NH and seen him at work. I have never met such a successful politician who was so focused on promoting men's rights, and I can say without a doubt that further legislative efforts in NH are heavily, if not fully, dependent on him being re-elected. He is in dire need of donations for signs and local efforts to help promote his re-election. If you are willing to help David in any way, please e-mail him directly at david1@worldpath.net. If there ever were a time that I would ask the Mensactivism.org community to do me a personal favor, it would be to help David out. He knows our issues, he's articulate and politically adept, and we need this guy, not only in NH but as an effort to show how men's activism can be successful in politics. Update: David is allowing me to include his address, which is in the Read More section below.If you'd like to send Rep. Bickford a donation, you can make a check out to Rep. Dave A. Bickford and send it to:

Rep. David A. Bickford

183 Brackett Road

New Durham, NH 03855

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/17/1537242.shtml

DesertLight Journal Suspended

Thomas · 19 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy Schuett, one of the guiding stars of the men's movement, has announced the temporary suspension of The DesertLight Journal and much of her other activism. She explains that she must do this for personal reasons that involve serious land use issues. Trudy is one of the leaders of the men's movement, and we all owe her a great deal. Please let her know of your gratitude for all she's done. Hopefully for all of us, especially Trudy, this situation will be resolved soon.Source: DesertLight Journal

Author: Trudy Schuett

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/19/1731222.shtml

"Deadbeat Dad" Gets Vasectomy as Part of Plea Agreement

Scott · 20 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

scottAsinclair writes sent in this article from the Nando Times, about a man who fell behind $1,000 in child support. In order to try to get leniency from the court, the man underwent a vasectomy. It is not clear whether the man received any direct order by the court to get the vasectomy, but he apparently was under the impression that this would help his case. scotAsinclair writes, "I couldn't believe this. This is like China."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/20/1416258.shtml

MANN Chat: Competition in the Men's Movement

Scott · 21 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve Imparl writes "I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night, starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the usual location. The topic for this chat will be "Competition in the Men's Movement: Traditional Ally in Disguise?" Sometimes, men's activism projects can seem like games of one-upmanship. We try to outdo our fellow activists. We want our Web site, lobbying campaign, discussion group, or protest to be the biggest, best, or most effective. Getting cooperation can be difficult. Are these issues necessarily problems? Is there a place in men's activism for healthy--and even friendly--competition? Join the chat and let others know about it!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/21/1419245.shtml

The War On Fathers

Scott · 23 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Ray writes "This news story by Roger F. Gay at Men's News Daily, expounds on the alleged crimes of a man who became delinquent in his child support. He has been demonized by law enforcement and the media for his violent attempts to retain his freedom. The more troubling question that no mainstream journalist is asking is, "What role did an out of control child support system play in driving this man beyond the bounds of all reasonable constraints?" I find myself wondering, "What was this man like before his contact with the CSS?" More frightening still, we must ask, "How many more of these men are even now being manufactured by the current (FATHER UNFRIENDLY) legal system in America and the Western world?""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/23/1324255.shtml

The Myth of the Oppressed Japanese Woman

Adam · 23 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I've found a book excerpt you'll be interested in, it's taken from Not Guilty — In Defence of the Modern Man written by David Thomas, and in it he gives us a look at Japan which is according to many feminists "an un-deniable patriarchy" however, the rhetoric does not match the reality (why ain't that surprising?) and it appears to be quite the opposite, which makes it all the more worth reading.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/23/0016236.shtml

Personal Stories of Abuse Needed for New Book

Scott · 23 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dr. Mic Hunter, author of Abused Boys: The Neglected Victims Of Sexual Abuse, is seeking the true stories of men and women who were sexually assaulted while in the military, either in combat or from comrades. He also seeks stories of hazing and sexual harassment of military personnel by other military personnel. These will be included in a book on sexual abuse in the military. He would also like to hear from treatment professionals who are interested in contributing one or more chapters on these topics. Authors may remain anonymous or use their actual names. Contributors will be required to sign a release granting publication rights. Those who are interested can contact Dr. Hunter at MHunt689@aol.com.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/23/1559248.shtml

No More Mr. Nice Guy!

Adam · 24 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

That's what Robert Glover author of No More Mr. Nice Guy! has to say about what the mindset men should have. His work involves battling what he calls "Nice Guy Syndrome." or as he puts it: "A Nice Guy is a man who has been conditioned by family and society to believe that he has to be good in order to be loved." There is much more to his writings than that, so click this link to find out more.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/23/0020218.shtml

Fathers Deserve Notification of Pending Adoptions

Scott · 24 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks and Dianna Thompson co-authored an article related to father's rights with regard to adoptions. They discuss a new Florida law that would require mothers to take out newspaper ads to inform absent fathers of the decision to give up their child for adoption, to allow the father the opportunity to raise the child himself. While opponents of the law say that it humiliates mothers, Sacks and Thompson don't deny this fact but instead compare it to the importance of a father's right to raise his child.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/23/1614206.shtml

Circumcision Video Demonstrates Barbaric Nature of Procedure

Scott · 24 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Robex writes "I was sent a link to a bona fide medical infant circumcision. It's here. Ignore the rest of the site - it requires a particular taste for the macabre/gory/tasteless.

However, you will see that on the listsing dated (2002-08-22), there is a file called circumcision.asf.

I don't want to shock or offend over this topic, but after seeing this video, I'm shocked beyond belief. In fact, I've found it very difficult to concentrate today after seeing it. I would go as far as to say that I'm actually nauseated each time I think about it.

I do feel pretty strongly about this mutilation without consent - and I do realise more than ever that it is all about consent after seeing this." Please do NOT watch the video if you are sensitive to this issue. I would recommend it instead to people who have never really felt circumcision was a big deal and don't quite understand the importance of the issue. This video will drive home that point.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/24/1519223.shtml

admin@mensactivism.org is Working Again

Scott · 24 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

To my complete shock, the admin@mensactivism.org alias was never set up to forward to my account after the system crash in early August. I am just now sorting through those messages, which weren't bounced but sat in a mailbox that I had never bothered to look at. To all the people who have been trying to contact me via that address, I sincerely apologize for not getting back to you. I hope to get through all of the e-mails this weekend.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/24/1547241.shtml

Bumper Sticker Policy Change

Scott · 24 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

After catching up on the admin@mensactivism.org messages, I now see that an attempt is being made to flood MANN with bumper sticker requests, many which are obviously bogus. It is clear from the 30+ requests for free stickers each day starting around August 14 that there is a concerted effort being made to have me send stickers at my expense to people who will not be displaying them. It's likely that many of the requests are being made to random addresses, particularly overseas, to incur the greatest expense to me. Due to this problem, which I've been aware of the possibility of for some time, I must now discontinue our policy of sending the stickers at no cost. I will look into a reasonable pricing rate for the stickers, one for domsetic requests and one for international ones, and payment will only be accepted from valid PayPal accounts. I guess it was fun while it lasted... Update: The new bumper sticker prices and requirements have been updated. Click here for more info.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/24/1615205.shtml

PA Legislative Effort for Presumptive Joint Custody

Scott · 25 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

A new bill in the Pennsylvania legislature, Senate Bill 1276, would mandate joint physical and legal custody to divorcing parents by default. A web site has been set up in support of the bill, and if you're a PA resident, you may certainly want to get involved in this effort to help the cause of father's rights.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/25/1833203.shtml

Dish Network Ad Literally "Bashes" Man

Scott · 26 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

equalitarian62 writes "A commercial for Dish Network shows a man and his wife at a swimming pool. The man reads the newspaper while a woman in a bikini bends over in front of him. The man doesn't see this, and says "Wow," presumably due to a Dish Network ad in the paper. The wife, thinking he's referring to the woman in the bikini, strikes him in the jaw. I'm sure that the ad was meant to be humorous. It wasn't for me." Thanks also to Thundercloud for submitting news of this ad. The web site for Dish Network is here and they have a feedback form on this page. This is certainly deserving of some feedback.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/26/1354252.shtml

September Is Prostate Cancer Awareness Month

Scott · 26 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "I just got this reminder in my e-mail and thought I would pass it along. Prostate cancer kills as many men per year as breast cancer kills women. But prostate cancer research gets only a small fraction of the funding that breast cancer research gets. This would be a good political point to pass along to your congress person this election year." The web site is www.pcaw.org, which has tons of links about prostate cancer. Please check it out, and consider doing some prostate cancer advocacy this month.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/25/1548254.shtml

Have The GenFems Given Men Everything?

Thomas · 27 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Though I don't fully share the sanguine mood expressed in this essay, the writer presents an interesting take on the fruits of radical feminism. With technology rendering men and women unnecessary to each other for the purpose of reproduction, radical feminism may ultimately hurt women more than men.

From the seeds of anti-male hate, will men ultimately enjoy a harvest of freedom?Source: Ether Zone

Title: GROWING UP IS NOT REQUIRED: RESEARCHERS, PARENTS, AND FEMINAZIS CONCERNED

Author: Joe Blow

Date: August 28, 2002 issue

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/26/2235205.shtml

Woman Flyer's Suit Rebuffed

Scott · 27 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "According to this story, in April 1996 former U.S. Navy Lt. Carey Dunai Lohrenz was one of the first two women trained to fly the F-14 Tomcat. In 1995, the Center for Military Readiness published a special report entitled "CMR Special Report: Double Standards in Naval Aviation Training." The 20-page report, backed by 104 pages of training records and related documents, exposed a pattern of low scores and major errors in the F-14 training of both women that may have contributed to the tragic death of Kara Hultgreen. Lohrenz was removed from carrier aviation in May 1995, due to flawed flying techniques that her superiors described as "unsafe, undisciplined, and unpredictable." With the help of attorney Susan Barnes, a feminist activist, Lohrenz blamed Elaine Donnelly, former member of the Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services (DACOWITS), for causing her to wash out by publishing the report. The courts responded by dismissing Lohrenz's action "with prejudice," which means (as I understand it) that the plaintiff cannot re-file the suit elsewhere."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/27/1348216.shtml

Men as Sperm Donors v. C4M

Scott · 27 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "This article, A father's role is more than just conceiving a child, presents an interesting and very important variation of the C4M argument. Here a woman is found to have cancer and has some of her eggs harvested. Then she has them fertilized and frozen using the sperm of her lover. In this case the eggs are external to the woman's body so she must share a bilateral choice with the man. Not surprisingly, after the break-up, the man wants the embryos destroyed as a matter of his personal choice. Yet the woman is arguing that she should be considered to be continuously pregnant because she cannot conceive naturally. If this woman wins this legal battle, it will have profound implications in the C4M arena. Clearly, a man must be considered more than a sperm donor in this context and given the right to have a choice over his body. If the woman is granted the right to destroy the man's choice, he may potentially loose his right to be free from burdensome child support obligations. We need to be following this case very closely due to the implications in C4M right. Any ruling from this case will have a major influence on future C4M issues."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/27/1843220.shtml

Male Sexual Abuse Survivor Conference

Scott · 28 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Mic hunter sent in an announcement for the 10th International Conference for Male Survivors of Sexual Abuse, which will be held in Minneapolis from Sept. 18-21 this year. Read More below for details. And if you'd like to help organize the conference, be sure to e-mail Mic for more info.

MaleSurvivor: Helping Boys & Men Recover from Sexual Abuse (formally known as the National Organization on Male Sexual Victimization)

Presents: The 10th International Conference: Recognizing Strength & Resilience

September 18-21, 2003

Radisson Metrodome

Minneapolis, MN

Sponsored by the University of Minnesota School of Social Work

Workshops will be divided into four tracks.

Track 1 - Most Appropriate for Sexual Abuse Survivors. This conference typically draws a number of male survivors who are not professionals as well as other lay individuals who have an interest in this topic. In order to meet their needs, workshops are offered on topics related to healing, sexuality, relationships and other areas that may be relevant to this group. While the conference provides safe rooms and trained professionals who volunteer to be available to any survivor, workshops should be designed as safe experiences that would be unlikely to trigger the emergence of trauma symptoms.

Track 2 - Professional Education and TrainingProfessionals with diverse interests and from many disciplines attend this conference. Social Workers, psychiatrists, psychologists, counselors, massage therapists, homeopaths, art therapists, attorneys, clergy, educators, criminologists, law enforcement officers, rape crisis counselors and volunteers, probation officers, corrections personnel, graduate and undergraduate students have an interest in this topic. Most come to learn new skills that will enable them to work more effectively with male sexual abuse survivors. This track is further divided into beginning, intermediate and advanced levels of training.

Track 3 - Professionals as SurvivorsNOMSV was founded through the efforts of a small group of professionals who worked with male survivors and who were also survivors. There is a sizeable number of professionals who are survivors attending the conference. Being a survivor and working with survivors poses unique challenges. Workshops submitted for this track will address some of the concerns shared by this group.

Track 4 - Research Proposals should attempt to focus on the theme of strength and resilience. Proposals that address the healing diversity of specific cultural groups are highly sought and will receive special consideration

Submission Instructions for Papers & Workshop Proposals (Tracks 1, 2 and 3)

All proposals that focus on any aspect of the sexual abuse of males (adults, adolescents and children including work with perpetrators) will be considered. Sexual abuse is defined as any unwanted, forced or unforced sexual act by a person in a position of power regardless of age or gender difference between the victim and perpetrator. This includes acts such as prison rape, sexual torture, hazing in the military, sports teams and fraternities, verbal and physical sexual assaults by peers, date rape, and all the other experiences more commonly defined as sexual assault. Those proposals that emphasize the conference theme of strength and resilience will receive priority consideration as well as those that address communities of color. Strength is defined as the efforts made to cope with the effects of abuse at the time it occurred as well as the strength necessary to acknowledge the abuse and engage in the process of healing.

Proposals should contain the following information: Name, professional association, degree and contact information of presenter including a brief biographical sketch (maximum of 25 words); names of co-presenters; abstract describing the main focus of the proposal and the track for which it is designed. In addition, a 500 word description of the proposal that includes length of workshop (90 0r 180 minutes); theoretical underpinnings of the proposal; presentation method (didactic or interactive or both); and audio-visual needs.

Submission Instructions of Artwork for Display and Sale

We encourage the submission of all forms of original artwork. This includes visual arts such as drawing, paintings, sculptures, pottery and digital art; literary art such as short stories, poems, slogans and graffiti; music and vocal compositions; theater and dance. The committee will attempt to find a means of displaying all submissions that meet the criteria of originality, adherence to the conference theme, and good taste. Artwork submitted for sale becomes the property of NOMSV and all proceeds from the sale less the cost of transportation by the artist will be retained by NOMSV. The proceeds from this sale will benefit other male survivors through furthering the goals of NOMSV. If you have artwork that you would like to consider placing on display or having performed, send a photo if visual artwork or score and lyrics if music. All written material should be submitted as either a MS Word document or in a rtf or text format. Your submission should indicate if you wish to have your work considered for the silent auction and should also include short narrative of the work describing the artist or author, title of the work, media used to create it and how you believe your work fits the conference theme.

Submission Instruction for Scientific Abstracts (Track 4)

September 18-21, 2002

MaleSurvivor Conference

A unique conference of professionals and others who share a common concern: the elimination of all forms of sexual victimization and who have a special concern for the treatment of male victims and offenders.

National Organization on Male Sexual Victimization

1-800-738-4181

Visit our website at http://www.malesurvivor.org or email us at nomsv@malesurvivor.org.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/28/0142247.shtml

Stanford Prof. Delaney Taken to Task for Blaming Child Abuse on Men

Scott · 28 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Many of you will recall Stanford Assoc. Prof. Carol Delaney's short letter in the San Fransisco Chronicle blaming men for child abductions and abuse. While a flurry of letters was sent in after that letter, both to Stanford and to the Chronicle, Keith Thompson wrote an excellent editorial on the subject that was printed today in the SFC. His discussion of how violence is unfairly seen as masculine and all of the evidence that refutes this notion is excellent. Read it here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/28/2136224.shtml

Julia Child Thanks Her Husband in Reader's Digest

Scott · 29 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dave in California writes "In the September 2002 issue of Reader's Digest, page 69, there is an article by Julia Child. Her husband Paul is her most unforgettable character! Just think of it guys, here is a woman that has the guts to publicly thank a man for being a great guy, and a lover of good food that guided her into her life's work! Why does this happen so rarely? Why is it so difficult for a woman to acknowledge the goodness in a man and the help rendered? Men thank their wives all the time for help rendered, even if the help does not directly affect what he has done. Unfortunately the Reader's Digest web site does not show this article. You will have to see the magazine to read it."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/29/1333230.shtml

Number of Black Men in Prison Exceeds Black Men in College

Scott · 30 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Serge sent in an article from the BBC that discusses the fact that in the U.S, there are currently more black men in prison than there are in college. This disturbing trend is one more reason why men's rights issues cut accross racial boundaries, and if anything, are even more critical for minority men to fight for.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/30/0321218.shtml

How "Fast Track" Laws Can Deny Men Equal Protection

Scott · 30 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "This article from INEWS, which I found on Men's News Daily, must have Clarence Darrow rolling in his grave. The system wants to "fast track" domestic violence cases in order to gain a quick resolve. What's happening is defendants are not gaining the advice they need from their lawyers in what may be their first time in jail. The consequences can be staggering for the uninformed. The article also goes on to show concern for the approx. 24% arrest rate of women in these situations, when (according to women's groups) it should only be about 5%, according to DoJ findings. It also goes on to describe women's advocates who are concerned with women pleading guilty just to get out to their kids. If this isn't looked into, what will eventually happen is men will not receive effective legal counsel but women will. Another budding sign of 'unequal protection under the law'."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/30/0329255.shtml

Violence and Gender Reexamined

Scott · 30 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Prof. Richard Felson from Penn State has just released a book, Violence and Gender Reexamined, published by the American Psychological Association. Some interesting excerpts from the jacket reviews are: "Violence and Gender Reexamined challenges one of western culture's most deeply held assumptions: That violence against women is different from violence against men. In this elegantly argued and well-researched book, author Richard Felson argues that this type of violence is rarely the result of sexism or hatred against women. The author cites research suggesting that the motives for violence against women are similar to the motives for violence against men: To gain control or retribution and to promote or defend self-image. These motives play a role in almost all violence, regardless of gender. Using a comparative method to determine how violence against women differs from violence against men, he illustrates not only that violence against women is less frequent than violence against men but also that our culture and legal system treat it more harshly." This definitely looks like an interesting book!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/30/1449219.shtml

CA Paternity Justice Act (AB2240) Passes in Senate

Scott · 31 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "It is my pleasure to announce that the California Senate has just passed a narrowed version of AB2240. During the hearing there was overwhelming concern expressed that the bill doesn't go far enough. This is excellent because it demonstrates that next year we will have support for an expanded version of the bill. Nevertheless, the opposition is already setting their sights on further damaging the bill so that women can freely and knowingly defraud men in paternity matters. Currently, the bill only addresses those instances where a default paternity judgment was entered by the state. It was amazing to see the opposition try to argue that men should continue to experience discrimination in paternity matters. These feminists that oppose men's rights, literally argue that a woman should be able to determine the father of the child and exclude men from any consideration. In my opinion, the most bigoted arguments came from Kuehl and Bowen. In both cases, they were making men out like they are evil womanizers that get innocent victims pregnant. What they want is for women to be able to assign any man with paternity if the woman believes it is in the best interest of the child. Obviously, these anti-male bigots are very dangerous and seek to further criminalize men. We cannot afford to relax our efforts in California. I have the transcripts on order from the Senate. When they arrive I will transcribe them so that we can educate the public how they argue in favor of institutionalized discrimination against men. I listened to the testimony live today and believe the final vote was 28 in favor and 4 opposed. Yes! Now we need to bombard Governor Davis with letters in support of AB2240." The the Read More section for contact info.

What follows is contact information:

Governor Gray Davis

State Capitol Building

Sacramento, CA 95814

Phone: 916.445.2841

Fax: 916.445.4633

governor@governor.ca.gov

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/31/131235.shtml

MA Governor Candidate Strong on Men's Rights Issues

Scott · 31 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

In Massachusetts, there is a candidate for governor whose main campaign platform is men's rights. Her name is Barbara Johnson, also a well-known attorney in the state, and her web site can be found here. Her campaign will be an interesting one to study to see what kinds of response she gets from the voters. I know there are some fairly active father's rights groups in MA and she could get a significant showing. If you'd like to help her campaign out, please contact her.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/31/163205.shtml

NYC Panel on DV Against Men

Scott · 31 August 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Peter Allemano from the NYC chapter of NCFM informed me that a panel on domestic violence against men is being held by the Queens Women's Network, to listen to the needs of male victims of domestic violence. The QWM sponsors a service center for DV victims and does a lot of outreach programs in the borough of Queens. This is a rare opportunity for both sides to come together on an important dialogue, and they are currently looking for speakers that can participate on the panel. They already are including Stanley Green, also a member of NCFM and a co-founder of Stop Abuse for Everyone. This is possibly the first public discussion on DV against men (straight, bi, or gay) being held in NYC. The forum will be held on October 17, and if you can make it to be a panelist or simply want to see the event in person, please contact Peter at PAllemano@cravath.com. I have to say, the fact that events like this are happening at all is a very encouraging sign.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/08/31/1351255.shtml

Boy-Bashing Stickers at Big Y Grocery Stores

Scott · 1 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

RPB659 writes "Hi Guys,
While I visit this site often, this is my first time posting anything. Remember those offensive stickers that were at Ames Department stores? Well, they're back. This time they are at Big Y grocery stores. For those of you that never heard of them, it's a chain of grocery stores in Western Massachusetts. It's run by the D'Amour family. I'm sure we can get them to remove the stickers in the same manner that Ames did." Excellent idea - but we need more info. Are the stickers being sold on the shelves, or at vending machines like they were at Ames? And can anyone find contact info for Big Y so we can write to them?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/01/189223.shtml

Albuquerque Men's Group

Scott · 1 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Ken Lucero from Albuquerque, NM sends news that a local men's rights group in that area is growing and that they're working to become an official chapter of NCFM by early 2003. They meet every Thursday at 1 PM at the Bennigan's restaurant on Louisiana St. in Albuquerque. If you'd like to attend the meetings, just show up or contact ken at kenrlucero@juno.com for more info.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/01/1815215.shtml

Boy Hating T-shirts Selling in California Chain

Scott · 2 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "Male bashing T-shirts are becoming a big thing again. Unfortunately this latest wave of them is starting in California in the retail chain Hot Topic, which means it will likely sweep eastward without much resistance. Tresa McBee wrote a good article about it for Wendy McElroy's ifeminists. The article is here." Oh boy. First the stickers, now the shirts. And Hot Topic is a national chain - we've got them in malls on the east coast too.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/02/1629226.shtml

Anti-Male Nature of New TV Show "Hidden Hills"?

Scott · 3 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

ahhkaboom writes "This story is a bit different. I was on NBC's website to peruse the new season of PC tv programming, and stumbled across this website of a new show ["Hidden Hills"]. Doesn't the man look like he has his severed penis on a fork, while his empowered businesswoman-wife looks gleeful? Check out the picture below, where the man covers his crotch after being hit in the you-know-where."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/03/0152248.shtml

Men' Health America Speaks Out Against CEDAW

Scott · 3 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

A recent post on the Men's Health America mailing list details the "four fatal flaws of CEDAW," including the fact that it's anti-male and allows for no recognition of gender discrimination against men. As they conclude, " CEDAW is an attempt to impose a radical gender ideology on countries around the world. CEDAW seeks to create a double-standard of rights and responsibilities for men and women. CEDAW represents a serious threat to family stability and gender equality."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/03/0156222.shtml

Labor Day and 9/11: Glass Ceilings and Glass Cellars

Thomas · 3 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Warren Farrell has written an essay on the glass cellar of dangerous employment in which many men find themselves. The time has long since come for society to accept the fact that men's lives have as much value as women's lives.Source: ifeminists.com

Title: Labor Day and 9/11: Glass Ceilings and Glass Cellars

Author: Warren Farrell, Ph.D.

Date: August 27, 2002.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/03/1543248.shtml

Second Annual Conference on Male Victims of Domestic Violence

Scott · 3 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Battered Men's Helpline is sponsoring its second annual conference on domestic violence against men. It will be held in Portland, Maine, on the afternoon of October 19. I attended this event last year and wrote up a summary of it (with photos). I'm definitely planning on attending again this year and I hope if you're in the area you will too. The program last year was excellent and I understand that this year there will be seating for more than 200 people. Help make sure these seats are filled and let others know about this conference, one of the only of its kind, focusing on DV against men. For more info see the BMH announcement of the conference.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/03/0330237.shtml

6-Year Old Boy Suspended for "Sexual Harassment"

Scott · 4 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tummler sent in this article and writes "A tardy six year old boy was suspended for three days from his Canton Ohio elementary school last spring for running to the window one morning and flagging down his schoolbus. Unfortunately for the pure souls of the six year old girls on board, he hadn't gotten his clothes on yet. Unfortunately for him, he's just become a man."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/04/035240.shtml

Ellen Goodman Dismisses The Educational Gender Gap

Scott · 4 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Bledso writes "Ellen Goodman is at it again. She has written an article that dismisses the gender gap in education as "crisis reporting". She states "You don't need a bachelor's degree to pick up a subtext in the crisis reporting: Somehow or other, women are upsetting the natural order of things". The article can be read here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/04/039205.shtml

Call for Ideas: Honouring Men's Advocates

Scott · 4 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "I'd like to suggest an open discussion about honouring those who we feel have contributed to the rights, health and glory of men. I'm sure everyone has their favorites but I would like to name as many names as we can brainstorm to accredit to our cause. It could even be people who contribute to this board or people from the past. It could even be people who did so inadvertently in respect to fairness , fellowship or advocacy of any sort towards men. This could be a time to make an awareness of even the least of the notables. I for one strongly believe in knowledge as the precursor to activism. Once we are armed with knowledge nothing can stop us. It's also good to know who is out there and who is on our side and with the constant growth of the men's movement hopefully this is something we will have to up date all the time."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/04/2027249.shtml

Progressive Wins, We Lose?

Scott · 5 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Thundercloud. writes "I don't know about the rest of the country, but where I live, Progressive Insurance is running their "Man being castrated with pliers, by ex-wife" commercial again. They are running it just as often as before our 'letters of protest', and at all hours of the day. Even when children can see it. It seems misandry wins, yet again. As for me, I'm just gonna go bang my head against the wall."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/05/146256.shtml

Interview Discusses L.A. Lawsuit Over Men's Commission

Scott · 5 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "Dan Curry wanted people to hear this Thompson and Sacks interview (part one, part two) with Marc Angelucci, the leader of the LA chapter of NCFM. On September 3, Angelucci discussed LA/NCFM's groundbreaking civil rights lawsuit and its drive to create a Los Angeles Commission for Men. Angelucci will also discuss his campaign to increase services for male victims of domestic violence in Los Angeles. Angelucci, Thompson, and Sacks will also discuss the California Senate's recent passage of the Paternity Justice Act (AB 2240) and the work and testimony of both the American Coalition for Fathers and Children (ACFC) and LA/NCFM on behalf of the bill. Listeners are urged to write, call, or fax California Governor Gray Davis and urge him to sign this bill.
Davis can be contacted by e-mail at governor@governor.ca.gov, by phone at 916-445-2841, by fax at 916-445-4633, or by regular mail at Governor's Office, Governor Gray Davis, State Capitol Building, Sacramento, CA 95814. Listeners are urged to write "I support AB 2240" in big letters across the top of their letters and faxes. For more information on the National Coalition of Free Men, visit their website at www.ncfm.org."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/05/1411234.shtml

Outline of Men's Issues

Scott · 6 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve Imparl has put together a very comprehensive outline of men's issues (focusing on men's legal rights), in a PDF document that can be downloaded here. This could be a useful reference for many people, so feel free to download it and give Steve your feedback at SImparl@aol.com.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/05/1959235.shtml

Gelles Article Details Repression of DV Research

Scott · 9 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dr. Richard Gelles wrote an important article for men's activists that details some of the ways that research about DV against men has been repressed and attacked over the years. It's an incredible eye-opener, and is definitely must-read material for DV activists. The L.A. chapter of NCFM received permission to reprint it on their web site, and it can be viewed here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/09/0037228.shtml

NFL Helping to Promote Prostate Cancer Awareness

Scott · 9 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

napnip sent me a link to this PDF document which announces that the National Football League is promoting prostate cancer awareness this month, particularly during Prostate Cancer Awareness Week (Sept. 15-21). As David Crawford, the founder of the Prostate Cancer Educational Council said, "There could be no better partner for reaching our target audience." Keep an eye out for players talking about this issue during this month. If you haven't already, also check out the PCAW web site.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/09/0058242.shtml

Is the NH Men's Commission Being Sabotaged?

Scott · 9 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Last Tuesday, the list of nominees NH Governor Jeanne Shaheen made for the New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men were released. Information about the seven nominees can be found on the NCFC-NH web site. However, the news is not all good. NCFC-NH members spent a lot of time lobbying for passage of this bill, and were alone through much of this process. Now that the list has been released (after tremendous delay, I might add), we are surprised to find that few of the names are even familiar to us. One individual on the list, Scott Hampton, even went on NH Public Radio debating Rep. Bickford about the legislation, saying that NH does not need a men's commission. It is suspicious, to say the least, that Hampton would then be nominated for the commission. Is the commission being sabotaged? I personally believe it is. And we only have about two weeks to stop it. For this reason, you will see a much lower number of new stories posted to MANN for the next week or so. I'm going to be putting a lot of resources into getting to the bottom of this mess and trying to do what I can correct it.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/09/0019212.shtml

Glenn Sacks on Creating Boy-Friendly Classrooms

Scott · 9 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks had a new article printed in the Los Angeles Daily News late last week on the topic of boys' educational needs. In it, Sacks discusses how discipline of boys is becoming a worsening problem in schools, and that this indicates how schools are failing to meet boys' needs. Sacks then goes on to make constructive suggestions on how to improve the classroom environment both to reduce discipline problems as well as be more inclusive of the teaching methods boys are most responsive to. Please pass this article around to any educators you know.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/09/1710207.shtml

Equal Opportunity Today

Thomas · 9 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Since we're noting the possible undermining of the NH Men's Commission, I thought it would be worth pointing out the stacking of the so-called Equal Opportunities Commission in the United Kingdom. Note that the chair, deputy chair, and chief executive are all women. In total, there are 13 women and 3 men -- equal opportunity in the allegedly post-feminist, western world.Source: eoc.org.uk

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/09/209242.shtml

Dan Rather Takes Dixie Chicks to Task for "Goodbye Earl" Video

Scott · 10 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Thundercloud. writes "Any one see "60 Minutes Special Edition", a few nights ago? Well, if you did, maybe you were as shocked as I was to see the Dixie Chicks taken to task about their video celebrating the murdering of men, called, "Goodbye Earl." Dan Rather (of all people), in an interview with the "Chicks", asked one of them: "Do you think it would've been OK if a male singing group had done a video showing the celebration of guys murdering a woman?" Of course, she gave the usual glib answer - she said something like: "No it wouldn't be OK. It's OK for US though, because we look so innocent..." HUH? Well, at least someone in the usually anti-male news media took these misandrists to task."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/09/1658235.shtml

Sacks and Thompson Respond to "Deadbeat Dad Raids"

Scott · 10 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks and Diana Thompson co-authored an article discussing the recent federal raids on "deadbeat dads," which resulted in dozens of arrests in recent weeks. The Sacks & Thompson duo shed light on the phenomena of "deadbeat dads," and find that unemployment, not apathy, is the primary factor in fathers who aren't paying child support. They then continue to tear down the myths about fathers who are not paying sufficient child support, discussing the need to enforce visitation rights and offer unemployed fathers more access to employment resources, rather than stigmatizing them and throwing them in jail.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/09/1715232.shtml

CEDAW Show-Down Approaching: It's Time to Act!

Scott · 11 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

As this post on Men's News Daily states, the United States Senate will be voting in the near future on whether to ratify the CEDAW treaty, which is well known to be a piece of gender feminist propaganda with wide ramifications that would make it harder for legitimate men's issues related to discrimination to be acknowledged. You are asked to write to your Senators and voice your opposition to the treaty. Please take a moment to let them know what you think - the members of N.O.W. certainly are.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/11/0137253.shtml

Good News for the NH Bickford Campaign

Scott · 11 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

If the New Hampshire primary election is any indication, Rep. David Bickford has a clear shot of being re-elected to the NH House. According to this Foster's Daily Democrat story, he received the most votes of any of the other candidates in his district. Rep. Bickford was the original sponsor of HB 587, which established a Commission on the Status of Men in this state. Many people responded from the plea on MANN to help David out, since due to redistricting he was going to have to campaign in six new towns, many of which historically vote only for Democrats (Bickford considers himself a moderate Republican). Due to the outpouring of support, David was able to buy and put up many signs in his district, and the effort clearly paid off. Thanks to everyone that gave David support in any form. His e-mail is david1@worldpath.net.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/11/1412208.shtml

MaleDepression.com Pays Tribute to Sept. 11 Victims

Scott · 11 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve Imparl's MaleDepression.com site was changed this morning, to create a memorial to the victims of the Sept. 11 attacks. As a site to help promote psycholocial healing, I felt that this was very appropriate. Thanks, Steve.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/11/1429240.shtml

More Anti-Male Bias in L.A. County Agenda

Scott · 11 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Angelucci writes *"Here you can read L.A. County's agenda for today. Take a look at Items 28 and 32 for more anti-male bias. Excerpt from Item #28: "specialized services in the areas of domestic violence against Cambodian refugee WOMAN and child care training and certification in total amount of $383,909..." Apparently Cambodian men are never DV victims, so they need not be included. Never mind that "approximately 1.5 million women and 834,732 men are raped and/or physically assaulted by an intimate partner annually in the United States." Excerpt from Item 32: "...$361,000...annually from the State Office of Criminal Justice Planning…to help combat teen pregnancy by prosecuting adult MALES who violate existing statutory rape laws with minor females and to obtain court orders against the fathers to increase child support collections, effective July 1, 2001 through June 30, 2003." Is this a sincere effort to combat teen pregnancy? Or is it targeting men for the purpose of political grandstanding? Is imprisoning young males and then seeking child support from them an efficient, rational and effective way to use $361,000 a year to combat teen pregnancy? This is another reason we need a commission for men."*

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/11/0125255.shtml

NZ Commissioner Questions Legality of Routine Male Genital Mutilation

Scott · 12 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Acksiom submitted this article from NZCity and writes "New Zealand Children's Commissioner Roger McClay is going to ask the Government to consider criminalizing the routine genital mutilation of male minors. . .a big step forward for intactivism, if it happens!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/11/2149235.shtml

Woman Fakes Baby for Child Support

Scott · 12 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Gonzo Kid writes "Men's News Daily reports that an Australian woman faked the birth of a baby and forged documents in order to fleece an ex-boyfriend of nearly $25,000 dollars. Now tell me it's about the child, and not about money and revenge."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/12/1438246.shtml

Study Blames Bad Fathers for Male Sex Offenders

Scott · 12 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "A study in Australia seeks to blame men for creating sex offenders. Or at least that is the spin the headline gives it. It says bad fathers are to blame for producing male sex offenders. Mothers are given a pass. The article is here. And by all means, get on the bulletin board commenting on this article and slam the radical female supremacists who are dominating it right now."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/12/2030231.shtml

Single Sex Schools

Scott · 13 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "This CNN story is on how single-sex schools are gaining popularity nationwide. It's among the few articles I've seen that highlights the advantages to boys of single sex schools; most highlight the advantages to girls. Perhaps this plays to the boys' advantage because it seems that the people who need to be convinced are feminist groups like the AAUW. Also, the article mentions the National Association for Single Sex Public Education, an organization perhaps we ought to look into supporting. Anyway, I'd like to all states REQUIRE that single sex classrooms (not necessarily whole single sex schools) be offered in public education, as it offers some tremendous advantages for BOTH boys AND girls. The men's movement, as a community of organizations ought to get behind this initiative in a big way. It may well be the "silver bullet" in solving the education gap between boys and girls."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/13/1356228.shtml

Popular Culture Important to Boys' Literacy

Scott · 13 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Rams forwarded me this article about an English professor at the University of New Hampshire who has taken a close look at boys and literacy. Prof. Thomas Newkirk argues that instead of viewing popular culture as of no intellectual value, that in the case of boys and reading, it can be a very important influence: "Newkirk interviewed 100 boys and girls in third, fourth and fifth grades in New Hampshire schools for the book, and discovered that sports, movies, video games and other venues of popular culture are a powerful way to encourage young boys to read and write. In his book, Newkirk argues against the simplistic stereotype of boys, showing that rather than mimic violence, boys most often transform, recombine and participate in storylines, and resist the unreality of popular culture." Newkirk has written a book on this subject, Misreading Masculinity: Boys, Literacy, and Popular Culture, that many MANN readers might want to check out.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/13/2011221.shtml

MI College Student Looking for Men's Issues Speaker

Scott · 14 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Jeff Mapes from Kalamazoo College in Michigan is looking for a pro-male speaker to come to his campus and give a presentation on men's issues. If you're interested, please e-mail Jeff at k00jm03@kzoo.edu. Jeff has been successful in starting a "men's issues house" on campus. Here's an excerpt from the house's mission statement: "At every level of discussion on this campus, masculinity is ostracized and shunned. From the way sports players are cynically referred to as "jocks," to the tendency of every discussion on masculinity to center around gender violence, the students, faculty and staff of Kalamazoo College largely operate under a fundamentally negative—and utterly wrong—conception of men and masculinity. This conception begins with the assumption that men, left to their own devices, will act like brutish animals in a Hobbesian state of nature. As a house, our primary mission will be to fight this misconception." We definitely need more college groups like this.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/14/1946216.shtml

ACLU Takes Up Cause of Due Process In Child Support

Scott · 15 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Luek sent us this article and writes "In Lawrence County, Pennsylvania the ACLU got 37 men out of the child support prison gulag. They reasoned correctly that anyone arrested and threatened with imprisonment is entitled to free legal counsel if they can't afford it and due legal process. Just because you are a male you still can't be treated like a piece of property by the iron heeled state tyrants." This could be a very important breakthrough if this kind of legal case is made in other regions. The ACLU has been lukewarm or completely apathetic to certain men's issues (ie, male reproductive rights) in the past, but this could be a way of getting our "foot in the door" and might lead to the ACLU being more open to men's rights issues. Let's hope for the best.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/15/1630223.shtml

Don McPherson Running High-Profile Batterers Group

Scott · 15 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

chicago joe writes "There is an article in this month's Oprah magizine [October] that should make everyone see red. It is a story about a former pro football player named Don McPherson and his men's program concerning domestic violence. He has been brainwashed into believing the traditional feminist stereotypes. He tells men at his workshop that women do not commit domestic violence - men do. He labels only men as perpetrators in gender crimes, and he states that male privilege, and our culture that breeds it, are responsible for most of women's woes. The article is also filled with the same anti-male distortions and facts that is common for this subject, and it convinces it's readers that the trend for many males is create or join organizations such as McPherson's so as to "take a hard look at their manhood.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/15/1633215.shtml

The Invisible Boy

Brad · 15 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Back in 1996, Health Canada released a report entitled The Invisible Boy: Revisioning the Victimization of Male Children and Teens. Prepared by Dr. Frederick Mathews, this paper documents the neglected experiences of our boys and provides yet another legitimate source of information regarding their troubles.Back in 1996, Health Canada released a report entitled The Invisible Boy: Revisioning the Victimization of Male Children and Teens. Prepared by Dr. Frederick Mathews, this paper documents the neglected experiences of our boys and provides yet another legitimate source of information regarding their troubles.

> Purpose of The Invisible Boy
> The Invisible Boy is intended for a wide readership. Readers may find some of the issues or research presented in the document new or surprising, maybe even a little controversial. Others may find no surprises at all, but instead a confirmation of what they have experienced, observed themselves or believed all along. In any case, it is perhaps most important to see the document, not as a definitive statement of the male experience (we are too early in the struggle for that), but rather as a snapshot in time of some of the controversies, challenges, knowledge gaps and unexplored issues pertaining to the male experience of victimization. If it spurs the reader to further explore the literature, encourages the therapeutic community to expand its knowledge base about victims and perpetrators, or widens public debate on abuse to make it more inclusive, then it will have achieved its purpose.

An HTML version is also available from Health Canada.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/16/012214.shtml

McElroy Helps Expose NH Men's Commission Sabotage

Scott · 17 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy's latest column in FoxNews discusses some of the suspicious and outright dirty politics being used to stack the NH Commission on the Status of Men. Not only was it discovered that one of the nominees went on a NH Public Radio program arguing that men don't need this commission, but it has been exposed that the governor's office has been soliciting people to apply even after plenty of qualified individuals had applied for the commission. Some were even solicited after the application deadline had passed. Hopefully with this kind of media exposure, and more expected to follow, politicians will get the message that using underhanded tactics against men's advocates is not worth the cost.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/17/0359230.shtml

Men's Health Act Continues to Gain Support

Scott · 17 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

A recent posting on the Men's Health America list announces that the federal Men's Health Act is gaining more support, with currently 115 co-sponsors in the House. We are encouraged to write to our legislators and ask them to support this bill during this time when they are very eager to get our votes during the election season. The Men's Health Act is a fairly non-controversial men's issue that we should definitely get them to include in their campaigns.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/17/0328251.shtml

MANN Chat: Beyond New Hampshire - Threats to Men's Rights

Scott · 17 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve writes "I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (9/18), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the usual location. The topic for this chat will be "New Hampshire Commission and CEDAW:
Latest Government Attempts to Harm Men's Rights." Recently, we've seen the attempts of N.H. Governor Jeanne Shaheen and her office to sabotage the new state commission on men. We also have CEDAW--a fundamentally anti-male treaty--moving to the floor of the U.S. Senate for a ratification vote. Courts routinely make anti-male decisions. Sometimes, it feels like threats are coming at us from all branches of government. What's an activist to do? Let's share ideas and develop strategy at thes week's MANN chat. Join us and let others know about it!""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/17/2025210.shtml

Michigan Unveils Paternity Fraud Legislation

Scott · 18 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Julian Droms writes "Yesterday, there was a front page news story in the Detroit Free Press about new paternity fraud legislation for the State of Michigan. There are four bills; testimony will be on the 25th of this month in Lansing. All four bills have passed the house and are now in committee. Written testimony can be sent to the Senate Committee on Families, Mental Health and Human Services; 517-373-3543." The fact that these bills are coming forth in several states is an exciting wave of change I see affecting men's rights nationwide. But be prepared for a struggle, as has happened in the L.A. County case.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/17/1111202.shtml

Indiana Pacers Basketball Player Battered

Scott · 18 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Gonzo Kid submitted this link and writes "Indiana Pacer Ron Artest was assaulted by his girlfriend - update on the story, on the news this AM he was shown leading her out of the lockup after posting her bond. Fox59 news played his 911 call, which said he feared for his safety, and knew if he defended himself he was going to jail. A sad commentary there." In other disturbing news, Agraitear sent us a story about woman has been charged with aggravated assault for setting her boyfriend's bed on fire while he slept in it. The man is now in intensive care. Agraiter comments, "Aggravated assault? Shouldn't this be attempted murder?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/18/1714223.shtml

What to do About DV Education Programs at Work?

Scott · 19 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Napnip writes, "I'm writing this hoping to get a bit of advice. In about a week, my place of work will be having a United Way fundraising program. There will be speakers from various agencies to speak with the employees. During my shift, our speaker is supposed to be someone from a local battered women's shelter. No doubt she will be presenting such "facts" as a woman is battered every 15 seconds, etc, while ignoring the other side of the data which states that a man is also battered every 15 seconds. I've already printed out a lot of information and will be carrying this to the meeting with me. Question: Should I confront her about the data? Obviously, I don't plan to be obnoxious about it (as I value my job!), but I would really love to ask her why she ignores the other half of the data (which I'm sure she will)." This is an excellent question to pose to MANN readers. What would you do? Note that I'm not asking what should someone do, but what would you do, especially if you value your job?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/19/1658211.shtml

BMH Conference One Month Away

Scott · 19 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This is a reminder that the Battered Men's Helpline second annual conference on Male Victims of Domestic Violence is one month away. The event will be held on October 19 in Portland, Maine. I'll be there and expect to do some digital recording of the audio which will be made available after the conference in Ogg Vorbis format, which is similar to MP3. But don't think that excuses you from attending this conference - we need people there to show their support of this cause, so make your travel plans today!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/16/1818248.shtml

The Men's Hour September Programme is Out

Scott · 20 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "The September programme is out. Domestic violence against men gets less media airtime than Haley's Comet (next due a splurge of publicity in 2061). News of a DV against men conference in Portland, Maine in October may have passed CNN by, but not the Men's Hour. The Blackshirts actions are called harassment and intimidation. John Abbott, leader of the Blackshirts, speaks. Steve Jones claims men are parasites. How far do men need to go before men are heard? Listen at www.menshour.com"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/20/1152258.shtml

iFeminists Chat on NH Men's Commission

Scott · 20 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This Sunday's chat in the iFemininsts chat room will also be about the sabotage of the NH Commission on the Status of Men. It will begin at 9 PM EST on Sunday, Sept. 22. If you missed the MANN chat or haven't had enough of this topic yet, please stop by and say hello.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/19/2120249.shtml

IWF Members Appointed to DV Advisory Committee by Ashcroft

Scott · 22 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Mark Rosenthal writes, "Nancy Pfotenhauer, president of the Independent Women's Forum, and Margot Hill, a member of the IWF's advisory board, were recently appointed to the National Advisory Committee on Violence Against Women by John Ashcroft. The IWF has consistently questioned the "one-size-fits-all, men-beat-up-women" portrayal of domestic violence promulgated by VAWA and the organizations it funds. Not surprisingly, NOW is launching an all out letter-writing campaign to torpedo these appointments. It is essential that we counter this by contacting the same officials to express our belief that the appointments of Ms. Pfotenhauer and Ms. Hill will help to counter the system's built-in biases which allows VAWA-funded agencies to get away with denying services to the 834,732 men who are victims of domestic violence each year (as reported by the U.S. Department of Justice)." Check the Read More section below for the rest of Mark's submission and contact info for the officials who will be approving these appointments.Mark Rosenthal continues, "Be polite and respectful, but emphasize that the plight of male victims is still being ignored by those who administer VAWA in spite of Sen. Orrin Hatch's statement, during the VAWA reauthorization hearings in 2000, that "it was not, and is not, the intent of Congress categorically to exclude men who have suffered domestic abuse or sexual assaults from receiving benefits and services under the Violence Against Women Act."

The people NOW is asking their members to contact are:

Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah):

U.S. mail:

104 Hart Office Building

Washington, DC 20510

Tel: 202-224-5251

Fax: 202-224-6331

E-mail: http://hatch.senate.gov/email_form.htm

Rep. Connie Morella (R-Md.):

U.S. mail:

Honorable Constance A. Morella

2228 Rayburn House Office Building

Washington, D.C. 20515

Phone: 202-225-5341

Fax: 202-225-1389

E-mail: rep.morella@mail.house.gov

Sen. Joseph Biden (D-Del.):

U.S. mail:

221 Russell Senate Office Building

Washington, D.C. 20510

Phone: 202-224-5042

Fax: 202-224-0139

TDD: 202-224-4048

E-mail: Senator@Biden.Senate.gov

Attorney General John Ashcroft

U.S. mail:

U.S. Department of Justice

950 Pennsylvania Avenue NW

Washington, DC 20530-0001

Phone: 202-353-1555

Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson

U.S. mail:

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services

200 Independence Avenue, S.W.

Washington, D.C. 20201

(202) 619-0257

Toll Free: 1-877-696-6775

E-mail: HHS.Mail@hhs.gov

George W. Bush

U.S. mail:

The White House

1600 Pennsylvania Avenue NW

Washington, DC 20500

Phone: 202-456-1111

Fax: 202-456-2461

E-mail: president@whitehouse.gov

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/22/1443219.shtml

Shaheen's Commitment to Status of Men Questioned

Scott · 22 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Foster's Daily Democrat printed an article outlining some of the problems men's advocates have with NH Governor Shaheen's nominations to the Commission on the Status of Men. In particular, the nomination of "Men don't have a status problem" Scott Hampton is at the center of the controversy. You can read the story here, but be warned - the article seems to crash Mozilla browsers on the Linux platform, at least.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/22/2036236.shtml

Abusive Mother in the News

Scott · 23 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

CPM submitted Police Searching for Woman Seen Beating Child from FoxNews and writes "Here we go again... Absent are the words "domestic violence".
The search for the woman continues and I presume also the search for the "nearest man" to blame it on. I hope that they can find her and the little girl soon if for no other reason but to be assured that the child is either OK or gets medical attention. I have not seen the video, but from the descriptions of it, it is quite possible that this little girl could be seriously injured." As an update to the story, the woman has turned herself in, was freed on bail, and is currently talking with the media taking some responsibility but trying to gain sympathy. Since we're getting so many submissions on this topic, please use the comment board for this story to post more articles and URLs for this story.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/23/1659202.shtml

Ghana Female Circumcision Hoax Exposed

Scott · 24 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "In the late 1990s the feminists and all their castrated male counterparts in Congress and the media rallied around a woman claiming to be a princess from Ghana who faced genital mutilation if she was not given asylum in the United States. In response to her claims, it is now illegal to mutilate the genitals of a female in all Western nations, even as male genital mutilation is heralded as a great source of fetal tissue for science. But the whole story was a lie. The woman is not a princess, there is no female circumcision going on, and the woman is now being brought up on charges. None of this is mentioned in the feminist media, but Michelle Malkin has written an excellent article about it which can be found here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/23/1638256.shtml

IWF Opposes CEDAW

Scott · 24 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Independent Women's Forum has a list of 10 Reasons Why CEDAW Should Be Rejected on their web site. They include reasons that many MANN readers are familiar with, including the dangers of an international "Gender Police," the damage to U.S. Sovereignty, and the socialist nature of the treaty's premises. They call it "The Worst Treaty …with The Best Name."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/24/0137255.shtml

Men's Activist Looking for Speaking Topic Suggestions

Scott · 24 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "I have an opportunity to do a speaking engagement discussing men's issues. This is the type of activism I would really like to get involved in. It will give me the chance to bring items up to people who are literally "virgins" to the men's movement. The group wants me to speak for about an hour and what I would really like is some advice on what to talk about and how to organize the speach etc.. The group may be small maybe even as many as 20 people I don't know, but I want to get the message to them clear and concisely. Any advice and thought input will be very welcome." Please offer Dan some suggestions in the comment section of this story.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/24/1712244.shtml

Reader Offers Matching Donations to MANN

Scott · 24 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Richard Cann from Brookline, MA is willing to make matching donations with anyone who makes a donation to Mensactivism.org between now and October 10, up to a total of $200. So making a donation during this time period is effectively doubling your contribution, and helping out Mensactivism.org even more. Please consider participating in this, however small your donation may be. For more info on how to donate, see our donations page. And many, many thanks to Richard for this offer!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/24/1716220.shtml

Maryland Child Custody Discrimination Case

Scott · 25 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Scott writes, "I managed to obtain the NCHS data base for Marriage and Divorce, 1989-1995 by Sally C. Clarke and do a statistical analysis for the state of Maryland. I completed the analysis of the NCHS data by going past the gender data to the race data. Given the recent legal decision in Georgia, based primarily on the evidence supplied by Ms. Clarke's study, I can understand why the states complained under the euphemism that it was too costly to continue the statistical reporting. We now have the evidence that Maryland discriminated in making custody decisions. African American men are even worse off than men as a group. Any way you look at it, Maryland discriminates based on both race and gender. The "Best Interests of Children" as practiced in Maryland is nothing more than a euphemism for discrimination. We now need a test case to go before the Federal District Court, the Maryland Appeals Court has already ruled in Griffin v. Crane that determination of custody by gender is not permissible, however, the local judges are very clever in getting around an issue for their own personal beliefs and political agenda.
We need a call to all men having recently lost a custody battle to file an appeal based on sex or race discrimination and have the State of Maryland Family Law system labeled as having committed discriminatory conduct requiring monitoring.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/24/1810230.shtml

MANN Chat: "Child Support: Can It Be Fixed?"

Scott · 25 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve writes "I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (9/25), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the usual location.
The topic for this chat will be "'Child Support': What's Wrong and How Can We Fix It?" The tax-free transfer of wealth from one parent to another is fraught with legal, economic, political, social, and moral problems. In fact, a frightening number of distraught fathers have committed suicide as a result of draconian "child support" policies. How can we fix this mess? Should we fix it, or scrap it? What are the viable alternatives to so-called "child support"? At this week's MANN chat we will share ideas with fellow activists, and plan strategies for reform. Please join us and tell others about it!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/25/1130213.shtml

Abusive Woman Ordered to Pay $500 to Women's Shelter

Scott · 25 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

shawn writes "The case of Chuck Finley and Tawny Kitaen is discussed once again in this report from ABC News and the Associated Press. Although the article focuses on Kitaen's 12 million dollar alimony lawsuit against Finley, the article mentions something that is both bizarre and a sign of our times. To recap, Kitaen (a woman) was found guilty of spousal assault against Finley (a man). Her punishment, you ask? In part, she was ordered to pay $500 dollars to a battered-women's shelter - presumably a shelter that excludes men. A woman commits domestic violence against her husband and the people who benefit are women who deny that battered men exist."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/25/1132208.shtml

NH Commission Victory for Us!

Scott · 25 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I just got back from Concord, NH, where the Executive Council voted on the nominations for the NH Commission on the Status of Men (see the room it was held in here). There is lots of good news: the nominations of Scott Hampton and Thomas Kaufhold were soundly rejected by the Executive Council. Stephen Gorin's nomination passed with only a 3-2 vote. The other nominees were pretty much voted in unanimously. I was very concerned when the meeting started, since the Council was approving tons of nominations without any debate. They were really rushing through them. When it came time for the NHCSM nominations, there was no discussion or debate on any of the candidates, it just came down to a quick vote for each nominee. There was no roll call on the votes, so I don't have any permanent record of which councilor voted which way, and I wasn't quick enough to keep track of it myself (sorry). A letter of gratitude to each of the councilors for hearing our concerns is definitely appropriate now. Further, they will have three other nominees to vote on in the future, so we need to keep them listening to us. A thousand thank-yous to everyone who took part in this activism, and supported us. The outcome of this meeting was very much in our favor. We are thwarting the attempted sabotage of the commission! Addendum: Paul Clements had a stinging letter printed in Foster's Daily Democrat criticizing Shaheen for her attempt to sabotage the commission.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/25/1711249.shtml

Follow-Up to Workplace DV Charity Event

Scott · 25 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Napnip sent me a follow-up to his workplace fundraising event for charities, which included a battered women's shelter. It seems from the dialogue that the woman could end up being educated about the hidden problem of domestic violence against men. I think the way napnip handled it also shows an effective way of challenging these myths without risking your job or even being overtly confrontational. See the Read More section for his submission. Napnip writes, "The forum was pretty much non-confrontational. The lady who gave the presentation didn't mention many statistics, except when she said that "every 9 seconds a woman is battered". I'm not sure where she got the "9 second" figure from, perhaps on a state-wide basis (here in South Carolina). When the meeting was almost over, I said that I had a question for her. I mentioned that not long ago the FBI stated that a woman is beaten every 15 seconds, to which she wholeheartedly agreed. Then I mentioned that the FBI doesn't actually tabulate or collect statistics on domestic violence, that they actually got that number from the Family Research Laboratory. Then I mentioned that according to FRL stats, a man is also beaten once every 15 seconds.
She was totally shocked when I said that. She really had a genuine look of shock on her face. I then mentioned the Dept. of Justice Violence Against Women Survey which stated men made up over 835,000 victims in '98, which amounts to 36%, and NOT the 5% myth going around. Again, she was in shock. She said that she had never heard those numbers, that she had always heard the 95-5% stats. I told her I would forward her some information from the 'net and she seemed eager to see the info. (I already had her e-mail addy since I had e-mailed her a couple of weeks ago asking advice about starting a men's shelter, and she surprisingly was very helpful.) She seems like she is open to an honest dialogue. I hope this is true."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/25/1218243.shtml

Recent DV Study

Brad · 26 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

RPB659 writes in on a recent article found in Massachusetts News. The article reports on the research done by Steve Basile on domestic violence and how the facts don't match up with commonly held beliefs.

> Basile found that female defendants were just as abusive as male defendants in terms of both physical and psychological aggression. The results fly in the face of feminist orthodoxy on which the domestic violence industry has been built.

"Domestic violence is time and time again painted exclusively as something male batterers do to their innocent female victims," said Basile. "Our laws, policies and practices unfortunately reflect this myth."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/26/1350223.shtml

Senator Sheila Kuehl's Testimony on Paternity Justice Act

Scott · 26 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original warble writes "What follows is the exact quote of Senator Kuehl's testimony as given in the Senate on the Paternity Justice Act. In transcribing this from a video, every effort has been made to preserve the actual statements made by her. They are rather incredible to say the least! NCFM, LA is interested in your objective comments and suggestions of how this can be used.

" See the Read More section below for the transcript of the speech.warble continues, "Senator Kuehl's Testimony on AB2240 August 6, 2002:

"I think that paternity law has been constructed not so that it's fair to the parents, but rather that it most likely guarantees that a child will have a designated father. That doesn't sound fair to people. Because biology, has been the thing that most men have pointed to as saying, 'okay I did this now I'll take responsibility for the child.'

But the law, rather, on its own made some decisions about the security of children in saying for instance; where there is a marriage we will declare that the husband of the mother is the father of the child. We don't care whether he was nor not. We don't want to hear about that. We will just declare it.

And there have been other instances where the law has made the decision, this will be the father, and that has not been necessarily (she smiles at the default paternity fraud victims in the audience) fair, as we heard from many of your witnesses (speaking to Assemblyman Wright).

But I'm disturbed by the breadth of the ability to unravel that. Where, we're not saying, rather than you sir, this gentleman is the appropriate father for this child

…But for me this bill goes way too far in unraveling what 'may be' an unfair situation. Such that there would be many more children who would not legally have fathers, and I do not think that would be in the best interest of society as a whole."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/26/1347235.shtml

New Jersey Citizens Against Paternity Fraud

Scott · 27 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

As more evidence that the public outrcy and acknowledgement of the problem of paternity fraud continues to rise, New Jersey is the newest state to have an anti paternity fraud group form. Their web site can be seen here. Thanks to frank_h for this info. Word is that they've already started on state legislation, and they have two billboards advertising their cause in the Trenton, NJ area.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/27/1634247.shtml

15 New Sponsors of Men's Health Act!

Scott · 27 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Men's Health America writes, "In June, Men's Health Magazine issued a call for readers to send in a form to support passage of a bill to create the federal Office of Men's Health. 3,000 readers enthusiastically responded. Then, Men's Health Magazine took the 3,000 names to members of the House of Representatives. Lo and behold, 15 additional Representatives agreed to co-sponsor the bill. So now the bill has 119 co-sponsors! The November 5 elections are six short weeks away. We need to make the Office of Men's Health a campaign issue. Find out if your Representative is supporting the bill (H.R. 632) by visiting this page. And then raise a ruckus if they're not.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/27/1640214.shtml

Woman Associated with Terrorist Group Suspected of Murdering Father

Scott · 27 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "A man whose wife is a member of a socialist female supremacist terror organization called MOVE was found shot to death after a judge ruled that he could have visitation with his own child. The ex-wife said she would never let him see his child, but she was not arrested for flagrantly violating the order, of course. The story of his murder is here." This is absolutely shocking.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/27/1717239.shtml

Sunday iFeminists/MANN Chat on NH Commission Outcome

Scott · 28 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy will be moderating this week's iFeminist/Mensactivism.org on-line chat, this Sunday, Sept. 29, at 9 PM EST. I will be there to discuss the current status of the NH Commission on the Status of Men and what still needs to be done (we're not totally out of the woods yet). Please join us at the iFeminist chat room for the discussion.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/26/1411216.shtml

Foster's Covers Rejection of Scott Hampton to NHCSM

Scott · 28 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Foster's Daily Democrat reports here about the rejection of Scott Hampton's nomination to the NH Commission on the Status of Men. Rep. David Bickford had a really strong quote printed, saying that Hampton's nomination by Shaheen "was kind of like putting Osama bin Laden on a Jewish, anti-defamation board." Also of interest is that the NCFC-NH web site now has a summary of the current history of the NHCSM, which is useful to get background on the commission.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/27/2251250.shtml

Kent State Columnist Discusses Paternity Fraud

Scott · 29 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

drakematrix writes "I am a columnist for the Daily Kent Stater. This week, my column discussed Paternity Fraud Legislation pending in the Michigan State Legislature. you can access the story by going to this page." Nice work, Michael. We need to get these issues addressed in colleges and universities, and help educate men as early as possible.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/29/1223206.shtml

California Governor Vetoes Paternity Justice Act

Scott · 30 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc writes "Governor Davis vetoed AB2240. In Davis' statement below you can see that his reason is mostly based on the requirement of "personal service." In my opinion the personal service amendment was a poison pill and should never have been there. We're nowhere near finished with this." An Anonymous User also wrote in with the bad news, saying "*An insightful explanation of WHY he's ignoring DNA evidence is in this news story: "the state might not meet federal requirements on collecting child support payments, putting California at risk of losing $40 million in federal funds." My take on it is that Governor Davis is defrauding men, taxpayers and the U.S. government.*" See the Read More section below for the veto letter that Davis wrote himself.To Members of the California State Assembly:

http://www.governor.ca.gov/govsite/msdocs/press_re lease/L02_199_AB_2240_veto_message.doc

I am returning Assembly Bill 2240 without my signature.

This bill would require additional activities for the local child support agencies by making changes to the current paternity establishment process, including a requirement that the summons and complaint be personally served on the alleged father in any action to establish paternity. In addition, the bill would expand the court's ability to set aside default paternity judgments based on genetic testing and upon determination of the best interest of the child.

The intent of AB 2240 is to provide relief to individuals who are victims of paternity fraud. I recognize that paternity fraud is a serious issue and has the potential of damaging an individual's livelihood. However, AB 2240 is flawed in its attempt to address this issue.

Personal service, as required in the bill, would establish a higher standard of service for paternity actions than all other civil actions. This higher standard does not directly address paternity fraud or prevent fraud in the future but instead would adversely impact the establishment of paternities. Thousands of paternity judgments are established timely each year by serving individuals by substitute service or by mail. The bill's requirement of personal delivery service would severely delay this process, but more important, would provide biological fathers the ability to evade service of process, preventing the establishment of paternity in the majority of these cases and allowing the avoidance of parental responsibilities. This would directly impact child support collections and would jeopardize California's ability to meet federally required performance measures putting California at risk of losing up to $40 million in federal funds.

In addition, AB 2240 has substantial federal compliance problems that would adversely affect California. The bill's requirement of a paternity questionnaire, signed by the mother, would prevent the filing of a paternity action in cases against the father if the mother is deceased or unavailable, or if she simply refuses to cooperate. This would prevent moving ahead on cases even if other evidence establishes paternity. This would also apply to foster care cases where federal law requires the establishment of paternity and child support. AB 2240 would prevent California from proceeding on a large number, if not most, of foster care cases, putting California out of compliance with federal law.

Therefore, I direct the Department of Child Support Services to work with the Legislature and advocates on both sides of this issue to develop recommendations that will address paternity fraud.

Sincerely,

Gray Davis

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/30/0216244.shtml

Prostate Cancer UNawareness Month?

Scott · 30 September 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Thundercloud. writes "Well, here we are at the end of September, 'Prostate Cancer Awareness Month'. So, did everyone else see all the news coverage and reports on this in the media? ... Neither did I.
I watched and waited all month to see even ONE mention of the subject.
But I waited in vain. I saw zilch! However, I did notice Katie Couric, about a week ago, reminding everyone that October is 'Breast Cancer Awareness Month'! How nice (and typical) of her and the rest of the media to remind us that October is "Breast Cancer Awareness Month", during "Prostate Cancer Awareness Month". and make NO mention of the latter!" Thundercould makes some valid points. I also saw very little attention to PCAW compared to what I remember last year. Where did we go wrong this time - what do you think?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/30/0224209.shtml

Grocery Chain Bashses Men

Scott · 1 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

alphamale writes "Will the male-bashing by corporations ever stop? The latest company is the A & P grocery chain in Canada. In their most recent flyer (ending October 05) one page 2 they have an advertisement for a "60 minute quick roast." The large bold heading reads "So easy it could be cooked by a child. Heck, even a husband."

I hope you are all as outraged as I am. As a husband and father of two I am deeply offended by this ad. I hope you too will show your outrage. A & P can be contacted at www.freshobsessed.com or 1-877-76fresh. We must stand up against this type of sexist, misandrist advertising! For a fact, you know they will not be running an ad next week with the word wife inserted for husband!

As for me.....I've stopped shopping there. They just lost thousands of dollars of my business."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/09/30/2354205.shtml

Joe Manthey Talks About Fighting Sexism with Sexism

Scott · 1 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "Joe Manthey has come out with an article that coincides with every thing I have been saying for a while now. I really like the way he puts this piece together and shows up Michael Moore for what Michael is really doing "Curing Sexism with Sexism"?!. Duh! Anyways I want people to look at this piece objectively. Try to not see the points about racial hate crimes as a tit for tat but to see how misconceptions create hostility; hence, more crime and division."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/01/1842219.shtml

Facts About Men and Heart Disease

Scott · 2 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Men's Health America has released a special report called Heart Disease: Why Are Men Still at Higher Risk of Death. This informative posting includes some statistics on heart disease, factors that have affected the rates of heart disease, and most importantly, why men are at such higher risk for death from heart disease. It will serve as good material to draw on for an upcoming activism project that MHA is doing.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/01/2236258.shtml

MANN Chat: War with Iraq as a Men's Activism Issue

Scott · 2 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve writes "Scott Haltzman and I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (10/2), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the usual location. The topic for this chat will be "War with Iraq: A Men's Activism Issue." They're in the news daily: war, Iraq, the draft, weapons of mass destruction, inspections, the overthrow of Saddam Hussein. All of these points ignore--or at least understate--the simple reality. If the United States (and its allies) go to war, it will be men dying, and men killing men. We can debate foreign policy and national security until we are blue in the face, but a war with Iraq still means a lot of dead men. Join us at this week's MANN chat to discuss why the prospect of war in Iraq is an important men's issue. Invite some friends to the chat, too!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/02/1445206.shtml

Matching Donation Drive Completed!

Scott · 2 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Due to the generosity of several individuals, Mensactivism.org has received the full $200 in donations which were matched with another $200 from Richard Cann. I'm in the process of getting permission to name the donors who contributed during this time, but felt it was important to announce that the matching fund drive is over so people were aware of this fact. I'm humbled that people completed this drive so quickly, and cannot thank you all enough. Update: The following people are to be thanked as generous supporters of Mensactivism.org: Marc Angelucci, Steve Imparl, Thomas Parker, Luke Brackett, Christopher Fritz, David H, K.S, Anonymous1, Anonymous2 (member of NCFM-LA), and of course, Richard Cann.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/02/1654245.shtml

Nashville Woman Sexually Mutilates Sleeping Boyfriend

Scott · 2 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "A Nashville woman used her fingernails to rip off the testicle of her sleeping boyfriend in a case of blatant sexual battery which was only prosecuted as domestic violence and only resulted in an arrest due to outstanding warrants against the violent female sexual predator. This is a case of blatant sex discrimination by the attorney general's office in that the attack is clearly sexual battery and has not been prosecuted as such. The article, buried in the back pages of the Tennessean, is found here. Contact the Governor of Tennessee and complain about the failure of the prosecutor and police to charge this sex offender with sexual battery. This exact crime, the ripping off of men's testicles by women using only their hands, is becoming more and more frequent as no prosecutor has ever filed appropriate charges. In fact, this is the only case I have found in which the woman served any jail time at all, and that was only because of mandatory domestic violence arrest laws and her outstanding warrants. She got away with committing a crime of sexual violence and will not be forced to register as a sex offender as she should be." Could anyone dig up the contact info for the TN Governor, and perhaps the AG who has jurisdiction in this case?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/02/1447259.shtml

More Coverage of NHCSM Nomination Controversy

Scott · 3 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Kristin Prolux of the Concord Monitor wrote an outstanding article on the current status of the NH Commission on the Status of Men. She informs readers of the controversial nomination of Scott Hampton, and the most recent nomination of Neal Boutin, who I understand works directly in child support enforcement and is trying to enact significant reform in this area to improve fairness to non-custodial parents. Update: The Union Leader, NH's largest newspaper, also printed a story today on the NHCSM. I've been wondering when they'd finally give it some attention.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/02/1733253.shtml

Illinios Domestic Violence Essay Contest

Scott · 3 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original chicago joe writes "This is National Domestic Violence Awareness Month and the Chicago Sun-Times newspaper has given us a golden opportunity to be heard. To raise awareness and education about domestic violence, the newspaper is running an essay contest to hear men and women discuss personal stories concerning DV, and more importantly, present ideas on how to diminish it. The winners of the essay contest must be from Illinios and will be honored at a women's forum at the end of the month. While I know we are not interested in winning any contest, the opportunity to e-mail a major newspaper and flood them with statistics and research concerning abused men is an opportunity that should not be passed up." See the Read More section for some strategic tips chicago joe suggests, as well as where to e-mail your essay/information.My basic strategy for my e-mail will be this:

1. Be as professional as possible. Angry letters won't promote much.

2. Provide them with enough information and links to get their attention.

3. Convince them that domestic violence should be viewed as a gender-blind, individualistic human problem, not a gender war.

4. Ask them, if they are seriously concerned about diminishing domestic violence, could they please educate and bring awareness to this side of the issue within their publication this month, or sometime in the near future.

Let's not pass up this opportunity. The Chicago Sun-Times e-mail address for this contest is: essays@suntimes.com

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/03/1813220.shtml

How NIH Shortchanges Men with Heart Disease Programs

Scott · 4 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Men's Health America list has three recent criticisms of the National Institutes of Health and bias in their heart disease programs. Despite the fact that men have approx. 50% higher risk of death from heart disease, the NIH has underrepresented men in heart disease studies, has more sex-specific publications for women than for men about heart disease, and is currently readying a special heart disease awareness campaign targeted at women, but not men. This is about men dying, folks. We all need to make some noise over this injustice, and physicians and others in the medical field have a deep obligation to speak out and demand more attention to heart disease in men. Educate yourself with these three MHA postings - one, two, three. And then take a moment and write.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/04/1439207.shtml

Reasonable Paternity Fraud Story

Brad · 5 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Mitchell Smith writes in pointing out this story focusing on paternity laws at ABCNews.com.

> "The paternity debate is heating up in the courts, too. Two men recently attempted and failed to get the U.S. Supreme Court to hear their cases after lower courts ruled they must continue paying support for children who turned out not to be theirs. One, Carnell Smith of Decatur, Ga., is trying to recoup more than $40,000 from his ex-girlfriend after learning three years ago that her 13-year-old daughter is not his."

The article goes on to make a few good points, including this one.

> "[Commonlaw Fatherhood] is an ancient practice going back thousands of years for the government or king or chieftain to make a rule about who is the child's parent. And it really was a way of organizing society.
>
> Using that argument, men could justify many socially unacceptable practices by relying on centuries-old law, say fathers' rights advocates. "Well, fine, if you want to bring back common law, then I own children and even a woman as chattel. If I catch the woman in an adulterous relationship, I can kill her. Do you want to bring that back?" Jaks said.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/05/2135237.shtml

Equitable Marrige Benifits

Brad · 5 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "A new study on the effects of marriage by researchers in Australia has found that the 1972 claim (that men benefit from marriage at the expense of women) was false. In fact, both men and women reap similar mental health benefits." This story may be found at yahoo.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/05/2142215.shtml

Server Problems Fixed

Scott · 7 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Since I went away this weekend on a trip, the web and mail server of course had to have problems. The hard drive filled up with irrelevant log messages sometime Saturday and ground the system to a halt. Mail has been delayed, but should get through eventually within the next 24 hours. The web site is running cleanly again, so hopefully things are back to normal. Thanks everyone for your patience...

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/07/0228245.shtml

Money before Truth

Brad · 7 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The latest article by Glenn Sacks and Dianna Thompson is out.

> "California Governor Gray Davis had the chance to free thousands of falsely condemned men last week. He chose federal funds instead."

Also recently at GlennJSacks.com:

Can Abolishing Sole Custody Curb Divorce?

New York Sun (10/2/02)

Equal Parents Week Highlights Need for Family Court Reform

Lansing State Journal (9/26/02)

Michigan Reform Plan Fights Rising Paternity Fraud

Detroit News (9/25/02)

Shared Custody Could Prevent Abductions

Colorado Springs Gazette (9/22/02)

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/07/0515221.shtml

Men Critical to Heathy Child Development

Brad · 7 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Scott Haltzman writes "This article reviews an Austrailian study. Bottom line: men count."

> "[T]he extent of a father's involvement in caring for a child between birth to five years old was found to be more influential on a child's ability to cooperate and obey instructions when they started school."
>
> "She said policy debates about child care had placed too much emphasis on a mother's role in parenting at the father's expense."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/07/1324219.shtml

Time for Action on Biased Heart Disease Programs

Scott · 8 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Continuing the Men's Health America campaign to end the neglect of men in new heart disease programs by the NIH, a sample letter to Claude L'Enfant, medical director of the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute, should be used as a model to help bring attention to this injustice. A letter by David Burroughs of Maryland has also been posted to the MHA mailing list. It only takes a few minutes to write, so please do so. Our tax dollars are paying for this biased program, and we have a right to take issue with this.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/08/1437253.shtml

MD District Commissioner Referendum a Danger to Men's Rights

Scott · 8 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Scott writes, "If you are a Maryland voter be warned that a serious threat to your basic civil rights has been offered for your approval this election year in November 2002. The referendum is asking to you amend the State of Maryland's Constitution to allow District Commissioners after normal business hours to remove people from "their homes" under the guise of domestic violence accusations." See the Read More section below for the rest of Dan's submission."Under current law, a hearing must occur before a judge, to decide whether a person can be removed from "their home" based on an accusation of domestic violence or for a mental health examination. While the idea of protecting "people" from violent family members or cohabitants sounds reasonable on the surface to normal people, are you aware this is not what is actually happening?

Are you aware that when someone brings an "accusation" of domestic violence, that absolutely no proof or witness(es) are required for a judge and by extension the proposed District Commissioner to issue a protective order removing a person from "their home"? They literally take the accusers word for it! Are you aware that the defendant is "not" at the hearing when the decision to have them removed from "their own home" is currently made? It is called Ex Parte

Are you aware that once removed from "your home" that you are made homeless for seven days until a hearing is held to determine your "guilt"? You have seven days in which to find a lawyer to defend yourself! We say your "guilt" since the majority (94% in one jurisdiction) of domestic violence decisions result in a "finding" against the defendant (male) under the civil rules of evidence where accusations are held on the same level of substance as evidence and witness(es). Did you realize that when a man is accused of domestic violence, the determination of guilt was already made at a hearing you were not allowed to attend? The hearing seven days later is merely a formality in most cases unless the woman fails to show up for the hearing.

Are you aware that the decisions currently made virtually targets only one group of individuals? Yes, only one group, men. We contend these are civil rights violations based on gender. Are you aware that domestic violence is committed with equal frequency by both men and women? Are you aware that divorce lawyers use the Domestic Violence Act as a cynical legal ploy to gain Custody and Use & Possession of the residence for divorcing women? Who do you think sponsored this referendum? The Divorce Lawyer Lobby. Who do you think stands to literally profit from round the clock removal of men from their homes? The Divorce Lawyers! Get the facts before you make a decision. See www.geocities.com/fightbigotry2002 (Maryland Judicial Equality Committee)

Are you aware of the current practice in the mis-use of the bail bond system to deprive men of the financial ability to retain a lawyer and remove men from their homes after hours. The Maryland guidelines for bond issuance is consistently disregarded by Court Commissioners in some cases forcing men to plead guilty in order to obtain freedom from incarceration. The Court Commissioners will set disproportionately high bail and force the accused to obtain a non-refundable 10% bond from a bondsman. Bail in some cases have been set up to $15,500+. In some cases, men have been forced to stay awake for 30 hours before being released on bond. Particularly troublesome is the practice of charging men under the criminal statute, forcing them to post bond, i.e. 10% non-refundable bond, dropping the criminal charge and then charging them under the Domestic Violence Act during business hours where the likelihood of obtaining a conviction is higher. According to a recent study of the bail bond system "Under Maryland's pretrial release rules, the overwhelming majority of these detainees should have been offered less onerous alternatives and been released without bondsmen."

Do you really want to give District Commissioners the power to remove you from "your own home" without a hearing, or even being presented with evidence or witness(es)? Are you prepared to give up your rights of property and become homeless as has happened to thousands of men in Maryland over the last six years due to the discriminatory mis-use of the Domestic Violence Act?

Pass this email on to your friends, they deserve to be told and warned about a threat to their civil liberties.

We urge you to Vote No to the District Commissioner Referendum!

Contact Us: Fightbigotry2002@yahoo.com
Maryland Judicial Equality Committee"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/08/1445255.shtml

MANN Chat: Integrated Men

Brad · 9 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve writes *"I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (10/9), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the usual location. The topic for this chat will be 'Integrated Men: Healing Ourselves, Healing the World.'"*Steve writes "In his book, No More Mr. Nice Guy, Dr. Robert Glover describes an integrated man as one who can 'embrace everything that makes him uniquely male: his power, his assertiveness, his courage, and his passion as well as his imperfections, his mistakes, and his dark side.' As men's activists, we want to effect positive change in the world. Still, as Mahatma Ghandi said, 'We must be the change we wish to see in the world.' How can becoming complete, whole, and integrated men help us in our activism? Join us at this week's MANN chat to discuss how being the best men we can be may be our most powerful contribution to men's activism. Take a friend or two to the chat, also!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/09/149254.shtml

CBS Program JAG States DV is 50/50 Issue

Scott · 10 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tom writes "We have some reason to celebrate. Last night my wife yelled to me "You better come watch this." When I made it to the TV she said a lead character on the CBS show JAG had just stated that 50% of Domestic violence is committed by women. How bout that! Network TV has now proclaimed that women are indeed violent in relationships. I hope my man Thundercloud got to watch this. It did my heart good. The tide is certainly turning. You can give them feedback here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/10/1844245.shtml

MA State Trooper Wins Suit for False Sex Harassment Accusation

Scott · 11 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User sent us this Boston Globe story and writes "A Suffolk County jury found Tuesday that Elaine Whitfield Sharp knowingly made false accusations that trooper Randy Cipoletta propositioned her for sex and fondled her breasts after arresting her for driving under the influence of alcohol in May 1998." Sharp is a high-profile defense attorney who apparently thought she could get away with this. The ruling will be appealed.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/11/1549231.shtml

Makers of Celexa/Lexapro Focus on Male Depression

Scott · 11 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "I found a brochure [on depression in men] at www.lexapro.com. It is a guide for male victims of depression. This is the first time I have seen a brochure geared specifically toward men for this disease. I encourage male victims of depression to write the makers of Lexapro and thank them for this attention." While Lexapro obviously has a financial interest in marketing their product to men, they clearly state that depression "is an equal opportunity illness, affecting all ages, races, and economic groups, and both genders" and they are contributing to awareness about depression in men.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/11/1553237.shtml

Ireland's Supreme Court Rules Part of DV Act Unconstitutional

Scott · 13 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Mark Rosenthal writes, "Ireland's Supreme Court just declared the Interim Barring Order provision of Ireland's Domestic Violence Act to be unconstitutional. Read about it on the AMEN website here. AMEN is an organization in Ireland set up by Mary Cleary in 1997 to provide support for male victims of domestic abuse and their children. On October 19, 2002, Mary Cleary will be emcee at the Battered Men's Helpline 2nd Annual Conference on Male Victims of Domestic Abuse in Portland, Maine."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/12/238208.shtml

Interesting Bias in a Homeless Outreach Program

Scott · 14 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Angelucci writes "The Union Rescue Mission is the most recognized and probably the largest homeless program in Los Angeles. Its programs have a non-denominational Christian basis and serve a huge population of homeless people, mostly men. Ray found the website when searching for organizations that might support a commission for men. That's when we noticed this. If you look under "services," you'll see "Men's Programs," and you'll also see "Women and Family Programs." The women's programs are heavily centered around children and "family" while the men's programs seem to leave parenting and children out almost entirely, with some exceptions. This is probably just reflecting a reality that homeless women are more often with their children than homeless men are, so I'm not making any outright attack here. But wouldn't that still, arguably, create a good reason to create a program that encourages the men to increase their involvement with their children in order to help inspire them to overcome difficulties and to increase father involvement even among homeless men? From what I've read, most homeless men are fathers. And given research we know by Sanford Braver and others, it's likely that a lot of these men are apart from their kids due to judicial and systemic bias against them, perhaps in combination with mental disabilities or other factors (which can even be caused or influenced by the systemic bias). Maybe some of us could contact them and perhaps even praise them their work while also politely sharing some thoughts. I'm curious how others would react to this."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/14/1447243.shtml

NCFM Announces New Web News Service

Scott · 14 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tom Williamson writes, "The National Coalition of Free Men (NCFM) has just initiated a brand new project at its web site. The new service is an automated news page that scans the internet for relevant headlines from magazines and from other web sites. Headlines will change every week and sometimes every day. Our material is divided up into five categories: Divorce, Civil Rights, Life Style, Health and Fashion. A short list of articles appears on the front page with a brief description. If you want to see a much longer list, simply click on MORE beneath the topic heading. Here is a really neat feature: There is an orange flag next to most of the individual articles. If you want to see a list of related articles click on the orange flag. This is great for anyone doing research; for anyone looking to find material to expand on a topic."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/14/1453200.shtml

When Men's Health Doesn't Count

Brad · 15 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks' most recent column, "When Men's Health Doesn't Count", just ran in the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot (10/9/02). To comment on the article, write to the Virginian-Pilot. The piece was co-written by Dianna Thompson, executive director of the American Coalition for Fathers and Children.

The Men's Health Act needs popular support. To write a letter to your Representative, go to this link.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/15/1959208.shtml

Letter Template for DV Awareness

Scott · 16 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Equalitarian62 writes, "October is Domestic violence awareness month in the United States. Last year I created a letter template that could be sent to media outlets across the USA. My own letter was published in the Denver Rocky Mountain News. I am sending an edited (more concise) version to the Denver Post this year (it had to be less than 200 words). Those of you in the United States are urged to contact as many media outlets as possible (newspaper, radio, TV, magazines, etc.). My template may be used, or you can modify it or write your own letter or email." To view the sample letter, view the Read More section below. Making use of a sample letter like this takes only minutes, and can make a big impact in numbers. Please help inform the media that domestic violence is not a gender issue, but a human one.To the staff at [insert media outlet here]:

As you are probably aware, October is Domestic Violence awareness month. Domestic violence is a serious issue that affects both men and women. However, the media has traditionally concentrated on those cases where women are victims and men are abusers. Many people are concerned about the lack of coverage of male victims. Here are just three facts to consider:

- Each year, 1.5 million American women are severely assaulted by their "intimate partners." It is less known that 835,000 men are also assaulted annually.

- Women and men assault each other with roughly equal frequency. This would make the difference in the above figures even closer to parity. However, women are somewhat more likely to be injured, and are more likely to report such injuries to police.

- Many women's shelters exist in the United States and other Western nations, but there are very few shelters for men.

Domestic violence hurts us all, either directly or indirectly. While it is important to maintain coverage of women victims, proportionate coverage should also be given to male victims.

I hope that you will take these opinions into consideration in future reports.

Sincerely,

[Your name, contact info, etc]

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/16/1430224.shtml

RACP Concludes Circumcision is Not Medically Justified

Scott · 16 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I received the following press release from NoCirc.org: "San Anselmo, CA – Last week, the Royal Australasian College of Physicians (RACP), along with six other Australasian medical associations, published its new circumcision policy statement concluding, "After extensive review of the literature the RACP reaffirms that there is no medical indication for routine male circumcision."" Read More for the rest of the release."It is time for American physicians to follow this lead and reject routine male circumcision," said Los Angeles pediatrician Paul Fleiss, M.D. "There are absolutely no scientific medical reasons for this procedure to continue parading as standard medical care in the USA."

"While a handful of American and Canadian circumcision advocates have gotten recent media attention by promoting circumcision to prevent cervical cancer or HIV, this new statement takes into account all recent studies and declares there is no reason to circumcise," said Marilyn Milos, RN, director of the National Organization of Circumcision Information Resource Centers (NOCIRC). "It is increasingly obvious that a medical fringe element is working to promote circumcision for no other reason than boosting their careers or their pocketbooks. What is abhorrent to me is that reasonable people are taking harmful advice."

"Physicians have known for years that neither male nor female circumcision could be justified on medical grounds. In both cases it is done for social reasons, not medical need," stated Dr. George Denniston, MD, MPH, president of Doctors Opposing Circumcision. "In the United States, we no longer circumcise girls, but boys are still unprotected. Perhaps other countries will have to take the lead away from this outmoded, harmful practice.

Milos said, "When there is no evidence that potential benefits exceed the known risks and harm of an operation, good medical practice dictates that the operation not be done. The RACP statement says there are no medical indications for circumcision. Therefore, any continued practice of routinely circumcising baby boys is not only medically unnecessary, but also unethical and, perhaps, criminal."

The policy statement was adopted by six other Australian and New Zealand medical organizations, including the Australasian Association of Paediatric Surgeons, New Zealand Society of Paediatric Surgeons, Royal Australasian College of Surgeons, and Urological Society of Australasia. The new policy statement observed there have been increasing claims over recent years of health benefits from routine male circumcision at a time when the rest of the western world was eliminating the procedure. The most egregious of these claims are urinary tract infections, HIV, and penile cancer. This thorough review of all literature showed these claims cannot be medically substantiated.

The RACP statement says, "The complication rate of neonatal circumcision is reported to be around 1% to 5% and includes local infection, bleeding, and damage to the penis. Serious complications such as bleeding, septicemia, and meningitis may occasionally cause death."

NOCIRC claims the complication rate is one hundred percent, calling it 'male genital mutilation' because the boy is denied a fully functioning penis.

Other national medical associations, including the American Cancer Society, American Medical Association, and American Academy of Pediatrics, also have circumcision policy statements that find there is no medical justification for routine infant circumcision. Irresponsibly, they leave the decision to parents who are often misinformed. In the United States, infant circumcision is the only surgery prescribed by parents.

The American medical associations did not reply when invited to comment on the RACP's new policy statement.

"Parents must be informed they are mutilating their sons," said Fleiss, "and that they are not preventing or treating any disease by having the foreskin removed in the first few days of life. The foreskin is necessary for full sexual enjoyment and helps protect this vital purpose throughout life. It should be left alone. Babies have a need to be loved and protected, and I look forward to the day when the agonizing cry of a newborn male being circumcised is no longer heard anywhere in the USA."
The male circumcision rate in the USA is under 60%, down from a high of 85% in 1979. Most European, Asian, and Latin American countries have a near zero circumcision rate. Female circumcision has been outlawed in the western world since at least 1996.

National Organization of Circumcision Information Resource Centers

P.O. Box 2512, San Anselmo, California 94979

www.nocirc.org

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/16/1450207.shtml

MANN Chat: Open Forum

Scott · 16 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve writes "This week's MANN chat will be Wednesday night (10/16), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the usual location. This chat will be an open forum, with no designated topic. Come to discuss any men's activism issues that you consider important, and invite a friend to join you."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/16/1841252.shtml

cyberMan & Harbinger Join Forces in E-Book Publishing

Scott · 17 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "cyberManbooks.com announced today it now offers e-published versions of books from Harbinger Press, http://harbpress.com an independent specialty publisher.

> "Our books are meant for, and bought by both genders. Frankly, more women buy them than men. But our male audience is also important and more reachable on the Internet. The men who buy books, especially nonfiction on issues pertinent to them as men, are more likely to be on the Internet, and often more at home acquiring and reading them there. It's an obvious place to take them, " says Keith MacLeod, owner of Harbinger Press. Harbinger features titles such as: "The Ultimate Survival Guide for the Single Father" and "Multiple Scandals Of Child Support."

See the Read More section for the rest of the press release.

cyberManbooks is an e-publisher with real-world bases in Yuma, Arizona and Bracknell, England. They publish a variety of 'guy friendly' titles, ranging from novels to cowboy poetry. The cooperative venture was established in an effort to provide more variety to cyberMan readers, and wider availability for Harbinger press. "In the present day e-books are still a little Shih Tzu barking at a big Alsatian. As more and more people have computers and even portable or handheld computers, e-books will grow. The more e-books there are, the more people will consider using them," says Raymond Cuttill, co-owner of cyberManbooks.

"Certainly the more options of both reading media and purchase media, the more people are served. We do very important books that few other publishers would touch. Not because they say outrageous things. They don't. They directly face very difficult issues that have deep meaning to a great many people like divorce, child support and domestic violence. But the mass media, including big publishers, for fear of offending anyone, only deal with things they feel safe in casting in black and white. It is exactly these black-white casted issues our books explore, and the people those books serve -- who are searching for the colors -- know they can't use traditional media to find it," MacLeod said.

Both companies were established to meet needs previously unaddressed by larger publishers. As big publishers increasingly focus on the women's market, owners Raymond Cuttill and Trudy W. Schuett saw a need for material for men, and a more-traditional focus for women. cyberManbooks went online in February of this year to provide fiction and other books for this niche market, which is growing as more consumers take advantage of the variety of choices offered by independent publishers.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/16/1838203.shtml

Battered Men's Conference this Saturday

Scott · 17 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This is just a final reminder that the 2nd Annual Conference on Male Victims of Domestic Abuse will be held this Saturday in Portland, Maine. Word is that Mary Cleary from AMEN (Abused MEN) will be at the event, coming all the way from Ireland. I also know other attendees are coming from all parts of the U.S. and even Canada.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/16/2133238.shtml

Biological Clock Strikes Men Too

Brad · 18 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tummler writes "Men who put their career before having a family should beware: the ticking of the biological clock is as important for fertility in men as it is in women.

American scientists have discovered that genetic damage to sperm routinely starts to cause infertility in men as young as 35." Scott's update: Men's News Daily also has an interesting follow-up article to this story.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/18/1313240.shtml

Wannabe Fathers Ramp-up Testosterone

Brad · 18 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Raindrop writes "Newscientist reports that men wanting a baby "unconsciously" increase testosterone levels. This goes against popular opinion of the "little brain" controlling the "big brain" - seems it's the other way around."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/18/1316245.shtml

Madonna's New Movie a Change of Pace

Scott · 19 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "I found this article on Madonna's new movie "Swept Away," and after I read what the movie is about, it occurred to me that the reason the critics panned the movie so aggressively might be because the female lead, played by Madonna, is made to look weak and dependent on a man, the male lead played by Adriano Giannini, and worse yet, a man below her "station." The film tells the story of an American "rich bitch," who makes life miserable for a lowly Italian crew member of the yacht on which she is cruising the Aegean. But when the couple are accidentally stranded, the Italian "rough trade" sailor forces her to beg for his help to survive until they become lovers. I haven't seen it yet, and I'm not really a movie critic, but it would be interesting to see what the folks here have to say about it. Is it really a bad movie, or is it just that the illiterati don't like the fact that the woman isn't dominant?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/19/1455227.shtml

Grants Encourage Male Arrest Policies

Scott · 19 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "Here are examples of how police departments become biased against men (with huge grant offerings) by teaching them the "correct way" to handle domestic issues. In MA, against all evidentiary facts in just about every instance, men (fathers, husbands, boyfriends) get arrested because this is the "correct and trained way to handle these things." Many men are sitting in jail in MA without any examination of the facts concerning the incident. I know, I was one of them. Please contact the people listed on this page with accurate domestic violence statistics. Whether they want it or not doesn't matter, they need to know. Stop the "witch hunt" against men in MA."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/19/1457222.shtml

Progress in Prostate Cancer Genetic Research

Scott · 20 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "Here is some good news about the fight to cure prostate cancer that kills over 30,000 American men each year. Scientists say a gene has been identified that will predict if the cancer will develop into its most lethal form. The earlier the treatment the more chance there is to cure it. Identifying this gene will give the doctors the edge in their diagnosis and treatment plan.

How appropriate just a couple of weeks after Prostate Cancer 'Un'awareness Month."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/19/1458249.shtml

CANOW Publishes Updates to Family Court Report 2002

Scott · 20 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

An Anonymous User sent us this link to the California chapter of NOW's debunked Family Court Report 2002. It appears that it has been revised recently, and I'd be curious to know if anyone familiar with the controversy over the first version could tell us what the new changes are? Please post your thoughts in the comments section below.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/20/2113227.shtml

The Baby Ceiling

Adam · 22 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Didja miss me? I hope so, as it shows good taste :-) Ok, enough cheap jokes and let's get to the article. This one is a series of articles centered around Sylvia Ann Hewlett's book Creating A Life: Professional Women and the Quest for Children which is focused on the large trend of childless career women. I admit this is not what you expect to see around here, but this book has got a large amount of feminists going mad over the issues it raises, and I thought you might be interested in seeing what all the fuss is about. Feel free to check it out for yourself.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/21/0340223.shtml

The Last "Stronghold of Masculinity"

Adam · 22 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This is quite an interesting article here, as it looks at the monastic community of Mount Athos which is a spiritual retreat for the nearest man, and for a thousand years has banned women and all images of women from the island. The writer thinks this is woman hating at its worst, but overlooks the fact that at the start at the article he says this was done in the name of the Virgin Mary. As Bugs Bunny would say, "what a maroon!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/21/0341235.shtml

Negotiating the Sexes on the Radio

Scott · 22 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "On Thursday I am scheduled to be on the Lion Radio at Penn State University. I will be talking about Men's Issues that are known to us and possibly challenging whoever it is they bring to debate me. I'm going to try and get an mp3 of the show so I can send around to people if the show turns out well. You can listen to the show live over the net. You will have to suppress your 'pop up squasher program' if you have one, so you can get the pop-up link to choose your bandwidth, etc... The show is planned for October 24th starting at 5 PM EST. Log on early just in case; sometimes the music is pretty good and it has less comercials. You can even call in and rant. I have no idea how many people listen to this station but that's what it's all about - raising awareness wherever you can. I will try to use my negotiation skills in regards to dispute resolution. Let's see what comes of it."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/22/1950248.shtml

MANN Chat: Men's Support Groups and Activism

Scott · 23 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve writes "I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (10/23), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the usual location. The topic for this chat will be 'Men's Support Groups as Aids to Activism.' On Sunday, I had the pleasure of meeting several men's activists in Denver, Colorado. They gave me a warm welcome and we discussed, among other things, men's support groups. Establishing a men's support group can be challenging. Running a men's support group can be even more challenging. Yet, great adventures and rewards await those who face the challenges of working with a small group of men who meet regularly and support one another on various issues. What do men's support groups have to do with men's activism? How can I start a men's support group? How can being 'one of the guys' in a men's support group make me a better activist? Join us at this week's MANN chat to discuss these questions and more. Take a friend or two to the chat, also!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/23/1758248.shtml

McElroy Questions Battered Woman Syndrome

Scott · 25 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

kade writes "FoxNews has an excellent argument against "Battered Woman Syndrome", which claims that battered women are psychologically traumatized and therefore not responsible for their violent actions.
As stated in the article, BWS is "a legal defense available to women and de facto denied to men."" Wendy McElroy is the author of this excellent piece.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/25/1736228.shtml

UK Cancer Research Funding Statistics

Scott · 25 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Robex writes "The BBC reports today that "Some of the UK's biggest cancer killers get only a fraction of the funding they deserve".

The graph has been produced by The UK National Cancer Research Institute and is the first ever comprehensive breakdown of cancer research in the UK.

You will be unsurprised to find that Breast Cancer is one of the most heavily funded cancers versus mortality rate. And if you ever were in doubt about the task we face in getting people to write about male health, the article manages to avoid mentiononing Prostate Cancer once. Of all the cancers shown on the graph, it and Melanoma are the only ones not mentioned."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/25/1739255.shtml

CBS "60 Minutes" Discusses Boys' Performance in Education

Scott · 28 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Serge writes *"CBS recently aired a "60 Minutes" episode on boys. "Just as educators' special efforts to improve the performance of girls in school is showing success, they now have a new problem: boys are falling behind at all levels of education. Lesley Stahl reports." The above snippet is the only transcript found on their site. All the other segments of that showing are transcribed! While partially putting the blame on fathers who fail to encourage their sons in scholastic achievement, as well as crying that "men still earn more," the program did raise important questions that are but all too familiar to this site's readers. But overall, I think it was a step in the right direction and is sure to get some discussion going in wider circles. Perphaps someone else could find the transcript of this on their site, as I am unable to. Otherwise, we should probably encourage them."* I've received word that N.O.W. has issued an action alert to lobby CBS to stop acknowledging the plight of males in school, so we really need to counter their efforts and help increase this kind of coverage.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/28/0050214.shtml

Grassroots Campaign for Male-Friendly Judge in WA

Scott · 28 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch sent us this story from Men's News Daily and writes "Here is an opportunity to do some more letter writing activism. There is a male friendly judge who is trying for a supreme court seat. In fact I think he is all about the greatness of fathers. Even his own daugther, which I think is great, is his biggest supporter. His name is Judge Steve Alexander who "is a fiscal and social conservative who believes in the sanctity of family and fatherhood" is trying to get himself on the ballot for Washington State Supreme Court, Position 4. If this is of an interest to you, you may consider writing in or helping with the "grassroots" campaign they, his daugther and many others are trying to organize for his admission. "I wanted to be there for my children--not just a name on their birth certificate, but a strong, warm, and loving presence in their lives"-Judge Alexander." I'm really sorry for taking so long to post this, I hope there's still time for it to help.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/28/0056232.shtml

Men's Groups Making Progress on DV Awareness

Scott · 29 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "Here is a somewhat unbiased article that was prominently featured in The Boston Globe concerning domestic abuse. The headline and pictures associated with the article look like they are of standard feminist slanted variety that newspapers regularly publish. But this one presents men's issues as they relate to the domestic violence "industry." As usual, the local feminists have issue with the truth. PLEASE contact the Globe to support unbiased reporting like this, and send them facts and support on domestic violence issues."" letter@globe.com

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/29/1411233.shtml

Osteoporosis Ignored in Aging Men

Brad · 29 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "A recent article discusses how the medical community ignores older men's health problems, specifically osteoporosis."

> " To investigate whether doctors treat osteoporosis in men who are hospitalized for hip fracture, the researchers reviewed the medical records of more than 300 patients at least 50 years old. Patients were asked in mailed questionnaires whether they received any medication for osteoporosis [...].
>
> According to the report, less than 5% of men had received any treatment for osteoporosis when they were discharged from the hospital, compared with 27% of women."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/29/1715235.shtml

Live Call-in Show with Thompson and Sacks

Scott · 29 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dianna Thompson and Glenn Sacks will host their first live call-in show on MND radio tonight at 9 PM EST/6 PM PST. They will be discussing the war against so-called "deadbeat dads" and the new, election season punitive measures against divorced dads being discussed in Ohio. The show will be on Men's News Daily radio and the call-in number is 1-888-440-3476.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/29/1945247.shtml

Paternity Justice Act Raises Questions

Scott · 30 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "In this article on ifeminists.com, Kirsten Tyrnan argues that the veto of California's paternity fraud legislation was not as irresponsible as Glenn Sacks and Dianna Thompson believe. In fact, vetoing the bill prevented the state from making the mistake of trading one set of problems for another. Tyrnan's main concern with the original bill is also well stated. Neither the woman who lied about vital information to the presumed father, nor the system which blindly enforced her fraudulent claims against him, would be held accountable.
"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/29/1833230.shtml

October Men's Hour Includes Status of Men in NH Update

Scott · 30 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "In the October Men's Hour; Michael J. Geanoulis talks about The NH Commission on the Status of Men, how hearts and minds are being won. Will the WHO report on violence save men from everything from suicide through domestic and sexual violence to war? Well, not exactly. In Costa Rica mothers can name the father of their baby if they want to. Presumably then they never get it wrong - right? wrong! Available at www.menshour.com. Listen online or download MP3s."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/30/1316230.shtml

MANN Chat: Do We Need an Office of Men's Health?

Scott · 30 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve writes "I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (10/30), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the usual location. The topic for this chat will be 'Do we need an Office of Men's Health?' The Men's Health Act of 2001 would create an Office of Men's Health within the Department of Health and Human Services. However, that bill is languishing in Congress, while men continue to suffer from the concerns the bill seeks to address. Some men say we need an Office of Men's Health to promote men's health and well-being. Other men say such an office would merely create bigger government and more bureaucracy, and would not produce any tangible benefits for men. What do you say? Join us at this week's MANN chat to share your views on the proposed Office of Men's Health or men's health issues generally. Invite a friend to accompany you to the chat; he'll thank you for it!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/30/1317226.shtml

VAWA Legislative Intent is to Include Men

Scott · 30 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

As Stanley Green mentioned during the Conference on Male Victims of Domestic Abuse two Saturdays ago, many people aren't aware that, despite some of the language of the bill, the Violence Against Women Act is not intended to exclude funding for male services, nor could doing so survive a constitutional challenge. Of special interest is the fact that Senator Orin Hatch entered some important comments into the Congressional Record before the bill was passed. These comments can be read in the Read More section below. If you'd like more information on this, the Men's Health Network has some relevant documents you can download from this page. "There is one final issue that has been raised, recently, which we would like to take this opportunity to address, and that is the eligibility of men to receive benefits and services under the original Violence Against Women Act and under this reauthorizing legislation. The original Act was enacted in 1994 to respond to the serious and escalating problem of violence against women. A voluminous legislative record compiled after four years of congressional hearings demonstrated convincingly that certain violent crimes, such as domestic violence and sexual assault, disproportionally affect women, both in terms of the sheer number of assaults and the seriousness of the injuries inflicted. Accordingly, the Act, through several complementary grant programs, made it a priority to address domestic violence and sexual assault targeted at women, even though women, of course, are not alone in experiencing this type of violence.

"Recent statistics justify a continued focus on violence targeted against women. For example, a report by the U.S. Department of Justice, Bureau of Justice Statistics issued in May 2000 on Intimate Partner Violence confirms that crimes committed against persons by current or former spouses, boyfriends or girlfriends--termed intimate partner violence--is `committed primarily against women.' Of the approximately 1 million violent crimes committed by intimate partners in 1998, 876,340, or about 85 percent, were committed against women. Women were victims of intimate partner violence at a rate about 5 times that of men. That same year, women represented nearly 3 out of 4 victims of the 1,830 murders attributed to intimate partners. Indeed, while there has been a sharp decrease over the years in the rate of murder of men by intimates, the percentage of female murder victims killed by intimates has remained stubbornly at about 30 percent since 1976.

"Despite the need to direct federal funds toward the most pressing problem, it was not, and is not, the intent of Congress categorically to exclude men who have suffered domestic abuse or sexual assaults from receiving benefits and services under the Violence Against Women Act. The Act defines such key terms as `domestic violence' and `sexual assault,' which are used to determine eligibility under several of the grant programs, including the largest, the STOP grant program, in gender-neutral language. Men who have suffered these types of violent attacks are eligible under current law to apply for services and benefits that are funded under the original Act--and they will remain eligible under the Violence Against Women Act of 2000--whether it be for shelter space under the Family Violence Protection and Services Act, or counseling by the National Domestic Violence Hotline, or legal assistance in obtaining a protection order under the Legal Assistance for Victims program.

"We anticipate that the executive branch agencies responsible for making grants under the Act, as amended, will continue to administer these programs so as to ensure that men who have been victimized by domestic violence and sexual assault will receive benefits and services under the Act, as appropriate.

"We append to this joint statement a section by section analysis of the bill and a more detailed section by section analysis of the provisions contained in Title V.

"Thank you."

- Senator Orin Hatch

October 11, 2000

Congressional Record pgs. 10191-92

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/30/197256.shtml

Male Witches Executed 400 Years Ago

Brad · 31 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

An anonymous user points to a finding by two Canadian academics. It turns out that the witch-hunts that occured around the 16th century were not exclusively female-oriented, as modern media suggests.

> "It makes it much harder to maintain the standard, stereotypical narrative of unrelieved misogyny, of blind ignorance, superstition and woman-hating,"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/30/205212.shtml

A Man Driven To Suicide/Murder?

Thomas · 31 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

We're gonna hear a lot about this.

Robert S. Flores Jr., the man who killed three professors and himself at the University of Arizona, wrote a long letter detailing the reasons for his actions. In that missive he states, "...I will stand up for myself and be assertive. What I discovered was that being a male and non-traditional student, and (shudder!), assertive was not compatible with the instructors at the college of nursing... In many ways male nursing students are 'tokens.'" He speaks of his wife using standard accusations against him during their divorce, though he says she couldn't substantiate any of them and even contradicted herself, and he gives other examples of being abused for being male. He has stated outright that these were among the reasons for his murder/suicide.

It sounds like, among other things, this man cracked after years of abuse and oppression for being male. I'm afraid we will see much more of this sort of thing in the future.Source: azstarnet.com

Title: Robert Stewart Flores Jr.: "Communication from the dead"

Author: Robert Stewart Flores, Jr.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/30/2317241.shtml

Breast Cancer Gene Tied to Prostate Cancer

Scott · 31 October 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "After all the disparately high funding for breast cancer research at the expense of other cancers such as prostate cancer it has been found that the gene that increases a woman's risk for breast cancer is tied to a man's increased risk for prostate cancer. The story is here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/10/30/1840258.shtml

Australian Phone Counseling Service for Men Swamped

Scott · 1 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "This story in The Age says that Australia's new phone counseling service for men is unable to keep up with demand. In spite of the degrading cartoon beside the article, men's voices are finally being heard." I also found some of the commentary in the article degrading to men, but I'm encouraged to see that men are making use of this service. We need to help these people, not ridicule them.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/01/0055218.shtml

Chicago Tribune Columnist Downplays Pedophilia by Women

Scott · 1 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

chicago joe writes "I just read one of the most disturbing commentaries co-authored by Eric Zorn and Mary Schmich of the Chicago Tribune. It was an opinion piece asking the question,"Is sex with teens different if adult is a woman?" This is concerning the recent arrest of a teacher in the Chicago area who is accused of having sex with three of her male teenage students. Both writers agreed that it is not the same. They essentially said female pedophilia is OK! Eric Zorn wanted to know why the boys were not suspended because "they should have known better", and he diminished the felony charges because it is "every teenage boy's fantasy." Mary Schmich states that men are predators when engaging in sex with underage girls, but women are innocent because they are "just having relationships" with young boys. The Chicago Tribune is owned by the powerful media giant Tribune Co, owners of many media outlets and also owners of the Chicago Cubs. This should be an embarrassment to them." Here's the link, though free registration is required to read it.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/01/010241.shtml

A Woman' Right to Choose, Not A Man's

Scott · 1 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "This story says that abortion rights are at the center of many key races in this year's election. We need to pay attention to this because as much as the feminists want to keep the focus on access to safe and legal abortion, the Roe v. Wade ruling is key to father's rights: it states that the father has no right to any decision making in the reproductive process. It is possible for father to have reproductive choice AND to keep abortion safe and legal. Note that this MAY be a possible dividing point with the pro-abortion crowd. There may be many women who favor male reproductive choice who also demand the right to safe and legal abortion."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/01/1735239.shtml

NOW's Report on Media Bias

Brad · 2 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

According to this article... well, read this.

> "Network programming sends a distorted, often offensive image of women, girls and people of color brought to you through the point-of-view of white men and boys," said NOW Foundation president Kim Gandy. "Television remains very much a man's world, with women serving primarily as eye candy."

Apparently CNN isn't aware that not all women agree.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/02/148257.shtml

UK Law to Men: Prove it

Brad · 2 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Gone is the notion that one is innocent until proven guilty. A new UK law puts the burden of proof on men to prove that they are not rapists.

> "The Home Secretary, David Blunkett, has made it clear that the current rate of convictions for rape is "unacceptable", and the explicit aim of these reforms is to find more men guilty."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/02/1414239.shtml

Gender Equity Policies

Brad · 5 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Chas writes *"In "The Australian" 5th Nov. 2002, Angela Shanahan challenges gender equity policies in schools because they result in inequity for boys. The claims by gender feminists that girls suffered because of gender bias is disputed. Shanahan points to the needs of boys being neglected because of such philosophy. She argues that inequity for anyone is not a gender issue but a pedagogic and educational issue."*Make good note of the "feedback" option at the bottom of the link. Support for this type of reporting is critical.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/05/149236.shtml

Does NOW Stand for Equality?

Brad · 6 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Thompson & Sacks ask 'Does NOW Stand for Equality?' on their new, live call-in show.

Deborah Watkins, former president of the Tarrant County (Dallas/Ft. Worth, Texas) chapter of the National Organization for Women, left NOW to become president of the Dallas-Ft. Worth Chapter of the National Coalition of Free Men. What prompted Ms. Watkins to make such a dramatic transition? You can find out by joining Thompson & Sacks as we ask "Does NOW Stand for Equality?" on our live call-in show on MND radio. The show will began at 9 PM EST/6 PM PST (Tuesday, November 5).

To listen, or for more information, go to Mens News Daily.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/05/2228249.shtml

MANN Chat: False Accusations - Disarming the Growing Threat

Scott · 6 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve writes "I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (11/6), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the usual location. The topic for this chat will be 'False Accusations: Disarming The Growing Threat.' New rape laws in the UK will gravely harm a man's right to due process of law when he is accused of rape. This anti-male legislation is just the latest threat to men's rights that false accusations create. What are we going to do to combat such threats? How are we going to hold false accusers accountable for their crimes? I hope you will join us at this week's MANN chat as we figure out the answers to these questions."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/06/1839224.shtml

NH Men's Commission Sponsor Re-Elected

Scott · 8 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "In August and September, this site ran articles about David A. Bickford, who was running for re-election to the New Hampshire House. He won. Read about it here." That's correct - David was the primary sponsor of the NH Commission on the Status of Men bill, and due to his district changing, he had a lot of concerns about being re-elected. In the end, he actually received the most votes in the new district (of which the top eight candidates receive seats), so he couldn't have done better. Thanks in part to some of the generous donations that went to him after pleas for help appeared on this site.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/07/2031217.shtml

An Explosion of Interest in a Commission for Men

Scott · 8 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "NCFM, LA completed a tabling project on Tuesday November 5th. The objective of the project was to obtain signed letters in support of a Commission for Men in Los Angeles County. Our goal is to obtain over 100 signed letters before November 19th. Currently, we have about 50-signed letters in support of the commission." See the Read More section below for more info. Congratulations to this group - we look forward to seeing the outcome of your efforts!The objective of the letters is to place additional pressure in addition to our suit against the L.A. Board of Supervisors. When we tabled, we were outside of the main courthouse on the sidewalk. We initially thought that it would be hard to obtain the signatures and create interest in men's issues. To our surprise we found it difficult for the two of us to manage the interest! We found that many potential contacts were missed because we were so overwhelmed with educating the public as fast as possible while moving on to the next person. You can bet the police were patrolling and watching is very closely. They made several passes but left us alone.

Due to the success of the response, we now believe that tabling is a key tool of our grassroots effort to expand interest in men's issues. It is amazing how many men commented that they had heard of our work with AB2240. There were people from all walks of life expressing interest in our activism. We literally had attorneys, doctors, laborers, and others taking our flyers, reading them, and coming back with the comment, "now this is an organization that I can support!"

Because of this effort and other efforts in increasing our membership we are finding that we should be able to double the size of NCFM, LA in the next couple of months. That means that our influence will double and that we will be able to increase the chances for success. The sense that we are getting is that there is an explosion of interest in a strong men's rights group. The interest is so strong that it is difficult to manage it. That is a great problem to have. Clearly, the public is fed up with the radical feminists and their lies. They are actively looking for solutions. It is now obvious that men's issues will move forward because of the shear justice of the cause.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/08/1820215.shtml

Registration required: Are sex offenders unique?

Thomas · 8 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I've often wondered about the forced registration of sex offenders, when other violent criminals are not required to register with the police. This article questions the dubious reasons for forcing only sex offenders to register and have their names and addresses available to the public. It seems to me that child abusers, at the very least, should also be forced to register. Perhaps they aren't because women are the perpetrators of most physical abuse and murders of children.Source: www.townhall.com

Title: Registration required: Are sex offenders unique?

Author: Jacob Sullum

Date: November 8, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/08/1916223.shtml

Staunch Feminist Nancy Pelosi Leads Race To Become House Minority Leader

Thomas · 8 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Representative Nancy Pelosi will likely become the leader of the Democratic Party in the House of Representatives. Pelosi is very active in spreading the myth that women are paid far less than men for the same work. She supports the discriminatory VAWA, and wants to see it more staunchly enforced. She is also very active in the campaign to ratify the radical feminist CEDAW. If she wins this post, the Democrats will have taken another step toward domination by the radical feminist agenda.Source: www.foxnews.com

Title: Frost Drops Out of House Minority Leader Race

Author: Liza Porteus

Date: November 08, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/08/1958245.shtml

Female Bashing E-cards Available to Prove a Point at MSNHatesMen.com

Scott · 9 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "A revived www.MSNHatesMen.com is now running. It is a free antidote to the male bashing e-cards on the MSN "Love Stinks" section. The female e-card is now available, equivalent to the MSN one about pressing the pillow harder so you can't hear a man whining. If you think the female ecard is sexist, then you should think the male ecard sexist. This is not about hating women - it is about challenging the hatred of men."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/08/1824203.shtml

The F-Word: Fatherhood

Thomas · 9 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Though it focuses mostly on men acting individually, this article struck me as a further sign of just how strong an impact the men's movement is having. Researchers have started to ask about the role of men in the plummeting birth rate in Australia (a phenomenon occurring in most or all industrialized nations). This suggests to me that, as we take control of our lives over the next few decades, men and the men's movement will have at least as much of an impact on society as feminism has had over the last 35 or so years.

Hang onto your hats, ladies and gentlemen, we're in for a hell of a ride.Source: theage.com.au

Title: Don't call me daddy

Author: Wendy Tuohy

Date: November 9 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/09/1817235.shtml

In Honor of our Vets...

Scott · 11 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I'd like to take a moment today to honor the military veterans who have made all kinds of sacrifices for the rights that most of us take for granted. If anyone has poems or other relevant thoughts on this, feel free to post them in the comments section of this story.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/11/1725243.shtml

The Silence Of The Man

Thomas · 12 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Unfortunately, this article was put in the entertainment section, rather than being written in a slightly more serious style and published as an editorial. I also don't buy the "Fathers may not, on the whole, have it as bad as mothers." Nevertheless, the essay deals with the silencing of men, and it shows that men are starting to speak out.

This other article deals with the general silencing, in the US, of any voice that runs contrary to pc dogma. It's good to see more and more people speaking out about the silencing of men and the social disease known as political correctness.First article:

Source: www.nypost.com

Title: Is this your wife?

Author: Joseph Steuer

Date: November 11, 2002

Second article:

Source: www.worldnetdaily.com

Title: America is afraid

Author: Dr. Laura Schlessinger

Date: November 11, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/12/1739211.shtml

NCFM-LA's Web Site Additions

Scott · 12 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc writes "Please check out the website National Coalition of Free Men, Los Angeles chapter, and sign our guesbook! We could use your support and feedback. Be sure to click on "flyer." That cute little boy smiling at you on the upper left is Ray. He grew up to become a battered male and a Vietnam Vet, and he's now one of NCFM's most active members! In fact he designed the flyer! Oh, and don't forget to click on "activist projects" to see the letters of support for a commission for men coming from leaders all over the community. The declaration by Patricia Overberg at the top names the DV shelters who abused and mistreated her just because she dared to make some space for male victims. Big thanks to Warble and his friend for designing the website, to Ray for designing the flyer, to all chapter members for their hard work, to NCFM national for their support and for a start-up grant, and to everyone else for their support as well and for being part of a movement that will not stop, ever, until we see equal justice for men. Of course there's much more in site for our site, but this is what we have so far and we'd love to hear from you in our guestbook. Thanks!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/12/1912215.shtml

Boston Globe Recognizing Men Abused by Women

Scott · 13 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "The Boston Globe has recognized that men are abused by women by publishing Cathy Young's excellent article that points out that domestic violence policies are all too often influenced by an outdated, one-sided, and sexist view of abuse."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/12/1921237.shtml

MANN Chat: Toward Male-friendly Family Law

Scott · 13 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve writes "I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (11/13), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the usual location. The topic for this chat will be 'Toward Male-friendly Family Law.' I think most men's activists would agree that there are many problems with the family law system and that the system generally discriminates against men. To effect positive change, it might help to consider what a reformed family law system would look like. What is your vision of a male-friendly system of laws relating to marriage and divorce? Join us at this week's MANN chat to share your vision and learn from others. Invite a friend or two to join you!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/13/1932233.shtml

The Men's Pill: News

Adam · 14 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Have I got an exclusive for you, some interesting news about the men's pill, I would say more, but the real fun is finding out yourself isn't it? of course it is!
Click the link and read for yourself. I think you'll be surprised....

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/13/1430237.shtml

Sacks Blasts College Misandry

Brad · 14 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

In his latest article, "Why Males Don't Go to College," men's issues columnist Glenn Sacks blasts American universities as "hostile environments" for males. He takes readers into the classrooms of his old alma mater, UCLA, to expose the bigotry which college men face on a daily basis. He also skewers what he calls the "timid male professors who are so content with their own careers that they were perfectly willing to allow 18 year-old boys to be beat up on rather than jeopardize their own comfort by speaking out" against anti-male bigotry.

Glenn will discuss the article on the Al Rantel Show tonight (Wednesday, November 13) at 7 PM PST on AM 790 KABC in Los Angeles. Listeners can call in to the show at 1-800-222-KABC.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/14/0427256.shtml

American Furniture Warehouse Ad Offensive

Scott · 14 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

equalitarian62 writes, "American Furniture Warehouse (in Colorado) has a commercial that shows a man and his wife on an old squeaky mattress. The man is uncomfortable with the mattress and keeps tossing and turning, which obviously annoys his wife. The wife then suddenly grabs a frying pan and hits him over the head! After this "humor," the viewer is told that that there is a sale on at American Furniture Warehouse. To send an email of protest, see this page."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/14/0221238.shtml

Glenn to Appear on the Charles Goyette Show

Brad · 15 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn will discuss anti-male hostility on college campuses and his new article "Why Males Don't Go to College" (She Thinks, 11/12/02) on the Charles Goyette Show on Friday, November 15 at 5 PM PST on KFYI AM 550 in Phoenix, AZ. Listeners can call the show at (602) 258-5394 or e-mail the host. For more information, go to GlennSacks.com.Glenn will also discuss this issue on the Gary Nolan Show on Radio America on Monday, November 18 at 8:30 PM EST on the Radio America network. Click here to listen.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/15/0124254.shtml

Wendy McElroy exposes feminism's "urban legends"

Brad · 15 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

FoxNews has recently commented on an article by Wendy McElroy that elaborates on how feminism destroys the lives of people who dare to contradict it.

> [T]he media should stop treating slander as though it was a counter-argument. When men who question feminist data are bashed as batterers, reporters should demand hard evidence for this criminal charge.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/15/0138210.shtml

Glenn to Appear on ABC Radio in Australia

Brad · 16 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn will discuss the increasing trend towards men as primary caregivers of children with host Madeleine Randall on ABC Radio's Early Morning program in Australia on Monday, November 18 at 8:30 am PST. You can listen to the show via the Internet.To read some of Glenn's columns on men as primary caregivers, see "Father Care: The Other Child Care Option" (W. New York Family Magazine, June 2001) and "Stay-at-Home Dads: A Practical Solution to the Career Woman's Dilemma" (Newsday, 5/22/02).

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/15/0127255.shtml

Man Arrested For Self-Defense

Thomas · 16 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anthony Davis was almost killed in a knife attack by his ex-girlfriend. His defense is that he defended himself by punching his assailant. She got black eyes; he almost died; he was arrested. Read about it here.Source: www.channel3000.com

Title: Defense: Badger Running Back Almost Killed In Attack
Davis Wants Charges Against Him Dropped

Date: November 15, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/16/0251244.shtml

Suicide Epidemic at School Not Raising the Right Questions

Scott · 16 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "This story concerns two successful suicides and one attempted suicide within in the span of one week in the Pioneer Central School District near Buffalo, New York. As I sit here shaking my head, all I can say is Isn't about time someone started to investigate why our sons are doing this?!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/16/171226.shtml

Sexism Against Dads at the IRS

Scott · 16 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Aleph Null writes "Check out this link at the IRS web site. Notice the genders of the presumed child support offenders - always male! File your complaints here. You can also include a reference to statistics which indicate that non-custodial moms are more likely to be in arrears than non-custodial dads."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/16/174228.shtml

NYTimes Magazine DV Article

Scott · 17 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Matt Campbell writes "This is a good article questioning the efficacy of DV-related mandatory arrest laws. Still, the article fails to mention that half of DV cases are women assaulting men, though at least it mentions DV vs. men a little more more than in passing. But it also does not discuss the anti-male judicial bias in DV cases, even ones where men were clearly the victim."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/16/179243.shtml

Radical Feminists Attempt to Silence Senator Anne Cools

Scott · 17 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

AFG writes "These video links show what the radical feminists don't want you to see. During a conference discussing domestic violence and shared parenting in Canada, Senator Anne Cools (who has fought for the rights of both sexes) was repeatedly shouted down by militant man-hating feminists. At certain times, they even attempted to get the camera shut off, as they didn't want their misandry exposed. One ray of hope at the conference: Most of the audience applauded Cools whenever she stood up to the feminists. I would like to extend my support and thanks to Senator Cools for standing up for what is right and for what is fair. And here is a link to Anne Cools' site (if anyone wants to send her a thank you note)."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/16/1713238.shtml

Series of Articles Document Violent Crime by Women

Scott · 18 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones refutes the idea that women are incapable of violent crime (and the light tone with which the media portrays it) with the following examples from recent news: "An Iranian woman cut off her husband's ear with a knife after he simply asked her why she was late coming home. He reported to police that she becomes extremely angry easily and often beats him up. The story is here.

A gang of armed and dangerous pregnant women in Ecuador went on a crime spree and said they did not care who saw them because sexist Ecuadoran law places pregnant women above the law. After their pregnancy tests came back positive the police were forced to release them all. The story is here.

Two 14 year old girls robbed a bank in New York and their mother drove the getaway car. The story is here.

A South African man died after his wife became angry with him and grabbed him by the testicles, squeezing and causing him unbearable pain from which he passed out and never recovered. The story is here.

A Cambodian woman murdered her husband with repeated axe strikes to the genitals so that she could run away with her son-in-law. The story was, of course, dumped into the Oddly Enough news as if it were nothing but a joke."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/18/0122238.shtml

A Founding Mother Speaks Out

Thomas · 18 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This one'll put you off your feed.

Germaine Greer is generally recognized as one of the founding mothers of second wave feminism. (You know, that's when feminism was so loving and well intentioned, before it was hijacked.) Well, the great feminist icon had this to say in a Guardian article. I love the fact that she carries on about how vile men are and how 99.9% could be elimated without any real loss. Then she finishes the article by saying, "Women would find a world without men flat and savourless; it is men who dream of a world without women."

The world waited to stop Adolf Hitler, and tens of millions suffered horribly as a result. How long will the world wait before stopping these feminists?Source: www.guardian.co.uk

Title: Surplus to requirements?

Author: Germaine Greer

Date: Nov. 16, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/18/0259237.shtml

UK Sex Offenders to Have Electronic Chip Implanted

Scott · 19 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

John Knouten writes "
The technology is being developed to implant electronic chips into sex offenders which will monitor their sexual arousal, thus signaling when they may present a criminal danger. The story is here. Civil liberties groups are horrified."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/19/0043254.shtml

Rights & Responsibilities

Brad · 19 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy's most recent article exposes Martha Burk's contempt for men.

> "According to PC feminism, the woman alone has the right of choice in carrying a pregnancy to term while the man bears legal responsibility for child support. Yet, in paying child support, he has no guarantee of joint custody or even visitation rights."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/19/1428253.shtml

Men's Groups Speak at L.A. County Supervisor Meeting - Lawsuit News

Scott · 19 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Angelucci sent me a press release which can be downloaded here. It begins, "About 20 or more activists from the L.A. chapter of the National Coalition of Free Men and others will hold a rally outside the L.A. County Board of Supervisors' meeting on November 19, from 9am-12pm. We will also testify before the Supervisors during public comment (Item 76) to ask the County to create a Commission for Men that will address issues affecting men, such as child custody, paternity fraud, domestic violence, prostate cancer, prison rape and false accusations. The testimony can be viewed live from the County website at this link. We have also filed a lawsuit to that effect based on equal protection (Superior Ct. BC77370)." This is some very important news, and the press release has more details, so please take a look at it.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/19/1539245.shtml

Progressive Insurance Threatened with Federal Legal Action

Scott · 20 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

incredibletulkas writes "I have just threated Progressive.com with civil action in federal district court for its "Voodoo Doll" commercial, via the following warning:

This notice is a final warning of federal civil action. If Progressive.com does not immediately cease and desist from its rampant anti-male hate-messages, and such are not removed from public airwaves immediately, I will immediately file suit in federal court seeking maximum damages for willful and malicious conduct as well as abuse of public airwaves, citing precedent including previous violations of federal sanctions placed for similar previous case law pertaining to offensive messages attacking race or gender." Read More for the rest of this letter.

I do not know, or care, from what mental institutions and/or abusive childhoods etc. that Progressive.com scours to find its advertising personnel; however, regardless of this in-house dementia, any lack of immediate response in the affirmative to such demand for cessation will be construed as a patent refusal. Attempts to reconcile this matter though proper channels have been exhausted, and this is a final warning beyond all reasonable restraint. Failure to remove such offensive ads immediately, will result in federal action within the coming week, and names of those responsible will be likewise forwarded to corporate management as well as stockholders, including legal costs; it is also a virtual certainty that this case will succeed, with punitive damages calculated to triple that of all profits gained thereby (as determined via pre-trial discovery), in addition to court-costs awarded to the plaintiff included; therefore there is no logical reason to refuse this final request; hence, continued refusal can only indicate a neurotic inclination consistent with the unstable mindset of such expressions of sadistic depravity.

I therefore urge Progressive.com to look to its best interests, as well as those of its stockholders, and take advantage of this final opportunity to avoid finding itself at the focal point of a legal battle that it cannot possibly win.

Legal papers have already been drawn up, and will be filed as of Monday, November 25 in federal district court in the event of a non-response; I therefore urge Progressive.com to make haste in order to cease its lawless and unconscionable disrespect of basic human decency.
Progressive.com's response will determine its future situation.

Brian Armstrong

barmstrong@joimail.com"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/19/1831254.shtml

Salem Witch Trials of 1692 and DV Hearings

Scott · 20 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Maryland Judicial Equality Committee writes "The court documents of the infamous witch trails are on line. After a case review of the seventeen people who were executed for Abuse by Witchcraft, there was a consistent pattern by the court in it's methods of determining guilt. The court's pattern is disturbingly similar to today's Domestic Violence hearings. The details and links to the documents are on this page. Like then Governor William Phips of Mass., who will have the courage to challenge our current dysfunctional legal system?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/19/1826211.shtml

MANN Chat: Men's Apathy About Men's Issues

Scott · 20 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve writes "I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (11/20), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the usual location. The topic for this chat will be 'Why Are Men So Apathetic About Men's Issues?' The title says it all. Let's figure out some answers at this week's MANN chat. Invite a friend or two to join you!" Scott's Update: The chat server that QuickChat uses is apparently down, so unfortunately tonight's chat must be cancelled. We do intend to revisit this topic during the next on-line chat, though.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/20/1728231.shtml

DNA Acquittals Show Men as Main Victims of False Accusations

Scott · 21 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "While reading this article, I came upon this link to something called "The Innocence Project," an organization that advocates the use of DNA evidence, post-conviction, to exonerate those wrongfully incarcerated. While there, I happened upon this section of the site, which includes a bar graph showing the factors leading to wrongful convictions, an analysis of the first 70 cases where wrongful convictions were reversed. If you sum the categories of False Witness Testimony, Prosecutorial Misconduct, and Police Misconduct, you see that these factors together overwhelm all others. Also, and maybe more important, I could not find ANY females among the exonerated. Given these two things, I submit to you that this is further evidence of the shoddy treatment of men by the court system."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/20/222229.shtml

Police Respond Favorably to NCFM, LA's Work

Scott · 21 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "I encourage everybody to read the stories of officers who have become victims of radical feminists. They are quite upset that they have to enforce bigoted male-hate laws. You can read the responses of two anonymous officers at this link: Police join with NCFM, LA in speaking out against male-hate laws!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/21/1527200.shtml

Man Awarded Damages in Paternity Fraud Case

Scott · 23 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Kingsley G. Morse Jr. writes "In a dramatic and long over due remedy, a court finally ordered a woman to pay damages for lying to her husband about who the father was. Bizarrely, men are often forced to reward liars with child support." All I can say is...I sure hope this helps to open the floodgates!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/22/2121205.shtml

MSN Ecards Giving Activists the Brush-Off

Scott · 23 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Mitchell A. Smith has been making repeated attempts to contact MSN Egreetings and have them remove their male bashing e-cards, but is getting the standard, "thank you for your opinion, it's been forwarded to the appropriate people" response. He would like to put the word out that he could use more support from other men's activists. Please contact them and let them know that we expect more from them. Mitchell would also like to hear from other activists who have tried to address this issue - his e-mail is ppmnow@hotmail.com.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/22/2148215.shtml

Marsden Charged with Criminal Harassment of Ex-Boyfriend

Scott · 24 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Mark writes "This Vancouver Sun article details the charges against Rachel Marsden for criminally harassing her ex-boyfriend. If the name seems familiar to you, it's because she made herself famous for accusing a Simon Fraser University swim coach with sexually harassing her. An interesting note on this trial is the judge has prevented Rachel from defending herself publically to prevent the alleged victim from being 're-victimized.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/24/061228.shtml

November 29 Is the Deadline for Title IX Messages

Scott · 26 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Tony submitted the following alert from the National Organization of Women:

> "November 29 Is the Deadline for Title IX Messages. Write to the Commission on Opportunities in Athletics in support of the current policies implementing Title IX, which guarantees equality for girls and women in all federally-funded education programs. Take action!"

Tony writes, "The link at www.now.org requesting people to submit letters of support for Title IX. As we know Title IX enforcement has caused many sports programs to fold due to the "play it safe" quota enforcement many schools use to abide by the Title IX rules. This needs to change now.
It has a nice bit of sarcastic irony to use NOW website links against them on NOT supporting this issue."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/26/1551217.shtml

Rethinking the Conservative View of Divorce

Scott · 27 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "An article on divorce and the traditional conservative position ends with the statement that conservatives should support "joint physical custody." This is a great step in the right direction. The author even mentions vengeful ex-wives who lock fathers out of their children's lives. The article is here." The author argues that it is not divorce, but what happens to children after divorce that causes social problems. It's an interesting way of looking at this.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/26/2143218.shtml

A Legislative Feminist-Only Club

Scott · 27 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "By now everybody knows that radical feminists are trying to force admission of women into Augusta National. We hear of evil men excluding women and see radical feminist Burk claiming that women would never do such an evil and horrific act like excluding men and having a women's only club. Well if that is true then why is there this women's only group called the Women's Policy, Inc. with a roster that includes only women? Were are the men? Were are the demands for men to be admitted into the leadership? Why is this group black listing Rep. Anne Northup for not being a member? Clearly, women have their own club and this one is shaping the male hate laws that we see flowing out of the federal government."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/26/2144221.shtml

McElroy: "Fighting Feminism"

Scott · 27 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Wendy McElroy's column this week is about recent attacks on her from mainstream feminists, one of whom slandered her to a potential employer in an effort to harm her career. Wendy's latest column is here. We live in a sick world."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/27/0652255.shtml

Father Abuse Leads to Suicide and Violence

Scott · 27 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

John Knouten writes "
Due to discrimination many fathers become desperados with nothing to lose. Thus, some become suicidal. Some become violent. The story is here." From the article:

> "Men who snap in such violent ways have few defenders. Yet fathers' rights groups, joined by a few academic experts, see a common denominator in these recent bursts of rage, and ask whether America's family court system could be partly at fault by deepening the despair of many divorced men."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/27/0655254.shtml

Just When Ya Thought It Couldn't Get Any Weirder

Thomas · 28 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

With birth control, abortion, artificial insemination, cloning, and ovular merging, women are well on their way to becoming biologically independent of men. This has led to a very real threat of men being reduced to a "manageable," low percentage of the population.

The promise of male birth control, stem cells, and artificial wombs has helped to reestablish a balance of power, in which men would no longer be dependent upon women for reproduction. A missing link in all of this, however, has been the need to obtain eggs from women in order to clone a man or possibly merge the genes of two men into an offspring.

This article (registration required) describes a prospective attempt to create a human-mouse hybrid using stem cells. It seems it might be possible for such a (mostly) mouse to create human egg cells. If that is the case, in principle a man's genes could be inserted into such an egg cell and the resulting embryo carried to term in an artificial womb. If you think things are strange now, just give us humans a few more years.Source: New York Times

Title: Stem Cell Mixing May Form a Human-Mouse Hybrid

Author: Nicholas Wade

Date: November 27, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/28/016208.shtml

Men's Hour November

Brad · 28 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

The Men's Hour November programme is out including: A protest in Strasbourg, France. Ian Kelly on the newly proposed U.K. rape law. Trudy W. Schuett on CyberManbooks. The death of Myra Hindley, child murderer. MSNHatesMen challenges MSN's sexism.

Also, a Christmas message for men is proposed. Ideas and contributions for a message that just might help men who can be very vulnerable at Christmas time (such as fathers excluded from their family) are welcome.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/28/1531214.shtml

New Launch of TheBlackDog.net

Scott · 30 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

"TheBlackDog.net, an Irish-based website for men who suffer from mental distress, invites its brothers from across the pond to join us for our launch this Friday from 9 PM GMT (that's 4 PM Eastern Time). The night will involve men speaking about their experiences and what they have found useful in dealing with the changing world. There will be plenty of scope for music and mingling. Click on The Men's Room link on our home page, login and meet fellow black dogs in Ireland this Friday evening. theblackdog.net is Ireland's interactive self-help site for men coping with mental turbulence. It is a place for men to visit, take their time, exchange views and advice, get angry, relax or get information which might be useful. We are confidential, independent, non-judgemental, readily available and easy to switch off. We are proud to be brothers of maledepression.com and salute our comrades in America."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/29/2016242.shtml

Ex-Domestic Violence Leader Charged in Murder

Scott · 30 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

ppmnow sent us this article from the News Tribune and writes "A custody battle, an exchange of words, and an innocent woman shot dead...by another woman. Clearly feminists are becoming much less clever at hiding their violence, and no longer afraid of shooting their own gender." The murderer was Lorraine Laxton, who formerly chaired the Federal Way Domestic Violence Task Force. She left this position "abruptly," as co-workers were concerned about her " frightening temper and penchant for carrying handguns." Thanks also to Mark Rosenthal for submitted this version from the Seattle Times.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/29/2028211.shtml

Giving Legal Recourse to Victims of Paternity Fraud

Scott · 30 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "The Jewish World Review has an excellent article dealing with a misandric ruling in Nebraska over paternity fraud. The author argues that a man who is lied to about paternity and made to pay support is a victim of fraud. The article is here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/29/2029224.shtml

Biased Report attacks Fathers Who Have Been Accused of Abuse

Scott · 30 November 2002 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "This Boston Globe article outlines the non-empirical method upon which feminists gather "statistics" that will support their biased view of gender/family relations. The report drew a sharp response from critics, including the chief justice of the family court system, who condemned the study as skewed because it relied on testimony only from women with complaints about custody decisions, not from those satisfied with the rulings. The author goes on to say that men who are abusers (accused of abuse)were often given custody or liberal visitation rights(?). In MA, all a woman has to do is claim 'abuse' and the system often imprisons the father, and in most cases the family courts strips him of constitutional rights as a result."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/11/29/2031218.shtml

Mary Daly's Advocacy of Male Gendercide

Scott · 1 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User sent us this article and writes "Brian Carnell exposes feminist Mary Daly's views on gendercide, her advocacy for killing all men." From the article:

> "Daly has long advocated for research into parthenogenesis to dispense with men. Her book, Quintessence is half-science fiction novel, half bizarre manifesto in which she explicitly lays out her views. Daly herself is a character in the book who visits a utopian continent where -- thanks to the influence of Daly's books -- a lesbian elite reproduce solely through parthogenesis....what Daly is advocating here is nothing short of gendercide, and yet Daly is taken seriously by radical feminists."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/01/1917259.shtml

How to Hire a Lawyer

Scott · 3 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "One of the biggest mistakes men make when confronted with family court is hiring the wrong lawyer. Dishonest lawyers abound in family law, most of them wanting only to squeeze another buck off an already beaten man. A story on bcentral suggests ways of sorting out the honest lawyers from the dishonest."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/02/2229241.shtml

Handling "Emotional Bullies"

Scott · 3 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Wendy McElroy's FoxNews article this week contains some lessons in argument we could all use to our advantage. In it she talks a little about dealing with "emotional bullies" and emotional bullying is something many feminists are really good at. Her article is here and another good article about emotional bullying is here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/02/2231240.shtml

Scotland Pledges Funds for Suicide Prevention

Scott · 3 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Douglas Rome writes, "Here is the horrifying truth about male suicide in Scotland. The "experts", of course, have no idea why suicide among men is so very many times higher than for women." With the suicide rate increasing 22% over the past 20 years, and the rate of male to female suicides at 3:1, the fact that this issue has been of such low priority for so long is appalling. Also shocking: "For men under 35 in Scotland, suicide is the biggest single cause of death and exceeds the number of accidental deaths"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/03/0123255.shtml

Child's Best Interest Group Promoting Shared Parenting Legislation

Scott · 3 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Child's Best Interest claims to work toward shared parenting legislation in all states, advocating for both parents (not just fathers and not just mothers). It distances itself from the label "father's rights." Interestingly, 8 out of 10 candidates endorsed by CBI were elected this past election day."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/03/1835223.shtml

MaleDepression.com Opens with On-line Chat

Scott · 4 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve Imparl writes, "I am happy to announce that the inaugural chat at MaleDepression.com will take place on Tuesday, December 3, 2002, at 8:30 p.m. Central Standard Time. (This is Wednesday, December 4, 2002, at 02:30 GMT.) The chat will be held in MaleDepression.com's chat room at this page. This will be our first chat, so it will be a good idea for us to get acquainted with one another. We will talk about our experiences with depression, with particular emphasis on the male experience of this illness and the difficulties we have in seeking and continuing treatment. We'll also explore possibilities for the formats and themes of future chat sessions at MaleDepression.com. I hope you can join us for our first scheduled chat."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/03/216246.shtml

Girls Also at Increased Risk for Using Violence When Witnessing it at Home

Scott · 4 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "A surprising article (for Reuters) about how witnessing family violence influence both the boy and the girl to an increased likelihood of violence in the future is found here. They are dropping this article down and down in their list as quickly as possible. Since I found it the article has already dropped from 5th story to 8th and disappeared from my screen."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/03/1838200.shtml

Fictional Biases?

Brad · 4 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "Among the other things I do, I'm a moderator at the FictionAddiction forum. This may seem like small potatoes, but it's home to about 800 members and many more visitors. The other day, a feminist posted a work about killing men at the critique forum. I spoke my mind and am tonight getting thrashed for it by both sexes. Help me out here, guys! This is one thing where you can make a clear, immediate difference! Blessings and peace! T_____"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/04/1410245.shtml

The War Against Fathers

Thomas · 5 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Here are a three good articles on the war against fathers.

The first and the second (you'll have to click on the link "click here to read" to access them) report on a lawsuit in Canada challenging the government's bias against fathers.

The third is a column in the Toronto Sun that reports on the vicious injustices meted out by the courts to fathers.First Article:

Source: www.fairnessforchildren.com/Calgary Herald

Title: Child custody laws discriminate against fathers and children, lawsuit claims -- Federal Court asked to strike down rules that encourage the "battle of the sexes"

Author: Fairness For Children -- Press Release

Date: December 3, 2002

Second Article:

Source: www.fairnessforchildren.com/Calgary Herald

Title: Case challenges child custody -- Moms often win battle

Author: Mario Toneguzzi

Date: December 3, 2002

Third Article:

Source: The Toronto Sun

Title: Dad on the brink

Author: Mark Bonokoski

Date: December 4, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/04/2235243.shtml

DV Campaign "Coaches" Boys

Scott · 6 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "The new phase for the Family Violence Prevention Fund is to 'coach' boys into becoming men, the program invites men to help end abuse by teaching boys that violence against women is always wrong. This is good idea, but one sided in approach. Perhaps this well funded organization could include some examples of violence against the male gender and include programs that ensure quality of life for both genders? I found out about this campaign through a banner ad on a high traffic corporate web page. FVPC is getting the word out that they think boys need to be changed. How long will it be before the campaign that states 'boys are bad and abusive' manifests in public classrooms? Lets help ensure gender parity on this issue before our young men are inflicted with more feminist funded psychological abuse."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/06/1832247.shtml

DNA Clears Five Convicted Men of 1989 Rape

Scott · 7 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "CourtTV has been closely following new DNA evidence which has apparently cleared five men who were convicted of raping a Central Park jogger in 1989. The gruesome crime (the jogger was severely beaten and her eyes were destroyed) was originally attributed to five youths. Four of them have already served complete sentences for it. DNA evidence has now exonerated those five after another convicted rapist and murderer confessed to the Central Park crime and provided his DNA as evidence. The story is here. What is most interesting is that the five youths eventually confessed to the crime themselves. They now say their confessions were coerced."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/06/1834208.shtml

"Busted" Documentary Covers Story of a Man's Abuse by His Girlfriend

Scott · 7 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Education Thru Communication writes, "It's called "BUSTED," and it captures the disturbing reality of the abusive, violent behavior of a woman after being rejected by the man she was living with. But she has no idea that her violence is being documented on video. So imagine her surprise when she gets busted by the evidence and the law. For people who don't realize men can be victims of domestic abuse, "BUSTED" is a shocking, rare glimpse behind the scenes of the domestic battlefront. For men who know the truth, "BUSTED" is a lesson. As one reviewer put it... "A remarkable story of one man's battle in the legal system... to demonstrate, in no uncertain terms, that he was the victim."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/07/0021210.shtml

Two Double Standards in One Article: Child Molestation and Child Custody

Scott · 9 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "This is the typical article of a women getting minimal bail for molesting an 11-year-old boy. Naturally, the police are trying to blame the tall boy for making sexual advances. Oddly enough, the fully-grown 28-year-old woman was unable to overcome the minor's sexual advances and gave-in. By contrast, we all know that tall 14-year-old girls NEVER come on to older men in their late 20's. Nope! According to feminists, such men who give in to the sexual advances of a minor are actually predators who are products of the evil patriarchy! Clearly, we need an explanation for this evil woman's weakness. Too bad it doesn't include her taking personal responsibility.

Anyway, Everett is a divorced woman who had a child by her ex-husband. Now where do you think that child was taken after the arrest? The logical choice would be the father. Right? Wrong! For the bigoted male-hating police of Virginia Beach, the logical choice is to take the child to the sister of the molester.

Now image a world that is free of male-hate. Do you think the father of the child might have gotten the child while custody hearings take place? A father cannot even get temporary custody while hearings are in progress."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/09/0321207.shtml

Mainstream Movie About Father's Rights

Scott · 9 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "In Evelyn, Pierce Brosnan is a father who loses his job and his wife leaves him. Because of custody law, he isn't allowed to keep his three young children who are taken away and put into orphanages. With the help of friends, he prepares to take on the Irish Supreme Court. As 'Ebert & Roeper' stated on their show, "it's nice to see a show about fathers, as fathers are now usually only depicted as absent or evil.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/09/0323216.shtml

Whitney Houston Admits Hitting Brown. But Who Cares?

Scott · 10 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Troy A. writes "In a recent much-hyped fluff interview with Whitney Houston, Diane Sawyer asks the following question: "Has [Bobby Brown] ever hit you?" Houston: "No. Never. I have hit him, in anger." [Note: this was in the video interview, not the article]. There is absolutely no follow up to this admission. It is immediately followed with a segment on Brown's risque music, drug use, accusations of affairs, etc. Later in the program Sawyer asks Brown directly if he's ever hit Houston, and his reply is given considerable inquiry and airtime. Apparently, even when a wife admits to abusing her husband, it isn't called what it is - domestic violence. In fact it's totally ignored. You can e-mail your protests via this page. On top of that, when I sent my thoughts on this via the web page, a Progressive Insurance ad popped up!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/09/2112244.shtml

More Bad Advocacy Coming from the FVPF

Scott · 10 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "The Family Violence Prevention Fund's Judicial Education Project seeks to further erradicate the rights of men by teaching (forcing) judges and the courts' handling of cases involving alledged domestic violence. The FPVC is responsible for creating the statutes that permit probable cause misdemeanor arrest without a warrant in domestic violence cases under specified conditions in most states. These and other changes were prompted by one sided feminist studies that showed that ARREST is a more effective deterrent in domestic violence cases than mediation or other arrest alternatives."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/09/2116204.shtml

Guess Who's A Ms. Magazine Woman Of The Year

Thomas · 11 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

For those of you who were wondering about the direction of the Democratic Party, Ms. Magazine has selected Nancy Pelosi, House Minority (Democratic) Leader, as a woman of the year.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/10/2033215.shtml

MANN Chat: Writing About Men

Scott · 11 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

This Wednesday, 12/11, at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, join us for an on-line chat at the MANN chat room. The topic for discussion will be writing about men and men's issues, with a particular focus on how the "lace curtain" poses problems for writers on these issues. Anyone with experience writing about these issues is especially welcome to attend.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/11/1834238.shtml

Erin Pizzey Says: Bermuda Too "Matriarchal"

Adam · 11 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Our friend Erin Pizzey has been out defending fatherhood, in Bermuda of all places. Her tone seems a bit more radical than normal, but since it's in defence of us, that's allright by me. There seems to be a bit of doublethink in the article, but I can't quite point it out. Have a read about it and see what you think.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/10/1839256.shtml

Common Chemical Damages Sperm

Scott · 12 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Serge writes "Scientists from Harvard University have uncovered evdience that exposure to the chemical, one of a group known as the phthalates, may lead to damage to the genetic material of human sperm.
"The correlation found in this study is extremely troubling" says Dr. Ted Schettler." These chemicals are used in cosmetics and fragrance products, so this is a really big deal.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/12/1749245.shtml

Book Review: Bias

Adam · 13 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

During my daily travel around the web I happened to come across a book review of Bernard Goldberg's book Bias. While I it found fairly short, it does make for some very interesting reading, proving the old lace curtain is still around, among other things. I've also heard rumours that there's a section on men's lack of reproductive rights. Perhaps someone who has the book can tell us?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/11/012258.shtml

Creepy New Study on Boys in Education

Scott · 14 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Uberganger writes "A new Australian study into the problems facing boys in education has arrived at a series of woolly-minded conclusions that seem to amount to very little. The study report itself can be found in PDF form here. The study seems unduly concerned with attacking masculinity and blurring the issues by insisting that solutions benefit girls as well as boys. It is an unsettling document because it shows just how pervasive the feminist version of reality has become in academia."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/13/2145224.shtml

Male Chaperone Faces Double Standard for Dress

Scott · 14 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Severin writes "The St. Louis Post Dispatch has the following article about a father who chaperones elementary children. He also does so dressed in a traditionally female style (sweater, jeans, makeup, and a "woman's hairstyle"). Many parents are outraged and will not allow their children to go on any outings where he is a chaperone. Why is it that when a woman wears pants, she's considered "liberated", but if a man wears make-up, he's a danger to kids? I think it's important that we stand up for the rights of men to wear whatever they wish, since women are given that opportunity."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/14/1849223.shtml

Whitney Houston / Diane Sawyer ABC Interview Transcript

Scott · 15 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Tolbert writes "I have been searching for the smoking gun on Whitney for a long time. She has a long history of violence towards others but I had not yet found solid evidence of violence against her husband. After reading the earlier posts about the interview (which I missed viewing), I went on a search for a transcript and finally located it here. I am just amazed that she was upfront about the issue. It is like she knew ahead of time that Diane Sawyer, Primetime and ABC would just gloss over the admission."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/14/1859254.shtml

RulyMob.com Sponsors V-Day Parody Song, Offers $100 Prize

Scott · 15 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Jack Kammer, a men's issues author and ownerof the RulyMob.com web site, is sponsoring a contest to write a song, "If I Only Had a V", modeled after "If I Only Had a Heart" from The Wizard of Oz. The song is to be a parody of V-Day, and will by judged by its "(a) effectiveness in satirizing the idea that women in western societies are always virtuous, never committing violence themselves, (b) effectiveness in satirizing the idea that women in western societies are oppressed, (c) adherence to the original meter and tone of the song "If I Only Had a Heart," (d) suitability for being reported verbatim by the mainstream media and (e) humor." Both men and women are welcome to submit entries. The deadline is February 6, 2003 - read the official rules here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/15/038256.shtml

Basic Promotion for Men's Issues (and Other) Writers

Scott · 16 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W. Schuett writes "Our writer/activists may benefit from a series I'm doing at Writer Online called, "Basic Promotion for Writers." There is a lot of misinformation and bad ideas floating around as far as promoting books, and in these days of the self-published and indie-published, authors need all the help they can get. I've put my 10 years of experience in publicity and promotions to work here, to give writers a basic strategy for promoting their work both on and offline, working with little or no budget. The series itself is, of course, free of charge."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/15/2332229.shtml

Farrell, Angelucci, Allemano on the Phil Donahue Show

Brad · 16 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Men's issues author Warren Farrell, Marc Angelucci, president of the Los Angeles Chapter of the National Coalition of Free Men, and Peter Allemano of the New York City NCFM, will discuss gender issues and the NCFM's gender discrimination lawsuit against Los Angeles County on the Phil Donahue Show. The show will air on MSNBC on Wednesday, December 18th, at 5pm PST and again at 8pm PST. To find out where to watch the show, go to Phil Donahue. To learn more about the NCFM, go to National Coalition Of Free Men. To learn more about the NCFM's suit against Los Angeles County, go to NCFM Los Angeles Chapter. To learn more about Warren Farrell and his work, go to Dr. Warren Farrell.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/16/1159222.shtml

On-line Chat at MaleDepression.com

Scott · 18 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve Imparl writes, "I am happy to announce that the next chat at MaleDepression.com will take place on Tuesday, December 17, 2002, at 8:30 p.m. Central Standard Time. (This is Wednesday, December 18, 2002, at 02:30 GMT.) The chat will be held in MaleDepression.com's chat room. We will talk about our experiences with depression, with particular emphasis on the male experience of this illness and the difficulties we have in seeking and continuing treatment. Specifically, I'd like to suggest that we talk about coping strategies during the holidays--how we keep ourselves well during the end-of-year holiday season. Further, with the winter solstice approaching in the northern hemisphere, it is probably a good time to talk about seasonal depression, too.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/17/2047209.shtml

MANN Chat: What's Right About Men's Activism?

Scott · 18 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Steve writes "I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (12/18), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the usual location. The topic for this chat will be 'An Attitude of Gratitude: What's Right with Men's Activism?" The holiday season is a good time to stop for a while and see where we are. What is going well for us men's activists? Stop by this week's MANN chat, have an egg nog or some hot cider, and savor the good things about activism with us!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/18/1954202.shtml

Transcript of Donahue Men's Issues Show On-line

Scott · 20 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Angelucci writes, "Here's a transcript of the Donahue show. Overall I'm pleased with things, except of course that Gloria did a lot of interrupting and often Phil cut me off when I wanted to refute her myths. But overall it was a show where we got a lot of issues out there and I did get to mention the lawsuit against L.A. County. Some members of the Queens High School football team spoke up about how their school cut the football team and shattered their dream as a result of the feminist overkill of Title IX implementation. Other audience members had some great things to say. And Warren Farrel and Peter Allemano did great as well."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/20/0330234.shtml

Pinter And Martin

Adam · 20 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I thought you might be interested to hear, Pinter And Martin are selling the
The Manipulated Man at the knockdown price of £5.99 for us UK folk, or $8.50 for everyone in the USA. I just got my copy today, and being halfway through, I have to say there's nothing like this. Make no mistake, you should get this book, it's well worth it. In case you're wondering, post and packing is free. So don't delay, Order now!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/19/1625211.shtml

A (Temporary) Return to Sanity

Scott · 20 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

I just wanted to let readers know that I have finished my final exams and that I really do intend to catch up on the news submissions and e-mails that have been piling up for a while. I have let things get unusually disorganized as of late and it's time to fix that. Your patience and understanding is appreciated.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/20/1747243.shtml

"Raising Cain"...for Sure

Scott · 21 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Philalethes writes "On NPR's Morning Edition news program 12/17/2002: "Susan Stamberg talks to family psychologist Michael Thompson about nurturing boys so they grow into peaceful men. Thompson is the author of Raising Cain." (Direct link to RealPlayer file.) Not too bad, despite the obligatory snide remark (Stamberg: "What about all that testosterone?"), and the usual implication that what's wrong with boys is that they aren't girls. Comparisons are also made with the "better" boys found in other countries like Britain, France and Japan -- though of course no there is no mention of the [major factor] that differentiates American child-rearing from practically every other culture's: [infant male genital mutilation], aka "circumcision." Every time I see one of the increasing crop of "What's Wrong With Boys?" books, I look in the index for "circumcision." I can't recall ever seeing the subject mentioned -- perhaps because circumcision is *the American "solution" to the "boy problem."*Philalethes adds, "Freud put his finger on it: What do women want, anyway? First they subject us to vicious, brutal torture directed at the vital core of our infant masculinity, overwhelming pain and terror, then they complain because we're "not in touch with [our] feelings" and "confuse sex with violence." Drop me a line when they figure it out, okay?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/20/1739234.shtml

Augusta Controversy Spawns Competing Web Sites

Scott · 22 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "I direct your attention to this web site [ittakesballs.com]. It seems that Martha Burk has established an anti-Augusta Web site here [augustadiscriminates.org] that attacks Augusta, their members, and their members' employers, and their sponsors. Since turnabout is fair play, a counter site has been established, and it has siblings here [theburkstopshere.com] and here [golfersforarealcause.com]. There are opportunities for activism. Ittakesballs.com has a listing of the NCWO's sponsors, along with their addresses and suggests that you write to them. Further, they are selling t-shirts that fund their efforts, and look like fun to wear, as well. At golfersforarealcause.com, you can sign a petition. There are over 2500 signatures there already, mine recent among them. Hootie Johnson may be the last man in a public role with a real spine, and he needs our support. This is an attack on basic the Constitutional rights of men, and we need to back him up."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/21/2135242.shtml

December Men's Hour Programme Released

Scott · 22 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "Up to 200 Father Chrismases will be on London buses this Tuesday 17th December. Organised by fathers-4-justice.org. This and more is in the December Men's Hour, including "phone the Men's Hour" with your opinion/contribution, Matthew O'Connor and the 200 Father Christmas protest, Carnell Smith about paternity fraud, news of a film called Busted, news of Father Christmas, Sue Price about the Men's Rights Agency in Australia (to be added Wednesday 18th) and Boys Education in Australia."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/21/2141231.shtml

A Special Gift for Mensactivism Readers!

Scott · 24 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "As a special gift to MANN readers, Raymond and I are making copies of "Friends to the End" available as a free download for a very limited time. It's available in MSReader, Adobe e-book, and Palm. But just until midnight GMT New Year's Eve! So get it now while you can! We wish you peace on earth, and good will toward men. From Raymond Cuttill,Trudy W. Schuett, and all at cyberManbooks." Many, many thanks to Trudy and Raymond for their generosity and spirit.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/24/0312258.shtml

Man sues "Man show," and an Interesting Coincidence

Scott · 24 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Thundercloud writes "I thought this would be an interesting submission, considering the recent post about the Phil Donahue show with Gloria Alred. A Man is suing the "Man Show". Aparently, this guy and his girlfriend were laying out on a beach (I believe in California) when producers from the Man Show sent a little boy to go up to them and talk to the man's girlfriend. While the camera rolled, the boy made rude and sexually explicit remarks to the young woman. The woman's boyfriend, disgusted, made the kid leave. Then two female "Man Show" producers approached the couple and told them it was all a joke and that they were on camera the whole time. According to the man, the "Man Show" producers did not have his permission to air the segment with him and his girlfriend, but they did so anyway. So now he is suing them. But guess who he got to represent him in court? None other than Gloria Alred! Does anyone think Alred's motives are to help a man who's been wronged? Or instead that she's probably been itching for an excuse to go after the politically-incorrect "Man Show" to begin with?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/24/0318234.shtml

Fathers Flood KABC Phone Lines

Brad · 25 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Calls from disenfranchised fathers flooded the phone lines at KABC radio in Los Angeles during the Al Rantel Show on December 23, as Rantel and men's issues columnist Glenn Sacks discussed what Sacks called "the greatest unrecognized problem in America today"--the way divorced fathers are prevented from being a part of the lives of their children.

Disenfranchised Fathers Flood KABC Phone Lines
During Discussion of Holiday Season Access Denial

Calls from disenfranchised fathers flooded the phone lines at KABC radio in Los Angeles during the Al Rantel Show on December 23, as Rantel and men's issues columnist Glenn Sacks discussed what Sacks called "the greatest unrecognized problem in America today"--the way divorced fathers are prevented from being a part of the lives of their children.

Caller after caller spoke movingly about the way they had been driven out of their kids' lives and the pain of spending another holiday season without the children they love. Don said he lives 10 miles from his three daughters and has not been allowed to see them in two years. Dave, a father of two daughters, has fought 15 years to be a part of their lives. Barbara, a second wife, said her husband has not been allowed to see his daughter for four months. Dan fought nine years to be able to see his children. Several fathers explained how their exes had done everything they could to turn their children against them.

Rantel called what is done to these fathers "heartbreaking" and "inhuman." Sacks noted, "upon a divorce we take away everything that a father has loved and has sacrificed for, without even bothering to ensure that he can still see his children, much less remain a meaningful part of their lives. Then we hand him the bill and call it 'justice.'"

For more information on access and visitation denial and the plight of divorced dads, see the following columns, co-authored by Sacks and Dianna Thompson, executive director of the American Coalition for Fathers and Children:

- "Fathers Bear the Brunt of Gender Bias in Family Courts" (Insight magazine, 8/19/02)
- "'Virtual Visitation' is no Substitute for a Father" (Boston Globe, 7/12/02)
- "Why Are There so Many Women in the Fathers' Movement?" (Minneapolis Star-Tribune, 6/21/02)
- "High-Profile 'Deadbeat Dad' Raids Won't Fix Child Support System Badly in Need of Reform" (Newark Star-Ledger, 9/6/02).

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/25/1542226.shtml

Degrading Men As A Joke

Thomas · 26 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Take a look at the "Strip and Run" video on this page.

Oxygen is some sort of Women's Media that was, as far as I know, started in part by Oprah.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/26/1824242.shtml

A Christmas Message for Men

Scott · 27 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "Men's Hour Christmas message for men is out. It is particularly aimed at men who might be depressed over Christmas, but should be fun for everyone. With music (from Elvis to Sinead O'Connor) (only on Live365 for copyright reasons), the Father Christmas's protest, getting through Christmas, The Samaritans, numerous jokes and how to get the cat to meow, and a free ebook until the new year. Available at the Men's Hour site and Live365 [recommended]." I'm really sorry this is being posted so late...I got snowed in on the day it was submitted.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/27/071211.shtml

Mock Men and Raise Money for DV Shelters All at Once!

Scott · 27 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "2 women in Salem have written a book they titled "Everything Men Knew About Taking Care of Themselves Before Women Came Along" in which every page is blank. They brag that they are making fun of men to raise money for feminist women's-only DV shelters. The article is here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/27/0655242.shtml

The Million Dads March

Scott · 27 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

GRomeo747 sent us some information on a Father's Day activity for men's activists, the Million Dad March:"

> "Fathers and Mothers are the two most important resources any child can have. For the last few decades we've been deluged with information about how important mothers are. And mothers ARE > important. However at the same time fathers have been ignored or worse, demonized. It's time we did both fathers and children right by > recognizing that fathers are just as important as mothers.
> CHILDREN NEED BOTH PARENTS! "

Enter the Million Dads March... It's international, it's been a long time coming and it is going on now!

Be a part of history not only for yourself but for the betterment of our world as a whole."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/27/0658228.shtml

Brian Heidek from Survivor Thailand Abused by Wife

Scott · 28 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "Brian Heidek, the winner in the latest Survivor Thailand TV show, just got his wife arrested last month for domestic violence. Wow! According to this article, she was ordered to stay at least 100 yards away from her husband and, now may not own, use or possess any dangerous or deadly weapons. I'd sure like to hear the circumstances behind all this and how Brian overcame the establishment prejudice in favor of women."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/27/076245.shtml

Cloned Baby Birth Claim

Scott · 29 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "A controversial company linked to a philosophical sect, says that it has produced the world's first cloned human baby. No proof was offered. Animal clones have shown defects as they age - scientists fear the same could happen with humans. Dr Patrick Dixon, an expert on the ethics of human cloning, described the news as "totally inevitable". He said: "There's a global race by maverick scientists to produce clones, motivated by fame, money and warped and twisted beliefs."" CJ also asks, "What is the impact of this on men's reproductive rights?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/29/1514241.shtml

Progressive Posts Edited Voodoo Ad

Scott · 30 December 2002 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Tolbert writes "Progressive Insurance has posted the edited short form of the infamous Voodoo ad on at this page. It includes links to outtakes and a question section. I am posting this for the benefit of those who have missed the ads in their local markets. If anyone has a video file of the full length ad with pliers please contact me and I will try to get it posted somewhere for everyone to view. Remember to write to Progressive with your opinions on the ad."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/29/2250247.shtml

McElroy Comments on Progress in Father's Rights

Scott · 1 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User sends us this FoxNews article and writes "Wendy McElroy does a good job of pointing out the governmental forces which have created the current child support industry in the United States." From the article:

> Men are confronting a governmental Goliath that has been called "the child abuse industry." In doing so, they defend not only fathers' rights but also those of mothers and children.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/31/2221200.shtml

British MP Calls on Neighbours to Report Wife Beaters

Scott · 1 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Red Kev writes "Here is a link to the BBC website Talking Point Section. Harriet Harman, British MP has called for neighbours to report 'Wife-batterers to the police. Typically a call to report husband batterers is not even considered. This is just another attempt to demonise men and inflict further injustices upon them. Please feel free to use the form on the website to submit your views on this topic."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/02/12/31/2222254.shtml

Planned Legislation Could Re-instate the Draft

Scott · 1 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

According to this article from the Star Tribune, Rep. Charles Rangel is going to propose legislation that would "resume the military draft in the event of a war against Iraq." He believes that by doing so, Congress will be less likely to support a war on Iraq. He is quoted as saying:

> "I believe that if those calling for war knew their children were more likely to be required to serve - and to be placed in harm's way - there would be more caution and a greater willingness to work with the international community in dealing with Iraq."

Note the use of the gender-neutral "children" - does anyone know if he's planning to include women in this draft legislation?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/01/0126212.shtml

Men's Health America Year in Review

Scott · 2 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Men's Health America published a report on the events in 2002 related to the status of men's health issues. Anyone working on men's health as an activist should check it out and see what progress we've made this year (and there has been some interesting progress!). The report can be read on the mailing list at this link. And what better way to start off the new year than by subscribing to this low-traffic, but high quality mailing list.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/01/2211230.shtml

Web Server Downtime This Weekend

Scott · 3 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Well, we're expecting a big snowstorm tonight and into the weekend in NH, so I figured it would be a great time to do some OS and hardware updates to the MANN server. Expect the web site to be down from Friday night until late Sunday night. The mail server will be down for a minimal amount of time too. Update: The web server has been moved to the dedicated machine, and is now running (with less than 5 minutes of downtime, woo-hoo!). The mail server might take a bit longer, but most users won't notice that anyway.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/03/190204.shtml

MSN Explores "Five Myths of Fatherhood"

Scott · 5 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "In a completely flooring surprise for the regularly misandrist MSN.com, the site's "Family" section produced this article on the Five Myths of Fatherhood and how to challenge them. " I do hope readers that have protested MSN in the past will take a moment to give them some positive reinforcement for this article. Encouraging notes can often make a big impact too.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/04/2021255.shtml

Government Grants Awarded to Promote Marriage

Scott · 5 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ sends us this Boston Globe article and writes "Courts, nonprofits, state agencies are all discovering that reaching out to local faith-based organizations is an effective strategy for making their programs work with populations that have been very difficult to reach, such as fathers coming out of prisons.
The goal is to increase child support collections, promote fatherhood and healthy marriage, and help struggling families take care of their children. Many 'groups' are concerned about money supporting marriage and fathers, and they are "watching this closely." Feminists do not like the idea of supporting marriage, only breaking them... Good for Gearge Bush!" The policy is controversial due to the fact that religious groups are directly benefitting from this, with some concerns about the separation of church and state being raised. But it is also true that this is helping many fathers and families.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/04/2029225.shtml

Vote for Men's Issues Authors in the "Preditors and Editors" Annual Poll

Scott · 6 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "Historically, the Preditors and Editors poll has been overloaded with chickbooks and girl-published 'zines. This year is different! Go over and vote for your favorite author, publisher, 'zine and etcetera. You also have the option to add a favorite that's not already listed — but you only get one vote in each category. Check here and you'll find some familiar names. The poll is only open until January 21, so don't miss out on a fast, free, and painless way to break the pink barrier!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/05/2142251.shtml

Remembering Derrick Miller

Scott · 6 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Men's News Daily has a page with several links related to the story of Derrick Miller, a divorced father who killed himself in front of a San Diego courthouse. January 6 will be the one-year anniversary of Miller's death. The fact that men like Miller, Darrin White, and others have nowhere other than suicide to turn to due to the unjust oppression of men and fathers should be a reminder to us all about our need to keep fighting for these causes.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/06/0224237.shtml

Maryland Judicial Hall of Shame

Scott · 7 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

fightbigotry2002 writes "For those of you who live in Maryland, if you need motivation to get involved with the process, take a risk to make your voice heard, consider what happens when we don't speak up for others. See this collection of articles about people who were wrongfully convicted of crimes and then exhonerated 15 to 20 years into their sentence. Get involved now because someday it may be your turn to be the target of a political witch hunt. Andrew Young was right, there are political prisoners in the US."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/06/2346212.shtml

MaleDepression.com On-line Chat

Scott · 7 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Steve Imparl writes, "I am happy to announce that the next chat at MaleDepression.com will take place on Tuesday, January 7, 2003, at 8:30 p.m. Central Standard Time. (This is Wednesday, January 8, 2003, at 02:30 GMT.)

The chat will be held in MaleDepression.com's chat room. We will talk about our experiences with depression, with particular emphasis on the male experience of this illness and the difficulties we have in seeking and continuing treatment. Specifically, as a topic, I'd like to suggest that we talk about "Renewing Our Commitment to Personal Wellness." How can we take care of ourselves, stay well, and deal with our mood disorders each day? I am dedicating this chat to the memory of Mr. Derrick Miller, who died one year ago on January 6, 2003. Mr. Miller was a suicide victim."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/06/2348254.shtml

Drug Addicts Offered Money to be Sterilized

Scott · 7 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "A California-based group is offering money to drug addicted-men and women in Brooklyn who agree to be sterilized or receive long-term birth control. The program is fundamentally incompatible with a health program that respects a woman's right to choose," Donna Lieberman, executive director of the New York Civil Liberties Union, told the Times. What about a man's right to choice? Like every gender issue today, only a female perspective is considered..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/07/1819225.shtml

The Form Of The Revolution

Thomas · 8 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Men's most effective response to the hatred, lies, and oppression known as "feminism" may well come one man at a time. A recent study in Australia shows that of men aged 50-54, 67% had children by the age of 30 (33% did not have children by the age of 30). Of men aged 30-34, only 32% had children by the age of 30. Men today seem to be putting off having children, or refusing outright to do it.

Men may well be asking themselves: Would allowing a female to become pregnant using my sperm be the stupidest and most self-destructive thing that I could possibly do?Source: The Age

Title: More men avoid parenthood

Author: Julie-Anne Davies

Date: January 6 2003

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/08/1358205.shtml

MANN Chat: Starting 2003 with Simple Acts of Activism

Scott · 8 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Steve writes "I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (1/8), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the usual location. The topic for this chat will be 'Starting the Year Right: Simple Acts of Activism.' 2003 is here already. Let's start the year with some successful activism. At this week's chat, we'll discuss simple but effective ways we can make the world a better place for men and, ultimately, for all creatures. We'll generate ideas for actions you can accomplish in the next week to advance men's issues. Instead of developing elaborate plans that take years to execute, let's see what we can do in one week. Join us at this week's MANN chat to share your ideas for some speedy, effective activism. Feel free to invite friends to the chat, too!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/08/1448203.shtml

Teachers Wanted: Non-Deconstructed Males Need Not Apply

Thomas · 8 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

It seems some people in Australia are actually concerned about the status of males in the nation's educational institutions. Peter West, head of the University of Western Sydney's research group on men and families, has stated that "luring more men to teaching may require 'altering the application of a discrimination act' as well as better recruitment and retention strategies."

The Independent Education Union has responded in part with the statement, "Male teachers with traditional views on masculinity may actually be confirming and colluding with the macho culture, not challenging it."

Perhaps only men, who preach that maleness throughout history has been pure evil and that femaleness throughout history has been pure good, should be allowed to have jobs as teachers. That'll sure help boys in school. (sarcasm off)Source: The Age

Title: The matter with boys is that there are not enough blokes in schools

Author: Linda Doherty

Date: January 1 2003

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/08/1424209.shtml

What Constitutes Rape?

Thomas · 8 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

A 17-year-old male has been convicted of forcible rape in California. What was his offense? A 17-year-old female was engaging in consensual sex with him. He allegedly continued to have sex for a minute and a half after she said, "I should be going now" and "I need to go home." Note that, by all accounts, she never said that she wanted to stop having sex.

If he had said, "I should be going now" and "I need to go home," and they then continued to have sex, would she have been convicted of rape?

Also note the article's statements "In California, for example, the Legislature and the state's courts have been revising the definition of rape," and "Among other changes, women sometimes were required to physically resist to be a rape victim, or their allegations had to be corroborated." Does this mean that no corroborating evidence is required to obtain a rape conviction against a man? Scott's note: Thanks also to Willj and Luek for submitting this story.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/08/1441218.shtml

DNA Clears Rape Suspect Who Committed Suicide in Jail

Scott · 9 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "This is a sad story about a man who killed himself in a police holding cell, hours after he was charged with rape. He has since been cleared of the crime through DNA evidence. Any man that has been charged with trumped-up or blatantly false charges (be it of rape, DV, in family court, etc.) knows how a mere allegation trumps all of your civil rights and opens the floodgates for a nightmarish experience in the name of victim advocacy. Lately it seems that rape convicts are regularly getting cleared of their sentences, like the group of kids that were held responsible NYC Central Park rape. One has to wonder how many men's lives have been ruined with false charges."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/08/2024230.shtml

A Call for Men's Health Media Monitors

Scott · 9 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I received the following announcement from Men's Health America: "Are you tired of all the one-sided coverage that the media is giving to gender health issues? Are you disturbed about articles that imply that a person's life counts for less because he happens to be male? This coming year, Men's Health America has established improved media coverage of men's health as one of our top priorities for 2003. We plan to do something about this bias! Men's Health America would like to invite you to participate as one of our Media Watchdogs." See the Read More section below for details on what this involves..." Men's Health America would like to invite you to participate as one of our Media Watchdogs. Here's what the Media Watchdogs will do:

1. Identify one newspaper that you read regularly.

2. When you see a gender health article that is biased, write a concise letter to the editor.

3. Then e-mail your letter to Men's Health America, along with the e-mail address of the Letters Editor and the URL of the article (if it's available) to the MHA website at this link.

4. Men's Health America will post 2-4 such letters each month on the MHA website, and invite all the MHA members to contact the editor about their concerns.

If you are interested, contact Men's Health America at eba@intr.net (eba-at-intr.net). Please respond ASAP. The men's health media campaign is in progress now!

Together, we will make a difference. Beginning now.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/08/2059243.shtml

Readers Digest Article on Male Bashing

Scott · 9 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "The January, 2003 edition of Readers Digest has devoted the entire "That's Outrageous" section to Male Bashing. There is no link that I can find to the specific article which takes up 2 print pages, but the author, Tucker Carlson is a regular columnist and a co-host for CNN's Crossfire. The article brings up most of the issues that have been presented here before, such as how men are streotyped in advertising and you would be hard pressed to find similar publicity directed towards women. While the article barely scratches the surface, perhaps this exposure to the RD reading public will help open a few more eyes."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/09/1357242.shtml

News Coverage of NCFM, LA Rally

Scott · 10 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes "Big Thanks to NCFM, LA member "Ray" for finding this article by NBC4.TV news that covers NCFM, LA's November 19 rally for a Commission for Men. The article is very brief and just gives a statement about the rally, but it's great that we're finally getting some coverage. It also is nice to see they didn't bash us like others have, and they even quoted a member."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/10/131201.shtml

Another Law Suit On The All-Male Draft

Thomas · 10 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Three teenagers and a 20-year-old have filed suit challenging the all-male draft. My guess? The draft today would be an opportunity for many women to get educations in fields such as medicine, air traffic control, and computer science. For men, the draft will generally entail clear threats of forced killing, maiming, and death.

Then again, maybe the Selective Service Act will be overthrown or left the way it is. This bears watching.Source: Boston Herald

Title: Teenagers challenge male-only draft law

Author: David Weber

Date: January 10, 2003

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/10/1913243.shtml

Reader Seeks Help in Unfair Alimony Technicality

Scott · 12 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

cobbbiz@yahoo.com writes "I have a legal problem that I think is unconstitutional and I don't have the resources or the knowledge to change it. I need help!:

I am paying $500.00/month in rehabilitative alimony to my ex-wife. She is now living openly with her lesbian partner. Her sexual orientation is the reason for the divorce. Under Alabama state law, the Statute concerning alimony states that it will be terminated if the recipient "cohabitates with a person of the opposite sex". If my ex-wife were heterosexual and living with another man, the alimony could be immediately terminated. I am working what is equivalent to two jobs while my wife lives in one of the most prestigious areas of Alabama.
Is there any source of help? This could make right a poorly-written Statute and unjust ruling not only for me but for all men and in some cases even women."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/11/2351200.shtml

Woman Tries to Hire Hitman to Kill Husband

Scott · 12 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "Here is a story [free reg. required] of a wife trying to hire a hitman to kill her husband. Of course it's a sad situation when people come to such a thing, but even more sad is that [news] coverage of this criminal act or attempt is rare. The woman even tried to use battered women's defense to get out of the charge."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/11/2354213.shtml

Men Forgotten in Social Work Research

Scott · 12 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

jmel96 writes ″

> "Social work literature is biased against heterosexual males, leading to "unfair and untrue" stereotypes about men and hampering social workers' ability to counsel men, an Alabama professor has concluded after reviewing articles in two social work journals from the last decade."

So begins a fascinating article in the Washington Times. I have long suspected that the "helping professions" were biased against men, but it is nice to have a member admit it and actually want to do something about it."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/12/1512204.shtml

More On What Constitutes Rape

Thomas · 14 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Kathleen Parker has written an essay, published in the Orlando Sentinel, on the 17-year-old boy who was convicted of rape for not stopping consensual sex when the girl said, "I should be going now" and "I need to go home." Unfortunately, Parker asks "Where's Daddy? Who didn't teach this girl the rules of engagement?" while not asking "Where's Mommy?" I guess women/mothers can't be held liable the way men/fathers can. Besides, maybe dad was driven out of the home as a result of a false accusation by the mother.

On the whole, it's a good article, though. I've called to thank her. You can write to her here.Source: Orlando Sentinal

Title: Rape California-style is a woman's prerogative

Author: Kathleen Parker

Date: January 12, 2003

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/14/0015205.shtml

MANN Chat: A Manly Sense of Humor in Men's Activism

Scott · 15 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Steve writes "I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (1/15), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the usual location. The topic for this chat will be 'A Manly Sense of Humor in Men's Activism.' We have seen a lot of anti-male humor in the last few years. Still, humor can be an important tool for men's activists. When should we use humor in our work to promote equality for men and boys? How can we use humor effectively to laugh at ourselves when appropriate? How can we disarm the mean-spirited man-bashing and boy-bashing humor we encounter in the media, in the workplace, and in social situations? Help us answer these questions at this week's MANN chat. As always, invite a buddy or two to join us!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/15/1817250.shtml

Court Challenge on Maryland Child Support Guidelines

Scott · 16 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

fightbigotry2002 writes "The Maryland Judicial Equality Committee and other Maryland Men's and Children's advocacy groups are in the process of seeking out both non-custodial mothers and fathers to challenge the current Maryland Custody Guidelines for Child Support. As you may remember, a Georgia lower court has declared the Georgia Child Support Guidelines unconstitutional, which has been appealed to the Georgia Supreme Court. Those of us in Maryland will be building upon that case to mount a challenge to bring equity to the child support issue for all concerned. If you can help us out, please contact us for details at Fightbigotry2002@yahoo.com."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/15/1856256.shtml

"MFNBC" to Broadcast Men's Issues Shows

Scott · 16 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

HombreVIII writes "MFNBC is pleased to announce that we will start broadcasting men's rights shows live, via the internet, this Sunday starting at 8 PM Central Time. Accompanying the 2 shows we will be broadcasting this Sunday will be a hosted chat, (accessible through the site), where listeners can discuss the shows as they are being aired. MFNBC - the Masculists Factfinding Network and Broadcast Channel located at www.MFNBC.com, will be presenting episodes of Jack Kammer's 6 year running radio show called "In a Man's Shoes" for the first time ever on the internet starting this Sunday! This will be followed immediately by a broadcast of Raymond Cuttill's newest "Men's Hour" show, scheduled for realease on that date as well." For more details, see the Read More section below.

"MFNBC is a newly created site designed to do two things. First, to provide men's activists with quick and easy access to the information which justifies our cause. Second, MFNBC is attempting to help promote networking among men's activists while at the same time possibly increasing the audience size for men's rights broadcasts. By providing a reason to listen to these shows at specific times, the hope is that interested parties will not wait until they "get around to it" to listen to the shows, which inevitably never happens. The Men's Hour will continue to be archived at its current location, though no archives will be kept of "In a Man's Shoes". As other shows join the lineup, they may or may not choose to archive their shows elsewhere as well.

Q: Will the broadcasts work?

A: We hope so. The beta-testing has been admittedly short, but so far broadcasts seem to be working properly. Not all platforms have been tested however.

Q: What if I have a show I'd like to see played at MFNBC alongside a hosted chat?

A: Great! Just go to www.mfnbc.com/broadcast/submitshow.htm and fill out the form. Also, there's a short FAQ there which will hopefully answer any questions you have about webcasting a show with us.

For the latest information on these shows or to browse our factfinding network, just visit our site at www.MFNBC.com. Note that we are not affiliated with Microsoft, NBC, or MSNBC in any way."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/16/040240.shtml

Governor Davis' Executive Order on Paternity Fraud

Scott · 16 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "As we all know, Governor Davis vetoed AB2240 last year and claimed he was doing this because the bill was flawed. That was a very disappointing event in the men's movement. However, NCFM, LA is made up of winners, and winners will always find a way to turn a failure into a success.
So NCFM, LA examined the veto and determined that there was an Executive Order in place. Then we made some phone calls and sent in a FAX asking about the Executive Order. The order in effect directed the Department of Child Support Services to work with the proponents and opponents of paternity fraud to reach a resolution to the issue. To our surprise we received a phone call from the DCSS and they are demonstrating a literal commitment to resolving this issue. It turns out that the DCSS representative is very friendly to men's issues in the matter of paternity fraud. To our surprise, we are finding that the DCSS wants fairness in paternity fraud issues!" There's much more to this post, see the Read More section below for more info.

"Also, I've been very careful to gather physical evidence and proof of each and every claim. This involves going to paternity fraud victims and obtaining a trail of documents and very personal information. The result is that we should be able to introduce language next week to start a new bill.

Next, it should be clear that NCFM is changing the strategy on this complex issue to resolve the problem of paternity fraud through incremental legislation. We will explain more about why that change is being made at a future date. After all, we need to keep some secrets from the radical feminists.

In a nutshell, we are changing our strategy because there have been several years of failed attempts at paternity fraud legislation in California. What we need are incremental successes. We believe that if there is a failure that it is because the issue was incorrectly framed.

The fact of the matter is that the public wants a resolution to paternity fraud. There is also overwhelming support in the California Legislature for a resolution. Now, for the first time, we have the overwhelming support of the Executive Branch of the California Government. All we need to do is change our strategy and move forward. By doing this we should experience success.

As noted, NCFM, LA has examined the political failures and determined they were mostly due to what we believe are strategic errors in trying to resolve the complex issue. The proponents (men's activists) were simply trying to change a very serious problem too fast! The fear was that there would be a resulting chaos. That fear is quite well founded because NCFM, LA believes that about 7 million children have the wrong father assigned as the parent. Making major changes in the paternity laws would almost certainly overload the courts and potentially throw the system into chaos.

Finally, if any paternity fraud victims in California want to help us strengthen our case then please contact NCFM, LA. We will be asking you to submit copies of the documents that prove there is paternity fraud.

Most important: If there are any family law or criminal law attorneys in California that would like to assist us as we move forward in crafting the legislation then please contact us. We will appreciate your support!

Email: ncfm.la@verizon.net"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/16/1625250.shtml

National Center for Men Preparing Legal Challenge for Men's Reproductive Rights

Scott · 16 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

On the 30th anniversary of the historic Roe v. Wade Supreme Court decision, the National Center for Men is announcing their intention to legally challenge the unjust double standard of "her choice, his responsibility." They seek to establish a legal recognition of men's reproductive rights. Their press release can be found on the choiceformen.com web site here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/16/1634238.shtml

New MANN Admins to Replace Scott

Scott · 17 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

It has come time for me to announce that soon I will no longer be administering Mensactivism.org on a day-to-day basis as I have since the site was started. We have taken on some new people who will be working with some of the older co-admins to keep this site running smoothly and in the spirit that it was created. This is a decision I have not made lightly and I think will improve the quality of this site as a resource to men's activists. Read on for more explanation...Mensactivism.org has been running for almost three years, and I have found administering the site to be a very rewarding experience. The time commitment it takes to keep it going is significant, and it has always been worth the effort. However, for several months now I've found it very difficult to maintain all of my time commitments, and far too many worthy news stories haven't been posted out of neglect simply because I've been too overwhelmed with things.

Much of this had to do with a very challenging (and also rewarding) semester I had at UNH this past fall. I am in my final year at UNH and the upcoming semester will be my last in the Computer Science program. My academics have pushed me to many new limits, and I'm finding that I enjoy the work immensely. However, due to the intense time requirements these classes have, I found myself in way over my head last semester, to the point that I was making a lot of compromises with my personal health and relationships. I've decided that I can't do this to myself again. My final semester is going to be even more challenging than the last, and in this depressed tech economy, I am going to have to put even more resources into finding a job for when I graduate.

Now, there's no way I could stop being active in men's issues - it means so much to me that I could not be complete without being a men's activist. However, I've decided that in order to maintain my physical and mental health for the next six months, I will have to focus on local men's issues activism at the expense of some of the wider scale things I've been doing, such as running Mensactivism.org. One of the things I intend to do is make a final attempt to get a seat on the NH Commission on the Status of Men, for which I now have support from several key people.

I also didn't want to consider shutting down Mensactivism.org. Such a vibrant community of activists have kept this site going, and I wanted to see what could be done to allow this community to sustain itself. Thus we have taken on four new administrators who will work with the three we currently have, to edit and post user submissions to the site. I'm confident that this new team has the resources to keep the spirit of the site going strong, and to maintain Mensactivism.org as a useful resource for men's activists in a wide variety of issues.

I'd like to thank Adam, Thomas, and Brad for helping me keep this site going for so long. Nightmist will not be forgotten for his enormous contributions to this site as well. And now I'd like to welcome Steve, Tom, tparker, and Dan as new admins. I'll be helping them get up to speed on things over the next couple of weeks and will be acting as an advisor when needed by the beginning of February. Some of the info pages in the "Navigation" section of the site will be updated to reflect the new status of things over the next week, and e-mails to admin@mensactivism.org will be forwarded to the mailing list of MANN admins so they can keep track of e-mail submissions and such.

Mensactivism.org is really run by all of its readers, the admins just keep a consistent image and "smooth out the edges" editorially. I'm confident that this site will only improve because of these changes. Thanks for sticking with us through all this!

- Scott Garman

scott@mensactivism.org

(who started this site as an "experiment" to learn apache and mysql) :)

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with

comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/16/1726219.shtml

L.A. County Sanctioned $700 for Ignoring NCFM Request

Scott · 17 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Marc writes "The County of Los Angeles was sanctioned $700 by a judge of the L.A. Superior Court for not responding to NCFM, LA's demand for documents on their gender policies that we made several months ago. The judge gave the County 10 days to come up with the documents. We filed this case last year because L.A. County funds a Commission for Women but no Commission for Men. To view the complaint, see this PDF file. We recently filed another suit against L.A. County for spending millions of dollars on an Office of Women's Health but having nothing similar for men at all. We will post that complaint on our website soon."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/17/1634243.shtml

The Media's Double Standards

Scott · 18 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "This opinion piece is a great example of how things are progressing to the awareness stage for men's issues. Some of the books being mentioned are mainstream books. They are along the same lines as Spreading Misandry. The fact that more and more material is coming out and being published is a welcome sign. One which, according to this author, will lead to the improvement of men's health."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/18/0234255.shtml

V-Day Parody Contest Deadline Approaching

Scott · 18 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The parody contest sponsored by Jack Kammer is still accepting entries for their "If I only had a V" contest to satirize the radical feminist hijacking of Valentine's Day as "V-Day". The deadline for submissions is February 6, so please get them in early, for a chance to win $100! Read on for more details, and check out the contest link. You may have heard that for the past several years certain sexist domestic violence zealots have been attempting to convert Valentine's Day into yet another occasion for wrongly portraying violence as something men mainly do to women. They have dubbed February 14 "V-Day." The V stands for, you guessed it, Violence. At the behest of Eve Ensler, author of the much-ballyhooed stage production "The Vagina Monologues," the V also stands for Vaginas.

Hearts to Violence to Vaginas. A lovely trick.

To help poke some fun at this bizarre turn of events, I have agreed to serve as a judge, along with 22 other men and women in the US, UK, Canada and Australia, in the first "If I Only Had a V" satire/parody songwriting contest, based on the "Wizard of Oz" Tin Man's song "If I Only Had a Heart."

The winning entry will humorously describe how a man's life might be better if he only had a vagina. Judging criteria are (a) effectiveness in satirizing the idea that women in western societies are always virtuous, never committing violence themselves, (b) effectiveness in satirizing the idea that women in western societies are oppressed, (c) adherence to the original meter and tone of the song "If I Only Had a Heart," (d) suitability for being reported verbatim by the mainstream media and (e) humor.

The author of the winning entry will receive a cash prize of $100.

The deadline for entries is February 6, 2003. For details on rules and how to enter visit www.RulyMob.com/contest.htm.

Please let the Tin Man's song play in your mind for a while and try to come up with a satire/parody of your own. It just might be the winner.

Here are the words to the original song, the words for which I hope you will submit a sharp, funny, incisive parody.

If I Only Had a Heart

When a man's an empty kettle

He should be on his mettle

And yet I'm torn apart

Just because I'm presumin

That I could be kind-a human

If I only had a heart.

I'd be tender, I'd be gentle

And awful sentimental

Regarding love and art.

I'd be friends with the sparrows

And the boy who shoots the arrows,

If I only had a heart.

Picture me... a balcony...

Above a voice sings low --

Wherefore art thou, Romeo?

I hear a beat.

How sweet!

Just to register emotion,

Jealousy, devotion

And really feel the part.

I could stay young and chipper

And I'd lock it with a zipper

If I only had a heart.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/18/0246225.shtml

More On The Baby Bust

Thomas · 18 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I like to keep track of this type of article, because I'm pretty sure that population collapse will soon result in crises throughout the developed world. (The Aussies seem to be paying more attention to the problem than anyone else.)

The piece makes a number of interesting points including, "About 20 per cent more women aged in their late 20s and early 30s have (bachelor) degrees than men in the same age group." So let's review what we frequently find... The fembots drive men out of the school system with their unrelenting anti-male hatred and lies; women are less inclined to "marry down" than men; many women complain about the shortage of worthwhile eligible men and, when they're in their 30s and 40s, complain that they're single and childless.

Brace yourselves, folks. The population collapse is gonna result in serious turmoil.Source: The Age

Title: Fertility crisis: why you can't blame the blokes

Author: Bob Birrell

Date:January 17, 2003

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/18/188236.shtml

Men Seek 'the Truth' on Prostate Treatments

Scott · 19 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ sent us this insightful article from the Boston Globe and quotes it:

> "Men who have suffered prostate issues feel they were misled about the sexual side effects of their treatment. "Why can't we get good solid information?" said one Boston man....The result is that with 180,000 men diagnosed and 55,000 undergoing prostate-removal surgery each year, thousands of survivors are glad to be alive, but painfully disappointed with their sexual function."

CJ comments, "Perhaps its time that hospitals start treating men's cancer issues as importnant as they do for breast cancer, and supply support and information in a manner that is effective for the continued health of men."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/19/0147213.shtml

MSN.com Tones Down Male Bashing E-cards

Scott · 22 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "MSN.com has toned down its ecards. The "Man whining" ecard has gone. There are 3 along the lines of "There are no good men to be found", a slight improvement on violence. MSNHatesMen.com has changed its ecards to match although I doubt any feminist would like them. I'm sure MSN would claim that the change was just a facelift of the MSN site, but I can't help thinking that maybe those protest emails and MSNHatesMen.com had some influence." This is great to hear - many thanks to everyone who has written to MSN and applied some pressure.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/21/2256238.shtml

It's All The Woman's Fault

Thomas · 22 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

In this essay about women not taking responsibility for their choices, Taylor Marsh maintains that it's women, not men, who are to blame for the dramatic downturn in male/female relationships. I've put this into the "Humor" category because, though I don't agree with everything Taylor says, the piece cracked me up.

Here's an excerpt:
"Enter men, that wonderfully easy going, happy go lucky, go with the flow gender, who have stood by and watched as women implode, explode, and erode into a group of confused, hesitant, irresponsible people that won't take yes for an answer."

Enjoy!Source: What Do You Want?

Title: It's All the Woman's Fault

Author: Taylor Marsh

Date: November 13, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/21/2345224.shtml

January Men's Hour Released

Scott · 22 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "On the January Men's Hour: Senator Anne Cools on her work in the Canadian parliament. Trudy W. Schuett on the successes of 2002 and hopes for 2003. Ian Kelly on the rise of paternity fraud and more media coverage for 2003. MSN has toned down its sexist ecards and the MSNHatesMen.com response. Baby bust - the declining population. See the January programme here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/21/2258217.shtml

MANN Chat: Roe v. Wade--Not for men!

Steve · 22 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Steve writes "I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (1/22), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the usual location. The topic for this chat will be 'Roe v. Wade at 30: Same Old Legal Abuse of Men' In all the hooplah over the 30th anniversary of the U.S. Supreme Court's controversial 'Roe' decision, many people are overlooking a simple fact: in the last 30 years, men's rights concerning reproduction have decreased dramatically. We now have rampant paternity fraud, an antire industry dedicated to collecting so-called 'child support', increasingly anti-father adoption laws, legalized baby abandonment, and a seriously damaged system of divorce law. Where are men today in the area of reproductive choice? What can we do to improve things? Join us at this week's MANN chat to assess the situation and develop a strategy to correct it."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/22/1752231.shtml

Cathy Young Comments on the California Rape Ruling

Scott · 23 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

mcc99 writes "Cathy Young has commented in the Boston Globe on the recent ruling regarding the definition of rape and consent in California. I submitted a letter to the Globe editor, printed below. If you send your own, please make sure it is utterly original, since they are far less likely to publish any letter that appears to be part of a form or write-in campaign." I would encourage people to read Young's article, since she has brought to light some other factors in this case that I was unaware of until now. Read More below to view mcc99's letter.mcc99's letter: "Cathy Young's January 20, 2003 article on the California Supreme Court's recent decision to expand the definition of rape indeed brings up some hard-to-answer questions. I agree with her overall conclusion that forced sex is rape.

What bothers me though, and especially so as a man, is the lack of evidentiary standards in this kind of case. It is he said-she said-- and her words are weighted far more heavily than his. In fact, in today's climate of misandry, one need only accuse a man of a sex-related crime to destroy his reputation and/or send him to jail, with or without any evidence other than an accusation. Divorce and family courts lawyers will tell you how much such allegations, unsubstantiated or corroborated, are thrown about in efforts to besmear a man's reputation, and even when they are groundless, how the woman making the allegation is not prosecuted.

There is a reason the marriage rate has fallen and men these days are categorically uninclined to marry and have kids. Perhaps people need to start looking more objectively at the causes for the decline in both the marriage and reproductive rate in the United States and other western countries before either statistic is likely to trend back upward."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/22/1840221.shtml

DNA Dragnet of Men in Louisiana

Scott · 24 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Bill Kuhl writes "I saw a report on national TV news about a dragnet of men in Louisiana and then later found this article on the same story. Apparently there is a serial killer of women at work in the Baton Rouge/Lafayette area. Police have identified the murderer as male and have commanded hundreds of men in the area to show up to prove themselves innocent through a DNA test. How unbelievably unconstitutional can you get?!!! The same would never be done to women, I believe. One man refused to show up for the test and his name was put in the paper." To me, the most disturbing thing is the number of men who are willingly giving up their rights. [Question to readers]: When will these dragnets hit the town that you're in? Will you submit to the same, given that you have "nothing to hide?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/23/2157220.shtml

Man Friendly Feminists?

D · 24 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "Speaking of fourth generation feminism (not sure if this qualifies)Christina Hoff Sommers is invading campuses in an effort to "Take Back the Campus" campaign. The campaign was originally started by the IWF. Whats good about this is a Chicago unversity club has started up and they are naming themselves "The Partnership for Common Sence Feminism". I know sounds like an oxymoron, but; the group is aiming to set the record straight about research. This undoubtedly will be a welcome sign for the men's movement. So if these women who are starting campus groups are going to be thorough in their investigations there will be another voice speaking out against the misleading information. Best of all it will be women dealing with women. They also ask men to participate aswell. This is FYI to let you know its spreading."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/23/2335234.shtml

Large Scale Study Finds One-Parent Children at Risk

Scott · 25 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "This story in the NY Times [free reg. required] reports that according to a Swedish study unprecedented in scale and follow-up, one-parent children have a significantly higher risk to develop serious psychiatric illnesses and addictions later in life. The story didn't focus on children raised by their mother only, but nevertheless this is a strong argument against the current sole custody policies of the family courts." Studies like this are of great importance to the default joint custody movement.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/25/198241.shtml

Special Events and Violence

D · 26 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "This weekend is SuperBowl weekend. It has been reported (falsley I add) that this was a weekend when domestic violence skyrockets and shelter phone lines go threw the roof. None of this was substantiated in any form whatsoever. I'd like to point out that this scare tactic (that teaches women to both fear and hate men) is becoming more and more common. Shelters in Ireland were trying to pull the same stunt on their World Cup Soccer. It has also been reported that DV spikes during Christmas time. None of these allegations are accountable for and none of the accusers state whether or not men are asked about abuse against them. This is a common tactic no doubt to cash in on the events themselves. Im sure they will expand to every and anything they can think of for the bottom line M-O-N-E-Y. I didnt add any links, this post is meant as a reminder, but feel free to list some of relevence. Enjoy your weekend, Dan."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/25/2012211.shtml

Eeva Sodhi Discusses Unjust Laws

D · 26 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Bruce M. writes "This is a great commentary written by Eeva Sodhi in lewrockwell.com.
It basically sums up (as men's rights activists have been saying all along) the unfairness towards men by the laws passed with the influence of gender feminism.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/25/2027255.shtml

The Latest From Glenn Sacks

Brad · 26 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks' latest column, "30 Years After Roe v. Wade, How About Choice for Men?" just came out in the Mail & Guardian (published in Johannesburg & Cape Town, South Africa) as well as Mens News Daily.

He also made two radio appearances on Choice for Men this week, on ABC Radio's Early Morning Program in Australia on Monday and on the Nick Kasoff Show on WGNU in St. Louis on Tuesday. Archived versions of the shows may be available soon on ABC Australia and The Nick Kasoff ShowTo learn more about Choice for Men, see Glenn's previously published columns "Shouldn't Men Have a Choice, Too?" (Los Angeles Daily Journal, San Francisco Daily Journal, 2/18/02) and "Pennsylvania Abortion Case Raises Question of Choice for Men" (Newsday, 8/7/02). The Newsday column was coauthored by Dianna Thompson, executive director of the American Coalition for Fathers and Children.

Also, see the National Center for Men's Voluntary Fatherhood Project. Archived audio of Glenn's discussion of a man's right to choose (from the Dave Taylor Show in Calgary, Canada last year) is also available.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/26/156203.shtml

Legal Waiver to Protect CA Men Against Rape Charge

D · 28 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matthew Weeks writes "I initially wrote this article about a week ago, once the story of the California Supreme Court's ruling in People v John Z. broke, and published it on my personal site. It concerns the possible implications of the ruling, and contains a very macabre, yet humorous, tone to it. I drafted a possible legal waiver for people thinking of engaging in sex that would disavow them from any rape charges. It's made a lot of people laugh.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/27/219206.shtml

Angry Harry, Radical Feminists and the Superbowl

D · 28 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "Angry Harry's blog brings up the issue of the myths and lies perpetrated on Superbowl sunday. Harry has some history as well as some future concerns about the expanding nature of radical feminists falsehoods on all major sports events."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/27/2112236.shtml

CA Paternity Fraud Champion

D · 28 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "Attention ALL California Paternity Fraud victims! I have reviewed all of the tapes from the legislative sessions that took place last year. As everybody knows we need a champion to push paternity fraud legislation in the California 2003 legislative session. I believe that John Longville is that perfect candidate. THIS MAN GETS IT! P John Longville is the ONLY person on the Committee of the Judiciary that stood up to the bigotry that men face. He identified the issue and went after the issue like a bulldog!

Please send your FAX now requesting him to be our champion for paternity fraud legislation. I believe John Longville is a major fighter and will fight for the rights of paternity fraud victims. You can view his web site here: Assemblymember Longville

All of the information necessary to send letters and faxes are there. You can even call if you like. Please appraise him for his exposure of the bigotry that paternity fraud victims face and encourage him to be our champion.

Thanks,

Warble"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/27/2146213.shtml

UK Human Genetics Commission

D · 29 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anon writes "Hi! I came across a web page for a UK Human Genetics Commission plenary meeting.

http://www.hgc.gov.uk/business_meetings_05february .htm

Is this meeting to discuss the topic of regulating men's access to parentage testing services?

a.k.a. http://www.ukmm.org.uk/issues/shame/hgc.htm

Is there anyone out there interested in this meeting? Going to the meeting? If so, I'd appreciate being contacted." Dan's note: Hopefully this person will make themselves known on the board, but; I feel this topic needs to be explored immediately. With men's views and choices always taking a back seat we should always be up to date on new relative issues. Thanks for your understanding.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/29/1958205.shtml

What affects all men

D · 30 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User:Storyteller writes "Dear friends, we are an organisation concerned with what affects all men, in all societies. So we hope you can share with us some of your stoires with us at www.jaredstory.com and www.abusedbythesystem.org.uk/ thank you."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/29/2039210.shtml

Woman stabs her boyfriend to death, gets one year

D · 30 January 2003 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "A female track star stabbed her married boyfriend to death. She only received a sentece of one year for her violent crime. The article made a point of accusing the male victim of domestic violence in an obvious attempt to justify her murderous attack. The article is here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/01/29/2340258.shtml

Anatomy of a Dysfunctional Legal System

D · 1 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

fightbigotry2002 writes "When politics decides who is guilty.
This article is a study of the systematic nature in which the Maryland legal system bends the rules to ensure a predetermined outcome in civil cases. It is not enough to complain in a general manner that men as a group are discriminated against, we must understand how a system works to inform the public. When we make general complaints we are in danger of trivializing the true nature of what we face as a society. It is not just men or any target group who are loosing their civil rights, it's all of us. If we can not overcome the excuse by government to discriminate then we all have lost our civil liberties. Have so many died in 200+ years to fight tyranny only to lose that freedom by the tap of the gavel?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/01/1735208.shtml

Harvard returns money to Jane Fonda

D · 3 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "Actress Jane Fonda has pulled back most of a $12.5 million pledge to Harvard's Graduate School of Education, ending the school's plans for a major research center on gender in education. Fonda's intent was to study the focus of education as it relates to girls only, despite the fact that during the past two decades, most (all?) gender specific studies have been on girls. The most influential study done on gender in education was by Carol Gilligan, which lacked empirical support to back up her claims (even today she still will not provide her research for analysis). Perhaps academic honesty prevailed here, as the media claims that Fonda had to 'scale back" the project because of concerns about the economy. I think the truth is that some of her money may have benefited boys, who are the only known casualty of the impact feminism has had on secondary education, so Jane pulled her money out." Read an article here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/02/2213254.shtml

Men "...inherently a threat..."??

D · 3 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

mcc99 writes "Should anyone question misandry as a pan-western world phenomenon I suggest you merely read this article. Well, at least this article reported that the comments were denounced. Read it yourself--I don't make this stuff up, honest."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/02/2229250.shtml

Erin Pizzey: a Spectacular Woman

D · 3 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "Since Feburary is the month of Erin Pizzey's birthday I would like to post as much of her writings and contributions as I can find. If you don't already know who Erin is I will link her bio here. I feel its very important that we all get to know this dynamic woman who has challenged adversity for decades for the sole purpose of improving our lives. Both men and women."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/02/2318238.shtml

Anonymous Sperm Donation Damaging

D · 3 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

westcoast writes "There is movement to remove the anonimity of sperm donors...

It occured to me that if Mother's commit Paternity Fraud then this may challenge the idea of 'In the best interests of the child' raised when DNA tests show a Man is not the real father.

Is it possible to argue that Paternity Fraud and Sperm donation are similar?

From the BBC news coverage....

"Those who favour change argue that children born as a result of donor insemination can be psychologically damaged by discovering in later life that they will never know their biological father."

Of course in Paternity Fraud they can know their biological father, if the Mother reveals it and puts an end to the Fraud."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/03/177205.shtml

The Judicial Manslaughter of Fatherhood

D · 4 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "This story is specifically about Mark Edward Dexel, but it plays of so many men's lives it could be anyone of us. This man committed suicide because he could no longer fight the system. He felt beaten so he decided to hang himself. Mark left a note to explain his reasons and he aptly blames the system."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/04/0825238.shtml

Circumcision Opponents Use the Legal System

D · 4 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This NY Times article (free reg. req) talks about how "circumcision opponents use the legal system and legislatures." Must read.

Serge

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/04/0829208.shtml

iFeminist Web Site Regains Momentum

Scott · 4 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

After some rough times starting late last December, the iFeminists web site stopped being maintained due to a lack of funding. Fortunately, Wendy McElroy has found support from the Independent Institute, and the web site is slowly being rebuilt again. Note that the main web site is now iFeminists.net - the .org and .com domains now redirect to the new location. If you haven't checked out their site, please do so - this is not your typical group of anti-male feminists.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/04/1839242.shtml

Feminist 'Paedophile' Targets Boys

D · 5 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Uberganger writes "Germaine Greer, the feminist 'icon', has written a new book "challenging conventional views on child pornography". Called 'The Boy', it specifically focuses on boys as objects of sexual desire. It is astonishing that, in the current sexual climate, anyone would consider producing such a book. At the same time it seems consistent with a kind of deliberate perversity in relation to boys, to their depiction and treatment, that seems to be growing up in the wake of the wholesale denigration of men. Sick. A related article on sexual assault to boys by older women is here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/04/2320240.shtml

Why women are single?

D · 5 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

ppmnow writes "They just don't get 'it'...and neither does msnbc. Why is it that viewer dissatisfaction with this network is at an all time low? Read the following excerpt of a book featured on the front page of MSN....

So, why are so many women single today? I am certain there are different opinions to that query than whats being offered by Whitehead's book. Perhaps they should consider asking some men on this. You know, to add to the whole perspective."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/05/0459210.shtml

MANN Chat: Misandry in Super Bowl Commercials?

Steve · 5 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (2/5), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location. The topic for this chat will be "Men in Commercials: What Shall We Do About the Misandry?" The National Organization for Women Foundation (NOWF) has published its href="http://www.nowfoundation.org/watchout3/superbowl.html">assessment of the television commercials that aired during Super Bowl XXVII. NOWF's comments on the commercials are interesting because they indicate some ground on which men and radical feminists might agree. Quite troubling, though, is NOWF's clear approval of some commercials that may stereotype men or otherwise portray men in a negative light. What do you think of this development? Join us tonight at MANN chat to have your say. It will help if you >read the href="http://www.nowfoundation.org/watchout3/superbowl.html">NOWF report before attending the chat. Hope to see you there!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/05/0717241.shtml

Feminist Response to Circumcision Lawsuit

Adam · 6 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Philalethes writes "You may be familiar with the Flatt case in North Dakota, wherein a newly-enlightened mother is suing the hospital that induced her to sign away her newborn son's foreskin (see "Circumcision Opponents Use the Legal System" under Tuesday). Here is a charming editorial from the University of Southern California's Daily Trojan student newspaper, representing the views of the modern, liberated young American female.

J. Steven Svoboda of Attorneys for the Rights of the Child comments, "Without any credit or mention of journalist Adam Liptak and his recent New York Times article, and without any attempt to directly contact us for comment, the article takes and distorts information from Liptak's piece about the Flatt v. Kantak case (conducted by attorney Zenas Baer) as well as about Attorneys for the Rights of the Child.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/06/1558217.shtml

Texas woman who ran over husband to be aquitted?

D · 8 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "The Texas woman who ran over her husband 3 times while his daughter was riding in the car with her will probably get away with it by claiming, as Lorena Bobbitt did, that she acted out of 'sudden passion' and is therefore not responsible for her actions. Sudden passion is a defense generally reserved only for women who are clearly guilty of horrible violent crimes such as sexual mutilations or murders. It's simply the "temporary insanity" claim reworded and the standard punishment, which the story doesn't mention, is 'counseling' and no jail time. The story is here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/07/2020231.shtml

News Flash! Mainstream Media States Facts About Domestic Violence!

Thomas · 8 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

ABC news has published an article that states some important facts about domestic violence. Some of the valuable statements include:

"men are battered by their partners more than 800,000 times a year, according to surveys cited by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention."

and

"(Attorney and psychologist, Claudia) Dias thinks women who batter are much harder to treat than their male counterparts. According to Dias, female batterers 'start from a place where everyone sees them as victims.' She said men tell the very same stories of childhood abuse, yet men are never excused for hitting women. Women, on the other hand, have gotten just the opposite message."

We should write to commend them for this report.Source: ABC News

Title: Battle of the Sexes:

Spousal Abuse Cuts Both Ways

Date: February 7, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/07/2158222.shtml

Teenager Girl challenges male-only draft law

D · 10 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Jeff (aka This is Not Equality) writes "A 17-year old Boston girl has earned my respect, and she is, along with her step-brother and his friends, taking on the Selective Service System. With this move, she has done more for women than the NOW could ever hope to accomplish.

"The discrimination is kind of in favor of women," she said yesterday. "But this is kind of an ethical thing. If you say women have the same rights as men, you're going to have to take the good with the bad.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/09/2331239.shtml

Sacks on National Radio Tour

Adam · 10 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tatis writes "Men's issues columnist Glenn Sacks is doing a national radio tour debating his Valentine's Day column "Should Men Still be Expected to Pay for Dates?" (St. Louis Post-Dispatch , 2/14/02). Sacks has appeared or will be appearing in dozens of major cities leading up to Valentine's Day, including New York City, San Antonio, St. Louis, Phoenix, Los Angeles and others. To follow the tour, go to glennsacks.com."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/10/1846217.shtml

Male Suicide: Genetic Defect or Desperate Act?

D · 11 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes ""There is no bottom to stupid when it comes to government inaction" someone mailed me today.
Read on: " 'New think' thought of the day, published first in the Montreal Gazette – Men commit suicide because they are genetically defective (the Gazette always reports women commit suicide from desperate acts).
Once again the Montreal Gazette Newspaper, continues to call any issue regarding men a PEOPLE ISSUE (Women's issues are reported as women's issues).
It is the same sexist propaganda from the Gazette when it comes to suicides. Because suicide is 80% men, the Gazette reports it as a people issue.
Men are the victims of 75% of violence in Canada, 43% (growing) of spousal abuse victims and ¾ of suicides. Over 90% of the homeless in Canada are men.
Heritage Canada gives 100% of all gender specific funding to women and 100% of gender exclusive resources to the over 500 gender exclusive shelters to women.
The Canadian and Quebec governments refuse to fund a single gender exclusive penny to anything to do with men's issues (health, suicide, etc). Millions to women, nothing to men.
Desperate men / Zero resources = desperate acts.
Yet these researchers as you report, obviously without a clue, are looking for 'a genetic link' and a new study. Study What???
How about the Gazette Newspaper starts asking why there is no emergency funding for men from our Governments.
Today and each and every day 3 men in Quebec will commit suicide.
There is no bottom to stupid when it comes to government inaction and newspaper silence!""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/11/0513203.shtml

Stop Denying that Women Batter Men!

Adam · 11 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Ray writes "In this article
the outgoing mayor of a Southern California city is reported as having been caught on videotape slugging a City Councilman. She was cited for misdemeanor battery. Does this story confirm once again that violent women really can't do any serious harm, because their upper body strength is not equivalent to that of a man? Does our society view a woman's upper body strength differently here, than when a woman competes against a man for a job?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/11/0237258.shtml

Free Clara Harris?

Adam · 11 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "When I read this article by Joseph Farah, my blood pressure went up so far that I immediately got a headache. As you may recall, Clara Harris murdered her husband by running him over with her Mercedes Benz. Her trial is in progress in Texas. Frankly, I think she deserves the death penalty. But apparently Mr. Farah thinks she is a saint and that there ought to be more women like her. I would encourage anyone who is similarly outraged to share thoses feelings with Farah in no uncertain terms, at: jfarah@worldnetdaily.com

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/11/0250253.shtml

Differences between Male and Female Brains

Thomas · 12 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

It makes sense to view with a bit of skepticism such precepts as those espoused in this essay. The article does, however, present some interesting facts about fundamental, cognitive differences between males and females. And it flies in the face of those genfems, who insist that such differences are purely social constructions.Source: The Spectator

Title: Why women can't read maps:

The high incidence of male autism reveals basic mental differences between the sexes

Author: Rod Liddle

Date: November 30, 2002

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/11/2020241.shtml

Ruling Ended Son's Life

Adam · 12 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

dave100254 writes "Register Guard/Editor's MailbagOn January 18th, the Swat Team killed my son, Guy Einer McClure. His life was really over when Crook County Circuit Judge George Neilson and the State of Oregon decided what he would pay in child and spousal support in June of 1999. He had no hope and no life after that. I really wish the laws could be changed. Sent in by Kathy McClure, Guy's mother." I wish I knew what to say here, but words fail me.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/11/0258250.shtml

V-Day Parody Song Winner Announced

Scott · 13 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The winner of the V-Day parody song contest has been released. Jack Kammer, a men's issues writer, sponsored this contest to find a good parody of the Wizard of Oz song, "If I only had a heart" to satirize the idea that women are the exclusive victims of violence and oppression, which is the main impetus behind changing Valentine's Day to "V-Day". The winning entry can be found here, and the second and third place winners on this page. Many thanks to everyone who participated - the contest was a lot of fun. Plus, the winner received $100 cash prize!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/13/022256.shtml

Sacks' Newest: "Valentine's Day & the Gender Wars"

Adam · 13 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anon User writes "On Valentine's Day 2003...American men and women often remain bitterly divided...Part of the division...is due to women's legitimate grievances. But much of it is also caused by men's resentment that the very real problems and disadvantages they face as husbands, partners and fathers have been ignored by the media, our lawmakers and by society as a whole. To achieve reconciliation between the genders, it is necessary to address men's grievances." Read the article at http://www.glennsacks.com/valentines_day_and.htm --Newsday (2/12/03)

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/13/169229.shtml

Cyberman Books Chat

Adam · 13 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Just to let you know, it's the first anniversary of Cyberman Books this friday, and you're welcome to come along and chat with the regulars this friday. If you're interested, visit their homepage to find out more.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/13/1626207.shtml

Male Victims of DV on the BBC

D · 14 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

westcoast writes "The BBC did a story on male victims of DV this inside out programme was on at 7:30 pm together with a follow up Radio programme at 10pm.
Mayor Ken Levingstone when asked about the 50/50 male/female violence figure said 'I do not believe it'
At last the BBC have raised awareness of this issue and showed a sympathetic point of view."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/13/2132219.shtml

A Wife Murdering Her Husband is Domestic Violence

Adam · 14 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Ray writes "Cathy Young's new article appears on MND, and is about the alleged murder of Dr. David Harris by Dr. Clara Harris. Ms Young appears to take a reasonably objective and balanced approach to the story, and even goes so far in her closing sentence as to allude to this incident as domestic violence. That is something I have not noticed any other journalist do so far. One can only wonder whether the words contained in the heated debate on mensactivism over her last story (CA Rape Ruling) have had some influence over her balance and objectivity in this story. Hummm???"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/13/1628240.shtml

Masculist Anthology revived

D · 15 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "We're hoping to revive the Masculist Anthology, originally proposed by Nightmist. We're looking to get men's writers to submit articles on issues ranging from divorce through education through male health through false accusations (to name but four) with a view to publishing later this year. Email us or join the chat, www.cyberManbooks.com Valentine's Day – Friday 14th 2-12 Eastern (7-5 London)"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/15/0127220.shtml

Clara Harris found guilty

D · 15 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Doug writes "Clara Harris, the dentist who killed her husband after finding him with another woman, has been found gulity! It is interesting to me that in a case this clear it took over eight hours to reach that verdict. None the less, this is still a victory. Here's the link to a local news story." Here's also a link to the sentencing

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/15/1939227.shtml

Exposing a Feminised System

D · 16 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

jll1024 writes ″

I found this article on AskMen.com. It's a letter and a response concerning male-bashing in the media. I think it's important to note that AskMen.com may be one of the web's most visited site concerning general men's issues, and that the reality of a feminized culture is being exposed by a mainstream media source.

Please write to AskMen.com and thank them and encourage them to continue writing without fear of women who fear men."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/16/0436226.shtml

Lazy husbands the norm?

D · 17 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

WORKING in Seattle writes "
As you can see from this link, Dodge has joined the male bashing league with a minivan billboard advertisement that states: "Gets more done than most husbands." Can you imagine the media firestorm and feminist backlash if the word Husbands was replace with Wives? Even better, how about a billboard with an advertisement from Playboy with the statement: "Get more pleasure than with your wife!" YOW!

No fewer than (2) of these billboard are within a couple of hundred feet of my workplace. It has several thousand, hard-working husbands who work everyday, year after year, to bring home the cash for their families. What's next for men if this can be put up by a major US corporation?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/16/214249.shtml

Who cares if a man lives or dies?

Adam · 17 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous writes "A Boston Globe article addresses some positive health news for men: men are apparently living longer, and the gender gap among living senior citizens is narrowing. However, the article seems to more or less ignore the main reason to celebrate this news - namely, that men are living longer. Instead, it almost exclusively discusses the ways in which this would clearly benefit women. Great! If you are male, social "scientists" will celebrate your longevity - but only if doing so helps and assists your wife. Thanks for the concern! We've all heard it already - it's best not to be too much of a burden. (FYI, this article is very reminiscent of past articles that I have seen regardig the dearth of men on cellege campuses, focusing exclusively on how this reduces the "qualified" dating pool of men available for - you guessed it - women!) Here is the article. The author can be reached here: dembner@globe.com"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/17/0441208.shtml

Column about the negatives of V-Day

Adam · 17 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Steve writes "This is a column I wrote for the Daily Orange, the college newspaper of Syracuse University. It is about the negative aspects of V-Day, the anti-male propaganda holiday originated by Eve Ensler that takes place on Valentine's Day at college campuses all across the country. "V-Day" is a misguided attempt to empower women through hateful statistics that furthers the men-as-abusers stereotype." Free registration is required to read.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/17/0444235.shtml

Testicle attack "Is murder."

D · 18 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "BBC reports that the "Indian Supreme Court has ruled that anyone who inflicts fatal injuries to the testicles should face first-degree murder charges."

Serge"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/17/236201.shtml

The Media and the "Hive Mind"

D · 18 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "It is my opinion that the men's movement should know everything it can about the media and how it works. A quote from an article I came across " If it's not on television, it never happened. Out of sight, out of mind."(May explain the voicelessness of men's issues). Now this article, about a 10 minute read, may not have identical opinions to everyone, but the framework of what the author is saying stands true. The Author shows the bass work of how television can develope mass opinions and how those opinions can translate into formalized thought control. Men feel more and more they are being reduced to a wallet or a slave in the menial sence. Their civil liberties being shortchanged. I think this article is certianly up for debate and a must read. "Jack Kerouac once noted," remarks the author, "while walking down a residential street at night, glancing into living rooms lit by the gray glare of television sets, that we have become a world of people "thinking the same thoughts at the same time."""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/18/0534221.shtml

Sacks Blasts College Misandry

D · 19 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Men's Issues columnist Glenn Sacks blasts college misandry in his latest piece "The Best Valentine's Day Gift for College Students: Gender Reconciliation." In it he vivdly describes what he calls "modern collegiate America's darkest hour"--misandrist feminist Catherine MacKinnon's Yale commencement address.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/18/2034217.shtml

MANN Chat: Attacking Misandry on Campus

Steve · 19 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (2/19), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location. The topic for this chat will be "Attacking Misandry on Campus." In a recent essay, href="http://www.glennjsacks.com">Glenn Sacks artfully described some of the problems college men face on campus. Those problems are rooted in misandry and happen not just on college and university campuses, but in elementary schools and high schools as well.
From labeling young boys as "proto-rapists" and "proto-harassers" to inviting notorious man-hating women to speak at graduation ceremonies, misandry is alive and well in the academy. Wanna do something about it? Join us at tonight's MANN chat to discuss strategies for dealing with misandry on campus. See you there!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/19/195209.shtml

Artists Wanted

D · 20 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "To draw political comics based on men's issues. I can come up with the writing and the ideas but would need someone to draw them. It would be a good idea for email campaigns as well as to be held on file on some web site. Obviously there is no money, its all volunteer, but; it will be a good , quick and easy way to get points across hopefully in an interesting and humorous fashion."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/19/2240239.shtml

UCSB columnist endorses domestice violence

D · 20 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Boy Genteel writes "I found this piece from a columnist at UC-Santa Barbara that endorsed domestic violence towards males as a way to heighten later sexual pleasure. Below is my angry letter to the newspaper.

"Beth Van Dyke is a sexist hypocrite. In her November 13 column, she suggested that couples should get into arguments and shouting matches so that they could later have rough "make-up sex".

She specifically condemned the act of a man smacking a woman around "like an inflatable doll", but she proved earlier that she has zero credibility, as she outright endorsed the act of a woman slapping a man"...

"NO ONE, big or small, female or male, should tolerate being physically assaulted. It appears that Beth Van Dyke sorely needs to learn that members of the male gender are also not to be treated like inflatable dolls."

Now do your worst, mensactivism gang!

bg"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/20/1748203.shtml

Iowa legislator for Commission on Status of Men

D · 21 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "A male state senator in Iowa has proposed a Commission on the Status of Men to balance the female supremacist Commission on the Status of Womyn. In the article a female supremacist legislator is given more space for her harassment of him than his proposal receives. And the fact that a Commission for Womyn already exists is also conveniently left out of the biased article. The article is posted in Oddly Enough News rather than in the real news as a final kick in the crotch to all men everywhere. Nevertheless, the article is posted and can be found here.

We need to do whatever we can to support this Iowa state senator in his efforts to obtain some equality for men. He is going to need whatever we can give him in standing up to the feminist political machine."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/20/2329257.shtml

The BBC and Gender Fascism

D · 21 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "Here is an article(just click on BBC and Gender Feminsim) written by Melanie Philips who takes the BBC to task in regards to new segments that are appearing in coming weeks. Melanie points out many of the atrocities that the BBC perpetuate for the myths of domestic violence. How monopoly networks can maintain status quo and politically demonize men wholesale. Another Journalist (Jennie Bristow) points out the flaws of 'Hitting Home' campaign in her article"A Licence to Indoctrinate". With the indoctrination tactics and the fearmongering designed to make us suspicious of our partners. She alludes that the government is trying to invade our homes. Which is something I blatently state."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/20/2334213.shtml

Rehabilitative Alimony In Tennessee Courts

Adam · 21 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Lee in Tennessee writes "I'm not sure of the laws regarding rehabilitative alimony in other states, but in Tennessee, there is no legislature that ceases this type of alimony, even when an ex-spouse lives with someone of the opposite sex, or remarries. I am not a man myself, but rather a woman that is married to a very good man that, at present, even though his ex-wife has remarried, is paying her rehabilitative alimony. I have sat through more court hearings with him than imaginable, because every time she even senses he has gotten a raise, regardless of how much, my husband is drug back into court again. I have come to the definite conclusion that in no way are the laws fair or equal in regard to men, in fact, I have come to refer to rehabilitative alimony only as "the rape of man". How can courts and judges allow women to continually destroy men financially, even after they remarry, without some protection for the man. My husband's income, even before child support and alimony, is not rich, but substantial, around $45,000.00/year. He's not even left with a third of that after he pays his ex-wife. As for the child we have together, that, according to the Tennessee courts, is my responsibility, but yet, his ex-wife's husband does not have to take any responsibility in providing for them, because they can live off of what my husband's paying them. I would love to know what can be done to change Tennessee legislation regarding alimony, particularly this kind, not only for my family, but for the other men in Tennessee that I know are experiencing the same kind of "rape"." Coincidentally, I'm just about to post an article on this very subject, so stay tuned to this website.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/21/0411213.shtml

An Intentional Single Father

Adam · 21 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Hunsvotti writes "Bold new idea, or just arranged marriage done right? John, like many of us, read the writing on the wall. He knew that the odds were in favor of any marriage he might join ending in a messy divorce. You know what happens next - the separation of his progeny from one or the other parent. (Most likely him, not that he actually says it.) And yet, he wanted to be a father. So he entered into a relationship of convenience with a career-minded woman who wanted to be a weekend mom while still maintaining a career. They were never in love, and they never got married - thus sparing their 11-year-old son, Stefan, from the trauma of marital disputes and eventual divorce. Both parents are interested in Stefan, just not in each other, and each pursues their own romantic interests. Is this a viable new way, or are fathers like John cruising for potentially nasty custody battles?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/21/0412219.shtml

The V-Monologues

Adam · 22 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Bill Kuhl writes "Hey guys. Wendy McElroy of ifeminists.com just published an article of mine. It's about a "mini-protest" I performed at a performance of the Vagina Monologues a couple years ago. I thought it was especially appropriate now cause during Valentines (or V-day as the feminists are calling it) there will be many performances of the Monologues to coincide with V-day, to generate contempt instead of love for men. If you just go to the first page of Wendy's site it's on the right side,"My Monologues Mini-Protest." I think you'll like it."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/21/0415230.shtml

Default Paternity Fraud Sponsor - California

Adam · 22 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "It pleases my to announce that California Senator Roy Ashburn has agreed to carry a bill crafted and proposed by NCFM, LA. For political reasons, this bill will focus on obtaining relief for the victims of default paternity judgments.

It is based on proven language that has taken years to develop and extends the efforts of Roderick Wright and Stan Dorio who have been so helpful in establishing a foundation on this issue.

Paternity fraud from default judgments is a major problem in California. For example, in L.A. County 79% of all paternity judgments are default judgments. As a consequence, California has a 120% paternity rate because more fathers are being assigned to children than were actually born. This means that we have many cases where two fathers are legally assigned to pay child support. An example of this is the Yvette and Chaka Kee family. They are victims of the actions of a fraud mom that has two fathers assigned to her child. Naturally, the corrupt and dishonest opposition supports this practice.

This bill promises, if passed, to grant relief to the poor and many families that suffer from the effects of paternity fraud. The proposed bill also allows for the recovery of damages in civil court where there is actual provable fraud on the part of the mother. NCFM, LA notes that there is no state that has such provisions as a matter of law.

Finally, NCFM-LA, CAPF, ACFC, NCFC, and others will be participating in a Paternity Board sponsored by Governor Davis to draft recommendations on the future laws relating to paternity fraud.

I'd also like to thank Roderick Wright, Stan Dorio, Dianna Thompson, Carnell Smith, Marc A., Taron James, and all those that wrote the letters when requested to petition the California Legislature for support of our proposed language. Obtaining support could not have been accomplished without everybody coming together as a team. This proves that we can make a difference when we work together as a team

Warble"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/22/2146254.shtml

"Progressive.com" ads still at it

Adam · 23 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

IncredibleTulkas writes "It seems Progressive.com is still at it with their "voodoo doll" commercials, which portray a woman torturing a man for fun.
Apparently this is considered "humorous" despite the fact that the man is always in the receiving end-- or, more accurately, BECAUSE of this fact; the message is clearly that, the image of a man torturing a woman is considered horrendous, while the image of a woman torturing a man is hilarious.
Although Progressive.com has apparently toned down the ads from former portrayals of genital mutilation (I'm not sure since I refused to dignify the new commercial by watching it to completion), Progressive.com's simple history of misandry makes even the appearance of impropriety to be as unacceptable as Lorena Bobbit selling steak knives. Furthermore, the violent misandry portrayed in this commercial is unacceptable on its own."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/22/2149249.shtml

Violence and Gender Reexamined

D · 23 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "I came across a new book (Violence and Gender Reexamined) written by Professor Rich Felson and published by the American Psychological Association. The author goes on to describe that it is the 'non violence'(or chivalry) in regards to women that is the sexism. Plus a great deal more. The Author does not play to any agenda and shoots from the hip. I will post the flap synapsis of the book with written permission from the author. Also; the contents and the first chapter of this book is available upon request to my email address,(all with the permission of the author). One final note on this book. It was found in a university display. A good sign in my opinion. My email address is lynch4569@rogers.com"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/22/2252238.shtml

Men's Activist Page in France

D · 24 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This is a French website for men's activists around the world.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/23/2028215.shtml

DLJ to Resume Publishing

D · 24 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W. Schuett writes "Yuma AZ — After a six-month hiatus, the DesertLight Journal has returned to a regular publishing schedule. Beginning with the March issue, to appear March 1, the DLJ will contain both some familiar features and some new additions. In addition to news of the groups and orgs of the international men's movement, the DLJ will include book reviews, news of new book releases, as well as short fiction and poetry related to men's issues.

As in the past, subscriptions will be free. Those wishing to subscribe can go HERE to sign up. Past subscribers are asked to also go to this address and sign up, as this is a different process than the previous delivery method.

Writers wishing to submit work should e-mail the publisher, Trudy W. Schuett, at dsrtlite@mindspring.com for more information."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/23/2032239.shtml

Bill Maher's New Show

D · 24 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes *"Bill Maher is getting a new show. After looking at the site I think its possible that a person can submit their own ideas for a topical discussion. Now I don't know the whole score but I believe that Maher did try to bring some men's issues to the table but was stiffled for whatever reason. The advertisement I have heard states that the guests will have far more "Freedom" to discuss their beliefs on the issues. I think this is an oppurtunity worth trying despite the high chance for rejections. Personally its my dream to have more feminists and more masculists debating in the same room. Let's hope Bill stands true to his word."*

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/24/1858207.shtml

Discrimination against boys

D · 24 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

School programs exclude boys" and "Boys' advocate contends girls-only offerings in Petaluma, Sonoma illegal." See how Joe Manthey's activism is making some notice.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/24/1914208.shtml

Privilege Check List

D · 25 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "This is funny and yet so true. Anyways due to administrations requests I am going to post a check list that you should check out. Just read the first comment of this thread to see an interesting view by an unknown author."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/25/025254.shtml

Chivalry Linked to Sexist Views of Women

Adam · 26 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Martian Bachelor writes "Here's some classic damned-if-you-do, damned-if-you-don't academic "research" on chivalry and sexism which was in the news recently. A short quote may help give an idea: "Chivalry isn't all it's cracked up to be, suggests new research showing that men who hold doors for women also tend to hold sexist views about them...""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/26/026218.shtml

Do shirts and ties discriminate against men?

Adam · 26 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Serge writes "Have your say." Pointing out the double standards here will be a good thing.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/26/0212225.shtml

Pheminism at work - From the "MS." files

Adam · 26 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Gonzo Kid writes "I don't know whether this is believable or unbelievable. Read this: http://www.crowmagazine.com/ms-sperm.htm Martha Burke's email is capp@capponline.org. Drop her an email and let her know what you think. On second thought, it is believable. This is what "feminism" is all about; if you've ever doubted it, here's the smoking gun. Fight the Evil!!!!!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/26/0213220.shtml

MANN Chat: Attacking Misandry on Campus

Steve · 26 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (2/26), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location. The topic for this chat will be "Attacking Misandry on Campus." In a recent essay, href="http://www.glennjsacks.com"> Glenn Sacks artfully described some of the problems college men face on campus. Those problems are rooted in misandry and happen not just on college and university campuses, but in elementary schools and high schools as well. From labeling young boys as "proto-rapists" and "proto-harassers" to inviting notorious man-hating women to speak at graduation ceremonies, misandry is alive and well in the academy. Wanna do something about it? Join us at tonight's MANN chat to discuss strategies for dealing with misandry on campus. See you there! (Please note: This is the topic I had hoped to discuss last week, but the chat server was down.)

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/26/1940251.shtml

Women Now Empowered By Everything A Woman Does

Adam · 27 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "http://www.theonion.com/onion3906/women_now_empowered.html

Enjoy this humorous article about how today a woman is empowered by anything that she may do (shopping, buying shoes...), but also realize that mass marketing efforts DO ACTUALLY embody this feminist ideology, and this could account for the dramatic increase in misandric messages in all commercial media outlets. This is so because feminism is a class-based ideology, and so it tends to see everything in antagonistic terms. So, in order for women's lives to get better, men's lives must get worse, and this is reflected in contemporary mass media. Enjoy and reflect..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/27/1248248.shtml

Black men- the biggest victims of feminism

D · 27 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "Here is a disturbing article that glorifies the successes of black women over black men. A quote from the article "Not just teachers but the entire educational support system now favors girls over boys, argues Monette Evans, a Tuskegee College vice-president." "Most black males were encouraged to be athletes," not scholars. None made it big as jocks (obviously); instead, "over half of the males who graduated with me are in jail." The main focus of the article is that it is "hard to find a good black man" My opinion is that if black women (society) wants more good black men, start creating academic environments that are pro-male, because the current academic climate is misandric, and is expecially broken for the black male.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/27/1629200.shtml

The Case Against Alimony

Adam · 27 February 2003 · Archived copy · Original

A while ago, most of you read my article against alimony and I said I'd get back to you when it's finished, well it's practically finished but when I read Lee's post on alimony I had to post this, so click "read more/post comments" to read it. The article is co-written by Allen Cole and I must say were it not for him, chances are this article would not exist. So read it well, learn the counter arguments, and tell people the way it is.The Case Against Alimony

By Allan Cole and Adam H

Before I begin, let me state outright that it would be better to see alimony abolished outright and not some pseudo-equality effort involving equal numbers, for the simple reason that if a woman can withdraw her labour effect from a relationship at any given time with no penalty, then the same should go for the nearest man, as if the roles were reversed you can be sure that this double standard would not be acceptable.

Permanent and Periodic Alimony are monthly payments given from one ex spouse to the other in an attempt to equalize lifestyle, this is no different from socialism and in theory it can continue forever or until a significant change takes place. This is a practice which is sanctioned in numerous States. Rehabilitative Alimony is more frequently practiced and its purpose is to assist an ex spouse in acquiring a marketable skill so that they can become self sufficient. The characteristics of this form of Alimony are that it is limited in duration to typically 2 years. This essay will primarily focus on the rules and processes followed in the State of Florida dealing with Alimony, and advocate reasons why Alimony in general is illegal and should be abolished.

When a divorce reaches a final judgement, the court must distribute in an equitable manner the accumulated assets that the couple has acquired. These assets in effect are the financial “fruit” that the family works hard to acquire to improve the quality of life, and to achieve their financial goals, examples of these assets are; cars, boats, homes, furniture, savings, pensions, cash & stocks, etc. Thus one could conclude that these assets were the financial reward that both party’s worked for during the marriage.

It would be nice and simple if it would end there, however the state of Florida and other states, permit the courts to also award Permanent and Periodic Alimony, which is based on the following four criteria:

1.Length of Marriage, the marriage must be “of duration” to be awarded Alimony.

2.Significant difference in income producing capabilities of the two spouses.

3.Spouse needs additional support to maintain a lifestyle accustomed to.

4.Ability of the other spouse to pay.

This form of Alimony is permanent; however it can be increased or decreased if either ex spouse can demonstrate a significant change, these changes can be; Retirement, Permanent Change in Earnings, Increased need for support, etc.

To illustrate the inequity; if the ex spouse earnings increase over 20% the other spouse can get the court to increase her Alimony. In addition there are no financial controls or oversight placed on the spouse that receives the alimony. By illustration, if she decides to spend lavishly and go beyond her means, she can ask the court for more alimony.

The arguments against Alimony

Alimony should be banned on two grounds:

Legal (violates the US & Florida Constitutions) Alimony is involuntary servitude and is more often awarded to women.

a.US Constitution, Amendment XIII - Slavery Abolished. Ratified 12/6/1865. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

b.Florida Constitution, Article 1, Section 2
Basic rights.--All natural persons, female and male alike, are equal before the law and have inalienable rights, among which are the right to enjoy and defend life and liberty, to pursue happiness, to be rewarded for industry, and to acquire, possess and protect property; except that the ownership, inheritance, disposition and possession of real property by aliens ineligible for citizenship may be regulated or prohibited by law. No person shall be deprived of any right because of race, religion, national origin, or physical disability.

Moral and Social reasons:

a.Alimony is forced work under the threat of prison and exists at the nearest man’s expense.

Alimony is involuntary servitude.

Alimony is forced labor for the benefit of another, and also obligations without rights or goods or services.

Alimony assessed by courts, on the wife's behalf and taken against a man's wages for his work performed, fits ALL of the criteria of INVOLUNTARY SERVITUDE, under Title 18, USC., Sec.1584 and PEONAGE, under Title 18, USC., Sec. 1581 Hence: the concept of Alimony is illegal and violates anti-slavery laws in America.

From Title 18 USC Sec 1584

Peonage:
Not withstanding its early acknowledgement in the Slaughter-House Cases that peonage was comprehended within the slavery and involuntary servitude proscribed by the Thirteenth Amendment,25 the Court has had frequent occasion to determine whether state legislation or the conduct of individuals has contributed to reestablishment of that prohibited status. Defined as a condition of enforced servitude by which the servitor is compelled to labor against his will in liquidation of some debt or obligation, either real or pretended, peonage was found to have been unconstitutionally sanctioned by an Alabama statute, directed at defaulting sharecroppers, which imposed a criminal liability and subjected to imprisonment farm workers or tenants who abandoned their employment, breached their contracts, and exercised their legal right to enter into employment of a similar nature with another person.

The clear purpose of such a statute was declared to be the coercion of payment, by means of criminal proceedings, of a purely civil liability arising from breach of contract.26 Several years later, in Bailey v. Alabama,27 the Court voided another Alabama statue which made the refusal without just cause to perform the labor called for in a written contract of employment, or to refund the money or pay for the property advanced thereunder, prima facie evidence of an intent to defraud and punishable as a criminal offense, and which was enforced subject to a local rule of evidence which prevented the accused, for the purpose of rebutting the statutory presumption, from testifying as to his "uncommunicated motives, purpose, or intention."

In as much as a state "may not compel one man to labor for another in payment of a debt by punishing him as a criminal if he does not perform the service or pay the debt," the Court refused to permit it "to accomplish the same result [indirectly] by creating a statutory presumption which, upon proof of no other fact, exposes him to conviction."28 Pursuant to its Sec. 2 enforcement powers, Congress enacted a statute by which it abolished peonage and prohibited anyone from holding, arresting, or returning, or causing or aiding in the arresting or returning, of a person to peonage.32

The Court looked to the meaning of the Thirteenth Amendment in interpreting two enforcement statutes, one prohibiting conspiracy to interfere with exercise or enjoyment of constitutional rights,33 the other prohibiting the holding of a person in a condition of involuntary servitude.34 For purposes of prosecution under these authorities, the Court held, "the term 'involuntary servitude' necessarily means a condition of servitude in which the victim is forced to work for the defendant by the use or threat of physical restraint or physical injury, or by the use or threat of coercion through law or the legal process."35

Reference: The U.S. Constitution:

Amendment XIII - Slavery Abolished. Ratified 12/6/1865.
1. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

2. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Thus the only way that Alimony could therefore be legally justified is as punishment! But, punishment for what? What is the crime? The only event that can trigger Alimony is Divorce. Thus it would appear that Divorce is a crime punishable by Alimony. Yet Divorce is not a criminal matter it is a civil action, thus the dilemma and the basis for a constitutional challenge.

The International Labour Organization's Forced Labour Convention of 1930 defines forced labour as "all work or service, which is exacted from any person under the menace of any penalty and for which the said person has not offered himself voluntarily."

From the Florida Constitution, Article 1, Section 2
SECTION 2. Basic rights.--All natural persons, female and male alike, are equal before the law and have inalienable rights, among which are the right to enjoy and defend life and liberty, to pursue happiness, to be rewarded for industry, and to acquire, possess and protect property; except that the ownership, inheritance, disposition and possession of real property by aliens ineligible for citizenship may be regulated or prohibited by law. No person shall be deprived of any right because of race, religion, national origin, or physical disability.

From the Florida Civil Rights Act ss.760.01 – 760.11

760.01 Purposes; construction; title.--
(1) Sections 760.01-760.11 and 509.092 shall be cited as the "Florida Civil Rights Act of 1992."
(2) The general purposes of the Florida Civil Rights Act of 1992 are to secure for all individuals within the state freedom from discrimination because of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age, handicap, or marital status and thereby to protect their interest in personal dignity, to make available to the state their full productive capacities, to secure the state against domestic strife and unrest, to preserve the public safety, health, and general welfare, and to promote the interests, rights, and privileges of individuals within the state.
(3) The Florida Civil Rights Act of 1992 shall be construed according to the fair import of its terms and shall be liberally construed to further the general purposes stated in this section and the special purposes of the particular provision involved.

Conclusion #1

Alimony which was court mandated after a divorce violates the United States Constitution Amendment XIII.

Alimony and Common Law Duty

The Supreme Court of the State of Florida states in Gilbert v. Gilbert, 447 So 2d 299 (Fla. 2d DCA 1984) “Alimony evolved from the common law duty of a husband to support his wife. The duty to support survives the dissolution of marriage for equitable and policy reasons.” Hence Alimony is a permanent duty of the Husband regardless of the legal status of the marriage. Alimony based on the "common law" right of a wife to be supported by her husband, but there is no equal law for a husband to be supported by his wife. This interpretation by the Florida Supreme Court is an explicit declaration of sexual discrimination.

Men should not consent to being economically marginalized. Alimony then, is a marriage tax usually for men only; a subsidy for women only, if you will. In an age of “equality” and "partnerships" it does not deserve to exist. Otherwise, in the eyes of the law, Men will always be working to economically marginalize themselves by being responsible, in short: Men should not be punished for being responsible.

The State assigns it’s obligations to its citizens on the former spouse:

The Supreme Court of the State of Florida again states in Killian v. Lawson, 387 So. 2d 960 (Fla. 1980); Brackin v. Brackin, 182 So. 2d 1 (Fla. 1966), “The purpose of Alimony is to prevent a dependent party from becoming a public charge or an object of charity.” It is incredible that Florida can assign it’s responsibilities that it has toward one of its residents and require a former spouse to assume those responsibilities. By this ruling Florida has also transferred Federal responsibilities to the spouse. This violates the basic obligation of Government’s responsibilities to its citizens which is broadly spelled out in The U.S. Constitution Article I, Section 1, Clause 1 which is reproduced as follows:

Reference The US Constitution:
Article I.Section 1.
All legislative Powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

Clause 1:
The Congress shall have Power To lay and collect Taxes, Duties, Imposts and Excises, to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defense and general Welfare of the United States; but all Duties, Imposts and Excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

Comparison between Alimony(Support for an ex spouse) and Welfare (Government support for indigent citizens).

Alimony/Welfare:

Can Amount Change due to ability to pay Yes

Can Amount Change due to greater need Yes

Are there incentives to become self sufficient No

Marital Debt:

Alimony is supposed to pay the "marital debt" that women are "owed" he's forced to pay and support a woman who does nothing for him, and if he fails to pay, he risks prison and contempt of court. The only official law remaining in the justice system where imprisonment happens for non-payment of "debt" Except, that this is a "debt" which the man had never started. Fred Hayward once wrote "A wife's control over her husband's body is so extreme that we Invented "alimony." (Alimony is the requirement that a man's body continue to serve the needs of the woman even after their marital contract has officially ended and she no longer has an expectation, let alone a requirement, to lift a finger for him for the rest of her life.)"

For a Spouse to claim she compromised her career because she chose to parent her kids full time is a choice she made and should not have it both ways. All benefits that she enjoyed and accrued during the marriage are equally distributed by the Court at dissolution; this would include all property, investments, cash, etc. In this way the spouse that compromised her career is repaid in 3 ways;

1: All the economic benefits acquired during the marriage are distributed, and she receives half of what the husband acquired during the marriage.

2: The Husband has supported her during the marriage in a manner that was comfortable to her and she did not have to go outside the home to earn this, this was a benefit to her.

3: In many cases the wife chooses to stay home and does not want to return to a high pressured work world, thus she accomplishes her objective during the marriage and thus must accept the consequences.

The reality of the situation is that the ex-wife becomes little better than a extortsionist, living in the family home in a good life style. Whereas the ex-husband has to down size his life style to meet the Alimony obligations. The crucial mistake in the concept of Alimony is thinking that a woman staying at home to take care of the children is the only one making a sacrifice. If her leaving her career is to be considered a sacrifice, then his evaporating options (having no choice but to work full time for the time his wife is home) and his added distance from the family must be considered an equal sacrifice.

To be honestly brief, the amount and duration of alimony that a woman receives after divorce is determined by only two factors: the net worth of her ex-husband ("the style to which she has become accustomed"), and her inability to find a job that will support her in that style. basically, the less promising her career before marriage, the longer she will collect afterward.

US Constitution Article XIV.

Section 1.

All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

From the Florida Constitution Article 1, SECTION 11.
Imprisonment for debt.--No person shall be imprisoned for debt, except in cases of fraud. From the Florida Constitution Article 1, 1SECTION 17. Excessive punishments.--Excessive fines, cruel and unusual punishment, attainder, forfeiture of estate, indefinite imprisonment, and unreasonable detention of witnesses are forbidden. The death penalty is an authorized punishment for capital crimes designated by the Legislature. The prohibition against cruel or unusual punishment, and the prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment, shall be construed in conformity with decisions of the United States Supreme Court which interpret the prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment provided in the Eighth Amendment to the United States Constitution. Any method of execution shall be allowed, unless prohibited by the United States Constitution. Methods of execution may be designated by the Legislature, and a change in any method of execution may be applied retroactively. A sentence of death shall not be reduced on the basis that a method of execution is invalid. In any case in which an execution method is declared invalid, the death sentence shall remain in force until the sentence can be lawfully executed by any valid method. This section shall apply retroactively.

History.--Am. H.J.R. 3505, 1998; adopted 1998.
1Note.--The changes made by 1998 Constitutional Amendment No. 2, adopted in November 1998 and which are reflected in this section were held unconstitutional by the Florida Supreme Court. Armstrong v. Harris, 773 So.2d 7 (Fla. 2000). In accordance with the final judgment in Armstrong v. Harris, No. 98-5826 (Fla. 2nd Cir. Ct. Feb. 2, 2001), s. 17, Art. I, State Constitution, as it appeared prior to November 3, 1998, is the law that is in full force and effect. Prior to November 3, 1998, s. 17 read as follows: SECTION 17. Excessive punishments.--Excessive fines, cruel or unusual punishment, attainder, forfeiture of estate, indefinite imprisonment, and unreasonable detention of witnesses are forbidden.

Justification for the abolition of Alimony:

Equality of the sexes which is an established doctrine in this country and has been the Law of the Land since 1865. Thus there is no justification for Alimony.

Alimony undermines and discourages the willpower to become self-sufficient and self-reliant, such a thing is hardly good for a grown adult and society. Recent changes in our welfare system are clearly and specifically focused on becoming self sufficient. Consider that Alimony is almost entirely designed to protect women's interests at the nearest man's expense. A woman who "sacrifices" her career or helps him gain a degree to support her is entitled to alimony, for example, but a man who marries a woman and supports her for 20 years gets no compensation. This de-humanizes the nearest man to be little better than a walking wallet. The question here is, why is acceptable for the nearest woman to own her life and labour while the nearest man does not?

It is an out dated concept that does not apply in today's society, should a spouse need training to become self sufficient a rehabilitative program should be crafted with State participation (the state should provide the same benefits and services it would normally afford to it's residents that were unemployed) this should be enough to get them started.

It can serve as an incentive to break up a marriage; this is completely contrary to our social objectives, it's unacceptable for any state to provide economic incentives for divorce, and economically marginalize a spouse in the process.

Alimony is out-dated and incompatible with the idea of autonomous responsible individuals; it is not compatible with the concept of marriage as an partnership (since alimony is one way) or contract between equals. How is it acceptable that one set of obligations remain indefinitely when the other (whatever they may be) has ended?

Since women are not bound to the same agreements after a divorce, the same should go for the nearest man as well. If a man is to be forced to do unpaid work for the nearest woman, then it should be a two way thing.

Lastly, consider a man who marries down and financially supports a woman which improves her life immensely. To use the sacrifice argument, she should be forced to compensate him on divorce for the "the lifestyle she was accustomed to" that he provided at his expense.

To finish, I leave you with this quote from E. Belfort Bax. It was written near the start Of the 19th century, but little has changed:

"A wife is now at full liberty to leave her husband, while she retains her right to get her husband sent to gaol if he refuses to maintain her--to put the matter shortly, the law imposes upon the wife no legally enforceable duties whatever towards her husband. The one thing which it will enforce with iron vigour is the wife's right of maintenance against her husband. In the case of a man of the well-to-do classes, the man's property is confiscated by the law in favour of his wife. In the case of a working man the law compels her husband to do corvee [i.e. unpaid work] for her, as the the feudal serf had to do for his lord. The wife, on the other hand, however wealthy, is not compelled to give a farthing towards the support of her husband...."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with

comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/27/1324224.shtml

Join us and Protest Feminist Hypocrisy

Tom · 1 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Join us for some MENS ACTIVISM. March 8th at the McLean Hilton outside Washington DC from 8:00 am to noon. Martha Burk is coming to town. Yes, that's right, the feminist who campaigns raucously against Augusta National Golf Club for not admitting women while she presides over dozens of all women organizations. NCFM of DC will be there to meet her. Join us as we protest her feminist hypocrisy. more information about the protest

If you are near the Washington DC area please come and join us. Door prizes are being given away and one is a set of "Drive Burk Out" golf balls for the protester who travels the farthest distance to join us! Be there. Make some history, stand your ground, have some fun. Spend a morning with men who are like-minded. Stop by for a short time or the entire 8:00 am to noon. Bring your golf clubs, bring a sign, or just bring yourself! We would love to have you with us.

If you can't join us how about making some suggestions here about wording for signs or just encourage those men who will be attending.

If you can attend please email me at tom@standyourground.com and let me know!

Hope to see you there.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/02/28/167237.shtml

Snow Penis offends feminists.

D · 1 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Chris writes "This is an article from the Harvard Crimson about some guys who built a giant snow penis, natuarlly offending feminists who decided to destroy it.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/01/1558244.shtml

Possible Problems of Cloning Confirmed

D · 1 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "We all know Dolly the cloned sheep. Well she had to be put down because she had serious health problems related to old age. The sheep had only reached it's typical half age cycle. Obviously this is important to a distant future for Men's issues so if you are interested read here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/01/167203.shtml

Another man hit by car

D · 2 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Atrocity! Here is another case where a woman hits her husband intentionally with her car. Fortunately, this time the man did not die. Reading from the article, this woman was charged with a MISDEMEANOR! Misdemeanor family-violence assault. Why is this not attempted homicide? The Liberty county sheriff, Greg Arthur, can be reached here: cosheriff@co.liberty.tx.us. The district attorney, Mike Little, can be reached here: distattorney@co.liberty.tx.us."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/02/1819208.shtml

KKK supports Augusta National Golf Club

D · 3 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

napnip writes "Great, just friggin' great. Martha Burk must love this. Notice that she says "It [the Augusta National Golf Club] must expect support of a like-minded group." I predict what Burk and her Burkettes will do is to use this to paint the Augusta members as supporters of the KKK, despite the fact that the Club doesn't want KKK support.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/02/2017208.shtml

IHateMen.com

D · 3 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "Im not sure if this site has been submitted or not. I thought I would throw it into the pile and show you what some people think is funny. This site still spouts the usual anti-male propaganda."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/02/2312242.shtml

Sacks Announces New Los Angeles Radio Show

D · 3 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Men's issues columnist Glenn Sacks' new LA radio show "His Side with Glenn Sacks" will debut on KRLA 870 AM on March 19th.

According to industry estimates, Glenn's show will have between 40,000 and 60,000 listeners in its Wednesday at midnight time slot, and there will be 15 million people within the sound of Glenn's voice. KRLA is one of Southern California's biggest radio stations, and can be heard all the way from San Diego to Santa Barbara. Also, the show will be broadcast live via the Internet and will be archived on HisSide.com.

To learn more about the show, go to www.HisSide.com

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/03/1750233.shtml

Progressive Insurance runs ads showing violence

D · 3 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

HombreVIII writes "Last July their ad featured a sexy woman, (the type that girls say "I wanna be like her when I grow up!"), using a webpage to cast voodoo spells on a guy finishing off in grand tradition with a pair of pliers to the genitals. This time at least she leaves the genitals alone, but once again she's smiling contentedly as she uses the voodoo website with the words "Cheating Boyfriend" emblazoned across the top to prick a guy with a pin, burn his foot, and finally shrink his head. Judging by the facial reactions of the girl he's dancing with, another sexy girl, she finds the fact that he's experiencing pain repulsing rather than sympathizing. In light of the fact that this ad was made after recieving the letters MANN readers sent them about the last commercial, under no circumstances will I ever use Progressive insurance."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/03/1754200.shtml

False Accusations Against Men To Rise?

D · 4 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "A man who has been keeping track of the BBC wrote an opinion piece with many informative remarks based on the BBC's campaign against men of late. An interesting read to say the least."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/03/224215.shtml

Fred Reed on Harvard Snow Penis

D · 4 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I wanted to post this since the topic was still a hot item. Fred has some great lines so its worth the read!!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/03/2341202.shtml

Expose "Dead Beat MOMS"

D · 4 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "you want to read about "Dead Beat Moms"? Read Here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/03/2350244.shtml

Very Special Guest for Chat This Week

D · 4 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Last week I posted the book by Dr. Felson. Many of you were interested in his book and his comments. I have asked him to guest host a chat this week (Wednesday night 9:30 est) so that some of you can ask him questions. Dr. Felson is a law proffesor and his book discusses issues of 'chivalry' and 'feminism' in the law. I will post his book cover flap again as the first post. Take some time to read it if not again and hopefully you will be able to make the chat. It's these types of books that should be shown to lawyers, judges, police officers and the general public of interest.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/04/1957231.shtml

Junior College Calls Men Tyrannical

Adam · 5 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

jeremyrainman writes "The local junior college that I attend, Cerritos Community College in Norwalk California (www.cerritos.edu), is having a few events on Mondays in March in lieu of Womens Month (March). I discovered this by walking into the library and seeing this posted in front of it:

> The history of mankind is a history of injuries and usurpations on the part of men towards woman, having direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over her.

> ---- Declaration of Sentiments, The Seneca Falls Convention

Any suggestions on formal letters of protest are appreciated."
NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/05/210202.shtml

New Threat to Civil Liberites In Maryland

Adam · 6 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original fightbigotry2002 writes "Maryland bills HB 668 and SB 273 two bills before the Maryland legislature.

http://mlis.state.md.us/2003rs/billfile/sb0273.htm and Senate Bill 273

What this means is that someone no longer needs to go before the court to have someone taken against their will for a mental observation request, no hearing. The potential for false accusations are enormous when added to the ease in which a petition is already made and accepted.

I had a friend whose ex-wife, pulled that stunt on him several years ago, he was forced to into a holding pen with other people, stripped naked and kept that way for a week. After the week was over, they told him he was in good physical health and sent him on his way.
Write your legislator www.geocities.com/dscott8186/legislation.htm"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/05/211240.shtml

Boys need conflict to thrive

D · 6 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Garth writes "This story argues that boys need conflict in school in order to stay focussed and energized. Dr. Leonard Sax asks "Where did we get this notion that a teacher should never yell at a fourth-grade boy?""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/05/2313257.shtml

Chat Topic Tonight

D · 6 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Just a quick reminder of our special guest on the chat tonight. I'm hoping several of you can make it out to night to ask some questions of Richard Felson's book. Read the earlier post to see his flap. He discusses chivalry and feminism in the justice system. How feminist assertions don't add up.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/06/0112215.shtml

Woman sex offender freed because she is a woman

D · 7 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original madman writes "Our society is sick enough to confine sex offenders to essentially life imprisonment thru the so called "civil commitment" laws if they have "personality disorders". Who doesn't have some personality disorder??

However, our legal system has sunk to a new low, where they have essentialy declared that this law will only apply to MEN!!! sound impossible???
A WOMAN sexoffender - sodomized 11 year old boy--- but they ruled because she is a women, they will not confine her. I guess they need the room to lock up all the guys who looked at topless pictures of 17 1/2 year olds... this really really pisses me off!!

Read This.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/06/2036246.shtml

Sacks Rises to David Harris' Defense

D · 7 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Sacks writes:
"...there is no evidence that David Harris was anything worse than a fallible human being who was caught in a difficult situation...The fact that this flawed but decent man could be slaughtered and then vilified for his one comparatively minor transgression speaks volumes about our society's noxious mix of anti-male feminism and anti-male male chivalry. The product of this witches' brew is a sick cultural norm where, in any conflict between a man and a woman, the man is always wrong." Read here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/06/2042242.shtml

TV and the Docile Doofus Dad

D · 7 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This little opinion piece discusses how the nation has changed. An entire collective thinking the same things and how fathers are accepting their fates. How America is getting dumber by the 30 min. episode. Think about it.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/07/0658209.shtml

Dance star sues rape accuser.

D · 7 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Serge writes ""The Irish-American dancer hit back at his accuser by saying the pair had consensual sex and she was trying to blackmail him. He said she threatened to go public with the claims unless he made "a sufficient payment to satisfy" her, and that she defamed him.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/07/1621228.shtml

Reminder of Feminist Protest Rally

D · 7 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I believe this saturday the 8th men and women will be joining together to protest feminist lies and hypocracy. Not only is feminism hateful towards men it is hateful towards women and the whole of society. If you have the time and are willing check it out.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/07/1839231.shtml

Women most violent to the unborn

D · 8 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

alphamale writes "Here is an interesting story stating that pregnant women and their fetuses are at risk as victims of domestic violence. While I am sure that pregnant women and their unborn babies may rarely be hurt by a partner, I suggest to you that thru the heinious crime of abortion, an unborn baby's greatest threat of violence is from its mother!
Why does society continue to ignore this blatant form of pre-meditated violence on an innocent victim?" Dan's note: "Here is another opinion column (I say "opinion" as it is void of any fact) to give you an idea how far and wide this spreads in the media regardless of country. In short it is "Short and Sensational" rag mag writing merely cashing in on the dissappearance of Laci Peterson. Everything the author asserts doesn't stand up to scrutiny. In short more unfounded demonization of men. I wrote the author and editor a letter maybe you can too.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/08/0056235.shtml

MSN's Dollar-a-Year MEN

D · 8 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

mcc99 writes "Well, here goes MSN again!

Note MSN articles and commentaries fairly lavish "man" and "men" on the people they describe when those people are doing something wrong or in some way judged negatively. Note that when they do things judged positively, they are called "people" or referred to by their occupations or relationship to others.

This is one egregious example. I am sure we have all seen others not quite as bad, just as bad, or worse elsewhere.

When, oh, when, will MSN stop hating men?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/08/1550235.shtml

The misery of being a French man

Thomas · 8 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This article describes a crisis that French men are allegedly experiencing. The piece is based on a survey conducted by Elle magazine. It repeats several of the tired feminist lies (lies in the US and probably in France) such as the claims that women make less than men and that women are the main victims of domestic violence.

The author states that "One gets the impression that a new war of the sexes is emerging." These bozos have no idea what's coming as the result of decades of anti-male hatred and lies.Source: Times Online

Title: The misery of being a French man

Author: Charles Bremner

Date: March 07, 2003

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/08/169200.shtml

Are Ties Sexist?

D · 8 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I thought this might be an interesting topic for discussion. Dresscodes for men in the office. Are 'ties' sexist? This news story shows how english men are taking it to challenge. Read here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/08/1647241.shtml

The Divorce Genie

D · 9 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I really enjoyed this Ray Peterson commentary, maybe you will too. It rings true for todays man. "The husband meanwhile is without support, resources, friends or legal protection while he lives in his parent's basement or in his car and wonders what the hell happened."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/09/0418230.shtml

Protest Rally a Success!!!

D · 9 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I wish to congradulate all the men with the balls to stand up and protest. Here is the link to the photos of what is described as "What a Day!". Take some time to take a look make some comments and maybe discuss further rallies. Thanks Tom and all.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/09/1738221.shtml

Massachusetts Killing State Prostate Cancer Funding

D · 10 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CodeMonkey writes "The Massachusetts state budget allocated to prostate cancer research and awareness has gone from $3.2 million a few years ago to NOTHING today. According to this MetroWest Daily News article, 765 men in MA died of this disease in 2000. What's even more sickening about this is that state funding for breast cancer is barely being cut, to about $3 million. Breast cancer killed 1,055 women in 2000. The injustice of this, and the discrimination it amounts to, are absolutely incredible. Where is the public outcry from Mass. men and medical professionals?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/09/214257.shtml

The not so privileged white male

D · 10 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Here is something that discusses the other side of the coin. Not intending to offend any other of our posters who are not caucasian. But, I wanted to post this to see how everyone feels on how white men feel they are getting the shaft. My intention is to bring us closer together. Enjoy.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/10/1718234.shtml

Tie him up, beat him up, It's all good...!

Adam · 10 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Thundercloud. writes "Just a little 'heads-up', for everyone.
I just saw on "ENTERTAIMENT TONIGHT" that yet another "women gang-up on and get "revenge" on a man" movie is comeing out, soon.

It's the standard premise:
Man cheats on the woman, abuses the woman, or is just a "jerk" to the woman. of course this is the "excuse" that is given to justify women commiting crimes and illeagle acts against men. this film features the usual stuff. The women beat up and kidnap the man and keep him bound and gagged to a bed while they humiliate, touture and physicaly abuse him. blah, blah, blah. Things that NO movie today would EVER depict being done to a woman. Aparently, women LOVE these male-bondage/hate films, and that is why the same type of film is made again and again.
Here's the kicker. I don't know what the name of the movie is. All I know is that it stars an all hispanic cast.
We need to keep an eye out for this flick, then give thje producers HELL for it, without mercy!!

TC."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/10/218214.shtml

Female on Male Murder to be Legalised??

Adam · 11 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Red Kev writes "Found this article via the Angry Harry Website http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/uk/2814267.stm.
Harriet Harman wants a change to the Law in the UK whereby Provocation should no longer be a valid defence in a Murder trial. However, while reading the article it is quite clear, in my opinion that what she is actually advocating is for female on male murder to be legalised. Shocking."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/10/215250.shtml

Father Christmas arrested

Adam · 11 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "Father Christmas, Sarah Ashford and Shaun O'Connell arrested for their purple door painting in England.

Jack Kammer about the "If I Only Had A V" Contest (including 3 renditions of the song), his book "If Men Rule How Come Women Make the Rules?" and a Washington DC March 8th Protest about Martha Burke.

DesertLightJournal being published again.

Call for submissions for a masculist anthology.

On the belated long February Men's Hour, http://www.menshour.com, an internet audio show that champions men's rights."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/10/217201.shtml

Women Rapists and the Government who backs them

D · 11 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CPM writes "Teacher back in jail on allegations she was at boy's home

I have so many issues with this story but don't have time to write them now. Here is another link of a woman raping another boy student. So I will just post it now and hopefully jump in later." I wanted to make this all on one thread. To show how underage boys who were raped then forced to pay child support and the government who rewards them. This piece will piss you off.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/11/188239.shtml

2nd Clara Harris copycat run-over in Houston

Adam · 11 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

starzabuv writes "Actually, since I just heard it on the 10:00 pm news, there isn't anything in print yet. Just an FYI to keep your eyes open for the story. First she stabbed the guy in the arm, then ran him over, breaking both of his legs. He's recuperating at Herman Hospital in serious condition, and she is on the run in a white ford taurus stationwagon. Since men have known these things happen all the time but the stories of women's violence are either suppressed or glossed over by blaming the man, maybe we are seeing a new trend in reporting? Maybe. Maybe not."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/10/219207.shtml

The Black Gender Gap: MSNBC insults black men

Adam · 12 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

equalitarian62 writes "Today I found an online article in MSN titled "The Black Gender Gap." Apparently, misandry and anti-male bias is even worse in the black community. The article is here:

http://www.msnbc.com/news/875614.asp

I'm not against black women advancing so much as the way they put black men down in this article. For example, saying that educated professional black women face a choice of being alone or "settling" for less-educated black men several steps below them. How condescending.

Steve"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/12/1649201.shtml

The Down-Trodden Kiwi Male

D · 12 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This article discusses how men in New Zealand have been emasculated by government. Discarded and down-trodden.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/12/179211.shtml

Raelian Cult to work on artificial wombs

D · 12 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

rage writes "Here is a link to the Raelian Cult website, whose scientists are said to have achieved the first human cloning a few months ago. So now they have taken to the following step : artificial wombs. To me, this news gives evidence that incubators are on their way in the short-run, else this Cult wouldn't have committed itself to the project. Once achieved, this breakthrough will ensure men's freeedom from women, we will be able to have our own children without resorting to a woman's womb, so no woman won't be able to steal our kids away from us in the courts any more.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/12/1711215.shtml

Fund Raiser for Prostate Cancer

D · 12 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

A New Jersey Non-Profit Corporation is having a fund-raiser for prostate cancer. Please go to the post and check it all out. See if you can help or contribute. Or even just make it known that prostate cancer is a killer.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/12/184215.shtml

MANN Chat: The Power of Protests

Steve · 12 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (3/12), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location. The topic for this chat will be "The Power of Protests in Men's Activism."
We'll discuss NCFM-DC's recent successful href="http://www.mensactivism.org/article.pl?sid=03/03/09/1738221&mode=threaded">protest of Martha Burk in MacLean, Virginia. We'll consider the factors that made the protest successful, discuss the lessons we can learn from it, and share ideas for future protests related to men's issues.
Join us at tonight's MANN chat and invite a friend or two!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/12/1820208.shtml

Yet Another Reversible BC Option for Women...

Adam · 12 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

mcc99 writes "Amazing. This article discusses new BCPs that cause the menstrual cycle to be elongated to three months instead of monthly. The article discusses the many benefits of doing so while quoting some misandrist as follows:

"'Cultures have long had many practices to manage the taboo and stigma of menstruation over the years. You can see them all as ways of managing women's behavior,' said Joan Chrisler, a professor of psychology at Connecticut College in New London, Conn., and president of the Society for Menstrual Cycle Research. 'Many feminists would say that misogyny is at the base of it.'"

Meanwhile, men still have the same-old options for birth control: abstinence, homosexuality, masturbation, condoms, and sterilization. We apparently don't merit the serious option of reversible BCPs though these are entirely a workable option."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/12/1654203.shtml

Bring back otousan!

Adam · 13 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

nagzi writes "This news article from a Japanese newspaper has a solution to the 'Declining morals of mothers' has the article would put it, that many here would cheer for. PS: otousan is japanese for father."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/13/1947241.shtml

Contacting the Father

Adam · 13 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Severin writes "I saw this news story (http://www.uwire.com/content//topnews031203002.ht ml) posted on ifeminists.net and I was just curious what people thought about this. I personally believe that a father should be notified if he is the father of a child, so that he may be involved in the decision as to what to do about the child, and at least have the chance to state his case one way or another. But is this something that we should require by law?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/13/1948224.shtml

Men forced to wear ties discriminatory?

Adam · 14 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "Here's the latest on the complaint in England by a man fighting against the forced wearing of ties with no corresponding dress code for women:

http://news.telegraph.co.uk/news/main.jhtml?xml=/n ews/2003/03/12/ntie12.xml&sSheet=/news/2003/03/12/ixnewstop.html/news/2003/03/12/ntie12.xml"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/13/1949259.shtml

Martha Burk on the Ropes

Steve · 14 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Hombre writes, "Hey guys, we've got Martha Burk on the ropes! Last Saturday's NCFM-sponsored protest in DC was a great success, and Todd Manzi's site, The Burk Stops Here, has had a strong impact. Let's go for the knockout punch!
Mr. Manzi has taken it upon himself to spearhead this battle, and needs all the help he can get. Let's give it to him. Check out his site for more info and then email him at href="mailto:tmanzi@theburkstopshere.com">tmanzi@theburkstopshere.com to see how you can help."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/14/0748258.shtml

An Excellent Response To A Critical Woman

Adam · 14 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Freebird writes "Devvy Kidd blasts American men as unchivalrous and lazy in this article: http://www.newswithviews.com/news_worthy/news_wort hy.htm and gets a response which echoes a lot of the feelings of the men seen on this board, including mine: http://home.iprimus.com.au/grahamstrachan/reply_to _devvy.htm

Until more alleged "non-feminist" women think about what their silence tells both men and feminists alike, the chasm between the genders will widen. Perhaps the fact that more and more men are turning away from women will prod them to finally speak up."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/14/122224.shtml

A request from columnist Bettina Arndt

Adam · 14 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I've just seen this on a mailing list I'm subscribed to, and I think you'll be interested in this. If you can help out, do so, She's prepared to give our issues a hearing in public, so click "read more/post comments" to find what she needs.The HREOC has just knocked back an application for exclusion from the anti-discrimination legislation by the NSW Catholic Education people - who wanted to offer scholarships to attract more males into teaching.

I am looking for other examples where males have been refused exclusions i.e. where they have been seeking pro-male affirmative action but have been refused.

Also am looking for examples where permission has been given to allow positive discrimination in favour of women, particuarly in education/higher ed.

Thanks, Tina.

If you can help please email her via:

Bettina Arndt: tina@starg8.org

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/14/1318235.shtml

complaints on dv

D · 15 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

gistmason writes "For there is a right in this state for non warrrented arrests, per states attorney office, unknown of statue for non warrented arrests of youngmen that are innocent of crime. But women should be believed since they are the weaker sex. True crime is believable? A question that is probably asked by youngmen perhaps who can't find a way to prove innocence. Is there control in the judicial system, if so where is the line drawn for nonviolent so called crime? Maybe there should be a new law of nonviolent domestic situations to be filed for men so they can have a chance to prove they were the ones victomized and to be heard in certain cases. Why? Think about being in reverse mode while driving."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/15/1813206.shtml

Men's health

D · 16 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Mangesh writes "Finally, the problem of male suicide has got some attention here in India. During the last year, in the city of Pune, there were 496 reported cases of suicide out of which 344 (70%)were cases of male suicide. These statistics are based on the analysis done by an Assistant Commissioner of Pune Police. Dr. Ulhas Luktuke, a leading mental health professional based in Pune says that the higher rates of male suicide are due to excessive societal expectations from men and the frustration that it leads to. The link is the story in the Mararthi language newspaper Sakal (15th March, 2003, Pune edition).

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/16/026229.shtml

My name is EARL

D · 16 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Now that the Dixie Chicks are controversial for their anti-american speech, the parody song "My Name Is EARL" by the Dixie DICKS is funnier than ever. It is a sarcastic shot at the Chicks and Martina Mcbride for their hatred of men that can be downloaded here

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/16/0212255.shtml

Sacks Writes about the 'Damned of the Earth'--Iraq

D · 17 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

In his latest column,"Iraqi Draftees: We Should Care about Their Boys, Too," mens issues columnist Glenn Sacks writes "Today the young Iraqi male is the damned of the earth. Drafted by force at 18 or younger...this generation of young Iraqi men can see nothing but pain and death both in front of it and behind it....By decrying the death of 'innocent' civilians, those on both sides of the war debate backhandedly ascribe guilt to these young draftees. Yet if they are not innocent victims of this war, who is?" The article can be seen at "Iraqi Draftees: We Should Care about Their Boys, Too."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/17/0036235.shtml

Domestic Violence Broadcasts

Adam · 17 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dave writes "Gentelemen,

PBS will broadcast via most of their stations Tuesday and Wednesday evenings (18 and 19 March) programs on domestic violence. We should hope that these are done looking at both sides of the matter. Let us watch these shows and judge them for what they are. IF, they are biased against men we need to be prepared to shower them with our thoughts and opinions. Check out their web site at: http://www.pbs.org/previews/DomesticViolence/"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/17/1852242.shtml

Radical feminist publicly calls for male gendercid

D · 18 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "This article by Dr. Helen Caldecott is the most disgusting article I have ever read and the mainstream is taking it seriously. This woman is pissed off becaues an editor at Marvel did not want to run her anti-male rant so she developed this "Code Pink" speech. Be warned that frontpagemag.com is really busy because of this article so you may not be able to see the page on the first try. Here is a quote from the aritcle. ""I mean how dare, HOW DARE these men think they can do this. WHO DO THEY FLAMING WELL THINK THEY ARE? They are truly pathological and they should all be removed, as I have said, for the public health of the people of the planet. Now 53% of us are women. We've had the majority and we've been absolute wimps. And it's time we smacked their bottoms, removed them and we took over. I'm not just joking --this isn't funny. I am deadly serious.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/17/2142202.shtml

Men's Health Week to become international

Adam · 18 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original rage writes "As some of you may already know, men's health week will become international for the first time in 2003. Countries included : USA, England, Scotland, Wales and Australia. Please make sure that all masculist sites and people you know are informed of that. That event must become known on a large scale.

Here is a link that provides the reader with useful information about this topic.

Men's Health.

Obviously, men's health is perhaps the only one masculist subject that draws public attention, and I think we can be confident for the coming decades as far as men's health is concerned."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/18/201215.shtml

Addressing Gender disparity in the workforce

Adam · 18 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

ahhkaboom writes "Men still only go to make up 20% of the workforce in most offices across the UK and unemployment has always been largely a male problem. Manbalance intends to target that disproportion.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/18/2246216.shtml

Sacks Blasts Feminist 'Women do the World's work"

Adam · 19 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tatis writes "In Sacks' newest column, "Men, Women and Work" he writes:

"One of the staple feminist claims heard every March during International Women's Day and Women's History Month is that 'women do the work of the world'... negative references to men and housework litter our popular culture. 'The Myth of Male Housework: For Women, Toil Looms From Sun to Sun' was a headline in one major publication, over a cartoon depicting a woman juggling (and struggling) with a baby, a roasted turkey, and a house pet, while her husband watches TV and "juggles" his beer and his potato chips...

...[However] the U.N. report upon which most claims of 'women work more' are based was deeply flawed...""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/18/2251211.shtml

We Must Seek The Truth

D · 19 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This fact finding essay puts legislators on the spot. The total disregard for the evidence in front of their eyes. The refusel to look at the complexities of domestic violence. The facts that will show that the patriarchy is not the reason for domestic violence. As more and more people begin to wake up to the falsehoods of the 'Battered Women's Industry'.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/19/0155234.shtml

New Miller Lite Ad promotes Male D.V.

Adam · 19 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

chicago joe writes "I just read in the local paper that Miller Brewing Co. is going to respond to their controversial Lite ad (with the two women fighting, and their clothes coming off) by creating two female friendly versions. Both spots feature "women fantasies", and will begin airing during the NCAA Tournaments. The first one is going to feature two men who are about to scuffle - their clothes flying off - before they realize they are lovers, not fighters. However, the second spot will feature women who've dated cheating boyfriends. They fantisize about various physically violent ways to get back at them. They include a piano crushing one, a golf shot into the groin of another, and lighting striking another.
Noting that alcohol is an unequivical co-factor in most assualts and most domestic violence situations, one must question the wisdom of this move. But I'm sure if the people at Miller Brewing Co. have not realized their foolish mistake, the boys at Mensactivism will let them know!
Side Note: Thanks to Jeffery Leving, the well known father rights attorney in Chicago and Rep. William Delgado (D-Chicago), the Illinios House Judiciary Committee has unanimously approved the states first paternity fraud bill. It now goes to the House for a final vote. I'll keep everybody posted."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/19/1436242.shtml

MANN Chat: Topics and Guests for Upcoming Chats

Steve · 19 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (3/19), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location. The topic for this chat will be "Topics and Guests for Upcoming Chats." In this chat, we'll collect ideas for topics for MANN chats to be held over the next few months. We'll also develop a list of candidates we can invite to be guests at our chats. Don't miss this opportunity to tell the guys at MANN what topics are important to you. See you there!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/19/1926234.shtml

Sex as a Weapon

D · 20 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This story tells us how women are getting jobs in Japan. I wonder if the Playboy article tells us how men are scammed here in America.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/19/2015248.shtml

The (convenient) hazards of being female.

D · 20 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Thundercloud. writes "Look out everybody.
*Here we go again with yet another malady that targets women only.*
According to some of the news media I've listened to, women can now suffer from what is called "Hurried Woman Syndrome" or "H.W.S.".
This comes, apparently, from women "having it all". You know, a career, a husband, kids, house work, soccer practice, etc.
Funny, men have had similar if not even more responsibilities in life but notice there is no "hurried MAN syndrome".
Seems like every week there is a new ailment that targets women only.
With all these ailments, syndromes, maladies and "disorders" that effect only women, how come we always hear only about how "weak", geneticaly inferior and flawed MEN are...?
Hmmmmm.

TC."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/19/2037250.shtml

The Alpha Male Comeback?

Adam · 20 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

An interesting look at changing gender dynamics from the nearest man's point of view, from the look of things, It would seem the groundwork and support for our movement is starting to turn up for us to tap into. You'll probably have to fill out a short form to read the article, but there's very little info to fill out to access it. Reading this article, I was reminded of Esther Vilar's quote from The Manipulated Man when she said "Men are at best praised for their steadfastness, courage, reliability - all qualities useful to women" if you focus on certain quotes, you'll probably get that feeling as well.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/19/2346229.shtml

"Violence and Gender Re-examined" Richard Felson

Adam · 20 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "Ian Kelly about the new Child Support Agency assessment procedure and the fight with the CSA.

Richard Felson about his book "Violence and Gender Re-examined" that challenges the feminist view of violence against women.

News of women using sex against men (news??), a woman who wants to sell her father, mothers who don't want equality and men and boys who do.

All this on the March Men's Hour

Been ill but getting better. Hope you enjoy the show."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/20/1852200.shtml

Video gets Rape Charge Dismissed

Adam · 21 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Gonzo Kid writes "This link This link has a story about three men jailed on charges of rape for almost a week on the sole word of a woman until a video caught her in her lie; showing that there was little in the way of a real investigation, and a rush to judgement. Prosecutors are described as embarassed. I should hope so! It still chaps me, though, that they are only "considering" bringing charges against the false accuser."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/20/1853225.shtml

A new front in the war (of the sexes)

Adam · 21 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Am I good at spotting social trends or what?
No sooner had I posted that, do I come across an article written by Suzanne Fields calling men in general pigs for lashing out at 30 years and more of rabid man hating, and then she slams us for not putting women in general first! I imagine she and Devvy Kidd would get on quite well....

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/21/1447245.shtml

Jobs for the boys

Adam · 21 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Following Bettina Arndt's request here's the article in question.
It looks like it turned out pretty well, so there's not much left to say apart from read it,
I guess....

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/21/1448239.shtml

NYTimes reports on Wage Gap

Adam · 22 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

mcc99 writes "The NY Times continues to outdo itself on disseminating false information and misleading statistics favoring females. The latest installment can be found here

The myth of the "wage gap" between men and women is based on the false notion of aggregation-as-fact and presumption of equal outcomes with equal opportunities. What this and other articles on the matter fail to mention is that 1. women tend to gravitate for whatever reason to service sector jobs despite the "affirmative action" (legalized discrimination vs. men) that they enjoy in every sector, both high- and low-paying, of the economy, and 2. such factors as supply and demand for services and things like time in grade and experience on the job are not safely ignored, and when taken into account, show no wage disparity between men and women."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/22/159229.shtml

Abused Men Tell Their Stories on Sacks' New Radio

D · 22 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Male victims of domestic violence shared their stories of abuse and anti-male bias on His Side with Glenn Sacks last night on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles. Victims included Jim (attacked by his ex-wife with a butcher knife as he held their two month old baby in his arms), Benny (gouged and attacked with household objects by his ex-wife) and Ray (a Vietnam veteran attacked by his ex-wife on several occasions, causing permanent injury). Also, Marc Angelucci of the Los Angeles Chapter of the National Coalition of Free Men discussed the lawsuit his group filed this week against 10 state-funded domestic violence shelters in the Los Angeles area for discriminating against male victims.

Other topics discussed included: anti-male police and judicial bias in domestic violence matters; what Angelucci called the domestic violence industry's "cover-up" of male victims; the Socorro Caro murder/domestic violence case; and the uniquely agonizing position abused fathers often find themselves in.

His Side with Glenn Sacks is a new, men's and fathers' issues radio show hosted by columnist Glenn Sacks. To listen, an archived version of last night's show will be up on His Side with Glenn Sacks Archive this evening. To learn more about the show, how to listen live and how to support it, go to His Side with Glenn Sacks.

To learn more about male victims of domestic violence, contact Stop Abuse for Everyone , an advocacy group which fights for services for all victims of domestic violence, regardless of gender. Also, see Glenn's columns:

"Nowhere to Go: Why Does LA County Refuse to Help Male Victims of Domestic Violence?"
(Los Angeles Daily News, 8/21/01, Pasadena Star-News &Affiliated Papers, 8/23/01)

"Baseball Player's Domestic Violence Arrest Demonstrates How Men are Presumed Guilty in Domestic Disputes"
(Los Angeles Daily Journal, San Francisco Daily Journal, 8/8/02)

"California Mother's Triple Murders Show Cost of Ignoring Female Abusers" (IFeminists.com, 1/24/02)

"Domestic Violence: A Two-Way Street"
(Los Angeles Daily Journal, San Francisco Daily Journal, 10/15/01)

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/22/1555238.shtml

More NYTimes misandry with Title IX

Adam · 22 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

mcc99 writes "
Speaks for itself

Note the editorial notes that 56% of higher ed students are female, but only 42% of college athletes are female. It fails to even point out the fact, by its own admission, that there are 6% more female students in higher ed than male. And of course the matter of interest in the sports, from students or spectators, goes unmentioned as factors for anything.

But what do we expect of the Times these days? Seeing more then one side of a debate? Not anymore!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/22/1511228.shtml

Prison for Streakers - Only if You are Male

Adam · 23 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Red Kev writes "The UK's definition of 'Equality' - If my girlfriend and I decided to go jogging one morning in the woods naked, only I would get prosecuted and would face up to two years in prison.
Read the story here:
http://news.independent.co.uk/uk/legal/story.jsp?s tory=388250"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/23/1616257.shtml

Judge hauled off to jail.

D · 24 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

For defying higher court orders a judge was hauled of to jail for 'contempt'. This particular judge is quite the 'biased' advocate for domestic violence cases, so it is an interesting read as well as an important precedent for men's advocates.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/23/2055223.shtml

The Machismo Monologues

Adam · 24 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Continiuing on from the previous parts (which can be read here and here if you missed 'em)
Gerald Rowles has just written a follow-up called The Machismo Monologues It's quite good, I know you'll like it. I think this was a good trilogy of articles don't you?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/23/207238.shtml

Letter to Progressive.Com

Adam · 24 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

BlondGuy10 writes "Glenn Renwick
Progressive Insurance
6300 Wilson Mills Road
Mayfield Village, OH 44143

Dear Mr. Renwick:

I am writing to you regarding a commercial that you are running. The commercial in question is the voodoo commercial with Kate Martin. This commercial is highly offensive to me and to other males in this country. Every time I see it I want to throw a brick at my television.

It makes absolutely no sense whatsoever to think that airing a commercial over and over depicting a supposedly jilted, revengeful female relentlessly sexually humiliating a male using voodoo and her computer is going to make other males buy your insurance. Are you under the mistaken impression that is does? What kind of message is this type "advertising" sending to young, impressionable minds in country?

I expressed these thoughts at your web site and a female replied that this was a humorous way to sell insurance and that it would continue. Well, male bashing is NOT funny to males and it is going to stop. Let's see a commercial where the tables are turned and it is a female being made a complete fool of and routinely discarded like yesterday's trash under the guise of humorous advertising. That would be on the air about 2 seconds before the women's groups had it removed!

You are spending much money I am sure to run this GARBAGE which is making males NOT buy your insurance. You don't have to be a rocket scientist, Mr. Renwick, to see that there might be an error in this plan.

I would not buy your insurance if it were the only insurance on the planet. Nor will anyone else over whom I have any control. Further, I am going to post this letter to every male movement web site I can find. Hopefully, you will receive additional letters in this regard.

I hope that I have your attention and that this trash will be removed from the air and replaced with a commercial where the male is NOT the subject of humiliation to the delight of a "victimized" female such as "Ms". Martin.

Thank you for your time and attention.

(signed)"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/24/1810211.shtml

Progressive Insurance At It Again!

Adam · 24 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "Seems like Progressive Insurance just can't stop being misandric in the image they project to the public.

This time these misandric idiots have put a nude picture of an 82 year old man in their annual report! Would a nude picture of an elderly female ever be used? I don't think so!

I recently got a junkmail solicitation from Progressive offering me insurance. When I read this article I fished it out of my trash barrel and sent the self-hating male president, Glenn Renwick a letter containing the junkmail solicitation and the following note along with a copy of the article about the nude man.

"""Monday, March 24, 2003

Progressive Insurance Corporation
6300 Wilson Mills Road
Mayfield Village, Ohio 44143

Attn: Glenn M. Renwick
President and Chief Executive Officer

Dear Mr. Renwick,

Enclosed in this correspondence you will find a solicitation letter from your company offering me insurance.

Also you will find a news report about the use of a picture of a nude elderly man used in your annual report.

Even though I am currently in the market to find the best insurance rates I will have to pass up your offer due to the situation mentioned above. I prefer my insurance carrier to have a more mature attitude about the image they project to the public. I am afraid yours is lacking in this regard.""" http://www.wsbtv.com/money/2047118/detail.html"

Story at:

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/24/1811200.shtml

Equality: A Man's Claim

Adam · 25 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Now here's an excellent looking book, It's Equality: A Man's Claim by Alan Millard, The website gives you a good preview of the book, and it's a very interesting perspective written there. It's quite an eye opener, even for us folk in the know. The book is 563-pages long and at only $14.95, There's no excuse for not getting this book, Since my sources tell me this book gives Warren Farrell's work a serious run for it's money, You know where to take it from here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/24/1431228.shtml

Census survey only outlines women's issues

D · 25 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes ″

Notice how the Associated Press article starts this article off in an inflammatory way by highlighting the data point (not fact until research is shown) that women at the absolute highest level of incomes are not on par with men (I'm sure not all dat is considered when researching this point too). The article then goes on to point out that "Despite lingering disparities, a separate Census Bureau report last week showed that earning levels for women are at record highs" Here is media manipulation at its best...ala the gynarchy."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/24/2338214.shtml

Women are powerful, men gutless says Elle magazine

D · 25 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Willj writes "This article by a Canadian columnist refers to an article in this month's French magazine Elle which says that French masculinity is in crisis. It describes three "generations" of men: 1) 45-55, guilty, afraid - they've capitulated to women. 2) Bitter divorced men, 35-45, looking for foreign women they can dominate. 3) The New Eunachs, 25-35, married, - they've set virility aside for conflict-free life in a matriarchal family. Interesting that those of us who don't want to live with feminist hatemongers are said to be looking for women we can dominate. I haven't found the original Elle article yet. I keep wondering when large numbers of men will finally stand up and show a bit of self-respect."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/25/1635248.shtml

MANN Chat--Blaming Men for War: A Healthy Masculine Response

Steve · 26 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (3/26), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location. The topic for this chat will be "Blaming Men for War: A Healthy Masculine Response." Feminist dogma routinely blames men for creating and fighting wars. Dr. Helen Caldecott's recent href="http://www.mensactivism.org/article.pl?sid=03/03/17/2142202&mode=threaded">speech, put the blame for war and destruction squarely on men's shoulders. It's convenient--and even popular--to impute to men the responsibility for all violent human conflict. But can we answer the issue so simply? If we look deeply into wars, we will see that women and the material culture they enjoy are at least as responsible for giving rise to wars as are men. Join us at this chat to explore some less popular views about the roots of war and how an authentic, healthy masculinity supports peace rather than war.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/26/1943229.shtml

"Self-defense for women only--" my response

D · 27 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original incredibletulkas writes "In response to the article "The Attack on Women's Sports" which complained against the sexes treating equally in school programs, I was incensed regarding a more serious issue which has been of concern to me for some time. As a result, I used the information in the article to write the following letter to Education Secretary Rod Paige at customerservice@inet.ed.gov :

"Hello;
I wish to contact Education Secretary Rod Paige regarding a serious and widespread violation of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, which requires schools to treat the two sexes equally; this violation has been going on for a number of years with no protest from the Department of Education.

Specifically, these violations take place in the form of certain self-defense courses, often known as "RAID," which are offered exlusively to women-- at school expense-- and which specifically prohibit men from attending at any time, and in fact ban even male attendance or observation under any circumstances, except for the course instructors.

Furthermore, these courses are often open to female non-students in the community, while likewise barring even male students of the school from participation.
This sexism was rationalized dismissed by simply claiming men had the option to fend for themselves, or in terms of finding--and funding-- other self-defense courses "elsewhere," despite claiming them to be of inferior quality in adequately preparing a person to defend against an actual attack, as well as being more difficult to learn in terms of time, trouble, expense and safety.

Since statistics regarding violent criminal assaults apply at least equally to men as to women in terms of frequency and severity-- and in any event do not indicate men to be inviolate-- then there is no evidence, conclusive or otherwise, that men would not benefit from such a program.

As such, this sexist double-standard is an outright violation of Title IX, and I would like to see this issue addressed immediately; either schools must immediate cease and desist from offering such courses-- either in terms or providing funding or facilities for them-- or else they must offer them to male students or participants on equal terms.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/27/0126218.shtml

Gender/military debate

D · 27 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

napnip writes "Not sure if this would be considered newsworthy, but MSNBC's homepage has a story on the renewed debate over women in the military. (Renewed due to Shoshawna Johnson being a POW in Iraq.) Ms. Huus does a pretty good job in covering this story, IMHO. The only thing I wish Ms. Huus had covered was the fact that women don't have to register with Selective Service, which seems rather hypocritical to me if they're going to have the same opportunities as men, but not the same responsibilities. The story can be found here: "

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/27/0128245.shtml

Overprotected Pregnant Women

D · 27 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Brightwriter writes "We fathers have been duped. Pregnant women are told not to lift anything weighing over 20 pounds, but my (pregnant) wife's obstetrician could give no rationale for that edict when we asked what (bad) would happen if she did so. The obstetrician said prospective studies were unethical, and that's that. Problem: a pregnant woman with a child already born will lift him/her often, obstetrician edict or no. Anything more likely to go wrong if it is not a first pregnancy (and the mother often lifts a pre-existing child)? I think not, else where is the evidence? This myth needs formal challenge in the medical community. I am a doctor."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/27/0129243.shtml

Feminism, Iraq and Human Rights for all

D · 27 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

" Feminists should be speaking out for human rights, not just women's rights." writes Cathy Young. In this article Cathy assails feminist diatribe as a pathetic waste. Even in this article it seems that the atrocities against men by Saddam is downplayed. But it does show the equation overall to women. Cathy still nails it. Human rights for all!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/27/1735220.shtml

"Dr. Caldecott Spits on My Grandfather"

D · 27 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

In his latest column, men's issues columnist and radio talk show host Glenn Sacks defends men and masculinity against the anti-male attacks of misandrist femninist Dr. Helen Caldecott. Of Sacks' grandfather, a decorated World War I veteran, Sacks writes:
"This magnificent man (and the millions like him) is not your punching bag, Ms. Caldecott. He's not a bloodthirsty warmonger, or an oppressor, or a patriarch, or an abuser, or any other of the dozens of repulsive canards which feminists have used to vilify men over the past three decades"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/27/1749211.shtml

Girl accused in plot to kill grandmother

Adam · 28 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Mitch Dean writes "Milwaukee Journal 02/26/03

This is an article About a fourteen year old girl who alledegly solicited her boyfriend to kill her Grandmother for the sum of $100.00 or else she would break up with him.The grandmother was informed of the attempted plot by a freind of the girl.The girls defense attorney says he will establish that it was all joke.This defense does not surprise me.Our culture would be more comfortable believing a female of any age incapable of such treachery.The story should be tracked just to see the outcome and treatment by the legal system to further demonstrate inequity in charges and sentencing between male and female juviniles."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/28/188259.shtml

John Gardiner Tells it Like It Is

Adam · 29 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

John Gardiner takes an interesting look at Oprah's prank team over at Oxygen, pointing out the hypocrisy involved, It's a great read. Don't just take my word for it, Have a look....

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/29/1955207.shtml

Using Emotion As Ammunition

Adam · 30 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Now here's un-expected surprise of an article, I could tell you what's said, but I think you want the fun of finding out yourself, so click the link for a refeshing perspective.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/30/1418222.shtml

Women And The Vote Part 1

Adam · 31 March 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The question in this article posed by Dorothy Anne Seese is Giving Women the Vote:
A mistake that wounded America? there's alot to comment on here, and I don't really the room or the time to do so. Oh yeah, have a look around the site to see who runs it, you should get an ironic laugh out of it.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/31/1951222.shtml

Does single-sex education help boys to learn better?

Steve · 1 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This href="http://news.telegraph.co.uk/news/main.jhtml?xml=/news/2003/03/30/ncoed30.xml">article reports new research in the UK that indicates that single-sex classes in some subjects may help boys to learn better. Apparently, the experimental single-sex classes helped both boys and girls to obtain better grades, raise their confidence, increase their rates of attendance, and improve their behavior in school. While the idea of single-sex classes and schools is understandably controversial, the approach seems to have merit. I was privileged to attend an all-boys high school, and I must say that the experience is one of the great treasures of my life. I hope other students will have the opportunity at least to explore the benefits of single-sex classes so that they can perform better in school.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/03/31/2247200.shtml

Informing Men about the Evils of Lifetime TV

Adam · 1 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Brett Carlson writes "This site is for men everywhere whose lives have been affected by Lifetime TV. Husbands Against Lifetime Tv"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/01/2150213.shtml

Women And The Vote Part 2

Adam · 2 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Here's part 2 of the series continuing with The Gap In The Gender Gap and let's just say there's quite a bit of heresy to go around this time. This one should get the comments rolling....

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/01/2154234.shtml

Nurturing Gold-Digger Socialists?

Adam · 2 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Now this article is a un-expected one, with a title like this: No shame in women choosing dough over the regular Joe Tina Arndt seems to be saying go for the money over the man, after making the case that most guys can't compete with the welfare state when it comes to women, she even goes on to say "So perhaps it is nurturing instincts that drive women to go for the money. No shame in that." And I thought she was on our side. Can't say I'm surprised.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/02/1117233.shtml

MANN Chat: Is Single-sex Education Better for Boys?

Steve · 2 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (4/2), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location. The topic for this chat will be "Is Single-sex Education Better for Boys?" Recent href="http://www.mensactivism.org/article.pl?sid=03/03/31/2247200&mode=threaded">research in the UK suggests that boys may learn better in some single-sex classes. Advocates for single-sex education argue that it helps students get better grades, be more confident in class, and improve their school attendance and behavior. Opponents of single-sex education worry that single-sex education deprives boys and girls of the opportunity to learn how to interact with one another. Got an opinion about this? Come to the chat, quaff a cold beverage, and mouth off. Hope to see you there.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/02/1856204.shtml

ESPN Commentary shows why Burk is now marginalized

Adam · 3 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

ppmnow writes "The following link, gives a seminal perspective on the coming fall of the Burk inadequacy."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/03/1030223.shtml

Re-writing the Rules

Adam · 3 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Freebird writes "This article should be required reading for all those women who endlessly whine "Where are all the decent men??" while harboring their hatred and bitterness against the same. We all should get a few nods and chuckles out of this one. It is good to see more and more people, women no less, waking up to what we have been saying for years. Happy reading!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/03/1032209.shtml

Another man free after 19 years in jail

Adam · 4 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "DNA clears another man who was sent to jail based upon false allegations. False allegations have ruined many a mans life, and until the US courts become unbiased and require proof, not the current "she said" evidence, things will always be bad. This is true for domestic violence allegations and sexual crimes. Innocent people have to be protected, otherwise there is no justice. It has become a "witch hunt" for men in the courts of the US. Middlesex MA District Attorney Martha Coakley said "There is not much you can say to someone who has unfortunately been at the wrong end of an imperfect system."

http://www.boston.com/news/daily/03/maher.htm"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/03/2214215.shtml

Woe to Women: Ruined Men

Adam · 4 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

What is with conservatives? Is the only way they see men's issues in how it will help or harm the nearest woman or kid? Reading this article you would be forgiven for thinking so. It's not all bad through, At least she makes an effort to the see things from a man's point of view, If only she could leave the "Women and Children First" mentality behind. Still, everybody's gotta start somewhere I suppose.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/04/0020251.shtml

Links: Buster B

Adam · 5 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Since it's all quiet on the submissions front, I think you'll be interested in visiting Buster B's webpage for a libary of writing on men's issues, you'll probably be there a while :-) And don't miss his web log either.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/05/1940200.shtml

"Practice" doesn't make perfect...,

Adam · 6 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Thundercloud. writes "Any body a loyal viewer of the TV show "The PRACTICE"?
If you are perhaps you have noticed a rather disturbing trend on this show.
This show, like many others, more and more often is dipicting what I refer to as "Male-bondage" senerios. This is when a man is tied up by a woman or women and is threatened physicaly and sexual inuendos are perpetualy made to the bound man. Often times the woman will hold a gun to the mans genitals or elbow or punch him there while she has him tied.
Any time I have seen "The PRACTICE" this senerio seems to ALWAYS be being played out. I just saw a preview for the show this morning, and sure enough I see yet another woman holding a man captive, gagged and tied to a chair, while she makes sexual comments and kisses him "affectionatly". Anyone who hasn't beleived me that this is a perpetual (and phsycolocicaly damageing) theme on this show (and many others) just watch the episode I'm talking about. It airs on Sunday nights, on ABC. I'm not sure of the time. Don't worry if you miss it. The way this show depicts men, I'm SURE you'll get another opportunity to see an example of what I'm talking about.
Personaly, I think we should make it a PRACTICE to boycott "The PRACTICE". AND let them know this sort of bull $#!t will not be tolerated by men any longer.

Thundercloud."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/06/1847214.shtml

Replace "Failed" Institution of Marriage?

Adam · 7 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "New Type of Relationship to Replace Failed Institution of Marriage
"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/06/1849209.shtml

CA - Incorrect Default Paternity Judgments

Adam · 7 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "As everybody knows, anytime that men's activist try to bring fairness to paternity law we get overwhelming opposition, and as predicted the opponents of paternity fraud legislation are opposing SB1030 in California in big numbers. Currently, there are only two letters of support in Senator Ashburn's office for SB1030. Therefore, we need every person on this forum to send in letters and faxes. Do not send emails or make phone calls. They will not work. This must be in writing. Here is a sample letter: Click Read More/Post Comments for the letter.

Honorable Senator Roy Ashburn

State Capitol, Room 2068

Sacramento, CA 95814

Fax: (916) 322-3304

Dear Senator Ashburn,

I am writing this letter in support of SB1030. For too long innocent families have been victimized by incorrect default paternity judgments and paternity fraud. With the advances in technology we are able to determine the actual paternity of a child. We need to update our paternity laws to account for modern advances in science. Like a person on death row, we should be using DNA testing to provide relief to innocent victims of incorrect default paternity judgments. It is my understanding that SB1030 will do the following:

- 1. Permit a victim of paternity fraud and an incorrect default paternity judgment to seek an affordable remedy at law.
- 2. Permit the victim to have arrearages of an incorrect order to be vacated
- 3. Allow a victim of an incorrect default paternity judgment a reasonable chance to challenge a judgment that would otherwise be final by allowing a judgment to be set aside within two years have a wage garnishment or the actual discovery of an incorrect default paternity judgment.

I encourage you to aggressively move this bill forward and thereby free innocent victims and their children of the oppressive burdens imposed by an incorrect default paternity judgment.

Thanks,

Your Name

Your Address

It is very important to thousands of families in California that we get these letters sent. Thanks for your help.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/07/2133247.shtml

Trident Gum castration campaign

Adam · 8 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "Trident Gum has been running an ad featuring two men being castrated by a squirrel which runs up their pant leg and bites their testicles while they scream. Trident's CONTACT link on their web page is not working so they will have to be contacted by other means to complain. But please do complain. Meanwhile, there is a web site that rates ads and has the Trident ad, which you can click on and watch before voting your opinion. The link to the site with the ad is here and so far has rated the ad highly. But only 14 people, including myself, have voted. Only a few of us can bring the rating down closer to where it belongs for using gender-specific sexual violence to sell gum. Please vote and remember this web site next time an ad is run featuring sexual abuse of males to sell a product (and you can be sure there will be a next time, unfortunately.)"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/08/149244.shtml

Retired Lieutenant gives his opinion on DV

D · 8 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This is something I feel is at the heart of the matter for the men's movement. Since the ennactment of VAWA more innocent men have gone to jail than we can imagine. Hardline feminists are not at all interested in finding a solution to domestic violence. They are more interested in destroying the family unit and dividing men and women against eachother. This retired-lieutenant, who has seen it all first hand, gives a good essay on the subject. One that I have fought for myself and one that you should too. Read Here

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/08/1635201.shtml

1 in every 142 people in US was in jail last year.

Adam · 8 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Serge writes ""A report from the US Justice Department also estimated 12 per cent of black men in their 20s and early 30s were in jail last year. [...] The US currently incarcerates more people than any other country in the world."" Articles like this prove our movement to be a moral imperative.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/08/1412251.shtml

Courts, Laws Allow Military Fathers to Be Stripped

Adam · 9 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tatis writes "When Gary, a US Navy SEAL, was deployed in Afghanistan as part of Operation Enduring Freedom in the wake of the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center, he never dreamed that his service to his country would cost him his little son.

Gary and Larry Hellmann, president of the National Congress for Fathers and Children, discussed this terrible injustice and the reforms needed to change it on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles yesterday evening. To listen to the archived show, go to http://www.hisside.com/show_archive.htm"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/08/1413231.shtml

Erin Pizzey: Ardent Anti-Feminist

Thomas · 9 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

For those who aren't familiar with this wonderful, important woman, Erin Pizzey is the person who started the first shelter for battered women. She quickly became disillusioned by the way feminists stole her efforts and used them in their war against men and little boys. This essay is attributed to her. (It's not on an official, Erin Pizzey site.) I wanted to share it, because it's a good read.

Erin does say, "The gross injustice to men deserves our concern but save your tears for innocent women." I find that statement unfortunate, since feminism has cost men at least as much love from women as it has cost women the love of men. In addition, men are losing their children and being sent to prison as a result of false accusations -- one of feminism's preferred weapons. Nevertheless, this is a good essay.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/09/1314241.shtml

MANN Chat: Men's Right to Freedom of Association

Steve · 9 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday
night (4/9), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location.
The topic for this chat will be "Men's Right to Freedom of Association." The recent flap about the Augusta National Golf Club has generated a lot of controversy. However, one point that is often overlooked is the value of men-only spaces. Sometimes, men want to be in the company of men. Should men have the right to have men-only clubs and organizations? What value do such groups offer to individual men and to society, as a whole? We'll discuss this question from an unabashedly male-friendly perspective at tonight's chat. Join us for tonight's chat and share your views on this issue.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/09/1749226.shtml

History of the Women's Movement: One Woman's Perspective

Thomas · 11 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Since we're having so much fun discussing Erin Pizzey on another thread, I thought I'd add this essay by her on how she's seen the women's movement develop since the late-60s and early-70s.

By the way, I didn't dig through it, but BC Fathers looks like it may be a good site.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/10/2226254.shtml

Japanese Women Putting Money First?

Adam · 11 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Looks like the cynics in us are gonna get their fix of cyncism with =http://straitstimes.asia1.com.sg/women/story/0,1870,39432,00.html>this article telling us about the Japanese women's standard in money. The bigest problem I have with this is they're not wanting to marry a man, but an image, and images have a reputation for fading. This quote makes me wonder "The survey also found that 64 per cent of women questioned thought they would never get married, although it offered no explanation as to whether that had more to do with women's high expectations or the nature of Japanese men. I do wonder about this sometimes.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/10/2232248.shtml

Heroic Father Risks Jail Rather than Lose Daughter

Adam · 11 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tatis writes "Martin Luther King went to jail to end segregation. Nelson Mandela went to jail to end apartheid. Edgar, a Los Angeles teacher, risked a long jail sentence for his right to be a father. Hear this heroic father's gripping story on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles at 11 PM on Sunday, April 13. To listen to the show live via the Internet, go to Listen Live http://hisside.com/listen_live.htm. Listeners can call the show at 1 866 870-KRLA.

Also joining Glenn will be Lisa Scott of TABS and former police officer John Brumbaugh."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/11/1733206.shtml

Unless we forget

Adam · 13 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

zerostress writes "I found this story 2 years ago on an Australian site.
It touched me to know they are still remembered, even if is only by a small group, the Men's Titanic Society."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/12/2247221.shtml

Martha Burke, still at it...!

Adam · 13 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Thundercloud. writes "I was just watching the NBC evening news.
They ran a story on the "contraversy" of Augusta national's "men only" policy.
I have to say it was classic far-left, anti-male media bias. They gave Martha (the jerk) Burke plenty of air time to screech like the harpie-feminazi that she is. But the guy who runs Augusta was given perhaps a 3 second blurb to defend his position.
They DID show men counter protesting the feminazi protesters, But they made absolutely certain that they showed the member of the KKK that also showed up at the men's counter rally. This was done, of course, to make it appear that men's activists are SYNONYMOUS with the likes of the Klan!
I find it interesting that the media never asks the question, that if Burke is truely for gender equity, why she and the fem-squad never take to task things like the WNBA, that has no male players. Or why is it that there are at least 500 ALL FEMALE universities in the U.S.A. but NO all men's universities, and why that is the case.
Oh, no. The media would never dare ask such things. If they did Martha (the jerk) Burke's and all feminazi arguments would be rendered completely MOOT! And we can't have that. Not in misandrist America...,

Thundercloud."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/13/169214.shtml

Fizzled Augusta National Protest A Failure. But A Success For Men?

Thomas · 13 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The screwball, Martha Burk's protest against Augusta National for not having any women members went beautifully as far as I'm concerned. Tom has turned us on to this link on another thread, but I enjoyed the article enough to want to make sure as many people as possible read it.

Many thanks to the misandrist, Martha Burk. She's got a lot of people pointing out that men have rights (freedom of association in this case).

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/13/221230.shtml

Another Man Driven To Suicide Over Child Support

Adam · 14 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "Last year in the US it was Derrick Miller who publically killed himself in California over an outrageous child support order. Now in Canada, Darren White has committed suicide because of the same misandric burden.

Just when will this insanity end?

The story"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/12/2248246.shtml

Against Martha - from an unexpected source

Adam · 14 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Freebird writes "Now here is something you don't see every day - an article from a college newspaper taking Martha Burk to task for her hypocritical crusade against Augusta National. The author loses it a bit when he calls Augusta's practices "obselete" (hmm, and all-women's clubs and female-only colleges aren't? why not?) and says women should be admitted to Augusta, again offering no rationale for his position. Otherwise, a pretty good article."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/14/1328225.shtml

Its A Crime To Be A Boy!

D · 14 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I never saw such a thing. What they did to this little boy is sureal. Read this story and shake your head, just as I did.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/14/1828217.shtml

Subtle Male Bashing in a Commercial

Adam · 14 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anon User writes "I am sorry that I can not be specific about the product of this commercial. I can not remember the product due to the overriding message that it exudes about males' ineptness about what is under the hood of a car.

There is one white male looking under the hood of a car for a dip stick. He takes some time to look and appears puzzled. Then a black male comes to help him look for the dip stick and he can not find it either. He also appears puzzled. Then a white female is seen standing on the side of the car. She says something such as, "Have you found it yet?".

I am a female and I thought this was a bit too much....

Commercials present all types in a subtle to profound negative light. I wonder who writes the commercials and are they sensitive to their audience. If you have ever been discriminated against and,in essence, did not have the power or the forum to fight back, you would scrutinize almost every thing seen with a fine tooth comb."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/14/1329253.shtml

Women's violence against men...humorous?

Thomas · 14 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tor Ackman writes "This article http://www.tucsonweekly.com/tw/current/feat.html recently appearing in the Tucson Weekly demonstrates how women's violence against men is viewed very differently from male on female violence. Until the cloak of innocence is lifted off of women this hypocrisy will be hard to reverse."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/14/1745244.shtml

Is there a DV fundraiser in your area?

Adam · 15 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W. Schuett writes "This AM I wrote a letter to the editor for a friend in NoCal, in protest of a fundraiser for the local domestic violence shelter. Much to my surprise, I discovered there are similar events here in AZ on the same day. (April 26)

So if you've got one of these going in your area, send me the e-mail contact info for whatever paper or TV station may be sponsoring the event, along with info for any corporate or government sponsors, and I'll send them a copy of my letter (with the correct references plugged in, of course). I'll need the title, location and date of whatever event they've got going.

E-mails or the direct URL for any 'contact us' form, please! A lot of the corporate websites have their contact info buried, so please don't make me work too hard! Otherwise I'm happy to do this. There's still time to get a word in, so e-mail me direct at dsrtlite@mindspring.com with your info. I'll cc you if you like, so you can see what I said."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/15/1525222.shtml

MHA's Opposition To The UN's War Against Boys

Thomas · 15 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The United Nations has undertaken extensive efforts to improve the lot of girls the world over. The UN has chosen to ignore the plight of boys, however, despite the fact that boys suffer far more than girls in many countries for a variety of reasons. Men's Health America (MHA) has undertaken a campaign to reverse this terrible injustice. Here's an essay by MHA on the status of boys' health around the world. And here's an essay on UNICEF's one-sided pursuit of gender equality (as if gender equality is possible while ignoring the welfare of boys).

Let's thank the fine folks at Men's Health America and work with them as much as possible.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/15/199223.shtml

Different Standards In Relationships

Adam · 15 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

MrDave writes "Buster offers much wisdom about how women attempt to manipulate men in thousands of subtle ways. Here's a sample from his daily blog:
"Women expect to be smiled at. They expect to be talked to. They expect some minimum level of courtesy and respect. If a man doesn't look at or talk to a woman, she thinks that there's something wrong. Women are fearful of negative attention; they take positive attention in stride. The one thing they find puzzling and disturbing is no attention at all."
For more see:
Blogger Archive"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/15/1528242.shtml

Boycott Budweiser and Post-it Notes

Adam · 16 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Alan Millard writes "Post-it Note pads (3M company) has expressed many examples of prejudice and discrimination against men. Captions include: "The more I know about men, the more I like my dog," and "Men have only two faults: everything they do and everything they say." After being confronted by Men's Rights, Inc., 3M gave them a shameless if not criminalistic response, ensuring them they would continue to use their products to only bash men, and "...assured us that they would never sell a product which was equally offensive to women." Reward companies that do not practice prejudice and discrimination, perhaps as Beauatone Notes, that can replace the same product.

Budweiser is guilty of expressing extreme prejudice and abusiveness of men, especially in its Bud-light commercials. Does anyone remember in one Bud Light commercial the woman at the bar, who didn't like the man's demeanor next to her, kills the man, then tells the bartender to "keep the chains," referring to the chains left behind the poor guy had worn around his neck? Ironically, this product also provides an example of men selling out their self-worth, since this beer is often deemed the official beer of many men's sports! Explain that one. Would a product that put down women and conveyed abuse of women be sponsored and endorsed by women's sports events?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/15/1948234.shtml

Men Who Get Hurt

D · 16 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Tucson Weekly has published an article discussing the greater picture of domestic violence. Names like Pizzy, Fiebert and Corry were mentioned. Along with a great story of Fiebert getting booted of Oprah for telling, well, basically the truth. Im not sure how big this paper is, but it is showing more and more that mainstream media is breaking away from the duluth model. Read Here

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/16/1258207.shtml

DV In India

Adam · 16 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Mangesh writes "Ms Madhu Kishwar is a leading women's rights activist in India (but she refuses to call herself a feminist). The following link is a balanced article (in English) written by her on the use and misuse of DV Laws in India"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/16/141205.shtml

Canadian Feminist Jurisprudence

Adam · 16 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tor Ackman writes "Recently, the topic of the tragedy of Darrin White has been mentioned on this forum. It's no secret that Canadian jurisprudence is controlled by the feminist agenda, and is the most onerous on men in the western world. In this document Eeva Sodhi describes how Canadian Jurisprudence has been hijacked by the feminist agenda and how Canadian courts have usurped a monopoly on 'justice' in disregard of the actual law. This four part series is fascinating and revealing. Other articles By Eeva can be found here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/16/142252.shtml

MANN Chat: Open Forum

Steve · 16 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (4/16), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at color="#222222">the usual location. This chat will be an open forum, with no designated topic. This is a good opportunity to share any important news you have about men's activism, ask questions about issues and projects, and just connect with fellow men's activists. Come to the chat discuss any men's activism issues that you consider important, and invite a friend to join you. >Please note: >If you cannot access the chat after a few attempts, we have a temporary alternate location for tonight's chat. href="http://pub40.bravenet.com/chat/show.php/3385628227">Click here to access the alternate location.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/16/1823201.shtml

A Golden Oldie: In Defense Of Men

Thomas · 17 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This essay may have been linked to from MANN a couple of years ago. Even if that's the case, there may be a number of people, who didn't see it then but will see it now. Some folks may take exception to a few statements by Heather Roscoe, but on the whole the piece cracks me up.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/16/237207.shtml

"Pulse-ateing"

Adam · 17 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Thundercloud. writes "I recently saw a preview for the TV news show "the PULSE".
They are going to do a segment on that "contriversial" comercial for some beer company, (I think it was) that depicted two women ripping each other's clothes off in a fight in a fountain.
The question asked was; "Is this ad sexist towards women?"
It may be interesting to watch. I personally want to hear someone ask; "Why the flack over this ONE commercial that may bash women, but not a peep about the HUNDREDS of ads we see every year bashing, belittleing and humiliating MEN?" This is FOX, so Maybe, Just maybe, someone will INDEED ask that question.
I'm not sure of the exact time, but I think it is on at 9:00 pm. (8:00 pm. central) on Thursday nights.
Let's see what happens...!

.....Thundercloud"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/16/144200.shtml

Bill Would Do Away With No-Fault Divorce

Thomas · 17 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This article discusses some of the arguments, pro and con, surrounding a bill to eliminate no-fault divorce in Louisiana. It's a bit of a mystery to me why any man would get married today, but some do so this is an important issue for them.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/17/1636218.shtml

In New Zealand....

Adam · 17 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

There's one hell of a double standard, You regulars are gonna love this one, It's something else.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/17/1718255.shtml

Further Erosion of our Civil Rights

D · 18 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Here is a suggestion being tabled for domestic violence. This reccomondation will allow the police to monitor just about everyone in the future as far as Im concerned. Ankle monitors will be placed on "offenders". I use the term lightly because none of the alleged offenders will probably see a trial and will have to wear the monitors as a condition of bail. Since the law enforcement will only see men as abusers and are only trained to see men as abusers, this will further subjugate men to the state based on descrimination.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/18/1426209.shtml

Activism Needed for NH Men's Commission

Scott · 18 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

After being very patient with the new Governor of New Hampshire, the NH chapter of the National Congress for Fathers and Children is asking for help in a focused letter writing campaign to get the final members of the New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men (NHCSM) appointed so that the Commission may fulfill its duties. We suffered attempted sabotage of the commission last year by former Governor Shaheen and now have a more neutral Governor, Craig Benson, in office. However, he apparently doesn't understand the urgency of making these nominations. Please help us demonstrate to Governor Benson that a lot of people care about this Commission and want the nominations to be made immediately. Click here to participate in this campaign. Note that you do not need to be a NH resident for your letter to count. And thank you in advance for your help!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/18/1624203.shtml

A Victory In Canada?

Adam · 18 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Andrew74 writes "Old Divorce Agreements Can Not Be Reopened-

Edmonton Journal

This looks like a victory for divorced men whose ex-wives use the anti-family court system to extort money from them. The only problem is that it still leaves loopholes for anti-family judges to reopen cases. Canadian anti-family judges are notorious for utilizing loopholes to push their feminist agenda."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/18/1642246.shtml

Gender War, Sexuality, and Love

Adam · 19 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Philalethes writes "The link (last Tuesday) to BusterB's comments led me eventually to Gender War, Sexuality, and Love, which has a lot of commentary I think MANN readers would enjoy. Perhaps it's been featured before, but not recently. I've been browsing it for the last couple of hours, and particularly enjoyed 'Can't we all just get along? Can't we just go out on a date?,' 'An open letter to women,' 'Masculism, not me-too-ism,' to name only a few. Give it a try."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/19/169228.shtml

Equal Opportunity Creates Greater Female Victims

Adam · 20 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Ray writes "In this article author Elaine Donnely asks (Are 'women') "serving at greater risk?" (than men?) emphasis mine. This article appears to try to delve deeper and ferret out the ramifications, "Are women today who encounter combat at greater risk than men in every way? Are they at greater risk, simply because of their gender's lesser physical strength and resultant inabilities, or does their physiological roll as sexual attractants to men put them in even greater risk of rape, genital mutilation, torture, and death?" Hum? Could you somehow weave the domestic violence "primary aggressor" rule into some of the replies to these questions? Do policies for women in combat and women in domestic violence reflect an American double standard?" There was also an interesting soc.men thread on this as well.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/19/1616251.shtml

Sommers and Sacks to Discuss 'Boy Crisis'

Adam · 20 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tatis writes "April 24 is "Take Our Daughters to Work Day," which was renamed "Take Our Daughters and Sons to Work Day" for this year. Christina Hoff Sommers, author of The War Against Boys, will join Glenn to discuss the boy crisis in education on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles at 11 PM on Sunday, April 20. To listen to the show live via the Internet, go to http://hisside.com/listen_live.htm>.

Listeners are invited to call the show and join the discussion at 1 866 870-KRLA. To get CDs and cassettes of all previous and future shows and to learn how to support the show, go to http://hisside.com/store/index.htm>"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/20/0942211.shtml

Canadian Supreme Court rules separation agreements

Adam · 20 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Garth writes "An Ontario judge and later the Ontario Court of Appeals ruled that a spouse should be able to reopen separation agreements simply by showing a material change of circumstance (meaning whenever you feel like it). Now, the Canadian Supreme Court has reversed that and what's more has also stated that judges should not "presume an imbalance of power" between a husband and wife. So, not only do agreements actually mean something now, but the court seems to making a point that husbands aren't always the bad guys."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/20/154233.shtml

Returning to New Zealand, Things Get Much Worse....

Adam · 21 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I hope you're sitting down and not drinking anything when you click http://www.stuff.co.nz/stuff/0,2106,2412808a10,00.html>this link and see how things are unfolding, It's.... Well, here's a quote from the 21 year old woman who had adult relations with a 13-year-old swim champion; To quote "He is not a little kid. If he made the decision to deal with grown up things he needs to own up to what he is doing in a grown up way. Maybe he is a child. But he chose to do grown up things." It's quite something when a woman goes around commiting sex crimes on a minor, blaming her victim and practically no-one cares, Don't you think?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/20/1926220.shtml

Skakel gets Railroaded

D · 21 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Since when did America start convicting people based on soundbites? Have juries become so stupid to take a man's life away from him without hearing the whole context of a conversation? The prosicution kept replaying over and over a soundbite from a conversation taped decades ago by the police while denying the rest of the conversation to be heard. Our individual rights are nothing but a history lesson. Read Here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/21/145231.shtml

Men's Health Act : good news at last

Adam · 21 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original rage writes "The Men's Health Act bill is currently being reintroduced in the Congress, or will be in a few weeks, so perhaps this amazing breakthrough for men's rights is not too far away now. Keep up the good work, brothers, men's health is perhaps the only one field in which we manage to make our voices heard!

See the latest news in the following link"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/21/1850249.shtml

Scholars ask if manly virtue is all washed up

Adam · 21 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes " What is the future of manliness itself after decades of ignominious retreat? Get a group of academic feminists together, invite a pro-male College professor, and debate the need for masculine studies on campus at Radcliffe. The head feminist asks "whether masculinity studies isn't a form of "academic Viagra"-an attempt to resolve the culture-wide crisis of "hetero-masculinity" by stealing some of feminism's scholarly mojo." The article ends by implying that women have less justice than men do... unbelievable. I'd like to add that it is time to start lawsuits that demand equal budgets for studies in both sexes on college campus, just like in sports. Normative studies on masculinity are all but gone. Thirty years of hard-line feminist studies on perceived masculine socio-pathological constructs have lead to laws which are biased against men, and have resulted in the "culture-wide crisis of "hetero-masculinity" – time for a change."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/21/1853229.shtml

History of the Women's Movement: One Man's Perspective

Thomas · 22 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I recently posted a link to an essay by Erin Pizzey that discussed the development of the women's movement since the late-1960s. Here's an essay by a man on the development of feminism in the same time period. It's a bit long, but a good read.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/21/2358217.shtml

Public Humiliation Not Enough Reason For Divorce

Adam · 22 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

AngelKnight writes "I don't know if you've seen this, but there's been a ruling in Italy where a magistrate who divorced his wife because she would berate him in public and abuse him verbally all the time was wrong in divorcing her - because there was no cause. Of course, she claims that this is just par for the course in married relationships."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/22/133250.shtml

Let's Tell Our Side

Adam · 22 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Freebird writes "This article entitled "Women March To End Violence" entitled shows the usual female tendency to ignore violence against males, which of course makes up the overwhelming majority of violence, not to mention female against male violence being nearly as common as vice versa and increasing year by year. There is a place at the bottom of this page to post feedback regarding the article. We should take advantage of opportunities like this to get the truth about violence out. The more the publice hears it, the better for all of us."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/22/135245.shtml

"Chasing Papi" Rhymes With....

Adam · 23 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Thundercloud. writes "A little while back I submitted a post about yet another anti-male movie that is to be released soon. But I didn't know the name of the movie, untill now. It is called "CHASING PAPI".
As you (may) recall I described this movie as haveing an all hispanic cast. That's not the bad part, of course. The bad part is that this is yet ANOTHER; "Men are all evil, cheating, louses and women get revenge on man, by tying him up and torturing him.
This is simply an Hispanic version of any given anti-male\males-put-in-bondage-by-"righteous"-wome n movie that we have all seen in the past. The whole "Man as lying, cheater" scenario is just an excuse to show the usual; 'women tying up and gagging and dominating a man bondage situation', that has become so prevalant on TV and movies these days.
I don't know who's sicker. The people who keep cranking these hate-films out or the women who go see them...
And women ask why men don't particularly like them, anymore. Yeah, Can't imagine, ladies. Can't imagine."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/22/137209.shtml

MANN Chat: Sexual Abuse of Men and Boys

Steve · 23 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday
night (4/23), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location.
The topic for this chat will be "Sexual Abuse of Boys and Men."
The sexual abuse of boys and men is largely overlooked by society. There is a double standard regarding sexual abuse: abuse of women and girls gets a lot of attention, while abuse of men and boys is ignored, celebrated, or even rationalized. The consequences of these social attitudes are incredibly devastating to male victims of sexual abuse. What can we do to fix this situation? Join us at this week's chat to discuss what we can do to correct this problem. Feel free to invite a friend or two to join us.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/22/2345207.shtml

Dads On Air Interview Warren Farrell

Adam · 23 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dads on air have re-posted their 2001 interview with Warren Farrell, Here's the lowdown "Dads On The Air interviewed Warren Farrell last time he was in Australia in 2001 and we are taking this Easter Holidays as a chance to now put this up on line and replay it for those who missed it." It's about 1 hour 15 mins with breaks in between. Oh yeah about 50 mins in, the interviewer plays the Dixie Chicks song "Goodbye Earl" talk about irony.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/22/219255.shtml

Women Responsible for Homeland Security?

Adam · 23 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

hurkle writes "In this article

the author manages to insult both men and women at the same time. Men ignore their societal requirements, and women save the day by giving in to their anxieties."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/23/1047255.shtml

UN Feminist Taken To Task For Anti-Male Bias

Thomas · 23 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

We've all seen evidence of anti-male prejudice at the United Nations.

This article points out how Dr. Ned Holstein, clinical assistant professor at Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York and a specialist in public health and preventive medicine, has challenged Carol Bellamy, executive director of the U.N. Children's Fund (UNICEF), to back up her misandry with some facts or withdraw her proposal to give special attention to the needs of women and children (and as a result less attention to the needs of men) in Africa. Holstein, a spokesman for Fathers and Families ("one of about a dozen gender equity groups from around the world that are calling on Bellamy to retract or renounce her proposal"), states that Bellamy's proposal violates the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, a U.N. document that prohibits any form of sex discrimination.

Perhaps it's time to look a little deeper into the misandry at the UN and to start demanding not only a few retractions but also some resignations.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/23/1256212.shtml

How easy for victims to lie!

Adam · 23 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

MrDave writes "
"To brainwash and manipulate a segment of the population ... convince them they were victims ... easy to blame someone for our problems... victims are conferred a higher moral status ... They become motivated, self-righteous and regimented ... They don't care if society is destroyed as long as they get their way." Those are the thoughts of cantankerous prophet, Henry Makow.

"Victims don't care about objective truth ... their suffering gives them the right to manipulate the truth ... "Post modern" and "feminist" (i.e. Marxist) theory disputes the existence of objective reality ... How easy then to lie!"

Makow's full essay is at: http://www.savethemales.ca/000012.html"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/23/1050244.shtml

New Standard of Teamwork in Men's Movement

Thomas · 24 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes

"The men's movement came together yesterday (April 22nd) and fought for male issues with a unified, coordinated, professional, and well-refined front. The organizations instrumental in this effort involved ACFC, CAPF-CA, US-CAPF, NCFM – LA, RAAPFV, MSN, MND, hisside.com, and many more groups and individuals working behind the scenes. Indeed, the effort was an international one that drew people in from all corners of America and drew attention from all corners of the earth. It has taken the veterans of the men's movement ten years to establish this type of foundation from which we could leverage our influence."

For the rest of this message of hope, click on "Read More/Post Comments.""This new milestone in cooperation proves that the members of these groups can come together and cooperate in a highly effective and focused manner to make a difference. The beauty of the coordinated effort was like a delicate work of complex machinery. We would like to extend a special thanks to the paternity fraud victims who were present to make a difference in 100's of thousands of lives.

"The result was that by the time the feminist opposition had a chance to speak all of their issues and concerns had already been addressed. They could not bring up any new issues that we had not already discussed and resolved in SB1030.

"We freely admit to the critics that this bill is not perfect nor by any means was it the ideal. It is clearly a heavily watered down version of what we want. Nevertheless, we are gaining a major political foothold in California for addressing men's issues, and the Senate Committee of Judiciary sent a strong message to the opposition that they will not permit further obstruction, obfuscation, or delay in addressing the issue of incorrect default paternity judgments.

"I would like to extend a special thanks to all of you that answered the emergency call for letters in support of SB1030. We are close to breaking the 200-letter mark. Think about this. In two weeks we went from 2 letters of support to almost 200 letters of support. To the skeptics who don't think those letters wouldn't make a difference or that we would be able to gather the support I say that the facts speak for themselves.

"The result of this coordinated effort resulted in the California Senate Committee of Judiciary passing SB1030 and moving it to the Senate floor. The only person opposing the bill was Senator Kruel with Sher abstaining. All of the rest voted to move the bill forward.

"We have three more steps to go, and it will be a tough fight. While we blindsided the opposition, we can rest assured that they will regroup and fight back. This is not over. Now we need staying power. I'll continue to use this forum to inform everybody on how they can support SB1030 and make a difference in the men's movement.

"Thanks!

"Warble"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/23/2323246.shtml

To frown is a crime?!

Adam · 24 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

MrDave writes "The city council in Palo Alto, California is considering a "code of conduct" mandating officials not to roll their eyes, shake their heads, or frown. The purpose is to discourage non-verbal forms of "disagreement or disgust". The council member proposing the idea is a woman. The scary aspect of this story is Palo Alto is the last city in Silicon Valley, California, to consider such a code – according to the mayor: also a woman. How long until men are arrested and charged with frowning at the silliness of such women? Unless we're careful, laughing out loud at a woman could become a capital crime. News story at http://www.bayarea.com/mld/mercurynews/5576044.htm"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/23/2328210.shtml

Women: Earn $$$ At Home! Threaten False Rape Charges. Minimal Risk.

Thomas · 24 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This story ought to get a rise out of you. Is any man safe?

As the article states, "Langshaw (the woman) pleaded no-contest to six felony counts of extortion, five felony counts of sending threatening letters and three misdemeanor counts of falsely reporting crimes (sexual assault) to law enforcement. She will be sentenced to no more than one year in Sacramento County jail." Her boyfriend (Umana) "pleaded no-contest to three felony counts of attempted extortion and three felony counts of sending threatening letters. As part of a plea agreement, prosecutors agreed that Umana would receive no more than two years in state prison."

The woman pleaded to 6 felony counts of extortion. The man pleaded to half as many felony counts of attempted extortion ("attempted" usually being less serious than "completed"). The woman pleaded to five felony counts of sending threatening letters. The man pleaded to three felony counts of sending threatening letters (a little more than half as many as the woman). In addition the woman pleaded to three misdemeanor counts of falsely reporting crimes. The man didn't plead to any misdemeanors. So what are the sentences? The woman faces a maximum of one year in the county lockup. The man faces up to two years in the state pen.

Fembots will probably spew garbage about how we don't know all the particulars of the case. Well we sure as hell know what the defendents pleaded to.

How do we stop these monsters?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/24/1742203.shtml

"Perfect" Boyfriend Movie

Adam · 25 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anon User writes "This story absolutely irritated me: The entire basis is a video of a British actor acting like a so-called "perfect" boyfriend (e.g. arranging flowers, gaggable flowery compliments, cleaning the house, cooking dinner, hates strip clubs and football games, etc. ad nauseam) which any woman can watch on her VCR or DVD player. Apart from the fact that the company producing this tape is making this out to be funny, the article quotes a "V.P. of romance" from Match.com as suggesting that the videotape will "fail to deliver like so many bad boyfriends in the past" and that it could be used as a training tool for men! The icing on the cake is the quote at the end of the article from a representative of the company regarding a comparable "Perfect Girlfriend" videotape: "That could be controversial, since she'd probably be a girl in her underwear with tape over her mouth handing you a beer."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/25/127233.shtml

Farrell to Discuss College Misandry on Sacks' show

Adam · 25 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tatis writes "Best-selling men's issues author Warren Farrell will discuss anti-male hostility on our college campuses on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles at 11 PM on Sunday, April 27. To listen to the show live via the Internet, go to http://hisside.com/listen_live.htm. Listeners are invited to call the show and join the discussion at 1 866 870-KRLA.

Sacks and Farrell will be joined by members of the National Coalition of Free Men Los Angeles who will discuss their recent demonstration against anti-male campus feminism."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/25/128220.shtml

The Enemy of Man

Adam · 25 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

MrDave writes "David Yeagley, PhD, is a Comanche Indian. His recent essay, "Why Communism Loves Indians"" could have been titled, "The Enemy of Man". Here are some excerpts. Note the parallels with Feminism: 'Communism is the religion of hate. It says, "You have made me suffer. I will therefore violently take from you whatever you have that I want." ... Communism redefines words. "Envy" now means "justice". "Justice" means I have a right to have what's yours. "Equality" means I deserve whatever you have. "Democracy" means the state makes sure I have what you have ... Communism wants to destroy the achievements of the white male, and to subjugate him to all that he has had dominion over ... Feminism envies the strength of the male, and seeks to destroy it. The male represents an inequality which Communism cannot tolerate ... Feminists hate American Indian warrior images, and want them all removed ... In the name of Communist equality, you must devote your life to bringing down the achievers. This is the sinister element of envy, to destroy those who have more than you have, because you hate them for having more."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/25/1219239.shtml

The War Against Boys – news from the front

Thomas · 26 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

MrDave writes "
Eight-year-old punished with detention for pointing a chicken strip at another student in the cafeteria while saying "pow, pow, pow."

Third grader given five-day suspension for violating substance abuse policy after classmates reported that he took a "purple pill." His offense was taking a multivitamin with his lunch.

16-year-old honor student expelled when security guard found a butter knife in the bed of his pickup truck. The knife apparently fell out of a box of household items he and his father had transported the previous day from his grandmother's home to a local Goodwill store.

Phyllis Schlafly comments, “Almost all zero tolerance rulings punish boys. Boys are also the victims of the current fad to eliminate recess and build new schools without playgrounds. This nonsense may be part of the feminist agenda to try to make little boys behave like little girls.”

Read more here".

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/26/0037224.shtml

An Essay In Defense Of Fatherhood

Adam · 26 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I came across this feature by Aaron Burr due to one of my fellow admins, And I found it quite interesting, and worth sharing. It's quite a different perspective to what you're used to reading, But I think it will generate some worthy thoughts to be heard. Click "read more/post comments" to read it.Dear People,

One of the most outrageous facts in the modern "Codes" and "laws" throughout the United States as well as all the states is the laws which are implemented against fathers for the collection of Child Support. After much analysis, I have come to the conclusion that they are not only unconstitutional--but they are opprobrious and in direct contravention to our foundational form of government. They are, in fact, "anti-law" laws--which our form of government prohibits, and it was the reason why we formed our government in the first place.

Here is a simple deconstruction of the problem:

First, that our children hold some form of status to their parents, cannot be controverted. Your child IS your property. You "created" and "own" your own child. Most Father's Rights advocates go white with fear at this realization--but it is well spelled out in the law...and it is a fact. Children are "something"--and under Hale v. Henkle as well as Dartmouth College cases--that property gives both parents and children substantive rights to this fact that children are property and that the state is prohibited from intruding upon this sacred contract.

When a child is born, it is expecting an unwritten contract--that it should have both parents. There is an unwritten contract that the child has a mother to nurture it. She has been designed, and is best suited for that role. The mother has a contract with the child, that she will be the mother, and uphold all the duties in relation to that station and those duties. The child also has a unwritten contract with the father, to be provided for and protected by him. The father concomitantly has a unwritten contract with the child, that he will be the child's natural guardian; as he is best suited for that role and has shown he upholds that function very well (for six thousand years, this system not only worked, but it ascended Western Civilization, generation after generation). All three parties to this unwritten contract assume the proper places within it.

The child is the child-- the unemancipated minor who cannot decide for itself; and thereby, defers to the protection and guidance of its parents. The mother is the strongest link with the child, and is thereby not the focal point of keeping the family together--as she will always be there, come hell or high-water. She will be there through all, and is not the "glue" to complete the family. The father is. He is the weakest link of the home and family--and may leave it, unless he is given a benefit to stay in the relationship. Society has bolstered his participation in the family by establishing marriage and the social institutions which give men "Quid Pro Quo" contracts with the father.

"This for that." Society, knows that marriage is the best place all three people can be. The family, Western Civilization has understood, is the best place for men, women and children. This is incontrovertible. This is where families do best: within the home and family.

So, mothers, because they will always be there, are allowed the role of subordinate; as again, they are best suited for that role. The father is the ordinate within the family, and has the obligations--because the law points to him as having all the benefits. (Quid pro Quo).

This interrelation of the family, suited both society and men, woman and children for 5000 to 6000 years. It worked. It kept social pathology rates low. It kept prison rates low. It allowed, year after year, wealth to be slowly accrued within the home and family--not government. It created "free-Societies" advanced and superior to all other tribal institutions before it. It gave both the family, stability--and it allowed society to flourish as it used [the regulation of] sex as a tool to promote society to societies advancement. Society needed this sexual regulation and the rigid demarcation of the "contract" of the family, between children and their parents.

Currently our society has completely deconstructed this archetype, in favor of socialism. It has allowed the leakage of feminism to directly destroy the home and family (and most particular the father). Presently, it does this and forces the man to be the slave of the child, woman and government--at their bidding. (Yet, our laws clearly state that no person is to use their rights at the expense of another).

One of the largest frauds of this is the Institutionalized implementation of CHILD SUPPORT.

What is extreme and very odd about this "obligation" (which has not been fully and exactly defined at law, nor admitted by government employees whom are enforcing it), is that in their "law" there are only limited defenses for any father attempting to refute it. For instance, the California Family Code states that the following defenses are applicable in court:

4612. An obligor-parent alleged to be in arrears may use any of the following grounds as a defense to the motion filed pursuant to this article or as a basis for filing a motion to stop a sale or use of assets under Section 4631:
(a) Child support payments are not in arrears.

(b) Laches.
(c) There has been a change in the custody of the children.
(d) There is a pending motion for reduction in support due to a reduction in income.
(e) Illness or disability.
(f) Unemployment.
(g) Serious adverse impact on the immediate family of the obligor-parent residing with the obligor-parent that outweighs the impact of denial of the motion or stopping the sale on obligee.
(h) Serious impairment of the ability of the obligor-parent to generate income.
(i) Other emergency conditions.

The only defense NOT ALLOWED is the most obvious one: THAT THE FATHER DOES NOT OWE IT.

What could be the reason the government omitted this defense? Well, the ORIGINAL CONTACT itself which has been violated between a father and child! If a child has been kidnapped, the father has no recourse currently in the law. The courts incorrectly intimate that the father must pay, no matter what outrage, no matter what crime is done against him and his family, no matter what illegality or unjust acts in overt violation to either his rights or the rights of the child--well, the courts illegally compel him to pay. They leave him absolutely no redress at law other than the "no win scenario" defenses shown above.

Yet, the law not only allows, but it compels a father to enforce his power to PUNISH those who defy him in his own home.

"Glanville maintained a contrary doctrine, and insisted that an action lay. 'For,' said he, 'the father hath an interest in every of his children, to educate them and to provide for them; and he has his comfort by them; wherefore, it is not reasonable that any should take them from him and such injury, but that he should have his remedy to punish it." Vaughan v.Rhodes, 2 McCord 227.

Now here is what most Father's Rights activists miss.

The ability of a wife and mother to obtain alimony and child support, developed under a Patriarchal construct that saw that the wife and mother as incompetents. That because they came under the protection of the father and he provided for them; that under that coverture (the male protecting his wife and taking responsibility for her) that he was thereby obligated to her for Alimony (and then Child Support) upon separation or divorce. This made sense under the light of the institution of Patriarchy.

Yet, the current courts are implementing feminism. The law is feminist. And what we have not placed forwards as a legal proponent to these courts is that under that alien tutelage of feminism, women are now "emancipated." That it is a "you go girl" society where women are now equal, that they do not need men, that they are in fact, superior. (Feminists actually make these claims, and the courts uphold them with a vengeance against men.)

Well, then, if this is the case: then why does the feminist codes compel a man to pay? There never has been any assignment of Alimony or Child Support against a competent father. In fact, it is a fact that most fathers even today, upon getting custody of their children (when that rare event occurs) NEVER ASK FOR CHILD SUPPORT! Nor are the courts too quick in assigning payments to go from the mother to the father--and they are even more recalcitrant in enforcing such support "obligations" when the women defaults!

The big question is here, in the age of feminism--why the assignment of support at all? "IF" women are "you go girl" go-getters and are in fact, "just as good as men" (if not superior, as they allege) and now independent and better than men--and if Patriarchy is now destroyed--then why are we having laws which intimate men only owe Child Support and Alimony--and that we have laws which do not allow men to make the defense that they do not in fact owe the obligation from the onset?!?? (Ergo: "We now are in a feminist society, the Family Code is feminism: Child Support is obsolete because the woman claims she is just as good and just as independent as the man.)

They now say we do not own them. Fine. Okay. Then why are they asking for Alimony?

If they are as good and as responsible as men--then why aren't they assuming the same obligations that men understood? (That you take care of your own without outside support). Men do not ask for child support--but the new feminists implementing this feminist sophistry within the "new" Family Law and throughout the codes--MAKE SURE WITH A DEATH GRIP THAT THEY CLUTCH THE PATRIARCHAL OBLIGATIONS AGAINST THE MALE AND FATHER--when in fact they refute the institution of the Patriarchy.

No person can sit on two sides of the defense. This society is either Matriarchal or it is Patriarchal. "IF" the courts are enforcing Matriarchy: THEN NO MAN OWES CHILD SUPPORT. Because women are independent and equal to men. They don't need coverture...and alimony and child support are Patriarchal systems of COVERTURE.

For "if" children are not property but sovereign citizens with full legal rights (as Hillary Clinton intimates), then they cannot legally compel child support. "IF" women are sovereign and not under the Patriarchal confines of coverture, then they have no basis to demand either alimony or child support.

Either the courts are feminist, or they are Patriarchal....

And if they are Patriarchal, then that means children are property, and they are unemancipated minors who need both parents in a family for help and guidance in their life. They need a mom to be a mom...and they most certainly need a dad to be a dad. And if this is the case, then the full structure of Patriarchy comes into play, and the courts are compelled in the first instance to implement "Quid pro Quo" contract, assured to children and parents under the unwritten contract, so protected under Article I, Section 10 of the US Constitution: Obligations of Contracts (Hale v. Henkle, Dartmouth College, etc).

Consider my words.

Hope this helps.

Aaron

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/26/1637241.shtml

Statutory Rape of A Boy - No big deal!

Adam · 27 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "Have you seen this yet? In Houston, a 27 year old woman teacher at a private school was convicted of having sex with a 13 year old boy over a seven month period and got 30 days in jail, a $500 fine, and 10 years probation. This sentence was given by a woman judge. According to TV accounts, there is an "uproar" over this light sentence.I wonder how much of an uproar there really is and I also wonder how hard it would be to depose a judge who hands out a sentence like this, whether or not she is an elected judge. I know judges are supposed to be "permanent" in many cases, but I wonder how difficult it would be to overcome this obstacle. Anyone here have ideas on such a possibility?" The Gonzo Kid also submitted this story and said "30 days, and a $500 fine for a 27 year old female teacher having sex with a male student. Guys, I'm absolutely speechless for the moment. Especially since I know of someone who got 90 days and a thousand dollar fine for a petty offense."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/27/1446230.shtml

A life of bright promises?

Adam · 28 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "This article appeared on the front page of the Boston Sunday Globe with a nice picture of the subject next to it. When one starts to read this article, one would think the story to be about a distinguished person. Instead, the story is about the wonderful and interesting life of a cold-blooded female killer. I have never seen anything remotely similar to this done for a man, where a criminal act is questioned to figure out what went wrong. This woman killed a doctor at Mass General Hospital and then committed suicide. When the story broke, the media took days to point out that a woman had actually done the killing as the police were reluctant to charge her with the murder (even though it must have been obvious), and reporters got positive comments about the woman's life. The feminist hate mongers at the Globe are beyond contempt for this flagrant double standard. Men are viewed as patriarchal monsters, and women get the "what went wrong, she was so wonderful" type of treatment. Please email your disgust to the Globe. Thanks"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/28/1425239.shtml

Where Are the Men on Campus?

Thomas · 29 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tatis writes "This article, co-authored by Philip W. Cook and Glenn Sacks, examines some of the causes for the decline of male college enrollments. Males comprise only 43% of all college students nationwide. It was just published in the book Abuse Your Illusions: The Disinformation Guide to Media Mirages and Establishment Lies (published by The Disinformation Company)."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/29/172248.shtml

Apologies!!!

Thomas · 29 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I want to apologize to everyone for a submission that I recently posted. I wanted to do some cleaning out of back submissions from readers, so I posted the link after just glancing at the Webpage. That's a mistake that I WON'T repeat. Sheesh!

Turns out the site is very twisted.

I'd like to thank Tor Ackman for letting me know about this.

Again, my sincere apologies.

Thomas

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/29/2012220.shtml

A New Feature: Ask Ads

Adam · 30 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Yep, Yours truly is about to start doing a weekly advice piece coming to you each friday (Or bi-weekly, depending on how it goes) where you can ask me various questions (not strictly on men's issues) the more interesting questions will be more likely to be answered. To begin asking, send me an email with "Ask Ads" in the header to adam@mensactivism.org while I can't answer everyone, I will read 'em all, So we'll see how it goes.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/29/1835250.shtml

Doritoes Comercial??

D · 30 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "Now I just wanted to post this while it was still on my mind. But there seems to be a recurring theme in many comercials these days. The ones I am speaking of are ones like a recent Doritoes comercial I just saw. The set up is: two guys are at a party surrounded by pretty girls and some cutey catches their eye. Now they don't talk they more or less 'munch' their communications. The conversation ends up with one guy asking the other 'do you think I have a chance with her?' in subtitles. She walks over takes a chip and munches to the subtitle 'slim to none'. My question is--Why is this theme so prevelant on television with guys striking out with girls? Does this really sell stuff? Any thoughts on this?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/30/0128239.shtml

Are attacks on male genitalia family entertainment

Thomas · 30 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "Here is just one example of the ever increasing presence of the bludgeoning of male genitalia on TV and in the movies as humor: Oliver, the main character in Fox's new family sitcom (Oliver Beene) gets scared to dance with a girl in the gym class. So while standing in front of the most attractive girl in his grade, he fakes getting kicked in the groin by someone, with the girl standing above him. The teacher calls the whole class to come and stand over Oliver and observe in a casual way while he asks the boy if his testicles had "retracted into his body" The whole gym class is invited to watch as this boy gets dropped on his behind as a way to fix his condition(?). The students go into an amused panic over this scene, as it was depicted as a fun and interesting event. In the last scene of the show, the teacher gets hit in the groin by a ball and falls to the ground, the students gather around and someone suggests a "testicle drop" and the show ends... This trend is increasingly becoming more popular/common. What can be done about this atrocious double standard, where any perceived violation of a female's reproductive right is an outrage, and the destruction of a male's reproductive system is common acceptable humor or a justified act. The episode guide makes no mention of the central theme of this show. http://www.fox.com/oliver/#episodes"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/30/180201.shtml

MANN Chat: What Men's Health Crisis?

Steve · 30 April 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (4/30), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location. The topic for this chat will be "What Men's Health Crisis?" Earlier this week, a researchers at the University of Michigan published an article that refers to a href="http://story.news.yahoo.com/news?tmpl=story&u=/ap/20030429/ap_on_he_me/men_s_health_4">"silent health crisis" in men's health, and suggests the need for href="http://story.news.yahoo.com/news?tmpl=story&u=/hsn/20030430/hl_hsn/the_risky_lives_of_american_men">"a new definition of masculinity that includes greater responsibility for oneself." What do you think about this issue? Are men experiencing a "crisis" in their health? How much of the alleged "crisis" is due to men's individual behaviors? How much of the "crisis" results from the disproportionate attention the government pays to women's health? Join us at this week's chat to explore these questions about the men's health "crisis." See you there.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/30/1839246.shtml

Gadzooks! Many Women Stop Pretending to Want Equality

Thomas · 1 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Napnip writes: I was at my local mall today, and there is a store in it called "Gadzooks". It's a trendy clothing store that has all the latest fasions. Well, when I walked past it, I noticed they had lots of large print signs in the windows. The signs said "SAY NO TO EQUAL RIGHTS" and "PROUD TO BE A SEXIST". The signs all had pictures of beautiful women with the bold letters in front of them.

Another sign said that all the male-related items were on sale and that the company was switching over to a completely female-related product line.

If you go to their website, you'll notice that their homepage says "By this summer Gazooks will become a whole new place. One that celebrates, glorifies, dresses and accessorizes girls only." Notice the words "celebrates" and "glorifies".

It's one thing to switch over to a strictly women's clothing store. It's another thing entirely to blatantly display sexism to the point that their signs declare that they're proud of it!

Do you think we should start a letter writing campaign to this company?

If you look at the lower left corner of Gadzooks' Home Page, you'll see a poster that says "EVERYTHING FOR GUYS MUST GO!" Note that the "EVERYTHING FOR" is much smaller than the rest, so what really catches the eye is "GUYS MUST GO!"

Also, Dan Lynch found this gem. Can you imagine an all-men's store selling T-shirts that say "GIRLS ARE STUPID... THROW ROCKS AT THEM!"?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/04/30/2339249.shtml

Paternity Fraud with a real sting in the tail

Adam · 1 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Doctor Damage writes "I found this one at Mens News Daily. For sheer, jaw dropping insensitivity to the needs of men and our right to justice, this one stands head and shoulders above the pack. In this story a brazilian judge ordered that a man not only pay child support amounting to 100 pounds a month, but fined him a further 10000 pounds. Why? because a probability greater than 99.9% that he was not the natural father based on DNA evidence was insufficient to counter the testimony of witnesses who claimed that he was the father. Notice also, that the story is listed in "quirkies" as if this example of judicial misandry completely out of control is somehow amusing! "

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/01/1728230.shtml

MSN may NOT hate men so much after all

Adam · 2 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Thundercloud. writes "I couldn't believe my eyes, when I saw on MSN's homepage an article on MEN'S health. Not women's as is the norm, but MEN'S!
The article is entitled; "Why men die sooner".
They covered all kinds of things that the regular news won't even let see the light of day. Includeing MANY things we have discussed here at MANN.
They compared the life spans of Black and White men, But left out American-Indians, American-Asians and other American men, as usual.
(At least Hispanic men were mentioned, albeit breifly.)
This is a step in the right direction. We should continue to protest MSN when they do their anti-man stuff, But we should also praise them when they do things like this!
If you want to check it out, here's the link;
http://www.msn.com"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/01/1730246.shtml

Men and Women: Say Bye-Bye (Another Nail in the Coffin)

Thomas · 2 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

It appears that very soon, with artificial wombs, men will be able to create male and female offspring, and women will be able to make female offspring, without recourse to the other sex or to the female body for gestation. (Women may only need male embryonic stem cells, however, to make Y-chromosome sperm and, thereby, to make male offspring.) This article describes how embryonic stem cells (including male embryonic stem cells) can be used to make human eggs.

It's ironic that, just when men are rising up against their oppression, men are gaining reproductive power equal to or exceeding that of women. Ladies and gentlemen: We are living future shock.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/02/1345258.shtml

Free State Project

Adam · 2 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "I wonder how many at this site are aware of the Free State Project. I'm also wondering what others here think of this as a possible avenue to help us and other like-minded men and women to set up one state as not only more "free" than all the others, but a lot more "equal" and male friendly. As a quick synopsis, people are signing up who are fed up with our continued loss of freedom in the U.S. A number of states are being analyzed to determine and compare each's small population (easier to effect changes in state law and to get elected), the current population's predisposition to the philosophy of more rather than less freedom based on their current laws, etc. The goal is to get at least 20,000 people to move to the chosen state within 5 years of the project reaching that number of particpants. The state will be voted on by all members as soon as 5,000 sign up agreeing to move to that state after the 20,000 number is reached. There are over 3300 presently signed up. What do you think? Do you think this might be a good cause for us to join and advocate?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/02/1550200.shtml

Boy, 12, pays child support

Adam · 3 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

If the previous incidents over in New Zealand didn't get your blood boiling, this will. According to the stuff story it's quite a depressing read, and right now words fail me.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/02/1557251.shtml

Men's Health: good news again!

Adam · 3 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original rage writes "Thanks to the tremendous efforts of Men's Health America, the May issue of the American Journal of Public Health features a theme issue on men's health....and the American Public Health Association held a news conference on April 29 on this topic.

As the Men's Health America site states, "this is a historic event in the development of men's health. We invite you to thank the American Public Health Association for this publication."

So please do thank them by emailing them, and check out the following link!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/02/1950243.shtml

Spouse assault policy changes

Adam · 3 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Garth writes "In British Columbia, Canada, the policy is changing so that there will no longer be mandatory charges laid in every case of alleged spousal abuse. Hopefully this will result in some common sense being used when dealing with these cases, rather than an automatic chasing down of the alleged perpetrator with pitchforks."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/02/1953231.shtml

Check the new features at the DLJ!

Adam · 4 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "We've got a new front page, featuring the site of the month, a link to upcoming events, and a new, easy way to subscribe. We won't be archiving past issues on-site this go-round; Volume 3 issues can be found at Smartgroups. As you'll see from the events, your DLJ publisher is getting around, so this will be one less thing for her to do.

The May 2003 issue features news on how orgs can get help finding volunteers, the long-awaited film, "Evelyn" starring Pierce Brosnan, and much more!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/03/2133208.shtml

The Man Matrix: The Five Different Types of Men

Adam · 4 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

radikal writes "Shana Davidson, a blogger and graduate of Hampshire College, posited her ideas about the five different types of men and the "rules" of dealing with them. A year later, she reconsidered it. Read the original post at the bottom in bold first, then go back to the top for best results.

http://beltwaybloggers.com/bloggers/shana/manmatrix.html"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/03/2136218.shtml

Woman makes false accusations as blackmail

Adam · 4 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

AFG writes "According to this story in the Sacramento Bee, a women who had falsely accused 8 men of rape -- in a blackmail effort to get $500,000 from them -- received a maximum of only one year in jail, due to a plea bargain. Now, if that doesn't get your blood boiling, this will: Her boyfriend, who had a lesser role in the crime, received a maximum of 2 years in jail. Even if he was the motivating factor behind her rape claims, she was still guilty of more crimes than he was. And wasn't she the one who made the accusation after all? http://www.sacbee.com/content/news/story/6497918p- 7448998c.html"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/04/2338228.shtml

Voluntary Fatherhood

Adam · 5 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Freebird writes "Here is the link http://www.nas.com/c4m/ to the Voluntary Fatherhood Project. No doubt a lot of the news material at this site will make your blood boil, but this is an established organization working to stop the exploitation of males for reproduction purposes. This may be an opportunity to help put a stop to the pedophile females we've been reading so much about lately. I didn't get a chance to read the story all the way through, but there is a link on the page about a man in Australia who WON a sizeable settlement in a paternity fraud case. Our battle is not an easy one, but it is definately winnable...if we show up and fight it." While we do have this link on the frontpage, it looks like we've had an influx of newcomers lately, so here it is.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/03/2140254.shtml

Betty Lucas And D.V.

Adam · 5 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

radikal writes "OHIO - In May 2001, Betty Lucas violated an order of protection by inviting her ex-husband to a party. Following a violent exchange, both were charged with domestic violence. Lucas also received an additional charge for her complicity in violating an order of protection. Now, Lucas wants her conviction overturned and the Ohio Supreme Court has the tough decision of establishing one's responsibility and culpability in violating an order of protection in domestic situations.

http://www.cantonrep.com/index.php?ID=97688"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/04/2336238.shtml

Military Fathers Betrayed

Adam · 5 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tatis writes "Glenn Sacks' latest column, "The Betrayal of the Military Father" (Los Angeles Daily News, 5/4/03) explains how current laws allow military fathers to be stripped of their children while they are away on deployment. Readers can comment on the article by sending letters to the editor to dnforum@dailynews.com." And on this, you should comment!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/04/2342243.shtml

Wife, Husband Ordered to Separate

Adam · 5 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tatis writes "With one baseless accusation two families were torn apart, three children lost their father, and a woman lost the husband she loves. When John was falsely accused of sexually abusing his daughter from a previous marriage, the state not only drove him out of his daughter's life but also forced John's current wife Rosalind to separate from him and bar him from being a part of their children's lives.

John, Rosalind and the attorney who's fighting to unite John with his children will tell their story on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles at 11 PM on Sunday, May 4. For more information about the show, click here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/05/1553207.shtml

Mothers More Likely to Marry Fathers of Sons

Adam · 6 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

radikal writes "Lundberg and Rose, two profs from University of Washington, conclude that mothers having sons are more likely to marry the father than when they have daughters. Most interesting are their speculations about why this is so, particularly Lundberg's.

http://www.eurekalert.org/pub_releases/2003-05/uow -wma050503.php"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/06/1711206.shtml

PCBs Make Mothers Less Likely to Give Birth to Boys

Adam · 6 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

radikal writes "In conjunction with the Lundberg and Rose study concluding that women with boys are more likely to get married, here is another article detailing the possible connection between high PCB content and low birth rate of boys. Seems like there will be a lot less married women then?

http://www.eurekalert.org/pub_releases/2003-04/bc- nss043003.php"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/06/1711254.shtml

Men forced out of work and into domestic service

Adam · 6 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

mcc99 writes "MSN can barely contain its glee in this article: http://www.msnbc.com/news/907920.asp?vts=050520031 440 at the number of men who, after layoffs and downsizings, are at home being Mr. Mom. Very few by choice, it seems-- most by necessity.

Notice this quote in from article:

"The first half [of the feminist vision] was to liberate women from domestic servitude," says Suzanne Levine, a founding editor of Ms. Magazine and author of "Father Courage: What Happens When Men Put Family First." "The second half was to integrate the men back into the family."

"...integrate the men back into the family".

So, Step One of the 'Grand Plan of Family Destruction' included driving men out of the family and undermining their econominc base, all at once. This seems to have largely succeeded. Step Two appears to consist of re-including men, but as domestic servants, who may be removed at any time through any of various means, including false accusations, etc.

That 50% replacement western birth-rate looks like it'll probably stay that way for awhile."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/06/1712258.shtml

The men's movement, why bother?

Adam · 7 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Thundercloud. writes "Recently I posted some submissions about the way men are being depicted in the media. The formost thing that I found disturbing is the images of "men-in-bondage-by-woman" scenerios as well as simple gratuitous violence against men in general, that are alarmingly freaquent in movies and TV., these days.
The responses I saw disturbed me further. I kept seeing posts that said things like; "Men like being abused by women.", "Men like being dominated by women." and "Men like being treated like dirt."
This gave me pause for thought. If men LIKE being dominated, humiliated and abused by women, then what the heck are we fighting for?
On the one hand I hear men complaining about domestic violence, then turn around and say; "But we like being abused."
I hear men complain about "women haveing privliges and too much power over them", then they turn around and say; "But we WANT to be dominated by women."
I find this not only disturbing but CONFUSEING.
Either men want equality, or they DON'T. You can not have equality if one person or people have "dominion" over another.
If men WANT to be dominated by women, and abused, etc., Then they do NOT want equality, they want to be dominated.
It is at this point I am wondering if I should even be spending my energy fighting for a group of people who say one thing, but WANT just the opposite.
I hope someone can clear this up. Because it HAS to be one or the other. It can't be BOTH!
I am dis-heartened and disapointed by this "revealation" if it is true. But most of all I'm just confused. And I have enough aggravation.....-Thundercloud."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/07/163246.shtml

Fathers are not optional: a woman's view

Adam · 7 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Chas writes "Opinion piece in 'The Australian' newpaper of 8th May 2003 by a female journalist. It discusses the significance of fathering - often denigrated - and the role of the Family Court of Australia in parenting orders which favour mothers over fathers.

She says, "So often the deep bond between father and child goes unnoticed. It is underestimated and sadly misunderstood. How else do you explain a society where fatherlessness is so common?"

This is a pro-father item and is refreshing to read when Naomi Wolf in in Melbourne pushing the motherhood bandwagon this week.

An encouraging item.

Chas"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/07/166217.shtml

Pesticides Linked with Prostate Cancer

Adam · 7 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

radikal writes "Nothing new or unexpected about this, but I'm interested in how this relates to Warren Farrell and his contemporaries theories on men taking on more dangerous occupations."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/07/168213.shtml

Lifetime Movie Title Generator

Adam · 8 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

It's been soooooo long since we had a good laugh around here, so why not have a mess with the Lifetime Movie Title Generator and post your results here. We could all do with a laugh.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/07/226229.shtml

Ireland's feminism ill-serves YWCA

Adam · 8 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "This is an excellent article in the Boston Globe by Cathy Young. It covers many issues relevant here: pay wage gap myth, domestic violence, double standards, and how Ireland's leadership at NOW embraced virulent hostility toward fathers. Under Ireland, NOW issued an "Action Alert on `Fathers' Rights' "she accused divorced men who seek a role in their children's lives of abusing power "in the same fashion as do batterers" and urging feminist activists to combat such proposals as joint custody and divorce mediation instead of litigation. What impact will Ireland bring to the YWCA? Her appointment is a radical 'slap in the face' to the founding mothers of this institution."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/08/1534210.shtml

No standards and you can still be an abuser

Adam · 8 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

crescentluna writes " These are examples of out-dated but still used methods of psychoanalysis, with examples of misintrepretation. A lot of the bad examples involve child custody battles with guess who losing. I think anyone involved in one should ask for a second opinion when any of these experts claim a child has been abused or a parent is an abuser using these methods."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/08/1534247.shtml

Great new radio show

Adam · 8 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

LeMorteMark writes "Hey,

Did you guys hear that new show hosted by Dianna Thompson and Jane Silk? It was great! I'm happy to hear these ladies standing up for us. It just proves that there are good women in America. The show is on Sunday nights at 10 pm. The website for the show is families under siege"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/08/1536209.shtml

Grrl on Grrl Violence

Adam · 9 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

MrDave writes "This lends new meaning to the phrase, "You go, grrrl":
FOX news reports, "A touch football game between suburban Chicago high school girls turned into a brutal hazing in which players were slapped, punched, doused with paint and splattered in the face with mud and feces." Girls will be girls!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/08/1539224.shtml

No Ask Ads This Week

Adam · 9 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Sorry folks, I won't be able to start it this week, due to going through various bouts of nausea, indegestion, and the odd headache/migraine right now. I guess I should have heated those microwaveable snacks a bit better, and the fizzy drink afterwards didn't help either. Ugh, next week hopefully.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/09/1455242.shtml

Only Men's Magazines Too Racy?

Adam · 9 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "I just heard that Wal-Mart has decided to no longer carry Maxim, Stuff, and FHM men's magazines because they have been deemed "too racy."I'm not very familiar with these three magazines (I've purchased Maxim twice in the distant past) but I don't remember it as all that bad. Here is a link to the article What do you all think of the content and pictures in these magazines as compared to all the women's magazines that have scantily clad women's pictures on their covers? Are only men's magazines bad and women's magazines with similar content perfectly OK? Are these men's magazines so much worse than their women's magazine counterparts?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/09/1457204.shtml

Columnist suspended for offending DV speech rules

Adam · 9 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "Here is an outrageous double standard: While TV commercials depict woman hitting men (like in the Saturn commercial where the sales guy says, "please stop hitting me"), and today there is a plethora of shows where men are cast as evil and therefore get the stuffing knocked out of them by beautiful models, a Boston Globe columnist gets suspended for saying that a pro-athletes wife should get "smacked" for her self promotion by means of her husbands fame. The phrase the reporter chose to make on a local talk show may not be the best choice of words, but suspending him and threatening his career is akin to an Orwellian (1984 thought-crime) nightmare. The "system" will use him as an example to shut up any dissent against the abuses men suffer in the highly sexist DV industry."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/09/1459242.shtml

The Language Police

Adam · 10 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

MrDave writes "Women cannot be depicted as caregivers or doing household chores ... Men cannot be lawyers or doctors or plumbers. They must be nurturing helpmates ... Old people cannot be feeble or dependent; they must jog or repair the roof ... Children cannot be shown as disobedient or in conflict with adults. Those are just some of the guidelines used by textbook publishers according to "The Language Police" by Diane Ravitch. For a review of the book see: http://www.languagepolice.com"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/10/1229227.shtml

Is it just me?

Adam · 10 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Futharon writes "Is it just me, or have we slipped so far in gender relations to practically promote female pedophilia? Check out this article, where a judge...even a male judge on this one...gets 'repremanded' for saying something "just clicked" in the relationship between a teacher and a 13 year old BOY. Why is it I get this funny feeling that he should just be terminated?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/10/1231224.shtml

Man Prefers Jail Cell to His Wife

Adam · 10 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "For those looking for a good chuckle, try this out."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/10/1233234.shtml

Are you SINK SCUM?

Adam · 10 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

radikal writes "SINK SCUM, acronym Single, Independent, No Kids: the Self-Centered Urban Male. Used to describe the growing number of heterosexual men who have little or no interest in marriage and children.

Interesting acronym from our friends at Wordspy"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/10/1234221.shtml

Now here's something you don't see every day

Adam · 11 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Freebird writes "A judge actually getting punished for condoning the statutory rape of a 13 year old boy by his former teacher. ""Gaeta said he didn't see the harm in the sexual encounters. "It's just something between two people that clicked beyond the teacher-student relationship," he said." Yeah, sure judge. Would that pervert - which is exactly what he is - say the same if a male teacher had done the same with a female student? We all know the answer to that one. Here is the article

Even better is the fact that people actually got UPSET about this judge's leniency with the teacher. Society is, although slowly, coming around to the fact that women who have sex with little boys are indeed sexual predators, and should be treated as such."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/10/1236233.shtml

1984

D · 11 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes *"Here is a link to a great commentary site on 1984. It's one of the better ones I have seen. It not only shows how Orwell criticizes communism and socialism, it shows how other giant statist organizations are destructive to society. Like the all powerful churches, monarchy's or just bureaucracy in general, that way we won't have to make this about left/right wing politics. It can be about how the state can get out of control when it seeks control. (But if you want to point out why you think its more rightest or leftist I don't want to stop you, but I am hoping that we as 'men's activists' can look at it objectively in concern to our common ground here). Its amazing how we can line up the similarities from Orwell's story to our modern day. One being how "TACK BACK THE NIGHT" events are almost identical to the "HATE WEEK" rallies in the book, which use total lies and biaism to maintain that 2 + 2 = 5 (Which is why I think 'Feminism' is 'Totaltarian' and not a true 'Liberal' ideal). They have released the DVD back in April and I am hoping to make it popular again as it becomes classic next year. I think that Orwell's work could be a great basis for language for us all (and to many it already is I realize) to understand the concepts. One being "Some Animals are more Equal than others" from 'Animal Farm' or the 'Doublethink' or 'Newspeak' from 1984 etc..."*

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/10/2345203.shtml

An Attorney Speaks

Adam · 11 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Gonzo Kid writes "On the main editorial page of this major paper, an attorney and guest columnist comes out and down on the side of truth. The current link is at: http://www.indystar.com/print/articles/7/039206-97 17-021.html

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/11/1510214.shtml

Zero Tolerance

Adam · 11 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

locksley2k writes "Eighteen High School baseball players from my hometown of Massapequa, NY were suspended from school and thrown off the team for visiting a strip joint while they had official unsupervised "free" time during the attendence of a baseball camp in FL. while on Spring Break. The coach and assistant coach were fired although they had no knowledge of what the players were up to. They were supossed to be at the beach. All the players were 17 or 18 years old.

As far as I'm concerened this is a good example of the ill conceived and dangerous concept of ZERO TOLERANCE that appears to have infected our schools on a national level. Zero Tolerance (ZT) has caused the suspention of first graders for sexual harrasment, put tens of thousands of students on Ritalin and forced unnatural and superficial behavior upon a whole generation of minors,mostly boys.
It appears to me that ZT is attempting to convolute children into a short sighted concept of the perfect social member while destroying whom they really are. They are saying to the children "We are going to remove what makes you you because it may offend someone. If you have excess energy we will drug you (I'm not refering to ADD but kids who just fidget), if you stomp in a puddle we will arrest you, if you act like a healthy teenager we will severely punish you, if you are 6 years old we will still treat you like a pervert without regard to the fact that you innocently do not understand.

I wonder if the ball players had visited a gay strip joint they would have been so radically punished.
I believe they wouldn't have been, a message like that may offend someone."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/11/1512218.shtml

Parker, Young to Appear on His Side

Adam · 11 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tatis writes "Syndicated columnist Kathleen Parker and Boston Globe columnist Cathy Young will join His Side with Glenn Sacks http://www.HisSide.com as the show celebrates Mother's Day 2003 by honoring women who help men. The show can be heard on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles and live via the Internet at 11 PM on Sunday, May 11. CDs and cassettes of the show and all previous shows are available at http://www.hisside.com/store"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/11/1513219.shtml

Claim abuse to collect unemployment checks, women

Adam · 12 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "A new "Study" indicates woman get biased treatment from unemployment services, yet the study states that women leave work for different reasons than men. This is a non- empirical study, it compares different sociological data with the assumption that women are short-changed somehow. The underlying premise of this study is to offer women more options for unemployment services than men. In some states women (only) have provisions that permit them to quit their jobs because of domestic violence to collect unemployment insurance. With todays broadly defined standards of "abuse" (because of relentless one-sided advocacy) and with the continual addition of incentives (divorce, custody, property, benefits...) for one gender only to claim that they were abused, inevitably more and more women will play the "abuse card" for payouts, and the feminist DV industry becomes a self-fulfilling anti-male reality.

http://bostonworks.boston.com/globe/out_field/"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/11/1514211.shtml

Reverse Aroma Therapy

Adam · 12 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "Just another case of Domestic Abuse, by a woman against a man, of course."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/12/024229.shtml

Stone Phillips Discusses Male Depression

Adam · 12 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

radikal writes "Stone Phillips, in support of the Westchester County Depression Support Network, talked on Thursday about his father's bout with depression in order to promote depression awareness Links to outside sources are included in the article."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/12/026246.shtml

Another "nurturing caregiver"

Adam · 12 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

RPB659 writes "Here's a link to a story about a woman who escaped from jail, kidnapped her 3-year old kid, and held a gun to her own child's head when confronted by police. Of course it had to have been those evil men that made her do it..." {sarcasm} Yeah, and it was in the best interests of the child too. {/sarcasm}

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/12/0211206.shtml

An alderwoman from Alberta

Adam · 12 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

It's big post time, so brace yourselves: H. Vincent writes "This story was very big in canada
An alderwoman from Alberta went on a trip to the States with some other councillors and went missing. She turned up in a Las Vegas hotel and "told Las Vegas police she had been kidnapped and sexually assaulted but refused a medical examination and wouldn't offer police any details." People thought she was dead and the police searched for her at the taxpayer's expense. It turns out she just had a fling and got caught so she told the usual lies. She has been charged but it will be interesting to so how "accountable" she will be held. One other thing is that she has children. For making them think that their mom had been kidnapped and maybe killed she should be punished. That is very cruel abuse to put a child through. I wish they would prevent her from contacting them." Andrew74 writes "Here is a story about a Lethbridge alderman who had a whole city fooled. She went missing and when found she claimed to have been raped and kidnapped. Under further investigation police found that she had made up the whole story and instead had run off with a married man. She cried lots after being caught in her lies and we should all feel sorry for her hairaising ordeal. She shouldn't resign from her post as alderman and just take leave so she can get better after all she went through. At least at the end some Lethbridge folk use there brains and see her for the horrible manipulator and embarresment she is. I'm unsure of how long the story will be here so read it while you can." Garth writes "Darlene Heatherington, a Lethbridge, Alberta alderwoman, vanished recently, turning up later in Las Vegas. She had a dramatic tale of abduction and rape. Under police questioning, however, her story fell to pieces, and she now claims she got tired of her life and ran off with a married man for a chance at a new life. This second story has yet to be substantiated. The police are quite unhappy with her, but there is no indication yet that she will face charges."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/12/1736233.shtml

Female Columnist Laments About Casual Sex

Adam · 13 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

radikal writes "Bridget Harrison of the New York Post, compares the movies The Real Cancun and Down With Love to real life tension over casual sex between men and women. Post-feminists never had it so angsty!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/12/1740250.shtml

Cut Men: Do They Not Bleed?

Thomas · 13 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Here's an excellent essay by our ally Wendy McElroy. It's a call for an end to male-bashing, to anti-male hatred, really. And it's a great read.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/13/1256230.shtml

Men ... a bad smell in the room?

Adam · 13 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

MrDave writes "Time magazine - back in 1994! - wrote: 'the overt man bashing of recent years has now refined itself into a certain atmospheric snideness – has settled down to a vague male aversion, as if masculinity were a bad smell in the room.' (Time, Feb. 14, 1994) ... This quote in a thoughtful essay by Gerald L. Rowles, Ph.D., "From M.L.K. To N.O.W. To NAMBLA, Devolution And The Abuse Of Power". ... Rowles' essay offers a thoughtful perspective on what society will be like in the years ahead ... http://toogoodreports.com/column/general/rowles/20020520.htm"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/13/1431236.shtml

Men and economic security

Adam · 13 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Mangesh writes "According to the latest figures released by the Indian government, the proportion of women holding a job in the organized sector in India has gone up from 15 % to 18.5 % in the last five years. In India, the organized sector accounts for only 7% of the total workforce, and a job in this sector is a passport to prosperity. What is worrying is that male employment in this sector actually declined by 1.3 million and female employment increased by 0.4 million. This data explodes the feminist perpetrated myth of `feminization of poverty'. The following link is to the story in the English language daily `The Economic Times'.

http://economictimes.indiatimes.com/cms.dll/html/u ncomp/articleshow?msid=45504919"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/13/1432232.shtml

I Think I'll Take Up Golf

Thomas · 13 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

What with our buddy, Hootie at Augusta National, standing up to the lunatic fembots, and now men like Vijay Singh and Nick Price daring to forthrightly speak the truth, I'm becoming quite the fan of golfers, if not the sport itself. This Sports Illustrated article reports on the ploy of allowing the Swedish woman, Annika Sorenstam, to play in the PGA's Colonial next week.

Women have the LPGA. By letting a woman play in a PGA tournament, the sports powers-that-be nudge out a man, who would otherwise have gotten to play (a man who might well clean the links with Sorenstam).

Maybe it's time to eliminate special teams and leagues for women. Then again, maybe we should create separate teams and leagues for every special interest group that can't measure up. If I were in college, I wouldn't make the basketball team because I am not tall enough and I'm no longer as fast and agile as I once was. Maybe there should be a separate basketball league for people over 40, who are within 4 inches of average height (and yet another league for those who are shorter). The league should receive equal government funding, of course, and the public should be guilt tripped into attending games.

On the other hand, maybe there should be one team per sport per school, and the best men and women should get to be on the team.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/13/2123246.shtml

MANN Chat: Gearing Up for Men's Health Week

Steve · 14 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (5/14), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location. MANN has a new chat server! The topic for this chat will be "Gearing Up for Men's Health Week."
href="http://www.menshealthweek.org/imhw/imhw.htm">International Men's Health Week will be observed June 9-15, 2003. The organizers of Men's Health Week want to raise awareness about health issues that affect men. Various men's health events are planned all over the world during this week. What can we as men's activists do to celebrate International Men's Health Week and make the public more aware of men's health concerns? Join us at the >new MANN chat server as we share ideas to celebrate this important week. Tell a friend or two!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/14/0010249.shtml

Andrea Yates is at it again....

Adam · 14 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CPM writes "Court Appearance for Texas Woman Charged in Sons' Deaths

OK I'll get the ball rolling... I suppose she had post-partum psychotic mestrual patriarchal oppression depression/psychosis! Perhaps we can even invent a few more. Also, lets not forget any men who happen to be nearby. For it is not Miss Laney who did this, some man somewhere must certainly be totally responsible for this horrible tragedy.

"We all believe as a family that this wasn't our Dee that did this to her children," I sincerely sympathize with this family, but I can assure you that it was Dee who did this. She said so herself!

"I'm not sure if she can truthfully say she understands what is going on," Files told the judge.

Perhaps a needle in the arm will help to enlighten this "petite" "wide-eyed" angelic picture of innocence.

"bashed their heads in with a rock," Sheriff J.B. Smith said.
I'll see you in hell Miss Laney; you can room with me..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/14/1224206.shtml

Escape from the war on men?

Adam · 14 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

MrDave writes "Communist leader Leon Trotsky observed, 'You may not be interested in war, but war is interested in you.' ... A perfect view of the war on men ... In the 1930's, in Germany, perceptive Jews escaped to England, Canada, Australia, South Africa, or the USA, fleeing the war of death on their horizon ... Today, where can men escape the war on us?? ... Nowhere in the USA is safe ... Male-bashing is endemic in Canada, Australia, and the U.K. ... I have stopped trying to stem the tidal wave of anti-man attitudes ... I have come to the conclusion that stoping it is impossible ... Now I simply want to get away from this war on men ... Is there any place, anywhere, where a man can escape?" While I did post about such a place in the first Ask Ads announcement, running away will only make things get much worse.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/14/1226232.shtml

Heinz Foundation honors Child Support Queen

Adam · 14 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Richard Green, M.D. writes " The Heinz foundation awarded child support queen Geraldine Jensen a Heinz Award for achievement in public policy. Ms. Jensen is a strong proponent of blatantly unfair presumptive child support guidelines and draconian child support enforcement. She is an enemy of fathers. Heinz should be targetted for boycott.
Regards, Richard Green, M.D."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/14/1227232.shtml

Linda Chavez Spits on Fathers

Adam · 15 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tatis writes ""As tragic as the death of a father is in a young child's life, it simply can't compare to the loss of a mother."

With these words syndicated columnist Linda Chavez spat on the American father and endorsed the justification under which millions of men have been involuntarily separated from the children who love them and need them. Glenn Sacks and his guests will fire back at Chavez and remind audiences of the importance of fathers in children's lives on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles at 11 PM on Sunday, May 18."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/14/2050222.shtml

A Novel Way To Celebrate Mother's Day

Adam · 15 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "This article is about a woman who kills her 2 young sons and tries to kill a third on Mother's Day weekend. This story is almost an exact copy of the Andrea Yates horror of a couple of years ago and in the same state (Texas) believe it or not! I am betting she will get no more than 10 years because her defense team will play somekind of B.S. abuse excuse card!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/15/1638237.shtml

Disscussion on False Accusations of Rape

D · 15 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

" This female 'cadet' downs six shots of tequila in a men's dorm, then has sex. Guess who's fault it is?"

by Dave Nevers

"And she went to the men's dorm after having drunk alcohol already and then downed another six shots of tequila.

However, the rape- and various associated charges in the case are for a good cause, to save the woman's reputation (the sex was apparently okay):

Defense counsel Capt. Kathleen Reder suggested the woman reported the incident because she was worried her boyfriend, also a cadet, would be angry with her for having sex and that her reputation would be tarnished.

The man's reputation doesn't matter; to save the woman's, the man's reputation needs to be destroyed. That is part of the price to be paid for female "liberation" and "equality".

The moral of the story is, if you are a woman who has had illicit sex and was found out, offence is the best defence: LAY RAPE CHARGES! Chances are it will work more often than not in the woman's favour; if not, so what! There are no consequences for women for lying in the courts.

There's nothing new about any of that." Here's some points you'll find interesting.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/15/1743249.shtml

The Secret Fantasies of Women?

Adam · 16 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Andrew74 writes "
This just makes me sick. It's unbelievable, I don't know what to say. It's great to know that only society's standards and the chance of getting caught stop most women from abandoning their families.

Some background history to this story:
Dar Heatherington is a city alderman that made accusations of kidnapping, stalking, and rape when she was found in Las Vegas after disapearing on a trip to Great Falls. She was questioned by the police, her story fell apart, and she admitted that she made the whole story up and had really just ran off with a married man."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/15/1642209.shtml

News Story About Rape Charge Spreads Misandry

Adam · 16 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "This is an article about an Air Force Academy cadet charged with raping a female cadet. His name is printed for all the world to see but not the female accusor's.

This man has not been convicted of any criminal act so why should his name be dragged through the mud? This is always the pattern when the media reports alledged man on woman crime. The man is always named but the female accusor is never mentioned so as to protect her precious sensitivities. And of course women never make false allegations of rape or other crimes as we all know!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/16/1525245.shtml

Ask Ads Week 1

Adam · 16 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Ok folks, here goes the first week of Ask Ads where you ask your questions and I (along with the regulars) try to answer 'em. So let's begin.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/16/1536210.shtml

Fantasy Fighting Women Damaging to Women

Adam · 16 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes ″

This article may only be accesible to AOL subscribers or NYTimes subscribers, I'm not sure. It is about all of the new video games where strong, independent, sexy, sultry, intelligent women beat the living crap out of men. Of course, the focus of this idiotic piece is how this is harmful TO WOMEN!!!! I couldn't believe it either. Mark"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/16/1531241.shtml

False Accuser May Be Punished

Thomas · 17 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This article in the UK Independent tells of how Nadine Milroy–Sloan falsely accused former Tory minister Neil Hamilton and his wife, Christine Hamilton, of sexual assault. It looks like she may actually do time for her monstrous crime. According to Christine Hamilton, "The whole thing was preposterous and false. It was a deeply frightening experience."

Now Ms Hamilton has an idea of how so many falsely accused men feel. It's also interesting that in the article's title the Independent refers to the horrendous crime as a "slur."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/16/2244220.shtml

Companies with anti-male agendas

Adam · 17 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Wal Mart employes 75% female and has been removing male goods from there shelves citing "racy". . .not. Take a look at comso and the massive amounts of fem mags and then we'll understand "racy."

I have started watching CNN with my son. . .the journalist male and female are extremely anti-male. Watch as they nearly jump out of there seat when someone attempts to stand up for a boy or man. Every criminal women must be a victim. . .Evey man is guilty and should be exicuted or at least extreme punishment. They do have an older gentlemen that attempts to look and talk about things realistically; however, the other journalist always and very quickly, shuts him up. My son is learning the dangers of being male in today's society and I will do everything in my power to make him understand that he is, the very good person he is. . .reguardless of the schools, courts, tv, or societies general anti-male sentiment. I teach and prove (thanks CNN) the real threat and dangers of dating (especially having sex with a)women these days. Men loose their jobs, careers, property, money, health, they are very regularly and often wrongly imprisoned to be beaten and raped, just to name a few. . . Nobody cares (society). I myself am afraid and have chosen (if I still have that right) to NOT get on the elevator with the snake. . . I'll take the stairs too.

Signed: The persecuted"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/17/1740241.shtml

DV Criteria

Adam · 17 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original masculinism writes "G'Day from Sydney Australia. You would have to question the Justice Department's description of DV. It is so 'gender specific' as to indicate that a male experiencing DV is an impossibility. Under 'Who Commits DV:.....in recent years, some studies suggest women use violence in intimate relationships as frequently as men do. These studies are refuted by credible members of the domestic violence discipline, particularly batterers' treatment providers, who are concerned about flaws in such studies:.....

The DV description for the Justice Department must have been handed over to the feminist lobby.
http://www.ojp.usdoj.gov/ovc/assist/nvaa2002/chapter9.html"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/17/1741219.shtml

Female Suicide Bomber Kills Ten

Adam · 18 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CPM writes "Female Suicide Bomber Kills Ten She is not the first and will not be the last. The grrls also have their hand in the terrorism business. Don't forget to mention this when your femitwit acquaintences tell you how it is only men who inflict violence."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/17/1742219.shtml

MSN & American "Greetings" team up for misandry

Adam · 18 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Martian Bachelor writes "Well, two of our favorite male-bashing mega-companies have now evidently teamed up to spread their hate wide and far across the land: You only have to look at one or two to get the idea. Any great new ideas on how to put an end to this sort of crappola masquerading as hip humor? Cheers! MB"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/18/1229238.shtml

Domestic violence staff walks out on video showing

Adam · 18 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

SunCat writes "
Karen Dunne and her associates acknowledged that women do assault men in relationships, but the problem isn't big enough to justify the amount of time and money spent on it.

Family Violence Coordinating Council of Cecil County"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/18/1239221.shtml

Business Week says boys are falling behind

Adam · 18 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes " The biggest problem with this article is how gleefully the author jokes about how boys are falling behind girls in education."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/18/1240239.shtml

Venomous Male Bashing Op-Ed

Adam · 19 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Freebird writes "In this Op-Ed piece Jim Reeves makes no attempt at all to mask his venomous misandry. Words alone just cannot do justice to this piece. Granted, he's entitled to his opinion, but we should make ours known, not only to him and his newspaper, but everyone else. If this sort of thing goes unanswered, it will just open the floodgates to even more of the same. Now we know how the Jews felt in Germany before the extermination camps began. You'll have to read it to appreciate it."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/19/0135210.shtml

Boycott "The Body Shop" anti male compaign

Adam · 19 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Earl writes "Boycott "The Body Shop" anti-male campaign.
The Body Shop for many years has been supporting and solicting donations from customers to "Stop the violence against women".

This attitude is blatantly anti male; not recognizing male victims of domestic violence, blaming men for all violence and condoning violence against men by making it a non-issues.

Simply going into a store and telling the manager that they will not shop at the store sends a warning to the management.

Please pass it on!!!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/19/0136239.shtml

Women: The Hardier Sex...

Adam · 19 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original radikal writes "Another report about women being able to tolerate pain better than men. Didn't someone contest this?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/19/195208.shtml

Heineken

Adam · 20 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Geo writes "I watched the new advertisement of the beer named "Heineken" and it shows an actress of the film "Matrix reloaded" kicking a man because he touched her back. I think you should see that ad." You might be able to catch this at Ifilm if you're lucky.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/20/143225.shtml

Whirlwind Vacumes

Adam · 20 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tim Randles writes "Eureka Whirlwind vacumes has a commercial on television that shows men as incompetent and how easy it is to install their built in systems and that men can do it even if they are incompetent." Can anyone verify this?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/20/144223.shtml

2nd Major Win for Paternity Fraud Victims in CA!

D · 21 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "Paternity fraud victims have experienced a second major win, and they are just friggin out! As everybody knows, AB2240 was vetoed by Gov. Davis last year. As part of the veto, he issued an Executive Order to create a Paternity Workgroup. After five months of nothing, NCFM, LA took action and demanded that the Executive Order be carried out.

The result was that a workgroup, sponsored by the CA-DCSS, started in the last week of Feb. 2002. Prior to the first meeting of the workgroup, the opposition started a bill (AB252) that was designed to give them a means of subverting the efforts of the paternity fraud victims. This bill was worded such that it would have destroyed the efforts of the paternity fraud victims in seeking relief. It would have done this by directly attacking SB1030 and coercing the paternity fraud victims submit to the efforts of the opposition.

That strategy of the opposition has now been thwarted, and the opposition has been put on notice. The vote was close at 34 ayes and 30 noes. It is the abstaining votes that made the difference in this case. The paternity fraud victims are deeply grateful to the Dem's that abstained from voting in favor of AB252.

It is no accident that all Dem's voted in favor of AB252. We believe the opposition misinformed them because they were lied to and haven't heard the truth from the victims. The truth was that AB252 represented the interest of the opposition that was composed of a secret alliance who opposed AB252. Further, the alliance excluded the victims from voicing their objections to AB252 in the analysis that went before the Assembly Committee of Judiciary.

Finally, AB252 failed in that it did not provide any timelines, goals, directives, or specify which categories of paternity fraud were to be addressed by the workgroup. NCFM, LA has made it clear that we will continue to support the Paternity Workgroup despite its being stacked against the victims. This is to demonstrate good faith to the Dem’s and Gov. Davis. In addition, should the workgroup produce an actual product that has merit in relation to the issue of paternity fraud then Senator Ashburn will be most willing to amend SB1030.

Later!

Warble
"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/21/0325259.shtml

Gender Fems Invade Africa/Blame Men for epidemic

D · 21 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy has a great article on how socialist feminists use their money, i.e... demonize and shortchange men. Much like in Canada where socialist health care it is interesting to know that a prostate cancer check up is the only cancer check up that requires a fee. There has been debate on this board about socialism as an evil, but I want to post this not as a negative response to 'socialism' in and of itself, but rather of how certain groups can run a muk with socialism as it can and as we have seen with capitalism or communism. The end result - men are being demonized unfairly.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/21/0335258.shtml

Mass. Medical Society Symposium on Men’s Health

Scott · 21 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Massachusetts Medical Society is sponsoring a symposium on men's health that qualifies as CME credit for physicians. Arnie Robbins, the chair of the recently created Ad Hoc Committee on Men’s Health, would like this info to be distributed as widely as possible. An overview of the symposium and registration forms can be found on this site: "The burgeoning field of men’s health has exploded in the 21st century. The media touts the benefits of wonder drugs, shakes, and equipment -- all directed toward improving the male psyche and physique -- while the core clinical, environmental, and psychological health issues are often lost in the message. The Symposium on Men’s Health will help physicians better communicate with male patients and their families and address strategies for improving health and reducing the increasing rates of morbidity and mortality." I've met Arnie personally and am excited about the progress he's made within the Mass. Medical Society on men's health issues.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/21/051257.shtml

MANN Chat: Why Can't Boys Be Boys?

Steve · 21 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I will host this week's MANN chat, Wednesday night (5/21), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location. >The topic for this chat will be "Why Can't We Let Boys Be Boys?" That's the title of a recent href="http://www.businessweek.com/magazine/content/03_21/b3834008_mz001.htm">insightful commentary, by Marcia Vickers, in the same issue of >Business Week that contains the controversial cover story, " href="http://www.mensactivism.org/article.pl?sid=03/05/18/1240239&mode=threaded">The New Gender Gap." Recounting her son's experience, Vickers warns of the harm that boys can suffer at the hands of a female-centric school system, particularly in preschool and in the primary grades. Do you share her concerns? Join us at this week's MANN chat to discuss why there may be a lot wrong with our educational systems, but little, if anything, wrong with boys. Invite some friends to join you!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/21/1824257.shtml

Program to help boys catch up in school

Adam · 22 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Chas writes "'Helping boys catch up is a brilliant idea' by Ross Fitgerald is published in "The Australian" newspaper of 22 May 2003. It catalogues the ways in which boys have been educationally disadvantaged in the past three decades. Fitgerald describes federal government initiatives to address the problem following a 2002 House of Representatives survey of boys' education. In 2004, 30 cluster school zones will be established across Australia to improve boys' education. Each cluster will contain a Lighthouse school to champion best practice in boys' education. Funding of up to $60,000 will be provided to the Lighthouse school to develop, facilitate and implement a professional development program for teachers in a cluster of surrounding schools. Each cluster will be required to evaluate its programs in boys' education and its professional development activities under the Lighthouse project."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/22/1712224.shtml

The 'Dead Beat' Fathers Myth

Adam · 22 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

masculinism writes "G'Day from Sydney Australia. How many times have we all had to endure the verbal assaults of 'dead beat fathers'? I went and looked at the facts and lifted this comment under Section 2.2 Of the Australian Child Support Agancy website. Here is the link
"only 6 per cent of children did not have reasonable maintenance action requirements met on their behalf and, in many cases, this can be a temporary situation." Now correct me if I am wrong wouldn't this indicate that the vast and OVERWHELMING!!!! majority of fathers pay their child support IN FULL. Why then are there never ending media stories on 'dead beat fathers' these fathers represent a very small fraction of fathers, almost to the point of insignificance.
Masculinism"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/22/1716212.shtml

How America Betrays its Military Fathers

Adam · 22 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tatis writes "Military men's service to their country often creates the conditions under which they can be the victims of injustice in our family courts. Nationally-known family law attorney Jeffery Leving and paternity fraud crusader Carnell Smith will join columnist and commentator Glenn Sacks to discuss these problems on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles at 11 PM on Sunday, May 25. To listen to the show live via the Internet, go to Listen Live http://www.hisside.com/listen_live.htm."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/22/1716253.shtml

UK police fitness tests made easier.

Adam · 22 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Fitness tests standards for police recruits are being lowered in UK, to increase the number of women officers."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/22/1717229.shtml

Save the Males

D · 23 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Philalethes writes "Save the Males is a very well-designed web site by a Canadian university professor who woke up when he was 'slandered and removed for encouraging debate.' Lots of excellent articles, links and other material on feminism, as well as its close relation to the "New World Order" conspiracy program. 'Feminism has achieved enormous power in society because it serves the long-term elite agenda of destabilizing society and reducing population. The elite's goal is "New World Order"--a United Nations-based global government that uses the arbitrary power of the state to promote the agenda of monopoly capital. It is the “left” in the service of the “right.”' Henry Makow is also the author of A Long Way to go for a Date *, the story of 'his quest for love and masculine identity at a time when both are under siege in America.' He married a woman from the Philippines (she's a doll, BTW); a while back in a MANN forum I was trying to remember where I saw this site; I'm glad to have found it again.'*Special note: Makow has been mentioned here before with his views on sept/11. Not everyone here agrees thats for sure, but I still believe Makow has done his homework in areas such as showing how supporters of Nazism turned to supporting Feminism after the war. If some people are to sensitive to his writings I will withdraw the post. Thank you , your friend Dan Lynch.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/23/044209.shtml

anti-male bias in walmart

D · 23 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

ih8hillary writes "If you think there is anti-male bias in Walmart(HOME OF CHINESE ARMY BX/PX)you are dead wrong.Try Abilene,Texas in Hendrick Health Center where hugging is a hideous crime.I started to work there in August of 2000 and met a girl named Sheila who worked in the o/r.She would always come to my place of work and pick up supplies.She started being friendly with me and we always talked about things.I would always give her a hug and she had no problem with it.She even encouraged it sometimes.Never told me to stop unless people would be in danger of seeing her.All of a sudden she tells her o/r supervisor on me .The o/r supervisor tells my supervisor to tell me to stop.At the time my supervisor tells me about this,I have no idea she was referring to Sheila unitl I went to her work place and confront her and found out she ratted me out.I later told one of her coworkers to tell her i didnt want to see her again.So a few days later i get called by human resources and get fired for retalliation and hugging.The messege I have got is that it is ok for a nurse to hug a doctor but for a supply guy it is taboo.Also while I was being fired ,I was up against 3 women and no male present.Now I HATE hENDRICK AND ANYTIME I SEE A NURSE I SEE RED.!!!!!!!!!!!!!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/23/047237.shtml

Capitalism and Misandry

D · 23 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "I thought fair is fair and I would now post more stuff on how Capitalists go out of their way to slam men. Back when I was teaching self-defence to women in large groups I too used to spout the myth that 1 in 4 women were raped. I now regret this and do what I can to reverse that ignorant lie by Mary Koss. Though I didn't realize it I was just trying to create business for myself. Using scare tactics to convince women to train under me. Here is a new Jacket for women and women only. It is a defensive electrical jacket. Though the idea is a good one they don't make jackets for men and they specifically target men as the only perpetrators of violence or the possible attacker, which is also blatenly false. It is a capitalist venture that terrorizes women and demonizes men all in one shot. Good money."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/23/0437226.shtml

Avoid These Women

Thomas · 23 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal writes "Here's a new woman columnist that we can enjoy promoting:

http://www.lewrockwell.com/orig/fiori3.html"

As always (this is Thomas writing now) I don't agree with everything that the author of this essay says, but I still loved reading this essay by a good woman, who tears into feminism. One of the things that I respect about Fiori is the fact that, while she holds women primarily responsible for the lunacy and evil of feminism, she doesn't just let men off the hook. (Note her statement, "To the decent men, if you think you're getting the shaft economically and socially now, just continue to sit back like a bunch of feminine cowards and let things continue to deteriorate.")

I think you'll, on the whole, appreciate Fiori's perspective. Enjoy!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/23/1528237.shtml

Girls Behaving Badly Redux

Adam · 24 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Gonzo Kid writes "Hmmm. Anyone notice this? This story reports that the violent and demeaning hazing incident that took place in Illinois was fueled in part by alchohol provided by the mothers of two of the girls, one the mother of a junior. Anyone taking any bets these are single mothers?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/24/1930221.shtml

The Anti-Feminist Page

Adam · 24 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Philalethes writes "The Anti-Feminist Page presents an excellent, lucid critique of feminism, its context and results, with a gold mine list of internet links and resources. 'The result of the victory of feminism has been disorder cascading from America throughout the world, from the most immediate personal relationships to high culture and international politics. It must therefore be opposed as a destructive fanaticism based on a gross and wilful misapprehension of human life. In the end feminism cannot win because it radically undermines any stable and productive ordering of private life. It has done a great deal of damage, however, and will do much more before it destroys itself. The more explicit, articulate and successful its opponents the more damage can be prevented. Hence this page.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/24/1927239.shtml

Big Sister Is Watching

D · 24 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Feminists have officially declared war against Men's activists in Canada and the US. Feminists have cited hundreds of Men's issues internet sites and they are looking for money and personnel to monitor the sites. They will be the ones who will bring 'hate crimes' to court. I will post a mission statement. "Recommendations include increased monitoring of Internet sites and possible legal action with respect to hate propaganda on the Internet, that women's groups develop and disseminate through the Internet positive, egalitarian messages to counter this discourse, that they form a network of experts in fields on which the masculinists are focusing. They also suggest that whenever possible, the release of gendered data be accompanied by contextual analyses." It is clear that the internet is having an effect on them. I also suspect a feminist move towards more centralization of the internet will be following not to long afterwards. Here is the first page. Here is the second page. Scroll to the bottom and see if your group or a group you know about is listed. They list US , Australian and French sites as well.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/24/1942254.shtml

Easy foreskin restoration?

Adam · 25 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Hunsvotti writes "In the past, foreskin restorers relied on weights ("pondus judae") and awkward strap/tape devices that were a nuisance to use and could cause irritation. Now, the folks at Cut/Uncut are offering a foreskin restoration kit for US$19. It is very simple: silicone rings of varying sizes are applied, and these adhere to the skin without the use of tape. Does anyone have experience with this or other restoration methods?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/24/1928250.shtml

It's my birthday!

D · 25 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I know this is shameless advertising, but I want people to know Im human. A real life person with feelings and events. I also want to encourage others to tell us when its they're birthday, or if their getting married or promoted or something good about their lives. We so much focus on the shit men are dealing with, we should also have some more good stories to tell. Please feel free to post anything you feel is something you want us to know. You can of course remain anonymous under your user name. You dont even have to post the day your birthday is , just tell us its your birthday or you're being promoted or you get the idea. There has been great tragedy expressed on this board many times over. I think a greater tragedy would be not to express some of the happier times we face. Your friend Dan.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/25/0826247.shtml

Hormone Replacement Therapy for our older brothers

Adam · 25 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original rage writes "For years, women have benefited from hormone replacement therapy (estrogen and progesterone), and as usual there was no equivalent for the growing number of men getting older....but recently HRT for men has become the norm, and in the future men will have full access to male hormones and all their health benefices : growth of muscle mass, increase of bone density, improvement of cognitive abilities (spatial, logical and scientist skills), reinforcement of self-confidence. So for all our older brothers on this site who are in their 50's or 60's, do not forget to visit your physician and ask for the prescription.

Your French brother,
Rage

http://www.cbsnews.com/stories/2003/05/19/health/m ain554633.shtml"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/25/1532202.shtml

Just walk into any wal mart and look around

Adam · 25 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Just walk into any wal mart and look around, do you see any guys??? If so what is HE doing??? If you don't want to walk in, just call. . .any department and see if a man actually answers the phone. I have called wal mart (local) and their world headquarters many times. . .managers, human recource, specific departments. . .yet to talk to a man. I watch as anything deemed "Male" items is simply being removed from the shelves. Discrimination . . . against WHO???
I stopped shopping there, I am driving 30 minutes more to shop at Mejer's. Why? As I told the (apparently "female only")reps for wal mart "I WON'T support any business that has such an obvious anti-male agenda. . . . . .EVER". I (and my family) have shopped primarily at wal marts for the past 20 years. . .never again."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/25/1533200.shtml

extraordinarily evil message in WA initiative...

Adam · 26 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

ppmnow writes "Read this link:

http://www.citizensforaonestrikelaw.org

Here is a quote from the homepage:

"It also exposes the problem that our government could have created a One Strike You're Out Law but instead proved impotent to deal with these horrendous crimes against our children and women."

She is perpetrating a most egregious falsehood on page one by implying only children and women are affected by sex crimes! She also references more instances of men behaving badly throughout her site (I don't recall her attaching one single referential scenario involving a woman perp).

To everyone involved with this site, get off your duffs and write this lady, tell her what she is doing is flat out wrong! Tell her she either changes the homepage and the rest of her site to make it gender neutral, or we will fight this initiative tooth and nail! Remember, she comes from the same state that produced Mary Kay Letourneau! You can reach her here:

onestrike@monroe.net

I'm also contacting the print and airwave media to point out the absolute hypocrisy of this situation, but I need your help to make a real difference. Let's not allow this to go unchallenged. If we are a force, then let that force be wielded now !

One last note: The wording behind this initiative is overreaching and so blatantly unconstitutional I know it will fail any higher court challenge.

Mitchell A. Smith"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/25/1533258.shtml

The Post Finally Slipped Up

D · 26 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal writes "Here's an historic event: the Washington Post finally let a letter with a man's point of view get into print. Let's hope somebody doesn't get fired over this.

http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/articles/A334 56-2003May23.html"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/26/0239250.shtml

Where's the Media?

Adam · 26 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Gonzo Kid writes "Well, no link, heck you can probably find your own. Annika didn't make the cut; though credits, I suppose, are due her for not shooting from the red tees. What I do notice is that time and again the "applause" for her is mentioned, even when she bogeyed. So where, I ask, is the media mentioning all the men who failed in their efforts to move to the advanced rounds? Why is it that a woman gets all this credit for trying and failing (while in on a pass) when these men aren't even mentioned at all, many who have failed to make the cut for a few years running, but still plugging away? Things to make you go "Hmmmmmm...""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/26/2019229.shtml

Meryl Streep Challenges N.H. Graduates

Adam · 26 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Meryl Streep spreads her wisdom.

http://apnews1.iwon.com//article/20030525/D7R8L9BG 0.html"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/26/2028258.shtml

Extra-uterine fetal development

Adam · 27 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Irish Independent newspaper on 24/5/03. It was reported that a baby girl developed on her mother's liver. The baby weighed in at 6 pounds after an ultrasound scan showed the mother's womb was empty. At operation, Professor Jack Krige found the amniotic sac behind the liver, cut it open and delivered the baby. Operation took place at the Groote Schur hospital in Cape Town, South Africa.
This is further evidence that uterus not absolutely necessary for human reproduction. Also it makes the concept of an artificial uterus seem more credible" I think I saw this on mensdaily, no promises through.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/26/2030251.shtml

Family Law Reloaded

D · 27 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "I thought this piece was great. The writer takes some quotes from the Matrix series and applys them to our family courts culture. Its a fun read I think. "Go here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/27/0448250.shtml

Domestic Violence issues in Norway.

D · 27 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

khankrumthebulgar writes "Gentlemen,

While reading the Glenn Beck web site I found a link to terrorism affecting the Norwegians. On that web site is a link regarding the unfair treatment of Men in Norway in Domestic Violence issues and how their concerns are not being addressed. The UK, France, Canada, Germany, New Zealand, Australia, Norway, & the US. I turned 47 on Sunday. I can distinctly remember the "Women's Rights" movement becoming a political force as a teenager. Now the Feminazis are trying to create this Lesbian paradise devoid of Men. I hope those bitches love burqas. If this trend of the feminization of The West continues. We can kiss our freedoms and culture goodbye. Dumb asses all of them.

In my 47 years I have seen Oprah become a Billionaire and own 2 cable Networks both anti-male. She made it by bashing Men. I have witnessed Men friends, cousins, relatives go through Divorce and many never remarry. They are burned out to Women and their demands. I am sick of Women's abuse of my gender. I am sick of their abuse of boys. I agree that Bernard Goldberg's book "Bias" speaks volumes about the propaganda war against Men. I fear for my Three Sons and Grandsons. I have been through a Divorce in the mid 90s, and remarried in the late 90s. If my second marriage fails I am personally done with marriage. It holds nothing for Men but obligation. We can thank the gutless asses in Congress from both Parties for this mess. And for the NOW gang of Lesbians. You hate Men, the feeling is mutual. I could use the materials for another drinking cup.

KhanKrumtheBulgar"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/27/0455247.shtml

Girls are victims even when they commit crimes?

Adam · 27 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "Here is a despicable article that clearly outlines a new standard of (in)justice, one applied to men, and another to women. The article (and study) is clearly sexist and feminist, it states that "because there is a zero tolerance for violence in the home, it's been criminalized across the board - But in a lot of the girls' cases these are social service problems, not problems solved by prosecutions." What is stated here is the complete opposite of the treatment men (boys) get is MA as set up by feminist jurisprudence. The article states that Girls who commit crimes should get "vehicles to be empowered to control their own destiny." This type of study is non-empirical, and always intends to offer girls less responsibility for their actions while maintaining more options for these girls to get out of any accountability. Please write the Boston Globe with disgust that they would publish this sexist garbage on the front page of their newspaper."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/27/1622245.shtml

Male Bashing at the New York Times

Thomas · 27 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

After getting caught up in the scandal over dishonest reporting by Jayson Blair, the New York Times has sought to portray the problem as an isolated incident. This editorial by Carey Roberts, writing in ifeminists.com, serves to somewhat debunk that spin control by pointing out the newspaper's systematic anti-male bias.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/27/1625223.shtml

Women Who Murder Their Children

Thomas · 27 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

radikal writes The bodies of three dead infants were found in a storage unit in Arizona. Their mother was their killer. Kranes says in her article, "O'Dell had kept the three pregnancies, and the babies' births, a secret, Lungren said, explaining that she was able to hide her condition because she was very heavy."

Here's an encouraging piece of related news (Thomas writing now). Apparently, courts are starting to hold women a bit more responsible for their actions.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/27/1644209.shtml

Mr T Pities Mensactivism!

Adam · 27 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

You ever wondered what would happen if an certain 80's pop culture icon came across us, and decided to do what we do his way? well, here's a look at would happen if he got his way. He also showed us what he could do to Angryharry and the Ifems as well. Whew, that was something else :-) I'm posting this mainly for keeping our morale up, as it hasn't always got to be doom and gloom in our line of work.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/27/1634223.shtml

Wed Night Chat: Big Sister is Watching

D · 28 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dan Lynch writes "'BIG SISTER IS WATCHING' will be the topic. Im amazed at the turn of events; personally, I think its good publicity all around. Can't wait for Oprah to do a segment, myself. Here is a good article on the debacle of government funded feminism to go after men's activists. "Make sure you read to the bottom after the long list of names cited by the Canadian Feminists. The other links are up and running now. "
Here and "Here. It's a move in censorship that would make Stalin proud and Orwell protesting. Of course the the feminists rely on the oldies but goldies of 'abuse' and 'sex crimes' along with women's oppression as their reasoning factors. And as usual with those crimes its always their word and their word alone that is the convicting factor. With so many closed courtrooms and unconstitutional trials the public will never know until its to late. Its also difficult for embarassed men to fight the system that has degraded them so much publicly without fair treatment. I find it astonishingly interesting that those are the crimes in which rules of evidence are very different than regular trials. Here is another link that I feel coincides with all of this. The author asks why there is "double standards." Your input at the chat is important and a greater understanding of what's happening here is needed. "Freedom is the freedom to say 2 + 2 = 4"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/28/0417210.shtml

BBC Pulls Offensive Commercial

Adam · 29 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

radikal writes "Perhaps I read into the topic a bit deeply, but I could only imagine the silence if the shoe was on the other foot."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/29/1621238.shtml

Suzanne Fields Does It Again

Adam · 29 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Well well, she's done it again, with her latest article and where to begin? perhaps we should start with what seems to be her condescending attiude and the fact that she pretends to know the nearest man's experience. The initative is in your hands.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/29/1842254.shtml

Mothers Who Murder their Children

Adam · 29 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Chas writes "In Melbourne, Australia, Kathleen Folbigg has been convicted of murdering her four infants over a period of 10 years. In the pre-sentencing period, the usual excuses for her behaviour are being canvassed. In particular her father, her husband and 'society' are being examined for causes of her murderous conduct. In this article by Janet Albrechtson, "Mums must not get away with murder", it is refreshing to read a female journalist in the mainstream press examine the evidence of double standards which is familiar to readers of mensactivism.org. Albrechtson says, "... when mothers kill we apply double standards. We look away, explain away, let women off. But a moral universe where we do this, and allow women to go on killing, makes no sense." It is a tightly written article. On line feed back is invited. You should just see what the tired old feminists have to say about it!!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/29/1624200.shtml

Dr. Chang's Death Fast to Equality

Adam · 30 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Eric writes "Daniel K. Chang, Ph.D., of New Jersey, starts his 3rd week of a "Death Fast" for his constitutional rights and legal injustices. He declares that only water, salt and a brand name vitamin will pass his lips until he receives true justice and his rights.

At noon, May 16th, 2003, Chang started his hunger strike to the the death, if need be. Passively infuriated by his false arrests initiated by Middlesex County Child Support (MCCS), Daniel starts his 15th day of fasting until past wrongs are righted. When the New Jersey "family" courts system started with a basic denial of 14th Amendment rights of a parent and a child, then applied unjust levying of assets and finances to charge him with an insurmontable amount of payments to his ex-wife some 14 years ago, he tolerated it. But, when MCCS unjustly destroyed his character and the respect of his child, neighbors and the public, they went past the point of tolerance.

For the story thats "TOO HOT" for local and national media....Only in the:

NCP Advocate
The Non Custodial Parents WORLD information source
"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/29/1629231.shtml

Want to Know the Truth? Go to Jail!

Adam · 30 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Gonzo Kid writes "Under a new proposal, wanting to know the truth about whether or not you are the real father of a baby can land you in jail. Which is another way of saying that they are criminalizing the act of catching a woman in a lie. Seig Heil!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/30/1347254.shtml

Mens Activism Success

Adam · 30 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Canadaman writes "I have found that most of my kids videos teach children to fit into to sterotype roles and put the value mainly on the mother as the household figure. I was proud to see that mens activism has made an effect on the Disney conquered world of childrens entertainment. There is this show for preschool kids called "Bear In the Big Blue House" that I think is great. It teaches real value of equality, not womens lib. Here's the web site this one is produced by Jim Henson Studios."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/30/1350211.shtml

Why Your Wife Won't Sleep With You

Adam · 30 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

radikal writes "A post on this popular enough weblog deals with a male reader having marital issues with his stay-at-home wife. The comments alone are worth reading. I wonder what would happen if one of us responded."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/30/1352227.shtml

Ask Ads 2

Adam · 30 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Okay, it's the second week of Ask Ads, where you can talk about things not strictly related to men's issues, or if you just wanna vent about something, or if you're wondering about something ask away, it's your call.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/30/1354259.shtml

WordSpy's Word of the Day: Alpha Earner

Adam · 31 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

radikal writes "(AL.fuh urn.ur) n. A wife who earns all or most of her household's income.

Check it out!
http://www.wordspy.com/words/alphaearner.asp"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/31/1558248.shtml

Bizarre arguments in supreme court decision

Adam · 31 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt Campbell writes "Washington Post columnist Michael Kinsley comments about a recent Supreme Court decision penned by CJ Wm. Rehnquist (or, more aptly, by one of his legal aides) in this column

Kinsley points out the sudden change of direction this decision constitutes away from Rehnquist's bias toward state soverignty and instead, in this case, toward pan-state applicability of federal laws regarding employment. While Kinsley never comes out and says it, it is clear that a massive exception in that direction was made in this case dealing with the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 because the matter of gender was introduced into it. The decision may very well amount to a good substantive effect: state workers get the same FMLA benefits as federal workers get. But the disturbing thing about the ruling is the overwhelming pro-feminist sentiment in the wording of the decision. Gender issues and speculative opinions are dragged into a ruling wherein it is clearly not even relevant. This is a further example of the degredation of reasoning and retaining principle of scope when applying and interpreting laws in favor of gender-feminist hysteria.

I can't help but speculate the aide who actually wrote this decision was a 24-year-old female Harvard Law graduate.

The full decision is here "

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/31/161208.shtml

Girls Rule!

Adam · 31 May 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Peter writes "Here is an article in The Globe and Mail about girls vs boys education: They are accomplished, idealistic, funny, modest, well-rounded, socially aware, and ferociously bright. And all of them are girls. The rest of the article is here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/05/31/1610225.shtml

The National Post enables men to stand up

Adam · 1 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original rage writes "Check the following link out, How about writing letters to this newspaper to defend the masculist cause and explain we're not woman-haters ? Articles released on the National Post up to now about the federally-funded feminist report have shown some kind of criticism against feminists'behaviour concerning this event. They seem to want to let men express their point of views, so why not trying ?

But in my opinion, we must write to them as individuals and not as "mensactivism" members, we must not give the link of our site, else it could be viewed as inopportune lobbying...."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/01/2158226.shtml

Feminist bigotry parading as progressivism

Adam · 1 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

JackTakeyama writes "Hey guys. Just thought you might be interested in a series of essays by an unabashed feminist bigot on the frontpage of a purportedly progressive website. The latest tirade can be found towards the bottom of this page. Many of her other essays can be found here. The responses are even better than the essays.

It's stuff like this that keeps me (and a lot of other men I'm sure) from rejoining the so-called progressive community here in Portland.

Jack"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/01/220233.shtml

Feminists alarmed at "masculinist" network

Adam · 2 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "I think that we all have noticed the increasing desperation of feminists who realise that the mens movement is starting to pick up momentum. In this article another feminist has noticed us and gone into the usual tailspin that happens when someones comfortable "facts" smack head on into uncomfortable reality. This one, however, is funded by the Canadian government to the tune of $75,000 smackers. In fact, much of what she has to say is true, so long as you ignore the negative connotactions that she attaches to it."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/01/221212.shtml

Courage, sacrifice, and the 2003 Pulitzer Prize in photography

Thomas · 2 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This may only be tangentially related to men's issues, since both men and women were involved in the struggle against the fires that devastated Colorado last summer. I still wanted to post this, though, perhaps as inspiration. Click on "VIEW PHOTOGRAPHY ESSAY" on the page that first comes up, or just wait for the slide show to begin.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/02/0842246.shtml

Finding Nemo Father Friendly!

Adam · 2 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

alphamale writes "It has been many years since I have come across a male friendly movie but "Finding Nemo" is a refreshing change to the deluge of female chauvinism that we have been inundated with during the past few decades. It is a wonderful story about a single dad whose son is abducted and the amazing adventure and gutsy determination the father endures to rescue his son. While there was one sexist rant about men and asking for directions, the rest of the movie is sexism free. A thoroughly enjoyable story about dad as hero. Just in time for Father's Day and well worth the price of admission."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/02/1628213.shtml

The Child Tax Credit

Adam · 3 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal writes "The Senate is scrambling to expand the child tax credit because it was left out of the recent tax-cut legislation. This is a good opportunity to highlight the tax code's bias against fathers. Send a letter to your local newspaper. Here's mine to the Washington Post (letters@washpost.com).

To the Editor:

If senators are really concerned about those who miss out on the child tax credit, they will provide for fathers to be eligibile, not just mothers ("Senators Rush to Propose Expanded Child Tax Credit," June 3). Currently a noncustodial father may not take the child tax credit even when he provides a majority of the child's support.

Sincerely,
Neil Steyskal
(address and phone)"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/03/1547234.shtml

Where are the men going ...

Adam · 3 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

MrDave writes "
In recent years, I've often heard women say, "What happened to all the good men?" ... Fred Reed has one answer that I expect will become increasingly common as feminist/socialist control continues to spread: Men are simply leaving ... leaving the USA and other Western countries ... and moving to countries where the culture still respects men. Here's a taste of Mr. Reed's recent essay on this topic: 'For a man of fifty, a sloe-eyed sweetie of twenty-five beats hell out of an angry menopausing gringa with a law degree. Maybe it shouldn't be that way, but it is that way.' "

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/03/1549246.shtml

Towards a "streamlined" system of justice...

D · 3 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "Here is another example of feminist intent to remove due process based on gender profiling. A Lawyer for students at Harvard states: "it's a myth that only rape produces difficult "he said, she said" cases. "In almost every crime, it's the credibility of one person that makes or breaks the case, whether it's a cop watching a drug deal, or a woman who's raped," she said. "You challenge their credibility, assess their demeanor, and render a judgment. That's what the justice system is all about." This is absolute tyranny. A judgment should be FIRST based on the facts, and contributing factors such as credibility are secondary to the case. Last year Harvard attempted to change the school's sexual assault policy - making corroborating evidence a prerequisite for the university to fully investigate - this in turn drove (feminist)students to file a discrimination complaint with the department's Office for Civil Rights. The highly organized feminist movement of today is working toward a gender based standard of justice, and it appears due process and evidence is something that they regard as insignificant. Its time to fight back against the dominant paradigm that gender-socialism has become. Be active before the rights of men are all but gone.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/03/1813228.shtml

STAUNCH WARNING TO AMERICANS!!

D · 3 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This is a staunch warning to all you Americans about Radical Feminists and the plight of Canada. Take this to heart; because this author nails it.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/03/1931254.shtml

vicious attack gets funny headline

D · 3 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original sick of it! writes "Some vicious women cuts off a man's penis... and the headline makes a joke about the wife giving her husband 'the chop'. on that page is a list of related stories where other women have done the same thing. Maybe they will make this women a folkhero among the fem-nazis. makes me sick.

Cant imagine the journalist being so 'cute' if the man had attacked the woman.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/03/1936203.shtml

ifeminists speak out

D · 3 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

One feminist group that refuses to have their voice as a woman replaced by totalitarian feminist dogma talks about 'masculist discourse'. Wendy McElroy delivers a piece with multiple links including the IWF's (another group of women that refuses to be silenced by totalitarian feminist dogma) letter to NOW. It has been my opinion that "feminists" have replaced women's voice for their own party line indoctrination. Regardless of my agreement or dissagreement with McElroy or IWF I feel they are speaking up for themselves more and more everyday. It will be women like them that will lead men and women to a better communication for eachother.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/03/2037252.shtml

SB1030 Passes CA Senate 34 Ayes/2 Noes!

Adam · 3 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes "It pleases me to announce that SB1030 has passed out of the California Senate by a vote of 34/2. Considering the power of the opposition, it is astonishing to see this level of support for the bill. SB1030 addresses the category of paternity fraud that we call an incorrect default paternity judgments (IDPJ's).

An IDPJ results when a judgment is entered against a male who is mislead into believing he is the father, or a male that never receives notice of a paternity hearing because the mother supplies incorrect information. Currently, when the 6 month to two year time limits expire, there is no possibility of making a challenge to the default judgment.

This means that victims of an IDPJ will potentially be subjected to contempt, oppressive child support burdens, criminal charges, and jail when they refuse to pay for a child that is not theirs. This pattern will continue until the child is 18 or graduates from college. Worse, the victim of an IDPJ will learn that they are behind on the first day they learn of the judgment. The source of the oppression is the CA DCSS. It is radical feminist organizations that seek the oppression of men and the destruction of their families.

Often the victims do not learn of the IDPJ until there is a wage garnishment, tax seizure, damage to a credit report, and etc. That is because the DCSS relies heavily substitute service. With substitute service the notice of a hearing may go to the wrong address without the victim ever learning of a hearing. In Los Angeles County alone, there is a 79% default judgment rate. This means that significant numbers of males never learn of the judgment until enforcement action is taken.

SB1030 addresses this failure of the system by permitting the victims of an IDPJ to use DNA testing to overturn the judgment and have the arrears dismissed. The victim will have two-years to overturn the judgment from the day a wage garnishment begins. The advantage of this is that for under $1000 an IDPJ can be overturned. Currently, if the male is lucky they can do this for ~$5,000 if they discover the IDPJ in time.

The next stop is the California Assembly. There it will meet stiff and well-organized opposition. NCFM, LA will be working with the Men's Issues Coalition in California to lobby the Assembly in California. This is a tough fight, but it is not an impossible fight.

Warble
"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/03/1551229.shtml

CS Abuses Drive Fathers away

Adam · 4 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tatis writes "Hundreds of thousands of divorced and unwed fathers are victims of the government's war on so-called "deadbeat dads." Patti Diroff of the Children's Rights Council joined Glenn to discuss these abuses and how they drive decent fathers out of the lives of their children on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles on Sunday, June 1. To listen to the archived version of the show, go to "Past Shows: June 1" at His Side"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/03/1553238.shtml

Million Dads March on the Men's Hour

Adam · 4 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "The May Men's Hour is about the Millions Dads March including Thomas Lessman, the Chairman, Millions Dads March and Stephen Baskerville on Government interference in the family and the Millions Dads March. It also has Harry Crouch on the NCFM-LA protest at San Diego Domestic Violence Council's Annual Awards and News of a Fathers-4-Justice protest at the family court in Plymouth, England and the 'Black Friday' protest on 13th June. Please also add your comments on the Men's Hour in the easy survey."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/04/1612210.shtml

Woman only writing awards should be allowed

Adam · 4 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Caeruleus Flamma writes "
This is an article talking about the Orange prize and how woman only prizes should be allowed."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/04/1617229.shtml

Media Campaign Against Canadian Feminists' Call for Censorship

Steve · 4 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Men's activist and author Rich Zubaty is starting a media campaign to attack Canadian feminists' recent href="http://www.mensactivism.org/article.pl?sid=03/05/24/1942254&mode=threaded">call for censorship of men's activists. Rich can use help with creating and disseminating press releases and contacting media organizations. Also, if you have any news media contacts, please share them with Rich. This is a great opportunity to take direct action to protect your rights to speak and write freely. Please contact Rich directly by e-mail at the following address (remove the "DELETETHIS"): richzubaty@DELETETHIShotmail.com

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/04/1715223.shtml

MANN Chat: Big Sister is Watching--Part II

Steve · 4 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This week's MANN chat will be held on Wednesday night (6/4), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location. Recently, Canadian feminists used Canadian taxpayers' money to publish a href="http://www.mensactivism.org/article.pl?sid=03/05/24/1942254&mode=threaded">call for censorship of men's activists that was disguised as "research." We began the discussion at last week's chat.
This week, we'll discuss direct action that we can take to combat this latest threat to men's rights. Also, Scott has fixed some settings on our chat server, so it should work much better for us this week. I hope to see you there!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/04/1733245.shtml

DV How Men Are Ignored

Adam · 4 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original masculinism writes "G'Day from Sydney Australia. If it wasn't so serious it would be laughable. Under the Office of the Status of Women the Federal Government launched a $50 million dollar 'initiative' on domestic violence to be headed up by a department called Partnerships Against Domestic Violence. Now just take a look at the supposed "Facts About Domestic Violence in Australia" that underpinns this departments philosophy on domestic violence. Here is a exerpt: In 1996 the Australian Bureau of Statistics surveyed 6,300 Australian women for the Women's Safety Survey. The survey asked women about their experience of actual or threatened physical or sexual violence and found that in relation to violence by a male partner" 6,300 WOMEN!!!! What the hell happened to the survey on 6,300 MEN!!!!! Read the exact document here Regards Masc"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/04/1619222.shtml

Would a man get a fair trial from this judge.?

D · 5 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

MrDave writes *"Would a man get a fair trial?

In our culture today men are not allowed to denigrate women, but women compete with each other in their ridicule of men ... In our culture today whites are not allowed to comment about blacks, but blacks can say, well, pretty much anything ... This story in the _NY Post_ combines both of those ironies. http://tinyurl.com/dgxe ... As you read it, wonder, 'Would a white man get a fair and objective trial from this judge?'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/04/2253240.shtml

Open Letter Protesting Canadian Feminists' Demands for Censorship

Steve · 5 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I have sent a lengthy letter to the Honorable Jean Augustine, Secretary of State (Multiculturalism) (Status of Women), to protest Status of Women Canada's recent publication that calls for censorship of men's activists and organizations. You can view the letter as a href="http://www.imparl.com/mensactivism/docs/canada20030604.pdf">PDF file here, or in href="http://www.imparl.com/mensactivism/docs/canada20030604.htm">HTML format here. I hope other men's activists will write letters protesting this advocacy research and the Canadian federal government's funding of it. My letter is an open letter, so feel free to use it for your activism if you find it helpful. I'd appreciate an attribution if you do. Thanks.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/05/0115202.shtml

Research shows that men work longer than women

Adam · 5 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Chas writes "Men are now expected not to stray too far too often. Out-of-home leisure - all-day weekend rounds of golf, days at the dogs - now has to compete with the new demands placed on men by their wives and children.

Is this true, and if so, is it a good thing?

Bettina Arndt is an Australian journalist who regularly examines men's issues and in the process frequently runs foul of certain feminists. In this article, in Melbourne's "The Age" newspaper, she discusses recent research which shows men generally work longer hours than women in paid and unpaid employment and have far less leisure time than they used to. Read the article here. The online reaction is worth looking at too."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/05/1613248.shtml

But it's supposed to be about fairness, isn't it?

Adam · 5 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Gonzo Kid writes "From the `Things to make ya go hmmm Department:" I find the last line in this whole story very revealing, to wit: "Asked whether she continued the struggle out of a desire for vindication, or in revenge, she said, "A little of both." That's right, you greedy female. Go after the kids from the second marraige. Well, in Boston, it doesn't even end with death, does it?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/05/1618213.shtml

Office of men's Health activism project.

Adam · 5 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Ron J writes "We now have 53 cosponsors. Write to your congressmen and Senators and keep this momentum going. Congressman Randy "Duke" Cunningham and Senator Mike Crapo have introduced companion bills which will establish an Office of Men's Health at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. This office would mirror the work of the existing Office of Women's Health, which has helped to save thousands of women's lives and has improved the lives of many more.

Write a letter to your congressmen and Representatives. Sign this online petition" The list of co-sponsors is copied below.COSPONSORS(53), ALPHABETICAL

Rep Baldwin, Tammy - 5/9/2003 [WI-2]

Rep Bishop, Sanford D., Jr. - 5/15/2003 [GA-2]

Rep Brady, Robert - 4/10/2003 [PA-1]

Rep Brown, Corrine - 5/1/2003 [FL-3]

Rep Christensen, Donna M. - 5/15/2003 [VI]

Rep Conyers, John, Jr. - 4/10/2003 [MI-14]

Rep Davis, Susan A. - 4/10/2003 [CA-53]

Rep Davis, Tom - 5/15/2003 [VA-11]

Rep Deal, Nathan - 4/10/2003 [GA-10]

Rep Foley, Mark - 4/10/2003 [FL-16]

Rep Ford, Harold E., Jr. - 4/10/2003 [TN-9]

Rep Fossella, Vito - 4/10/2003 [NY-13]

Rep Frelinghuysen, Rodney P. - 4/10/2003 [NJ-11]

Rep Frost, Martin - 4/10/2003 [TX-24]

Rep Garrett, Scott - 5/9/2003 [NJ-5]

Rep Gutierrez, Luis V. - 6/2/2003 [IL-4]

Rep Hinchey, Maurice D. - 5/9/2003 [NY-22]

Rep Hoeffel, Joseph M. - 4/10/2003 [PA-13]

Rep Holden, Tim - 4/10/2003 [PA-17]

Rep Holt, Rush D. - 4/10/2003 [NJ-12]

Rep Isakson, Johnny - 4/10/2003 [GA-6]

Rep Issa, Darrell E. - 4/10/2003 [CA-49]

Rep Johnson, Eddie Bernice - 4/10/2003 [TX-30]

Rep Johnson, Nancy L. - 4/10/2003 [CT-5]

Rep Kilpatrick, Carolyn C. - 4/10/2003 [MI-13]

Rep King, Peter T. - 4/10/2003 [NY-3]

Rep Lantos, Tom - 6/2/2003 [CA-12]

Rep LoBiondo, Frank A. - 4/10/2003 [NJ-2]

Rep McCotter, Thaddeus G. - 4/10/2003 [MI-11]

Rep McDermott, Jim - 4/10/2003 [WA-7]

Rep McIntyre, Mike - 4/10/2003 [NC-7]

Rep McNulty, Michael R. - 4/10/2003 [NY-21]

Rep Meeks, Gregory W. - 5/21/2003 [NY-6]

Rep Menendez, Robert - 4/10/2003 [NJ-13]

Rep Moran, James P. - 4/10/2003 [VA-8]

Rep Musgrave, Marilyn N. - 4/10/2003 [CO-4]

Rep Ney, Robert W. - 4/10/2003 [OH-18]

Rep Norton, Eleanor Holmes - 6/2/2003 [DC]

Rep Owens, Major R. - 4/10/2003 [NY-11]

Rep Pallone, Frank, Jr. - 4/10/2003 [NJ-6]

Rep Pascrell, Bill, Jr. - 5/1/2003 [NJ-8]

Rep Pickering, Charles W. (Chip) - 5/21/2003 [MS-3]

Rep Platts, Todd Russell - 4/10/2003 [PA-19]

Rep Rangel, Charles B. - 4/10/2003 [NY-15]

Rep Rogers, Mike - 4/10/2003 [MI-8]

Rep Saxton, Jim - 4/10/2003 [NJ-3]

Rep Sessions, Pete - 4/10/2003 [TX-32]

Rep Stearns, Cliff - 4/10/2003 [FL-6]

Rep Watt, Melvin L. - 4/10/2003 [NC-12]

Rep Weldon, Curt - 4/10/2003 [PA-7]

Rep Whitfield, Ed - 4/10/2003 [KY-1]

Rep Wilson, Joe - 4/10/2003 [SC-2]

Rep Wynn, Albert Russell - 4/10/2003 [MD-4]

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/05/1627208.shtml

L.A. Area Media Covers Lawsuit Against DV Shelters

Adam · 6 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Today, numerous media outlets are covering a lawsuit against 10 domestic violence shelters in LA County alleging they use state funds to discriminate against male victims. It has been on the radio and in various large newspapers, one of them being the San Bernardino Sun.

Marc"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/06/1522221.shtml

Men's Health Magazine

D · 6 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Marc writes "The June 2003 issue of Men's Health Magazine surprisingly contains an article on how the child support/custody system is devastatingly unfair to fathers. I've subscribed to Men's Health for about 10 years and have never seen them cover men's rights issues this honestly, with the exception of issues like circumcision and the huge disparity in funding for prostate cancer research compared to breast cancer research. I know a number of activists have written the Men's Health editor in the past and requested more coverage of men's rights issues. Maybe it helped after all. It would be good if we purchased the June 2003 issue of Men's Health and even wrote thank you letters to the editor to send the message that we want more coverage of these issues.

Marc"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/06/1713203.shtml

Outlining women's issues despite the relevance

Adam · 6 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes " The Associated Press has an odd propensity for outlining issues relevant to women despite the relevance of the data (or study). In this article, one would read the headline and assume that increased driving speeds are killing women. However at the end of the article it states that "highway deaths may be increasing for women but nearly 28,000 men died in automobile crashes in 2001, compared with more than 13,000 women. Obvioulsy many factors contribute to this disparity (such as more men on the road driving), but to frame this study as a isssue relevant to women while more than double the amount of men are dying on the roads illustrates a common yet slight double standard in contemporary journalism. Post how you think the headline would read if the genders were to be reversed..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/06/1523211.shtml

Ask Ads 3

Adam · 6 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This week, I'm posting a requested essay from one of our regulars, I think you'll find it interesting. Click the old "read more/post comments" to read it.What's wrong with Woman-Bashing?

Having already expressed my own personal distaste for what some commentators call 'woman-bashing' that appears on some of the Men's Activism websites, I must stand up for those who wish to express these views.

Question: Is it not the inalienable right of every individual in a free and democratic society to hold and express his (or her) views? After all we have seen over three and a half decades of feminist 'male-bashing'! OK, you may argue that just because women bash men, men don't have to bash women, that two wrongs don't make a right. Fair enough, however, the airing of views no matter how extreme, and potentially distasteful to us as individuals, are part of the rich fabric of our society. We may wish to argue with them, ignore them or scorn them – that is also part of our right. Let us be mature and adult enough to exercise that right. The watchword of freedom has always been vigilance ! Surely, we are intelligent enough to recognise and speak up against that with which we disagree? If we are not – then why does the Men's Movement exist?

I would hate to see the Men's Movement develop a 'Guy-speak' the equivalent of political correctness. The Men's Movement should not adopt a single philosophy of what is bad or what is acceptable. Just as there are various hues of feminism, there are likely to be a myriad of hues of masulinism, however, the core objectives of the movement will remain pretty much stable, and this will form a reasonably firm consensus.

We must also not fall into the trap, that feminists are so fond of setting, of believing that every criticism of feminism is 'misogyny' ! For too long we have been stifled by this argument. When the views of (men and) women are of the feminist hue, then we are entitled to disagree and criticise. Feminism has sought to identify itself with all women since its inception.

[The argument that the current Neo-Marxist Women's Movement sprung up from a long tradition of women's protest does not wash with this writer. What we are seeing is an extension of Socialism, not the Suffragettes!]

Given the short-term advantages that feminism has bestowed on women, it is no surprise that a great many women will embrace this dreadful creed and yet more will utilise the tools of feminism to manipulate situations to their own advantage. At the end of the day, very few women actually stood up against feminism. This does not conveniently forget the fact that many men, seduced by the prospect of copious amounts of responsibility-free sex, also signed up to the early promise of feminism. They little realised that 'equality' was another word for ‘domination’. The difference now is that most of the men have wised-up. The women are taking a little longer to get the message and are trying to hold on to the unfair advantages. To achieve this many women are happy to go along with the misandry our society condones. After all they have a mechanism, and a system of social sanctions, that absolves them from all of the consequences of the mistakes they make in their life-choices and personal inadequacies….blame men!

The cult of ‘female victimhood’ is widespread and most pervasive, and although not every single woman on the planet subscribes, it is almost universal in Western Society. By this acknowledgement it is sometimes difficult to separate ‘women’ from ‘feminism’. If women wish to utilise the tools of feminism then they should be tarred with the brush of feminism – and be subject to criticism accordingly.

Concurrent with this myth of female victimhood is the myth of ‘male demonisation’, which holds men responsible for almost all of the evils that befall women in the world. From their early school days boys are taught a feminist view of the world where they are ‘guilty by birth’ of all of the great social evils of society. This has resonance with the concept of ‘original sin’ expounded by the Catholic Church in the Middle Ages. This conditioning continues into adult life where our gender-biased media and feminist societal norms further reinforce the fallacy of male ‘wickedness’ to elicit the correct patterns of speech and behaviour from them. Political correctness is so ingrained in our culture that many responses are like conditioned reflexes. This is what is described by the Psychiatric community as Psychological Abuse. How can we then castigate those men who, in their own personal anger and resentment, after years of psychological abuse stand up and answer back? Remember, misogynists are made, not born!

All in all, the message is really quite simple; if women do not want to be ‘bashed’ by angry men – then they should ditch their feminist practices and start showing a little respect and consideration.

Thunderchild.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/06/1529247.shtml

Deceptive women

Adam · 7 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Caeruleus Flamma writes "This is an article from yahoo that, I think is pretty good. Mostly it discusses Hillary Clinton Which naturally shrewd and shark-like operator won fame, power and certain riches on a platform of pity - posing as the pathetically abused victim of one of the world's most powerful men?

A. Monica Lewinsky.

B. Jayson Blair.

C. Hillary Clinton (news - web sites).

The correct answer is - you knew this was coming - D. All of the above."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/06/1531213.shtml

OMG! MSN presents an article on fatherhood!

Adam · 7 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

ppmnow writes "Very nice article (remember to check and remove any spaces!)- written by Bruce Linton. Can't believe MSN actually posted this. Could it be...pressure? I would prefer fairness, understanding, equality. Maybe they're starting to listen afterall. I damn well hope so!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/07/1834232.shtml

TV for Men? Maybe

Adam · 7 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

LeMorteMark writes "I just learned that the cable station TNN, will become SpikeTV. It appears they are trying to market this as "TV for Men". I am looking forward to seeing this channel but when I checked out the website, it looked more like a station for reruns of cancelled shows than a "Lifetime for men". Still its a step in the right direction. They should have a couple of shows that focus on men's news and politics. Maybe a news program anchored by Glenn Sacks or a TV version of "families under siege". I would be more interested in that kind of stuff than just seeing more stereotypes of guys belching and watching football. Here's the website: Spike Tv"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/07/1835245.shtml

NCFM on His Side with Glenn Sacks

Adam · 7 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tatis writes "An influential Canadian ministry has accused American and Canadian men's and fathers' organizations of "hate propaganda" and has issued recommendations which could threaten the Canadian groups with prosecution and jail.

Marc Angelucci and Ray Blumhorst of the National Coalition of Free Men, one of the groups targeted by the report, will discuss this threat and NCFM's struggle for men and fathers on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles at 11 PM on Sunday, June 8. To listen to the show live via the Internet, go to Listen Live."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/07/1837203.shtml

Child Tax Credit

Adam · 8 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal writes "The Washington Post printed my letter about the child tax credit, one of the many divorce subsidies for women in the IRS code."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/07/2357241.shtml

Misandry at askmen.com

Adam · 8 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

hurkle writes "askmen.com's current newsletter features a joke about a mood ring that revolves around accepting female-on-male violence as funny. Feel free to let them know how you feel about it at newsletter@askmen.com"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/07/2356217.shtml

Global women flood local dating market?

Adam · 8 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

There's one hell of a interesting discussion going down over at the Ifems forum, so check it out!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/07/2353233.shtml

Boys More Demanding, Even in Womb

Adam · 9 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes ″

The article includes the cute zinger: "Men start pushing women around even before they leave the womb." Oh, ha ha. It is to laugh.

Please inform the editors that they shouldn't give-in to the urge to man-bash. editors@healthscoutnews.com, jhelmer@healthscoutnews.com"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/07/2359208.shtml

NH College Costs Bill Sidelined

Adam · 9 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Code Monkey writes "In New Hampshire a bill was proposed in the state legislature that would prohibit the family courts from requiring divorced parents to pay college costs for children over the age of 18. The bill's primary sponsor, Rep. David Bickford, proposed it after a Dover man was jailed for 43 days when he couldn't come up with almost $17,000 to pay for half of his daughter's private university tuition. Proponents of the bill say it's unfair to force divorced parents to pay college costs when the same isn't done for married parents. Unfortunately, the bill has been referred back to commission and won't be re-introduced again until next year. Read the Foster's Daily Democrat news article."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/09/1640257.shtml

The War of the Roses Redux

Adam · 9 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

radikal writes "I know that this story is a bit old, but no one seemed to have mentioned it. A wife has been accused of trying to render her husband scents-less."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/09/1642256.shtml

International Men's Health Week (June 9-15, 2003)

Steve · 9 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Around the world, June 9-15, 2003 is being celebrated as href="http://www.menshealthweek.org/imhw/imhw.htm">International Men's Health Week (IMHW).
Check href="http://www.menshealthweek.org">this page, and your local public health department or ministry for information about local events planned for this week. Even if there are no local events in which you can participate, try making one personal resolution this week that will help you improve your health. Best wishes for a great, healthy week!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/09/1721223.shtml

Erin Pizzey's Response to Feminist Hate List

D · 9 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The other day columnist Ted Byfeild opined as to why he wasn't on the 'Hit List' or 'Hate List' which ever you prefer. Erin Pizzey had the time to read his article and wrote a response to his column. Hopefully the Edmonton Sun will have the courage to print the letter, until then I will post the letter on the 'post comments section' and I recommend that you pass it along as far and wide as you can. For more on Erin Pizzey travel here."I founded the first shelter in the world for victims of domestic violence in 1971 (Chiswick in London). I said then that domestic violence was not a gender issue both men and women can be violent but as you will see from the attached article, my evidence was censored by the emerging feminist movement that hi jacked the subject of domestic violence and distorted the statistics. I toured Canada with Senator Ann Cools and I came away disturbed and appalled at the damage that has been done to families, to fathers and to children by this evil movement. I work internationally and travel to many countries but what concerns me is the apathy of the people of Canada. Why have you allowed a small handful of powerful women to destroy the fabric of your society? My mother was born in Portland near Ottawa, I went to school in Montreal, I came away from Canada saddened, perplexed and ashamed of Canadians who could allow such an unjust persecution to continue. The sick joke is there never was a 'women's movement' it was always a Marxist/communist movement and the idea was the planned destruction of the family. In order to achieve this it was first necessary to disenfranchise men from their partners and their children and then to force the women out to work. Nowhere else in the world have I seen the fulfilment of this plan more successfully accomplished than in Canada and now you are implementing a 'hate list.' I would be proud to be added to this list because those of us on the list are the prophets who have been warning the people of Canada to stop sleeping and wake up before it is too late.
Erin Pizzey"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/09/205216.shtml

Custody Court Massacre

Adam · 9 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "I read this article on Strike The Root:
Custody Court Massacre -- Bernard Chapin 'The thing I don't understand is how the guy in the story was persuaded into marriage in the first place. He went to the court thinking that his life would be changing for the better, but now he found that his life was over. "I'm going to jail" he told me on the phone. I argued with him and said that wasn't possible, but after speaking with somebody who does testimony on the behalf of fathers, I discovered that jail time could well be a likelihood for his failure to pay. Robert summed up the proceedings: "The judge had heard this all before. American man takes advantage of innocent immigrant girl. He'll have to pay and pay and pay." Only you can't get 60 grand from a man who's down 40'. "

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/09/1645259.shtml

MEN'S GROUP.... WITH A DIFFERENCE

Adam · 10 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Chas writes "Here is a report of a group of men in Melbourne, Australia, who regularly get together for a meal in a pub. The purpose of the group is to talk crap... just like women do. And to have fun and time together as good mates in a men-only setting.

Starting with 10 members there is now a waiting list of 69 to join this "Reclaim the Pants" group. Each of the men wears a colour patch which becomes his name for the night.

Sounds like a load of fun! I love the way the group pokes fun at the way men and women communicate, 'getting in touch with your inner female' crap, the implied mockery of 'Reclaim the Night' movement in the group's name, "Reclaim the Pants'.

Maybe this is something to consider for future Men's Groups?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/09/1647246.shtml

Fathers' rights victory in Canada

Adam · 10 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

nutboy writes "Some good news for fathers in Canada. In the province of British Columbia, a sexist law which barred men from having any rights re the naming of their children, has been struck down.

What I find interesting is that the details of the couple mentioned seem very similar to those of a B.C. couple in which the man was falsely accused of rape by the woman, and had to prove his innocence. Perhaps someone can look into this."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/10/1539248.shtml

Martha Stewarts Parody Site

Adam · 10 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

mdcwnt writes "Martha Stewart posts an open letter on her new site MARTHATALKS.COM while a parody of the very same site is making waves on the internet. If you enjoy internet parody visit http://www.marthastewarttalks.com for a good laugh!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/10/1540252.shtml

Girls under Pressure !

Adam · 10 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Take a look at this article bemoaning the fact that teenage girls from the UK are under increasing pressure to succeed in exams, life etc.

Notice how the 'pushy mum' is mentioned and how magazines 'indirectly influence what men find attarctive"

comments please

ThunderChild"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/10/1546200.shtml

deadbeat dad - he was only POW - doesnt matter

D · 10 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

madman writes ""Deabeat dad" arrested after returning from POW experience

He was POW in Kuwaiti- he returned-now he is POW of the insanity here-http://www.lewrockwell.com/orig4/roberts-carey2.ht ml"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/10/209229.shtml

Stop Prisoner Rape

Adam · 11 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Stop Prisoner Rape
http://www.spr.org/

Their campaign is to pass THE PRISON RAPE REDUCTION ACT OF 2003 (H.R. 1707)

I was very heartened to see this organization.
Usually men being raped in prison is considered something which is laughed-at as hilarious."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/10/1548226.shtml

Another Female Gets Away With Murder...Sort Of

Adam · 11 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "
This news story is significant because one, it shows that a woman will probably get the lesser charge of manslaughter rather than murder when she deliberately kills a man in a manner like this.

And two, it suggests speculation that one of the factors that caused this man's violent brutal death was the social conditioning now in vogue that a man will never ever hit a woman no matter what she does. Did social conditioning in regards to violence against women suppress the natural human instinct to defend one's self against a violent physical attack?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/11/1856205.shtml

"Evidence" not required for sex discrimination law

Adam · 11 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "In a unanimous decision the Supreme Court lowered the standard for discrimination suits to be presented before a jury. "Direct evidence" which requires proof based upon personal knowledge or observation, "which can be difficult to produce" has been replaced with "sufficient evidence" for a jury to conclude that discrimination was a motivating factor for any employment practice.
"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/11/1857228.shtml

Sacks Criticizes 'Move-Away Moms'

Adam · 12 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tatis writes "Men's issues columnist and radio talk show host Glenn Sacks examines move-aways and the damage they cause children in his latest column, "New Study, Case May Help California Children of Divorce Retain Bonds with Both Parents" (Pasadena Star-News & Affiliated Ppaers, 6/5/03)"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/11/1859224.shtml

MANN Chat: Improving Men's Health, One Man at a TIme

Steve · 12 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This week's MANN chat will be held on Wednesday night (6/11), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location.
Tonight's topic will be "Improving Men's Health, One Man at a Time." Around the world, June 9-15, 2003 is being celebrated as href="http://www.menshealthweek.org/imhw/imhw.htm">International Men's Health Week (IMHW). Being aware of our health and how we men can improve it seems like a very good thing. However, there is some debate among men's activists concerning whether we need special governmental initiatives, offices, or programs to promote men's health. Some men feel very strongly that we need an href="http://www.menshealthoffice.info">office of men's health in the government. Other guys want to limit government involvement in health care matters, and emphasize each man's responsibility for his own health care. (See the first comment href="http://www.mensactivism.org/article.pl?sid=03/06/09/1721223&mode=threaded">here.) How do you feel about this issue? Grab a healthy beverage and snack, and join your fellow men at tonight's chat to see what each of us can do to improve his health.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/12/0018213.shtml

"The Lowest Moments in Advertising"

Adam · 12 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Kyle Knutson writes "The June 9, 2003 print edition of Adweek Magazine , features a cover story entitled, "The Lowest Moments in Advertising", which highlights the worst of the worst (supposedly) in advertising history. Surprisingly enough (ha!), the bitterly misandrous Progressive Insurance "voodoo doll - castration" ad didn't make the list. You can let the Adweek editors know how inexcusably remiss they are by sending your letters to letterseditor@adweek.com."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/12/1627204.shtml

Progress on Attitudes

Adam · 12 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal writes "Linda Chavez' latest column shows that some are waking up to mothers' role in fatherlessness. She talks about women's attitudes about whether a father is needed; but she doesn't mention that most divorces are initiated by women, nor that 40 percent of divorced mothers interfere with children seeing their fathers. Still, it's progress.

"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/12/1628229.shtml

Men's Rights Martyrs Rising

D · 12 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Rember this man come father's day. Or any other day we celebrate "Individual Rights". He's willing to sacrifice everything he has in order to fight the corrupt state of affairs. READ HERE.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/12/1757218.shtml

Male sweat relaxes women

Adam · 12 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Philalethes writes "According to Nature , 'Male underarms relax women and may make them more fertile.' Just thought we ought to know. Can we forward this to that 'Explain to me again why I need a man' bumpersticker babe?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/12/1631219.shtml

"Guy TV" in a women's popular culture?

Adam · 13 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "A must read! If you haven't already heard, "Guy TV" is on its way. Unfortunately, it seems that it will be somewhat stereotypical in that it will cater to the base level of men. The article has some surprisingly interesting statements in it, such as: "a male-focused channel will help rectify an "overemphasis" of women's issues in popular culture" - "Men are the new women, in terms of research. They're very trendy" - Judith Kegan Gardiner, author of "Masculinity Studies and Feminist Theory: New Directions," said that the channel offers an escape for men at a time when they appear to be under attack as more women are graduating from college and growing in economic power. "Many men feel they don't have the earning power or job security they previously had," Please comment, and lets contact this network immediately."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/12/1634245.shtml

African Men Against Female Circumcision?

Adam · 13 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Philalethes writes "According to a new report, 'Most male Sudanese college students report that they would prefer to marry a woman who has not been "circumcised," a finding that contradicts the traditional belief that so-called female circumcision increases a woman's chance for finding a husband.' Wait a minute: I thought men -- male lust, male preferences, male cruelty -- were behind this cruel practice? Okay, so maybe it's declining, and good riddance; but as usual, not a word about male circumcision, which is at least as prevalent in the same culture -- but not, apparently, worthy of any concern."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/13/168254.shtml

Sacks' New Column Defends Abused Man's Lawsuit

Adam · 13 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tatis writes "Men's and fathers' issues columnist and radio talk show host Glenn Sacks defended male domestic violence victim Ray Blumhorst and his recent, highly publicized lawsuit against 10 LA County domestic violence shelters in a new Los Angeles Daily News opinion column."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/13/1611251.shtml

Newstory "softens" Little League mom attack

Adam · 14 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "Just another example of the double standard in the media based upon gender here. This a sympathetic article the Boston Globe ran on a mother who attacked and kicked an 11 year old boy at a little league game. The paper is highly sympathetic to the defense attorney's arguments here; in fact it is the basis of the entire article. If the gender were to be reversed here, a father would likely be portrayed as a monster that should be locked up until trial based on a "dangerous hearing." This woman was released on her own recognizance... trust me, this just doesn't happen for men in MA."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/13/1613224.shtml

Men's Issues Hitting Primetime!

Adam · 14 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Mark writes "I'm not sure if anyone saw lately but Hannity and Colmes on Fox News had a segment on anti-boy bias on Monday of this week and Scarborough Country on MSNBC had a segment on anti-male bias at the NYTimes tonight (Friday). Warren Farrell was tonight's guest and Dr. James Dobson was Monday's.
For the record, both men had a chance to speak out and Hannity and Scarborough (especially) openly and emphatically agreed."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/14/1145204.shtml

Men and women bargain differently

Adam · 14 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "A new study found that men routinely ask for more money than do women in salary negotiations. The study found that the two sexes take radically different tacks as they bargain. The feminist response: Instead of comparing men's and women's negotiating skills, it might be better to examine "gendered" perceptions in the workplace. For example, if women are less greedy about salary than men, why are women not perceived as being better for the organization? Hmmmm...?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/14/1148201.shtml

Same sex marriage, thinking outside the box

Adam · 15 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

zenpriest writes "Someone, I think it was Thunderchild, recently commented about "thinking outside the box." Here is what I think is an excellent example. Canadian courts have essentially decreed same-sex 'marriage' to be legal. (BTW, I could not find this guy's archives, so this link has a one week shelf life.) A sexual relationship is already not part of the marriage contract (with marital rape laws and all that) (see also: "Why your wife won't have sex with you")
So here's the deal - any of you guys want to marry me? I can be the wife and refuse to have a sexual relationship with you, we can pool our resources, live frugally, and retire in 5 years. Any takers?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/15/175250.shtml

Happy Father's Day!

Adam · 15 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Nancy writes "Honoring Fathers on this Father's Day."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/15/178206.shtml

A Father Gets A Break....Finally

Adam · 15 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes " At last a father gets a break from the law on the accidental hyperthermia death of his child he left in a van. There have been a couple of reports recently about women who did the same thing and and didn't get prosecuted either.

So maybe the law is finally starting to view men and women equally? Let's hope so.

Anyway....Happy Father's Day!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/15/179241.shtml

Washington Post covers boy soldiers

Adam · 16 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "Great! About bloody time! Boy Soldiers Toting AK-47s Put at Front of Congo's War: Wonder when the UN will take this seriously? Relatedly, just today for Father's Day, also from the Post: Making Do Without Dad: and At Least 14 Children Will never Meet Dad:
sigh*... Happy Father's (Fatherless) Day, guys."*

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/15/1715216.shtml

Bashing Men to Celebrate Father's Day

Adam · 16 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Mark writes "Burlington Coat Factory has taken an interesting approach to attract female shoppers for Father's Day...bashing dad, of course!
In a new TV ad dad - of course chubby, sloppy and balding - messes up the laundry and messes up dinner while mom and the kids look on with condescention.
I am not sure if there is a link to this ad on their company website but I am sure there is a "contact here" link."
Anybody else seen this?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/16/1157243.shtml

Moms with no pregnancy, lesbian fathers

Adam · 16 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

zenpriest writes "Is that cracking sound I hear the camel's back giving way? In this historic week: in addition to Canada declaring same sex marriage to be the unlegislated law of the land, Joan Lunden has proven that the inconvenience of going through pregnancy is not required to be a mother (go to any search engine and type in "Joan Lunden surrogate"), and NZ PM Helen Clark has decreed that lesbians can be "fathers."
By my count, that makes 4 of the 5 major English-speaking countries which have declared surrender to the radical paradigm in the past week. I can be a mother if I have the $$$ to hire a surrogate, Ellen DeGenerate or Rosie can be the "father", in Canada I can marry any of you guys, and in the UK women are going to be pushed to work so the village can raise their kids. Is the war over yet?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/16/1159241.shtml

Simone de Beauvior's feminism

Adam · 16 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

zenpriest writes "Most of you by now are probably familiar with Simone de Beauvior's famous pronouncement that no woman should be allowed the choice to stay home and take care of her children, because too many women would take it. Well, it seems that her disciples are in positions of enough power in the UK to decree that this will be so.

"The call for mothers to work is made in a 76-page document from the Women and Equality Unit, which is responsible to Trade Secretary Patricia Hewitt."

In the interests of leveling the playing field, let's all get behind Hillary for president and let her also implement the priniciple that the "village" can raise children better than their mothers can."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/16/122219.shtml

Help !!

D · 17 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Thunderchild writes "Can anyone help me with an academic reference ?

I am writing a letter to a local newspaper which has printed a very biased view of domestic violence and I am looking for the study/studies where the attitudes of young men and women were quoted.
I remember that one of the tags was that young men thought that when a woman 'led a man on' he should not be charged with rape !!

Please help

ThunderChild"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/17/0012212.shtml

Men are DV victims too !

D · 17 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Thunderchild writes "Well, I never thought I'd see this in the UK !

The content may leave a lot to be desired, but the fact that it exists is a huge step forwards. The agitating obviously works !

READ HERE.

Respect,

ThunderChild,

"Die Gedanken sind Frei !""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/17/0026203.shtml

Cathy Young: "In abuse, men are victims, too"

D · 17 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes ″

This article was prominantly featured in the Boston Globe and addresses many issues that are relevant here. Cathy Young has been doing an excellent job getting the "word" out on true gender equity. The domestic violence establishment still denies or minimizes violence against men, and many DV advocates are hostile at any attempt to even raise the issue. This article is very important information as our judicial system (through 30 years of feminist jurisprudence) has become highly biased against men concerning DV matters."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/17/0037224.shtml

African American Fathers and the African American

Adam · 17 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Michae S writes "I would like to have this artice put in. Check it out."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/17/1514206.shtml

US News (Are Men Obsolete?)

Adam · 17 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

thrudd writes "If you have the print copy of US News & World report for 6/23/03, check out Jodie T. Allen's opinion piece. The article isn't online now, but it should be soon. Her archive is at http://www.usnews.com/usnews/opinion/jallen.htm. My jaw dropped when I saw this piece of misandry."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/17/1515246.shtml

sexist tv ads

Adam · 17 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "In the UK the problem of man-bashing tv ads is getting steadily worse. I was particularly angered by the adverts for Wall's "Carte D'ior" ice cream. To summarise one of these ads shows a man and a woman sharing ice cream in the back of a limosine. The woman is dissatisfied with the ice cream the man gives to her (it's not Carte D'ior) so she quickly kicks him out of the (speeding) limo and sends him spinning onto the ground and landing in a load of rubbish bins. As a result I would like to recommend Walls Ice Cream for the "companies to boycott" list on the "standyourground" site"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/17/1516258.shtml

MANN Chat: A Database to Track Feminist Hate Speech

Steve · 18 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This week's MANN chat will be held on Wednesday night (6/18), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location.
The topic will be "A Database to Track Feminist Hate Speech."
There is a lot of male-bashing speech and anti-male hate speech online. Feminist extremists in Canada are asking the Canadian government to href="http://www.swc-cfc.gc.ca/pubs/0662882857/index_e.html">monitor and censor men's activists. Let's beat them to the punch! Let's build a database of feminists' hate speech and male-bashing statements.
Join us at this important chat to develop a strategy for monitoring feminist hate speech and publicizing it. Invite a friend or two to join you! (Click on "Read More" below to see a list of some data elements that we can capture for the database.)Feminist_Hate_Speech_Online_Database

>

Category

[Affirmative Action]

[Boys/Young Men]

[Reproductive Rights]

>

[Censorship]

>

[Circumcision]

>

[Divorce]

>

[Domestic Violence]

>

[Education]

>

[False Accusations]

>

[Family Destruction Law]

>

[Fatherhood]

>

[Feminist Myths]

>

[Homosexual/Bisexual Men]

>

[Inequality]

>

[Law]

>

[Masculinity]

>

[The Media]

>

[Men's Health]

>

[Men's Organizations]

>

[Men & Religion]

>

[Science]

>

[The Draft]

>

[The So-called Wage Gap]

>

[Other]

>
Author1

>
Author2

>
Author3

>
Organization_Name

>

Organization_Type

>
[Government body]

[Political Action Committee]

>
[University]

>
[Publication]

>
[Feminist Organization with Physical Presence]

>
[Feminist Organization with Online Presence Only]

>
[Domestic Violence Program]

>
[Fundraising Organization]

>
[Non-organization/Individual]

>
[Other]

>
Title

>
URL

>
Type_of_Hate_Speech

>
[Original text]

[Archived text]

[Single Quotation]

[Collection of Quotations]

>
[Other]

>
Date_Hate_Speech_Appeared_on_Site

>
Date_Visited

>
>Comments

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/18/0457233.shtml

Arabian Paternity Rights

Adam · 18 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal writes "Here's a very tough issue for men's-rights activists. An American women isn't allowed to take her children out of Arabia. Try making the case for the father when he's a representative of such a repressive culture.

http://www.opinionjournal.com/editorial/feature.ht ml?id=110003636"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/18/1444250.shtml

Roe of "Roe Vs Wade" Reconsiders?

Adam · 18 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I heard rumours about this, but now it looks serious. To quote: "Norma McCorvey, the woman whose 1973 U.S. Supreme Court case helped make abortion legal in the United States, today petitioned to overturn the historic Roe v. Wade decision." Hmmm, I think you might want to look through the soc.men archives before you make a judgement.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/18/013220.shtml

Australia to consider equal parenting reforms

Adam · 18 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Chas writes "Australian Prime Minister, John Howard, is favourably considering proposals for changing child custody laws in favour of equal parenting provisions. Much of the impetus for change has come from within his own coalition government. "The Australian" newspaper reports that "Mr Howard told Coalition MPs yesterday he was "interested in the broad concept" of rebuttable joint custody – where the court presumes a child should spend equal time living with each parent unless there are strong reasons against it.

His spokeswoman said later that the Prime Minister was "mindful of the need for male role-models for children, and the desire for both parents to have continuing responsibility for their upbringing"." Read the full report here http://www.theaustralian.news.com.au/common/story_ page/0,5744,6615066%255E2702,00.html and note there is an online feedback link to the newspaper.

Watch this space!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/18/1446257.shtml

The Y chromosome: Fixing problems on one's own

Thomas · 18 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

For years we've heard gleeful titters from feminists about how defects in the Y chromosome can't be repaired. Every other chromosome is paired and can take information from its partner to correct faults. The Y chromosome, having no match, has been cast as inferior, unable to correct its damaged genes. It has even been stated that the chromosome and, therefore, men would disappear in about a million years.

Well knock me over with a feather. Guess what? That clever bit of genetic information that makes a man a man seems to have a way of solving the dilemma. It just works things out on its own! Problem solving on one's own can be difficult, of course, and in this case causes trouble in one out of every several thousand boys, but "'Y chromosomes really have a big trick up their sleeves,' said David Page of the Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Research in Cambridge, Mass."

Take a look and have yourselves a good laugh of satisfaction. The Y chromosome is not the decaying piece of trash that feminists would have us believe. It just solves problems in its own way.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/18/2031211.shtml

New to this site

D · 19 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

abourret writes "Hi everyone,
I don't really know where to post this...but,
I'm new to this site but not new to the ideas. Everything that is on here I have thought about at one time or another and I cannot help but to be filled with rage by the injustices men are faced with today. Everytime I hear one of my female friends brag that she has been pulled over 15 times for speeding and never gotten more then a verbal warning, everytime I hear just one more dictating, power-hungry feminist speak about the gender gaps, everytime I hear another court decision unfairly ruled in favor of a woman, I become angry and inspired to make change all in an instant. I look forward to being apart of this movement."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/18/2323219.shtml

The DLJ becomes a blog

D · 19 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "Yes, I've done the deal and made myself a blog. Check it out at http://dljblog.homestead.com/index.html

This should be easier for me and more widely-read than ever!

Yes, I'll still be publishing commentary and etecteras, as before. They'll be more immediate, since I'll be able to get things onto the website and announced in the blog whenever they show up rather than working by a strict deadline.

Today the big news is the Heritage Foundation report on feminism and marriage --check the blog for where to find it!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/18/2324228.shtml

English Men Starting To Strike Back

Adam · 19 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes ″

Seems there was a little 'dustup' in family court in England this past week. Over 500 demonstrators for justice protested the way the family court system over there, seems they are just as corrupt as ours, treat men in divorce and child custody.

I think we can learn from the FATHERS 4 JUSTICE that staged this demostration for human rights.

Also, their leader, Matt O'Connor will be interviewed by Glenn Sacks this Sunday night on HIS SIDE radio. Don't miss it."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/19/1716235.shtml

Fiebert's DV studies

Adam · 19 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Miletus Prime writes "Here is a site listing studies done by competent people and institutions on Domestic Violence. Notice the breakdown is essentially 50/50. Maybe the news media's requirement to report statistics is that they must be from incompetent people and institutions? http://www.csulb.edu/~mfiebert/assault.htm"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/12/1630244.shtml

Could it be?

Adam · 19 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Gonzo Kid writes "At this link , it appears that Australia has a proposal to make shared custody the default in divorce cases. Predictably, we have the femboy naysayers like Patrick Parkinson, a family law professor at the University of Sydney, who says, "It only really works when the parents can get along with each other." Hey, Pat! Ever consider that in that case the parent who refuses to get along - FOR THE SAKE OF THE CHILD - shouldn't get custody? Oh, but that would usually be the woman, wouldn't it? And that would go against your collosal suck-up to the Pheminists, wouldn't it?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/19/1718219.shtml

Chid Support Changes in Michigan

Adam · 20 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Bigg John writes "The Article here tells of how the Michigan Child Support System is being considered for an overhaul, basing support on the amount of parenting time granted to the non-custodial parent.

And here is a story on how a Father is asking to have the rules clarified, since they are so confusing."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/19/1720224.shtml

Million Dad March

Tom · 20 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Million Dad March on DC was a success. It felt good to be standing in front of the Capitol on Father's Day and make a public statement about Men, Fathers, and Father's Rights. The highlight of the day was Dr. Stephen Baskerville's address which you can now see on the web at http://www.standyourground.com/sb2.php. Just click the link and it will take you to a page that has some pictures and a link to open a windows media file of his brief and powerful talk.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/20/155249.shtml

Human rights are not for men

Thomas · 20 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

In this essay, which first appeared in the Daily Mail, Melanie Phillips lays into Britain's Home Office for selling out to feminists in their war against men. I think there are a few weaknesses in her logic, but on the whole it's a great essay. And I'm glad she's holding feminists accountable and not just blaming women and letting men off the hook.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/20/178235.shtml

Joint custody plan under fire

Thomas · 20 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Chas writes "Following yesterday's article about Australian plans to consider equal custody of children, predictable responses are now reported from women's organisations. American readers might like to respond online to these statements in the news report, and to set the record straight: "Sole Parents Union president Kathleen Swinbourne said overseas evidence showed the move was terrible for children, treating them like equally divisible pieces of property. "The research from America shows that it rarely works and kids are the ones that lose," she said.
Another comment: "Elspeth McInnes, convener of the National Council of Single Mothers and their Children, said California had been forced to amend its shared custody laws to prioritise child safety after "horrendous" problems with violence." Read the article here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/20/1728202.shtml

A bit o' humor from The Onion

Thomas · 21 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Here are a few humorous tidbits that relate, somewhat, to men's issues. Take a look at STATshot for "Why did we propose?" and "Father's Day Gift Way Shittier Than Mother's Day Gift" on the same page. I also enjoyed Hillary's Bestseller and the essay "You are a beautiful woman..." by a properly deconstructed, post-modern man.

If you can laugh, while the world around you is engaged in a gender war, ___ (I'll let you fill in the blank.)

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/21/0039237.shtml

Divorce As Revolution

Thomas · 21 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

In this essay, Dr. Stephen Baskerville briefly describes the war against fathers being waged by governments that increasingly encroach on our private lives. It's a good essay, with a lot of facts, but I have to say: I'm afraid he falls apart at the end. He recommends that fathers restore fatherhood with nonpolitical politics and a non-ideology "by re-creating the ordinary business of ‘civil society’ and private life," but he gives no details on how this might be done. With so much machinery stacked against fathers and husbands, their protests may have a mitigating effect, but they won't turn things around.

I've said it before and I'll say it again: Young men can protect themselves by refusing to marry and by doing whatever they can (within reason) to avoid becoming fathers. Save your money. If things turn around by the time you're 55-years-old or so, you still want children, and you have a decent home and income, there will be plenty of women of child-bearing age in the US and elsewhere, who will be happy to marry you.

Good luck, gentlemen. The government is at war against you.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/21/0440233.shtml

Check This Out

D · 21 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This one is even more important. Get writing or Ms. Boxer and Ms. Feinstein will get this legislation passed.

LINK Here.

Here is what I wrote:

Regarding SB127/HB262:

I am totally opposed to the idea of allowing the IRS to double tax non-custodial parents who get behind in their child support payments:

1) The money was not "earned" and therefore cannot be taxed; how can the government "create" earnings where there are none?

2) Most non-custodial parents are already giving more than half of their income to the custodial parent (in real dollars meaning before taxes are taken out);

3) Non-custodial parents are already being penalized by not being allowed to see their children or participate in the parenting of their children;

4) These bills fly in the face of the President's Fatherhood Initiative by making it even MORE difficult for fathers (75% of the time the non-custodial parent) to stay close to and involved with raising their children;

5) This proposed legislation is another "bright" idea of the feminist movement -- NOW -- the most destructive organization on the face of the earth when it comes to personal liberties and keeping families in tact; they won't be happy until they have half the population in jail;

6) Feminism has taken a bad turn (gone sour) and most of us (the original feminists of the sixties and seventies) disown the radicals we see these days -- these women don't want equality -- they want dominance;

7) Any legislator that votes for these absurd bills will be written off as viable candidates in the future by those of us who are watching; our numbers are legion; we are in contact across the nation;

9) The women's movement (as it was intended)is over; women like myself are alligning ourselves with our husbands, fathers, sons, brothers and male friends because we have sympathy for their plight;

10)If you don't believe that the public is sick of the feminists, take a look at New Hampshire, where the three most powerful women in the state were all defeated last election -- Governor Shaheen being one of them.

I'm a woman, a career woman, a mother, a grandmother, one of the first women to break through the ranks in the automotive industry back in the sixties. I called myself a feminist then -- but shun the title now. It's embarrassing. When I saw Ms. Shaheen (as she is now called) aligning herself with the feminists, I did everything in my power to get the word out and help defeat her in the last election.

While they disgust me, I can at least understand why women might be angry and vindictive toward men -- enough so to try to get this legislation passed.

What I don't understand is why men are turning on men.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/21/0754219.shtml

Girl has boyfriend beaten to death

D · 21 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

napnip writes "LINK HERE.

I can't wait to see the feminist spin that'll be put on this. Somehow it won't be the girl's fault. She's the real victim, right?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/21/0757242.shtml

Wendy McElroy has done it again!!

D · 21 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

SunCat writes "Wendy McElroy has done it again. In A Conscientious Objector to the Gender War she says that mens interests and womens intersts are not inverse. I think she got the Warren Farrell quote that "when only one sex wins both sexes lose."

Liked her "flat-Earther"ref (and what will future generations think of us?) but > the list scrolls on.

>
> But protesting men miss the point.

Not this humanist man. Men and women do share a common humanity. And that makes all the difference."
NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/21/080246.shtml

Divorced Dads Struggle to Remain in Kids' Lives

Adam · 22 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Glenn Sacks' powerful new column, "Many Divorced Fathers Struggle Desperately to Remain in Their Children's Lives," tells the story of Jim, a disenfranchised Michigan father who has been kept out of his daughter's life for so long he says he can't even remember what his little daughter looks like. Read it at http://www.glennsacks.com/many_divorced_fathers.htm"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/22/1830241.shtml

Sharing children in separated families

Adam · 22 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Chas writes ""The Australian" newspaper editorialises about the debate over equal custody proposals. You need to scroll down: it is the second editorial piece. Go here: http://www.theaustralian.news.com.au/common/story_page/0,5744,6617959%255E7583,00.html"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/22/1831253.shtml

Debating SOW Study in Canadian Parliament

D · 23 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

AFG writes "This video (found on www.fathers.ca) shows Canadian Alliance MP Betty Hinton blasting Heritage Minister -- and Liberal Party leadership candidate -- Sheila Copps with regard to the now infamous SOW report on men's groups. Look at the way Copps totally side-steps the questions by using the whole "women are still discriminated against" arguement.

Video Here

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/23/1717249.shtml

Women As Abusers

D · 23 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal writes "USA Today has broken the taboo on mentioning that women get violent as often as men:ARTICLE HERE

Unfortunately, the article implies that abuse is worse for women because men are stronger. They fail to note that there is no help for men, unlike all the programs for battered women. More importantly they overlook the fact that men will lose their kids if they leave an abusive wife."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/23/1720251.shtml

Leader of British 'Dads Army' on Glen Sacks

D · 23 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt O'Connor, leader of the British "Dads' Army" Fathers 4 Justice --whose spectacular acts of civil disobedience have garnered international attention--discussed his group's rapid rise and its upcoming plans on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles on Sunday, June 22. Also joining Glenn was Pat Lyons, a courageous English businessman who has vowed that he will go to jail rather than pay the Child Support Agency on behalf of employees who are being denied access to their children. To listen to the show archive, go to .

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/23/1848243.shtml

Is NYTimes Breeding Gender Warfare??

D · 23 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This is why I always question authority the media and anyone else for that matter. Artile Here

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/23/1912208.shtml

Warren Farrell Emails MANN Administration

D · 24 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Warren Farrell emailed the mann admin so I thought it was good for immediate release. I will place it as the first post in this section of the thread, so you can all have a look at it. It's in regards to the Slander Groups in Canada's feminist elite squad. Warren touches on some interesting points but I don't think he goes far enough in the damage that this feminist move can do to all of our freedoms.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/23/2253227.shtml

A USA Today Special

Adam · 24 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

It's a USA Today special, for all the wrong reasons. ppmnow writes "It's all starting to come together. Arm up, gentlemen, and take your weapons of pen and paper and begin the push full steam!
Mitchell A. Smith" Matt writes "USA Today quite out of character published this story on the "role women play in DV" They assert men do more physical damage to women in DV incidents. Well, the report needs some work, obviously, in terms of full disclosure. But it's a very good start. The false feminist beliefs around DV are directly challenged by name as such, too. Nice!" Mark writes " Less than a week after exposing the truth about domestic violence (that women are as likely to be aggressors as victims), USA Today is back to it's old self.
This gem of an article tells us that 92% of women fear domestic violence and 90% are concerned with equal pay for equal work.
Also, we are informed that women are very aware of cultural trends and that their feces doesn't stink and they are made of sugar and spice,... These ugh... "statistics" remind me how if you hype anything enough people will buy into it. Does anyone remember the months before 9/11 when everyone's biggest fear was the alarming "increase" in shark attacks? Actual data showed that the numbers were no different than before but the hype machine was telling us otherwise."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/24/1821241.shtml

Males have an extra brain gene

Thomas · 24 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Here's another article on the decoding of the Y chromosome. It seems this efficient (read "excess baggage removed") bit of genetic information that makes a man a man contains an extra brain gene. No one knows yet what function this gene serves, but "the gene must have played a key role in the evolution of mankind for it to exist in the genome today."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/24/1836230.shtml

Women about as likely as men to cheat

Thomas · 24 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

A survey conducted in Germany reveals that women are about as likely to cheat as men. No wonder the feminists are struggling to prevent men from having paternity tests done without the mother's approval. Also note that women are twice as likely as men to cheat frequently.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/24/1859226.shtml

MANN Chat: The Y Chromosome and Men's Activism

Steve · 25 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This week's MANN chat will be held on Wednesday night (6/25), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location.
The topic will be "The Y Chromosome: Its Role in Men's Activism."
Very recently, our manly Y chromosome has gotten a lot of good press. Scientists have discovered that "Y" can href="http://www.mensactivism.org/article.pl?sid=03/06/18/2031211&mode=threaded">fix its own genetic defects, href="http://www.mensactivism.org/article.pl?sid=03/06/24/1836230&mode=threaded">has an extra brain gene, and appears to be the href="http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/sci/tech/3000742.stm">toughest chromosome in the human genome. What implications do these findings have for men's activism? Can we use this new information to emphasize the good things about being a man, to really buy into manhood? Join us at this week's chat for some manly introspection and to explore how some fundamental characteristics of being male influence our activism. Invite some friends to join you!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/25/0558213.shtml

UK: No protection for men accused of fatherhood

Thomas · 25 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

With fatherhood having been deconstructed into something tantamount to a criminal offense, the government of the United Kingdom is now set to prevent men from using DNA evidence to prove their innocence. If a woman chooses to declare that you are the father of her child, she will be able to have your paycheck attached to take your income. If you try to prevent her from taking your money, the government will track you down as a "deadbeat dad" and imprison you.

Serves you right, guys. You've committed the ultimate crime in a matriarchy—you are in possession of a Y chromosome.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/25/1641250.shtml

Male DV Victims

Adam · 25 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Thunderchild writes "Here is another article, from The Times, about Male Victims of DV in the UK - it is dynamite !
Respect ThunderChild
Die Gedanken sind Frei"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/25/2321201.shtml

Bizarre murder trial? No.

Adam · 26 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "Look how our friends at MSN are covering this story

Note that the headline is: "Trial begins in bizarre traffic death". You can be sure it would not be that circumspect in judgment were the defendant male and the victim female (the reverse is true in this case).

Her lawyer stated in his opening that his client was "...hysterical, terrorized and confused." Um, excuse me? She had a dead or dying person on her car's hood which she got into and drove homeward after she had been drinking and drugging-- and this is how her lawyer makes her out to be? Can you imagine the same being used to describe a male perp and a female victim-- imagine this being said in a court under the same circumstances: "He was hysterical, terrorized and confused." It isn't imaginable, is it? It'd never happen.

Then, she called her friends to help her move the dead/dying man off her car and later dump his body in a park. They obliged her. Well, what's that saying, "Friends help you move, real friends help you move bodies"? Guess she has some real friends, all right.

Well, read the article for yourself. Wanna bet that no way in hell does she get the death sentence for it? Now had a man done this-- well, we know what they'd do to him. I am guessing she maybe gets 10-20, tops. Likely she'll be out in 8 if she even gets that much time. She'll be like the other women who kill men in Texas and all but get away with it.

I am never going to Texas. It seems to me it's too dangerous for men-- right up there with marriage and children."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/25/2327206.shtml

Playboy's Men columnist dies

D · 26 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Longtime Playboy columnist Asa Baber has died at the age of 66. He often used his column in Playboy to bring men's issues like the wage gap myth and male bashing some public attention. "We men are not the enemy," Baber told Oprah Winfrey's audience a decade ago.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/26/0310242.shtml

Straus Refutes DV Myths Again - Will the Media Lis

D · 26 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Code Monkey writes "Murry Straus publishes more research again on dating violence in college aged men and women, as described in this UNH press release. From the release:

> Straus says that while most of the assaults on dating partners by students are relatively minor, such as slapping and shoving a partner in anger, the rate of more dangerous assaults, such as punching, choking and attacks with weapons, although much lower, is still alarmingly high at 10 percent. Women assaulted their partners at about the same rate as male students did, Straus also found....The study also looks at the relation of the social context to crime, finding that a large percentage of students approved of slapping a partner's face in some circumstances. An average of 42 percent approved of a husband slapping his partner, while 76 percent said it was all right for a wife to slap her partner.

Please help to promote this study and get the media and public to accept the truth about domestic violence!"
NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/26/1720229.shtml

Increasing number of SAHMs (and a few civil words for men!)

Thomas · 26 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This article addresses the increasing number of Stay At Home Moms in the US. It focusses on the concerns of women but has some nice things to say about men and fathers. I particularly loved the ending, "Where will this lead? Not to Mommy Wars between moms who work and those who stay home, I hope, but toward a profound and shared recognition of the importance of mothering and of the husbands that give mothers the gift of choices."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/26/184222.shtml

Angelucci, Sacks Defend NCFM-LA Lawsuit

Adam · 27 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anon user writes "Marc Angelucci, president of the Los Angeles Chapter of the National Coalition of Free Men, and men's and fathers' issues columnist and radio talk show host Glenn Sacks defended NCFM-LA's sex discrimination lawsuit against 10 Los Angeles County domestic violence shelters in a recent opinion column in the Daily Breeze (Los Angeles. The column can be seen here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/27/1523209.shtml

Joe Scarborough does it again for us...twice

Adam · 27 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Mark writes "Joe Scarborough of MSNBC's Scarborough Country has become quite the leader in addressing men's issues lately. Within the past 2 weeks he has had feature stories on gender bias at the New York Times and discrimination against boys in school. On tonight's show are articles on a federally subsidized study on female arousal and one on...drumroll please...women being the PRIMARY AGGRESSORS in the majority of domestic violence cases."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/27/1525249.shtml

Proposed Australian Family Law reform

Adam · 27 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Chas writes "In the 'Canberra Times' (24/7/03) Sue Price challenges the myths and 'statistics' trotted out by opponents to proposed reforms to family law designed to support equal parenting and more equitable arrangements for fathers. She especially targets the position of Chief Justice of the Family Court, Alastair Nicholson, and points out the flaws in his arguments. She argues that, under present law, "...fathers are sidelined; considered unimportant to their children's wellbeing, apart from their ability to provide monetary support, and allowed to see their children only one or two days a fortnight." These developments in Australia will give courage to families in other jurisdiction. Read the article here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/27/1533227.shtml

Ask Ads 4

Adam · 28 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Alright folks, it's that friday feeling you can't get enough of, it's Ask Ads! rampant ego off you know how it goes by now. So ask some interesting questions huh?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/27/1951221.shtml

Lifespan gap narrows as men live longer

Adam · 28 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Rand T. writes "New findings by Britain's Continuous Mortality Investigation Bureau show that the gender lifespan gap is narrowing, and men may outlive women by the end of the century.

These findings cast doubt on the cherished belief of women's greater lifespan being a biological advantage.

The gender lifespan gap, being highly correlated with environmental factors, shows the new focus on men's health brought about by the men's movement is justified and should continue.

Two articles about the new data:

here
and
here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/28/1916259.shtml

Woman Abandons Children For Freedom

Adam · 28 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "How many feel that this woman, Sara Saga, couldn't have figured out a way to get herself AND children out of Saudi Arabia if everything she is saying about the father and his supposed abuse were REALLY true? Here's the latest."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/28/1918256.shtml

Australian Child Support Agency misleads

Adam · 28 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Chas writes "The federal government's Child Support Agency makes the front page lead story in today's (28/6) edition of "The Weekend Australian". The Agency is responsible for calculating and monitoring child support payments for more than 1.2 million separated or divorced parents [read fathers]. The newpaper's investigations shows that the agency has mishandled or ignored hundreds of threats of assault, murder and suicide by angry parents. This state of affairs has been uncovered by the newspaper's investigations. Elsewhere in today's edition of the paper (see separate post) sympathetic coverage is given to fathers caught up in the child support/separation for children whirligig. Read the lead story here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/28/1925243.shtml

Appeal by female magistrate against her sentance

Adam · 29 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original angry_young_men writes "Hey all, thought you might be interested in this story . It details the failed appeal by a female Australian magistrate (!) against her sentence for intimidating a male colleague. Get this pap from a female-inmate support-group mouthpiece: "She's experiencing the cruel and unusual punishment that every woman goes through in prison." Oh please - "cruel and unusual punishment" is intrinsically part and parcel of the female prison experience?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/28/1931214.shtml

Debunking The Femitwit Rape Gambit

D · 29 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "Resa LaRu Kirkland

has a very witty article, that, effectively debunks the radical feminist fear mongering mantra we have all been browbeaten with for so long. Doing some math concerning the falsehood of "a woman being raped every 6 seconds in this country".

The authorities should find this woman and give her some relief! She must be pretty damn sore by now. :)"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/29/169237.shtml

Fathers driven to suicide by Child Support Agency

D · 29 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Chas writes "This story reports one man's experience of Child Support Agency contact. It is used to illustrate the damage done to fathers by the laws governing child support enforcement. Within Australia, the male suicide rate in a single year is now four times that of the total number of Australian soldiers killed in the Vietnam conflict. Fathers' groups around the country claim at least three clients of the CSA commit suicide every day. "Jack" was almost one of them.Read the story here:

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/29/1614239.shtml

Another piece of hypocrisy

Adam · 30 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Thunderchild writes "Well, if you got hot under the collar about proposals to ban DNA testing without consent of both parents - this one will really make you steam ! Two women trying to prevent ex-partners from destroying IVF created embryos. Talk about hypocrisy!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/30/2041230.shtml

CBS "60 Minutes" talks about Title IX

Adam · 30 June 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes ″

The "Lace Curtain" (feminist tilted media bias) seems to be ripping at some of its seams, but only a little... "60 Minutes" did a story on Title IX. The report pointed out the gains women have made in sports since it was passed, and about the impact this has had on men's athletic programs - basically non-revenue generating men's sport programs have been eliminated on many campuses to meet gender quotas. Of course feminist groups are organized to oppose any reform to Title IX and their viewpoints were a big part of the news story. Title IX was created to stop gender bias, now it is used as a tool to eliminate men's sports despite student interest and participation levels - just to maintain gender quotas, and it is enforced by feminists interested ONLY in the well being of females. Lets support the cause and contact “60 Minutes” with good words for their effort…"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/06/30/2043246.shtml

Lifetime

D · 1 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

As far as boycotting particular companies, I have a problem with that. Only a small percentage of employees at a company (or the advertising executives they hire) are responsible for misandric advertisements, and boycotting could result in loss of business, and many innocent people losing their jobs. The only time I would boycott if is hatred of a particular group is a prerequisite for joining, or a high percentage of the members hate a particular group. Since it seems a very high percentage of NOW members are man-haters, I certainly wouldn't buy anything from them.

As far as boycotting Lifetime, they do have many programs that could appeal to men, such as movies with women many men admire. Also, they once had a movie produced called "Men Don't Tell". It features a man who is physically abused by his crazy, maniacal pig of a wife. She is played by Judith Light, who is a tall, menacing woman.

In a climactic scene near the end, she is yelling at him and hitting him. The little daughter runs up and says, "Mommy. Stop it! Stop it!" She then turns and starts hitting the little girl. To protect his daughter, he slugs his wife and knocks her out. My other e-mail address is mcbricker@webtv.net.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/01/0344228.shtml

Sacks Defends Divorced Dads in Newsday

D · 1 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks' latest column, "New Study Punctures Myth of Uncaring Divorced Dad" came out in New York Newsday last week and is now available at http://www.glennsacks.com/new_study_shows.htm>
The column discusses new research which shows that divorced dads are far more generous with their children than they are given credit for.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/01/0345242.shtml

The Death of Feminism ?

D · 2 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Thunderchild writes "I almost fainted when I read the headline on this one - content leaves a wee bit to be desired !http://www.guardian.co.uk/Distribution/Redirect_A rtifact/0,4678,2-989268,00.html

TC"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/02/1558259.shtml

Men Aren't Marrying Because They're.....

D · 3 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Mark writes "This article in the Baltimore Sun blames the immaturity of men for the declining marriage rates in America. Surprise, surprise...there is no mention of how women may in any way be responsible for this." Or the government for that matter.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/03/061213.shtml

Fatherhood

D · 3 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Thunderchild writes "It looks like the message is starting to get through in the UK. Article

TC"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/03/063254.shtml

Boys Poor Readers - Universal ?!?!

D · 3 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Thunderchild writes "Here's an article claiming that boys are poor readers is a universal phenomenon - I think the scource is UNESCO, so no surprises there then !

TC"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/03/065229.shtml

Alison Armstrong on Glenn Sacks

Adam · 3 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Philalethes writes "Highly recommended: If you didn't hear Glenn Sacks' program Sunday night (June 29), you can still catch it on his archive page for a few days.

'Educator and relationship guru Alison Armstrong, who has given workshops to thousands of women all over the United States, claims to understand men. Some quotes: "In my relationship courses for women a lot of women will say they want a man who wants a six figure income. I'll ask them if they know the percentage of men who earn a six figure income. It's maybe the top 5%. And then I'll ask them 'are you in the top 5% of all women?" ... "Men give women a lot more slack than women give men." ... "Women expect men to act like women--women can't see men for who they are. All they see are rude, hairy women. When a man doesn't do what a woman would do he's immediately in trouble."'

And my favorite: 'The more I'm willing to be responsible for, the more impact I can have in my own life.' I had to go back and listen to this again to make sure I heard it right. Nice to hear a woman willing to talk some sense."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/03/1543227.shtml

Goverment inquiry into child custody rights

Adam · 4 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Chas writes "The Australian Federal Parliament "will consider whether parents should automatically be given equal custody of their children if they split up and whether grandparents should have access rights in the event of a family breakdown.

Prime Minister John Howard announced yesterday that the Standing Committee on Family and Community Affairs will have until December to also consider whether the existing child-support formula works fairly for both parents given how much each contributed to the care of a child."

Notable in this enquiry is an investigation in to financial relief from Child Support payments for non-custodial parents who actively care for their children. Not reported in this item is the suggestion that fathers should be offered financial benefits for increasing their time with their children.

Read the report here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/04/1333233.shtml

Child Abuse

Adam · 4 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal writes "This editorial in the Boston Globe illustrates the lack of progress on child abuse, even after all these years. It's still not a criminal offense! Abusers don't go to jail. They just lose their kids for a short period -- sometimes. Why? Hint: the editorial shows that officials and the media won't even mention who is doing all the child abuse. If it were men, I suspect they'd tell us."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/04/1335251.shtml

Woman boss accused of putting boot in

Adam · 4 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

John Gardiner writes "Woman boss fooling around kicks male employee in the groin and creates serious injury. Check this out

This has got to go international. Maintain the rage! Make a noise. It demonstrates the sick and low attitudes held by women and public institutions towards men. An utter disgrace. This is a new low in female behaviour.

Fight the fight,
John"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/04/1329254.shtml

Ask Ads 5

Adam · 5 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This week, I've decided to talk about a topic that hasn't been discussed in a while, and that's choice for men or C4M as it's sometimes called. So let's hear your views.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/04/2123216.shtml

Mallard gets fifty years

Adam · 5 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original angry_young_men writes "Now this is what I call justice: A Texas woman who struck a man with her car, drove home and left him to bleed to death while wedged in the windscreen has been sentenced to 50 years in prison for murder. With a sentence of this magnitude, one could have expected the same penalty had the sexes been reversed; hence it shows us that, in sentencing, there exist at least some judges who don't discriminate by sex or gender but rather by severity of the crime."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/05/1825247.shtml

Montana provides free educations for the exonerrated

Adam · 5 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "MSNBC.com reports that Montana has enacted a new law that will require the state to provide free educations to anyone convicted in the legal system and then exonerrated by DNA testing. New Mexico is extending its DNA proof deadline to three years instead of one year to allow convicted felons to prove their innocence through DNA testing. "

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/05/1834256.shtml

Men could choose to get pregnant

Adam · 6 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original rage writes "Check out the following link and especially one of the last paragraphs :

"Surgeons in Saudi Arabia attempted a womb transplant in a 26-year-old woman in April 2000, but it had to be removed after three months because it suffered from blood clots and began to die. If implantable wombs become a reality in humans, they need not be confined to women. Some men might also be keen. "It's technically possible," said Prof Brannstrom."

Of course the article is mainly focused on women, but it appears clearly that such techniques could give a man the ability to carry a child . We are all waiting for ectogenesis and artificial wombs, but despite the articles already posted here, I'm very skeptical that these breakthroughs could occur before, say, fifteen years. And I think artificial wombs would be outlawed as soon as they would appear to cater for the claims of feminist pressure groups, as usual.

But if a man were given the opportunity to give life to a child by himself, it would be the end of feminism. And it's pretty sure this wouldn't be made illegal. Women control 100% of human reproduction these days. And that's why feminism is so hard to tackle. Because men depend on women, whereas women depend far less on men thanks to sperm banks. But if we can make our sons without resorting to a woman (remember the article stating that male stem cells can make eggs ?), we could attack more harshly feminism and destroy this ideology once and for all.

Your French brother,
Rage"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/05/1837205.shtml

Richard Hayden Marrow Donor Drive

Adam · 6 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "Richard Hayden is the listowner of the Abused Guys Yahoo Group, a support group for domestic violence victims active since 1998. Richard has been a source of much encouragement and support for both me and my activism efforts, and was instrumental in ensuring my research into the subject of DV for my book, "Friends to the End", was accurate. He was also among the first to "break the Pink Barrier" by publishing man-friendly DV works at the now-defunct Themestream website. If it wasn't for Richard there probably wouldn't be a DLJ. When I heard a few weeks ago he'd been diagnosed with leukemia, he also told me a bone marrow transplant could be his only hope. So I was determined to do what I could to help. The rest of this is in the "read more/post comments" section.The more donors there are, the more chances that Richard can find a match and continue his work with and for abused men.

How You Can Help:

If you have a website, go to here
and get the graphic and link for your site. Encourage your visitors to consider participating in the program by becoming part of the National Donor registry in their local area.

If you have a mailing list, or belong to any, tell them about the program and the Richard Hayden Marrow Donor Drive. Volunteer to participate yourself. The link at my site has information that can answer most of your questions, including a list of locations for testing, etc. across the US.

If there are a significant number of potential donors whose only barrier to volunteering is the cost of the test, I'll work with the foundation to establish funding, which is possible. Like so many other things the men's movement has attempted, this may be the first, or close to first, time this kind of thing has been attempted exclusively online. There are bound to be kinks to be ironed out, and unanswered questions, so if you've got questions, e-mail me at: dsrtlite@mindspring.com And I'll try to come up with an answer.

Meanwhile let me know if your group or website is participating by posting the graphic and the URL for the National Marrow Donor Program, and I'll include you in the list of participants in the upcoming press releases to the general media and the main page of the DLJ.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/06/1727217.shtml

No more state-funded circumcision in Florida

Adam · 6 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "The state of Florida has joined 10 other states by not providing state Medicaid funds for circumcision. You can read about the issue in The St. Petersburg Times . While circumcision is an accepted practice in many religions, in the US millions of boys are circumcised without their consent for what comes down to nothing but cosmetic reasons (since medical justifications for the procedure have long been disproven). The future sexual and psychological health of these boys is risked in what amounts to a double-standard that is still permitted by American society, and in my opinion, should be stopped."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/06/1729243.shtml

Men wrongly accused

Adam · 7 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original angry_young_men writes "Hello all, this article I found this morning:New laws designed to stop unsuitable people working with children have left many teachers wrongly accused and their reputations tarnished for life. Bettina Arndt reports. Sounds familiar."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/07/1642208.shtml

A Woman Gets It Right About Female Sexploitation

Adam · 7 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes " Here is a female columnist (in misandric ridden Canada no less!!!) who gets it right about older females who rape young underage boys. She points out the condescending hypocrisy of how female rapists are treated by the stupid judiciary as opposed to male sexual offenders. This article is a breath of fresh cool air from the far north."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/07/1644230.shtml

Patai Slams Academic Feminism on His Side

Adam · 7 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anon user writes "Former Women's Studies professor Daphne Patai, co-author of Professing Feminism: Cautionary Tales from the Strange World of Women's Studies, slammed Women's Studies for its hatred of men and fathers on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles on Sunday, July 6. To listen to the show archive, go to His Side Patai's targets included feminist "sexual harassment hysteria" and Women's Studies' relentless promotion of lesbianism."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/07/1645236.shtml

Petition the Government of Canada

D · 8 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Ray writes "Here is a petition;

I saw it posted at Men's News Daily, petitioning the government of Canada regarding hate speech. Read it for yourself. If you agree with its contents as I did, then sign it. Our brothers in Canada (and every other nation) need all the help they can get to protect them from the systematic misandry of governments that are biased against men."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/08/0453236.shtml

Real Men, Real Depression Chat

Steve · 8 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Men's activists are invited to the next chat at MaleDepression.com. The chat will take place on Tuesday, July 8, 2003, at 8:30 p.m. Central Daylight Savings Time. (That's Wednesday, July 9, 2003, at 01:30 GMT.), at MaleDepression.com's href="http://www.maledepression.com/chat.html">chat space, and the topic will be "Real Men, Real Depression." Real men do suffer from depression.
However, we don't always recognize it, and we rarely talk about it. Take a step toward changing that by joining our online chat, and invite some friends. (Click on "Read More" below to see more information about the topic.)In the United States alone, about 6 million men suffer from depression and other mood disorders. According to the href="http://www.nimh.nih.gov">National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH), as compared to women with the same conditions, men who suffer from mood disorders may experience the following symptoms much more frequently:

--abuse of alcohol or drugs,

--feeling frustrated, discouraged, angry, and irritable,

--violence,

--throwing themselves compulsively into work, hobbies, or sports,

--hiding depression from themselves, family, and friends,

--engaging in reckless behavior,

--taking risks, and

--putting themselves in harm's way.

Men also kill themselves four times as often as do women.

(For more information about NIMH's "Real Men, Real Depression" campaign, visit their Web page.)

We'll explore some of these characteristically male symptoms of depression and discuss why they can harm us. We'll also talk about the barriers that men encounter when they try to seek treatment, both cultural and practical.

Join us at this week's chat to ask questions, share information, or just get some friendly support from other men who struggle with mood disorders.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/08/0638229.shtml

The degradation of boys

Thomas · 9 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This is just sick. The boys who didn't want to participate in the fights were confined to their cabins. Girls didn't fight, but I wonder if they watched. Nine to 13 years old.

And here's an essay on the degradation of boys from anti-feminism.com.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/08/2318227.shtml

Government Hokus Pokus

D · 9 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Here is a short little write up on the state of things. The author points out exactly who really does benifite from 'divorce' and 'anti-male' legislation. I urge you to check it out.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/09/0359239.shtml

MANN Chat: The Degradation of Boys

Steve · 9 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This week's MANN chat will be held on Wednesday night (7/9), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location.
The topic will be "The Degradation of Boys." MANN recently reported about the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/article.pl?sid=03/07/08/2318227">degrading speech and actions that have been directed at boys. Why are such things happening to the next generation of male members of our society? What can we do to stop such abuses? Join us to identify and plan appropriate responses.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/09/1657219.shtml

De Coster Maligns the 20-something Male

Adam · 9 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Davii boy writes "Well, Karen De Coster seems to think that males should live to serve women. I wonder if the males she describes in this op-ed are products of a culture that hates men? It also seems to me that disrespect breeds disrespect, and speaking as a 20-something male with expired dreams of family life, the modern day female doesn't look all that appealing from a male perspective."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/09/1935246.shtml

A Touch of Sanity in New Zealand

Thomas · 10 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

It seems that the folks in New Zealand (and Australia) are starting to catch on. Consideration of fathers, who commit suicide after divorce and separation from their children, is terribly overdue, but at least it's finally being addressed.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/09/226210.shtml

Maureen Dowd can't hate men enough

Thomas · 10 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "This speaks for itself.

Letters to the editor are a good idea."

(Thomas writing now) This piece drips with hatred. Just one example is Dowd's statement, "Self-love as a survival mechanism: the unflinching narcissism of men may send women into despair at times" It seems the New York Times has learned nothing from its recent debacle over Jayson Blair. If anything like this were said about Jews, blacks, women—any group except men—the writer would be fired. In fact, it wouldn't make it into print in any publication masquerading as a serious medium.

You can contact the NYT at letters@nytimes.com.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/09/2212226.shtml

There Are Exceptions. I Hope. I Hope.

Thomas · 10 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This may come as a surprise to no one. If you're a man and a criminal, you might do society and yourself a favor by getting married. However, if you're a genius...

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/10/0412216.shtml

Support Shared Parenting Bill in MA

Adam · 10 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Mike Franco writes "
For anyone in MA (USA) who is interested in fairness, please help support Senate Bill 1075 for Shared Parenting which will be heard before the Joint Committee on the Judiciary, Thursday, July 24 at 1 p.m. in Room A1 of the Statehouse, Boston. To review the bill, please go to here. Several legislators across the state are sponsoring SB1075. Please help us bring attention to the bill by contacting your local representatives. The Fatherhood Coalition."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/10/1858202.shtml

Child support ruling - 'donor' up for payments

Adam · 11 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original angry_young_men writes "This should speak for itself: A VICTORIAN man who donated his sperm in the "usual and customary manner" - by having sex with a lesbian - has been found liable to pay child support."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/11/1635240.shtml

Standardized testing reveals big gap in writing

Adam · 11 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "Of course little is mentioned in the article (it would be the reverse if girls were behind). Girls are out performing boys in writing ability by large percentile differences. Federal focus on education has been to eliminate the small gap in math proficiency that boys have over girls, while girls are doing 20% BETTER than the boys (as tested in MA) in writing! Here is an actual quote from the article -"We're seeing it (boys doing poorly)in MCAS, SATs, reading and writing - It's a trend we need to pay attention to." A trend we need to pay attention to!!! What a stupid understatement, I'm sure that they will find a nice feminist solution to the problem. School systems must become boy friendly again and allow programs that interest boys. Right now masculinity is considered a pathogen, as the lesbian-feminist agenda continues to pummel normal and marginal boys into ignorant submission."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/11/1637208.shtml

Ask Ads 6

Adam · 12 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This week, I've decided to do something fun and dust off my 8-Ball to see some active service. Yep that's right, you ask the questions and I'll use the 8-Ball to answer, so ask away, and let's have some good questions ok?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/11/1644244.shtml

This Might Be Worth Referencing

Thomas · 12 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This article reports on research showing that men are far less likely (in fact not at all likely, if they think they can't get caught) than women to admit to fear. I post this because one of the most common arguments given by feminists, when they attempt to disregard domestic violence committed by women against men, is that if you ask a woman and a man, who have been victims of DV, if they are afraid of the perpetrator, the woman will say "yes" and the man will say "no."

The feminists claim that this shows that the man isn't really a victim, but they know that a man, even if he is afraid of a woman, is very unlikely to admit it.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/11/1846226.shtml

Computer program guesses sex of authors

Adam · 12 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Garth writes "Researchers have developed a computer program that can guess the sex of an author with 80% accuracy by simply reading their work. Surprisingly (or not), they have been denied publication on the grounds that their work is sexist. One critic states: "This whole rush to categorisation usually works against women." The researchers say they are "just reporting the numbers.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/12/210242.shtml

NCFM-DC member does radio interview airing 7/12

Adam · 12 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "Listen over the web at:
Live On Line

From:
here :

-- RADIO INTERVIEW --

NCFM-DC Member to Appear on Radio Show

Washington DC Chapter member Matt Campbell will appear as a guest on a Washington, DC area radio station this Saturday and Sunday, July 12 and 13. (Pre-recorded)

Mr. Campbell will be on radio station WFAX's "Mainstreet" show, with host Don Karnes and will discuss the chapter's recent press conference, "Voices from the Other Side of the Gender Debate", and other men's rights issues and concerns.

Mr. Campbell will also describe other recent chapter activity, including a rally in March to protest Martha Burk's appearance at a local feminist conference, attendance at The Million Dad's March on Father's Day, and development of the chapter's new expanded web site.

The "Mainstreet" show will be aired on Saturday, July 12 at 7:00 AM, 5:45 PM, and 9:30 PM, and again on Sunday, July 13 at 8:15 PM.

WFAX-AM is at 1220 on the AM dial."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/12/211232.shtml

How and why women kill

Adam · 13 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

zenpriest writes "Here is a perfect example of how women kill - covertly and indirectly - and why they kill - because they don't like the way they are being treated. Notice also that it took almost 5 months for the authorities to file charges against her."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/13/0914208.shtml

Guys have to work at reclaiming masculinity

Adam · 13 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "
One of the most openly misandric articles I have read for quite some time. Right from the beginning, the tone of the piece is defiantly vituperate, with quotations such as: 'Males are, in many ways, parasites upon their partners.' Hornblow continues her salvo by villifying the status of men in education, work, and the family. In conclusion, she argues that, the only way in which modern man may legitimately reclaim his (forbidden) masculinity is through reducing himself to the 'lowest common denominator': thus, embracing the traditional 'bachelor' stereotype. If that doesn't appeal, Hornblow advises buying a copy of Steve Jones' book, "Y: The Descent of Man", and indulging in some real gender autolysis."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/13/0915237.shtml

Site answers many questions on Russian women

Adam · 13 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "Hey, if you are still at all interested in marriage, maybe start by reading this site It seems to answer a lot of questions about such arrangements that are very hard to get answered elsewhere.

I would have submitted this under the topic "For the Gambling Man", but there was no such one. :) "Divorce" was the closest I could find. But apparently the divorce rate among US men and Russian women is less than half that of marriages between US men and women, so there still may be hope for some of us, at least, of a decent chance at something like a (more) predictably safe(r) kind of 'traditional' relationship with a woman -- you know, the old fashioned kind wherein the woman doesn't seem to hate the man for no apparent reason and then runs off with his kids in a few years, leaving him with the bill."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/13/0917254.shtml

His Side: Does NOW Represent Young Women?

Adam · 14 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anon User writes "At its annual conference this weekend on the theme of "The Drive Towards Equality," NOW struggled to win the loyalties of many women in their 20s and 30s. A diverse panel of young women discussed NOW, mainstream feminism, and gender issues on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles on Sunday, July 13. To listen to the show live via the Internet, go to His Side"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/14/1935212.shtml

Woman admits to false accusations.

D · 15 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original angry_young_men writes "Woman admits rape lies. She talked her kids into lying on her behalf too - heavy stuff."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/14/2215224.shtml

MANN Chat: NH Men's Commission Finally Becomes Reality

Scott · 15 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I will be hosting this week's MANN chat in Steve Imparl's place. The topic for this chat will be the new NH Commission on the Status of Men and its future. This Wednesday, NH Governor Craig Benson will announce the final two nominations for the NH Commission on the Status of Men. This is the final step we've been waiting for since last May when former Governor Jeanne Shaheen signed the bill into law. What kinds of strategies do you think the NH Men's Commission should use, given its mission? And how do you think it can overcome the problem of its complete lack of funding? Join us Wednesday night, July 16, starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time in the usual place for a discussion of this topic.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/14/1733226.shtml

Many Men's Response to Our Anti-Male Culture

Thomas · 15 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

WHOA!

Here's an essay on how feminism is leading to anti-social behavior by men. I'd say it hits quite a few nails on the head.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/15/061201.shtml

Two men having a baby together : how it works

Adam · 16 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original rage writes "As some of you already know, scientists managed to make eggs out of male embryonic stem cells a few weeks ago. Following this step towards male reproductive independance, here is an explanation of the whole process to enabling two men to have a baby who is genetically theirs. Note that a donor is required for the first egg used to cloning the man willing to obtain an egg of his own, but once one woman has given an egg, then theorically no more women are needed for every man interested in the experiment, as scientists then have at disposal a virtual infinite supply of eggs thanks to embryonic male stem cells."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/16/1416242.shtml

Child Support and Fatherhood

Adam · 16 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "The John Walsh Show, a talk show on during the day, did the entire show today (7/15/2003) on fathers forced into fathering children of other men after the wife cheats and doesn't tell the husband. Here's a link to the website giving details of the show. One guy didn't find out until after the divorce because of one of his children's medical problems, that 3 of his 4 children weren't his. If it weren't for that, he still wouldn't know the truth. Another guy didn't find out until after his wife died. A year later, the biological father who had had an affair with the wife, claimed that he was the child's biological father and sought full custody of the child. Naturally, the wife and John Walsh, in the first case, were more on the side of the man sucking it up and continuing to father the children and pay child support ($1100 per month!) for the SAKE OF THE CHILDREN. Don't you get sick of that "for the sake of the children" crap being used whenever it's convenient?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/16/1419205.shtml

Divorce, Custody, and Visitation: Japanese Style

Thomas · 17 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Men, who think they're going to get a fair deal by marrying foreign (especially Japanese) women, should read this. As fair warning, take note of the statement, "Even if children are taken away from a parent abroad who has legal custody and are brought here, Japan is a haven from international law."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/17/173258.shtml

Feminism Today

Thomas · 17 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Here's another good essay on the societal train wreck known as feminism.

Granted, there are some points in the essay that trouble me. First of all, the author, George Rolph, seems to buy into the fallacy that women were far more oppressed than men in the past. He also seems to feel a need to be some type of feminist, judging by his apparent comfort with what he believes feminism's earliest ideals were--"removing from society those things which discriminate against the female gender in particular and both genders in general." That sounds rather like the statement from "Animal Farm," "All animals are equal but some animals are more equal than others."

Still, it's a damn good read.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/17/1721230.shtml

Divorce Great For Men?

Thomas · 17 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "Do you all buy this?

Looks like just another feminist-created phony survey that claims just the opposite of what the truth really is.

What does everybody here think? How many here know divorced men who feel they gained financially after the divorce?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/17/1723200.shtml

"Judging Amy" supports paternity fraud

D · 17 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

amperro writes "July 8 CBS ran an episode of "Judging Amy" about a woman suing her husband for more child support, and then reveals that he isn't the real father! Then Judge Amy Gray threatens to put HIM (not her!) in jail! Frankly, if we are to win the war on paternity fraud, we need to call for the prosecution and imprisonment of the mothers, rather than just relief from child support orders."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/17/2143204.shtml

NCFM-DC Press conference covered in news

Adam · 18 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

mcc99 writes "See: The Washington Times they got our name not quite right - but if you search on the name given in Google, you'll find us!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/18/1910224.shtml

Double Standards

Adam · 18 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Mangesh writes "Indian Supreme Court has ruled that different retirement age for male and female flight attendants in Air India does not violate the Indian constitution. Currently, the retirement age is 58 and 50 respectively. This was challenged on the ground that it is based on gender discrimination and therefore violates article 14 of the constitution. Feminists have demanded a review of the verdict. You can find a sample article at here. The law on DV in India discriminates against men but feminists have never taken up the issue. If a man subjects his wife to cruelty, he can go to jail for upto 3 years, and cruelty is defined in the most general manner as "any wilful act which is likely to drive her to kill herself or causes or is likely to cause grave danger to her life, limb or health (whether physical or mental)". A woman subjecting her husband to cruelty is not a crime at all!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/18/1913225.shtml

Bush Drops the Ball on Title IX Reform

Adam · 18 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Chuck Jones writes "The Bush Education Department last Friday affirmed the use of destructive gender quotas in enforcing Title IX in school athletics. These quotas result in eliminating thousands of opportunities for male wrestlers, swimmers, etc., Recently on a 60 Minutes special, a male athlete who loved wrestling all his life but was suddenly told that he couldn't play because he was male, said "I pray that I have daughters because that's the only way they'll have any opportunities to play."

Please follow the URL to take action today and show your disapproval of this cave-in to the quota-advocate gender feminists.

URL: here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/18/1916231.shtml

Posing a Question to Men's Activists

D · 19 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Do men have to wage a Marxist Class(gender) War in order to get fair treatment? Hitler's brand of marxist class war consisted of bloated statistics, vile political cartoons, insinuating and biased "scientific research" studies among other things. Pretty much like many of the feminist research models we see today. I am asking, is it necessary for men's rights groups to 'lie', to inflate statistics, to create a manufactured reality and to drive home dramatic overtones that paralize society with distrust and division in order to advance our agenda, just in order to be heard and considered? Its a 'at what length will we go to acheive our goal' sort of thought. Will we retain respect and dignaty with our objectives? A special thanks to Wendy McElroy, Trudy Schuett, Dianna Thompson and Christina Hoff Sommers for thier relentless efforts for the co-operative love of both sexes.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/19/0829215.shtml

Calling Pager is DV in New Jersey

D · 19 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

warble writes ""In a 5-0 decision, the court said even a fit father with joint custody and liberal visitation rights does not have an automatic right to know the whereabouts of his child....Cynthia Sacharow accused him [her husband] of domestic violence because he repeatedly called her pager. She said he was harassing and stalking her, acts considered domestic violence under New Jersey law...." Gees. This basically says it all. A father can be fit, reputable, have visitation rights and it can be lost if he calls an x-wife's pager too many times in an attempt to visit a child. To qualify all a woman must do in New Jersey is call the police and report to a domestic violence (DV) shelter. If anybody still doubts that DV shelters are actually family destructions units they must be out-of-their-friggin minds!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/19/1513206.shtml

Fred on Marriage

Thomas · 21 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Here's Fred's take on marrying in the US today. I suspect he'd say something similar about marriage in much of the rest of the English speaking world. (Note the exception of Singapore.)

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/21/1322206.shtml

Society's Wake-Up Call To Men's Health

D · 22 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

locksley2k writes "The Long Island newspaper, Newsday, ran this article today acknowledging the exsistence of the health care crsis for men in this country.

Of course the author had to make a comment on the tired argument of who's the weaker sex question and a snide remark that concludes men are dying for the same reason they don't ask for directions.
However the problem is being recognized and that's what counts.Then again part of the problem is us, if men in general show more intrest in their own health the rest will follow."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/22/1541214.shtml

A Call to Activists, Journalists and Protesters

D · 22 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Warble has recently brought it to my attention that men are going to jail for refusing to pay child support to children that are not theirs. Resisting the tyranny of the state. I urge writers from men's news daily, journalists or activists alike to see what can be done about this. Is it possible to get interviews from some of the men who have gone to jail? For an investigative reporter this is a good story because a special note should be made of these men. Im sure there is more on this topic that I have overlooked. At the very least a mention on men's news daily. If anyone has a link on this issue I can use please send it to the admin email. It is the type of news that mainstream steers from, but it is news.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/22/1554208.shtml

Men Barred From Outdoors--For Equality

Thomas · 23 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The mayor of a Spanish town has barred men (1, 2) from the outdoors on Thursday nights. Any man caught outside during the all-male curfew will be fined, and the money will be given to "groups that deal with domestic violence and equality between the sexes."

This sort of thing has been done elsewhere, I think in Bogota, Columbia, and the feminists in Boulder, Colorado, have proposed barring men from the outdoors on a regular basis.

Remember how blacks used to be barred from the outdoors unless they were accompanied by an owner?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/23/1631232.shtml

Men, Marriage, and 'Finding your Nuts'

Adam · 24 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anon User writes "Glenn Sacks discussed men, marriage and how men can be "married and happy" with men's counselor Wayne Levine, M.A., director of the West Coast Men's Center on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles on Sunday, July 20.

Levine stressed the importance of men "finding their nuts"--their "nonnegotiable, unalterable terms" in their marriages, and criticized traditional marriage counseling as being bad for men. To listen to the show archive, go to His Side"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/24/136232.shtml

Race, sex, and age drive speeding

Adam · 24 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "This study reveals that minorities and men are least likely to receive warnings as opposed to tickets for speeding in a car. That there is a pattern of differential treatment between men and women is clear and it adds up to an estimated cost of $25 million a year in traffic fines and higher insurance premiums - just in MA alone. It is safe to assume that any interpretive interaction with a police officer probably yields harsher results for men, this is especially so in alleged domestic violence matters where men are always assumed guilty. The fact that intentional discrimination violates the constitution's equal protection guarantee seems to have little meaning when men are victimized by our own government.

>"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/24/1310224.shtml

Sean Hannity exposes double standard

Adam · 25 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Mark writes "Sean Hannity, host of the nation's 2nd most listened to talk radio show, discussed at length today the blatant double standard in the way rape accusers are treated in comparison to the accused. This was in regard to the Kobe Bryant situation. He acknowleged that while women's lives can in fact be ruined by rapes (a point that a female caller kept screaming at him), men's lives can be ruined by false accusations of rape. The majority of the callers overall (probably 60% or so) agreed with him, while about 30% or so of the women agreed. To anyone who is familiar with Hannity, this is definitely significant. He has been known to side with women in nearly every case split along gender lines. He is of the old school "men are naturally bad and women are naturally pure" train of thought. I've heard him tell his female callers to refuse to go out with any guy who doesn't pay for EVERYTHING. But, this appears to signal a potential change. At the very least, it signals an awareness. The topic will also be on tonight's Hannity & Colmes (9pm EST, FoxNews). We can contact him to thank him at hannity@foxnews.com"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/24/1311207.shtml

Tom Leykis makes a stand

Adam · 25 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

A double post here: Matt writes "Discussed here, Note how the article ends:

"'This is a violation of privacy, and in that way, it is very much, psychologically, like a rape,' said Patricia Saunders, director of the Graham Windham Manhattan Mental Health Center in New York."

OK, so openly accusing a man of a crime for which he is presumed innocent (supposedly) until proven guilty (as if he isn't assumed guilty by "virtue" of the mere accusation) is not a violation of his privacy-- but revealing the name of the accuser is, and if she is female and is charging him with rape, she is thus being raped again.
But what is happening to him is just fine.

I continue to be surprised, but really, why should I be?"

Hunsvotti writes "On Tuesday, July 22, 2003, radio host Tom Leykis revealed the name of the woman who has accused Kobe Bryant of rape on his nationally-syndicated radio show. Since then, there have been well over 100 media reports covering the revelation. Tom Leykis' e-mail has been flooded with hundreds of letters, many (all?) of which are displayed here. The e-mails ranged from staunch support to incredulous outrage. One woman taglined her e-mail with "Grow up you stupid bastard .....oh and watch out." Another woman wrote "...However, I do feel it unjust for a woman to accuse someone (anyone) of rape, then hide and request anonymity." The saddest part was the men who derided him for outing the accuser. Don't they realize how vulnerable they are to false accusations? Whether or not Kobe Bryant raped this girl is irrelevant - you can't drag the accused through the mud before they've even had a trial, while vehemently insisting that the accuser should have full anonymity."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/25/1810224.shtml

The Mommy Dearest to the Max

Adam · 25 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes ″

This is a story about hideous monster called Theresa Cross.

She murdered her 'first husband' when she was 18 and got away with it by playing the abuse excuse card in court. This was in the early 1960's! She then killed two of her daughters and plea bargained. Before she killed her two siblings she ruled her brood for years with a venomous brutality that would make Ghenghis Khan blush.

Theresa Cross is epitomizes the denial society is in when it comes to female domestic violence. For years this cretin carried on a reign of terror against her family that would never have been tolerated if she were a man."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/25/1815245.shtml

No Man Could Do this!

Adam · 26 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "Tuesday night on Dateline, they did a story about a child who during his first year or two, developed severe and frequent epileptic seizures. Many each day. Doctors tried different drugs and the seizures weren't diminishing. Frustrated, the father did some heavy research and found out about a specific diet (low carb) known about at least 50 years ago to diminish or stop seizures in children) but no doubt isn't readily known or utilized because it doesn't utilize drugs. He took his child to the actual doctor (retired now) who discovered the effects of this diet on child epilepsy. Turns out this diet has a 50%-70% success rate. In this case, it stopped the seizures completely until the child grew out of the problem at 7 years of age.

To make a long story short, Hollywood found out about this and did/is doing a movie about this case. Guess who's playing the father. Meryl Streep! MERYL STREEP!!!!! MERYL STREEP!!!!

Are we fighting a losing battle???? I still can't believe the chutzpuh!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/25/1818203.shtml

His Side: Bush Caves in to Feminists on Title IX

Adam · 26 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anon User writes "Largely due to Title IX, over 350 men's collegiate athletic teams have been cut over the past two decades. Glenn will discuss the feminist assault on men's collegiate athletics and the recent Bush cave-in on Title IX reform with Charlotte Hays, senior editor of the Independent Women's Forum, and Leo Kocher, Board President of the College Sports Council, on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles at 11 PM on Sunday, July 27. To listen to the show live via the Internet, go to His Side

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/26/144244.shtml

NCFM suing battered women's shelters

Adam · 26 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

HombreVIII writes "Three cheers to Angelucci and the National Coalition of Free Men, who have decided to represent Eldon Ray Blumhorst in a suit against battered women's shelters for discrimination.
From the article -
"According to the complaint, Eldon Ray Blumhorst's civil rights were violated when he called each of the Los Angeles County shelters last December telling them he "needed shelter from domestic violence perpetrated against him" and none of the shelters took him in."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/26/146258.shtml

Oh My God.

Adam · 26 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Gonzo Kid writes "The story speaks for itself. Click here" Now this is a bit of a weird one, don't know quite what to make of it.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/26/1410233.shtml

Australia considering quotas for government boards

Adam · 27 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

HombreVIII writes "From the article .... The poor turnout has prompted calls for quotas of up to 50 per cent, to set an example to industry.
"I don't think that (figure) is a bad thing," SA Water chief executive and board member Anne Howe said."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/27/1431254.shtml

MSN.com: What's a home-maker worth?

Adam · 27 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "MSN is at it again with: this

Actually, accoring to our old friend Jed Abraham (author of "From Courtship to the Courtroom"), being a homemaker is worth half of whatever it is your husband made when you were being a home-maker (male home-makers don't get similar consideration).
Some more from MSN:
here as well
What's the lesson here for the gals? Divorce the sucker while you still can~ Get this, too:
and here as well
This beaut finishes with:
"Also on the bright side, discovering that a second income really doesn't contribute much financially can free a spouse to learn new skills, go back to school, pursue an unprofitable dream career or launch a home-based business that may pay little during the first few years. If you're going to work for free, after all, you might as well enjoy it."

I.e., let your husband finance your get-set-to-divorce plans so after you take him for half he's worth, get the kids, get his $ flowing in alimony and C/S, you can still go get a job, too! Wooo!!! Thuch a deal!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/27/1440214.shtml

Media trend - Sympathetic regard for violent women

Adam · 27 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "A typical trend in the media that deserves attention is how females who commit acts of violence often get sympathetic regard and complete consideration concerning what may have lead to these actions. Here is a story about a woman who did an armed carjacking, a 33-mile chase, rammed several police cars and struck a state trooper and the article is sympathetic and inquires for reasons why it happened. The report goes on to bring up custody issues (rare case where a couple lost custody), and how someone feared she was fleeing an "abusive spouse," I would like to add that another car chase occurred around the same time that involved a male, and both got media attention, but there has been no follow up about what happened in a sympathetic light for his case. If a man had done this, he would be charged criminally – no matter what, end of story."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/27/1442240.shtml

1st Men's Issues Study opening in Oregon

Adam · 28 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

HombreVIII writes "Many of us have lamented about the lack of men's issues sections in our local bookstores, but for Gordon Clay a men's issues section isn't good enough. Gordon is the owner of the new Men's Issues Study, a library soon to be opened in southern Oregon. After having toured 26 US states with thousands of men's issues books, cassettes, and videos in his Browser Bookmobile, Mr. Clay has created a new home for them by personally funding the construction of a suitable building to house them out of his own savings. The building was completed on July 19th and the shelves are expected to be fully stocked in August."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/28/1326241.shtml

Suzy Whaley - A Winner even when a Loser

Adam · 28 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Rob writes "Like another female golfer, Anneka Sorenstam, this story paints Suzy Whaley as a crusader for women and a winner even when a loser. There are a number of issues with this type of reporting. Firstly, her male golf partners were "exemplary" because they allowed her onto the green first to take the applause. Mindless chivalry? She played "for women and their daughters" and "carried herself with the dignity...of champions". Leaving aside the fact she qualified by "beating" men (she was allowed to play from the Ladies tees in the qualifying tournament), she ended up about 146th out of 150. Hardly a winner! I'm firmly for equality, but this incessant focus and reporting slant that women are taking on and "beating" men is pointless and surely just riles the men. In addition, how do the jobbing pros on the PGA Tour feel about a place being taken in the Open by a qualifier who did not have to meet their qualifying criteria?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/28/1329205.shtml

I Refuse To Be Pigeonholed

Adam · 28 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Garth writes "This intelligent article discusses how, these days, superficial things (skin colour, sex, sexual orientation) are used to measure how "worthy" your opinions are, and how this approach in fact works towards conformity rather than diversity."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/28/1329257.shtml

Sacks Blasts Those Harassing Kobe's Accuser

D · 29 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Men's and fathers' issues radio talk-show host Glenn Sacks blasted those threatening and harassing the alleged victim in the Kobe Bryant rape case, calling them "demented animals" on his Los Angeles talk show His Side with Glenn Sacks. The entire statement, which Sacks read on his Sunday, July 27 show on KRLA AM 870 can be found on the underlined hyperlink.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/28/2357223.shtml

Toronto Star column attacks fathers' rights advocates

D · 29 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

HombreVIII writes "Michelle Landsberg slams father's rights activist in this article entitled Children of divorce need our protection*. A few excerpts - "The fathers' rights activists have shrewdly thrown up a fog of misstatement, false "anecdotes" and outright lies designed to elicit public sympathy. The first whopper: "Every child has a right to two parents" and "Kids need fathers.""*

- "A loving father, of course, is a boon to any child. But just any old father? A drunk, a batterer, a tyrant, an infantile male supremacist? A man who stalks his ex-wife through the courts? I don't think so."

- "Maybe fathers are being bamboozled by their own propaganda."

Maybe Ms. Landsberg is so bamboozled by her propaganda that she inadvertantly slipped and attacked fathers in that statement instead of father's activists."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/29/0245202.shtml

UK Father's rights group stage protest

Adam · 29 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

HombreVIII writes "Fathers-4-Justice has been getting a lot of press in the UK for their demonstrations this summer. Perhaps this is because they demonstrate in biohazard overalls while setting off air raid sirens? Find out more here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/29/1941234.shtml

30 Reasons Why Feminists Really Are 'Feminazis'

Thomas · 30 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Angry Harry has written an interesting list of similarities between Nazism and feminism.

If his article entitled "30 Reasons Why Feminists Really Are 'Feminazis'" isn't at the top of the page after today, you might have to scroll down or search for it.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/30/1349248.shtml

MANN Chat: An Activist by Any Other Name

Steve · 30 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I will host this week's MANN chat on Wednesday night (7/30), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location.
The topic will be "An Activist by Any Other Name." As activists, we work in a world of words. Therefore, we have to be careful about the words we use to advance men's issues. But what are the right words? If we use some words, we will alienate men--and women--who could be allies. On the other hand, if we try to be too "nice" and please everyone, we'll drive ourselves mad. Where is a workable balance? What are the words that "push people's buttons"? How can we use them, or avoid using them, to communicate most effectively? Join us to talk about the role of language in men's activism.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/30/175249.shtml

American Women should be Outraged!

D · 31 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

An up and coming writer and past president of the Independant Women's Club, Amber Pawlick, has written an article (click here) that starts like this "American women should be outraged. Not because of their supposed oppression over the years, not because of over inflated rape statistics that are always being beat into their brains, but because American women have been starved of one of the greatest values open to them while living life on earth – masculinity. " It is an enjoyable read and I hope you like it as much as I did. As a minor forwarning: this woman is hetrosexual.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/31/0451203.shtml

His Side: Seattle Press Brands Cops Batterers

Adam · 31 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anon User writes "The pro-feminist Seattle press recently launched an assault on Washington state police officers with the publication of a series of hit pieces on the alleged link between cops and domestic violence.
Glenn will discuss this anti-male press campaign with domestic violence activist Greg Schmidt and criminal defense attorney Lisa Scott on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles at 11 PM on Sunday, August 3. To listen to the show live via the Internet, go to Listen Live His Side.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/31/1655213.shtml

Susan Reimer blames men again

Adam · 31 July 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Read all about it here. It's a bit more of the same, so you know how it goes.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/07/31/1847231.shtml

Rape law permits changing mind during sex act

Adam · 1 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Ryan writes "SPRINGFIELD, Illinois (AP) -- A new rape law in Illinois attempts to clarify the issue of consent by emphasizing that people can change their mind while having sex.

Under the law, if someone says "no" at any time the other person must stop or it becomes rape. The National Crime Victim Law Institute said it believed the law is the first of its kind in the country.

Read more at here" Napnip also submitted this link and said "Not sure if this has been submitted yet, but a law just passed in Illinois will allow someone (probably only women) to consent to sex, then change her mind during the act. If the man doesn't immediately stop, he can be charged with rape. Question: Will a man be able to use this law as well?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/01/1641235.shtml

Scarborough Update

Adam · 1 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Mark writes "Tonight's Scarborough Country (10pm EST on MSNBC) will feature an article on the anti-male bias inherent in rape shield laws. If this posts too late, I believe MSNBC may re-run the show at 1am EST. Also, Wednesday's show featured Tom Leykis, a popular talk-show host out of LA and a men's right's advocate (in an odd way) who has received alot of attention lately for naming (Kate Faber) as Kobe's accuser."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/01/1643209.shtml

Another celebrity ruined then cleared

Adam · 1 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Rob writes "I wearily report another story of a Celebrity being accused of sexual assault only for all the charges to be dropped today. The prosecution have "come into possession of further material that has led to the charges against the defendant being reviewed". The reasons for the charges being dropped are not being revealed as it would be "unfair to the complainant". She is of course anonymous. He has of course lost his high-profile TV presenting job and been a social leper for almost a year. You can comment on the story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/01/1644243.shtml

Of Men, Female Companionship, and Nooses

Thomas · 2 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This editorial is a mixed bag, as far as I'm concerned, but it makes a few good points and may inspire some interesting discussion. At least the author, Marianne M. Jennings, states, "Some professional athletes need to worry about even being alone with their wives, but that's a story for another time," and "What man is safe from accusations if he spends time alone with a woman these days?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/01/174242.shtml

Schlessinger Devalues Males to Speck of Sperm

Adam · 2 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original warble writes "As usual we find this conservative female appealing to chauvinism and blaming the male when he objects to her bigotry. I've never cared much for Schlessinger, but now I know that I dislike her because she is an anti-male bigot. In this article, "Sperm donor or the father?" we find her devaluing a the natural father of a child to a speck of fluid while elevating the mother to near god-like stature. If Schlessinger were not a bigot then we would find her considering the mother to be nothing more than an egg donor. Instead Schlessinger promotes permitting the mother superior rights by permitting the mother to randomly choose any male to be the father while dehumanizing the natural father to a speck of fluid. Clearly, there is no doubt that if the mother went on welfare, had the male named as the father and assigned paternity, obtained oppressive child support obligations, and the male fell behind due to unemployment that Schlessinger would label him a deadbeat dad and spew her hate. What is also interesting is that Schlessinger spends so much time explaining and excusing her blow-up when the male objects to her hate speech. Naturally, Schlessinger believes the male is at fault."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/02/1649224.shtml

Divorce makes men richer - July Men's Hour

Adam · 2 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "The July Men's Hour is out; Including "Divorce makes men richer", "Western Authors Book Look - 16th August, Arizona", "Male Suffrage - Heard of it?", "NOW convention - Fun workshops?". News items including - Boys read, they just don't read books - Low pay a choice? - Marriage tames genius - Father suicides - Women lie about their sex lives. And there's now a forum; Fathers-4-Justice 27th July protest photos and a transcript."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/02/1650210.shtml

A refreshing take on the Kobe saga.

Adam · 3 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond writes "I was listening to the Larry Elder show today and heard about FreeKobeBryant.net. Larry got a kick out of it, so i decided to check it out. They seem to have a refreshing and sometimes hilarious take on the entire Kobe controversy."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/03/1541249.shtml

Men are promiscuous down to their genes?

Adam · 4 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Jen writes "Another slam on men supposedly proven by science. While later in the article the writer concedes that women lie on the tests if privacy is not guarenteed, the most adament points are made in the beginning as hard fact. Many of the social observations made are 20 years outdated, as not many parents in the post-AIDS, 'rape' happy age encourage their boys to have sex at all. "

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/04/182242.shtml

Why women make better managers?!

Adam · 4 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Again we can see another feminist who promotes her sexist materials with prejudiced ideas and excessive love and admiration for her and her counterparts ideas and usage of them as generalized and proven scientific facts. Go and read the article"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/04/182230.shtml

Men and Alcoholism

D · 5 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This is an area I don't think I've seen very much of in regards to men's activism. Though I think women are suseptible to this as well, from what I know it is mostly men who suffer from alcoholism. Go to this LINK and have a look at the subliminal messaging this ad expert is describing to us. I found the site to be very informative overall and is worth looking at in regards to media, marketing and conditioning of the masses. Also make sure to read this LINK Perhaps not all alcoholics are born some are made.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/05/0154218.shtml

Watermelons Are In Season!!!

Thomas · 5 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Viagra Monologues, by a New Zealand playwright, is reportedly an answer to The Vagina Monologues. The Viagra Monologues is receiving good reviews and might be worth seeing. Is anyone in NZ on this board, able to check this out, and willing to report to us? I might want to suggest to a local acting troupe that they put it on.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/05/172203.shtml

A Good Website

Thomas · 5 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This is a rather large Website, so I've only been able to read a bit of it. So far, it seems quite good, despite the fact that it uses frames (Yuck!).

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/05/1926231.shtml

You go, Australian boys !

Adam · 6 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original rage writes "It seems that people in Australia are beginning to be aware of the various discriminations most boys face in schools because of the feminist indoctrination.....

And this time, it is not everyday people who become aware but rather authorities and officials themselves, and the message is being displayed in the mainstream media !

Check

this out and and this

In the USA, things are also beginning, though slowly, to change : the media are more boy-friendly than previously. Some more here as well,

good news at last.

And for the example, you can see as follows the usual denials of feminists who systematically refuse to acknowledge gender-bias against boys."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/06/1418213.shtml

Conservative women on modern manhood (Bah!)

Adam · 6 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Hi, we're a bunch of conservatives who talk about masculinity over here after 9/11 we remembered that we needed the nearest man to save us from ourselves, because ya know, we're not the ones with abilities around here. We're the worst of both worlds for you men, as we're feminist enough to beat you over the head with a pseudo-moral club, but conservative enough to think you exist only to be un-emotional expendables. Either we way don't care, we just want you to be whatever we need you to be, your basic humanity be damned. We want it all, and you better provide, even through we'll give you nothing in return, not even the most basic pretence of lip service. And of course being men you're morally inferior anyway, so we're doing you a favour.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/06/1421200.shtml

MANN Chat: "No" means "no"? Implications for Men

Steve · 6 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This week's MANN chat will be held on Wednesday night (8/6), starting at 9:30 PM Eastern Time, at the href="http://www.mensactivism.org/chat.shtml">usual location.
The topic will be "'No' Means 'No'? Implications for Men."
Illinois recently enacted a href="http://www.legis.state.il.us/legislation/publicacts/fulltext.asp?Name=093-0389">law that allows a person who consented to sexual activity to withdraw that consent at any time. (MANN's coverage of the law is href="http://www.mensactivism.org/article.pl?sid=03/08/01/1641235">here.) How often does this situation really arise? Do we really need a law to deal with it? Is this just an overreaction to one publicized case Is it another example of Oliver Wendell Holmes' maxim, "Hard cases make bad law"? What are the implications for men? Join us to share ideas about how to deal with such laws and the hysteria that drives them.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/06/1918250.shtml

Men Finally Win A Gender Discrimination Lawsuit!!!

Adam · 7 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes " Well, well the proverbial worm has finally turned in this case anyway.
Two men in California got an out of court settlement to the tune of over $100,000 dollars for being discriminated against because of their gender. The culprit was the infamous "ladies night discount" gimmick used by wateringholes to draw in more female customers and thus supposedly more horny men looking to score. It seems to only perpetuate the negative stereotypes of men.

Notice the not too subtle misandric catty remark at the end of the article. Sounds like someone has been eating sour grapes to me!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/07/167228.shtml

Talking About Tears

Adam · 7 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I just chanced upon this article by Katharine Winans talking about tears, and I thought you folks might be interested. That's all for now.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/07/1611240.shtml

His Side: UC Bans Faculty-Student Relationships

Adam · 7 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anon User writes "The University of California Regents recently passed new rules banning most faculty-student romantic relationships. CSULB professor Barry Dank, Ph.D. calls this the "bureaucratization of sexuality," and criticizes the new policy as an "unethical intrusion into personal and private relationships."

Dank will discuss the new ban, the John Dwyer/Boalt Hall controversy, and anti-male sexual harassment hysteria on campus on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles at 11 PM on Sunday, August 10. To listen to the show live via the Internet, go to His Side"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/07/1613223.shtml

Ask Ads 7

Adam · 8 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This week, we're looking at counter arguments, ever been in a debate about men's issues and been kept on the defensive for lack of a good counter argument? Post the arguments you had the most trouble countering, and we'll help you to turn the pressure back on them.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/08/1729209.shtml

Powerpuff girls episode reflect current Feminist s

D · 9 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Firey Outbreak writes "WEll, not sure if this has been posted before, but I think the Episode Equal Fights reflects the state of feminism quite nicely. It is about a feminist villain who persuades thePowerpuff Girls (the superheroines of the cartoon) not to attack her because "girls need to stick up to each other". Read the rest of this in the read more section.
Firey Outbreak writes "WEll, not sure if this has been posted before, but I think the Episode Equal Fights reflects the state of feminism quite nicely. It is about a feminist villain who persuades thePowerpuff Girls (the superheroines of the cartoon) not to attack her because "girls need to stick up to each other". She convinced them that men were against all women and so they let her go on a crime spree and turned against their own "father", the mayor and their class mates. For example they felt that the Professor asking them to tidy their own room they felt they had been dealt a great injustice. In the end they realised the wrong in their ways and turned on Femme Fatale (the feminist villain). I particularily like the speech-thing they made in the end when they cornered her.
Femme Fatale: Oh?hello, girls. I didn?t expect to see you here. Hear you?ve been kicking some male butt. Good for you!

(No response. Blossom keeps flipping her coin.)

Femme Fatale: (starting across street) Keep up the good work. (They do not move.)

Buttercup: Susan B. Anthony coins, huh?

Bubbles: Do you even know who she was?

Femme Fatale: Er?she was?uh?um?

Buttercup: Once upon a time, women weren?t allowed to do much of anything.

Bubbles: Susan B. Anthony knew that that was wrong.

Blossom: In 1872, she broke the law by voting. (Back to Femme Fatale, watching the coin; she continues o.c.) And even though she was found guilty, the feds wanted to go easy on her.

Girls: (from o.c.) Because she was a girl!

Blossom: (from o.c.) And not send her to jail.

Femme Fatale: (stammering) Well, you?you know, she was this?well, men?girls should?oh, man!

(She drops the sack and makes a break for it, but Buttercup cuts her off.)

Buttercup: Susan B. Anthony didn?t want special treatment. She wanted to be treated equally.

(Femme Fatale backs up a bit and bolts in a different direction; this time, Bubbles intercepts.)

Bubbles: She demanded that she be sent to jail, just like any man who broke the law.

(Again the robber backs away before trying to escape, but Blossom stops her after only a couple of steps. The coin is produced and held aloft; extreme close-up of her face.)

Blossom: And that?s exactly what we?re gonna do to you.

If only hard-core feminists demanded to be thrown in jail like any man lik they used to. Instead, now, they claim psychological abuse and demand the men to go to jail."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/09/003238.shtml

TAKE BACK SOCIETY!

D · 9 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Shattered Men writes "TAKE BACK SOCIETY!

Our society is being held hostage by gender feminist.
They hold our Business, Courts, Health care system, Schools, Colleges and society in general hostage.

Isn't it about time for us to TAKE BACK SOCIETY?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/09/0025212.shtml

Company Encourages Domestic Violence

D · 9 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Member 29? submits "I wish to submit the company, "Factory Mattress" for our list of companies to be boycotted. Their latest ad on TV starts out showing a woman's face, totally annoyed as she's lying awake in bed. We see her being moved up and down and hear the bed creaking as her husband is repeatedly tossing and turning beside her. Suddenly without warning, she takes a frying pan that she apparently has "at the ready" in her left hand and soundly knocks her husband in the head with it. Evidently knocked out while in his sleep, he immediately becomes motionless. Is it OK for spouses to hit their companion in the head with a frying pan to stop their tossing and turning in bed if they can't afford one of Factory Mattress' new mattresses? Are there people who could get this message? If a woman hits her husband in this way and he doesn't get knocked out, is it OK for him to hit her back in the same way? Or maybe with something much bigger and more lethal to ensure it never happens again?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/09/0028225.shtml

The Pink Bloque

D · 9 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "Comments?

http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/articles/A379 61-2003Jul23.html"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/09/0030207.shtml

letter published on domestic violence

D · 9 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Boy Genteel writes "I'm published often in the PHILADELPHIA DAILY NEWS. This appeared today (July 23rd, 2003):

I agree with Kim Elton (July 15) that women aren't to "blame" for most of the violence inflicted on them, but I'm not sure I understand her other point, that men are "taught" that it is OK to abuse.

I think we do a pretty decent job of trying to steer men away from violence. Unfortunately, we're at the same time dropping the ball when it comes to violent women, as various media seem to give them the green light for letting out their anger onto another person.

So when dozens of studies indicate that women initiate domestic abuse approximately as often as men, they're dismissed as unimportant." Maybe Kim Elton should see the Factory Mattress comercial?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/09/0032207.shtml

More Shenanigans from AZCADV

D · 9 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "Remember the CANOW Report?

Not to be outdone, the AZ Coalition FOR Domestic Violence has produced one if its own. This time they've interviewed a big, whopping, 57 angry girls (surely that must represent a trend) and will present this to the AZ state Committee on Domestic Relations.

To see a copy of this and the call to action sent out to their supporters yesterday, go to:

DesertLightJournalAZDV

They complain about this report being suppressed -- OK, let's help 'em out here! ;>)

If you live in AZ, send this to your county attorney and/or state representive in legislature with your comments. The girls of the AZCFDV also accuse the state committee of making this a political issue. Like they didn't establish the whole situation as a political one themselves? Yeah, right."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/09/202244.shtml

Lawsuit Victory

D · 10 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes ″

Here is another article about a man winning a gender discrimination lawsuit. I personally think he should have gotten a much larger monetary settlement but a win is a win. Enjoy!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/10/0121249.shtml

Megan's Law

D · 10 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Having recieved an email discussing "Megan's Law", I'd like to share it with the rest of the men's activism community. If anyone can help or knows of this law and can explain it fully please do so. It appears from this woman's comments that a number of young boys are being treated cruelly in true Nazi style brutality. Go to 'read more comments' to see her email. Stop the injustice being done to her son and others.Sirs,

I am seeking any kind of help or advise regarding the over use of the sex offender laws in California against teenage boys.

There are hundreds, maybe thousands, of teen boys 14 through 17 who are charged with a sex offense called PC 288(a), this is a lewd act with a minor 14 or under. This means, if a 14 to 17 year old boy and a 13 to 14 year old girl are engaged in any kind of consensual contact, ie. kissing, fondling, even holding hands, the boy is guilty of a felony if his actions causes a sexual desire in himself or the girl. The girl is not held responsible for her conduct because she is not "old enough" to give consent to the contact, even if she initiates the contact, lies about her age, or misleads the boy in any way.

Many parents find this avenue through the DA when a statutory rape charge cannot be pursued; both kids are virgins. If the boy has even a minor juvenile record, it is common for the Judge to send these boys to the California Youth Authority for up to 8 years. Once the boys survive the brutality of the CYA, if they survive, they must then register as sex offenders for the rest of their lives. There have been suicides at CYA due to the fear of being targeted by the cruel and corrupt staff.

I have found that it is more typical for a rural county to commit on this charge.

Please do not confuse this PC 288(a) with a more serious charge PC 288a, the two are VERY different. A great deal of the abuse towards these boys while in the CYA is due to the staff's ignorance of the law and the difference between the two offenses.

Please forward this e mail to anyone who could help or give some guidance.

Laura Belmont

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/10/1918259.shtml

Father's For Life

D · 10 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This has to be one of the most extensive web sites I have seen in regards to men's issues. It is solid with facts, facts, facts. I must warn you that there is a musical theme on the web page that plays for a few minuts, so if you have any other programs going or your stereo is on, be forwarned. This website has to be a five star site that is enourmous with information and useable citations. FATHERS FOR LIFE

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/10/2150226.shtml

Sacks Signs Syndication Deal with Salem Radio

D · 11 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Men's rights radio talk show host and columnist Glenn Sacks recently announced the signing of a syndication agreement with the Salem Radio Network to bring his Los Angeles-based radio talk show, His Side with Glenn Sacks, to Seattle. The show, currently heard on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles, will begin airing on September 7 on KKOL AM 1300 in Seattle, putting His Side in two of the top three radio markets on the West Coast.
To learn more, go to This link at Men's News Daily.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/11/1629222.shtml

Older Women - Become Lesbians!

Adam · 11 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes " Women are coming to the conclusion that they are no longer attractive to men at older ages, plus men don't live as long as women, so what's the solution? Become lesbians! Notice that no mention is made as to possibly discerning why they are not attractive to men, how they could make themselves more attractive to men, or possibly support research to solve the problem of men dying earlier. Noooooooo! Become lesbians!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/11/2040239.shtml

The Marriage Strike

Thomas · 12 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy has written a fine article on the marriage strike being waged by an increasing number of men. In her article, Wendy refers to this insightful article by Matt Weeks.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/12/0625200.shtml

More On Why Feminism Is Feminazism

Thomas · 12 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Carey Roberts has written another fine essay. This one, "Feminism's Thousand Year Reich," describes a number of similarities between Nazism and feminism.

When are men gonna wake up?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/12/1659249.shtml

"Family" Violence Prevention Fund

D · 12 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Hiding under the veil of "family" this site has even recruited the Yankees to spread their one sided message. Check out the Yankees commercial on the right of the page. I just saw it watching the game...http://endabuse.org/"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/12/1954218.shtml

MANN Chats Taking Summer Break

Steve · 12 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

To give the guys on the MANN Admins team and all of our faithful supporters a break, our weekly MANN chats are taking a summer vacation. Therefore, there will be no chats scheduled for the next 6 Wednesdays. Our chats will resume on Wednesday, September 24, 2003. As we get closer to that date, we'll post announcements about the time and the topic. Enjoy the rest of your summer!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/12/222217.shtml

Two "conservatives" on rape shield laws

Adam · 13 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Well well, if there's one thing two certain groups love, it's attacking the nearest man through his kids or sexuality, and in these two cases, it's the latter. As Maggie Gallagher asks Should rape
shields hold? And Kathleen Parker says Naming rape victims may liberate the rapist I hope you notice how feminists put women first if it comes to a throwdown between the nearst man and woman, and how "conservatives" do the same thing. And also the fact that the paternalism they want is dependant on the very men it will harm. In closing, I would just like to add that with the spread of information they can't hide any longer. They're dependant on our consent to do this to us, and that being modern men, saying no is a moral imperative.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/12/2235230.shtml

CPS CONGRESSIONAL INQUIRY

D · 13 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This is a once in a lifetime opportunity to show the utter destruction the state has imposed on families.

Please post this to any and all boards, forums, etc. so people can be informed and attend to give testimony in regard to the travesties and destruction of CPS.

If the congressional Panel will listen and take the testimonies given I do believe that this can be the beginning of a Nation wide Sweep of CPS and DHS to enact changes that our families so despirately need.

Thanks,
kmps4887 (Pleas go to Read More Comments)
CPS CONGRESSIONAL INQUIRY PRELIMINARY ANNOUNCEMENT AUG 2003

Good news. After ten months of research and lobbying, Government Watch succeeded in getting the first Congressional Inquiry into CPS/DHSS/court abuses scheduled for January. It will be in the Inland Empire, date to be announced.

We are seeking commitments from victims to testify before a congressional panel. Please let me know if I can add you to the list. We are inviting people, victims and expert witnesses, from all over the United States. Hope you can join us. Major media will be invited also.

We plan to lead off the Inquiry with experts, such as a sociologist who researched the child "protection" system for 10 years and has developed solutions.

If you know of other expert witnesses, dedicated social workers, authors, doctors, psychiatrists, psychologists, etc., who want to share their research and knowledge with Congress, please have them contact me.

The formal hearing will be on a Saturday morning, longer if needed.
Date and location to be determined, depending on the number of people who want to testify.

Now we are looking at the County Board of Supervisors chambers in San Bernardino or Riverside. They are equipped with audiovisual systems, theater seating for over 200, a separate media booth, etc.

As plans are finalized and the witness/expert list is developed Government Watch will be sending out press releases to all major media.
Congresspeople are helping to notify their colleagues.

Please share this info with other interested persons. We must get at least 200 witnesses there in January.

Laura Koepke, President, Government Watch
Publisher and Executive Editor
Justice Journal
Published by Government Watch, Inc.
PO Box 1031, Big Bear Lake, CA 92315
Phone: 909-585-4633, Mobile 909-217-1787 [Laura Koepke]
Phone: 909-585-4385 [Gina Wagner, Vice President]
Fax: 909-585-5906
E-mail: govrnwatch@aol.com
WE WELCOME WHISTLEBLOWERS, evidence, documents, photos, audio tapes, video tapes and press releases

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/13/186237.shtml

The Onion does it again

Adam · 13 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This is too funny to describe, the title is enough to make you laugh out loud. Go on, have a read. To make things even funnier, just remind yourselves of all those feminist comments about DV.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/13/003217.shtml

Warren Farrell to run for California Governor

Adam · 13 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tom writes "Warren Farrell has decided to run for Governor of California. His web site will be updated later this week to reflect this. No matter what happens I think it is an important event for mens rights activists. I know I am planning to make a contribution to his campaign! Let's give him all the support we can.

Click Read More to see his opening campaign statement.Here's his opening campaign statement:

I am Dr. Warren Farrell. I am running for Governor of California. For thirty years I have researched men, women and families, authoring books like Father and Child Reunion and Why Men Are The Way They Are.

I am a darker horse than Seabiscuit. I am running to call our attention to solutions to family problems that are too politically incorrect for mainstream candidates to address. The state is now spending money on prisons and social services that largely exacerbate those problems. Problems like:

...our sons dropping out of school at a rate much faster than our daughters;

...the long term challenges endured by children brought up by one parent

Solutions like:

...keeping dads involved in families

...communication skills taught in early grades with parental involvement

With these issues addressed properly by our state, we can save both our state's money and save our families.

Dr. Warren Farrell for Governor!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/13/1319213.shtml

NH Men's Commission Nominees Confirmed

Scott · 14 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men has been plagued by delays and problems for more than a year now. Finally, NH Governor Craig Benson has made two solid nominations for the commission and on Wednesday, they were confirmed by the Executive Council. Attorney Gerry Boyle from Plymouth, NH and Mike Geanoulis from Newcastle, NH are now officially members of the commission. Mr. Geanoulis is also president of the NH Chapter of NCFC and has led much of the activism in NH for men's and father's rights. This is definitely something to cheer about!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/14/1740207.shtml

Is School House Rock Anti-Male?

D · 14 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original amperro writes "Remember the educational cartoon School House Rock? The one titled "Unpack Your Adjectives" goes like this:

"Girls who are tall can get taller," (Girl grows)
"Boys who are small can get smaller," (Boy shrinks)
"Till one is the tallest" (Girl becomes giant while boy gets tiny)
"And the other's the smallest of all." (Girl CRUSHES BOY WITH FOOT).

We even teach children that violence against males is acceptable!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/14/1828221.shtml

Online Petitions

D · 15 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

LeMorteMark writes "While politicians are not legally required to look at online petitions it would be my guess that some do.

Here is a link to a petition of male interest. http://www.thepetitionsite.com/takeaction/10401765 6

Also does anyone know of a political party devoted to mens issues?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/15/047214.shtml

Fred Lane's wife pleads guilty to manslaughter

D · 15 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Doug writes "As per this story that just broke, the wife of former Carolina Panthers running back Fred Lane has plead guilty to killing him. Apparently she was trying to cash in on a 5-million dollar life insurance policy. It's interesting to note that her defense was centered around allegations of abuse by her husband, but she was still convincted."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/15/048224.shtml

More on the M-Word

Thomas · 15 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The following are a few essays on marriage and divorce.

In the first, "Custody Court Massacre," Bernard Chapin describes the destruction of a friend of his by the divorce court. In the second, "(C-BINO) Confirmed Bachelor In Name Only", Chapin explains why he thinks marriage, given the right circumstances, may still conceivably be a realistic option for a man.

The third essay, by Robert Jackson, "Free Market Marriage," strikes me as downright bizarre at the end, but it might be worthy of some discussion.

And then there's this one, by W. James Antle III, entitled "The problem with marriage today – is me."

I truly wonder if the institution of marriage has been mortally wounded.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/15/1636215.shtml

And Men Need...

Thomas · 15 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This cracked me up. At least the fembots recognize that women will need robots, which are far more complex than inflatable dolls. ;)

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/15/187209.shtml

End Rape Shield!

Thomas · 16 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I heartily agree with this editorial, which calls for an end to shielding the names of women, who accuse men of rape. It's good to see that this idea is finally being openly debated. Also, I've noticed a reduction in the rate at which accusers of rape are referred to in the press as "victims." They are now often referred to as "alleged victims." That alone is a major step forward. The press, these days, isn't always going along with the hateful, feminist declaration that no woman would ever lie about being raped.

Next step? Prison for false accusers and a lifetime position on a national, public registry.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/16/0024252.shtml

Exclusive interview with candidate Warren Farrell

D · 16 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

HombreVIII writes "In an effort to find out more information about Warren Farrell's candidacy, I've contacted him via email and requested he conduct an email interview, the results of which would be posted on this site. He graciously agreed, and here it is. SEE READ MORE

Me: What are the reasons you decided to run for governor?

WF: First, my wife, Liz Dowling, suggested it. I would never run without her pro-active support, otherwise you win office by destroying a family. Second, this is a perfect opportunity to present fathers' and mens' issues to the public, which are otherwise too politically incorrect for any mainstream candidate to articulate. With 30 years of writing about these issues, and a PhD in political science, well, all the forces came together.

Me: Is this run planned as a one time thing, or are we looking at a career shift into politics for you?

WF: A one time thing unless some other extraordinary opportunity like this recall re-creates the conditions in which I can again be totally honest and not have to live a long-term political life with its Sirens of political correctness and its sacrifices to privacy, etc.

Me: You discuss your policies on father's rights, gun control, and abortion at your site http://www.warrenfarrell.com/gov/ but where do you stand on other issues such as drugs, the economy, and security?

WF: Drugs: Marijuana, alcohol, coffee and sugar legalized but well taxed. Economy: be business-friendly (low taxes, caps on unemployment insurance); subsidize job training and education, especially in the technical fields; eliminate affirmative action hiring, but expand affirmative action scholarships and training awards for the minority sex in fields that have less than 20% of one sex. Security: spy, infiltrate, use technology to tap phones, etc., but do not publicly reveal names of suspects until the suspect has been subjected to careful investigation and determined to be reasonably likely of being guilty.

Me: What else would you like to tell us about your campaign?

WF: It's exhausting, unifying, energizing and increases my respect for politicians. Politics is the only job you get by exposing yourself to people who won't get their job unless they attempt to ruin you. Between that and campaign laws, if you go into politics to make money dishonestly, you're crazy.

Me: On your site you mention the need for more male teachers in school. As governor how would you go about encouraging this?

WF: Three ways: Hiring:Exchange programs with male business executives, entrepreuneurs, accountants, politicians, leaders. Recruiting: special males-for-teachers scholarships; free tuition; and special outreach to boys in high school. Legislation:The more single moms a school district has the higher the percentage of male teachers the district be required to have so boys brought up by moms have positive male role models when young, and do not join gangs to get a male role model.

Me: Since tossing in your hat, what has been the reception you've recieved from others in the Democratic party? Has it been what you expected?

WF: My supporters are about 1/3 Democrats, 1/3 Republican and 1/3 Independent.

Me: Having seen you on a couple talk shows, you appear to be a soft-spoken man. Do you carry a proverbial big stick? Can you relate an example of when you've used it?

WF: My "big sticks" are The Myth of Male Power, Father and Child Reunion and in brief, my writing, where a loud voice and interrupting are not required. My other "big sticks" are being willing to research, speak up, hone sound bites from in-depth material, and, now, risk it all in the political arena. Interrupting and shouting are mediums that defy my message, so they must be used sparingly. When I taught a class once, I never raised my voice until, once, at the end of the year, it felt momentarily appropriate: three kids in the class cried.

Me: In addition to father's rights, what other men's or boys issues will you work on if elected governor?

WF: First, boys in school; second, undoing all the small and big ways we make boys into the disposable sex by cheering football games and channelling males into the hazardous occupations so that 92% of workplace deaths are males.

Me: How can people assist you in your campaign?

WF: It is so hard for me to ask for the help of others, but boy, it's character-building to realize that is part of the test: knowing how to inspire a state run by a team starts with knowing how to create a campaign team. The toughest part is asking for contributions. The upfront costs are over $10,000, and then there's no real end to it. The only way this campaign will be effective is with activists inviting me to do press conferences/protests, etc., in their city. So please email me with your willingness to help, or help via logging on to paypal through my www.warrenfarrell.com/gov web site.

Me: Any final words?

WF: Let others have the final word.

Me: I'd like to thank Dr. Farrell for allowing me to conduct this interview and also for his prompt reply. Good luck in all that your trying to do with your campaign and remember there are many who are fighting alongside you."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/16/0350223.shtml

Warren Farrell in the Washington Times

Adam · 16 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

In case you hadn't noticed Warren made the Washington Times, scroll down to "It's a guy thing" to read. The coverage is good BTW.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/16/1751236.shtml

No Justice in Canadian Family Courts

Hombre · 17 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

AFG writes "Here is a good site dealing with the corrupt and feminist controlled family courts in Canada. Take a look at some of the articles and letters and get a good idea of why Canada's family court system is one of the most misandrist in the world.

http://www.nojustice.info/"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/17/1710212.shtml

New MANN Admin: Hombre

Scott · 17 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

As you can see from the posting below, we have a new member of the Mensactivism.org admin team. Hombre is probably well-known to many of the regulars here, especially to participants of the on-line chats. Hombre's activism and enthusiasm for men's rights is a great example for us all and his web site, MFNBC.com, is a great resource. Welcome, Hombre!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/17/2131228.shtml

You reap what you sow

Adam · 18 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

bernee writes "This article in the Sydney Morning Herald outlines how the Australian government is suffering somewhat of a rebound from legislation originally formulated to 'protect' battered wives. Immigration legislation was amended to allow foreign spouses who were being sponsored by Australian residents special treatment when it came to getting a visa if they had been subjected to domestic abuse. It seems many women were abusing the system (surprise, surprise). Being the egalitarian society it is, law required the Australian legislators to make this legislation gender neutral – of course, only women are abused, aren't they. Lo and behold men are now applying in droves for protection under the law."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/18/1731230.shtml

Farrell Discusses Historic Campaign for Governor

Hombre · 19 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Best-selling men's issues author Warren Farrell discussed his historic men's and fathers' rights campaign for Governor of California on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles on Sunday, August 17. To listen to the archived version of the show, go to His Side.

Farrell put forth his long-term solution to relieving California's budget problems--keeping fathers in children's lives. Farrell proposed a package of reforms to solve this problem, including the rebuttable presumption of joint custody and placing legal limits on post-divorce move-aways.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/19/0332205.shtml

Y Bother: Men Are Doomed

Hombre · 19 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Another british male biologist (Bryan Sykes, professor of human genetics at Oxford University) claims that men are doomed to be extinct and that women will rule the planet. I feel that the article is in a fairly mocking tone as usual with these types of reports.

http://www.news.com.au/common/story_page/0,4057,69 87400%5E13762,00.html"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/19/0346229.shtml

Mini-British Backlash

D · 20 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Analog Worms writes "It seems that the feminist controlled Department Of Trade And Industry in the UK is suffering from a male backlash against it's blantant anti-male rules. A small group of male workers have written a pamphlet called the backlash which exposes the lies within the department. Read about it here.

http://www.standyourground.com/forum/viewtopic.php ?t=741 (You may have to scroll down a bit)"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/20/014255.shtml

A Change In Media Trend???

D · 20 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I posted this because it might make men feel there is some good out there. The author of this article is making an argument that the latest Terminator movie is "Anti-Feminist". I seen the movie and I thought the exact same things and a few more. Careful not to confuse anti-feminist with anti-women, because the movie is not anti-woman in any regards. To make it simple the robots represent the "system" and its almost as if the system is "feminist". Maybe Cameron's divorce gave him a view at the biased nature of our environment? Read Here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/20/0122249.shtml

Y-Not? Human Males May Last, After All

Hombre · 20 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original tparker writes "A BBC article offering counter arguments in the "Y-Males? Y-Not!" debate here. Some interesting information on the decoding of the Y chromosome, and indications that human males may be around a bit longer."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/20/2027204.shtml

NCFM and others to host Warren Farrell Rally

Hombre · 20 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The National Coalition of Free Men and others will be hosting a rally in order to support Warren Farrell and men's rights starting at 9 AM on Tuesday, August 26th at 600 S. Commonwealth Avenue, in front of the Los Angeles County Courthouse. JeffS provides more details in the Read More section.JeffS writes "As many of you may already know, men's movement leader Warren Farrell has announced his candidacy for the governorship of California. Farrell is, of course, America's leading spokesman for men's and father's rights, and the author of such groundbreaking works as "The Myth of Male Power," "Father and Child Reunion," and "Why Men Are the Way They Are."

This marks the first time in history that a major leader of the men's movement has announced his candidacy for a statewide office. Regardless of the outcome of the election, this is an historic opportunity to educate the media and the voting public about men's and father's issues.

The Los Angeles chapter of the National Coalition of Free Men and a variety of other men's organizations are helping Warren kick off his campaign by staging a rally in front of the Los Angeles County Courthouse at 600 S. Commonwealth Avenue in Los Angeles at 9:00 AM on Tuesday, August 26th.

If we can get the appropriate permits, then any group that would like to will be invited to set up an informational table at the event. Our plan is to have a podium where whoever wants to speak to the crowd can do so during the first two hours of the rally. Then, at 10:30, Warren will address the gathering and talk about his candidacy.

In order to demonstrate that Warren's campaign is serious and that the issues he's addressing have popular support, we would like to have as large a showing as possible at this kickoff rally. The California gubernatorial race is being watched closely by the national news outlets, so this is a tremendous opportunity to educate the news media, not just in California, but across the nation.

Won't you or other members of your organization consider joining us? If you're interested in attending, please contact the Los Angeles chapter of the National Coalition of Free Men at 818-907-9383 or send us an email at ncfm.la@verizon.net.

We hope to see you there!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/20/2038210.shtml

Good Contraceptive News From India!

Hombre · 21 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Acksiom writes "A Delhi biomedical engineering professor has developed a new male contraceptive that looks very promising!

According to the Alternet article at http://www.alternet.org/story.html?StoryID=16617 :

"The injection coats the vas with a clear polymer gel that has a negative and positive electric charge. Sperm cells also have a charge, so the differential charge from the gel ruptures the cell membrane as it passes through the vas, stopping the sperm in their tracks before they can even start their journey to the egg.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/21/0159222.shtml

MANN launches grassroots campaign to support Farrell!

Hombre · 21 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Mens Activism News Network is challenging its readers to take part in our grassroots campaign to support Farrell's candidacy and put men's issues on the political map. A new page has been added to this site, (see the new link at the bottom of the activism section to the right), which will list the daily, weekly, and campaign long activism challenges we encourage everyone to participate in. The time until the election is short, so lets make the most of it by redoubling our activist efforts for the few weeks we have. Together we can make a difference, let's do so!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/21/0448215.shtml

Illinois Woman Hires Hit Man

Hombre · 21 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "A Central Illinois woman was arrested after she was videotaped hiring a hit man to kill her ex-boyfriend and his sister in order to regain custody of her daughter. He had been given custody of their daughter after she had attempted to kill the child in her own suicide attempt. The story is covered at: http://www.pantagraph.com/stories/082103/new_20030 821025.shtml"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/21/1456248.shtml

Feminists just love paternity fraud!

Adam · 22 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

amperro writes "I came across the following article on the web by Jenny Skoble, an apparent enemy of men. Does anyone truly believe that feminists support paternity fraud for the benefit of children? Or do they just want to be able to lie, cheat, and steal with total impunity?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/22/1856252.shtml

Rowdy Bride Spends Night In Jail

Adam · 22 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CPM writes "Rowdy Bride Spends Night In Jail Wow! She sure didn't waste any time showing her true personality. Pity it wasn't before the wedding, so the poor sap might have been able to change his mind. Every guy considering marriage should read this story and take a long hard look at this chick's ugly mug. There is a good chance that this is what your little cupcake will soon reveal herself as. This one could barely wait until the wedding. Of course there were other hooligans in this group, but since this is HER special day, lets give all the attention to her just like she wants it." Ray also submitted this tory and said "I find it very biased that the words "domestic violence" were never once used in the telling of this story. Perhaps this new bride was just trying to clearly state here empowerment over any semblence of male oppression

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/22/191244.shtml

Our Philosophy

D · 23 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

And I say "our" , because it is our's. The ideals of Men's Activism News Network are simple. Its not complex even if the issues we tackle are. Every once and a while the administrators of this board like to post this page Please go here. In keeping with the tradition that MANN hopes to create I hope all posters take five minuts to read this. This of course is not to stifle debate or censor anyone's feelings, but the one thing it does encourage is 'empathy'. Not just for men, but for women and all races and individuals of all sorts. Still encouraging you to speak your mind, but please consider the posts you submit and it's relevance to our cause. One of the smallest poems ever spoken was by Muhammad Ali, it goes "Me, We". Our war is an ideological one and their weapon is hate, not ours. We need to nuetralize it, not inflame it. And to remind you, there is no end to our appreciation of your contributions. We will continue and we will love, laugh and smile as we do it. :)

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/23/0826236.shtml

Why Won't Men Watch Women's Sports

Adam · 23 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Gonzo Kid writes "Graham Hays asks in this article, Why don't men watch women's sports?" Okay, Graham, let's try this slowly: They play like girls. They're not good. They are playing a game designed by man, to test the limits of the male physique, and the best professional women's team would be hard pressed to win a series against a small college men's team. It's like a picture of a pregnant man - it's just wrong. Let them play in the NFL or the NBA, (And not on an affirmative action free pass) and I'll be impressed - until then, we have seperate women's leagues, well, because we need them. Because they can't run with the men. Sorry, but them's the facts."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/23/1822231.shtml

Farrell Campaign Rally on Tuesday

Hombre · 24 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Just a reminder that a rally to support Warren Farrell for CA governor is scheduled for this Tuesday, from 9AM to 12PM, in front of the Los Angeles Superior Court on Commonwealth Ave. For more details, see the official flyer here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/24/1624222.shtml

Who's Lying About Early Feminism?

Hombre · 24 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Philalethes writes "Art Lemasters over at MND has a very interesting article on the suppressed early history of what we now know as the feminist movement: 'Susan B. Anthony: Racist Manipulator.' This censored history (written, as always, by the victors) needs to be returned to the public eye: 'When mentioning feminism, people often write about those good, moderate feminists--feminist leaders of the 1800s. Let's go Web surfing. You might be really surprised at what we'll find.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/24/1617231.shtml

Weekly Activist Challenge!

Hombre · 24 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Here at MANN, activism is literally our middle name. As such, we have challenged ourselves and our readers to make the most of Farrell's candidacy for governor to spread the word about men's issues. Over at the grassroots center, we're putting up a new challenge every day, and a new weekly challenge every week, that will help to spread the word about men's issues and lead to greater consideration towards them from politicians in the future. Will you take the challenge?

08-21 to 08-30: This week's Weekly Activist Challenge is to write up an article that discusses Farrell's campaign and submit it to at least 4 media outlets for publishing, ideally located in California. Note that this week's challenge has been extended to run until next Sunday.

Archived challenges can be found here.
If you'd like to contribute some daily, weekly, or campaign long challenge ideas, please let us know.

Know of someone who's gone above and beyond the call of duty for Farrell's campaign? Let us know about that too!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/24/1646201.shtml

Smear Campaign agianst Fathers??

D · 25 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Hoax Bombs have been sent to various places in the UK , such as court houses, family offices etc.. The target for blame is at the Fathers' Rights Movement. Well, it is quite well known among the followers of Erin Pizzey of how she was constantly threatened with bomb threats while on her book tour. In fact Erin needed armed guards to escort across the UK. We know that Radical Feminists can be very militant, this web site has links to many of their violent protests especially with Senator Anne Cools. Make no mistake these bomb hoaxes real or not will only increase a police state in an already increasingly totalitarian society. This is huge in my opinion and will create laws to further oppress the movement. Wether it's a smear campaign against men, or; a men's group or individual becoming desperate enough to do the hoax, this will change things. Warble has described false accusations by feminist organizations as a standard procedure. I think we should consider the various alternatives and deal with them.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/24/2217236.shtml

Brainwashed Novelists

D · 25 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal writes "I read a lot of scienc fiction, mysteries and adventure novels; and I'm amazed at the number of male writers who have fallen for the feminist line. These books are full of macho women and men who victimize women. They never show the men who have been driven to desperation or suicide by vicious women. So I've started making comments about these books at amazon.com. The page for each book at their site allows you to post a rating and comments about the book. Let's take advantage of it to spread the word!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/24/2253247.shtml

Teenage kids charged with statutory rape of each other

Hombre · 25 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This is the kind of thing you'd expect to come from The Onion, except in this case its real. From the article...

"Sex between kids is not legal," said Assistant District Attorney Lori Kornblum, who is prosecuting the case.

According to the law, "Whoever has sexual contact or sexual intercourse with a person who has not attained the age of 16 is guilty of a Class C felony." There is no mention of consent.

Read about it at http://www.jsonline.com/news/metro/aug03/163688.asp.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/25/1717245.shtml

10 Rules for Women

D · 25 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This is great from Ask-Men. Not sure if it was posted, good for a laugh and very true. I also recomend watching the first half or so of the Tao of Steve. Anyways enjoy.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/25/1811224.shtml

NCFM-DC Interview on WFAX-AM available for downloa

Hombre · 25 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt Campbell writes "For those interested who didn't catch it a few weeks back, a radio interview with Don Karnes of WFAX-AM in Falls Church, VA, and myself is available for download by going to:

http://briefcase.yahoo.com/mcc99

and click on the "interview" folder link, then right-click on the file and save it to your hard drive.

The file size is just over 9 MB, so T-1 (ie, at work) or via DSL/cable modem is definitely recommended to get it. Please let me know what you think of of it.

- Matt""

For those who don't already know, Matt Campbell is the head of the DC chapter of the National Coalition of Free Men. This file require Realplayer to use, which is freeware available for downloading here for the PC and here for the mac.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/25/1958207.shtml

Need a Publisher for your Men's Issues Book?

D · 26 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This is a reletively inexpensive way to get your book going. Granted it won't get the big push from the networks, but you know you can do it. Trafford Publishing offers an alternative. Also Cyberman Books is another resource to get your book started. These are places that should be utilized by anyone interested in the Men's Movement. The important thing is that people read what you have to say. One issue that affects men's issues is that men do not read or buy books as much. This is a challenge for the men's movement, and one that can be overcome.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/26/0432200.shtml

From the mouth of a woman...

D · 26 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Gonzo Kid writes "Well, I will be go to ... You almost have to wonder if this is really a woman. Of course, read the "comments" section at the bottom of this, and a few show their true colors... http://64.33.12.99/childsupport.php If this is a woman, I want to bear her children."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/26/0443239.shtml

The Degradation of LA's 'Deadbeat Dad Court'

D · 26 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The government's all-encompassing war on so-called "deadbeat dads" is often simply a war on low-income and minority fathers. Nowhere is this made clearer than by the degradation, demonization and dehumanization of hard luck fathers in downtown Los Angeles' notorious "Deadbeat Dad Court."

Los Angeles family law attorneys Jeffrey Jacobsen and Bill Hauck discussed this ongoing and unrecognized human tragedy on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles on Sunday, August 24. To listen to the archived version of the show, go to His Side .

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/26/0444238.shtml

Woman Arrested on Sex Charges

Adam · 27 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "
Here is yet another story about a woman having sex with underage males and being charged with sexual misconduct NOT statutory rape mind you.

Would a man in this situation be charged only with "lewd and lascivious battery?"

I don't think so. He would be charged with rape!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/27/152232.shtml

Memo Feminists: Fathers Have a Role in Families Too

Hombre · 27 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I'm seeing more and more articles like this slipping past the lace curtain lately. This one makes the simple point that fathers are integral to a family, and that "men are not money-making machines".
http://www.theage.com.au/articles/2003/08/26/1061663791169.html

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/27/1617217.shtml

"Ladies" Attack Stripper At Bachelorette Party

Adam · 27 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CPM writes "Ladies Attack Stripper At Bachelorette Party

Hmm, let's see... A bachelorette, her mother, and a bridesmaid expect a little something from a stripper, they don't get it, so they punch, kick, and hit him over the head with a bottle. Mom gets 30 days court supervision (read "no punishment at all") and $2500 restitution. Daughter and bridesmaid get all charges dropped. Not a bad deal for the ladies! You guys know the routine right? Flip it around. A bachelor, his father, and a groomsman expect a little something from a stripper and she does not deliver. So the three guys decide to beat her up instead. By show of hands, how many of you believe that any of these guys will not be charged with rape (among other miscellaneous charges)? No wait, keep your hands up, I'm not finished counting. Also, would any of the three men have all charges against them dropped? And just in case you didn't notice, this little story just happens to be in the "Strange News" section so as to make it seem funny. My god, I think my comments here are longer than the article."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/27/157206.shtml

Suicides as Result of Court Decisions?

D · 28 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Australian courts are probing suicides as a result of court decisions. I think this is a major step towards looking at the injustices of the courts. I also want to point out the amount of homocides in relation to the court's decisions. In many cases it's a murder suicide scenario. A big issue for men and women. One that needs to be looked at objectively. Click Here

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/27/2241239.shtml

Female Childlove - Feminist NAMBLA?

D · 28 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original tparker writes "Not sure if this is a correct venue for this site, but I think it is worth bringing to the attention of fathers out there, in any case. Read the FAQ and draw your own conclusions. I don't imagine this sites speaks for any large portion of the population, but it argues that mother-child incest and woman-child sex should be considered acceptable and appropriate. (Father-child incest is condemned on the site, however....)"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/28/007202.shtml

Exposing Feminist Militant Terrorism Tactics

D · 28 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

If anyone has any more information or evidence of how feminists have used terrorist style tactics to get their way please send it to MANN administration. Erin Pizzey was constantly bomb threatened as she tried to do her book tour. In her book "Prone To Violence" Erin discribed how she need policemen to escort her around the UK for fear of harm. In the recent events of bomb threats in the UK I believe this is something that should be looked at. Nobody has any evidence as to who the culprits are but people are still pointing fingers. Is it the desperation of a father who can't win no matter what he does? Is it the desperation of feminist organizations wanting to stifle fathers` rights movement. Hell it could be the MI5 trying to expain an excuse to shut down fathers' rights activists before they get to out of hand. If we are going to talk conspiracies lets go all the way. These tactics are nothing new to feminists. Read Here for more on Erin Pizzey

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/28/0034253.shtml

Bizarre birthday behavior sets mom on court course

Hombre · 28 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The title makes you think she's just an eccentric woman who got a little out of hand doesn't it? You'd never guess that this woman, who was released on her own recognizance, had repeatedly attempted to grope her son's friends, tried to give them drugs, gave them beer, driven drunk over 100 mph with them in the car, went off the road twice in the process, handed them bills to stick into her panties, and pressured them into driving her car even after they told her they didn't have licenses. All of the boys were under 16, though their exact ages aren't revealed. On the bright side, at least it looks like she's being charged for the whole gambit, and the paper did mention her name.

http://www.sharon-herald.com/localnews/recentnews/0308/ln082703b.html

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/28/1656254.shtml

Women teachers doping our young boys

D · 28 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

donaldcameron1 writes "It would appear that the custodians of our boys minds can't cope with young boys! Using drugs to enforce politically correct behavior is inexcusable, and I want the perpetrators of this form of child abuse held accountable.

Teachers diagnosing ADD in 50% of cases: study

Doctors act as 'rubber stamp'

Julie Smyth

National Post

Thursday, August 28, 2003"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/28/1927226.shtml

death penalty

D · 28 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

greg walden writes "please tell everyone please checkout www.moratoriumcampaign.org people sign petitions on line nationwide because of the growing crisis in this country thank you."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/28/1930208.shtml

Farrell addresses spirited protest rally in front

Adam · 29 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anon User writes: "Men's and fathers' rights California gubernatorial candidate Warren Farrell addressed a spirited protest rally against anti-father family court bias Tuesday in downtown Los Angeles. For details, see "Fathers' Rights California Gubernatorial Candidate Warren Farrell Addresses Rally in Front of LA Court"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/29/1948253.shtml

This is what it's come to.

D · 30 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Man runs from police because he is wanted for 'child support'. He nearly gets killed as police describe him as putting his hands in his pants and acting suspicious. Story Here

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/30/0256242.shtml

Woman Killed Infant Son Then Had Sex

D · 30 August 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CPM writes "Woman Killed Infant Son Then Had Sex

Not much to say here other than I would like to know the specifics of the case. I think that for the woman to blame the boyfriend and the jury not fall for it, there must have been overwhelming evidence pointing to her. We all know that juries tend to search for a scapegoat or an excuse to let the woman off. For some reason this jury did not!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/08/30/0257253.shtml

MSN.com: Girls, Boys, and Autism

Adam · 1 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "This is interesting coming from MSN:
It actually doesn't bash boys. But notice the title of the aricle puts the girls first despite the fact that 80% of autistics are male.

Also note the various subtle anti-male jabs in the article. I'll let you spot them for yourself-- oh that's right, most of you are men and can only view things in terms of systems and stuff. Not able to perceive social vagaries and so forth. Oh yeah, that's it. Well, never mind, don't even try, you're male and thus can't interepret social cues or subtle distinctions in your environment... stuff like being beat up on TV by females and having the canned audience laugh at you. Or something like that..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/01/1511238.shtml

Terry Bradshaw Speaks Out about his Depression

Hombre · 1 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

"I thought maybe if I won a Super Bowl ... then maybe two Super Bowls will make me happy, or three or four ... but nothing pleased me." - Terry Bradshaw, see article.

This is the way the Superman complex works. No matter where you're at in life, the feeling is that to be okay you need to be more successful than you are right now, you need to make more money, have a prettier girlfriend, be in the same shape you were in back in college, etc. to be okay. As Terry Bradshaw's statement demonstrates, this feeling doesn't go away when you accomplish those goals, but typically makes you think you need to accomplish them even more or transfers itself to other goals.

For more information about how men's success object pressure can lead to depression or just male depression in general, see MaleDepression.com.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/01/1511212.shtml

Woman kidnapper!

Hombre · 1 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dave writes "Father, the legal custodian, is denied 2 of his daughters for 16 years! The mother runs away with 2 daughters and goes underground to deprive the father of his children. This is a very disgusting and bizarre story of a fathers rights denied. And the authorities in Riverside County CA were going to release this woman from jail, until the Texas sheriff called to stop it. By her own words she has "never committed a crime". If released she could run away from justice again!!!!

See part of the story at: http://www.blythecanews.com/BLYTHECANEWS/sites/BLYTHECANEWS/0290edition/myarticles800016.asp?P=80001 6&S=395&PubID=11112"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/01/1512222.shtml

Australian judge calls for urgent review of Rape Shield legislation

Hombre · 1 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

A new law due to be passed in two weeks stating that defenders in rape cases are not allowed to cross examine prosecutors, instead using a "person" appointed by the court to question them on the defendants behalf has rightfully drawn the ire of Justice Brian Sully, whom we hope can inspire common sense in the Australian Parliament. Some excerpts from the article...

But Justice Sully said that if the legislation, due to take effect on September 11, went through in its present form, there was a "very real risk" that the case before him would miscarry.

"It is imperative that someone get through that if we have this sorry interference with the law, it had better be done in a way that is workable - and this is probably unworkable."

Justice Sully said he presumed that the "person" would be legally qualified and be prepared to act without fee. But he asked where such a person would be found.

"What am I to do, ring the Bar Association and say, 'The best I can tell you is that the person is to be questioned in a week's time and I will send your chambers two folders'?" he asked.

http://www.smh.com.au/articles/2003/08/29/1062050674873.html

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/01/1539206.shtml

Prosecutors Fight DNA use for Exoneration

Hombre · 1 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This New York Times article exposes the moral bankruptcy of prosecutors who are challenging the release of convicted rapists from jail freed on DNA evidence. From the article...

"Mr. Dow said this exchange illustrates a trend. "What we're seeing is a double standard," he said. "Evidence will be considered more than sufficient by prosecutors if it establishes guilt and questionable or insufficient if it established innocence.""

Note that registration at the NYT website is required in order to read the article, however there is no charge for doing so.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/01/1652217.shtml

The routine drugging of little boys

Adam · 2 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Ray writes "I was watching MSNBC and heard that Scarborough Country (Labor Day evening) was going to be talking about the drugging of little boys in school, "just because they're little boys who do not fit the feminist model for males."

One of our protest signs says, WE DON'T SUBSCRIBE TO THE FEMINIST MODEL FOR MALES.

I would like to see a discussion of sports as a place for the displacement of aggression for males. The feminists don't subscribe to displacing aggression, because they feel that all forms of aggression are wrong. Title IX certainly is helping to derail the displacement of aggression for males, and drugs seem to me to be a far worse alternative.

What's a guy to do?

Ray,
California"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/02/1653220.shtml

Father guilty after taking son to hospital.

Hombre · 2 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Does a restraining order mean that a father can not legally go pick up his child to bring him to the hospital at the mother's request? According to Justice Trevor Riley, apparently so.
http://news.com.au/common/story_page/0,4057,7138499%255E13569,00.html

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/02/1759209.shtml

No Winner for Yesterday's Daily Activist Challenge

Hombre · 2 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

As some of you may know, yesterday's grassroots challenge was to write up a short editorial about your opinion on Farrell's candidacy and/or its effect on men's rights and send it to us with the best one being put on the front page today. Unfortunately, since we recieved no entries, there's no stellar article to display in all it's glory. This has caused me to question the grassroots campaign. See Read More.There has been a trend for men's activists to not get involved in activities, and the grassroots campaign has been no exception. I've seen this issue discussed on MANN, in newsgroups, on men's activists yahoo groups, and even on Angry Harry last winter when he called the inactive men's activists "Wet Whiny Whingers!", "Master Moaning Minnie(s)!", and "lazy good-for-nothing SCUMBAG(s)!". When I look at the results of some of the activities men's activists have been petitioned to support, it seems glaringly obvious to me that something is wrong.

Now I don't know that something is. I could speculate regarding the grassroots challenges that maybe this group doesn't support Farrell as much as I'd thought, perhaps most of you consider men's issues more of a hobby than a cause to be involved in, maybe you're very busy people and don't have the time to participate much. I don't know, and I think it doesn't matter. Either you'll get involved in an activity or you won't, regardless of your myriad reasons. Its not my place to judge you or to try to make you feel guilty about what you decide to and not to be a part of. After all, I haven't taken every activist opportunity I've seen either.

However, right now I'd like to figure out if continuing with the challenges is a waste of time I could better spend on other endeavors. If nobody wants to participate in the challenges, then there's no point in making them. If that's the case, I'd like to know now. If you aren't willing to participate in tommorow's daily challenge, just don't post a comment in reply to this. If however you do feel that the activist challenges are a worthwhile thing and you're willing to commit to participating in them, please post a reply to this stating so. If I get at least 5 different people to make a commitment to doing tommorow's challenge, and a few a week from here on out, I'll keep making them. Considering the amount of traffic this site gets that isn't asking for all that many. If I get fewer than that I don't consider it productive and I'll invest my efforts on other ventures. I won't be judgmental towards this group or have hard feelings, I'll just look at it as this particular activist attempt didn't work out. For an idea of what kinds of challenges I'm talking about, see the archived list at http://www.mensactivism.org/grassroots/PreviousChallenges.htm.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/02/1919200.shtml

His Side: Less Dads, More Crime

Adam · 2 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anon user writes "According to a new Justice Department study, the United States has the highest incarceration rate in the world. More than 5.6 million Americans are in prison or have served time there--one out of every 37 American adults. Studies show that crime is correlated with fatherlessness more than with any other social factor, including income and race. Jennifer Roback Morse, author of "Parents or Prisons," discussed this problem on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles on Sunday, August 31. To listen to the archived version of the show, go to His Side for more."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/02/1656215.shtml

Men's Hour forum is here!

Hombre · 3 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "After being dropped by MND the Men's Hour forum is back. It is divided into 4 areas, Serious, Fun, News, Feminist Free Area (No, you don't get a free feminist. It means you must have a valid email address to post there). Posts include female childlove site (from MensActivism), Men's DV site in top 25 of bad sites? (from DLJ blog), another hunger strike and Fathers-4-Justice are impugned about bomb hoaxes. Hope to see you there!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/03/0036249.shtml

Activists' Activism

D · 3 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Today , as I do often in a year, I put an ad in a local paper that reads: "Learn how biased and misleading "research" can discriminate against you or someone you love. For info email: profair@rogers.com". I advertise in the Penny Saver which circulates about 40 000 papers once a week and costs about $7.00 a week. This time I am running the ad for about 3 weeks. It works. I usually send respondants my speech, which covers a variety of poorely made public policies that discriminate against men based on bad research. I try to be gentle in my delivery while nailing the facts of the matter. I urge anyone to do it. And I have to commend Ray, a member here who has a sign on the back of his pick up truck. Ray drives around L.A. ? with this giant sign. If you've seen the pictures you know what Im talking about. Handing out pamplets is another good way. Everything helps. Reaching new people is key.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/03/1848224.shtml

A web site to my far away daughter

D · 3 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Benoit Leroux writes "A father build a web site to his 2 and half year old daughter. She is far away. She is in America, he is in Canada.

http://www.carbanzo.com/mafille/fr/micaela.html"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/03/1839230.shtml

Men's Hour Adding Video!

Hombre · 3 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "The August Men's Hour is delayed, at least until September! Due to editing of the F4J Brecon and Exeter protests which is taking longer than anticipated due to doing both video and audio editing for the first time. I hope it will be worth the wait when it is finished."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/03/2035226.shtml

Saying No to Zero Tolerance

Hombre · 3 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Looks like some people in the Ontario education system are finally waking up to the problems with zero tolerance policies, as this Globe and Mail article explains. From the article...

"Not one of the 20 educators contacted for this story endorsed zero tolerance. Most felt the time had come for a more proactive strategy."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/03/2046249.shtml

Belief.net runs piece on Ritalin Use

Hombre · 3 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "Pleasantly surprised to see this article on overuse/misuse of Ritalin: http://www.beliefnet.com/story/131/story_13161_1.h tml

Belief.net is highly trafficked, too."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/03/2055230.shtml

MSN on "Why women make better managers"

Hombre · 4 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original mens_issues writes "MSN had a link to this misandric article about "Why women make better managers."

Can you spot the errors in this article?

The link to it is:

http://www.bcentral.com/articles/krotz/150.asp"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/04/024208.shtml

Mere Men

Hombre · 4 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This article in The Age discusses in some detail the negative protrayal of men in the media. An interesting tidbit mentioned therein...

"A survey conducted for the ASB in 2002, revealed that while 40 per cent of all complainants thought women were portrayed offensively, 23 per cent were offended by the depiction of men."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/04/0217212.shtml

Impending Florida Execution Piques Abortion Debate

Hombre · 4 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This Christian Science Monitor article reports...

"The events involving Hill mark the singular intersection of two of the most controversial issues in US society: the death penalty and abortion. Although violence against abortion providers has declined somewhat in recent years, the impending landmark execution has once again drawn close attention to the issues - which has elicited a vocal and unusual set of responses across the spectrum."

Paul Hill's website is, for the moment, still up and contains several articles in which he argues in favor of killing abortion doctors.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/04/0257238.shtml

Misandric Insanity Is Worldwide

Hombre · 4 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "http://pub.tv2.no/nettavisen/english/article131263 .ece

Here is an article from far away Norway where getting an unintentional "woody" in the presense of at least two females can cause you to lose you livelilhood.

Evidently, the insanity of misandry is a world wide problem."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/04/1753240.shtml

Woman Murders Boyfriend, Gets Custody, Murders Child

Hombre · 4 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

SacredNaCl writes "As reported by CTV Canada Shirley Turner killed her boyfriend, fled to Canada to avoid prosecution, was picked up by authorities there and was facing extradition hearings. The childs grandparents had filled a motion for custody, but Canadian authorities still gave the child back to the mother even though she was facing extradition for first degree murder in the US. End result? Three dead including a small child."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/04/1757214.shtml

Skimpy swimsuit on men indecent exposure?

Hombre · 4 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "A man is arrested at a Taco bell because his Speedo swimsuit that he was wearing at a local beach violated an Arkansas law where a person (read - a man) can be charged with indecent exposure if "he knows his conduct is likely to cause affront or alarm." The man faces a $750 fine and possible jail time if convicted of indecent exposure. Not that I agree that this man's decision was in good taste, but would the same happen to a woman if she wore her bikini top and I considered it an "affront?" Or how about women wearing sexy clothing at work while men have to wear suits? It seems that many laws are written specifically for men alone.

http://www.boston.com/news/daily/04/odds_speedo.ht m"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/04/1758219.shtml

Farrell Planning Bold Move for Tommorow Morning!

Hombre · 5 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The following was just sent to us by the Farrell Campaign...

"Dr. Warren Farrell, Democratic Gubernatorial Candidate, Claims Democrats Have Driven Men Out of the Party and Businesses out of the State.

Farrell to "Nail" to the Capitol Door His "Ten Theses Toward a 'Reformation' of the Democratic Party"

CARLSBAD, Ca. Almost 500 years after Martin Luther nailed his 95 theses to the door of the castle church at Wittenburg, Dr. Warren Farrell, with a Ph.D. (in political science) in his pocket and a "hammer" in his hand, will "nail" to the Capitol door in Sacramento his "Call for a Reformation of the Democratic Party." The "nailing" will occur at 10:15 am pct. on Friday, September 5 at the Capitol's main entrance.

Dr. Farrell is the first California Gubernatorial Candidate to be listed on the ballot as a "Fathers' Issues Author." His Ten Theses envision a three-part Reformation. First, a Reformation of the Democratic Party's propensity for driving men out of the party;
second, a Reformation of the Party's propensity for driving businesses out of the state; and third, a Reformation of the Democratic Party's focus on pleasing constituencies by putting out fires more than by preventing the fires."

So where can I find out what the 10 theses are? As of the time of this writing, only on MANN. Click read more for details.
Dr. Warren Farrell's Ten Theses Toward a 'Reformation' of the Democratic Party

Social Solutions that Create Financial Solutions

1. Equal Father and Mother Involvement, Especially if there is Divorce. Worldwide research reported in Father and Child Reunion makes clear that children of divorce do best when they have equal time with both mom and dad. The savings are billions less for prisons, education, special education, social services, and unwed teenage pregnancies... When moms know that anything other than 50-50 parenting will cost a court fight, there will be less taxpayer money spent subsidizing fights in courts and more balanced children at home.

2. Universal prenatal care. An anxious or undernourished mom means a child damaged for life. Nine months of prevention saves ninety years of intervention.

3. A Men's Birth Control Pill and a Paternity Fraud Bill. A men's pill means fewer children who are not wanted by their dad because the dad felt tricked into fatherhood; a paternity fraud bill means fewer men falsely named "dad." Both will reduce the child support enforcement bureaucracy that currently, at great expense, chases down mens who are hiding from the fatherhood into which they felt tricked.

4. Intensive Communication Training Taught from First Grade, with Simultaneous Retraining of Parents. Both families and businesses are destroyed by poor communication--our inability to handle criticism is our human Achilles' heel. It is more cost-effective to prevent divorce and business inefficiency than to repair it--to communicate rather than litigate.

5. Schools with More Male Teachers--Men Who are as Responsive to the Needs of our Sons as our Daughters. For most of the 20th Century fewer women than men graduated from high school and college; now the reverse is true. But we have thousands of programs and scholarships exclusively for women as if they were the sex in crisis. Boys go from mother-only homes to female-only classrooms, and then, without positive male role models, we wonder why they join gangs. The result is a "boys' crisis." The costs are emotional and financial: increases in our sons committing suicides, leading to Columbines, suffering from ADD, doing worse than girls socially, emotionally, physically and in all subjects except math. Our neglect of the "boys' crisis" costs California billions to "pick up the pieces" by hiring more teachers per class, special education, and special schools. The solution begins with confronting our double standard: when girls do worse, we blame the schools; when boys do worse, we blame the boys.

6. Prioritize Long-term and Win-win Economic Solutions. Caring about labor means caring about businesses that create the jobs for labor. Which means creating incentives that attract business and jobs, not taxes that drive them away. Work safety standards need stronger enforcement (to counter the easier profits of neglect), but workers' comp needs caps. The fiercest attack must be on tax loopholes such as offshore banking that indirectly increases the taxes of the honest taxpayer. California must increase its tax incentives for alternative energy development, and the development of long-term pacts with Canada that has 40% of the world's fresh water supply.

7. Update California's Institutions to Reflect the Shift from the "Women's Crisis" of the 20th Century to the "Men's Crisis" of the 21st Century. Today men die sooner of all 15 leading causes of death; our sons' suicide rates are increasing even as our daughters' are decreasing. These gaps are magnified by Commissions on the Status of Women, and by Offices of Women's Health, even as we neglect equivalent studies for men. In California's universities, Women's Studies without Men's Studies create a hostile environment for men that keep men away from the social sciences. (See The Myth of Male Power and Women Can't Hear What Men Don't Say for full documentation.)

8. Empower our Daughters with Long-Term Female Empowerment rather than Short-term Female Victim Power. The Women Industry from Diversity to Domestic Violence, from Affirmative Action to Women's Studies, from Family Court to Social Workersóis invested in the magnification of women's status as victim. The woman who portrays herself as a victim gets power. Thus Female Victim Power. The dismantling of the Women Industry means billions of reduced costs, and thousands of our daughters being self-empowered rather than dependent on victim power.

9. Discourage the Government-as-Substitute-Husband. When the state of California offers a mom more than the dad can provide if she does not marry the dad, it bribes the mom to "marry" the governmentóthe state turns itself into the Government-as-Substitute Husband. We now know that children from poorer families living with both mom and dad do better emotionally and educationally than children from wealthier families without dad. (See Father and Child Reunion.) The bureaucracies and social workers that oversee WIC, welfare, food stamps, housing subsidies and the host of substitute dads wastes money that could better be spent on dad involvement. Money is no substitute for daddy.

10. Recognize How Our Neglect of Reforms 1-9, and especially our Neglect of Fathers and Men, has had a Disproportionate Impact on Working Class and Minority Communities. Ironically and tragically, the problems these reforms address have had a disproportionately negative impact on the very constituencies -- African-Americans, Native Americans and Latinas/os, the poor, the less educated -- about whom Democrats care deeply. Subsidized prenatal care is crucial to poor women; the combination of Government-as-Substitute-Husband and the disenfranchisement of fathers after divorce has destroyed poor families, and especially African-American families. The Democratic Party has unwittingly supported dependency as if it were afraid that a less dependent constituency would vote Republican.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/05/0030248.shtml

Selective Service

Adam · 5 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "The federal government requires only males above 18 to register for the Selective Service (i.e., sign up for the draft) in order to receive financial aid for school. Only males. A group of students have filed a lawsuit claiming 5th and 14th Amendment violations. The article does not mention results. Does anyone know what has happened?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/05/1540203.shtml

Women Admits Lying About Rape

Adam · 5 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

SacredNaCl writes "The Age Has a story of how a woman faked a violent rape story, claiming her husband raped her in front of the kids to get the edge in a divorce. It's even complete with video evidence of her coaching the kids to lie, a fallback lie, and just for good measure the female attorney throws in the old worn out fallback lie to deny accountability "this shows how dysfunctional and how much abuse she took"?

Unfortunately it doesn't say what they will do to her, but irregardless of what they do, it will not be severe enough IMO."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/05/2055202.shtml

Update - Farrell has nailed the theses

Hombre · 5 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I've just received confirmation that Farrell has nailed the theses to the Capitol door as planned. Apparently there was only a minor problem when police arrived and informed him he needed a permit to nail the ten theses to the capital building, (makes you wonder how some of these laws come about), so the cops handed him a few papers, he filled them out and was granted a permit. I've not found any info from any major news sources yet but the incident was watched by both FOX and NBC's Sacramento affiliates and word has it you might want to keep your eye on the Sacramento Bee for a report too.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/05/2130227.shtml

Ask Ads 8

Adam · 6 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This time, we're looking at marital rape, namely what are your opinions of it? Do you see it as a way to attack the nearest man through his sexuality? Or perhaps as an excuse for the nearest woman to play sexual power games? Or as a sign of madness that there's a law for women who are terrified of having adult relations with the man she loved enough to marry? Regardless, let's hear what you have to say. I know my comments above cut close to heresy for some of us, but if you want to see the big picture, it helps to look at everything, ya know?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/05/2052254.shtml

Last day to complete this week's challenge

Hombre · 6 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Just a reminder that today is the last day to complete the Weekly Activist Challenge over at the grassroots center. By the way I received a fortune cookie at lunch who's fortune read "Great tidings of joy will befall those who meet life's challenges", and I'm pretty sure life's challenges in this case refers to the Farrell Grassroots Activism Challenges. Also todays Daily Activist Challenge should be a fun one for those who wish to participate, but you'll probably want to start right away.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/06/1725230.shtml

Boom in female inmates focus of national meeting

Hombre · 7 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Over the last 20 years, the number of women in prison has jumped from 4.3% of the total US prison population to 6.8%. The list of reasons includes gender-blind sentencing, but it appears as if the spokeswoman for the recently created National Workshop on Adult and Juvenile Female Offenders plans to stress harsher drug laws as the reason. See Press Herald article here.

Considering that men are far more likely than women to be locked up, (rather than sent to treatment), for drugs and that even with the gender-blind sentencing guidelines men in the US still recieve an average sentence length twice that of women regardless of the severity of the crime see DOJ statistics, (table 5-5), methinks this is yet another attempt to pretend female criminals really aren't criminals.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/07/0118233.shtml

Women's advocacy group misused money, state report says

Hombre · 7 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

From the Star Tribune...

"A board overseeing a St. Paul battered women's shelter and advocacy organization failed to make sure that state grants and other state money were used appropriately, the state legislative auditor said in a report released Friday."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/07/0124241.shtml

First hand account of a "rape"

D · 7 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Been through too much already writes "Monday 4th August was a memorable day for me; it was the day that three policemen walked into my place of work and escorted me outside, before telling me I was under arrest for rape.

(Before I go on, I should make clear that I am from England, but I have read your site for some time, and it seems that you have to put up with the same injustices that we do. Strangely I have found no English equivalent of your board.)

Go to read more.
The weekend prior to this I had been at a nightclub looking to meet some girls, as I am single. I met a girl named Chloe, and as time went on we decided to go to my place. You're probably thinking that the evening's looking good so far, and so was I - but that's not how it turned out.

When we got back to my house in Sheffield, I opened a very expensive bottle of wine, which we drank together, all the time her legs crossed towards me, playing with her hair and laughing at my jokes - giving me all the right signals. I'm sure you all know what I mean. Well after the wine, some cleverly chosen music and a few brandies, we started touching each other and went to my room.

I don't want to go into personal details, but things were progressing very pleasantly right until I started to penetrate her. Suddenly she froze up and told me "no", like she was just after some free drinks and attention or something. I carried on despite her, and while she was telling me "no", it was obvious that she wanted it.

Which brings me back to Monday. Suddenly I'm not the nice generous guy I used to be, I'm a rapist. It's taken me this long to actually hear what I'm supposed to have done, spend long hours being interrogated, and finally get bail for far more than my mother could afford (but bless her she paid the police anyway) and I can finally post my story here. My friends are avoiding me, thinking I'm a monster, and my employers have fired me because I've not been able to work for a month. I'm a pariah.

My court date is not set, but my lawyer thinks it will be within a couple of months. I hope he's right. Once that's over with I'll tell you how it went, but until then I want you all to know how it feels to be on the receiving end of a false accusation from an unstable woman.

I apologise for not giving more details, but I have been advised not to talk about my case. I've left out anything too identifying, but I felt you all deserved to know about what women can put you through with a single phone call."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/07/071200.shtml

Comic Relief

D · 7 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "Spending any serious time at this website can become seriously depressing after awhile. My son sent me these yesterday and I decided to share them here

Only in America…..

Go to read more.

1. can a pizza get to your house faster than an ambulance.

2. are there handicap parking places in front of skating rinks.

3. do drugstores make the sick walk all the way to the back of the store to get their prescriptions while healthy people can buy cigarettes at the front.

4. do people order double cheeseburgers, large fries, and a diet coke.

5. do we leave cars worth thousands of dollars in the driveway and put our useless junk in the garage.

6. do we buy hot dogs in packages of ten and the buns in packages of eight.

7. do we use the word 'politics' to describe the process so well: 'poli' in Latin meaning 'many' and 'tics' meaning 'bloodsucking creatures'.

8. do they have drive-up ATM machines with Braille lettering.

Do you ever wonder….

1. why the sun lightens our hair, but darkens our skin?

2. why women can't put on mascara with their mouth closed?

3. why you never see the headline "Psychic Wins Lottery!"?

4. why "abbreviated" is such a long word?

5. why doctors call what they do "practice"?

6. why it is that to stop Windows 98, you have to click on "Start"?

7. why lemon juice is made with artificial flavor and dishwashing liquid is made with real lemons?

8. why the man who invests all your money is called a broker?

9. why the time of day with the slowest traffic is called rush hour?

10. why there's no mouse-flavored cat food?

11. when dog food is new and improved tasting, who tests it?

12. why Noah didn't swat those two mosquitoes?

13. why they sterilize the needle for lethal injections?

14. Why they don't make the whole plane out of that same stuff that indestructible black box is made of?

15. why sheep don't shrink when it rains?

16. why they are called apartments when they are all stuck together?

17. if con is the opposite of pro, is congress the opposite of progress?

18. if flying is so safe, why they call the main section of an airport the terminal?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/07/079212.shtml

Feminists haven't been complaining enough

Hombre · 7 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I never thought I would write those words in my life, but it seems that when it comes to Warren Farrell's campaign feminists have suddenly become unusually silent. Now I'm not sure what the medical reason is for this, (I'm guessing an outbreak of laryngitis), but as we all know if the feminists were healthy they'd be protesting up a storm. So it occured to me that men's activists, being the kind and helpful people we are, might want to complain about Farrell's campaign for them. See this week's challenge for details.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/07/1710239.shtml

Higher-Ed Gender Gap Article Sends Bad Message

Adam · 8 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Code Monkey writes "I found this article in the Portland, Maine Press-Herald to be similar to a lot on the topic of men's declining enrollment in higher education. The article acknowledges that women are getting degrees at a much higher rate than men, that this gender gap is continually increasing, but makes excuses for the disparity that tries to downlplay the significance of this issue. For example, claiming that "women need college degrees just to get jobs that pay as much as the jobs men get straight out of high school", and focusing on the oh-so-urgent issue that women won't be able to find enough "qualified" men to marry. The article even refers to Boston Globe's leading male-bashing columnist, Ellen Goodman. You can send respones to the editor at letters@pressherald.com."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/08/1549244.shtml

Gender Stereotypes

Hombre · 8 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Mangesh writes "This is an interesting article from India's Financial Express on the how gender stereotypes are breaking down in urban India. You can read the story here.

http://fecolumnists.expressindia.com/full_column.p hp?content_id=41451"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/08/177217.shtml

Huge List of Evidence of DV against Men

Hombre · 8 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

crescentluna writes "I would guess at roughly 300 entries shown here. This is a reference list, some are books about domestic violence, some aren't studies of domestic violence but of how people respond to it. If people try to claim Straus and Gelles aren't enough, here are plenty more."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/08/1710217.shtml

Womenists in denial

Hombre · 8 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

donaldcameron1 writes "

> Woman accused of plotting rape apologizes ??????

Graeme Hamilton

National Post

Saturday, September 06, 2003

> "She wrote in July, 2002, [in] her long-running correspondence with an imprisoned rapist and certified dangerous offender. "My limits? I don't really know," … But no, I don't think I'd want to witness a slaying. Torture maybe!" … "I don't want her dead. I want her alive to live with the pain and suffering."

IMHO statistics on spousal abuse are junk science in pristine form."
NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/08/1712253.shtml

Soldier's father accuses Jessica Lynch

Hombre · 8 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

From the Ananova article...

"He told a TV station in Comfort, Texas: "Pretty severe, isn't it? That she makes money off the death of my son and off the deaths of so many others.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/08/1721258.shtml

Amazon woman arrested for ritualistic serial killings

Hombre · 8 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Valentina de Andrade, the ringleader of a religious cult which believes that all boys born after 1981 are possessed by the devil, has finally been arrested 14 years after the group started torturing, maiming, castrating, and killing little boys. Details here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/08/1732200.shtml

How Divorce Makes Men Outlaws

D · 8 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Stephen Baskerville does great work. It should be read and passed around. I believe the Courts are already in Disrepute, they are just unwilling to admit it yet. Read Here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/08/1858218.shtml

Misandry In CPS Kills Child

Adam · 9 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes " This is a story of a father whose baby daughter was killed by her mentally deranged mother after he filed a warning with Child Protective Services stating his daughter was in grave danger being in custody of the mother.

He is suing the CPS and one of the points in his lawsuit is that he was virtually ignored by the apparatchiks in CPS because he is a male. Let's hope he wins big!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/09/1636237.shtml

Please Call Project Sanctuary

D · 9 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Steve Deluca is having computer problems and asked me to post this announcement from him about a Project Sanctuary ad that announces the "every 12 seconds" figure for female DV victims but fails to state that the same source for all of these "every XX seconds" factoids says----" Please go to read more. ----the same number of males are also victimized. I called the number myself and left a message, and they called back and left me a message apologizing for excluding male victims and saying they did that to get the public's interest. Amazing how they foster existing steretoypes just by playing off them and create their own relentless cycle of abuse against males. Marc. Here's the announcement from Steve _____ Today's paper, Fort Bragg Advocate News, has this submission from Project Sanctuary "A woman is beaten every 12 seconds" (and you thought it was "in this nation Eighteen percent of all law enforcement deaths are the result of responding to domestic violence calls. These are facts that society lives with. Project Sanctuary is accepting application for the fall 2003 volunteer training. Volunteers are essential to the operation of Project Sanctuary..."
So, anyone out there who is wishing to call to volunteer, OR TO ASK THEM WHERE THEY GET THIS INFO ... the number is 707 961 1507 ... If you call long distance, I will reimburse you for the call. Anyone who wants to give me some statistics related to police deaths, or the 12 seconds stuff ... send same e mail to me, for my next letter to the editor... Please let me know what responses you had when you questioned where this 12 second statistic came from. I would appreciate it if they heard from more than one person, I like them to know that they are being watched.

Steve DeLuca"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/09/1752209.shtml

Jury Nullification

Hombre · 9 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "http://www.juryduty.org/JuryDuty.htm

One of the reasons men are oppressed under misandric laws is that these laws have never really been subjected to the process of passing muster in jury trials where jury nullification could stop the abuse.

The link above has details on just how jury nullification works and most important tells how to avoid getting tossed out of the potential jury pool due to your beliefs.

Men in the movement have to be prepared to take advantage of the opportunity to use jury nullification to stop judicial misandry when and if they ever are called for jury duty on cases like marital rape, violations under the VAWA, workplace sexual harassment and so forth."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/09/1913203.shtml

His Side: Father Spends 3 Months in Jail

Adam · 9 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anon User Writes: "One of the greatest dangers men and fathers face today is the way restraining orders based on false domestic violence allegations are used to drive fathers out of their children's lives. There have been numerous documented cases of decent fathers being arrested for sending their children birthday cards, attending their son's Little League games, or calling their own children at the wrong time of the day. Last night Craig, a Seattle father of two who was sentenced to three months in jail for returning his ex-wife's phone call, told his story on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles and KKOL AM 1300 in Seattle/Tacoma. To listen to the archive, go to His Side"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/09/1638208.shtml

New Group: Warren Farrell for Governor

Hombre · 10 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original mens_issues writes "I have created a new Yahoo! Group called Warren Farrell for governor. The web address of the group is:

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/WarrenFarrellForGove rnor/

Please join this group and support Warren in his bid for governor of California. Even a couple of hundred members would bring this group into the top ten California politics groups, making it more visible to those seeking such groups on the web.

Steve"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/10/0253244.shtml

Men's Health Article on "Idiot Male" Sitcom Roles

Adam · 10 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Code Monkey writes "This month's Men's Health magazine includes an article about the way men are overwhelmingly portrayed as idiots and losers in today's sitcoms. While the author doesn't do much more than complain about this situation and offer examples of it, I do think this is a good sign that the issue is being discussed in a maintstream mag like Men's Health*. The media does have an impact on our culture and we should care about the consistently negative portrayals of men as incompetent jerks on TV."*

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/10/164216.shtml

Man recieves child support payback after 20 years

Hombre · 10 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Times Recorder reports that "Money that Jonathan Sims paid for child support -- for a child that was determined through DNA testing not to be his daughter -- was finally returned to him last week by the Ohio Department of Job and Family Services through the Muskingum County Child Support Enforcement Agency"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/10/1655209.shtml

Fathers-4-Justice member ties self to crane

Hombre · 10 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Jolly Stainsby, a member of the father's rights group Fathers-4-Justice, has tied himself to a crane from which he intends to stage week long protest of the way father's rights are treated in court. See this Echo&Exress News article for more details.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/10/1718225.shtml

Sexual Harassment Novel

Adam · 10 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Neil Steyskal writes "Today, Wednesday, the Wall Street Journal reviewed a new novel about a fraudulent sexual-harassment lawsuit: "You Look Nice Today," by Stanley Bing. It sounds like a good read. Here's the amazon.com review"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/10/166207.shtml

Judge Rejects Draft Lawsuit

Adam · 11 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

To quote: "If a deeply-rooted military tradition of male-only draft registration is to be ended, it should be accomplished by that branch of government which has the constitutional power to do so and which best represents the 'consent of the governed' - the Congress of the United States, the elected representatives of the people"
Hmmm, I got a few opinions about this, but let's read the article for now.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/11/1626237.shtml

Farrell to Challenge Democrats

Hombre · 11 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

This just in from the Farrell Campaign...

"CARLSBAD, Ca. At the Los Angeles Convention Center at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday, September 13, Dr. Warren Farrell will challenge his Democratic colleagues/opponents to take a quill pen in hand to sign his "Ten Theses for 'Reformation' of the Democratic Party."

See Read More for details.
"Farrell's "Ten Theses" stress solutions he believes simultaneously solve social and fiscal problems. With a Ph.D. in political science and books such as Father and Child Reunion and Why Men Are The Way They Are emanating from his own updated "quill" pen, Farrell puts a focus on what he considers "the Party's propensity to drive dads out of the home, drive men out of the Party, and drive businesses out of state."

Farrell claims the Party has not updated itself from the "Women's Crisis" of the 20th Century to what he feels is the "Men's Crisis" of the 21st Century.

In his official statement to the California Democratic Party, Dr. Farrell says:

"The Democratic Party is my Party. It is the Party of sensitivity and inclusiveness. Yet in some ways we are being insensitive and exclusionary. We care about families, but are disenfranchising dads after divorce. We care about education, but are ignoring why our sons are less likely to graduate from high school and college, and are neglecting the recruitment of male teachers. We care about inclusiveness, but support scholarships for women only. We care about integrity, but ignore paternity fraud. We care about health, but are ignoring the six times greater suicide rate of our sons and the six year earlier death rate of our dads. We care about jobs, but tax the job creators until they leave the state. We care about minorities, but miss how our failures disproportionately hurt minorities. We call ourselves progressive, but fail to update policies from the "women's crisis" of the 20th Century to the "men's crisis" of the 21st Century. We are driving dads out of the family, men out of the party, and businesses out of the state. My "Ten Theses Toward a 'Reformation' of the Democratic Party" will restore congruity with our values and save the state billions. See www.warrenfarrell.com.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/11/1826248.shtml

Ultrasound Zaps Prostate Cancer

Adam · 11 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

While there are some side effects, this new treatment shows great potenial. It does look like the way ahead. "In a study published in the journal Urology, Japanese researchers tested a new method that uses high-intensity focused ultrasound (HIFU) to deliver intense sound energy to destroy the tumor without damaging the surrounding tissue."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/11/1633220.shtml

German court determines man is liable to ex-wive's widowed husband

Hombre · 12 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "http://story.news.yahoo.com/news?tmpl=story&cid=573&ncid=757&e=1&u=/nm/20030911/od_nm/odd_germany_pe nsion_dc

Yep, you got it. A German court ruled that a man divorced from his wife owes her new husband part of his pension after she died. So a man is paying the man his wife hooked up with after she dies because she hooked up with him after they divorced.

Why does Yahoo! News keep putting stuff like this in the Oddly Enough category when it ought to be in a new category called Civil Rights Violations of Men category?

Again, stay single. Here and abroad."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/12/034207.shtml

Ex-rocker Geldof speaks on behalf of fathers

Hombre · 12 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Bob Geldof, formally of the punk band the Boomtown Rats, has decided to speak up for deadbolt dads. Sky News tells us that...

"He was speaking at the launch of a new book on the subject, Children and Their Families, to which he which he has contributed a chapter.

He told the audience, which included Cherie Blair, parents should get equal "50-50" access to their children, as in Denmark."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/12/1628234.shtml

Where's the justice? I'd say it's been served.

Hombre · 13 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dominic7 writes "I often wonder why the Toronto Star keep publishing this vile writer. Anne Marie Aikins misused public funds, was caught and found guilty end of story.

http://www.thestar.com/NASApp/cs/ContentServer?pag ename=thestar/Layout/Article_Type1&c=Article&cid=1 063231812644&call_pageid=970599109774

I love the line:

"I don't really blame myself for what happened, but I still haven't entirely forgiven myself for the hurt that people experienced when they lost their jobs, lost their counsellors, lost their services."

Huh?

Donna Laframboise gives us a bit more detail here:

http://www.dvmen.org/dv-73.htm"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/13/159243.shtml

Mainstream Discourse on the Nonexistent Wage Gap

Hombre · 13 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

hurkle writes "http://www.askmen.com/dating/curtsmith_100/101_dat ing_advice.html

What a thing to see in a typically FHM/Maxim - oriented site. I love it I love it I love it. Note, some points are made that even veteran male advocates forget sometimes. Good stuff."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/13/1515250.shtml

2-Day Challenge to catch up for Farrell

Hombre · 13 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

09-13 & 09-14: This 2-day Daily Activist Challenge is to catch up on helping Farrell! I know its not always convenient to do a small bit of activism every day, so lets all take advantage of the extra time on the weekends to catch up. The challenge is to pick 10 challenges from the archives which you haven't yet done and do them over the weekend. The reward will be knowing you've put some real effort out in helping the movement and Farrell's campaign. Good luck!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/13/1533204.shtml

Photos of Fathers' Rally in L.A. with Warren Farrel

Adam · 14 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Warren Farrell's website has been updated to include a schedule, media coverage (some of it), a video of his CNN coverage, and some photos of the fathers' rally held at the courthouse in Los Angeles on 8/26. You can view the photos here.
We have been holding lots of small rallies that aren't on the website. We held one today with about 13 people with signs, a bullhorn, and tons of fliers, at the Democratic Convention. We challenged the democrats for losing sight of their values, for becoming femicrats, and for driving so many men out of their party, and we informed hundreds of them, perhaps thousands, about fathers' rights and paternity fraud. We were both outside and inside.

Tomorrow Warren will speak at a church service, a homeless center, and a dinner (three separate events). This is an exhausting campaign but it's very worthwhile and we thank everyone for their support.

We're getting the issues out one small event at a time.

Marc"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/14/1811252.shtml

British fertility expert doubts the doom of the Y

Adam · 14 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Analog Worms writes "British fertility expert Lord Robert Winston, author and TV presenter of BBC Science programs believes declining sperm counts and the doom of the Y Chromosone is a load of media rubbish."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/14/1817203.shtml

Destroying the Family

D · 15 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

"People are most susceptible to propaganda when already in a high state of tension, and the emotion aroused by this scene was quickly used in the play to deal with what is perhaps the most difficult problem facing the Communists: how to break down the traditional family system in a manner that will split fathers and sons in hatred, and thus turn them in bitterness to the promising haven of Communism."

This quote is on the topic of a play that was being presented to university students. It was titled: "The Question of Thought".

It could probably be saddled right beside the propaganda known as "The Vagina Monologues".

The entire book is on the pdf file. A great read if I must say. Brain-Washing in Red China. In hopes of understanding what exactly is behind Misandry.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/15/0435211.shtml

Men are smarter than women because they.....

D · 15 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original rage writes "Found on the Angry Harry's website, an interesting article in the Times (UK) stating a well-known fact : men are at the same time at the top and at the bottom of the human race when it comes to the IQs. Have you ever wondered why all the geniuses throughout history happened to be males exclusively ? Now scientists have discovered the reason at last. Einstein, Beethoven, Mozart or Picasso could never have been female. To be a superior intellect, you've got to possess the once called puny Y-chromosome as explained in the article. Bad news for feminazis.

Enjoy !

http://www.angryharry.com/reBoysareStillTopDogs.ht m"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/15/0428227.shtml

Boys on Girls Sports Teams

D · 15 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Here is an excellent example of the hypocrisy surrounding equality in sports. While the feminazi's and mass media practically idolize women who play on the football team, go out for wrestling, and make the PGA circuit, look at the foaming and outrage when a male hits the female circuit. American women are increasingly indicting themselves as two-faced sexists. See www.hometownannapolis.com/cgi-bin/read/2003/09_10_18/HIG . If this link fails, the article is linked at www.mensnewsdaily.com Remember, equality is only equlaity when its in their favor."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/15/2040239.shtml

His Side: The Boy Crisis in Education

Hombre · 16 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Boys have fallen seriously behind girls at all K-12 levels. Educational consultants Bret Burkholder and Ed Leitner, founders of Boys' Hearts &Boys' Minds, explained what we need to do to make our schools more boy-friendly on His Side with Glenn Sacks on KRLA 870 AM in Los Angeles and KKOL AM 1300 in Seattle on Sunday, September 14. To listen to the show, go to http://hisside.com/show_archive.htm'

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/16/0231223.shtml

Petition against D.V. restraining order abuse

Hombre · 16 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Ray writes "Stop restraining order abuse and prosecute false accussers is the request at the top of this petition: http://www.thepetitionsite.com/takeaction/10401765 6
Orange County CA is the target of this petition, but all can sign. Men have written in to Mensactivism from Orange County CA, expressing their misery over abuses at the hands of the Domestic Violence Industry. We need your help, your signature on this petition."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/16/0236238.shtml

States Differ on College Fees in Divorce

Hombre · 16 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Las Vegas Sun writes...

"States are all over the place on this issue," said Sandra Morris, president of the American Academy of Matrimonial Lawyers. "In many situations, it's very tragic - the divorced parents don't do what they would have done if they had stayed together, and the children are pretty much cut off (from any support)."

"Judges need to listen more to how it makes a father feel when a kid says, 'Don't ever call me, I don't want to speak to you, here's my bill for $20,000,'" Boc said. "It drives people crazy."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/16/0257232.shtml

Prison Rape Elimination Act Signed Into Law

Hombre · 16 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "http://www.sbcbaptistpress.org/bpnews.asp?ID=16630

President Bush signed into law recently a bill that is supposed to stop the rape of prisoners in the nation's prisons."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/16/0250222.shtml

Man successfully sues for misuse of sperm

Hombre · 16 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Ananova gives us the scoop...

"The court ruled in favour of Kaspar after he claimed that in 1999 Bouchalova got him to give her a sample of his sperm after she told him doctors at the clinic needed it to determine what contraception was best for her."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/16/0320224.shtml

DNA To The Rescue...AGAIN!

Hombre · 16 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "http://www.jsonline.com/news/state/sep03/169169.as p

Here is a story about Steven Avery a man who was wrongly convicted of rape and served 17 years before DNA proved his innocence. He is the 137th innocent victim of the feminist promoted rape hysteria to be released by DNA.

When he was arrested he was the father of 5 minor children. It will be interesting to see if the misandric state of Wisconsin sues him for back child support. The bastards would probably do that if Mr. Avery justifiably sued the state for his 17 years in the belly of the beast."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/16/0328256.shtml

Want to become a Public Speaker??!

D · 16 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Toastmasters International: Making Effective Communication a Worldwide Reality. No you don't have to do any speaking the first night you go. Nor are you forced to speak at any time. However, Toastmasters International can certainly give you great experience in public speaking. Either for men's issues such as male depression or for your own business, career or personal quests, Toastmasters can really help you develope. Each area charges their own rates, but I believe their goal is to be as cheap as possible. My area charges $46 for 6 months. There are thousands of chapters to my understanding and it is a great way to network and add experience to your resume or personal life. You can ask me for info on a local chapter, or you can do a quick search on their site. Good luck, and don't be afraid to speak up!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/16/2044201.shtml

Feminist disquiet at "imbalance"

Adam · 17 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Doctor Damage writes "It seems that feminists don't much like it when the boot is on the other foot. In fridays courier mail Margaret Wenham reports During brisbane hearings by the House of Representatives Standing Committee on Family and Community Services, the committee members were, it seems, hostile to the notion that 50/50 joint custody was a bad starting position. It seems conservative politicians have learned from the example of their more liberal peers. Warning for non Australians: Here in the land of Oz, the Liberal party is our major right wing party, although I'm still a little fuzzy on how the left managed to appropriate that label"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/17/1531207.shtml

Man wins sexual harrassment case

D · 17 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

A Chinese man wins a case in the courts claiming a woman harrassed him severly over a period of years. It harmed his marriage and his day to day life. At the bottom of the article it explains that "Victims, often women, also shy away from filing lawsuits for fear of losing their jobs." I would like to make a statement regarding their propaganda and that is. "Victims, just as often men, also shy away from filing lawsuits for fear of being ridiculed, emasculated and not believed". Most of this contraversy really just fills lawyers backyards with big pools, but whatever.The Article Here

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/17/1728217.shtml

Boxing Anyone?

D · 18 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Crimson Arrow writes "I would have thought by now that someone would have commented on the Angry Harry vs. Karen De Coster sparring match. And in this corner ...."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/17/2211257.shtml

Washington Post covers DC Commission on Black Men

D · 18 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "My letter to the Post is as follows. I hope they publish it.

To the Editors:

It's great that the Post covered the problems of black men and boys in DC on 9/13/03 at: http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/articles/A364 7-2003Sep12.html

The problem though is that the article fails to mention what the root cause of fatherlessness is among blacks (and whites as well) in America's families: government programs that discourage ordinary women from forming long-term, committed relationships with ordinary men, the teaching of misandry to our young people of both sexes in our colleges, and so-called "family courts", influenced over the last 30 years by gender-based ideological dogma, that have worked mercilessly as a father-and-child-separating machine. All this, to create some kind of feminist utopian single-motherhood state. What's happened here in DC for the black population is an example of what is happening all across America, only moreso in DC for a variety of reasons.

Feminists and their allies in the government are the root cause of fatherlessness in society. Generalized misandry, found all over pop culture and in the mass media, reinforce the attitudes that support the policies.

The government has led the war on men and boys at the behest of feminists; they now are responsible for leading the effort to counter their misguided application of the family-destroying agenda they started in the first place."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/17/2214229.shtml

Mercedes murderer to get joint custody.

Hombre · 19 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

SacredNaCl writes " Houston Chronicle
"

A judge on Monday granted Clara Harris, serving a 20-year sentence for running down her husband with her Mercedes Benz, joint custody of her 5-year-old twin sons. The boys' paternal grandparents were given visitation rights.

The agreement approved by state District Judge K. Randall Hufstetler in Brazoria County names Harris as well as her former neighbors, Pat and Ana Jones, as joint managing conservators of Brian and Bradley Harris. The boys' grandparents, Gerald and Mildred Harris, will have visitation rights every other weekend, for extended periods in the summer and on alternating holidays, said attorney Lloyd Stansberry, who represented the Joneses.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/19/1741238.shtml

Embarrassment

Hombre · 19 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

thrudd writes "Sometimes, I am really embarrassed by my Alma Mater. Parents this is how your money is being spent on your sons' (daughters' education) !! "It is a rare class at Brown where the syllabus includes pornography screenings and a fieldtrip to Miko Exoticwear. Female anatomy as well as sexuality, body image, masturbation and contraception are all among the topics addressed in the female sexuality workshop offered at Brown this semester." http://www.browndailyherald.com/stories.asp?show=1 &storyID=1350"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/19/1746203.shtml

Dumb Stereotypes Take Hope Out of Boys Hearts

Hombre · 19 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

SMH journalist Andrew Block, who publicly states an interest in men's issues, wrote...

" John Marsden, the best-selling adolescents' fiction writer, and author of the non-fiction books Secret Men's Business and The Boy You Brought Home, said, "Teenage boys are among the most maligned group in our society ...

"The media portrays them as either drug-crazed, illiterate, unemployable, suicidal, failures at school, sex criminals or vandals. So adults tend to treat them more suspiciously, and that causes them [unconsciously] to become angry or frustrated or alienated."

The Advertising Standards Bureau, one of the few organisations that measures complaints about stereotypes in the media, reports a steady increase in the percentage of men (now more than a third) complaining about advertising, and their most frequent complaint is about sexual discrimination."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/19/1759256.shtml

Mike Ditka speaking out about men's health issues

Hombre · 19 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Menstuff.org reports that...

"The Ditka you will see will be older, wiser and a little out of character. He will implore the millions of men 40 and older in the NFL's audience to prevent the things that caused him to have a heart attack at age 48 in his coaching prime with the Chicago Bears.

Ditka is spokesman for the NFL's health education campaign called "Tackling Men's Health," which is being launched today (www.tacklingmenshealth.com)."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/19/186254.shtml

Male-Friendly DV Conference in Portsmouth, NH this October

Scott · 19 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The third annual national conference on domestic violence will be held on October 18 in Portsmouth, NH. The event is co-sponsored by the Domestic Abuse Helpline for Men and the Violence Intervention Program (NH's S.A.F.E. chapter). It is one of the only DV conferences I'm aware of that specifically focuses on male victims, and I have attended it since these annual conferences began. This year they have a very ambitious program with four separate workshop session tracks - check out the list of speakers at the DAHM web site, and register before Oct. 3 for a discount!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/19/1935215.shtml

Is this a parody? I have trouble telling.

Adam · 20 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

What is going over here? either this is bad satire, or Bettina Arndt showing signs of rabid man hating? to quote: "There is a very good reason that domestic violence is now taken very seriously, given the long history of men using physical force to intimidate women. The new rules are there for a reason. He has to get it, fair or not These are tough lessons. No male entitlement, no cock crows or strutting." What do you folks make of this? I think she's projecting her problems onto us....

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/20/1757208.shtml

Woman Gets Arrested For Stalking Football Coach

Hombre · 21 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "http://www.philly.com/mld/inquirer/sports/6759366. htm

Here is a new blurp (it is 5th down on the list) about some banana headed woman who repeatedly called the football coach of Ohio State harrassing him.

What is good to note here is that she was actually arrested and charged with stalking and held in jail in lieu of a $105,000 bond. It looks like the DA did not laugh it off as the antics of just another harmless eccentric woman.

It is encourageing, however if this case ever goes to trial and she is convicted a feminized middle-aged male bastard in a black sheet will only give her mild probation and or a couple of hours community service. You can pretty well count on it."

Note: You do have to scroll a little to see the report. Also, the news on top about the Title IX suit is worth a look.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/21/2149245.shtml

Feminists catch heat for their politics

Hombre · 21 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

azcentral.com reports that...

" In the latest blow, the New York Times a longtime champion of women's rights, dismissed as "silly" NOW's decision to endorse the lone woman in the Democratic race.

"We have become a target," said Roselyn O'Connell, president of the National Women's Political Caucus, which joined NOW in endorsing former Illinois Sen. Carol Moseley Braun."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/21/2156222.shtml

Alleged abusers could avoid jail until conviction

Hombre · 22 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Indystar.com writes...

"Prosecutor Carl Brizzi says the public would be better served if officials stopped the emergency releases and opted to pay fines of $40 a day for each inmate over the limit.

He opposes any plan to release accused domestic batterers.

"By keeping these people in jail, I'm doing my part to protect the women and children of this community," Brizzi said.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/21/2210252.shtml

Bodybuilder has offered to kill Kate Faber, (Kobe Bryant's rape accuser)

Hombre · 22 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Star Online wrote today that...

"A Swiss bodybuilder will be charged with multiple felonies for allegedly proposing a US$3mil murder-for-hire scheme to kill the Colorado woman who accused Los Angeles Lakers star Kobe Bryant of rape, the Los Angeles County district attorney's office said.

Charges to be filed tomorrow include four counts of solicitation to commit murder, two counts of solicitation to dissuade a witness, one count of conspiracy to commit murder, and one count of obtaining money, labour or property by false pretences, according to a statement released on Friday by Sandi Gibbons, a spokeswoman for the office."

Perhaps the movement needs to work on getting those passionate about the issues into pro-active solutions as a team instead of desperate, detrimental acts motivated by individual powerlessness?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/21/2220219.shtml

It Doesn't Matter What Women Want

D · 22 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Sometimes we see a lot of issues in society that has men at disadvantages. I thought I would write an article and post something that could give men some advantages and some good attitudes in the dating arena. I know our current climate has some men avoiding women but it's meant to be fun and light hearted and I think it has some good strong advice. Enjoy. Read Here

It Doesn't Matter What Women Want

by Dan Lynch

When it comes to sex and dating all too often we are concerened what the other sex wants. Admit it, you don't really care what the other sex wants. You really care what you want.

Be it a roll in the hay, a walk in the park, or a long lasting journey of love and commitment - even in this hostile-to-marriage climate we live in.

You already know what you want. If you don't, don't waste your time going after a woman. Even asking the question, "What do women want?" is misleading. The constant barrage of propaganda that women are a mystery is misleading (and vice versa for the female readers of this website).

Each guy has a girl he admires, each to his own liking. Some like blondes, some like brunnettes, some like freaky gothic ghoul looking chicks (who I currently have a crush on right now), and yes some like red heads.

Don't think of what women want in the plural. You're not after a plural girl; you're after one. It could be that blonde that works at the coffee shop, or a waitress, or a struggling actress, perhaps a millionairess who made her fortune independantly.

As a man that is motivated by the beauty of this woman (a subjective beauty), you have to make contact. You have to say, "I like you" in so many words. Something that let's her know you're interested.

Is your ego fragile? Sorry about your luck, but don't hang all your hopes on one woman: it doesn't give you much of a position to bargain from. And I gurantee you that the more you ask, the more opportunities you will have with women. So, if you are reading me correctly, then you've guessed that I am talking about treating the relationship like a negotiated agreement.

If she is interested in you, it's all good. But, just like every negotiator or bargainer, they try to keep their secrets to themselves. They don't want to reveal their hand, so to speak and neither do you.

If you want to buy a car, do you sit around looking from the outside wondering what the salesmen will take for that car? Pinning all day long hoping you can get the car? No, that's pretty fricking ridiclous isn't it?

You have to go in and talk to the guy to find out if he will take a lower price, or a price you can deal with. It may be a one of a kind car, but that's no matter, you're still negotiating and you can't let that out of the bag unless you really think it will help your position.

Timing is crucial. It's not always price that get's the car; it's how badly the salesman wants to sell the car. Women are no different. She may have a boyfriend or husband. In which case you should probably drop pursuit. If she's available, it might get interesting. You're frumpy; she's refined. The more you discuss with her, the more she lets you know what she wants in a man. Because she won't be telling you what all women want. She's not interested in them and neither should you at the moment.

What do men want? I want a girl that's pretty. I want a girl with nice breasts. I want a girl with nice teeth. But I want a girl that is fun to be with, that I can talk to. One that I can enjoy my time with. One that likes sex as much as me (don't worry these women do exist). Maybe sex isn't all that important and just having someone to walk the dog with is aces (I'm alergic to dogs but whatever).

I'm going to be brutally honest - that's how I like to write - so don't get too pissy when I say this, because I believe it's true. I like to be seen with a hot girl so that I can feel confident about myself. Guess what, so do women. Many women like status, your status, because it gives them status. They like to say they date so and so (and forget the feminist propaganda because women only pay it lip service when it suits them, then jump the fence when it doesn't).

That's why they like musicians, it puts them in the spotlight. That's why they date arrogant egomanic type guys, it gives them a false pretence, but it still gives them something more than what they had. It also means they will date you, as soon as you realize your status.

If I asked you what you want, you could very well tell me you want the moon. Why not go for the stars right? But define it, as in "what do you want for this car?" It narrows it down. Just like when you ask a woman what she wants in exchange for her. That's when the coversation becomes more reasonable. She knows what she's worth, even if she does have an inflated or deflated ego, it's still going to be relative to you.

If she tells you she wants the moon, it's likely she doesn't want to sell to you. That's okay. Don't even let it bother you. Never commit yourself over one woman so badly that it skews your vision and rationality. Ask her sister out, her best friend or don't. You have to remind yourself that you are a good bargain and that they didn't see the value. You don't even have to be rude about this, because believe it or not, many a salesmen have chased a potential buyer out into the parking lot in order to make the deal.

Now combine this with tact, ingenuity, artistic flavour, experience, politeness, back up alternatives and an all around love for the game, because women will be telling you what they want just as soon as you ask them. It's about what you want that matters first.

by Dan Lynch

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user

comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/22/0032230.shtml

14 Years And Counting For Marital Rape

D · 22 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "So you think marital rape is a joke and you would never be accused of or convicted of it? Read on and go to this site for some sobering reflection:

http://www.ncfm.org/will.htm

WILLIAM HETHERINGTON is in a Michigan prison on a Criminal Sexual Conduct (CSC) conviction. His wife claimed that he had raped her. The case was a matter of "he said/she said". Wil has been in prison, now, for more than 14 years. During all of that time he has consistently maintained his innocence."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/22/0350211.shtml

NCFM-DC at Olde Town Gaithersburg Day in Maryland

Hombre · 22 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "NCFM-DC was present at the Olde Town Gaitherburg Day Fair in Gaithersburg, MD, which was attended by thousands of DC-area residents.

We had a table set up and passed out hundreds of fliers and leaflets. We were met with a variety of reactions, some supportive, others dismissive- but no pies in the face or shrill screaming from enraged feminists. :)

It was a great success. Getting the word out is the name of the game; public outreach is well worth the effort!!

HUZZAH!!

Matt Campbell
VP/Treasurer, DC chapter"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/22/0358220.shtml

Into the Abyss and Back

D · 22 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Our very own Steve Imparl has written an incredible piece regarding Depression. His description may be of every man. That reaching out from depression is not a crime of shame. Showing those who have walked down that road may help others. His story is here.

xmlns:w="urn:schemas-microsoft-com:office:word" xmlns="http://www.w3.org/TR/REC-html40"> href="./Into%20the%20Abyss%20and%20Back--final--formatted--web_files/filelist.xml">

Into the Abyss and Back

Into the Abyss and Back

By Steven D. Imparl

(Published in Newsweek Japan, December 4, 2002, pp. 54-55)

"Beep…beep…beep…beep," my alarm clock sounded on a sunny, clear morning in mid-October, 2001. A warm breeze blew through the open window. Birds chirped happily in the backyard. Outside, the day was starting very well.

There was only one problem: I could not get out of bed. My brain simply could not be bothered to tell my arms and legs to move. During the previous few months, I had begun to dread the mornings and I did not want to face another day. Although I love my work, the thought of going to my downtown Chicago office on this particular day was positively horrifying.

Under normal circumstances, I relished autumn days like this one. Now, I wanted to hide under the covers and wait for the world to disappear.

My
low mood was not a surprise. For the previous three months, a strange fear—a sense of impending doom—greeted me when I awoke in the morning. That fear followed me through my waking hours like a lost black dog. I was having trouble concentrating, working, and enjoying life.

Knowing
what lay ahead of me, I did not greet the day with my usual enthusiasm. Instead, I found myself tumbling down a bottomless abyss from which there appeared to be no escape. Indeed, at that point, I did not even want to escape. I was content to continue my free fall into oblivion, unconcerned about such mundane things as paying my bills, getting dressed, or even eating. A profound apathy tainted everything in my life; I just did not care what happened.

Sure,
the economy was deteriorating all around me and I was highly anxious about keeping new clients and trying to find new ones. Yes, I had been chronically cranky, irritable, and restless. I hadn't slept longer than 30 minutes at a time for several months. I had broken off a relationship with a woman whom I had loved deeply and to whom I had nearly become engaged.

I found myself angry almost all the time. Although I am usually calm and fairly even-tempered, lately, the slightest provocation could make my blood boil. Once, while I was walking down the street at lunchtime, a man driving a small red sports car in the snarled Chicago traffic blew his horn just a little too long. I yelled at the driver and he yelled something back. Almost instantly, I was shouting at him and ready—no, eager—to throw punches. I calmed myself with a few deep breaths as the noisy man and his car disappeared into the endless flood of vehicles. My response had been totally out of character; I knew something was wrong and I didn't like it.

On
top of this, I was working insanely long hours, yet accomplishing less and less, despite all my effort. On weekends, I mostly laid on my bed, staring at the ceiling. Spending time with friends was unbearable. I was contemplating suicide with an alarming frequency, and I had plotted my demise in gruesome detail. But no, I wasn't depressed.

In
my one-man law practice, I counsel and represent small businesses, especially Internet and e-commerce companies. I intentionally surround myself with fellow entrepreneurs, in part, to boost my energy and mood. My work is interesting and very rewarding. However, in the summer of 2001, I was turning away new clients because I could not generate the enthusiasm to work for them. Consequently, my income was dropping. As my income dropped, my mood sank, too. As my mood worsened, my income fell further. A dangerous cycle had begun.

Because
all of these feelings and behaviors were so unusual for me, I started seeing a therapist. The sessions were helpful, but something was missing. I mentioned my frustration with the "missing" piece to my therapist, and he gently invited me to consider medical treatment. For a few months, I balked at that idea. I told him I was not "crazy" or "unstable," and I resented any suggestion that I was. I did not want to see a psychiatrist. Seeing a psychotherapist was bad enough, but to see a psychiatrist implied mental illness, with its embarrassing baggage of misconceptions and stigma.

Nevertheless,
on that October morning, I realized I had two options: try medications or kill myself. Facing that grim Hobson's choice, I contacted a psychiatrist that my therapist had recommended and scheduled an appointment with her at the end of the following week.

Arriving
at the psychiatrist's office, I expected to meet a cold, disagreeable figure who would delve into my earliest childhood memories, fill me with exotic brain-numbing pills, and administer painful electric shock therapies when the former methods failed to cure me. I was pleasantly surprised. The doctor was a friendly middle-aged woman with a soft voice and a gracious demeanor. She asked a few questions, but mostly let me talk. She listened intently and wrote a few notes. After pausing for a moment, the good doctor smiled respectfully and told me I was suffering from major depression.

I was shocked. Me? Depressed? No way! I bristled at the doctor's diagnosis. On the surface, everything seemed to be going great. As a lawyer-businessman in my late 30s, I had been blessed with success and interesting opportunities in law, information technology, business, and writing. I had achieved most of the goals I had set for myself professionally and personally. I had been happily self-employed for seven years and had published a highly successful three-volume book about Internet law. I was exploring some promising new business ventures. My family was healthy. I had a lot of friends. How could I be depressed?

Initially,
accepting that I had depression was extremely difficult. I felt weak and inadequate, flawed and lazy. I concluded I must have had some terrible character flaw to be feeling so awful. Because most things in my life were going very well, a diagnosis of depression made no sense to me.

Nor
did I like the idea of taking pills for depression; in part, because I worried they would change my personality or turn me into a zombie. I had read about antidepressants. I knew that the process of prescribing antidepressant medicines could be a matter of trial and error, and that doctors had only "theories" about how those medicines worked, rather than facts. I was very uncomfortable with the idea of medical treatment for depression because it seemed so unscientific.

Further,
I had thought that depression was an illness that primarily affected women. In the popular media, I had seen many depictions of depressed women, but never of depressed men. As a guy who liked to be active and engaged in life, I felt ashamed of a condition that threatened to bench me in the game of life at a critical point in that game. Depression was too unmanly and, well, too depressing to accept.

Since
I was paying my hard-earned money for the 45-minute visit with the psychiatrist, I told her all of my concerns. I expressed my disbelief and asked her how I could possibly be depressed. Patiently, my doctor explained that depression is a physical illness as much as it is an illness of the mind. I learned that most psychiatrists now believe depression results from an imbalance of certain chemicals in the brain called neurotransmitters. Encouragingly, the doctor said that depression usually responds well to treatment. She also told me that a lot of people suffer from depression and that there is no reason to feel ashamed of the illness. Becoming somber for a moment, she cautioned that untreated depression could be fatal: as many as 15% of depressed persons who do not receive treatment eventually kill themselves.

The doctor prescribed a medication called EffexorXR®. I'd like to say that there was a miraculous change the next day, but it didn't work that way. In fact, for the first few weeks, I felt nothing. I wanted to abandon the treatment. I called my doctor, who suggested I be patient because antidepressants can take several weeks to reach their full effect. I waited three months, punctuated by regular visits with my doctor. Finally, after taking the medication for about three and one half months, I began to feel consistently better and more like my usual self.

A year later, I am feeling much better. Most of my enthusiasm for life has returned. Increasingly, I have moments of joy and a sense of direction and purpose. My income is gradually rising, too, although it will take time to recover the recent losses. I am developing a new Internet-based business, actively networking with other professionals, and seeking new clients for my law practice.

I now realize that I did not have to suffer as long as I did or feel ashamed of my depression. Effective treatments are available and offer us hope. I am the living proof.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/22/204232.shtml

Injustices against men

Adam · 23 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Mangesh writes "This is a short piece from the Indian newspaper Telegraph on how DV laws are unfair to men, and the proposed changes in Indian DV laws to restore the balance. On the whole, it's a male positive article.
"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/23/1522200.shtml

Sexual Harassment of Men

Adam · 23 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

TLE writes "Did you see the CBS report on sexual harassment of men by women? The HR department of course ignored this guy's complaint and said he must have brought it on himself! Bet that Kristen Carmen was surprised to see herself on the national news!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/23/1524217.shtml

Men's Rights Candidate needed in 2004!

Adam · 23 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Ray writes "Friends:

I just heard a news report wherein Democrat, Carol Mosley Braun formally announced her candidacy for President, and blamed the problems of the world on men. She has garnered an endorsement from N.O.W., and has stated that she wants to bring women's issues front and center. She is getting a lot of press for her women's issues.

The only question we need ask now is, "Who is the men's rights candidate for President in 04?" I'm running in 08 against Hillary, but we need to take the "bull" by the horns in 04.

My campaign motto in 08 will be either,

VOTE MEN'S RIGHTS, OR BE PILLORIED BY HILLARY

or

EQUAL JUSTICE IN EVERY FAMILY

or

END THE FEMICRAT CONSPIRACY AGAINST AMERICA

My motto for today is LET'S NOT WAIT 'TILL 08.

"A laptop in every pot,"
Ray"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/23/1525238.shtml

His Side: Father & Son Reunited

Adam · 24 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anon user writes: "Despite a decade of physical and emotional abuse at the hands of his mother, Darius never gave up on his dream to be reunited with his father.

Darius and his father told their story on His Side with Glenn Sacks to commemorate Equal Parents Week (September 22-28), an international week of recognition of children's right to both parents. To listen to the show, go to His Side"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/24/1740255.shtml

Man arrested over domestic dispute

Adam · 24 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

No nick yet writes "This story appeared in the newspaper where I work. I know the person in the story who is named as a friend of the man arrested. He was with the accused when he was arrested. They were returning to the guy's apartment, with slushies in hand, and found it surrounded by the Crisis Response Team. The guy goes up to a cop and asks what was going on and they tell him there is a guy in an apartment with a rifle - him! The cops had evacuated the building and blocked off the street and then held a four-hour stand-off with an empty apartment. Why? Someone phoned the police and told them he was holding a woman hostage with a rifle. Coincidentally, he had an argument with his girlfriend that morning. So even though the call was a false alarm and there was no victim they arrested him anyway and then went into his apartment and seized his rifle."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/24/1942211.shtml

Men have no rights?

Adam · 25 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Mangesh writes "This is (yet another) tragic story of a man who was falsely implicated and lost everything - his job, reputation and his daughter."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/25/1847203.shtml

Sacks: Convicted Murderess Gets Custody

Adam · 25 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anon user writes: "Glenn Sacks blasts the family court system in his newest column, "Convicted Murderess Can Get Custody but Decent Fathers Can't" (Houston Chronicle, 9/19/03). To read the column, go here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/25/1848241.shtml

Boys bottom of the class worldwide

Adam · 26 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "This study (presented in a somewhat celebratory fashion) shows that women have overtaken men at every level of education in developed countries around the world and blames boys for not being able to overcome peer-pressure as well as unable to deal with disruptions in the family unit as a cause for this problem. Likely, the real culprit behind lagging male interest isn't ability, but motivation. Feminism has replaced core educational standards with a "female empowering emotive-feminist" model. Educational programming has to be a primary factor in the sharp decline in male interest in higher education, not "peer-pressure" which often makes boys thrive. For this article to imply that the educational failure of boys isn't an academic issue that needs high level concern is insidious, and it is indicative of what the global academic feminist institutions intend to do to fix the problem of educational equality - nothing."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/26/1555222.shtml

Farrell's Campaign Bringing More Light to Us

Adam · 26 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Warren Farrell's campaign for governor of California is bringing some fairly good media attention to fathers' issues. We just learned about this one in the National Review by Jennifer Roback Morse. She supports Warren as her favorite of the lesser-known candidates. She then makes a list of good ideas from the lesser-knowns, and the top two items on the list are Warren's call for joint custody laws and a paternity fraud bill. You can also view TV footage from CNN National and some local stations. Marc"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/26/1937249.shtml

Finding Men's Activists

D · 27 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The gloominess of men's activism is sometimes difficult to deal with. I would like to point out how there are far more men's activists then we may formerly acknowledge at present. After hearing a speech presented by a children's service departement head no less I am inclined to believe there are far more of us out there than we may realize. I think it is important to find these people and make contact with them. They too may not realize the large movement developing in our mysts. Keep in mind not all of them are up to date as many of us and still may even hold onto feminist propaganda as truth. Try to focus on what they do believe and work slowly from there. A positive attitude opens all doors.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/27/0038231.shtml

University shuts down Affirmative Action protest

Adam · 27 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Doctor Damage writes "Newsday.com reports that Texas University shut down a bake sale which was set up to protest Affirmative Action. white males had to pay $1 for a cookie. The price was 75 cents for white women, 50 cents for Hispanics and 25 cents for blacks. The Universities justified its action saying "This was not an issue about free speech" (uh huh...) "It was really an issue where we had a hostile environment being created."Has anyone heard of a protest which did not result in hostility? is hostility not the underlying reason and purpose for any protest. One remark:"They were arguing that affirmative action was solely based on race. It's not based on race. It's based on bringing a diverse community to a certain organization." struck me as the most egregious sophistry I have encountered in many years (over a decade) following the development of mens politics"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/27/1651259.shtml

Stone Soup comic reinforces myth of male power

Adam · 27 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original mens_issues writes "The Stone Soup comic strip, by Jan Eliot, is usually quite entertaining. However, the past two days have featured a conversation between the mother and her daughter "Alix" in which Alix says that she wants to grow up to be a man because "it's a man's world" and she thinks she will earn more money, etc. It does say that Jan Eliot took women's studies in college, which may just have something to do with this.

Here's the link"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/27/1653259.shtml

Marriage? Just Say No.

Adam · 28 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Darren Blacksmith has just written a superb piece on marriage, and it's a must read. Having seen what happened to my uncle, you're better off without marriage, believe me.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/28/0326202.shtml

Male-bashing on go.espn.com vs 'metrosexuals'

Adam · 28 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "This article condemns "metrosexuality". No surprise it was off-linked from msn.com's Hotmail opening page.

I submitted a comment as written here, and also sent it to the author of this lovely little tract whose e-mail address is found at the bottom of the article she wrote.

For decades men have been scolded to be more like women. Some have become that way, and now they are condemned for it?

The underlying phnomenon here is this: When a man stops living to serve women, he is condemned. If he takes care of himself and/or acts as "self-absorbed" as the average woman does, he is also condemned for it. Women want the right of self-absorption and self-care to themseleves. They would rather sit safely on the bleachers watching men hurt themseleves in sports like football for their own entertainment than watch a man be happy and healthy and care for himself. There is nothing wrong with a man taking care of himself as he sees fit.

The mistake men have been making for a long time is that they have been too much taking their cues about what they ought to be from women. Of course if you live for anyone else's opinion of you, you are bound to get caught in a cycle of pleasing/not pleasing that leads to no one's happiness. You must live life the way you think is right for you, and not for anyone else. To not do so is to allow oneself to get caught in a kind of co-dependency, and that is not good because the results are rarely satisfying.

I say this: individual men should be the way they want to be, act as they want to, and live for their own goals. If those include playing football and not 'doing their hair', so be it. If they include spending $1,000/month+ at the spa, so be that, too.

Men should have as much CHOICE as women have in every area that they have it.

Ms. Pressman needs to update her notions of "equality of the sexes" to include men."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/28/1456240.shtml

Ann Richards "joke"

D · 29 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dave writes "Gentleman,

Ann Richards, the former governor of Texas, made violence against men the subject of a most disgusting "joke" today (26 September) at a ralley of women for Gov. Davis in the Los Angeles area. I have not been able to locate any report on this on the web. Her story was: the economy is bad all over, it is so bad in Texas that women are now carpooling to run over their husbands! Can you believe this?!! This was shown on L.A. local TV news tonight. I hope that some of the media pick up on this, and all decent concerned people make her a pariah."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/29/0218201.shtml

Man claims sexual harassment from female boss

D · 29 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

A male employee at the online service America Online claimed to have been subject to sexual harassment from his female boss. Among other things, he claims she touched him and prevented him from leaving when he was at her home. One supervisor at AOL suggested that the man himself was to blame for the harassment, possibly because of the clothing he was wearing.

The CBS News article (last checked Sept. 26, 2003) is at the URL Read Here

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/29/0221231.shtml

Domestic Violence Conference, Diverse Perspectives

D · 29 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Lee Newman writes "Please reserve your seat at this very important event!

The excitement is building!

Violence Intervention Program SAFE-NH is co-sponsoring this unique Domestic Violence Conference with the Domestic Abuse Helpline for Men and...READ MORE content="text/html; charset=ISO-8859-1">

We have been swamped with phone calls,e-mails and visits to our websites...regarding not only this important Conference during Domestic Violence Awareness Month,but many crisis calls along with requests for information.

The last few weeks have made us even more committed to the visions of both of the Co-sponsors of this event!

The sheer numbers of callers in need of services speaks very clearly to us that we are a necessary addition to services already available! We have been attending an increasing number of hearings as DV Advocates,the Helpline is experiencing an incredible upsurge in calls and registrations for this Conference are coming in a steady flow.

The reason for this e-mail is to remind you to register soon so that you won't be among those who wait to long. Space is limited to the first 400 registrants and our deadline is Oct.4th before the ticket price increases.

More and more everyday we are receiving positive feedback ,not only from individuals who work in the helping professions,educational institutions,medical facilities and State Agencies,but most of all from those who suffer the effects of abuse in their personal lives! We are receiving validation that yes...we ARE "Making a Difference"!

PLEASE...register to attend what some are saying could be "the most important Conference that has come along regarding these issues ...in a long time!"

Join all of the people who have already commited to adding their voices,increasing their awareness and forging important connections at the :

Diverse Perspectives...

Conflict & Violence In Our Families...

Our Communities...

Domestic Violence Conference

Your presence,your voice,your ideas,your perspectives and your compassion are important. The time has come for all of us to join together in order to assure that every victim of violence and abuse has a place to reach out to and an understanding voice to speak to.

This is a Conference where"politics and personal agendas" are left outside the door so that open and "inclusive" communication can take place.

The time has come for new solutions,new initiatives...and new voices to be heard.

Let's work to blend the old and the new so that we can end the devastation that occurs in our Communities when voices of victims can not be heard!

Please take the time to join the many who are meeting on "common ground" to "Take a Stand Against Violence" on October 18th .

Your attendance will send a clear message that you are ready to forge alliances with those who are ready to make changes and progress!

Presenters from across the country are coming to share their ideas and experience...registrants are coming from everywhere to take ideas home with them and make much needed changes in their communities,while sharing their resources with us.

A regionally well known musical talent and "advocate/activist" will be joining us to share his music so please come early and enjoy your "morning coffee" while listening to him. He will perform for us while we all settle in for our Keynote speaker and the beginning of our day.

The future of services in in all of our hands...important work needs to be done...and will be...!

Come spend a few hours and add your voice and your visions to this important initiative.

Please forward this to others you think may be interested and feel free to share these materials via e-mail or print.

Comments and questions can be e-mailed directly to me via reply or visit www.VIP-NH.org for more details.

Take care,and be SAFE,

Lee Newman

www.VIP-NH.org

Lee Newman

Executive Director/President Violence Intervention Program/SAFE-NH

P O Box 523

Rochester, NH 03867

VIP@QuixNet.net

tel: 603-859-0859

fax: 603-297-0244"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/29/0249215.shtml

The Men's Hour at last! (New and improved)

Adam · 30 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "Following video/software/health delays the New Men's Hour is here. It now has a blog, a forum and video. This includes videos and photos of 2 Fathers-4-Justice protests in the UK. It also has links to other media on the net, such as Warren Farrell interviews and Bob Geldof attacking the treatment of fathers in Britain."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/30/1646256.shtml

Forced Weddings? Really?

Adam · 30 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "Do you all believe this? After such a forced wedding, the groom has no option to void the marriage? Huh? Is this a joke by some prankster trying to see if she could get such an outlandish story printed?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/30/1649204.shtml

Time online covers high rate of marital breakups

Adam · 30 September 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "Ever notice how when females break engagements, they are being independent-minded, but when males do it, they are said to fear commitment?

At least Time got the fear of divorce right with regard to being among the top reasons for why people are not following through with this most ridiculous of arrangements. I would say any man who studies the stats should make it his top reason. And predictably, this article focuses on women's opinions of the whole thing.

Read it
here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/09/30/2340207.shtml

What Real patriarchy looks like

D · 1 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

SunCat writes "Hey, if Western Rational Thought is so male and so evil then why do the worst misogynists in the world slash their daughters to death for being Western?

http://littlegreenfootballs.com/weblog/?entry=8350 _Honor_Killing_in_London

I don't do this sort of thing so why blame me?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/01/024217.shtml

NYPost discusses wealthiest women

Adam · 1 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "Speaks for itself" Yeah it does, but this speaks even more "but if you're looking for the strongest growth numbers it's probably through divorce'" I hope that didn't comprimise your gag reflex too much. Eugh....

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/01/1830202.shtml

His Side: P.I. Reveals Secrets Behind Mercedes Murder

Adam · 1 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anon user writes "The Clara Harris "murder by Mercedes" case--wherein a Texas woman garnered widespread sympathy after killing her husband as his daughter begged her not to kill her father--has been a textbook example of our society's noxious mix of anti-male feminism and anti-male male chivalry. Incredibly, last week the murderess was granted joint custody of her twin five year-old boys.

Sunday on His Side, Glenn discussed the Harris case with the private detective who knows it best--Bobbi Bacha of Blue Moon Investigations, the agency which Clara hired to spy on her husband. To listen to the show, go to His Side"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/01/1831213.shtml

Women Lie About Sexual History

D · 2 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Grant Hayes writes "The New Scientist is running a piece about how men and women lie about their sex lives. Of course, the more likely it was that the women believed she would be caught, the more she lied. The much maligned male, however, proved to tell the truth more often. Conclusions, anyone?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/01/2347228.shtml

Male brain science gives clue to nagging questions

Adam · 2 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "Here is an article that touches many deep issues for men. The article tries to help promote a better understanding of men and reverse what seems to be a dangerous assumption born of the past 40 years of radical femininism that men have simply become redundant, but falls short as it argues that it is men that ultimately must live up to the expectations or the newly fabricated "independant women"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/02/1913222.shtml

Non Sequitur comic shows date with vindictive woman

Adam · 2 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

mens_issues writes "The Non Sequitur comic strip for 9/26 (by Wiley Miller) features a father on a date with a vindictive woman who quotes the worn out cliche about men and toilet seats before dumping a wine glass on his head. It ends with his daughter's horse "Lucy" asking why her dad hadn't remarried. The daughter, Danae, replies that he's overqualified. This cartoonist is good! Here is a link to the comic strip (choose the 9/26 episode)"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/02/1914241.shtml

Boys are better for marriages

Adam · 3 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Jen writes "Well, here is something, as the mother of sons, I knew for a long time and never realized was universally true-boys are much easier to have around than girls. Apparently easier on marraiges as well.This story claims that world wide, marraiges with sons fare better than those with daughters, and the more the better. Very interesting read. I did find the piece at first seemed to be blaming boys, but later down the girls get the same treatment, so I don't think it was really angled one way or the other."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/03/1717232.shtml

No jail for mom who killed baby

Hombre · 3 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original donaldcameron1 writes "Do I have to say that this is outrageous?"

Time served is sufficient, but judge orders Krystal Coombs to get psychological help
Chris Purdy
The Edmonton Journal
Wednesday,
October 01, 2003

"Krystal Coombs will not go to prison for the beating death of her baby daughter a crime she continues to deny.

Court of Queen's Bench Justice Joanne Veit said Tuesday the 20-year-old woman deserves a four-year sentence for manslaughter but has already served the equivalent of that time in custody awaiting the outcome of her trial.

Veit sentenced Coombs to one day in jail, which she technically served Tuesday in court, as well as three years' probation with psychological treatment and addictions counselling.

She also ordered Coombs to notify her probation officer if she becomes pregnant again
..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/03/1845214.shtml

Misandric play - "The male intellect: an oxymoron?

Hombre · 3 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original mens_issues writes "There is a play showing in Boulder (where else?) called "The male intellect: an oxymoron?" by Robert Dubac. The "protagonist" of this stupid play is a man named Bobby who supposedly can't figure women out. The explanation then goes into the worn out cliche about him being a chauvinist "like most guys," as well as the fact that the five men who have taught him the most about women are even bigger "chauvinists."

Here is the link:

http://www.maleintellect.com/

Steve"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/03/1849259.shtml

Abortion Bill's Passage Expected

Hombre · 3 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Cape Cod Times is one of many papers telling us that...

"The House voted overwhelmingly yesterday to ban what opponents call "partial-birth abortion," and the Senate is expected to agree today, sending the measure to President Bush, who says he will sign it into law"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/03/1855232.shtml

Quentin Tarantino says "Kill Bill" about "Girl Power"

Hombre · 3 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CNN.com tells us that...

"Tarantino said Kill Bill was a feminist statement, "a film about girl power."

"Tarantino said that over 380 litres of fake blood had been used for the movie, and described how one fight scene, in which Thurman dismembers 88 opponents with a Japanese sword, took over eight weeks to shoot."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/03/197202.shtml

Men denied equality by new Afghan constitution

Hombre · 3 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Afghan News Network's title to this story says it all, albeit inadvertantly.

"The draft constitution guarantees women at least one seat from each of the 32 provinces on the wholesi jirga, the national parliament, and a minimum of 25 seats in the mushran jirga, the senate, said Fatima Gailani, a member of the Constitutional Review Commission. The total number of seats in each assembly has not yet been decided. "

"The draft document says the government must provide women with education and health care not only equal to men, but that additional provisions must be written to care for pregnant women and educate widows whose husbands were killed during the last two decades of war."

Amazing how people can miss the irony.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/03/1922213.shtml

Male birth control pill soon a reality (hopefully)

Adam · 3 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

It's looking hopeful, acording to this story it looks like we might have several choices before long. And with minimal side effects too. Anybody else got the feeling this invention might be like using a flamethrower on a planet full of gunpowder?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/03/1728226.shtml

Prostitutes bribed to make false rape claims

Hombre · 3 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Daily Nation and Telegraph.uk have uncovered a story in which they reveal...

"Human rights activists have encouraged Kenyan prostitutes to submit fake rape claims against British soldiers"

"They told me that if I said I was raped by British soldiers and showed them my baby then I would get three million shillings [£30,000]," Miss Muguri said. "I would take two million and they would take one."

"I know none of them was raped. The fathers were either British soldiers or tourists or white Kenyan citizens. If a child looked partly Indian we would tell them to say they were raped by Gurkhas."

"Another prostitute, Rose, who has two mixed-race children as a result of liaisons with Italian tourists at the coast, refused to say she was raped, despite attempts by activists to persuade her."

"However, lawyer Martyn Day maintains that most of the claims are genuine and is set to continue with the legal action on behalf of several hundred Samburu and Maasai women."

Anyone want to make some money by claiming Martyn Day raped you?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/03/1941253.shtml

So what has feminism to be proud of?

Adam · 4 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Hope your readers would like to give these links a look at and leave a few comments.
We'd like to know....
What the word 'Feminism' means to you?
What have feminist ideas meant to you in your life - has this changed over the years?
Your personal stories?
What are feminism's successes and failures?
What's the future for feminism? In the second article feminists are crowing about being terrorists. These days rather than being funded through drugs they use your taxes to destroy you.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/04/2221219.shtml

NH Men's Commission Now Ready for Action!

Scott · 5 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Foster's Daily Democrat printed an excellent front page news story on Saturday about the NH Commission on the Status of Men. The article objectively mentioned many of the injustices and problems we had getting the commission established and included some great quotes about men's issues. My favorite, from Rep. David Bickford, was: "For so long, it was politically incorrect to examine whether there was anything wrong with the way men are treated in society. To not even consider where men fell in the mix, I think, has had a negative effect on society...This will give people a chance to hear from the other side. Until now, information about gender issues has been very tainted and one-sided." Right on, David!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/05/0249222.shtml

The pill for men

Adam · 5 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

More news on the pill here, not too much longer hopefully. To quote: "A male pill is potentially the next step after the successful Australian trial of a treatment of hormones that switches off sperm production. The five-year study, led by David Handelsman of the ANZAC Research Institute in Sydney, involved 55 couples. None of the women in the trial became pregnant. Sky News revealed last night that the treatment was a world first, and Professor Handelsman said the method would eventually have men taking an injection every three to four months."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/05/1720233.shtml

Jobless, single and male

Adam · 5 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

That's what it says here and it's about the time this issue got some coverage. However, she does leave out two very important factors, namely the fact that alot of jobs get shipped off to third world countries for cheap sweatshop labour, and she neatly side-steps the issue of women in the workforce, which is a pity as you won't see the full picture until you look at everything I suppose. Still, it's a start right?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/05/1737207.shtml

Unsung Hero

Hombre · 7 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

locksley2k writes " Today's Newsday ran a feature story about Pfc.Patrick Miller whom appears to be the real hero of the 507th, Jessica Lynch's outfit.
Although Pfc. Miller received the Silever Star for his actions, he was not promoted and still only receives $25K/year as a Pfc.while Ms.Lynch is making millions. True to form Pfc. Miller has apparently never said a word about it.
http://www.newsday.com/mynews/ny-p2cover3483031oct 06,0,3500854.story"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/07/0015243.shtml

His Side Commemorates DV Awareness Month

Hombre · 7 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

October is DV Awareness Month, the month when the men of America have to endure listening to feminists and their endless array of media lackeys pretend that domestic violence is only committed by men.

Glenn discussed the anti-male myths guiding current DV policies with domestic violence experts Phil Cook and Jan Brown on His Side with Glenn Sacks on Sunday, October 5. Cook is the author of Abused Men: The Hidden Side of Domestic Violence. Brown is the founder and executive director of the Domestic Abuse Helpline for Men. To listen to the show, go to His Side Archive http://hisside.com/show_archive.htm>.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/07/0019227.shtml

Letter from Farrell to men's activists

Hombre · 7 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Warren Farrell sent us the following letter...

"On Tuesday a few friends of yours in California will vote for children to have their dad only if you call them, and only if you address your friends' unconscious ambivalence: their openness to voting for me versus their desire to make their vote count. Here's how they can do both:

Explain that there's about a chance in a billion that their one vote will make the difference between the winner and the loser. But since I am identified on the ballot with fathers' issues, each vote for me can be seen, and delivers a crystal clear message to politicians, "stop giving moms the right to children while making dads fight for children."

In brief, their vote will tell politicians, "you can no longer ignore dads". (This is the way the Green party forced politicians to no longer ignore the environment.)

If your friend objects, "I care about children, not dads," explain that since every child is half their mom and half their dad, a vote for me is a vote for a child to have both halves of itself.

It's the first chance we've ever had to do this. We don't know if we'll have that chance again. Please think of a California friend and make that call tonight.

Warmly,

Warren

www.warrenfarrell.com "

Until recently I'd been offering a new challenge to you everyday to work for the men's rights cause by supporting Farrell. Election day is today! This is your last chance to participate by taking up Farrell's challenge and talking to any friends you have in California, or if you don't have friends there discussing it on a California forum.

"What did you do when a politician ran on a men's issues platform?"

"Nothing, I was tired and didn't want to miss my favorite TV show."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/07/1739207.shtml

Men Get Own Kindergarten While Women Shop

Adam · 8 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original mens_issues writes "Isn't this demeaning? Reuters' "Oddly Enough" reports that "German women fed up with their partners' grumbling on weekend shopping trips can now dump them at a special kindergarten for men offering beer and entertainment." Interesting that there isn't a similar kindergarten for women who grumble about their men attending sporting events! The link is here

Steve"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/08/2041205.shtml

Anti-Male Hate Campaign Kicks Off in PHX

Adam · 9 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "Ads drive home message on abuse
by Susie Steckner
The Arizona Republic
Oct. 9, 2003 12:00 AM

Waxing a car. Pitching a tent. Throwing a spiral. Punching a woman.

A new public service campaign aimed at fathers will carry messages like this, explaining "There are certain things only a father can teach his son."

The campaign, like two previous blitzes launched during Domestic Violence Awareness Month, intentionally go for shock value....

A television spot, for instance, traces through adulthood a little boy who has heard his father repeatedly yell at his mother, slap her around and knock over furniture. When the boy grows up, he repeats the abuse in his own home. The lesson for dads: "He becomes more like you every day."

Full text is
here

The campaign comes from MAN, the Men's Anti-Violence Network in Phoenix, established in 2000. This site is loaded with false and misleading factoids!

Contact info for all parties:

Reach the reporter at susie.steckner@arizonarepublic.com or (602) 444-7962.

AZCADV
Leah Myers
Phone: 602-279-2900
800-782-6400
Fax: 602-279-2980
Info: acadv@azcadv.org

Brian Landauer
Cramer-Kasselt Phoenix

Phone (602) 417-0600
Fax (602) 258- 1446
e-mail: blandauer@c-k.com

The Men's Anti-Violence Network
Phone
602-532-2800
Fax
602-532-2801
Email
info@themangroup.org
Address
2828 N. Central Ave. Suite 1200; Phoenix, AZ 85004"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/09/1735243.shtml

No Plans to Charge Ben Affleck's False Accuser

Thomas · 10 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

According to this BBC article, Tara Ray, the woman who filed an unfounded arrest warrent against Ben Affleck, won't be charged with any crime. Mr. Affleck's spokesman claims that there are a number of witnesses, who can testify to Affleck's innocence. Nevertheless, North Carolina District Attorney, John Carriker, stated that there are no plans to charge Ms. Ray with any offense.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/09/2322250.shtml

Men Flex Political Muscle in California

D · 10 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

As you know Steve Imparl works with male depression. His great attitude is greatly appreciated at Men's Activism News Network. A major function of MANN is simply the activism. From time to time Steve will be sharing with us his views on Male Depression and its relation to us. Here is his latest journel in regards to California's recall vote. Read here and enjoy :).

Steve's Midlife Crisis: Men Flex Political Muscle in California Archives

Steve's Midlife Crisis

Welcome to Steve's Midlife Crisis!

October 09, 2003

Men Flex Political Muscle in California

Here we are, shortly after the big California recall election. Arnold “the Terminator” Schwarzenegger is the governor-elect of the Golden State. From a male perspective, the election has been interesting for at least three reasons.

First, California's recall election featured a prominent men's rights expert and advocate as a candidate. Dr. Warren Farrell campaigned on an innovative platform in which he called for a “Reformation” of the Democratic Party. His campaign emphasized practical solutions for men's issues and the benefit of families and children. I am grateful to Dr. Farrell for bringing those issues to the public debate in a once-in-a-lifetime election. I also congratulate him for running a fine campaign, focused on the issues, and totally free of the nasty mudslinging that we so often see in today's politics. I appreciate Dr. Farrell's work on behalf of men, and, by extension, on behalf of all people.

Second, male voters are getting attention as an electoral force to be reckoned with. Susan Faludi claimed that Arnold Schwarzenegger owed his election to “a lopsidedly male following.” In a sneering commentary in the Village Voice, James Ridgeway notes that “[t]he main force behind [Schwarzenegger] were macho men.” It also appears the male vote was decisive in approving the recall itself, and that more than half of Schwarzenegger's voters were men. The whining—and thoroughly predictable—Katha Pollitt moaned, "aggressive male chauvinism is back in style, and Mr. Schwarzenegger is its standard-bearer.”

Finally, the results of the election seem to suggest that voters will not be swayed by desperate, last-minute attempts to discredit a male candidate by claiming that he sexually harassed some women, with no opportunity to investigate or rebut the claims. Perhaps that is a sign of an electorate that is becoming more savvy about politcal gamesmanship. On the other hand, it could be a sign of an electorate that just doesn't care about the harm that individuals may have suffered. The latter possibility is unfortunate and frightening. Still, we might be seeing a case of political opportunists having “cried wolf” once too often.

In any event, the mainstream media may not be reporting on these male-significant implications of California's recall election. However, it is important to consider and discuss them because men are beginning to flex their political muscles. While we have a long way to go, we have taken the first steps toward a reformation. It may not be the precise reformation that Dr. Farrell sought in his campaign, but I think this election is a wake-up call for all men in the USA. Let's build on this foundation to make this world a better place for all beings.

Posted by Steve at 01:15 AM
| Comments (0)
| TrackBack

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/10/0433250.shtml

The sexist death penalty, sexual abuse, and homoph

D · 10 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

P. George writes " A gay man named Eddie Hartman was(?) put to death by the state of North Carolina last Friday. The prosecuter used people's prejudices against homosexual men in particular to bias the jury against him. This situation may be able to bring to light the sexist and useless death penalty that mainly targets men, and also the homophobia that seems to mostly target men more so than lesbians. It also shows the ignored but very real sexual abuse/assault that does happen to some boys.

Click Here

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/10/0442244.shtml

Menafists.com

D · 10 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tom Pierce

Admin, Menafists.com:
"Having been put through 3 years of hell in a Georgia Family Court system which repeatedly reminded me that only mothers can raise children, I've decided to put my computer/internet skills to work. The site is at www.menafists.com and while it don't look too pretty right now it is fully database driven. I'm currently seeking advice/comments etc., on shaping the content of this site. I have not yet taken any steps on advertising the link on Google, etc., but am hoping your site would be so kind to direct some traffic there to help shape the community a bit before advertising further."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/10/2053253.shtml

Oops, she did it again!

D · 11 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "Way funny.

http://www.cnn.com/2003/SHOWBIZ/10/09/spears.maryl and.reut/index.html

In short, Kendel Ehrlich, wife of the state's Gov. Robert Ehrlich, suggested she'd like to shoot Britney Spears - saying this at a DV conference.

Sugar 'n Spice..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/11/0011228.shtml

Censored by Feminists

D · 11 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I was rudely banned from babble's board. They claim to be domocratic and open to debate. I for one never said anything rude or vile and merely presented facts that were contradictory to their brain-washed ideologies. Yu can see for yourselves what I wrote here. If you feel like engaging them in debate try to be open and polite using fact and principle. 90% of the men's movement will be in confronting the falsehoods and laying down a standard for fairness. I'm not asking you to troll I'm asking you to take a stand either on the internet or in your community. It will be a tactfull and principled battle but most of you are well equiped. All you really need is a good and honest heart.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/11/107208.shtml

Harvard student columnist discusses Paternity Fraud

Adam · 12 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

amperro writes "I found this article It is refreshing to know that the word is getting out about paternity fraud, even at Harvard! Still, we are not making progress quickly enough. Maybe men's groups all over the country should band together and persuade the media to blitz the airwaves with the paternity fraud issue."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/12/1621236.shtml

FluMist's sexist ad depicts father as inept

Adam · 12 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original mens_issues writes "FluMist has a sexist new ad which depicts a mother in bed with the flu while her husband gets their two kids ready for school. The husband lets the kids dress in light clothing while the radio predicts heavy snow. After the kids have their breakfast, the kitchen is a mess and he doesn't know what to do. Mothers then get the message that this scenario can be avoided by taking FluMist.

The site for FluMist is here

Steve"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/12/1622247.shtml

Head to head: Embryo court case!

Adam · 13 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

John C writes "Head to head: Embryo court case
-
I know the blessings that children are, and I can understand the anguish of those people who cannot have children.
-
"But we mustn't lose sight of the importance of the children having a father, or both parents, in their life.
-
I think we're thinking about the rights of the mothers to have children and not too much about the rights of the children.
-
Full Story
Here!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/13/1342237.shtml

The New Meaning of "Rape"

Thomas · 13 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

In light of the cases against Kobe Bryant and an (in this article) unnamed football player, whose guilt or innocence have not yet been judged in court, Barbara Amiel examines the new meaning of "rape" under a matriarchy.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/13/1722208.shtml

It's good to be a man

Adam · 13 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

John C writes "It's good to be a man by Paul S. Boynton - Can there be any doubt than men are in the midst of the most important transitions in their history? Are there men who don't feel, on some level, this new beginning? For me there is a strong sense of impending joy, as men, individually and collectively, begin to make startling discoveries about what it means to be a man. Some of the most important discoveries revolve around our incredible potential for goodness. Surprise! Things aren't always as they seem. Things aren't always as we've been taught. We are finally discovering that it is good to be a man.
-
Story Here!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/13/1347203.shtml

We did It guys!

Adam · 14 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "We did it guys! THX to the many e-mails and phone calls from dedicated activists, the AZ 'Public has publicly admitted that men need help too!!!

Men also domestic-abuse victims

Plight often overlooked, not reported, author says

Susie Steckner
The Arizona Republic
Oct. 14, 2003 12:00 AM

Author Philip Cook calls it the hidden side of domestic violence: male victims, overlooked, ignored and underserved.
Full text at:

http://www.azcentral.com/arizonarepublic/local/art icles/1014dv-men14.html"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/14/1620224.shtml

The Good and the bad

Adam · 14 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Julian Abbott writes "First article to inspire you chaps and to get writing. "David Elliott and Brad Thompson said men were finding it increasingly hard to have books accepted by mainstream publishers. As a result there are too few "good reads" for men and boys".

Second article gives an opportunity to comment on the article of women working longer hours. Remember all the whining from the fem brigade about men not helping around the house? Well this article states that men work on average 11 hours longer per week, that adds up to a whole lot of housework."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/14/1830218.shtml

Top 10 most dangerous jobs in America

Adam · 15 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Jen writes "Top 10 most dangerous jobs in America

"Loggers and fishermen faced the most daunting odds of dying at work in 2002, but the highways remained the most dangerous place for American workers...."

"....But highway accidents were the biggest overall killer in 2002, accounting for a quarter of all worker deaths. Falls killed 13%. Men were still, by far, the most likely to be killed on the job. Ninety-two percent of all workplace fatalities were male."

"Among the 441 women who died on the job, though, the chief cause of death was homicide. "

Ok, I would like to know why that last bit had to be stuck on there. It's like they are saying "Even though way more men die, it is men's fault for the women dying, and that is more important. " Grrr."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/15/1932210.shtml

Advertising and Gender

Adam · 15 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

tparker writes "The Gender Ads Project attempts to categorize advertisments in various ways to indicate how they relate to gender. The have over 1600 ads categorized, and accept email comments (and maybe new ads?) Maybe the site could use some more examples of misandrist ads, since they seem to be focused misogyny at the moment."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/15/1933224.shtml

Sexism in nature

Adam · 15 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Miletus Prime writes "Here is a great story I found by The Onion on sexism It is only funny because we know he is joking but the same absurdity is expressed by feminists who want and expect to be taken seriously."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/15/1934231.shtml

Stop Hitting Mum!

Adam · 16 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "Here is an article about a book describing the child's perspective on domestic violence.

The name of the book NOT surprisingly is "Stop Hitting Mum!"

Some people still do not seem to "get it" that 50% of domestic violence is committed by women against men and the percentage is even higher of women who abuse children.

When is domestic violence going to be taken seriously and stop being used as a radical feminist political wedge issue?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/16/1832254.shtml

Pro-choice rally

Adam · 16 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Jen writes "
Here is the NOW rally in Washington for reproductive choice
April 2004. I don't know if there is anyone interested in setting up a booth to represent father's choice (or lack there of)issues. It may be a way to get some exposure for the issues, as the news likes to show conflict, and I am sure it would cause conflict. I would be interested in heading this up, if anyone thinks it would do any good. If anyone else is interested please let me know. Jen"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/16/1835208.shtml

Domestic Violence in the Workplace

D · 17 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Here is the disclaimer "The U.S. Department of Justice estimates that more than 90 percent of all victims of domestic violence are women and most perpetrators men.* For this reason, this website uses she when referring to victims and he when referring to abusers." It's unfortunate that these disclaimers exist period, and the bigger question is why do they use the 'U.S. Department of Justice as the only standard for their remarks. If you read their page they are certianly hypocritical Go Here. For some email addresses see at the bottom left of page safe_at_work@liz.com and caepv@caepv.org

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/17/0246214.shtml

Check List for Violence

D · 17 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Increasingly the system doesn't hear the "man's" version of things. We here know that. Unfortunately to many of us know it first hand. I wrote this article to give us a start at learning how to defend ourselves from abusers and false accusers. It doesn't have to end here either, but it's a good start. Enjoy. Read Here. You also have my permission to pass it around to those you think it might help.Check List for Violence

A self defence approach to weeding out women that are potentially violent or who will use the justice system to extort, blackmail or to commit indirect forms of violence against you.

Here is a story for ya. I used to date a young woman, we'll call her Michelle. Michelle was a liar. A big fat liar, who used to tell the most amazing stories to garner your sympathy. Not only was Michelle a liar, she was an actress. Involved in various amature plays performed at a local theatre. A deadly combination for sure.,

Here is my hell with Michelle, which in reality is not nearly as bad as some men have gone through, but, there is a bit of smart advice at the end.

Dating Michelle was interesting, she was a cross between a redhead and a blonde with a body made for porn. However, Michelle's psyche was made for psycho thrillers. This woman lied about everything and anything. She lied about having cancer, which I drove up to see her in the hospital two towns over to be with her. She lied about being pregnant, she lied about a cist being removed from her overies as being something much more serious. She lied to the police about me breaking into her house, when in fact she broke into my house and stole my stuff. She put on quite a performance, and played the little helpless victim for the heroic and chivilrous cops to eat up and I had to higher a lawyer. This little lovely also virtually blackmailed me. She knew that I was going to Europe and that I was going without her so she told me that I would go to jail based on her report to the police if I did not take her. What was worse, she could do it and the police would believe it. Welcome to Ontario.

Did I also tell you about her stalking me even after we had broke up? This little honey made friends with my current girlfriend in order to get close to me. She is a devious woman.

I went to Europe without her and face the music when I got back because she was so pissed she did file a report. It was obvious the charge was fallacious and it was thrown out. But the hell and anxiety I went through was aweful and nobody gave a darn about me simply because I was a man and they were trained otherwise about these situations.

My feelings now is that the system is all about process and politics. Not truth and justice as I was raised to believe.

Now get this, even after we broke up, and after the court b.s. in which I had a restraining order agaisnt me to see her she kept harassing me. It was me who was trying to get rid of her but the system gave her the leverage to play me and try to control me to do her whim. After all the lies about cancer and such I dumped her, she made friends with my girlfriend and got back into my house even after I told her and everyone else that I never wanted her around again. She stole a number of my things, which I wish I just had of let go, and kept them. She moved right into an apartment down the road from me and was doing her laundry at my house weekly. Gawd. Now back to the story.

So Michelle, after about a year or two, calls me right out of the blue. She asks me what I'm doing, how things are going etc... I'm fine, things are good, so what? But of course I'm playing nice. She then is making a date with me. And during all this nice time extending over a couple of calls she goes over the list. The list is very simple, do I have a house, do I own my own car, how much money am I making, how much is in my bank account, how big is my house, of course you get the idea. It seems meaningless and typical questions for a girl looking for a status guy but it gets worse, let me tell you. The conversation moves along and she starts to tell me about her life. About her life with her latest boyfriend. Guess what, they lived together and well, he beat her up.

Automatically I don't care. I don't care if she lied, or if he did. My assumption is she probably threw a large pair of cutting shears at him like she did me, but unlike me he wailed off and hit her. Whatever. It turns out my little sweetheart has been to a shelter and this woman, who by every definition of the word a freeloader, was not trying to be with me as a longterm commitment. She was trying to be with me for a short term commitment. One just long enough to allow her to make an allegation about me to the police which under the new law bill c 117 which was passed recently, gives her all of my stuff. That's right. She by court order would have my house, car, bank account and probably my wages signed right over to her on the spot. Think I'm kidding. I don't even have to hit her. She just has to have some sort of intuition about it. It could be the furtherest thing from my mind and a sunny beautiful day and that's what she can claim in Ontario.

Does it work both ways? I doubt it, no one really talks about men as victims. However I am hearing more and more about men using this tactic. But there are no shelters for men, and no stats pounded on billboards that show men as victims. No pamplets or social workers ready to speak to men on the subject and inform them of their rights.

I hear it is increasingly like this in several states as well. Colorado? California?

There is a high motivation to make allegations here. In Australia they are now looking at the possibility of male suicides related to court decisions. I think they should also look into the possibility that the courts decisions and politicians panderings are also contributing to homocides as well. The unjust laws are creating crime. Quite frankley the system is already in dispute, they are just unwilling to either accept it or acknowledge it because in my opinion they are cowards who are only to happy to ride that gravy chain of in-justice.

Honestly, if someone took away everything you have and worked so hard for, even in my case for possibly only a one night stand, you might be tempted to kill someone and or yourself. Feminists can have all the vigils they want, their brain-washing tactics are wearing thin on the rest of us and not just men, but mothers, daughters, sons, sisters, brothers and all relatives of the victims the system creates because of political insentive and dishonesty about the facts.

Like I said, Welcome to Ontario, and if you hear that check list being recited, you know what to do.

By Dan Lynch.

Dan Lynch is a Fellow Mann administrator, has studied Self-Defence for over 23 years and he is a trained mediator.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/17/0553226.shtml

NBC4.TV Quotes Ray of NCFM re: Shelter Lawsuits

Scott · 17 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Marc writes "This article by NBC4.TV briefly covers the court's recent dismissal of Ray Blumhorst's lawsuit against 10 state funded domestic violence shelters for discriminating against males, which we are immediately appealing. As the article states, the court dismissed the case based on Government Code section 11139, which exempts "programs benefiting women" from the ban on discrimination in state funded programs. But the article fails to mention that we made a constitutional challenge to section 11139 based on Connerly v. State Personnel Board, which makes gender classifications in the law presumed unconstitutional, and that the judge refused to respond to our constitutional challenge and only said, "I'm not going to declare it unconstitutional." We are appealing this immediately."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/17/153205.shtml

UCLA Daily Bruin Prints NCFM Letter Refuting Pay Gap

Scott · 17 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Marc writes "There is currently a 4-day conference at UCLA on women and pay inequities. So the UCLA Daily Bruin on Monday printed the usual myths about pay gaps by citing weekly earnings without giving details about other important factors (hours worked, experience, spending power, etc.). Thankfully they did print our letter refuting their distortions. And it's good timing - right while the conference is still taking place. I thank Joe Manthey of Kid Culture in the Schools for sending us the original Daily Bruin article."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/17/154241.shtml

Why a child is not a house?

Adam · 18 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Member2k3 writes "Good article. I definitely agree that it's about the needs of the children - rather than the rights of the father." Oh man, I'm gonna keep a distance from this one....

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/18/1754257.shtml

Washington Post champions dating dishonesty

Adam · 18 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "... ahh, they pine for the good ol' days, don't they, when women and girls could flirt and lead men on and not be held responsible in any way for it. (Well, they still can.) But now should that noble and lofty paradigm be challenged in the least, they are crying bloody murder and once again blaming boys and men (in this case, boys in particular).

I can tell them why the boys are not interested in dating-- the short version: why bother? It wastes the boys'/men's time and money for the most part and leads eventually to a lot of whining about commitment (which isn't really commitment when half of marriages end in divorce, these being largely intitiated by the female). What, do they think we're so stupid as to keep walking into this trap again and again? Maybe today's adolescent boys, after seeing what has happened to their fathers and uncles, are wisely saying no to the relationship/marriage trap.

The boycott will continue until men get their rights back!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/18/1757235.shtml

Frankly this man amazes me.

D · 18 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dominic7 writes "Bob Almighty." AKA Bob Geldof.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/18/2149202.shtml

The Top Ten Myths of Marriage

D · 18 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

JohnC. writes "The Top Ten Myths of Marriage
By David Popenoe

The most recent U.S. Census figures confirm what most everyone already knows divorce rates, indeed, are on the rise.

1. Myth: Marriage benefits men much more than women.

Details Here!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/18/2158201.shtml

If MEN have all the POWER.....

D · 19 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

JohnC. writes "If MEN have all the POWER, how come WOMEN make the RULES?

- You keep hearing that “It’s a man’s world” and “women are oppressed,” but it sure doesn’t seem that way to you.

- Is “something wrong with you”?
- Do you have “an emotional problem”?

- Are you going crazy?

- Or is maybe something else going on, something you’re not supposed to think,
and certainly not talk about?

- This book lays it out in plain language with vivid images and examples to help you see clearly what’s really going on between men and women.

-And why you’re right for thinking something is very, very wrong...

"Download eBook

*Here!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/19/0821259.shtml

When Your Partner Cheats...

D · 19 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

JohnC. writes "When Your Partner Cheats
By Karen Berney -

Few events cause as much turmoil in a marriage as infidelity, which can reduce a marriage to rubble, shattering trust and creating a breeding ground for insecurity, mistrust and resentment.

Peggy Vaughan, author of The Monogamy Myth, estimates that 60 percent of husbands and 40 percent of wives will have an affair at some point in their marriage.

Story Here!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/19/0821219.shtml

Men are going to extinct...

D · 20 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes ″

Seriously, what is the media's interest in this topic? Why is it every article on this issue always has to include some little snide comment on what a wonder step forward this will be?

Why is it so hilarious to muse about the genetic withering of half the populace? If I were to welcome the devestation of the world's black population via HIV, what would that say about my character?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/20/010242.shtml

Polls should heed Arnie's angry army

D · 20 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

JohnC. writes "Polls should heed Arnie's angry army
/
Daily News editors, The New York Daily News
/
Riding the crest of one of the more astonishing people's insurrections in modern memory - a rebellion of historic proportions and enormous implications - Arnold Schwarzenegger is today the man who will govern California. And Gray Davis is not. There's a bottom line for you.
/
Riding the crest of one of the more astonishing people's insurrections in modern memory - a rebellion of historic proportions...
/

CONTINUED"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/20/014240.shtml

TWO Network Shows Address Paternity Fraud!

D · 20 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

amperro writes "On Sunday (10/12)ABC's "The Practice" ran the first of a two-parter concerning a man whose wife was cheating on him. She reveals to him that his children were in fact fathered by another man.
On Tuesday (10/14)CBS's "The Guardian" ran an episode about a couple suing a fertility clinic because the wife's eggs were fertilized with another man's sperm. Later it is revealed she had an affair and the clinic was not at fault.
Why doesn't Congress have the guts that Hollywood seems to be showing when addressing this issue?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/20/015240.shtml

Does Prostitution Exploit Men?

D · 20 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I'm really just posing a question here which I hope you'll read. But ask yourself, is it the "payee" or the "payer" that comes out on top? Check it out here. As always feel free to pass it around for discussion. Enjoy!Does Prostitution Exploit Men?

Key word "satisfaction". There are allegedly over 280 million porn sites on the internet. Brothels from here to kingdom come, strippers times two, massage parlours, street walkers, escorts, video shops, tittie bars, and college. Just to name a few. Now I'm only half kidding about college but the double standards are evident even on a simple night out.

Even disputes over "Ladies Night" abound. The usual arguement from men's activists opponets is that "Ladies Night" is for guys. It is not. It is for the establishment, so let's keep focused here. Ladies night envites women to get in early or for free or whatever in the marketing genius that men will show up and buy loads of beer. It's all money that goes to the establishment. Women will take up this offer perhaps realizing , perhaps not, that the said establishment is using women as bait. Women don't really drink much anyways. Societal norms still have men buying drinks for women to get to know them. These are not things I have a problem with particularly, nobody twisted your arm to buy the hottie a drink, accept perhaps your little friend. In the long run these are things that hold women back in the scheme of things and they always will. Perhaps that's for another debate. What I will point out here is that both sexes are being exploited. Both for sex, one for money. (Hmmm kind of reminds me of divorce court.)

People have urges. Men do. Women do too. In fact if you've ever seen a woman in heat you will see just how much her urges take her. A dramatic scenario is watching a female cat in heat. It's pretty extreme. Women aren't to far off, but men, usually, in their younger and more un-experienced days don't realize the significance of this. Oddly, women in their later years are more often the initiators of sex while men the not so interested. This could be why the new cougar craze is fitting in. You know "cougar", it's an older women with a younger man. Think Demi and Ashton, but subtract the blatent publicity stunt of the whole thing.

Does anyone have any idea how much a woman can earn in the sex industry? Basically the sky is the limit given her "talent". But what does a woman provide? Nothing. Is the woman being "exploited"? Not necessarily. Is the man? Yes he is. However, many women are "shipped" (or so we are led to believe) in what is termed the "white slavery trade", and yes, that is exploitation at it's absolute worse. Poor families sell either their sons or daughters for pennies in backroom "romps", and yes, that is the worst kind of exploitation. I'd like to stop it, who wouldn't. But, let's talk about "Claudia" that works the 'Red Light District' in Amsterdam. Is she being exploited? No! She is unbelievably gorgeous. I mean fucking solid top to toe and you won't believe me until you see her with your own eyes. Now, Claudia charges as much as she can. Perhaps $200 American for 15 to 20 minutes and the next guy is in. Keep in mind that the district is rich with tourists and for a girl this hot 20 men is not unusual in one night. Hmmm $4000 American in one night, not bad work and some would say she earned every penny. But was she really exploited? Is her position in life because of her gender exploitation? Give me a frikin break, dude.

There are all kinds of jobs for her to take on. None of which pay that kind of money. What she made in one night could cover many people's tuition for a year. We could argue that they are both being exploited. Very few stand for the idea that he is the one being exploited. My stance gets pretty weak when it comes to personal choice. (He has free will right?) But the thing is a woman like Claudia knows that she can cash in on this biological function. This necessity of life. So as it is claimed the first industry was formed. Supply and demand. Sex for goods. (Perhaps another day I will explain why I think it was actually nursing that was the first real proffession for women. Until then.)

Our bodies were formed to biologically reproduce it's that simple. But women like Betty Friedan claim that marriage is an institute of class hiearchy, where sex is a commodity that needs to be seized in the market place. To be witheld until further notice, in ideological terms. And don't even get me started on Catherine MacKinnon, who also has made a class war out of sex extend into the work place, creating a Stalin like state of fear and reportiveness. Either way you look at it, it's about a transfer of wealth in the name of s-e-x. Guess who pays?

If women have a "biological clock" than so do men, I say and prostitution is something that exploits that. We could throw rocks all day long trying to figure out who is really responsible for it, but with women like Claudia, tall, blonde, built, she knew it was easier to lie on her back than it was to go about it the hard way. Now don't get me wrong. I'm not here to preach conservative values and point to the greatness of "marriage", cause quite frankly, in this day and age, prostitution is might really be the safest sex going for many men.

I was for prostitution, I was against prostition and now I'm both for and against prostitution. I'm for it because it's not up to me what two consenting adults do. I'm against it, because my experience with it is that nobody really comes away fullfilled. The women are damaged goods and the men are no better off. It's a coldness that might never be warmed again. Call me a romantic.

However, in the end, women are not exploited solely because they prostitute themselves out for money, it is the men who are exploited. They do the jobs that are either high risk or of great physical strain. It is their labour and toil that does not measure up to the time in exchange for sex. And men usually by necessity have to do it. Sex should not be a commodity bought for and traded with, sex should be something shared for and cultivated with two people in my thinking. But if that's not your bag, and you want to see the wonderful world of prostitution and all that comes with it, don't think for a moment because she's lying on her back that she is the one being exploited, because it's bullshit. Feminists have merely claimed exploitation with out backing it up. Repeating it over and over again until people accepted it as truth. Much like I did here with my view. In the end it is something that exploits itself for either way. Natures curse and blessing on us. It doesn't mean we have to stop making the claim that prostitution actually exploits men, nor do we have to thank bars for having ladies night, because neither one is for men, they are both exploiting men when it comes right down to it.

by Dan Lynch

Dan Lynch is a fellow MANN administrator who has studied self-defence for over 22 years, he is also a trained mediator.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/20/037202.shtml

Thou shalt speak only as "we" allow

D · 21 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

donaldcameron1 writes "Nebraska man ordered to speak English to his daughter or face limited visits

Canadian Press
Tuesday, October 14, 2003

"PAPILLION, Neb. (AP) - A Hispanic man who spoke to his five-year-old daughter in Spanish has been ordered to use primarily English around the girl as a condition of his visitation rights.

I wrote a letter to the Governor expressing my concerns and urge readers to contact this governor to express their concerns or outrage over this kind of stupidity.

Email
the Governor Go to Governor's Website or you can send an e-mail to the newspaper of record The Papillion Times

Thanks for taking the time to read this."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/21/0353255.shtml

Buy some mushrooms....help cure prostate cancer

D · 21 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

napnip writes "It seems like everyday I see an ad by this or that company stating that it contributes to breast cancer research and awareness, yet I have never seen a company mention prostate cancer, until today! I bought a package of fresh To-Jo mushrooms from my local grocery store, and it has a logo on the package stating that the company is a "Blue Ribbon Partner" in the fight against prostate cancer! I went to their website, and it has some more info: http://www.mushroominfo.com/ If only more companies would do this. Let's write them and thank them!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/21/0354251.shtml

Wash. Post covers bris ceremony

D · 21 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "In the 10/18 Wash Post:

Washingtonpost.

This is a toughie- the challenge here is to call into question the practice without seeming to attack the faith of those doing it. If this can be done, since it is likely to get coverage vs. "routine" circumcision, bringing the issue up in a letter to the editor in this context could serve the cause of getting awareness of male genital integrity issues increased-- but it's a tightrope-walk, no doubt. No objection can be seen to be an attack on the religious context in which it applies, or risk distraction from the issue or worse yet, a further entrenchment of the practice in the name of religious self-defense."

"Only those who think they can word their letters appropriately would I encourage you to write; I suggest you have several people review it before sending it, esp. find if you can find observant members of the Jewish faith to see if they think the wording of your letter may be counter-productive; they need not agree with you, just see if they think the wording is patently offensive to their religious beliefs. I feel that the goal is not to annoy or alienate people but to communicate the position that boys deserve genital integrity as much as girls regardless of the beliefs of adults, and that such a decision should be made by the man himself once old enough to do so, not his kin for him.

Uusally I lean toward the side of taking action at risk if need be, but in this case, if you don't think you can write with clear sensitivity to the religious matters involved, I say, don't do it, as it is not likely to help the cause. But the good news is, hey, this article was even published at all in the first place."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/21/1921231.shtml

AZ Shelter, Utility Charged With Fraud

D · 21 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "An AZ women's shelter and a public utility has been charged with soliciting funds from the public in a fraudulent manner.

Please Read More.....

In a formal complaint filed with the AZ Attorney General last week, Yuma resident Trudy W. Schuett accused Catholic Community Services, the administering agency of Safe House, a women-only shelter, of misrepresenting both domestic violence statistics and census figures of the shelter itself, in order to raise money for a proposed expansion effort. The Arizona Public Service Company, which paid for a half-page ad which appeared in the September 28 issue of the Yuma Daily Sun, was included in the complaint.

Schuett believes the shelter's claim of "turning away 350 families" and a section of the ad purporting to contain "National Domestic Violence Statistics" to be both without basis in fact and misleading to the public. "There is no evidence given or statement of fact to support any claims made in this advertisement," she says in the letter, which was received at the Attorney General's office on October 15.

The ad, which asks Yuma residents for help in raising $180,000 to expand the shelter, claims that "Domestic Violence is the #1 cause of emergency room visits," and that "95% of victims are women and children, among other statements. Schuett maintains these statements to be "wildly incorrect and inflammatory…No reference source for these numbers was given; neither was any time frame in which they applied."

The complaint was made after direct attempts at contact with both Catholic Community Services and APS were ignored. Schuett faxed and/or e-mailed letters to all parties, including the Yuma and Tucson offices of CCS, and the Yuma office of APS shortly after the ad appeared in the newspaper. Her letters protested the use of this kind of information to solicit funding, and requested that CCS and APS publicly admit to "the false and misleading statements made by Safe House," and return any funds derived from the campaign. She has had no response from either APS or Catholic Community Services.

When an article on the Safe House expansion appeared in the Yuma Daily Sun on October 3, Margie Coffaro, Executive Director of CCS, repeated the ambiguous "350 families" term, which led Schuett to believe CCS was intentionally misleading the public.

This led to the filing of the formal complaint. "I'm well aware of the way fundraisers are conducted," Schuett says. "In fact, I've worked in fundraising for CCS myself in the past. But this kind of numbers game cannot be allowed, especially when the agency has been given the chance to admit to an error. Apparently CCS feels they can tell the public anything they like without challenge, or providing any definition of their terms or proof."

In addition to serving either as volunteer or as paid staff at Yuma charities at various times since 1986, Schuett has been an advocate and activist for domestic violence victims since 1999. She first became aware of what she terms "the crisis in service" while doing research for a novel on a male victim of domestic violence. The novel, Friends to the End, was initially published in 2000. "The agencies of the entire domestic violence field have failed their communities miserably," she said in a recent post in the DesertLight Journal, her publication related to issues of domestic violence and divorce. The DLJ has been in publication since 2001."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/21/2125219.shtml

The Rising: Tanks on the streets of London. F4J

D · 22 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "A tank is to lead over a thousand fathers in a march in London tomorrow (Wednesday 22 October) to demand a legal right to see their kids. The fathers, who say they have been discriminated against by the Family Courts, are members of Fathers 4 Justice (F4J), a radical campaign group that has stormed into the headlines thanks to a series of high profile protests, including 200 Father Christmases in one protest and Men In Black sit-in in another. Being video for the Men's Hour"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/22/0031207.shtml

Anyone else tired of this crap?!

D · 22 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

NYPD Blue

ABC 7 Oct 21 09:00pm Add to My Calendar
Series/Drama, 60 Mins.

"Keeping Abreast"

A serial killer targets women from an upscale bar; Jones attempts to protect a boy from his violent father. Adult Situations.

Cast: Dennis Franz, Mark-Paul Gosselaar, Gordon Clapp, Bill Brochtrup, Henry Simmons, Charlotte Ross, Garcelle Beauvais, Esai Morales, Jacqueline Obradors, Austin Majors, Kim Delaney, Chandra West, Andre Jamal Kinney, Philipp Karner , Michael Reilly Burke, Albie Selznick, Joseph Will, Julie St. Claire, Billy Kay, Molly Hagan.
Director(s): Jesse Bochco .
Producer(s): Steven Bochco, Mark Tinker, Bill Clark.
Writer(s): Bill Clark, Matt Olmstead.

Original Airdate: October 21, 2003.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/22/0319234.shtml

Why Aren't Males Watching TV? DUH!!

D · 22 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CPM writes "Why oh why won't men watch our shows? Because they're fucking pissed that's why! I love how one theory is that most of their Nielson samplers(men) have been deployed to Iraq. That's funny, I always hear that it is "men and women" who are serving as if to get equal billing. If this is so, then it is also "men and women" Nielson people who are not home to watch TV. Crappy misandrist programming/advertising has nothing to do with it...!

Few Viewers and Network Execs Scratch Their Heads"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/22/1927257.shtml

THE POLITICS OF MANHOOD

D · 22 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes ""Not only have we Americans lost the powerful influence of real men, we also have universally accepted the counterfeit. Ray Romano, star of the award-winning CBS comedy sitcom Everybody Loves Raymond, is the quintessential man of modern America. This is manhood, as represented by the social engineers, to all of America's children." This article outlines the plight of true American manhood which is under attack by modern culture, alternative lifestyles and feminism.
Put your "seatbelts on" - this is a great article...

http://www.newswithviews.com/EmanuelMcLittle/mclit tle7.htm"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/22/1929228.shtml

Republicans Continue Male Persecution

D · 22 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Quote Ashcroft Attorny General:"Domestic violence is wrong and destroys the lives of far too many women and children. I'm challenging men across America to take the pledge against domestic violence. We must work together to eliminate the horrific cycle of violence," said Attorney General John Ashcroft. "This public service announcement demonstrates the Bush Administration's unceasing commitment to keep families safe, hold offenders accountable, and bring communities together in our ongoing efforts to end domestic violence."

They will be spending 20 million dollars to make men look like evil bastards. Even if the comercials on the front look all warm and fuzzy with everyone working together, we know all to well the ugliness of the bureaucracy behind it all. Here is the link I promised.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/22/216247.shtml

A Brief History of Collaborative Family Law

D · 23 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

JohnC. writes "A Brief History of Collaborative Family Law
/
Never doubt that a small group of thoughtful, committed citizens can change the world & indeed it is the only thing that ever has. - Margaret Meade, 1970 -
/
Lawyer Stuart Webb of Minneapolis, Minnesota is generally credited with being the founder of collaborative family law. In 1990, after 15 years' experience practicing "traditional" family law, Mr. Webb decided to do something about the frustration and stress he and his clients were experiencing. He decided to "unilaterally disarm".
/

ARTICLE"*

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/23/0124214.shtml

What You Don't Know About Honor Killings

D · 23 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

What you don't know about honor killings. Read on and Enjoy!

What you don't know about Honor Killings

What you do know … is that honor killings are, by and large, committed by men. That they happen somewhere in countries you've never been, and that collectively feminists probably blame the men in America just as much as the men in Pakistan.
You also know that honor killings usually revolve around a woman's fidelity, such as: did the woman sleep with such and such guy before she was married, is she sleeping around on her husband with someone else's husband, did she resist the marriage proposal of a man, and so on.

What you don't know … is that the majority of honor killings are instigated by women. This is pointed out by Patricia Pearson her 1997 book on violent women, When She Was Bad. In it she references Ilsa M. Glaza Wahipa and Abu Ras's article, "On aggression, human rights, and hegemonic discourse: The case of a murder for family honor in Israel," which describes how it is women who actually instigate honor killings. Much like the rest of Pearson's book that describes women's covert tactics in violence, these women do their work behind closed doors. The motives are just like motives here: to extract revenge, to beat out a competitor, or gain respect.

Even if the alleged crimes were committed, it is the gossip network that instigates the process in which men are forced by culture to levy out. "So even though it's violence against women, it is violence against women by women," Pearson, When She Was Bad.

Even in America – where shows like Oprah Winfrey describe these issues – the blame is leveled against men as the sole proprietors of honor killings. From an article on Oprah.com giving a brief overview on their show on honor killings: "For women in some Middle Eastern countries, this is a constant fear. In these countries, men have the power of life or death over their female relatives. Thousands of women are killed because men believe they have brought shame to their family." Men are described as the only ones who want to uphold this tradition of honor killings.

However, even during an Oprah show on honor killings, a short clip interviewing a Pakistani man described that these men do not always want to kill their wives, daughters, sisters or other females – that the traditions force them to carry these out or faced being killed as well. The man also described how many men just pick up and flee with the respective woman and their families. However, the abruptness in which that clip stopped and the brevity of it, makes me believe I saw that clip by editorial error.

Zainab Saldi of Women for Women International describes these situations also as all-male violators against all-female victims. From the same Oprah.com article, Saldi admits that, "[O]ther women in the family cooperate with the perpetrators. They know that if they try to defend a woman, their own morality will be questioned." For women, she admits that they help kill only for fear of being morally condemned, but she does not offer the same leniency to men. Men, she implies by neglecting to mention their situation, must want to kill women just for the desire to kill. Obviously this woman knows the score, and is down playing just exactly what is going on here with women's involvement, namely because of her feminist views that often put women in the "women can do no wrong" category.

We can run around in circles playing the blame game, but tearing down these traditions is far too difficult. We shouldn't waste our energy fighting each other. Clearly their battle is against men instead of objectively solving the problem of honor killings. The objective view would be to bring about the right of a victim to face their accuser. Ironically those are the exact rights that feminists are trying to destroy here at home. Another would be to clearly state that the crime does not fit the punishment. And again feminists are known for crying for harsher punishments than meet the crime here at home. So what exactly is going on?

I like to hypothesize that feminism is being used as a form of imperialism to invade foreign countries, which has a sole aim to tear down traditions and claim “Democratic Reform.” But just because an agency is called “Human Rights,” it doesn't necessarily point out which group of humans will have the rights when the smoke all clears.

Now for those men who do their honor killings out of pride and ego, like the women who instigate honor killings, I cannot defend them, nor do I want to. I want to tear down those traditions as much as anyone else does, but I want to tear it down for the right reasons not the wrong ones. I agree, feminism may be successful at tearing those traditions down; tearing down traditions is what feminism is good at. However, let’s not tear down traditions merely to resurrect other ones just as evil or worse. Like Christ, who set the example with his very life by stopping an honor killing, let's use solutions that use love and forgiveness as a staple, not oppression and victimhood as a divider.
Author's side note: I feel I should mention an email conversation with a Pakistani man. He verified many of my points, but though he never witnessed an honor killing, he tells me that it is likely either gender will instigate it. Petty rivalry, or even to gain inheritance from another sibling can be the reasons. My concern is of how feminists in America use this to demonize men in general where it is difficult for us here to verify the facts and reasons.

By Dan Lynch

Dan Lynch is an avid enthusiast of Self-Defence, with over 22 years of training.
NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/23/0448236.shtml

Men's Movement Fires Back with own 'Pledge Against

D · 24 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

"I pledge to work against ALL domestic violence, whether committed by a male or a female...I pledge to raise my voice when I see a man using his strength to abuse a woman, or when I see a woman using the police to abuse a man.....

For full pledge, go to http://mensnewsdaily.com/archive/s/sacks/03/sacks1 02203.htm

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/24/040234.shtml

A Double Standard for Sex Offenders

Thomas · 24 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Psychologist Katherine Peterson of the Kentucky Department of Corrections has looked into double standards regarding the reporting and punishing of female vs. male sex offenders. Here is a brief report.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/24/0528223.shtml

Feminism has achieved very little for women

D · 25 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original tjc writes "Women enjoy greater freedoms today because of progress in the areas of science, medicine and technology, not because of feminism.

/
Those who have doubts about this should try to imagine how feminist policies or attitudes could possibly have succeeded 100 years ago - or in impoverished places in the world today.
*

HERE"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/24/2326233.shtml

1,000 Thank Yous and Here's the Skinny!

Adam · 25 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Trudy W Schuett writes "First, I'd like to thank everyone for the many kind posts in support of my little project. I've had many equally-lovely msgs at my e-mail, as well. Please forgive me if I don't answer you all personally -- there are so many, and as you can imagine, this is a very busy time here at the desert outpost, as I'm still just one person! ;>)

I've written up a basic how-to at the blog, which will give some insight you into how I went about Phase One of what I'm calling "The Attorney General Project."

There are no secrets here, so don't be concerned that the opposition can or will attempt to use this against us. Because it is all based on demonstrable fact, and truth, it's not anything they can even challenge effectively. As you know, the domestic violence industry is based on smoke and mirrors, and as more of us who are determined that the truth be known embark on small projects here and there, the truth will out.

Something that is less well-known is that in some states (AZ especially) DV services are withdrawing from their state chapters of NCADV. The public statements made by the groups withdrawing suggest an ideological disagreement. If anyone hears about this kind of thing happening in your own state, please let me know! I will be addressing this as soon as I can."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/25/1744229.shtml

For Immediate Release: Cox Cancer

Adam · 25 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Stephanie Frostic writes "~ FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE ~ ATTENTION ALL MEN'S & PARENT'S RIGHTS ACTIVISTS

ENDANGERED SPECIES: ALL NON-CUSTODIAL PARENTS

NEW TUMOR DISCOVERED THROUGHOUT MICHIGAN

Honor, Michigan, USA October 22, 2003 -- Michigan's Attorney General Mike Cox's Enslaving Deadbeat Parents Agenda is one of the toughest amongst the nation. He has been holding the status of Attorney General in the State of Michigan and hiding behind America's children since he won the election in 2002. Cox's Enslaving Agenda, in the name of children and families abroad, has already conceived the first of its malignant cells, thus it is just a matter of time before this newly conjured Cancer, recently named as Cox Cancer by Stephanie Frostic of PaternityByChoice.com, multiplies at such an enormous rate, a National Quarantine would be inevitable. PaternityByChoice.com's Founding Mother, Stephanie Frostic, notes "[t]here is no need for panic or alarm, but it doesn't mean that it's safe to ignore it, either." While Mrs. Frostic looks further into discovering an antidote for this new epidemic, scientific details on it are offered to you for your own research and protection on the web at paykids.com Stephanie Frostic, Founding Mother Paternity By Choice"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/25/1748253.shtml

Fox News Reports Male-Bashing Outrage

D · 25 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Michael Phillip Wright writes "This Fox News story is about how I came under suspicion of being a "stalker," just because I tried to contact a woman to return her lost student ID card, which I had found. Unfortunately writer McElroy made some mistakes. The town is Norman -- not "Normal." I am 56 -- not a "young man." Also I am not an OU student. Here is the link to the Fox story "

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/25/2112244.shtml

"It's a boy"?

D · 25 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Sorry about this post, I've been seeing billboards that have a little piglet in a blue blanket. The sign reads:"It's a boy!" but it has nothing that I could see denoting what it is. Could someone possibly inform me of what that sign is in regards to? Thank you.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/25/2138213.shtml

NYTimes hops on divorce-and-boys bandwagon

Adam · 26 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "Well, the NYT has done it again. Jumping on the recent junk-science-based "revelation" that couples with boys stay together more often than those with only female children, they bemoan the difficult place of girls as a result.

Read it and barf here.

No mention of the male-only draft or much higher injury and suicide rates of males, though. Guess that isn't important to them."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/26/208210.shtml

Patricia Ireland Fired from Girl Scouts...

D · 28 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes ″

Read about it!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/27/2110217.shtml

"No shame. No blame. No names."

D · 28 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

"No shame. No blame. No names."

Posters bearing this slogan can be found in bus stops and on billboards all over Los Angeles, urging unhappy new mothers to drop off their babies at hospitals and fire stations. The Safe Haven Laws now in place in 44 states starkly reveal the enormous inequality in reproductive rights between men and women.

Glenn Sacks debated the issue of Choice for Men with Kingsley Morse of the Voluntary Fatherhood Project and feminist columnist Elaine Vigneault on His Side with Glenn Sacks in Los Angeles and Seattle on Sunday, October 19. To listen to the show, go to His Side Archive.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/27/2112256.shtml

Minnelli files for divorce from Gest

D · 28 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original tjc writes "Minnelli files for divorce from Gest

/
Entertainer denies husband's abuse allegations
/
NEW YORK, Oct. 22 — Liza Minnelli filed for divorce from estranged husband David Gest on Wednesday, a day after he filed a $10 million lawsuit against the entertainer, accusing her of beating him during alcoholic rages. Minnelli moved to end her 16-month marriage shortly after issuing a statement denying Gest's allegations
/

STORY"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/27/2113246.shtml

Advocating Violence

D · 28 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "What is the best action concerning a website like this and the last comment that advocates "enlisting the aid of our friends Colt, Smith, and Wesson"?

Should the police be notified? Have they broken the law? Should we find out the ISP and get them taken down, if possible? If so, how do we get this information?

If any of you have trouble with my link, as I seem to have found more and more lately, here is the address for copying and pasting:

www.feminazi.org"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/27/2115202.shtml

Gendercide web site

D · 28 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "Good site on "gendercide":

www.gendercide.org

I see an opportunity for men's issues/rights activists to be involved in this area, especially as it links us in more directly with human rights issues (ie, it's a possible "in" for our issues, which have such a hard time getting press in human rights circles as such).

From their "about" page:

"Gendercide is gender-selective mass killing. The term was first used by Mary Anne Warren in her 1985 book, Gendercide: The Implications of Sex Selection. Warren drew "an analogy between the concept of genocide" and what she called "gendercide." Citing the Oxford English Dictionary definition of genocide as 'the deliberate extermination of a race of people,' Warren wrote...." Please Read More.

Warren wrote:"By analogy, gendercide would be the deliberate extermination of persons of a particular sex (or gender). Other terms, such as "gynocide" and "femicide," have been used to refer to the wrongful killing of girls and women. But "gendercide" is a sex-neutral term, in that the victims may be either male or female. There is a need for such a sex-neutral term, since sexually discriminatory killing is just as wrong when the victims happen to be male. The term also calls attention to the fact that gender roles have often had lethal consequences, and that these are in important respects analogous to the lethal consequences of racial, religious, and class prejudice."
.
."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/27/2121246.shtml

Record childlessness

D · 28 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "As many of us know/suspected:

I submitted this link under "Fatherhood" because I wasn't sure where else to submit it under. After all, if women aren't having kids, neither are men!

Anthropological suicide in action. Make it too risky for men to have kids and incent women not to, and what do you expect the result to be?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/28/198253.shtml

Women-only floors in hotels...

D · 29 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "... that are nicer and more spacious than the "ordinary" floors. Gotta make sure they have lots of room and, with the bigger peep-holes, they can keep an eye out for those evil, awful MEN that are lurking everywhere!!! Hooray for those "forward-thinking" hotels, yes sirree!!!

Here it is:

I wonder if the poor dears are charged a little more for these rooms??"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/29/0451224.shtml

Sisters fed, brothers starved

D · 29 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Matt writes "Speaks for itself:"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/29/0459241.shtml

Child Medication Article in TIME

D · 29 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes ″

The most recent cover-article in TIME magazine is on medication (or possible over-medication) of youngsters... however, in order to humanize the account, they give two girls personalized treatment (three girls, if you include the sidebar "Life on Medication")... even though it is boys who receive the lion's share of children's prescriptions relating to ADHD and bipolar disorder.

Seriously, look through this article-- where are boys mentioned? Not one. They are completely invisible in this narrative."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/29/051250.shtml

New Forum To Discuss Various Issues

D · 29 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "A new forum has been set up to discuss various issues. Things ranging from gender issues, politics and current events. Aswell fun stuff like music. The place is sympathic towards men's rights so you should feel right at home.

It's called Reality Check -

A Whopping Dose of Clue for the Clueless."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/29/055257.shtml

Must-read DV Gulag Essay by Baskerville

D · 29 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "Excellent brief essay by Stephen Baskerville on the MND site. Dr. Baskerville echoes many of our reader's sentiments in describing the Domestic Violence Industry as a Stalinist/Fascist Gulag that has eroded civil liberties and legal due process, while strategically inculcating FEAR in its "target population," i.e. men.

A must-read for those concerned about our nation's growing DV Gestapo regime!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/29/057238.shtml

Davis' Parting Shot at CA. Men

D · 29 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks' latest column--"New California Move-Away Law Hurts Children of Divorce" (Daily Breeze, Los Angeles, 10/28/03)-- describes a new law which is Governor Gray Davis' parting shot at the men of California. The law, which was rammed through the California Legislature by feminist groups with almost no resistance or publicity, is a major defeat for California fathers and children. Read the column at Link Here
To respond to the column, go to letters@dailybreeze.com

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/29/076214.shtml

John Walsh Show on Domestic Violence and Men

Scott · 29 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Tom writes *"John Walsh is taping a show this Friday that will focus on male victims of domestic violence. They are seeking men and women who can offer insight into these issues. Click Read more for the contact details."*JOHN WALSH SHOW: DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

We're doing a show about domestic abuse, focusing on the abuse of MEN. We are looking for couples dealing with these issues who will share their story to bring enlightenment and hope to couples in similar situations. The show tapes this Fri, Oct. 31 at Rockefeller Plaza in New York City. We will take care of all travel accommodations (costs and arrangements).

Andrew Goldman

The John Walsh Show

Toll-Free 866-459-2574 ext. 2057

212-664-2057

andrew.goldman@nbc.com

www.johnwalsh.tv

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/29/181241.shtml

Three Stories Deleted

Scott · 29 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

I have deleted three recent postings on MANN that were too far off-topic for this site. One was on the subject of separation of church and state in the U.S, another on the shutdown of a Nestle plant, and a third on junk food and alternative medicine. I'd like to reiterate that the purpose of Mensactivism.org is to focus on stories and activism directly related to men's rights and dignity - we are not a general news site for men (such as Men's News Daily, which is a great site for that purpose). The deleted stories are legitimate topics of discussion and debate, just not here. Please check out Our Philosophy page to get an idea of what Mensactivism.org's guiding principles are. Thank you for keeping this in mind.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/29/1812226.shtml

Comparing Feminism to Fascism

D · 31 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

Lawrence Britt has examined the fascist regimes of Hitler
(Germany), Mussolini (Italy), Franco (Spain), Suharto (Indonesia) and several Latin American regimes. Britt found 14 defining characteristics common to each: (Personally I feel he left out Stalinism. Perhaps on purpose.) So what I have done is added Feminism to the mold to see how it stands up. Read here and Enjoy. Dr. Lawrence Britt has examined the fascist regimes of Hitler (Germany), Mussolini (Italy), Franco (Spain), Suharto (Indonesia) and several Latin American regimes. Britt found 14 defining characteristics common to each: (Personally I feel he left out Stalinism. Perhaps on purpose.) So what I have done is added Feminism to the mold to see how it stands up. Enjoy.

Quote:

1. Powerful and Continuing Nationalism - Fascist regimes tend to make constant use of patriotic mottos, slogans, symbols, songs, and other paraphernalia. Flags are seen everywhere, as are flag symbols on clothing and in public displays.

Instead of 'nationalism' its identity tracer is replaced with gender. Feminists constantly use mottos, slogans, symbols, songs and other paraphernalia. Instead of 'flags' they might use white ribbons or other ornaments.

Quote:

2. Disdain for the Recognition of Human Rights - Because of fear of enemies and the need for security, the people in fascist regimes are persuaded that human rights can be ignored in certain cases because of "need." The people tend to look the other way or even approve of torture, summary executions, assassinations, long incarcerations of prisoners, etc.

Doesn't this look a lot like 'family court'? Or accused of domestic violence, or sexual assault? Its very difficult to get anyone to look honestly at the above mentioned. When I asked a room full of women if they felt they "needed, or deserved special protection" every single one of them said yes. Of course I blame this on media hysteria. A manufactured reality, not actual reality. Because of a media blackout of violence perpetrated against men and overpotrayals and over dramatization of violence against women a very distorted view of reality can exist. In true Pavlovian style it is no wonder that women respond in this way.

Quote:

3. Identification of Enemies/Scapegoats as a Unifying Cause - The people are rallied into a unifying patriotic frenzy over the need to eliminate a perceived common threat or foe: racial , ethnic or religious minorities; liberals; communists; socialists, terrorists, conservatives etc.

Enemies/Scapegoats , unifying cause, this does sound like men doesn't it (in feminists' eyes). The unifying patriotic frenzy is gender the common threat is gender which should be added to the list mentioned in quote 3. By the use of faulty research designed to de-humanize men with Pavlovian style response techniques feminists , such as authors like michele landsberg, can create this unifying patriotic hysteria in women by using trigger words. Constantly inspiring women to be resentful, spiteful, angry and hateful. Without hate their 'movement' is void. Their cause is already void and this they are well aware of, or why else would they lie so much?

Quote:

4. Supremacy of the Military - Even when there are widespread domestic problems, the military is given a disproportionate amount of government funding, and the domestic agenda is neglected. Soldiers and military service are glamorized.

This one is still the same. The military can be seen in the social workers as indoctrinators and brainwashers. Found in almost any abuse shelter, children services, sexual assault centers. They are given a disproportionate amount of government funding and power that is not tallied for and is not shared with the demonized gender. These groups are glamorized and dramatized. These organizations are not meant to help domestic problems they are meant to increase government of fascism (bureaucracy). In this case under the guise of feminism.

Quote:

5. Rampant Sexism - The governments of fascist nations tend to be almost exclusively male-dominated. Under fascist regimes, traditional gender roles are made more rigid. Divorce, abortion and homosexuality are suppressed and the state is represented as the ultimate guardian of the family institution.

Its all really just the other side of the coin isn't it? One could even argue that they are trying to promote such fascism, nazism from playing the other side forcing the target group to rise up. The State is still the ultimate guardian of the family. Not only are father's being forced out of their children's lives, women are being persuaded out of their children's lives. Different tactics, same result.

Quote:

6. Controlled Mass Media - Sometimes the media is directly controlled by the government, but in other cases, the media is indirectly controlled by government regulation, or sympathetic media spokespeople and executives. Censorship, especially in war time, is very common.

Women's groups do the exact same thing. Look at how Canada is being pushed into extreme censorship laws. Important research on many of the feminist main issues are supressed. Statistics of violence against men were suppressed for years and still is in many regards. Even if the stats come full circle the harsh fascist laws are in place and now will be working against women as much as it does against men. So in a sence feminists have been working to undermine women's rights all along.

Quote:

7. Obsession with National Security - Fear is used as a motivational tool by the government over the masses.

Feminsim may very well be what Hitler spoke of when he said, "Today Germany, Tomorrow the world". Feminism has no borders and its ideology can reach the entire globe. The same methods are being used to enforce this, with identity, women are terrorized with images of violence perpetrated against women daily and as the men's movement increases so will these false images. Women are being manipulated to vote in such a direction. It doesn't matter who sets up the massive police forces or why, in the end they will be set up for whomever to use and thats what counts. This is fascism at its finest.

Quote:

8. Religion and Government are Intertwined - Governments in fascist nations tend to use the most common religion in the nation as a tool to manipulate public opinion. Religious rhetoric and terminology is common from government leaders, even when the major tenets of the religion are diametrically opposed to the government's policies or actions.

With feminism it could be argued that it opposes religeon and is trying to do away with it. It doesn't really matter if the feminist movement goes with religeon or not, in this case religeon is still being used as a tool. It is used to identify an oppressor. Thereby for the fascist government at hand killing two birds with one stone.

Quote:

9. Corporate Power is Protected - The industrial and business aristocracy of a fascist nation often are the ones who put the government leaders into power, creating a mutually beneficial business/government relationship and power elite.

Well, this would lend credence to the likes of Henry Makow. But feminism has taken over corperate power and has allowed the government into not only our businesses but our homes our sex lives even our private conversations. This is fascist rule. Because of feminism the government is everywhere. It even has a grip on our children.

Quote:

10. Labor Power is Suppressed - Because the organizing power of labor is the only real threat to a fascist government, labor unions are either eliminated entirely, or are severely suppressed.

Feminism in this case glutted the market with employees. Thereby making the unemployment rate go up and weakening the power of the individual especially men who are emasculated and walk a tight rope around women in the office. Our status of living has decreased and will continue to decrease with foreign competitors in the labour markets.

Quote:

11. Disdain for Intellectuals and the Arts - Fascist nations tend to promote and tolerate open hostility to higher education, and academia. It is not uncommon for professors and other academics to be censored or even arrested. Free expression in the arts and letters is openly attacked.

In our case they have invaded the intellectual foundations and control it with strong propaganda techniques. They control this with money. The rest just follow blindly as 'feminism' has a cult like drawing. Its indoctrinating process is severe and powerful. Dissent is punishable with ridicule , lower grades, loss of funding for certain clubs based on ideology. Universities are not the place for debate, they have become becons of brain-washing exactly as in Red China.

Quote:

12. Obsession with Crime and Punishment - Under fascist regimes, the police are given almost limitless power to enforce laws. The people are often willing to overlook police abuses and even forego civil liberties in the name of patriotism. There is often a national police force with virtually unlimited power in fascist nations.

Social Justice for Women is the continual battle cry. Meanwhile supressing and excusing any and all of women's crimes (for now). No where in the legal system is anyone denied rights more than with gender related crimes. Such as domestic violence, sexual assault, sexual harrassment, etc..... Civil liberties are denied in the name of feminism (nationalism/patriotism). Descrimation against men is being described as 'positive descrimination'. The regular police forces are ideal and shows an advancement on the ideology because now it can be utilized at the home base--the municipulality, and work its way up instead of down.

Quote:

13. Rampant Cronyism and Corruption - Fascist regimes almost always are governed by groups of friends and associates who appoint each other to government positions and use governmental power and authority to protect their friends from accountability. It is not uncommon in fascist regimes for national resources and even treasures to be appropriated or even outright stolen by government leaders.

Feminists favour feminists. In fact even women who try to make it in politics who are not under the feminist mindset are horrendeously attacked by feminists.

Quote:

14. Fraudulent Elections - Sometimes elections in fascist nations are a complete sham. Other times elections are manipulated by smear campaigns against or even assassination of opposition candidates, use of legislation to control voting numbers or political district boundaries, and manipulation of the media. Fascist nations also typically use their judiciaries to manipulate or control elections.

Feminists control and manipulate media. They also use other forms of enforced elections to gain power, terming it 'quota'. I am not aware of any feminist or finacial elitest trying to assasinate anyone. But since I feel that someone is cranking the wheel of feminism its rather a matter of manipulating the masses into their governmental control.

by Dan Lynch

Dan Lynch teaches the martial arts and self-defence. Having over 22 years of experience.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/30/2036202.shtml

Anyone See "ER" on October 30th?

Adam · 31 October 2003 · Archived copy · Original

The Gonzo Kid writes "Here's the episode guide, episode is titled "Out of Africa." It seems that a mother going through a divorce has her kids out, and is drunk, dropping one and fracturing his skull. Social Services is called, and emergency custody given to the father. She then torches herself in her SUV. What is bizarre is that (1) great angst is expressed over calling CPS, (2) Great sympathy is shown the woman, (3) Of course, ex-hubby is made as much a monster as possible, and finally (4) the litany of excuses is recited. I had the occasion to be watching this in my local tavern, towards the end some pheminist gasbag commented on "What a tragedy" it was - I looked her dead in the eyes and asked for all to hear, "Happens to men every day, chicky. Why is it suddenly a tragedy now?" LOL - you should have seen her eyes bug out and get the fishy face!! (For the ignorant: Fishy face is when your mouth opens and shuts and no sound comes out - like fish do in a tank.)"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/31/2331252.shtml

Sometimes you can judge a book by its cover ....

Adam · 1 November 2003 · Archived copy · Original

CrimsonArrow writes "Sure, "Divorce War!: 50 Strategies Every Woman Needs to Know to Win" has seen seven years in printing. But try reading a few reviews from these two links: [1] [2]" Ack, If women in general want to suffer a future world of hurt, they're going the "right" way about it. sighs Like my dad used to say: god bless us and save us.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/03/10/31/2351231.shtml

How To Kidnap A Child

Adam · 1 November 2003 · Archived copy · Original

JohnC. writes "How To Kidnap A Child
by Stephen Baskerville, PhD
/
