2. The bill needs to remove specific references to women and girls, to make the language gender-neutral.

Watch for RADAR's Alert coming out this Monday morning.

In the meantime, if you want to contact your Senator at their local office on Monday or Tuesday, that's fine.

But it's important that we stay on message – see points 1. and 2. above. If you request other changes to VAWA, it will dilute the key message that advocates for equal treatment are trying to make.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/01/1454209.shtml

Drunk mother suffocates baby - no jail

Matt · 1 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "This mother got drunk and suffocated her baby by falling asleep on the child. She gets three years 'community rehabilitation'. If you get drunk and kill someone in an car accident you go to jail - but get drunk and kill your own baby and somehow that is different.

Now imagine how many years in prison a man would have got for a similar offence. "

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/01/1456219.shtml

New Yahoo! Group: The Patriarchy

Matt · 3 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original mens_issues writes "Our friend Thomas (Tom) Fullery has created a satirical new Yahoo group called The Patriarchy. Its web address is:

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ThePatriarchy"

Click "Read more..." for more.

Here is its description:

This is the officious website of The Patriarchy.

Feminists are always talking about how they are against patriarchy, or even "The Patriarchy." I find the latter term to be rather intriguing, and even amusing. It conjures up images of a group of elderly men in white robes who meet in secret locations to scheme how to benefit men by oppressing women. Such meetings would involve outlandish rituals. And edicts would be given out from some sort of Patriarchy Central to men around the world.

The purpose of this group, of course, is to illustrate the absurdity of the feminist concept of The Patriarchy by indirectly pointing out the inherent contradictions within such a concept. And to find a little fun and humor along the way.

Thomas (Tom) Fullery

Communications Engineer

Ministry of Communications

PATRIARCHY CENTRAL"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/03/0218213.shtml

RADAR Alert: Mr. Specter, Why are Disabled Boys Ineligible for VAWA Services?

Matt · 3 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Section 1402 of the Senate version of VAWA states how the funds will be used:

(b) USE OF FUNDS- Grants awarded under this section shall be used--

> `(1) to provide personnel, training, technical assistance, advocacy, intervention, risk reduction and prevention of domestic violence, dating violence, stalking, and sexual assault against disabled women and girls;

Note that disabled women and girls qualify, but apparently not disabled boys or men. This is simply outrageous.

Click "Read more..." for more.

Mr. Specter, Why are Disabled Boys Ineligible for VAWA Services?
As chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and an original co-sponsor of the Violence Against Women Act, Senator Specter has the power to remove this discriminatory language.

This is what we are asking him to do:

1. Remove specific references to women and girls (like in Section 1402) to make the language gender-neutral.
2. Add clear and explicit language clarifying that male DV victims are entitled to service. The Senate bill currently has male-inclusive language, but we want to make it much stronger.

This is how to contact Senator Specter's office:

Fax (the most effective strategy): 202-228-1229

Telephone: 202-224-4254

E-mail: Use his comments submission page – be sure to put the words "Make VAWA Male-Inclusive" into the subject line.

It is essential get your message through as many times as possible. As always, keep your message short and sweet.

And PLEASE stay "On-Message." It is true that there are many problems with VAWA. But if everyone complains about their particular issue, we will end up canceling each other out. At this point in time, the most important thing is to make VAWA male-inclusive. That will get us a seat at the table.

We've come too far and worked too hard to dilute our focus. Please stay On-Message.

VAWA may go to the Senate floor for a vote later this week. Then it will go to the Senate-House Conference Committee to work out the differences in the Senate and House bills.

You can be sure our opponents will be pressuring Congress to get VAWA approved this week. We need to work very, very hard to match their efforts, fax by fax, phone call by phone call, and e-mail by e-mail.

Let's roll.

++

Date of RADAR Release: October 1, 2005

To track the current status of VAWA, go to http://thomas.loc.gov/ and enter the bill number: Senate bill S. 1197; House of Representatives bill H.R. 3402.

Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting (RADAR) is a coalition of men and women working to assure balance in the domestic violence issue: http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/03/169245.shtml

Boy-hanging girl gets no time

Matt · 4 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Rob writes "You'll remember an article here a while back about a 12yr old girl who hung a 5yr old boy from a tree. The boy nearly died. Before being caught, she blamed 3 other boys who were all taken from their homes and interrogated at a police station.

Anyway, she effectively escapes punishment. Read it here. Also, read her defence lawyers mitigating claims and his anger at her being treated as an "Adult". I'm not sure what his complaint is. IF she was an adult, she'd probably still got off."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/04/1938253.shtml

Pictures of MRAs at Work

Matt · 4 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

This at standyourground.com. Hooray to those who get the message out!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/04/1943227.shtml

Not the Father? Really?

Matt · 6 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "Country singer Chris Cagle has had a little bit of disappointing news of late. It seems he is not the father of the baby him and his "girlfriend" were expecting.

OBTW, this morning (10-5-2005), Diane Sawyer had a piece where a non-father was interviewed, along with his (female) lawyer. It seems his ex-wife duped him, and by G-d, the lawyer actually used the term "paternity fraud." I was shocked, SHOCKED, I tell you."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/06/0022242.shtml

VAWA Passed the Senate Today!

Matt · 6 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "According to the National Network to End Domestic Violence, VAWA (S. 1197) was passed in the Senate today, "by unanimous consent."

Copy from NNEDV's always-lovely Allison...

Click "Read more..." for more.
Tuesday, October 4, 2005 5:36 PM

The Violence Against Women Act of 2005 was just passed by unanimous consent in the Senate.

This unanimous support of VAWA is tremendous and we thank all Senators for their work to bring VAWA to the floor! Chairman Specter and Senator Biden and their staff really pulled out all the stops to make this happen. Many Senators set aside other pressing issues to move VAWA forward, particularly Senator Landrieu, and we thank them and the Republican and Democrat Senate Leadership for making VAWA a priority.

This was really down to the wire, and truly all the credit goes to YOU who mobilized your grassroots, who made calls yourself, who spoke on behalf of all the victims who have been silenced.

The versions of VAWA passed in the House (HR 3402) and the Senate (S 1197) are different, and now must go to conference where the differences between them will be resolved. We will need your voices again in the coming months to ensure that needs of victims are met in the final VAWA that is signed into law!!

Thank you again for all the amazing work you do.

Allison

Allison Randall

Public Policy Specialist

National Network to End Domestic Violence

660 Pennsylvania Ave. SE, Suite 303

Washington, DC 20003

202-543-5566 (phone)

202-543-5626 (fax)

arandall@nnedv.org

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/06/0027200.shtml

Honor Killings' Victims Not Always Female

Matt · 7 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "Just so you know, "honour killing" is not just for women. Check this out:

A UNIVERSITY student was murdered to 'vindicate a family's honour' after he fell in love with their daughter and made her pregnant, a court was told yesterday."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/07/0123232.shtml

Men and Success - Post-Divorce

Matt · 7 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "MIsForMalevolent struggles with why a divorced man in the system would ever choose to try and better himself or improve his income. He seems to indicate faith as an answer, but he may be discounting plain old subborness (whoops, tenacity)."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/07/0126256.shtml

Woman Gets 20 Years for Killing Son

Matt · 7 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Woman gets 20 years for killing her son. Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/07/0129213.shtml

Another 'abused woman' gets away with killing her husband

Matt · 8 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "This woman stabs her husband because he is verbally abusive. She is severely and harshly punished with a community rehabilitation order. The judge and prosecutor fall over themselves to avoid blaming her.

Next time your wife nags or yells at you, try stabbing her. The judge will understand and be appropriately sympathetic."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/08/1532228.shtml

Great MRA Letter Prints in Star Bulletin

Matt · 9 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes "http://starbulletin.com/print/?fr=/2005/10/08/edit orial/commentary.html

'Ignoring the fact that gender inequities hurt boys has promoted the idea of girls as "underdogs" while suggesting that boys are somehow privileged.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/09/1525221.shtml

RADAR Alert: D.V. Providers Who Violate The Law Must Not Be Granted A Monopoly

Matt · 10 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

The House and the Senate have now passed bills to reauthorize VAWA for another 5 years. Both versions of the reauthorization bill acknowledge that male victims of DV need help too, however the language needs to be strengthened.

Click "Read more..." for more.

D.V. Providers Who Violate The Law Must Not Be Granted A Monopoly
As the bills now stand, existing domestic violence programs are granted a monopoly, and any new programs must partner with an existing program. Unfortunately the majority of existing programs make male victims and their children sit at the back of the bus, if they even allow them on the bus at all. Most established domestic violence service providers find males so toxic that if a woman has a son over 12 years of age, they'll sooner send the woman back to her abuser than permit the son to accompany his mother into the shelter.

Sen. Joseph Biden, who calls the bill "his baby," claims that VAWA-funded shelters are already required to provide help to male victims. If Biden's claim is correct, then shelters that regularly violate the law are being rewarded with $5 billion federal tax-dollars for thumbing their noses at the very concept of equal treatment for all. Ten of the largest recipients of VAWA funds in Los Angeles recently went to court to defend their right to discriminate against male victims (http://www.menshealthnetwork.org/library/Blumhorstbrief.pdf).

The next legislative step for VAWA 2005 is for both versions of the bill to be reconciled in conference committee. This will be the last chance to make this legislation truly fair, equal, and just. At this point, nobody knows who will be on the conference committee. This week we need to make certain that likely members of the conference committee understand that male victims of domestic violence need help from sympathetic providers, just as female victims do. VAWA funding must be made available to new programs whose primary focus is on male victims of domestic violence.

Please call or fax the following legislators:

Rep. Jim Sensenbrenner	voice:202/225-5101	fax:202-225-3190
Sen. Arlen Specter	voice:202/224-4254	fax:202/228-1229
Sen. Orrin Hatch	voice:202/224-5251	fax:202/224-6331

Tell them:

The VAWA conference committee must make sure that new programs with a primary focus on male victims of domestic violence must be eligible to receive funding without having to partner with the established male-hostile domestic violence providers.

As always, be sure to be polite and respectful.

++

Date of RADAR Release: October 9, 2005

To track the current status of VAWA, go to http://thomas.loc.gov/ and enter the bill number: Senate bill S. 1197; House of Representatives bill H.R. 3402.

Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting (RADAR) is a coalition of men and women working to assure balance in the domestic violence issue: http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/10/1457207.shtml

UK divorce laws - read it and weep

Matt · 11 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Fantastic article here on the heavily female biased divorce laws in the UK. Some of the stories will make you gasp in amazement. The print edition of the Sunday Times chose to illustrate this story with a picture of a power dressed woman sneering imperiously at a crestfallen man. At least it accurately captures the mood of your average female divorcee!

Rob"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/11/1433225.shtml

Article Retracted

Matt · 11 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

All,

MANN received good information that the article regarding the adoptive mother who wanted a sex change operation for her son was, as many of you suspected, incorrect. All I can say is: Sorry! It was posted and defended in good faith (hey, even major media sources print bad stories from time to time). So, the story has been removed from MANN and sorry again for accidentally publicizing what appears now to be a false story.

-- Matt

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/11/1731222.shtml

Article: Abuse against men ignored

Matt · 11 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

johnnyp writes "Abuse against men ignored researcher: Just as likely as women to be battered Karen Kleiss

The Edmonton Journal

Sunday, October 09, 2005

EDMONTON -- Husbands and boyfriends are abused by their partners far more often than most Canadians realize, yet there is virtually no support for battered men, attendees of a two-day conference heard Saturday."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/11/2159205.shtml

Enticement of Male Hate - "'All Men Are Bastards' Knife Block"

Matt · 12 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Gang-banged writes "Frankly, this just leaves me speachless. Check it out GUYS!!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/12/1522246.shtml

Crticism against women is ALWAYS sexism

Matt · 12 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Evil White Male Oppressor writes "Hey everybody, now anyone can play the sexism card! Lack of experience? Never! Cronyism? Pishaw! It MUST be sexism!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/12/1525206.shtml

Sperm donor to pay child support

Matt · 14 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Steve P writes "Sperm donor to pay child support

From correspondents in Stockholm, Sweden

October 13, 2005

A SWEDISH man who donated his sperm to a lesbian couple must pay child support for the three children he fathered, Sweden's Supreme Court ruled today.

The man, now 39, donated his sperm to the couple in the early 1990s. Three sons were born during the years 1992-1996, according to Swedish news agency TT which reported the ruling.

The man told the court that he and the women had agreed that he would play no role in the boys' child rearing and that the two women would be their parents.

Nonetheless, the man signed a document confirming that he was the biological father of the children.

Shortly after he signed the document, the two women separated and the biological mother demanded that the man pay child support.

The man took the case to court, but lost in the district and appeals courts.

The Supreme Court upheld those rulings today, saying that as the biological father he is required to pay for the children's upbringing."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/14/002235.shtml

Mainstream Media Recognition of Unequal Treatment of Accused Sex Offenders

Matt · 14 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Evil White Male Oppressor writes "As yet another story emerges about a female teacher, this one involving a teacher who allegedly cut her wrists with broken glass in front of her class as well as performed oral sex on a 9-year-old boy in her classroom, let students peek down her blouse and talked to some of the children about sexual matters, Fox News does a story about how female teachers are often treated differently in the media than male teachers who have sex with underage students.

"The main dichotomy is in coverage — men are demonized, women are diagnosed," Felling said. "Men are beasts, but women are troubled, or mentally ill." Or the women are simply portrayed as voluptuous and sexual. Yet they quickly point out that sometimes, the "offenders" turn out not to be guilty. 'The teacher has to be concerned because there can be a vindictive kid" who can falsely accuse the person at the head of the class of a sex crime."

TELL THAT TO THE FALSELY ACCUSED MEN IT HAPPENS TO IN AND OUT OF SCHOOL ALL THE TIME..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/14/0019249.shtml

'Female champion' Hewitt discriminated against man

Matt · 14 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

bandersnatch writes "From The Independent:

Career sexism that stops women "achieving their full potential" is something that the former trade and industry secretary Patricia Hewitt fought hard against. But it seems that her fight against sexism also includes discriminating positively towards women. Yesterday, it emerged she was found guilty of overlooking a strong male candidate for a job in favour of a weaker female applicant. Mr Hanney used the Freedom of Information Act to access the interviewers' notes, which included comments such as "Malcolm Hanney, much the strongest candidate" and described him as the "clear favourite". The notes concluded the panel "agreed to appoint Malcolm Hanney". But the ultimate decision was left to Patricia Hewitt, who was in charge of sex discrimination laws as minister for women and equality. She appointed Christine Channon, who was placed third in line by the RDA."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/14/0023200.shtml

General Round-Up of "DV-Suspected" Men in Florida

Matt · 14 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "The Pasco County Sheriff's Office is keeping the streets free and clear by removing dozens of domestic violence suspects from the streets."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/14/0035242.shtml

List of NJ Law Resources

Matt · 14 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Misandrope writes "I have posted a list of NJ Legal resources relating to custody and child support on MIsForMalevolent that will hopefully be of use to persons struggling through the system.

Yours,
-M"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/14/1623241.shtml

Marine Corps Spokesman Acknowledges Male DV Victims

Matt · 15 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Posted on behalf of Marc A.:

Story here.

"According to Tech. Sgt. Hastings, the statistics for male victims of abuse are even higher.
'A man is abused every 14 seconds,' he said. That's 6,192 men every day.

Click "Read more..." for larger story quotation.

> "U.S. NAVAL HOSPITAL OKINAWA, Japan (Oct. 12, 2005) -- More than 200 men, women and children came together Oct. 8 at Lester Middle School to battle domestic abuse by participating in the 2nd annual Joint Services Family Shelter Domestic Violence Awareness 5k Run/Walk.
>
> The annual run/walk took place in conjunction with this month's Domestic Violence Awareness Month. The event is intended to raise domestic violence awareness, explained Emeline Hastings, the shelter manager at the Joint Services Family Shelter.
>
> More than 30 volunteers came out to register participants, pass out T-shirts and purple ribbons and serve as road guards while participants completed the course.
>
> The opening ceremonies kicked off after the 6:30 a.m. registration session came to a close. Several key speakers offered inspiration for the run and information on domestic violence, including Tech. Sgt. Robert Hastings, the section chief of electronic warfare for the 353rd Special Operations Group, and a former victim of domestic abuse.
>
> "A woman is abused every 15 seconds," Tech. Sgt. Hastings said during the ceremony. "That's 5,760 women every 24 hours."
>
> According to Tech. Sgt. Hastings, the statistics for male victims of abuse are even higher.
> "A man is abused every 14 seconds," he said. "That's 6,192 men every day."
>
> Once the key speakers left the podium, the runners took a few minutes to stretch their muscles, and then lined up at the starting point."

Visit the link in the posting for the entire story.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/15/006255.shtml

UK Men - Discriminated against in Cancer Research

Matt · 16 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Rob writes "At last, the actual proof that men are discriminated against in Prostate Cancer funding versus Breast Cancer. The opening paragraphs are:"A MAN diagnosed with prostate cancer has only one-quarter of the cash spent on research into his disease compared to the amount devoted to a woman's breast cancer. The wide discrepancy shows the scale of the discrimination against men. The two diseases kill similar numbers."
And in the biggest selling UK Sunday newspaper too! Of course the UK's female Health Minister said:"Gender is not a factor in any of the government's decisions on cancer funding." Sure - unless you're female!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/16/1723245.shtml

NYTimes' David Brooks Addresses Boys' Lag in Education

Matt · 17 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

David Brooks helps with the Lace Curtain problem with this article. Alas, the NYT has recently decided to start charging for access to their Op-Ed content, but if you subscribe, apparently, you can register for site access "for free". If not, it's worth a look next time you're at your local library. It's in the Oct. 16, 2005 issue of the New York Times in the Op-Ed section, titled: "Mind Over Muscle". The Times graciously allows unpaying readers the first sentence:

"If we want to help boys keep up with girls, we have to have an honest discussion about innate differences between the sexes."

I read it in the NYT today and thought, "Wow, how did this get past the editor-in-chief?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/17/0228226.shtml

Child Support for Step-Kids

Matt · 18 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "If you marry a divorced woman with kids, and it goes sour, at least you don't have to worry about child support... ...or do you? You do in New Jersey."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/18/0241213.shtml

CA Bar Journal Runs NCFM-LA Letter re Male DV Victims

Matt · 18 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Way to go, Marc!

"Men are victims, too"

Text:

As an attorney who works with male victims of domestic violence, I was very offended by your article, "Safety and services under one roof" (August). Every example of domestic violence in the article was male-on-female, and the article was prefaced with a drawing of "the difference between the family's old life and their new life after Dad is gone." Male victims are stigmatized and ignored enough as it is without having to read articles like yours.

Click "Read more..." for the rest
According to a study by the Centers for Disease Control, "approximately 1.5 million women and 834,732 men are raped and/or physically assaulted by an intimate partner annually in the United States" (i.e., at least 36 percent of the victims are men), which is at ncjrs.org/ txtfiles1/nij/181867.txt. California State University maintains an online bibliography of over 174 studies showing "women are as physically aggressive, or more aggressive, than men in their relationships with their spouses or male partners" at csulb.edu/~mfiebert/assault.htm. One of the studies is the most comprehensive analysis of existing research on the topic ever published (Archer, Psych. Bulletin, 11/00), which found that 38 percent of injured victims are men and that self-defense does not explain the female violence.

A report by the California Research Bureau shows that thousands of men seek shelter-based services every year. But Health & Safety Code §124250 excludes them from the services, including motel vouchers and court advocacy, because of their gender. So they have to travel hundreds of miles to the Valley Oasis shelter in Lancaster, the only one that will help males, in order to escape the violence. They have faced over 30 years of exclusion, neglect and outright sexism from the domestic violence industry because they do not fit the feminist man/bad woman/good model.

I hope you will be more fair and honest next time in how you depict this issue.

Marc E. Angelucci, President

National Coalition of Free Men

Los Angeles chapter

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/18/0248211.shtml

UN Report Cites Russian Men in Crisis

Matt · 18 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Well it's nice to see a UN report that isn't all about women. But it comes at such a terrible price. Read about it here.

From the article:

"Stereotypes of men's behaviour in Russia include excess alcohol consumption, drug addiction and smoking as stress reduction measures and ways of demonstrating manhood. Growth of suicides among men is an extreme form of reaction to growing socio-economic pressure and inability to perform the traditional role of breadwinner," the statement said.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/18/0251244.shtml

MSN: Wow, a Marriage Article Not Written by a Woman or Manhole!

Matt · 18 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

A surprise from MSN: What a Happy Marriage Really Looks Like

I truly believe -- and I know I can get a lot of backing from my fellow husbands on this -- that women worry way too much about The Relationship, worry that even the smallest problem is the first step on the road to divorce court. I would be the last one to deny that there are a certain number of marital stress points. But many of them -- certainly the five detailed below -- are not worth one moment of lost sleep.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/18/1059202.shtml

RADAR Alert: PBS Smears Fathers Who Contest Child Custody

Matt · 18 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Beginning this coming Thursday, PBS stations around the country are planning to air a film entitled "Breaking the Silence, Children's Stories". This film denigrates divorcing fathers with it's bald-faced assertion that in "75% of cases in which fathers contest custody, fathers have history of being batterers".

Click "Read more..." for moreThe flaws in this film are as numerous as they are flagrant:

1. The film paints a false picture of a world in which the only abusive parents are fathers, ignoring the fact that far more children are abused and killed by their mothers than by their fathers (U.S. Dept. of Health and Human Services (refs: here and here).
2. The film misleads the viewer by failing to explain that psychiatrists who've called Parental Alienation Syndrome "junk science" don't mean that parental alienation doesn't happen, but rather that it's not an officially recognized mental illness. (See: http://www.mediaradar.org/mr_breaking_the_science.php#pas)
3. The program makes a number of very serious accusations against fathers without allowing the accused to defend themselves.

A detailed analysis of the flawed logic and biased "research" this PBS program is based on can be found here.

Public Broadcasting Service and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting are funded out of your tax dollars, and have a responsibility not to disseminate bias. The CPB's own Code of Ethics (.pdf file) requires employees to "avoid any conduct that might result in the loss of public confidence in CPB's programs and activities ... or might reasonably give the appearance of ... the compromise or loss of complete impartiality of judgment and action."

This week, we're asking you to contact the officials at PBS and CPB listed below to cancel the show as currently edited, and revise it so it reflects commonly-accepted journalistic standards of fairness, accuracy, and balance.

The revised program should interview adult children of abusive mothers, as well as fathers who've been forced to stand helplessly by, unable to protect their children, due to decisions by biased court officials.

The most important point of contact is your local PBS station:

1. Go to the website of your local PBS station. To find that website, go to http://www.pbs.org/stationfinder/index.html and enter your zip code.
2. Each PBS station's website is laid out differently, but somewhere on the website will be a link labeled something like "Contact Us". If this takes you to a webform, enter your comments. If it shows a list of contact names, identify the station manager. If there's no email address listed, call the station and ask to speak with the station manager.

As always, remember to courteous and respectful in your communications with them.

If you're still bothered about PBS' unfair depiction of fathers, there are a number of other people you can contact. If you don't have time to contact all of them, contact as many or as few as you have time for.

CPB national headquarters:

Mr. Kenneth Y. Tomlinson, Chairman of the Board

Corporation for Public Broadcasting

401 Ninth Street, NW

Washington, DC 20004-2129

Ombudsman:

Webform at http://www.cpb.org/ombudsmen

-or-

U.S. mail to:

Ombudsmen

Corporation for Public Broadcasting

401 Ninth Street, NW

Washington, DC 20004

PBS national headquarters:

U.S. Mail:

Pat Mitchell, President & Chief Executive Officer

Public Broadcasting Service

1320 Braddock Place

Alexandria, VA 22314

Michael Getler, Ombudsman

Public Broadcasting Service

1320 Braddock Place

Alexandria, VA 22314

Connecticut Public Broadcasting (co-producer of the film):

U.S. Mail:

Connecticut Public Broadcasting Inc.

1049 Asylum Avenue

Hartford, CT 06105-2411

Phone: 860/278-5310

Jerry Franklin, President and Chief Executive Officer

Email: jfranklin-at-cptv.org

Larry Rifkin, Head of National Programming

Email: lrifkin-at-cptv.org

Lee Newton, CPTV "Breaking the Silence" contact person

Email: lnewton-at-cptv.org

Phone: 860-275-7285

++

Date of RADAR Release: October 17, 2005

Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting (RADAR) is a coalition of men and women working to assure balance in the domestic violence issue: http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/18/1352254.shtml

Divorce Parties

Matt · 19 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes:

"'Good Morning America' Celebrates Divorce in the United States

ABC's Andrea Canning on Sunday's "Good Morning America" did a report on Divorce Parties. That's right, married women having a party to celebrate their divorces. In fact, Canning in her report referred to the party as "Part celebration, part exorcism."

At this party, they play games like throwing the wedding ring into the toilet, as well as with voodoo doll figurines of the former husband.

Of particular note, the report made no mention of ex-husbands having such parties. Quite the contrary, the only person in this piece who wasn't celebrating was a divorced man: "I don't find anything about divorce to be funny at all. I find the whole experience rather tragic."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/19/0036201.shtml

USA TODAY: College gender gap widens

Matt · 21 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

mens_issues writes "It seems that USA TODAY is finally recognizing that the education system over the last few decades has been so tilted against boys that it is resulting in a gender gap of 57% women to 43% men. The disparity is even greater for black men.

While the article is not perfect (it also mentions the so-called wage gap as if it were fact), it is an improvement. The article is here.

Also, see these related articles:
http://www.usatoday.com/printedition/news/20051020/admitboyside.art.htm

http://www.usatoday.com/printedition/news/20051020/d_admitboysgraphic19.art.htm

Steve"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/21/0139215.shtml

Teacher "snogs" pupil

Matt · 21 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "I know these stories are common now, but this one is a good example of the brazen nature of some of these women. She admits kissing the boy, then claims instead he sexually assaulted her, then her solicitors decide they can no longer represent her after she gave evidence in the trial. She has now been found guilty and was criticised by the judge for letting the case get "so far" because she refused to plead guilty. She evidently felt she could do what she liked and get let off because she's a woman and can't possibly be to blame. Ironically, it will probably work out that way. The judge(female) has already told her she won't be imprisoned."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/21/0213257.shtml

"North Country"

Matt · 21 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

crescentluna writes *"*North Country is a movie about female coal miners in Minnesota fighting "male coworker brutality" through a class action lawsuit. Starring Charlize Theron, who is quoted here as saying "This case was only settled seven years ago, and you go, 'How dare you sit back as a young female and think the feminist movement happened in the '60s, some bras were burned and now everything is fine'?"
It is also a plug for http://www.participate.net/, a website with a section on starting your own anti-harassment campaign at school and how to raise caring men."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/21/0218253.shtml

Swedish Feminist Party Implodes

Matt · 21 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Rand T. writes ""Feminist Initiative is in disarray with the loss of several founding members who abruptly departed over the radical direction the party was taking" ... "Support for feminism took another hit this summer with the airing of a Swedish television documentary ... which showed militant feminism to be widespread, reaching into official circles: Ireen von Wachenfeldt, the chairman of Roks, Sweden's largest women's shelter organization, for one, was shown asserting that "men are animals."

Full article here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/21/207255.shtml

A good movie, let's hope: "After Innocence"

Matt · 21 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

zerostress writes "I have always wished that women would stop making movies about how they are poor victims of men and do a movie about, let's say, what a man can feel after spending 20 years in jail for a rape he did not commit.

It seems that my prayers have been answered. This movie, After Innocence seems to be very interesting. I will not judge a movie by its website but this is something I am definitely going to see. Another thing I can't wait to see is also the reaction of the feminists."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/21/209249.shtml

Feminist PC Claims Another Victim

Matt · 21 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

bandersnatch writes "From The Globe and Mail:

Legendary adman Neil French is leaving one of the premier jobs in advertising after telling a Toronto audience that family duties usually prevent women from succeeding in the business. Mr. French confirmed yesterday that he has quit as worldwide creative director of WPP Group PLC, the world's second-largest marketing company where he oversaw famous agency networks including Ogilvy & Mather, JWT, Young & Rubicam and Grey Worldwide."

Click "Read more..." for the rest.
'"The woman asked why there are so few women creative directors. I said because you can't commit yourself to the job. And everyone who doesn't commit themselves fully to the job is crap at it . . .' Mr. French said yesterday in an interview. 'You can't be a great creative director and have a baby and keep spending time off every time your kids are ill. You can't do the job. Somebody has to do it and the guy has to do it the same way that I've had to spend months and months flying around the world and not seeing my kid. You think that's not a sacrifice? Of course it's a sacrifice. I hate it. But that's the job and that's what I do in order to keep my family fed.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/21/2017224.shtml

Miers and Race/Sex Quotas

Matt · 22 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Wonder what the feminist establishment will do with this?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/22/2154236.shtml

Danica Patrick hits male IRL driver, plays it off

Matt · 23 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

bandersnatch writes "From The Sun Sentinel:

"Danica Patrick didn't hold back words or apparently one of her fists after she got tangled up with Jaques Lazier late in Sunday's Toyota Indy 400 at the California Speedway. "The first person I saw after the accident was Jaques, and that wasn't a good thing," said Patrick, who blamed Lazier for the Turn 4 mishap that knocked both from the race with 15 laps remaining. "I confronted him. I told him how I felt. I was mad at him." But sometime during the ride to the infield-care center in the back of an IRL safety-team vehicle, Patrick evidently took it up a notch. The Press-Telegram learned that the 23-year-old IRL rookie sensation struck Lazier in the face. The driver of the SUV had to stop briefly to tend to the situation, which reverted back to verbal sparring as they circled the track."

Check out Google News for more journalists defending Danica for assaulting a man... I mean fair and balanced news stories."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/23/2044227.shtml

Oh, Ellen... "Equal Opportunity Bash", by Ellen Goodman

Matt · 23 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Normally I don't initiate the post of links to widely-syndicated mainstream columnists myself, but this one from our old pal Ellen Goodman warrants an exception. If you can find an argument of some kind in here or some sense of what she is trying to get at, please, post it and clue me in!

You can't deny though that she is an entertaining writer, from a style perspective anyway, depite the lines (or circles) of argument she does (or doesn't) draw...

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/23/2146226.shtml

Female inmates increase but not at the same rate as male

Matt · 24 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "
Notice that women now account for 25% of arrests but only 7% of inmates in jails?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/24/1626212.shtml

RADAR Alert: Despite Urgent Requests, PBS Releases "Breaking the Silence"

Matt · 24 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Last week RADAR requested that PBS delay the release of Breaking the Silence: Children's Stories until it could be revised to reflect basic journalistic standards of accuracy and fairness. Ignoring the thousands of e-mails, phone calls, and letters, PBS went ahead and released the program anyway.

Click "Read more..." for more.

Despite Urgent Requests, PBS Releases "Breaking the Silence"
So the evening of October 20, a group of men gathered outside the headquarters of the Los Angeles PBS affiliate. Armed with signs and a bullhorn, they made it clear that a lot of people were very upset. This is their report:

"We just handed out RADAR's flyers to KCET (PBS) employees in Los Angeles as they entered and exited. We stood out there for two hours with signs. We got lots of honks from cars passing, including a bus driver. The best part was when the KCET van pulled up, bewildered and curious what we were about, and they took a flyer."

Breaking the Silence, which was funded by the Mary Kay Ash Foundation, has been widely criticized by editorialists and others:

* "Balance was sacrificed to the political agenda of the sponsors" (Mike McCormick)

* Reflects an "extremist point of view" (Ned Holstein)

* "Compromise of impartiality violates PBS's own code of ethics" (Mark Rosenthal)

* Promotes an "ideological dogma" (Dean Tong)

* Represents a "direct assault on American fathers" (Jeff Leving and Glenn Sacks)

* Program is "larded with Leftist fantasies and sweeping stereotypes" (Carey Roberts)

The most intensive campaign in the history of the American fatherhood movement is now underway. This effort is being waged at the local, state, and national levels. RADAR invites you to join this break-through campaign.

The foundation of PBS is the hundreds of affiliates around the nation. These affiliates rely heavily on local contributions and community support. So this week, we are asking you to contact your local affiliate. To find your local affiliate:

1. Go to http://www.pbs.org/stationfinder/index.html and enter your zip code, or
2. Look in your local telephone directory

Second, find out whether Breaking the Silence has already been aired, or if not, if the affiliate plans to air it.

Then telephone, e-mail, and/or write the Station Manager with this message:

"Please do not air Breaking the Silence until it can be revised to reflect basic journalistic standards of accuracy, fairness, and balance."

If you have a conversation with an employee, emphasize these two points:

1. Disseminating false information about fathers will only hurt, not help abused children.

2. Breaking the Silence does not conform to the CPB Code of Ethics which requires PBS to "give the appearance as well as the fact of such impartiality, devotion, and integrity." [http://www.cpb.org/aboutcpb/cpbethicsguide.pdf]

If the program has already been aired, ask the affiliate to not air it again.

Or take your effort to a higher level. Find a couple other people, print out some copies of RADAR's flyer (Word document), and pass it out in front of your local PBS office (please send a brief report to info-at-mediaradar.org and attach pictures if possible!). Don't make this too complicated - just get out there and have some fun!

Above all, do not come across as a "mad-dad" or send "poison-pen" letters. These only reinforce the worst stereotypes and hurt our cause. Always be polite and reasonable.

++

Date of RADAR Release: October 23, 2005

Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting (RADAR) works to assure fairness and balance in the domestic violence issue: http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/24/1632216.shtml

Nationwide Comic Strip Promotes Warren Farrell Book

Thomas · 25 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

dschmidt writes "A bit late on this, I know, but just wanted to point out the 10/16/2005 comic strip "Mallard Fillmore" mentions Warren Farrell's recent book and even seems sympathetic to what it has to say! If your paper carries this strip, I'd suggest writing them in support of keeping it. (Hint: Read it as sarcasm/humor)

We all know how few in the media are so openly supportive of men's issues."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/25/0055247.shtml

A Couple Good Ones

Thomas · 25 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Every once in a while, it's good to lighten up with a little humor.

First, from The Onion, astronomers discovered a new galaxy.

Then there's this insight from Fred Reed.

Enjoy.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/25/010211.shtml

Boys abandon the box office

Matt · 25 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "With all the misandry in todays movies - is it any wonder that boys are turning their backs on Hollywood?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/25/1639248.shtml

Domestic violence shelters for pets in MA

Matt · 25 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "The domestic violence hysteria clans expand their networks in MA: Noah's Arkis - a domestic violence service for pets! It will be housed in the newly opened Family Justice Center in MA. The DV organizers will recruit and train potential foster owners, particularly on the sensitive and secretive nature of their roles. Animals won't be walked near areas where they originally lived, for fear that the abusive men will see them. Classes in foster care will be held at the Family Justice Center, at the MSPCA, and at the Animal Rescue League. What the article fails to mention is that men are removed from their homes for up to a year without due process and are arrested and often incarcerated without evidence when any type of allegation of DV is made. Naturally, this article got front page coverage."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/25/1642221.shtml

Request for contact information

Matt · 25 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes "Does anyone know this student in Utah who printed this men's rights letter to the editor of his campus newspaper?

Marc A."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/25/2110246.shtml

Alleged assault on Tonya Harding

Thomas · 26 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Christopher Nolan has been arrested after allegedly assaulting former figure skater, Tonya Harding. Though Nolan stated that Harding attacked him, and Harding lied to the police, apparently only Nolan was arrested.

Note that the article states that Harding's husband hired a hit man for the January 6, 1994, attack on champion figure skater, Nancy Kerrigan, but no mention is made of any criminal activity by Harding in the case. (She later plead guilty to hampering the investigation into the attack.) More details on the attack on Kerrigan can be found here. In addition, as noted here, the U.S. Figure Skating Association later concluded, using civil standards (preponderance of evidence) not criminal standards, that Harding "had prior knowledge and was involved prior to the incident." In addition, Jeff Gillooly, Harding's husband at the time of the Kerrigan attack, and Shawn Eckardt, who arranged it, both testified that "Harding had prior knowledge of the attack on Kerrigan and procured information that helped them carry it out."

But, once again, only the man, Christopher Nolan, was arrested in the recent fracas.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/25/2351222.shtml

Wife jailed for plotting to kill husband

Matt · 26 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "A British woman has been jailed for trying to hire a hitman to kill her husband. The saddest part of the story is that her husband forgives her and wants her back. Story here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/26/1717206.shtml

First Female Designated "Sexually Dangerous"

Matt · 27 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Evil White Male Oppressor writes "The "sexually dangerous" designation assures that Wheeler will get the counseling she needs... WHEW, I WAS WORRIED THERE FOR A SECOND!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/27/170228.shtml

Woman gets 20 years for killing defacto husband

Matt · 27 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Finally an "I killed him in self-defence" story that the judge didn't buy!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/27/174216.shtml

Rise in Sydneys Domestic Violence

Matt · 27 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Wow! A story that not only acknowledges that men are victioms of domestic violence but also mentions that there are cases where male victims than of DV outnumber female victims!

So much for the "Violence against women, Australia Says No!" campaign..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/27/176201.shtml

Men's Breast Cancer

Matt · 27 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

SpikeRants writes "Finally, they're getting into the topic of MEN having breast cancer. Now, if only they'll do a "Susan G. Komen Walk for the Cure" type fundraiser for prostate cancer, we'll be good."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/27/177218.shtml

Dealing with Posters You Don't Like

Matt · 27 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

All,

It's no secret to MANN regulars that there has recently been a "troll-flame" war going on between an anonymous poster and some of our regular members. I would like to point out that people who "troll", bearing in mind that "troll" is a judgment and not a strictly-defined word, do so specifically in order to be provacative and get a reply. One who posts merely controversial comments is not a "troll" as long as he or she does so in sincerity; it's a matter of intent on the part of the poster. Nonetheless if you find someone whose posts for whatever reason consistently annoy you and you want them to stop/go away, the best thing to do in general is ignore them. Eventually, troll or not, they will go away, since shouting into a black hole is no one's idea of a good time.

So in the name of keeping the site focused and topical, please consider how and why you respond to posts you believe are meant to be provacative. Remember that there is this thing, the "right to remain silent"-- in some cases, staying quiet in the face of commentary/speculation is the best thing to do, for any number of reasons.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/27/1719212.shtml

Marriage Like the Perfect Storm?

Matt · 28 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "MIsForMalevolent compares marriage to a perfect storm, one where skill, care and intelligence count for little, because it is all about how women are tempted by the overwhelming power given them by the family court system. He also points out how men discount the misfortune of other men, assuming that those who went before were somehow at fault."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/28/1636225.shtml

Islam Feminists Urge Gender Jihad

Matt · 28 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

This from the BBC. Closes with:

Organisers say they want more collaboration with western feminists but say non-Muslim feminists need to challenge their anti-Islamic stereotypes.

I'd buy tickets to watch the proceedings of the first conference between Muslim and western feminists, just for the sheer entertainment value if nothing else!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/28/1641225.shtml

US Sets Unwed Births Record

Matt · 28 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

I wonder if single moms will soon be having "unwed maternity" parties to go with their mothers' "divorce parties"? Story here. Meanwhile, the fathers of American children remain without parental rights-- married or not.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/28/1958208.shtml

San Pedro Woman Kills Husband with Scissors

Matt · 29 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes *"San Pedro woman shoves sissors in husband's eye, tapes him to chair, kills him because she didn't like the way he played with his beard. And according to Health & Safety Code Section 124250, this elderly man is still not a victim. Why? Because he is a man.*

Marc"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/29/0025211.shtml

Men's Rights Group: Victim Support Only For Women

Matt · 29 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes:"Link here:

Men's Rights Group: Victim Support Only For Women

Group says male victims of violence don't get same support as women.

Jon Baird

Reporting

(CBS 13) SACRAMENTO A men's rights group claims the domestic violence system is skewed toward women.

Today, a lawsuit was filed in Sacramento court, claiming that male victims don't get the same help as female victims.

"I remember going to phone 911, saying get here now, I'm going to kill him!" said Ruth Woods.

They fought all the time, often over money. Things sometimes got violent.

"I do it. I do hit. I do slap," said Ruth.

"She reaches a point when she's angry, you look in her eyes, there's no one there," said Ruth's husband, David Woods."

Click the link above for the full article.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/29/1714234.shtml

2005 Bankruptcy Act and Debt Servitude

Matt · 29 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Misandrope writes "I was suprised and shocked to find that the recent bankruptcy act directly affects men paying support or alimony. Now to obtain any relief from their creditors, a support/alimony paying man must FIRST bring his support and alimony payments current. How exactly one is supposed to do that when he is insolvent isn't clear to me, but then that's the approach that the courts have traditionally taken to men and their money - "just load the bills on, he'll find a way to pay, somehow, and if he doesn't, we can throw him in jail". My MIsForMalevolent Post on Topic Here.

Yours
-M"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/29/1715249.shtml

What's a Modern Girl to Do?

Matt · 31 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Evil White Male Oppressor writes "Oh Ms. Dowd, does it ever end? Another 'woe is me, what has happened to feminism?' piece from the 'better half.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/31/0020249.shtml

RADAR Alert: PBS Stonewalls Protesters

Matt · 31 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

On October 20 PBS released Breaking the Silence (BTS), a "documentary" that portrays fathers seeking joint custody as batterers and makes false claims about domestic violence.

In response to last week's RADAR Alert, fatherhood advocates flooded local PBS affiliates with e-mails, phone calls, and letters.

Click "Read more..." for more.

PBS Stonewalls Protesters
At one major affiliate, RADAR flyers [http://www.mediaradar.org/RADAR_BTS_Flyer.doc] were passed out to employees as they came to work in the morning, coffee cups in hand. Two hours later, the station's Vice President for Communications came outside and announced that her affiliate would not be running BTS.

Other affiliates have decided to delay broadcasting the program or to air opposing views.

And the PBS headquarters took a lot of heat, as well:

* On Monday the American Psychological Association criticized the BTS portrayal of parental alienation syndrome as "incorrect" and "inaccurate." [http://www.glennsacks.com/pbs/apa-102405.php]

* On Tuesday, over 25 mental health professionals called on PBS to allow them to respond to the distortions in the program. [http://www.glennsacks.com/pbs/mental-health.php]

* On Wednesday RADAR released a press release to over 11,000 media outlets criticizing the program. [http://www.therealitycheck.org/TRCMediawire/pbs102605.htm]

* On Thursday, Family News in Focus quoted ACFC director Michael McCormick as describing BTS as a "classic example of the lack of balance" of PBS shows. [http://www.family.org/cforum/fnif/news/a0038359.cfm]

* On Friday, Agape Press ran an article critical of the show. [http://headlines.agapepress.org/archive/10/272005f.asp]

Despite all this, PBS executives have decided to stonewall, apparently thinking the storm soon would pass. It's time to politely let them know this is one storm they won't be able to weather.

Because this week, we are asking you to contact your elected official in the House of Representatives, and ask them to give Pat Mitchell, the PBS president, a friendly little call.

We want them to ask Ms. Mitchell, "Why is PBS standing behind a flawed program that has been widely criticized as biased, distorted, and inaccurate?"

Here's what we'd like you to do:

1. Get the name and phone number of your Representative by going to http://www.house.gov/, and entering your zip code.
2. Telephone the Washington office and ask to speak with the Legislative Aide ("L.A.") who deals with family issues.
3. Chances are you will end up talking to an answering machine. At the sound of the tone, state your name and indicate you are a constituent. Then give this message:

> "I'm calling to complain about the recent PBS program, Breaking the Silence. Groups like the American > Psychological Association, Focus on the Family, and others are saying this program is not only inaccurate and false, it is also biased against fathers and families. Please call PBS president Pat Mitchell at 703-739-5000, and ask her why PBS continues to broadcast a program that doesn't meet even the most basic standards of journalism."

4. Ask the L.A. to return your call and leave your phone number. SPEAK IN A COURTEOUS AND RESPECTFUL TONE - the old saying that it's easier to attract bees with honey than with vinegar.
5. If you end up talking to the Legislative Aide, explain that we are asking PBS to revise the program content before any more affiliates broadcast it. Also, invite the person to visit the RADAR website at http://www.mediaradar.org/ for more information.
6. Finally, consider faxing a copy of the RADAR flyer to the L.A. The flyer can be downloaded from http://www.mediaradar.org/RADAR_BTS_Flyer.doc.

And remember, no rants please!

++

Date of RADAR Release: October 30, 2005

Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting (RADAR) is an organization working to assure fairness and balance in the domestic violence issue: http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/31/1727230.shtml

Bully-girls just want to be loved

Matt · 31 October 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Here's a story on a study of girls who bully - as usual, excuses such "Those behaviours are to protect themselves" are used to justify the verbal, mental and physical abuse that the girls dished out..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/31/1729202.shtml

Mike Adams to Sue UNC-Wilmington?

Thomas · 1 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

This looks great to me. I hope Professor Adams follows through on what he promises here. It might help to rectify some of the anti-male sexism at UNC-Wilmington.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/10/31/216242.shtml

DV Litmus Test

Matt · 1 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

frank h writes "It seems that there is now a litmus test to identify men who are potential batterers, as studied by Florida Atlantic University and described here. There was no mention of such a test for women. What's interesting is that I found this (via WND) in a Scottish newspaper, not an American one."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/01/023229.shtml

Not a Chance in Hell?

Matt · 1 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "Here's a story detailing a proposed change in England's law doing away with a man's obligation to keep a woman supported to the level to which she has become accustomed after a divorce. There are a couple of other common sense "believe it or not" changes too that you'll find hard to believe. Anyone here think this will get passed... even considering that of the 646 members of parliament, only 127 are women?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/01/025240.shtml

More News Coverage of Class Action DV Suit in CA

Matt · 1 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous user writes: Article here. Excerpt:

Man joins lawsuit against shelters

By Brittany Retherford

October 29, 2005

A Grass Valley man is claiming he was turned away because of his gender when he sought help from the county's Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault Coalition, said the man's attorney Friday.

The man, Patrick Neff, is part of a class action lawsuit filed Friday along with three other men and one woman against the State of California and two state-funded domestic violence agencies, including Grass Valley's Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault Coalition and Women Escaping a Violent Environment in Sacramento, said Neff's attorney, Marc Angelucci.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/01/028217.shtml

Domestic Violence in a non-domestic environment?

Matt · 1 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "The 'domestic violence' pork barrel keeps expanding. Last week the Boston Globe reported on the creation of domestic violence shelters for animals (pets), now the Globe reports that "domestic violence" activism will take place at the workplace as violence is highly prevalent now at work too(?). Oddly enough this alleged unreported violence will still be called 'domestic' violence despite the fact that it did not occur in a domestic environment. Clearly the totalitarian "DV industry" is looking to spread its might into the workplace so that men will be further incriminated and will also suffer career disadvantage in the workplace now too. Yet another way to spend the forthcoming VAWA grant money...expand the definition of "violence" and the expand the definition of 'domestic.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/01/1858219.shtml

New SC Nominee Good for Men's Rights?

Matt · 1 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Misandrope writes "Is it possible that Supreme Court Nominee Samuel Alito will cast a favorable eye towards Men's Rights? I believe that this is possible. See my post here.

Yours
-M"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/01/191206.shtml

RADAR Alert: Congress Stalls on VAWA Approval - You Can Still Make a Difference

Matt · 2 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

The Senate and the House have each passed bills to reauthorize the Violence Against Women Act, but Congress has not yet formed a conference committee to reconcile the bills. Although the House version of the bill contains a statement that the bill is gender-neutral, the bill is still seriously flawed.

Click "Read more..." for more.

Congress Stalls on VAWA Approval - You Can Still Make a Difference
It has been said that when the only tool you have is a hammer, everything looks like a nail. And that's especially true of the approach taken by VAWA-funded shelters that, as Phyllis Schlafly points out in http://www.mediaradar.org/Schlafly_on_VAWA.pdf, treat even the most trivial disputes between partners as life-or-limb endangerment and promote arrest of the man and divorce as the only solution. This encourages law enforcement and the judicial system to violate men's civil rights, and tears families apart.

VAWA funnels a billion dollars a year into battered women's programs, but even with the gender-neutral language added by the House, it still denies funding to programs that focus on male victims of domestic violence. The bill makes special provisions for underserved populations, but doesn't consider the 835,000 men victimized per year to be underserved.

VAWA is based on the false premise that in virtually all disputes between men and women, men are batterers and women are innocent victims, in spite of 174 scholarly investigations over the past three decades (http://www.csulb.edu/~mfiebert/assault.htm) that show that women are as physically aggressive as men.

The bills as currently written also contain "gatekeeper" provisions, preventing funding from going to new organizations unless they are willing to partner with women's organizations currently receiving funding, thus perpetuating the "man bad/woman good" ideology.

This week we're asking you to contact your Representatives and Senators to make sure they know we haven't forgotten about VAWA. Tell them that the conference committee, when it is formed, should fix VAWA so that, at a minimum, the bill clearly states that men are frequently DV victims, and so groups that are not hostile to men receive appropriate levels of funding to service male victims.

1. Please contact both of your Senators and your Representative.
2. To find your Senators' contact information, go to http://www.senate.gov/ and enter your zip code.
3. For your Representative's contact information, go to http://www.house.gov/ and enter your zip code.
4. Call and ask to speak with the Legislative Assistant who deals with family issues.
5. Explain that there's an important article you want to send, and ask for their fax number.
6. Download Schlafly's report by right-clicking on http://www.mediaradar.org/Schlafly_on_VAWA.pdf and selecting "Save Target As". Save the document to your desktop, double-click to open it, and then print a copy.
7. Fax a copy to the Legislative Assistant.
8. Repeat for both your Senators and your Representative in the House.

As always, be courteous in all communications with your legislators' offices.

++

Date of RADAR Release: November 1, 2005

Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting (RADAR) is an organization working to assure fairness and

balance in the domestic violence issue: http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/02/012239.shtml

US Divorce and Suicides

Matt · 2 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Misandrope finds statistics that show a man in the US commits suicide as a result of divorce every 35 minutes. The same data show that suicide rates among women are not affected by divorce."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/02/1839237.shtml

NEUROTICA cartoon once again shows elder abuse as

Matt · 2 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

mens_issues writes "Several months ago, the NEUROTICA cartoon strip (by Big Al, the Gal) showed the "protagonist," Petunia, punching her grandfather "Gramps" in the face. Once again she has assaulted him in this manner. As if punching a 100-year-old man in the face is "funny." The strip was actually printed on October 10, but I just came across it now.

The email address of the cartoonist is: bigal-at-bigalcartoons.com

Steve"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/02/1842221.shtml

Teacher charged with having sex with student

Matt · 2 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Teacher charged with having sex with student. Excerpt:

Teacher charged with having sex with student

Tuesday, November 1, 2005

Tampa police have arrested former Wharton High School math teacher and girls basketball coach Jaymee Lane Wallace for allegedly having a sexual relationship with one of her students.

Wallace, 28, is charged with one count of lewd or lascivious battery, a third-degree felony. She was arrested Monday and released on $7,500 bond."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/02/1844258.shtml

Kathleen Parker: Feminism's Devolution From Hoaxers to Whores

Matt · 2 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

cmdr iceman writes "Perhaps the sand is beginning to shift beneath the feminist's feet "just a little" as we see here in this article as the conservative columnist Kathleen Parker lambastes moderern feminism for the bill of social dysfunctional goods it has foisted upon us all. Excerpt:

"Men haven't turned away from smart, successful women because they're smart and successful. More likely they've turned away because the feminist movement that encouraged women to be smart and successful also encouraged them to be hostile and demeaning to men.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/02/1846251.shtml

Angry Ex Glues Man's Penis, Testicles, and Buttocks

Matt · 3 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Evil White Male Oppressor writes "The Article is titled: "Civil Suit Goes To Court: A Scorned Lover, Glue And A Naked Man" (oh how cute!) and goes on to say Gail O'Toole was convicted of simple assault and sentenced to six months probation for acts she committed against her ex-lover.

FILE THIS ONE UNDER: WHAT IF THE SEX OF THE VICTIM AND VICTIMIZER WERE REVERSED...?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/03/152231.shtml

Actor assulted by celebrity wife

Matt · 4 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "The British TV star Ross Kemp has been assaulted by his wife. She is Rebekka Wade, the editor of the top national newspaper The Sun. He suffered a cut mouth, but declined medical treatment. Wade was arrested and released without charge. Story here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/03/2233258.shtml

Autism 'extreme male brain' clue

Matt · 4 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

This from the BBC... excerpt:

The brain structure of people with autism is an "exaggeration" of the normal male brain, researchers suggest.

It has long been suggested that autistic behaviour is an exaggeration of male habits such as making lists.

But Cambridge Autism Research Centre researchers say the actual development of the autistic brain also exaggerates what happens in male brains.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/04/045249.shtml

State moves to ban T-shirts that are deemed offensive to girls

Matt · 4 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Evil White Male Oppressor writes "This is great! Girls have started a boycott--or girlcott, as they're calling it -- of Abercrombie & Fitch. "We're telling [girls] to think about the fact that they're being degraded," Emma Blackman-Mathis, the 16-year-old co-chair of the group, told RedEye on Tuesday. "We're all going to come together in this one effort to fight this message that we're getting from pop culture."

From this story:

"State Senator Steve Rauschenberger says he plans to introduce a resolution in the state Senate this week, calling on trendy retailer Abercrombie and Fitch to stop selling a line of racy t-shirts. The Republican, who is a GOP candidate for governor, says the $24.50 t-shirts are "offensive" and "degrading." He says if the Senate resolution doesn't stop Abercrombie from selling its shirts - he'll lead a boycott of the stores."

DOES ANYBODY REMEMBER THE T-SHIRTS THAT SAID "BOYS ARE STUPID, THROW ROCKS AT THEM," THE GREETING CARDS THAT MADE FUN OF AND DEMEANED MEN, AND THE KNIFE HOLDER SHAPED LIKE A MAN?!!! WHAT WERE MEN TOLD? GET A SENSE OF HUMOR! I GUESS WE NEEDED LEGISLATION INSTEAD. PEOPLE, THIS REALLY MAKES ME CRAZY!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/04/043229.shtml

False Accusations - India

Matt · 4 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "This article discusses some of the recent cases of false accusations of rape, and even provides details on the legal remedies available to the victims of such accusations. Surely, the tide is turning!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/04/1655201.shtml

Female Killer Jailed -- on Appeal

Matt · 4 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "UK: A woman kicked a grandmother to death in a row over a parking space. She wasn't jailed! A female judge gave her three years' probation and 240 hours' unpaid work, because she expressed remorse. The dead woman's family appealed, and the Appeal judge has sentenced the killer to 4 years. This is regarded as a victory. How much would a man have got for the same offence? Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/04/1657246.shtml

Woman Pleads Guilty in Sex Acts with Boy

Matt · 5 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Evil White Male Oppressor writes "
"When this was first in the paper, it was almost a joke, because of the role reversal," prosecutor Cornelius Kelly said. "It conjures up thoughts of, 'Oh, that's a young man's dream.' But as we stand here today, we still don't know what damage this will have on the young boy's self-esteem, his interpersonal relationships. We don't know what damage the young girl suffered."

The article goes on to say... "Defense attorney Donald Papcsy said Imre had been raped and has a mental problem that made it hard for her to understand that what she did was wrong. "She's not a wicked person," he said."

AT LEAST SHE IS DOING TIME..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/05/1618212.shtml

Women "excluded" from Senegal circumcision rites

Matt · 5 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

mens_issues writes "Reuters reports about a circumcision rite in Senegal in which a mythical figure called "Kankouran" guards the boys being circumcised from the village women. This is spinned to make it seem that since women are being "excluded" from this ritual it must be "discrimination" against them. The irony is that the article also mentions that female circumcision was banned in 1999, but does question the fact that it is still done to boys.

The article is here.

Steve"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/05/1620234.shtml

Fox News Laughs at Male Victims of Domestic Violence

Matt · 5 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Ray writes ″

I just sent the email (below) to Fox News (Fox & Friends) regarding coverage of the news story about a man who had his "private parts super glued by an intimate female partner." Civil Suit Goes To Court: A Scorned Lover, Glue And A Naked Man "

Click "Read more..." for more.

"My email:

"It is not enough that the vast majority of time Fox spends on homicide victims revolves around privileged, pampered white women (although 76% of homicides) are male, you have to make fun and laugh at a male who is tortured and seriously injured in a super glue attack by a vicious female.

What if a male had super glued a female's body parts together? Would you be laughing at that, or pillorying the male as some sort of violent, sexual deviant batterer? You have provided me this morning with just one more example of the glaringly sexist, man-hating, gender double standards Fox news routinely broadcasts."

They actually read someone else's email that (paraphrasing) started, Quote:
"Since when is domestic violence such a laughing matter? Would you still be laughing if the gender roles were reversed?"
I suspect they would, because even though they were somewhat more serious while reading that email, they were still somewhat yuking it up. Allison Camerata still thought it was funny, because the woman was able to do all this "while the man was sleeping." Julian Phillips said he "almost fell out of his chair laughing," when he first read about the Super Glue attack.

Here is the email address for Fox and Friends,

Friends-at-foxnews.com

The "three newscasters" who were on the show this morning when this happened were Allison Camerata, Page Hopkins, and Julian Phillips. Please email Fox and Friends and tell them there's nothing funny about domestic violence just because it is committed against man by a woman (as they seem to think)."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/05/1623258.shtml

NYTimes Re-Runs Dowd's Latest

Matt · 6 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Well, it's unavailable to the general public (NYT print subscribers can see it on-line though if they sign up for the extra service), but our very own Maureen Dowd's recent woe-is-me piece appears in the Nov. 6, 2005 New York Times Magazine. So if you can, have a look; it includes a pic of our gal sitting on a bar stool, in black stockings and heels no less -- waiting for someone to buy her a drink, I guess.

My how the people change as the years go by... what would the Maureen of 20 years ago say of herself today?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/06/0659205.shtml

MSN Article on Depression Among Successful Men

Matt · 7 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

MSN surprised me with this. There's some of the usual anti-male stereotyping and so on, but there is an air of sympathy here that is unusual for MSN when it comes to men. Excerpt:

The very qualities that propel them to success can arise from an extremely dark place in the psyche. The tendency to build their identity on achievement makes a downturn unbearable. The modern American corporation is structured to give CEOs wealth and power but also crushing isolation. What's more, there's something in the nature of success that makes being at the top dramatically different psychological terrain from getting there. And the American dream that wealth transmutes success into happiness always ends in bitter disappointment. "You're the same you, just in posher surroundings," says psychotherapist Terence Real, head of the Real Institute in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and author of I Don't Want To Talk About It: Overcoming the Secret Legacy of Male Depression.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/07/048256.shtml

RADAR Alert: "Breaking the Silence" = Junk Journalism

Matt · 7 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

The program Breaking the Silence has been widely criticized for bias and inaccuracy in depicting a world in which the only abusive parents are fathers. The program amounts to a libel that dads who seek child custody are wife-beaters.

Click "Read more..." for more.

"Breaking the Silence" = Junk Journalism
In light of recent revalations (listed below), it's no longer appropriate to ask that the show be revised. The bias is so widespread and so egregious that there's no solution other than to pull the plug on this sad example of a "documentary."

The local PBS affiliates choose which shows they will air. This week, we're asking you to contact your local PBS station. Explain to them:

1. It is now known that the filmmakers were informed on numerous occasions that one of the mothers featured in the film had been found by a court to have committed eight counts of child abuse. But the producers chose to portray her as the victim anyway. [http://www.glennsacks.com/pbs/loeliger.php]
2. The American Psychological Association has now called the film's claims "incorrect", and says that far from having debunked PAS, the APA has no official position on PAS. [http://www.glennsacks.com/pbs/apa-102405.php]
3. A number of people with stories of anti-father court bias have now come forward to say that the producers scheduled and then cancelled interviews with then. [http://www.familytx.org/research/articles/PAS/BreakingTheScience-OstrichSyndrome.html#rejected-interviewees]

Then request that they:

1. Not broadcast "Breaking the Silence".
2. Produce a documentary focusing on the plight of children abused by their mothers, and the anguish of fathers who are prevented by the courts from protecting their children.

To find your local PBS affiliate:

1. Go to http://www.pbs.org/stationfinder/index.html and enter your zip code, or
2. Look in your local telephone directory

++

Date of RADAR Release: November 6, 2005

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner: http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/07/1149242.shtml

Prostate Cancer Drug "too expensive"

Matt · 8 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "So men in Scotland can't get the best drug for treatment of prostate cancer because it is too expensive and not 'cost-effective'.

Imagine a drug for the treatment of breast cancer not being made available to women for the same reasons.

Story here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/07/2059216.shtml

Abercrombie and Fitch fold over "girl-cott".

Matt · 8 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Thundercloud. writes "Well I just saw on YAHOO news that Abercrombie and Fitch have folded, because of the boycott led by some irate girls and women.
They caved just like that. I was surprised to see A and F try to use the old "But it's meant to be humorous" excuse. They usually only try that on guys who complain of sexism. Well maybe these gals know how we guys feel, now."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/07/212204.shtml

Frisky cheerleaders not charged for public lewdness

Matt · 8 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Read this. Now ask yourself, "Why aren't they being charged with lewd conduct as well?" Two men sure would have been.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/08/0237231.shtml

Follow-up on super-glue woman

Matt · 9 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "Verdict - $46,200. I'm sure it's not what a man would have been stuck with had the roles been reversed but it's a lot better than nothing. Not surprisingly, the jury foreman said the verdict was not a slam-dunk, even with a mostly male jury. Also, the woman tried to get out of any blame by blaming the man. Gee, what a surprise!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/08/2029217.shtml

NH Commission on the Status of Men Releases Report

Scott · 9 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

The New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men (CSM) has released its first biennial report to the public. The 44-page report is the result of two years of research and testimony in the areas of men's health, fatherhood issues, domestic violence, family law, child custody, and education. You can download the report from the publications section of the CSM web site.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/08/037236.shtml

No more jail for Edmonton woman who concealed birth federico writes "Do you think that letting a baby die is murder? Infanticide?! Think again! Obviusly is not if you're a woman, specifically the mother.

Matt · 9 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Incredibly, Justice Terrance Clackson said, "While this is about loss of life, this is not about murder," and also noted that Anderwald's crimes involved deception but not violence. The article contiues stating that "After [passing out] she woke up, she put the baby in a garbage bag beside her bed, had a bath and watched TV" and "Co-workers said she was happy [the day after]". Of course the tearjerker line follows as the deception manual prescribe: "I wish I could change the past and bring Angela back," she said, using the name she gave the child."

Click "Read more..." for more.
Now, leaving aside the consideration of the fact that "Scott Peterson was sentenced to death earlier this year for killing his wife and their unborn son. Their bodies were found..." as CNN puts it, given the understanding that an unborn baby has (depending on the gender of the killer) more human value than a born one, should we consider the fact that "Anderwald [the mother] was originally charged with second-degree murder, but the charge was reduced to infanticide after a preliminary hearing. On Oct. 7, she pleaded guilty to the lesser charges of causing the death of a baby by neglecting to obtain assistance in childbirth and disposing of the body of a child," as an assumption that it is acceptable and non-violent to suffocate a human being?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/09/0033255.shtml

BBC: Becoming a father 'civilises' men

Matt · 9 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

More anti-male junk science propagation from the BBC here. Excerpt:

A UK expert said the fall was nature's way of ensuring men behaved in a 'civilised' and non-aggressive way around newborn offspring.

sigh...

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/09/0449205.shtml

Unfair expectations lead to divorce

Matt · 9 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "This article in the Times On-Line celeberates soaring indian divorce as result of womens liberation, while bharati counters it in similar vein saying unfair expecation caused by militant feminism leads to soaring divorce.

What do you people say?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/09/0452211.shtml

Mother Attacks Son with Axe

Matt · 10 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Here is another example of how women are diagonosed instead of demonised when they do something heinous. A mother attackers her baby son with an axe and she 'would undergo a psychiatric assessment.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/10/0054246.shtml

Retrial For Andrea Yates

Matt · 10 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Story here":

"'It's a good day,' Parnham said. 'The whole issue of mental health, specifically women's mental health, has been championed in this decision.'

Parnham said a new trial is a mixed blessing, because Yates will have to relive the horror of her children's deaths, but added, 'She needs to be found not guilty by reason of insanity.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/10/0059239.shtml

RADAR Turns the Tide on Domestic Violence

Matt · 10 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

RADAR – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of men and women working to assure the domestic violence (DV) issue is addressed in a balanced manner. RADAR was established in early 2005 in response to a series of inflammatory articles that appeared in the Washington Post.

RADAR Turns the Tide on Domestic Violence
Each week, RADAR's Media Monitors kept tabs on DV coverage in scores of national and local news outlets. When a biased article was spotted, an Alert went out calling on persons around the country to respond. The Alerts were posted at the RADAR website: http://www.mediaradar.org/ and at other key websites.

As the result of the hard-hitting Alerts, RADAR succeeded in curbing the biased depictions of DV in the major print media that were based on the formula of "male = abuser, female = victim."

Beginning in June, RADAR turned its attention to the Violence Against Women Act. In July we launched our Shock and Awe campaign. Over a four month period, and working in close collaboration with RADAR's partners, thousands of persons sent faxes, e-mails, and letters, and made phone calls and personal visits to members of the Senate and House of Representatives. Impressive!

RADAR also enlisted a group of columnists to write articles about VAWA: Stephen Baskerville, Richard Davis, Gordon Finley, Mark Rosenthal, Lisa Scott, Mike Spaniola, and David Usher. These articles appeared in the Washington Times and in many internet editorial sites. Other well-known columnists such as Wendy McElroy, Cathy Young, and Phyllis Schlafly also wrote articles that highlighted RADAR's concerns.

This was the first time in the fathers'/men's movement that such a coordinated and sustained effort to influence national legislation was mounted. A detailed listing of RADAR's activities and accomplishments is shown at the end of this report.

As a direct result of the outcry from the grass roots and intensive lobbying efforts, both the Senate and House versions of the bill added language designed to clarify that male victims of DV qualify for VAWA services. Currently, VAWA is stalled in Congress and its final outcome is uncertain.

Overall, RADAR succeeded in changing the way the print media portrays the domestic violence issue and in influencing national legislation. But more work is needed, as shown by the recent PBS program, Breaking the Silence.

Many thanks go to RADAR's Media Monitors, organizational partners, HisSide for its website support, Men's News Daily, Men's Activism News Network, and to the thousands of persons who participated in the RADAR campaigns over the past 10 months.

Together we made a difference – and the best is yet to come.

++

RADAR's Activities and Accomplishments, January to October, 2005

ACTIVITIES

Issue-Specific Campaigns:

1. VAWA
2. Amnesty International
3. PBS Breaking the Silence

Alerts:

Issued 44 Alerts organized in three phases:

1. 1. January 16 – June 7: Biased articles in the print media
2. 2. June 13 – Oct. 9: VAWA
3. 3. Oct. 17 – Oct. 30: Breaking the Silence

Press Releases: 8

Publications (listed on RADAR website):

1. Op-Ed Columns and Articles: 46 (this number is known to be an under-count)
2. Letters to the editor: 10 (also known to be an under-count)

ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

1. Stopped the publication of biased DV articles in the major mainstream print media.
2. Placed dozens of op-eds favorable to our perspective throughout the men's rights and internet media.
3. Helped to generate thousands of phone calls, emails, faxes, letters, and personal visits over a four-month period to elected officials regarding VAWA, resulting in expected changes to VAWA that will recognize men as DV victims.
4. Generated widespread awareness of RADAR – a Google search of "Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting" brought up 363 hits, including a section on domestic violence in Wikipedia: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Domestic_violence
5. Stimulated broad awareness and concern about PBS' Breaking the Silence.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/10/019223.shtml

Child support payments upheld by high court

Matt · 11 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Garth writes "The Supreme Court of Canada has decided that divorced parents can't necessarily get their child support payments reduced just because they start taking more care of their children. What is most interesting about this article are the reader responses at the bottom, which are universally opposed to the decision. It is obvious that there are a large number of people opposed to the current trend of governmental and judicial stupidity. Will politicians ever take notice, change their stance to be more sane and reasonable, and reap a windfall of votes from bitter parents?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/11/0025234.shtml

Warren Farrell on NBC Nightly News Tonight

Thomas · 11 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Warren Farrell writes "Here's NBC's question: If a mom takes a leave of absence, if she wishes to return should she be guaranteed her same job at the same pay? I think you'll appreciate my answer (a la Why Men Earn More). NBC Nightly News is this Friday, Nov. 11th at 6:30 pm Eastern, 5:30 in the rest of the country. And that would be the perfect time to do an Amazon order if you are thinking about giving your daughter or son a Christmas or Chanukah present that will both help them earn more and have a better life."

You can let NBC know your answer by writing to Nightly@NBC.com.

If you haven't purchased Warren's latest book, "Why Men Earn More: The Startling Truth Behind the Pay Gap -- and What Women Can Do About It," this is a good time to provide support for a man who has done a tremendous amount to advance men's rights.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/11/206237.shtml

NCFM, NY and GLBT Community Working Together

Thomas · 12 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Peter Allemano writes "NCFM's (National Coalition of Free Men) Greater New York Chapter experimented several times during the Spring by participating in 'Orientation' night at The Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual & Transgender Community Center here in New York, where we manned a table, greeted visitors and gave away literature. The overwhelmingly positive reception suggested that taking the next step and scheduling presentations at The Center might be worthwhile."

(Thomas writing now) Gay/bisexual men are, in general, well-educated and organized. In addition, because they have fewer children on average than heterosexuals, they have time for political activities and a relatively large amount of disposable income. (Several years ago, I read that, because of this, numerous companies had begun advertising campaigns designed to appeal to this demographic.) To the extent that the Men's Rights Movement works with gay/bisexual men, I believe we all stand to gain.

Interested people should click "Read More" for details, contact information, and dates.MEN'S ISSUES FOR GAY/BISEXUAL MEN

THE NATIONAL COALITION OF FREE MEN, GREATER NEW YORK CHAPTER /AT THE CENTER!/

Thursday, November 17, 2005

and

Thursday, December 15, 2005

6:00 - 7:30 p.m.

The National Coalition of Free Men ("NCFM") is a nonprofit educational and civil rights organization that examines the ways sex discrimination affects men and boys. NCFM also helps males to identify their inherent strengths and goodness and to build upon these qualities. All are welcome to join us on November 17 and December 15 at The Center for a presentation and discussion of issues of particular concern to gay/bisexual men /from the perspective of gender/, including:

- masculophobia, the seldom-acknowledged, insidious companion to homophobia
- health, both physical and mental, especially in the realm of men's widely underdiagnosed problems with depression and mental health issues
- intimate partner violence and the scarcity of resources for male victims
- reproductive rights (or, more accurately, the lack thereof) and the anti-male "presumption of perversion"
- widespread male-bashing humor in the media and its deleterious impact upon gay/bisexual males' self-esteem and relationships
- the disparity in intensity of disapproval for same-gender sex for males compared to females
- the inadequacy of the dominant paradigm of gender relations and a proposal for a new one that honors men and women alike, regardless of sexual orientation

The Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual & Transgender Community Center

208 West 13th Street

New York, NY 10011

(212) 260-7310

/NATIONAL COALITION OF FREE MEN, GREATER NEW YORK CHAPTER/

/Working together to free men from gender discrimination; JOIN US TODAY!/

Telephone: (516) 482-6378;

on line at www.themalevoice.org;

e-mail: ncfmgny@themalevoice.org

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/11/2146222.shtml

Men's Issues and The Psychiatric Society of Westchester

Thomas · 12 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

The Psychiatric Society of Westchester has formed the first Committee on Men's Issues within a branch of the American Psychiatric Association.

Click "Read More" for a fascinating article, written by Edward M. Stephens, M.D., Chair, Committee on Men's Issues, The Psychiatric Society of Westchester, (a district branch of The American Psychiatric Association) and President, NCFM, Greater New York Chapter.

Special thanks to Peter Allemano for alerting us to this development and to NCFM's Greater New York Chapter as well as The Male Voice e-newsletter, www.themalevoice.org.THE DECLINE OF MALES
(originally published in The Westchester Psychiatrist and reproduced with permission)

by Edward M. Stephens, M.D.

Chair, Committee on Men's Issues

The Psychiatric Society of Westchester

(a district branch of The American Psychiatric Association)

- and -

President, NCFM, Greater New York Chapter

"Gender, not geography will determine the direction of world resource use in the 21st Century."

In my recent dinner with Professor Lionel Tiger, the talk was all about sex. Not the stuff you have in bed but its __expression in the more abstract, less sticky and infinitely more complex question of gender.

Lionel, the Charles Darwin Professor of Anthropology at Rutgers University and the author of The Decline of Males, had become the strange bedfellow of a psychiatrist out of a shared concern for the declining prospects for males. Our dinner conversation was about the prospect of creating a Department for International Men's Studies at a major university and the ground breaking formation of The Committee on Men's Issues of The Psychiatric Society of Westchester (PSW).

As psychiatrists, gender is not usually high on our list of causative factors for diagnostic concern. That 20th century perspective changes when we begin to understand that gender is destiny in the 21st century and it is not just the women's movement that is affecting our world view. Tiger opines that a basic change has occurred in our relation as men and women. Through the shift in the control of reproduction, women are now able to manage their reproductive function with the Pill with no one but themselves knowing whether it is their time or not. Men are out of the loop for the first time in the history of our species.

Learning from Primates

Austin, the stump tail monkey, found this out in the '70s study of progesterone when it was given sequentially to his three active sex partners in the primate troop. He lost interest in his favorite mate when she was on birth control and regained it when the progesterone effect wore off. When all three of his mates were on the stuff, Austin became nervous, irritable and began to masturbate, refusing sex with all three of his sexual partners. Austin's story is relevant to us since he and his partners are our closest primate relatives.

Although Austin was confused when his partners signaled pheromonally that they were artificially pregnant with a birth control substance, his mates didn't compound the problem by changing life roles. Austin's mates, released from their sexual obligations, didn't take up 60% of undergraduate places in college or 75% of graduate spots. They didn't get pregnant outside of marriage as women all over the industrialized world are doing. They didn't create single parent families. They didn't divorce Austin. They didn't change the nature of the workforce, displacing Austin. They did demonstrate that primate sexual responses are radically altered by chemical birth control without signs being posted and they make us wonder about the profound and unexplored effects on our species of change in reproductive responsibility.

Austin got cranky and aggressive when a major change was made in the fundamental nature of his relationship to his gender-mates. What is happening to us as men and women in the midst of the changes we so glibly characterize as "women's liberation"? What is happening to one half of our patient population who are sometimes characterized as alexithymic and whose needs have become socially invisible as the male gender is increasingly characterized as "the problem"? Today's men seem as surprised as Austin that they are living in a different world, over which they have very little control.

Men's Issues?

When I went into The Committee on Women's Issues at the national meeting of the APA, asking for help to set up a corresponding Committee for men, I received some interesting responses. By and large, I think that the Committee members thought I was far fetching until some hard core sentiment emerged from one of the members: "The whole organization of the APA is about men's issues."

Fortunately, that's not the response I got from the leadership of PSW and many of the female psychiatrists to whom I presented the concept, so that PSW has the first Committee on Men's Issues (COMI) in the APA. COMI has invited Lionel Tiger to speak to us in person and describe the crisis in men's lives not just in Western societies but also on a worldwide basis. (Editor's note: This special event was attended by members of NCFM, GNY, and a report on it was featured in The Male Voice e-newsletter.)

The Canary in the Coal Mine

For many years, we have been appalled as a society about what is happening to our men of color. In some communities, there are unemployment rates of up to 50%. Murder rates by men of men in these communities are as startling as are rates of drug and alcohol addiction and incarceration. Alarmingly, "all the indices that were commonly thought to be confined to the African-American community are in fact rising more quickly in white communities. The prevailing African-American situation is part of the American system, and its characteristics are shared in other countries," according to Prof. Tiger. While the illustration appears to create race as a significant element, it is actually "a spurious and imprecise category that has nothing to do with biogenetic competence." We know this because when men of all colors are allowed to perform on a level playing field, as in the armed services, men of all backgrounds perform equally well. "Race is skin deep, but sex is implicated in many fundamental human systems."

Until we begin to appreciate the sea changes taking place in the world of employment, we are out of touch with the world of these men. Each year in the United States there are one million fewer jobs created for men than for women; men, unlike women, are not culturized to the concept of "part time work." The net effect for our office practice is that we have a cohort of depressed men who are having what we might euphemistically call an "adjustment reaction of adult life" for whom we may have no adequate counsel because we are unaware of the major economic shifts taking place as a result of the new alignments of gender in the workplace. Then, even when they might be candidates for antidepressants, we hesitate to interfere with their already fragile maleness because we don't want to depress their sex lives.

In the Committee on Men's Issues, we are looking for some answers. What may be more important for us as psychiatrists will be the new set of questions that come up for us about our men and boys, brothers and fathers, husbands and sons, our patients and ourselves.

The Psychiatric Society of Westchester's Committee on Men's Issues was founded by Dr. Stephens and is the first-ever such committee within a district branch of the APA. Dr. Stephens can be contacted in care of NCFM, GNY via e-mail at ncfmgny@themalevoice.org or by leaving a telephonic message at (516) 482-6378.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/11/2218217.shtml

Concord Monitor Reports on Men's Commission Findings

Scott · 12 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

The traditionally anti-male Concord Monitor published a glowing article on the findings of the New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men's first biennial report. Mentioning all of the issues the Commission reported on, the article is a decent summary of the 44-page report.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/12/0513233.shtml

CNN Article Addresses Family Issues in French Unrest

Matt · 13 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

bandersnatch writes "From CNN:

Families break down in the pressure-cooker of crime, poverty and unemployment. Many single mothers are left to fend alone, said Imloul, a single mother herself whose Algerian parents divorced before her father's death. "Fathers do not play any role in their children's lives. The father doesn't exist at all. French justice gives full rights to mothers," Imloul said. Coming to France has given some Muslim North African women new freedoms. "They want to lead a similar life as their French counterparts," Imloul said. "But it is very difficult to leave a patriarchal culture all of a sudden. Women take on the responsibility of both mother and father while they are not at all suited for it. In the end, it is their children who suffer." She estimated 40 percent of families in the suburbs where she works are dysfunctional, causing a high rate of school dropouts, drug use, petty crimes and aggressive behavior. Police records for petty crimes burden youths, making it harder to build a productive life, she said."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/12/2056208.shtml

MA Lt. Gov. seeks GPS for restraining orders

Matt · 13 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "Story here. Excerpt:

Lt. Gov. Kerry got mixed reviews as she continued her push for the state to attach electronic tracking bracelets to certain people who violate restraining orders.

Healey's bill requires Global Positioning System (GPS) tracking as a condition of probation for people convicted of violating a restraining order issued due to domestic relations concerns. It is necessary to curb the "genuinely staggering" statistics of domestic abuse cases here each year, she said last week."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/12/2121221.shtml

Bush administration accuses SIU of anti-white and anti-male bias

Hombre · 13 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

From the Chicago Sun Times, "President Bush's administration has threatened to sue Southern Illinois University, alleging its fellowship programs for minority and female students violate federal civil rights laws by discriminating against whites, men and others...

The University has engaged in a pattern or practice of intentional discrimination against whites, non-preferred minorities and males...

The letter demands the university cease the fellowship programs, or the department's civil rights division will sue SIU by Nov. 18...

I don't think there's any way that Southern Illinois can defend these programs legally, and I don't understand why they'd want to run a program that refuses to consider some individuals on the basis of their skin color...

"I'll be upfront with you -- no white male will get this award," McNeil said."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/13/0342222.shtml

Nowegian Government On the Verge...

Matt · 13 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

... of madness, or so it seems. Story here.

Norway has said it might close down companies that fail to meet proposed boardroom quotas for women.

The new coalition government in Oslo said it was considering introducing a law which would require 40% of boardroom posts to be filled by women.

.

.

.

"It is a question of power," the spokeswoman said, insisting that several surveys had found that companies where both sexes were strongly represented on the board were more profitable.

"For a woman to get in a man must get out. It is not difficult to find qualified women."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/13/053234.shtml

Girl bullying continues to hit UK headlines

Matt · 14 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "This is the third major story in as many weeks reporting serious assaults among high school girls in the UK.

In the first case, a 12 yo girl had her face slashed by another girl using the blade from a pencil sharpener. She suffered serious injuries and may be scarred for life.

Last week 15yo Natasha Jackman was the victim of a multiple stabbing in the school cafeteria, and underwent eye surgery as a result. Three girls were arrested on conspiracy to commit grievous boldily harm and pervert the course of justice.

This time, 15yo Danielle Price was punched repeatedly in the face by another girl after receiving two achievement awards in high school.

So much for sugar and spice and all things nice."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/14/123202.shtml

RADAR Alert: "Breaking the Silence": Time for Congress to Investigate

Matt · 14 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Over three weeks ago PBS released its flawed program, Breaking the Silence.

Since that date, the factual content of the program has been shown to be biased and unfair. One of the mothers portrayed as a victim turned out to be a serial child abuser. And the program makes numerous claims that unfairly libel fathers.

Click "Read more..." for more.

"Breaking the Silence": Time for Congress to Investigate
Thousands of viewers have complained, and several affiliates have declined to air the program. But PBS has refused to pull the program. More than three weeks later, PBS has only promised to do "a review of the research behind and conclusions presented" in the program.

So why did the Corporation for Public Broadcasting let PBS to air such a biased program? Part of CPB's legal mandate is to ensure "strict adherence to objectivity and balance in all programs or series of programs of a controversial nature." (http://www.cpb.org/aboutcpb/goals/objectivity). If they don't hold PBS accountable, who will?

The US Congress, that's who.

This week, our lobbyists will be meeting with key members of the House of Representatives. They will be delivering a letter signed by RADAR and 15 other organizations around the country. A copy of that letter is shown at the bottom of this Alert.

So while our lobbyists are talking to staff members in the front room, the phones need to be ringing off the hook in the back. Please call the following Congressmen TODAY:

Rep. Fred Upton, Chairman Telecommunications and the Internet	202/225-3761
Rep. Joe Barton, Chairman Commerce and Energy	202/225-2002
Rep. Ed Whitfield, Chairman Oversight and Investigations	202/225-3115

"I'm calling about Breaking the Silence, a program that was recently aired by PBS. This program has been caught up in allegations of bias and misrepresentation. The Corporation for Public Broadcasting has a legal mandate to assure objectivity and balance in all public broadcasting. Please investigate to find out exactly what went wrong. Thank you."

Your prompt response is critical to the success of this effort.

Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting

P.O. Box 1404, Rockville, MD 20849

http://www.mediaradar.org/

603-436-8810
November 14, 2005

Fred Upton, Chairman

Subcommittee on Telecommunications and the Internet

2183 Rayburn Building

Washington, DC 20515

RE: Complaint about the Corporation for Public Broadcasting

Dear Chairman Upton:

We are writing in regard to the PBS program Breaking the Silence: Children's Stories, a documentary about the treatment of abused children by divorce courts in America. The program falsely concludes that children are frequently awarded to abusive fathers by divorce courts.

As such, the program directly violates the legal mandate of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting to ensure "strict adherence to objectivity in all programs or series of programs of a controversial nature."
Even though CPB did not create this program, CPB is nonetheless obligated by law to assure that all public broadcasting programs conform to journalistic standards of objectivity and balance.

Breaking the Silence was released by the Public Broadcasting Service on October 20. Even before its release, this controversial program has been surrounded by allegations of bias and misrepresentation. We know the following to be true:

1. Breaking the Silence (BTS) was funded by a $500,000 grant from the Mary Kay Ash Foundation, which has previously funded misleading television programs about domestic violence.
2. The program's directors refused to interview persons who would have presented a balancing perspective on the issue, leaving a one-sided and inaccurate portrayal. [http://www.familytx.org/research/articles/PAS/BreakingTheScience-OstrichSyndrome.html#rejected-interviewees]

3. The program makes numerous sweeping claims that unfairly libel fathers. These claims are easily refuted by government reports and/or widely-accepted research:
   a. BTS claims that children are "most often in danger from the father." But government statistics show that more children are abused and neglected by their mother than their father. [http://faq.acf.hhs.gov/cgi-bin/acfrightnow.cfg/php/enduser/std_adp.php?p_faqid=70]
   b. BTS claims, "All over America, battered mothers lose custody of their children." But the US Census Bureau reports that in 2002, "about 5 of every 6 custodial parents were mothers." [http://www.census.gov/prod/2003pubs/p60-225.pdf]
   c. BTS indicates the vast majority of divorced dads who seek custody of their children are "abusive." But research shows women are just as likely as men to commit domestic violence. [http://www.csulb.edu/~mfiebert/assault.htm]
   d. BTS claims that the parental alienation syndrome "has been thoroughly debunked by the American Psychological Association." But the APA responded on October 24, 2005 that the BTS claim was "incorrect." [http://www.therealitycheck.org/GuestColumnist/mrosenthal110405.htm]
4. The program features Sadia Loeliger, who is portrayed as a heroic mother who battled a biased divorce court system to regain custody of her child. But recently-released documents prove that Ms. Loeliger had been found by a California Juvenile Court to be a serial child abuser. [http://www.glennsacks.com/pbs/loeliger.php]
5. Six months before the program was scheduled to be aired, the program directors were apprised of Ms. Loeliger's history of child abuse, but they chose to conceal that important information from program viewers. [http://www.glennsacks.com/pbs/loeliger-producers-warned.php]
6. To date, CPB and PBS executives have failed to comment on the substance of any of these charges.

The controversy surrounding Breaking the Silence has been reported on numerous news outlets, including Fox News, NPR radio, and various newspapers. We are enclosing a number of these articles with this letter. Several PBS affiliates have already aired opposing perspectives, or refused to air the program all together.

RADAR – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – believes that fundamental journalistic principles of balance, integrity, and accuracy have been violated by this program. RADAR asserts that the Public Broadcasting Service should retract this flawed show.

Furthermore, RADAR has requested PBS to produce an objective documentary that focuses on the plight of children abused by their mothers, and the anguish of fathers who are prevented by the courts from protecting their children.

We the undersigned call on you to investigate CPB's egregious violation of its Congressional mandate to ensure "strict adherence to objectivity in all programs or series of programs of a controversial nature."

Gordon E. Finley, PhD

RADAR: Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting

Marc Angelucci

National Coalition of Free Men – Los Angeles Chapter

Paul M. Clements

President, DADD-NH

Charles E. Corry, PhD, F.G.S.A.

President, Equal Justice Foundation

Harry Crouch

Director, San Diego Men's Center

Michael Geanoulis

National Congress for Fathers and Children – New Hampshire Chapter

James Hays

President, Coalition of Fathers and Families NY, Inc.

Donald C. Hubin, PhD

Director, Columbus Chapter of Parents and Children for Equality

Lee Newman

Executive Director, Stop Abuse for Everyone – New Hampshire

Alan Rusmisel

Vice-president, Alabama Coalition for Fathers and Children

Albert Schafer

President, Coalition of Parent Support

Lisa Scott

Taking Action Against Bias in the System

Tom Smith

American Union of Men

Marc Snider

http://www.nhcustody.org/

Terri Lynn Tersak

President, Center for Children's Justice - Carolinas Chapter

David Usher

President, American Coalition for Fathers and Children – Missouri Coalition

Date of RADAR Release: November 13, 2005

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner: http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/14/1218234.shtml

15 yo girl holds down 12 yo boy while pit bull rapes him and gets less than 2 years probation

Hombre · 15 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Masculiste writes "See the story here... http://www.torontosun.com/News/Columnists/Bonokosk i_Mark/2005/11/04/1291748.html

...with an additionally commentary here... http://www.torontosun.com/News/TorontoAndGTA/2005/ 11/08/pf-1297471.html

This is as sick an example of Judicial bias in favor of females as you'll EVER see."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/14/2137241.shtml

Are Men Necessary?

Thomas · 15 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

My Sweetiepie, Maureen Dowd (don't tell my other Sweetiepie, Hillary Clinton), is getting more press for her new book, "Are Men Necessary?"

It's interesting for me to read about this sort of professional blathering from English speaking women, because I no longer have an emotional response to it. Except for the few who are men's rights activists, these folks have become pretty much irrelevant to me. Not an irritation. Not a joke.

Irrelevant.

Click "Read More" if you think you can tolerate the rest of my own blathering.
In her book, my Sweetiepie opines, "Men are simply not biologically suited to hold higher office." And "There's a body of evidence now that the Y chromosome is rotting at such a fast rate that it will go out of business in about 100,000 years..." And "So now that women don't need men to reproduce and refinance, the question is, will we keep you around? And the answer is, you know we need you in the way we need ice cream, you'll be more ornamental."

With inimitable feminist insight she also states that men avoid women like her because they are successful. (Okay. Sometimes I still get a chuckle out of these clowns.)

Despite her success and awesome (to herself, at least) brain power, she is at a loss to understand why it is women who have taken passionate exception to her gibberish. Well, Sweets, it's because women are realizing that men with any sense are simply walkin' away. No panic. No running.

Walkin'.

And most women, despite all the feminist lunacy that's been drilled through their sculls non-stop for four decades, don't want to be devoid of men.

Note: a lot of research indicates that the Y chromosome is no longer dispensing with unnecessary genetic material. And the research showing that it will decay away smacks of feminist advocacy. In addition, my own scientific insight (yup, nothin' but my own scientific insight based on a Ph.D. in physics and years of research) tells me that it is far more probable that, in much less than 100,000 years, humans will have complete control of their genetic makeup than that the Y chromosome will have decayed away. The research, that the Y chromosome will have disappeared in about 100,000 years, should be published in and only in the Journal of Unverifiable Conclusions.

So, gentlemen, it used to be that we'd have a good ol' American group hug. But this calls for somethin' different.

Group yawn! Group yawn!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/15/1756228.shtml

New website: "Breaking the Science"

Matt · 15 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

mbr writes "I've finally done it! For ages I've wanted to gather articles I've written all together in one place. I've now created a website called Breaking the Science. Check it out at http://www.breakingthescience.org.

Most of the articles currently on the website are related to domestic violence. I hope eventually to include articles that will broaden the focus beyond that to the entire subject of how too much research in the soft sciences is driven by the researchers' agenda rather than objectivity."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/15/1947259.shtml

Colorado's "Cool Mom" Gets 30 Years

Matt · 15 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Finally, some justice! Read it here.

Excerpt:

GOLDEN, Colo. - A woman who authorities said had sex with high school boys during alcohol- and drug-fueled parties has been sentenced to 30 years in prison, officials said.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/15/1949239.shtml

Sugar and Spice and Everything Deadly....

Matt · 16 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Evil White Male Oppressor writes "I wonder if these situations will become so commonplace that we stereotype all women as violent thugs, just like we do to men now..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/16/1140237.shtml

Sage Mens Circle in Yakima, WA Marks 10-Year Anniversary

Matt · 16 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

sagemenscircle writes "Sage Men's Circle will be 10 years old on January 3, 2006. We are a small men's support group for men 25 and older. No other criteria apply and we have no political, social or economic agenda. Just men's support."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/16/1144244.shtml

"Family Court" Judge send man to jail for sighing

Hombre · 17 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "A New York "Family Court" judge is in the news for sending a man to jail because he sighed and because the judge didn't like the way his eyes looked. The judge was admonished not for his prejudice in sending a man to jail for what amounts to breathing and standing silently, but simply for failing to follow protocal. Apparently the judge was supposed to warn the man before sending him to jail for essentially no reason at all. The story is here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/16/2346218.shtml

Too close to home

Hombre · 17 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Debra Lafave is one of the female teachers who've become famous lately for being charged with statuatory rape of one of her students. After hearing about the charges, Lisa York, a mother of two, filed for a restraining order to keep Debra away from her children. Her request was denied. Story here

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/17/002238.shtml

Stud Farm in Nevada

Thomas · 17 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

I guess I'll just say, "Make of this what you will."

Well, okay, I won't stop quite there.

People often say that sex crazed women are acting like men. No. They're not. They're acting like women, who no longer face societal condemnation for sexual license and who no longer have to worry about unwanted pregnancy.

I'm not at all certain that, in and of itself, that is a bad thing. And it may indicate why efforts to get women to keep their pants on more often, in order to bring men in line as far as committing to marriage, might be a very steep, uphill battle.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/17/1216232.shtml

Out-of-This-World Sex

Thomas · 18 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

This is an interesting presentation of the sexual concerns of astronauts on long missions. It's a theoretical matter today, but in the future a number of people may be personally involved with the issue.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/18/0448251.shtml

Problems with Assisted Reproduction Technique

Thomas · 18 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Most readers here might not be concerned with this, but it's worth reading to become more informed about problems with technologically assisted reproduction techniques.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/18/0453257.shtml

"Save the Males" on New Zealand TV

Thomas · 19 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

The television show described here may be viewable only on NZ TV, and late at night on a Wednesday at that, but it's still good to see that it's airing. It seems to cover many of the concerns of men's rights activists everywhere. If you're in NZ and can see it, please do so and give us feedback. (Please record it and view it later, if you have to.)

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/19/0015204.shtml

UK: Child Support Agency Still a Disaster

Matt · 19 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "This week Tony Blair stated in Parliament that the Child Support Agency isn't doing its job. Other reports concur. The UK government admits that one third of Child Support assessments are wrong. Here is what the BBC feminists have to say on the matter."

Click "Read more..." for more.
What all these people are saying is that the CSA is bad because it doesn't properly serve the interests of women. No-one mentions the effect it has on men. After 24 years of marriage, my brother's wife had an affair, took the kids and left him. He, an innocent man, hasn't seen his own kids in over two years, but the CSA hounds him for money. He hasn't had a raise, but this week he had his payments doubled with no explanation. Just in the interests of balance, here is Fathers 4 Justice.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/19/022232.shtml

10 Girls Brawl at Columbus, Ohio High Scool

Thomas · 19 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous writes:

A high school brawl leads to arrests at East High school, and the participants aren't who you'd think they would be.

Media still doesn't get that women are violent too.

Thomas writing now. At least the media is starting to catch on, in part due to the efforts of those good people who are reading this right now.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/19/0025204.shtml

The Domestic Abuse Helpline Needs Your Support

Matt · 20 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

mens_issues writes "The Domestic Abuse Helpline for Men and Women recently sent out a newsletter highlighting the need for services for male victims of domestic abuse. Of note, the shelter for abused men managed to get a roof in the nick of time before last winter, but still needs renovations before it can open.

Donations can be sent to:

Domestic Abuse Helpline for Men and Women

P.O. Box 252

Harmony, Maine (ME) 04942

Or donate through PayPal at:

http://noexcuse4abuse.org/support.html

Steve

Please click on Read More/Post Comments to see the newsletter."
October 27, 2005 - Five Years of helping victims!

Hello Friends! Today marks the fifth anniversary of our helpline being launched. Five years ago today our new helpline number was placed at the end of the first ever Bangor Daily News front page article on, "Battered Males, the domestic abuse secret."

That very first day fourteen calls came into the helpline. Since that day we have had close to 10,000 calls from men in need of assistance, concerned family members, friends, social service agencies, law enforcement, and others. We have provided support, information, referrals, court advocacy, emergency shelter, transportation expenses, education, brochures and brought public awareness to this issue through the media and provide trainings concerning male victimization. Below are examples of just some of the work we have done in the past five years to bring more public awareness and services to victims of domestic violence: From 2001-2003 we held three successful educational conferences in Maine and New Hampshire on domestic violence. In 2002 the National Crime Prevention Council included information about our helpline in their publication, "50 Strategies to Prevent Violent Domestic Crimes."

In 2003 Verizon began publishing our toll free helpline number on the crisis pages of their phone books across the country. Many callers were now able to find us in their local phone book as well as via our website and referrals from other social service and law enforcement agencies. In September of 2004 the Journal of Family Violence notified co-authors Dr. Denise Hines, Jan Brown and Edward Dunning that their peer reviewed article, "Characteristics of Callers to the Domestic Abuse Helpline for Men," had been accepted for publication. (available upon request) In July of 2005 we were invited to do a poster presentation on, "Best Practices: Service Provisions for Male Victims of Domestic Abuse," at the University of New Hampshire's 9th International Family Violence Conference. (available upon request) We have distributed thousands of brochures to social service agencies, students doing research papers, court house personnel and law enforcement agencies at their request. We have answered calls from journalists, college students, and others who were researching and writing about abused men. These achievements are the just a few of the highlights of the many activities that we have focused on. Over the years we have worked diligently to give voice to the many victims we hear from daily on the helpline and through our website email. Many who call say, "It's so embarrassing, I can't tell my extended family or friends...I thought I was the only one...I am so grateful to have someone who believes me...I called other programs but your organization is the only one that would help..."

Current and future projects include but are not limited to: Publishing an informational booklet about male victims of domestic violence for both victims and service providers. Many service providers have requested copies of this booklet when it is available. Finish remodeling on our shelter and office/meeting space so that we can house victims and their children and offer support groups and other services. Put together a resource list of providers around the country that help male victims and offer the same services (emergency shelter, one on one counseling, educational support groups for victims, court advocacy, transitional housing, job placement etc) as they do to female victims and their children. Continue to collaborate with other service providers around the country.

What you can do: We still have a long way to go! If we ever hope to fulfill our mission of making sure that all victims are offered the services they need to escape domestically violent situations. Although our costs to offer services and keep the helpline staffed and running 24/7 has increased greatly due to the much higher call volume we have received over the last five years (we currently receive nearly 10 times the amount of calls now as we did in 2000-2001) our contributions have decreased greatly. Please consider making a contribution to our non profit organization so that we can continue to assist victims of domestic abuse and their children. You contribution may be tax deductible. No amount is too small (or too big ;-))!

Send your donation to:

Domestic Abuse Helpline for Men and Women

P.O. Box 252

Harmony, Maine 04942

Also, we are currently redesigning and updating the website and will be putting the PayPal donation button back up ASAP so that you can make a contribution at our website.

Yours Truly,

Ms. Jan Brown, Founder and Executive Director"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/19/2338229.shtml

How Men's Lives would be Affected if Roe v Wade were Overturned

Matt · 20 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

unrulypassenger writes "I haven't seen much here on the subject of the U.S. Supreme Court nominee and how the possiblitiy of Roe v Wade (abortion rights) being overturned would negatively impact the lives of all American males. Perhaps it's because this is primarily a Canadian forum, I'm not sure if I'm right on that. I suppose it would be an economic advantage to Canada and the other countries where abortions are obtainable. But American males' lives would be thrown back into the 20th Century/1950's backseat Chevy era and shotgun wedding times of yore ...not to mention the consequences of changes in child support laws, collection of social security numbers and all that has changed since the Pill and abortion rights. Men would be impacted far more than women and it looks as if that hasn't yet become apparent to many. There's not much we can do other than writing our Senators and keeping it zipped until we die. Article here."

Ed. note: MANN is owned and moderated largely (if not entirely) by American men. However it is meant to be a pan-national information/activism site and accepts submissions from anywhere in the world about topics relevant to men's issues regardless of where they come up, as misandry is, unfortunately, a global phenomenon.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/19/2343228.shtml

Canada's Public Works: Males Need Not Apply

Matt · 20 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Here's a story in today's National Post newspaper. Isn't this discrimination? And isn't this the same issue that early feminists fought in the mid-1960's?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/20/1633259.shtml

MSN Surprises with Article on Infidelity

Matt · 20 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Expecting the usual "it's all guys doing it" subtext, I was pleasantly surprised to read this on MSN. Despite the title it directly states, and repeatedly, that women cheat as often as men. Refreshing coming from MSN.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/20/1656204.shtml

Drunk Woman Tries to Leave Aircraft in Flight

Matt · 22 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Evil White Male Oppressor writes "A drunk woman tries to open the door of an aircraft in flight and she is released on a "Good Behavior" Bond". Uhm, isn't what she did a terrorist act?!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/22/0149248.shtml

Latest Rationalization for MGM

Matt · 22 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Here it is-- it'll help prevent AIDS, don't you know? Gee, so would emasculating men entirely, or maybe making women wear chastity belts, so let's just do it!

Excerpt:

The South African study, reported in Public Library of Science Medicine, found it had a protective effect for some of the 3,280 young men involved.

Circumcision is thought to help protect against HIV because cells under the foreskin are vulnerable to the virus.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/22/0154244.shtml

"Fortune" asks, "Why Aren't More CEOs Women?"

Matt · 22 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

The answer is of course predictable. The closing comment:

Gloria Steinem once remarked that we'll know women have reached full equality when a mediocre woman can get as far as a mediocre man. Are we there yet?

We're still a long way from there. But women can avoid the trap of having to be better than their male colleagues in order to reach the same heights. I advise my students to think carefully before they join any organization—to avoid leaping at the first job offer they get. Figure out whether that company is likely to help you reach your goals, as well as vice versa. Of course, you can go to work in a male-dominated industry or at a company with few or no high-ranking women, but you must go in with your eyes open and be prepared to tough it out. Be aware that, even today, you may be a pioneer. And the way you can always tell a pioneer is, she's the one with the arrows sticking out of her back.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/22/0312230.shtml

Taking the Mommy Card to Task

Thomas · 23 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

In this Dayton Daily News article, D.L. Stewart discusses the overconcern with motherhood and the lack of concern with fatherhood in both news reporting and the courtroom. It's refreshing to see mainstream news that reveals the female-favoring disparity between treatment of men and women.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/22/2024253.shtml

Zambian Constitution and Men's Rights

Matt · 26 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "I came across this interesting column on the constitutional debate in Zambia and its emphasis on `gender equality'. The writer argues that the draft constitution actually encourages discrimination against men. (You need to scroll down a bit to get to the relevant part, starting from an anlaysis of Section 40 (4))."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/25/2143231.shtml

Only One Year in Jail for Twelve Felony Counts of Sex with Boys

Matt · 26 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "Twelve felony counts and only one year in jail? They even comment on the obvious bias at the end of the article"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/25/2145241.shtml

58 YO Father Falsely Accused of Rape

Matt · 26 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Disgusting-- I am at loss of words.

--bharati"

Excerpt:

'And now the daughter, on whose complaint the father is in prison, has confessed in a sworn affidavit that her dad was innocent.

She said she had framed him at the instance of her mother whose relationship with her father was strained. This bizarre case—senior lawyers say they've not heard of a more weird twist to a case—has raised several questions.'

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/25/2149200.shtml

Ottawa "Rescinds" Hiring Ban on Able-bodied White Men

Matt · 26 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

zerostress writes "From ifeminists, here is some good news for a change. Even there, they tried to weasel out of this mess by saying that the policy had been "misconstrued by some as being non-inclusive. This was not the intention."

Being an optimist, I think this policy will still be implemented but not as publicly. Still, it its good to see that by protesting we can make things change."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/25/2154218.shtml

Paternity Fraud: It's Done by Oppressed Women!

Thomas · 26 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

That's rights, folks, you heard it here first. Paternity fraud is committed because of (among other things) "The threat of sexual violence or shaming..." I swear, this confused piece of crackpot sociology might outdo even the best of my Sweetie Pie, Moaning Dud. Ooops, I mean Maureen Dowd.

If you can stomach more of my take on this, click "Read More."A few excerpts and comments:

"The voices of children and women are rarely heard. Indeed, even in the wake of her victory in the Victorian Supreme Court, Meredith Magill refused to grant interviews to any of the assembled reporters."

I can't tell you how awful I fell for the poor women (and children?) whose voices aren't heard because, after their victories in the Supreme Court, they refuse to grant interviews to the assembled reporters.

"Both of these women, as well as others to whom Turney spoke, had dismissed the reproductive potential of these one-off encounters because they wanted to believe that their chosen or permanent partner - the one with whom they were having regular (as opposed to irregular -- my comment) unprotected sex - was the genetic father."

Well, the women did want their regular partners, as opposed to their hot humps, to be the genetic father. In case you didn't know, that makes the women victims.

"In Turney's sample, several women admitted uncertainty about the genetic father of their child."

Why, that's awful. I wonder why they were uncertain. Gonna have to think about that one.

Here's one of my favorites: "Abortion was considered by several women unsure who caused their pregnancy." Note the "who caused their pregnancy." As we all know, it's men who cause pregnancy. Women are, well, victims of pregnancy.

Hell, you can read the article, but I can't resist one more priceless insight: "From the wife-swapping husband to the abortion-opposing partner to the spouse who knew his wife had conceived during a short break in their relationship yet chose to sign the birth registration papers and act in the role of the child's father, Turney exposes a range of scenarios in which fraud poorly describes what the men involved describe as the problem they face, if indeed they define their situation as problematic at all."

It strikes me that, perhaps, these people (feminists) are, to borrow an expression from the psychology profession, clinically batshit.

Any young man, who isn't considering a wife-free life without financial responsibility (under penalty of imprisonment) for some woman's children, might seek out advice. In any case, I'm gonna find me a wonderful woman, one who's committed paternity fraud, and buy her a nice fruit basket.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with

comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/26/0135206.shtml

'Snog' Teacher indeed!

Matt · 26 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Steven Brown writes "Imagine if the sexes had been reversed in this case (the man would almost certainly have been imprisoned and never allowed to teach again).

Note also the light-hearted use of the word 'snog' in the headline to the story: "'Snog' Teacher Spared Ban".

Excerpt:

'A geography teacher who kissed a 15-year-old male pupil at school has been spared a ban from her profession.

Judge Sally Cahill QC, at Leeds Crown Court, said the offences were serious but they did not merit a custodial sentence or a teaching ban.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/26/1958226.shtml

Naturally, No Prison for Lafave

Matt · 27 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "
Link here.
Excerpt:

'(CNN) -- In a last-minute effort to keep herself out of prison, a 25-year-old middle school teacher pleaded guilty Tuesday to having sex with a 14-year-old.

Debra Lafave, a former remedial reading teacher at Greco Middle School in Temple Terrace, Florida, pleaded guilty to two counts of lewd and lascivious behavior, and was sentenced to three years of house arrest followed by seven years probation. She also must register as a sex offender.'

The question of disparity of sentencing due to the perp's sex does get covered here. Excerpt:

'Debra Lafave's plea deal raises the question of whether there's a double standard when it comes to female offenders involved in a sexual crime.

Would a man in the same situation have received a similar sentence?'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/26/202209.shtml

Men's Anger May Mask Anguish

Matt · 27 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

locksley2k writes "An interesting and breakthrough article in today's Newsday, originating from the LA Times, deals with male depression as an often misdiagnosed distinct and unique gender based mental disorder caused by men feeling emasculated and vulnerable manifesting itself by aggression and recklessness amongst other symptoms. It's the inverse of what therapists have traditionally considered the signs of depression or as the article calls it "melancholy on steroids."

The greatest significance of all this is mental health professionals are trying to legitimize "male-based depression" as a new mental health category in the same way they have Battered Wife Syndrome and Post-Partum Depression. If they are successful, MBD can be used as a legal defense in domestic abuse or other battery crimes. A good lawyer can logically argue his aggressive behavior was therefore caused by the victim as has been successfully done with the BWS defense. Therapy will replace jail time. This is not a good thing; it can cause a lot of harm unless it forces the mental health and judicial communities to have ALL people made to be responsible for their own actions regardless of their Battered Wife Syndrome, Post-Partum Depression or Male-Base Depression."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/26/204205.shtml

Female Statutory Rape - More Cases or Just More Reporting?

Matt · 28 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "These cases are really starting to stack up. I wonder if women are changing, our perception of the occurrence has changed, or just that these cases are being reported has changed."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/28/0345238.shtml

Male Genital Mutilation — Death in South Africa

Thomas · 29 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Here's an article (albeit a little short on clarity) about male genital mutilation in South Africa. I begin to wonder if more males than females worldwide are damaged and/or killed by genital mutilation, and if we rarely hear about the mutilation of male genitals in the mainstream media because of the standard anti-male prejudice.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/29/016251.shtml

Air New Zealand and Quantas will not allow Men to Sit next to Children

Matt · 29 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Ban on men sitting next to children on Quantas flights and Air New Zealand- see story by Ainsley Thompson, Nov. 29, 2005. This is a case of discrimination gone mad!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/29/0353208.shtml

Corporal Punishment

Matt · 29 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

David Hill writes "I was just wanting to let this men's group know about the horrible corporal punishment that men are subjected to everyday around the world. Remember Singapore this horrible torturous humiliating practice is done only to men. It can not be done to a women for any reason even if she breaks the same law. Check out World Corporal Punishment Research, there are literally thousands of countries that practice caning and it is done to only one sex ours. Women can not have it happen to them even when they break the same law. It is a horrible humiliating practice they do it across the buttocks just like in school its only us that gets spanked. This is a very serious issue that should be addressed if women have a higher pain tolerance than men why is this horrible punishment done only to men? In Singapore in particular women are on equal footing as men but still this horrible practice is only for us as it also is. If women and men are equal then why is this horrible practice only reserved for one sex?"

Ed. note: It's not true to say only males are caned or spanked in official and non-official forms of punishment. It is true however to say the vast majority of people abused this way are men and boys and the public's stomach for it is much larger when it is males at the end of the cane. Same goes of course for all manner of punishment, including the death penalty.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/29/040208.shtml

RADAR Alert: Don't Let N.O.W.'s Voice Be The Only One Congress Hears On VAWA

Matt · 29 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

In late September, different bills to reauthorize VAWA for the next 5 years were passed by the House and the Senate. The House bill includes language stating that VAWA is gender neutral.

Separate from that, a bill to provide continuing funding for VAWA programs for the next year has now passed both the House and the Senate and was signed into law by the President on November 22nd. This one year continuing funding bill contains no mention that Congress intends VAWA to be gender neutral.

Click "Read more..." for more.

Don't Let N.O.W.'s Voice Be The Only One Congress Hears On VAWA
Meanwhile, the differing versions of the 5 year reauthorization bills must still be reconciled in conference committee before a final vote to make them law. N.O.W. recently called on their members to launch a massive telephone campaign urging Congress to form the conference committee when they reconvene in early December, and even though the current levels of funding provide women's advocacy programs nearly a billion dollars per year, N.O.W. is instructing their members to ask for still more programs.

It's a safe bet that N.O.W.'s members will not be asking Congress to make sure the bills allocate funding to programs that focus on male victims of domestic violence, or that the 835,000 men victimized per year should be included in the list of underserved populations. Only you can do that.

It's also a safe bet that N.O.W.'s members will not be objecting to provisions which deny new organizations funding unless they partner with currently-funded women's organizations. These provisions give organizations that are unsympathetic or outright hostile to male victims, a virtual lock on all funding.

And finally, it's a safe bet that N.O.W.'s members will not be demanding that Congress prohibit VAWA funds from being used for any political purpose.

Congress will be hearing from N.O.W.'s members. They need to hear from you too. If your own legislators are included in the list below, please call them. Otherwise, please call the Senate and House leadership.

Tell them:

> "Since HR2682, providing basic funding for VAWA, was signed into law on Nov. 22, it's far more important for the conference committee to fix what's wrong with VAWA than to rush it through. Please > make sure the final bill allocates funding to programs that focus on male victims of domestic violence, without requiring them to partner with the established male-hostile organizations. And please make sure the final bill explicitly prohibits any recipient of VAWA funds from using those funds for any political purpose whatsoever."

As always, be courteous and respectful when you call.

If Congress doesn't hear from you NOW, there's no reason for them not to do N.O.W.'s bidding. So don't put this off. Make the call today!

It's particularly important for legislators to hear from their own constituents. So if any Congressman or Senator in the list below represents your district, call your own legislator. If not, call the Congressional leadership, whose names are marked with an asterisk.

Jeff Sessions		202/224-4124	Alabama	Senate Judiciary Committee
Ted Stevens		202/224-3004	Alaska	Senate President Pro Tempore
Jeff Flake		202/225-2635	Arizona	House Judiciary SubCommittee on Crime
Jon Kyl		202/224-4521	Arizona	Senate Judiciary Committee
Dan Lungren		202/225-5716	California	House Judiciary SubCommittee on Crime
Ric Keller		202/225-2176	Florida	House Judiciary SubCommittee on Crime
Tom Feeney		202/225-2706	Florida	House Judiciary SubCommittee on Crime
Dennis Hastert		202/225-2976	Illinois	Speaker of the House
Mike Pence		202/225-3021	Indiana	House Judiciary SubCommittee on Crime
Charles E. Grassley		202/224-3744	Iowa	Senate Judiciary Committee
Sam Brownback		202/224-6521	Kansas	Senate Judiciary Committee
Mitch McConnell		202/224-2541	Kentucky	Senate Assistant Majority Leader
Roy Blunt		202/225-0197	Missouri	House Majority Whip
Howard Coble		202/225-3065	North Carolina	House Judiciary SubCommittee on Crime Chairman
Mike DeWine		202/224-2315	Ohio	Senate Judiciary Committee
Steve Chabot		202/225-2216	Ohio	House Judiciary SubCommittee on Crime
Tom Coburn		202/224-5754	Oklahoma	Senate Judiciary Committeea
Arlen Specter		202/224-4254	Pennsylvania	Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman
Lindsey Graham		202/224-5972	South Carolina	Senate Judiciary Committee
Bill Frist		202/224-3344	Tennessee	Senate Majority Leader
John Cornyn		202/224-2934	Texas	Senate Judiciary Committee
Louie Gohmert		202/225-3035	Texas	House Judiciary SubCommittee on Crime
Tom DeLay		202/225-5951	Texas	House Majority Leader
Orrin G. Hatch		202/224-5251	Utah	Senate Judiciary Committee

Randy Forbes		202/225-6365	Virginia	House Judiciary SubCommittee on Crime

++

Date of RADAR Release: November 28, 2005

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner: http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/29/1745200.shtml

Albany Teacher Gets Little More Than Time Served for Statutory Rape

Matt · 30 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

As a follow-up to this story, the perp is not only given little more than time served (she'll be out of jail by Christmas) but also, the judge in his sentencing said she was really the victim.

Excerpt:

"The 16-year-old in this case is a victim in the statutory sense only," Albany County Judge Stephen Herrick told Sandra Beth Geisel. "He was certainly not victimized by you in any other sense of the word."

Geisel pleaded guilty to one count of third-degree rape on Sept. 27 after admitting to having had sex with the boy in May. She was sentenced to six months in jail but is scheduled for release in several weeks, counting time already served. Though she also admitted to having sex with two 17-year-old students, no charges were filed in those incidents because the boys were of legal age.

[Judge] Herrick, in handing down his sentence, said the students "manipulated, used and sexually abused" Geisel.

This story was covered on Inside Edition (a TV news program) on 11/29/2005 (and is covered on their web site too, so have a look). In their report tonight, they mentioned that after the boy stopped seeing her the teacher started having sex with several other students, including three (i.e, all of them together) in the school's stadium.

Folks, I couldn't make this stuff up if I tried.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/30/0025251.shtml

Double Standard in Sex Offender Sentencing

Thomas · 30 November 2005 · Archived copy · Original

This is a somewhat confused article, but it also contains a few good points. It's good to see USA Today quote Richard Gartner, the psychologist in New York who authored Betrayed as Boys, "(regarding jail time) we definitely still have a double standard," with women receiving lesser jail terms than men.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/30/0643206.shtml

CPB (PBS) Ombudsman Issues Statement on "Breaking the Silence"

Matt · 1 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks to Mark R. for the word on this report, featured on the web site http://www.breakingthescience.org/.

The final paragraph of the CPB ombudsman's statement reads as follows:

PBS says it has received around 4,000 letters, calls and e-mails about Breaking the Silence. The National Organization for Women issued an action alert calling for mail supporting the program. Glenn Sacks used his radio show to promote mailings objecting to the broadcast. Jan McNamara the director of corporate communication at PBS says the program is now under official review. That's good. Along with the motives of its sponsor (The Mary Kay Ash Charitable Foundation), Breaking the Silence needs to be reviewed for accuracy, fairness and balance.

This is a big win! Thanks to Glenn Sacks and RADAR for their efforts to make these folks admit, finally, that they got it wrong. This also proves that public pressure to get to the actual truth in the face of lies and distortions can and does work. Inspirational stuff!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/11/30/2157242.shtml

10,000 years of Alimony?

Matt · 1 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "A $15M alimony judgement to be paid at $125 per month for 10,000 years? Anybody here from Iran? Does this alimony obligation continue as an obligation to this guy's successors to be paid to the ex-wife's successors?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/01/0151213.shtml

UK: CSA Must Return Money to Men

Matt · 1 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Nice to see some justice anyway.

The Child Support Agency has had to refund hundreds of thousands of pounds in maintenance payments to more than 3,000 men after DNA tests revealed that they had been wrongly named by mothers in paternity suits. One in six men who took a DNA test to challenge claims by women that they were the fathers of their children were cleared by the results, according to official figures disclosed by the agency.

Under CSA rules, men must start paying maintenance the moment they are named by mothers as the father of the child. They can challenge the ruling by asking for a DNA test but have to pay for it themselves.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/01/0158217.shtml

UK: More Overt Anti-Male (White in particular) Discrimination

Matt · 1 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Candidates for an unidentified UK police force were quite explicitly turned away because of their race and sex. The police force in question is being held to account, but one must ask why they feel they can behave this way with such impunity?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/01/0223241.shtml

Female Murderer/Rapist Released After Twelve Years in Jail

Matt · 1 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

A willing accomplice and participant, she is released after 12 years in prison while her husband rightly stays behind bars. Had she been a he, she would still be there as well.

Excerpt:

Months after prosecutors made the plea bargain, however, Bernardo's attorneys handed over homemade videotapes by the couple that indicated Homolka was a willing participant, drawing the ire of Canadians.

When she was released in July, a Superior Court judge in Montreal imposed several restrictions, which her lawyers argued violated the plea bargain agreement.

"The possibility that Ms. (Homolka) might reoffend one day cannot be completely eliminated," Brunton wrote. "However, her development over the last 12 years demonstrates, on a balance of probabilities, that this is unlikely to occur. She does not represent a real and imminent danger."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/01/1551229.shtml

Fast, At Home HIV Test Might Be Available Soon

Thomas · 2 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

A rapid, over-the-counter HIV test may be available soon. Some details can be read here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/02/0126234.shtml

More falses accusations

Thomas · 2 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

zerostress writes "This time, it is six men that had their lives broken and spent years in preventive detention following false accusations by a woman. Another good article on this affair can be found here.

In total, 13 of the initial 17 persons originally accused have been innocented."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/02/0149210.shtml

Wife 1.0

Thomas · 2 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "I know. I know. This is off the subject. But this website's posters need a good laugh once in a while."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/02/0153246.shtml

Birth Control and the Law of Unintended Consequences

Thomas · 2 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

I've gotta say, this creeps me out. If you've got a weak stomach, you might not want to read it.

This article takes a look at the feminization of the hornyhead turbot (no, I didn't make up that name), a fish off the coast of southern California. It seems that estrogen, both natural and artificial (from birth control), is entering males of this species through the food chain and causing them to develop female characteristics. Some of the males have actually grown small eggs in their testes.

The hornyhead turbot isn't consumed by humans. Scientists are now looking at seafood species, including the pacific sand dab -- one of my favorite fish when I was a poor grad student, to see if they contain concentrations of estrogen, which might pose a danger to humans.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/02/0255227.shtml

Sexual Discrimination Lawsuit

Matt · 2 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

William Joseph Lake writes "I currently have a $75,000,000.00 sex discrimination suit against the family court of my district. First District Circuit Court of Florida. States may have a 11th amendment immunity against law suits but it doesn't cover actions by individuals that deprive a group or class of their fundamental constitutional rights. Unlike the class action suit waged by the Indiana group that took a scatter gun approach we are targeting one really bad judge that has a proven record of favoring women. The same thing can be done in any state under USC 42-1883 discrimination under color of law. This is a list of of writings we are using. Some of them are from Australia and England but they use American data and research it also shows that Fathers all over the world are fighting for their children. I also have this on CD and will mail it to you if you wish. If you have any relevant information that we don't have please let me know. Thank you William J Lake, 3056 Safronia Shores Rd Navarre Florida 32566,"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/02/1559256.shtml

Backhanded Extortion?

Thomas · 3 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Just when you thought that the world couldn't get any loopier, this comes along.

Across much of the world, especially the developed world, women have gotten their wish to legally abort. Now that abortion is contributing to a catastrophic collapse of fertility rates, and resultant population aging and population collapse -- in Russia there are now more abortions than births and the country is losing nearly a million people a year, MPs in Italy are on the verge of paying women not to abort. (This isn't the first case of paying women to have children, but it's the first time I've seen it called what it often is -- paying women not to abort their children.)

As far as I know, it was zenpriest, who coined the term "prostimum". Interesting word.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/03/016247.shtml

Interesting Twist in a Rape Trial

Matt · 4 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Tumescent writes "Here is an interesting story about an unusual ruling in a rape case in Oregon where the tables were turned. The males in the case were on trial and were acquitted and the woman was then charged and convicted of filing a false police report. This is the second time this has occurred in Oregon recently and it may be show a trend in acknowledging that false rape accusations occur and should be dealt with."

Click "Read more..." for more.
"Of course, I'm all for harsh penalties for convicted rapists and I'm not suggesting otherwise, but given the seriousness of a rape accusation, false reporting of rape should be dealt with seriously as well, Of course, the males standing trial, if convicted, faced at least 7 years in prison and a lifetime labeled as a sex offender, but for filing a false rape report, her maximum penalty is 30 days in jail and a $1,250 fine. To access the story you might have to truthfully or untruthfully enter a date of birth and your gender."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/04/0246242.shtml

RADAR Alert: BTS Producers "Plainly Got it Wrong"

Matt · 5 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

This past Tuesday the Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB) Ombudsman released a 3-page report that slammed Breaking the Silence.

The CPB report highlighted RADAR's November 14 letter to chairman Fred Upton, which called on the House Subcommittee on Telecommunications to investigate the documentary's widespread bias. The RADAR letter was co-signed by more than a dozen organizations representing families and fathers.

Click "Read more..." for more.

BTS Producers “Plainly Got it Wrong”
CPB didn't pull any punches in its criticism of BTS - here's just a sampler:

1. Regarding the claim that parental alienation syndrome is junk science: “it appears that Lasseur/Tatge plainly got it wrong.”
2. “... there is no hint of balance in Breaking the Silence. The father's point of view is ignored.”
3. “The producers apparently do not subscribe to the idea that an argument can be more convincing by giving the other side a fair presentation.”
4. “But this broadcast is so slanted as to raise suspicions that either the family courts of America have gone crazy or there must be another side to the story.”
5. “The Mary Kay Ash Foundation is providing a stipend so that every battered women's organization in the country can put on private screenings of this film for their local judges and legislators.”
6. “Along with the motives of its sponsor (The Mary Kay Ash Charitable Foundation), Breaking the Silence needs to be reviewed for accuracy, fairness, and balance.”

Basically, CPB supported everything that RADAR has been claiming all along. The full report can be seen here: http://www.cpb.org/ombudsmen/051129bode.html

PBS is expected to finish its 30-day review of Breaking the Silence this coming Thursday, December 8. Last week RADAR sent a letter to PBS head Pat Mitchell asking her to retract BTS and to air a documentary that focuses on the plight of abused children and the anguish of fathers who are prevented by the courts from protecting their children: [http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/RADAR_letter_to_Upton.pdf]

Now, PBS needs to hear from all the men and women who deplore the bias of Breaking the Silence, and ask PBS to produce a second documentary that gives the fathers' perspective.

So please contact Pat Mitchell with this message:

“Last week the Corporation for Public Broadcasting said Breaking the Silence is slanted and inflammatory. PBS should IMMEDIATELY retract Breaking the Silence.

Then PBS should produce and broadcast a documentary highlighting the plight of children endangered by a court system that prevents their fathers from protecting them."

Here's how to contact Pat Mitchell:

E-mail:	pmitchell@pbs.org
Telephone:	1-703-739-5000
Fax:	1-703-739-5777

Do this today. We can't let up when we're so close to victory.

++

Date of RADAR Release: December 4, 2005

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner: http://www.mediaradar.org.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/05/0512259.shtml

Where Are the Boys?

Matt · 5 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Tumescent writes "According to this story boys and men are losing the battle. This has been part of the feminists' plan-- to discourage and discriminate against boys and men in education to the point that they simply drop out. Then blame is placed on the boys themselves."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/05/0515250.shtml

Twisted Statistics Against Fathers

Matt · 5 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "
This is very interesting because the people whose statistical findings were twisted in a PBS program called "Breaking the Silence," detail how their research was totally twisted. The progress of the Glenn Sacks campaign against the "Breaking the Silence" PBS showing can be found on his website). "Breaking the Silence" gave the impression that only men abuse children and all men who try to get custody of their children in divorce proceedings are child abusers.

In this article, the research organization gives their actual research findings which everyone here should find heartening."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/05/0519238.shtml

Nokia Capitalizes on Misandry

Matt · 6 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

MANN admins received a note from a reader who corresponded with Nokia customer service over a TV ad they are airing that features a Nokia user gloating merrily over how she uses her phone to exorcise ex-boyfriends from her life. Needless to say, the same kind of ad is unlikely ever to appear with the sexes revesed. So far Nokia hasn't acknowledged the capitalization off of misandry that this ad represents. In fact, it appears as if this ad or a tale very much like it is prominenetly featured on Nokia's website, here, as "Jill's story"-- have a look.

Alas this is just one of many instances of ads made by companies that seek to make appeals to misandry (either directly or indirectly) in an effort to sell products and services. And, I know many of us here who visit MANN are sick to death of it. So I encourage MANN readers to write pointed, respectful, but honest faxes and emails (communication.corp@nokia.com) regarding Nokia's attempt to capitalize off of anti-male sentiment in society. Also mentioning how you feel about purchasing their products and services will assuredly help - big corporations think with their wallets since profit seems to be all they are concerned with. Their contact page is found here.

Click "Read more..." for the reader's letter, response, and counter-response. And, stay tuned for updates!Original letter to Nokia:

Date: December 6, 2005

To: William Plummer

VP External Affairs

Nokia Corporate Communications, Americas

6000 Connection Drive

IRVING, TX 75039

Tel +1 972 894 4573

Fax +1 972 894 4706

Email: communication.corp@nokia.com

Dear Mr.Plummer:

Nokia currently is running in heavy rotation a television advertisement in which a female describes with tremendous enthusiasm and glee how she "gets rid" of her former boyfriend -- "David" -- including erasing his name from her Nokia cell phone contact list. At the conclusion, she invokes his name as if she never knew him and asks, "David Who?"...and laughs. Tag line -- Buy more Nokia phones (so you can have fun getting rid of men like this too!)

The attitude portrayed and supported by Nokia in this spot truly MEAN SPIRITED and supports the offensive societal bias that male bashing is perfectly acceptable, desirable, and even fun. The audience knows nothing about who David is, what he did right or wrong in this situation, or why we should side with this female in her joyous elimination of him from her life. What, perhaps, was David's side of this story?

Just Consider this....

How would this advertisement play if you REVERSED THE ROLES -- i.e., a male describing with great glee his technique for "getting rid" of a former girlfriend, then smiling and laughing as if this were attractive behavior.

I challenge you, Nokia, to produce and broadcast the exact same "David Who?" spot, except REVERSING the gender casting and editing the script to a male perspective, e.g. "Susan Who?" [laugh-laugh!]. Would that have the same appeal and help you sell more phones?

What is most disappointing too is your TIMING for the release of this spot. This is Christmas...a time for people to come together and love one another...not to take pride and pleasure in disconnecting from people they previously cared about. "Bah Humbug to THAT spirit!", says Nokia in this advertisement of yours.

We give you NEGATIVE POINTS, Nokia, for VERY BAD TASTE, and REALLY POOR TIMING with this "David Who?" campaign.

Consider taking corrective measures in your advertising.

Respectfully,

John Speer
President

Media III Partners

Palm Valley, TX

CommitteeAssociates@Yahoo.com

Nokia's reply:

Hi Mr. Speer-

Thank you for your comments - however, this commercial was not written or scripted - this is an actual consumer's story of how she uses her Nokia phone.

While this may not be the method that every person may use while dealing with a breakup - this is how she deals with it - and is a story that illustrates the myriad of unique ways that individuals use their Nokia phones.

While your proposal is certainly interesting, it would not be in the spirit of our current campaign which uses real people (not actors) telling their own stories.

Keith Nowak

Nokia

Reader's reply:

Date: December 6, 2005

To:

Keith Nowak

Nokia Corporate Communications, Americas

6000 Connection Drive

Irving, TX 75039

Tel +1 972 894 4573

Fax +1 972 894 4706

Email: communication.corp@nokia.com

Dear Mr. Nowak,

First of all, I am impressed that Nokia would respond to my email in such a timely fashion. Your response was in hours, not days. Thank you! That is appreciated. Nokia does have its ears open.

Secondly, I appreciate now that your enactment of the "David Who?" spot was just a testimonial from a real customer. I am a Nokia phone owner and a Nokia customer of many years myself.

QUESTION: May I write Nokia a testimonial as to how I use my Nokia phone and then have my testimonial made into a commercial too?

I have a testimonial which might present the "male perspective" as a balance to the female perspective you are funding and promoting with the "David Who?" spot.

By way of background, I'm a former creative executive / copywriter from the largest ad agency in the Southwest (worked on American Airlines account and others). I could send you something developed and ready for production, if you feel a corporate responsibility towards gender fairness in your public relations and dealings with existing and future customers.

SUGGESTION: If the controversial attitude and approach promulgated by the woman in the "David Who?" spot are truly just her own and do not represent the corporate position or opinions of Nokia, perhaps some DISCLAIMER to that effect would be in order, either in a voice tag or a written disclaimer on screen.

Merely by your funding and promoting this anti-male point of view in a broad based media campaign, others naturally ASSUME this customer's male bashing dialogue is Nokia's brain child or an attitude Nokia supports with considerable corporate resources devoted to its national promotion.

And I must ask you as a male, Mr. Nowak...do you smile with this woman when she gloats and laughs about her various ways of ridding her life of her boyfriend, David? Just from a basic position of general appeal (or lack thereof) and beyond all considerations of gender issues, the "David Who?" spot comes across as unkind, rather arrogant, and purposely disrespectful. It "smacks" of emotional abandonment or even abuse (we don't know the full story). Snubbing those you once loved is not particularly adult-like or kind behavior.

Did you test market this spot before airing it? I'd love to see the test group results and composition of your focus group. Every time I see the "David Who?" spot, it makes me reluctant to chance dating or committing to a woman who might act like this -- and I've had unpleasant experiences with several like her. Don't we have enough problems with a highly disposable-minded society, distrust between the sexes, divorce rates that are out of control, and a general lack of committment in America already?

I offer this as constructive criticism for improvement as a marketing professional with a background in consumer research.

Best Wishes,

John Speer

Media III Partners

Palm Valley, TX

CommitteeAssociates@Yahoo.com

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/06/202225.shtml

Woman Gets Three Years For False Accusation

Matt · 7 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

RandomMan writes "Finally, a bit of justice. It appears that a woman has received a relatively harsh prison sentence for perjury for falsely accusing her ex of rape to "get back at him". Story here. Of course another woman had to come forward to get the man out of 8 months of wrongful detention, but progress is progress."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/07/0229221.shtml

UN Election Chief Fired for Sexual Harassment

Matt · 7 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Well I didn't think this was possible-- a female sexual harrasser, and a sort of queen harasser at that! Wait, it must be a conspiracy to get rid of her... yeah, that's it. I mean, women can't sexually harass anyone, can they? It's just not possible... or is it?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/07/042248.shtml

Courts Go Easy on Women Who Commit Rape

Thomas · 7 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

The Courier-Mail carries this article on how "COURTS across the US are cracking down on women, especially teachers, who have sex with underage boys." Word is getting out that women are not the persecuted saints that feminists claim they are. I've often seen it stated that when adult women and boys have sex, the boys want it. Well... that is the nature of statutory rape -- an adult with a willing child or adolescent who, according to the law, can't give informed consent. This is the first time that I've seen it unequivocally pointed out that in cases of statutory rape of girls by men, the girl also wants it, though, according to law, she is too young to give informed consent.

The article also points out "...the courts are reluctant to punish women as harshly as men convicted of similar crimes. Whereas male abusers of girls routinely receive sentences of 15 to 20 years, women often avoid jail." The fact is sickening, but at least the word is getting out. It's incredible that these people still imagine that they're oppressed.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/07/1458220.shtml

Why Males Fail in School

Thomas · 7 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

There've been a few articles recently about males falling farther behind females in school. Michael Gurian is often cited as an expert on the subject, but he seems to have little understanding of why males are failing. Here's an article in the National Review Online by Kate O'Beirne, who lays the blame where it belongs -- on the feminist take over of the academy.

Until the root cause of the crisis is recognized and eliminated, attempts to address the problem will amount to nothing more than cosmetics that make the powers-that-be feel good about themselves.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/07/1610223.shtml

"Women-Only" Bank? Legal in Germany?

Matt · 8 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "Doesn't Germany have regulations requiring certain percentages of women and men employees? Or are the regulations only applied, like in the U.S., when necessary to increase female employment?"

Excerpt:

Frauenbank's customers are typically university-educated women between 30 and 55.

There is also "a handful" of male clients. "We are women friendly, but that does not mean that we are hostile to men," Miss Hastreiter said.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/08/0148225.shtml

Advocates for Boys Battle Back

Matt · 8 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Article here:

Excerpt:

Such talk gets gender warriors on the other side loading their muskets.

"When girls were thought to be hurting in schools, the approach was to change the schools," said boys advocate Manthey. "When it's boys who are in trouble, people say, `Change the boy.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/08/0153217.shtml

Equality is grand 'til it involves jail sentences

Matt · 9 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

bandersnatch writes "From The Independent, Baroness Hale of Richmond will point to the "disproportionate increase" in the numbers of women and teenage girls in custody and call for judges to consider alternative community sentences for female offenders. Delivering the Longford Lecture, sponsored by The Independent, Lady Hale, the only female law lord, will denounce "some very unequal treatment" faced by women and girls who appear before the courts. "A male-ordered world has applied to them its perceptions of the appropriate treatment for male offenders," she will say. More and more in recent years, women and girls have been punished in the same way as men and boys. There seems to be less and less understanding of the ways in which their lives are very different from men's." -- Sorry, ladies -- can't have it both ways! You made your bed, now go lie in it."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/08/2228249.shtml

"After Innocence" - Film About the Wrongfully Convicted

Matt · 9 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Please check this film out and tell all -- a must-see for everyone. Thank you for your time GOD BLESS."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/08/2233206.shtml

Mother chops baby's leg off with an axe

Matt · 9 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Tirryb writes "News.com.au reports here that a mother chopped her own 20 month old son's leg off with an axe. Although she's been charged with attempted murder and other minor charges, she's getting help of course (diagnosis rather than punishment). Quote: "...court heard police had shown her great compassion since the attack... The court was told the mother would be taken to the Thomas Embling secure hospital rather than be kept in prison while on remand."

And, the father is now having to fight for custody with her parents... Where is the justice in this world..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/08/2236240.shtml

Boys' Education — Finally a Straight Article

Thomas · 9 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

This editorial in USA Today lays it on the line. There's no excess of comments about how we also need to attend to girls. It focusses on the plight of boys. Damn! And it mentions the promise of single sex schools — one of the blessings of my life (Fairfield College Preparatory School in Fairfield, Connecticut).

I'm into financial investment, in part because I want to retire someday, but fertility rate collapse is going to flail society's pot, crank up the heat, and dump in a gallon of Tobasco. At least I know not to invest in feminism. The rate at which it's being debunked today is surprising even me.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/09/0553255.shtml

Canadian Men - 0.014% as Valuable as Canadian Women

Matt · 10 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Random Man writes "On the recent anniversary of the killing of 14 fellow students (the dead were female) by a deranged person named Marc Lepine in Montreal, (he also wounded men, who are not honoured at all), all government flags in Canada flew at half mast to honour victims of violence against women. Of course, that same courtesy has only recently been extended to the 100,000 men who died in the world wars, Korea and peacekeeping missions on our "Rememberance Day" on November 11th, when only the flag over the parliament buildings was lowered in honour of the men who died defending our freedom, and then only in response to harsh public criticism of the incredible disrespect Canada's so-called Heritage Department was showing veterans and those killed in action.

It's nice to know where one stands on a quantitative basis. Some details here and here and the FINALLY revised flag-lowering policy that covers Rememberance Day here.

Still, we're now 0.014% as valuable as women. At least it's an improvement from a millionth of that a few years back"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/10/0025248.shtml

"Off The Chain": A Disgusting Anti-male Movie

Matt · 10 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original mens_issues writes "I received the following post at Men's Issues Online regarding a misandric movie called "Off The Chain.""

Click "Read more..." for more.
"As a teacher in the public schools, I am concerned about the messages boys and girls are getting from current television programs and movies. It has become a national pastime to bash men and perpetuate negative stereotypes of males. How can young men grow into productive adults when we are being bombarded with this kind of thing? A notable case in point is the film "Off The Chain." I was appalled by the totally offensive content. It holds men up to constant ridicule (disguised as comedy), and offers joke after joke about male amputation. Pardon me, but I fail to see the humor in any of it.

It is based on a story that would make any self-respecting male cringe (a man is so lazy and no-account that his wife decides to liberate herself by killing him). What ever happened to divorce? Instead of this or anything that remotely resembles a sane solution to her problems, she tries repeatedly to murder him.

If that isn't reason enough to complain, the largely female audience delighted in the numerous references to male amputation and male bashing. It was so offensive, I nearly walked out. Against my better, judgment though, I white-knuckled it to the bitter end; thinking somehow the film would redeem itself. Believe me when I say it didn't. Virtually every man in the movie was either stupid, lazy or both. In the final scene, Joe Everege (I guess the name is supposed to mean Average Joe, as though men are typically dumb and lazy), begs the judge to go easy on his wife so they can get back together.

If I was married to someone that tried to kill me a half dozen times, I would want her locked up for good. Not this guy, he tells the judge that the whole thing is his fault and pleads to get his wife back! Personally, "Off The Chain" is just another film in a long line of movies that makes male bashing an acceptable form of entertainment. This is exactly the kind of thing that is eroding our society.

You can go to http://www.beckjacobs.com and petition the releasing of this movie. Please, let's stand together and get this off the shelf before it even hits the shelf. Lets not corrode the minds of our youth to portrayals of men like this.

[There is a message board at the site with some defensive responses at: http://beckjacobs.com/sitebuilder/viewtopic.php?t= 2]"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/10/0031221.shtml

Lafave must stand trial - agreement rejected!

Matt · 10 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

quetzal writes "As you may recall, Debra Lafave was the woman arrested for sexual battery in Florida a few months ago. She then reached an agreement with the victim's family such that she would serve no jail time. The agreement has now been nullified by a judge, and it appears she will stand trial for the Marion County charges (and possibly the Hillsborough County charges)!!

Here it is."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/10/0035223.shtml

Are 'Ubersexuals' Replacing 'Metrosexuals'?

Matt · 10 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Emanslave writes "It seems like our beloved pop culture wants to phase out "metrosexuals" in favor of "ubersexuals", the men who combine masculine traits and feminine traits and are socially aware. This AOL-WebMD article explains how men are redefining manhood and masculinity for themselves. I can tell you this, having the best of both worlds is one thing, but selfishly having a little for yourself is another.
Article here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/10/0034208.shtml

Another Murdered Child, Another Man in Debtor's Prison

Matt · 10 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

RandomMan writes "Just reading Men's News Daily, and noticed these pieces. The continuous stream of these articles about poor, oppressed child murderers is just depressing. Meanwhile, men are sent to debtor's prison for not paying and paying and paying when they don't have the means. It makes it hard to look an average woman in the eye sometimes, even though I know that most of them would share our revulsion at this nonsense."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/10/0038230.shtml

Blame Men for Global Warming

Matt · 11 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Fidelbogen writes "Men, so they say, are larger contributors to global greenhouse gassing. Personally, I think that trying to quantify something like this (with its myriad intangibles and ambiguities) is like measuring a gaseous substance with a rubber band. BUT..... notice the call to "integrate gender sensitivity into all mechanisms, policies and measures, and tools and guidelines within the climate debate."
This is the kind of stuff that makes feminism profoundly sinister... link here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/10/2121213.shtml

Indian Feminist Defends Court-martialed Woman

Matt · 11 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "A woman flying officer in the Indian Air Force - Anjali Gupta was court-martialed and dismissed from service for fudging travel bills and indiscipline. After the court-martial procedeeings began, Anjali accused her male seniors of sexual harassment. She claimed she was victimised for standing up to their behaviour. After a long drawn enquiry, charges against her were proved, charges of sexual harassment were dismissed. Now a feminist lawyer comes forward to defend Anjali saying she was punished because she dared to enter a male bastion!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/10/2124232.shtml

Insight from TV-land

Thomas · 11 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Though this article has a rather stupid title and is about television (which means little to me), I found that it contains a few good insights.

As a result of thousands of interviews with young men, to determine what they want in television, Spike TV "found that men responded not only to brave and extremely competent leads but to a menagerie of characters with strikingly antisocial tendencies".

Also, the director of the Center for the Study of Popular Television at Syracuse University, Robert Thompson, states that the enemy of the contemporary male is "the legal, cultural and social infrastructure of the nation itself."

Ya think?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/11/0158209.shtml

RADAR Alert: It's Time for the Inspector General to Investigate What Went Wrong at PBS

Matt · 12 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

On December 2nd, the Public Broadcasting Service Ombudsman Michael Getler issued his report on Breaking the Silence: Children's Stories [http://www.pbs.org/ombudsman].
Getler criticized the program, saying:

- "there was no recognition of opposing views on this program."
- "I thought this particular program had almost no balance, and went too far, turning it, at least in my mind, into more of an advocacy, or point-of-view, presentation."
- "the totality of the presentation came across as quite tilted"

Click "Read more..." for more.

It's Time for the Inspector General to Investigate What Went Wrong at PBS

This criticism came hard on the heels of the report by the Corporation for Public Broadcasting Ombudsman, Ken Bode [http://www.cpb.org/ombudsmen/051129bode.html]. Bode described the program as "slanted", said "there is no hint of balance in Breaking the Silence", and concluded that "Breaking the Silence needs to be reviewed for accuracy, fairness, and balance."

PBS and their affiliates have systems in place to assure adherence to the PBS Editorial Standards and Practices. Given the unanimity of both the PBS and the CPB ombudsmen on how seriously flawed this program was, it's clear that this program represents a massive system failure.

So RADAR is requesting that CPB's Inspector General, Ken Konz, conduct an investigation of Breaking the Silence: Children's Stories and make specific recommendations for how to make sure a system failure like this one doesn't happen again. A copy of the letter to Inspector General Konz can be read at http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/RADAR_letterToCPB_InspectorGeneral.pdf.

Please call or fax CPB's Inspector General with the message:

“Both the PBS and the CPB ombudsmen have stated that Breaking the Silence: Children's Stories lacked any balance and ignored the existence of any alternative views. The CPB ombudsman called for Breaking the Silence to be reviewed for accuracy, fairness, and balance. Please conduct such a review and recommend changes to guarantee that future programs comply with the US Congressional mandate to assure ‘strict adherence to objectivity and balance in all programs or series of programs of a controversial nature.’”

Here's the contact information:

Ken Konz, CPB Inspector General
Telephone:	1-202-879-9600

Fax:	1-202-879-9700

Don't put it off. Call today!

Date of RADAR Release: December 11, 2005

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner: http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/12/1122235.shtml

BiscuitQueen Takes the Helm

Thomas · 13 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Posters here may be familiar with BiscuitQueen, aka JenK, a highly intelligent and delightful woman, who is becoming an increasing force in the men's rights movement. She has recently taken over as editor of The Male Voice, e-newsletter of the National Coalition of Free Men, Greater New York chapter.

I won't reprint the entire publication (her first as editor), though I'll separately post an article contained therein by Edward M. Stephens, M.D., President of NCFM, GNY and Chair, Committee on Men's Issues, The Psychiatric Society of Westchester (NY), a district branch of The American Psychiatric Association.

The newsletter contains several additional items, including a fine interview with Tom Ellis, groundbreaking author of "The Rantings of a Single Male: Losing Patience with Feminism, Political Correctness... and Basically Everything."

I have to say, BQ/JenK has done a superb job with her first NCFM newsletter. It's a blessing to have her as a player in our civil rights movement.

Members of NCFM can subscribe to the newsletter at http://www.themalevoice.org/

Thanks, BQ, for all your great work!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/13/0437216.shtml

Male Suicide: From the Westchester Psychiatrist

Thomas · 13 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

The following is an article written by Edward M. Stephens, M.D., Chair, Committee on Men's Issues, The Psychiatric Society of Westchester (a district branch of The American Psychiatric Association [APA]) and President, NCFM, Greater New York Chapter (NCFM, GNY). The article, published in The Westchester Psychiatrist,, was also published in The Male Voice, e-newsletter of NCFM, GNY.

The piece has great value in and of itself, but it's also good to see that this information is being brought forth by The Psychiatric Society of Westchester's Committee on Men's Issues, founded by Dr. Stephens and the first-ever such committee (men's issues) within a district branch of the APA.

To view the article, click "Read More"WHERE HAVE ALL THE OLD MEN GONE?

GONE TO GRAVEYARDS EVERYWHERE

(with a nod to Paul Simon)

(originally published in The Westchester Psychiatrist and reproduced with permission)

by Edward M. Stephens, M.D.

Chair, Committee on Men's Issues

The Psychiatric Society of Westchester

(a district branch of The American Psychiatric Association)

- and -

President, NCFM, Greater New York Chapter

Why are males killing themselves at an alarming rate? Suicide, in every age group, is higher for males than females with a peak ratio of 8 to 1 in the over 65 category.

In my earlier newsletter message, "The Death of John -- Age 16 -- Suicide," I paid tribute to an adolescent who simply needed counseling. He didn't get it. He had some reverses in school and was upset over the fighting between his mother and father. His reported experience, in his suicide note, was that he was “tired of life.”

In the week before he shot himself, he was acting up in class and offered his apologies to his teacher in the suicide note. If only someone had seen his depression instead of seeing him as an obstreperous boy, he would still be alive.

As physicians, we have to ask ourselves about our awareness of depression in males with such alarming rates of suicide and clear categories of risk. Are we routinely screening our male patients for depression? Do we recognize the different ways depression shows up in men and boys as opposed to women and girls? Do we have referral resources for distressed boys and men?

For many years, we have known that there are genetic links to depression that are not gender referenced. If depression occurs in first degree relatives, it can usually be traced back through the family history with other markers such as alcoholism, suicide, antisocial behavior and mental illness. The genetic predisposition for depression is equally divided between the genders.

After a positive history for depression and its equivalents in a patient and other family members, our index of suspicion about the seriousness of the case in front of us should rise appreciably. What we are more than likely looking at is a depression that is potentially life threatening; even if it is only presenting as lowered energy, sleep disturbance, increased use of alcohol or back pain.

We probably all remember the axiom, “You don’t diagnose what you don’t know.” One of my suspicions in regard to the low rate of diagnosis and treatment of depression in men is that we have been brainwashed out of seeing depression as a disorder of men. Every drug ad that comes through my office has a woman prominently displayed on the material, and the commonly held and promoted wisdom is that women become depressed twice as often as men. We don’t diagnose what we don’t know or don’t suspect.

I cornered a drug rep and asked point blank about this preponderance of advertising about depression in women. Her response: “I guess that’s where the manufacturers feel the market share is.” That may be so, but we are not dealing with market share in our offices.

In all fairness, while I was in training, the ideal control patient was an attractive, intelligent young woman with a touch of depression, dependency and awe of her brilliant young male doctor. We certainly didn’t want angry, depressed men with a potential for acting out aggressively as our control case. In effect, we were institutionalizing our prejudice against the recognition of depression in men in our own psychiatric training.

After recalling the death by suicide of 16-year-old John, the son of my patient, I am glad to have intervened effectively in the case of a patient of mine, John, age 54. In the latter situation, realizing that he was suicidally depressed, I was determined not just to continue with antidepressants and a prayer. I called his wife and told her to get his sons, in their late twenties, to descend on him and take him to the hospital until he was on the mend.

Hospitalization worked. Stronger doses of antidepressants, mood stabilizers and some hard-hitting bedtime sedation turned him away from the sure path of suicide. Two years and at least two grandchildren later, his is a happy senior who did not leave the devastating legacy of his own self-inflicted death to his boys.

While my emphasis has been on recognition of depression in men and boys, it is important to keep in mind that, despite popular belief, there is a one third higher cancer rate in men than in women. Boys in school and men in the workplace and life place are having a tougher time than is known without the same sense of sympathy and support that is being extended to girls and women. Any perusal of services for women, across a broad spectrum of difficulties, nets a long list of resources while the same inquiry for services for men may come up with a zero.

The Committee on Men's Issues of The Westchester Psychiatric Society is on a consciousness-raising mission about boys' and men's needs in both the medical and psychiatric realms. The Committee encourages participation of both male and female physicians and leaders from the community. Meetings regularly have general physicians, social workers, psychologists and school personnel who have seen the need first hand and are searching for ways to make a difference.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/13/058242.shtml

Boy was no Victim, but Girl was

Matt · 13 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Off-linked from the CNN home page (as of this posting), are two stories:

Man faces 50 years for sex with bride, 14

and

Wife: Child groom is 'no victim': Pregnant woman says she prefers older men

Need I say more?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/13/1912220.shtml

The Feminist Agenda (NZ)

Matt · 13 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Baniadam writes "The feminist agenda three decades on (10 Dec 2005)

Article describing the history of "Radical Feminism" and its main goal to destroy the "nuclear family". It has quotes and reference to the current polices in New Zealand. Very interesting if you're from Oceania region.

Here are a two excerpts:

"The effect of the DPB was to pay women to separate from their husbands and partners. It paid them more money to have more children, and it didn't matter how many different fathers were involved. In fact, it was not even necessary for the woman to name a father on a child's birth certificate."

"Further, as the DPB has caused parenting and inheritance lines to become increasingly blurred, men have been prevented from using modern DNA technology to establish paternity - unless the mother agrees."
"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/13/1913204.shtml

Men Are Chellenged to Speak About Feminism

Matt · 13 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Liberty Unh writes "
In the misandrist article Let's hear from the boys on feminism, Sushi Das challenges us to speak about feminism:

> Men need to discuss whether their behaviour and demands need reform. Their cowardly opting out of discussions that relate to feminism is apparent in their silence... Where are men's voices? I challenge men to speak out. Show you understand these issues are important to everybody, not just women. Let's hear what you've got to say.

Let's send letters (letters @ theage.com.au) to The Age editor showing that we indeed have an opinion on gender issues."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/13/1915246.shtml

High School Female on Male "Domestic" Violence High

Matt · 13 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "Surprise! Surprise! In Florida, high school males are reporting more physical violence against them by their girlfriends than the girls are reporting against them by their boyfriends. Notice that in the statistic, they changed "girlfriends" to "significant others.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/13/1916241.shtml

New MANN Server and New Wiki Address

Scott · 15 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Some major changes will be underway at Mensactivism.org in coming months. I've finally decided to buy a dedicated server and have it hosted at a professional internet co-location site. You can see pictures of the old and new server as well as some more background info here. I have just completed migrating the Mensactivism.org Wiki to the new server. As a result, the URL (web address) of the site has changed. It no longer has "3333" in the address and can now be found at http://wiki.mensactivism.org. Enjoy!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/15/0217246.shtml

More Men Cleared of False Rape Convictions

Matt · 15 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Fidelbogen writes "Verrrrrrry interesting case! Several men exonerated from bogus rape raps due to old DNA samples inserted in their files and rediscovered years later.

Is it my imagination, or are such stories on an accelerating growth curve? Well it's bound to reach critical mass, and THEN..... mass realization in the mass media and in the mass consciousness."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/15/1727203.shtml

MANN Reader Likens Misandry to Racism

Matt · 17 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

I HATE BLACK PEOPLE

By George Rolph

If I said, "I hate black people!" How would you react?

Stop and think very carefully about that sentence. Does it make any sense to you at all? Can it ever be justified? Can it ever be anything other than just a sign of my own mental illness?

Is there a single instance, circumstance or situation in anyone's life, in which it is possible to lump together a whole race of people and say, "I hate them all." What if I was witness to the gang rape and murder of my wife, children and mother by a whole village full of black men? Would that be enough reason to hate the whole race?

Click "Read more..." for the rest.

I HATE BLACK PEOPLE

By George Rolph
Continued from main entry...

Should I also hate the black guy who dived into the river and saved my neighbor's son? How about the black woman who donated her heart to my sick father and gave him life? Perhaps I should include the black fireman who carried my friend from the burning house, or the black nurse who thought quickly and saved my own life when I was choking to death in a restaurant one night? They are part of the black race, should I hate them for what the sickos in the village did?

Assuming that the person reading this is sane, the answer has to be a resounding, "NO!"

All of the sane people reading this know, just as I know, how stupid, sick and twisted racism really is. Yet many of the people reading this are also racist.

In reality, there are only two races on earth: male and female. The rest are just males or females with differing degrees of sunburn. Just as with men and women, there are cultural differences between races and these may, at times, produce tensions, but I want to ignore those differences for the purposes of this article and focus instead on the race issue in its own right. In order to do that, and to address an issue that is too often ignored in this context, I am going to ask a fundamental question of women (and some men) in general. That question is a very simple one:

Do you realise how many of your gender are filled to the brim with sick, disgusting, twisted and crazy race hate?

If I said, "I hate men!", how would you react?

Stop and think very carefully about that question. Does it make any sense to you at all? Can it ever be justified? Can it ever be anything other than just a sign of my own mental illness?

When most of us think about racists we think of extreme right wing groups, but not all racists give the appearance of Nazis. There are left wing racists too and when it comes to hating men, most of the perpetrators are left wingers. Yet these poor, deluded and sick people, are as infected with Nazism as any Jew- or black-hating fascist.

The problem with hypocrisy is we often do not realise we are hypocrites and we often do not want to know that we are. It's easier to kill the cause of our discomfort and justify that killing, than it is to admit it is us that need the help, not them. Therefore, it is easy to be Oh-so-PC about the kind of racism that we understand (white versus black or vice versa) but difficult to understand that we are soaked in the same racism we condemn in others. Because of this, we can all observe the left wing, radical feminists -- whether male or female -- sitting in the TV studio and decrying the latest racist attack by "right wing thugs" while being sublimely stupid to their own racism when, seconds later, they call all men "pigs" or, "stupid" or, "rapists" or, "wife beaters" or.., ad infinitum. These foolish and damaged people crop up in the press with depressing regularity also. In fact, so prevalent are they, that it is possible to find them anywhere. From the classroom to the boardroom. From the social worker to the doctor. From the plumber to the politician.

Authors, publishers, TV and film actresses and actors, sportsmen and -women, journalists, TV presenters and on and on. All soaked in hate for the male gender and all being encouraged in that hate by a political group making lots of money and pursuing political power on the back of it.

Just as it is insane for the traditional racist to say, "I hate blacks and it is their fault I hate them," so it is insane for radical feminists, and those who support them, to say, "I hate men and it's their fault I hate them."

Hate breeds hate. If you do not believe that, try walking up to a stranger in your local bar and insulting them. 90% of the people you do that too will call you on it. Yet, men have been astonishingly patient for four and a half decades during which they, as a race, have endured a staggering degree of insult.

For forty five years, radical feminists have been branding all men as -- well, you can add any insult you like at the end of that sentence. Many of these racist men and women are doing it unconsciously. They have no idea of the depth their racial hatred for men has reached or, just how sick they have become because of it. Yet most of them would react in horror at the opening sentence of this article. Oblivious to their colossal hypocrisy.

Of course, this is the poison that infects those who advocate gender politics in our society. Those who pour this racist poison into the hearts and minds of our daughters and our sons, do so in the knowledge that most people do not think about man-hating as racism at all. Because of this, they have a social cover for their activities and can even make those activities sound reasonable and logical. Lift the cover, as this article is attempting to do, and what you find is the same thing you find when you lift a stone. It's a dark world inhabited by dangerous creatures.

A serpent can be a beautiful animal to look at but its bite can kill you nevertheless. Don't be fooled by good looks! What lurks inside these racists can destroy the lives of everyone they come into contact with.

Perhaps it is time that the hunted became the hunters? Perhaps it is time we all spent some energy lifting up the social rocks these vermin hide under and exposing the occupants to the light? How to do just that will be the topic of my next article. In the meantime, you could do worse than start your education here:
http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/entertainment/tv_and_radio/4158624.stm
and then contrast the racist views expressed by Anna Ford, Sarah Montague and Joan Bakewell (All female broadcasters in Britain) with the more reasonable and considered approach taken by the non-racist, (unatrributed) at this link: http://www.newsandstar.co.uk/opinion/viewarticle.aspx?id=275369

Finally, take a look at this link to see the reactions of some men to the attacks made against feminist dissenters:
http://www.mensactivism.org/articles/05/08/30/1257247.shtml

George Rolph

December 2005

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/17/017202.shtml

MSN, Men, Women, and Chores

Matt · 17 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

This was a pleasant surprise-- and funny, too. Excerpt:

I watched in utter disbelief. She laid them all out flat on the bed, and began giving me a little tutorial on the proper method of folding towels, which involved some form of terry-cloth origami. Instead of folding in successive halves, she wanted one-third of the towel to be folded in from either side. I thought this was ridiculous, but nowhere near as ridiculous as the idea of unfolding already-folded towels -- and thereby sending a signal to your newlywed husband that it is more important that a chore be done a certain way than it is for him to actually do it.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/17/0413221.shtml

Excellent Column on Men and Society in Wall Street Journal

Matt · 18 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

garypc writes "There was an excellent column in support of men's rights on the editorial page of the 12/17/05 Wall Street Journal:

You've Got Male!

By LIONEL TIGER

December 17, 2005; Page A10

Male resentment of the self-righteous and automatic public support for women's interests and issues has been increasingly on the boil for some time. Civic celebrations of antipathy to men such as the Violence Against Women Act are finally generating specific and pointed responses by men fatigued, if still baffled, by the knee-jerk assumption that they suffer irredeemably from what I call Male Original Sin."

Click "Read more..." for the rest.

Ed note: The article is given entirely here because the WSJ on-line requires registration and commitment to a 2-week trial subscription, which would effectively block most of our readers from seeing it."At my university as at countless others, one of the very first official greeting to students is a rape seminar predicated on the intrinsic danger which males carry with them. And in family courts, the presumption of male behavioral malefaction has yielded heartbreakingly numerous cases in which men are charged with domestic violence to which courts overwhelmingly -- often in brief hearings in which the male is not even present -- issue temporary "restraining orders." These frequently segue into permanence, and award women the dwelling they've shared, financial support and the all-important privilege of custody -- mothers gain custody in 66% of uncontested cases and 75% of contested ones. Less than a quarter of parents are awarded joint custody.

Judges issue such orders based only on the word of the alleged victim. It is small wonder the overwhelming majority of such actions are sought and achieved by women. It has been legitimately argued that there is a merciless post-marital racket of therapists, lawyers, judges and governmental advocates who prosper because it is so easy to define males as guilty.

Meanwhile, the publicly financed educational system is at least 20% better at producing successful female students than male, yet hardly anyone sees this as remarkable gender discrimination. While there is a vigorous national program to equalize male and female rates of success in science and math, there is not a shred of equivalent attention to the far more central practical impact of the sharp deficit males face in reading and writing.

There are countless thriving "women's studies" programs and only a paltry number of male equivalents. The graduates of such programs (which rarely pass the laxest test for gender diversity) staff the offices of politicians and judges, and assert the obligation of society to redress centuries of dominance by that gaseous overgeneralization -- "patriarchy."

When it comes to health status, the disparity in favor of women is enhanced by such patterns as seven times more Federal expenditure on breast cancer than on the prostate variety. And no one is provoked into action because vaunted male patriarchs commit suicide between four and 10 times more frequently than oppressed and brainwashed women. This isn't simply carping about invidious comparison, or reluctance to support legitimate social responses to the needs of women as workers, parents, citizens and virtuousi of their private lives. It is solely about inequity in law, funding and productive public attention. There is scant acknowledgment of the fact that we face a generation of young men increasingly failing in a school system seemingly calibrated to female rhythms.

A consequence is that male income falls and female income rises. Nothing wrong with that, except that men inexorably withdraw from domestic life: they become out-laws rather than in-laws. Legions of women despair of finding a mate compatible in function and vibrancy. So they go it alone: a third of babies are born to unmarried women, perhaps making a sage choice given the feckless, demoralized chaps from whom they must choose. We lead the world in fatherless families -- 40% of children fall asleep without a resident father regularly within reach.

* * *

Into this acrimonious climate has whispered a breath of spring air in winter -- an extraordinary document which may have surprising impact because of its severe countercultural implications and its almost sweet innocence of purpose. In early November, the New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men issued its first report (www.nh.gov/csm). The commission was proposed in a 1999 bill by N.H. Rep. David Bickford. The House passed the bill, awarding a budget of $69,561. But months later, the state Senate stripped away funding. The commission was finally established in 2002. According to its report, the Senate's effort to defund it reflects "the inaction of good people who apparently have been led to believe that legislative activity designed to primarily benefit men is somehow not appropriate politically, financially, or otherwise."

To the contrary, the commission's report frontally accepts that there are intrinsic differences in how men and women cope with health, education, responsibility and violence. It concludes that social policies must not begin by denying differences. If you're running a zoo, know the real nature of your guests. This applies nationally, not only in New Hampshire. The clout of female voters has been transmuted into a strangely pervasive inattention to the legitimate needs of boys and men. While there remain grating sources of unfairness to women, the community is in the process of steadily creating a new legal and educational structure which generates new gender unfairness: 90% of the victims of Ritalin and similar drugs prescribed for schoolkids are boys; but even drugged they perform less well than girls. A 2005 study at Yale found nationally that even in prekindergarten boys are nearly five times more likely to be expelled than girls.

What is going on in this country?

Of course those who can do the work should receive the rewards. However, the broader question is: Who defines the work and evaluates it? The drastic occupational and familial situation of especially minority males suggests the urgency of a hard review of this issue. Were females the victims of such apparent sex-based unfairness, the legal paper attacking the matter would cloud the air like flakes of New Hampshire snow. But since it's only males...

The report is an innovative 44 pages focused on life in one state. It grips the macrocosm of stunning changes in American sociosexual and family experience. Like those which affect the terrain of a delta the changes are gradual and barely perceptible and yet suddenly it becomes clear there is a new barrier, a new channel, a new uncertainty. So with the issue of men in America. The New Hampshire report may not be a full map of the delta but its alerts us to the large reality of implacable changes. And we may not like them.

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++

Mr. Tiger, Charles Darwin Professor of Anthropology at Rutgers, is the author of "The Decline of Males" (St. Martin's, 1999).

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/18/0619200.shtml

RADAR Alert: VAWA Clears Congress: Some Progress, But Still Much Work to Do

Matt · 19 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

This week's alert has a positive twist. As a result of your determined efforts, we have something to be thankful for in terms of making VAWA laws applicable to all victims of domestic violence.

Click "Read more..." for more

VAWA Clears Congress: Some Progress, But Still Much Work to Do

First is a revision that seems small but holds promise for the future. Section 40002 [Definitions and Grant Provisions] section (b), paragraph 8, now contains the following language:

NONEXCLUSIVITY - Nothing in this title shall be construed to prohibit male victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking from receiving benefits and services under this title.

A second provision we worked hard for is an investigation of VAWA programs by the General Accounting Office:

SEC. 119. GAO STUDY AND REPORT.

(a) Study Required- The Comptroller General shall conduct a study to establish the extent to which men, women, youth, and children are victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking and the availability to all victims of shelter, counseling, legal representation, and other services commonly provided to victims of domestic violence.

(b) Activities Under Study- In conducting the study, the following shall apply:

(1) CRIME STATISTICS- The Comptroller General shall not rely only on crime statistics, but may also use existing research available, including public health studies and academic studies.

(2) SURVEY- The Comptroller General shall survey the Department of Justice, as well as any recipients of Federal funding for any purpose or an appropriate sampling of recipients, to determine--

(A) what services are provided to victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking;

(B) whether those services are made available to youth, child, female, and male victims; and

(C) the number, age, and gender of victims receiving each available service.

(c) Report- Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit to Congress a report on the activities carried out under this section.

However, the language providing for funding eligibility of programs focused on male victims did not survive. That is a disappointment.

Nonetheless, we consider this revision a step forward in the effort to get that proverbial pendulum back to the middle.

To maintain this momentum, we ask you to send/e-mail/fax notes of appreciation to all of your elected officials.

1. Tell them you appreciate that they were willing to be responsive to the need to serve male victims of domestic violence.
2. Highlight the need for continued monitoring of VAWA-funded programs to make sure that male victims receive the services they need.

Contact information for your Representative can be found at http://www.house.gov/.

Contact information for your Senators can be found at http://www.senate.gov/.

Date of RADAR Release: December 18, 2005

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner: http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/19/1739245.shtml

Congress Committee Passes Gender-Neutral VAWA?

Matt · 19 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "An MND blogger reports that the Senate/House conference committee yesterday passed a version of VAWA 2005 that includes "gender-neutral" language. Problem is, nothing in this language actually mandates any spending or support for male DV services, nor does it reform the biased funding authority of the Office Against Violence for Women that distributes the five billion. "Today VAWA passed through the Senate/House Conference Committee with the entire gender-neutral text that we asked for. David Burroughs who wrote the text said ... 'Through the hard work and support of many dedicated supporters of equality we have succeeded in having language inserted in the VAWA that makes it clear to the DOJ [Department Of Justice] VAWO [Violence Against Women Office] that it can no longer circumvent the original intent of Congress that this legislation provide shelter and services to all victims of domestic violence regardless of their gender.' " Link at -- http://mensnewsdaily.com/blog/feminist4fathers/200 5/12/in-this-time-of-holiday-magic.html"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/19/1743213.shtml

Further Commentary from CPB's Ombudsman re "Breaking the Silence"

Matt · 20 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks' Dec. 19, 2005 newsletter points out this latest statement from Ken Bode, CPB's ombudsman. Excerpt:

"I agree with everything Getler says, to a point. He allows that PBS editorial guidelines for fairness and objectivity were "bumped up against and maybe breached," but does not assert they were clearly breached.

I think it is worse than that. There was no alternative point of view presented in "Breaking the Silence," and the producer admits it was intended to be that way. It might be difficult to find a clearer breach of PBS editorial standards unless one concludes there is only one side to child and spousal abuse issues in the country's custody cases."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/19/2310226.shtml

Marriage Broker Act Sneaks Into VAWA 2005

Matt · 20 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Lee writes "Maria Cantwell (WA) has succeeded and inserted the 2003 language for International Marriage Broker Regulation of 2005 into Appendix D of VAWA 2005, which passed this weekend.

This language would require all who seek to meet or communicate with a foreign love interest online to first pass an invasive and extensive background check. The foreign national client would also get the scoop on how the U.S. Domestic Violence and Divorce Industries work.

See thread on standyourground.com for a discussion."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/20/1851211.shtml

WorldNetDaily Author Spews Misandry

Matt · 20 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous user writes "I saw this and knew I had to share it. It speaks for itself. Once past the tip of her hat to the recent newsflashes about female teachers molesting minor males, she goes on to lay in mercilessly to the male sex. From the article:

'Sorry, young co-eds are being sexually brutalized by "Joe College" – the ones they know – from fraternity abuses to "hooking up" for what passes for a "date" these days. Well, after all, the sexy stars do it on "Sex and the City" with no downside.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/20/1857248.shtml

More from the Women-as-Far-More-Valuable Department

Matt · 20 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

This NYTimes article speaks volumes about how women are considered darn-near infinitely more valuable than men. Excerpt:

"Making sure the women's commute was safe was the responsibility of the men who provided convoy security. "That was their job," said Corporal Saalman, the group's leader, of Branchville, Ind."

Those killed in this incident were all Marines. All of them valuable people but all equally valuable as war-fighters. So why does this article fairly drip with contempt for and lack of recognition for the men who served, and some of whom also died, in this same incident?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/20/1943243.shtml

RADAR Alert: PBS Whitewashes Flawed Documentary

Matt · 21 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

After a month-long review, the Public Broadcasting Service has disappointed thousands of viewers and given its stamp of approval to Breaking the Silence: Children's Stories.

According to the PBS statement, “The producers approached the topic with the open mindedness and commitment to fairness that we require of our journalists. Their research was extensive and supports the conclusions drawn in the program.”

Click "Read more..." for more.

PBS Whitewashes Flawed Documentary

PBS plans to produce a follow-up documentary on child custody, family courts, and parental alienation syndrome, to be aired in Spring 2006. PBS does not indicate that the second program will highlight the concerns or perspectives of fathers; indeed, the PBS statement does not even include the word, “father.”

Of greater concern is the PBS statement that says, “Additionally, the documentary's ‘first-person story telling approach’ did not allow the depth of the producers' research to be as evident to the viewer as it could have been.” [emphasis added]. RADAR is concerned that in Breaking the Silence Part II, PBS will simply present biased experts and one-sided research that will reinforce the propaganda-like conclusions contained in Breaking the Silence Part I.

The PBS statement made no concession to Ken Bode, ombudsman for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, who wrote on Monday, “It was precisely the lack of balance and fairness that caused so many viewers to contact PBS and CPB ... Lasseur now says that [lack of balance] was intentional. Simply put, that amounts to a plea of guilty to violating the fairness and balance standards of PBS.” [http://www.cpb.org/ombudsmen/051219bode.html]

The PBS statement also ignored the criticisms by PBS' own ombudsman, Michael Getler, who wrote on December 2 that the program comes across “as a one-sided, advocacy program” and “there was no recognition of opposing views.” [http://www.pbs.org/ombudsman/2005/12/introduction_and_breaking_the_silence.html]

On December 12, RADAR sent a letter to the Corporation for Public Broadcasting calling for an Inspector General investigation of the program. The letter reiterated RADAR's demands that PBS completely retract Breaking the Silence, and that PBS commission a follow-up documentary that highlights the plight of children endangered by a court system that awards custody to fathers only 15% of the time. [http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/RADAR_letterToCPB_InspectorGeneral.pdf]

A recent column by David Usher reveals how Breaking the Silence is part of a broader campaign to influence public policy that would make it far more difficult for divorcing fathers to gain shared parenting rights of their children. [http://www.therealitycheck.org/GuestColumnist/dusher121905.htm]

RADAR will analyze the situation over the upcoming holidays and issue our next Alert on January 2, 2006.

PBS Programming Statement on BREAKING THE SILENCE: CHILDREN'S STORIES

BREAKING THE SILENCE: CHILDREN'S STORIES chronicles the impact of domestic violence on children and the recurring failings of family courts across the country to protect them from their abusers. In stark and often poignant interviews, children and battered mothers tell their stories of abuse at home and continued trauma within the courts. The producers approached the topic with the open mindedness and commitment to fairness that we require of our journalists. Their research was extensive and supports the conclusions drawn in the program. Funding from the Mary Kay Ash Charitable Foundation met PBS's underwriting guidelines; the Foundation had no editorial influence on program content.

However, the program would have benefited from more in-depth treatment of the complex issues surrounding child custody and the role of family courts and most specifically the provocative topic of Parental Alienation Syndrome (PAS). Additionally, the documentary's "first-person story telling approach" did not allow the depth of the producers' research to be as evident to the viewer as it could have been.

PBS has received a substantial body of analysis and documentation from both supporters of the documentary and its critics.

It is clear to us that this complex and important issue would benefit from further examination. To that end, PBS will commission an hour-long documentary for that purpose. Plans call for the documentary to be produced and broadcast in Spring 2006. We expect that the hour-long treatment of the subject will allow ample opportunity for doctors, psychologists, judges, parent advocates and victims of abuse to have their perspectives shared, challenged and debated.

Date of RADAR Release: December 20, 2005
R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner: http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/21/0731202.shtml

Indian Policewomen Assault Couples for Dating

Matt · 21 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Just when you don't think it can't get any weirder, just read this.

Excerpt:

Two policewomen have been suspended in the northern Indian city of Meerut for slapping and punching couples who were dating in a public park.

Police were carrying out "Operation Romeo", which they said was to target the sexual harassment of women.

Anti-police protests erupted after TV pictures showed officers punching and pulling the hair of young women.

So let's see, this is an assault not just on the right to associate and freedom to assemble (which is guaranteed under Indian law) but also an assault on romantic relations between the sexes. Note that the ostensible reason for the "program" that placed these policewomen in the park was targetted specifically at stopping men from... dating women? Note there is implied in the name of the operation itself ("Operation Romeo") that the female of the couple is not presumed to be an active part in what... making out or something? And just how is making out in a park "sexual harassment" anyway? Anyone who needs explicit evidence that male sexuality itself is being directly persecuted need only look at this story.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/21/1152251.shtml

"Cheaper by the Dozen" Another Cliche Dumb-Daddy Movie

Matt · 22 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

CJ writes "Finally, a movie columnist (one from the Globe too!) stands up for men/fathers:

"I have to say Tom Baker is one idiot patriarch too many. We're saddled with the cliche dumb daddy in ads, TV sitcoms, comic strips, but a neutered (numerous crotch injuries) Steve Martin is the last straw. I therefore announce the founding of a new anti-defamation organization, Fathers United against Dopey Dads -- or F.U.D.D. -- and call for volunteers and greater media awareness of this slanderous stereotype. A dad is a terrible thing to waste A dad is a terrible thing to waste, and 'Cheaper by the Dozen 2' is one vast, cheery wasteland."

Let's offer support to the writer of this article."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/22/0257207.shtml

Letterman finds out how easy it is to get restraining order

Matt · 22 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

bandersnatch writes "From CNN, Lawyers for David Letterman want a judge to quash a restraining order granted to a Santa Fe woman who contends the CBS late-night host used code words to show he wanted to marry her and train her as his co-host. A state judge granted a temporary restraining order to Colleen Nestler, who alleged in a request filed last Thursday that Letterman has forced her to go bankrupt and caused her "mental cruelty" and "sleep deprivation" since May 1994. Nestler requested that Letterman, who tapes his show in New York, stay at least 3 yards away and not "think of me, and release me from his mental harassment and hammering." Lawyers for Letterman, in a motion filed Tuesday, contend the order is without merit and asked state District Judge Daniel Sanchez to quash it. That's right, folks. A woman was able to get a restraining order against David Letterman based on that in her mind he is using code words to show he wanted to marry her and train her as his co-host. And the feminists have the nerve to cry about how "hard" it is to file a restraining order."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/22/0258255.shtml

HIV positive woman faces life in prison for raping boy

Matt · 22 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes:

Police Say HIV-Positive Woman Raped Boy

AVOCA, Ark. -- Authorities said a 13-year-old Arkansas boy was exposed to HIV when he was allegedly raped by a 42-year-old woman in his own home.

Deputies thought they were headed to a domestic disturbance call at the teen's home near Avoca, Ark., at about 2 a.m. Monday.

When they arrived they found two men arguing with a woman named Donna Sue Mars. However, during subsequent interviews, police said one of the men said Mars had sex with his 13-year-old son, Fort Smith, Ark., television station KHBS reported."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/22/1758202.shtml

Homeless Boys Line African City Streets

Matt · 23 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

"Young and Homeless Fill Africa's City Streets" - no mention though of UNICEF, or any other organizational outrage, over the fact that the vast majority of these are boys. That's because, quite predictably, no one seems to care nearly as much as they would if these kids were predominently girls. And people wonder why Africa is plagued by problems with violent, angry young men. Excerpt:

They are part of an unprecedented and growing phenomenon of homeless youths in Africa's exploding urban centers, according to studies by UNICEF and Save the Children. There is no reliable estimate of their total number, but studies indicate it could be as high as 1 million.

.

.

Now, nearly every major African city has its own name for them. In Khartoum, they are called "the children of the market." In Nairobi, they are known as "glue boys," because they sniff glue out of old bottles, holding the rims to their lips as if they were whispering into the neck. In Kinshasa, the capital of Congo, they are called "the desperate children" -- barefoot boys who shine shoes, banging a stick with a bottle cap to attract customers.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/23/1857259.shtml

Virginia Men Cleared of Rape with DNA Testing

Matt · 23 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

If you haven't seem the Innocence Project web site yet, please take a look. The number of men who have been railroaded into jail on flimsy evidence for the crime of rape is truly heartbreaking, and DNA testing that exonerates them is showing "The System's" routinized knee-jerk anti-male bigotry for what it is. Most recent news of DNA testing-based exonerations is here. Excerpt:

He wasn't always that resolute. He remembers saying over and over to himself the night he was convicted: "I am innocent. I am not a rapist." It was a refrain he would repeat in the coming years in handwritten letters to judges and lawyers and advocates for those wrongly imprisoned.

Thurman said he trusted the criminal justice system; he said he believed it wouldn't fail him. But in the end, it did, he said, and his only choice was to carry out his sentence in silence.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/23/194236.shtml

Wife, Her BF, and Daughter's BF Held in Slaying of Reservist

Matt · 25 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "The enemy was his own wife. Story here.

Excerpt:

'RALEIGH, N.C. --Home for Christmas after nearly a year in the Middle East, Navy Reservist Paul Berkley was making up for lost time with his family.

He arrived Wednesday, in time to hear his 18-year-old son, Zeke, sing the national anthem with his high school chorus. On Friday, he and 16-year-old daughter Becky ate pizza, watched movies and danced.

By Sunday, the 46-year-old sailor was dead, shot once in the head during a walk in the park with his wife, Monique. She now stands charged with his slaying, along with two men -- her alleged teenage lover and her stepdaughter Becky's boyfriend.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/25/008223.shtml

Ex-coach had sexual relations with player, indictment alleges

Matt · 25 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Story here.
Both female. I wonder if there will be any real punishment? Excerpt:

'NEWARK, Ohio — A Licking County grand jury yesterday indicted a former assistant softball coach at Newark High School on three counts each of unlawful sexual conduct with a minor and sexual battery.

Jessica Spain, 26, of Newark, was arrested Dec. 16 by Newark police after they investigated a relationship between Spain and a player on the high-school team. Some staff members and a police officer assigned to the school observed Spain and the 16-year-old girl kissing in a car in a school parking lot on Dec. 14, authorities said.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/25/0011204.shtml

"Moms in prison"

Matt · 25 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Not much mention here of "dads in prison" or any chance they have (or don't) to see their kids today.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/25/1257205.shtml

"Cool Mom" in Crash

Matt · 26 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

She just can't seem to control herself, can she? Story here.

GOLDEN, Colo. - A woman who authorities said had sex with high school boys so she could be a "cool mom" was injured while riding in an SUV that veered off an interstate a day before she was to be sentenced. The driver was a 14-year-old girl.

.

.

Johnson and three other passengers — her 14-year-old daughter, 11-year-old son and a 12-year-old boy — were hospitalized with serious injuries, authorities said. Only the driver was wearing a seat belt and escaped serious injury, authorities said.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/26/139230.shtml

USA Today: Female Tsunami Survivors are Biggest Victims

Matt · 27 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

mens_issues writes "One year after the horrific Indian Ocean tsunami, it appears that most of the survivors are still living in tents or other rudimentary conditions. Unfortunately, USA Today just had to put in something unsubstantiated about women survivors being particularly vulnerable to abuse (from the "beastly male" tsunami survivors, one is led to assume).

It's sad that a tragedy like this has to be reported on through the distorted lens of gender-feminist groups.

A link to this article is here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/27/0412222.shtml

Restraining Order vs. Letterman Quashed

Matt · 28 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Good news for David Letterman... problem is, it never should have been issued in the first place. Story here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/27/2244226.shtml

Wall Street Journal Prints Supportive Letters Re Men's Commission

Matt · 28 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes "Today the Wall Street Journal printed two supportive letters responding to Professor Lionel Tiger's op ed on neglected issues affecting men and on the findings of the New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/27/2246217.shtml

CNN wants to Hear from Male DV Victims

Matt · 28 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

mens_issues writes "CNN wants to hear from male victims of domestic violence. If you were a victim within the last three years, this is your chance to present the other side of the domestic violence issue.

This information is from a newsletter sent out by Chuck Corry of the Equal Justice Foundation."

Click on Read More/Post Comments to see the original newsletter with his announcement.
From: "Dr. Charles E. Corry"

To: EJF comments

Cc: "Abate, Angelena"

Subject: EJF notice - CNN looking for abused men

Date: Tue, 27 Dec 2005

Charles,

My name is Angelena and I am a producer at CNN's Paula Zahn Now program.

We are working on a story about battered men and I got your name from Lisa who works with DV victims. I have also talked to Marc Angelucci and several others.

I would like to talk to you about your experience helping men who have experienced domestic violence.

I can be reached at 212-275-8340 or I am happy to call you if you give me a good number. I look forward to hearing from you.

Angelena

I received the above from Angelena Abate with CNN and spoke with her on the phone today. She would like to speak to men who have been physically abused by their wives or girlfriends within the past three years and are willing to discuss their experience.

Given CNN's global coverage I would assume this invitation includes men in the many other countries the EJF works with. Also please feel free to forward this to your local lists if you think any in your group would possibly be interested.

Her phone number and email address are given above if you meet this criteria, and would like to talk about it, please contact her directly.

Charles E. Corry, Ph.D., F.G.S.A.

Charles E. Corry, Ph.D., F.G.S.A.

President

Equal Justice Foundation http://www.ejfi.org/

455 Bear Creek Road

Colorado Springs, Colorado 80906-5820

Personal home page: http://corry.ws

Curriculum vitae: http://www.marquiswhoswho.net/charleselmocorry/Def ault.aspx

The good men may do separately is small compared with what they may do collectively.

-- Benjamin Franklin

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/28/1716202.shtml

Female Ohio SC Justice Scolded for DUI

Matt · 28 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Hmmm, this is the kind of story I ponder about because the question is, is she being let off light (with a mere reprimand, when any "ordinary person" would lose a professional license, get jailed, etc.) because she is female, or a senior citizen, or a state supreme court justice, or because she is cop-friendly, or any combination/all of these? That is, is this a gender/class/sandbox thing or a combination thereof? What do YOU think?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/28/1720205.shtml

California Domestic Violence Lawsuit Will Help Secure Services for All Abuse Victims

Matt · 30 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes "Sacks/Angelucci print column on class action lawsuit to end state's discrimination against male DV victims in California here. A Superior Court family law judge called me saying he read this and he wants to know the data on male DV victims.

A CBS video covering this effort can be seen here."

Ed. note: Way to go, guys!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/29/2022254.shtml

Woman Killed By Son During DV Was Justified

Matt · 31 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "Well, this is rare!

A woman who was attacking her 73 yo father with a pair of scissors during a DV confrontation was shot and killed by her son.

This woman's death during this domestic violence incident was ruled justifiable homicide.
No charges filed against the son or his grandfather."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/30/2329200.shtml

Lawsuit says gym's women-only policy illegally discriminates

Matt · 31 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "

Article published - Dec 29, 2005

BODY CENTRAL

State sues SR health club

Lawsuit says gym's women-only policy illegally discriminates against men

By STEVE HART

THE PRESS DEMOCRAT

A state agency that enforces civil rights laws has filed a lawsuit against a Santa Rosa women's health club, charging its women-only policy unlawfully discriminates against men.

The state Department of Fair Employment and Housing is seeking a court injunction against Body Central, a fitness center on Ross Street in downtown Santa Rosa.

(snip)"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/30/2334214.shtml

"HOSTEL" is hostile to men

Matt · 31 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

Thundercloud writes "If anyone still doubts that violence against men in "entertainment" is MUCH worse than at any other time in our history, I present to you the latest Quentin Tarantino movie called "HOSTEL" (Macromedia Flash required).

In this movie two American males are led to believe that they are going to have sex with beautiful women. Instead the women lead the men to the Hostel to be kidnapped, bound and gagged, tortured, sodomized and cut up into pieces for the viewing pleasure of the "audience".

This type of "hate-male" imagery is becoming worse, more graphic and more sadistic with each like movie. Not only is it a disturbing trend, it is a harmful one to our society.
If this were FEMALES portrayed in this manner, even to a lesser extent, it would NEVER make it to the screen.
It is time for MRAs to break the silence on this issue, NOW!
The silence is deafening..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/30/2348204.shtml

Men's Studies Activism Project Launched

Scott · 31 December 2005 · Archived copy · Original

I am collaborating with Dr. Ed Stephens (president of NCFM's Greater New York chapter) to do some research necessary for an effort to get Men's Studies programs established at major 4-year colleges and universities. There is now a wiki page where you can participate in this project, and this is a perfect activism project from the standpoint that you can made a helpful contribution with as little as ten minutes' research on the web. The information we collect will be used to approach these colleges and universities to request that Men's Studies departments be created, to collect paperwork of their responses, and (in all likelihood), have a strong body of documentation that could be used in a future sex discrimination lawsuit. Please take a look at this project and offer some help - there is a lot of work to do, but it will be easy if a good number of people participate to help break up the tasks.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/30/2030217.shtml

WP Covers Men in Commercials

Matt · 1 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I was surprised, pleasantly, by this piece in the Washington Post. I do get the impression that the author is playing both sides of the fence, however. Still, it's a good thing we're seeing it some discussion of it in mainstream press. Excerpt:

Advertisers make fun of men, in part, because they always have, says ad executive Marian Salzman, who points out that the guys have been the butt of the joke in sitcoms and movies for decades. Men don't seem to mind, she says, and what's more, who else is there to make fun of? Women and members of minority groups have long reacted with hostility to similar portrayals. Says Salzman, "The only people [advertisers] are still allowed to offend these days are straight white men with a full head of hair."

But the "doofus" approach is doomed to fail with young men because it underestimates them, says Salzman, a trend-spotter with the giant ad agency J. Walter Thompson and the co-author of "The Future of Men." "[Men] think with a multiplicity of organs, not just the one below the belt. They want to be respected, admired, entertained, to be part of a community," she says. "They don't want to be patronized like they're a bunch of morons."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/05/12/31/2040231.shtml

NY Times Essay on Divorce Neglects Facts

Matt · 2 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

No mention in this essay regarding how 70% of divorces are initiated by the wife, nor any chance for her ex-husband to discuss his own reasons. Classic stuff, indeed, just bursting forth into the new year!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/02/0438207.shtml

RADAR Alert: Tell PBS Stations that PBS' Whitewash Doesn't Mean 'Breaking the Silence' is Unbiased

Matt · 3 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A few days before Christmas, PBS finally issued their statement on Breaking the Silence: Children's Stories. (See http://www.pbs.org/aboutpbs/news/20051221_breakingthesilence.html) PBS' statement gives their affiliated stations a green light to continue airing this biased program.

Click "Read more..." for more.

Tell PBS Stations that PBS' Whitewash Doesn't Mean Breaking the Silence is Unbiased

In the statement, PBS says, “The producers approached the topic with the open mindedness and commitment to fairness that we require of our journalists.” To make this assertion, they had to completely ignore their own ombudsman's opinion that “this particular program had almost no balance” and the CPB ombudsman's opinion that the producers' stated intention to exclude any alternative view “amounts to a plea of guilty to violating the fairness and balance standards of PBS”. (See http://www.pbs.org/ombudsman/2005/12/introduction_and_breaking_the_silence.html and http://www.cpb.org/ombudsmen/051219bode.html)

PBS also claims that the producers' research “was extensive and supports the conclusions drawn in the program,” in spite of their having received a detailed analysis, which shows that the research cited by the program's creators does not support the program's message (http://www.fathersandfamilies.org/Publications/BTS/BTSResearchCritiqueWithComments.pdf) One has to wonder if they even bothered to read the analysis, or if they decided early on to support the producers' research no matter what.

PBS' implicit message to their affiliates is that there's nothing wrong with them broadcasting this biased program. So this week we're asking you to contact your local PBS affiliate with the message:

The PBS Ombudsman has described Breaking the Silence as “a one-sided, advocacy program”. The CPB Ombudsman has called the producers guilty of violating the fairness and balance standards of PBS. Affiliates that want to maintain the public's trust in their commitment to PBS' own fairness and balance standards should refrain from rebroadcasting Breaking the Silence.

To find your local PBS affiliate:

1. Go to http://www.pbs.org/stationfinder/index.html and enter your zip code, or
2. Look in your local telephone directory

Date of RADAR Release: January 2, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner: http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/03/1031215.shtml

Salon.com Advice Columnist Excuses F-on-M DV

Matt · 3 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The only good news about this piece is that the readers' comments are uniformly against the "advice" the columnist serves up to the letter-writer.

Note that to see premium content (though I myself wouldn't call it that), one must either subscribe to salon.com or put up with watching a 4-page ad for something. At least the ad allows fast click-through to get to the content, and given what a blatantly outrageous apology for F-on-M battery the response represents, it's worth the hassle.

Feel free to make ample use of the "Make a comment to the editor." link as well as the "Post a letter about this article" button.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/03/1722249.shtml

Planet Mensactivism: A New Blog Feedreader

Scott · 4 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The Men's Activism News Network has a new addition to our family of sites, planet.mensactivism.org. Planet Mensactivism is an aggregator of men's rights-oriented blog postings. We currently only have a handful of blogs subscribed to with it, including Cathy Young's blog, the DesertLight Journal, The Men's Hour, and a few more. Please send your blog recommendations to admin@mensactivism.org so we can increase this list. Also, please be aware that there are still some bugs to shake out of the new site and occasionally you'll see some odd formatting of the entries.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/04/0149219.shtml

Japan: Divorce Boom on Deck

Matt · 4 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This article demonstrates the effects that government-induced financial incentives have on people as they evaluate marriage, or staying married, as the case may be. The result is no surprise, really. Excerpt:

With a new law set to come into force in 2007 allowing ex-wives to claim half their husband's pension, domestic media are warning of a possible divorce boom.

The number of Japanese couples parting ways has risen rapidly over the past 20 years to a 2002 peak of 290,000, while divorce among those married more than 20 years has increased even faster.

Now figures are drifting downwards, but many commentators speculate that women -- who initiate the majority of divorces -- are holding out until 2007.

Wait 'til the law is in effect, then take the old man for half, or better -- simple enough, yes?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/04/1130240.shtml

Comparing Justice: Men vs Women

Matt · 4 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Misandrope writes "Statistics can tell interesting stories. Here we learn about relative rates of incarceration for men vs women, and we also learn about a HUGE disparity between sentence lengths for the same types of crimes.

Women murderers are sentenced to term lengths about 17% of what men are sentenced to. In particular, I believe this is because in about 88% of the cases, they are murdering men, their spouses, and ex-spouses.

Yet another chilling piece of evidence demonstrating how very misandrous our legal system is.

-M"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/04/1125224.shtml

Mine Tragedy - Men as Casualties of Work

Matt · 5 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The current mine tragedy story points up the fact that men are far-more often victims of industrial accidents than women due to the jobs they do and the way they are perceived as being "less valuable" than women, so more readily sacrificed in the name of profit margins. As this story points out, the last thoughts of some seem only to have been of their families. So next time a feminist tries to tell you that men don't care much for their children as compared to women, etc., send them that link as a reply needing no further elaboration.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/05/190248.shtml

First 2006 edition of Journal of PAS Newsletter Available

Matt · 6 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

From their e-mail announcement, posted with permission:

Your free copy of the January/February edition of the Journal of Parental Alienation is now available for download at http://www.helpstoppas.org/.

Click "Read more..." for more.Click on “Newsletter” and you will find the latest edition of the Journal available as a free download in Adobe Acrobat. If you do not currently have Adobe or you wish to upgrade to the latest edition just click the Adobe icon on the newsletter webpage. This month we have started a new feature – a Q and A with Dr. Reena Sommer. Information on how to send your questions to Dr. Sommer is located on page 7. Also, be sure to read the information regarding virtual visitation and look for more information on this hot topic in our next edition.

We would like to introduce you all to our new editorial committee. Dr Richard Austin, Dr. Katherine Andre, Dr. Catherine Cain, and Dr. Reena Sommer have all agreed to join our editorial committee to volunteer their time and efforts to further the development of the Journal of Parental Alienation. We warmly welcome them aboard and thank them for donating their considerable expertise to help make the Help Stop PAS Journal the number one source for parental alienation information. The Journal has a current distribution rate of over 6000 and, thanks to you, is still growing rapidly.

Inside this Issue:

- Parental Alienation: How to Deal With It In Your Family Law Case by Stewart Gagnon, Esq.

- Overturning the Programming Of A Child by L.F. Lowenstein

- Editorial by Dr. Laird Sweet, Executive Director

- Your letters to the editor

- Q and A with Dr. Reena Sommer

- How Many US Children Might Be Alienated by The Rachel Foundation

- Introduction to Virtual Visitation by Michael Gough

- Divorced Parenting Do’s and Don’ts from Help Stop PAS

If you have any questions, comments, feedback, or would like to submit a letter or article for inclusion in the Journal of Parental Alienation send your inquiry to:

E-Mail: Editor-at-HelpStopPAS.org

U.S. Mail:

Editor

Help Stop PAS

3118 FM 528 Suite 234

Webster, TX 77598

Until the next issue,

Dr. Laird Sweet, Executive Director

Help Stop PAS

3118 FM 528 Suite 234

Webster, TX 77598

409-789-7482

admin-at-helpstoppas.org

A Non-Profit 501 (c)(3) Organization

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/05/217209.shtml

'Off the Chain' Update

Matt · 7 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Ron writes "There is a very sick and disturbing film on its way out under the title 'Off the Chain'.

The film is full of male-bashing jokes, critism and even has a scene about male castration.

Click here to see a trailer for the movie.

If men were to make a movie about female bashing and cutting off tatters, there would be mobs taking over the set stopping the scenes from being shot!

I am asking everyone to begin a boycott of this film immediately"

Ed. note: Seeing the trailer is easier if you download the .mov file itself to your PC and run it from there using the Apple Quicktime Player or some other video player that can handle .mov files.

To download the file, right-click on this link and choose "Save Link As..." and save the file. This movie was reported in Dec. 2005 here on MANN at this entry but there was no trailer available at the time.

Of likely interest also is the response to MRAs' complaints about the movie that the producers of this film currently have on their home page, here. Apparently, they do not much care about the opinions of MRAs regarding the topic of DV against men.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/07/054239.shtml

Another abusive mother gets a suspended sentence

Matt · 8 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Convicted of child abuse, the judge suspends the sentence because the child may blame himself if his mother goes to jail!!

What do women have to do to their kids to be punished as a man would be?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/08/0239232.shtml

RADAR Alert: Ombudsmen Refuse to Let the BTS Controversy Go Away

Matt · 9 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

When PBS executives issued their whitewash of Breaking the Silence four days before Christmas, they figured that all the controversy would die down and things would soon get back to normal. [http://www.pbs.org/aboutpbs/news/20051221_breakingthesilence.html]

Because the very next day, PBS ombudsman Michael Getler appeared on the PBS MacNeil-Lehrer report. He pointed out that the documentary did not interview even a single father, and again criticized Breaking the Silence for being "quite a one-sided presentation."

Click "Read more..." for more

Ombudsmen Refuse to Let the BTS Controversy Go Away

And then a few days ago Ken Bode, ombudsman for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, came out with his third critique of the flawed documentary. Bode didn't pull any punches: "I found the program to be so totally unbalanced as to fall outside the boundaries of PBS editorial standards on fairness and balance." [http://www.cpb.org/ombudsmen/060104bode.html]

Translation: PBS blew it.

Now, PBS local affiliates have to decide who's right: the PBS executives who approved the program in the first place, or the two independent ombudsmen of the Public Broadcasting Service and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

Of course it's possible the statements by Ken Bode and Michael Getler will be ignored. That's exactly what the abuse advocates are hoping for. Because they have more surprises in store.

Or maybe word will get out that most fathers who seek custody of their children are doing it to protect and care for their children. That's the message that RADAR wants to get out, because that's the truth.

On Monday, January 9, RADAR sent a press release to over 10,000 media outlets – shown below. We want the truth to get out.

But what about the PBS affiliates? That's where you come in.

This week we are asking you to e-mail RADAR's press release to your local PBS affiliate. And if you can, send it to other media contacts.

Because the truth needs to get out. It's in our hands.

Today, please take these steps:

1.

Go to http://www.pbs.org/stationfinder/index.html and enter your zip code to get the web address for your local PBS affiliate.

2.

E-mail

the attached Press Release to the PBS contact listed on their webpage.

3.

Forward
the Press Release to any other media or other contacts you may have.

==========

Ombudsman Slams Documentary, Despite PBS Whitewash

PRESS RELEASE

January 9, 2006

Contact: Mark B. Rosenthal
781-956-1034
mbr-at-arlsoft.com

WASHINGTON
– Ombudsman Ken Bode has charged PBS with violating its own editorial standards in airing the program, Breaking the Silence.
In his January 4 report, Bode concluded, "I found the program to be so totally unbalanced as to fall outside the boundaries of PBS editorial standards on fairness and balance."
[http://www.cpb.org/ombudsmen/060104bode.html]

In a previous statement, Bode, who works as ombudsman for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, criticized producer Dominique Lasseur for not interviewing any fathers for the program: "Simply put, that amounts to a plea of guilty to violating the fairness and balance standards of PBS."

Since its broadcast on October 20, Breaking the Silence has generated a firestorm of controversy for the Public Broadcasting Service. The program, which probes the issues of child abuse and child custody, triggered thousands of protests from viewers who deplored the inaccurate and one-sided presentation of the issues.

On December 21, PBS re-affirmed its support for producer Dominique Lasseur, saying he "approached the topic with the open mindedness and commitment to fairness that we require of our journalists."

Many viewed the PBS statement as a less than candid acknowledgement of the program's shortcomings. Bode suggests PBS' failure to admit bias and retract the program may be due to "the possibility of litigation."

"We encourage PBS affiliates to carefully consider Mr. Bode's latest critique in their decision whether to air Breaking the Silence," notes RADAR member Gordon Finley. "Neither the best interests of children or the public are well-served by one-sided, misleading programming."

Bode's January 4 report was his third statement highly critical of the PBS documentary. His previous reports were issued on November 29 and December 19. Additional analyses and critiques of Breaking the Silence can be found at http://www.mediaradar.org/.

++

Date of RADAR Release: January 9, 2005

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner:

http://www.mediaradar.org/

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/09/0347255.shtml

Bush Signs VAWA - What Did MRA's Learn?

Matt · 9 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "The press reports that on 5 January 2006 President Bush signed VAWA endorsing a 20% increase in the billions of dollars funding this primary legal assault against men. "The act, which expired in September, helps children exposed to violence, trains health care workers on how to support victims of abuse and encourages men to teach youngsters that violence is wrong. The extension includes new provisions on health care, early intervention and outreach to American Indian women." Note there is no mention of "gender-neutrality" in any of the press coverage. Link here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/09/0349228.shtml

Woman dresses up as man to explore stereotypes

Matt · 10 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Rand T. writes "Interesting story at the New-York Post:

If you need a name and password to log in, you can use http://www.bugmenot.com/"

Click "Read more..." to read the Post article; bugmenot's userid/passwords are often hit-and-miss. :(GAL DONS A GUY'S GUISE TO EXPLORE A MAN'S WORLD

By BILLY HELLER

As a woman, New Yorker Norah Vincent was used to being stared at by men she passed in her Village neighborhood. It's a way men "assert their dominance," she says.

But she often wondered what was behind those stares. So she conducted an experiment.

Like John Howard Griffin, who disguised himself as an African-American in the South of 1959 for "Black Like Me," and Gregory Peck playing a writer posing as a Jew to investigate anti-Semitism in the Oscar-winning "Gentleman's Agreement," Vincent went undercover.

With makeup, workouts, wardrobe and a voice coach, she became a man and plunged into a world she had only known from the other side.

The result is a book, "Self-Made Man" (Viking, $24.95), in which Vincent, a journalist, tells how she used her childhood nickname, Ned, and joined a men's bowling league; went into the woods with nearly three dozen guys for a touchy-feely retreat; got a job with a testosterone-fueled sales force; and hung out with her guy pals at strip clubs.

She even went out on some dates with women, although Vincent revealed her true identity before things went too far.

To transform herself into a convincing man, Vincent, who's gay, glued tiny clippings of synthetic hair to her face for a 5 o'clock shadow, and got a flat-top haircut. She bound her breasts with a cupless sports bra and wore loose-fitting clothes and layers, lifted weights and consumed a lot of protein.

She even wore a prosthetic penis in a jockstrap.

In the end, Vincent was surprised by her stereotype-defying discoveries, which included:

* It's men who frequently suffer rejection — and supposedly emotionally in-tune women are extraordinarily self-absorbed.

* Although men are supposedly the dominant species, it's women who dominate most dating conversations.

"I listened to them talk literally for hours about the most minute, mind-numbing details of their personal lives," Vincent writes. "Listening to them was like undergoing a slow frontal lobotomy."

* Women are responsible for some of the hostility they encounter while playing the dating game.

"The women who were hostile to me made me mad," she writes, "and that made me want to be hostile to them. I can't imagine men in the same position not reacting the same way."

* Women could learn a lot about sincerity from a man's handshake.

On her first night of bowling, Vincent's team's captain, Jim, offered his hand in introduction. "There was something so warm and bonded in this handshake . . . It was more affectionate than any handshake I'd ever received from a strange woman. To me, woman-to-woman introductions often seem fake and cold, full of limp gentility."

Vincent was also surprised to hear manly, muscular men complain about being "ob jectified."

Toby, from the men's self-help group she joined, "was built like an English bulldog, with wide lats, burly shoulders and a tiny waist." But he moaned, "Every time I come into a room or restaurant, especially with other guys, I can see the fear on their faces, like they think I'm going to hurt them. They assume I'm violent because of the way I look."

Vincent compares that to men presuming all blondes are bimbos.

Even the sleazy strip-club culture should not all be blamed on men, Vincent now believes. After observing a strip joint as a man, she decided it wasn't only a place men visited "to be beasts. It was also where women came to exercise some vestige of sexual power in the most unvarnished way possible."

What Vincent hated most about being a man, she wrote, was that society expects men to express limited emotions.

"As a guy, you get about a three-note emotional range. That's it as far as the outside world is concerned," she writes. "Women get octaves, chromatic scales of tears and joys and anxieties . . . but guys get little more than bravado and rage."

billy.heller@nypost.com

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/09/2149225.shtml

Bad prostate cancer test is harmful to men

Matt · 11 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

zerostress writes "According to this article, a prostate cancer test used to screen tens of thousands of men every year may be dangerously flawed. This test does not detect early form of cancer and cause many false positive result, bringing on unnecessary anxieties and surgeries."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/11/0327206.shtml

NOW confuses allegations of rape with conviction

Matt · 11 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

DocDamage writes "As reported in this article, N.O.W. wants Penn St. coach Joe Paterno to resign over comment he made regarding allegations of sexual assault made against AJ Nicholson. Paterno claims his comments were taken out of context, and having read the article, the comments are so garbled that there is obviously a considerable quantity of context required to make sense of the remarks.

Wouldn't it be nice if NOW were to wait for a conviction before acting as if the accused was guilty?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/11/0330244.shtml

VAWA -- "Annoying" Someone Online Is Now Illegal

Matt · 11 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bandersnatch writes "From CNet News -- Annoying someone via the Internet is now a federal crime. It's no joke. Last Thursday, President Bush signed into law a prohibition on posting annoying Web messages or sending annoying e-mail messages without disclosing your true identity. In other words, it's OK to flame someone on a mailing list or in a blog as long as you do it under your real name. Thank Congress for small favors, I guess. This ridiculous prohibition, which would likely imperil much of Usenet, is buried in the so-called Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act. Criminal penalties include stiff fines and two years in prison. "The use of the word 'annoy' is particularly problematic," says Marv Johnson, legislative counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union. "What's annoying to one person may not be annoying to someone else." A new federal law states that when you annoy someone on the Internet, you must disclose your identity. Wow, just wow. Talk about your rights ending where her feelings begin."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/11/0335244.shtml

Boston Globe prints DV-balanced op-ed

Matt · 11 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks to Marc A. for pointing out this op-ed in the Boston Globe written by Cathy Young.

Click "Read more..." to read the article. Family violence strikes men, too

By Cathy Young | January 9, 2006

LAST MONTH, in a little-noticed end-of-the-year action, Congress reauthorized the Violence Against Women Act. The final version includes text that, for the first time, recognizes male victims of domestic violence and sexual assault. This is a step in the right direction of a balanced approach to family violence -- but only the first step.

The new language, included due to lobbying by men's advocacy groups, states that authorized federal grants can be given to programs that "provide assistance to female victims, male victims, or both." There has been confusion over this issue in the past, and the clarification is most welcome.

No less important, the bill directs the General Accounting Office to "conduct a study to establish the extent to which men, women, youth, and children are victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking and the availability to all victims of shelter, counseling, legal representation, and other services commonly provided to victims of domestic violence." The text of this provision specifies that the study should rely not only on crime statistics but on public health and academic studies and should investigate whether services are available to male as well as female victims.

Whether men as well as women are victims of domestic violence has been the subject of many arguments and dueling statistics. Men's rights activists cite numerous family violence surveys showing that women are just as likely to be aggressors in the home as men, but often downplay the fact that women are at greater risk of injury. Battered women's groups point to Justice Department statistics from crime victimization surveys showing that 85 percent of intimate partner violence victims are women, but fail to mention that these surveys miss many violent acts that the victim does not regard as a crime. The 1996 National Violence Against Women Survey, cosponsored by the Centers for Disease Control and the National Institute of Justice, found that 38 percent of the approximately 2.3 million Americans who experience partner violence every year are men.

Too often, abused men have to fight an uphill battle to be taken seriously. Men are presumed to be able to take care of themselves because they are generally bigger and stronger; but that advantage can be neutralized by a weapon, a surprise attack, or a man's reluctance to use force against a woman even to fend off her assault. (The most reliable research shows that up to 35 percent of victims injured by violent partners are men.) Yet many domestic violence programs offer minimal or no services to men, and male victims often have to deal with attitudes that are considered Neanderthal if expressed toward women -- for instance, that they must have done something to provoke the assault.

Bias against male victims is harmful not only to men. It hurts children whose fathers are unable to remove them from abusive households and women whose brothers or sons are victims of abuse. Actually, it's bad for all women, who will never be truly equal unless they are held equally accountable for their actions.

The recognition of violence toward men in the new law is an important achievement. But some major problems with the legislation remain.

First, the law has created a symbiotic relationship between the federal government and the battered women's advocacy movement. State coalitions against domestic violence play a vital role in the implementation of programs and policies based on the law. Unfortunately, most of these groups espouse a radical feminist ideology that reduces the complex issues of abuse to "women good, men bad" -- a secular religion with the patriarchy as the devil. Take this tidbit from the website of the Arizona Coalition Against Domestic Violence: "All men benefit from the violence of batterers. There is no man who has not enjoyed the male privilege resulting from male domination reinforced by the use of physical violence. . . . Battering by individual men keeps all women in line." This is hateful stuff.

Congress should have directed each state to create a domestic violence board to oversee the implementation of Violence Against Women Act programs, with no more than a quarter or a third of the seats going to members of battered women's groups and the rest to scholars, mental health professionals, and community activists.

In addition, the gender-specific title of the legislation still perpetuates the notion that violence against women deserves special concern. A gender-neutral title such as "The Family Violence and Sexual Assault Prevention Act" would have sent a much better message.

Still, the bill creates new opportunities to ensure fairness in domestic violence services, and that counts for a great deal. These opportunities should not be missed.

Cathy Young is a contributing editor at Reason magazine. Her column appears regularly in the Globe.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/11/1830207.shtml

Colombia town requires all men to carry condoms

Matt · 11 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "I suppose this law applies even to men that are not sexually active.
Also, carrying a condom is not the same as USING a condom, but this point is naturally lost on the stupid people behind this law."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/11/1832220.shtml

ABCNews.com: Retired Husband Syndrome

Matt · 12 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

mens_issues writes "Note the latest gem from ABCNews.com called "Retired Husband Syndrome." The reference to wanting to toss one's husband out the window is apparently OK in this article - with the roles reversed it would be "domestic violence."

The demeaning article can be found here.

Steve"

Ed. note: A recent MANN post on the divorce boom wating to break in Japan is found here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/11/2332216.shtml

Kathleen Parker Op-ed addresses "Dangers of Cussing Like a Sailor"

Matt · 12 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Apparently loose lips sink more than ships... even minor wisecracks with any implications of sexual tension made by a man in uniform is enough to get him into a military court. Ms. Parker addresses the latest excess of the militarized-P.C.-world here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/11/2337223.shtml

'Off the Chain' Producers have Apology for MRAs

Matt · 12 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Well, not really... take a look:

http://www.offthechain.us/

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/12/1815228.shtml

New Book Recommendation "Women Who Make The World Worse"

Matt · 12 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "In her new book Women Who Make The World Worse and How Their Radical Feminist Assault Is Ruining Our Schools, Families, Military and Sports, author Kate O'Beirne has shown the courage to expose the plan, name the perpetrators and give fair warning to all who will listen. All concerned men and women should buy, and read this book to show the publishing world that there is a market for any authors willing, and courageous enough to stand up and say to the man haters "we have all had enough"."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/12/1817253.shtml

An older version of present domestic violence scares

Matt · 12 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

ahhkaboom writes "An older version of present domestic violence accusations is: White Slavery.

Wikipedia defines this as a moral panic in late 19th century and early 20th century United States, where there was a perception that abduction of (white) girls into forced prostitution was a danger to every young woman.

In this moral panic, the selected scapegoats were Chinese immigrants (known as Yellow peril), who were stereotyped and demonized as white slavers (eg: Thoroughly Modern Millie)."

Ed. note: Note the off-site link at the bottom of the entry leading to here, discussing the current scare regarding "trafficking in women" by one Jo Doezema.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/12/1828238.shtml

Enlightenment Japanese Style?

Thomas · 12 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This article is definitely written from the "It's men's fault but women are blamed. Waaaaa!" perspective. Nevertheless, it presents some interesting points about what seems to be the Japanese equivalent of American men's Marriage Strike. The odd thing to me is that it implies that Japanese men have turned away from sex, whereas the US has a hearty hook-up scene. Maybe Japanese men just prefer to spank the bishop while preserving their integrity and sanity.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/12/1848259.shtml

Support Groups in or Near Orlando, Florida?

Scott · 13 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

We've been contacted by someone who is going through an intense divorce, and is looking for other men's groups or male-friendly support resources in or near the Orlando, Florida area. Does anyone know of anything around there? Please post anything in the comments section here if you can. It would also be of help to post any internet resources such as e-mail lists or forums that might be useful to someone in the midst of this kind of crisis. Thank you for your help!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/13/1833218.shtml

Mona Charen: Enemy of Feminism But No Friend of Men

Matt · 14 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Columnist Mona Charen writes about Kate O'Beirne's new book "Women Who Make the World Worse".

To use a quote by Charen:
"Against the better judgment of generals and admirals, women have been given more and more access to combat, to the point where scores of women have been killed and wounded in Iraq."

SCORES of women have been killed and wounded in Iraq!! Is that REALLY worse than the THOUSANDS of MEN killed and wounded in Iraq?

Apparently, it's not just the feminists that are anti-male. Even the anti-feminists like Charen and O'Beirne are anti-male!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/13/2154250.shtml

NH Bill Aims to Improve Visitation Enforcement

Scott · 15 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Kathleen Parker wrote an excellent editorial about an effort underway in New Hampshire to put some teeth into child visitation orders. Rep. David Bickford is sponsoring the bill, HB 1585, whose idea was originally proposed by psychologist Dr. Stevan Gressitt of Maine. The bill would refer violators of child visitation orders to the state's Department of Health and Human Services to prompt an investigation for child abuse or neglect. New Hampshire's head of DHHS supports the legislation. This bill could help reduce the number of Parental Alienation Syndrome cases in the state, and is definitely a piece of legislation to keep an eye on.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/15/012235.shtml

I Want My 'Lifetime' Back! Fems Mount Attack on Dish Networks

Matt · 17 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "There's an intriguing media battle going on right now as feminists are mounting a P.R. assault on satellite network DISH TV for pulling the plug on the womyn-centric "Lifetime" channel. Claiming that DISH TV, a private company, has no right to "deprive women of their favorite entertainment...." Lifetime's CEO writes -- "DISH has no right to decide for women that they should not have all of the viewing options for which they have paid — especially their favorite networks. The only disservice to women in this dispute is keeping Lifetime off the air." Another Evil Patriarchal plot to make women unhappy?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/17/004241.shtml

Court overturns conviction of woman who killed ex-boyfriend

Matt · 17 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Story here.

Excerpt:

'The high court ruled in a 45-page decision that Cary did not receive a fair trial because instructions about self-defense were not given to the jury. The Supreme Court said Circuit Judge Charles D. Griffith Jr., who presided over the trial, erred in keeping that information from the jury.'
"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/17/008220.shtml

CBS/Tom Selleck promote more sexual violence vs. men

Matt · 17 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

SJones writes "Sunday night, January 15, CBS ran a Tom Selleck movie, Jesse Stone: Night Passage in which the so-called hero, Sheriff Jesse Stone, goes to his very first call as sheriff to a domestic dispute. At the house he finds Stephen Baldwin playing the lesbian-feminst stereotype of a divorced man. Baldwin says obnoxious things, but has no weapons and does not make any threatening motions towards anyone. Tom Selleck then kicks Baldwin in the groin."

Click "Read more..." for more."They focused on Stephen Baldwin's suffering, dragging it out for as long as possible as if the audience will of course enjoy it and thus it needs to be given as much attention as possible. Tom Selleck then leaves. The story clearly intends for him to seem heroic for having sexually assaulted a divorced man who was standing in his own living room, but to anyone who considers sexual assault of a man, especially by a police officer who has absolutely no justification for it, to be a hate crime this scene was in itself a crime.

Variety Online said in their review of this sexist misandric scene, "The prequel also affords Stone a chance to begin breaking in his staff, which must grow accustomed to his little eccentricities, from bringing his dog to the office to settling a domestic dispute call by giving the pugnacious husband (Stephen Baldwin, with maybe the worst hairdo ever) a swift kick where it will do the most good.". Clearly, Variety thinks sexual abuse of men is a good thing, too, and apparently wants to see our police using and abusing it as often as possible, which is what in fact will occur as our society increasingly accepts, encourages, and even celebrates this gender-specific hate-crime against males.

Write to CBS and complain about their sexism and celebration of sexual abuse. Write to Tom Selleck, if you can find an address, and tell him how you feel about him producing and staring in this misandric hate-film. And write to Variety and tell them what a bunch of sexist pigs they are for celebrating sexual assault of an unarmed non-violent man by a police officer. Don't let this keep happening without complaining every single time. It's getting much, much worse with each passing year that the mens' movement does virtually nothing about it."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/17/1819213.shtml

"Just Another 12 Dead Men"

Matt · 18 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Feature submission addressing the deaths of the 12 miners in West Virginia, and how they are part of a flood of largely unrecognized male victims of workplace accidents/violence.

Click "Read more..." to read this outstanding essay.“Just Another 12 Dead Men”

by Mike Spaniola

Memorial services were held recently for the 12 men who died in West Virginia’s Sago Mine. The men died Jan. 2 after returning to the mine from the holiday break. An investigation continues to determine what went wrong.

The tragic death toll in the West Virginia mining accident is ironic. Every day of the year, an average of 12 men die in this country in work-related incidents [1](.pdf file). We are often reminded of the more than 2,000 deaths suffered by U.S. Armed Forces in the Afghanistan and Iraq. But each year, that grisly death toll is reached in the U.S. workplace by the end of May.

A majority of these deaths are white males and typically cut short the lives of the youngest men. (Women account for 8 percent of U.S. workplace deaths.) This annual workplace slaughter of men is ignored by media, making it a truly silent crisis.

Many initial media reports on the mining tragedy referred to the men only as “miners,” which is an odd twist for a media so otherwise gender-conscious. But when men die in war, they are merely “soldiers;” and when men die in construction accidents, they are merely “workers.”

In the article, “Dying at Work,” by Carrie Coolidge for Forbes.com [2], she lays out the statistics but never mentions that more than 90 percent of U.S. workplace deaths inconvenience men, and permanently so. Ms. Coolidge works for a business publication but seems unable to do the math or to discern a statistical omission.

While our country’s death toll from mining operations is regrettable, men elsewhere fare much worse. From 1992 through 2002, mining accidents killed 434 miners in the U.S. and a staggering 59,543 in China. Working hours and conditions in Chinese mines are debilitating, and holidays are rarely given. One survivor from a mining disaster in China’s Lianing province, where 220 men died in two days in February 2005, said he worked without stop for a year because “there is a great demand for coal in the country.” [3]

PC imagery vs. hard reality

When terrorists attacked the TwinTowers on Sept. 11, 2001, the politically correct term “firefighters” applied to dead firemen only. The New York City firefighter death toll from that horrendous day was: men 343, women 0. America as a gender-neutral society seems a swell idea until someone gets hurt.

But it’s an old story. Remember the Titanic? Ninety-four percent of those in first-class who survived and 81 percent of those in second-class were women. A modern take on the chivalrous phrase “women and children first” coincided with the release of the movie, Titanic. The joke was: “How long can a feminist hold her breath?”

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, 5,703 deaths occurred in the U.S. workplace in 2004, a 2 percent increase over 2003. Most of the deaths occurred mainly in construction, agriculture, transportation and law enforcement. In 2003, a total 5,129 men died on the job, an average of more than 12 male deaths every day, weekends and holidays included. More than 70 percent of those deaths were white males, ages 35 to 54. Hispanic men accounted for 15 percent of male workplace deaths that year and male African-American workers, 10 percent.

Ironically, the controversial “Violence Against Women Act” is based on making the workplace safer for women. When the multibillion-dollar VAWA was first passed in 1994 under President Bill Clinton, critics pointed out that relatively few women experienced job-related “assaults and violent acts,” a key category used in granting VAWA federal authority under the Commerce Act. In fact, only about 2 percent of all assaults and violent acts involved women. Incidents in this category include “violence by persons, self-inflicted injury and assaults by animals.” The figure remains nearly the same today.

Nonetheless, our federal legislators renewed VAWA late last year, and, in the process, condoned a millennia-old social norm: men are expendable. Yet imagine the reaction if one were to suggest affirmative action or a “Violence Against Men Act” to bring about true equality in the workplace?

Of course, men can only be victims of other men, and not societal injustice. A letter from a woman printed in the Houston Chronicle recently used the trite feminist excuse: Men have all the power; therefore, men are to blame for the miners’ deaths. Of course, if men had all the power, then women would work the coal mines.

Women consume a great deal more than they produce. Most retail stores -- 75 percent by one estimate -- cater to women and girls. Men largely build these stores and provide the raw materials and transportation for the goods, including the fuel, trucks and jets involved and maintenance of same.

The woman’s comments reflect the reprehensible politics of feminism, which encourage a primal narcissism among followers. And once having succumbed, they are incapable of acknowledging, let alone expressing gratitude, for the millennia of sacrifices made by men on behalf of women.

Mike Spaniola writes political commentary from high atop the Rocky Mountains in central Colorado. He seeks to counter the oxymoron known as mainstream media.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/18/1949212.shtml

F4J Disbands After Blair Planned Kidnap Story

Matt · 19 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "The UK fathers' rights group Fathers 4 Justice has decided to suspend its activities following newspaper reports that fringe elements were plotting to kidnap Tony Blair's son Leo as a publicity stunt. Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/19/0424255.shtml

Netscape.com Rivals MSN for Guerrila Anti-Male Spin

Matt · 19 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I guess the Netscape folks want to compete with MSN so they maintain their "news" portal in much the same vein as MSN. You need only visit their main page to see articles and stories the likes of these: No. 1 Reason Women are Unfaithful (complete with racy strip-tease-like picture) and Man Said to Fake Death, Keep Child Support (complete with inside-the-prison picture).

Summary: Cheating women get sexualized while desperate men get demonized.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/19/0434203.shtml

Sacks Article on Abuse of Restraining Orders

Matt · 19 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes "Glenn Sacks just had an article printed in the Alburquerque Tribune re the David Letterman example of the abuse of restraining orders."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/19/188226.shtml

News Article Describing Men as Lacking Empathy

Matt · 20 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Dan writes "This was a study to determine gender differences in seeing pain in other people. It is slanted to say that men like to see others suffer.
The last paragraph of the article does say that the study might be flawed because the men felt threatened."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/20/0344227.shtml

Men Get Jail, Women and Children Get Housing

Matt · 20 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bulldogo.1 writes "Most Australians are appalled with the way the conservative Federal government treats political asylum seekers here. They are routinely rounded up and immediately placed in detention centres (jails), where they are held for years. In the past some have been freed, but only if they are women or children. The latest chapter in this sorry story again has humane Australians up in arms. But no-one, now or in the past, comments on the gender discrimination of it all."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/20/1646220.shtml

Corporal punishment/double standard/mocking tone

Matt · 20 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "The usual frivolous take on a disgusting double standard. Excerpt:

'Singapore‘s drug laws, which include the death penalty for possession of certain amounts of drugs, provide for different punishments for males and females.

While male offenders can be punished with up to 15 strokes of the rattan cane for drug-related offences, female offenders are exempt from caning.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/20/1648211.shtml

No Jail Time for Female Statutory-Raping Citrus County Teacher

Matt · 20 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "No jail time for Citrus County, FL teacher. Excerpt:

'Howard said Lilley received the reduced sentence because the girl's father didn't want to press charges. The vocational teacher and softball coach was arrested Nov. 1 after the girl told deputies about their three-month relationship that began in September. Lilley said it was consensual.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/20/1650252.shtml

Homeless Men Ignored While "Bag Lady Syndrome" Makes News

Matt · 20 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I saw this and wanted to scream. The media ignores the relatively much larger numbers of homeless/shelterless men as compared to homeless/shelterless women, all while running "stories" like this one?? Yes, believe it.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/20/1935212.shtml

14th Annual Conference on Men and Masculinities Scheduled

Matt · 21 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Posted on behalf of Peter Allemano of NCFM-GNY:

The American Men's Studies Association ("AMSA") has scheduled its 14th Annual Conference on Men and Masculinities for April 7 - 9, 2006 at the Ypsilanti Marriott at Eagle Crest, in Ypsilanti, Michigan (which is near Detroit); this year's theme is "No Man is an Island: Masculinities-in-Relation."

Click "Read more..." for more.Edward M. Stephens, M.D., President of NCFM's Greater New York Chapter, submitted a proposal for a presentation at the AMSA conference, "A Roadmap for an International Department of Men's Studies with a Named Chair." The proposal has been accepted, and Dr. Stephens writes:

"Now the work begins. I need to have in my hands a print-out of every gender program in the U.S. From there I want to see what is available internationally. I understand the University of Leeds has a department of men's studies, etc.

"I would hope to have input from economists, anthropologists, sociologists, historians of culture, family law specialists, social policy experts, biologists, epidemiologists, educators, etc. so that a truly larger picture of men's studies can emerge. Anything that can be done to encourage participation by the international community will be crucial to broaden the scope of the proposed studies."

Dr. Stephens can be contacted via e-mail at ems3md-at-yahoo.com.

At last year's AMSA conference in Nashville, TRANSITIONS editor Jason Leatherman and I manned an exhibitor's table for NCFM, where we greeted attendees, gave away literature and answered questions. We plan a "repeat performance" in Ypsilanti, and anyone who would like to join us for this event is more than welcome to do so. As reported in TRANSITIONS, we took turns manning the table, which enabled us to attend presentations too -- so the more volunteers we have this year, the more presentations all of us will be able to attend!

For more information on AMSA and its conference, visit AMSA's website at http://www.mensstudies.org/. As the dates of the conference draw near, more details will be available on that site, including a complete schedule and discount rate reservation information for the Marriott.

Best wishes,

Peter Allemano

Member, Board of Directors

National Coalition of Free Men, Greater New York Chapter

http://www.themalevoice.org/

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/21/013249.shtml

Husband Killer Gets Life

Matt · 22 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "Here is a good article about a woman who lost custody of her children to her ex and ambushed and murdered him to regain custody. She was also $7,000 behind on her child support; another deadbeat mom. The ex also got the house too!

It is significant to note what the now convicted murderous felon's mother said at the sentencing. She said, "You cannot take your children away from a mother and come out with the same person," Betty Rountree said. "It's almost like God gave children to a mother, and the father comes second."

Only a real misandrous b1tch would say something like this but unfortunately too many family court judges have the same negative attitude."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/21/2130201.shtml

NYT Reviews "Self-Made Man" by Lisa McNulty

Matt · 22 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here is the review. Excerpt:

"But in its best moments, "Self-Made Man" transcends its premise altogether, offering not an undercover woman's take on male experience, but simply a fascinating, fly-on-the-wall look at various unglamorous male milieus that are well off the radar of most journalists and book authors.

...

"Ned's whistle-stop tour of modern manhood also takes him to a Roman Catholic monastery, a lap-dance club, a men's consciousness-raising group and on a series of awkward dates with women. (Amusingly, Vincent is utterly astounded by the amount of rejection and hauteur that heterosexual men put up with.) Conspicuously absent from 'Self-Made Man,' though, are men leading full, contented lives. Perhaps this is a function of the limitations of Vincent's experiment - after all, a "man" created out of thin air and stoppelpaste can't very well insinuate himself into an elegant country club or a loving nuclear family."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/21/2240257.shtml

Articles on the Education Crisis among Boys

Matt · 23 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Surprisingly, MSN features these two stories, this one by "a feminist scholar" and this one which includes off-links to the works of Lionel Tiger and Michael Thompson. It seems they are part of the Jan. 30, 2006 issue of Newsweek.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/23/045213.shtml

RADAR Alert: Lynch Language in OK Child Abuse Story

Matt · 23 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A recent article in The Oklahoman, the largest newspaper in Oklahoma, sticks to the old formula about domestic violence and child abuse: men = abusers, women and children = victims. The article, by columnist Tom Lindley, keys off the recent deaths of Kelsey Smith-Briggs and Caitlin Wooten.

Click "Read more..." for more.

Lynch Language in OK Child Abuse Story

Sadly, the article ignores the fact that men are now recognized by the Violence Against Women Act as victims of domestic violence. The article neglects to mention that in most cases of child abuse, it.s the mother who is the perpetrator. This is what the federal Administration on Children and Families says about child abuse [http://www.acf.dhhs.gov/programs/cb/pubs/cm03/index.htm]:

- 58% of persons who commit child abuse and neglect are female
- In 31% of child abuse deaths, the perpetrator was the mother acting alone, compared to only 18% of fathers acting alone.

By combining an example of a wife who'd been battered for 20 years with the stories of the two murdered girls, the article misleads the reader into thinking that the greatest danger to children is from their fathers.

The truth is, children face far greater risk when their mother's love-interest is someone other than their biological father. Two-year-old Kelsey, was beaten to death her STEP-father, possibly with her mother's help. Teenaged Caitlin, was gunned down by her mother's ex-boyfriend.

Boys are at even greater risk of death and injury from their mothers than girls are. If Mr. Lindley had wanted to do a fair-minded story, he would not have limited his story solely to murdered girls.

And he might have mentioned Caren McDonald of Choctaw, OK who is serving a prison term after admitting she beat her husband with a baseball bat on June 21, 2002.

Worse, Mr. Lindley's article uses inflammatory language similar to the words used a century ago by Southern newspapers to vilify Black men:

- Mr. Lindley claims there is a 'growing number of perpetrators of violence' without providing even a single statistic.
- Lindley repeats the old feminist myth that men batter their wives because of 'the need to be in control of someone else'.

Each year, hundreds of thousands of restraining orders are issued around the United States against men accused of domestic abuse. As David Heleniak documented (.pdf file), these orders frequently violate the fundamental civil rights of men.

But apparently those constitutional violations do not concern Mr. Lindley, who actually pushes for strengthening these protection orders. In fact according to Mr. Lindley, the time for debate has long passed:

"As long as this debate rages, so too will the violence directed at women and children."

Contact columnist Tom Lindley and his editors at The Oklahoman and tell them -- politely -- the truth about domestic violence and child abuse. Here.s the contact information:

Tom Lindley: tlindley-at-cox.net

Letters to the editor: yourviews-at-oklahoman.com

Ed Kelly, editor: ekelley-at-oklahoman.com

Sue Hale, executive editor: shale-at-oklahoman.com

Mike Shannon: managing editor: mshannon-at-oklahoman.com

Joe Hight, managing editor: jhight-at-oklahoman.com

Telephone: 405-936-0175

Fax: 405-475-3183

Snail mail:

P.O. Box 25125

Oklahoma City, OK 73125

Do More than Demand Justice for Kelsey, Caitlin

By Tom Lindley

The Oklahoman

January 19, 2006

http://newsok.com/article/1737520/?template=

If fear is the flip side of rage, then too many women and children in Oklahoma have their battered faces plastered on the wrong side of the coin.
When child abuse and domestic abuse are carried out to the extreme, when a 2-year-old such as Kelsey Smith-Briggs of Meeker or a teen such as Caitlin Wooten of Ada is killed, it becomes unfathomable.

Then, for a short time, it gets personal, which usually means more tough talk by the state Legislature and law enforcement, followed by new laws and more rows of prison cells.

But the question always comes down to whether Oklahoma's compassion for women and children will outlast the rage of a growing number of perpetrators of violence or will it disappear with the rest of yesterday's news.

Those who see the bruises up close say there is too much evidence the judicial system doesn't push hard enough to hold accountable those perpetrators who have a history of abuse.

Can a state that ranks so low nationally in so many categories that matter -- income and education attainment -- and so high in others -- the number of women incarcerated, teen date violence, alcohol and methamphetamine use and the number of women killed by their partners -- overcome its reluctance to get involved in somebody else's business?

"We have a pioneering, independent streak in Oklahoma where you pull yourself up by your boot straps and don't ask for help," said Pamela Cross, executive director of central Oklahoma HeartLine, a 24-hour support service.

"We also are shaped by our own experiences, good or bad, and unfortunately, we all don't start out on a level playing field."

Cries for help
Can Oklahomans resist the temptation to blame the victims? She didn't have dinner on the table on time or keep the kids quiet enough, so she must have asked for it, right?

That would be the only way Jan Peery, chief executive officer of the Oklahoma City YWCA, which operates three hot lines, can explain why a judge would order a battered wife who after 20 years of abuse finally got the nerve to go to the court for help to go across the hall with her husband and make up with him.

If it's true that children who witness violence in the home are more disposed to resort to violence or end up victims of it as adults, is the proliferation of computer-game violence and violence on television and at the movies a good learning tool?

Those are the questions some of those who hear the cries for help and understand the root causes of violence would like for Oklahomans to honestly answer. If the statistics aren't enough to demand answers, maybe Kelsey's sweet face will.

She died Oct. 11 after suffering blunt force trauma to the abdomen, genital area, head, torso and extremities. Her stepfather is charged with first-degree murder and her mother is under investigation.

Caitlin Wooten died when her mother's ex-boyfriend, who a few weeks earlier had kidnapped her mother at gunpoint and was out of jail on bond, kidnapped the high school junior from school and shot her to death.

Violence rages on Such hideous crimes send all of us searching for answers.

For some, the blame for violent behavior begins with "he was born with a mean streak" and ends with "he has no one to blame but himself" or "she was an unfit mother."

For those trained to understand human behavior, it often ends with a partial indictment of a society that gives some kids their first opportunity to get three meals a day when it puts them in prison.

As long as this debate rages, so too will the violence directed at women and children.

"It seems to me we have to look at how someone loses the ability to relate to someone else's pain," said Cross, whose hot line fielded almost 50,000 calls for help last year.

Substance abuse, financial and emotional stress, depression and the need to be in control of someone else when everything else is spinning out of control remain high on the list of causes of violence.

A cut-off notice from the utility company can send someone over the edge.

A lot of Oklahomans don't know it, but there is help on the other end of the line -- the kind of assistance that can help them solve problems and redirect their anger.

"I'm not trying to excuse child abuse or domestic violence, but it helps when we understand it," Cross said. "And it makes it easier for people to get assistance before they act on their anger."

As for the rest of us, we need to do more than demand justice for Kelsey and Caitlin, although that would be a good start.

Among the suggestions:

End the culture of silence in Oklahoma and report suspected child abuse as state law already demands.

Make necessary changes in the child protection system and require people charged with kidnapping to prove they are not a public threat before they can post bond.

Strengthen and enforce victim protection orders and implement an electronic notification system to alert victims when offenders move through the criminal justice system.

Adopt Oklahoma County's system of educating law enforcement and the judicial system in dealing with crimes related to domestic abuse or sexual assault.

Lobby lawmakers not to cut counseling services and social programs aimed at preventing abuse and neglect.

"There is no real simple answer and there is not one solution," Peery said. "Hopefully, these high-profile cases will make all of us a little more aware."

The hope is that some day maybe a child won't have to die to get our attention.

Date of RADAR Release: January 22, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner: http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/23/1910206.shtml

Domestic Violence and Murder/Suicide

Matt · 24 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Shattererd Men writes "The Early Show (CBS) has a segment about David Brame. He was a police chief who murdered his wife and then took his own life. There have been charges of domestic violence but we are only hearing one side of this story.

Check Shattered Men for the other side of the story."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/24/0213229.shtml

Miami Herald Columnist Defends Paternity Fraud

Matt · 24 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bulldogo.1 writes "The author of this misses the whole point. She says that parenthood isn't about biology, but is about who raises the child and I agree. What is wrong about the situation is that the court only ackowledges fatherhood as an obligation to provide financially. It does not recognise the deception and fraud the mother has committed, not only on the ex-husband, but her own child. How much psychological damage is done when a parent lies to a child about this."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/24/0219200.shtml

"Break Your Date with Death"

Matt · 24 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

MSN surprises from time to time, and did so today with this article discussing the most common ways men meet untimely demises, and how to avoid becoming a statistic.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/24/0352218.shtml

Antelope Valley Press covers DV shelter for both sexes

Matt · 25 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes "This past Sunday the Antelope Valley Press ran a story about Valley Oasis, the only DV shelter in California, perhaps the U.S., that takes both male and female victims.

Valley Oasis' former director was put through "continuous abuse" by other shelter directors for helping men, according to her sworn declaration at: http://www.ncfmla.org/pdf/overberg.pdf.

Men travel hundreds of miles for services at Valley Oasis, in the remote desert community of Lancaster, California, because nobody else will help them."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/25/0113203.shtml

US Army Characterized as "Thin Green Line"

Matt · 25 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This story is important because whether the report is accepted or not publicly by the government for what it says, eventually any shortfall in the supply of troops to fight for whatever reasons for the United States or its perceived interests will have to be "augmented" in a "cost-effective" manner. Anyone who still thinks that the draft is not on the table, think again. Note the results for the poll associated with the article, too. As of this writing, "Bring back the draft" is neck-and-neck for the lead among the responses.

So what does this story have to do with men's rights or interests directly as such, you ask? Well, suppose men and women would be drafted in proportion to their population and sent into combat also in proportion? Not any time soon.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/25/0123225.shtml

Shocking Video of Woman Abusing Boy

Matt · 26 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Sumanth writes "Blogged:

Women who abuse male kids create probable criminals of future.

Male kids who are tortured by women (mothers, aunts, sisters, maid servants) in their infancy, grow up with sub-conscious post traumatic stress, which makes them violent towards women (if they get cornered by women)." Click "Read more..." for more."Every year, millions of male kids are brutally abused or killed by women all over the world.

Please see this shocking video, in which a maid servant is brutally abusing a male kid:

http://www.neethu.com/abbasiya/

(Viewers are advised to exercise discretion, as this video can be quite disturbing)

Do feminists have any answers for this kind of violence by women? What do those bloggers and so called progressivists, who suck up to the feminazis, have to say about this proof of female violence on an infant, who can hardly explain this torture to anyone?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/26/0151209.shtml

AAUW Releases Latest Foolishness on "Sexual Harrassment" on College Campuses

Matt · 26 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This story speaks for itself. "Boys in crisis" hits the media, followed immediately by a story regarding how things are so tough for the girls because of the way those nasty boys are. Answer? Get those boys off campus, of course!

Shortly, I predict you will see very few men on college campuses, thanks to the likes of the AAUW and their feminist friends and sympathizers. Men with higher educations will be the exception (by 10%), not the rule, and we all will have to live with the consequences.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/26/1821201.shtml

Schoolboy's Bias Suit

Matt · 26 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Return of the King writes "A Milton, MA High School senior has filed a federal discrimination suit, saying his school is unfair to boys. Excerpt:

'At Milton High School, girls outnumber boys by almost 2 to 1 on the honor roll. In Advanced Placement classes, almost 60 percent of the students are female.

It's not that girls are smarter than boys, said Doug Anglin, a 17-year-old senior at the high school.

Girls are outperforming boys because the school system favors them, said Anglin, who has filed a federal civil rights complaint contending that his school discriminates against boys.

Among Anglin's allegations: Girls face fewer restrictions from teachers, like being able to wander the hallways without passes, and girls are rewarded for abiding by the rules, while boys' more rebellious ways are punished.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/26/1824228.shtml

U.S. Military Releases Five Iraqi Women

Matt · 26 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "We DON'T negotiate with terrorists UNLESS a woman is the hostage. This is ABSOLUTE PROOF of a complete disregard for men's lives (how many male hostages and soldiers who were brutally murdered could have been saved if we gave in to the terrorist's demands?) over that of woman. I am left speechless..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/26/1825212.shtml

"I wish I had killed him. I really do hate him." - Welsh Woman Assaults Boyfriend over Job-Seeking

Matt · 26 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Steven Brown writes "So what kind of sentence would a man have got if he'd assaulted his girlfriend like this? Excerpt:

'The argument started about their income. Thomas ripped off Mr Smith's glasses and started punching him to the face.

.

.

.

'She admitted inflicting actual bodily harm and was given a two-year community rehabilitation order.'

I'm sure it wouldn't have been this: 'a two-year community rehabilitation order'.

Sickening."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/26/1829236.shtml

Female Wrestler Arrested as Most-Wanted Murderer in Mexico

Matt · 26 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

It seems the most-wanted serial killer in Mexico is believed to be a female wrestler. Read it here. All the victims also appear to have been old women. Innocent until proven guilty, I say, so wait and see what happens. Of interest to those who wonder about "gender blinders," look at the denial in action:

'Mexico City prosecutors said fingerprint evidence linked Ms Barraza to at least 10 murders carried out in recent years. She was arrested at the scene of the killing of 82-year-old Ana Maria Reyes on Wednesday in the Venustiano Carranza area of the capital.

After reports that a woman had carried out the killings, police suspected a man in woman's clothes.'

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/26/1835254.shtml

Pilots are worth the same as stewardesses?

Matt · 27 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

RandomMan writes "According to this recent decision here in Canada, highly trained and experienced commercial pilots and skilled aircraft mechanics should not be paid more than women who spend most of their time handing out peanuts, serving lousy food, scowling at passengers and forcing males from their pre-assigned seats next to unaccompanied children (story here). According to this same logic, an unskilled cleaner working at a computer company should be able to sue for discrimination because she makes less than an electrical engineer, programmer or even the CEO. How does working for the "same organization in the same business" make everyone's work equally valuable? Would male cabin crews expect to be paid as much as the pilots or mechanics? Should female orderlies be paid as much as male surgeons?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/27/192207.shtml

"Vagina Monologues" Author has New Show

Matt · 27 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

For those interested in tracking the theatrical efforts of Eve Ensler (author of The Vagina Monologues), note the showing of her latest production, The Good Body.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/27/197231.shtml

"Institutionally Racist"? Or is it more like "Institutionally Sexist"?

Matt · 27 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The entire matter of the sexes of the two young victims in this case has been entirely ignored. Had the victims been boys of any ethnic background, I have no doubt the story would not have made headlines in the UK, and wouldn't have here in the US either... or Germany, Australia, New Zealand, France, Spain, Belgium, or... you get the idea.

Amazing the level of denial going on here, isn't it?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/27/1929210.shtml

Pregnant Mother of Fourteen Arrested for Abuse and Neglect

Matt · 27 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

So I wonder how this will get spinned into her being a victim? What will it be, institutional dereliction perhaps or maybe, just maybe... it's all their father's (or fathers') fault!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/27/1936225.shtml

School Stands by Falsely-Accused Aide

Matt · 28 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes "Link here. Excerpt:

'Fla. School Stands by Aide Hit by Father

BRADENTON, Fla. — A teenager who accused a teacher's aide of molesting her _ prompting the girl's father to march into school and punch the man in the face _ made up the story, officials said.

School surveillance cameras show the aide was not even in the room when the 15-year-old said she was touched inappropriately, said Lakewood Ranch High School Superintendent Roger Dearing.'

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/28/0215206.shtml

Marriage in U.K. Soon to Mean Lifetime Wage Extortion

Matt · 30 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "This piece linked from Angry Harry's web site covers a critically important court case in Britain that will determine whether a divorcing man will be obligated to provide a percentage of his future (post-divorce) earnings to his ex-wife. He already must give her 50% of everything acquired during the marriage. Excerpt:

'This will be argued on the grounds that his money-making potential should be treated as an income-yielding asset that Kenneth could not have built up without the contribution of Julia in building the home and looking after the children. Kenneth McFarlane is senior tax partner at the accountants Deloitte, earning more than £750,000 a year, and his marriage to Julia lasted more than 16 years. She gave up her career as a solicitor with a City firm to look after their children.
James Pirrie, a solicitor with Family Law in Partnership, who is acting for Julia McFarlane, said: "The fruits of the partnership should be shared equally. One of the things created by a marriage is an earning capacity.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/30/1934253.shtml

Granny got her gun...

Matt · 30 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

MR writes *"Man Fatally Shot by Ex-Wife's Grandmother

"A man picking up his young son for a supervised court visit was shot twice at point-blank range by the boy's 81-year-old great-grandmother and died of his injuries, police said.

Alex Reyes, 26, was shot Saturday while picking up his 18-month-old son, said Jim Amormino, a spokesman for the Orange County Sheriff's Department.

"There was no argument," he said. 'She just pulled the gun out and started firing.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/30/1935231.shtml

Help from Hollywood?: Alec Baldwin Wants Custody Battle Book to Help Desperate Dads

Matt · 30 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bulldogo.1 writes "Good to see public identities doing things that bring the plight of fathers into the media. As more and more men like Baldwin or are put throught the divorce and custody circus, the more men's rights will be in the public forum. They have the fame and financial resources to help men's plight. Sadly, it's the only way that people will sit up and listen. Maybe Baldwin would be interested in doing a movie that tells the real story. Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/30/1937254.shtml

RadFem Playwright Wendy Wasserstein Dies At 55

Matt · 30 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "Yet another overrated misandric radfem checks out at age 55. First Dworkin, now feminist playwright Wendy Wasserstein dies.

Her seriously misandric works included The Heidi Chronicles (not to be confused with the Sci-Fi classic, The Martian Chronicles) and of course the all time favorite, The Sisters Rosensweig.

"The Heidi Chronicles," is about an insecure feminist heroine's life over a 20-year period beginning in the late 1960s and changes her attitudes about herself, men and other women. "The Sisters Rosensweig" concerned three female siblings who find strength in themselves and in each other. The usual self-serving stuff. Yawn!

Has anyone heard from that over-the-hill (70+ years old!) arch-misandrist, Gloria Steinhem lately?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/30/1946236.shtml

Oh, the poor, lonely women who rape.

Thomas · 31 January 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This piece, justifying the rape of male youths by women, is from Pravda. You'll be happy to see of the Mary Kay Leturno case "Luckily, the story ended quite happily, and the woman was pardoned." You'll also learn that "Men are more inclined to employ women's weak points for their selfish ends." This latter statement is followed by a description of how David Ashbrook was allegedly driven from his job for refusing to have sex with his female boss. (That's an example of how "Men are more inclined to employ women's weak points for their selfish ends"???)

Well, in Russia, there are now many more abortions than births and the population is dropping by nearly 1 million a year. Perhaps this form of anti-male madness has something to do with that national collapse?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/01/31/1648220.shtml

Woman Goes Postal - Literally

Matt · 1 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "And they would have us believe that women NEVER do this kind of thing!"

Ed. note: In the MSN story, it has a mid-article red-colored link: Workplace shootings almost always by men. Suppose an article on the topic of, oh, I dunno, say sexual extortion by a male of a female, would ever headline with "Sexual extortion almost always perpetrated by women"?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/01/0447253.shtml

Joint Custody to be the Norm in Italy

Matt · 1 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes "The Italian Senate just approved a new law that will make joint custody the norm in Italy. Excerpt:

"The legislation makes joint custody of children the norm when parents split up. This means single-parent custody - which usually goes to the mother - will now only be granted in a minority of cases."

Some fathers' rights groups, however, point out that the bill is too watered down."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/01/0449240.shtml

US woman accused of sex with Kenyan street boys

Matt · 1 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "And here I thought she raped them; luckily it was just 'indecent assault.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/01/0453200.shtml

U.S. abortion policy violates men’s rights

Thomas · 1 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here's an editorial on choice for men. It was actually published in the newspaper of a US university, the University of Northern Iowa.

The fembots and femboys must be going crazy with the way things are developing these days.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/01/0629241.shtml

Two 14-year-old girls held over murder of a disabled cabbie

Matt · 3 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Tirryb writes "Another story of female violence - News.com.au reports here on two 14 year old girls, arrested for the beating and murder of a disabled taxi driver. The poor guy had only been back at work for a week, after being robbed at gunpoint twice in the past...

They are also being held over other robberies. I wonder how long it will be before a man somewhere is blamed for their behaviour, poor things."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/03/0118211.shtml

Too Many Men Is Bad, Too Many Women is Good

Matt · 3 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

RandomMan writes "This is unbelievable. At the University of Utah, they're going to start programs to attract more women, including day care and women-only scholarships because according to the article, the university "bucks the trend" and actually has the audacity to have more males than females attending undergraduate programs, whereas the national trend is the reverse, with men outnumbered by women almost everywhere.

Their hypocrisy is unbelieveable. In effect, the article is saying: "women don't outnumber men, so something must be done to correct this situation". There is absolutely no interest in "equality", Title IX or correcting the overwhelming discrimination against men in the educational system. Where are the programs to correct the national over-representation of women on college and university campuses?

Let's hope they teach both irony and Orwell in freshman English Lit: 'All people are created equal, but some are more equal than others.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/03/0120224.shtml

Andrea Yates leaves Jail for Treatment

Matt · 3 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Well, there she goes. Yet another horrendous female murderer gets "treatment" instead of jail time. This is especially poignant for me since when I was falsely accused of rape last year and arrested and incarcerated for four days, my bail was set at $200,000 as well. Let's do the math: False Rape Allegation = $200,000 bail, A woman murdering five children = $200,000 bail. Yep, sounds about right."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/03/0155212.shtml

OH Supreme Court Upholds Paternity Testing

Matt · 4 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes:"The article confirms that about 30% of DNA tests are turning out negative. A link to the document from the American Association of Blood banks confirming this figure is here (.pdf file).

Marc

Click "Read more..." for excerpt.

Cleveland Plain Dealer

No limit on proving paternity

Thursday, February 02, 2006

Donna J. Miller

Plain Dealer Reporter

The Ohio Supreme Court upheld a state law Wednesday that gives men unlimited time to use DNA proof that they are not biological fathers, which means they could stop paying child support.

Previously, men had one year to challenge support orders with DNA. The law removing the time limit, enacted by the General Assembly in 2000, was challenged by the Cuyahoga County Prosecutors Office.

Thousands of the 685,000 child support orders in Ohio could be overturned, sending mothers and child support enforcement agencies searching for the real fathers.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/03/206243.shtml

Grieving Dads

Matt · 4 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "This may be interesting to fathers who have lost babies and felt ignored as if a fathers' grief is a much lesser emotion than that of the mother."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/04/1752214.shtml

Man Forced to Marry - Four Times?

Matt · 4 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "Is this more funny than sad or more sad than funny? I don't know whether to feel sorry for the guy or to laugh. And I thought men were king in Arab countries. If women are victims and men are victims, who's in charge? If the mother can force this guy to marry against his will twice, just like the father, how victimized are Arab women, really?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/04/1753244.shtml

Betty Friedan has Died

Matt · 5 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Betty Friedan has reportedly died at the age of 85.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/05/0019226.shtml

TV Interview with Kate O'Beirne

Thomas · 5 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

C-Span2 BookTV had an interview this evening with Kate O'Beirne, author of "Women Who Make the World Worse." It will be replayed tomorrow at 6 and 9 PM. (Apparently that's Eastern Standard Time.) She did a fine job.

For more info see this page.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/05/0235239.shtml

WA Residents Asked to Protest "The Vagina Monologues"

Matt · 5 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

From e-mailed announcement, posted with permission:

GREAT NEWS!! There is a nationally organized protest against both (1) the play "Vagina Monologues" and against (2) the anti-male hate groups that are promoting it nationwide.

Click "Read more..." for more.BAD NEWS!! This play shockingly and wrongly demeans females as victimized sex-objects. It intently degrades and exploits males as evil, oppressive, sexist/sexual monsters. The hate groups that produce this play are likely funded, directly or indirectly, by your male taxes via VAWA. Nearly all campuses that produce the play are definitely funded by your taxes.

WORSE NEWS!! These hate groups are attempting to steal Valentine's Day with a nationwide blitz via this play. (Remember the cruelly bogus protests of the Super Bowl, years ago?)

BEST NEWS!! There is very cheap, immediate, positive and effective action you can take, NOW. Many college officials are in an honest quandary, juggling strongly opposing arguments about producing this controversial play. They need your help; and you deserve to be heard. You are paying their salaries.

Contact your local college officials regarding this play, now Give them honest, positive reasons to disallow this play on their campuses. You are invited to use any of the several arguments in the following paragraphs. (If you us other arguments, please let me hear about them.)

Be confident and self-empowered! Our prior protests to our local public television stations and to our local Claire's stores were a success! It proves that when we voice ourselves, we have the rising power to turn back the intellectual and commercial forces that have intently degraded, exploited, and lethally disposed us males for generations.

Also below is a list of college campuses in Washington State where applications to produce "Vagina Monologues" in recent years are reported. Wherever or not the play actually occurred, the list is a measure of the historic presence of such virulent, organized anti-male hate and bigotry. It best indicates where this play may (again?) be produced in the immediate future, WITH YOUR OWN TAX/BLOOD MONEY! You and your local tax-funded college officials need and deserve to be mutually aware of your legitimate, legal opposition. All but three or four listed campuses are tax-funded.

Many college officials have acquiesced to this play when confronted by promoters' assertions of "artistic freedom", "freedom of speech" and the necessary expose of the “domestic violence and rape suffered by 25% of college coeds”. If so, consider any of the following.

Painting the swastika or burning a cross on a college campus is not “artistic freedom” or “freedom of speech”. It is a hate crime. The rape statistics given are the proven wrongful fabrications and deceit of hate groups that have some insidious similarities to the Nazi Party and the Klu Klux Klan. They are not dissimilar from the Salem witch trials or the intellect of Senator Joseph McCarthy. These tax-funded campus groups must be held accountable for their hatefully deceitful misinformation and agenda. They commit a rapacious disservice to the generations of tax-paying men who more than pay for the existence of these campus groups. The same men routinely have been—and still are—uniquely and mutely obligated to suffer immeasurable violence for the very existence and freedom of the individuals and resources that serve these groups. It is male blood and money that provides the “artistic freedom”, “freedom of speech”, and secure freedom from truly maiming abuse and truly horrific violence… which this play’s coddled promoters can blithely take so wantonly, monstrously for granted.

(Part II to follow)

Peter Maule

Coordinator

League of Voting Men

425-822-3313

College Campuses in Washington State alleged to be historic sites of "The Vagina Monologues":

Clark College [Community College in Vancouver?]

Washington State University

Central Washington University (Sign Interpreted)

Pacific Lutheran University

Seattle Central Community College (Sign Interpreted)

Western Washington University

Eastern Washington University

University of Washington

Peninsula College

Spokane Falls Community College

Bastyr University

Seattle University

Tacoma Community College

University of Puget Sound (Sign Interpreted)

Skagit Valley College, Whidbey Island campus

Pierce College [Community College in Puyallup and S. Tacoma?]

Evergreen State College

Olympic Community College

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/05/0648252.shtml

"Commitment-phobia" = Sanity?

Matt · 6 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Martian Bachelor writes "In the light of Betty F.'s recent death, and all the subsequent reports about how much women's lives have changed, I thought this was a bit of a reality check...

From "Divorce settlements: B.A.C.K.L.A.S.H."

'The lawyer responsible for one of Britain's most influential divorce settlements has told The Independent on Sunday she 'would not blame men' for deciding not to marry if a divorce settlement before the House of Lords is not overturned.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/05/2039239.shtml

Wake for an Indian Warrior

Matt · 6 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Clancy writes "Nothing to do with Men's Rights but everything to do with men. I cried ... Link here."

Ed. note: This is a must-see, guys. Take the time to go through the photos.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/06/0350258.shtml

Cathy Young: "The Lost Boys"

Matt · 6 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Return of the King writes "Link here. Excerpt:

IN THE EARLY 1990s, talk about girls as an endangered species was everywhere. There were studies purporting to show that patriarchy-damaged girls suffered a disastrous drop in self-esteem in adolescence. The American Association of University Women published a report titled "How Schools Shortchange Girls," which landed on the front pages of many newspapers. Educators and legislators alike rushed to tackle the problem of gender bias that was allegedly keeping girls from reaching their full potential -- despite the fact that, by then, girls were already graduating from America's colleges in higher numbers than boys.'

What will be done for the boys?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/06/1859243.shtml

Dove's "Campaign for Real Beauty" Ignores Boys

Matt · 6 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This made it to the legendary spate of Superbowl advertisements yesterday during Superbowl XL. While most of the advertising, if not all of it, was otherwise touting consumer products such as beer, cars, and skin care lotion (with the usual dose of men getting beat on, made out to look like fools or whatever, etc.), the makers of Dove cleansers managed to tout their latest save-the-girls P/R campaign and to solicit donations for it. [I read that Superbowl ad time this year was $33,000/second - it strikes me they could have used that money instead for their own cause rather than using it to try to get TV viewers to fork over the cash!]

Click "Read more..." for more.In any case, it's P/R campaigns such as these that lead people to believe that only girls have problems like those described. Regulars to MANN already know the statistics on boyhood suicide, drop-out, and alcohol and drug abuse rates, to name a few problem areas boys have these days. What do the makers of Dove suppose such behavior stems from, an overage of self-esteem?

If you agree, please send Dove a note from this page, or call them if you prefer at their given 1-800 number, asking them to stop discriminating against boys, particularly as they show far more in the way of signs of low self-esteem in general than do girls, and instead change their campaign such that it supports all children's healthy growth in self-esteem... or do they think such lofty goals as "inclusivity" only apply to girls?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/06/1914226.shtml

China Paternity Fraud - Ex-Wife Pays!

Matt · 8 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "Looks like China has the right idea. $3100 is not all that much but I suppose it's worth a bit more to them assuming their cost of living is lower over there. I wonder how much it would be if we equalized theirs and our two countries' costs of living."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/07/237222.shtml

Dishonored Colonel Spreads False Alarms about Rape of Female Troops in Army

Matt · 8 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Clancy writes "This is from a military BLOG called "The Mudville Gazette". I found it a good read. It's a story that I have not heard about. Perhaps some of you guys have. Unfortunately, it is unabashedly tiltted to the right which will likely offend many members of this group. Nevertheless, it puts the spotlight on victim feminism in action within our military."

Click "Read more..." for excerpt.Excerpt:

Death Before Dishonor

Greyhawk

The latest Iraq war urban legend:

Several female service members have died of dehydration because they refused to drink liquids late in the day due to fear of being raped by male soldiers if they had to use the women's latrine after dark.

This is absurd for countless reasons - the most obvious being that death by dehydration takes a little longer than a couple hours without fluids, even in the hottest conditions.

But this fabrication has an interesting source: Col. Janis Karpinski, former commander of the unit responsible for torturing prisoners at Abu Ghraib. And she's found a sympathetic forum in which to tell the story: The "Commission of Inquiry for Crimes against Humanity Committed by the Bush Administration" - a mock trial sponsored by "Not in Our Name", a group originally founded by members of the Revolutionary Communist Party to protest the US-led war in Afghanistan."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/07/2316215.shtml

Posting troubles on mensactivism.org

Matt · 8 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

All,

Some of you have mentioned in posted comments or by e-mail to MANN admins that you have had problems submitting comments or new stories successfully to MANN.

The problem some are getting is this: After typing in a comment or a story for submission, the user clicks "Post" (or whatever the submission button reads) and after a few seconds, a standard "Unable to display page" error comes up. Frustrating though this is it does not mean the text you have typed is lost! The thing to do when this happens is to click the 'Refresh' button on your web browser. [For the major browsers, this is the third or fourth button from the left at the top of the browser, and looks like two arrows pointing at each other.] You will then get a message saying you are re-posting this data and are you sure you want to? Click "Yes" or "OK", whichever is the affirmative response in the dialog box for your browser. The post should complete OK on the second attempt but if it doesn't, click 'Refresh' to try again.

I have had this problem myself occasionally and this always works to make sure my typing hasn't been for naught.

-- Matt

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/07/2329249.shtml

Future Ban on Circumcision?

Matt · 8 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Story here. This is about a proposal for a bill that would make laws banning "female genital mutilation" gender neutral is circulating through congress and fifteen state legislatures. The proposal, and the group advocating it, claims infantile circumcision is mutilation and sexual assault done without a child's consent. As a Jewish man and a man opposed to circumcision I have much interest in this topic. I'm curious as to whether there would have to be first amendment exceptions provided for Jews (and perhaps Muslims) for religious freedom purposes."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/08/0313253.shtml

Man wrongly convicted now owes $38,000 in back child support

Matt · 8 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "If this isn't the ultimate in chutzpuh! The guy is sent to prison unjustly for 13 years, child support continues to accrue plus interest and penalties, and they blame it on him as though it would have been possible to have the child support suspended. Neither women nor the government are ever at fault, no matter what!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/08/1929209.shtml

Sweden: More men complain of sex discrimination

Matt · 8 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

al_nbd writes "Story here. Excerpt:

"The number of Swedish men who believe they have been discriminated on the basis of their gender has increased dramatically, according to the equality ombudsman's office, Jämo.

On July 1st last year an amendment was made to the law against discrimination, specifically banning gender discrimination. This has led to a rapid rise in the number of incidents reported by men, who were previously under-represented.

Of 56 cases reported under the new amendment, 45 concerned complaints made by men. Added to a series of complaints under the previous legislation, Jämo is now handling a total of 82 incidents reported by men in 2005, compared to just 23 the year before."

Will the complaints of those men be handled with the same attidude as women's ones? I think discrimination against men will be justified by law soon."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/08/1932239.shtml

"Draft created patriots, respect"

Matt · 8 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Kelly Rice writes
""Draft created patriots, respect"

Whether they wanted it or not.
"

Ed. note: Reverse all gender references in this article and see if it would still be the least bit palatable.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/08/1942227.shtml

Sheriff's Deputies Suspended from Work for Infidelity

Matt · 8 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

klp writes "Deputies in Pinellas County, Florida can now be suspended for cheating on their own spouses or doing another person's spouse.

Query: How will the complaints be handled? Will this give a new retaliation vehicle to criminals? Or vengeful ex's?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/08/1944241.shtml

Wash Post Points to Boys/Men for Girls' Rise in Substance Abuse

Matt · 9 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Seems the girls themselves can't be blamed for it. Read it here. Excerpt:

"It's really sad the girls are winning," said Warren Seigel, chairman of pediatrics at Brooklyn's Coney Island Hospital. "This isn't the game they should be winning at."

.

.

There is no single reason why girls are smoking, drinking and taking pills more than ever. Academics, therapists, teachers and teenagers themselves report that today's young women live in an increasingly stressful environment; many are worried about their appearance, eager to date older boys or recovering from physical or sexual abuse. Unlike young men, who often use illegal substances for an adrenalin rush, teenage girls use alcohol or drugs as an escape."

Only toward the end is parental behavior mentioned as a contributing factor. No one would want to imply "maternal permissiveness" though in any way, given that such isn't P.C., despite the facts that single-parent households are now 28% of all households with children, that 84% of these households are headed by women (ie, are single-mother households), and that the number of single-parent households continues to grow. [You may want to browse more stats and facts on this topic here].

There's so many ways this article ignores relevant facts and tries to shift/conjure blame, it's hard to just get through a single sentence of it without wanting to eat glass!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/09/1759245.shtml

First-Grade Boy Suspended for Sexual Harassment

Matt · 9 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "A first grader was suspended for three days after school officials said he sexually harassed a girl in his class by allegedly putting two fingers inside the girl's waistband while she sat on the floor in front of him. The boy's mother said she "screamed" about last week's suspension, and added her son doesn't know what sexual harassment is. "He doesn't know those things," she told The Enterprise of Brockton, MA. "He's only 6 years old." Proving that for the feminists who dominate K-12 education nowadays, it's never too soon to identify a predatory-patriarch-in-training!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/09/181257.shtml

NOW's Prez Sounds Alarm Over "Extremist Fathers' Rights Groups"

Matt · 9 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "In her February 8th newsletter, NOW's Prez Kim Gandy approaches her usual near-hysteria over program funding cuts proposed for the FY 2006 federal budget, while shrieking especially loud about funding fathers' rights groups and pro-marriage initiatives:

'This legislation includes up to $50 million annually to fund questionable fatherhood programs ... NOW suspects that some of those monies will end up with extremist "fathers' rights" groups. The authorized total would be $150 million annually for both fatherhood and marriage promotion initiatives; all states will be mandated under this bill to establish marriage promotion programs and to meet numerical performance objectives. NOW regards marriage promotion efforts targeting low-income women as potentially coercive, discriminatory and an invasion of privacy.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/09/186218.shtml

Warning Urged for ADHD Drugs

Matt · 10 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The Washington Post, on the same day it all but places the blame for the increase in cigarette, alcohol, and drug usage by girls on boys and men, also reports that an FDA Panel is urging the use of very serious notices with ADHD drugs "because of reports that they may have caused sudden deaths or serious complications." It makes some reference to how 10% of 10-year-old American boys have been placed on these drugs (you read that right: TEN PERCENT) but doesn't spend a lot of time suggesting that it's the fault of girls that they "need" it.

You can be pretty darn sure though if 10% of America's 10-year-old girls were on ADHD drugs, just as with their other article, the Post would be blaming males for it.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/10/0537216.shtml

BBC: Teasing 'fuels unhealthy dieting' - Impact Greater on Boys

Matt · 12 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This story covers how especialy harmful teasing is to boys in terms of how they perceive their weight and how they react to it. Note however that the article still panders to feminist "sensibilities" in its reporting. Excerpt:

The researchers suggest that teasing may have a greater impact on boys because they are not used to facing a negative reaction to their weight.

Girls, in comparison, are constantly bombarded with a variety of media messages and images hammering home the need to stay slim.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/12/064249.shtml

RADAR ALERT: V-Day Hypocrisy at Roger Williams University

Matt · 14 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

For the last decade there has been a concerted effort to convert Valentines Day from a celebration of loving relationships between men and women into a day reserved for vilification of males as perpetrators of "rape, battery, incest, female genital mutilation and sexual slavery." (http://www.vday.org/contents/vday/aboutvday)

V-Day Hypocrisy at Roger Williams University
More offensive than the play Vagina Monologues is the way college administrators have censored light-hearted criticism of the play, even as they turn a blind eye to the gender-based contempt that Vagina Monologues fosters. These administrators seem less concerned about even-handed treatment of all students than they are about pandering to powerful interest-groups.

The best example of this hypocrisy was the reaction of Roger Williams University to the spoof The Penis Monologues, as reported by Christina Hoff Sommers in her National Review article Why Can't They "Just Get Along"? (http://www.nationalreview.com/comment/sommers200505020808.asp)

Sommers reports that Edward J. Kavanagh, Provost of Roger Williams University, was so scandalized at being greeted by the play's costumed penis-mascot "Testaclese" that he seized the costume and placed students Monique Stuart and Andy Mainiero on probation for creating the spoof.

V-Day, the New-York-based organization devoted to getting campuses nationwide to do Valentines Day productions of Vagina Monologues, reports that Roger Williams University is making the school's fieldhouse available for this year's Vagina Monologues presentation. (http://events.vday.org/2006/College/Roger_Williams_University)

Do we conclude that Provost Kavanagh, so offended by the appearance of the spoof penis-costume, is unperturbed by the prospect of the RWU Fieldhouse filled with women loudly chanting "Ct", as happens in the play's "Reclaiming Ct" section? Does the RWU administration approve of the idea that child-rape is good rape if it's committed by a lesbian, as sympathetically portrayed in "The Little Coochie Snorcher that Could"? Does the RWU administration think the university should encourage its female students to abandon studying for successful careers and instead seek fulfillment as dominatrixprostitutes specializing in whips, handcuffs and ropes, as glowingly portrayed in "The Woman Who Loved To Make Vaginas Happy"?

RWU president Roy J. Nirschel has stated, in an open letter to the university community (http://frontpagemag.com/Articles/ReadArticle.asp?ID=10394) "the university will not condone publications that create a hostile environment for our students and community." What could create a more hostile environment for male students than Vagina Monologues' consistently hostile portrayal of males as brutal oppressors?

This week, please write a letter to your local newspaper pointing out how Roger Williams University is a prime example of the hypocrisy demonstrated by colleges all across the country that permit hate-speech from favored members of the student community while using an iron fist to suppress simple satire from disfavored groups.

If you happen to know sympathetic RWU alumni, please ask them to write letters too.

Date of RADAR Release: February 12, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/13/2053248.shtml

Teacher Bounds, Gags Students

Matt · 14 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bull writes "Montreal school teacher tapes student in his chair, then, gags him and two other students as punishment.

click here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/13/2055233.shtml

Cohabitation and Support

Matt · 14 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Misandrope writes "In several cases that came up on appeal this fall and winter, New Jersey has shown that they are taking cohabitation more seriously. In one case, a woman was actually ordered to pay back alimony recieved when it was found that she was already cohabiting at the point where she signed her divorce agreement."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/13/2057218.shtml

New Zealand: Men's Rights Activist Turned Down as Lawyer

Matt · 14 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

EvilPundit writes "An outspoken men's activist and critic of New Zealand's legal system has been told he is not a fit and proper person to be a lawyer.

But Peter Zohrab, acting president of New Zealand Equality Education Foundation, says he will not let matters rest there. "I just intend to keep at it and see how long it takes," he said of his quest to become a lawyer."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/13/2058251.shtml

Domestic Violence vs Men in the News

Matt · 14 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bulldogo.1 writes "This and this may be evidence that the message is finally getting through; women are violent too. Hopefully, judges, family courts and governments will take their heads out of the sand and realise that they are wrecking children's and fathers lives by believing that only men are violent.
Notice, however, that when women are finally identified as capable of violence, authorities start talking of mental health etc. Before it was simply; men are violent. Also, the Florida woman says it happens because 'you just get pushed and pushed', which means, it's men's fault. And as for men 'are becoming victims', there have always been male victims of domestic violence. But, it's a start.

-- Bulldogo."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/14/1845238.shtml

India : State Women's Commission To Help Men

Matt · 14 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Maharashtra State Women's Commission decides to help men who are victims of harassment or false accusations by women. I live in this state, and so very pleased with this development! This is also a state where the feminist lobby has been very powerful, so looks like men's activism is beginning to make an impact. Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/14/1848215.shtml

Woman Puts 'Sex Offender' Sign on Wrong House - No Charges Pressed

Matt · 14 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "In this case, how do you feel about the guy not pressing charges against this crazy woman? Not only that, even the police let her off with just a warning when they caught her breaking the law."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/14/1848241.shtml

Resources re Deaths Caused by Ritalin

Matt · 14 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "The feminist/psychotherapy led education system is branding many thousands of normal healthy boys as mentally ill, mainly because they do not act like girls, and is turning them into drug addicts. Evidence is mounting that Ritalin is actually causing death from heart failure. Who is it that is dying? Boys of course. Some sources:

The UK Guardian newspaper.

Bereaved US parents tell their story.

Another excellent article, Psychiatrists and Ritalin.

This pathologisation of boys must stop."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/14/1851238.shtml

Another Mom Tried For Grievous Assault on Infant

Matt · 14 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "Seems like Texas is setting some type of record for murdering moms who plead (temporary) insanity as their defense.

The trial for Dena Schlosser, 37 a sole custody mom who cut off the arms of her infant daughter starts. Remember Texas is also the home of Andrea Yates who slaughtered her five children by methodically drowning each one in the bathtub. She is now out of prison on a technicality and will be retried. The "fix" is obviously in to get her off on an insanity plea too. Also, Texas recently found murdering mom Deanna Laney not guilty by reason of insanity for fatally beating two of her young sons with rocks and seriously injuring a third.

Someone needs to check the water out there!"

Ed. note: Stories from Texas make the news a lot these days perhaps because our current president is from there. However I don't think it's fair to the state of Texas as a whole to single it out as having more than the average number of problems with abusive mothers/parents in general. Child abuse is a nationwide problem, as is the under-reporting and overall lack of awareness of the rate of abusiveness by mothers of their children. Also, the fact that mothers get off far more often on insanity pleas than dads do when charged with child abuse-related crimes is also a nationwide, of not also a worldwide, problem.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/14/191213.shtml

False Rape Allegations Worth Less Than Theft

Matt · 15 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bulldogo.1 writes "You are not going to believe this.
Besides showing how unbelievingly stupid some women can be, this highlights the gender bias in law. If not for a video these men would have spent most of their lives in jail. The most time she can get for endangering all these men is 44 months. And most of that time is for theft of public money."

Ed note: Explicit content warning. Bulldogo's points however are so well-represented in this story that it can't be ignored in the name of "taste". I wonder if "taste" will be the excuse mainstream media uses to avoid covering it any time soon?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/15/1533242.shtml

"Boyhood Studies" Journal Initiative

Matt · 18 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Boyhood Studies is a new peer reviewed journal initiative. This website tracks its status: http://www.boyhoodstudies.com/. From their intro:

"[W]e want to situate historical applications of Kenneth Kidd's "boyology" within their respective cultural contexts, including, for example, nationalism, feminism, the medicolegal apparatus, scholastic institutions, and even the capitalist system itself. With these contexts given their due scrutiny, we argue, scholars can productively begin to map the structures and strictures that inform both boys' lives and those who play leading roles in the lives of boys.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/18/179215.shtml

Violence: it's all men's fault!

Matt · 19 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

alphamale writes "I just about fell off my chair reading this article. This guy must be from another planet! He actually is arguing that there is more sexual violence towards women today than in the past.

He makes no mention of the millions of violent women and lays the blame for all violence squarely at the feet of all men. He even goes so far as to assert that "our consumer dollars contibutes to a system that reinforces sexist beliefs and attitudes." Apparently this guy has never turned on a television or walked through a mall and seen all of the pro-female, anti-male messages that are bombarding both genders on a daily basis. I know pro-athletes aren't always the brightest of the bunch, but this guys needs a serious re-education!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/19/0420226.shtml

'Paternity Fraud' Headline

Matt · 19 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "I realize this is old hat for regulars of this website but paternity fraud being given top headline status (this top billing dated 2/18 won't last more than a day before being replaced with something else) on the internet news site whose editor wrote a sympathy piece crying for Clara Harris' release from jail after she ran over and killed her husband, is definitely news worth noting."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/19/0423235.shtml

Circumcision battle goes to court

Matt · 19 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

SpikeRants writes "Oh yeah! An Illinois court is hearing arguments wherein a father is opposing the circumcision of his 8-year-old son, and the mother wants it because of "health reasons."

Note that in the article, "health reasons" is not in quotations, but "unnecessary amputation" is."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/19/0427244.shtml

Colorado: Woman, 26, has "affair" with boy, 13

Matt · 19 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

mens_issues writes "Yet another case of an older woman having sex with an underage boy. She got a one year prison sentence. What's the going rate for when the genders are reversed again?

BTW, this happened just miles from where Sylvia Johnson aka the "cool mom" lived.

Story starts with:

"She was 26-years-old, 5 foot 1, 100 pounds, blonde and blue eyed, and in early 2003 the Westminster wife and mother of three initiated a sexual affair with the 13-year-old son of a close friend and eventually gave birth to the 7th grader's baby."

Steve"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/19/0432201.shtml

Japan: Woman murders two children

Matt · 20 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "A woman in Japan has admitted stabbing to death two five-year-olds and tossing their bodies into a rice field. They were classmates of her own child. The motive is unclear. Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/20/0632234.shtml

NH Men's Commission Member to Appear on Tucker Carlson Show

Scott · 21 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

NH Commission on the Status of Men Commissioner Michael Geanoulis will appear Tuesday night (2/21/06) on MSNBC's Tucker Carlson show to discuss some of the Commission's findings. This will be the first national TV converage the Commission has received.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/20/2231210.shtml

WorldNet Daily Cites NH Commission in Article on Bias vs. Men

Matt · 21 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes Herein a study cited, documenting the fact that affirmative action has gone beyond the pale and is actually killing men. Men are literally dieing because so little attention is being paid to men's needs."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/21/0125235.shtml

Domestic Violence Suit against CA

Matt · 22 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

MR writes "Domestic violence, to quote Dear Abby, is a human problem, not a gender problem. But in California, it's defined as abuse against women.

Now, a father, daughter, and three other men are suing the state, so that shelters and services will help men too.

NBC4's Robert Kovacik has their story here *

*There is a short commercial preceding the video."
Ed. note: Windows Media Player and IE browser required to view video. Also, for those with slower connections and stream-sensitive O/Ss, be aware that the page opens right to in-line video.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/22/0516219.shtml

Harvard's Summers Announces Resignation

Matt · 22 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Read it here. It's also covered in the Washington Post here, for those who care to deal with a log-in.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/22/0523218.shtml

Wendy McElroy Says No Victim Class Status for Men

Matt · 23 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "Wendy McElroy argues that the men's movement is making a blunder by seeking to identify men as a new "victim class." She says rather than seeking inclusion for services under VAWA, MRAs should be advocating for the repeal of bad laws. "Only time will tell whether the men's movement will become a politics of rage as the feminist movement did in the mid-70s ... Only time will tell whether men will become the next group to use government force to seek restitution, not for wronged individuals (which is just) but for an entire class of people." Interesting iFeminist variation on Chivalry... only women deserve status/power as an organized social group ... but a man must go it alone?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/23/1550209.shtml

Tucker Carlson/NHCSM Video Available for Download

Scott · 24 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

There is now a digital video available of the Tucker Carlson interview with Commissioner Michael Geanoulis of the NH Commission on the Status of Men. The video is very low resolution/low quality, but still gives you an idea of how the interview went. You can download the 7.1 MB MPEG here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/24/1545218.shtml

Columbia: Touch a woman's behind, get 4 years

Matt · 24 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "A man in Columbia has been sentenced to four years in jail for touching a woman's ass in the street. Get this: 'When he was arrested, she was given the option of slapping him, letting him go, or filing a complaint.' Story here."

Ed. note: The exercise here is, once again, switch the sexes. Would a woman who grabbed a man's behind like this have gotten the same treatment?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/24/1938235.shtml

Woman accused of plotting to kill rich husband

Matt · 24 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "UK: A 37 year old woman is being tried for soliciting to kill her 60 year old millionaire husband. She had a string of affairs, persuaded her husband to change his will in her favour, and allegedly asked one of her boyfriends to kill him. The trial continues. Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/24/1939228.shtml

Update on Andrea Yates

Matt · 24 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

klp writes "It seems that Andrea Yates may have been more culpable than her lawyers implied.

It seems she advised one of her cellies to fake mental illness to get of easy for her crimes. Article here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/24/1942205.shtml

Shared Parenting Bills - New York

Matt · 24 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "We're slowly making progress, little by little. Next in shared parenting cases, we need to do away with alimony and child support completely."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/24/1940207.shtml

BBC: "Temp work 'harms women's health'"

Matt · 25 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The BBC strikes again! Read it here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/25/0435224.shtml

New Book from APA on Men and Therapy

Matt · 25 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The American Psychological Assn. (APA) has published this book, In the Room With Men: A Casebook of Therapeutic Change. Amazon.com says it isn't available yet but it looks like it may be available directly from APA's web site.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/25/0441248.shtml

Female teacher accused of sex with 11 YO boy

Matt · 26 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

mens_issues writes "From 9news.com (Denver):

"LAURENS, S.C. (AP) -- It's the latest case of a female schoolteacher accused of having sex with a young boy.

Authorities in Laurens, South Carolina, have arrested a 36-year-old elementary school teacher on charges that she'd had sex with one of her eleven-year-old students."

The whole sordid story is here.

Steve"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/25/2048224.shtml

Lesbian Teacher Pedophile Will Not Be Charged

Matt · 26 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "A lesbian teacher who had sexual relations with a 17 year-old female student will not be charged with criminal sexual conduct, after her anonymous victim declined to press charges. She's been suspended without pay from her teaching job, pending a school board review. A local lesbian minister says it's a shame that when the schools need excellent teachers, this predator is being kept out of the classrooms. Note that if this case were about a male perpetrator, the state's "no drop" policies would guarantee his prosecution.

Link here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/25/2049256.shtml

Former Female Nazi Guard: She was "manipulated"

Matt · 26 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The Washington Post, which normally and rightly condemns people who commit the most heinous of crimes, again balks when the perp is female. Their latest offense against common sense is here.

Excerpt:

All she wants is to set the record straight, Margarete says, for others to see her for the manipulated young woman she believed herself to be, not one of the criminal "blond beasts" that female SS are seen as. Her family learned her secret first -- and they believe her. When her daughter, Monika, was 16, Margarete recounted her life story. "At the time, I was enraged," Monika told one of Jacobeit's researchers in 2004. "But when I learned it wasn't voluntary -- that she'd been sent there -- well, what kind of chance did she have? What could she have done?"

Well, she could have refused, for one thing, accepting execution like any number of male draftees who refused to go along with the Nazi "program", or she could have worked within the system to undermine it in some way. But instead, like so many others of both sexes, she just went along.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/25/2056218.shtml

'Tis the Season: The Vagina Monologues Re-emerges

Matt · 26 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Like a crop of mushrooms or crabgrass on the front lawn of academe, The Vagina Monologues is popping up all over to celebrate the springtime season of romance and endless victimhood and oppression. One such example: U of Rochester, Rochester, NY. There are dozens of other such examples of this piece of joy erupting on US and Canadian college campuses, as discussed in this MANN post.

Since the Vagina Monologues seems to be like Cerebrus, multi-headed guardian-hound of Hell, simultaneous attacks on the heads of the beast are probably a good strategy.

Homework for the month of March: check your local institution of "higher learning" and see if the beast is rearing one of its ugly heads there. If so, make your opinion about it heard to the producers, trustees, president, whoever. If enough people openly challenge the beast, it will lose potency and may one day retreat back to the firey depths from which it emerged.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/25/2111258.shtml

Men's activist runs for Congress

Matt · 27 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous user writes: "Tom Kovach has a day job, and also writes investigative columns. He has written for Men's News Daily, World Net Daily, and Renew America. Before moving to Nashville in 2001, he was active with the Fathers' Rights Association of NY State for several years. He was hand-picked to serve on a 1998 Legislative Task Force, and wrote the major portion of the report on Family Court Reform.

But, when he announced a run for Congress, he was snubbed by the media. You can read the details here.

Fighting pro-se, Tom got his ex-wife's NY lawyer sanctioned twice. The lawyer appealed twice, and lost ... twice."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/26/2251234.shtml

The Penis Monologues

Matt · 27 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bull writes "Monique Stewart, who hated the play The Vagina Monologues, has been making waves with her own spoof/satire play, The Penis Monologues.
Click Here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/26/2253230.shtml

RADAR Alert: Why Does AARP Have No Compassion for Elderly Abused Men?

Matt · 27 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The article And Then He Hit Me
minimizes elder male domestic violence victimization. It was published in the January/February 2006 issue of the AARP Magazine. The author, David France, claims that the numbers of woman-on-man incidents of domestic violence are, in his words, "negligible".
He also notes that data from a 1988 study of elder abuse in Boston suggests that the extrapolated number of elders abused could be a million a year.

Click "Read more..." for more.

Why Does AARP Have No Compassion for Elderly Abused Men?
This is yet another egregious example of a nationally published article by authors and publishers who have little to no real understanding of domestic violence. What the authors of that Boston study actually document is that 43% of the physical violence cases were of the wife assaulting the husband, whereas only 17% were of the husband assaulting the wife [Pillemer, K. and D. Finkelor. (1988) The Prevalence of Elder Abuse: A Random Sample Survey. Gerontologist, Vol. 28, No. 1, 51-57].

This clearly documents that the author and the publisher of the AARP magazine, similar to the majority of members of the media, mislead their readers, and mislead policymakers as well, by printing untruths about domestic violence as if they were the truth.

Please contact the publisher of AARP magazine, and tell him:

1. By misrepresenting the number of woman-on-man incidents of domestic violence as "negligible", they have put a great number of elderly at risk -- many of them AARP magazine's very own readers!
2. A first step in rectifying the harm AARP has done would be for them to publish an unbiased article that emphasizes the plight of elder male domestic violence victims who, because they're male, find that virtually no services are available to them.

Here's the contact info:

Publisher: Ed Dwyer

Email: edwyer-at-aarp.org

Phone: 202-434-6880

Date of RADAR Release: February 26, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/26/230213.shtml

Possible Progress in Prostate Cancer Research

Thomas · 27 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This CNN article discusses possible progress in prostate cancer research. It seems that the cancer might be linked to a virus.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/27/0245203.shtml

Low Bail for Female Teacher

Matt · 27 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Here is the follow-up to the teacher that had sex with her 11 year-old student. Her bail set at $100,000. The boy she raped is terrified and traumatized. Her bail set at $100,000. My bail set at $200,000 for a false rape allegation by a consenting female adult."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/27/199239.shtml

Fox News Legal Analyst Supports Libelous Anti-Male Website

Matt · 27 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "On 2/26/06, I was shocked to see Fox News legal analyst Lis Wiehl so enthusiastically embrace the "www.dontdatehimgirl.com" website.

The site makes it free and easy for women to publish libel about a man with no consequence to themselves.

Wiehl laughed as she state that all the men identified were probably "guilty as charged" -- i.e. cheaters, had venereal diseases, etc. We must correct this..."

Ed. note: Would like to see on-line available confirmation of this report. If anyone can post, please do so.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/27/1917204.shtml

UK: More lies about the 'pay gap'

Matt · 27 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "In 2004 the Blair government commissioned a report into the gender 'pay gap'. It is published today, and surprise, surprise, it repeats the usual feminist myths. "Women earn 17% less than men", "There is widespread discrimination within the system", blah blah blah. The feminist account usually takes no account of men's and women's different priorities and life-choices, or the fact that men have greater cultural and psychological incentives to chase money, or the fact that women have other socially-acceptable ways of getting money apart from working for it. Instead, it describes everything in hopelessly simplistic terms of an evil conspiracy against women. Whenever feminism does take account of women's choices, it claims that these choices are invalid, and the result of cultural brain-washing. "It is because of structural problems; because of young girls' choices in schools and the fact that our careers education system completely fails to make them realise that the choices they make will determine what they earn". If women are happy with the choices they make, then what's the problem?
I'd also like to hear an answer to this one: If women are cheaper to employ than men, then why do employers ever hire men at all?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/27/1917252.shtml

Sydney AM Herald: "Why men won't commit"

Matt · 27 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "The usual article on why are men being afraid to commit? Of course the author paints men as "messy, greedy, sports-loving, junk-food-scoffing and womanizing". Women on the other hand are the long-suffering victims trying to "understand the antics of the opposite sex." The author goes on to lay the blame for the downward spiral of marriage at the feet of men.

Nothing too surprising there - but what is surprising is the backlash to the article from men in the commments section! It looks like a hella of a lot of men arent putting up with this crap any longer!

C'mon guys let show the author what we think!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/27/1920227.shtml

No Jail Time for Woman Who Stabs Husband Over Flowers

Matt · 27 February 2006 · Archived copy · Original

RandomMan writes "This past Valentine's Day, a woman stabbed her husband for not spending enough on flowers on Valentine's Day. At least we know the Vagina Monologues are having their desired effect on "V-Day": domestic violence is still "something men do to women". Perhaps Eve might consider adding a line or two to her play, something to the effect of "stabbing your husband over insufficient gifts is OK: it was a good stabbing". No jail time for the attacker. As usual, reverse the genders and see if this still works."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/27/1922237.shtml

4th-Wave Feminists Just Wanna Stay Home, Make Babies

Matt · 1 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "A new survey of teenaged girls linked off AngryHarry's web site finds that they want traditional homemaker/mommie futures and hubbies that will work to provide them with that privileged lifestyle:
"According to a survey of 5,000-plus teenage girls, their main ambition is to complete university then return to the homestead - whether their partners like it or not.
More than nine out of 10 of the girls believe it should be up to their husbands to provide for them, with 97 per cent disagreeing with the statement 'It doesn't matter who is the main earner, as long as we are happy.'" Feminists call this preference for heterosexual domesticity "false consciousness."

MRA's might label it "predatory gold-digging?" Link here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/02/28/2141231.shtml

Australian dads to pay less, mums to pay more

Matt · 1 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Tirryb writes "News.com.au reports here that proposed changes to the child support laws in Australia (due to come into play in 2008) will mean fathers will pay less in some cases, whilst mothers become more responsible.

In particular, fathers who spend one day a week with their children will have their child support payments reduced, and more of a mothers income will be taken into account when calculating child support payments (currently it's set pretty high).

But, I wonder how long before this has the opposite effect? Won't mothers now be incentivised to stop fathers from seeing their kids once a week, so they can claim more..?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/01/1637230.shtml

Cocaine Brought To Class By Second-Grade Girl- No Charges Filed

Matt · 1 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Yep you guessed it...no mention of any charges against her or suspension. Oh by the way, do ya remember the six-year old boy suspended for sexual harassment...thought so...

Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/01/1640208.shtml

"Virtual Visitation" More Common

Matt · 1 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Comments on this story, folks? From the article:

The idea has its critics, though, who fear judges might use the option of virtual visitation as justification for ordering fewer real visits with children or letting one parent move away with the children.

“Real parents need real time. Real kids need real time,” said David L. Levy, director of the Children’s Rights Council.

“It can be a wonderful accessory, but the danger is that it will be used as a substitute for real visitation.”

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/01/1934231.shtml

Article on "The Return of Patriarchy"

Matt · 1 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Acksiom writes "Are secular leftists non-breeding themselves into a minority, compared to their more religious and conservative fellow-citizens? Phillip Longman, in an article in Foreign Policy magazine, considers the demographics involved, and some historical parallels, and thinks it likely."

Ed. note: Not only is such an article surprising to see in publication, but what is also surpising is in which magazine it is being published!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/01/1953250.shtml

Woman awarded $100k for raising 'an unwanted child'

Matt · 2 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Tirryb writes "News.com.au reports that a woman who had a failed abortion has been awarded over one hundred thousand dollars to cover the cost of raising her 'unwanted child' (for physical/psychological trauma, too).

Whereas fathers who have no say in the abortion and end up with an unwanted child are forced to PAY UP for 18 years. That seems fair..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/02/0351240.shtml

CNN Money Covers Farrell's Arguments

Matt · 2 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Nice to see this in a major media channel.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/02/0352211.shtml

Suspended sentence for abusing teacher, but outcry ensues

Matt · 3 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Tirryb writes "News.com.au reports here that a female teacher who had sex with a 15 year old male student (sex, not rape of course) has gotten a suspended sentence.

Nothing new there, but the outcry is definitely something new - and includes the State premier. Things are beginning to change!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/03/0114231.shtml

15 years for man who took bite out of girlfriend

Matt · 3 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Sick Boi writes "Found this article on MSN today. (I try not to read this biased Feminazi-friendly junk but I could not resist.) Funny how a woman can repeatedly stab her partner and gets a slap on the hand, but when the shoe is on the other foot... Prison here HE comes. They do not talk about what sparked the fight. Maybe she just did not spend enough on flowers for him on Valentines Day? Maybe she is like my wife and felt she has no need to even acknowledge him at all on Valentines Day? Who knows?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/03/0116244.shtml

Tennis Champ Bjorn Borg Selling Trophies -- after Two Divorces

Matt · 3 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Remember Bjorn Borg? Well, he has to sell his trophies to cover his bankruptcy/two divorces. Story here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/03/1917202.shtml

N.O.W. "Discovers" that Females Can and Do Sexually Harass Males

Matt · 3 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "Citing a new research study by the American Association of University Women, N.O.W. admits that female students sexually harass males:

"Male and female students are nearly equally likely to be sexually harassed on campus... Female students are more likely to be the target of sexual jokes, comments, gestures, or looks. Male students are more likely to be called gay or a homophobic name."
The definition of sexual harassment is so broad and subjective as to make most inter-gender communication suspect -- "Sexual harassment is unwanted and unwelcome behavior which interferes with your life...
Such as, a person made sexual comments, jokes, gestures, or looks..."

Full AAUW report here (.pdf file)."

Ed. note: This is somewhat 'old news' in that the AAUW report has been out since 2005. However that N.O.W. is "announcing" it at this time is a recent event. Read the N.O.W. release carefully; it downplays heavily the harassment men suffer and up-plays heavily the harrassment of women. Of course the very definition of harrassment, as pointed out by Roy, is not too close to the average legal or dictionary defintions. By their defintion, sexual harassment is pretty much anything you don't like that someone says or does in your presence. I suppose I could say then that just about everyone I ever met has sexually harassed me in some form or another-- that's it, gonna call a lawyer right now and sue everyone!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/03/1929211.shtml

37-YO female rapist blames four-YO boy for "seduction"

Matt · 3 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

SacredNaCl writes "Apparently, blaming the "man" extends all of the way to the tender age of 4, as in the case of this 37 year old, accused of having sex with a 4 year old boy. In her statement she said: "Sources tell us in what amounts to a bizarre confession that the suspect is actually accusing the four-year-old boy of seducing her. But police are not buying that explanation as they investigate several instances of rape and sexual abuse inside the day care center over a six-week period."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/03/1931213.shtml

Jim Izard - R.I.P.

Matt · 3 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I don't know if his actions were related to what went on between him and Indiana University, but what happened is mentioned in this news item. Rest in peace, Mr. Izard.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/03/1950206.shtml

Students Suspended for Viewing Postings

Matt · 3 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Without condoning what the boy reportedly did, is it fair what happened in this case, particularly to the 20 other students? Would the school have taken these steps if a girl had done the same thing, only with a boy as the target of hostility?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/03/1954206.shtml

Woman sniper kills husband - but found not guilty

Matt · 4 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Tirryb writes "News.com.au reports here that a woman dresses in camoflage gear, lies in wait in a snipers 'nest', and shoots her husband dead - but of course she's found not guilty of either manslaughter or murder...

The reason of course is that she was abused mercilessly during her marriage. Even if her version of the marriage is completely true she could have left or had him arrested, but instead chose to put a bullet through his heart and end his life. Not guilty. Go figure."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/04/1944205.shtml

Woman's Gang Rape Story is Bogus

Matt · 4 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Yet another one... at Disney World no less. Imagine my shock when I saw it was yet another false rape accusation..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/04/1943219.shtml

Wall Street Journal Again Championing Men

Matt · 6 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

garypc writes "I submit the following article in its entirety from the Wall Street Journal, since they require a subscription for access. The Wall Street Journal has increasingly been championing the ideas of men's right and the virtues of masculinity. This article is the latest, and interestingly has a female author."

Click "Read more..." for the article.
Harvey Mansfield: Calling All Hombres

By NAOMI SCHAEFER RILEY

March 4, 2006; Page A8

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. -- "Defend yourself." That's the lesson Harvey Mansfield drew for Larry Summers the week before Harvard's president was forced to resign. Mr. Mansfield, a 73-year-old government professor and conservative elder statesman of the university, went on to suggest that Mr. Summers's capitulation to those he offended (when he said women might be biologically less inclined to succeed in the hard sciences) is not simply a craven kowtow to political correctness, but proof, also, of a character flaw. Indeed, Mr. Mansfield continued with a mischievous smile, "He has apologized so much that he looks unmanly."

Perhaps this seems like a quaint insult, but Mr. Mansfield means something very particular by it. He would like to return the notion of manliness to the modern lexicon. His new book, "Manliness" (manfully, no subtitle), argues that the gender-neutral society created by modern feminists has been bad both for women and men, and that it is time for men to rediscover, and women to appreciate, the virtue of manliness.

Mr. Mansfield's former office in the grand neoclassical Littauer Hall just off Harvard Yard seemed better suited to his project, but the government department moved into a new building this year and he has been relegated to a spare, modern room in which even the blinds are operated electronically. The professor, with his elegantly tailored suits and sharp fedoras, looks out of place in his ungracious surroundings. (The poster-size portrait of Machiavelli, about whom he has written extensively, doesn't seem to fit in either.)

But after more than a half-century at the university -- as undergrad, grad student and professor -- Mr. Mansfield seems to have settled into his role as campus gadfly. This is not to say that scholarship and teaching do not occupy his time. In the past 40 years, he has published more than a dozen books, including a translation of Tocqueville, as well as groundbreaking studies of Machiavelli and Burke.

But it is his combat with campus liberal orthodoxy that has brought him a more public profile. To drive home his crusade against grade inflation, he began giving students a real grade (what he actually thinks of their work) and an "ironic grade" (which goes to the registrar). More controversially, Mr. Mansfield argues that grade inflation is the result of the university's affirmative-action program -- admitting too many underqualified minority students and then not wanting to give them poor marks.

* * *

Of all the enemies Mr. Mansfield has made, none has he more consistently provoked than feminists. It's been 20 years since he voted against the proposal for a women's studies major at Harvard (the only faculty member to do so), arguing that "it is not possible to study women except in relation to men." And he has not let up since.

"I've had a lifelong interest in women," Mr. Mansfield purrs in his smooth classical-radio-announcer voice when I ask why he decided to embark on his manliness project. Joking aside, he explains that "I always wanted to write a book on the woman question, and one reason, perhaps the main reason, I see is that we are embarked on a great experiment in our society, something very radical: to make the status of men and women equal, or, better to say, the same."

Mr. Mansfield's contention that women and men are not the same is now widely supported by social scientists. The core of his definition of manliness -- "confidence in a risky situation" -- is not so far from that of biologists and sociologists, who find men to be more abstract in their thinking and aggressive in their behavior than women, who are more contextual in their thinking and conciliatory in their behavior.

Science is good for confirming what "common sense" already tells us, Mr. Mansfield allows, but beyond that, he has little use for it: "Science is a particular enemy of manliness. Manliness asserts something you can't scientifically prove, namely the importance of human beings." Science simply sees people as just another part of the natural world. But what manly men assert, according to Mr. Mansfield, is that "they are important and that their party, their country, their society, their group, whatever it may be, is important." As examples, Mr. Mansfield offers Arnold Schwarzenegger (predictably, since he's no girly-man), Humphrey Bogart, Donald Rumsfeld and Margaret Thatcher -- yes, women can occasionally be manly. (Both Clintons are manly in their own ways -- Hillary is "formidable," while Bill is the "envy of vulgar men.")

Achilles, though, is Mr. Mansfield's model of a manly man. "He challenged his boss, Agamemnon, who had taken his girlfriend from him. He didn't so much make a complaint against him as to . . . say that what Agamemnon had done was the act of an inferior person, and that only true heroes, the men of virtue like Achilles, are fit to rule." In other words, Achilles raised the stakes and resolved to defend a cause larger than himself -- the manly action par excellence.

Mr. Mansfield suggests that it is difficult to rid men of their tendency to seek out such battles. Yet he believes that the sexual revolution has been a surprisingly easy one. "Certainly," he notes, "there has been no massive resistance like the segregationists opposed to the civil-rights movement." He has been surprised by the extent to which men have adjusted to this current system, but believes the evidence that they will never do so completely is to be found all around us.

Take housework. Mr. Mansfield cites surveys that show that despite their now equal capacity to be hired for jobs outside the home, American women still do two-thirds of the housework. He argues that this is not simply a hangover from our former oppressive patriarchy. Rather, he writes, it is evidence of manliness. "Men look down on women's work . . . not because they think it is dirty or boring or insignificant, which is often true of men's work; they look down on it because it is women's work."

When it comes to the subject of housework, Mr. Mansfield has a decidedly different take from that of the late Betty Friedan. He accepts her point that keeping house in the modern era need not be a full-time job, and that boredom, or "the problem that has no name," is a natural byproduct of forcing educated women to remain in the home, even when there is not enough to keep them occupied mentally or physically. But he disapproves of her "demeaning of household work to . . . a necessary thing that you can't take any pride in." And though he doesn't accuse Friedan of doing so, Mr. Mansfield suggests that more radical feminists, like Simone de Beauvoir, built upon this notion "to demean motherhood as well."

But what does this have to do with manliness? In our conversation and in his book, Mr. Mansfield often seems to want to discuss women more than men. Ultimately, he concludes that it is OK for men and women to be treated similarly in the workplace; but in private life, "it should be recognized that men will be manly and sometimes a bit bossy . . . and that women will recognize manliness with a smile by checking it while giving it something to do or, on occasion, by urging it on."

Given what he hopes to achieve -- more humoring of men by women -- it may not be surprising that Mr. Mansfield writes that he wants to "convince skeptical readers -- above all, educated women" -- of his argument.

Such women might well wonder, as I did, what we have to gain from encouraging men to do less of the housework. But Mr. Mansfield believes that women do instinctually realize the value of respecting manliness. He offers the example of the police detective in the movie "Fargo." She performs her job "wonderfully," says Mr. Mansfield, but "she's careful to maintain the sensibilities of her husband . . ., an artist, who at the end of the movie succeeds in getting his drawing accepted for a two-cent postage stamp." "This is pitiful," he laughs, "but she makes a big thing of it."

Of course, Mr. Mansfield doesn't need to go to the movies to see how men and women behave today. He has the classroom for that. Though he thinks that his female students have become "more assertive than they used to be," he observes that "the very same women will be careful of the sensibilities of the men they wish to attract and not try to compete with them except in fun or ironically." "If not," his brow rises slightly, "I think they would have trouble getting married."

Mr. Mansfield's other observations about the dating scene at Harvard are no less provocative. At a speech to students a couple of years ago, he observed that the only "gentlemen" at Harvard were conservatives and gay men. Conservatives, he believes, realize something's been lost in the recent social revolution; and gay men "have a certain greater awareness and perspicacity than other men." (He doesn't get into the subject of homosexuality in his book, and when I press him on this, he says, "If I had, I might have said something unpleasing to homosexuals and I'm taking on enough critics as it is.")

"What you see today at Harvard and elsewhere are a lot of liberal males who are trying to make women happy by trying to treat them as if they weren't women." "And that," says the man who never misses the chance to open a door for a woman or help her put on her coat, "doesn't work very well." So why didn't he simply write a book on gentlemanliness? "Because before you're a gentleman, you have to be a man. Gentlemanliness is a refinement. It presupposes that you have a certain superiority over women, but teaches you how to exercise it. It also teaches you that women are superior in their ways."

Nine years ago, when Mr. Mansfield offered his first seminar on manliness, I barely managed to score a seat in the small classroom. So many campus feminists had crowded in that students were forced to sit on the floor. These women saw their opportunity, finally, to have it out with the conservative bogeyman.

But Mr. Mansfield got the best of them. He proceeded to talk for much of the next two hours about the ancient Greek notion of thumos, or spiritedness, an idea he believes is the precursor of modern-day manliness. The feminists were bored silly -- almost none returned the following week.

Despite his statements outside the classroom, Mr. Mansfield sees his role of professor very differently from that of provocateur. His classes rarely descend into debates over current affairs. Arguments from Plato may not convince these "educated women" that he is right, but unlike Larry Summers, Mr. Mansfield has tenure.

Ms. Riley, deputy editor of the Journal's Taste page, is the author of "God on the Quad" (2005), out next month in paperback from Ivan Dee."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/06/046257.shtml

Plan USA Follows in Amnesty International's Footsteps

Matt · 7 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Recently Plan USA started a new campaign: Give a girl child an equal chance. Recent recipients of donation reminders face a well-directed solicitation for this new program on the back of their remittance envelopes.

If you feel so inclined, contact them at: DonorRelations-at-planusa.org or 800-556-7918 and let them know what you think of their highly selective vision regarding the well-being of children. May I suggest sending them facts about the state of boys and men in the world and remind them of the many ways in which males die at alarmingly (for some anyway) higher rates than females in all sorts of contexts and for many reasons that are a direct expression of how they are perceived, treated, and USED, simply due to their maleness.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/07/0341211.shtml

Doctor forced to pay half his income as child support

Matt · 7 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Tirryb writes "News.com.au reports here that a doctor got divorced, and due to the stress gave up his high paid job to take a part-time much lower stress position.

However the Child Support Agency decided that he had earning 'potential' of at least twice what his new job paid, and he's got slugged with child support payments at that level - equivalent to half his current income.

The moral of the story is simple - we divorce, and we're slaves. Work harder or go to jail, what a choice."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/07/0333240.shtml

Uganda politician cleared of rape

Thomas · 7 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

It seems that false accusation of rape is now an overt political tool.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/07/1327253.shtml

Yanni Arrested in Alleged Domestic Dispute

Matt · 7 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "The New Age musician Yanni was arrested on "domestic violence" charges. As usual a woman lied and a man got punished. Hopefully, this incident will bring public's attention to the epidemic of false DV charges and the corrupt system of mandatory arrest and no-drop prosecution under which American men suffer..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/07/1850215.shtml

UK: Ensure consent for sex, men told

Matt · 7 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

robrob writes "This is the latest attempt in the UK to "increase" conviction rates for rape. In short, if a woman is drunk and has sex with you, the onus will be on you to prove she consented. This is another example of the "Adult-Baby" defence. A woman can be adult enough to drink alcohol, own a house, and invite men back. However, if she wants sex and even consents to it, but can't remember doing so the next day, she can claim rape and the responsibility will be on the male to prove she ever gave consent. It's amazing how Rape Laws are continuously tweaked compared to any other legislation, isn't it?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/07/1854206.shtml

Desperate Feminist Wives: Liberation = Miserable?

Matt · 8 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "Slate's culture editor Meghan O'Rourke reviews a new research study that links feminist beliefs with female unhappiness: "Feminist ideals, not domestic duties, seem to be what make wives morose. Progressive married women — who should be enjoying some or all of the fruits that Freidan lobbied for — are less happy, it would appear, than women who live as if Friedan never existed." DUH? Only a university educated neo-feminist journalism major would be flabbergasted by this "discovery!" Good read and excellent debate link here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/08/0151223.shtml

Support Shared Parenting

Matt · 9 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "Glenn Sacks is supporting a new law in New York that would presume shared parenting over sole custody in divorces. You can read about this new law and easily send an email to all the committee members presently considering this change by clicking on the link."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/09/003246.shtml

Another Killer Mom Gets Away With It.....Almost

Matt · 9 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "Well, almost. She did plea down to 5 years in prison for letting her infant daughter die from heat stress.

When the police found her passed out in her car from drug and alcohol intoxication they revived her and let her drive off though she had two outstanding warrants against her for failure to appear on two charges of driving with a suspended license.

This happened in Florida the same state that arrested the singer Yanni under the VAWA law for allegedly hitting his freeloading treaspassing girlfriend. Freeloading girlfriends in Florida have more priority than children in danger from drunken moms, it seems."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/09/005234.shtml

UK: Women must get Partners' Consent to use Embryos

Matt · 9 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "A woman is required to get her ex-fiance's permission to use their stored frozen embryos. This is a score for men, finally. In this case HE has the "choice" of wether or not a pregnancy proceeds. Link is here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/09/0014208.shtml

For Men, it's 1962

Matt · 9 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "For Men, it's 1962"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/09/0017229.shtml

BBC: EU's gender gap still wide open

Matt · 9 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Despite taking more P/T jobs than men (three guesses as to who makes up the income difference-- hint: choices are: husband, boyfriend, ex-husband), the BBC once again paints women-as-victims despite the better educational levels and opportunities presented to them. Of course in response, "something must be done", and the EC plans to do just that. Read it here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/09/0027257.shtml

"Choice" for Men on CNN

Matt · 10 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

amperro writes "Don't expect feminist support, but it's on the major news now."

MANN also received this submission on this story as well, so the posts are combined:

Anonymous User writes "The reaction to "Roe vs Wade for Men" on Fark.com is interesting for its length (many posts) and for the overall position that responsibility for and rights with respect to pregnancy is way out of balance and needs some redress."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/09/2335216.shtml

David Hasselhoff's Wife Claims Domestic Violence

Matt · 10 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Sound fishy to you? David Hasselhoff's wife claimed domestic violence AFTER the divorce proceedings had started. Who wants to bet this was yet another bogus DV charge made up by an ex-wife for advantage during divorce? AMAZINGLY, NO RESTRANING ORDER WAS ISSUED! Now that we have two male celebrities inside of week being nailed with fake DV charges the public will start to pay attention?

Maybe one man can make a difference?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/09/2337228.shtml

Teacher Accused of Sending Sexual Text Message to Girl Quickly Pilloried

Matt · 10 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "While in no way do I condone what this teacher did, will you look at the HUGE deal they are making about a text message. The male teacher was arrested, fired, and may be stripped of his teaching credential. The "victim" in this story is devistated and in need of counselling. Funny that when boys are the victims of actual physical rape by their female teachers, the words "victim," "stripped of teaching credentials," "counselling," etc. never seemed to get used."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/09/2342217.shtml

13-YO Girl's Abduction Claim in Doubt, Police Capt. Sympathizes... with Girl

Matt · 10 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "She's 13, she claims she was abducted, raped, and the chivalrous police captain proclaims...

"If it turns out to be a total hoax, quite frankly, I feel sorry for (the girl) and her parents..I would not say that precludes us from bringing any charges." Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/10/1933258.shtml

"Ice is like a man's ego. Fun to crush."

Matt · 10 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Natalia writes "Not quite sure what topic this would go under, but it was for Standyourground.com. A few months ago I was glancing through a Vanity Fair that my mother had bought and an advertisement for Rolex had caught my eye, or rather, the slogan had. "Ice is like a man's ego. Fun to crush." I wasn't particularly offended, but I believed that it was a horrible message to be sending to women. I have not been able to locate a contact for them to comment on it directly and I'm not sure if anyone has yet even if the advertisement is old, it is out of turn.

Thank you for your time."

Ed. note: Reverse the sexes in the ad and see how it would go over. It seems magazines like Vanity Fair and other "women's magazines" will go places in topics, writing, and advertising that "men's magazines" would not dare to tread.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/10/1938226.shtml

Discrimination Against Men at Rutgers University

Matt · 12 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original charger writes "Rutgers University (State University of New Jersey) which just announced a major reorganization of its main campus, preserves the only public single-sex college left in the United States. With the number of men attending college declining, one would hope that there would be programs for men at Rutgers, but that would be politically incorrect."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/12/1457207.shtml

Different sentences for child sexual abuse

Thomas · 14 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here's an excerpt from the article.

Robert J. Shoop, professor of education at Kansas State University, has studied teacher sex abuse for 15 years and has written a book on the subject. He said his review of five years of news reports shows that male teachers are likely to get 15 to 20 years in prison, while female teachers typically are placed on probation or go to prison for one to three years.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/14/0123230.shtml

Boy pupil sues over 'sexist' US schools system

Hombre · 15 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

arindamp writes "The fear of being branded a girly swot has long been cited as the reason some boys fail their examinations. Now this may be presented as evidence in an American schoolboy's landmark lawsuit. In a federal civil rights action brought this month, Doug Anglin, a 17-year-old lawyer's son, is arguing that his country's education system is institutionally sexist.

He claims that American teachers push girls into top streams while discriminating against boys, creating an atmosphere in which boys inevitably fail.

With the help of his parents, he is suing the United States Department of Education.

The complete story."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/15/170206.shtml

Husband murdered in passport plot

Hombre · 15 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "UK: A math teacher was stabbed to death by his wife and her lover so that she could collect on the insurance, marry the lover, and get him a UK passport. The lover got life in prison, the wife got mental hospital. Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/15/172240.shtml

Mother/Wife Violently Abuses Family in Survellience Video

Matt · 16 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

John Fleming writes "This video (.mpg file) explicitly reveals a mother/wife violently abusing her kids and husband. She has gotten away with it. She has never been prosecuted or even reprimanded for it. She made false allegations of abuse A FEW HOURS after learning of the existence of the video by DYFS. The father is the one that is called the abuser after submitting the video to DYFS and the police. The father has not been with his children in three years. Please note that this is a small segment of the full video that is under complete control of victim. Main page: http://johnflemingmps0.tripod.com/"

Ed. note: Opening the web site includes the playing of an audio file, so if viewing at work or elsewhere public you may want to turn your speakers down. Also, the video clip is a must-see.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/16/0247257.shtml

The Manly Man's Man

Matt · 16 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Return of the King writes "Harvey Mansfield, conservative political theorist and academic provocateur, argues that women--and society--need to come to terms with 'manliness' - The gender-neutral society is by definition a mediocre one, with male greatness viewed as threatening to the social order and men and women crammed into boxes they don't fit in."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/16/0252255.shtml

More U.S. Women Swap Briefcase for Diaper Bag

Matt · 16 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Clancy writes "
March 10, 2006— More and more American women are swapping briefcases and office suits for dungarees and diaper bags as they opt to stay home and raise children, putting the brakes on decades of female advances in the workplace."

Ed. note: Notice how this is described, "putting the brakes..." Also, they don't discuss who is financing these women's choice to stay home. Do their husbands really have any choice to stay home vs. go work? Then what choice do they have when their wives leave them and stick them with the alimony and C/S debt?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/16/030249.shtml

Vigilantism: It's okay if you're Female

Matt · 16 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Prostitutes in the Daytona Beach area are arming themselves and teaming up in order to hunt down and murder a serial killer on the loose. Strangely, the local police appear to have no objection. If a group of men were to try the same thing I wonder what the authorities would have to say about it...Hmmm..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/16/034234.shtml

FAU student admits rape was a lie

Matt · 16 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "This is infuriating! Another coed lies about rape and gets off scott free! We need to start punishing females that lie about rape with severe penalties... excerpt:

'Police do not know why the woman, whose name was not released, concocted the story.

The woman will not face criminal charges for filing a false police report, Ferrell said.

"I do believe the psychological effect of having to talk to her parents, because they supported her and believed in her that this did occur...will have more of an impact on her than me filing charges on her or having charges filed on her," Ferrell said.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/16/0311210.shtml

Missing Males Not Worthy of Discussion

Matt · 16 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

al_nbd writes "A CNN journalist in his blog tries to analyse why crime stories where victims are white females receive much more coverage in media than others. More than a hundred people left their commentaries on this topic. The absolute majority of commentators agree that it's not fair when lives of white females are valued more than other lives. But they think that it's not fair only in respect of FEMALES OF OTHER COLORS, NOT MALES. Below is a commentary reflecting the general mood:

"If the "socially concious" media made an effort to report disappearances of ALL women, it would effect what your viewers are interested in. Last I checked, your audience is made up of many non-whites, including myself. I feel insulted that CNN might not value my disappearance or that of any other woman of color."

Misandry is becoming more and more deeply rooted in the western society.

The blog entry can be found here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/16/0315218.shtml

careerwomen.com: No men allowed

Matt · 16 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Return of the King writes "This career placement company advertises regularly in major media outlets. It places only women into career paths. I thought it was illegal to profile for jobs on the basis of gender?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/16/0321245.shtml

RADAR Alert: VAWA Violates the Civil Rights of 2,000 Americans Every Day

Matt · 16 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Equal protection under the law. Due process. Innocent until proven guilty.

Those principles, enshrined in the U.S. Constitution, are foundations of a free and just society. Those concepts are routinely violated every day by the Violence Against Women Act. Each and every day in the United States, over 2,000 Americans have their civil rights violated by VAWA.

Click "Read more..." for more.

VAWA Violates the Civil Rights of 2,000 Americans Every Day

- These people include over 750 male victims of severe partner assaults every day – who don't seek service because they know they will be turned away. Or worse, they fear they will be accused of the very crime that they were just subjected to.
- These people include over 1,250 men – and sometimes women – who are evicted from their homes on the basis of a restraining order that does not even allege violence.
- These people include an uncounted number of persons accused of partner assault who are unfairly arrested as a result of mandatory arrest policies.

As a result, families are broken up and children are removed from their fathers.

In short, the Violence Against Women Act represents a grave threat to people's civil rights and to the family structure of America.

On March 20, 2006, nineteen organizations around the country will be coming together to launch a major public education campaign. The five-week campaign will consist of a series of Special Reports that will document:

1. How VAWA harms families, children, men, and women
2. How VAWA programs discriminate against male victims
3. How restraining orders are widely abused
4. How mandatory-arrest policies violate basic principles of justice
5. How VAWA policies have biased the prosecution and adjudication of DV cases

For this Campaign to be successful, we will be calling on people to pass along the Special Reports to media contacts, friends, and others. We would like to invite you to participate.

To make sure you get the vital Campaign information, please sign up for our E-lerts. It just takes a few seconds:

1. Go to http://www.mediaradar.org/.
2. Type in your email address in the E-lert box in the left hand column
3. Hit the Subscribe button.

It's that easy!

It's time to get the truth out about the Violence Against Women Act – how it shamelessly disregards civil liberties and routinely breaks up families – sign up for the E-lert list now!

Date of RADAR Release: March 12, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/16/0333248.shtml

Australian Teacher Bailed on 92 Counts of Sexual Assault

Matt · 17 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Tirryb writes "News.com.au reports here that a female teacher has been bailed on 92 charges of sexual abuse of a student, now aged 16, over a 2 year period.

What will be interesting to see here is whether her treatment differs because the student is female. We've all seen so many cases lately where female teacher/male student equates to a slap on the wrist, I wonder if she'll get more because it was (shock!) a girl that suffered and not a boy. I'll try and keep a trace on this story..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/17/0035211.shtml

Abusive Female Teacher Fired... for BITING Boy

Matt · 17 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Accused of biting a student, she is initially reassigned to non-instructional duties even though in 2004 and 2005, administrators had warned her to avoid being physically confrontational with students, according to her termination letter. God, can you imagine if this were a male teacher -- oh that's right male teachers are being drummed from the field because they are all perverts... story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/17/0037231.shtml

Good News on Prostate Cancer

Matt · 17 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

klp writes "The Washington Times has this article on a simple regimen to lower risk of prostate cancer. No mention of the funding source for this research, interestingly."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/17/0039230.shtml

Redefining Marital Happiness?

Matt · 18 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Return of the King writes "Ellen Goodman once again gives us a biased one sided only perspective on redefining marital happiness. Her sexist muse is a follows: The question is not whether women should lower their expectations (on men - implying that it is men alone who need to change). It's whether men will kick it up another notch and make progressive (feminist) women happy. She wants women to express their feminist views with men they date to scare off future "ex-husbands." Nice."

Ed. note: Saw this in the local paper right above the Goodman article; it discusses how the same-sex marriage rights battle inevitably ushers in the permissibility of legalized polygamy/polyamory. I just laughed, seeing the two columns sitting there on the same page togther.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/18/0018222.shtml

Men also suffering from media/society body image pressures

Matt · 18 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Tirryb writes "BBC.co.uk reports here that men now suffer from the same pressures woman have complained of for years - pressure to change your body to conform to society and the media's view of how you SHOULD look.

Apparently as much as 20% of eating disorders occur in men, 25% of men lie about their health/weight etc because they feel pressured to live up to stereotypes and many are unhappy with how they look.

So, are we to be helped in this? Apparently not - quote from the piece:

"He said: "It is often easier to get through to men using image than it is to get through to them on health."But there is a danger with the way that we highlight issues that it can skew perceptions of risk.""

Apparently sounds like its acceptable to screw men up pyschologically, as long as it might benefit their health to do so..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/18/0019215.shtml

New Anti-Feminist Forum

Matt · 18 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "I found this British based Anti-Feminist forum. It seems pretty new, and it's a lot of fun. Enjoy!

http://www.forum.mathews.me.uk/index.php"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/18/0022230.shtml

Boston Globe: "The politics of female voters"

Matt · 18 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Return of the King writes "Excerpt:

'ONE OF the myths that Kate O'Beirne skewers in "Women Who Make the World Worse," her shrewd and refreshing new book on the modern women's movement, is the myth of the gender gap -- the potent edge that Democrats are supposed to have over Republicans when it comes to attracting women's votes.'

Full article here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/18/0026248.shtml

Time Magazine on Choice for Men

Thomas · 18 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The online edition of Time Magazine has this to say regarding choice for men. Each day, it seems, men's issues are taken more seriously by parts of the mainstream media.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/18/029225.shtml

The He Hormone

Matt · 19 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Return of the King writes "An article about testosterone as it relates to all of society enlightens many issues relevant to the rights of men. After a feminist century, we are in need of a new understanding of masculinity. The concepts of manliness, of gentlemanly behavior, of chivalry have been debunked by a ferocious post-feminist culture. Indications of masculine cultural displacement are everywhere today, in a world in which the power of testosterone is ignored or attacked, with the result that it re-emerges in cruder, weaker and less social forms. Our main task in the gender wars of the new century may not be how to bring women fully into our society, but how to keep men from seceding from it, how to reroute testosterone for constructive ends, rather than ignore it for political point-making."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/19/0520220.shtml

RADAR Alert: VAWA Spring Campaign

Matt · 20 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The VAWA Spring Campaign kicks off on Monday, March 20.

Twenty-two organizations around the country will be working together to educate the public and elected officials about the truth of the Violence Against Women Act.

To get in on the action, go to www.mediaradar.org and sign up to receive the E-lerts.

LET'S ROLL.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/19/2331250.shtml

Unwed fathers fight for adoption rights

Matt · 20 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "The article here found in the NYTimes online describes the plight unwed fathers go through when fighting for babies that are placed for adoption by mothers."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/19/2336240.shtml

RADAR Alert: VAWA Violates Civil Rights, Destroys Families, Harms Children

Matt · 20 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This week, RADAR has released a ground-breaking report, "VAWA: Threat to Families, Children, Men, and Women," (http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Threat-to-Families.pdf) that concludes that VAWA, although well intentioned, imposes a one-size-fits-all policy on American families. By treating families experiencing minor non-violent disagreements as if one party had attacked the other with a gun, families are ripped apart, the innocent are penalized, and children pay the price.

Click "Read more..." for more.

VAWA Violates Civil Rights, Destroys Families, Harms Children

Among the points highlighted by the RADAR report:

- Even when couple aggression is mutual or minor, domestic violence programs discourage partner reconciliation and encourage divorce.
- A National Institute for Justice study concluded, "Restrictions on couples therapy and individual psychotherapy for battering are a point of contention between feminist-oriented batterer intervention providers and mental health providers in many communities."
- The total absence of safeguards to prevent restraining orders from being issued for false or frivolous reasons deprives innocent people of their civil rights. Each year, half a million restraining orders are issued in cases with not even an allegation of violence.
- When New Mexico Judge Daniel Sanchez issued a temporary order requiring David Letterman to have no contact with a woman he'd never met, who'd accused him of harassing her telepathically over the airwaves, that was no abberation. It was business as usual for the family court system.
- Family law attorney Lisa Scott describes restraining orders as 'weapons of mass destruction'. She says of family courts, "Whenever a woman claims to be a victim, she is automatically believed. No proof of abuse is required.
- The result is that children typically lose daily contact with their father. While this may be appropriate in the minority of cases that are pathologically violent, the children of those half million orders no allegation of violence are are two to three times more likely to use drugs, do badly in school, be socially maladjusted, and engage in criminal behavior.

This week, RADAR is asking you to contact your legislators by telephone, fax, or U.S. mail. Ask that they investigate the civil rights violations documented in "VAWA: Threat to Families, Children, Men, and Women" (http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Threat-to-Families.pdf)

Phone numbers and mailing addresses can be found at:

Your Representative in the House: http://www.house.gov/

Your two Senators: http://www.senate.gov/

Remember to keep all your communications polite and respectful.

Date of RADAR Release: March 19, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/20/1647242.shtml

Black Men Doing Worse Than Ever....

Matt · 20 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Emanslave writes "According to this New York Times article, young black boys in America today are doing worse than ever, thanks in part to unemployment, poverty, incarceration, and abuse! It makes you wonder, when will it be time for black men like me as well as others liberate ourselves from this? Please read!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/20/1928221.shtml

NYTimes: Wanted: A Few Good Sperm

Matt · 20 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The NYTimes seems to be on this issue fairly regularly. It's a long read but worth the review. My own take is that a lot of things are contributing to the phenomenon, not just the vastly-reduced status of men in our society or even just the perceived importance of fathers in the lives of children, though obviously these are major factors. Anyway, read it here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/20/1931205.shtml

"Donor 401" Sperm selling like hotcakes

Matt · 21 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous user writes*""Donor 401" has fathered eleven babies... now the are trying to find out who this mysterious donor is. There's a waiting list for his sperm! I don't blame this guy (blonde haired, blue eyed, athletic, 6'1) for trying to conceal his identity. If you think one child support is bad... try eleven and counting."*

Ed. note: Posted not to belabor the topic, but as an interesting follow-on to yesterday's post on the topic of artificial insemination. All I can say is, the world just gets weirder and weirder. Is this some sort of strange kind of polygamy-at-a-distance thing? If I had any reason to believe this story was fiction, perhaps I would, but don't.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/21/1918212.shtml

WP Columnist: Bush is too, "manly"

Matt · 21 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "As usual the media attempts portray all things male as deeply flawed and probably evil. The latest attack on manhood is directed at the President. A laundry list of complaints about Bush is offered in this article suggesting if that he were just more female none of these terrible events, all conserative victories by the way, could have been avoided. Is anyone else tired of being attacked simply beacuse you're man? It's time to stop the hate. Email this troll and let her know how you really feel: marcusr-at-washpost.com"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/21/1921229.shtml

MRAs: Take a Lesson from NOW's Herstory Action Plan

Matt · 21 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "N.O.W. has published an excellent menu of activist suggestions for promoting Women's Herstory Month. These ideas could be easily adapted by MRA's to raise awareness of men's rights. Among the creative ideas -

MAP IT OUT Create a timeline of the women's movement on your campus or of women's contributions in your local community... Be sure to use bright colors and pictures! TEACH IT Many schools' history programs do not give a full portrayal of women's herstory. Organize a Women's Herstory 101, and talk about the importance of teaching women's herstory in our schools. If your university does not have a women's studies department, consider petitioning the administration to establish one. SLAM IT OUT Organize a women's herstory poetry slam.

(WTF, no bake sale of vagina-shaped confectionaries?)"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/21/1923228.shtml

Latest Charges in LaFave Case Dropped

Matt · 21 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

For our LaFave watchers, read it here. The stated motivation for the dropping of this set of charges is that they don't want to put the boy through the process of testifying for his own sake, and such would be required since the judge has rejected the proposed plea bargain. Thoughts?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/21/1927257.shtml

Are American Men Slackers?

Thomas · 22 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

In this essay, Jeffery M. Leving and Glenn Sacks refute the unjust and unfounded feminist claim that American men are slackers.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/22/0051255.shtml

Falsely Accused Man MAY Get Compensated

Matt · 22 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "Here is yet another man cleared of rape after spending many years in the Gulag.

What makes this story of interest is that the state of Texas "MAY" pay him up to $250,000 for the time he spent in prison for a crime he didn't commit. $250K / 18 years = $13,888 for each year incarcerated. Gee, how magnanimous of the state! It is common for judges award that much for a years worth of child support for one child!

A new twist to these now common false rape convictions is that the current DA actually apologized to him. However, this same DA said nothing about implementing failsafe procedures that would prevent such judicial outrages from occurring in the future."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/22/1922213.shtml

Domestic Violence allegations and illegal searches

Matt · 22 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Return of the King writes "The Supreme Court ruled on Wednesday (Mar. 22, 2006) that police without a warrant cannot search a home when one resident says to come in but another tells them to go away, and the court's new leader complained that the ruling could hamper investigations of domestic abuse. Yet, This case has no bearing on the capacity of the police to protect domestic victims," Souter wrote. "No question has been raised, or reasonably could be, about the authority of the police to enter a dwelling to protect a resident from domestic violence; so long as they have good reason to believe such a threat exists." In other words, the police will enter your home on assumption of threat which is already assumed, anyway."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/22/1928249.shtml

FindLaw Commentator Defends Status Quo on Male Repro Rights

Matt · 22 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Joanna Grossman, a FindLaw commentator and legal professor, defends the status quo re the lack of parental rights for men here. Needless to say, the arguments she uses as well as the ones she cites that the Supreme Court has used to deny men equal protection are laughable but alas, all too common. Mysteriously, the message board link at the bottom of the article leads to a page-not-found type of error. I submitted a note telling them it was broken; we'll see if they fix it!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/22/1935214.shtml

Kathleen Parker: "Deleting Dad"

Matt · 23 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

John Doe writes "Kathleen Parker reviews some recent NY Times articles on the decline of fatherhood. Excerpts:

'...men are necessary, if not to certain women, then certainly to children, who, despite the creative inventions of many modern mothers, seem to love their daddies.

A society in which women are alone, men are lonely, and children don't have fathers is nothing to celebrate. And a future world filled with fatherless children - bereft of half their identity and robbed of a father's love, discipline and authority - won't likely be a pleasant place to live.'

Column here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/23/047202.shtml

MSN on Men's Health

Matt · 23 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Surprising, in a positive way, this article from MSN.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/23/180237.shtml

'Wondermum' article in British newspaper - father is nominee

Matt · 23 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Craig writes "From 'The Sun' on Tuesday 21st about 'wondermums'. Six mothers from across the UK and Ireland have been nominated as wondermums-except one of the mothers is actually a single father of two nominated by his kids. Read about and vote for the nominees here.

It's nice to see positive recognition for fathers for a change, especially single fathers. I voted for the father and I hope others will do the same."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/23/183217.shtml

DADS UNITED to Hold March in London - June 2006

Matt · 24 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

DADS UNITED DEMO - Friday 16th June 2006

Every day loving dads and grandparents are being shown the red card in family courts throughout the UK. Children pay the penalty for a misguided and corrupt system. If you believe parenting is a game of two halves then join the red card dads for the annual Fathers Day demo through Central London on Friday 16th June 2006.

GET YER KIT ON!

Click "Read more..." for details.

Dress: Football kits (any colours) and/or footie hats and scarves.

Bring: Pictures of your children, whistles, air-horns, rattles, team spirit!

Venue: Meeting at Queens Walk, Piccadilly, London - Green Park tube - at 11.00am for 12.00 Kick-off. Full-time: 2.00pm (approx) at RCJ in The Strand.

March: Giant inflatable football, stiltwalker, brass band, balloons, guest speakers.

Rules: No 'foul' language or offside tactics.

THEY THINK IT'S ALL OVER - IT ISN'T YET!

Register now at: www.dadsunited.org

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/23/2011222.shtml

Female Teacher Sentenced

Matt · 24 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "She has sex with four students under 16 and gets '4 to 20 years.'

Teacher tries to use the same defense that Debra Lefave used too. Interesting quote: "Debra LaFave, a Florida teacher facing similar charges avoided prison this week. What was different?"

Uhm, she was a pretty blonde..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/24/0314237.shtml

Even in State Repression, Chivalry Reigns

Matt · 24 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Seems Belarusian police think women are not as responsible for law-breaking than men. While at once anyone not being hauled off for the "crime" of objecting peacably to election results is a good thing, it isn't good that only some people seem to be worthy of this indulgence over others for no other reason than the content of their pants. Article here. It closes with:

According to an opposition presidential candidate who arrived at the square, all the women were allowed to leave.

So, I guess it's not so bad then, right? Wrong.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/24/0320235.shtml

Life for wife who killed husband

Matt · 24 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "A former prostitute who murdered her elderly husband after finding he was not wealthy has been jailed for life. She was violent towards him during the 2-year marriage, and eventually killed him with a kitchen knife. She will serve at least 12 years. Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/24/1919210.shtml

Ex-Teacher sues over noisy chair

Matt · 24 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous user writes "A UK teacher is suing her school for sexism over a noisy chair. Just... wow. I can't even tell you what I think of this. Switch the genders on this one is all I can say."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/24/1922256.shtml

"Perfect Mother and Wife" Cops to Murder-One

Matt · 24 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The only good news about this story is that is seems to be all over the news today. I wonder what sort of Chicago-like "He had it comin'" excuses will get made though?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/24/1925227.shtml

Female NY state senator charged with assaulting staffer

Matt · 24 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Return of the King writes
State Sen. Ada Smith was accused in a criminal summons Thursday of throwing hot coffee into the eyes of a former staffer. Smith, a Queens Democrat, faces a misdemeanor charge of third-degree assault, according to court records."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/24/1927230.shtml

Couple Directs Young Daughter to Beat Neighbor Boy for No Apparent Reason

Matt · 25 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This is so sick and is fodder for so much thought and commentary on so many levels, I am at a loss for where to begin. Suffice it to say, I can only imagine the scars both kids will carry around, how it may affect them and their relations with others as they grow up, and marvel at the kind of dementedness of perspective the so-called "adults" have evinced.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/24/2013214.shtml

Boy Murdered for Refusal to Comply with Gender Dysphoria

Matt · 27 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Ragtime writes "I'm really not sure what I can add to this bit of horror. -- Four-year-old Jandre Botha disobeyed an order to call his mother's lesbian lover "Daddy". So the lover, Engeline de Nysschen (33), viciously assaulted Jandre while demanding that he must call her "Daddy". Jandre died from his injuries, which trauma expert Professor Mohammed Dada said were similar to those of a person who had fallen from a double-storey building. -- Appalling story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/27/0032226.shtml

Wendy McElroy Tracks Legal Redefining of Dads

Matt · 27 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "Wendy McElroy writes an objective piece about several current cases in the legal system that affect fathers' rights, mostly related to child custody in divorce and reproductive choices or lack thereof. One of the most important cases comes up this week – "On March 28, the New York State Assembly's Children & Families Committee is scheduled to hear Bill A330 on shared parenting. The bill seeks to establish "the presumption in matrimonial proceedings for awarding shared parenting of minor children in the absence of an allegation that shared parenting would be detrimental to the best interests of the child." (It's interesting that the bill's language requires merely an "allegation" to derail presumption of shared parenting. Women's divorce lawyers will be found negligent if they do not tell their client to make a false accusation of domestic violence against the soon-to-be-ex-husband. This in no way advances fathers' legal standing, unless a test of proof is required for allegations.)"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/27/0036205.shtml

ADHD drugs linked to heart attacks, etc.

Matt · 27 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Tirryb writes "News.com.au reports here that ADHD drugs have caused serious health problems in children as young as 3. Of course it's 'children' and not 'boys', I wonder what the percentage of prescription boy to girl is..?

Excerpt:

Documents obtained by The Australian reveal that almost 400 serious adverse reactions have been reported to the Therapeutic Goods Administration, some involving children as young as three.

Cases include the sudden death of a seven-year-old, and a five-year-old who suffered a stroke after taking Ritalin. Children also experienced heart palpitations and shortness of breath after taking Dexamphetamine.

Others taking Ritalin or Dexamphetamine - the two most commonly used ADHD drugs - experienced hair loss, muscle spasms, severe abdominal pain, tremors, insomnia, severe weight loss, depression and paranoia.

Almost 60 of the adverse-reaction reports dating back to 1980, obtained under Freedom of Information laws, involved children under the age of 10."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/27/0047246.shtml

Men's Hour United Conference, June 2006, London

Matt · 27 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "Following the disbanding of Fathers 4 Justice, it was unclear which way to go and how to get there. A conference was conceived by Thames Valley Equal Parenting and the Men's Hour. The "Men's Hour United Conference - The Way Forward" is in London on June 17th, 2006, the day before Father's Day.

It is to discuss the way forward for children's rights, equal parenting, men's and fathers issues, including mutual support, media campaigning, political lobbying, protest, marches and non-violent direct action."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/27/0049215.shtml

RADAR Alert: Massive Civil Rights Violations Under VAWA

Matt · 27 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Today RADAR is releasing a report that documents how the Violence Against Women Act, and the state laws it has spawned, routinely violate people's civil liberties.

Click "Read more..." for more.

Massive Civil Rights Violations Under VAWA
"Without Restraint: The Use and Abuse of Domestic Restraining Orders" reveals the following:

- Each year, one-half million domestic restraining orders are issued in the United States that do not involve even an allegation of violence.
- Such orders are often sought during a divorce proceeding, often making it impossible for the father to gain shared custody.
- The issuance of both temporary and final restraining orders is done without regard for due process protections.

The report can be viewed at this address: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Restraining-Orders.pdf

So now 25 organizations around the country are calling on the U.S. Congress to investigate. (See http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Resolution.pdf) We are asking the Judiciary Committees in both the Senate and the House of Representatives to hold hearings to make the judges who issue these orders more accountable.

It's time to stand up for our rights. This week, we're making phone calls to key members of Congress:

1. Telephone the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, James Sensenbrenner at 202-225-3951.
   Politely tell the person who answers:
   - Your name, city, and state
   - The reason for your call: "I'm calling about the recent RADAR report that documents that one-half million domestic restraining orders are issued each year without even an allegation of violence. These orders represent a massive violation of people's civil rights."
   - Your request: "I am requesting that the Constitution Subcommittee promptly hold hearings to investigate this problem."
2. Telephone the chairman of the House Constitution Subcommittee, Steve Chabot (pronounced "SHA-bot") and tell him the same things listed in the three bullets above.

NOW ON TO THE SENATE!

3. Telephone the chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Arlen Specter, and tell him exactly the same three points listed above: 202-224-4254.
4. Telephone the chairman of the Senate Constitution Subcommittee,

Sam Brownback, and give him the same message: 202-224-6521.

Your one-minute telephone call will help protect a family - and maybe someone you know -- from future restraining order abuse.

Date of RADAR Release: March 26, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/27/1918228.shtml

Ten years to artificial wombs?

Thomas · 27 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

It seems that population restoration efforts for animals may encourage the development of artificial wombs.

According to this article populations of gray nurse sharks may be replenished in part through the use of artificial wombs within 10 years.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/27/2011250.shtml

Serious Achievement Gap in Maine's Schools

Matt · 28 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Return of the King writes "In an about-face from decades ago, boys' grades lag behind those of girls, and boys go to college in far fewer numbers than they did even 20 years ago while female enrollment has skyrocketed. In Part One of a four-part series that outlines the plight of boys in education, the reporters fail to point out that decades of one sided sexist advocacy favoring girls alone from a federal level on down IS the reason for the failure of boys in school. Women's advocates say pay equity should be a higher priority than boys' lagging achievement while 38% of Maine undergraduates are male and they drop out of school in higher numbers as well..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/27/2220201.shtml

Boy, 8, Accused of Sexual Harassment

Matt · 28 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Here we go again...

'LORAIN -- Lorain school officials this week executed an "emergency removal" of an 8-year-old boy who they say sexually harassed a girl in gym class.'

Story
here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/27/2222253.shtml

Re-Born Fathers4Justice Launches 'Child Focused' Campaign

Matt · 29 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "F4J back but not bigger and better, more smaller and quieter. Re-Born Fathers4Justice Launches 'Child Focused' Campaign"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/29/0344213.shtml

Abuse of Boy-- Not Quite So Important to School Authorities

Matt · 29 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "And no mention of sexual harassment. Well of course it's not when the boy is the victim -- I guess he wanted it. Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/29/0348219.shtml

Valuable Citation Material for Fathers and Children Studies Available

Matt · 29 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

James Adams writes "I have collated citations to all the published research I could find supporting the case that children suffer without their fathers for our Government's enquiry on the Family Law ("Feminist Law"?). It lists hundreds of citations, running to 80 pages. Please download a copy of the document from the Australian Government website. This is submission no. 110 [main (.pdf file) and attachment (.pdf file)].

This was part of our campaign for a presumption of equal parenting time in Australia by Fathers4Equality-australia.org, the Non Custodial Parents Party, Dads In Distress, the Fatherhood Foundation, the Men's Rights Agency and not least the Shared Parenting Council of Australia (especially Yuri Joakimidis). Debate is continuing in our parliament (upper house).

Hope grows!

James Adams

PartTimeParent-at-yahoo.com.au"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/29/0355205.shtml

NOW slams shared parenting bill

Matt · 29 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "This article/propaganda piece printed for the feminists by the Times Union is a scathing attack on the shared parenting bill currently before the New York legislature. This bill would provide for automatic shared parenting in all New York divorces. This would be a devastating setback for the feminists who worked long and hard to eliminate fathers from families, separate them from thier children, and ensure that they serve as permanent wage slaves for women. NOW can't have this, so predictly the "article" is filled with usual lies and distortions used so often by the feminazis. Read it, get mad and rip Marcia Pappas a new one."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/29/1812232.shtml

No justice for rape victims, apparently

Matt · 30 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Tirryb writes "BBC News reports here that apparently there is almost no justice for victims of rape, with less than 1 in 20 accused of rape being convicted and with those horrible men still able to defend themselves in court and 'get away with it'.

Of course all the usual excuses are trotted out - institutional sexism (she flirted so she deserved it), old fashioned judges, men bamboozling the jury with expert witnesses, etc. And not even a mention of the possibility of a growth in false accusations.

Then right at the end, the shock figure - only 15% of rapes ever get reported. Yeah, right."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/30/0343218.shtml

Concern Grows Over College Gender Gap

Matt · 30 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Joe Manthey writes "Article here. Excerpt:

'Joe Manthey: "If you look at who is filling up our jails, our juvenile halls, our prisons; who is more likely to be homeless; who is more likely to commit suicide; who is more likely to commit crimes; who is more likely to be institutionalized; it's boys and men."

'Manthey says men who make it to college don't get the same kind of encouragement women do. For example, most universities have support organizations for women, but nothing specifically for men -- even though the women are often doing better.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/30/0350252.shtml

Afghan Convert was also Seeking Child Custody when Arrested

Matt · 30 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This BBC news report adds a critical missing piece of information about the recent story regarding the Afghan man who, after converting to Christianity, was held for trial on charges of apostasy. It appears as if he had converted sixteen years ago and had left Kabul, but returned from the Panjshir Valley to try to get custody of his daughters. Only then after his relatives complained was he arrested for the crime of choosing his own "unacceptable" religious beliefs! This important piece of information of course only comes toward the end of the report, so read the whole article.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/30/058219.shtml

Hidden dangers of failure to diagnose ADHD correctly

Matt · 30 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "Interesting article in New Scientist about ADHD. "Now reports are coming in of serious adverse reactions, including hallucinations and, in rare suspected cases, sudden death from cardiovascular problems...10 per cent of 12-year-old boys in the US, where diagnosis of ADHD is more common than in most other countries, are being treated for the condition" And how many girls?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/30/2020252.shtml

Indiana Civil Rights Council Asks for Push to Hold Counties Accountable for NCP Violations

Matt · 30 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

You know about the nationwide NCP classactions filed directly against the STATES. Now - welcome to Round #2: nationwide NCP lawsuits directly against the COUNTIES.

Click "Read more..." for more.While many federal judges did violate their oath of office, dismissing their STATE classaction by choosing to ignore clear statutory law that automatically waives immunity of a state, there are, actually, a handful of these previous classactions still pending in the lower federal district courts, and there also are, as of this writing, at least three of the illegally dismissed classactions against the states now under appeal in the higher federal courts.

But, that's no reason to wait on launching Round #2...

Suing a STATE, at all, let alone for damages, is difficult, although it actually can be done. However, suing a city or a town or a COUNTY for violations of rights, and for damages, is well established in this country, and can easily be done. In fact, it is done almost every day, somewhere in this country. Moreover, cities and towns and counties do not have any immunity to being sued, which blows away the very notion of dismissing for immunity...

On our revamped website, you can find out about the new NCP classactions against the 3142 USA counties:

- details about the claims, arguments, and damages, etc.

- details about how to start a county classaction lawsuit.

- details about how to find other NCPs from the same county.

- checking to see the status for a particular county.

In fact, a few people got early wind of Round #2, and volunteers are already beginning to select their counties...

GO HERE TO LEARN MORE:

http://www.indianacrc.org/

http://www.indianacrc.org/classactionco.html

Please distribute this information as widely as possible... TODAY...
Ideally, there should be a team filing against each of the 3,142 counties in the USA.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/30/2025219.shtml

The most men-friendly university in America?

Matt · 31 March 2006 · Archived copy · Original

zerostress writes "While wandering on the Internet, I found this place. This must be the most men-friendly university in America. I have never seen or heard about something similar. Check this out."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/03/31/188247.shtml

Take Back the Campus

Matt · 1 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bull writes "An interesting article I found on the "Independent Women's Forum" website about the "Ten Most Common Feminist Myths." Click Here"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/01/1755235.shtml

Weirdest False Rape Conviction Story Yet

Matt · 2 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "This article is about a man who has served 5 years in prison for sodomizing his daughter. He was convicted on the state's expert witnesses testimony that his daughter was suffering from repressed memory syndrome. This expect witness the state relied so heavily on for conviction got her doctorate degree from an unaccredited online internet university! Additionally, the judge who threw out his conviction noted he was poorly represented by his defense counsel.

Also, the daughter who was supposed to have been sodomized was killed by a pregnant woman when the daughter tried to cut out her baby and claim it for her own.

However, the man still remains in jail. The state may ask for a retrial for some stupid reason. Society doesn't have money to pay for proper veteran's medical care and other worthwhile causes but we have tons of money to keep innocent men in prison on bogus sex assault charges."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/02/2054228.shtml

Mass. Family Courts Expose

Matt · 2 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "In case you hadn't heard, Mr. Kevin Thompson has written a book about the bias and corruption found in the Massachusettes Family Courts. This book landed him in hot water. The kangaroo courts didn't want this information public. While they tried to get it banned it is still available from Lulu.com. Please get it and distribute it as widely as possible."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/02/2059233.shtml

Why Parenting Time Motions Fail and Child Support

Matt · 2 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Lary Holland writes "An overview of why parenting time motions are more likely to fail than child support motions are to succeed. Short concise statement of a major issue surrounding bias in the family courts.

After a Friend of the Court Citizen Advisory Committee (Michigan FOC) meeting an attorney indicated that it seemed that their parenting time motions seem to fail more frequently than child support motions succeed. This was a brilliant observation and I wanted to take a quick moment and tell you why."

Click "Read more..." for more

For every three dollars ($3.00) that your local court spends on Child Support Enforcement the court receives two dollars ($2.00) by way of federal block grant money. Additionally to make up the difference of the remaining one dollar balance the local courts have been able to use what is known as federal incentive grants from the federal government, which has made it possible to “profit” from operating a “successful” child support enforcement program. An immense gain by the state is to be had by operating a "successful" child support enforcement program which means that a child cannot have substantially equal time with both parents. In order to maximize federal money the states create the appearance of an absentee parent for purposes of the Child Support Enforcement welfare program. Successful also means maximizing the number of participants the state has in its Child Support Enforcement welfare program by including the middle-class at the sole expense of the U.S. Tax Payer.

See 42 USC 655; “Payment to States”;

See 42 USC 658a; “Incentive payments to States”;

In a parenting time conflict, there is disincentive to allow children to have substantially equal time with their parents because then the parents do not fit wholly into the above welfare program model as being absent. The more parenting time provided, typically, child support is reduced or abated. A reduction in participants is a reduction in the justification of federal monies to the state. Normally the reduction of expenditures is encouraged by government but in this case the oppositeholds true because there is a profit derived from the excess influx of funds. Because of lack of eligibility requirements there is immense waste in the new Child Support Enforcement Beuracracy. In 2006 alone, 4.2 BILLION of our Social Security Fund, nationally, is being invested into this program which is a huge disincentive for the states to allow substantially equal parenting time with both parents.

The huge mass of money out of your social security also is the reason that the State is so eager to incorporate all the middle-class into their Child Support Enforcement Welfare programs; that means higher support awards and an appearance of more need for federal money now that there is widespread expanded group participation.

The new welfare abuser is not the people, but the states who have shaped their participant numbers to create the appearance of need for a program that lacks eligibility requirements. The reality is that there are many fit, willing, and competent parents that are trapped in a welfare system against their will and they are being prevented from parenting their children because the state wants to maximize their federal funding and make them look absent.

Very Truly Yours,

/s/ /s/

Lary Holland

5180 Cedar Lake Rd.

Oscoda, MI 48750

Lary Holland

http://www.laryholland.org/serendipity

http://360.yahoo.com/laryholland@sbcglobal.net

http://standuptoday.blogspot.com

http://www.removethesepeople.org"?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/02/219210.shtml

MSN and "Marie Claire": Women Must Trade Sex for Food

Matt · 3 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Read this. Excerpt:

In war-torn countries, food is frequently a barter tool through which women are exploited. In the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), Uganda, and many other countries, "food for sex" is well documented by human-rights organizations: That is, food is withheld by peacekeepers (as in the case of the DRC) or local soldiers (as is the situation in Uganda) until women, at the brink of starvation, submit to sex.

Comments?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/03/0327201.shtml

RADAR Alert: VAWA Appropriations Hearings on April 5th - Call Senators ASAP

Matt · 3 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Next Wednesday, April 5th, the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee will hold hearings concerning funding for the Violence Against Women Act. And for the first time since VAWA was initially passed, the 2005 reauthorization bill includes language explicitly stating that VAWA-funded benefits and services are to be available to male as well as female victims.

Click "Read more..." for more.

VAWA Appropriations Hearings on April 5th – Call Senators ASAP
Although Senators Hatch and Biden have publicly stated that this was always the intent of Congress, the majority of organizations in the Federal grants pipeline that are destined to receive VAWA funds remain firmly convinced that domestic violence is caused by sexism and the power and control of men over women in our society. This ideologically held belief renders these organizations unable or unwilling to recognize male victimization.

The majority of domestic violence organization websites clearly document that those organizations ignore empirical studies in favor of ideology, and they willingly and purposely ignore male victimization.

Furthermore, restraining order abuse is rampant, as documented in RADAR's recent report "Without Restraint: The Use and Abuse of Domestic Restraining Orders" (http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Restraining-Orders.pdf) Contrary to the original intent of restraining orders – to provide protection to spouses who are in danger of being beaten and battered – these orders are now granted for minor family disputes. And according to a recent article in the Illinois Bar Journal, restraining orders have become "part of the gamesmanship of divorce." Each year, half a million restraining orders are issued without any allegation of violence.

The temporary restraining order recently issued by New Mexico Judge Daniel Sanchez is only unusual because the target happened to be a celebrity who could defend himself. Sanchez, for those who don't remember, is the judge who issued an order against David Letterman, based on the claim that Letterman had used code words, gestures and "eye expressions" on the air to respond to a woman who said she'd been communicating with him telepathically.

The issuance of millions of unfounded orders each year trivializes and minimizes their effectiveness for those in real need of services and assistance. And an increasing number of studies by the National Institute of Justice and National Academy of Science document that mandatory arrest and no drop prosecution policies create as many problems as they solve.

The new RADAR report: "VAWA Programs Discriminate Against Male Victims", also documents many of the contemporary problems and presents some solutions. (See http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Discriminates-Against-Males.pdf)

This week, it's extremely important to contact the following members of the Appropriations Subcommittee before their April 5th hearings.

Senator	Voice phone	FAX
Thad Cochran	202-224-5054	202-224-9450
Richard Shelby	202-224-5744	202-224-3416

When you call or fax them, ask them to get substantive answers to the following questions during their hearings:

1. How does the Violence Against Women Office plan to protect the civil rights of innocent Americans falsely accused of domestic violence?
2. How does the Violence Against Women Office propose to monitor compliance with Section 40002(b)(8) of VAWA 2005, whose purpose is to prohibit discrimination against male victims?

As always, be polite and respectful in all your communications with the Senators' offices.

Date of RADAR Release: April 2, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/03/1015216.shtml

Congresswoman Assaults Capitol Police Officer - Uses Ethnicity and Gender as Defense

Matt · 3 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "This little excerpt explains why a man in this stiuation would be arrested on the spot: he is white and male...

'WASHINGTON (CNN) -- As U.S. Rep. Cynthia McKinney, D-Georgia, faces possible criminal charges for a Wednesday altercation with a Capitol Police officer, one of her lawyers said Friday that the real issues were "sex, race and Ms. McKinney's progressiveness."

In a news conference featuring actor Danny Glover and singer Harry Belafonte, McKinney said she would be exonerated and that "this whole incident was instigated by the inappropriate touching and stopping of me, a female, black congresswoman.'

Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/03/1918203.shtml

NY Shared Parenting Bill Stalled in Committee

Matt · 4 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

According to Glenn Sacks' most recent e-mail newsletter, the Shared Parenting bill in the NYS Assembly has been stalled. He is asking for the resumption of emails and faxes (initially suspended due to their request, since so many were arriving that they couldn't do anything else).

Click "Read more..." for how to act.From the newsletter:

Despite media coverage and over 5,000 calls and letters, powerful members of the New York Assembly Committee on Children & Families are trying to stall voting on A330, the New York Shared Parenting Bill.

We recently suspended the thousands of faxes being sent to the Committee members through our campaign page because the committee members told us they were unable to get any work done. James Hays of the Coalition of Fathers and Families New York, which is sponsoring the New York Shared Parenting Bill, has now asked us to go back to emails to deliver the message. To email now, click here.

This bill has been locked up in committee for 12 years! Opponents of Shared Parenting cannot win this battle fairly and openly--they can only prevail through political maneuvers. If one doubts the correctness of our position, one need only read last week's clash between shared parenting advocates and the National Organization for Women in the pages of the Albany Times Union. Marcia Pappas, president of New York State NOW, wrote a column called Joint custody bill not in child's interest. The column in support of the bill, penned by Mike McCormick of the American Coalition for Fathers and Children and myself, was Supporting the child by order of the court.

The vote on the bill was set for March 28 but has been postponed twice. New York is a battleground state for shared parenting and fatherhood, and we want a vote on this bill. Again, to support the bill, click here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/04/118232.shtml

CALL FOR ACTION: Phone Senators TODAY re VAWA

Matt · 4 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Originated by Lee Newman, Exec. Dir. of SAFE-NH:

VAWA violates people's civil rights, undermines families, and causes fatherlessness. Please make these calls by noon Wednesday, in time for the VAWA hearings which will start Wednesday (April 5, 2006) at 2PM.

Click "Read more..." for what to do.
Please telephone Senator Gregg's office at 202-224-3324 and ask him to raise the two questions below at the Dept. of Justice hearings; also call Senator Murray's office at 202-224-2621 and ask her to do the same. The questions are:

1. How does the Department of Justice plan to protect the civil rights of innocent Americans falsely accused of domestic violence?

2. How does the Department of Justice propose to monitor compliance with Section 40002(b)(8) of VAWA 2005, whose purpose is to prohibit discrimination against male victims?

Please take a few minutes today or tomorrow morning and call the Senators... You may call after hours and leave a voicemail if that is more convenient for you.

The first question is on behalf of men AND women because EVERYONE's at risk of being falsely accused and suffering the results.
The second question is important on behalf of your loved ones of all ages who happen to be male...Do you love them less than the females in your life? Of course not...but they are not equally protected under this law!

PLEASE take a little time today to make a big difference and possibly save the life of someone you love!

Thank you as usual for "Making a Difference" and "Taking a Stand Against Violence" with SAFE-NH.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/04/1844220.shtml

Female Judge Mocks Male Assault Victim

Matt · 5 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Another for the "reverse the genders" file...

http://www.breitbart.com/news/2006/04/04/D8GP9IPG6 .html

Excerpt:

'A municipal judge has accepted censure as punishment for mocking an assault victim by comparing him to a lying character on "Saturday Night Live."

The state Commission on Judicial Conduct said Monday that Syracuse City Court Judge Karen Uplinger "demeaned and mocked" assault victim Anthony Nushwat in October 2004.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/05/0133215.shtml

Female Teacher and 13-year-old Student

Matt · 5 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Yep, it's a woman. Another female teacher caught having sex with an underaged male. At least this one is in jail after admitting to the whole thing. Who wants to bet she'll get off scott free? Also, included on this webpage is a bunch of hyperlinks to arrest records for other female teachers who did the same thing and got caught. Book mark it and email to the next person who claims that only MEN do that sort of thing. Excerpt:

'APRIL 4--Meet Rachel Holt. The 34-year-old Delaware teacher is facing rape charges for allegedly having sex with a 13-year-old student 28 times during a one-week period last month.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/05/2025223.shtml

BBC.com: "Woman jailed for Paris 'slavery'"

Matt · 5 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. I wonder, why is the BBC using quotes in the headline of this article? I notice they do this a lot with not just these but other kinds of news items as well, perhaps as a way of avoiding accusations of bias of some kind. But it only makes them look (even more) stupid, IMHO. Excerpt:

The events began in 1990, when Mensah went to her country and brought the then 15-year-old Olivia back to France with the promise to her parents she would receive an education in return for a few hours' babysitting.

But the reality turned out to be completely different.

Once in Paris, Olivia was locked up in the house working 20 hours a day, and told to sleep in the basement.

She was badly beaten up, burned with cigarettes and sexually abused every time she was accused of making a mistake in her housework.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/05/2033229.shtml

Class Action Suit by EEOC Against Restaurants

Matt · 6 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A writes "The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission just filed a class action lawsuit against Lawry's Restaurants, Inc., dba Lawry's The Prime Rib, Five Crowns, and the Tam O'Shanter Inn, on behalf of male applicants who were systematically rejected for hire as food servers due to their gender. Lawry's, a California-based corporation, operates restaurants in Las Vegas, Nevada, Chicago, Illinois, Dallas, Texas, Los Angeles, Beverly Hills and Corona del Mar, Calif.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/06/1352231.shtml

Are Schools Geared to Girls?

Matt · 6 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Martian Bachelor writes ""Battle of the Sexes: Are Schools Geared to Girls?", by Martha Brockenbrough, is pretty standard msn.com drivel, but some of what she writes may motivate you to email her at martha-at-marthabee.com..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/06/1359240.shtml

New Prostate Cancer Tests Developed

Matt · 6 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

Prostate cancer is the most common cancer in U.S. men. It is diagnosed in 232,000 men every year and kills up to 30,000 of them. Worldwide, 221,000 men die from prostate cancer each year.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/06/1414236.shtml

Truth about DV in mainstream media

Thomas · 7 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Facts continue to slip, on occasion, into reports by mainstream media. This article on CNN reports on DV by women against men. It ends with a bit about anger and frustration felt by many women, which to me sounds like an insinuation of an excuse, but on the whole it's a decent article.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/07/003231.shtml

Another Teacher Has Child with an Underage Student

Matt · 7 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Let's see, the police tazed him for trying not to get caught with her and he is the father of her child -- he'll be paying soon... story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/07/0017244.shtml

New Book on DV to be Released

Matt · 7 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Rethinking Domestic Violence to be released May 8, 2006. There is at least one other book by this title out there already, so note the author, publisher, and year when looking for it. First reader(s), please submit reviews.

From the "About the book" section on the publisher's site:

After twenty years of viewing intimate partner violence as generated by gender and focusing on a punitive "law and order" approach, Dutton now argues that this approach must be more varied and flexible. Treatment providers, criminal justice system personnel, lawyers, and researchers have indicated the need for a new view of the problem – one less invested in gender politics and more open to collaborative views and interdisciplinary insights*.*

Also note that Amazon.com already has a stub for this book here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/07/0028238.shtml

NY College Student Charged with False Reporting of Rape

Matt · 7 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I wonder what motivates some people, sometimes. I can only speculate. Rather brief and under-descriptive story here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/07/0540213.shtml

Woman found not guilty of severing daughter's arms

Matt · 8 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Story here. Excerpt:

'A mother charged with murder for cutting off her baby daughter's arms in what her lawyers portrayed as a religious frenzy was found not guilty by reason of insanity Friday by a judge.

Dena Schlosser, 38, will be sent to a state mental hospital and held until she is no longer deemed a threat to herself or others.'

How thoughtful of our judicial system. A psychotic baby killer is being given the opportunity to be "healed" and ultimately released back into society. Presumably as if nothing ever happened. I wonder, would a man be treated with such leniency as to be committed to a state mental hospital for a few years and then let go? Not a chance. At the very least he'd be behind bars for the rest of his natural life. But more than likely he would be counting the minutes until his speedy execution."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/08/187211.shtml

Paternity Fraud Update - making progress

Matt · 8 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original oregon dad writes "This article shows that progress is slow, but steady. Even the woman attorneys are stating that women are losing ground...and its about time.

Excerpt:

"This is the new underdog," said Michigan family law attorney Michele Kelly, who represents mostly men tangled in paternity disputes. "I was a staunch feminist. I marched with Gloria Steinem. But the new victims in America are working men. All they are is a mule train.""

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/08/1818255.shtml

High School Dropout Crisis

Matt · 9 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Surfed over to cnn.com and saw this article reporting that almost 1/3 of US high school students don't graduate. It's only part of the actual "Time" magazine article, which of course requires a paid subscription to see the entire thing. But in the part on cnn.com that is there, what is amazingly absent is any mention of gender breakdown-- even though they do mention the ethnic breakdown of the drop-outs. MANN regulars already know that this 1/3 of high school drop-outs are most assuredly overwhelmingly male. cnn.com also has this report on the now-critical shortage of child psychiatrists in all our states. Again, anyone care to guess how many of these underserved children are boys?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/09/2131206.shtml

Single-gender classroom are good for both sexes

Matt · 10 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

zerostress writes "I found this blog entry while searching blogs. Look like what has been said all along by many peoples is right: single-gender classroom benefits both gender. Let's all hope now their experiment won't be closed down by some feminazi."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/10/1817202.shtml

RADAR Alert: Tell Congress Not To Fund Discrimination And Destruction Of Due Process

Matt · 10 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

RADAR has recently released reports that reveal how the Violence Against Women Act routinely discriminates against male victims, tramples on due process protections, and undermines the family.

Today, RADAR is issuing a fourth report: "Justice Denied: Arrest Policies for Domestic Violence." The report reveals how mandatory arrest policies have turned "innocent until proven guilty" into "guilty unless proven otherwise." The report is available at: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/Justice-Denied-DV-Arrest-Policies.pdf.

Click "Read more..." for more.

Tell Congress Not To Fund Discrimination And Destruction Of Due Process
Word is now getting out that VAWA is at the root of massive civil rights violations. Law enforcement programs typically train officials to think of the victim as "she" and the perpetrator as "he". A top-ranking judge, when training a class of other judges on how to handle domestic violence cases, stated:

"Your job is not to become concerned about all the constitutional rights of the man that you're violating as you grant a restraining order. Throw him out on the street, give him the clothes on his back and tell him, 'See ya' around.' We don't have to worry about the rights."

RADAR's series of reports document that this mentality is typical of those who run the system. On February 6, President Bush delivered his 2007 budget request to Congress. His budget requested $347 million for VAWA - that's $39.5 million less than for 2006. (http://www.womenspolicy.org/thesource/issue.cfm?issueID=243). By simply reallocating funding away from programs that destroy due process, and the very principles that make the U.S. a free society, this budget request will be more than sufficient to fund those victim services that demonstrably provide equal assistance for all domestic violence victims regardless of gender.

Last week FamilyViolence.org put out a desperate call saying that VAWA is "in trouble." The group called on people to pressure Congress to provide full funding for all VAWA programs.

It's bottom of the second inning, the score is tied 1-1, and two of our men are on base. Now we're up to bat - let's bring our boys home!

This week, call the following key Senators who will make BIG decisions about the VAWA budget for 2007:

Senator	Voice phone	FAX	Chairman of
Thad Cochran	202-224-5054	202-224-9450	Appropriations Committee

Richard Shelby	202-224-5744	202-224-3416	Appropriations Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, and Science (this subcommittee will decide on funding for the Department of Justice, which administers VAWA)

When you call or fax, urge them to approve the President's 2007 budget proposal for VAWA. The VAWA budget cuts should be directed to curbing overly-aggressive law enforcement programs, not to reducing services for victims of domestic violence.

Your telephone call or fax will help assure that VAWA stops violating the civil rights of hundreds of thousands of innocent American citizens.

Date of RADAR Release: April 9, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/10/1823212.shtml

No DNA Match in Duke Lacrosse Team Scandal

Matt · 11 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I debated which category to post this under: News, False Accusations, The Media, or Inequality. Really, this story touches all of them, so I went with "News" since that is the most general, though it sort of seems like it underemphasizes what is a very comprehensive example of how men and male sexuality in particular is attacked and condemned.

Click "Read more..." for more.There's no doubt that it is in some people's judgment immoral to hire a stripper. At the same time, it's perfectly legal and geez, women do it too (Google "Chippendales" or better yet just look up "adult entertainment" listings in the Yellow Pages to see that strippers come in both sexes). The morality of the actions of the lacrosse players though is not nor should be a factor-- the legality of their actions are what should be examined, since we can play the morality game all day and come up empty. As for the lousy attitude shown by one of the players in one of the emails reportedly sent by him to his friends, I will be first to say that it is not at all desirable and eminently condemnable. However, is his attitude enough to label him a criminal? And would the parallel attitude from a female toward a male, stripper or not, be as readily condemned? We here at MANN know about how many times a day prominent women in media and other spheres say or write equally nasty things about men and seem to get away with it without the least bit in recriminations. So I stress that such behavior and attitudes are wrong coming from people of either sex. But are they grounds for criminal prosecution or the ruining of one's future, especially if the person in question is still rather young yet and perhaps has some growing up to do? No, they are not.

I saw the breaking news yesterday on CNN when it was revealed there was no DNA match on the boys, nor any forensic evidence at all of any sexual assault committed by any of them. The reporters seemed embarrassed and harried and one remarked that "rapists can use condoms," implying that the lacrosse players had done what they were accused of, and just were smart enough to use condoms to avoid detection. There has been no evidence reported that such was the case (ie, condoms recovered, or other evidence, such as of physical injury to the accused or the accuser), and even if there had been, in the case of a used condom being discovered, such is not prima facie evidence that a rape occurred.

So at the present time, what this appears to be simply is a case of a false accusation that has likely led to the ruining of the futures, at least the foreseeable futures, of a number of young men who have been publicly named-- while their accuser has not been and can't be under law. It is another case, or so it appears, of a man/men being presumed guilty based solely on the accusation of a woman, with any further evidence entirely lacking.

In short, it seems to be a textbook example of what MANN regulars have been discussing now for years: men are guilty of whatever, no matter what, when accused of whatever by a woman.

Justice for all, indeed!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/11/1815237.shtml

DEMONSTRATION FOR CONGRESS TO HOLD HEARINGS ON JUDICIAL REFORM

Matt · 11 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "LAW VICTIMS ORGANIZE

By Barry Weinstein

In a sprawling yellow two story house in the seaside Boston suburb of Hull a 50ish, balding and chunky lawyer is working over time to bring radical change to his profession.

David Grossack has been though a lot of battles, having won some and lost some, but in every move using his wars to organize what he immodesty calls a Second American Revolution."

Click "Read more..." for more.
On April 17 Grossack is scheduled to lead a rally of what he calls:
'victims of legal abuse', it is a constellation of victims of judicial bias, vicious lawyers, corruption, official misconduct, bad decisions and similar outrages to demand that the House Judiciary begging investigations as to why Americans are losing confidence in their courts.

Grossack, the author of a self-published book entitled How to Win A Lawsuit Without Hiring A Lawyer (see http://www.citizensjustice.com/) is a lawyer, who in addition to having regular law practice, has made a sideline of holding seminars for pro se, or self represented litigants. He believes the system is broken beyond repair and his Citizens Justice Institute has built a alliances with other legal reformers to bring folks to the steps of the Rayburn Office Building at 1 pm on the 17th to issue demands that, if enacted, would greatly reduce the role of lawyers in society.

Grossack believes the country is over 'lawyered'. He believes the courts and the laws should be user friendly so his profession would be less needed.

A self described libertarian, Grossack believes lawyers have used their power in the legislature to help government cross the boundaries between the rights of individuals and government to the detriment of individual rights over and over again and he isn't going to quit until the process is reversed.

Is he a dreamer, a utopian or a revolutionary?

His colleagues chose him as a Lawyer of the Year in 1999 reported in the Mass. Lawyers Weekly. That same year the Boston herald listed him as one of the state's ten best lawyers, a claim he self effacingly would not make for himself.

In any event, his April 17th demonstration is on at the Rayburn offices, and is not an event that should be ignored."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/11/1822224.shtml

Police Hunt for Women In Beating Death Of Bingo Winner

Matt · 11 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Police claim they are searching for four women who beat a man to death over his bingo winnings. According to witnesses the man refused to hand over his $1,000 bingo jackpot and so they beat him to death over it. Question: If there were witnesses why did no one come this man's aid when he was under attack by this female gang? Answer: Well, he's a man! He's expected to be able to protect himself and everyone else for that matter. After all his attackers were only female. It's not like they were capable of injuring anyone, especially a man. Sadly, if this man had managed to fight back an win, this news story would have been framed as, "Yet another terrible act of violence against women." The fact this story was reported at all amazed me. Excerpt:

'When Youkhana refused to hand over the jackpot, the women kicked and punched him, the report said.

Witnesses said the man stumbled back into the bingo hall after the attack and later died from his injuries.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/11/1824252.shtml

Pink Visits High school and Speaks on Body Image Issues and Girl Power-- while Boys Attend Classes

Matt · 12 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

cmft_jihad writes "It seems as though body image and self-esteem issues only affect women, at least according to to Pink. She recently visited a Toronto area shcool to talk about these issues with the female students while the male students attended their regular classes. And I can't be the only one who sees the ominous similarity between the terms "Girl Power" and "White Power". Both seem pretty oppressive to those who don't belong."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/11/2238251.shtml

Men twice as likely as women to get fired in Australia

Matt · 12 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Tirryb writes "According to News.com.au in a story here, men are twice as likely as women to get the sack in the workplace. They are also less likely than women to 'see the end of their marriage coming'.

Of course the excuses are instantly made. Quote: "It is possible that, at any given job level, women are somewhat more competent, or perhaps less likely to cause trouble at work than men," the Household, Income and Labour Dynamics in Australia report says.

No consideration for the fact that most employers are terrified of sacking women because they get dragged into unfair dismissal claims based on gender almost immediately. Or that women call it quits in marriage far more often than men, which is why men 'don't see it coming'. Nope, it's all the fault of us dumb, useless, incompetent males...."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/11/2240244.shtml

"The Myth of The Boy Crisis"

Matt · 12 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

jim4146 writes "Fellow Activists... here is another two feminists refusing to acknowledge the current crisis young men face today in education. As usual the spin is wielded, "The boy crisis we're hearing about is largely a manufactured one, the product of both a backlash against the women's movement and the media's penchant for continuously churning out news about the latest dire threat to the nation." Please check it out and respond to the authors or the Washington Post accordingly."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/11/2245238.shtml

NOW Launches Counterattack Against FaFNY, Sackson Horde

Matt · 12 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Following is part of Glenn Sacks' April 12, 2006 newsletter. It calls for action on the NYS Shared Parenting Bill, so I though it was too important not to post, even though many MANN regulars get his newsletter.

In response to over 7,000 calls and letters to the New York Assembly Committee on Children & Families in support of A330, the

New York Shared Parenting Bill, the New York State Chapter of the National Organization for Women and

Stop Family Violence
have launched a counterattack.
To see NOW's Call to Action, click here. To read the

Stop Family Violence

Call to Action, click

here.

Click "Read more..." for the rest.

In both cases, it's the usual feminist hysterics about savage males and innocent, saintly, victimized females.

As during our

Campaign Against PBS's Father-Bashing Breaking the Silence, NOW is not able to match our numbers. However, their counterattack is still problematic. This is because the Assembly committee members began blocking emails from our supporters after last week's wave, and we stopped faxing the committee members two weeks ago at their request. I don't blame them--staffers told our activists that the deluge prevented them from being able to get any work done.

However, the result is that at this point the committee members are pretty much just hearing from feminist opponents of A330, even though we have far more supporters. As a remedy, I suggest you call the committee members yourselves and send them faxes and emails independently. These aren't blocked and will get through. To call, fax, and email the committee members, click here.

A330,
the New York Shared Parenting Bill, is sponsored by the Coalition of Fathers and Families New York, the New York affiliate of the American Coalition for Fathers & Children. To learn more about the bill, see my co-authored column

Shared Parenting Bill Would Help New York's Children of Divorce (Albany Times Union, 3/28/06) and NOW president Marcia Pappas' Joint custody bill not in child's interest.
Again, to contact the committee members, click

here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/12/1829238.shtml

Prostate cancer cholesterol link

Matt · 12 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "Scientists have produced evidence linking high cholesterol levels to a raised risk of prostate cancer. Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/12/187246.shtml

Catherine MacKinnon: "Are Women Human?"

Matt · 13 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "A UK Guardian journalist interviews Catherine MacKinnon about her new book Are Women Human?.

MacKinnon thinks that a woman's act of giving consent to sex is not relevant, because sexual inequality os so all-pervasive that she does not have the power to give consent in a meaningful way. Therefore, all heterosexual sex is rape "in a certain structural sense". In other words, women, like children, are not capable of making their own decisions."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/13/1655214.shtml

The Media and the Boys' Education Crisis

Matt · 14 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "The boy crisis in poor school performance is fast becoming a hot button issue in the mass media. It's creating much "buzz." And it promises to illuminate the sexist, hateful, misandrist true nature of feminism. Already feminist journalists are mobilizing to define the boy crisis as non-existent or trivial. The reason this issue has massive potential for the men's and father's movement is because mothers love their sons. Moms will mobilize if they are convinced that harm is being done to their boys in feminized classrooms. See an excellent article – Survey Finds Young Boys Failing in Schools Across the US. Quote from an all-boys school Headmaster: '...you can't ask a boy to fake it. You have to redirect his passion, and they are going to be passionate and they should be passionate.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/13/2236233.shtml

Ellen G at it again!

Matt · 14 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Ahh, Ellen, what would we do without you? In her latest column, our Ellen makes criticizing our current president a full-scale assault on manliness in nearly any of its potent forms. Does she really think the world's problems would go away if every position of any authority were filled exclusively by women? You know, I really think she does.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/14/1810218.shtml

Coffeeville Teacher accused of student 'sex' and murder plot

Matt · 14 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "There appears to be no end to the recent parade of female teachers having sex with male students. This one is especially disturbing. Coffeeville High School teacher Sharon Linton Rutherford is awaiting trial on charges of: Solicitation of murder, first-degree rape, 2 counts of enticing a child to enter a vehicle or room, sexual abuse second degree. That's right folks she not only had sex with TWO underage boys but she tried to get one of them TO MURDER HER HUSBAND.

This is just sick. We need to start keeping records of all these female freaks and shove them in the face of naysayers all the time or we run the risk of having only men being branded as sexual predators. And we all know what that feels like..."

Ed. note: I placed the word "sex" in single-quotes in the title line because once again, statutory rape when done to boys by a woman is referred to as "sex" in the press.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/14/1813237.shtml

Sexist Celebration in British Medical Journal re Life Expectancies

Matt · 14 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Check out this editorial in the British Medical Journal Life expectancy: women now on top everywhere and how the authors gloat over women now living longer all over the world. Also see the rebuttals people wrote in in the Rapid Responses."

Ed. note: Since the BMJ is a subscription service, I have copied the entire article (for educational purposes only, mind you) in the extended section, so click "Read More..." to see the entire thing.BMJ 2006;332:808 (8 April), doi:10.1136/bmj.332.7545.808

Editorial

Life expectancy: women now on top everywhere

During 2006, even in the poorest countries, women can expectto outlive men "Women who seek to be equal with men lack ambition."

TimothyLeary (1920-1996)

The year 2006 should not be allowed to pass without at leasta quiet celebration that this is the first year in human historywhen—across almost all the world—women can expectto enjoy a longer life expectancy than men. That the trend ismoving in this direction will probably be confirmed this weekin the 2006 world health report.

In its world health report of 2002, the World Health Organization,using data for 2001, reported that male life expectancy exceededfemale life expectancy in only six countries: Nepal, Botswana,Zimbabwe, Lesotho, Bangladesh, and Swaziland.[1] A year later,the situation seemed to have reversed in all six countries,with two other countries (Qatar and the Maldives) reportingthat men were living slightly longer than women.[2] In its 2004report the WHO continued to report the same 2002 data and inonly those two tiny territories (the Maldives and Qatar) didwomen die younger than men.[3] In the 2005 report, life expectancydata for 2003 were reported, but only to the nearest year ofage, making comparison difficult.[4]

In January this year the US Central Intelligence Agency (CIA)updated its World Factbook and reported its estimates for lifeexpectancy in 2005.[5] According to the CIA, in Qatar and theMaldives women now lived longer than men. Elsewhere, however,women's fate had slipped back, by the CIA estimates which donot tally with the WHO data for earlier years. According tothe CIA, in Niger women could expect to live a dozen days lessthan men and in Botswana three dozen days less by 2005, butnearer to two years less in Zimbabwe and Kenya by 2005. Theunderlying source of the CIA data is vague, as befits a somewhatsecretive organisation. We will never know with certainty theexact year in which women everywhere can expect to live on averagelonger than men, but this year—2006—is as likelyas any.

Almost 30 years ago, amid much fanfare, the eradication of smallpoxwas announced.[6] But when it becomes certain that women everywherecan expect to live longer than men, also a remarkable achievement,a similar announcement is unlikely. We tend to forget that inmany countries of the world women could expect, until recently,to live fewer years than men and that maternal mortality inparticular remains a big killer.

The most reliable historical mortality records are in Europe,where states were sufficiently affluent and interested to keepaccurate records. In Europe men last outlived women in the Netherlandsin 1860 and in Italy in 1889. Elsewhere females' life expectancyhas long exceeded males': in Sweden since 1751, Denmark since1835, England and Wales since 1841.[7]

But in all western European countries the life expectancy gapbetween women and men is now narrowing. Except in one aberrantyear, 1789, the gap reached its maximum in Sweden in 1978 (6.2years); in Denmark in 1979 (6.2 years); and in England and Walesin 1969 (6.3 years).

Greater emancipation has freed women to demand better healthcare and to behave more like men, and most importantly to smoke.A century ago it would have been hard to imagine such changes,or the fact that women now expect to live longer than men almosteverywhere. As this transition is so recent, the processes drivingit cannot be purely biological: they relate primarily to socialchange. In a way, women's life expectancy is an indicator ofhow well everyone can do, akin to the healthy districts identifiedin the 1850s by William Farr, the British epidemiologist whofirst reported on health inequalities.[8] In 1990 Amartya Sen,Indian economist and Nobel laureate, concluded from an analysisof unequal rights between men and women and mortality in thedeveloping world that, worldwide, more than 100 million womenwere missing.[9] The women who were born when Sen wrote this arecoming of age in a very different world. We must remember, though,that life expectancy data apply from birth onwards. The picturewould be different in some countries if life expectancy fromconception was considered: the first doctor to be imprisonedfor carrying out sex selective abortion in India was sentencedon 28 March 2006, which may be another landmark.[10] Even thelife expectancy from birth may not be a permanent achievement,given that the largest remaining untapped market for cigarettesin the world is made up of women living in poorer countries.

Anna Barford, research fellow

Department of Geography, University of Sheffield, Sheffield S10 2TN

Danny Dorling, professor of human geography

Department of Geography, University of Sheffield, Sheffield S10 2TN
(Daniel.Dorling@sheffield.ac.uk

)

George Davey Smith, professor of clinical epidemiology,
Mary Shaw, reader in medical sociology

Department of Social Medicine, University of Bristol, Bristol BS8 2PR

Competing interests: None declared.

References

1. World Health Organization. World health report 2002: reducing risks, promoting healthy life. Geneva: WHO, 2002. www.who.int/whr/2002/en/index.html (accessed 31 Mar 2006).

2. World Health Organization. World health report 2003: shaping the future. Geneva: WHO, 2003. www.who.int/whr/2003/en/index.html (accessed 31 Mar 2006).

3. World Health Organization. World health report 2004: changing history, Geneva: WHO, 2004. www.who.int/whr/2004/en/index.html (accessed 31 Mar 2006).

4. World Health Organization. World health report 2005: make every mother and child count. Geneva: WHO, 2005.

www.who.int/whr/2005/en/index.html (accessed 31 Mar 2006).

5. Central Intelligence Agency. The world factbook, 2005. www.cia.gov/cia/publications/factbook/ (accessed 31 Mar 2006).

6. Fenner F. Smallpox and its eradication. Geneva: World Health Organization, 1988.

7. Human mortality database. University of California, Berkeley (www.mortality.org); Max Planck Institute for Demographic Research (www.humanmortality.de); (data downloaded 9 Dec 2005).

8. Lewis-Faning E. A survey of the mortality in Dr Farr's 63 healthy districts of England and Wales during the period 1851-1925. J Hygiene 1930; 30: 121-53.

9. Sen A. More than 100 million women are missing. N York Rev Books 1990 Dec 20: 61-6.

10. Srinivasan S. Challenges in implementing the ban on sex selection. Info Change Analysis. March 2006. www.infochangeindia.org/analysis121.jsp (accessed 3 Apr 2006).

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/14/1821212.shtml

Quarter of Men in US with Vasectomies not following up with Effectiveness Test

Matt · 15 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Read about it here. Short version: If you get a vasectomy, make sure you check to see it worked!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/15/0121219.shtml

Real Fathers for Justice scale Westminster Abbey

Matt · 15 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Craig writes "Unfortunately the protest has happened without me even hearing about it on the radio as it took place. I'd be willing to bet it wasn't mentioned on TV either. Protesters have scaled Westminster Abbey claiming fathers are being "crucified" by the courts over access to their children.

First part:
http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/england/london/4905836. stm

Second part:
http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/england/london/4909934. stm"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/15/1834231.shtml

Women's Studies Professor and Students Vandalize Campus

Matt · 16 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Little Lion writes "Interim Director of Women Studies and English Professor Dr. Sally Jacobsen of Northern Kentucky University is alleged this April 12th to have invited her students to join her in the destruction of an anti-abortion display of nearly 400 crosses on the NKU campus. Professor Jacobsen was quoted as justifying her civil disobedience, which she characterized to the NKU administration as an exercise of free speech, on the grounds that "any violence perpetrated against that silly display was minor compared to how I felt when I saw it." A report on the incident in The Northerner Online is available here."

Ed. note: Would like a link for the quote attributed to Prof. Jacobsen; seems to me to be the most telling summary of the "modern" principle: "Your rights end where her feelings begin".

Ed. note II: Thanks to the original poster for providing the link requested in my note above. It is here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/16/1553235.shtml

RADAR Alert: This Week, We FLOOD Capitol Hill with Calls and Faxes

Matt · 17 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The past four weeks RADAR has released a series of Special Reports that document how the Violence Against Women Act violates persons' civil rights on a massive scale:

Restraining orders: According to the FBI, over one million restraining orders are issued each year. Half of these restraining orders do not include even an allegation of violence. These orders are widely used as a legal ploy during a divorce proceeding.

Click "Read more..." for more.

This Week, We FLOOD Capitol Hill with Calls and Faxes

Must- and pro-arrest policies: Twenty-two jurisdictions have mandatory arrest laws for DV cases, and 8 others strongly encourage arrest. And 33 states mandate arrest if a restraining order has been violated, even for the smallest technicality.

Primary aggressor laws: Worse, 24 states have laws on the books that discourage dual arrests, and instead rely on a "primary aggressor" assessment which amounts to blatant gender profiling and the inevitable arrest of the man.

No-drop prosecution: any jurisdictions require prosecution of the case, even if the woman withdraws her complaint. In some cases, prosecutors have coerced a woman into testifying against her will by threatening to have the state take custody of her children if she refuses to testify.

Discrimination against male victims: It is estimated that only 1-5% of victims served by VAWA programs are males. Worse, in many cases when a man does reach out for help, he finds himself accused of the very crime to which he has become the unwitting victim.

This week, RADAR releases its fifth Special Report, "Bias in the Judiciary: The Case of Domestic Violence." The report reveals how judicial education programs openly tell judges to disregard men's civil rights, and shows how fast-track prosecution programs operate on the principle, "guilty with no opportunity to prove otherwise."

The report can be viewed at:
http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/Bias-In-The-Judiciary.pdf

VAWA, and the 600-odd state laws it has engendered, is the product of a poisonous gender ideology that claims domestic violence is a tool of patriarchal dominance. But its real target is not just men, because many women also have become caught up in VAWA's law enforcement abuses.

The real target of VAWA is the family. Why? Because every instance of marital discord – a shove, a thrown object, even a sharp word – is now subject to state intervention and criminalization of the alleged perpetrator. The family unit cannot withstand this assault for much longer.

It is time to cast political correctness and complacency aside.

WE WANT CONGRESS TO CONDUCT HEARINGS ON THE MASSIVE CIVIL RIGHTS ABUSES OF VAWA. AND WE WANT THE HEARINGS NOW.

Telephone or fax these Chairmen:

	Voice phone:	Fax:
Congressman Steve Chabot, Chairman House Constitutional Subcommittee	202-225-2216	202-225-3012
Sen Sam Brownback, Kansas, Chairman Senate Constitutional Subcommittee	202-224-6521	202-228-1265

Be polite, yet firm in your request.

Your telephone call or fax will help stop the VAWA assault on families.

Date of RADAR Release: April 16, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/17/1811231.shtml

Ex-manager acquitted in sexual assault on busboy

Matt · 17 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "This article has less to do with women then it does with the biased nature of our justice system against men. All signs pointed to a brutal rape of one man by another, and yet the alleged attacker was aquitted. Simply put a female in the victim's place and tell me if this guy would have been aquitted..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/17/1816252.shtml

Feminist Falsehoods about Boys' Education Crisis

Matt · 18 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

QuickNick writes "The recent racist, misandristic op-ed in the Washington Post, "The Myth of the Boy Crisis," deserved to be condemned as the usual moral and intellectual rot on display in the mainstream media today. But just in case you have any doubt, the main point of the article is false. White women in 2001 received 31% more bachelor degrees than men (56% of all degrees). Including bachelor and associate degrees, white women received 35% more degrees than men. These statistics are from p. 9, Tables 1-A and 1-B of this report (.pdf file). Did you really expect the truth from a feminist journalism professor and a senior scientist at the Women's Studies Research Center at Brandeis University? The important point is that men's social justice activists should stand up for ALL MEN. Women receive 39% more college degrees than do ALL MEN. Don't let feminists pretend that black men aren't men."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/18/048204.shtml

Take Action: CA Bill Threatens NCPs, Children

Matt · 19 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

From a Glenn Sacks action alert... passing it along, of particular interest to CA residents:

A new bill has been introduced into the California Senate which will make it more difficult for children of divorce to retain the loving bonds they share with both parents. The bill's backers made a sweeping, last minute amendment to the bill in order to slip it through before opponents had a chance to organize.

I want all of you to write the Judiciary Committee members in opposition to SB 1482 by clicking

here.

Click "Read more..." for more.

Under

SB 1482, which will be voted on by the California Senate Judiciary Committee next Tuesday (April 25), a parent seeking to block a move is specifically prohibited from citing most of the evidence that could provide a basis for restraining the move. Nonmoving parents are prevented from citing the move's impact on their children's relationships with them or the effects of the children losing their schools and friends. This directly abrogates current California case law which says that the children's relationship with their nonmoving parent must be considered when deciding a relocation case.

SB 1482 is an attempt by the extremist Coalition for Family Equity and misguided feminists to reverse the progress made on behalf of California's children of divorce over the past two years. From 1996 to 2004 move-away determinations were based on the Burgess decision, which was interpreted by California courts as conferring unlimited move-away privileges. Under Burgess the bonds between tens of thousands of children and their noncustodial parents were needlessly ruptured.

The California Supreme Court addressed the problem in the LaMusga decision in April, 2004 by making it clear that courts can prevent children from being moved when it is detrimental to their interests. Among the factors deemed important were the relationship between the child and the nonmoving parent.

In the summer of 2004 then Senate President John Burton, one of the most powerful people in California, introduced SB 730, a bill which would have granted custodial parents an almost unlimited right to move children far way from their noncustodial parents.

We organized opposition to SB 730, and thousands of you wrote and called Sacramento to oppose the bill. Our campaign gained widespread media attention and was endorsed by numerous mental health and family law professionals. Burton surprised Sacramento insiders by withdrawing the bill a few weeks later.

Today we must again fight to preserve the relationships children of divorce share with their mothers and fathers. To voice your opposition to SB 1482, click here. By filling in the form, you will be both faxing and emailing Sacramento. Also, we suggest you call the members of the committee--the phone numbers are here.

California family law has a huge influence on other states, and parents all over the United States have a large stake in what happens here. I hear every day from devastated parents who lost their children in the aftermath of the misguided Burgess decision. I often hear from parents whose relationships with their children were saved by the LaMusga decision.

The Alliance for Children Concerned About Move-Aways, which we originally formed to defeat SB 730, is working with the California Alliance for Families and Children to defeat SB 1482. Again, to take action, click here.

Best Wishes,

Glenn Sacks

Alliance for Children
Concerned About Move-Aways

GlennSacks.com

Subscribe to this E-Newsletter

Email this E-Newsletter to a Friend

Missed an E-Newsletter? Find all of Glenn's E-Newsletters here

GlennSacks.com

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/19/162204.shtml

Responses to Feminist Dismissal of Boy Crisis Printed in Wash Post

Matt · 19 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes "Last week, feminists Caryl Rivers and Rosalind Chait Barnett had printed an op ed in the Washington Post dismissing the boy crisis in education because it only affects minority and low income boys.

Click "Read more..." for more.
A number of responses were sent in pointing out how racist and classist these feminists were, and also that they are wrong, because even white boys drop out more than girls within their own race (http://nces.ed.gov/programs/digest/d04/tables/dt0 4_107.asp), and white women in 2001 received 31% more bachelor degrees than men (p. 9, tables 1-A and 1-B at http://nces.ed.gov/pubs2005/2005169.pdf).

The Washington Post printed the following two letters responding to Rivers and Barnett.

http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2006/04/14/AR2006041400912.html

Saturday, April 15, 2006; Page A13

As a professional high school counselor in an urban school, I found the April 9 Outlook piece "The Myth of 'The Boy Crisis' " contrary to the reality that I see every day.
To say that it's only inner-city and rural boys who are not doing as well as girls is like saying that besides women, breast cancer is not a big problem (men can acquire the disease as well).

That may be a suitable perspective from the ivory tower of the article's authors. But for those of us who work in the trenches every day, all populations matter. We are not willing to discount any to serve our own agenda, which the authors clearly have.

-- Gus Griffin

Suitland

==========

Caryl Rivers and Rosalind Chait Barnett cite my New Republic article as an example of poor reporting on the boy troubles, which they see primarily as an issue concerning African American boys.

They may not be aware that the alarms about boys' academic problems are heard loudest in states such as Vermont and Maine, which lack high minority populations. The state that appears to have the largest gender gap at the university level? Minnesota. Scores of private colleges that rely mostly on white, middle class students grant admission preferences to boys as a way to keep the female-male balance on campus under 60-40.

The authors' contention that literacy gaps are not driving the gender imbalances is undermined by the reality that the schools that produce equal outcomes among girls and boys do so by doubling or tripling the amount of time and effort spent on literacy instruction. One such school is Washington's Kipp DC: Key Academy.

-- Richard Whitmire

McLean"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/19/189229.shtml

Acquitted Teacher Still Not Rehired

Matt · 20 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Acquitted teacher may lose job
Excerpt:

'Fronczak was charged with one count of capital sex battery and one count of lewd and lascivious molestation. It took the jury less than an hour to acquit him, but more than nine months later he still doesn't have his job back.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/20/1634230.shtml

Scotland Creates Special DV Courts

Matt · 21 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "Apparently the nation where men proudly wear kilts is fast becoming the most feminazi-fied place on earth. In this article linked from AngryHarry's site, the Scots have decided it's better to coerce a man accused of domestic violence into a confession of guilt as quickly as possible. Excerpts:

'As a result, many vulnerable women are spared the trauma of giving evidence against their husbands or boyfriends.'

'Domestic abuse is unlike any other crime, it's not like house-breaking or robbery or drug dealing,'... 'You are dealing with a specific complex set of circumstances in which the offender and victim are intimately connected. It is appropriate that the court system recognises that difference with specialist courts... a specialist court on domestic violence allows for the creation of a constructive atmosphere.'

In the U.S. thousands of counties are using VAWA money to establish similar "DV fast-track" gulags."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/21/0035229.shtml

Duke Case Update

Matt · 21 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

At this stage of it, it reminds me of The Bonfire of the Vanities. Latest is here. My prediction is that after thousands, perhaps millions, in legal fees are spent, there will be no trial, or if there is one, the case will be dismissed or the jury will acquit or return no verdict.

The lawyers will of course get rich off this case. Some will manage to capitalize off the whole thing while others will be effectively ruined. Now just guess which'll be which!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/21/1825211.shtml

The Philosophical Void of Modern Feminism

Matt · 22 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Submitted by Patrick Bryant:

The feminist movement, which initially was based on the desire to achieve equality and dignity for women, has been hijacked by a core of mostly-lesbian misandrists who have turned it into a doctrine of hate, blame, and imagined superiority. Those three elements make it remarkably similar to Nazi doctrine.

This would all be of little consequence, and the movement would have been disregarded long ago along with the mindless blame and hateful mutterings of other extremist groups like the KKK and the Neo-Nazis, were it not for the fact that feminism has become an institution in American politics.

Click "Read more..." for the rest.As someone who has traveled the world, I've found that activist feminism is an almost exclusively American phenomenon, and it can be further defined as being comprised almost exclusively of the white middle-class to upper class bourgeoisie women. It is rare, for example, to find a black woman who claims to be a "feminist". It should come as no surprise that this division among women also defines the social group most affected by the narcissistic consumer economy. The real root cause for allegiance to feminism is probably best defined by Carl Jung's definition of the Electra Complex: if there is a perversion in the development of females or if their aggression is somehow stifled, resentment can be displaced towards the dominant male (the father) or patriarchal cultures in general. This explains both lesbianism and its closely related manifestation: feminism.

Rather than seeking equality and parity with men, the popular feminist seeks superiority. Consequently, the popular feminist movement can be viewed as a sexist partisan force; and yet this partisan force has been treated as though it were a gender-neutral humanist movement that has been afforded an invalid yet powerful position in modern American society.

Of its core values, the most prominent is the overthrow of the "white male 'good-old-boy'" network (known in the 60s and 70 by the more gender-neutral term: "The Establishment"). What the movement tends to neglect is that this 'good-old-boy network' is based on class, not on gender, and that the average working class white male is no more welcomed into that network than are working class females. The methods used to overthrow this network come straight from classical Marxism: wherein Marx stated that it is appropriate for the "under class" to use any means necessary, however brutal, to wrest power away from the "upper class." The history and eventual collapse of the USSR is a classic example of the failure of this doctrine: eventually, EVERYONE comes to see themselves as being in the "underclass," and what results is a kleptocracy where everyone feels justified in stealing from everyone else. However, Marx suggested that the primary social division was between a "ruling class (the class of people exerting power or authority) and a laboring class. Since most white men fall into Marx's definition of the laboring class, I am sure even Marx would be appalled at the rationally vacant concept of women in the "proletariat" attacking their own men!

Unfortunately, since the popular feminist movement has defined the "enemy" as being males, rather than the upper ruling class, they have irrationally converted the issue from a class struggle into a gender struggle. By drawing the battle lines between genders instead of between classes, the movement does real and significant harm to its own sons, brothers, husbands and fathers, who invariably get caught in the "friendly fire". The net effect over time is to corrode and undermine the feminist movement's own interests by:

1) marginalizing struggling working class males by erecting hurdles to effectively supporting their families

2) increasing the number of single parent families supported by the mother alone, and

3) deactivating what is historically the most powerful weapon in any class struggle: the family

The hurdles to working class men come in the forms of special entitlements reserved exclusively for female students. If the current trend continues there will be no more males graduating from college by the middle of this century. This vicious cycle threatens to marginalize men to such an extent that women will be hard pressed to find a man who is capable of supporting a family. And in the future, fewer men will be able to afford to attend college without the tuition subsidies and entitlements reserved exclusively for women. Due to this redistribution of education that progressively excludes men, an oppressive and evil class system built along gender lines - as currently imagined by the feminists - will eventually become a reality, with the women in the upper ruling classes and the men in the lower labor class! This, whether consciously or unconsciously, appears to be the final end goal of the American Feminist movement. Such a matriarchal society is not without historical precedent. And when such societies existed in the past, they were among the most oppressive, unjust, warlike and bloodthirsty in human history.

An example of the blamefulness practiced by popular feminism is their common reaction to economic compromise. The desire to seek a career, for example, instead of nurturing a family involves a significant compromise. All compromises involve giving something up. However, true to form, the feminist movement even goes so far as to blame men for what is surrendered by choice when making this compromise. Here is an example of that type of blame: "Our oppressive male-dominated American society has forced women into a 'cruel trade-off': if they focus on their careers in their youth, it's extremely difficult to get pregnant after age 40." (The Phyllis Schlafly Report, VOL. 35, NO. 12, JULY 2002). No one is FORCED to follow a career rather than have children. Having children is a personal choice. The basic premise of the argument expressed by Ms. Schafly is transparently bogus.

When confronted by the injustices of American feminism, a common argument heard from feminists is that the injustices produced by their movement, the repression of working class males, and their selection of men as victims regardless of their social class, is a case of the "pendulum swinging too far the other way," and that in any social revolution there are bound to be innocent victims. I am sure those were the rationalizations on the lips of many Germans while their Jewish neighbors were being carted away to Auschwitz. The rationalization is clearly specious for anyone who claims their goal is social justice. "An Eye for an Eye" leaves everyone blind, and two wrongs never make a right.

The most alarming rhetoric of the movement is more than vaguely reminiscent of Nazi propaganda. This comes in the form of statements like: "the Y Chromosome is defective" (Valerie Solanas, considered by many to be the first modern radical feminist). The feminist rhetoric that ascribes destructive attributes to all who have the genetic code that defines the male gender could have come straight out of Hitler's Mein Kampf! Then there is the rhetoric that men are exclusively responsible for destructive acts such as war. In fact, some of the most warlike leaders have been women. From Cleopatra in ancient history, to Indra Ghandi, Margaret Thatcher, and Golda Mier in modern times, women have lead societies into battle at least as often as have men. War isn't caused by "testosterone poisoning," and depriving men of their testosterone making parts won't cure it - as the feminists would have you believe - but rather war is caused by greed and the desire to increase one's prestige - both characteristics that are evenly distributed between the sexes. If an enemy of peace were to be defined - a mindset likely to produce widespread death, atrocities and genocide - it is the very mindset of the American Feminist: blame, hate, and imagined superiority. This is the core lesson learned from the Holocaust: that blaming another group for your economic woes, hating another group because they are different and are imagined to be engaged in a secret conspiracy to keep you down, and thinking yourself superior and possessed of the manifest destiny to improve the world - are all of the essential ingredients for genocide. Or perhaps, in this instance, I could coin the term "gendercide." Be it the purges of Stalin or the Holocaust imposed on the Jews, all of these atrocities were justified by the belief that they were necessary for "the greater good" and that the victims were somehow inferior to the perpetrators. Tthe main impetrative that comes down to us from the Holocaust is that this type of destructive behavior MUST be called out and exposed to the light of day at its earliest inception. This must be done early, vigorously, and fearlessly because the particular form of psychosis that this type of thinking represents soon takes on a mob mentality of its own. I'm afraid that we are now several decades into this feminist psychosis, and in all likelihood, only a generational change will now reverse its impact. Fortunately, that seems to be coming to pass, as younger women are beginning to complain about the passive-aggressive character of the men that the "feminist age" has produced - men who were pummeled into feeling guilt over their own masculinity.

Since the popular feminist movement has no philosophical defense, since its underpinnings are based on a set of false premises, and since it is eventually bound to bring about harm to women as well as men, the two antidotes to its fallacies are time, and men and women of courage who are not afraid to call its lies out into the light of day. Time is on our side, and as anyone who has ever debated a feminist will attest, their fragile doctrine cannot tolerate the light of logic any more than Count Dracula could stand the light of day. Popular feminism is based on frail and broken precepts that cannot withstand even a trivial assault by logic and rationality. But a word of caution: don't expect to change the feminist. Psychologically, the outlook of a feminist can best be viewed as a psychotic delusion, classically described as: "false, inaccurate beliefs the person holds onto even when he/she is presented with accurate information." Anyone who has argued with a feminist will find that definition fits well with their circular logic and their bending of reality to fit their distorted world view founded mostly on half-truths, myths and urban legends. They won't change their opinion because if they did, they would be forced to confront the atrocious injustices that they have supported. Just like the Nazi Julius Streicher who incited hatred and murder against the Jews, and whose last words shouted at the gallows of the Nuremberg Trials were: "Heil Hitler!" they refuse to see the blatant failure of their own doctrine. In a free society we all have a duty to confront dangerous lies that affect public policy, and you may help dissuade those around them from the corrosive effects of their falsely-held beliefs while helping to roll back some of the injustices already perpetrated on others.

The best course for men is to not be afraid to act like men, to not give up their principles and sense of honor that make them men and reject the angst and self-loathing about your masculinity that you have been force-fed since birth. Unfortunately, since manhood is a learned set of traits, it takes only one break in generations to have its teachings lost to history, and in far too many cases, boys are raised by only mothers who are naturally unequipped to teach them manhood. In cases such as these, it behooves a man to either find a suitable mentor, or to live for some time outside the confines of the effects of the feminist psychosis that is generally defined by the borders of the United States. After living in Europe for several years, I can personally attest to the fact that women there will reward and nurture whatever remnants of masculinity an American male has managed to retain.

Each generation has its challenges, and among those for this generation is rolling back the distorted realities of feminism. Were I to call myself a masculinist, you would have every right to call me a sexist. I am instead a humanist, who believes that everyone - regardless of factors like race and gender - should have the right to choose their own path in life. I am a man, and I object to the accusations assailed upon me by feminist rhetoric that - owning only to my gender - that I am an oppressor and a destroyer. As a father of two sons, I hope that this yoke of blame will someday be lifted from their shoulders, and that the feminists will learn to put down their arms and embrace what is good in men, rather than focusing on or imagining their flaws. Until then, I'll settle for people just seeing the truth.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/22/1556240.shtml

Teacher Cleared of Rape - Too Late

Matt · 22 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "UK: A male teacher falsely accused of rape by a female student dies of cancer in prison and then has his name cleared by the Appeal Court. His 88-year-old mother has collected compensation from the government. The accuser, who remains anonymous, also accused another man, who was cleared. Lock this psychopath up. She is obviously a danger to the public. Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/22/1558247.shtml

Is Ritalin creating 'Zombie kids'?

Matt · 23 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "Top British scientist Susan Greenfield has voiced public concern about the use of Ritalin in the classroom.

"The use of Ritalin is probably having the effect of making the classroom more manageable," said Susan Greenfield. "But we should be considering how to design the classroom to fit the child, rather than the other way around," she said."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/23/1552214.shtml

Charlie Sheen Issued Restraining Order

Matt · 23 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

apetr26542 writes "http://entertainment.msn.com/celebs/article.aspx?n ews=221654&GT1=7701

Excerpt:

'The court papers include a 17-page declaration by Richards alleging that Sheen pushed her, shoved her and made threats against her and her parents. They also include transcriptions of telephone messages Richards said were left by Sheen in April 2005.

Sheen denied the allegations and the judge granted his request that he and Richards be allowed to tape record telephone conversations with each other. In a declaration signed Thursday, he said he and Richards had agreed to undergo counseling to "address parenting issues and to establish a mutually acceptable custody schedule," but that Richards stopped participating after two sessions.

He also alleged that he had been seeking overnight visits with the children but that last week, Richards "abruptly refused" to allow him any contact with them.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/23/160222.shtml

Newsweek, Parker on the Duke Story

Matt · 24 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Just won't seem to go away, this story. It has some of everything people love to gawk at and get worked up about.

The behavior of pretty much everyone in this case is reprehensible, all for different and varying reasons. The only question though anyone should be asking is, "Did a rape take place and if so, who did it?" Instead, money, politics (race and otherwise), class struggle and simple rudeness vs. comity all come together to form a great big massive stew of gunk. And is the actual, germane question in the matter really being asked? Will that be what goes on trial?

Relatedly, look at this from Kathleen Parker. Ms. Parker is usually a voice of reason in a lot of instances but IMO in this case she succomed to the urge to think inside the box. Note that she seems to think the LAX players are guilty, presumes them to be guilty, and doesn't seem to even allow for the chance that while they are not the sort of fellows you want in polite company, they may, just may, be innocent of the crime for which they stand accused (contrast the tone she has now with the tone she had on this same topic just recently; I wonder what prompted the changed?). Alas, as men, they will continue to be presumed guilty even if they are proven innocent. She also seems to utterly ignore the fact that strippers come in both sexes and are watched by both sexes-- just Google "chippendales" or look under "adult entertainment" in the Yellow Pages for all the proof you need.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/24/1839250.shtml

Teen Launches Web Site for Children of Divorce

Matt · 24 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Big kudos to Bill for launching http://www.billsarena.com/. Let's hope it provides a place for children of divorce to find fellowship and resources.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/24/1841237.shtml

RADAR Alert: Protect Our Children, Tell Congress to Hold VAWA Hearings Now

Matt · 25 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Each year the parents of 1 million American children get a divorce.

In an estimated one-third of divorces, an allegation of domestic violence is made, often in the form of a restraining order. These restraining orders have become so widespread that they are referred to as “silver bullets,” “slam-dunks,” or simply, “divorce planning.”

In half of all restraining orders, there is not even an allegation of violence. (http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Restraining-Orders.pdf) Even in those orders that do allege violence, often the person who requested the order was mutually involved, the dispute was minor, or the allegation of violence was flat-out false. So it is estimated that 80% or more of DV allegations represent trumped-up and even malicious claims of domestic “violence.”

Click "Read more..." for more.

Protect Our Children, Tell Congress to Hold VAWA Hearings Now
In 85% of divorces, custody is awarded to the mother, thus depriving the children of contact from their father.

That means each year, false claims of domestic violence contribute to over 200,000 children losing daily contact with their father. That's about 550 children each and every day. And that's a huge tragedy for our children and for our nation.

This spring, 25 organizations from across the country banded together and signed on to a Resolution to counter the negative impact of VAWA. The Resolution is shown at the end of this Alert.

We are requesting that Congress hold hearings on the massive civil rights violations that are happening each and every day, as a direct result of VAWA-funded programs.

This Alert is the last call for our VAWA Spring Campaign.
This is it. Please contact your Representative and two Senators with this very simple message:

WE WANT CONGRESS TO CONDUCT HEARINGS ON THE MASSIVE CIVIL RIGHTS ABUSES OF VAWA. AND WE WANT THE HEARINGS NOW.

Please make a telephone call to the Legislative Aide who deals with judicial or family issues. Or better yet, fax a copy a copy of the Resolution to your elected official.

Please do it now, for a better future, for our children.

RESOLUTION

Regarding the Violence Against Women Act

1. Whereas, in 2000 Senator Orrin Hatch directed the executive branch to "ensure that men who have been victimized by domestic violence and sexual assault will receive benefits and services under the Act" [1]
2. Whereas, despite that statement of Congressional intent, male victims continue to be turned away from VAWA-funded shelters. [2]
3. Whereas, the language of the 2005 Violence Against Women Act now recognizes that male victims of domestic violence are in need of treatment and protection, and requires VAWA-funded programs to provide them with such services. [3]
4. Whereas, VAWA funds judicial education programs that instruct judges to disregard constitutionally-protected due process provisions, [4]
5. Whereas, judges often issue restraining orders without any direct threat of harm, [5], [6] and restraining orders are widely used as "part of the gamesmanship of divorce." [7], [8]
6. Whereas, the Massachusetts Trial Court found that less than half of all restraining orders issued in that state involved even an allegation of physical violence, [9]
7. Whereas, it has been estimated that each year one million protective orders are issued in the United States, and about 500,000 of such orders represent a direct violation of due process protections, [10], [11]
8. Whereas, 15% of such protective orders are issued against women and 85% against men. [12]
9. Whereas, research shows that most instances of partner aggression are minor in nature, [13] and such cases require counseling, not legal intervention,
10. Whereas, VAWA-funded programs and policies often discourage couple counseling and partner reconciliation, and
11. Whereas, various VAWA incentives serve to promote family break-up, [14] which results in children losing daily contact with one of their parents. [15]

Therefore, the undersigned organizations request that:

1. The VAWA appropriation bill for FY2007 include report language directing the DoJ Violence Against Women Office to provide Congress, no later than December 30, 2007, with client utilization statistics of VAWA-funded programs and services, in compliance with the male-inclusive requirements of Section 40002(b)(8) of the 2005 Violence Against Women Act.
2. The Senate and House Appropriations Committees support and approve President Bush's budget request to fund the Violence Against Women Act at the $347 million level in FY2007.
3. The United States Congress establish a panel to investigate the claims that the Violence Against Women Act promotes the excessive issuance of restraining orders, which often leads to family break-up and inappropriate loss of parent involvement.

Signed:

Michael J. Geanoulis RADAR: Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting	Mike East FATHERS: Fathers Asking to Have Equal Rights	Gary Gagnon National Congress of Fathers and Children – New Hampshire
David R. Usher ACFC – Missouri Coalition	Dan Hogan Fathers and Families	Pastor Kenneth Deemer Shattered Men
Alan Rusmisel Alabama Coalition of Fathers and Children	D'Arcy L. McGreer Fathers for Virginia	Lee Newman Stop Abuse for Everyone, NH Chapter
Michael McCormick American Coalition for Fathers and Children	Jamil Jabr Fathers-4-Justice	Philip Cook Stop Abuse for Everyone
Tom Smith American Union for Men	Richar' Farr Krights Radio	Lisa Scott TABS: Taking Action Against Bias in the System
James Hays Coalition of Fathers and Families NY, Inc.	Harry Crouch Men's Advocacy Network	Terri Lynn Tersak True-Equality.org
Paul Clements Dads Against Divorce Discrimination-NH	Jeffrey W. Dick MensCustodyShelterNetwork.com	Gregory Romeo Tulsa Area Fathers Rights Association
James Semerad Dads and Moms of Michigan	Marc Snider NHCustody.org
Michael Burns Dialogue on Sustainable Community	Marc Angelucci National Coalition of Free Men, Los Angeles Chapter

href="http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060421.php#sdendnote1anc" > 1
Congressional Record, October 11, 2000, pp. S10191-92.

href="http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060421.php#sdendnote2anc" > 2
RADAR. VAWA Programs discriminate against male victims. Rockville, MD:
Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting, 2006. target="_blank" href="http://www.mediaradar.org/" > www.mediaradar.org

href="http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060421.php#sdendnote3anc" > 3
Violence Against Women Act, Section 40002(b)(8).

href="http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060421.php#sdendnote4anc" > 4
Bleemer R: N.J. judges told to ignore rights in abuse TROs. New Jersey Law Journal April 24, 1995.

href="http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060421.php#sdendnote5anc" > 5
David Heleniak. The new Star Chamber: The New Jersey family court and the prevention of Domestic Violence Act. Rutgers Law Review , Spring 2005.

href="http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060421.php#sdendnote6anc" > 6
Wendy McElroy. Abuse of temporary restraining orders endangers real victims. FoxNews.com , December 27, 2005.

href="http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060421.php#sdendnote7anc" > 7
Thomas Kasper. Obtaining and defending against an order of protection. Illinois Bar Journal June 2005.

href="http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060421.php#sdendnote8anc" > 8
Thomas Kiernan. Re: False Claims. New Jersey Law Journal , April 21, 1988 Vol. 121 p. 6.

href="http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060421.php#sdendnote9anc" > 9
Office of the Commissioner of Probation, Massachusetts Trial Court: The tragedies of domestic violence: A qualitative analysis of civil restraining orders. October 12, 1995.

href="http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060421.php#sdendnote10anc" > 10
Dorothy Carl Quinn. Ex parte protection orders: Is due process locked out? Temple Law Quarterly Vol. 58, Winter 1985.

href="http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060421.php#sdendnote11anc" > 11
RADAR. VAWA: Threat to families, children, men, and women. Rockville, MD: Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting, 2006. www.mediaradar.org .

href="http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060421.php#sdendnote12anc" > 12
Cathy Young. Domestic violence: An in-depth analysis. Washington, DC: Independent Women's Forum, 2005.

href="http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060421.php#sdendnote13anc" > 13
Linda Kelly. Disabusing the definition of domestic abuse. Florida State University Law Review Vol. 30, 2003.

href="http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060421.php#sdendnote14anc" > 14
Phyllis Schlafly. Federal incentives make children fatherless, Human Events Online , May 11, 2005.

href="http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060421.php#sdendnote15anc" > 15
Stephen Baskerville. Violence against families: Fathers fall victim to domestic-abuse laws. American Conservative , August 29, 2005, pp. 23-25.

Date of RADAR Release: April 21, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/25/0045205.shtml

Document on Indian Dowry Law Misuse

Matt · 25 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Here's (.pdf file) a good report on the misuse of India's dowry law (Section 498A of the Indian Penal Code)."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/25/184219.shtml

NOW: April 25th is "Equal Pay Day"

Matt · 25 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous user writes: "The National Organisation of Women has deemed the 25th of April to be the date when women equalise wages with men, their news article directs readers to a census article which makes none of the equality claims that their main page does. Read for yourselves and try and work out how they arrive at their conclusions."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/25/187201.shtml

Maury Povich Sued for Sexual Harassment

Matt · 25 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Another high-profile case, this... we'll see where it goes. Excerpt:

Bianca Nardi, 28, of Fort Lee, N.J., says in court papers that the sexually charged atmosphere among the show's production staff was fostered by the "intimate and sexual relationship between defendants Maurice Richard Povich and Donna Benner Ingber."

...

Povich is married to the veteran television news anchor Connie Chung.

Gary Rosen, spokesman for the show, flatly denied the allegations, as did a spokeswoman for NBC Universal.

"We are aware of the allegations of harassment made by Ms. Nardi. We have done a complete and thorough investigation of her allegations of harassment and we are satisfied that there is no merit to them," Rosen said. "We stand behind our experienced and dedicated staff, fully."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/25/1816229.shtml

Monster.com "Gets It" on Wage Gap

Matt · 26 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Stan Gaver writes "I found a link on Monster.com entitled The Gender Wage Gap. I clicked it, expecting to find the same old lies and distortions about the so-called Wage Gap. As expected, the opening line included the typical BS, about how "...women in the US workforce still earn substantially less than their male colleagues."

I almost stopped reading right there, but decided to continue on, and was pleasantly surprised to find that most of the article, instead of simply repeating the same old feminist pay-gap mantra, actually rebutted the "discrimination" excuse. In fact, the article went on to include much of the information from Warren Farrell's new book "Why Men Earn More" and did a decent job of fairly presenting the "other" side of the issue.

A good sign that the truth is starting to come out."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/26/0241224.shtml

Largo, FL police department to start anti-DV campaign

Matt · 26 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

quetzal writes "..which of course is totally one-sided, i.e. anti-male. Excerpt from the article: "Most of the time when men are abusive it's because of insecurity."

You may phone the Largo Police Department Division of Media Relations at 727-582-6221, to let them know what you think!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/26/0243248.shtml

"Brothers of the unpopped question"

Matt · 26 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

quetzal writes "The St. Petersberg (FL) Times has printed its second front-page article in a series about single dating. Here is an excerpt from the Tuesday installment:

"Pepper Schwartz, a sociologist at the Univ. of Washington (and also a 'Relationship Expert' on PerfectMatch.com) says: 'One group[of middle-aged single men]...is the men nobody wants...They don't earn money or they are obese... They are losers in the truest sense of the word.'"

Ed. note: Check out the discussion on this article here. Also take a look at the first installment in the series. As you may have gathered from the quotation above, the series tone is most definitely not male-friendly, and it's also incredibly shallow in its analysis as well. Maybe they'll do better on the next two parts but I wouldn't hold my breath. Among many other things, the picture that this stampede toward singleness and especially childlessness points to is quite clear: the problem of elder-care facilities being short on staff won't be improving any time soon!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/26/0258252.shtml

Media Columnist makes Personal Allegation of Rape

Matt · 26 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "News & Observer columnist Ruth Sheehan claims she was raped two decades ago with zero evidence. (Sidebar to the Duke LaCrosse Case). Sheehan's column is here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/26/1831259.shtml

Another Man Snaps

Matt · 26 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

One Herbert L. Chalmers of St. Louis, MO, finally lost it and did what some other men driven to the brink do. All very sad.... story here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/26/1838223.shtml

"Effort under way to close wages' gender gap"

Matt · 27 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Story here. Excerpt:

'A nationwide grass roots campaign has aligned with lawmakers to push passage of two laws designed to close the wage gap between men and women.

The campaign is working with four lawmakers, including New York Sen. Hillary Clinton, in moving forward the Fair Pay Act and the Paycheck Fairness Act.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/27/0353211.shtml

Duke Case: Photo Line-up Exclusively of LAX Players

Matt · 27 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "It appears in this story that in the photo line-up of pictures that the stripper had to choose her three alleged rapists from, there were no wrong answers! All the pictures presented were of lacrosse players so whomever she chose, she couldn't miss. Now if the lacrosse players go free based on the disqualification of the line-up evidence, will they always be considered to have been guilty because they 'got off on a technicality'?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/27/046218.shtml

Policewoman faces charge in mishandling of domestic dispute

Matt · 27 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Ragtime writes "From the story:

'A veteran Chatham police officer who headed the force's domestic-violence unit has been charged with assault following a domestic dispute.'

I suspect this violent police woman fully expected to be treated like the "victim" after she slapped and kicked a man, just like so many other violent women before her, "but police were called by a witness, Chief Carl Herder said yesterday." "We have an obligation to the community," Herder said. "We're there to protect the victims, regardless of who the accused is." Nice to see a police chief who's grown a pair!."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/27/1650259.shtml

Wales: Woman Attempts to Murder Husbands over a "Sneer"

Matt · 27 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Steven Brown writes "A good thing he only sneered at her, otherwise who knows what she'll have been forced to do to him! Story here. Excerpt:

'Mr Hamilton believes had he not sneered at his wife, she wouldn't have carried out these actions.'

These 'actions' being lunging at him with two knives! Also note the headline and general tone of the story. She's referred to as 'mum' and he's referred to as 'husband' not 'dad'!

No need to say of course, that if the genders had been reversed he'd be in prison and she'd be hailed as survivor of domestic violence.

The silly man has decided to stay with her..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/27/1653258.shtml

Germany: Woman Births and Murders Eight Children

Matt · 27 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Read it and weep... hard to even come close to believing the excuses she is coming up with, and of course, guess who is really responsible... her husband!

I find it hard to believe that either of them were this stupid/ignorant. Something really evil and/or nuts was going on here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/27/171220.shtml

Woman rapes, lies, and tries to kill child... and gets to be on Oprah

Matt · 28 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "See this story.

This woman had a child and placed it in a trash bag and then into a dumpster to abandon it to die. Luckily a passer by found it. She lied and said the child was the product of a rape at a party. I wonder how many men were harassed on these false charges. The charges against her for trying to kill her child were dropped. Turns out the father of the child was her cousin, who at the time was 12, I believe she was about 20 when she raped him. Currently rape of a child under 13 carries a life sentence, but did not at the time, so she faces 5-25 yrs, and is expected to serve at least three. We know all this becuase she admitted it, trying to make things right."

Click "Read more..." for more."Oh, she got her kid back too, the one she tried to kill who is the product of her raping a child, in 2000.

Oh, and she has been on 20/20 and Oprah speaking about her experiences, not the rape the trying to kill the kid and not getting punished part.

Oh yeah, the 12 yr old, now 23, is in prison for rape, not suprising considering his cousin raped him when he was 12 and nobody did anything about it.

So, rape a 12 yr old, try to kill the baby, what happens, get the kid back, do no time and you get a book deal and a guest spot on Oprah and 20/20. WOW!!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/28/0444222.shtml

Circumcision Studied in Africa as AIDS Preventive

Matt · 28 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Apparently the fact that circumcision doesn't prevent HIV transmission is irrelevant to the Zambian government. Story here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/28/0450226.shtml

Drunk Mother Suffocates Baby - Should Get "Some Prison Time"

Matt · 28 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Another story of an intoxicated mother passing out onto her baby during breastfeeding only to wake up to find she had smothered the child to death. How much time does she get? Not that much. Would a dad who drunkenly passed out while cradling a baby and smothering the child to death as a result also just get "some time"? Doubt it. Excerpt:

Prosecutor John Jorgensen said he would recommend that she receive at least some prison time.

"We just believe she should be held accountable for the neglect," he said.

Hawkins had been drinking at a bowling alley in February 2005, and after her husband dropped her and the child off at home, she started breast-feeding the baby but fell asleep, a criminal complaint said.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/28/0454248.shtml

BBC: Male contraceptives 'reversible'

Matt · 28 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Some good news here. Of course there has to be the ding on men with this thrown in there:

However, far fewer women said they would trust men in general to use the contraceptive.

Still, it's good news, and the Pill-4-Men can't come too soon.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/28/0459211.shtml

Follow-up to Twyana Davis Story

Matt · 29 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

MANN Admins received the following from the author of the MANN submission found here.

"I recently submitted a story to the site about Twyana Davis.

This is a woman who recently confessed to raping her 12 yr old male cousin some 10 yrs ago. The rape resulted in a pregnancy, she then hid the pregnancy, threw the baby out, lied and said the child was the result of her being raped, and recieved leniency from the court, getting no jail time and eventually regaining custody of her child. She then wrote a book about her tragedy, continuing her lie about the rape and was featured on 20/20 and Oprah."

Click "Read more..." for more."The 12 yr old, now 23, is in prison for rape. Had it not been for her rape of this child and her lies this man may not be where he is, may have gotten help, and his victim would not have had to suffer the rape she did. She has ruined at least 2 lives.

I am sure the story will be posted, I write to request something be added to it. I have contacted Oprah's site administrators with a request she make known to her audience the truth about this woman. She had James Frey, author of "A Million Little Pieces" back on her show for lying about his own experiences with drug abuse. Surely this warrants the same, or at least some mention since this woman is likely not available since she is up on rape charges. In fact Ms. Davis's story is still on Oprah's website. 20/20 should do the same thing, making the truth known, they ran the story which was false, they should correct it, let it be known this woman deserves no sympathy and is a rapist.

I want it added to the post that people should contact Oprah and 20/20 and ask that the truth be told. This woman profited from her lies, from rape, from false allegations. She recieved sympathy from America and leniency from the courts and it is not right. She deserves the max for her crime, although I doubt she will recieve it. Perhaps more publicity will mean more jail time."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/29/0131210.shtml

NYTimes.com: Girls and Horror Films

Matt · 29 April 2006 · Archived copy · Original

If you are past a certain age and don't find what this article reports as even a wee disturbing, then perhaps you are not past that "certain age" just yet. Excerpt:

To her, the tension-and-release cycle that accompanies cinematic terror brings about something like a gambler's high. "It's not that I'm a self-mutilator," she said, "but it's just a powerful rush when you can overcome some pain."

...

Of the 25 top-grossing movies released so far this year, almost a quarter are horror films. David Edelstein, a critic for New York Magazine, equated some with "torture porn."

...

"I loved how the women used their bodies to deceive," Ms. Zelez said, referring to the women in "Hostel," who appear to be sexual playthings for the victims but actually lure the men to their deaths. As women, she asserted, "We use our bodies and get what we want. And they definitely got what they wanted."

I wonder how popular these movies would be among teenage girls and young women if both the slashers and slashees were female.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/04/29/225226.shtml

Pesticides and Male Genital Deformities

Matt · 1 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Perhaps these two stories should be read in conjunction.

One is about the effects of pesticides containing estrogen like compounds on male fetal development, how overexposure can result in decreased penis size and abnormalities and potentially effect fertility.

The other is about a teenager driven to suicide over his belief his penis was too small.

I'm sure we have all heard about the increasing concern over chemical compounds containing pthalates which have an estrogen like effect. The EU has gone so far as to begin considering restrictions if not bans on the plastic softeners, but the US does nothing."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/01/036247.shtml

RADAR Alert: VAWA Campaign Reaches Over 10 Million

Matt · 1 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Change is in the air!

In the past month and a half, RADAR has orchestrated a campaign to inform legislators about civil rights abuses under VAWA that Congress surely did not intend.

Twenty-seven organizations across the country co-signed a Resolution Regarding the Violence Against Women Act.
(See http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Resolution.pdf)

Click "Read more..." for more.

VAWA Campaign Reaches Over 10 Million
The past month's activities are detailed at http://www.mediaradar.org/accomplishments2006SpringCampaign.php.
Below are just a few of the highlights:

- RADAR released a series of Special Reports documenting the abuses that occur under VAWA. These were faxed to over 460 federal and state government officials.
  - VAWA: Threat to Families,
    Children, Men, and Women

    http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Threat-to-Families.pdf
  - Without Restraint: The Use and Abuse of Domestic Restraining Orders

    http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Restraining-Orders.pdf
  - VAWA Programs
    Discriminate Against Male Victims

    href="http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Discriminates-Against-Males.pdf">http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Discriminates-Against-Males.pdf
  - Justice Denied: Arrest
    Policies for Domestic Violence

    http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/Justice-Denied-DV-Arrest-Policies.pdf
  - Bias in the Judiciary:
    The Case of Domestic Violence

    http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/Bias-In-The-Judiciary.pdf
- Countless members of the organizations that co-signed the resolution wrote their Senators and Representatives.
- Representatives of many of the co-signing organizations:
  - held meetings with their elected officials
  - were interviewed on radio, including on the Sean Hannity radio show, which has 10+ million listeners
  - published editorials

- Newspapers across the country printed articles on the issue.
- RADAR and SAFE-NH submitted written comments to be included in the minutes of the meeting of the National Advisory Committee on VAWA on April 25-26.

And so, with your help, we've made a good start at getting the word out, all across the nation. From California to the New York island, from the Redwood forests to the Gulf Stream waters, our voices are starting to be heard.

This week we'd like to express our thanks for your support in this effort. No need to write letters or make phone calls this week. It's time for a breather. So enjoy a well-earned rest.

And stay tuned. This is only the beginning!

Date of RADAR Release: May 1, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/01/0314211.shtml

Student Claims Colleges Teach Male-Discrimination

Matt · 2 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Doug Baker writes "Missouri's second largest college is charged with teaching male-discrimination. As part of a course, a male student says, 'the class was assigned to read and discuss 96 pages of text that denigrated men and elevated women, which I believe discriminated against males. I was then denied educational opportunities when the school provided no way to avoid the discrimination except to drop the class. Similar data is being taught in other courses and throughout higher education nation-wide. The government has failed to objectively investigate my complaints.'

Go to http://EmasculationOfAmerica.com/ for the entire story, full case documentation, and a wealth of research information."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/02/1714235.shtml

"Sexpo" in Australia features re-enactment of Bobbit Assault

Matt · 2 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Tirryb writes "News.com.au reports here that a "sex expo" in Perth, Australia is opening a Sex Train Ride - kind of like a ghost train, but with simulated sex scenes instead of coffins and skeletons.

Nothing wrong with that, until you reach this paragraph:

'And then there's the reenactment of the infamous 1993 Bobbit attack, in which American woman Lorena Bobbitt cut off part of her husband John's penis.'"

Click "Read more..." for more."I was pretty surprised to see that, I mean if this ride has simulated sex scenes then surely it's meant to be sexual, how could mutilation such as this fit in with that? So what does the organiser say? QUOTE:

He said one group had expressed concerns the ride might be a bit too real, and could inspire people to emulate Lorena Bobbitt's act.

"But if anyone mistakes it for real, and thinks that that is something they should go off and do in their private life, then they are sadly mistaken and should probably have their funny bone checked out," he said.

I only hope he would find it just as 'fun' should something like this ever happen to him..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/02/1716219.shtml

"Mom gets probation for gun at school"

Matt · 3 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Hard to believe, or is it? Read it here. Excerpt:

Cozad was in assistant Principal Martha Beseau Bock's office Oct. 11 at Park Glen Elementary School in Fort Worth to discuss her son's one-day suspension for a fight on a school bus, according to Fort Worth police reports. Park Glen is in the Keller school district.

After the door was closed, Cozad took a handgun and holster from her purse and placed it on a shelf near the assistant principal, according to reports.

No shots were fired, and Cozad left the office with the gun, police said.

She got probation. Wonder what 'dad' would have drawn at court had he done the same thing?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/03/0356211.shtml

The Pendulum of Rights?

Matt · 3 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Misandrope writes "I keep getting told that there is a mythical pendulum of rights that was very in favor of men at one point, that now has swung in favor of women, and against men - but just how long has the pendulum favored women? Over 111 years, I found out."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/03/0359209.shtml

UK: Conservatives Seek to Protect Accused Teachers

Matt · 3 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "False accusations against male teachers are reaching epidemic proportions over here. In 2003, teacher Alastair Wilbee committed suicide after being accused of a sex offence against a boy. Now the Conservative Party is calling for greater protection for accused teachers, including anonymity. Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/03/152242.shtml

Duke Case: Mike Nifong Wins Primary

Matt · 3 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Misandrope writes "Mike Nifong has won the Durham NC Democratic Primary for DA. There being no Republican opposition, he will continue as DA in the Duke Lacrosse case. I see this as a loss for men, because in my opinion the case has been trumped up for votes, and is mostly based on predjudices against the accused men. Nifong orignally based his case on his claim that he would absolutely find DNA from the purported rapists. I wonder, how would you tell DNA from a paying client from DNA from a rapist? But there wasn't any DNA. More here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/03/155203.shtml

Woman drugs, molests stepson, gets 20 years

Matt · 4 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

dschmidt writes "WFAA is reporting that a Tyler, TX woman who molested her then 14 year old stepson while supplying him with drugs and alcohol has been sentenced to 20 years in prison.

Note the article refers to "an affair" and "a relationship" rather than repeated molestation/statutory rape/rape due to the victim being under the influence."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/04/1826202.shtml

"Why women don't relax"

Matt · 4 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "More bizarre drivel from Germaine Greer to the effect that a woman's work is never done. "The typical world citizen - who is still female, illiterate and an unpaid family worker - knows only too well that if she is ever to be seen with her hands in her lap, a job will be found for her."

Yes, Germaine. It's time for your medication now."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/04/1830247.shtml

"Men: Cut Stress in 5 Minutes"

Matt · 4 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Didn't know if posting this under 'Humor' or 'Men's Health' was most appropriate, but in the end, I picked 'Humor' simply because it is so funny. Enjoy!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/04/1833223.shtml

Teen Pregnancies and Sperm Count

Matt · 4 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This article is something of a follow-up to other posts under "Men's Health" on the same or a related theme. It suggests that the likeliest reason for the recent drop in teen pregnancies is not the effects of abstinence or education programs, but instead from the steady and significant decline in human sperm count over the past 100 years, which doesn't seem to be slowing down. Even worse, since the causes are likely to be environmental and irreversible for the near future, we may not be able to stop this phenomenon in time to keep it from becoming a serious threat to our species.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/04/1839215.shtml

"Study": Mothers Deserve Salary

Matt · 5 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

As if the whole dollar-to-78-cents myth weren't bad enough, check this out. Guess dads are only worth what they can make at work then?

Comments can be posted here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/05/0322229.shtml

Male Suicide

Matt · 5 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bulldogo.1 writes "While it's great this is finally being acknowledged, the response is hardly encouraging. A quarter of a century to stamp out male suicide? 25 years? Imagine if this was about female suicide.

On top of that it'll be hard actually dealing with the problem, as its causes (parental alienation, toxic feminist social engineering, female driven divorce etc.) aren't politically correct enough to be made public.

Also, newspapers don't report lone male car accidents etc., with no other evident cause, as suicide so the actual number is definately way higher."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/05/1853236.shtml

Death of a Hero: Peter Law

Matt · 5 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "UK: The Member of Parliament Peter Law, has died of a brain tumour at 58. A life-long Labour Party supporter, he was the MP for Blaenau Gwent, Labour's safest seat in Wales. However, in the May 2005 election, the Blair government decided to impose all-women shortlists for election candidates, a blatant feminist-inspired attempt at election rigging. Law decided to stand as an independent against the official Labour candidate, Maggie Jones, even though he had been diagnosed with a brain tumour. Rumours are surfacing that the Blair government tried to bribe him with a peerage (a seat in the unelected upper house) if he agreed not to oppose them. He refused, fought the election, and won by a landslide, delivering a slap in the face to the feminists and to Blair. What happened to Maggie Jones? As one of Tony's cronies, she was given a peerage. His illness finally caught up with him. His widow is considering standing next time to continue his work in upholding democracy. RIP Peter Law, a politician with integrity. We need more like him."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/05/1854218.shtml

Not Attempted Murder?

Matt · 6 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "This woman stabbed her husband's ex-lover 17 times and is acquitted of attempted murder but found guilty of grevious bodily harm.

How can you stab someone 17 times and not intend to kill them?"

Ed. note: Some may ask how this relates to men's rights issues as such. This is an example of how a person's femaleness is taken into consideration implicity and without true relevance to the matter at hand-- had this been a man killing another man under similar circumstances, can anyone doubt that he would be found guilty of murder and sentenced commensurately with the ferocity of the crime? The problem here is that the sex of the perp has obviously been taken into account when viewing the question of her level of accountability for her actions, and she has in essence been largely let off the hook simply because she is a woman.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/06/1736216.shtml

13-YO Girl Recants Gang Rape Allegation

Matt · 7 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Here we go again, another female recanting a gang rape charge. This girl lied to Illinois police claiming she was raped by a group of seven teenage boys last month in an apartment complex laundry room.

Of course, the police are not even bothering to charge her with filing a false report. She gets "counseling" while the boys will get a permantly damaged reputation. The sad part is that we still do not know the accuser's name. When are we going to start punishing females for heinous actions like these?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/07/1817259.shtml

Another Serial False Accuser Remains Anonymous

Matt · 8 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "Former Deputy President of South Africa Jacob Zuma has been cleared of rape. In his verdict, the judge said the accuser had a history of making rape claims that turned out to be false. We need to know who this woman is. She is a danger to the public. Expose her name and start a false accusers' register now!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/08/1955207.shtml

Men, Suicide, Divorce, and Cuba

Matt · 8 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Misandrope writes "We know that suicide is a serious problem for men in the US, that the vast majority of men committing suicide are divorced, that women experience no similar uptick in suicide after a divorce, and that if divorced men were removed from the equation, suicide rates for men and women would be the same. But what about foreign men? What are their suicide rates like, and can we link that to divorce? Today I pulled together some clues from here and there for the status of Cuban men."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/08/1957226.shtml

Dating Violence - Just Blame Men

Matt · 8 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

RandomMan writes "More of the usual "men bad, women good" here. No mention of the fact that women in dating relationships are equally likely to be violent, just the usual misandry and fear-mongering."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/08/1959258.shtml

NYTimes.com: "One Thing They Aren't: Maternal"

Matt · 9 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I suppose you could call this an educational piece, but the object lesson is quite clear and readily made to anyone who says "How could a mother do such a thing?" when faced with a mother-abandons-baby story in the news. Just send them this link and say, "Happens all the time!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/09/170234.shtml

Carey Roberts Columns

Matt · 9 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bull writes "Carey Roberts' weekly column is interesting reading; he typically disarms feminist myths and claims using facts and credible citation. Facts, you know; the things that radical feminists typically distort, invent, or exaggerate! Click here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/09/173214.shtml

Female British Soldier Killed in Iraq - Media Goes Wild

Matt · 9 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "The British press is full of reports of the first British servicewoman to die in Iraq apparently as a result of enemy action. The only other female casualty, Military Police officer Denise Rose, apparently killed herself at an army base in Basra in 2004. The last time the British Army lost a woman to the enemy was 22 years ago.

Corporal Heather Kerrigan, 20, was killed by an IRA landmine in 1984. Women's contributions to the British military are still insignificant compared to men's, but you would never know it from the media. The papers are full of glowing praise for the latest casualty, pictures and biographies everywhere. No mention of the fact that men die all the time. This is the gender-neutral military: all men can have the obligation for combat, a few privileged women can have the right to choose combat, and their contribution is grossly exaggerated. Doesn't sound very equal to me."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/09/176213.shtml

Former Deputy President of SA Cleared of Rape, now the Whining Begins

Matt · 9 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

RandomMan writes "Naturally, 'women's groups' are screaming for blood, because some man 'got away' with heterosexual sex, which is always rape, apparently. The fact that he was found not guilty by a court which allows evidence of the alleged victim's conduct into evidence just doesn't seem to matter. The fact that he was foolish enough to have unprotected sex with an HIV-positive partner was stupid, but not criminal."

Click "Read more..." for more."Just as rape accusations are false as much as 41% of the time, no doubt the occasional rapist walks free. But given the misandric climate in the judical system, and the rabid hatred of ALL men the 'women's groups' out there have repeatedly demonstrated, what exactly does a man have to do to clear his name when a women files a false accusation after the fact, if intercourse occurred at all? Being found not guilty by a fair trial isn't enough. Is it even possible?

From the article: 'Gender activists criticized the judge for saying the accuser was inappropriately dressed, for accepting detailed testimony on her sexual history and for implying that not saying "no" means sex is consensual.'

So an adult woman who doesn't explicitly say 'no' reserves the right to charge her partner with rape? Where is the adult woman's responsibility here?

Apparently the legal definition of women as irresponsible children who don't even have to indicate their refusal to have sex when they don't consent, or take any sort of responsibility for their conduct continues unabated.

This case is solid proof that anonymity should be extended to the accused as well as the victim, and the ridiculous 'rape shield' laws in the West should cover BOTH the alleged victim and the alleged offender, if there is ever to be any sort of equality in the justice system."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/09/179209.shtml

AIDS in America: A Black Woman's Disease?

Matt · 9 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Not content to make HIV out to be largely the fault of men (gay ones in particular), some in the media seem to need to paint it as a "black" disease and in particular, a "black woman's disease". A "mere" gynocentric observation when talking about sub-Saharan Africa, HIV infection rates in African women have come to be a staple of discussions about Africa's health. But in this article, they're talking about America!

Even, it seems, in the case of devastating pandemics, the media cannot resist the urge to gender and/or ethnicify pretty much anything. Right from the get-go, the article starts with:

Battling a Black Epidemic
At home: AIDS now threatens tens of thousands of African-Americans, many of them women, in big cities and small towns alike. A community in peril tries to save itself.

Nowhere in this article does the author seem to suggest that maybe, just maybe, anyone who engages in known high-risk behavior for HIV transmission ought to be taking a wee bit more responsibility for their own actions--regardless of their sex or ethnicity. Precautionary measures are well-known and widely available in America, yet some folks, even when they know their likelihood of contracting HIV is high, just seem to think the law of probability doesn't apply to them.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/09/1959259.shtml

Teens Treated Much Differently for Same Act due to Gender

Matt · 10 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Dittohd writes "In this case, a seventeen year old girl and sixteen year old boy were caught having sex in the girl's home during a lunch break from school and only the boy was suspended. I checked North Carolina's statutory rape laws and the age of consent there is sixteen years of age, so no crime was committed. Note that in this case, the girl is older than the guy and she drove him to her house, yet he is still the predator and she the victim. Sigh!!!!!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/09/2246237.shtml

Indian Boy Nearly Run to Death for Entertainment

Matt · 10 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Hard to believe it, but can the gender blinders be so incredibly thick that people couldn't see what was wrong with this until a child welfare group pointed it out to them? Excerpt:

On May 3, Budhia was woken up at 3:15 a.m. and started running at 4:07 a.m. to avoid the worst of the heat as he made his way from the temple town of Puri to Bhubaneswar, the capital of the eastern state of Orissa.

He ran for 7 hours 2 minutes, braving a peak temperature of 36.7 degrees Celsius, or 98 degrees Fahrenheit, but collapsed from exhaustion 5 kilometers before reaching his goal of 70 kilometers.

As soon as he had recovered sufficiently to face the cameras, he was met by the Orissa sports minister and a contingent of dignitaries from the local police brigade, which had sponsored the event.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/09/2251247.shtml

SB1482 (CA) Withdrawn

Matt · 10 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Good news in Glenn Sacks' May 9, 2006 newsletter: SB1482 in California has been withdrawn! From the newsletter:

In the face of over 4,000 opposition calls, letters and faxes, California Senator Gloria Romero (D-Los Angeles) has decided to withdraw a bill which would have granted custodial parents an almost unlimited right to move children far way from their noncustodial parents. Romero pulled SB 1482 just before today's scheduled hearing on the bill.

SB 1482 would have weakened if not abrogated the California Supreme Court's 2004 LaMusga move-away decision, which affirmed that courts have the power to restrain moves which run counter to children's best interests.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/10/1615255.shtml

Boys to be Charged as Criminals... meanwhile...

Matt · 10 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Today's news couldn't be more pointed in terms of double-standards as applied to males and females, boys and girls. This article reports a current case now splashing the headlines.

Now compare this news with the following piece in the front page of "B" section under local news in Rochester, NY as a "News Brief": Woman Faces Rape Charge. If a man had been charged in the rape a girl like this, it would be front-page news.

Click "Read more..." for more.
The article doesn't even discuss what acts the boys are accused of. However in this article they are referred to as 'young men' by the school superintendent- umm, 6-8 YO boys are no where near to being men, so why are they referred to that way? They are children!

The boys are minors-- more than that, they are pre-adolescent minors. Anything that a child or children that young may do wrong to another child may be condemnable, but is it punishable by law? They are facing criminal charges, and are not much past walking age. Can an 8-year-old really be said to understand what he or she is doing (with exactly what they were doing not even made clear)?

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/10/224221.shtml

Russian Men's Health Crisis Finally Getting Attention from Russian Leaders

Matt · 11 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This article reports that Russian president Putin has finally decided to address the crisis in health/population implosion in Russia. Guaranteed if it were Russian women's health that was in such bad shape, it would have gotten a lot more attention a lot sooner. He also seems to be stressing the idea that Russian women should just have children -- and get paid for it, no less -- over Russian men getting better health care and education. Excerpt:

MOSCOW, May 10 — President Vladimir V. Putin today directed the Russian Parliament to adopt a 10-year program to stop Russia's sharply declining population, principally by offering financial incentives and subsidies to encourage Russian women to have more children.

...

Mr. Putin then warned that Russia's population has been declining by almost 700,000 people a year, and that the state must stop the decline. In 2004, for every 16 Russians who died, only 10.4 Russian babies were born, according to the most recently available official data.

Click "Read more..." for more.
And the average age of death for a Russian man was 58.9 years, far below that of other industrial nations, and roughly two decades behind the average age at death of an American male. Birth rates have also plummeted since Soviet times, falling from an average of 2.63 children per woman in 1958 and 1959 to 1.89 children per woman in 1990 and to 1.34 children per woman in 2004.

"The Russian crisis is not due to a single disease, or even a small set of microbial horrors," [Dr. Murray Feshbach, of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars] wrote... it is the result of "a constellation of occurrences that include not only infectious disease, but alcoholism, drug abuse, suicide, trauma injuries, astounding levels of cardiovascular disease, male/female estrangement and loss of family cohesion, declining physiological fertility, ugly environmental pollution and micronutrient starvation."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/10/2214237.shtml

Duke Update: Defense Witness Arrested

Matt · 11 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Nifong must be getting desperate. The Durham police have arrested the taxi driver, Moezeldin Elmostafa, who placed Seligmann away from the crime scene the night of the alleged rape, on a 2 1/2-year-old misdemeanor warrant. Ernest Conner, a lawyer representing Seligmann, asserts that this is nothing more than an attempt to intimidate and pressure a witness who presents a rock solid alibi for the defendant.

Especially damning in this article is the following quote: "Conner said it was highly unusual for police to arrest someone for a misdemeanor more than two years after the crime. He contrasted the treatment of the taxi driver with that of Kim Roberts, the other dancer at the party. Conner said Roberts initially told police no rape occurred at the party but changed her story after she was arrested on a probation violation. District Attorney Mike Nifong later reduced Roberts' bail". Apparently, the DA in this case will stop at nothing in order to get a conviction, regardless of the facts."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/11/2013214.shtml

Domestic abuse role reversal

Matt · 12 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes "Good article here. Excerpt:

'"It's becoming less taboo for male victims to come forward," she said, "and there certainly is a need to provide similar services to them."

There could be a legal need as well. Herma Hill Kay, a Boalt Hall law professor who specializes in anti-discrimination law, said federal court decisions and state law suggest that excluding male victims from funding may violate the law.

"Equal protection under the law sounds like a cliché," said David Woods, who claims he was denied a restraining order against his wife and mocked by police when he reported being hit. "But wouldn't it be nice for someone who never got it."'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/12/1546227.shtml

The Female Discount?

Matt · 12 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "No explanation why - but the three men in this case each get 12 years in prison while the only woman gets four.

http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/uk_news/england/staffor dshire/4762481.stm"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/12/1547245.shtml

Principal did backround checks on girls' prom dates

Matt · 12 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "A Cape Cod area high school principal is under investigation for performing criminal background checks on the male prom dates for a number of female students. While the prom dates of these females students were not actually enrolled at this school this is largely irrelevent. In essence, what we have here is a government official screening male citizens for their romantic suitablity via criminal backround checks. Admittedly, some of the male guests did have minor records but this is not the point. How long until the government requires all males to submit to a criminal backround check in order to initate a romantic relationship with a female citizen? Think it can't happen? Have we forgotten IMBRA?"

Ed. note: IMBRA is also discussed in this Wikipedia entry.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/12/1557201.shtml

Website to Support Duke Lacrosse Players

Matt · 12 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Ora Pro Eis writes "I have opened a new website entitled Support Duke Lacrosse / Pray For Colin and Reade. This site is a support and prayer site for the Duke Lacrosse team and specifically for the two boys who are falsely accused of rape. Visitors can add their prayers to our "Prayer Chain", or just log on to the Message Board and post words of support for these young men. This is an excellent way to show support for these young men in the midst of the media's rush to judgment. Please visit the site today and write your words of support and your prayers. The boys very well may read the site, and I'm sure it would mean a great deal to them."

Ed. note: In particular note the presence of a message board at this site.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/12/163220.shtml

UCLA Daily Bruin Columnist Supports Choice4Men

Matt · 12 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes "This UCLA Daily Bruin columnist did a pretty good piece supporting choice for men. I was impressed to see this at UCLA. It would be good to email and thank her."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/12/2156201.shtml

Petition to Repeal IMBRA

Matt · 12 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "The petition to end IMBRA can be found on this website. So far they have over three thousand signatures. If you click on the "View Signatures" button at the bottom of the webpage you may view the comments of the signers. There are quite a few people who are angry at this new law, and they're not all men. The good news is that according to Wikipedia, 'On Feb 4, 2006, The District Court of Northern Georgia placed a restraining order preventing the enforcement of IMBRA. A trial will be held to determine its Constitutionality'. In the meantime, please sign the petition to repeal IMBRA. No man should have to go through the lengths that IMBRA specifies in order to communicate with a foreign female. By allowing this law to go unchallenged we are agreeing that every American man who intiates a romantic interest in a foreign woman is a criminal. Is this how you want men to be known?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/12/2156255.shtml

Woman jailed for beating daughter's teacher

Matt · 13 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Is it just me or is there a rash of mothers beating up their kids' teachers these days? Well, at least she drew jail time rather than "counselling". Story here. What adds an odd twist to this case is that the assailant was herself a teacher! Excerpt:

DALLAS - A woman convicted of beating and kicking her daughter's teacher in front of the girl's seventh-grade class was sentenced to six months in jail Thursday.

Paulette Baines, 45, was convicted Wednesday of felony assault on a public servant. She also was fined $800 and ordered to pay $14,000 restitution to Mary Oliver.

Baines, a high school teacher, walked into Oliver's science classroom, grabbed Oliver's hair and dragged her across the room while punching her in the face and kicking her, Oliver testified.

So much for the "conventional wisdom" about women and violence, but then again, regular readers of MANN already know this. :)

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/12/225244.shtml

Feminist Politics in Scientific Publications

Matt · 13 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

J Turner writes "Unfortunately, it is common to hear the lies of feminist politicians on television and radio and see them written in newspapers and in many magazines. However, it is rare to see them in well-known and respected science magazines because these publications usually have an objective screening process akin to the scientific process itself.

It should be of great concern to all of us when this screening process fails or is disabled. This is a reply to one such article in The New Scientist which states in part: "...when women kill their mates it is usually in response to the man's controlling violence"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/13/1842203.shtml

Eighth-grade girl suspended for sexual assault

Matt · 15 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Sykolojik writes "Suspended... that's it. And her name is being withheld... if the roles were reversed, the punishment wouldn't just be heavier but the offender's name would be made well known, regardless of age... as a victim/survivor of similar situations I'm too enraged to say much more..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/15/2110228.shtml

Anti-feminist Ilana Mercer

Matt · 15 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "Maybe you've already discovered her excellent writing, but if not, check out Iliana Mercer's web site at http://www.ilanamercer.com/.
An excerpt from worthwhile archives:

'Like a black hole, whose collapse becomes increasingly likely as its center of gravity grows heavier, women—especially feminists—risk vanishing into self-centerdness and self-preoccupation. "New feminism" embodies an oppressive and authoritarian culture of grievance and chronic offense. When it comes to longevity, the propensity for suicide, unemployment, and death or injury on the job, men, in reality, are at a considerable disadvantage...'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/15/2114236.shtml

Third Duke Lacrosse Team Member Indicted

Matt · 15 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "A third member of the Duke Lacrosse Team has been indicted by the Grand Jury. David Evans from Bethsada, Maryland had been charged with first-degree forcible rape, sexual offense and kidnapping. Strangely, there is still no DNA evidence linking ANY of the players to the stripper. Also, if we take the stripper's original story at face value then the Grand Jury still has yet to indict 17 of the remaining players. OOPS! I forgot, she changed her story. It's really only three. But what's the difference, it's an election year."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/15/2115225.shtml

New Senate Immigration Bill

Matt · 16 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "The number of extended family members that U.S. citizens or legal residents can bring into this country would double. More dramatically, the number of workers and their immediate families could increase sevenfold if there are enough U.S. employers looking for cheap foreign labor. Another provision would grant humanitarian visas to any woman or orphaned child anywhere in the world "at risk of harm" because of age or sex. Read it here.

HOW DO WOMEN GET LUMPED INTO THE SAME CATEGORY AS AN ORPHANED CHILD?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/15/2322217.shtml

MSN Hasn't Lost its Touch

Matt · 16 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

When it comes to mixed-up priorities and pandering to the lowest denominator, MSN can't seem to be beat. Latest examples, all on the very same day on the very same front page:

The world's most eligible billionaires (This one has been around for the past few days; must be real popular)

Sexy, successful... and single?

Mixed messages, priorities, and everything else. Just too damned funny.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/15/2328204.shtml

False Paternity - Only a Bad Thing When It Benefits Men

Matt · 16 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

RandomMan writes "In Germany, there is a loophole which allows men to 'falsely' declare paternity (there's a switch), allowing mothers with children to remain in the country and receive social benefits. The man receives some compensation from the woman for committing this fraud.

Unethical and immoral, but it's happening. However, women have been saddling men with false accusations of paternity as a money-making scheme for over a century, but now 'action is being taken', because something about all this lying might somehow benefit a MAN who chooses to lie. It's not that I support lying by anyone, but...double standard, anyone? The fact that this loophole exists because the laws were designed to permit the fraudulent naming of fathers for the profit of women seems to tbe quite lost on the government officials involved."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/16/1750206.shtml

Women Finally Free of Music Dowloading Oppression

Matt · 16 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "When I see stories like this I am always amazed at the subtle and not so subtle way the media has created the modern gynocentric world in which we live. An article about downloading music laced with terms like freedom and choice for women, all while gloating that men download less. Really, what is the point of this media fluff piece? Excerpt:

'Ms Watson Smyth said: "The freedom afforded by new technology means that women are now confidently downloading music at home and broadening their musical horizons in private.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/16/1753249.shtml

cnn.com: Why do girls lose interest in math and science?

Matt · 17 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "In light of the known state of education today (boy's performance down, fewer men going to college, 'girl power' programs, special programs for women, the blatant manufacturing of non-existent female deficits--Gilligan/Pifer/Sadker etc., destruction of men's sports programs through Title IX, 700+ women's studies programs, take our daughters to work day, on and on and on...), what would you call this article?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/17/156205.shtml

Fine article on DV vs. men

Thomas · 17 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The UCLA Daily Bruin has printed this article on male victims of domestic violence. I'm not surprised that Marc Angelucci of NCFM-LA presents important facts, but it's very refreshing to see the same done by Tina Oakland, director for the UCLA Center for Women & Men, and UCLA Clothesline Project executive co-chair, Alexis Flyer.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/17/1745249.shtml

Woman Pulls Off Husband's Genitals, MAY Face Charges

Matt · 18 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

RandomMan writes "A women 'pulled off' her husband's genitals when she discovered he was cheating on her. Story here. It's a sad story, but it wasn't treated as 'humorous' and the article pointedly mentions the fact that 'authorities said she could have faced attempted murder'. Why doesn't she still face attempted murder charges, since her violent actions could easily have resulted in the man's death? I was under the impression that the victim did not need to actually die for his or her assailant to be guilty of 'attempted' murder. I feel terribly sorry for the man involved, and wish him a full and speedy recovery, but I'm pleased that the media and the police didn't make their usual attempt to laugh this attempted murder off as has been the norm in recent years. It's nice to see that mutilating and attempting to kill one's intimate partner is finally starting to matter to police, even if the attacker is a woman."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/18/025259.shtml

Woman gets ASBO after terror campaign

Matt · 18 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "A 57 year old woman has been convicted of waging a hate campaign against her neighbours for more than a year. The court has given her an Anti-Social Behaviour Order, a kind of injunction which means she is banned from doing certain things. What would a man have got in the same circumstances? Almost certainly jail time. This woman is a psychopath who has apparently shown no concern about her actions."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/18/149224.shtml

Parker on Duke Case, Rush to Judgment of White Males

Matt · 18 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Well she has redeemed herself to some degree in my eyes. :) I saw this in my local paper and thought, wow, how did THIS get past the editors? I also found it several other places, including here on the Orlando Sentinel. It ends with:

White males -- descendant as they are of the imperialistic, colonizing, native-raping patriarchy -- are the new culturally approved targets of the lynch mob.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/18/2043233.shtml

McCartney May Lose $390 Million in Divorce

Matt · 18 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

dschmidt writes "Analysts believe former Beatle Paul McCartney may lose 1/4 of his 1.56 billion dollars to his soon to be ex-wife in his allegedly upcoming divorce.

If that happens, ex-wife Heather Mills stands to gain roughly $1.9 million for every week of a 4-year marriage!!

Even sadder, Mills offered to sign a pre-nup, and McCartney refused! Wish he had that little piece of paper now!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/18/2040222.shtml

Please Respond to Feminist 95% DV Myth in Contra Coasta Times

Matt · 19 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes "This Contra Costa Times editorial on dating violence spews the feminist myth that, "In male-female relationships, 95 percent of the victims are the girls." No current credible data supports that. I wrote the opinion editors and the letters editor about this, showing the data and asking them to provide their sources. If you have a moment, please do so also.

The letters editor is at letters-at-cctimes.com.

The opinion editors are at tdrummond-at-cctimes.com, mfry-at-cctimes.com, jglennon-at-cctimes.com, dhatfield-at-cctimes.com"

Click "Read more..." for more.
DATA ON TEEN DATING VIOLENCE

Nearly 8.8 percent of girls and 8.9 percent of boys report that they were hit, slapped or physically hurt on purpose by a boyfriend or girlfriend. About 11.9 percent of girls and 6.1 percent of teenage boys were physically forced to have sexual intercourse against their will with dating partners. Sources: National Youth Risk Behavior Survey: http://www.cdc.gov/mmwr/PDF/SS/SS5302.pdf and Straus, M. (2004). "Prevalence of violence against dating partners by male and female university students worldwide." Violence Against Women, 10 (7), 790-811.

Most recently, in a Florida high school study, more boys than girls reported being physically hurt by dating partners, while about 9% of boys and 12% of girls said they were physically forced to have sex. That study was publicized by the Tampa Tribune at ("Sex Survey 'Eye-Opening' For Local Parents", 12/11/05).

California State University Professor Martin Fiebert's bibliography has a number of sources on teen dating violence showing girls are as violent as boys.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/19/1557248.shtml

"Jack The Ripper" was more likely "Jill the Ripper"

Matt · 19 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

RandomMan writes "Sounds like 'Jack' the Ripper may actually have been a 'Jill', according to recent DNA testing. Correlates with other evidence, too, as it turns out. Story here. Can't wait to hear who the feminists in the media blame for this one!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/19/162201.shtml

Elderly women target homeless men in fraud scheme

Matt · 19 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

While on the Contra Coasta Times re the second most previous submission, I found this story as well. To think, these "old ladies" are probably grandmothers.

Helen Golay, 75, and Olga Rutterschmidt, 72, were arrested Thursday after they allegedly collected more than $2 million in benefits from policies issued on the lives of two homeless men killed in hit-and-run crashes in 1999 and 2005, authorities said.

Police believe the women may have committed the fatal accidents themselves, and were befriending other men to set up more insurance policies.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/19/1721209.shtml

UK: Teenage girls are 'out of control'

Matt · 20 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Clearly these poor girls are victims of the white male patriarchy. We need to help them. Notice one of the solutions is to make school more interesting for these poor girls. Yes, gear school to be even more feminized. Also, its ironic that the headline isn't 'Boys better Behaved than Girls'. Story here. Excerpt:

'In a disturbing confirmation of the spread of the 'ladette' culture, it found violence, aggression and self-destructive behaviour has spread alarmingly among girls over the past 20 years.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/20/1613211.shtml

Erin Pizzy interview discussed on journalist's blog

Matt · 21 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes "NCFM-LA convinced this journalist to go interview Erin Pizzey, which he just got through doing. Apparently he got several hours of footage of her. That should be very valuable to our cause in the future. The journalist talks about the interview in his blog at here.

I wish him luck getting the story publicized."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/21/0057216.shtml

F4J Is Back

Matt · 21 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

RandomMan writes "F4J re-launched itself (after the smear campaign that tried to shut it down), with a high profile protest on a live lottery broadcast. Details here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/21/1812207.shtml

Alternative Sentencing Urged for Women in High-Incarceration States

Matt · 21 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bull writes "Oklahoma, Mississippi and the Mountain states have set the pace in increasing the imprisonment of women, while several Northeastern states are curtailing the practice, according to a new report detailing sharp regional differences in the handling of female offenders. Rest of the story here. A telling excerpt:

'Ann Jacobs, executive director of the Women's Prison Association, said states with high rates of women behind bars should look closely at alternative sentencing, particularly mandatory treatment as an option for drug offenders.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/21/1815238.shtml

Girls' Lacrosse the Line, Strippers & the Pope

Matt · 21 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "Members of the women's lacrosse team at Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C., are seen in sexually suggestive poses with a male stripper in just a thong and socks on the website badjocks.com." In this naïve essay, the authoress promotes the chauvinistic notion that girls behaving badly should still be revered and respected, and quotes the Pope in support of her argument. Funny stuff!"

Ed. note: The essay author you will note quickly brings up the Duke case but rushes to draw distinctions based largely on the fact that the LAX players are on the other end of (thus-far unsubstantiated or corroborated) rape allegations.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/21/1823245.shtml

Burgeoning Prison Population...Mostly Males

Matt · 22 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Luek writes "America's mania for locking up a sizable chunk of its population has never been more popular according to this article. Now 1 out of every 136 US residents are behind bars and they are mostly men. We can also surmise that an equally large number are on probation or parole so the ratio of 1 in 136 is understating the crisis.

The article focuses on drugs and sentencing guidelines as the reasons for the increase. However, nothing is said about false rape accusations, trumped up domestic violence charges, barbaric child support enforcement policies or other feminist political agenda driven laws causing the increase in the male prison population."

Ed. note: Yes, and notice who they pick for a picture of an inmate for the article: a woman. On the heels of this piece of news, look for a push to get women released from prison into "alternative sentencing" programs all across the country while the men languish behind bars.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/22/007250.shtml

The United Equal Parenting Conference – The Way Forward

Matt · 22 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "The United Equal Parenting Conference – The Way Forward (http://www.unitedconference.com/) is proud to announce a conference that includes Neil Lyndon, vilified in the 1990s for his book "No More Sex War: The Failures of Feminism", Barry Worrall, author of "Without Authority" that details his story at the hands of the family courts and The Equal Parenting Alliance, a new UK political party. London, Saturday June 17th, 2006, the day before Father's Day."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/22/1554217.shtml

The Power of False Accusations

Matt · 22 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "If you ever doubt that false accusations can do serious damage, then read this story. Race-riots took place last year in the UK's second largest city, Birmingham, following rumours that a local West Indian girl had been raped by a gang of Asian men. There is no eidence the rape ever happened, but the ensuing public disorder left one man dead, and at least 30 people taken to hospital."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/22/161248.shtml

RADAR Alert: Contra Costa Times' Claim is Wildly Different Than CDC

Matt · 22 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

On May 17th, the Contra Costa Times published their editorial entitled "Teen Dating Violence", in which they repeat the long-debunked claim that 95% of domestic violence victims in male-female relationships are female.

Click "Read more..." for more.

Contra Costa Times' Claim is Wildly Different Than CDC Research Results
Last Friday's issue of the CDC's "Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report" reports that 8.9% of U.S. high school boys have been physically attacked by their girlfriends, a rate nearly identical to the 8.8% of high school girls who have been physically attacked by their boyfriends. (See http://www.cdc.gov/mmwr/preview/mmwrhtml/mm5519a3.htm).

And the most comprehensive research into dating violence worldwide, the University of New Hampshire's Family Research Laboratory's ongoing International Dating Violence study, covering 19 countries, finds that the median rate of female-on-male dating violence (29.2%) is actually higher than the rate of male-on-female dating violence (24.7%). Even when limited their investigation to severe violence, female perpetrators predominated at 9.4% as compared to 9.0% male perpetrators. (http://www.nh.gov/csm/dv_straus.html)

On Monday, May 22, RADAR will issue a press release entitled "Males Equally at Risk of Partner Violence, But Media Bias Persists". (See http://www.mediaradar.org/press_release_20060522.php)

It's traditional for newspapers that learn they've disseminated false information to print a retraction. So this week we're asking you to contact the Contra Costa Times. Be respectful in your communications with them, and the facts will speak for themselves. Tell them:

1. The CDC just reported that the rate of dating violence is the same for boys as for girls.
2. The UNH Family Research Laboratory, the first and most respected such research institute in the world, has studied dating violence in 19 different countries and found that the rate of dating violence perpetrated by girls against boys is actually higher than the rate of violence against girls.
3. In their May 17th article "Teen Dating Violence", the Contra Costa Times made the demonstrably false statement, "In male-female relationships, 95 percent of the victims are the girls."
4. In light of this, journalistic ethics requires that the Contra Costa Times print a retraction.

Send your letters to:

Email: letters-at-cctimes.com

Snail mail:
Editor

Contra Costa Newspapers

2640 Shadelands Drive

Walnut Creek, CA 94598
Phone: 925-943-8235

Date of RADAR Release: May 21, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/22/196206.shtml

First-Year-as-Coed-College Report Sounds Vaguely Familiar...

Matt · 22 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This is very much like the sort of thing written about whites-only colleges accepting black students back in the '50s and '60s. Here's an exercise: Replace all references to men/male/etc. with the corresponding reference to black ethnicity (black/African-American/etc.), and replace all women/female/etc. references with the corresponding reference to white ethnicity (white/Caucasian/etc.), and marvel at the result.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/22/1915236.shtml

Cancer in Boys and Floridated Water

Matt · 23 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Dave in CA writes "Floride causing an increase of bone cancer in boys?? Check out this report. Excerpt:

'(WASHINGTON, April 5) — Boys who drink water with levels of fluoride considered safe by federal guidelines are five times more likely to have a rare bone cancer than boys who drink unfluoridated water, according to a study by Harvard University scientists published in a peer-reviewed journal.

The study, led by Dr. Elise Bassin and published online today in Cancer Causes and Control, the official journal of the Harvard Center for Cancer Prevention, found a strong link between fluoridated drinking water and osteocarcoma, a rare and often fatal bone cancer, in boys. The study confirms studies by the National Institutes of Health (NIH) and the New Jersey health department that also found increased rates of bone cancer in boys who drank fluoridated tap water.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/23/0256249.shtml

Feminist Distortion about Pensions

Matt · 23 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "This article in the London Independent tells us what a hard time women have regarding state pension entitlement. It is the usual distorted feminist whining, "Boo Hoo. It's not fair". It does mention in passing "To qualify for the full pension, women need to work for 39 years (men, 44 years)", but strangely, this doesn't seem to be a problem for the sisterhood. Combine it with the fact that men die before women, and you can see who is really being discriminated against! Men work longer, pay more taxes, and then claim less back in pension because they die sooner. Women work less, pay less tax, and then get more back in pension becuase they live longer, yet it is women who are being treated unfairly. Unbelievable."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/23/1720202.shtml

The Revolution is Revolting

Matt · 23 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "A NY Times article from Sunday covered the 'revolution' of women entering male dominated fields/jobs.

On making men "understand the female perspective":

"'I sent one of my managers out to buy a pair of size 12 high-heeled pumps at Payless,' recalls Mary Sipes, the vehicle line director for full-size sport utility vehicles at General Motors. Then she had male engineers, dressed in skirts, heels and press-on fingernails, use the cars they designed."

Hat tip to Broadsheet for noticing the story."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/23/1725235.shtml

South Asian Women's Forum: Men are More Likely Than Women to Be Victims in Dating Violence

Matt · 24 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes: "Link here. Excerpt:

'A 32-nation study by University partners that about a third of dating partners had been violent, and most incidents of partner violence involve violence by both the man and woman, according to Murray Straus from the University of New Hampshire. The second largest category was couples where the female partner was the only one to carry about physical attacks, not the male partner.

Straus' new research also found that dominance by the female partner is even more closely related to violence by women than is male dominance. These results call into question the widely held belief that partner violence is primarily a male crime and that when women are violent it is self defense.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/24/1932239.shtml

15-YO Girl Makes False Accusation of Rape To Avoid Cab Fare

Matt · 25 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

RandomMan writes "A 15 year-old girl decided that given the climate of racism and misandry in western society, it would be easier to destroy an innocent cab driver's life than to pay the fare. Of course, the girl's clearly criminal acts of fraud and filing a false police report have not yet resulted in charges against her. Story here. From the article:

'None of the girl's allegations — that Otunba-Payne offered to waive the fare in exchange for a sex act and then tried to rape her in the back seat of his Metro Taxi cab before she managed to escape — turned out to be true, police said. The case is still under investigation, Moscato said, and the girl could be arrested herself for making a false report.'

How nice. An innocent cab driver is arrested without the slightest bit of evidence in order to further this girl's attempted fraud, but when there is clear evidence of wrong-doing and criminal behavior on the part of said girl, no charges are filed."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/25/0034224.shtml

Reader's Digest Prints Anti-male Story

Matt · 25 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

mens_issues writes "The Reader's Digest printed a demeaning and insulting anti-male story in its "Life in These United States.""

Click "Read more..." for more."'I helped a lost little girl by taking her to the store's service counter, and having them page her mother. I saw this as a chance to teach my 12-year old daughter, Kylie, a safety lesson.

"That girl did the right thing," I said. "Do you know why? Because she asked a woman for help, NOT A MAN."

Kylie looked at me mystified. "Why on earth would I ask a man for help if I was already lost?"

Submitted by STEPHANIE TAIT, Olathe, Colo. to Readers Digest.'

This is in the June 2006 issue on p. 197 at the bottom.

Let these jerks know what you think of their nasty little story, and the formerly decent magazine that became politically correct several years ago. Their link is here.

Steve

[Thanks to K9 at Stand Your Ground for bringing this to my attention."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/25/173204.shtml

Published Letter on Sexual Mutilation Victim

Matt · 25 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Boy Genteel writes "Letter found here (it's the second one on the page). Excerpt:

'Let's turn this around: If a man had ripped his wife's breasts off with his bare hands, would your writer have turned out a similar story? If a man mutilated his wife's vagina, would there be a double entendre on the cover?'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/25/176257.shtml

More Feminist Spin at the BBC News

Matt · 25 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "This story describes the seizure by police of a £4.4m haul of the drug GHB in Lothian, Scotland. The story states that the drug "In small doses...can have a relaxing effect, lowering inhibitions and making the user feel talkative and elated." The story seems to imply that the purpose of the drug is for rape, that only rapists would buy it, and that rape is some kind of lucrative industry. We could equally say that GHB is a robbery drug, or that alcohol is a rape drug. This story has nothing to do with rape. Thanks once again, BBC feminists."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/25/1716229.shtml

Brit Divorce Law Kills Marriage For Good

Matt · 30 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "Story here. Excerpt:

'ALL couples were advised last night to sign prenuptial agreements before getting married after a landmark ruling that gives wives much bigger divorce settlements... In the most important judgment on divorce for more than 20 years the law lords ruled that women who sacrifice careers to bring up children and look after the home should be compensated and may claim a share of their husband's future income.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/30/016204.shtml

Richard Doyle's new book -- "Save the Males"

Matt · 30 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Kyle Knutson writes "Save the Males

by Richard Doyle of Forest Lake, Minnesota

Available at http://www.lulu.com/content/279780

Prices: $6.95 Download, $16.45 Print

Description:

"Save the Males" presents a common sense approach to gender issues. The 236 page book is divided into three parts. In the first part, author Richard Doyle examines differential treatment in four areas - criminal justice, family law, employment and image - finding that men, as a class, are shortchanged nearly everywhere. Part II concerns itself with the search for causes and culprits. Among the culprits he finds legislators, judges, attorneys, politicians, feminists, the media and even men themselves. Part III, "Reality, Sensibility, Liberation," explores ideas for solutions to the problems identified in the first two parts.

The book is intended to restore men and traditional families to their formerly respected status by defeating the widespread discrimination against men throughout society. Warning: this book is incorrect politically. It has `attitude. A philosophic street-fighter, Doyle takes on highly sensitive issues such as feminism, homosexuality and SNAGS (sensitive new age guys)."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/30/2055224.shtml

Feminism Masquerading as Men's Studies

Thomas · 31 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A Men's Studies curriculum will soon be established at Nottingham Trent University in the UK. The program will offer degrees.

The course convener, Jim Wild, states, "...we need to apply what we have learned from feminists about men's abuse within the family, and apply it to day-to-day work."

The article goes on to state, "Wild is keen to emphasise the high levels of physical, emotional and sexual violence men inflict on women, children and one another. Students will explore why some men are abusive and how the structures that maintain this behaviour can be challenged. 'I want the course to contribute to ways in which statutory and voluntary agencies can assist men to break out of these patterns of behaviour and, as a consequence, protect women and children from such abuse.'"

The article makes no mention of violence by women against anyone.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/31/019239.shtml

Another Columnist Disillusioned by Reality

Matt · 31 May 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Hang in there, Mr. Starr. The power of cognitive dissonance knows no limits and soon, you too will be back to thinking of them as goddesses on Earth (just as many of them also do, apparently).

From
Why are women athletes in college choosing to mimic the worst behaviors of their male counterparts?:

Instead they appear to be mimicking the basest instincts of male athletes, embracing a pathetic notion that predicates acceptance on the willingness to share humiliating rituals. Indeed there is almost nothing that distinguishes this Northwestern affair from the seamy and demeaning antics of the Duke men's lacrosse team at their team fiesta—except, of course, that at Duke it escalated into allegations of criminal behavior.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/31/205238.shtml

NH Public Radio: Boys in Trouble?

Scott · 1 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This morning, New Hampshire Public Radio's "The Exchange" program covered the problems boys are facing in education. Interviewed are both Dr. Michael Thompson (author of Raising Cain: Protecting the Emotional Life of Boys) and Kathy Stevens, (co-author of The Minds of Boys: Saving Our Sons from Falling Behind in School and Life). The program was generally very male-positive and can be listened to on-line here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/05/31/2236250.shtml

Will there be a coin for prostate cancer victims?

Matt · 1 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "I got my first one these coins the other day in my change and couldn't help wondering if there will ever be a coin for prostate cancer victims. Obviously there never will be. I don't know the statistics but I'm sure prostate cancer kills a number on par with breast cancer. Not only is there this coin but the Canadian Breast Cancer Foundation also organizes a marathon in large cities every year that recieves a lot of press."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/01/1414221.shtml

German woman convicted over baby deaths

Matt · 1 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "A German woman has been found guilty of the manslaughter of eight of her newborn babies. A ninth baby also died, but too long ago to allow prosecution.
Sabine H, 40, was sentenced to 15 years in prison, the maximum jail term the Frankfurt court could hand down. Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/01/1417250.shtml

"Dateline" Desperately Needs Balance

Matt · 1 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

NBC could use some education on the topic of sexual predation. Take a look at Dateline's main page and see how they are dealing with the issue of Internet predators. In case anyone has been following this series, they are catching men who make illicit contact with supposed underage girls for sexual encounters, and then when they show up, they are getting interviewed by Dateline and then arrested by local police. This is a good thing and NBC should be commended for having the courage to go this far in addressing this sort of problem. Where NBC is failing is in how they are not reporting in a balanced fashion. Next week's episode promises to review the Mary Kay Letourneau case and all but makes it out to be a matter of love-denied-by-evil-society. The reality contrasts sharply with the perception.

Feel free to send them an email from their web form at the lower center portion of the series' home page.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/01/1434241.shtml

Not to overdo the issue of female predation, but...

Matt · 1 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

... it just never seems to end, really (though you wouldn't know it by watching Dateline): Woman jailed for hiding child groom. Excerpt:

DOUGLASVILLE, Georgia (AP) -- A 37-year-old woman who married one of her son's 15-year-old friends pleaded guilty to helping her young husband escape from state custody.

Lisa Clark was sentenced Wednesday to two years in jail and three years' probation after entering the plea to two counts of hindering the apprehension of a child.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/01/2025239.shtml

Scottish Lawyers to Refuse Sex Crime Cases

Matt · 2 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "If you get falsely accused in Scotland, you won't even get a lawyer to defend you, unless you are rich enough to pay for it yourself. Lawyers are planning to refuse sexual offence cases unless the government pays them more. Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/02/150202.shtml

UK Looks to Extend Divorce to the Unmarried

Matt · 2 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "More British divorce silliness. As many of us suspected, they're now trying to extend divorce to cover unmarried people who live together, as if there aren't enough ways for women to pick men's pockets. Wonder if they've figured out that this will mean no support for women who cohabitate after divorce, but avoid marriage to continue receiving alimony. Time to start packing up your stuff, guys."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/02/154239.shtml

I guess they won't be happy until men are categorically illiterate

Matt · 2 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

MANN regulars will want to have their barf bags handy for this one; it is getting syndicated all around the country and trumpets the 76-cents-on-the-dollar wage gap myth along with the "they're aren't enough female engineering professors in colleges!" complaint.

Meanwhile, along with the majority of all college degrees getting awarded to women in every category (i.e.: liberal arts, engineering, and the physical sciences), and at the current rate of implosion, you will be hard-pressed to find a 25-year-old college-educated American man by the year 2020. Only at the bottom of the article does it mention the deteriorating educational condition of men in some way as to make it sound undesirable. [I would post the article author's e-mail address but I wasn't able to locate it on-line. If anyone can find it, please post it.]

In fact the whole report is generally bleak, with US schools consistently underperfoming Asian and some European countries, particularly in math and science.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/02/1811256.shtml

RIT Student Fights Sexual Assault Accusation

Matt · 3 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Check out this story - RIT Student Fights Sexual Assault Accusation. Excerpt:

'Taylor and his family prepared to launch an aggressive defense.

Taylor's lawyers arranged a polygraph test. He passed.
...

The report says the accuser has a history of making false allegations.

The private investigator visited the woman's hometown. He discovered a restraining order she took out four years earlier against a high school classmate. The investigator tracked down the boy, who said she accused him of raping her and threatening her with a knife. The boy said the case was dropped after two of her friends told police she admitted making the story up. The boy was never arrested.

...

"We allow hearsay in our process," said Rob Eckhart, Assistant Director for Student Conduct. "It's not a criminal process. I want to make it very clear it's not criminal. This is RIT's student conduct process and when we make a decision, it's based on what's most likely to have happened."'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/03/1548202.shtml

Hillary in 2008?!

Matt · 4 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bull writes "Carey Roberts' article, "The day the matriarchy came to power," summarizes key events during what he calls the "Clinton Co-Presidency" that firmly entrenched feminists in key positions of power. Hillary may have a shot at the presidency in 2008. Roberts' article gives a good feel for what one might expect with her at the helm. It would be a sad day for Men's Activism should she be elected! Excerpt:

"It was a bloodless coup. It happened under the penumbra of the law. In fact chief justice William Rehnquist presided at the event. The date was January 20, 1993." Click here to read more."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/04/168225.shtml

DV article for deconstruction

Matt · 4 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Here's one that made the front page of Fox. As far as I can tell it only contains one indirect reference. The reference, in my mind, is questionable.

Should be a good article for deconstruction.

BK"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/04/1610219.shtml

New Men's Activism Website

Matt · 4 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "Check out Men's Links (http://www.mens-links.net), a new men's activism site. The blurb claims "This site was designed as a resource for men's rights activists. The idea is to gather useful men's activism links into single web portal. We hope to keep adding to the content, and any suggestions for new links would be much appreciated." Let's see if we can find them some. Good luck to them."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/04/1956214.shtml

Judge: Women's fitness club must open to men

Matt · 5 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Judge rules SR women's fitness club must open to men

Excerpt:

'In a case that could have repercussions for single-sex fitness clubs, a Sonoma County judge has ordered a Santa Rosa women's health club to open its doors to men.

Judge Knoel Owen said Body Central must provide showers and lockers for men and stop advertising itself as a women-only health club.

He ruled in favor of the state Department of Fair Employment and Housing, which sued Body Central last year for allegedly violating California's anti-discrimination law.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/05/1958207.shtml

Gender wage gap myth trumps boys educational crisis

Matt · 6 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "I stumbled across this article from a couple months ago, its a double whammy:

'Improving pay for women should be a higher priority than trying to figure out why there is a gender gap between students' performance, some women's advocates say.'

It is so irresponsible for organizations/media to report the 76 cents per dollar gender wage gap myth without breaking down the numbers in any way."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/06/1548246.shtml

More Discrimination from the British Health system

Matt · 7 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

zerostress writes "From Angry Harry, here is another story about how the British National Health is discriminating against men by refusing to pay for an alternative to the usual prostate cancer treatment. Business as usual for the NHS, I guess."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/07/190242.shtml

Ann Coulter's New Book Disses Feminism

Matt · 8 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "Ann Coulter is hawking her new book all over the mediasphere ... Godless: The Church of Liberalism, includes a few slams of feminism. This one for example ---

"Women are no different from men, but we need a library of laws and codes to protect women from sexual harassment. As Chesterson said, where we once had a few big rules, now we need an encyclopedia of little rules."

But then, you also have to deal with her main premise --- 'Liberals can believe what they want to believe, but let us not flinch from identifying liberalism as the opposition party to God.'

And as expected, on the cover of her new book, Ann is slinky skinny in a black designer outfit... posing as a chick who doesn't want to be objectified!

She's really, really into her own irony!

The story has something for everybody, no matter your MRA politics."

Ed. note: Spotted this piece reporting the nastiness between Coulter and Hillary Clinton, and thought our MANN regulars would get a real kick, so I have included it.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/07/229247.shtml

Girls "Pressured" into Sex

Matt · 8 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Celarnor writes "I stumbled across this article earlier today. Naturally, the young women aren't 'having sex because they want to', but they are doing it 'because they felt their boyfriend would get angry'.

The article, of course, contains the obligatory 'boys bad, women helpless' subtext that is typically seen here. From the article: "That means [. . .] boys to understand what constitutes pressure.", and "The importance of educating boys [. . .] is often the untalked about part.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/07/224245.shtml

Police Say Woman Had Sex With Two Underage Boys

Matt · 9 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Here we go again, another woman busted for having sex with underaged boys. Peggy Bick, 30, a Portsmouth, NH resident has been arrested and held on $50,000 bond for allegedly having sex with two and possibly more underage boys. The really sad part about this news report is the nonchalant attitude presented by the police and reporters. Let me ask you, what if a thirty year old man got several teenage girls drunk and then proceeded to have sex with them all, what would the the news report would have sounded like then? Just some food for thought the next time some feminut starts howling about how only women can be victims of sexual assault."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/09/0133237.shtml

Fox propagates human trafficking distortions

Matt · 9 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Lis Wiehl is cranking these out rather quickly. The last article she did had only one indirect reference through a feminist page that featured the SCUM manifesto. These articles are beginning to smell like a number of the issues C. H. Sommers destroyed. Unfortunately, it may be, that truth is just getting its boots on in the time it takes a lie to travel around the world."

Click "Read more..." for more."I note several red flags. She says:

"The Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) says human trafficking is the third largest criminal industry in the world, right behind drugs and gun smuggling. Sex traffickers lure hundreds of thousands of desperate girls from overseas with the promise of a new life, only to enslave them once they've arrived."

Notice the sleight of hand here. HUMAN trafficking is the third largest criminal industry, but in the next sentence it becomes 'Sex traffickers'. I suspect there's a big difference.

I suspect that what is happening on our southern border right now is classified as human trafficking. If this is, indeed, what is being referred to in this article, blaming U.S. citizens as a general class, and in particular men, for these problems would be one of the lowest feminist tricks yet.

Does anyone have any data on this? She certainly doesn't reference any, apart from several bills. (We know what happened with VAWA.)"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/09/213210.shtml

Duke case: Second stripper called allegations a 'crock'

Matt · 9 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Lawyers for the defense of the Duke lacrosse players made public a police report indicating the Kim Roberts, the second stripper at the now infamous party, claimed that the accuser's story was a 'crock' and the two were together the ENTIRE time while at the party. Assuming it holds up in court, this is the silver bullet, folks. In essence, what the defense now has is a witness that completely exonerates the defense. It's over and now is the time for the real justice to begin. We must strike while the iron is hot. MRAs must call for strict punishment of the accuser as well as new laws that protect men from this sort of slander in the future."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/09/218234.shtml

Use GoodSearch.com to support DAHMW

Matt · 10 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original mens_issues writes "Jan Brown at DAHMW sent me this regarding GoodSearch - a search engine powered by Yahoo! which donates money to the charity of your choice each time you use it. While it's only 1 cent for each use, this could add up to hundreds of dollars a year for the Domestic Abuse Helpline for Men and Women if enough MRAs use it. Remember that they are also trying to get a shelter for men up and running, so every bit helps.

Steve"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/10/1522236.shtml

Abusive wife files DV case against husband

Matt · 10 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "In Calcutta, India: a woman physically assaults her husband, and files a DV case against him and gets him arrested! Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/10/1543243.shtml

Female Forcible-Rapist of Boy Draws Six Months of Jail

Matt · 10 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A child-rape crime covered by a mere news brief mentioned here on MANN a month ago about a woman in Rochester, NY who reportedly raped a boy at knifepoint, actually gets a full article today! The confessed child-forcible-rapist draws a whole six moths in jail plus 10 years of probation on a plea bargain. Ostensible excuse for not taking the case to trial: "it's too hard to prove". Would the same excuse be used were the sexes reversed? DOUBT IT! Story here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/10/192230.shtml

UK: MPs urge family court 'openness'

Matt · 12 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "'The UK government is being urged by MPs to open up family court proceedings as a way of restoring confidence in decisions on adoption, custody and contact with children'. MRAs are beginning to have some effect, but I think 'openness' is not enough - we need a just, unbiased system. Story here."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/12/022244.shtml

Female Sex-Slaver in Australia Sentenced

Matt · 12 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bulldogo.1 writes "Funny isn't it? The first person jailed in Australia for having sex slaves is a woman.
Re a story on MANN earlier about the misleading report that sex slavery is rampant in America: well, we get the same crap here. And we also get the feminist garbage that it is only men and the patriarchy to blame."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/12/1524211.shtml

Father's Day Activism 2006 Begins

Matt · 12 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

MR writes "At the crack of dawn, before the sun even peeked over the horizon, NCFMLA activists took it to the streets of Los Angeles for Day 1 of "Father's Day" week, 2006, protests. Big Truck Sign

Yes, boys and girls in the land of stretch Hummers and tropical plants it's difficult to be noticed amidst all the glitter and glamour, but a humble attempt is still worth the effort if one Dad can be encouraged, or one misandrist judge's mind enlightened. Some say it will be a cold day in L.A. (it very rarely freezes in L.A.) before Dads ever see justice in family courts, but I say all the more reason to publicly call attention to their plight in prominent protest(s). Let the Father's Day protests 2006 begin, and may the plight of Dads truly become a front burner issue this Father's Day. "Happy Father's Day week," to one and all. Stay tuned for Day 2..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/12/1527252.shtml

Woman Indicted for Murder of Preacher Husband

Matt · 12 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Wonder what the spin will be for this one?

The McNairy County grand jury in Selmer, Tennessee, named Mary Winkler, 32, in an indictment alleging "premeditated murder."

Winkler has been in custody since the day after the March 22 slaying of her husband, Matthew Winkler, who was 31 and the popular minister at First Street Church of Christ in Selmer. The community is about 80 miles east of Memphis.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/12/2025203.shtml

'UK Schools too feminized for boys' says academic

Matt · 13 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "Boys are being failed by schools because lessons have become too "feminised" in recent years says Dr Tony Sewell, a leading academic. He calls for more male teachers, and more competitiveness, and more exciting lessons. We need more like him."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/13/1837246.shtml

Divorcing Couple Warring Over Son's Circumcision

Matt · 14 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "In a really extreme case of how ugly a divorce litigation can get, check out this article describing how a divorcing couple are using the threat of circumcizing their 8 year-old son's penis as part of the psychotic Family Court warfare. The mom's lawyer (female) wants the foreskin badly. The dad's lawyers (female and male) want it preserved. This kid must be about ready to become a runaway ...
See Dad sues to block son's circumcision."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/14/0046226.shtml

Where is Masculinity Headed?

Matt · 14 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Dave in CA writes "Where are men (our behaviors, beliefs, etc.) headed? Read this recent article and decide for yourself. Excerpt:

'We are now witnessing the corruption of the masculine ideal into absolute violence and amorality. This phenomenon has developed over time, as manhood and the role of men in the home and in the society have been undermined by social, legal, economic, and ideological forces.

'We now know that boys are doing more poorly in school than girls and that young women now outnumber young men on college campuses. The vast majority of violent crimes are committed by young men, and young males drive the statistics in virtually every form of antisocial behavior. The absence of strong male role models for boys and young men to respect and emulate — especially fathers — is surely the largest contributing factor to the rise in the social pathologies and antisocial behaviors.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/14/0051257.shtml

Family Court Judge Shot in Reno

Matt · 14 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "A family court judge was shot in Reno yesterday. Judge Chuck Weller was shot through a window in his office at the Mills B. Lane Justice Center. He was wounded in the chest and taken to the local hospital in serious condition. He has survived, so far. Who wants to bet this was the result of yet another father who was railroaded by the family court system? When the police do catch the suspect involved my guess his biography will be one all too familiar fathers rights advocates."

Ed. note: Looks like indeed that may be the case; the main suspect fits that description. Follow-up is here.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/14/0112207.shtml

Humor: "Things a Man Should Know: About Fatherhood"

Matt · 14 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

While there are a couple items in here MRAs may find not-so-funny, all in all, this is pretty good. Surprisingly, it's found on MSN, too.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/14/0235225.shtml

Does marriage matter to the nuturing of children?

Matt · 14 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Does marriage matter to the nuturing of children? Yes - very clearly, according to this study. More than cohabitating, and more than step-parenting. Married Dads, in the home, make the biggest difference in the outcome of children."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/14/155245.shtml

How to be a well man

Matt · 14 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "To mark Men's Health Week, Dr Sabreena Malik explains the things that every male should know."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/14/156248.shtml

Drive to bring down male suicides

Matt · 15 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "Suicide is the most common cause of death among men under 35. If we are all basking in our Patriarchal power, why are so many of us killing ourselves?"

Ed. note: The AFSP holds suicide prevention walk-a-thons that are done at night. These walk-a-thons however require a minimum of $1000 in pledges from sponsors for each walker and an entrance fee, sort of like the AIDS rides that were in the news a lot last year (there was big controversy too over the very high percentage of the amount raised going to "overhead costs"). I don't know anything about AFSP or how well they use their donations; I am just mentioning that it exists and there does seem to be a national awareness campaign, at least here in the U.S., regarding suicide-- though it doesn't seem to be too well-known nor mention particularly the fact of the much-higher percentage of males who commit suicide.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/15/0138220.shtml

National Post Stands Up for Men

Matt · 15 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AFG writes "Canada's National Post, one of the country's largest daily newspapers, has devoted an entire page to men's rights in its 'Issues & Ideas' editorial section. One article, by Barbera Kay, is called Welcome to the Matriarchy; the other, by Prof. Don Dutton (author of Rethinking Domestic Violence) is called Domestic Violence isn't One-sided. These articles appear under the header 'Stacking the Deck Against Men.'

Note: The Post has featured many anti-feminist editorials in the past, and next week, Barbara Kay will continue the assault by writing about a family court system that exiles 'disenfranchised fathers to a Kafkaesque non-custodial limbo.'"

Ed. note: Paid registration is required to read most of the content.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/15/0147220.shtml

Anti-Husband Cadillac SUV Commercial

Matt · 15 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

mens_issues writes "I was watching the news this afternoon, when a commercial for the Cadillac SRX Crossover came on. It showed a few women returning from a vacation together. One of them commented on how nice it was to have a vacation with 'No stress,' and then all of them said 'No husband!' in unison. As they got out of their SUV in an upper middle class residential neighborhood, one of them then said 'Back to reality!'"

Click "Read more..." for more."The last comment was an obvious reference to the husbands whose very existence must cause them such unbearable stress. Oh, those poor oppressed women who had to get away from their husbands in a $37,000 SUV for a vacation. (I wonder who paid for it.)

Here is a link to the homepage of this overpriced gas guzzler.

There is a 'Contact Us' link at the bottom of the page.

Yeah, I know that not all of us regularly buy $37,000 SUVs, but they need to hear from us anyway.

Steve"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/15/0153256.shtml

F4J is now in the USA: Rally for Equal Parenting - Sat. June 17, 2006

Matt · 15 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

F4J is now in the USA!

Rally for Equal Parenting

Saturday June 17th, 11:00 am to 1:00 pm

Ohio Statehouse, downtown Columbus (Map here)

Plan to attend!

Click "Read more..." for more.Saturday, June 17th, Fathers-4-Justice USA will make their national launch known in honor of Father's Day at the Statehouse steps in Columbus, Ohio!

A motorcycle rally will begin the event starting at The Iron Pony leaving at 10:00 AM and the rally to start at 11:00 AM. It is a family-friendly event with Super Heroes, music, chanting, and speakers from around the USA. Knight's Radio will be there and events for the kids will be featured. It is for all the children, parents, grandparents and others who have been abused by our system.

For more information go to http://www.f4j.us/ and also view the ad (Apple Quicktime required to view) that is running all over Ohio. All donations are welcome even if someone is unable to come as they are tax deductible. F4J-USA is an all-volunteer group.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/15/0216204.shtml

Elder Abuse & Men's Rights Issues

Matt · 15 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Today (15th June), the First Elder Abuse Awareness Day is being observed. I think this is related to men's rights because it clearly shows that DV is NOT a gender issue. Here (.pdf file) is a World Health Organization fact sheet (prepared in 2002) which clearly states 'elder men are at risk of abuse in about the same proportion as elder women'."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/15/080227.shtml

Misandry alive and well in Hollywood: "My Super ex-Girlfriend"

Matt · 15 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bandersnatch writes "One of the trailers playing on all the latest films is for a movie called My Super Ex-Girlfriend."

Click "read more..." for more."Basically, this guy meets a girl and goes out with her a few times, they have sex, and he figures out that she's crazy and extremely needy. He breaks up with her. Then he finds out that she is actually a superhero ("G-Girl"). She uses her super strength and flight powers to make his life a living hell. Examples: she takes his car, flies to a high spot and throws it down onto the street in front of him. She appears in front of him out of nowhere, grabs him by the throat, and lifts him off the ground. While he's lying in bed with his new girlfriend, she flies up, looks in the window, and hurls a giant shark into the room onto the bed. The finale is when they are having dinner together (apparently they are on a date again). She leans close to him and whispers 'I had a feeling you'd realize your mistake and come back to me. That's why I didn't kill you.'

Can you even IMAGINE Hollywood making a movie like this where a "superman"-type guy gets dumped by a girl and proceeds to violently assault her, destroy her property, and threaten her with death? And this is the type of shite that passes for COMEDY now? Just another propaganda piece telling women that it's OK to beat up men if they do something the woman doesn't like. No wonder we've got women like Clara Harris driving over men with SUVs!

Remember guys, if a woman feels wronged in her mind that gives her a license to pursue unlimited revenge with impunity on you!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/15/086240.shtml

Rape rumour sparked attack, teen boy set on fire

Matt · 15 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bandersnatch writes "From Nine MSN, A teenager was doused with kerosene and set alight in a "vigilante" attack sparked by false rumours he was a rapist, a Melbourne court was told. Prosecutor Gavin Silbert told the County Court there was an unsubstantiated rumour circulating amongst a group of teens who congregated at Greensborough Plaza that 19-year-old James Merrett had raped a girl and cheated on his girlfriend. The girlfriend then made it known she wanted retribution, telling one man: "He's gotta be bashed. He cheated on me." -- Wow, she sounds like our superhero ex-girlfriend."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/15/088216.shtml

Mother made cash demand after alleged sex abuse of daughters

Matt · 15 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "A businessman is on trial accused of abusing two girls more than 25 years ago. It is alleged that the mother did not report the supposed abuse to the police but instead tried to blackmail him for £100,000 per girl. He refused and chose to got court instead - sounds like he believes himself to be innocent. It will be interesting to see how this one turns out. If he is acquitted maybe we will see the mother on trial for blackmail."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/15/1558221.shtml

More Details on Recent Circumcision Court Fight

Matt · 15 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Recently reported here on MANN, this made it to cnn.com. While it has a few more details of the case and represents broader exposure, it doesn't discuss the case against circumcision and of course, just has to throw religion into the mix as well.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/15/1642223.shtml

Double standard for sex offenders discussed in MSM

Matt · 15 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Finally some progress in seeing that women do get off easier than men do in the courts."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/15/2134245.shtml

United Equal Parenting Conference - London - Saturday, June 17

Matt · 16 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Raymond Cuttill writes "Come and help plan the way forward at the United Equal Parenting Conference – The Way Forward, this Saturday, June 17th 10:00 AM at the Central Hall Westminster, London (opposite Westminster Abbey and close to Parliament).

Hear from authors Barry Worrall ("Without Authority") and Neil Lyndon ("No More Sex War"), hear from Philip A. Else, Equal Parenting Alliance and Mike Kelly, Real Fathers For Justice (hopefully with video of the protest at Tony Blair's house on Friday) and others."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/16/0251204.shtml

Polk guilty of killing therapist husband

Matt · 17 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bull writes "Woman acted as her own attorney during four-month trial

Interestingly enough, even though she came across as delusional, she was allowed to represent herself and ultimately found guilty. If she appeals, and gets backing from a feminist organization, will the verict probably be overturned?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/17/0358249.shtml

'Focus on the Family' Diminishes Dads

Matt · 17 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

mens_issues writes "Just in time for Father's Day, Focus on the Family (with James Dobson) has aired a two-part series about the importance of involved fathers. Unfortunately, the two-part series takes the view that it is fathers who are abdicating their responsibility to their families, while mothers are taken for granted."

Click "Read more..." for more."The speaker was Josh McDowell, who is the author of 'More than a Carpenter' which is a book that I read that made a compelling case for Christianity. This makes writing this all the more difficult, as I had respected McDowell, except for what I heard here.

While I agree about the importance of involved fathers, it appears that McDowell may not realize the extent to which fathers are pushed away from their families by separation and divorce, most often initiated by their wives. Or the extent to which fathers are unable to spend as much time with their children as they would like as they spend a lot of time at work supporting their families financially while the the mother is able to stay home with the children.

Finally, to make matters worse, at one point James Dobson said "The biggest problem in this country is renegade males - men not doing their jobs."

If you want to send a comment to Focus on the Family, try this link (please try to be polite, infuriating as this is).

The homepage for Focus on the Family is http://www.family.org/"

Ed. note: This submission posted without review or assessment of the content to which the submitter is referring. Therefore, before taking action to contact the author of the content, I suggest you listen to it yourself before making any judgments.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/17/049222.shtml

BBC: Study shows Women Approve of Female-on-Male Violence

Matt · 19 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "The BBC reports here that Professor Murray Strauss' latest research in Europe shows that a large percentage of women believe that it is acceptable for them to hit their male partners. He says 'The bottom line is that we need make the same "big deal" about violence by women as we do about men who behave violently.'

This study is due to be published in the European Journal of Criminology. It is unfortunate then that this journal's editor found the results 'surprising' and that 'the number of women who admit to assaulting men is interesting as it's well known that men are more violent than woman.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/19/0137201.shtml

"The Weaker Sex"

Matt · 19 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

RandomMan writes "Despite the insulting title - consider what would happen to a male columnist using that phrase to describe women - this piece by a female medical columnist is very refreshing, especially on Father's Day. It's a pleasant departure from the NY Times old habit of running a 'women's health' pull-out section on Fathers Day, as they have in the past.

An astonishing note from the article: the author claims that studying diseases that affect both genders in men only was 'sexist', and she describes the current focus on women first and women only in healthcare as something along the lines of 'atonement', but this is the first time I've heard a female opine that only studying diseases that affect women while neglecting men entirely is 'sexist' as well.

If this continues, men might actually start to matter one day. I'm not holding my breath, but it's refreshing, nonetheless."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/19/0150227.shtml

F4J-UK Makes the News Again - in Style!

Matt · 19 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Huzzah to F4J for their latest attempt to draw attention to the plight of fathers. Great work, lads!!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/19/0156245.shtml

Woman jailed for infecting lover with HIV

Matt · 19 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "A London woman has been jailed for 32 months for deliberately infecting her male partner with HIV. Somehow, I think a man would have got longer."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/19/1625227.shtml

RADAR Alert: Mark Your Calendar, Hold the Date: June 26!

Matt · 19 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Monday, June 26, 2006. That's the day that 40 organizations around the country will launch an unprecedented effort to educate candidates how the Violence Against Women Act tramples on people's civil rights and destroys families.

The campaign theme is "Truth and Consequences: 2006 Elections." The purpose of the campaign is to educate candidates involved in the 2006 elections about the truth of domestic violence, and the consequences of VAWA on families and children.

Click "Read more..." for more.

Mark Your Calendar, Hold the Date: June 26!

The 40 participating groups have a broad range of missions, including promoting children's rights, family stability, shared parenting, victim advocacy, and media accuracy. These groups have signed a three-point Resolution Regarding the Violence Against Women Act: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Resolution.pdf

This is what some of these groups are saying about the campaign:

- "Susan Faludi once wrote, 'Men have no clearly-defined enemy who is oppressing them.' Well, thanks to VAWA, now they do." – Richard L. Davis, Family Nonviolence, Inc. (Massachusetts)
- "Our campaign to end the discrimination by VAWA is a 'circling of the wagons' to defend traditional American values." – Paul Clements, DADD-NH
- "For two decades I have struggled against the anti-father bias in court. It is a blessing to be a part of this movement." – Mike East, Fathers Asking To Have Equal Rights (Kentucky)
- "A system without redress is tyranny, and those who do nothing about it have abnegated their freedom and acquiesced to slavery." . Terri Lynn Tersak, True Equality Network (North Carolina)
- "You can blow out a flame, but our solidarity is becoming an inferno." – Alan Rusmisel, Alabama Coalition for Fathers and Children
- "Restraining order abuse has skyrocketed since passage of VAWA. TABS stands 100% behind this effort to expose the truth how domestic violence laws have gone too far." – Lisa Scott, TABS: Taking Action against Bias in the System (Washington)

During the course of the campaign, we will be calling on people around the country to meet with candidates in all 470 national races (33 in the Senate, 437 in the House of Representatives). We will request that immediately after the November 7 elections, the newly-elected official call for Congressional hearings to investigate VAWA abuse.

The first step of the campaign will be for people to contact the candidate's Scheduler and request to set up a meeting in August. We will explain the details in next week's Alert.

For now we encourage people to sign up to receive E-lerts which will be issued on a weekly basis throughout the Campaign. Go to http://www.mediaradar.org/ and enter your e-mail address in the box in the left-hand column.

Stay tuned!

Date of RADAR Release: June 19, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/19/1940205.shtml

New Study Confirms Males Outperform Females in Engineering-Related Tasks

Matt · 20 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original oregon dad writes "Here is another study that clearly shows that boys outperform girls in Math, Chemistry, and Physics.

These are the foundation courses for Engineering degrees and this study points out (AGAIN!!) why Men perform better in that function."

Ed. note: What is really interesting about this report is that more women then men are now graduating with engineering degrees from universities and colleges. So why is it that men are graduating at a lesser rate in not just these fields but generally while as boys taking AP tests just a few years before, they are generally scoring higher? Very strange indeed.

College is filled with plenty of opportunities for distraction as well as, we know, special scholarships and support programs for women who want to go into engineering and the sciences. Perhaps between these two forces, the net result is what we see today: fewer men graduating with engineering degrees than women, and fewer men attending/graduating from college overall-- with the increasing tendency of this trend showing no signs of slowing.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/20/227253.shtml

Woman Commits Suicide-- Husband Blamed and Arrested

Matt · 21 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Victor Han, 34, of Staten Island has been charged with promoting a suicide attempt after his WIFE killed herself by driving off a cliff in New York. That's right folks. Wifey killed herself and now the husband is responsible for her actions. Try getting your mind around that idea, much less the fact that he's been arrested. Furthermore, Victor Han did nothing more than step out of his vehicle to take some pictures when she rolled up all the windows, locked all the doors, and drove his van off a cliff WITH HER TWO KIDS IN THE CAR. She died, they lived. The man is to blame of course for her voluntary actions and will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. When are we as a society going to start holding women accountable for their actions? When will we stop blaming and prosecuting men for the poor choices that women make? I'll tell you when, the time is now..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/20/2210242.shtml

Kentucky Supreme Court Upholds Paternity Fraud Finding

Matt · 21 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original oregon dad writes "Finally - a very small measure of justice.

Search on "Kentucky Supreme Court" on the page to read the story."

Ed. note: Great site for those interested in tracking developments in "family law". Definitely bookmarkable!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/21/1433239.shtml

China: Woman Kills Husband with Sword

Matt · 21 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Tirryb writes "For those who doubt woman are as abusive as men... This report states that this Chinese woman 'accidentally' killed her husband with a sword, when he refused to make her dinner.

Apparently she had often held her husband at the end of her sword to force him to do her bidding. She's an expert swordswoman who had been using it since she was young. And, yet again, just what do we think would happen to a man who'd killed his wife with a sword after a lifetime of threatening her to be his slave..?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/21/1515237.shtml

Update on "Murdering Grannies" Story

Matt · 21 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Referring to this story reported on MANN, cnn.com has an update here.

Police say they have new evidence linking two elderly women to the death of a second homeless man on whom they had taken out an insurance policy.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/21/1521229.shtml

Canada: Fault Surrepititiously Returned to Alimony Determination

Matt · 21 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bandersnatch writes "From the Globe and Mail: A Vancouver woman will receive monthly support payments from the ex-husband who cheated on her because the emotional toll of his conduct prevented her returning to the workplace, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled Wednesday morning. A 7-0 majority emphasized that their ruling it not intended to return the concept of fault to divorce law. They instead expressed confidence that the emotional consequences of marital misconduct can be considered in spousal support cases without actually slipping 'fault' back into the Divorce Act. The Court awarded Sherry Leskun a continuation of her $2,200 monthly payments, based on the harm that Mr. Leskun's philandering caused her as well as the particular difficulty that a woman of her age has returning to full employment."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/21/2145244.shtml

India: Hope for male prisoners

Matt · 22 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Friday, a new law comes into effect. Under this law, a prisoner can claim bail as a matter of right if he/she has been under detention for more than half the prescribed period of imprisonment.

There were more than 217,000 undertrials in Indian jails (2003), 96.5% of whom were male. See http://ncrb.nic.in/PS-2003.pdf.

With this law, about 50,000 inmates are expected to be set free. Most of them will be male since males typically spend more time in jail as undertrials."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/22/168237.shtml

Article on False Allegations of Sexual Harassment in Prominent Psychology Journal

Matt · 22 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "I thought this might be of interest. It is a new research article entitled "Pathways to false allegations of sexual harassment" in the 'Journal of Investigative Psychology and Offender Profiling', vol. 3, 1, pp.47-74. Regards."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/22/2155240.shtml

L.A.-Local Editor Admits Error re DV stats, Covers NCFM

Matt · 22 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes "Not long ago the Mountain Valley News, a weekly newspaper covering about ten cities Los Angeles County, printed a story on a battered women's shelter and told the usual femi-fibs about domestic violence.

NCFM-LA wrote the editor a letter refuting the lies. The editor not only printed it but, the following week, ran a surprisingly-positive story on NCFM-LA and discrimination against men. The actual article is here (.pdf file) , and the text is also linked to NCFM-LA's website here.

Thank you letters can be sent to the editor at editor-at-mvnnews.com."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/22/220250.shtml

Court opens employers to more retaliation suits

Matt · 23 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Return of the King writes "The U.S. Supreme Court made it easier on Thursday for an employer to be held liable for money damages when a worker has been 'retaliated' against after a discrimination complaint.

This ruling means that anytime a woman alleges any type of harassment, then ANY action afterward by the company - even years later (i.e. if she fails to show up for work and is penalized, if her job responsibilities EVER change, if her title changes, if she used to file in cabinet A and now files in cabinet B ...ANYTHING... then she is now a victim of the employer and can sue for damages).

It should be of no surprise that harassment cases are the fastest growing lawsuits currently in the U.S. The court ruled workers can collect damages even if the retaliation did not involve a firing or lost wages (?!)"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/22/226245.shtml

Wife gets life for 'dance' murder

Matt · 23 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "A woman shot her husband through the heart with a shotgun, and claimed that it went off accidentally while she was doing an erotic dance to please him. The jury didn't believe her. Story here, but it is not described as a domestic violence death."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/23/1619228.shtml

Father has parental rights terminated after mother lied

Matt · 23 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Michael_NC writes "A court rules against the father for not filing an affidavit to legimate a child after the mother lied to him and told him she had a miscarriage. He had previously did all he could for the mother and upcoming child until the lie.

'RALEIGH - A biological father should lose his parental rights because he did not establish himself as a caregiver, even though the mother deceived the man by claiming she had a miscarriage, the state Court of Appeals ruled Tuesday.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/23/1622222.shtml

National Post Stands Up for Men, Once Again

Matt · 24 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AFG writes "Continuing her assault on radical feminism and the family courts, the National Post's Barbara Kay writes about how it is men who suffer the most after divorce due to feminist ideology influencing Canada's judicial and political circles. Last week, Kay was one of two writers who lambasted the one-sided view of domestic violence in Canada (among other gender related issues), and next week, she will offer solutions to fix the problem. Excerpt:

'In fact, non-custodial fathers' loss of their children causes them fathomless anguish. Herein lies a paradox: We know that fatherlessness is the single biggest predictor of criminality for boys, and low self-esteem for girls, leading to a variety of social failures. Nevertheless, no significant swell of political will has yet materialized to bring more balance into post-separation childcare.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/24/0519201.shtml

Coming Soon to a City Near You: Women-Only Subway Cars!

Matt · 24 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

They're not just for Tokyo anymore! This article is a lovely entree into establishing them right here in America.

Maybe they'll add entire women-only subway lines, too. They'll hit all the major stops plus new ones at all the women-only gyms, banks, spas, etc. that are both already here and on the way!

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/24/1732236.shtml

Female molester fugitive considered "missing"

Matt · 24 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Return of the King writes "A female youth counselor vanishes after allegations that she was having a relationship with a minor she met at a school where she worked - and the newspaper and police call HER missing and have not brought charges against her. She has been spotted thousands of miles away from her home state with the young male student. Can you imagine what would happen if the genders were reversed? The whole nation would be hearing about it every minute of the day. This woman has received a highly sympathetic handling of her crimes. It is time to dismantle the feminist poisoning of this nation's police. Excerpt:

'At least two witnesses reported seeing 8-year-old Brennan Malone with his mother, Jennifer Malone, and 16-year-old Christopher Cole.

Police Chief Gwen Deurell said Saturday she believes these are two solid leads that place them in the Tampa area late Friday...

...

Police this week began a nationwide search for Brennan, his mother, 32, and Cole, the teenage boy she is believed to be involved with.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/24/2048259.shtml

Social Isolation, Depression

Matt · 24 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A topic recently discussed in a syndicated story is the increasing social isolation that typifies living in "modern society." It leads to problems all by itself and exacerbates existing problems, most notably those that can be addressed at least in part by the company of others (for example, depression).

Isolation and depression impact men in particular ways and for a variety of reasons. So, be on the look out for the effects of isolation and depression and if you spot it in yourself, do something about it: get help, get more social, whatever you need to do. Happy men are healthier men! Some related news/sites:

1. Men Get Angry, Not Sad
2. Maledepression.com
3. www.depression.org Donates 15k on Behalf of Merrill, Duncan Honored
4. Clinical Depression A Hidden Disease
    - Statement from Doug Duncan on Pulling Out From Gubanatorial Race

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/24/215247.shtml

NOW Opposes Michigan Approval of Single-Sex School

Matt · 25 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "In yet another stunning illogical about-face, NOW argues that single-sex schools cannot be allowed. The Michigan Senate has passed a bill to allow single-sex schools, but Kim Gandy proclaims – "We strongly oppose these bills because the separation of boys and girls, and the underlying (and false) assumption that girls and boys are so different that they shouldn't even be educated together, introduces harmful gender stereotypes into public education... Contrary to what supporters are saying, research does not show that gender is an accurate, consistent, or even useful determinant of educational needs." Gosh, did I misinterpret the last twenty years of the "girl's educational crisis" that was at the forefront of feminism's protests? And, now that 57% of college students are female, did I miss something else in the alleged "harmful gender stereotypes?" NOW is a priceless exemplar of feminist integrity."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/25/1427256.shtml

Andrea Yates Gets Second Trial, Chance

Matt · 26 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Looks like Andrea Yates will get her second go at pleading insanity due to postpartum depression. Another classic example of women using their femaleness as an excuse for their criminal behavior. They wouldn't do it if men weren't so gullible as to buy this bunk.

'(CourtTV) -- For the second time since Andrea Yates drowned her five children in a bathtub, her lawyers will attempt to convince a jury she was legally insane when she did the unthinkable.

With its guilty verdict in 2002, a jury in Houston, Texas, seemed to reject defense arguments that a history of mental illness compounded by postpartum depression drove Yates to drown four sons and a daughter, ages six months to seven years.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/26/186225.shtml

Oh, Danica... why did you?

Matt · 26 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

You know, I wasn't sure whether to post this link or not. She is a great pro IRL driver; there is no reason at all for her to start peddling her femaleness/looks as a commodity in this fashion.

Next time a feminist tells you women do this sort of thing because "they have to", send them the link. 'Danica the Pro Racer' had absolutely no reason, except perhaps vanity or insecurity, to start being being 'Danica the SI Model'. Sad, really.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/26/1811249.shtml

Columnist Declares It Serves Boys Right to be Abused by Education System

Matt · 26 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I am going to give a heads-up for you all before reading this column in the Waco Tribune. The columnist, one Rowland Nethaway, is stating categorically and in all seriousness that it's just fine, if not also perfectly fair, for boys to be left behind in education, drugged to keep them "calm", etc. He also repeats a few feminist myths such as the "Rule of Thumb" myth which has been debunked repeatedly. Be forewarned, some of you may find this article so infuriating you will want to do violence to the computer monitor in front of you.

Well now that I have prepped you for it, I want to encourage everyone to write him at RNethaway-at-wacotrib.com, discussing your opinion of his essay.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/26/1827246.shtml

RADAR Alert: Set Up a Meeting with your Representative This Week!

Matt · 26 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This year we begin to reform the Violence Against Women Act, to stop the injustices, to protect our families, and to save our children.

The name of our campaign is "Truth and Consequences: Election 2006." Our objective is simple: To meet with candidates in every single district around the country, explain the abuses of VAWA, and ask for their support to request Congressional hearings right after the November 7 election.

Click "Read more..." for more.

Set Up a Meeting with your Representative This Week!

To do that, we've put together a Coalition of almost 50 organizations, 37 state-level contact persons, and a variety of Special Reports and other resource materials. These can be seen at http://www.mediaradar.org/.

So let's roll up our sleeves and get on with it. These are the steps you need to do this week:

Step 1: Find out what Congressional District you live in. Go to http://www.house.gov/ and enter your ZIP code in the box at the top of the page.

Step 2: Get the telephone number of your Congressman's local office. You can do this by:

- Reviewing your representative's web page,
- Looking up the number in the telephone book, or
- Calling the Capitol switchboard at 202-224-3121 and asking to be connected to your Congressman's office.

Step 3: Call your Congressman's local office and ask to speak with the Scheduler. Explain that you are a member of a coalition of 50 organizations around the country. Request to meet with the Congressman (or staff) to discuss how the Violence Against Women Act affects families and children. Keep it short and sweet -- you just want to set up a face-to-face meeting.

Step 4: The Scheduler may ask you to send or fax them a request letter. If so, just fill in the blanks on the letter shown below and send or fax it right away.

That's all there is to it! The July 10 Alert will explain how to prepare for your meeting.

Additional Questions:

1. "I belong to an organization in my area that is arranging to meet with the Representative to talk about VAWA. Should I coordinate with my group?"
   Yes, by all means.

2. "One of the senators in my state is also up for re-election this year. Should I try to meet with the Senator, as well?"

   Yes. We encourage you to coordinate this meeting with others in your state.

3. "The Alert only mentions meeting with the incumbent. What about the challenger?"
   Good question. As the campaign progresses, we'll be asking persons to get involved in activities such as putting up signs and making phone calls for the candidate. Obviously, you can't do that for both the incumbent and the challenger. So you have to choose. The incumbent wins 95% of all races, so generally you'll want to meet with the incumbent.

Sample letter for requesting a meeting. Copy the section below and paste it into your favorite word processor. Then fill in the information indicated in [brackets].

[Letterhead with your name, address, and phone number]

[Date of letter]

[Name of scheduler]
[Street address]
[City, state, zip]

Dear [Name of scheduler]:

I am a member of a coalition of 50 organizations around the country. [If you are writing as a representative of a local group, indicate the name of that organization.]

I am following up on our conversation to meet with Congressman [Last name] to discuss the Violence Against Women Act and how it impacts families and children.

The best dates for me to meet are [fill in several dates and/or times, and any other information about location].

Thank you for your help. I'll look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

[Signature]

color=#000066>

Date of RADAR Release: June 26, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner.
http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/26/1852225.shtml

Allegation Nets Female Executive $1.14m Settlement

Matt · 26 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Return of the King writes "A CEO is forced to resign after he invited a fellow female executive to accompany him on his sailboat and shared frustrations about his marriage with her. This netted Georgina Fisk, the accuser, (now corporate swindler) $1.14 million to settle a sexual harassment case which can not be empirically proven in a court of law. Feminist jurisprudence is running rampant, time to fix a broken system."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/26/1859216.shtml

Harriet Lechter? Cannibal Murderess Seeks Acquittal due to Her Gender

Matt · 27 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Roy writes "This one's so over the top it begs belief! An Australian grandmother who skinned and cooked her de facto husband will plead with a court to overturn her life sentence - because she is a woman. The mother of four pleaded guilty to murder after hubby's body was found on the floor of his Aberdeen home in the Hunter Valley in 2000. She worked as a slicer and packer at Aberdeen Abattoir and her lover had been carefully skinned and his skin hung on a meat hook in a doorway at the house. His decapitated head was found in a pot on the stove. The table had been laid for dinner with name cards for Mr Price's three children and parts of his buttocks cooked and served up with vegetables and gravy on dinner plates. Her solicitor refused to comment on the grounds of her appeal, due to be heard this week, but it is understood it involves innovative grounds, including that she is a woman."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/27/1916243.shtml

The Elitist Feminist Trash Can Runneth Over

Matt · 27 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "This crap made me cancel my LA Times subscription. This elitist piece of trash dictates to women on what they should be from her ivory tower. I would be really curious where she got her money from... perhaps her first husband?

EXCERPT: 'Never do yourself what you can pay someone else to do, because that then frees you up to do what you're good at," said Hirshman of housework. "When workmen come to my house and say, 'So what's the matter with the lamp?' I say, 'OK, you stand up in front of a class of 200 people and explain to them about Plato, and I will figure out what's wrong with the lamp...For many years she was a union side labor lawyer, and bargaining in marriage plays a big role in Hirshman's philosophy. For example: "You want more children?" she said a woman could say to her husband, "Then start doing the laundry."'

LIKE THE GUY WANTS MORE OF A FINANCIAL BURDEN AND THE WIFE IS GRACIOUS ENOUGH TO HAVE ANOTHER KID FOR HIM..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/27/1920219.shtml

CA Case Decision Advances Cause of Fathers

Matt · 28 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Marc A. writes "This decision (.pdf file) is a must-read. It just came down yesterday from the 2nd District Court of Appeal (Los Angeles) and overturns a disgusting decision by a dependency court judge, making it very clear how shocked the appellate court is a the lower court judge's attitude toward this potential father who wanted a DNA test before the child was permanently placed in foster care.

A drug-addicted mother couldn't care for the child, so the child was placed in foster care temporarily. Mother didn't give names of possible fathers, but later told Jesus H. he might be the dad. Jesus immediately comes to the DCFS, just before the child turns 1 and just before the court permanently places the child in foster care. DCFS refuses to let Jesus see the child but tells him to appear at the upcoming hearing. He did. Ultimately the court refuses him a DNA test, treats him like garbarge, and acts like he should have come forward sooner. Even the child's own attorney waffles on its position. Jesus appealed on his own with a handwritten notice of appeal. DCFS fought him and even tried to argue his notice was insufficient. The appellate court wrote this scathing decision reversing the judge's order and repeatedly quoting the judge to show how outrageous her reasoning was."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/28/0237216.shtml

Sick Judge, Sick D.A., Sick Jury Won't Listen to False Accuser's Recant

Matt · 28 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Chuck H writes "Woman recants story of being sexually assaulted by her boyfriend. Now the court runs with the ball of false witness. Sounds like Bell County Texas all over again. I can't believe it's happening in Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin. I am ashamed to live here!"

Ed. note: Since the Leader-Telegram has a particularly thorough (ie, annoying) registration process, the story is posted in its entirety under "Read more..."6/27/2006 12:24:38 PM

Despite plea from girlfriend, man sent to prison for attack

Alyssa Waters

Chippewa Falls News Bureau

CHIPPEWA FALLS — A Stanley man will spend six years in prison for sexually assaulting his girlfriend, even though she says it never happened.

Donald J. Lewallen, 26, of 238 Dewey St. was found guilty of two counts of sexual assault and one count of battery during a jury trial in Chippewa County Court in April. He was sentenced Monday.

Lewallen's girlfriend, Amanda McNamara, initially called police in January after being beaten by Lewallen. During the police interview, she said Lewallen had slapped her in the face, pulled her hair, slammed her face into a concrete floor and then sexually assaulted her.

Several days later McNamara recanted her story, saying it was consensual sex.

Even though McNamara told the jury she lied to investigators, jurors found Lewallen guilty.

At the sentence hearing, McNamara said all she's ever wanted is for someone to believe her now.

"Coming forward with the truth is the hardest thing I've ever done," McNamara said. "(Lewallen) is not guilty of rape and shouldn't have to pay for something he didn't do."

Assistant District Attorney Wade Newell asked Chippewa County Judge Roderick Cameron to sentence Lewallen to 20 years in prison because of the nature of the crime.

"This is something where his violent behavior has escalated over the years," Newell said. "This was a very violent sexual assault. She was made to do reprehensible things."

Lewallen has a criminal record that includes operating vehicles while intoxicated and disorderly conduct.

After hearing McNamara's final plea to save Lewallen from prison, Cameron decided that prison time was necessary.

"At this time in his life, (Lewallen) is not able to control his alcoholism," Cameron said. "This sentence will let others know regardless of how the victim feels, (the perpetrator) will serve a lengthy sentence."

In conjunction with prison time, Lewallen was sentenced to five years of extended supervision and nine months in jail concurrent with his sentence.

Waters can be reached at 723-0303 or alyssa.waters-at-ecpc.com.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/28/0246231.shtml

Oracle Head Cancels Major Harvard Donation

Matt · 28 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Tumescent writes "It's not certain why Larry Ellison of Oracle changed his mind on the donation but it looks like the feminists just cost their school a cool $100M for running Summers out for no good reason."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/28/1414236.shtml

Female Paedophile Teacher Jailed

Matt · 29 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "A 49-year-old female teacher has been jailed for 4 years 3 months for repeatedly raping a 14-year-old boy. The article call it rape, doesn't call her a paedophile, and doesn't complain that the sentence is too lenient. How many years would a male teacher get for having sex with a 14-year-old girl? That's the female discount for you, guys!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/29/1540241.shtml

Privacy or justice?

Matt · 29 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

John Doe writes "A significant victory for fathers' rights in the UK: The Times reports that Fathers (and I would assume mothers) will now have the right to talk openly about family court cases.

Something to celebrate for a change...?"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/29/1544210.shtml

Female Psychopath gets Life

Matt · 29 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "A 17-year old girl has been given life for the cold-blooded killing of an elderly woman. Her plan was to kill a defenceless old woman for her money. This killing of a neighbour was a test run. Was she desperate for money? No. Her father is a millionaire. He has now disowned her, and she will serve at least 20 years."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/29/1546238.shtml

Newsflash: Einstein's First Wife Behind the Theory of Relativity

Matt · 29 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Last night on the local public TV station, I saw Einstein's Wife, about Albert's first wife. It is implying strongly that she really was the one behind the theory of relativity as well as nearly everything else he did. It even has a poll asking viewers if they think she "collaborated" with Einstein for the creation of the momentus series of papers he published in 1905.

I knew it would come to pass. Soon Napolean Bonaparte will in fact have been a female, and every great world leader (the hero ones anyway) will have in fact been women or controlled by women.

Hitler and Stalin of course will remain men.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/29/1555228.shtml

Must Be an MRA Working at Dictionary.com!

Matt · 30 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Stan Gaver writes "We all know how sexist and feminist-manipulated mainstream dictionaries have been in the past. For example, many didn't and some still don't include a definition for "misandry".

My son brought something to my attention today that sure surprised the hell out of me and brought a smile to my face. Check out the Word of the Day on Dictionary.com for June 29, at http://dictionary.reference.com/wordoftheday/archive/2006/06/29.html. Check out that first example for the word "timorous"... you won't believe it!

Put a smile on YOUR face today!"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/30/1554254.shtml

Another Pro-Father National Post Article!

Matt · 30 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AFG writes "For the third week in a row, Barbara Kay of the National Post has slammed Canada's feminist family courts and politicians. This week, she explains why the lives of so many dads are destroyed through divorce, and thus, she goes on to offer solutions to the problem."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/30/1556247.shtml

Woman gets slap on wrist for $1.5M embezzlement

Matt · 30 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Return of the King writes "It seems that judges are reluctant to view women guilty of committing crimes without a man involved. In this case a woman embezzled more than $1.5 million from a credit union and bought more than 1,500 items, including hundreds of pairs of shoes and a $60,000 swimming pool, and was sentenced to a mere 27 months in prison (this is what men get for petty theft). The judge stated from the bench "You have a small fish here. Where are the big fish? No one else has been charged with a parking ticket in this case...? Translation: no men to blame? Also, this is under the "Odds and Ends" section of the paper..."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/30/162243.shtml

Twelve-Step Program for Feminists

Matt · 30 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

bull writes "Another gem by Carey Roberts; he offers a solution for women who have been programmed by the feminist movement to be victims and not take responsibilty for their own lives.

'The solution is a 12-step self-help program — you guessed it: Feminists Anonymous. With no apologies to the Friends of Bill, here are the 12 Steps to gender recovery...'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/30/169244.shtml

Man Robbed at Gunpoint by Schoolgirls

Matt · 30 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "Two girls in the US, aged 13 and 14, have been charged with holding up at gunpoint a man they are said to have contacted on social networking website MySpace.com."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/30/1612249.shtml

Lawyer sues 'Don't Date Him' Web site

Matt · 30 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anonymous User writes "Story here. Excerpt:

'The lawsuit filed on behalf of Mr. Hollis, 38, of East Liberty, said Ms. Joseph has "conspired with disingenuous people whose only agenda is to attack the character of those individuals who have been identified on her site." The suit says there are no protocols to ensure statements on the site are valid or truthful. Mr. Hollis, who has practiced criminal law for 12 years, claims statements posted on the site, which appear to be by different people, have affected his practice and family life.'"

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/30/1616240.shtml

Schoolgirl violence goes to trial

Matt · 30 June 2006 · Archived copy · Original

AngryMan writes "One of the girl-bullying cases reported on last year has gone to trial. One girl repeatedly punched another in school so that her head was banging against the wall. The next day the victim retaliated by slashing her attacker's face with a razor. The razor-wielding girl is in court. So much for the natural peace-loving nature of women."

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/06/30/1621250.shtml

MANN to Move to New Server This Weekend

Scott · 1 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

www.mensactivism.org will be down this weekend (July 1-2) so that I can migrate the site to a new, faster, and much more modern server and web engine. This is an exciting change for the site, which has remained in its current state more or less since its inception in late May of 2000. The migration will not be as seamless as I would like, but it needs to be done because the old server and software it's currently running on is getting close to failure. Please Read More below to view some Q&A on the migration process.

Winkler Murder Case Update

Matt · 1 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Pastor's wife said she 'snapped', agent testified

SELMER, Tennessee (AP) -- A woman charged with murdering her minister husband told police she shot him after they argued over family finances and then told him "I'm sorry" as he lay dying in their bedroom, according to testimony at a bail hearing Friday.

NOTICE: This story was migrated from the old software that used to run Mensactivism.org. Unfortunately, user comments did not get included in the migration. However, you may view a copy of the original story, with comments, at the following link:

http://news.mensactivism.org/articles/06/07/01/0052219.shtml

A New Server, a New Lease on Life...

Scott · 2 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Mensactivism.org is back now, at least 99% of what I wanted to accomplish this weekend. There are still a couple of minor things I'd like to change, but I felt the rest of you would prefer that the site become available again ASAP.

If you're using Internet Explorer, the menu tabs at the top of the page look horrible, and I do intend to remedy that. There are some minor formatting issues from our old static pages that need some attention as well. But you should now be able to submit new stories and post comments on this story and stories posted after this one (all previous ones are frozen).

Please let us know about any problems that arise when using the new site: admin@mensactivism.org. Thanks for your patience, and we hope it was worth the wait!

Remember, all user accounts must be re-registered now. I was unable to migrate them from the old site due to complex dependencies in the old database.

Harvard's Summers' Parting CNN Interview

Matt · 3 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Text here. Relevant excerpt:

AP: You have apologized for your controversial remarks that innate ability may partly explain why fewer women reach top-level science jobs, but you also said any idea should be on the table as a university. How do you reconcile that?

Summers: As president I bear responsibility for the signal that my remarks send, and the signal that was sent by those remarks was anything but what I intended or what I believe. And so I have taken responsibility for that. At the same time, no subject should be off limits for academic research in a university, and at a time when 30 percent more women are graduating from college than men, I think we ignore the whole topic of gender differences in learning styles very much at our peril.

In the meantime while that research is being done I think the right agenda is pretty clear: it's to turn heat into light. ... We've done that with a variety of changes in our parental leave policies, or changes in the ways in which we provide research support and mentoring, and I think that's something quite constructive that has come out of the furor.

Local editors battle over DV Stats and NCFM - Please Write letters of support!

Matt · 4 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Posted on behalf of Marc A.:
NCFM is caught up in a battle between two rival newspapers. One is honest and ethical about DV stats, etc., while the other insists on PCness, bias and reactionism.Please write letters in support of NCFM-LA and editor Steve Tobia of the Mountain Valley News. Tobia had printed a positive article on NCFM-LA that cited the DV data and admitted he was wrong in previously citing the 95% DV figure.
In response, editor Larry Wilson of the Pasadena Star News criticized Tobia, attacked NCFM and reactively dismissed NCFM's claim about gender and DV by quoting a local DV shelter and a cop but without looking at randomized research. Tobia then defended himself and the 50/50 data, citing Gelles and the New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men, and challenged Wilson (.pdf file) for his PCness, bias and personal motives. He also printed two letters to the editor supporting NCFM-LA.

This is a rare case of journalistic ethics, especially since Tobia is a co-chair of a battered women's shelter! PLEASE WRITE the Pasadena Star News in defense of Tobia and NCFM at letters.star-news-at-sgvn.com and larry.wilson-at-sgvn.com.

Girls mug man they contacted on MySpace

GaryB · 4 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

BBC News reports here that two girls reportedly mugged a guy that they made contact with on the MySpace site.

From the article: "Two teenage girls in the US have been charged with holding up at gunpoint a man they are said to have contacted on social networking website MySpace.com.

Yana Galilova and Rafaella Yusupova, 14 and 13, are accused of armed robbery and carrying a concealed weapon. The girls, from Florida, are said to have posed as an 18-year-old to lure men into chatting to them online."

Of course, the article then immediately sets about mentioning a previous incident of a man sexually assaulting a girl he met on MySpace as if to balance out any idea that girls can be evil all on their own.

...BTW This is Tirryb, changed my nick when registering again for the new site.

Dr. Murray Straus Testifies Before the NH CSM

Scott · 5 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

During the June 2006 meeting of the New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men, UNH Family Violence Professor Murry Straus testified on domestic violence issues, and answered questions regarding the Conflict Tactics Scale. Foster's Daily Democrat reported on Dr. Straus' testimony today, but as of this time the article is not available on the Foster's web site. Read more below to view a temporary version of the article. Also, an audio recording of the testimony will be made available from the NH CSM's web site later this month. Perhaps this information will help the NCFM-LA letter writing effort?

Researcher calls for women to stop abusing men

Wednesday, July 5, 2006

By Chloe Johnson
Staff Writer
ljohnson@fosters.com

CONCORD — Murray Straus says its time for a men's movement.

Posters and broadcasts on partner violence always portray male perpetrators and female victims, he said. According to his new research findings, that leaves the other half out of the picture.

He told this to the New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men at their meeting Friday in the Legislative Office Building in Concord.

Straus, co-director of the Family Research Lab at the University of New Hampshire, recently completed an international study on partner violence among university students. His queries of more than 13,600 students revealed that the most common instance of partner violence is mutual abuse.

The second most common situation of partner violence is when the female is the perpetrator against the male, he said. This leaves the reverse — when males abuse females — to be the least common in practice, although the most common in publicity.

"I have a long-term prevention goal that I hope my research will make a contribution to," Murray said prior to the meeting at which he was asked to testify. He added that it's not enough to provide services for the battered, and that the solution is to stop the aggressive behavior in the first place.

He said it's possible to stop half of abuse by making it as reprehensible for a woman to slap a man as it for a man to hit a woman.

"If we want men to stop it," he said. "Women have to stop it also."

This is in part because his research indicates that abuse can escalate from one partner to both.

He said overall partner abuse has decreased since the problem was recognized nationally. However, he said, the change only applies to abuse by men, not against them. That's because society has not made a "big deal" out of abuse against men, he said.

Straus said he lauds the women's movement for calling attention to violence against them. Now, he says it's men's turn.

"We should make the same big deal about women hitting men," Straus told his audience. "That's one of the things your Commission can do."

Commissioner Marshall Hickok said the effort is blocked by society. "There's a perceptual wall we run into where it's not taken seriously," he said.

Straus said the fact that the commission even exists is evidence that people are taking the position of men more seriously. It was established by the Legislature in 2002.

"It's going to depend on a mass social change of opinion," he said. "And that takes a movement."

Straus said the study relied on self-reporting since partner violence is rarely observed and rarely reported.

He said violence usually has to lead to injury or a disturbance of the peace before the police are notified, and that is only a small fraction.

Straus said men are less likely to report abuse because of their own shame and the disbelief of other people.

"No one has waged a campaign to get men to come forward when they are victimized," Straus said.

Straus said female perpetrators of violence don't get reported by shelters because they aren't asked if they also hit the men. And women do not go to a shelter if they are the only one doing the hitting.

Research indicates that women are as likely to initiate violence as men, Straus said.

Straus said the offenses range from a slap to homicide. He said nationally women only commit 10 percent of homicides, but they commit one third of domestic violence-related homicides.

"Women rarely commit homicide," he said. "But when they do, it's a male partner."

Commissioner David Lauren asked whether the study took into account the reason women would be abusive. Straus said his research found that dominance is the primary reason people use violence.

People get violent out of anger and frustration, Straus said. He said they are frequently attempting to correct misbehavior or punish for wrongdoing.

Chairman Joseph Mastromarino said the problem is not based on gender, but on the ability to function in a relationship. He said people need to learn to deal with conflicts without resorting to violence.

Straus noted that there is a difference between the type of violence the different genders inflict. He said men cause two-thirds of the partner violence that results in injuries requiring medical treatment.

"Men's violence against women has more severe consequences both physically and mentally," he said.

But, he said, the other one-third can't be ignored.

Lauren agreed. "No violence should be ignored," he said. "It's a problem regardless of who perpetrates it."

Hickok asked whether there is a correlation between the changing roles of women in society and increased violence perpetrated by them. Straus said the issue is disputed, but there is a theory of that nature. He said his international study is consistent with the theory because countries with liberated women have more cases of violence by women.

"Does that mean we shouldn't have equality?" he asked. "No."

"Every social change — including desirable ones — has its downside," he said.

The commission asked Straus for advice on what kind of public initiative could help lower the violence against men.

Straus said the violence presentation programs in public schools need to be changed to address violence by females against males.

"Little by little — too little at a time — but things are happening," Straus said

DNA Frees Yet Another Falsely Accused Man

Luek · 6 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Well, it just keeps happening. Another man has been exonerated through DNA evidence (or lack thereof), of a rape that happened 21 years ago.

A particularly noteworthy point in this story is the falsely accused man never admitted to the rape, and lost several chances at making parole because of that. Turns out he did the right thing. Now, I hope his lawyers do the right thing and get him a huge monetary settlement from the state. The only way to get rid of institutionalized misandry is to make it costly.

Indian Woman Sodomizes Girl with Aluminum Rod

Anonymous · 6 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Feminists present Indian women are to the whole world as weak and helpless. But, in reality, Indian Visual Media suppresses most stories where the women commit heinous crimes including proxy murders of husbands, torture and murder of children.

Here is what an urban Indian Woman of 40 did in her posh apartment in Mumbai. Excerpt:

'Roma Bhatia caught her 10-year old maidservant trying on her mother's make up, flew into rage and PUSHED AN ALUMINIUM ROD up the anus of this child not older than her three kids, bound her hands and feet, and left her to bleed to death.'

Man free 21 years after wrongful rape conviction

Anonymous · 7 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

From MSNBC -- A man who spent more than two decades in prison after being wrongfully convicted of a brutal rape was freed Thursday because DNA evidence has cleared him. Relatives of Alan Newton, 44, whooped loudly as he entered the crowded courtroom. Newton stood quietly in a beige suit and bright blue shirt as Judge John Byrne signed the order declaring him free. After his paperwork was processed, he stepped outside the courthouse, thanking his attorneys and offering his sympathy to the woman whose rape led to his wrongful conviction.

DV in the media - My Super Ex-Girlfriend

GaryB · 7 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I saw an ad for a new movie today, and checked it out at Rotten Tomatoes (check it here. Stars Uma Thurman, it's not some byway b-movie.

The outline is basically this: Nice guy meets neurotic, controlling girl, they date, she gets too freaky, so he breaks up. The kicker being that she actually has super powers. What then follows - at least based on the outline and trailer - is her berating, embarrassing and beating him up and generally trying to ruin the poor guys life.

Official outline is: "Everyone's had a painful parting of the ways with a romantic partner. We pick up the pieces and move on. But for one New York guy, it's not going to be so easy. When he breaks up with his girlfriend, he discovers his ex is actually the reluctant superhero, G-Girl. A scorned woman, she unleashes her super powers to humiliate and torment him."

So now we have yet another major movie release showing that it's acceptable and even funny to torture and otherwise humiliate men, even when they've done nothing wrong - time to boycott for all we're worth...

Ex-Michigan Band Teacher Admits to Sex

Evil White Male... · 7 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Not only disturbing are the number of male children she raped, but the article states she will change her plea bargain deal if they dare to give her more than seven years for this heinous act. Note that ALL the male rape victims and their parents agreed to the plea deal. Reverse the genders anyone?

A New Zealand Man's Protest Walk Begins for Fathers and Children

Paul Catton · 8 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Wayne Pruden of New Zealand is walking from Hamilton to Wellington to hand over to the Parliament of New Zealand a petition demanding a full public inquiry into the Family Court of New Zealand

Waynes journey can be tracked at www.waynepruden.co.nz.

This is another string in the bow of activities being conducted down in New Zealand to stop the systemic abuse of children and margianlisation of fathers.

Verizon is at it again

Anonymous · 8 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Well it seems Verizon hasn't learned their lesson from their earlier misandric commercials. The new one has a guy ask a (female) hardware store worker if they stock Verizon phones with navigation systems. To which, she gives the usual annoyed facial expression & the "Ummmm, you're in a hardware store" response. The idiot man then says "wow, I need that phone more than I thought!" Voiceover with phone info. & then it cuts to the same man leaving the Verizon store confused & you hear the phone say "go left" & the man follows the orders.

Right back to the "idiot man" formula. I will be switching to Cingular as soon as my contract ends.

...No doubt.

Why boys really are in a crisis

Anonymous · 8 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Why boys really are in a crisis

Gender feminists spin the facts in order to claim that boys' lower academic performance relative to their sisters is not a gender issue but due to "behavioral and emotional" reasons, as Warner wrote, or "larger educational and social problems," as Mead wrote.

U.K. Study Finds Women Seeking Repeated Abuse

Roy · 8 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A new study from the U.K. makes a controversial claim about domestic violence, documenting that some women repeatedly seek out abusive relationships. These findings dispute the dominant feminist DV creed that the Evil Patriarchy is the sole explanation for domestic conflict. Erin Pizzey, who set up the first woman's refuge in 1971, said that the study confirmed what she had been saying for years: "Violent relationships can be like an addiction to drugs and alcohol and these are the people who need the most help."

Murray Straus CSM Testimony Available

Scott · 8 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men's web site won't be updated until next week at the earliest, so I thought I'd make available the audio recording of Dr. Straus' testimony. It's very worthwhile listening material, both for the information on domestic violence, as well as insight into the state of the Commission. You can download an mp3 of the audio here (22 MB).

NYTimes.com: At Colleges, Women Are Leaving Men in the Dust

Evil White Male... · 8 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here is an interesting article on women attending college more, graduating with honors more, etc., but not to worry -- according to the article there is no crisis in boys ... sure they are expelled from high school more, sure they are more likely to be diagnosed with ADD or ADHD, sure they drop out more, but hey they still earn much more on the dollar than women. Sheesh! Is it my imagination or does this article try a little too hard to legitimate the sudden acceleration of girls in school at the expense of boys...?

Home-Alone Boy Survives 11-Story Fall

Matt · 9 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Home-Alone Boy Survives 11-Story Fall. Excerpt:

'The boy ended up in the same pediatric intensive care unit at Albany Medical Center where his mother works as a receptionist, police reports said.

'Elizabeth Burciaga, 21, was charged with endangering the welfare of a child. She initially told police the boy had been left with a baby sitter, officials said.

'A psychiatric evaluation has been ordered for her, authorities said, and an order of protection to keep her away from the boy has been filed.'

RADAR Alert: Step 2: Now Get Ready to Meet with Your Congressman

Matt · 10 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Step 2: Now Get Ready to Meet with Your Congressman

The 2006 elections are already beginning to heat up. The goal of the Truth and Consequences campaign is to meet with every Congressman throughout the country to explain how the Violence Against Women Act is violating people's civil rights on a massive scale.

See first comment for more

Protesting outside the Judges / Lawyers Homes

Paul Catton · 10 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here in New Zealand we have found that taking the protests directly (Note: preceding link opens directly to RealMedia clip) to Family Court Lawyers and Judges, outside their homes is the most effective way of letting these Family Court parasites know the true damage they inflict upon seperated families and children. (Main video page here).

These protests are completely legal and let the neighbourhood know what a seriously nasty neigbour they have.

Kind Regards
Paul

NH CSM May Meeting Minutes Available

Scott · 10 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I'm going to start taking a more pro-active effort to announce happenings of the NH Commission on the Status of Men. The CSM web site has now been updated with the May meeting minutes PDF and the mp3 file of Dr. Murray Straus' testimony (22 MB) during the June meeting.

Female "care-givers" force-feed elderly woman with talcum powder

AngryMan · 11 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Although the three women workers were actually captured on video force-feeding talcum powder to an 89-year-old disabled woman, they were acquitted of assault by the court.

The agency they worked for had its license revoked and went out of business, and now the victim has received compensation.

What is the reason for the perpetrators' acquittal? It can only be because they are women. Can you imagine what would have happened if 3 men had done this? They would be doing jail time for sure. Story here.

NBC News: "What working moms want"

Matt · 11 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Apparently they want more time with their kids and if their (lazy good-for-nothing) husbands would just make more money or the government would just intervene and force employers or other taxpayers to pay them to stay home, they'd be just fine. Oh yeah, their coworkers should not mind it if they get paid the same for half the work, too.

Yep, that's pretty much the summary version. Saw it tonight on NBC Nightly News and predictably they have a web-based version of this claptrap here. One comment that stands out to me made by an interviewee was that it breaks her heart when she leaves home in the morning and her kids say they want her to stay. Well every man I know who has had to leave small kids at home (usually with their moms) has had the same experience. Yet somehow, it's not so bad when it happens to men.

Contact NBC Nightly News at nightly-at-nbc.com.

Backlash over new 'women's only' craze has Japan split down the middle

Anonymous · 12 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'At 2 o'clock every afternoon, an employee of Buon Viaggio walks out to the front of the restaurant in the JR Hakodate Station building and posts a huge sign saying, "Women Only," according to AERA (7/17).'

RADAR Alert: Blow the Whistle on VAWA Waste, Fraud, and Abuse!

Matt · 12 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Domestic violence programs around the country have become larded with waste, fraud, and abuse. These are some recent examples:

MICHIGAN: Two weeks ago the Michigan Department of Human Services affirmed its decision to require the SafeHouse Center of Washtenaw County to repay the state $483,000 for services it billed for but apparently never provided. The state's decision follows on the resignation of executive director Susan McGee, who admitted in 2001 she had falsified financial reports to cover up delinquent tax payments.

Click "Read more" for more.

MINNESOTA: This past May, Paulette Wang, former treasurer of Asian Women United, pleaded guilty to stealing $265,000 from her domestic violence organization. Ms. Wang is scheduled to be sentenced on August 1.

NEBRASKA: A 2005 audit by the U.S. Department of Justice of Legal Aid of Nebraska identified $1.3 million in non-allowable and questionable expenses. TEXAS: An audit of a VAWA grant to the Texas Office of the Governor discovered that $852,000 in claimed matching costs could not be documented.

WISCONSIN: A DoJ audit of the domestic violence program in Dane County concluded, "we question $1,766,964 in grant funds received." The total amount of the grant was $1,771,146 -- which means 99% of the total grant expenditures were questionable!

That's just the beginning. The Equal Justice Foundation has compiled dozens of examples of domestic violence programs that abuse women and children and violate the civil liberties of men. [http://www.ejfi.org/DV/dv-25.htm#pgfId-998197] And, RADAR has issued five Special Reports that document widespread abuses under VAWA.

IT'S TIME TO BLOW THE WHISTLE ON VAWA ABUSE.

Earlier this week our Truth and Consequences campaign got a HUGE boost – an Alert went out to one million Americans, asking them protect families from VAWA abuse: http://capwiz.com/sicminc/issues/alert/?alertid=8899031&type=CO

Now we need to capitalize on that message. So this week we are asking you to take 5 minutes to make two telephone calls and send one fax or e-mail:

1. Call both of your Senators at the Capitol Switchboard at 202-224-3121. When the receptionist answers, state your name and the city where you live, and then explain, "I am calling to ask Senator _____ to request an investigation into the rampant waste, fraud, and abuse involving the Violence Against Women Act." (If you do not know the names of your Senators, just ask the switchboard operator.)
2. Send a message to Mr. Glen Fine, Inspector General at the Department of Justice. His fax number is 1-202-616-9884. His e-mail is inspector.general-at-usdoj.gov. Your message should be factual, something like this:

   Dear Mr. Fine:
   I am writing to request that your Office investigate the widespread waste, fraud, and abuse involving Violence Against Women Act funds. The media has recently reported the following examples of fraud:- Two weeks ago the Michigan Department of Human Services affirmed its decision to require the SafeHouse Center of Washtenaw County to repay the state $483,000 for services it billed for but apparently never provided. The state's decision follows on the resignation of executive director Susan McGee, who admitted in 2001 she had falsified financial reports to cover up delinquent tax payments.

- This past May Paulette Wang, former treasurer of Asian Women United in Minnesota, pleaded guilty to stealing $265,000 from her domestic violence organization. Ms. Wang is scheduled to be sentenced on August 1.

Department of Justice auditors have also documented waste among VAWA grantees:- An audit of Legal Aid of Nebraska identified $1.3 million in non-allowable and questionable expenses. (Audit Report No. GR-60-05-012)- An audit of a VAWA grant to the Texas Office of the Governor discovered that $852,000 in claimed matching costs could not be documented. (Audit Report No. GR-80-05-008)

- An audit of the domestic violence program in Dane County, Wisconsin concluded, “we question $1,766,964 in grant funds received.” The total amount of the grant was $1,771,146, which means 99% of the total grant monies were questionable. (Audit Report No. GR-50-04-003)

Many other examples of waste, fraud, and abuse have been documented by watchdog organizations such as Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting [http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Discriminates-Against-Males.pdf]. Please act now to ensure that these abuses stop NOW.

I look forward to hearing your decision on this request.

Sincerely,

Your name
Address
Telephone

Register now for the National Family Law Reform Conference, to be held September 15-16 in Alexandria, Virginia (near Washington, DC). The conference will address the crisis of family law, including biased family courts, false allegations of domestic violence, child abuse, and much more. For more information: http://www.acfc.org/site/Calendar?view=Detail&id=100021

Date of RADAR Release: July 11, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Men less likely to Report Domestic Violence, due in part to lack of Agencies for Men

RandomMan · 13 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

From the article:

"Whether a person reports an incident depends on a number of factors. Women are twice as likely to report abuse than men, and aboriginals more likely than non-aborginals."

Concord Monitor Editorial Trivializes the Impact of Female Abusers

Scott · 13 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here's one article regariding abusive women that I feel directly relates to gender inequity and bias. This editorial in the (NH) Concord Monitor starts out by advocating for equal justice for men and women, but then rationalizes reasons why female sex abusers could be treated more leniently. The editorial suggests "Females are much less likely to use force or intimidation, less likely to threaten retaliation for reporting the offense and more likely to believe that they are truly in love with their victim. They are also far less likely to have multiple victims." I think this article tries to sound fair-minded, but has a more insidious purpose: to justify the leniency that female offenders, particularly of sex crimes, often receive in the criminal justice system.

Iraq Vets Left Stranded

Matt · 13 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Check this out. Used, discarded. They are after all, only men.

The article mentions a female vet who returned and said she had her bank account cleaned out by her boyfriend and is left with nothing, living in a shelter. That is bad indeed. However the article fails to mention the many men who come back to find the law after them for child support, etc. they couldn't pay when they were in service. Welcome home, brave warriors.

WHO helps women quit smoking while men are on their own

Anonymous · 14 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The United States of America has signed a treaty with the World Health Organization in order help curtial smoking all over the planet. That's the good news.

The bad news is that it's for women only. Apparently, the health of men worldwide is less important than that of women and thusly they must be excluded. Not only is WHO selling men out to please feminists but so is our government. The U.S. Senate has yet to vote on this. Please contact your senators and let them know that they should NOT vote to pass a bigoted treaty like this one.

Sperm from Stem Cells

Anonymous · 14 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here is a particularly desturbing take, as such cannot be ignored, by someone called Vanessa Feltz (you may know her name) from a national newsaper 'The Daily Star', here in the UK. Brace yourselves and read it.

Then email Vanessa at:

vanessa.feltz-at-dailystar.co.uk and the newspaper at:

news-at-dailystar.co.uk

Thanks, Red Kev

[Story covered here by the BBC. No URL to the story referenced herein though was submitted. If anyone finds it, please post it. Click "Read more" to read it as submitted.]

Here it is:

Reigning Men? Not any More!

Gents, it gives me great pleasure to reveal that pretty soon you'll be surplus to requirements. We won't have to iron your shirts, massage your egos, supply endless sex or be polite to your mothers.

Why not? Because in the delightfully foreseeable future we won't need you OR your sperm.

A genius of a scientist took some stem cells from a mouse embryo, fiddled with them in a test tube, turned them into grade A, fully-functioning, Olympic swimming sperm – all my himself without an adult male mouse in sight – and hey presto, seven tiny, warm, fury baby mice have now happily arrived on planet Earth.

You'll indulge me if I crow a little. No male mouse! Chaps, blokes, guys of any description were 100% unnecessary.

The miracle of life was accomplished without the sweaty, expensive, embarrassing, potentially heart-breaking business of courting or rumpy-pumpy with the opposite sex.

Fast forward a few years and for mice, read humans. No human males required. How liberating! How empowering! What a fabulous way of cutting out the middle man!

If we're more honest than most of us dare to be, many women will admit they only want you for your sperm. We're forced to remember your birthday, dress up in French maid's outfits, take the bones out of your fish and cherish you until your dying day, not because you're any great shakes but because we have designs on what lurks in your testicles.

Frankly, if we can have the precious liquid without all the inconvenience we'll take it in a heartbeat. Trot to the lab, order some Grow Your Own Sperm, have the baby of your dreams without Dad sulking, hogging the remote and feeling jealous that you're not breast-feeding him. Paradise.

Sure, love will still find a way. Sure, sex will be supersonic. This way though, there'll be no need to wake up next to the snoring bore who got you up the duff 10 years ago.

Babies will be a private matter between a woman and her lab technician. Making love and romance will be strictly for the man fawning, crawling and obedient enough to deserve it. So gents, you're strictly on borrowed time. Enjoy our worship while it lasts.

That clever scientist may have put you just where you belong – on your knees, at our feet, offering hours of top quality foreplay.

Ex-Teacher Goes to Jail for Nude Photos

bull · 14 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

“When Pamela Rogers, 29, was released after serving 198 days in jail, she was under orders not to contact the student or his family or use the Internet. But authorities say that even after appearing in court on a charge of violating her probation in April, she continued talking with the boy and sending him text messages and sexually explicit photos and video of herself.”

It’s refreshing to see a female sex predator being held culpable for her dastardly deeds. What is it about “STOP” that she didn’t understand!? Could it be that she was running with the notion that she would not be severely punished because she is a woman? Perhaps times are changing as precedents like this case would imply?

Story Here

CSM: Men as Big Babies = Big Box Office $$$

Roy · 15 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

CSM's film critic writes that Hollywood has invented a new cultural stereotype for men to add to our lexicon of deadbeat dads, homicidal maniacs, rapists, pedophiles, and incompetent eunuchs – the "Big Baby." A series of recent movies portray men as arrested adolescents who can't make the transition to married domesticity, fatherhood, and careerism. For the perpetual man-child, 'male camaraderie is both hailed and assailed. It represents a noble rite of passage that all too easily becomes a case of arrested development. The women in this universe are doting, exasperated saints who rescue men from themselves. These films are saying that men, left to their own devices, are nothing more than porno-obsessed lunkheads. Only through the acquisition of a wife and family are they truly fulfilled.'

False Rape Accusation Follow up- "Just Shut Up".

Tumescent · 15 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I don't know if anyone remembered the original story here, but it was unusual in that a woman who made a false rape accusation was later charged and convicted with making that accusation, even though it was only a class C misdemeanor for filing a false police report. Now, apparently, it turns out that even this is too much for her and society to bear. Story here.

Despite the previous conviction, and prior to an appellate trial by a higher court, the judge dismissed the case, had the woman enter a "diversion" program, and is making sure no one says a word about it... even though it stems from a criminal case. What is the diversion program for making a false rape accusation that can put someone away for years? 40 hours of community service, talk to a mental-health counselor at least once about the case and post $250 security. If she violates the terms of the agreement, including talking to the media, she forfeits the money.

But even if she violates the agreement, the case against her will be dismissed by Dec. 15 and won't appear on her record.

MIT feminists mad that Nobel laureate denied female hire

Anonymous · 15 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

One of the most brilliant neuro-scientists in the world denied a female a job position in his research efforts and 11 gender feminists blast him and produce media condemning this man. Yet, six MIT faculty who WORK WITH him, including two women, wrote in favor of his decision. Apparently, men can not pick who they want to mentor if a female applicant applies for the job. Feminist bias is so apparent on high level issues, yet the same feminist deny bias in secondary education. Story here.

"Heading South" Wreaks of 2x-Standards

Matt · 15 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Ahh, another "reverse the sexes" exercise for you... Libidos of a Certain Age, indeed! Not just the movie, but the audiences', as well as the NYTimes' reaction to it stink of double-standards. Men "of a certain age" heading south for sexual relations with teenage girls would of course be condemned, arrested, etc. Women doing the same to get with teen-aged island boys, however-- well, that's not only OK, it's grrreeeaaattt!!!

Woman 'spared' jail for sex abuse of son

Ragtime · 16 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Note that this rapist didn't "avoid" jail, but was "spared." Yet another female predator escapes jail on the puy-pass. And this monster raped her own SON! Note also how the writer of the news article desparately tries to find a man to blame it on, and it's quite a stretch, too -- apparently, the woman got messages on the Internet telling her to do it. Is that like blaming the voices in her head? Heaven forbid women should behave like grown-ups and have the strength of character to say "no" to an email. Good God!

CNN.com's latest foolishness

Matt · 17 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

All I can think is that CNN.com has taken a page from MSN and happily copied it. These sorts of "stories" are now a regular thing on their news site. Excerpt:

'LONDON, England (Reuters) -- Working long hours has a greater negative impact on women than men because it makes them more likely to smoke, drink coffee and eat unhealthy food.

'Both sexes consume less alcohol if they spend more time working, researchers said this week, but toiling extra hours makes women crave unhealthy snacks.'

Let's see, where to begin deconstructing this claptrap...

Boys found starving; adoptive parents charged

Matt · 17 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Contrast the previous posting re their idiotic women-"made"-to-crave-unhealthy-snacks piece with this story also on CNN.com (what, was someone asleep at the editor's desk?). Perhaps those poor long-hours-working-women need to donate their candy bars to adoptive boys held in basements, unfed for days.

RADAR Alert: Blow the Whistle on VAWA Waste, Fraud, and Abuse! Part 2

Matt · 17 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

RADAR ALERT:

Step 3: Talking Points for the Meeting with Your Congressman

VAWA is riddled with waste, fraud, and abuse. It's time for change. And it's time to put this on the political agenda.

The goal of the Truth and Consequences campaign is to meet with every Congressman around the country and explain the problem of VAWA abuse. August is often a good time for a meeting, but you may hold the meeting anytime before November 7.

Previous Alerts asked you to contact the Scheduler to set up a meeting, and then to prepare yourself for the meeting. You may want to review these Alerts at: http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060626.php and http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060710.php

This list of 10 Talking Points is intended to outline the main points to cover during your meeting. This is a possible set of issues to be covered —feel free to select the points you want to discuss.

These Talking Points are based on information contained in 4 handouts to be printed out from the RADAR website and given to the Congressman or staffer:

Massive Civil Rights Violations under the Violence Against Act – http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/Candidate_Handout-Civil_Rights.pdf

Letterman Lawyers Fight Restraining Order -- http://www.comcast.net/tv/index.jsp?cat=TELEVISION&fn=/2005/12/21/288641.html

Without Restraint: The Use and Abuse of Domestic Restraining Orders -- http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Restraining-Orders.pdf

Jury Acquits Rucker Smith -- http://www.americustimesrecorder.com/siteSearch/apstorysection/local_story_125003348.html

We recommend before the meeting, use a colored highlighter to emphasize key sentences in the handouts.

These are the 10 Talking Points:

1. The Violence Against Women Act was conceived with good intentions, and has done good things in treating victims of domestic violence. However, the law enforcement aspects of the law are now raising concerns about widespread violations of civil rights.

2. The problem begins with VAWA funding to train judges and police officers. [Read out loud the quote from first handout: "Your job is not to become concerned about all the constitutional protections…] These training programs have been found to be biased and misleading. That sets the stage for how the rest of the domestic violence system works.

3. Turn to the second handout, Letterman Lawyers Fight Restraining Order. Outline the key facts of the case, in which a judge issued a restraining order under civil law to protect a woman from a man who was allegedly using mental telepathy to harass her.

4. Go to the third handout, Without Restraint and turn to page 7, which is an actual restraining order from Illinois. Review the check boxes in section 1, which reveal that physical abuse was not even alleged. Then go to sections 5 and 7, which spell out the dire consequences of this order, which turned the child's father into a mere visitor.

5. Go the page 9 of the third handout, half way down. Highlight the fact that 2-3 million temporary restraining orders are issued every year. In half of those orders, there is not even an allegation of physical violence! [Key point, let this really sink in] Under civil law, only a preponderance of evidence is necessary, which explains why these orders are so difficult to get dismissed. [Again, key point].

6. Now go back to the Massive Civil Rights handout, to the Arrest and Prosecution section – we're now dealing with criminal (not civil) law. As a result of VAWA, 33 states now have mandatory arrest laws, which disregard civil liberties protections. Review example of former NFL quarterback Warren Moon.

7. Go to the handout about Rucker Smith, a chief judge in Georgia who was accused of assaulting his girlfriend. Turns out, she was the perpetrator. Review the story. Highlight the judge's statement after he was found innocent: "For someone to falsely accuse another out of anger and vengeance silences the voices of the many real victims." [Let this sink in -- it should be one of strongest points you make during the meeting].

8. Go back to the Massive Civil Rights handout and review whatever other material you have time for.

9. Now highlight your request: We are asking you, right after the Nov. 7 elections, to call upon Congress to hold hearings to investigate VAWA abuse. Don't expect a definite answer at this time.

10. Leave enough time for discussion. End the meeting on a positive note. Don't pressure the person for an answer to your request.

++

Date of Release: July 17, 2006

Register now for the National Family Law Reform Conference, to be held September 15-16 in Alexandria, Virginia (near Washington, DC). The conference will address the crisis of family law, including biased family courts, false allegations of domestic violence, child abuse, and much more. For more information:
http://www.acfc.org/site/Calendar?view=Detail&id=100021

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner:
http://www.mediaradar.org/

Kathleen Parker Lionizes Paternity Fraud

Matt · 17 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Well I used to count Kathleen Parker as an ally of MRAs-- a sort of ally-in-denial-herself, but one lurking in there. Sadly I must now conclude after reading this column by her that she isn't. She uses part of the plot/scenario in the recent Superman movie re-make to glorify the man who puts up with being cuckolded, and does so all the while not so much as mentioning the behavior of the mother in the matter. Needless to say, the superhero of the movie is not much above pond scum in her eyes, while I suppose, the leading lady is some sort of victim.

Just no end of it, is there?

The Death of Real Science...

Anonymous · 17 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This article is instructive. I would have said 'eye-opening', but anyone with half a brain should have passed the 'eye-opening' stage years ago.

Having read the above article, the results of this article should cause one to ask some questions.

All three winners of this fair are women. The gender distribution of the fair participants, though not given in this article, was, according to other articles on the subject, 'still skewed'. I may be wrong, but I take this to mean that more boys than girls were participating. Still, assume that the genders were equally represented. This means roughly, a 12.5% random chance all three winners were women. If, say, a third of the participants were women, this means a ~4% random chance all three winners were women. All this in spite of the fact that boys still, somehow, manage to achieve higher scores on science aptitude tests. Indeed.

Why Johnny Can't Read: Schools Favor Girls

RandomMan · 18 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

It seems this idea is finally gaining momentum. Citing a "new study", this article also mentions that there is no difference in literacy between home-schooled boys and girls. Why aren't the women who dominate elementary teaching being disciplined for failing to educate half of their students?

Girl Sues Los Angeles over Denial of Reunion with Father

Matt · 18 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. No surprise it has come to this: children must sue now to get to be with their fathers. Notice too this man was paying child support for years while his daughter was in a foster home. Did the money he was sending in actually get to his daughter in any way, shape, or form, or was it just another entry in the LA County's General Accounts Receivable system? Excerpt:

'But the lawsuit alleges that the Department of Children and Family Services failed to use "due diligence" to locate Thomas Smith. It claims the agency never notified Smith, who had continued making child support payments, that his daughter was in foster care and never gave him a chance to claim her.

"He's a registered voter with a valid driver's license 'and an open child support case," said Smith's attorney, L. Wallace Pate. "All they had to do, at any time during those 10 years, was pick up the phone and ask the L.A. County Child Support Services Department: `Do you have a contact on this man?""'

Joint custody recommended when women abuse men

Anonymous · 19 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Syndicated advice columnist Ellie Tesher suggests that a man beaten by his girlfriend seek joint custody with his abuser, even though the girlfriend is a danger to him and their child.

Several times, she has hit me, usually after several drinks [...] all while I was holding our 20-month-old baby.

Her advice: "... focus on getting a legal separation with joint child custody."

Ed. note: Submitter is referring to the second letter on the page.

Feminism's Last Frontiers

bull · 19 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Woody Zimmerman does a nice job of summarizing areas that remain largely male turf. Despite radical feminism's incessant attempts at minimizing naturalistic gender differences that give advantage to males in certain domains, males continue to outperform females in these areas. They (radical feminists) can jump up and down and scream all they want; however, their protests will not change what is.

Breaking the Silence...

Anonymous · 20 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This isn't a news story, per se. It's a question regarding PBS 'Breaking the Silence' propaganda piece. PBS had promised to bring out another program with 'balance'. (Even alluding to the truth would probably provide more balance than was in the original piece). They had promised this in the Spring. Spring has come and gone and there's still no program that I'm aware of. Does anyone know what the status of this is? All I'm aware of is silence...

Breaking the silence on 'Breaking the Silence'.

How to 'train' your husband - treat him like an animal

Anonymous · 22 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Check your blood pressure after reading this piece of misandry. Despite the disclaimer that this is not a tryoical 'men bad - women good' article - it is.

Woman Granted Court Order Against Cusack

bull · 22 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

After Cusack got a retraining order on his female stalker, she requested a restraining order against him. The court obliged her pending a hearing in August even though she is the predator. We only hear about cases like this when a celebrity is targeted. Makes me wonder how many female whack-jobs are awarded retraining orders against their prey? Story here.

Feminists cannot defend their positions

afg · 23 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here (.mp3 file - 4.5 MB) is a taped phone call by a men's rights activist to a Canadian feminist government worker. She cannot defend her position when asked various questions about feminist beliefs.

Paternity Fraud/Glenn Sacks Covered in Popular CA Weekly

Matt · 25 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This is a good sign, and unexpected indeed. Progress! Starts with:

"It's not politically correct to say that child support laws are biased against men. But cases of questionable fatherhood and bizarre prosecutions of disproved dads show that, sometimes, it's true."

RADAR Alert: Step 4: How to Win Friends and Influence Politicians

Matt · 25 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This is our mission: To meet with every Congressman between now and November 7 to explain how VAWA is violating civil rights and breaking up families.

Last week's Alert laid out the Talking Points for the meeting: http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20060716.php. But a successful meeting also depends on your ability to present yourself in the best possible light.

Here are a few tips how to get the Congressman or staff to become persuaded of the need to call for civil rights hearings:

1. Wear business attire. That means a jacket and tie for men. Act in a professional manner.
2. Be courteous and friendly. Comment about some of the work the Congressman has done that you appreciate. Anything to make a connection.
3. When you start your presentation, get to the point quickly: the massive civil rights violations under VAWA. Then work through the Talking Points. Practice your presentation in advance so it comes across smoothly.
4. Do not get argumentative or angry. This will only hurt your credibility. Try to find an area that you can agree on.
5. Do not mention your own case. The purpose of your visit is to avoid future VAWA abuses, not to resolve your personal legal issues.
6. Play to the Congressman's or staffer's interests:
   - If the person is a strong supporter of Constitutional protections, then emphasize how VAWA violates due process and civil liberties.
   - If the person believes strongly in equality, then explain how VAWA promotes sex-based discrimination.
   - If the Congressman is known to be a strong supporter of VAWA, then emphasize how VAWA addresses an important social problem, and you have suggestions to make the law better.
7. If you are asked a question that you can't answer, tell them you will get back to them later with the information.
8. At the end of the meeting, ask them what their impression is. Ask if they have any suggestions on what you should do next. Don't press your case too hard.
9. Ask if there is anything you can do for them such as getting statistics, etc. It may be as simple as keeping them updated.
10. End the meeting on a friendly, positive note.

++
Date of RADAR Release: July 24, 2006

Register now for the National Family Law Reform Conference, to be held September 15-16 in Alexandria, Virginia (near Washington, DC). The conference will address the crisis of family law, including biased family courts, false allegations of domestic violence, child abuse, and much more. For more information: http://www.acfc.org/site/Calendar?view=Detail&id=100021.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Jury Deliberates for Second Day in Andrea Yates Trial

Anonymous · 25 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Read how many possible excuses were made for this horrible child murderer. She was possessed and depressed with the tagline that she had postpartum depression: "Yates suffered from severe postpartum psychosis, which he called the cruelest of mental illnesses" Yes the cruelest, and it ONLY happens to women. How convenient.

Mensactivism.org Fund Drive

Scott · 25 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

MANN has now been running on our new server and software for nearly a month. I hope everyone is happy with the changes - I know it's definitely improved the reliability and usefulness of the site to me. I've rarely done this before, but I'd like to make a special request for donations to help keep Mensactivism.org going. Our new dedicated server and hosting costs have gone up significantly, and while I will continue to pay for them out of pocket, contributions are greatly appreciated, and I pledge that 100% of donations received will go to defraying our hosting costs. Please consider making a donation via PayPal. I will take down this post on August 1. Thanks for your support!

Excellent Essay by Erin Pizzey, U.K. DV Expert

Roy · 25 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy's iFeminist site gets some props for publishing a new essay by Erin Pizzey. Just a sample of E.P.'s quotes -- "(Feminists) redefined the Marxist goalposts and declared that it was MEN (the patriarchs) not Capitalism that held power advantages over women ... and all men were now the enemy."... "It cannot therefore be assumed that men are bound to be an asset to family life." ... "Both sexes are harmed when exposed to violence and either sex can become a victim or a perpetrator."... "The feminist movement resolutely refuted any argument that women should be allowed to take responsibility for their choice of relationships. The image of women as victims, as helpless childish dependents upon brutal men worldwide has damaged relationships between the sexes."

Men are More Likely Than Women to Be Victims in Dating Violence, UNH Expert Says

bull · 26 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A 32-nation study of violence against dating partners by university partners found that about a third had been violent, and most incidents of partner violence involve violence by both the man and woman, according to Murray Straus, founder and co-director of the Family Research Laboratory at the University of New Hampshire. The second largest category was couples where the female partner was the only one to carry about physical attacks, not the male partner.

As studies, such as this, make their way into mainstream thinking, perhaps most reasonable people will start calling into question feminist myths that have yielded them much and altered social policy in destructive ways?

Article Here

UK: Men may be banned from daring to bare their chests

Evil White Male... · 26 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Chalk this one up to "criminalizing being a man." As the story states: "...But one of the things that is depressing for anyone going shopping is the numbers of shaven-headed men, mainly in their 30s and 40s, who seem to think people want to see their torsos...It is an unfortunate thing, but those men who like best to bare their stomachs are the ones who have too much stomach." I wonder when they will criminalize women who where belly shirts with their big fat bellies hanging out. Oh never because we must celebrtae femininity and the female form in all its shapes and sizes, and criminalize the masculine.

Andrea Yates NOT GUILTY!

Anonymous · 26 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This is the most disgusting thing I have ever seen -- kill children and walk free. A man sits next to a young child on a plane and is immediately considered a criminal molester. I am so upset I can't express it...

Arrest Warrant Issued for N.J. Stripper Who Kept Severed Hand in Mason Jar

bull · 26 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

“Police were looking for a nude dancer who kept six human skulls and a human hand in a Mason jar in her home here after the woman failed to show up for a court arraignment on Wednesday.”

Yet another nut-case on the loose! I can’t imagine how she will link her bizarre behavior to the “oppressive patriarchy,” but, I’m sure it will enter into the picture; poor dear!

Story here.

Alumnus' Letter to Large University sets an Example

Matt · 27 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I nearly fell out of my chair in stunned disbelief when I saw this letter.

The U of Rochester has a large women's studies center and attracts numerous "scholars" to this place every year so they can do "research" and write their papers condemning the evil patriarchy, etc. Thus the fact that the official magazine of such a place would print not just that letter, but have it as the first one of the issue, is astounding. Kudos to the author and to the brave souls who let it go to press. I am sure they will get a good thrashing from the director of the "Susan B. Anthony Center for Women's Leadership" for it.

Ahh, another brick is knocked from the wall and a little more daylight is allowed to shine through...

A long overdue essay: Honey, you're not a victim klp · 27 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Anne Taylor Fleming finally takes a high-profile victim wanabee to task in Honey, you're not a victim

Excerpts:

1. Just once, it would be great to hear a young woman stand up and say, "I take total responsibility for my part in this," instead of ducking and dodging. That would be a great service. That's the path of true women's liberation, instead of this victim pose that is just a male-bashing perversion of what it means to be liberated.
2. It would be refreshing if Bianchi could do that -- take responsibility -- and then just disappear and refuse to answer any more questions. But, of course, in a culture in which celebrity is the highest value and there is little distinction between fame and infamy, you'd better enjoy your limelight moment, even if it's a tawdry tabloid one. You want a book deal? Step right up.

   I couldn't find Fleming's contact information, but some words of thanks and compliments are clearly in order.

Duke LAX Case: Nifong Admits Some Criticism Justified

Evil White Male... · 29 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.
Excerpt: Nifong also said there was evidence he hoped to have in the case, such as DNA, but that it didn't pan out..."There were things we hoped to have in terms of evidence that we ended up not having," Nifong said...However, Nifong said that he stands behind the case....

"I have not backed down from my initial assessments of the case," Nifong said.

Translation: We hoped to have evidence to back up our wild, false, politically motivated, misandric claims, we didn't, but they're still guilty. I FEEL it!

Match.com Resorts to Shaming and Sexism

Anonymous · 29 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

From Yahoo PR, Match.com has released a press release that's just chalk full of sexism, outdated gender roles and typical male shaming. Citing a rampant rise of "Bachelorism", it continues, "educating" readers about the symptoms of this "horrible disease" which includes: "Generally acting like a jerk, Leaving the toilet seat up and Generally unkempt appearance." Eventually winding down to suggest the cure and you guessed it, finding your soulmate on their site.

IMO, this is both negative and positive news. Negative that companies still find it acceptable to shame/slur/insult men in their advertising. Positive that is evidence that more and more men are waking up to the fraud that is marriage and the anti-male courts and proactively joining in the marriage strike.

Verdict for Murder of Two Children by Father Shows Pro-Female Bias in Courts

Anonymous · 29 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Ever wonder how things would have played out if Andrea Yates was an Andrew? Wonder no more -- "A bank executive who said he had battled depression for years was sentenced Friday to life in prison for killing his 5-year-old twin daughters. David Crespi, 45, pleaded guilty to two counts of first-degree murder to spare his family the trauma of a trial and possible death penalty. He has a wife, Kim, and three surviving children. In court, Crespi apologized to his family and his late daughters, Samantha and Tessara, saying the girls "deserved to grow up" and be loved. Crespi told police that in his periods of depression, he thought of killing his children, wife and parents or running over strangers with his car, but he had always been able to stop himself.

New Comment Viewing Options

Scott · 30 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Philalethes dropped us an e-mail earlier today lamenting the lack of sorting options for viewing comments on the new site. Fortunately, this was a feature I simply forgot to enable, and users can now configure how they want comments to appear. Just like the old site, the comment sorting controls appear at the top of the comments list. Set it as you'd prefer and click the "Save settings" button. Enjoy!

Children Are More ValuableThan Women Are More Valuable Than Men, Says UN

Anonymous · 31 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Not that this will come as a surprise, but in an emergency session of the UN's security council about Isreal's continuing attacks on Lebanon, there were plently of the usual anti-male comments:

"Action is needed now before many more children, women and men become casualties of a conflict over which they have no control," Annan said.

"These bombs which killed 57 children and women are American bombs," Syria's U.N. Ambassador Bashar Ja'afari said.

The real surprise was that a member of the UN said anything at all which recognized that a few men might also be injured or killed, when in fact it is primarily men who suffer and die during wars and armed conflict.

While it's a tragedy that people are dying, the UN just couldn't resist the chance to put men in their place. It appears that the less one contributes to society, the more that person is "worth" in society's eyes. Perhaps we should stop working ourselves to death to provide for children and women, fighting the wars to protect them and paying the majority of taxes if we wish to improve our status.

Another Defeat at the Supreme Court of Canada

Paragon · 31 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Divorced dads lose in SCC ruling on child support

Here is the story.

Excerpt:

Canada's Supreme Court has ruled ex-spouses [READ: DADS] could face hefty retroactive child support payments if they fail to declare increased earnings -- a decision that could affect thousands of divorced and separated couples across the country.

The ruling was unanimous: 7-0. The top court decided that ex-spouses -- the fathers in most cases -- who pay support have an obligation to report increases in income which could therefore boost their court-ordered payments.

NH Men's Commission June 2006 Minutes

Scott · 31 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The June 2006 minutes of the NH Commission on the Status of Men have been released. They include a summary of Dr. Murray Straus' testimony before the Commission, as well as two different perspectives regarding the annual domestic violence conference sponsored by the NH Attorney General's office.

Mom gets 40 years for raping her children; Dad gets FIVE life sentences!

SpikeRants · 31 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

So, the crime is the same: the parents are having sex with their children and doing it live over the web. But, mom only gets 40 years, but the dad gets 5 consecutive life sentences PLUS 96 additional years!

No bias indeed.

Story here.

The Missing Men: Laid-off Workers Dropping Out Permanently

Roy · 31 July 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Millions of men in the prime of their lives, between 30 and 55 -have dropped out of regular work. They are turning down jobs they think beneath them or are unable to find work for which they are qualified. About 13 percent of American men in this age group are not working, up from 5 percent in the late 1960's. Most of these missing men are former blue-collar workers with no more than a high school education. But their ranks are growing at all education and income levels. It is a significant cultural shift from three decades ago, when men almost invariably went back into the work force after losing a job and were more often able to find a new one that met their needs. The missing men are also more likely to live alone. Nearly 60 percent are divorced, separated, widowed or never married, up from 50 percent a decade earlier...

Story here.

--

Ed. note: This also printed (surprisingly) in the NYTimes today here.

Mass Mutilation of Boys Celebrated, Trumpeted

Matt · 1 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

In the same issue as they covered the matter of millions of non-working/work-discouraged men, they laud and trumpet mass mutilation of boys here. There's seemingly just no end to the madness the MSM promulgates.

RADAR Alert: Step 5: Follow-through Makes for a Successful Pitch

Matt · 1 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

In step 4 we gave tips on how to meet with your Congressman and persuade him or her of the need for Congressional hearings into the egregious civil rights violations fostered by VAWA.

Just as important as holding the meeting is following up after the meeting:

1. As soon as possible after the meeting, review your notes. Your recall about the meeting will be much better if you review your notes sooner rather than later. Add to your notes any details that you did not have time to write down.
2. Pay particular attention to the following:
   - Write down any actions the staffer asked you for, such as looking up statistics or providing other documentation. If you promised you'd get them information, you do not want to forget what you promised them. So write down what you promised. And then be sure to look up the information and get back to them as soon as you can. If the things they ask for require explaining, set-up another meeting.
   - Write down any tips they gave you about other legislators, etc. Pass this information on to RADAR so other people can take advantage of it as well. Send email to election2006-at-mediaradar.org
3. Regardless of the outcome, be sure to send a thank you to your legislator by mail or FAX. The thank you should summarize what was discussed during the meeting, as well as any followup actions agreed to during the meeting, both actions that you agreed to take and actions that they agreed to take.
4. Phone the office to follow up on any action items they said they would do for you. Be persistent, without making yourself a pest. Unless the action item is time-critical, calling every week or so should be sufficient.

And above all, regardless of whether or not your Congressman or his staff seem supportive, always remember to be polite and courteous when you talk to anyone in the Congressman's office.

++
Date of RADAR Release: July 31, 2006

Register now for the National Family Law Reform Conference, to be held September 15-16 in Alexandria, Virginia (near Washington, DC). The conference will address the crisis of family law, including biased family courts, false allegations of domestic violence, child abuse, and much more. For more information: http://www.acfc.org/site/Calendar?view=Detail&id=100021

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic
Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Dead Broke Dad Starts Non-violent Protest

Luek · 1 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here is a story about a "deadbroke dad" John Murtari who decided to stop cooporating with the system that enslaved him.

July 31, 2006 - UPDATE - John began his six month jail sentence today, at the Jamesville Correctional Facility near Syracuse. He reported to the Jail at 4 PM, and as planned, refused to cooperate with staff once he identified himself. He took a seat in the lobby. He refused to answer processing questions and politely explained that he was not going to cooperate. John stayed sitting in a chair until two officers placed him into custody and dragged him out of the room.

AT LEAST SEND HIM LETTERS OF SUPPORT!

John Murtari, P.O. Box 143, Jamesville, NY 13078

Woman jailed in housekeeper slavery case

Evil White Male... · 1 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A woman keeps another woman enslaved for years and receives two months of jail time -- the last sentence has the husband yet to be tried. They appear to have added sexcual assault on to the list of "other charges" he faces. Any bets on his jail term? Story here.

Movement in UK: Close Women's Prisons!

Anonymous · 2 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I don't think any introduction is needed for this story, other than soon the streets of the UK will be plagued with psycho women! I am even more strongly thinking about moving to South America. The UK is really becoming a joke.

Mother Sentenced For Cutting Son's Tongue -- NO JAIL TIME!

Anonymous · 2 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A mother accused of cutting off part of her son's tongue with hot scissors avoided a 5-year prison sentence and was sentenced to 10 years' probation.

Davis heated a pair of scissors on a stove in August 2004 and held it to her 6-year-old son's neck before cutting off a piece of his tongue as punishment for talking back, authorities said. Her estranged husband, Toby Davis reported the injuries to police and she was arrested.

The most telling: In the meantime, Richardson said Samantha Davis was relieved by the sentence. "She was hoping for straight probation but at least it isn't the five years in prison the state wanted," he said.

Update on Nationwide Equal Parenting Class-actions

Anonymous · 2 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

As of today (Aug 2, 2006), exactly 2650 of 3143 (84.3%) potential Yahoo groups for each and every USA county are online and running, including total saturation in 43 States, one more State completed by tomorrow morning, one other State within a few days, and working on people now to setup the remaining five States. Graphic here.

All 3000+ county classactions are tentatively scheduled for nationwide simultaneous court filings during "Constitution Week" (Sept 17-23), assuming a couple of remaining manpower factors are leveraged into proper place by that time.

Plaintiffs are THREE "Classes": (1) noncustodials; (2) young adult children of custody; (3) any taxpayer -- YES, each and every one of the 230+ million American taxpayers are eligible Plaintiffs in these lawsuits against family court injustices. Details on eligibility, and which county is appropriate, for each plaintiff, are available here.

Defendants in each suit are the county itself, and that county's family court judges/masters/commissioners.

More general details, and links to each State's set of county groups, are found here.

Violent Femmes at Any Age

Matt · 3 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Some of you will remember hearing about this story some months back. Goes to show you that anyone at any age regardless of their sex can murder with impunity-- and almost get away with it. Speaking of which, I wonder what she'll say was her motivation for doing this to her husband? Three guesses.

Prison Guard Indicted in Candy-for-Sex (ie, Rape) Case

Matt · 3 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Suppose she'll see any jail time for this little caper? Probably not. Excerpt:

"SEATTLE -- A King County Jail guard accused of having sex with two juvenile inmates pleaded not guilty to four charges of custodial sexual misconduct at her arraignment Tuesday, KIRO 7 Eyewitness News reported.

Lydia Korolak, 34, is accused of having inappropriate sexual relations with two boys half her age that were under her guard at the King County Juvenile Detention Center in 2001 and 2002."

The Kiss-and-Accuse Capers

bull · 3 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

If you are falsely accused of domestic violence, and don't have the financial resources to fight back, you are screwed! This is probably not news to those MRAs that have been there.

Or as Carey Roberts puts it, ""But few men have the financial where-with-all of a former NFL player, sitting judge, or media personality. So when they are accused of domestic violence, men often find themselves dragged into a legal machinery that eventually leaves them penniless, disillusioned, and broken."

Carey's Article Here

Protesting Fathers Assaulted by Lawyer's Wife

Paul Catton · 3 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The NZ Fathers Coalition were out again on Sunday 30th July 2006 protesting against the carnage created by the Family Court process outside the homes of the the most notorious Lawyers who assist this devastation with alacrity.

We were then subject to assault.

A referral to Anger Management?

Kind Regards
Paul

Another teacher rapist - 229 charges!

Anonymous · 4 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This story in NineMSN today has a lot to be encouraged about, The Police are clearly throwing the book at her. The story uses the term "sexual assault" not "seduced" or "slept with". At last decent journalism from NineMSN!

Ric
Respectworks.org

Michigan man not even allowed to seek parrental rights to biological son

Demonspawn · 4 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

In this story we can see the plight of a man not allowed to seek any parental rights of his son that he had begun to raise. Why? The mother no longer wants him around, and since the child was conceived before her divorce from a previous marriage, her former husband is the one who has to take responsibility.

Shocking excerpt from a member of the Supreme Court of Michigan: "As a practical matter, defendant's former husband will almost certainly never provide financial support for defendant's son."

That's right, folks! This man is attempting to sue for rights to SEE his son, and the courts are complaining about who is going to pay for the child. Can the courts make it more obvious that they see men as nothing more than walking wallets?

A Man to be Proud Of!

Matt · 5 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Saw this story today and it made me feel good. Glad to see someone living his convictions even if it means foresaking running water! Of course, now that his story is published, will he get a moment's peace? His observations about finding a mate will likely get some laughs from the audeience as well.

Woman assulted teen - not the other way around

Matt · 5 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I will render the entire story, brief as it is and noticably scant in details, since the registration and login is tedious.

Published : Friday-August 04, 2006

Woman attacked teen, police say

NASHUA, N.H. (AP) - A woman has been charged with sexually assaulting a teenage boy and filing a false police report saying she had been raped.

Police say Robin Mowery of Nashua, 35, was arrested Wednesday night on seven sexual assault charges.

Investigators say she had sexual contact with the boy in April and May and, when confronted about it, reported he had raped her at knifepoint.

Police began investigating after they came into contact with the boy through an unrelated investigation.

They said Mowery later retracted the rape report.

Convicted female murderer granted 4th trial

Paragon · 5 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This story shows a true bias and a definite problem in the Canadian legal system. Giving a 4th trial to this monsterous killer allows the victim's family to endure nearly a decade thus far, and probably more, than a decade of torture when it's all said and done.

Kelly Ellard will get a 4th trial in the beating death of Reena Virk. It took two trials to get her found guilty and now she's getting a 4th trial almost a decade after the fact.

To give come perspective, her at-the-time boyfriend was an accomplice (though Ellard was the planner, instigator, and primary attacker in the beating) and he only got one trial, was found guilty, and has already finished his sentance. After this long, why on Earth should she get another trial?

Suman Virk, Reena's mother, called the situation "ridiculous."

"I don't know where this judge gets off thinking that Kelly Ellard is entitled to this," she said. "There's been three trials. She's been found guilty.

Potential US Pres'l Candidate Seeks Platform Including Joint Custody

Matt · 6 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I just learned about this fellow. Not making any judgments one way or another re political parties, it is simply very significant that someone has as a major part of his would-be platform such things as mandates for a presumption of joint custody and accountability for how C/S payments are spent. This would not have even appeared on a potential gubenatorial candidate's web site five years ago; now we see it on a possible contender for a major party nomination for president placing it on his campaign's home page. It's progress!

Excerpt:

- introducing an EQUAL PHYSICAL CUSTODY ACT that would mandate states to enact a rebuttal presumption of joint physical custody in divorce;

- introducing the CHILD SUPPORT FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY ACT, which would mandate child support recipients to file reports supported by documentation that child support payments were used for the child’s direct benefit.

Routine questioning prompts fight, arrest

bull · 6 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

“A young woman assaulted an Anchorage police officer Saturday morning in Mountain View after the officer approached her for a routine questioning on the street, police said.”

Notice her bail is only $10,000 even though she had an outstanding warrant for violating her probation from a previous assault charge. If a guy, with a history of assault, attacked a police officer what would his bond be set at?

Artcle Here

RADAR Alert: Step 6: Now Tell Us About Your Successes!

Matt · 7 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

If you have followed the first five Alerts, you have already requested a meeting with your Congressman. (If you haven't done this yet, it's not too late to request your meeting - but time is running out!!)

As soon as you hold your meeting, please report the results of your meeting to RADAR. Please answer these 5 questions:

1. Name of Congressman (or Senator) and state
2. Date of your meeting
3. Did the staffer or Congressman appear to be supportive of your request to call for civil rights hearings on VAWA abuse?
   - Yes
   - No
   - Unsure
4. Were there any particular sub-issues (false accusation, male victims, mandatory arrest, etc.) that particularly attracted the staffer's interest?
5. Other comments

Please send your information to RADAR at election2006-at-mediaradar.org. We will compile this information and provide feedback shortly after the November 7 election.

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++
Date of RADAR Release: August 7, 2006

Register now for the National Family Law Reform Conference, to be held September 15-16 in Alexandria, Virginia (near Washington, DC). The conference will address the crisis of family law, including biased family courts, false allegations of domestic violence, child abuse, and much more. For more information: http://www.acfc.org/site/Calendar?view=Detail&id=100021

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Indian cabinet proposes women-only judges for rape cases

Evil White Male... · 7 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

So here it is(alternate link here). Only women are qualified to hear rape cases. So the assumption here is that somebody's biology, thier vagina in this case -- makes them better qualified at deciding on cases with impartial justice.

"This is a very positive step and will help get justice for the rape victim," said Girija Vyas of India's National Womens' Commission. "Until now, male lawyers were able to threaten the victim and scare her." The government has already introduced new fast-track courts to try to clear the backlog of rape and other serious cases.

By no means do I believe that rape is something that should be taken lightly, but coming from someone who has been falsely accused of it here in the good old USA, does anyone smell the potential for abuse by the ever-increasing number of feminist lawyers and judges that call all intercourse rape?

UCLA's Daily Bruin Publishes Op-Ed by NCFM-LA Member

Matt · 8 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Kudos to Marc Angelucci for this well-written piece. It was so good, it even got published! At UCLA, no less!

Excerpt:

When problems carry on into adulthood, men today make 85 percent of homeless adults, 92 percent of occupational deaths, 90 percent of prisoners, 80 percent of deaths by suicide, and have higher death rates than women for each of the 10 leading causes of death.

Meanwhile, fatherlessness remains the leading predictor of crime in a community.

The illusion of male privilege at the top of society masks male disposability at the bottom and the rest of society.

Feminism has become a billion-dollar industry, while men's issues remain severely neglected due to a combination of political correctness, chivalry, misandry and the myth of male power.

Ads and Male-bashing: Newsbusters gets it

Anonymous · 8 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

It was good to see this blog entry on the Newsbusters site. More of this can only help. For those of you not familiar with Newsbusters, they deconstruct, on a daily basis, the news of the day as fabricated by the MSM. Great stuff.

Male Gender Bias Test AKA "What Would Gloria Steinem Do?"

Anonymous · 8 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I'm not sure how many of you have seen this already, but it's a hilarious Q&A about gender feminism's paranoid, anti-male psychosis. It's also about the funniest thing I've ever seen that contains the words "gender" and "feminists". Thanks to Fred X for pointing it out.

"Facing Middle Age With No Degree, and No Wife"

Matt · 8 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The NYTimes seems to have become obsessed of late with such topics as what are people's sleeping arrangements. Nonetheless, this article actually starts discussing some of the issues MRAs have been talking about for years. Alas they don't get too deep into them, but that they are even mentioned and not immediately dismissed or set upon shows there is some MSM progress here.

But soft, we should not get our hopes up too much, for there is always tomorrow's edition!

Dedicated MRA Completes Eighth Day of Hunger Strike

Matt · 9 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

John Murtari has completed eight days without food or water in protest of the injustices meted out by the so-called family courts. read about him here in MDN. Excerpt:

"Drawing on his faith, John Murtari is enduring the suffering that comes from eight days of dehydration and starvation, surprisingly, conditions he imposes upon himself. Murtari, father to Domenic, 13, decided his 6-month sentence for child support arrears would include the 'nonviolent action of noncooperation,' to draw attention to the need for Family Law Reform and Parents' Civil Rights. Murtari, a faithful, loving, gentle man graciously calls it being 'uncomfortable,' yet speaks in a weak voice, saying the feeding tube he once feared was, 'now the best thing I can imagine.'"

News Station Identifies & Includes Photograph Of Juvenile Male Rape Victim

Anonymous · 9 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A 19 year old teacher's aide ran off with a 14 year old student at the school where she taught. She is being arraigned on charges of interference with custody, but nothing else. They quote the police claiming the two had a "romantic relationship". They identify the boy, and include a picture of him with the teacher's aide. The age of consent in New Hampshire is 16. Even if the woman isn't charged with rape, it is ridiculous to post a 14 year old boy's picture and name on the internet in a case like this.

Story here. Hat tip to fark.com

Blame it on the patriarchy

bull · 9 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

“The feminism is a secular religion with its own high priestesses, dogmas, and initiation rituals. Its creation myth holds that on the first day Goddess created Eve, and all was right with the world. But that idyllic state was shattered when first patriarch Adam stumbled into the Garden, pounded on the table, and demanded his apple.”

Carey Roberts, in his usual straightforward (male) fashion, takes another slab at debunking feminism.

Carey’s Article Here

Disparities in Workday Dress Standards for the Sexes

Matt · 10 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This in the NYTimes does a good job of pointing up how men and women are held to substantially different standards of "business attire" and speculates on why that may be. Indeed, heaven help the man who dares wear anything not within very prescribed limits to the office!

Latest in the McCartney Divorce

Matt · 10 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

For those wanting a little tabloidism today, the latest in the McCartney divorce news is here. She's going to walk away with a great big chunk of this guy's wealth, all for five minutes of "work": standing there and saying "I do", in a dress no doubt bought by Paul.

The New Double-Standard

anthony · 10 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The New Double Standard, by Marty Nemko. Excerpt:

'This establishes a new double standard: you can, without reprisal, viciously denigrate men without substantiation but dare you make a milder statement about women, your career is eviscerated. That double standard will make academics, leaders, and the media think 10 times before saying something negative about a woman, but not about a man. That will immeasurably hurt how men are treated today, and in future generations.'

Mother and Grandmother Send Kids on Boosting Spree

Matt · 11 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A mother and grandmother would never do this sort of thing, now would they? Of course not. Some man must be behind it all.

"BEDFORD, New Hampshire (AP) -- A woman turned herself in to police Wednesday after a store surveillance video captured footage of two children sneaking behind display cases to steal thousands of dollars worth of jewelry, allegedly on instructions from their mother and grandmother."

Dads Get Postpartum Depression, too

Matt · 11 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Hard to believe, except for men whose wives/partners have had children-- or is it? This is one less thing feminists can assert is the exclusive province of women, though I am sure some will try.

Does this mean if a man does something insanely violent after a baby is born he can claim it as a defense, too?

Mary Winkler Out on Bond

Matt · 11 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The update is here. I doubt if she had been the victim, he would be out on bond. The report closes with the usual sort of "she has only seen her kids once," blithering foolishness. Well, that's because she's unpredictably muderous!

India: Wife charged in abortion-extortion case bharati · 11 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Save Indian Family member Swarup finally was able to summon his wife (to court) for killing his unborn child on account of not meeting her monetary demand.

This sends a strong message to ladies who would like to kill their child that it is not proper to kill a child on failure of the husband to meet your monetary demands.

Charged With Underaged Sex At 15

Luek · 12 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here is one that is hard to believe. A 15 year old male is to be sentenced this month because he had sex with an 11 year old female who subsequently got preggo and is now a mother at 12. If a 15 year old male can be convicted of having underaged sex then why can't the 12 year old female?

And to think this happened in the land of Braveheart. BTW: the 12 year old female was recently arrested for a "drunken incident." Get it?

Update on John Murtari's Protest

Matt · 12 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

"Commitment" is a word that doesn't begin to cover this fellow's dedication. He has been put on a feeding tube but continues his vigil. Story here.

John, we're in your corner!

Gold Diggers Are Alive and Well in 2006

bull · 13 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

“Men, I urge you to be more conscious about whether you are allowing yourself to be turned into being a beast of burden to pay for the expensive house, kids, and all the material “stuff” that you might well be willing to trade away for a more pleasant life.” Marty Nemko

Apparently, according to Marty, most women who start out on a career path, in the end, long to be taken-care of by a successful male breadwinner who will maintain them in a lap of luxury.

Marty’s Article Here

Petition to Finnish Government

Matt · 13 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Please sign the petition here to the government of Finland to rectify the injustices in their child custody/divorce system. The petition accepts signatures from people regardless of their nationality. The more the merrier, so please do your part.

Mary Winkler out on bond

bull · 15 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

"I have nerve now, and I have self-esteem. So, my ugly came out," Alabama investigator Stan Stabler quoted Mary Winkler as saying, according to a report on the hearing published in The Jackson Sun. She referred to herself as a "moron" and an "evil woman," the newspaper reported.

My bet is that eventually the preacher will be condemned as an evil patriarchic oppressor and she will be painted as poor Ms. Wonderful who fell victim to his abuse and rightfully killed him in self-defense.

Article Here

RADAR ALERT: What if my Congressman is a Die-Hard VAWA Supporter?

Matt · 15 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The goal of the Truth and Consequences campaign is to meet with every Congressman to discuss VAWA abuse. One question that is often asked is, "What should I do if my Congressman (or senator) is known to be a strong supporter of VAWA?"

Basically you've got two options:

1. Work with the incumbent, or
2. Support the challenger.

Work with the Incumbent

If you choose to work with the VAWA supporter, you need to adjust your goals and expectations. Any progress you make will be incremental. When you meet with the staff person, highlight the good work that VAWA has done in serving DV victims. From here you have two possible strategies:

1. Walk through the unintended consequences of VAWA. Show how overly-broad definitions of DV and mandatory arrest laws often lead to false accusations. The goal with this strategy is bring the system back into balance so the true victims of domestic violence can be helped.
2. Key in on the male victims of domestic violence. Emphasize how VAWA does not treat men equally and male victims are often turned away. The goal here is to make the language of all VAWA appropriations bills and policy documents male-inclusive.

Support the Challenger

If you choose to work with the challenger, set up a meeting and explain his or her opponent's position. State your objections to VAWA and explain what you are asking for: Congressional hearings on the massive civil rights abuses of VAWA.

As long as they agree with you, support them. Challengers are desperate for help. Here you will want to help as much as you can on their campaign. Putting up signs and knocking on doors are very helpful.

If the challenger wins, he will be grateful to you. Then set up a follow-up meeting as soon as he is in office. If he loses, stay in contact because he may run for another office. Play for the long term.

It's Your Call

You make the call: Work with the VAWA supporter and key on short-term, incremental change, or help the challenger and look for long-term change.

++++++++++++++++++++++

Date of RADAR Release: August 15, 2006

Register now for the National Family Law Reform Conference, to be held September 15-16 in Alexandria, Virginia (near Washington, DC). The conference will address the crisis of family law, including biased family courts, false allegations of domestic violence, child abuse, and much more. For more information: http://www.acfc.org/site/Calendar?view=Detail&id=100021

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada speaks about women's contributions to the court: 'a Piano'

Paragon · 16 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

From The Toronto Star:
"Since we have women on our bench, we have nicer pictures on the walls, better food in our dining room, a cake for every judge's birthday, yoga and, recently, a piano," McLachlin said in a speech at the Canadian Bar Association's annual meeting.

On a personal level, women judges could make for "happier courts," McLachlin said yesterday.
[SNIP]
For at least two decades, Canada has defined merit as the ability to do the job, McLachlin said. As a result, the pool of prospective judges has widened, with more women, academics and lawyers with limited courtroom experience becoming judges, she said.

So, Chief justice Beverley McLachlin thinks that the important role that women play in the justice system is to make sure that the court houses get pretty pictures in the hallways and birthday cakes for judges; oh and a piano, can't forget the piano. BUT, she also mentions that Canada hires inexpirienced women judges [READ: INCOMPOTENT] over males (who if hired, must be even more incompotent then the females so as not to show them up) who have much greater in court experience.

Once again, a hardcore feminist puts having a vagina (and optional YOGA classes) over hard work and experience in order to fast track 'equality'

God help every man when YOGA classes are higher on the list then justice according to the Supreme Court!

Story here

Confessions of a Divorced Wife

anthony · 16 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I was absoltely horrified when I read this story (search on "'x'files" to see the post). I never realized how the legal system and vindictive women can so easily destroy a man's life. If there was one positive aspect, was this woman realized her mistake, and understood how she was manipulated. She is now taking action from preventing the same injustice from destroying her brother's life.

Also of interest: An Open Letter To Women In The Domestic Violence Movement

So. Carolina: Four women, 15-year-old Girl Arrested after Murderous Crime Spree

Evil White Male... · 16 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

E.B. Strong, executive director of Gang Out in Columbia, said he has seen increased violence among groups of young women in the Midlands. “I think young ladies are trying to prove they are just as bad as males and are attacking males,” he said.

YOUNG LADIES?! AHH, GIMMEE MORE OF THAT OL' CHIVALRY...

Story here.

More Excuses in MSM for MGM

Matt · 17 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Use of Circumcision to Fight AIDS Epidemic Is Debated

Mutilation over education... always some excuse for MGM, isn’t there? You can be sure if it was so much as hinted at in any way that FGM in any way reduced the spread of any disease, there'd be hell to pay for whoever wrote it, true or not.

There seems to be no end to the desire among certain civilizations to see people, sometimes men, sometimes women, sexually mutilated. I wonder what the genesis of this sickness is?

Two Good Pieces: Real F4J Update, Murtari Backgrounder

Matt · 17 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

MANN Admins received notices from the author of these two pieces, Teri Stoddard, for our information. Great pieces, both-- thanks Teri!

Prison Break-in Averted: Real Fathers For Justice Downes Free, Photos

John Murtari: Man, Son, Father... Peace-loving Activist

Mens-links.net

AngryMan · 17 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Check out the new look Men's Links. It has had a face-life and lots of great new content. Content changes every week, so check back regularly. If you have any suggestions for links, please let them know.

Death leap father 'murder charge'

bull · 18 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here's a case to compare and contrast with the Winkler murder. Let's see how the press, society, and the judicial system handle this. Will there be inquires about an abusive wife or of his suffering from depression that led to his actions? I think not! Will there be a rallying of support and people minimizing his responsibility? I think not! According to the hospital director, "He should commit suicide."

Article Here

Update on 'Murdering Grannies' Case

Matt · 18 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The latest is here. Apparently, murder and fraud weren't enough; they had to kill their victims more slowly than necessary.

Does one ever hear an older male murderer referred to in press as a "murdering grandpa"?

School Shooting Appears Tied to Bullying, Gender Stereotypes

Scott · 19 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A group I had never known of before, the Gender Public Advocacy Coalition, reports here about a shooting at a Farmington, Missouri high school last year related to the bullying and taunting of Joshua Minks. Minks was subjected to teasing on a regular basis because of his appearance, and one day last October brought a shotgun to school, firing it into the ceiling when he was confronted by three students (fortunately no one was physically injured). GPAC reports an interesting study by the California State Schools Coalition that "27% of students reported harassment for not being masculine or feminine enough and over half said that school was unsafe for boys who weren't as masculine as other boys."

High suicide rate for older white males

Evil White Male... · 19 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Well a small blurb appears at UPI regarding the fact the suicide rate is 3 times the national average for white males. Just imagine the uproar if women's suicide rates were higher. The reason cited:

"Suicide experts are unable to pinpoint an exact cause for the higher rate but some believe white males lack the resilience and coping mechanisms that women and other ethnic groups have."

SO WAIT, ALL OF A SUDDEN WHITE MALES ARE WEAKER. AND HERE I BELIEVED THEM WHEN THEY TOLD ME WHITE MALES WERE THE MOST POWERFUL GROUP -- HENCE THE REASON WHY THEY OPPRESS EVERYONE...

Ed. note: Of interest: the comments people are leaving around the story on the UPI page. Apparently, plenty of folks see through the foolishness.

N.O.W. Urges Fems To Blog More

Roy · 21 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I guess the poor turnout at last month's 40th Anniversary bash (only 800 of N.O.W.'s alleged 500,000 members showed up -.001%) has made Kim Gandy pay more attention to "new" media. A recent N.O.W. website "Take Action" blurb worries that –"There are already many feminist voices in the blogosphere, but many of the blogs are written by ultra-conservative men with narrow perspectives." Fem-bloggers are advised – "If someone blogs about feminism being dead, or NOW being washed up, write a comment about why this is far from the truth and why you are proud to be a NOW activist!" Sounds like a self-esteem crisis, and creeping paranoia have invaded N.O.W.'s HQ.

UK: "Accused", Tues. 22nd Aug, BBC2, 9:00pm - 10:30pm

Anonymous · 21 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Documentary about the allegations of ritual child abuse on the remote Orkney island of South Ronaldsay in 1991, for which social workers were severely criticised. Fathers speak about their experiences. DVD this program and show it to everyone you know.

"Oh no!! You're one of THEM!!?"

Matt · 22 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Apparently, for certain women of a certain orientation, there can be nothing worse than becoming... male! Or, at least looking and acting like one.

So much for the whole "acceptance of differences" that gets touted from some quarters, eh? Looks like exercises in mind-broadening and learning tolerance appear to be necessary for more than just a couple types of person. Read The Trouble When Jane Becomes Jack.

RADAR ALERT: It's Baaa...aack! "Breaking the Silence" re-aired by PBS affiliate!

Matt · 22 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Last Sunday, KVCR in San Bernardino, CA aired Breaking the Silence: Children's Stories.

Many of you will remember that when this film was aired last October, its blatant bias resulted in a veritable firestorm of criticism for PBS, and condemnation from both the PBS and the CPB ombudsmen.

For those who need a reminder, a history of the controversy is included below and also found on RADAR's site here.

Last December, the CPB ombudsman found that the producer's attempt to justify excluding certain interviewees, "amounts to a plea of guilty to violating the fairness and balance standards of PBS."

Considering this, one wonders why a PBS station would choose to air this film now? Three possible explanations come to mind:

- Cluelessness?
  Perhaps the management at KVCR is so clued out that they managed to remain blissfully unaware of the universal condemnation of this film's bias.
- Arrogance?
  Could it be that the management at KVCR consists entirely of true-believers who intend to push this bias onto an unsuspecting public, regardless of whether or not it violates PBS' editorial standards?
- A harbinger of things to come?
  Could it be that PBS has a real doozy planned for this October, and their stations are re-airing "Breaking the Silence" to soften up their viewership in advance?

This week please write to KVCR. Tell them:

- The bias in "Breaking the Silence: Children's Stories" has been condemned by both the PBS ombudsman and the CPB ombudsman.
- The CPB ombudsman has stated, "It might be difficult to find a clearer breach of PBS editorial standards," in regard to producer Lasseur's admission that the film's suppression of alternative views was intentional.
- PBS affiliates should require that any material they broadcast must rigorously adhere to standards of objectivity and honesty. The taxpayers and PBS' donors deserve no less.

Address your letters to:

KVCR General Manager: Larry Ciecalone
and
KVCR TV Program Director: Don Leiffer, Jr.

You may email them at:
hometeam-at-kvcr.pbs.org or send snail mail
to:
KVCR TV
701 South Mount Vernon Avenue
San Bernardino, CA 92410

We also recommend you send a copy of the letter to PBS headquarters. If emailing, CC to the following addresses: pkerger-at-pbs.org, rnrauer-at-pbs.org, and jmcnamara-at-pbs.org.

If sending via U.S. mail, address the copy to:

Paula Kerger
President and Chief Executive Officer
Public Broadcasting Service
1320 Braddock Place
Alexandria, VA 22314

History of the controversy caused by the bias in "Breaking the Silence: Children's Stories":

- Production of this film was paid for by the non-profit arm of Mary Kay cosmetics. The non-profit has a demonstrated history of one-sided portrayals of domestic violence.
- The film's producers, Dominique Lasseur and Catherine Tatge, cherry-picked their interviewees, outright rejecting anyone whose story might call their biased premise into question.
- Furthermore, although they knew that one of the mothers in their film had been found by the court to have committed child abuse, Lasseur and Tatge portrayed her in the film as a sympathetic victim.
- In one of the very first analyses of the film, RADAR worried that it would be used by women's rights activists to stampede legislators into passing ill considered laws. It was! The Mother's Research and Reference Center organized screenings and demonstrations at courthouses nationwide. They even announced that one PBS affiliate planned to help them advertise and promote a special screening of the film for judges and other officials.
- When one commentator suggested that the PBS station's willingness to provide special favors for this lobbying effort may be considered evidence of partisanship, which would violate PBS' own mission statement as well as their Congressional mandate, the evidence was quickly removed from the web.
- This is a film that was so biased that it was roundly criticized by both the PBS and the CPB ombudsmen. PBS' own ombudsman said the program "had almost no balance".
  And echoing RADAR's prediction, CPB ombudsman Ken Bode opined, "PBS may find it has been the launching pad for a very partisan effort to drive public policy and law."

  But Bode went even further. He quoted producer Dominique Lasseur as stating that the lack of balance and fairness was intentional, and concluded, "It might be difficult to find a clearer breach of PBS editorial standards".

++
Date of RADAR Release: August 21, 2006

Register now for the National Family Law Reform Conference, to be held September 15-16 in Alexandria, Virginia (near Washington, DC). The conference will address the crisis of family law, including biased family courts, false allegations of domestic violence, child abuse, and much more. For more information: http://www.acfc.org/site/Calendar?view=Detail&id=100021

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

LiveScience: Christopher Wanjek supports male circumcision mens_issues · 22 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I used to respect Christopher Wanjek's articles, until I read this one in support of male circumcision. What about "My body, my choice" for men as well, Christopher? Wanjek also makes the false analogy between the men's movement and a white rights club in college. What a jerk!

Christopher Wanjek's email address is wanjek-at-yahoo.com in case you want to write to him about what you think of his article.

Steve

Update: Activist father Murtari thankful for press, lucky to be alive

Matt · 22 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The latest from Teri Stoddard re John Murtari's brave efforts is here. Thanks to everyone who is part of making his sacrifices appreciated and his cause noticed!

Woman goes on trial for polygamy

Matt · 23 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

'Polygamy'? Well, that too, but also try 'fraud', 'grand theft', etc., etc.

Story here. Excerpt:

Kyle Elizabeth McConnell admits she has a habit of marrying men.

But while a lawyer for the 46-year-old says McConnell is simply a serial monogamist, Michigan authorities claim McConnell was a polygamist.

They allege she went from from one spouse to the next before they realized she had cleaned out their bank accounts.

McConnell has already pleaded guilty to attempted forgery and intent to defraud for writing bad checks to her former husband, Richard McConnell. Those checks were drawn on an account belonging to Len Battaglia, who she married before McConnell.

"Rally for polygamy"?

Matt · 23 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

On the heels of the last story, look at this (requires RealPlayer plug-in). Add it to your list of things that fall under "Now I've seen everything," and send it on to your favorite feminist when she starts babbling in any way, shape, or form about marriage.

Murtari Hunger Strike Makes TV News

Matt · 24 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A local news station covered the Murtari hunger strike, including the interview on its web site. Teri Stoddard has the latest here.

"John Murtari, 49, former Air Force training pilot and loving father to 13-year-old Domenic says he's back on strike. The New York father stopped eating and drinking July 31 to highlight the desperate need for family law reform when he reported to serve a 6-month sentence for child support arrears."

Mismeasuring Women

Anonymous · 25 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article shows 'A study done in 1994 hints that if women think nobody is watching and judging them, and there are no physical consequences, they might be more aggressive than men.'

Very good stuff here. How does this relate to crime activity when they are likely not to be punished for pedophilia, or reproductive rape?

Los Angeles County Child Support Services Department Helping Prisoners but Abusing Good Fathers

AbusedFather · 25 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

News Release:

August 25, 2006

On Sunday, August 20, 2006 two representatives from the Los Angeles County Services Department (LACCSSD), attorney Lisa Garrett and Al Reyes Division Chief of Communications and Marketing, appeared on a Los Angeles television show (KTLA, Pacesetters) touting "Child Support Awareness Month" and the wonders of their abusive government agency. Not surprisingly, Garrett merely reiterated the propaganda that LACCSSD wants the public to believe and Reyes practically beamed with joy when he stated, "We have a new approach in our department where we try to reach out and start a dialog," and "We're doing outreach in jail."

What Garrett and Reyes didn't discuss was the blatant disregard for the rights of innocent fathers who serve as prey for LACCSSD's ceaseless illegal and unethical actions whereby they literally steal money from good men who have never missed a single child support payment. In fact, Garrett had the audacity to state, "We are helping all the parents in the case, not just the custodial parents." Of course, one father knows that this statement is a blatant lie as he has been subjected to severe ongoing abuse at the hands of LACCSSD since January of this year when their chief attorney, Lori A. Cruz illegally garnished his wages without a court order and by intentionally lying when she fraudulently told his employer that he owed arrears. The fact of the matter is that the father had always made every court ordered child support payment, on his own, for six years and had actually overpaid.

His exhaustive efforts to stop LACCSSD's abuse were only met with scorn and belligerence. Things became so out of control that he filed a suit against LACCSSD and appeared in Los Angeles Superior Court on April 17, 2006. During that hearing LACCSSD and their attorney, Dennis Coe, were ordered to halt their aggressive and completely unfounded collection activities. This only serves to demonstrate the hypocrisy of Garrett's statement on Pacesetters that "Any of the enforcement remedies that we do use, due process is still available to everyone. We can't throw that out the door." The father had had his wages garnished based upon Cruz's entirely fraudulent claims that he was in arrears and had been denied all due process. The court then set a second hearing date for July 7, 2006. Not surprisingly, Dennis Coe intentionally ignored that court order and LACCSSD continued to harass the father. Since then, LACCSSD has:

- continued to fraudulently garnish the father's wages
- tried to have a professional license held by the father revoked
- fraudulently reported the father as being severely past due on child support to the credit bureaus
- illegally garnished money from the father's unemployment checks after he was laid off in June
- stole the father's tax refunds in July

At the second court hearing, Dennis Coe even signed the court document that stated that the father had actually overpaid his child support. That, of course, hasn't halted LACCSSD's and Coe's abuse. In fact, the father's attorney wrote three (3) letters to Coe after the July court hearing demanding that the abuse stop but Coe, not surprisingly, refused to respond to a single one of them. It wasn't until after the father sent out his first news release, on July 27, 2006, as well as wrote to every member of the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors, that another LACCSSD attorney, Deborah Echeverria, finally wrote back to the father's attorney. Not surprisingly, Echeverria glossed over the facts and completely ignored the ongoing abuse. Two weeks ago, Coe finally called the father's attorney and again lied by promising to correct the fraudulent information on the father's credit reports that were now stating that he was more than 90 days past due. As of today, Coe has refused to correct any of the problems. In fact, the father learned that LACCSSD just stole more money from his latest unemployment check.

Garrett made numerous other patently false statements on Pacesetters, as evidenced by the above, including:

“We are now working with the non-custodial parents to ensure that they receive the same services that the custodial parent receives.”

“We are helping all the parents in the case, not just the custodial parents.”

“We try to look at both sides of the story.”

“If someone doesn’t owe any arrears then we send out a notice saying there is no arrears owed and just forget it.”

As Los Angeles County Child Support Services has no problem appearing on television shows bragging about their prison outreach programs while, at the same time, ignoring court orders, committing fraud, lying, etc., an e-mail writing campaign is now underway to inform LACCSSD that the rights of innocent fathers will no longer be tolerated. We are urging all members of the public to write to:

Philip Browning, Director - pbrowning@childsupport.co.la.ca.us
Lori A. Cruz, Chief Attorney - loricruz@childsupport.co.la.ca.us
Dennis Coe, Attorney - Dennis_Coe@childsupport.co.la.ca.us

Other e-mail addresses have been posted on the Los Angeles County Child Support Services Department Sucks site at:

Los Angeles County Child Support Sucks

Be sure to ask LACCSSD why they are so happy to serve prisoners while abusing innocent men.

Female prison workers cited in 2/3 of sexual offenses against inmates

Anonymous · 27 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Female staff were the offenders in two-thirds of the prison cases, and two-thirds of the victims of prison staff were male inmates, according to the U.S. Bureau of Justice Statistics."

Australian Authorities OK Exclusion of Men From Cultural Events

Anonymous · 27 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

"Of course, as is right and proper, Victorian law demanded we get permission in the interests of equality," said SWAN's Debbie Roberts.

Link.

The continuing, feminist-driven campaign to push men out of public spaces is obviously gathering steam. I'd be very curious to know what (if any) bona fide reason there was for the exclusion of men in this case, or if the Victorian authorities simply rubber-stamped the hatred of men as western governments invariably do.

Rare Case of Chimerism Highlights Inequities

Anonymous · 28 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Looks like the same people who aired that all-male sexual predator series not too long ago are also in on a sideways attack on DNA testing. Check out this story on ABC's Primetime web site regarding chimerism, an extremely rare condition wherein a person has the fused DNA from two different eggs in their genetic make-up. One discussion board for this subject shows the mentality: a one-in-millions exception to a general rule is grounds to suspect all DNA testing. Notice they also spend a lot of time talking about how terrible it must be to be a mother who is having her role as mother questioned, or her word questioned on the matter. Guess she found out just a little bit what it's like to be a father in a divorce case.

NCFM-LA Member Gets Interview on Radio

Matt · 28 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Kudos to Marc Angelucci of NCFM-LA for his recent interview on 700WLW in Cincinnati. It is archived and available for dowload here (search on 'Marc' to find it), or right-click to download it here (.mp3 file).

Teacher's gender affects learning (Study)

RandT · 28 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A new study suggests that boys learn more from men and girls learn more from women.

"[The] study comes as the proportion of male teachers is at its lowest level in 40 years. Roughly 80 percent of teachers in U.S. public schools are women."

Expectedly, a feminist group was sought for commentary (men's groups weren't). Interestingly, the author notes, "As provocative as this all might seem, I really haven't gotten that much negative feedback."

AP article available here.

School Teacher Fights Back Against False Accusation

Luek · 29 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A school teacher is actually suing his ex-wife who used the old false accusation gambit of sexual molestation of the children to gain an advantage in custody disputes.

False accusations by women are encouraged by society because there are really no consequences for using them.

Coming Soon to RADAR: Warren Farrell on Domestic Violence

Matt · 29 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This week, RADAR's not asking you to make any calls or write any letters.

But we do want to let you know that Warren Farrell has graciously given RADAR permission to serialize the chapter of his book "Women Can't Hear What Men Don't Say" that deals with domestic violence.

Watch the RADAR website for the first installment, coming soon!

Murtari Update: A Day in the Life

Matt · 30 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Latest from Teri on John Murtari here. Thanks Teri! And keep the faith, John! Excerpt:

"The following message was written by John Murtari on August 20, the day before doctors removed his feeding tube. He learned on Wednesday they would not be reinserting it as planned. He immediately resumed his hunger strike; no food or liquid, just enough water to keep his mouth moist.

John sounded weak on Friday, and I haven't heard from him as expected this morning. I pray he's in court today."

NH CSM July Minutes Now Available

Scott · 30 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The minutes from the July meeting of the New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men are now available from the CSM's web site. This meeting included two guest speakers. Dr. Elaine Holden of The Reading Foundation spoke about the prevalence of boys in special education programs, the lack of male educators in elementary schools, and reading disabilities. Justice Gerry Boyle (former Chair of the CSM before he was appointed to become a judge two years ago) also came to speak about domestic violence issues in the courts. See the meeting minutes for highlights from both of these speakers.

Comment Rating System Enabled

Scott · 31 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A few people have requested that a comment rating system be put into place like we had on the old site, so that they can filter out comments that get moderated down. I have enabled a similar system on MANN this evening, so you'll see a rating drop-down list on each comment, and can set your comment display settings to show or hide low-rated comments. Feel free to make use of this to make the commenting system more valuable. Some bugs may need to be worked out at the start, so let us know if the system is being abused.

Women 'steal' money from their partners - but that's okay

GaryB · 31 August 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This news story from the BBC tells how more and more women are secretly setting up bank accounts, without their husbands knowing, and stockpiling cash to ensure their own future.

It makes it pretty obvious that this is basically to secure their own futures when they decide to leave.

In other words, they take money that belongs to them both (stealing), lie and cheat and then eventually leave him.

But is this looked on in a negative way? Like hell it is. The entire article praises them for protecting themselves from those mean-old men, clever women you.

As usual, what would it sound like the other way around? If men were stealing money and storing it in secret bank accounts for the day they left their wives, I'm pretty sure they'd be portrayed as evil, selfish schemers. But not the girls.

Nice quote: ""Money controlled by women is more likely to be spent on children than money controlled by men, children lose out too," she said."

Call to Action: CA Bill Threatens 'Delinquent' NCPs with Collection Fees

Matt · 1 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Teri Stoddard gives us an important heads-up re a bill in California that would further empower the state to incent collection agencies to pursue "delinquent NCPs" by making them pay for the honor of being hunted down! Details here. She also includes the latest on John Murtari's struggle.

BBC: Semen 'may fuel cervical cancer'

Anonymous · 1 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

I.M.O this is nothing but junk science designed to further poison relationships between men and women by enforcing the premise that such relationships are bad or wrong or somehow inferior to 'alternative' lifestyles, etc. However they have sunk to a new low here by suggesting that the very thing men and women ARE DESIGNED FOR in order for us to continue as a species is a danger to women! Since the majority of women have sex with men there must surely be a pandemic of Cervical Cancer?

Guilty until Proven Innocent, with a six year waiting period

Demonspawn · 1 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I don't know what to say about this other than I can't beleive it is true.

Excerpts:

A recently enacted law allows county prosecutors, the state attorney general, or, as a last resort, alleged victims to ask judges to civilly declare someone to be a sex offender even when there has been no criminal verdict or successful lawsuit.

A civilly declared offender, however, could petition the court to have the person's name removed from the new list after six years if there have been no new problems and the judge believes the person is unlikely to abuse again.

If you are male, move out of Ohio.

Kim Basinger Ordered to Visitation Hearing

Anonymous · 3 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Kim Basinger is being hauled into court to explain why she has violated a judges order to permit Alec Baldwin to see his own children. In my opinion, this is big news for the mens movement. Finally, we have a family court judge taking action against a female public figure for abusing child custody. It is amazing to me that a family court judge would hold any ex-wife/mother accountable much less a famous/pretty one. This judge has a set on him.

Article here

RADAR ALERT: Warren Farrell on Domestic Violence, Part 1 This Week

Matt · 4 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Beginning this week, RADAR will be serializing the chapter of Warren Farrell‘s book “Women Can‘t Hear What Men Don‘t Say” that deals with domestic violence. Read Part One here.

++
Date of RADAR Release: September 4, 2006

Register now for the National Family Law Reform Conference, to be held September 15-16 in Alexandria, Virginia (near Washington, DC). The conference will address the crisis of family law, including biased family courts, false allegations of domestic violence, child abuse, and much more. For more information: http://www.acfc.org/site/Calendar?view=Detail&id=100021

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Saudi Prince’s Wife Charged With Enslaving 2 Women

Evil White Male... · 5 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

You know, all I have to say about this is THANK GOD women are the fairer sex. Thank God women are not as evil and horrible as men. Thank God women aren't as er, uhm, oh, never mind...

Germaine Greer Lauds Death of Steve Irwin

Anonymous · 5 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Bitter feminist Germaine Greer just can't help taking a shot at the tragic death of Steve Irwin - apparently "The animal world has taken revenge on self-deluded animal tormentor Steve Irwin" Story here.

Are you a misogynist?

Anonymous · 5 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This story is interesting as it raises the term misandrist in mainstream media:

"If you don't know what a misandrist is, I'm not surprised. It's the opposite of a misogynist and means someone who hates men. Maybe I hang out with inarticulate boofheads, but I've never heard the word used in conversation, let alone as a put-down for a woman who's pointed out basic differences between how men and women view the world and interact with each other. Datum: Microsoft Word's spellcheck doesn't even recognise the term, it is so obscure."

Glenn Sacks Launches Campaign to Stop Unjust CA Bill

Matt · 6 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This is definitely a take-action item. Excerpt from the newsletter:

NEW CAMPAIGN--Veto Domestic Violence Bill Which Excludes Fathers, Children from State Services!

The California Assembly just passed a domestic violence bill which deliberately perpetuates the state's harmful policy of excluding men and their children from receiving state-funded domestic violence services. Under AB 2051, only "battered women" are eligible for the shelters, hotel vouchers, counseling and legal services the state provides victims of domestic violence. We're calling on California Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger to veto this misguided legislation.

I want all of you to write to the Governor to tell him to veto AB 2051 by clicking here. By filling out the form you will be sending a fax to the Governor.

NYTimes Drools Over Males-Getting-Eaten-Alive Theme

Matt · 6 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This sort of reminds me how it is reportedly illegal in Japan to display erotic art in public, so instead Japanese artists make use of animals-having-sex as a theme to portray eroticism.

Obviously discussing human males being killed by females during or after sex and sort of objectifying it as a natural phenomenon would provoke too much overt outrage, so instead, the Times must titillate itself with the "story" it has run. I guess it's their way of reminding everyone (as if we needed it) of such wondrous cultural standards as the disposability of males and the awesome reproductive and sexual powers of women-- all without actually doing so overtly.

Subtle as a sledge-hammer on the back of the head.

But, you have to admire their imagination and cutting-edge scientific reporting; after all, such sexual cannibalism in the insect kingdom has only been known about and studied for, oh, a mere 1,000 years or more.

Great Article on Male DV Victims

Matt · 7 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Thanks to Marc A. for pointing it out.

Excerpt:

Men, too, reporting abuse by partners
Published: September 5, 2006
By ABBE SMITH

Men are victims too.

It's the message more domestic violence experts locally and statewide are trying to get out.

And it's a fact becoming more evident by the growing number of male victims reporting cases of abuse.

According a 1988 report by the state Attorney General's Office, just 6 percent of those arrested for domestic violence were women. By 1998, the total had risen to 16.5 percent.

RADAR ALERT: Almost Anything Now Counts as Domestic "Violence," Report Finds

Matt · 8 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Last December TV talk show host David Letterman found himself named in a restraining order. The order was granted at the request of Colleen Nestler of Santa Fe, New Mexico. Nestler alleged that for the past 11 years Mr. Letterman had been sending her "thoughts of love" in the form of mental telepathic messages and televised facial gestures.

According to a RADAR Special Report (.pdf file) issued today, Letterman's actions indeed represent domestic "violence," at least according to the laws of New Mexico. In that state, domestic violence is defined as "Any incident by a household member against another household member resulting in ... severe emotional distress ... [or] harassment."

The law states "cohabitation is not necessary to be deemed a household member." Any "person with whom the petitioner has had a continuing personal relationship" is a "household member." So Nestler's decade-long telepathic relationship with Letterman made him a member of her household, even though he had never heard of her.

RADAR's report, "Expanding Definitions of Domestic Violence, Vanishing Rule of Law" analyzes the civil domestic violence laws in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. The report concludes that statutory definitions have been widened over the past decade to the point that in most states, almost any action can be viewed as "violent."

"Domestic violence has become whatever the man does that the woman doesn't like," notes RADAR Steering Committee member Lisa Scott of Washington State. "Finding out she is having an affair and demanding she stop is seen as 'abuse.' This often triggers the woman to file for a restraining order, where no real evidence is required. In my 18 years of family law practice, I have seen this pattern occur over and over."

Each year 2-3 million restraining orders are issued in the United States. Half of all restraining orders are issued without even an allegation of physical abuse. In 85% of cases, it is the husband or boyfriend who the target of the order.

Most orders are issued on an ex parte basis, which precludes the defendant from being present to give his side of the story. Restraining orders require the defendant to vacate the house and restrict contact with his children.

"Expanding Definitions of Domestic Violence, Vanishing Rule of Law" can be viewed at http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Restraining-Orders.pdf.

We are asking people to share the report with media representatives, state legislators, and judges. Reporters are being asked to write articles that explain the problems of our current domestic violence system; lawmakers should roll back overly-broad definitions of abuse; and judges should demand higher standards of proof before issuing restraining orders.

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++
Date of RADAR Release: September 6, 2006

Register now for the National Family Law Reform Conference, to be held September 15-16 in Alexandria, Virginia (near Washington, DC). The conference will address the crisis of family law, including biased family courts, false allegations of domestic violence, child abuse, and much more. For more information: http://www.acfc.org/site/Calendar?view=Detail&id=100021

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a network of concerned men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

McElroy Advocates More Scrutiny of Violence Data

Roy · 8 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy (iFeminist) McElroy published an excellent piece at FoxNews that argues for closer attention to new violence statistics, defends Dr. Laura Schlessinger, and condemns (non-I?) feminists for dismissing the data. McElroy writes -

"In a recent radio broadcast and newspaper column, Dr. Laura Schlessinger addressed the 'Take Back the Night' movement that protests violence against women. She accused it of deliberately ignoring data that suggests men may be more vulnerable to violence than women. ... That PC ideology rests on the concept of women as victims and men as aggressors.

The backlash against Schlessinger was dramatic and instructive to others who consider questioning the dominant paradigm of victimhood."

The piece also includes a look at the recent Australian "Personal Safety Study," which found that "although men are three times more likely than women to be the perpetrators of violence, they are twice as likely to become victims of physical violence or threats."

I appreciate that in her writings Ms. McElroy is becoming more of an MRA advocate for objectivity, and less of a strident instructress.

John Murtari On Talk Radio This Sunday

Luek · 9 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

MRA hunger striker John Murtari will be on a call-in talk show this Sunday at 10 am EST. You can hear the show on the internet and call in using a toll-free number. A great opportunity! Link here.

Ed. note: Obviously, the time has come and gone for this interview. However, a link to a recording of the interview (an .mp3 file) is found here.

Randolf-Macon Student Body Calls Trustees "Traitors" for Voting to Admit Men

Anonymous · 10 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

During the end of this article, CNN conducted a poll, asking if "single sex colleges" served any purpose. Out of 17,968 polled, 60% believed single sex colleges should exist. The irony? There are ZERO all-male colleges in the United States*. Many women attending this college are extremely angry and one alumna even tried to sue the university citing "legal concerns".

I suspect a feminist lawyer was hired and failed to manipulate the administration with false statistics regarding date rape and violence against women on college campuses.

Ed. note:

* This isn't true. There are five men's colleges left in the US. Contrast this to the 65 women's colleges that are operating (hope I got that count right, there are so many!).

Australian Blogger Defends Men

afg · 11 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here is a blog entry from Melbourne's The Age concerning the myth of male privilege. Have a read and then join the discussion below. The author seems to have ticked off a lot of feminists. Starts with:

"I argue that men do not enjoy a life of privilege. Far from it, a look at the life of the average man is a fairly depressing sight. What kind of privilege it that bestows on men a ten-year-shorter life span than women, and a higher incidence of disease, crime, alcoholism and drug addiction? What kind of privilege is it that blesses men with a frequently self-destructive need to achieve?"

Woman-Only Talk Radio Network Started

Anonymous · 13 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Feminuts Gloria Steinem and Jane Fonda are trying to start a talk radio network run by women for women. That's right folks, the femnags are now trying to take control the of the New Media which people are flocking to these days. They finally realized that it's male dominated so, as usual, they have to try and take it over and ruin it like everything else they touch. The ironic part of this news release is their characterization of the, "male dominated talk radio world as hostile and argumentative." What do they think feminists are?

The Sun Promotes Myths About Rape

AngryMan · 13 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

In their new campaign against rape, the Sun promotes many familiar myths, and makes absolutely no mention of false accusations.

Go to the Sun's website and sign their petition.

Name: STOP STIRRING UP HATRED
Address: AGAINST MEN

Serial Rape Accuser is Front Page News

ahhkaboom · 13 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The Daily Mail (of the UK) has put a story about a serial rape accuser on the front page (of both print and online versions of the newspaper) entitled Man freed but serial rape accuser remains anonymous. Excerpt:

"An innocent man jailed for a sex attack was dramatically cleared after it emerged that his 'victim' is a serial liar with a long history of crying rape.

But because of laws that protect her anonymity, judges are powerless to name and shame her, leaving her free to make more false accusations against blameless members of the public."

PBS follows through on promise to show a more balanced documentary axolotl · 13 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This has been a hot topic on this board for a long time. We have all been wondering if PBS would respond to criticisms of 'Breaking The Silence', a completely one-sided documentary on divorce issues and domestic violence, by subsequently showing a more non-biased documentary.

Glen Sacks' aricle is here.

Although he lauds PBS for the new documentary, he points out that there are still some weaknesses in it.

There is also a proverbial WEALTH of information on related issues at the above link. Enjoy!

Woman May Avoid Jail After Setting Man's Groin On Fire

Anonymous · 13 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A Montreal woman may avoid jail after she poured fondue fuel (mostly methanol) on a man's penis and set it on fire while he slept. The attack followed the well-known female pattern of attacking men with a weapon while they are defenseless and when the woman is in no danger herself. She was convicted of aggravated assault last year, and remains free on bail, despite having committed a violent and potentially deadly assault. Story here, with details here.

If the man had poured methanol on her and set her genitals on fire, hospitalizing her for a month with third degree burns and scarring her for life, would he be spared jail? Would he be free on bail? Will she be spared the "blame and shame", Duluth model "treatment" programs?

I'll take the issue of "violence against women" seriously just as soon as society starts taking the issue of "violence against men" seriously.

Family: Media Coverage May Have Pushed Missing Boy's Mom Over Edge

Evil White Male... · 13 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

You know, every time one of these stories creeps up (which is quite often), I notice more and more that there is ALWAYS an excuse given for the woman's horrific behavior. It is ALWAYS somebody else's fault. Never once is a woman blamed or expected to take responsibility for any of her actions. Yet, on the other hand, there is never a legal, emotional, social, or any other kind of excuse afforded to a male. Women truly are the WEAKER sex.

RADAR ALERT: Out-of-Control DV Allegations Hurt Families and Children

Matt · 14 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Let's say you've never physically abused your spouse or children. Now imagine the following scenario:

1. Your spouse accused you of domestic violence on the basis that you "harassed" her. (According to RADAR's recent report, "Expanding Definitions of Domestic Violence, Vanishing Rule of Law," 17 states now consider harassment to be a form of domestic "violence.")
2. The accusation was made during an ex parte hearing, so you had no opportunity to be present during the hearing or to refute the charge.
3. As a result of the false accusation, temporary custody of your children and other benefits were awarded to the accuser.
4. State laws in 26 states require the incident to be considered by the divorce judge as a "best interest of the child" consideration. As a result, you were not able to receive shared custody, even though you never abused your children, or were never even accused of abuse.

Each year, over 2-3 million restraining orders are issued – in half those, there is not even an allegation of violence.

When parents make false allegations of domestic abuse, children are bharmed the most. In many cases, a variety of perverse incentives are at work behind those allegations that harm children, according to a Special Report issued by RADAR.

"Perverse Incentives, False Allegations, and Forgotten Children" analyzes state domestic violence laws and the incentives they provide to make false claims. The report is now available at http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/Perverse-Incentives.pdf.

As a result of being separated from the father, children are placed at higher risk of child abuse, academic difficulties, conduct problems, and involvement with the criminal justice system.

The report is designed to be shared with media representatives, state lawmakers, and judges.

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++
Date of RADAR Release: September 13, 2006

Register now for the National Family Law Reform Conference, to be held September 15-16 in Alexandria, Virginia (near Washington, DC). The conference will address the crisis of family law, including biased family courts, false allegations of domestic violence, child abuse, and much more. For more information: http://www.acfc.org/site/Calendar?view=Detail&id=100021.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Female Rapist Allowed To Offer "her side" On The Today Show

anthony · 14 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Convicted rapist Debra Lafave has been granted permission to sit down with Matt Laurer and explain "her side" regarding the rape of a 14-year-old student. How many television interviews has anyone seen regarding a male who had sex with a 14 year old girl? She uses her bipolar disorder as an exuse. Millions of people suffer from a bipolar disorder, how many of them rape? I watched the interview (morbid curosity) and here is a direct qoute from the rapist: "He wanted it, so I gave it to him"!

Harvard supports false research glenwillis · 14 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Feminists in charge of Harvard have long been supporting biased research (read all about what happenned a few years ago).

Well now they are explicitly working with lobbying groups. The National Network to End Domestic Violence-- a lobbying organization for women who opposed fair funding for male victims of domestic violence--is working with a researcher at Harvard University to make up more numbers about domestic violence.

I found out more about this project at this report (.pdf file).

It's on page 6. The study is going to show how many women are victims completely ignoring men and ignoring how many of these women are kidnapping their children and using federally funded hiding spots to help them.

I did some detective work and found out the researcher is Radha Iyengar and her email is riyengar-at-rwj.harvard.edu. She needs to be told to do unbiased research on not produce more feminist propaganda and call it research. She has a resposibility if she is at Harvard. I sent her an email and hope you will encourage other people to do the same. She should not work with a biased lobbying group to do research in the first place and people should know about the dirty tricks feminists use to break up families.

Update on "Murdering Grannies" Case

Matt · 15 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Looks like the "murdering grannies" are gonna fight it out. Story here. Starts with:

LOS ANGELES, California (AP) -- Two women pleaded not guilty Wednesday to charges that they killed two homeless men in hit-and-run crashes so they could collect on the victims' life insurance.

Helen Golay, 75, and Hungarian-born Olga Rutterschmidt, 73, were being held without bail.

At the hearing, Superior Court Commissioner James Bianco denied Golay's request to use makeup, get tweezers to pluck her eyebrows, wear her own clothes and be awakened no earlier than 7 a.m. on court days.

Outside the courthouse, her lawyer, Roger Jon Diamond, explained her request.

"Any lady would want to be well groomed to make an appearance in court," he said. "If she looks haggard and not well groomed and she appears in the press, then a jury pool would be affected by that."

Las Vegas Teen Murderess: "I didn't think anyone would miss anybody like that"

Anonymous · 16 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Truly shocking story. I'm not sure if you've covered this in the past:

"When Lobato, now 23, realized Bailey didn't have any drugs, she pulled out a butterfly knife, cut off his penis and killed him with a combination of stabbings and blows to the head with a baseball bat, according to Kephart."

When it's men, they're only bodies and corpses

Kirk · 16 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This and most other similar news reports are careful to avoid saying it, but every once in a while it slips by that all these victims are men:

Latest one here from BBC:

"Forty-seven bodies have been found across Baghdad, police say, raising the total number of corpses found in recent days in the Iraqi capital to 176.

Many of the victims had been tortured or shot in the head or chest."

Family Begs "Attacker" To Return Mother's Baby

anthony · 17 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Notice how the associated press only one time* in this entire article made reference to the suspect being a female. ("...any woman who talked about wanting a child or acted pregnant recently.") If you take that line out of the story, you would have no idea it was a female. The words "Attacker", "Abducter", and "Someone" were used instead of directly stating "woman".

---

* Ed. note: Actually there was one other reference: 'They fought after the woman told Ochsenbine "I'm here to take your child,"'. But that one was the only other such reference I could find, and I agree the word 'man' would have appeared a lot more had the suspect been known to be male rather than female.

LaFave Case Double Standard Gets MSM Time

anthony · 17 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I hope to see more articles about this obvious double standard. Watching The Today Show interview, I noticed the rapist (divorced by her husband) has seemingly kept the house with an impressive swimming pool. Can her ex-husband petition the court to force this rapist to take back her maiden name?

Anonymity for women who 'cry rape'

Anonymous · 17 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This woman repeatedly made false rape allegations. The prosecution witheld this information from the defence lawyers and an innocent man spent 3 years in prison. After his conviction was thrown out by the appeal court, he gets no apology from the police or crown prosecution service, and she still gets to keep her anonymity - so she can get another innocent guy thrown in jail?

Man rejects first penis transplant-- utility also questioned

Evil White Male... · 18 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This is one of the most frightening stories I have ever read. The man loses his penis in an accident -- gets a new one in the first ever of its kind surgery. But... "although the operation was a surgical success, surgeons said they had to remove the penis two weeks later. "Because of a severe psychological problem of the recipient and his wife, the transplanted penis regretfully had to be cut off," Dr Hu said."

Even more disturbing, AND I QUOTE: "...The question is whether it's right to be doing a transplant for what may be seen as cosmetic reasons."

Thank God health insurance companies pay for breast implants after breast cancer in women...

Women: make sure you get 'me time'!

Demonspawn · 18 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Men: Continue to work yourselves to death.

According to this CNN article, it is very important for women to take care of themselves and spend some time on themselves. Mind you, they recommend this if the woman is "single or married, childless or mothers".

But only if your female. While it's obvious that EVERYONE could benifit from spending some time on themselves, apparenly CNN thinks that only women are worthy of it. Why, in an health article that could obviously benifit both genders, is it represented as a woman's issue?

Prison for Lapdancer who cried Rape

Ragtime · 18 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

FINALLY, a false accuser is actually going to do time -- and in the UK, too! Congrats UK!

A teenager who entertained four men in a Cardiff Bay flat with a private lap dance - which was filmed on a mobile phone - has been sent to jail for crying rape. Cinzia Sannino, 18, of Llanishen, Cardiff, was locked up for six months at Cardiff Crown Court after she admitted making false allegations

See the article here -- it's a good read.

Man fired for being "good looking"

Anonymous · 18 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

"HUNKY teenage labourer Joe Norman was sacked from a building site at a girls school — for driving pupils into a frenzy.

The 18-year-old, who had spent the summer helping to build an extension, started getting wolf-whistles when classes resumed after the holidays."

Story here.

Ed. note: No double-standards here, no siree!

Innocent Man Released from Prison, False Accuser Remains Anonymous

Anonymous · 18 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Check out this story. An innocent man spent time in jail for a sexual offence he never committed. His accuser has a shocking history of false accusations. Yet she remains anonymous.

He was convicted by Northamptonshire police in England. Here is their feedback form. Please send them your comments.

Feminists Have Sites Set on Science Depts.

Matt · 19 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

As predicted, after conquering liberal arts, they have targeted the sciences. Read all about it here. I feel sorry for the old fuddy-duddy professors in their labs at night-- do they have any idea what is about to hit them?

Female Teacher Gets No Jail Time for Sexual Relations with Student

anthony · 19 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This story should come as no surprise.

"If this was a 29-year-old male and a 17-year-old female, I would be inclined to order some incarceration," noted 3rd District Judge Mark Kouris during sentencing yesterday for Cameo Patch."

A mother's love?

Steven Brown · 20 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Truly horrendous abuse case here. Not just (just?!) the physical abuse of scalding but the mental abuse too:

"A mother poured boiling water over her five-year-old son after he annoyed her by playing a game and asking questions about his father, a court has heard."

"Men's Rights Activists" - The Book

StephenBlack2009 · 20 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

At last, something positive about men in the world of literature!

I found this book, Men's Rights Activists by Steeves Volmar. It's a good read, very encouraging, realistic and helpful. All about men's issues from biased laws to courts, etc.

I'd recommend to all of you!

BIAS AGAINST MEN PROMINENT AT ICFV, 2006

MR · 20 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

BIAS AGAINST MEN STILL APPEARS TO BE ONE OF THE MOST PROMINENT DISPLAYS AT SAN DIEGO'S ANNUAL INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE OF FAMILY VIOLENCE, 2006

The annual International Conference of Family Violence took place this past week (Sept. 14 thru 19) in San Diego, California. Visual #1 I was not able to attend every day that the conference was open, but made it for the entire day on the 18th.

How much taxpayer money was used by participants, and, or exhibitors, in the furtherance of this event is anybody's guess, considering what a business minded person would describe as "questionable VAWA accounting methods." In my opinion, it appeared that a very significant number of people in attendance where people who have directly benefited from the billions of dollars of taxpayer's money that has funded VAWA over the years.

The Conference consisted of numerous exhibition booths set up in the hotel's Grand Ballroom, and break out workshops in other meeting rooms. The workshops addressed various issues surrounding family violence.

The National Coalition of Free Men, San Diego (NCFMSD), and NCFMLA (Los Angeles) once again had an exhibition booth at the event. Giving credit where credit is due, Harry Crouch, NCFMSD did by far the lion's share of the work to make the NCFM booth a reality. His efforts to gather and set up educational material, posters, handouts, etc., etc., etc. must honestly be given credit for the primary reason this men's issues effort was as successful as it was. During a lull in visitors to our booth, when most people had vanished into workshops, I took the opportunity to take this photo of our exhibition booth. Visual #2

While NCFM was grateful to be permitted to display at this event, again, the mood of the event was still less that what I would describe as a "male friendly environment."

Silhouettes of family violence victims have been displayed at various Family Violence events in San Diego for a number of years. Here is one located in the main hall at this years ICFV, Visual #3 The first time I ever saw the red painted silhouettes was at least five years ago, and at that time all the silhouettes were female. A couple of years ago, a couple of male victims were added to the inventory, and this year, apparently household pets (a dog and a cat) have been included. Visual #4 and Visual #5 Women, dogs, cats and men were all on display at the ICFV this past week in San Diego, and in that order, in my opinion.

The President of NCFMLA was the first to notice the disparity in the "placing" of the silhouettes, and called the disparity to the attention of one of the conference's planners. It appears both male silhouettes were placed at the end of a long dark hallway that no one had reason to go down. After this complaint one of the male silhouettes was placed at the entrance to the Grand Ballroom (exhibition room). Visual #6 The other was placed outside the door of the men's restroom. Visual #7 The female silhouettes, the dog silhouette, and the cat silhouette did not need relocating from their prominent positions in the main hallway leading to the Grand Ballroom.

During the course of the day I had opportunity to stroll through the exhibition room, and talk with some of the exhibitors. Although some progress was apparent in regards to recognition of men as victims of domestic violence and women as perpetrators, one needed only scratch the surface to discover many pre-existing gender feminist biases, still touting the same old gender bigoted propaganda casting the man as "the batterer" and the woman as "the victim" (woman good/man bad). Visual #8

At one point as I was browsing through some family therapy literature, I got into an interesting discussion with the woman part of a husband-wife team exhibiting their Family Therapy program. Refreshingly, the woman approached the dynamics of family dysfunctions not following the standard gender feminist model, but instead followed more closely human motivational factors. The big workbooks on display at this booth were labeled "Men's Tools" and "Women's Tools." Upon running across the standard domestic violence industry, Duluth, Power and Control wheel Visual #9 (.pdf file) I pointed out to the man that the page followed the gender biased, gender feminist model in as much as all the “he” and “him” pronouns always referred to the batterer and all the “she” and “her” pronouns always referred to the victim. “Ah,” said the man, “you are looking at our workbook for the man. We have it just the opposite in the Woman’s Tools workbook.” On that note, I put down the “Man’s Tools Workbook,” and picked up the “Woman’s Tools Workbook.” I turned to the corresponding page. Sadly, the same gender biased Duluth, Power and Control Wheel was there with all the “he” and “him” pronouns always referring to “the batterer” and the “she” and “her” pronouns always referring to “the victim.”

“We are going to change that in our next printing,” the man replied after I pointed this out to him. I sincerely hope that happens as the couple otherwise seemed very professional and understanding of men’s issues. I guess this experience just goes to underscore how much biased, gender feminist language has infiltrated literature surrounding domestic violence issues.

After lunch as I was again browsing through the displays, when I found this document prominently displayed at the entrance to the exhibition room, Visual #10 I could only wonder how long it had been allowed to be there. “Why,” I asked myself, “was this exhibiter allowed to display so prominently such a glaringly undocumented statement?” “Less than 10% of child sexual abuse is ever reported to law enforcement and few abusers are ever held accountable for their actions.” This exhibit appeared to me to be nothing more than verification of domestic violence industry “myth making” in action.

Later in the day, I talked with one of our NCFMLA group who had attended a workshop that was going to address male victims of domestic violence. In a nutshell, the attendee said that the issue was raised, along with the issue of women as perpetrators of domestic violence, but then it was all just quickly glossed over with minimal discussion. “Sounds like male victims just got marginalized again,” I said. “Yea, that was about it,” replied the workshop attendee.

To end on a positive note, NCFMSD and NCFMLA were a presence noted by all who attended this conference, and through NCFM’s exhibition booth, members and some very professional guests worked hard to raise awareness about family violence issues regarding male victims and female batterers, Visual #11

Canada's NDP panders to feminists -- as usual

afg · 20 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Canada's New Democratic Party (a party that cannot seem to gather more than 20% of the vote in any given election) put out this press release criticizing the current Conservative government for failing to ensure that the mandate of a number of women's organizations will survive into the near future.

Don't count on the Conservatives getting rid of such groups, however, as they are well aware that most Canadians are brainwashed into believing that women are oppressed and that these groups actually stand for equality. Like every political party, the Conservatives just want the most votes.

RADAR ALERT: Are You at Risk of Becoming a Victim of False Allegations?

Matt · 21 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Alan Karmin of New Jersey was accused of domestic violence. But he had never assaulted his wife. What was the basis of the claim? It was alleged that Karmin telephoned his ex-wife 10-15 times a day and was late on his child support payments. But telephone records and cancelled checks easily disproved both allegations.

How could anyone make such a ludicrous accusation? Because in New Jersey, state law includes “harassment” in its definition of domestic violence. And according to a report issued today, New Jersey and six other states fall in the “Extremely High Risk” category of states with laws that actually encourage false allegations.

“An Epidemic of Civil Rights Abuses: Ranking of States’ Domestic Violence Laws” ranks the 50 states and District of Columbia, and identifies which states have laws in greatest need of reform. Those states are Alaska, California, Missouri, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, and Virginia.

The report uses the following criteria to identify the best and worst states: loose definitions of domestic violence, financial incentives to file allegations, mandatory arrest laws, primary aggressor laws, and how judges weigh domestic violence allegations in child custody determinations.

The report can be viewed at http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/Ranking-of-States-DV-Laws.pdf. The document is the third in a series of RADAR Special Reports that expose the perverse incentives of state-level DV laws.

False allegations of domestic violence allow states’ social welfare agencies to tap into federal funding sources. The winners become the states with the most intrusive laws, and the losers are the real victims of abuse this money was supposed to serve.

Readers are encouraged to share the report with local media representatives, judges, and state lawmakers, to use the report as the basis for reform efforts.

++
Date of RADAR Release: September 20, 2006
Sign up today to receive RADAR's Alerts! Go to http://www.mediaradar.org/, enter your e-mail address in the upper right hand box, then hit Subscribe!

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/

Wife Of Ex-Football Player Arrested For Domestic Violence

Luek · 21 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here is an interesting story not so much that a woman actually was arrested for DV but for the little blurb at the end where the male writer seems to obsess over the weight differences of the female perpetrator and the male victim as if that was really relevant.

I guess the destructive and outmoded concept of chivalry is very deep rooted in this culture.

Genia Shockome - Bogus Claims, Malicious Mom

Anonymous · 21 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Newsweek publishes this story about a woman who supposedly lost her kids to an "abusive" husband by a crooked court system.

She cried victim and the bloggers heard her cry -- backing her with petitions, endless articles, and more. (Google her name to see all the petitions and blogs).

But they ignored some important facts. Glenn Sacks did a little digging...

"Some of the more important points contained in the documents include:

1) The allegations of abuse against Genia's ex-husband, Timothy, were never once substantiated.

2) The abuse allegations coincided perfectly with every custody hearing.

3) Genia was caught--on videotape--at a supervised visitation center coaching her children to make remarks against their father.

4) During the hearing resulting in her contempt charge and jailing, she was warned over 15 times to stop interrupting the judge.

5) Despite a position with IBM, paying $80,000 per year, Genia refused to pay her child support.

6) A court appointed psychologist characterized Genia as highly controlling, and said the biggest hurdle to an amicable custody arrangement was this fact.

7) Her previous attorney had quit the case because she was too volatile and unpredictable."

Deported former guard at Nazi camp is emphatic -- 'I did nothing wrong'

Matt · 22 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Yes, it seems she saw nothing and knew nothing and was just doing her job. Read all about it here. Not an ounce of remorse or sense of responsibility.

Suppose she'll get the Femme-pass or the Age-pass? Or both?

Mutari Update, Dads on the Air

Matt · 22 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The latest from Teri re the Murtari case is here. Excerpt:

"As John Murtari wrote in his weekly newsletter; the appellate judge denied his stay. He's decided to ask Judge Hedges for a reduced sentence. If that doesn't work he'll move forward with an appeal."

Kindergarden Infected with "Boy Bigotry"

anthony · 22 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Kindergarten rhyming book stirs controversy

"Girls are dandy, made out of candy. Boys are rotten, made out of cotton. Girls go to Mars to get candy bars. Boys go to Jupiter to get more stupider.".

Parents are upset, rightfully so regarding a Kindergarden book that has negative messages about boys. Male biogtry now affects young boys. Is there any wonder why boys are falling behind in school? From the age of five these boys are brainwashed with the notion they are inferior to girls. Its time more men become elementary school teachers.

Accused Denied Due Process In Duke Lacrosse Rape

anthony · 22 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Accused Denied Due Process in Duke Lacrosse Case? by Wendy McElroy

"I believe the accused are blatantly innocent and that the prosecuting District Attorney Mike Nifong is acting with willful disregard for both the evidence in the case and the Constitutional rights of the accused. In this case, I believe the legal system is the enemy of justice...and nakedly so."

The Duke rape case will be an "eye opener" when it reaches court this spring. Why should these men wait so long to prove their innocence? The outcome (not guilty) will raise awarness that some woman do lie about rape for their own perverse goals ($$$$). The three accused men happen to have parents with tremendous wealth. She is looking to make some money off this false accusation. Disgusting!

'Cause... Y'know... It's would have been OK if she really had recently lost her baby...

Anonymous · 22 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

UNION, Mo. -- A woman who authorities say slit the throat of a young mother and stole her baby was charged Wednesday with kidnapping and assault as authorities cast doubt on her claims that she had recently lost her own baby.

Story here.

Ford Ad: Family Vacation - Truth in advertising

Anonymous · 22 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

In this Ford ad (embedded video), Dad gets out of the car, sad dufflebag in hand, dropped off at his crummy townhouse, and thanks his ex for inviting him along for the day with the kids.

Meanwhile, she is the gatekeeper to the kids, and is driving a brand new SUV.

Truth in advertising.

"I don't believe she did that intentionally"

Anonymous · 22 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Woman Charged in Husband's Slaying

"I hate to speculate on what's going through some one's mind, but in my own personal opinion, I'm not sure she wanted to kill him either," said Sgt. Tim noble, Toledo Police Department.

Canadian Women's groups fear federal cuts coming

Anonymous · 22 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The Toronto Star is publishing a firestorm of articles about the Status of Women here, here, and here.

Maclean's and the National Post have also picked up on the news here and here.

REAL Women of Canada are said to be the instigators, with the call to Prime Minister Harper to disband the SOW. The NDP brought it to light in their recent press release.

The Liberals have also issued a press release insisting that the Tories "make a public commitment to equality-seeking groups that they will be able to continue their very valuable work for women's equality in Canada."

But even the NDP don't seem to be making this top priority: they have brought other issues to the forefront guaranteed to overshadow this, including calls for pharmacare.

Bev Oda, minister responsible for the Status of Women, is remaining silent on questions about the lack of funding, and the Finance Minister won't comment until next week.

Could this be the beginning of the end fo the SOW?

"Sen. Clinton Calls for Global Plan for Poor Women"

Matt · 22 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Not to be outdone with the "HIV is a Woman's Disease" move, now feminists have targeted perhaps the oldest of all scourges for their propaganda: poverty. Read it and weep/laugh/whatever right here. Excerpt:

‘Senator Hillary Rodham Clinton made a star turn this morning at former President Bill Clinton’s conference on global challenges, calling for a concerted attack on the “feminization of poverty” by destroying cultural, political, and economic barriers that trap women and children in desperate conditions.’

In case that isn't enough to get you sick, taste some of this outright horse-cow from our very own Anne Veneman in the 7th paragraph:

'"Women do 66 percent of the work in the world, produce 50 percent of the food, but earn 5 percent of income and 1 percent of the property," said Ann Veneman, the former secretary of agriculture who is now executive director of Unicef. "We need to convince not only governments, but major multinational corporations who do business in these countries, to help be a partner in changing conditions."'

"Don't Date Him Girl" Bigotry Exposed, Class Action Website Started

anthony · 22 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

http://www.classaction-dontdatehimgirl.com/

Paul D. "My boss said it was financial cutbacks, then why did she hire new staff last week without calling me back to work? I know why."....a possible outcome based on his profile on this disgusting website.

These men are fighting back with their class action lawsuit. Vindictive women post unsubstantiated comments about men they've dated. These women can include the man's name, picture and location. The women remain anonymous.

Female Fire Chief Accused of Harassment

anthony · 23 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

"After reading this story, it would be safe to say their next chief probably won't be a lesbian."

"Bleskachek endured, becoming Minneapolis' first female fire chief and the only openly gay fire chief of a major U.S. city. but now, two years after ascending to the top job Bleskachek is the one who stands accused of harassing women."

"Uppity Men", by Carey Roberts

anthony · 23 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Read it here.
Excerpt:

'Hard-working men whose liberated wives had come to look askance at anything that might remotely be called housework. And it resonated with the average Joes who put in long hours on the factory line, only to come home and learn that he was a member of the male oppressor class.'

Woman Brutally Murders Pregnant Friend, Children

Matt · 24 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

People seem astounded such a thing happened. But why should they be, the press covers stories of parents (of both sexes) murdering friends and children almost daily. The surprise is that they are surprised. But then again, "everyone knows women, especially mothers, would never do such a thing...". Um, yeah, that's right, only men/fathers do such horrific things. Excerpt:

'Hall and the baby were taken to a hospital, where she refused to let doctors examine her and gave conflicting accounts of why she went into labor, alternately saying she had consensual sex and was raped, Hart says.

The baby girl showed no signs of trauma and an autopsy the next day failed to pinpoint a cause of death.

"We didn't even figure it was a homicide," Hart said.'

Mother Kills Sons by Tossing Them into San Francisco Bay

anthony · 25 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

After reading this story I wonder: Will the Andrea Yates verdict have an impact on this trial? We all know a mother would NEVER kill her children unless she was insane. One of her children was 16 months old. I would be SHOCKED if postpardum depression isn't part of her defense.

"Lashaun Harris, 23, believes her children are growing up in heaven, psychiatrists say."

Excellent Digital Video On Men In Early Education

Anonymous · 25 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Once again we have a TV New Zealand News piece that shows quite fairly what men are up against in this equal world, which as we know isn't equal at all. This isn't a direct connection so once you click the TV New Zealand site you will still have to click "Sunday: Men in early education (10:38)" under "Related Video" in the middle of the page.

Ed. note: The video stream is an .asx file type, so Windows Media Player will play it. The direct link is this, but you'll need Media Player installed so that it opens and runs as desired. Recommend Media Player version 10 on a decent platform, such as XP.

Three Stories about Wrongful Rape Convictions

anthony · 25 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

All three stories are about men wrongfully imprsioned for rape....all spent many years in prison for a crime they did not commit. DNA evidence exonerated them:

One.

Two.

Three.

Ed. note: Of note as the driving force behind these acts of justice is The Innocence Project.

Update: Scalding Case Mother May Walk

AngryMan · 25 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A mother who cannot be named for legal reasons has denied pouring boiling water over her five-year-old son 11 years ago.

The prosecution claimed she had scalded her son to stop him constantly asking questions about his father, and afterwards had told him: "You say I did this and I will kill myself."

The boy said in evidence: "I was crying on the sofa because of what she'd said about my dad.

"She was in the kitchen and she flipped the kettle on three or four times.

"She then called me into the kitchen and said 'Sorry kid, but I've got to do this.'

"She then tipped the contents of the kettle over me."

The incident only came to light when the boy told his father nine years later he had not pulled the kettle on himself, the jury was told.

The jury has now been discharged, so is she going to walk? Probably...

Woman Charged for False Rape Claim

Anonymous · 25 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

"A 21-year-old Napier woman has been charged with making a false rape complaint against champion jockey Michael Walker.

The woman was arrested on Saturday by Detective Daryl Moore, of Napier CIB, after an investigation which started with the woman's complaint on Friday morning.

The woman alleged she had been raped by the 22-year-old Walker in a Hastings motel, after the two had met in Havelock North the previous night."

Story here.

Irish Study: Home Violence ... Men in Firing Line

Matt · 25 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks, Marc A., for sending in this piece. Excerpt:

'A STUDY of patients attending family doctors has found that 52 per cent of men and 43 per cent of women have experienced domestic violence.

The research, carried out by Trinity College Dublin and published in the European Journal of General Practice, reflects the findings of all other two-sex studies carried out in Ireland.'

Lawyers Befuddled without Sex Discrimination as Guidepost in Divorces

Matt · 25 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

For those casual visitors to MANN who may be under the impression that “family courts” don’t consider such things as people’s sex when divvying up child custody, property, etc., just read this. Excerpt:

‘Same-sex couples who break up are finding themselves in a legal morass. State divorce laws conflict with federal tax laws; differences among states' laws can jeopardize child-custody agreements if one or both partners move; and some attorneys are shying away from same-sex divorces for fear of their own liability.

Attorneys "are worried that they don't know the answers to a lot of questions, and people are making decisions on what their lawyer tells them to do. There can be liability on the lawyers' side if they make their best intelligent guess that happens to be wrong," said Deborah Wald, a San Francisco family law attorney who works with same-sex couples.’

If it didn’t matter, lawyers wouldn’t be so confused about things that some refuse even to handle same-sex couple divorce and custody cases. The truth is, it’s easy when the couple is a man and a woman: simply shaft the man and gush over the woman, and you’re safe and paid. However, when it’s people of the same sex, you don’t know who to stick it to and who to pander to, and so you run for cover.

Decline of Civilizations and Male Mortality

Matt · 25 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here is an outstanding piece in Vality Fair on the decline of civilizations. The author mentions the mortality of men as a factor, referring to his own country as follows:

'Take Scotland, the land of my birth. Male life expectancy in some parts of Glasgow is now as low as 54. There has been a 350 percent rise in alcohol-related deaths in the last two decades. About 13,000 people die from smoking-related diseases every year. More than a third of Scotland's 12-year-olds are overweight or clinically obese.'

Sadly he doesn't mention this as the tragedy in and of itself that it is. But the points he makes are well-taken. The well-being of a civilization's men is intimately intertwined with its chances of survival. I don't mean to sound too much the pessimist, but as the health and status of men in the west continues to decline, so will whatever is left of western civilization, unless something changes rather dramatically and quickly.

Mitchell Sanderson, A Hero Who Needs Our Help

Anonymous · 25 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Mitch Sanderson is waging a heroic stand there against the slings and arrows of the Mitchell Sanderson, A Hero Who Needs Our Helpdivorce industry. Arrayed against Mitch is virtually the entire North Dakota government, as well as the bar associations, social workers, feminists, and all the others who have discovered how lucrative it is to take control of other people's children. All these groups are receiving help from outside the state who realize the earth-shaking importance of what Mitch has done."

Lung cancer is now a woman's disease, apparently...

GaryB · 26 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This article on the BBC News site explains a new campaign to highlight how lung cancer affects women.

Apparently we are all guilty of thinking that this is a smoking men's disease, when actually this isn't the case. So, a new campaign is pushing for funding and exploration of how this disease affects women. My favourite quote: "women are often the gatekeepers of family health and need to be aware of this disease".

The article admits that women are smoking more often, but otherwise fails to quote any figures - chief amongst which is that many more men die of lung cancer than women, despite what the article proposes (see this).

I know from my own experience in the UK that many more women are into smoking now than men, they just don't care - yet the article is at pains to avoid this fact and any blame. So, I guess more of the same; women can choose to smoke, but can't ever be blamed if they get ill, and should receive priority health care if they do.

Another turn of the wheel in the wrong direction.

Kidnapping by Casearian section - latest excuse: maternal instinct run amok

Anonymous · 26 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Full story here.

"It's a crime so monstrous as to surpass comprehension. Yet its passion takes root in some of the most tender ground of human experience: pregnancy and motherhood.

What drives a handful of women to slice open the bellies of others to steal their newborns?

Researchers have uncovered hints. "You can describe it as sort of the maternal instinct run amok," said psychiatrist Dr. Phillip Resnick, who had written about this kind of crime"

NHL star Tie Domi is being taken to the cleaners by estranged wife

Paragon · 27 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

He offered her a settlement of more money then most people make in a lifetime, but she wants it all and it looks like she's going to get it. Check out the details of the 'temporary' agreement that has been reached here.

The really sad part is that he might end up being taken to the cleaners again if the rumours are true that he is currently in a relationship with turncoat (former conservative, now liberal) MP Belinda Stronach. She has had plenty of her share of controversy. A quick Google of her name reveals plenty for those interested.

RADAR ALERT: Reports Attract Media Interest; Now Time to Recharge RADAR's Batteries

Matt · 27 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Dear Friends of RADAR (Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting):

As you may be aware, RADAR has been circulating reports, press releases, and flyers in an effort to tell the complete story about domestic violence, with a special emphasis on the effectiveness of the Violence Against Women Act, and the entire set of facts re domestic violence (DV).

We hope to make the public aware that, in the name of DV prevention, gender-based discrimination and governmental violations of the Bill of Rights have become commonplace, and that DV law and policy must be modified to prevent these abuses.

These reports have attracted widespread media attention. Reporters have called for interviews, and one state legislator has already contacted RADAR asking for recommended language to revise his state's DV law.

While we have made fair progress with limited resources, we wish to spread the word to a wider universe with a little more energy. But this will be expensive, and we need to request your financial help.

Would you consider making a donation? It's easy. Just click on our "Donate to RADAR" button at the top left corner of our website at http://www.mediaradar.org/. Or, if you prefer to send a check, make it payable to RADAR and mail it to:

R.A.D.A.R.
PO Box 1404
Rockville, MD 20849

A $25 donation allows us to print flyers to pass out to 250 elected officials in Congress. A $100 contribution allows our message to reach 17,000 reporters, editors, and producers around the country. A $1,000 contribution supports a national radio campaign.

Thank you,

RADAR Financial Committee

RADAR is a 501(c)4 non-profit, non-partisan organization. As a 501(c)4, RADAR can engage in public education and advocacy efforts. Contributions are not tax deductible.

++
Date of RADAR Release: September 25, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Trial opens for Fla. teen accused of enlisting her boyfriend to kill her father

Matt · 27 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

If nothing else, one should keep in mind when reading this: never judge a book by its cover. Excerpt:

“What is in dispute at a trial this week in Seminole County Circuit Court is the role the victim's own daughter played in the brutal slaying. Authorities allege that 16-year-old Courtney Schulhoff was the cold, calculating mastermind of the murder, giving her older lover the bat, pointing him toward the bedroom where her father slept and opening a celebratory beer afterward.

While she is not accused of physically participating in the assault that left her father, Steve, 48, dead, she faces the same charge as Morin: first-degree murder. A conviction means a mandatory life sentence. Morin will be tried separately next month.”

But when this “angel-faced child” takes the stand and claims her father was abusing her, is there any doubt she will walk? Her boyfriend is in jail for the murder, her father is dead, and I predict she will walk away being viewed as the victim. She‘ll probably make money off of it in some way, too. Just another day at the shop for “the justice system”.

Why Johnny Can't Read: Schools Favor Girls

anthony · 27 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This article makes several good points regarding schools being more "girl friendly".

"But a new study finds that the problem cuts across socioeconomic lines and pins part of the blame on schools, whose techniques cater to the strengths of girls and leave boys utterly disinterested."

-- combined posts from same submitter ---

This article suggests boys are better off with home schooling. It makes perfect sense considering boys are the "second" sex in the public school environment.

Diane J Hulse:

"Research shows that American elementary school classrooms have a female orientation and a feminine inclination."

"In a boys' school, boys seem to have more options available to them as they define their own masculinity."

Wendy McElroy: Confronting Male Suicide

anthony · 27 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy McElroy exposes aspects of male suicide that receives virtually no national attention. She also mentions child custody hearings and the tragic effect it has on men: "As far as the [divorced] man is concerned, he has lost his marriage and lost his children and that can lead to depression and suicide," Kposow advises."

"If a similar rise in female suicides was occurring, a public crusade would demand a remedy. Yet the extraordinarily high rate of male suicide is rarely discussed."

Less Men = Equality, Less Women = Travesty

Anonymous · 27 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A recent human-rights ruling in Canada found that barring two twin girls from trying out for a boy's hockey team is discriminatory. Since the ruling the girls have tried out and didn't make the cut.

According to this article as a result of the ruling there have been cases of boys attempting to try out for the girl's teams.

The final paragraph of the article quotes the executive director of the Manitoba High Schools Athletic Association as saying:

"Everything that our organization has done … is based gender-equal. And if we all of a sudden get an influx of males participating, it could affect female participation and that would be a travesty."

Sacks and McCormick: Shared Parenting Initiative Helps Women, Too

anthony · 27 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Glen Sacks and Mike McCormick discuss how Shared Parenting initiatives also helps women. The story includes testimony from feminists (thats right feminists) who agree with Sacks. Unfortunatley the two women only mention "shared parenting" and the postive effects it has on mothers. even though they fail to mention the benifits for men, any support is vital

"While many women's advocates have taken a misguided stand against shared parenting, there is a significant, outspoken minority which recognizes its benefits for women."

Article on False Rape Allegation on College Campuses

anthony · 28 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This article by Eugene J. Kanin, Ph.D. gives an excellent overview of false rape accusations. As a college student they try and convince us (most are convinced) that 1 in 4 women will be victims of a sexual crime by graduation.

Let's do some math: Syracuse University has approx. 18,000 students. 55 percent are female (almost 10,000 women). The 1 in 4 theory suggests 2500 women will be a victim of sexual assault by graduation. Are you kidding me? 2500! Completely ABSURD.

"These false allegations appear to serve three major functions for the complainants: providing an alibi, seeking revenge, and obtaining sympathy and attention."

Stat Rape and Supplying Drugs Buys Female Teacher One Year in Jail

Marc A. · 28 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

And she does not have to register as a sex offender.
What would a man have received? Letters can be sent to letters-at-uniontrib.com. Excerpt:

"“I really believe that you are a good person. I believe that what you did was very wrong,” Brown said.

The judge ordered Walls not to have any contact with the victim, but did not require her to register as a sex offender.

Walls pleaded guilty on July 26 to four felony charges of having unlawful sexual intercourse with a minor and a misdemeanor charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor for providing the student drugs and alcohol."

Leving and Sacks Take on "Single by Chance, Mothers by Choice"

anthony · 29 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This article written by Glenn Sacks and Jeffery M. Leving, discusses "Are single mothers the 'New American Family'"?

We all know that a father's role in parenting is vital, but some think differently. The title of the latest anti-father book is "Single by Chance, Mothers by Choice: How Women Are Choosing Parenthood Without Marriage and Creating the New American Family."

The only viable use for a book written by a Women's Studies professor is using the pages to line the cat's litter box. Gentleman, I'll give you a DISTURBING quote from this article citing the book:

'Hertz asserts that today the "core of family life is the mother and her children." Fathers aren't necessary – "only the availability of both sets of gametes [egg and sperm] is essential." In fact, Hertz explains, "what men offer today is obsolete."'

Maybe you'd like to e-mail her (rhertze-at-wellesley.edu) and have her define "misandry".

MSN Launches Men's Subsite

Matt · 30 September 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Stop the presses, can it be the sun has risen in the west and will set in the east? Check out http://men.msn.com/. Yes, you read that right. Now let's see just what kind of stuff they put there. Wonder if they will include any links to MRA-issues and -interests sites? Frankly I am not holding my breath, what with articles on back-hairiness and closet contents on the debut day.

Looks to me more like a site for women that is "supposed" to be for men... sigh... same claptrap, different day.

Users Blocked and Posts Deleted

Scott · 1 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I have disabled the account of Bert (and his alter-ego, Henry) and removed all of Bert's postings to the site. Enough is enough.

"Women Behind Bars"

Anonymous · 1 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Typical news story about the rising rates of female jail offenders-- and of course how much harder it is on them than their male counterparts. Excerpt:

'Jackson's scenario is a fairly common one for incarcerated women, he said. Two-thirds of all women in state prisons are parents of minor children; many have substance abuse problems.

"It is illustrative of a lot of the problems with drug sentencing," King said.'

More from the NY Times on Colleges and Women

Matt · 2 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

An otherwise unremarkable review of an otherwise unremarkable book opens with a scathing taunt of the male sex in this review from the NY Times Book section. A wonderful little "nya nya nya" from another privileged recent college co-ed graduate whose father probably paid her way through whatever school she went to.

You know, I think the Times (as well as MSN for that matter) should just dispense with any pretense and set up their own "Nya nya nya we're made of sugar and spice and you nasty boys SUCK" subsite and put all their misandrist claptrap in one place rather than sneak it in via both sideways commentary and overt misstatements, lies, and distortions throughout their respective publications. That way the rest of us could just skip it entirely and go look for something decent to read.

Fox News Ignores Male DV Victims and Pumps Up the Misandry... Again

anthony · 2 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Read it here.

"You might be surprised to learn that the most dangerous place for a woman in the United States is her own home. Domestic violence is the single biggest threat of injury to U.S. women — more than heart attacks, cancer, strokes, car accidents, muggings and rapes combined!"

Ed. note: This article is a couple months old, apparently; it is cited here in a comment dated 6/13/06. Still, it's a fine example of Fox's inability to see male DV victims.

I have seen this Fox analyst's name before attached to similar such rantings, too. Looks like she's a regular, and a law professor to boot. I can only imagine what being a man in one of her classes (or someone who dares speak the truth about DV in it) must be like.

Husband Charged in Wife's Minivan Suicide

anthony · 2 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"A 34-year-old architect was charged Friday with helping his wife commit suicide by stepping aside as she drove the family minivan down a 300-foot cliff with their two daughters inside."

Thats right, this man faces severe criminal charges because his wife decided to drive off a cliff. "He "afforded her an opportunity for her to carry out her intentions," police said in a statement."

Apparently he tried to grab the bumper, but was unable to stop the minivan. I guess they expected this man to use his strength and prevent a 3500-lb. SUV from falling down a cliff. He is also charged with endangering the welfare of a child. The woman had his two daughters (3 and 5) in the minivan during her suicide attempt.

More Media 2x-Standards in Combat-Deaths Reporting

Matt · 2 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A CNN video report covers women in combat in Iraq (MediaPlayer or similar required). They talk about it like it is something that is bad and should be stopped, without so much as mentioning the much larger number of men killed and wounded thus far in the Middle East. So much for equality in both status and commensuarate risks.

Getting killed or wounded/maimed in combat is a terribly tragic thing. That's what you sign up for though when you volunteer to serve in the armed forces, and it is no more or less tragic however when it happens to men as opposed to women. So why do MSM outfits like CNN act like it is? Answer: gross sexism and arcane chivalry.

In order to stop male-bashing we must hold the perpetrators accountable.

Anonymous · 2 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

My essay addressing our strategy for protesting male-bashing is here.

RADAR ALERT: Tell Newsweek to Tell the Truth about Parental Alienation and Domestic Violence

Matt · 2 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Newsweek's September 25th article "Fighting Over the Kids: Battered spouses take aim at a controversial custody strategy" attempted to sell the American public an impossible theory: abusive fathers are successfully winning custody of children by claiming that the mother alienated the children from them.

The article highlights the case of Genia Shockome, who lost custody to the father in her divorce. A study of case facts reveals that the judge made the correct decision. (http://glennsacks.com/enewsletters/enews_9_20_06.htm)

1. Genia had joint custody of the children 60% of the time. The father filed for change of custody due to chronic custodial interference.
2. Allegations of child and spousal abuse made by Genia against her ex-husband were never substantiated by the court.
3. Abuse allegations made by Genia against her husband coincided perfectly with every custody hearing.
4. Genia was caught on videotape at a supervised visitation center coaching her children to make remarks against their father.
5. During the hearing resulting in her contempt charge and jailing, she was warned over 15 times to stop interrupting the judge.
6. Despite a position with IBM paying $80,000 per year, Genia refused to pay her child support and attempted to avoid paying support in a bankruptcy proceeding. (http://www.nysb.uscourts.gov/opinions/cgm/136581_20_opinion.pdf)
7. A court appointed psychologist characterized Genia as highly controlling, and said the biggest hurdle to an amicable custody arrangement was this fact.
8. Genia "failed to comply with virtually every decision, ruling, and order" of the trial court. (http://www.thelizlibrary.org/outrage/Shockomeappearance5-05.pdf)
9. Her previous attorney had quit the case because she was too volatile and unpredictable.
10. Genia's appeal to the New York Supreme Court, over the trial court's criminal contempt decision, was denied on September 19, 2006. (http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2006/2006_06589.htm)

Newsweek quotes Harvard's Jay Silverman who claims that "54 percent of custody cases involving documented spousal abuse were decided in favor of the alleged batterers".

The study, published in the American Journal of Public Health, involved 39 women recruited as a non-representative, self-selected sample by the Battered Women's Testimony Project. (http://www.pubmedcentral.nih.gov/articlerender.fcgi?artid=1448371)

The study clearly states that the report "involvedreliance on the self-report of participants." ... "It is important that these data be recognized as documentation of a set of issues based on reports of affected individuals (i.e., battered women referred to the project based on their dissatisfaction with family court outcomes or processes) rather than an attempt at definitive research into the prevalence and nature of the types of cases discussed."

This study is a classic example of how opinion is transmogrified into science by federally-subsidized radical activists. It contains no evidence indicating that mothers are being treated unfairly by the courts. Mothers receive primary custody of children in approximately 85% of divorces. When cases involving false allegations of abuse and parental alienation do get fully heard, as happened in the Shockome case, courts sometimes bravely make the correct decision.

This Newsweek story is a carbon-copy of the discredited PBS documentary, "Breaking the Silence". (http://www.cpb.org/ombudsmen/060104bode.html) In both cases, allegations of abuse made by the mother were anecdotal and unsubstantiated, and the mother was found to be the worst parent by the court after great scrutiny and lengthy litigation.

Tell Newsweek to do another story that tells the truth about parental alienation, custodial interference, domestic violence and divorce. You can contact them at the addresses below:
Email: Letters-at-newsweek.com

Mailing Address:
Newsweek
Letters to the Editor
251 W. 57th St.
New York, NY 10019

++
Date of RADAR Release: October 2, 2006
Sign up today to receive RADAR's Alerts! Go to http://www.mediaradar.org/, enter your e-mail address in the upper right hand box, then hit Subscribe!

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Boycott ESPN's Monday Night Football

sjones · 3 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The female-supremacists have been steadily moving to replace "he or she" with the sexist "s/he", which is simply "she" with a slash, and is even prounounced "she". Along with this attack on males comes the reversal of "men and women" to "women and men." The intent is clear, to remove males altogether in the first case, and to relagate us to a secondary status in the second case.

In the spirit of this sexist attack on males through our language, at the very anti-male, ABC-owned ESPN, a network almost entirely dependent on male viewers for its survival, retired professional football players who now announce the Monday Night Football games are being forced by the feminist management to sign off every Monday night football game by saying "thank you from all of the WOMEN AND MEN at ESPN's Monday Night Football" even though it alienates and insults the male viewers and reduces viewership of the games.

For ESPN to spit in the faces of the vast majority of its viewers out of a blatant hatred of the entire male sex should be a wake-up call to everyone. Boycott ESPN. Email them and complain. Warn them that you are boycotting them until they stop harassing the male viewers with this sexism. And most of all, boycott Monday Night Football for as long as ESPN controls it. Let their "women and men" look for work elsewhere. I'd rather surf the net and write about how sexist the feminists are then watch any football game that's controlled by them and used as a tool to spread their religion of misandric hate.

Mom Accused Of Fleeing State With Teenage Lover Arrested

anthony · 3 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Fortunately this man has gained custody of his two children.

"Nashua, N.H. -- The Canterbury woman accused of taking her 16-year-old lover and 8-year-old son to Florida is back in jail on charges of stalking him.

Jennifer Malone was arrested in July after a 10-day nationwide hunt to track her down.

Malone was out on $50,000 bail awaiting trial. She was told to stay away from the 16-year-old."

Nurse pleads no contest to killing 10 patients

anthony · 3 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article about a nurse who killed 10 people. No comments on my part....just a news story. Excerpt:

'FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) -- A former hospital nurse pleaded no contest Tuesday to killing 10 patients nearly six years ago by injecting them with a drug used to temporarily halt breathing.

Vickie Dawn Jackson, 40, will be sentenced to life in prison, the maximum sentence she faced if she had been convicted by a jury.

Authorities have not offered a motive for the slayings.'

Update on Lohstroh Murder Case

Matt · 4 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Some of you may remember the case mentioned in this previous MANN piece. The follow-up to it is that the man's son was just found guilty of murder, or at least the juvenile equivalent of it. Story here.

Teen Girls Pull Woman from Car, Beat Her Senseless

Matt · 4 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

More from the sugar 'n spice dept., this latest is here. Notice the sex of the perps isn't mentioned in the headline and also not until close to the end of the article. Excerpt:

'The woman, 23, had her head slammed into her car, causing her left eye to be swollen shut. She also suffered cuts, bruises and abrasions. Her injuries sent her to the hospital, where she was released Thursday night, the Herald reported.

During the attacks, the woman's 10-month-old son was in the car's back seat.

Police interviewed and released two teenage girls, ages 17 and 18, who could face assault charges.

A 15-year-old girl, believed to be involved in the second attack, was arrested.'

Woman Charged with Sexual Assault of Male Flight Attendant

Matt · 4 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Send it on to your favorite feminist!

'A woman was charged Wednesday with sexual assault after an altercation with a flight attendant on an airplane flying from Charlotte, N.C., to London, an official said.

.

.

"During the altercation, she grabbed his buttocks," Bruce said, adding that he based that information on police reports.

When the airplane landed at Gatwick Airport, Sussex police charged the woman with disrupting a flight and sexual assault, Bruce said.'

Violence is a man's problem?

Alphamale · 4 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The typical female chauvinist crap is repeated here about how violence is only a man's problem.

Yet, other headlines today revealed that violence is not so much a "man's problem". Here where a woman killed her husband's 13 month old baby son while awaiting extradition to return to the U.S. to face a murder charge for killing her husband. Nice.

Also look here, where a woman killed her husband's 1-year-old and 3-year-old daughters because she was involved in a custody dispute with him. Notice how the article paints the woman as "desperate" "reaching out" and "let down" by the system.

I wonder if the police chief from London, Ontario is aware that violence is not a "man's problem", but a societal problem? Not likely. He, acting as the female mayor's lapdog, seems to be just repeating the female chauvinist lies that the female mayor wants to hear.

Status of Women Canada Funding Slashed

Anonymous · 4 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

OTTAWA — The federal Conservative government says it will no longer fund women's groups that do advocacy, lobbying or general research, leaving some to wonder what's left.

The drastic change to the mandate and operation of Status of Women Canada also drops the word "equality" when listing the agency's goals.

Story here.

BBC: Women Still Victims of Computer Game Oppression

AngryMan · 5 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

"The debate about how to get women more involved in gaming is a perennial one and one on which there is pretty wide agreement that not enough is being done."

Another bizarre story from the BBC femi-socialist propaganda machine. Apparently the 'male-dominated' computer games industry is not doing enough to make women feel included. Apparently "There needs to be changes across the board."(sic)

However, even the author admits that this story is a complete non-issue.

"There is evidence to suggest that, despite the obstacles, young girls carry on playing games. Research done by gaming firm Electronic Arts' found that 40% of teenage girls played video games but, crucially, they seem to lose interest within a year."

Well there you have it then. Girls who want to play computer games play them, and those who don't, don't. End of story.

What motivates this kind of bizarre reasoning? Is it jealousy? Boys love computer games, and so their pleasure has to be spoiled? They fail to understand that this is a free market. The talk is all about what the industry has to do to please them.

Why don't feminists write their own games if they feel like that? How about a strategy game called 'Uncivilisation', in which your community of wimmin has to cultivate lentils in the fields and sell them, and use the money to construct a temple to the Goddess, and then split up all the marriages in the village. The winner is the first one who causes half the men to kill themselves.

Basinger to Stand Trial

Matt · 5 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'LOS ANGELES, California (AP) -- Kim Basinger will go to trial after pleading not guilty Wednesday to disregarding court orders concerning ex-husband Alec Baldwin's visitation rights with their daughter, a court official ordered.

Court papers filed by Baldwin allege that in 2005, the Academy Award-winning actress ignored court orders by not letting her ex-husband know she would be out of town working so that he could take care of their 10-year-old daughter until she returned.'

Good Piece on Aging Men and Testosterone Levels

Matt · 5 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Good clip here (embedded video) from CNN.com on men and testosterone levels changing as we age. Also pleasing is the non-taunting, matter-of-fact way things are presented without the usual misandrist sideways jabs. And, it has good advice for helping with this age-induced state.

Essay on and Call for Men's Movement Unity

Canistor · 5 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Essay by Richard Doyle is here. Excerpt:

'I have long suggested a philosophy meeting that criteria: "To preserve the traditional nuclear family through restoration of equal dignity and equal (not identical) rights under the law for all male persons across a broad spectrum of life, including divorce, employment, health and crime punishment." Anything essentially similar to this will do. I ask leaders of the major men's/fathers' organizations to respond to me with comments, pro and con.'

Lacking Jail Space, "Family Courts" Turn to Public Shaming

anthony · 5 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'WABASH, Ind. -- A judge ordered that a man who has failed to pay child support must spend his days sitting in a county building's lobby under a sign reading "I don't support my kids."

Wabash Circuit Judge Robert McCallen III said he imposed the sentence against Michael Booth, 33, of Wabash not as a special punishment, but to avoid adding to the overcrowding of the county jail.'

USAToday Runs Gandy's Latest Propaganda

anthony · 5 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here it is. Exceprt:

'Every few years, a report that women are gaining ground prompts panicky articles proclaiming that "men are falling behind!"

Don't get me wrong: I believe in equality for all. I'm concerned about women's status and I'm concerned about the race, ethnicity and income divisions revealed in the Department of Education survey.'

ASU Students Found "Caucasian Men's Club"

Matt · 6 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Looks like college students are finally beginning to do something to show their disaffection with the many ethno-genderal interest clubs that openly proclaim their proud affiliation with any group of people except whites, men, or both. Clip on CNN.com is here (embedded video). To note is that membership isn't restricted to white men only, in the same way other college campus groups can't restrict membership based on gender or ethnicity. My only reservation about it is the ethnic issue, since men's issues are men's issues first and foremost But I suppose including it may be unavoidable in terms of making a statement, in that there are generalized men's groups already on college campuses but these are usually affiliated with feminist goals, groups, or their inclinations.

In any case, these people are making a strong statement around the idea of "equal time and consideration" that college administrators at ASU and on other campuses should hearken to.

Husband Killer's Application for Widow's Pension Denied

AngryMan · 6 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A woman who killed her husband has had her legal battle for a widow's pension dismissed by the Court of Appeal. She stabbed her husband, a retired police officer, to death, and was sentenced to only two years in prison. I believe she may have been released after one year. She then applied to the government for a widow's pension. The judge has had the good sense to refuse, but still described her as a 'decent, hard-working woman'. Amazing. Story here.

Woman commits murder/suicide, but she's still the victim

Anonymous · 6 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A judicial inquiry into a woman who:

- was out on bail pending her trial for murder
- had a record of child abuse complaints against her
- eventually committed murder/suicide by walking into the ocean and drowning with her son

... is somehow a victim of "substandard child protection practices".

"It is evident that substandard child protection practices contributed to the outcome of Zachary Turner's murder and the mother's suicide," Ms. Neville told a news conference after delivering the report.

Story here: here

UK taking a stand on false rape allegations

Anonymous · 6 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A couple of false rape allegations have come to light and the police are pressing charges in the UK.

Two women, three instances.

Ex-wife who made false rape claims faces prison

Rape claim raised 'serious doubt'

Media now "cares" for homeless men

Anonymous · 7 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The media now cares enough about homeless men to at least do a single story about them. Or maybe it was misandry in disguise? You decide:

Homeless Men Are Aging on the Streets

Mother Seeking C/S from Minor Father Arrested for Stat Rape

anthony · 7 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Warren County mother who tried to get child support ended up getting arrested Thursday.

Twenty-two-year-old Kimberly Baker sued for support for her 3-year-old daughter.

Prosecutors became concerned when they found out father is 16 years old. That means he was 13 when the child was conceived.'

Reporter Argues Killing of Females is a "Hate Crime"

Roy · 7 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

So writes Kansas City reporter Mike Hendricks. Excerpt:

'The recent tragic murders of ten Amish girls has fueled a renewed effort to define violence against women as a special category of "hate crimes." "Too many of us would rather isolate crimes against women, rather than look at them the way many women do — as just more evidence that they are victims of hatred by men in general. Certainly, the National Organization for Women saw it that way. The group has been trying for years to pass legislation that would make gender-based violence part of hate-crime laws. "Every woman saw this and said, ‘Oh, my God, they sent all the boys away and targeted all the girls,’ NOW President Kim Gandy told me Thursday. It’s easier than facing the fact that there’s a sickness in this society in need of a cure. What that cure is, I don’t know. A starting point would be to recognize misogyny for what it is. And then to give its victims names."'

Odd that Mike passed up the obvious opportunity to write a column about child homicide, in which the majority of thousands of victims are male infants and boys killed by their mothers.

That shouldn’t qualify as a "hate crime," right?

FL: Wife who killed husband freed

anthony · 8 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Is depression now a license to kill for women? Maybe each Prozac prescription should include a defense attorney's phone number. Story here. Excerpt:

"Kathleen Hill, doctors for both the defense and the prosecution testified that she suffered from depression and post-traumatic stress disorder because she was a battered wife."

Women who kill thier children are now bonding with each other...

Anonymous · 8 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This is just insane. Andrea Yates and Dena Schlosser are now buddies. That's right. They give each other, "emotional support" and have a "relationship" . The article that follows seems to portray them as poor wounded victims clinging to each other for surivial. Let me ask you, would two men who murdered thier children ever see the light of day again much less be allowed to buddy up? I think not. The world has gone insane...

Now Boys Have To Sit To Urinate?

Luek · 9 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This may be taking equality of the sexes a bit too far.

In a school in Norway boys are told they will have to sit on the toilet to urinate. The rationale by the female principal is that the boys aim is not always so good when they stand and it wets the toilet seat for the next girl who might use it. This school doesn't have separate restrooms for boys and girls and I guess wall mounted urinals would be obvious sexism.

Justice After 21 Years!

Luek · 9 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Yet another falsely imprisoned man is released from prison after being unlawfully held for 21 years.

This case is different from the others we have been hearing about because blood tests at the time before DNA testing came on the scene failed to link him to the crime. He was convicted basically on the woman's testimony alone. Her husband who was tied up by the real rapist and got a good look at him was not able to identify him as the attacker.

Man Compelled to Pay Alimony to Ex-wife who is now also a Man

Matt · 9 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Yes, you read that right. Watch it here (embedded video). For those of you who are outraged enough as it is by the notion of "alimony", you will probably need to pick your jaws up off the floor after watching the clip. Not only is this man compelled to pay his ex-wife alimony for life or until she remarries, but she is no longer a she. She is now legally a he and he (the husband) still has to pay her (the ex-wife, now a him) alimony.

Why bother reading works of fiction when you have the news? Stuff like this makes video games and movies look tame in comparison.

Woman charged with using baby as weapon

Matt · 9 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'ERIE, Pennsylvania (AP) -- A woman used her 4-week-old baby as a weapon in a domestic dispute, swinging the infant through the air and striking her boyfriend with the child, authorities said.

The baby was critically injured in the attack early Sunday, said District Attorney Bradley Foulk.

"Never, never, never. I can never remember anything like this," Foulk told the Erie Times-News.

Chytoria Graham, 27, of Erie, was charged with aggravated assault, reckless endangerment and simple assault. She was held Monday in the Erie County Jail in lieu of $75,000 bail.'

RADAR ALERT: Tell Congress VAWA Is Harmful To Women

Matt · 9 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

After the Nov 7 elections VAWA funding reauthorization will be up for a vote in the Senate. The President's budget has allocated $350 million to fund VAWA. This is in line with other social spending priorities. Unfortunately the House has passed a 25% increase in VAWA funding.

Last Friday we went to all the Senate offices and asked for two things.

- Support the President's VAWA budget.
- Hold hearings on how VAWA actually harms woman.

We gave each Senate office a copy of our flyer Six Reasons why VAWA is Bad for Women (.pdf file). The message resonated with the Senate staffers we spoke to.

We need your help in getting the message out. Here is what to do:

1. Review the flyer at http://www.mediaRadar.org/docs/VAWAIsBadForWomen-flyer.pdf
2. Call both your Senators at 202-225-3121. This is the Congressional switch board number; they will connect you with your Senator's office.
3. When you reach the office tell them you are a constituent and ask to speak with the legislative aide who deals with family policy or who covers VAWA. If they are not available you can leave your message with the person who answers the phone.
4. Tell each Senator's office:
   - VAWA is harmful to women. Mention examples from the flyer.
   - VAWA funding should be set at the level in the President's budget, not the inflated House figures.
   - Request that the Senate hold hearings into VAWA's failure to help seriously abused women, while simultaneously encouraging violations of the civil rights of innocent people.

++
Date of RADAR Release: October 9, 2006

Sign up today to receive RADAR's Alerts! Go to http://www.mediaradar.org/, enter your e-mail address in the upper right hand box, then hit Subscribe!

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

NJ Guidance Counsellor Finally Held to Account

Matt · 10 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

She did what she did for years and went unchallenged. Unthinkable if she had been a he. Story here. Excerpt:

'After Ms. West was arrested, school officials insisted for more than a year that the allegation was the only accusation of misconduct in a sterling 24-year career. They allowed her to take an early retirement package that fattened her pension, and gave her a farewell party with cake and ice cream. When Ms. West pleaded guilty in 2005 to sexual assault charges, glowing references from co-workers, supervisors and friends helped persuade a judge to sentence her only to probation. She was also spared the ordeal of having to register as a sex offender.

Now, with Mr. Castlegrande suing the school district for failing to protect students from a woman with a sexual appetite for under-age boys, this city of 62,000 has been forced to examine how little was done to stop her earlier. Even as the news media were saturated with coverage of teachers like Pamela Smart and Mary Kay Letourneau who slept with their students, Bayonne averted its eyes for years.'

Woman convicted of killing homeless man in 'compromise' verdict

anthony · 10 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"More than five years after a Las Vegas homeless man was killed and mutilated a jury reached an apparent compromise in holding Kirstin Blaise Lobato accountable for his death."

"But by finding Lobato guilty of voluntary manslaughter the jury determined that, although Lobato was provoked and didn't act in malice, she was still accountable for killing Bailey."

"Both the prosecution and defense agreed that the jury's decision was a "compromise"

UK: Male suicide rate doubles in year

anthony · 10 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

While the increase of male suicide is alarming, there are some positive aspects from this BBC article.

Male suicide is at least gaining some attention, but MUCH more is needed to solve this problem. The increase of male suicide cannot be ignored any longer!

Excerpt:

"Merseyside is one of a handful of CalmZones, set up by the charity, where callers are given detailed information about the help they can receive."

"The charity also has a service where men can receive counselling online."

Australian report: 1 in 3 women abused, no mention of male victims

GaryB · 10 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

News.com.au reports here that the UN has reported that around the world as many as 1 in 3 women will be intimately abused throughout their lifetime. They will face constant sexual harrassment, are likely to be murdered and sexually assaulted by their husbands/boyfriends, and are basically barely surviving amidst a constant barrage of attacks from us nasty men. Geez, it's a wonder any of them ever survive at all...

And of course, it's all the fault of us evil, nasty, sexually-predative males.

Amazing how they can only look at one side of the coin. If I were to do the same, I'd see that my sons are constantly harrassed and attacked by my daughter. There isn't a week goes by that she doesn't denegrate them, hit them, steal something of theirs, abuse them mentally and physically. Terrible really.

Until I look at the 'other' side of the coin, where they actually do the same or worse to her. Look at BOTH sides of the picture, and it's a touch different. Hmmm, I wonder if I should let Kofi know that.....?

"The war on fathers" by David Kupelian

anthony · 10 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This is an oustanding article by David Kupelian. He does incorporate some religious idealogy in his beliefs (which could offend some here), but there are some excellent examples of male bigotry, education, and marriage.

'Mountains have been written about this feminist-inspired assault on men, this mysterious hostility we've lived with for so long. So let's skip over the usual litany of evidence – the fiery denunciations of marriage (which some feminist professors condemn as "slavery" and "legalized rape"), the militant demonstrations of the '60s, the toxic books maligning homemaking in favor of corporate ladder-climbing, and so on. Instead, let's get right to the very heart of the matter. Let's dive down deep, so deep it's almost scary – and then dredge up what truly lurks underneath today's "war on fathers."'

S.I. Article: "Gender inequality: Title IX was necessary then, but now it's just unfair"

anthony · 10 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Read it here. Excerpt:

"That wasn't the idea behind Title IX. It was designed to create, not eliminate, opportunity. But since its enactment more than 170 men's wrestling teams have disappeared. Eighty men's tennis teams, 45 track teams and 106 men's gymnastics teams have been axed."

"Yet there are some 580 more women's teams at NCAA schools today than men's teams, a disparity that is likely to continue to grow. Faced with budgetary cuts last summer, the board at Rutgers University elected to eliminate six teams, five of which were men's teams: lightweight and heavyweight crew, tennis, swimming and diving, and fencing."

Articles in support of Male DV Victims appear in Two Major Canadian Papers

afg · 10 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The Toronto Sun published a column arguing that male perpetrators of violent crimes receive much less public sympathy than female perpetrators. This is an excellent article, written by a woman, in which no punches are pulled.

The National Post, on the very same day, published yet another article criticizing the misandrist attitudes when it comes to dealing with domestic violence. Though less "confrontational" than the previously mentioned article (there seems to be just a hint of reluctance to "upset" domestic violence "experts"), it is still a very, very good resource.

CNN Video: Military Women and Eating Disorders

Matt · 11 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Add this (embedded video) to your list of ridiculous spins on poor-dearism. At this point I put nothing past the feminist hooey machine. The story talks about how some women join the military to help with their weight-loss regimen and how it often doesn't work.

What is one supposed to conclude? That the military (ie, men) isn't doing enough to help them? That they are victims?

How about this: I am going to join the Army so I can get a scholarship to a college after two years in. When after reading the enlistment contract and fully knowing that I could be sent into battle one day, six months later a shooting war starts and I have to go fight in it. Now, should you feel sorry for me?

The point here is that joining the Army to do anything other than to serve as a soldier, with all its attendant risks and liabilities, is clearly not a good idea and never has been, given the risks involved, assuming you don't want to take them. Why then should women who make this decision with wrong-headed intentions be treated any differently from men who do the same?

Politics makes for strange bedfellows indeed!

Matt · 11 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The day has come when touting one's credentials as a team hand-around from the 1960s is qualification for secretary of state of a state? Yes, read it here. No further comments from me I think are necessary. Excerpt:

'The usually ho-hum race for Wisconsin secretary of state is being spiced up by one candidate's naughty tell-all book about her bed-hopping exploits with Green Bay football legends during the team's glory days under Vince Lombardi in the 1960s.

Sandy Sullivan, a 65-year-old Republican with no political experience, self-published a gushing memoir in 2004 titled "Green Bay Love Stories and Other Affairs" in which she claims she was the girlfriend of Green Bay Packers Paul Hornung and Dan Currie, deflected a pass from Hall of Famer Don Hutson and was on the receiving end of a saucy comment from Richard Nixon.'

Sins of the Mother

afg · 11 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here is another National Post article defending men. This time, Barbara Kay writes about how society is much tougher on violent male criminals than on violent female criminals. Excerpt:

'We have heard the story before. The names change, the province changes, the particulars of the custody case change, the age of the dead child changes, but some things stay the same when a mother kills her own children: Any objective observer can see the tragedy coming a mile away, the children are not removed from her toxic embrace before it happens, and the mother is not only insufficiently punished (if at all) for the crime, but receives public sympathy on the assumption she was driven to it by forces beyond her control.'

Woman Sentenced for Lying About Rape

Evil White Male... · 11 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A woman who gained national notoriety for writing a book about being raped, then abandoning her newborn in a college trash been has been sentenced to prison for being the rapist in the case.

Well, you can't say she didn't try to make excuses -- and boy are we talking cliche here:

"She told the judge that she is trying to become a better person. "With all respect to you, there is a judge we all have to stand before sometime," she said. Davis confessed to clear her conscience and claimed the sex was consensual [the victim was 12], defense attorney Byron Potts said. He blamed her actions on a poor upbringing and abuse when she was a child."

Sun-Times: Women get work perks, men get zilch

anthony · 11 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I realize this article is over a week old, but Betsy Hart makes some good observations. I also like the fact that a story which appeals to our site, is featured in a major publication, the Chicago Sun-Times. Excerpt:

"NOW may find that at this point, such 'discrimination' may largely be running against the guys. I mean, how many men can indulge in the luxury of ever thinking to themselves, 'Gee, would I like to be respected for having a meaningful job with all kinds of perks for being a dad, or respected for staying home and raising my children, or maybe a little of both?'"

Woman sentenced for baby's stabbing, arson

anthony · 12 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

'A Decatur woman who authorities say stabbed her 1-year-old son and then set her mother's house on fire was sentenced Monday to five to 15 years in prison.

.

.

.

Following the sentencing, Gipson's brother, Ted Gipson, questioned whether prison is the right place for his sister. "She needs some professional help beyond the (Michigan) Department of Corrections," he said.'

McElroy: False Child Support Case Exposes System's Failures

anthony · 12 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'More than $20,000 in payments later, a judge finally did the obvious. Trevino was ordered to produce the disputed child, then supposedly 5-years-old. On her way to the court appearance, Trevino snatched a 2-year-old off the street to pass off as her own daughter; the ruse collapsed when the infant's distraught grandmother trailed Trevino into the courtroom.'

U.K. Schools Failing to Meet Boys' Education Needs

anthony · 12 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"U.K. Chancellor of the Exchequer Gordon Brown, aiming to improve his appeal with voters as he seeks to succeed Tony Blair as prime minister, will call for policies to improve education for boys with poor exam results."

Teenager's False Accusation Prosecuted

anthony · 12 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A teenage girl is facing jail after her "wicked and evil" rape lies caused an innocent man to be locked up for six weeks"

"My son has been left absolutely devastated, he will never be the same man. He is a totally different person."

Mother Smothers Infant Sons to Death

Matt · 12 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

More of the same here (embedded video). She smothers her newborn twin sons to death and already, police and community are making excuses.

What's the future hold? Probably an insanity defense, maybe mandated psychiatric treatment, and no justice for the dead babies.

Some mothers have had enough hugs

Anonymous · 12 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

An excellent commentary from Christie Blatchford of the Globe and Mail (and CFRB radio) about murderous moms and the double-standards in society and government agencies. Excerpt:

"As a female friend of Frances Elaine Campione put it, this after Ms. Campione was charged on Wednesday with murder in the death of her two young children, "That mother needs a hug."

In that line, widely repeated in Toronto and national media outlets, is a telling clue to what is so wrong with much of what happens both in the nation's family courts and in its child-protection system -- the pervasive view of the female of the species as constantly nurturing (except, you know, when she allegedly kills) and as in need of constant nurture (hugs all 'round, no matter what)."

Woman named McBride had Six grooms, Police say

anthony · 13 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"McBride, 31, has married five men without divorcing her first husband, according to warrants issued by Gwinnett County Police detectives. She is charged with five counts of bigamy and false swearing"

"60 Minutes" Covers Duke Case

Matt · 13 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Unexpected from a MSM source, but worthy of notice in any case. Story here. Excerpt:

'(CBS) The three Duke lacrosse players indicted for a rape they say they didn't commit are indignant over the effect the charges are having on their lives and their families.

In their first interviews, they speak to Ed Bradley this Sunday, Oct. 15, at 7 p.m. ET/PT.

"Your whole life, you try to, you know, stay on the right path, and to do the right things," says Reade Seligmann. "And someone can come along and take it all away, just by going like that," he says, pointing his finger. "Just by pointing their finger. That's all it takes."'

NOCIRC Releases Criticism of UN for Ignoring Circumcision

anthony · 14 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Press release is here. Excerpt:

"According to the National Organization of Circumcision Information Resource Centers, the UN fails in its humanitarian mission by choosing to ignore boys. Are they ignorant, sexist, or sadly just indifferent to boys' suffering? The first sentence in the just released, 34-page report, which took four years to compiles, is "No violence against children is justifiable." The United Nations' silence on these crimes is nothing less than justification for them."

Pink Ribbon Obsession Called to Account

Anonymous · 14 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Warning: This column might be so politically incorrect that you may feel the need to send me harassing e-mails. During October, this sacred month commemorating breast cancer awareness, our commitment to the cause may be diverting our attention from diseases in greater need of our attention.

.

.

.

This year, in lieu of a pink ribbon, I'll be wearing brown and light blue in support of my husband - another nagging reminder of my commitment to his prostate and colon health and, ultimately, our life together. Oh, the romance.

Prisons for women now have nurseries...

Anonymous · 14 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

That's right folks, the madness never stops. In the never ending race to please women the State of Ohio has gone created living quarters for the babies of female convicts, on prison grounds. Think about this: We are now not only allowing female convicts to maintain contact with thier children, we are actually willing to put children in prison in order to accomplish this. Of course, the taxpayers, who are mostly male will have no say in this matter. So let me ask you: Would a male convicted felon be allowed to imprison his children just so he could selfishly maintain a "relationship" with them? Is that a question that is even allowed?

"The Dads Who Fought Back": Documentary about Dads who Wouldn't Quit

Anonymous · 15 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The Dads Who Fought Back, a documentary about two dads who tried to be part of their kids' lives in spite of bitter exes and a system stacked against them, aired on Global TV last night.

No word yet as to where it's going to air next, but definitely worth keeping an eye out for it.

A number of government and private organizations contributed to the development of this film (see bottom of home page) -- it's worth noting and thanking them for their contributions to this project.

Fathers4Justice protester wins court case

anthony · 15 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Guy Harrison says no one was put at risk by his stunt.
A Fathers 4 Justice campaigner who scaled the Houses of Parliament has been acquitted."

"Fathers4Justice founder Matt O'Connor warned the organisation planned to stage several more events before Christmas."

Man Stabbed to Death After Custody Swap

anthony · 15 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Let's reverse the genders, the father would have been in police custody within five minutes. Excerpt:

"Sheriff's investigators said it was not clear whether the killing was related to the man's relationship with his estranged wife or the custody arrangement, or whether he was the victim of a random violent crime."

Teacher accused of sex with 11-YO student

anthony · 16 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"A former Johnston County teacher has been arrested on charges that she had sex with a student on campus."

"The boy was believed to be 11 at the time."

Teacher's aide charged with "having sex" with ex-student

anthony · 16 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The criminal complaint filed in Canal Township Justice Court on Wednesday charges Tracie Nelson, 26, with felony statutory sexual seduction for the alleged sex act, open and gross lewdness for allegedly engaging in the act in front of the other juveniles and contributing to the delinquency of a minor, Lyon County sheriff's Lt. Rob Hall said.'

Toronto Star: Women no longer need to be coddled

Anonymous · 16 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

For those of you who know the Toronto Star, you'll probably be shocked to read that this little ditty was published in their pages:

"As much as equality between the genders can be achieved, it has been achieved in Canada. In the reasonable ways in which gender equality can be measured, Canadian women can declare victory.

Women have every kind of liberty, intellectual, physical and reproductive freedom. Women have the same opportunities as men. Women can become CEOs, die in horrible space shuttle accidents, buy banks, get the better of someone in a divorce settlement — all the things that used to pretty much be the realm of men.

Contrary to the oft-repeated — and debunked — perceived wisdom, women in Canada have achieved pay equity."

"The Dads Who Fought Back" Available On-line

Anonymous · 16 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The Dads Who Fought Back, the documentary of father's stories in the justice system can now be viewed online.

The main page can be found here.

The episode is broken into six pieces, and should be viewed in this order:

http://video.canada.com/VideoContent.aspx?9293
http://video.canada.com/VideoContent.aspx?9294
http://video.canada.com/VideoContent.aspx?9295
http://video.canada.com/VideoContent.aspx?9296
http://video.canada.com/VideoContent.aspx?9297
http://video.canada.com/VideoContent.aspx?9298

Not sure how long it will be available -- it's definitely worth watching.

Ed. note: Tried to view the main page but got a message saying this video was only available to Canadian viewers. However if you use the list of direct links above, it should show for you. Again, high-speed connection with solid O/S strongly recommended, as this is streamed content.

Marrieds now in the minority-- gee wonder why?

Matt · 16 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This will come as no surprise to MRAs. What is significant about this piece is the readers' comments. They are unabashed and unflinching in saying why they think "the M word" is no longer in vogue. Enjoy!

UNICEF supports only girl's education -- what about boys?

Anonymous · 16 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

UNICEF, the United Nations Children's Fund sends 22% of their donations to girl's education. Not a penny to boys. Expenditures here.

Their expenditures total $1.9 billion, so that works out to $4.2 million for girl's education. A very noble and worthwhile cause, but what about boys?

"Of an estimated 700 million primary-school-age children in the world today, roughly 120 million are not in school. Nearly three quarters of these children live in sub-Saharan Africa and South Asia. They are mostly children of ethnic minorities from remote regions, working children, children living in conditions of emergency and conflict, children affected by HIV/AIDS, and children with disabilities. And they are mostly – 53 per cent – girls."

You'd think they might be able to scrape up a few bucks for the other 47% of human beings they're supposed to serve.

It's worth telling them that you'd like to see the funding shared fairly among both boys and girls, by sending them a note here.

Father Sued by Couple for Child Support

Anonymous · 16 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This story is another example of just how absurd family law can actually get. Excerpt:

'A Saskatoon father who is battling with a Prince Albert couple for custody of his five-month-old son got a shock this week in the form of a letter demanding that he pay them child support.

"Shame on them," Rick Fredrickson said in an interview, after learning the couple who left a Saskatoon hospital with his newborn son this spring -- while he desperately sought help asserting his paternity and right to custody -- now wants access to his financial records in order to calculate how much he should pay them for the child's care.

...

"If his son's mother was the one asking for child support, he would pay it immediately, Fredrickson said."'

RADAR ALERT: Presidential Proclamation on Domestic Violence Recognizes Male Victims

Matt · 16 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

In this year's presidential proclamation on domestic violence, George W. Bush said, "Domestic violence has no place in our society, and we have a moral obligation to help prevent it. The terrible tragedies that result from it destroy lives and insult the dignity of women, men, and children."

The inclusion of "men" in the proclamation is significant. Never before has anyone at this level acknowledged what researchers have known for three decades – that domestic violence victimizes men as well as women and children. Domestic violence is not a gender issue. It's a human issue.

Our effort last year to get the VAWA reauthorization bill to require service providers to stop refusing to help men resulted in explicit language in the bill, stating, "Nothing in this title shall be construed to prohibit male victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking from receiving benefits and services under this title." It's likely that this is what brought the issue to the president's attention.

But there are politically powerful groups that are committed to continuing the long-standing policies that place blame solely on men and refuse to hold women accountable for any transgression. In the face of such oppostion, most politicians would have taken the politically prudent course, and as in past years, would have acknowledged only women and children as victims. So it's important that the president's inclusion of that one little word, "men", not go unacknowledged.

Please send a note to the president, telling him that you appreciate the fact that he saw fit to include male victims in his proclamation on domestic violence. You might want to mention:

1. researchers have known since the first National Family Violence Survey in 1975 that many men are victims of women's domestic violence
2. this has been confirmed by nearly 200 studies and analyses by respected researchers (http://www.csulb.edu/~mfiebert/assault.htm)
3. Congress has consistently ignored these findings

Send your letters to:

President George W. Bush
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue NW
Washington, DC 20500

or send email to:
comments-at-whitehouse.gov

++
Date of RADAR Release: October 16, 2006

Sign up today to receive RADAR's Alerts! Go to http://www.mediaradar.org/, enter your e-mail address in the upper right hand box, then hit Subscribe!

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Sydney's Daily Telegraph Covers Maths Crisis Without Actually Mentioning Boys

Anonymous · 17 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Our boys are falling behind in education at an alarming rate, we know that already. One area where this is starting to show up is the shortage of Math Teachers.

How so? Because Maths is traditionally a male area. By failing our boys the education system is actually shooting itself in the foot. We are not producing educated boys so we are not producing Maths Teachers. It is that simple. Yes of course women also teach maths, but educated women have so many choices these days Maths is seldom one of them.

Sydney's Daily Telegraph has managed to do an editorial about the shortage of Maths Teachers without once mentioning that it is boys who are falling behind. Rather it ends with a call for a new program to be put in place to encourage (girls) to take up mathss.

No boys crisis at the Telegraph. Copy of the editorial and commentary here.

Mums knuckle-up over baby-sitting

Matt · 17 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

You'd think it was something from a one-hour nighttime cop/lawyer drama series, but no, it's for real-- read it here. Excerpt:

'TWO women armed with a knuckleduster* invaded a house because of a baby-sitting dispute, a court heard yesterday.

Rachael Anne Jones, 35, and Shelby Wilson, 28, had both been drinking when they made a late-night visit to "sort out" a transport issue, Darwin Magistrates Court was told.

The court heard one woman grabbed a knife from the kitchen during the rural Darwin home invasion on December 6 last year.

.

.

.

"I don't want the ladies to think it's a lay-down misere they're going to get a home detention order," he said. "There must come a point single mothers must go to jail when they have kids when they commit serious crimes."

The magistrate adjourned their sentences to November 6.'

Well, I guess time will tell if he's serious about that.

---

* For those not familiar with the term, a "knuckleduster" is also called "brass knuckles".

Five Children (4 Girls) Lock Disabled Teen Boy in Burning Woodshed

Anonymous · 17 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Four girls and one boy locked a disabled boy in a backyard shed and set it on fire.

Oddly, the CBC doesn't see it fit to report the sexes of the prepetrators, but the Globe and Mail does.

Think they would've reported the sexes more prominently if disabled person set on fire were a girl and the perpetrators were boys?

NYTimes Covers Problems with IMBRA

Matt · 17 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The new law has angered many men, who argue that there is no definitive evidence that violence is more likely to take place in an international marriage arranged over the Internet than in a domestic one. Unwilling or unable to find a spouse in the United States, some worry that the law could make it more difficult to find a wife abroad.

“We should have the right to correspond with, date and marry the person of our choosing,” said David Root, who has been involved with many women from the former Soviet Union in the past decade but has not married any of them. “The government shouldn’t interfere in this.”'

Girls 'forced handicapped boy to eat own faeces'

Anonymous · 17 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

More from the Sugar and Spice archives...

"The court heard one of the girls instigated the attack because she didn't like the way the boy looked at her.

It's alleged the boy tried to leave but Dignan stopped him and brought him back to the group so they could taunt him about his disability.

The group allegedly forced the boy to eat his own faeces and broken glass while one of the girls is accused of threatening him with a metal bar."

Story here.

Mother hid dead baby in freezer, police say

Anonymous · 18 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The National Post reports...

"TORONTO - Police have charged a young woman with allegedly hiding the dead body of her infant in a freezer for several years before it was dumped into the Humber River.

Ivana Levkovic, a 24-year-old Toronto resident, is also accused of a similar crime after the decomposing body of another baby was found in a vacated apartment in Mississauga earlier this year.

[...]

Her lawyer, Michael Moon, told a local newspaper that his client was "emotionally distraught" by the whole ordeal."

Golly. Poor woman -- the emotional distress of the whole ordeal must be awful for her.

Predictably, the same story in the Toronto Star is much briefer and more ambiguous, not even mentioning that this is the woman's second alleged murder of a baby.

Toronto Star asks, "Why was mother the trusted parent?"

Anonymous · 18 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The Toronto Star published an article about Elaine Campione, asking why she, the accused murderer of her two children, was the trusted parent.

"Elaine Campione has been charged with two counts of first-degree murder.

Yet she was the parent who was trusted, who had full and exacting custody of the children, who fought bitterly against easing access restrictions imposed on her estranged and allegedly abusive husband, who was reportedly terrified that she would lose those babies to their father.

Despite all the alarm bells — and they'd been clanging — despite Elaine Campione's palpable mental instability, her hospitalization, the purported warnings that she might do harm to those children, she was mistress of the manger.

In her care, those beautiful little girls were killed. Nobody protected them."

A surprising article, given the Toronto Star's usual political bent, and particularly surprising given that articles from the National Post and Globe and Mail more dryly submit the information in the court file that has allegations of the father's abuse all over them.

Paul McCartney Accused of Domestic Violence

dschmidt · 18 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Former Beatle Paul McCartney has been accused of domectic violence by his estranged wife. The soon-to-be-ex claims Sir Paul stabbed her in the leg, was insensitive to her disability(ies) and called her an "ungrateful bitch."
Surely this has nothing to do with ensuring she gets custody and a fat monetary settlement, right?
Surely she has witnesses and/or doctor/hospital records from this horrible stabbing, right?

Female Teacher Accused of "Sex" With Teen

anthony · 18 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

It's a pity these stories are so easy to find. Yet another female teacher is accused of having sexual relations with a student. At least one woman has identified a massive double standard exists:

“She really needs to be punished,” said parent Latonia Carroll. “Really, if a man did it, (he’d) get punished. If a woman does it, she should get punished.”

NYC day care worker accused of sex-abusing 4-YO boy

anthony · 18 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

It took almost half way through the article before her gender was mentioned. As you can imagine, the excuses have already begun:

"Her attorney, Stephen Turano, said his client was innocent and it would have been "physically impossible" for her to have done what the boy said she did."

"I would find it hard to believe that these things could have happened because the bathroom had paper-thin walls and was a very tight space"

Female Teacher Charged with Sexual Assault of Female Student

Anonymous · 18 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here's another story about a female teacher who is accused of sexually assaulting a student -- this time it's a girl who's the victim of the woman's advances.

"A popular French teacher at Streetsville Secondary School in Mississauga has been charged with the sexual exploitation and sexual assault of a student, police say.

Leslie Merlino, 36, was friends with the alleged victim before the incident, Peel Regional Police Constable Craig Platt said last night. She taught the 17-year-old girl in the previous school year and they had met outside the school and corresponded on-line, Constable Platt said.

Investigators contend that some of the on-line messages were sexually explicit. And this month, they say, the girl and her family approached police to complain that Ms. Merlino had acted inappropriately."

UN Violence Report Laced with Myths and Misandry

anthony · 18 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Report on the report is here. Excerpt:

"Never before have the UN feminists advanced the patriarchy theory so boldly. Never before have they presented their Marxist-inspired views in such a high-profile UN publication. And never before have they tried to stereotype and smear men in such a calculated manner."

"Apparently men's higher death rate doesn't comport with the UN's gender equality agenda."

UK: Brown vows to combat the gender gap in education

anthony · 19 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

My greatest concern as an M.R.A is an education system that is oblivious regarding the proven biological abilities of boys. I also believe (maybe paranoid) that young boys are enemy #1 for feminists. They realize their futile attempt to re-educate males begins at childhood. Our young boys (future leaders) need to overcome a "girl friendly" environment that thrives at the expense of an anti-male education system. I'm not completely pessimistic, the system is beginning to acknowledge the education disparity.

Story here. Excerpt:

"The chancellor said he and the education secretary, Alan Johnson, have asked the chief inspector of schools to recommend changes in the classroom to personalise learning to boys' needs, including greater use of computers."

BBC promotes DV myths -- again

AngryMan · 19 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This is the UK equivalent of the 'Superbowl Sunday' myth. Excerpt:

"Domestic violence surged by up to 31% on England's World Cup match days this year, Home Office data has revealed. The biggest rise in reports of domestic violence to English and Welsh police was on Saturday, June 10 - when England beat Paraguay 1-0."

"Domestic violence is a cowardly crime that will affect one in four women during their lifetime and, on average, claims the lives of two women each week - killed by a current or former partner."

Same old lies. No mention of female-on-male violence. No mention of gay-on-gay violence. For the first time, the article does suggest a link between alcohol abuse and violence.

Contrast it with this article, a blog by a serving UK police officer. Excerpt:

"I don't like fighting — but what is worst of all, though, is fighting with girls. My natural instinct, as an unreformed caveman, is to protect females. Ha, ha. Given a few Vodka Red Bulls and an errant boyfriend, the average Lycra-clad chav-woman will take on a full shift of officers, and possibly win. After years as a police officer, I have long given up expecting people to act in a certain way — women to behave with decorum, parents to look after their children."

The official feminist version, of course, is that women are morally impeccable creatures, horribly victimised by the Evil Patriarchy (TM). Women would never get involved in violence, would they? Of course not...

More on the Newsweek article about PAS

Anonymous · 19 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Blogger's discussion is here. Excerpt:

'In her article, it's apparent that Sarah Childress implies an awful lot, but is careful not to say anything really about Tim. She mostly demonizes him through association with the subject, assuming from the start that Genia is truthful and qualifying most of the unsupportable claims with phrases like, "she says." So first to examine are the premises of the article, which are that Tim Shockome is a batterer, and that the judge awarded him custody based on parental alienation syndrome (PAS).'

Drugged N.Y. woman driving naked kills pedestrian

Evil White Male... · 19 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Interesting how they refer to her as "drugged" implying somebody else drugged her -- rather than her being on drugs. Since she killed a man I wonder if this will be listed as a hate crime... story here. Excerpt:

'NEW YORK (Reuters) - A speeding car driven by a naked woman high on drugs hit and killed a pedestrian in the New York City borough of Staten Island, before flipping over and stopping in a parking lot, authorities said on Thursday.

The driver, Taliyah Taylor, 24, of Staten Island, was uninjured in Wednesday's crash and pulled from the upside-down car with no clothes on by employees of a nearby hardware store, said William Smith, spokesman for the Staten Island District Attorney's office.'

MSN Covers Men and the Lack of Desire to Marry

Matt · 20 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Surprising they would run it, but here it is. They include the 10 main reasons a study (I believe they are referring to this project) discovered why men are avoiding marriage, but even more unexpectedly, they are running some very honest feedback from men. For example:

'You should have an article on why divorced men will not marry again. The responses would be very interesting. For example:

* They've already been taken to the cleaners at least once by a prior wife.
* If a woman has kids, she really has no use for a man. She's got the house, the BMW, the kids, and his support and alimony.
* The women of today have taken the place of the man from yesteryear. They are today what they thought men were 40 years ago.
* They run the risk of meeting a female divorce attorney.

I'm not bitter, just realistic."'

N.Y. newspaper ad targets 'deadbeat dads'

Anonymous · 20 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Another one-sided story on those darned "Dead Beat Dads", and a way to shame them. Excerpt:

'Westchester County, just north of New York City, bought a quarter-page ad in Tuesday's New York Post aimed at shaming four major child support debtors into compliance — or at least finding out where they're hiding.

"Do you know where these deadbeat dads are? Their children don't," the ad said.'

Police exonerate man murdered by neighbor over molestation accusation

Matt · 20 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'We're confident this 2-year-old was not molested," said Capt. Gary MacNamara. "We are confident in our investigation that Mr. Edington did in fact kill Mr. James. We are as confident in our investigation that Mr. James did not molest the Edingtons' daughter."

MacNamara confirmed that investigators interviewed the girl but declined to release further details.

MacNamara also would not comment on whether the girl's mother would be charged. A molestation complaint was filed against James shortly after he was killed.'

Now why would the police be considering charges against the girl's mother? Making a false statement to police, perhaps, or maybe instigating murder?

In one fell swoop a man is murdered and another goes to jail for a long time for the crime he committed; qui bono? You have three guesses. I doubt you'll need more than one.

Let's keep an eye out for the follow-up on this one.

Girl Tries to Kill Herself by Ramming Another Car Head-on - Goes to Mental Hospital, not Jail

Matt · 20 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here's another one to watch. She was rejected by another girl she wanted to have sex with, so she decided to kill herself by running her car (ie, her parents' car) into someone else's car head-on, killing the other driver. She is to be charged for felony murder and tried as an adult-- but she is locked up in a mental institution, not a jail. So, time will tell if she actually gets treated the way a teenage boy would in her position. We already know she's getting different treatment while awaiting trial.

Suicidal men/teen boys are, if lucky, put on suicide watch, but still go to jail, if in the process of trying to kill themselves they have committed a serious crime against another person. But suicidal women/teen girls? That's different, I guess.

UK: Female police win right to bonus for working night shifts despite only working days

anthony · 21 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Apparently these women are entitled to "overtime" pay because "their childcare commitments stop them from working anti-social hours" Now that the so-called wage gap has been refuted, women are again looking for special privileges. Excerpt:

"Its judgement means West Midlands police must now pay thousands of pounds in special allowances to single mother Susan Blackburn and her colleague, mother of two Victoria Manley, both of whom work part-time."

Critics assess U.S. military's role in 'gender wars'

anthony · 21 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Anyone know how many male soldiers have died in Iraq? Excerpt:

"Kate O'Beirne, Washington editor of National Review magazine, said the Iraq war is producing an unprecedented number of killed and wounded military women. She said the military signs up mothers despite their child care responsibilities. "Does our national security really have to rest on single parents and teenage girls?" she said. More than 60 military women have been killed in Iraq or Afghanistan."

Florida: Divorce custody changes in works

anthony · 22 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A legislative committee is considering whether "shared parenting" may be best.

.

.

The House Study Committee on Shared Parenting, which began meeting in September, could propose new legislation by the end of the year encouraging judges to grant joint custody in most divorce cases.'

RADAR ALERT: Time to Blow the Whistle on the UN Violence Report

Matt · 22 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Two weeks ago the United Nations issued its one-sided Study on Violence Against Women (.pdf file).

If you haven't reviewed the report yet, think of it this way:

What the Violence Against Women Act has done to families in the United States, this report may do to families throughout the entire world.

The report's portrayal of domestic violence is so flawed that leading family violence researchers around the world are speaking out against the deliberate bias:

- "Research on intimate partner violence consistently finds that men and women use similar types of aggression. By ignoring the mutual nature of much partner violence, the UN ensures that both women and men will continue to be victimised in this way." - Nicola Graham-Kevan, PhD, University of Central Lancashire, England
- "The UN report's discussion on domestic violence is biased because it deliberately ignores half the problem - female perpetrators. Ending violence against women by male partners is not going to be achieved until women also desist." - Murray A. Straus, PhD, Co-Director, Family Research Laboratory, University of New Hampshire, United States.
- "Much domestic violence research conducted in North America has been so biased that it might be called 'junk science.' It has used selective data and interpreted results in a way that depicts all males as real or potential perpetrators, while downplaying female violence." - Donald Dutton, PhD, University of British Columbia, Canada
- "Studies consistently show that throughout the Western world, men and women initiate physical violence at about equal rates, and frequently partner violence is reciprocal. Portraying inter-partner violence as though it only involves male perpetrators and female victims does both men and women a disservice." - Felicity Goodyear-Smith, MB ChB, University of Auckland, New Zealand

For years, feminists at the UN have pushed through their resolutions, conferences, and programs. With no one to tell the other side of the story, these people have operated virtually unchecked.

All this is going to change on Monday, October 23, 2006.

RADAR has assembled an international coalition to protest this deliberately misleading report. RADAR has also put together key information on its website - http://www.mediaradar.org/ - under the heading, "UN Report on Violence Against Women."

This is what we are asking you to do:

- Send Ambassador John Bolton a short message. A boilerplate letter is shown here. Feel free to modify the first two paragraphs, but remember to always be polite and respectful.
- Send your message by e-mail: usa-at-un.int, or fax: 1-212-415-4443

Please do this today. The UN's "Third Committee" will be taking action on this report, possibly this coming week. Your voice is important. But time is of the essence.

++
Date of RADAR Release: October 21, 2006

Sign up today to receive RADAR's Alerts! Go to http://www.mediaradar.org/, enter your e-mail address in the upper right hand box, then hit Subscribe!

R.A.D.A.R. - Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting - is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

BBC Admits Leftist Bias

afg · 22 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

We are all well aware of the fact that no end of the political spectrum can claim a monopoly on misandry, but it goes without saying that feminists tend to gravitate to the far left. Here, the BBC actually admits that it has a leftist and pro-PC bias. It seems as though men's rights activists were not just talking nonsense when they were complaining that the BBC is anti-male. Story here.

Duke and the Death of Academe

anthony · 23 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Thus, when a black stripper claimed that members of the lacrosse team gang-raped her, faculty members seized the moment. The truth of the charges themselves was irrelevant; these young men represented everything these faculty members despised, and they were not going to permit something as bourgeois as truth stand in the way of their attempt to remake Duke University in their own image – and perhaps be able to help railroad innocent young men into prison, which they would have seen, ironically, as a triumph of justice."

Female teacher's sex charge is unusual

anthony · 23 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Only 4 percent of educators who were investigated for sexual misconduct were females, the report said. But students surveyed said 43 percent of inappropriate behavior came from female teachers."

"Researchers and advocates believe that most child sex abuse cases go unreported, and boys are less likely than girls to report abuse."

The bodies of men pile up

Matt · 23 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Into the abyss of Baghdad is exceptional because it discusses the truth of what is happening there without kowtowing to PC spin. Excerpt:

'BAGHDAD -- I keep seeing his face. He appears to be in his mid-20s, bespectacled, slightly bearded, and somehow his smile conveys a sense of prosperity to come. Perhaps he is set to marry, or enroll in graduate school, or launch a business — all of these flights of ambition seem possible.

In the next few images he is encased in plastic: His face is frozen in a ghoulish grimace. Blackened lesions blemish his neck.

"Drill holes," says Col. Khaled Rasheed, an Iraqi commander who is showing me the set of photographs.
.
.
.
"It's like a ghost city," laments Fatima Omar, a resident of the Amariya district, which once abounded with street life. She is 22, a recent graduate of Baghdad University, an English major — and, like many of her generation, unsure of what future she can expect. "So many of our men are either dead or have gone away," she says. "We may be doomed to spinsterhood."

People are here one day, gone the next. Those who do go out often venture no farther than familiar streets. In the sinister evenings, when death squads roam, people block off their lanes with barbed wire, logs, bricks to ward off the killers.'

False Rape Accusation Leads to Murder of Marine

Luek · 23 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'NORFOLK, Va. - A sailor pleaded guilty Monday to abducting and killing a Marine corporal he thought had been involved in a gang rape. The rape turned out to be a lie, but the truth surfaced too late.

Petty Officer 3rd Class Cooper Jackson, 23, pleaded guilty Monday to premeditated murder, kidnapping, impersonating a Naval Criminal Investigative Service agent and obstruction of justice in connection with the death of Cpl. Justin L. Huff, 23.'

Heather Mills to be the new face of DV in the UK

afg · 23 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

That's right, Heather Mills is now going to campaign on behalf of battered women because we all know she was mistreated and beaten up by Paul McCartney (sarcasm, as I'm sure you all know). So, is the former Beatle now going to campaign for fathers and men going through divorce? Unbelievable... story here.

Don't Blame Me, A Man Made Me Do It

anthony · 23 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Woman charged with armed robbery. Excerpt:

'HILLSBOROUGH -- A woman who was caught after allegedly robbing a convenience store Wednesday tried to tell deputies she did it after a man beat her and forced her to commit the robbery. But her lack of injuries to substantiate her story caused authorities to doubt her story.

The Orange County Sheriff's Office charged Elizabeth Scott Allen, 24, of 1523 Pleasant Green Road, Durham, with armed robbery, possession of drug paraphernalia and possession of burglary tools. A magistrate set her bond at $50,000, and she was confined in the Orange County Jail.'

Sex-segregated public school classrooms on rise

Matt · 24 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Looks like we're drifting back to sex-segregated classrooms... read it here. Excerpt:

'WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Bush administration is giving public schools wider latitude to teach boys and girls separately in what is considered the biggest change to coed classrooms in more than three decades.

After a two-year wait, the Education Department issued final rules Tuesday detailing how it will enforce the Title IX landmark anti-discrimination law. Under the change taking effect Nov. 24, local school leaders will have discretion to create same-sex classes for subjects such as math, a grade level or even an entire school.'

Judge sides with Father on his Son's circumcision

Anonymous · 24 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Good news for a change. In this case, a judge in America actually sided with a divorced man over the wishes of his ex-wife. Get this: the creepy ex-wife wanted to circumcise their 9-year-old boy! The Dad said no way and took her to court, and WON! Finally, we have at least one victory where the sicko ex-wife isn't allowed to literally castrate the male members the family. Thank goodness.

The Onion (HUMOR): DNA Evidence Frees Man After 15 Years Of Marriage

Matt · 25 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Gotta love The Onion! Read it here and laugh!
[For those not in the know, The Onion is a spoof newspaper/news site that frequently hits the nail on the head when it comes to using humor as a vehicle for social commentary.]

Starts with:

'JACKSONVILLE, FL—Henry "Hank" Doswell, 42, was released from his marriage Wednesday, after DNA tests conclusively proved his innocence in the July 1991 fathering of Spencer Doswell, the solitary charge that has kept him committed for 15 years.

Visibly moved to tears as his divorce lawyer read the test results, Doswell, who had been confined to a suburban housing facility after being wrongly wedded after allegedly impregnating then-girlfriend Karen Sanders, told reporters he was relieved to finally set his matrimonial record straight.

"Fifteen years, seven months, and two days," said Doswell, speaking to a group at the Red Room bar's Singles Night shortly after his release. "I always said they'd made a terrible mistake, that I did not deserve to be put away in the prime of my life, but no one believed me. If it hadn't been for this DNA test, I might have died in that monogamous relationship."'

MSN Covers Benefits of Singlehood

Matt · 25 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Do my eyes deceive me? Read it here.

Of course it doesn't go into the risks associated with divorce, nor the particular risks associated with being a married man, especially one with children. That, after all, would annoy their female readership base, since to paraphrase Jack Nicholson, people just can't handle the truth. But the fact that they have published anything that contrasts with their incessant marriage-as-a-panacea mantra is some progress.

"Veil Essay" is Food for Thought

Matt · 26 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I read this and thought "Gee, wonder how far down the street a man in London would get covered head-to-toe with only his eyes showing? Excerpt:

'I don't understand the need of women to wear something as severe as the niqab. But for that tiny number that do, I will shake their gloved hands for bearing this endurance task — the staring, the swearing and the discomfort. On the streets of London, the black veil does nothing to distract attention — and everything to attract it.'

One day perhaps men will start to voluntarily keep their faces covered in public. Only instead of being insulted for it, I rather think we'd be arrested or shot-- or both.

Hawking Could Be New Voice For Male Victims Of Spousal Abuse

Luek · 26 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The world-reknowned British astro-physicist Professor Stephen Hawking is getting a divorce from his present wife of 11 years.

Hawking has been totally paralyzed with motor neuron dysfunction, commonly-known as Lou Gehring's Disease, for years. His former nurses have publicly stated he was physically and mentally abused by his soon to be ex. However, it seems like Professor Hawking like too many male victims of DV and spousal abuse is in denial. He claims he was never physically assaulted by his wife. But the evidence seems to indicate otherwise. Hawking is very famous about his theories about the creation of the universe and time but his most important contribution could be in bringing the hidden crime of men being abused by their spouses to the public's attention. Let's hope he does the right thing.

Globe And Mail: Father dealt difficult hand by the system

Anonymous · 26 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Even last week, when the family court file of Elaine and Leo Campione was released to the press -- in significant measure because Mr. Campione didn't oppose the media's bid to see it -- most of the coverage that followed was exquisitely balanced, or what in the modern world has come to be deemed balanced.

It was a nifty mirror of how the police, courts and social service agencies, which so often are drawn into and/or influence these kinds of proceedings, see and treat the warring married couple.

There is, to be frank, an underlying perspective of feminist oppression from which all else springs.'

Should Men Be Able To Compete In Female Sports?

anthony · 26 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'I have no beef with either women's sports or female athletes, but I believe that equality should always be a two-way street. If women are allowed to compete in men's sports, then wouldn't a truly egalitarian policy allow men to compete in women's sports as well.'

World Bank Book asks - What about Men?

anthony · 26 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'But the authors argue that resolving some of the most chronic social ills in the developing world requires helping men deal with problems unique to being men."

"It is not that men are faring worse because women have advanced," Correia said. "It is just that we haven't realised that men are gendered beings."'

Title IX opens and closes doors

anthony · 26 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'But the reason that it's not fair might sound sexist to a stubborn person, so try to look at it with an open-mind. For example, it's a given that more people, a lot more people, attend male basketball games versus female basketball games. It isn't because fans like staring at guys more than the women. No, it's because men are generally more intense and generally physically stronger - two key points for a good basketball game.

For those of you who don't know, our athletic program scrapped four male sports in order to comply with this law years ago. The male swimming team and the male diving team were yanked. A nationally- recognized male track and field team was pulled. The male tennis team came to a crashing halt as well.'

Female coaches claim punishment inequity over prank

anthony · 26 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Two females claiming discrimination because there isn't equity regarding pranks on male coaches. Am I the only one who's confused? Excerpt:

'However, the lawsuit states that during the sleepover, Schroefel and Mahoney allowed the students to leave the school to place toilet paper and other items on the lawns of two male coaches as a prank.

The male coaches complained, and the school district suspended each of the women coaches from teaching for 21 days and banned them from coaching for two years.'

icWales: Is education too female for boys?

anthony · 27 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"It would be ridiculous to conclude that boys are more stupid than girls. Something must be going wrong for boys. Could it be that different approaches might be needed for boys and girls, and that perhaps a mix of men and women teachers would be best"?

It's time for the education system to make serious changes regarding the biological needs of boys. Ignoring this issue is tragic. I say "tragic" because education is vital! No one should be deprived a quality education regardless of massive feminist influence. I've said it before, boys are enemy #1 for feminists. They are looking to create a society where males are manipulated with their ideology. Am I paranoid, maybe so, but the education of young males is vital for a productive society.

F.R.A. Murtari to Remail in Jail

Matt · 27 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'John Murtari is a family rights activist who hasn't eaten solid food for 87 days, since July 31 when he reported to jail to serve a 6-month sentence for "willful failure to pay child support." Murtari's not eating, his act of non-cooperation, is his way of taking a stand against the immorality of family court where there is no due process and parents can lose custody with no trial by jury.'

Violent Female Celebrities

AngryMan · 27 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

In the wake of Naomi Campbell being arrested for violent assault yet again - her ninth rap in eight years - The Sun publishes a light-hearted review of female celebrity violence.

Mother cleared of poisoning son to death

anthony · 27 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Sounds like this women and defense attorney have "Yated" (ie: Andrea Yates) the court system. All prescriptions for Prozac, Lexapro, Effexor and Zoloft will now come with a book: "100 Ways For a Mother To Kill Her Children" (and not do jail time). Story here. Excerpt:

'During the trial, the prosecution alleged that Williams, who was on antidepressants, killed her son because she felt she could not cope with caring for him.'

Father to be tried for circumcising daugher

Matt · 27 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Taking a knife to one's daughter's genitals in the name of tradition is wrong-- but so too is doing it to one's son. Yet I wonder when boys will get equal protection under the law in this matter? In any case, what this man did to his daughter was wrong. Had he done it to his son though, or paid someone else to do it, he would not be facing trial.

Story here. Excerpt:

'LAWRENCEVILLE, Georgia (AP) -- The trial of an Atlanta-area father accused of circumcising his 2-year-old daughter with scissors is focusing attention on an ancient African practice that experts say is slowly becoming more common in the U.S. as immigrant communities grow.

Khalid Adem, a 30-year-old immigrant from Ethiopia, is charged with aggravated battery and cruelty to children.

Human rights observers said they believe this is the first criminal case in the U.S. involving the 5,000-year-old practice.'

Prosecutor Has Never Interviewed Duke Lacrosse Rape Accuser

Evil White Male... · 27 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

So here we have a prosecutor who has never even asked the accuser of the facts or events of the evening.

"I've had conversations with (the accuser) about how she's doing. I've had conversations with (the accuser) about her seeing her kids," Mike Nifong said. "I haven't talked with her about the facts of that night. ... We're not at that stage yet."

Oh, and at the end of the article: Evans, 23, of Bethesda, Md., was charged in May with rape, kidnapping and sexual offense. A month earlier, a grand jury indicted players Reade Seligmann, 20, of Essex Fells, N.J., and Collin Finnerty, 20, of Garden City, N.Y., on the same charges. The accuser, a student at nearby North Carolina Central University, told police she was raped in a bathroom by three men at the off-campus party.

FUNNY, I DON'T SEE HER NAME MENTIONED ANYWHERE. WHAT WAS THAT OLD SAYING: INNOCENT UNTIL PROVEN GUILTY...

UVSC Hosts Conference Aimed at Building Male Academic Success

anthony · 27 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'While recent studies show that American males may be losing interest in college life, Utah proves that higher education is just as important to boys as it is to girls.

"We have 2 million boys who need to be in higher education," Draves told the Arizona Republic. "This is an issue for everyone."'

Freep.com: "United States puts more women at risk in conflicts"

anthony · 27 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

The harsh reality of war and death should be understood by anyone who enlists in the armed forces. We cannot equate the mortality of one gender over another. They are all soldiers, each death tragic, regardless of gender. Excerpt:

'Ann Wright, a retired Army colonel and former State Department diplomat, said that, with each woman's death in Iraq, the public becomes more aware of the dangers women face. But it hasn't spawned the backlash some predicted.'

Kraft Foods slams men in order to sell their products

Anonymous · 29 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Not a new topic to MRAs but an essential one. Kraft foods has been bold enough to place an ad on their website denigrating men in order to sell their products, namely, their new line of A.1. steak marinades. The clever little ad reads, "A marinade so unforgettable, even a guy won't forget it."

What are they suggesting, that all men are so stupid that they can't remember which products they have used in the past? Or that women are just so naturally superior to men that they won't have to worry about forgetting which products they use? In either case, it's bad and we should not just ignore it as "humor"-based advertising. We did that in the past and look where it got us. Every time this comes up we have to hit them back hard. That's only way this will ever stop.

Ad here.

Contact form here.

RADAR ALERT: UN Violence Report: Three Strikes and You're OUT!

Matt · 30 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The United Nations recently released its biased Violence Against Women report. The report is filled with half-truths and distortions about violence against women, and absurdly claims that the root cause of domestic violence is male "patriarchy".

So last week, RADAR issued an Alert and press release that went to 17,000 media contacts. But that was just the warm-up pitch. In honor of the recently-concluded World Series, this week we're fielding our whole ball team.

RADAR and 90 other organizations from 9 countries around the world have formed a coalition to stop this dangerous report. These organizations are based in the United States, Canada, Ireland, United Kingdom, Netherlands, Germany, Czech Republic, Australia, and New Zealand.

This is what two of these groups are saying about the UN report:

"The UN Report ignores the plight and pain of half of all victims of domestic violence. In effect this report 'sanctions' male victims and ignores the terrorism that fills their lives simply because they are men." — Lee Newman, executive director, SAFE International

"While the UN report purports to be an 'in-depth study,' it ignores the failings of the current system. Many severely-abused victims discover to their surprise that trivial and false claims are consuming the resources that should be going to those most in need." — Terri Lynn Tersak, president and CEO, True Equality Network

The members of this coalition have signed a Resolution Regarding the UN Study on Violence Against Women. The Resolution notes that the UN report "uses misandrous and inflammatory language" to falsely stereotype men, and calls on the UN to "discourage implementation of the recommendations of the Study on Violence Against Women until its effects on families and children are analyzed and understood."

The full Resolution and list of co-signers can be viewed at: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/UN-ViolenceReport-Resolution.pdf.

So this week, we're asking everyone who reads this Alert to throw three pitches.

We'd like you to contact UN Ambassador Terry Miller (he represents the US delegation on the Third Committee, the body that handles social and economic issues at the UN) and throw him:

- 3 fast balls (e-mail him at usa-at-un.int),
- 3 sliders (fax him a letter at 1-212-415-4443), or
- A change-up (a combination of e-mails and faxes)

Three strikes and you're out!!

If you want to send Ambassador Miller a copy of the Resolution along with a short cover note, that's fine. Always be polite and respectful, but be firm in your request that the United Nations:

1. Simply "Note" (but not "Welcome") the recent Secretary-General's report (merely "noting" a report is the diplomatic equivalent of saying, "this report stinks").
2. Discourage implementation of the recommendations of the Study on Violence Against Women until its effects on families and children are analyzed and understood.
3. Request incoming UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon to undertake a counterpart Study on Violence against Men.

This is our first global campaign to stop DV bias. And it's a whole new ball game.

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++
Date of RADAR Release: October 30, 2006

Sign up today to receive RADAR's Alerts! Go to http://www.mediaradar.org/, enter your e-mail address in the upper right hand box, then hit Subscribe!

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Bulgaria: 23 girls brawl over handsome boy

AngryMan · 30 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Police were called in Bulgaria after a mass fight broke out between 23 teenage girls over a handsome male student.

The girls, aged between 15 and 18, used brass knuckles, chains and beer bottles to fight over the lad whose name was not revealed.

Mother guilty of killing, abusing boy

Matt · 30 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'LANSING, Michigan (AP) -- A mother who claimed that her missing 7-year-old son had run away was found guilty Friday of his murder.

Lisa Holland cried quietly as jurors found her guilty of first-degree felony murder and child abuse in the death last year of her adopted son Ricky.

Felony murder carries a mandatory life sentence without parole. Sentencing was set for November 28.

Prosecutors said Holland struck the boy in the head and then neglected to seek help as he slowly died of his injury.'

NYTimes: What Do Women Want? Just Ask

Matt · 30 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

'More companies, in the United States and elsewhere, have realized that they overlook women at their own financial peril.'

And there's no financial peril in overlooking male consumers?

Essay here.

You know, it seems the NYTimes has gotten a case of multiple personality disorder when it comes to gender-issues reporting. It seems some of their writers are fully aware of the negative impact of feminism and at other times, celebrate it. I can only imagine what one of their editorial meetings looks like.

I recall reading similar kinds of articles on the purchasing power of women that had been published back in the 1920s. The same point was made even then about how women make most of the household purchase decisions-- in households where they lived with men (back then, it was presumed, to men to whom they were married).

But I wonder how this formula changes when you add current trends of single-habitation, which now outnumbers married or co-habitation in terms of U.S. household composition? It seems to me the only real significant change in the formula is that women are working now in fields they didn't back then, but their control of money has stayed the same in the context of married relationships: he makes the money, she spends it, even if she also makes money, too.

Overall though, the message of such stories is clear, any way you slice it up: what "the ladies" want is important; what "the guys" want isn't.

Excerpt:
'Shane Homes is hardly alone. More companies, in the United States and elsewhere, have realized that they overlook women at their own financial peril. The companies are realigning their marketing and design practices, learning to court an increasingly female-centric consumer base that boasts more financial muscle and purchasing independence than ever before.

“We are perhaps on the first step to a matriarchal society; women will earn more money than men if current trends continue by 2028,” said Michael J. Silverstein of the Boston Consulting Group. “The trend has been escalating in the last 10 years as there has been a gradual, slow erosion of the power balance in the family, a psychic rebalancing.”

Women, Mr. Silverstein added, are “controlling purchases and driving a shift in our economy.”'

City sets underwear rule for firefighters

anthony · 30 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Gentleman, no more briefs! Get to the store a purchase some boxers! Story here. Excerpt:

'A Canadian city under pressure for alleged sexual harassment within its fire department has ordered firefighters to wear only boxer-style underwear.

Richmond, British Columbia, will spend $14,200 to buy six pairs of underwear for each firefighter in a bid to make firehalls in the suburb of Vancouver more gender neutral, a newspaper reported on Tuesday.'

News Tribune: "Colleges abandon frightened women"

anthony · 30 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

If this was a "NC17" website, I would offer numerous examples of women using their sexuality as a form of manipulation at S.U.

"Story" here. Excerpt:

'They wish more young men would focus on their minds and souls, instead of their bodies. They are tired of crude social games that serve the desires of men rather than the dreams of young women.

.

.

.

'Women have flourished academically in this well-regulated environment. On the other hand, men increasingly set the rules for an unregulated social life. … They've streamlined the old system. They've eliminated the time-wasting efforts to attend to women's wishes and gotten down to the fundamentals of adolescent male desire: playing competitive games, drinking with buddies and having sex with lots of compliant women.'

Typical response to fathers' rights protest

afg · 30 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A few weeks ago, the Governor-General of Canada, Michelle Jean, attended a violence against women fund-raiser in Montreal. After the function, she was met by a number of fathers' rights protesters outside. She listened to their views, thanked them, and left.

Here are her reflections on that meeting. Notice how she paints the views of these fathers in comparison to how she paints the views of battered women's advocates? We can send her a letter through the appropriate channels mentioned on her site, we can respond to the blog entry in the comments section, or we can start a discussion on her forums. The important thing is we have to be heard.

More good news on reversible male contraceptive front

Matt · 31 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Scientists are developing a male contraceptive drug which stops the development process of sperm.

Tests on rats show blocking connections to cells which "nurture" developing sperm makes the animals infertile.

The US and Italian researchers say they used relatively low doses of the molecule and found no obvious side effects, and the effect was reversible.'

Duke Case: Nifong Just Can't Admit His Error

Matt · 31 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'DURHAM, North Carolina (AP) -- The prosecutor in the Duke lacrosse rape case has heard the criticism from experts and armchair lawyers, and said Monday he is comfortable with nearly all the decisions he has made and confident about taking the case to trial.
...
In the early days of the case, Nifong granted numerous newspaper and TV interviews, at one point calling the players "hooligans" and declaring that DNA would identify the guilty. DNA failed to connect the players to the accuser.
...
Roberts said she was unable to get the accuser to leave her car, and pushed on the woman's arm and leg to try to force her out. Roberts quoted the accuser as saying: "Go ahead, go ahead. Put marks on me. Go ahead. That's what I want. Go ahead."'

BBC - Fewer women seek student places

Anonymous · 31 October 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Yes, the BBC has chosen to give a headline on their main website entitled "Fewer women seek student places". Reading the article reveals the decrease to be about 0.5% (yes really) but that female applicants outnumber male applicants by 55% to 45%. The BBC has recently been exposed as internally admitting that they "may have taken political correctness too far". This article is living proof. You couldn't make it up.

Man Cleared Of 1981 Rape, Gets Apology, Little Else

Luek · 1 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Well, it has happened again thank God!
DNA testing cleared this man of the politicized crime of rape.

What makes this rescue notable is that the judge who released him, a female judge no less, apologized to the victim and said it made her sick to her stomach thinking about the years he spent incarcerated over a crime he didn't commit! However, the article doesn't say anything about monetary compensation or the need for stricter evidence guidelines for rape.

UK: 'Bad girl' statistics get worse

anthony · 1 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'More city schoolgirls are landing in juvenile detention now than a decade ago - while crime among boys is dropping, a new report reveals. Last year, 1,037 girls younger than 16 entered city detention facilities, up from 772 in 1992, according to the report by the Citizens' Committee for Children.'

New Florida Law Finally Gives Justice to Cuckolded Men

anthony · 1 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A new state law allows men a way out of child-support payments when they can prove that they are not the child's biological father.

Last year, 30 percent of the 15,495 men targeted as possible fathers in paternity proceedings turned out not to be.'

U.S. Men's Testosterone Dropping Rapidly

Matt · 1 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This is disturbing for a lot of reasons. Lowered "T" in men is associated with an increased risk for various health problems including susceptibility to cancer, infertility, and depression. Excerpt:

'While a man's testosterone level will fall steadily as he ages, the researchers observed a speedier decline in average testosterone levels than would have been expected with aging alone.

They hypothesized that the rising prevalence of obesity as well as the sharp decline in cigarette smoking might help explain their findings, given that testosterone levels are lower among overweight people and smoking increases testosterone levels. But these factors accounted for only a small percentage of the observed difference.

It's likely that some sort of environmental exposure is responsible for the testosterone decline, Travison said, although he said attempting to explain what this might be based on the current findings would be "pure conjecture."'

Not being a researcher in this area, I don't know if T-levels are responsible for what amounts of what category of gametes are produced in men (ie, Y- or X-bearing chromosome sperm cells). Perhaps low T is associated with an abundance of X-bearing sperm cells? This may explain why there seem to be so many more girls being born these days than boys. [Anyone who may have more information on this than me, feel free to post.]

But anyway, my own feeling is that the pollution angle is probably right. With all the horrible stuff dumped into the environment the last 50 years in particular, I would not be the least bit surprised if it hasn't messed up human biology substantially, not to mention the biology of everything else on the planet.

Humanity seems to be pursuing a course, among several others, of polluting itself out of existence.

Mother Uses Duct Tape on Sons in Lieu of Babysitter

anthony · 1 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman accused of duct-taping her two children together and leaving them home alone has been charged with child abuse, the sheriff's office said.

Agla Nadia Vincent, 25, was arrested Monday following a seven-month investigation into whether she left her two boys, then aged 2 and 3, taped to each other while she went to work, said Lt. Annie Smith of the Jacksonville Sheriff's Office.'

Update on Father Accused in FGM Case

Matt · 1 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. He was found guilty. I imagine though that there could be an appeal. This is another one to watch. Excerpt:

'During the trial, Adem testified he never circumcised his daughter or asked anyone else to do so. He said he grew up in Addis Ababa, the capital of Ethiopia, and considers the practice more prevalent in rural areas.

Adem's attorney acknowledged that the girl had been cut, but implied that the family of the girl's mother, who immigrated from South Africa, may have been responsible. The Adems divorced three years ago, and attorney Mark Hill suggested that the couple's daughter was coached to testify against her father by her mother, who has full custody of the child.'

Reno fire suspect served time for murder

anthony · 2 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman who previously served prison time for second-degree murder was arrested Wednesday and accused of setting a blaze that killed six people and gutted much of a historic brick building in Reno's downtown casino district."

"About 30 people were injured, some of them after they leaped out the windows of the three-story building, which was primarily a residential hotel."

Mom charged with killing kids years ago

anthony · 2 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The killings began in San Diego County in December 1965 with the death of Sherry Scott, who was 11 days old, and continued a month later with her sister, Carla Scott, who was 1, Poma said. Both were deemed natural deaths.

"She kind of wanted to deal with it," he said. "She seemed surprised and remorseful."'

Men Face Higher Colon Cancer Risk

anthony · 2 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

'A new study finds that polyps linked to colon cancer are 73 percent more common in men than in women, leading researchers to suggest that colorectal cancer screening guidelines be changed.'

Glenn Sacks' recent e-newsletter provides good news to MRAs axolotl · 2 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Sacks writes:

"In a recent column in Monitor on Psychology (10/9/06), Dr. Gerald P. Koocher, the president of the American Psychological Association, acknowledges the truth about domestic violence--that women are just as likely to physically attack their male partners as vice versa. In Psychological science is not politically correct Koocher writes.."

Here is the link given in the newsletter:
Psychological science is not politically correct.

This seems to be a good start, to forcing feminist-leaning/female psychotherapists (which is most of them) to quit pretending men are only infrequent victims, and treating their "patients" accordingly!

Court: Woman Can't Say No After Start Of Sex

anthony · 2 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'An appellate court said Maryland's rape law is clear -- no doesn't mean no when it follows a yes and intercourse has begun.

The decision startled activists who believe people have the right to say no at any time. Jennifer Pollitt Hill of the Maryland Coalition Against Sexual Assault called the law "insulting and dangerous."'

Don't Always Believe the Victim, by Wendy McElroy

anthony · 3 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'For ten years, I have argued that both the law and society have embraced a fundamentally wrong approach to accusations of sexual abuse. The approach reverses the presumption of innocence and assumes that an accused is guilty until proven innocent. It also includes giving false accusers a 'free pass'; that is, until recently, it was rare for those who filed false reports to be punished by law.'

Man Escorted From Planet Fitness Gym For Grunting

Evil White Male... · 3 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'"We're creating an atmosphere that's not intimidating," said Carol Palazzolo, the gym manager, who yanked Argibay's membership on Monday.

Grunting is commonplace at most gyms, but not Planet Fitness, which discourages so-called "musclehead behavior." There's even a flashing light and siren on the wall, labeled a "lunk alarm," which sounds if someone grunts or drops weights on the floor.

Palazzolo admits she called the cops on Argibay. The Wappingers Falls police report said officers were asked to "escort a member out of the club for grunting while working out...which is not conforming with the rules of the establishment."'

WELL THERE WE HAVE IT -- MALE BEHAVIOR MUST BE RIDICULED AND OUTLAWED -- SO THAT WOMEN AREN'T FEELING INTIMIDATED. WHY NOT JUST CASTRATE THE LOT OF US AND GET IT OVER WITH ALREADY...

Woman Caught Lying that a Congressman Assualted Her

Anonymous · 3 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'LAS VEGAS A surveillance videotape released today (Thursday) by Congressman Jim Gibbons' lawyer does not appear to show the gubernatorial candidate or a woman who has accused him of assaulting her in a parking garage.

A partial review of portions of the tape by The Associated Press did not reveal evidence supporting 32-year-old Chrissy Mazzeo's allegations.'

Bull Busters Video a Must-See

Anonymous · 5 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Posted here on AntiMisandry.com:

'Bull Buster Video

Have any of you guys managed to get hold of the free Bull Busters video going around? It's called Violent Women and it is very powerful.'

Ed. note: The links to the downloadable .wmv format clips are at the above linked-to website. I have watched it myself and agree, it's a must-see.

Revealed: How BA bans men sitting next to children they don't know

anthony · 5 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"British Airways has been accused of treating all men passengers as potential sex offenders after it was revealed it has banned children from sitting next to male strangers - even if their parents are on the same flight"

"Leading child protection campaigner Michele Elliot, director of the children's charity Kidscape, said she was astonished by the BA rule."

"It is utterly absurd. It brands all men as potential sex offenders," she said.

Accuser in Duke Lacrosse Case Wanted Money

anthony · 5 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Four days after she said she was raped, the accuser in the Duke lacrosse case told co-workers at a Hillsborough strip club that she was going to get money from some boys at a Duke party who hadn't paid her, the club's former security manager said."

Female teacher's sex charge is unusual

anthony · 5 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"When former Johnston County teacher Rebecca Withrow was charged this month with having sex with an 11-year-old male student, the news stunned parents who knew her as a talented teacher, devoted parent and PTA president."

"The time Letourneau spent incarcerated is notable because women often face less severe punishments than male teachers charged with sexual improprieties."

"But Berlin said boys face the same long-term effects as girls who are victims of sexual abuse: early and inappropriate sexual behavior; problems building relationships later in life; a tendency to either remain a victim or become an abuser themselves."

scotsman.com: "Mankind to be wiped out by language police"

anthony · 5 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Don't assume it is acceptable to address women by endearments such as 'dear', 'pet' and 'love' when you would not address men in such a way," the guide instructs. "Don't refer to women as 'girls', for example, 'the girls in the office'."

It adds: "The term 'ladies' should only be used in situations where the parallel term 'gentlemen' is used."

Reynolds won't take ESPN's benching quietly

anthony · 6 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Reynolds admitted contact with the woman. From his lawsuit: "As he truthfully has stated publicly, in July 2006 he gave a brief and innocuous hug to a female intern. The intern, at the time, never expressed any discomfort and in fact had dinner with Mr. Reynolds at a Boston Market restaurant that same evening after he had given her this brief hug. Mr. Reynolds has never seen her since then, and upon information and belief she made no complaint until approximately three weeks later.

Maybe ESPN expected Reynolds to go quietly. In 11 years at the network, he had developed a reputation as a good guy and hard worker who did actual reporting, the rare athlete-turned-analyst who understands that even in an entertainment-first business there is value in journalism.'

Study: "Moms' motives key in killings"

anthony · 6 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'It is hard to comprehend why a mother would kill her child.

It is even harder to think she might do it out of love. But that's what an Ohio study published last year indicates may be the motivation, particularly when suicide follows.

The feeling on the part of a mother that killing her child will save him or her from suffering is usually rooted in depression, Callanan said.'

UK: Woman jailed in 'naked slave' case

anthony · 6 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A mother-of-six from York has been jailed for seven years for turning her sister-in-law into a domestic slave.

Veronica Sandeman, 26, originally from Dundee, was forced to work naked and beg for food, York Crown Court heard.'

OC Weekly Runs Racist, Misandrist "News" Cover

Anonymous · 6 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Look at this will you. The author all but paints (white) men categorically as drooling Asian-hungry predators. Well hasn't she ever met an Asian woman who only dates white or black men? I'll bet she knows a few. But these, I am sure she will say are victims of the "colonial occupation" and are to be sympathized with as victims.

What an incredibly smug, racist and sexist person she is. If she is so unhappy with "white guys" coming on to her, then she can wear a button that says "No white guys need apply". There, that will take care of her problem. Or maybe she is just having too much fun laughing at the misguided fools who waste their time trying to talk to her.

Feedback form is here.

RADAR ALERT: Make your voices heard on Nov 7

Matt · 7 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Often elections are close. Your heartfelt vote on your personal issues of importance can be the deciding factor.

In 2005 Jerry Kilgore, then-Attorney General of Virginia, was favored to win the race for Governor of Virginia. Kilgore, running on his record as Attorney General frequently emphasized how he had cracked down on domestic violence and wanted to expand the existing draconian laws. He lost the race for Governor by a small margin. A credible case can be made that his position on domestic violence lost him the election. This can be an effective argument to make to other candidates after the election's over.

In 2000, U.S. Senator John Ashcroft narrowly lost his re-election bid to a candidate who died in a plane crash shortly before the election. His position supporting the Violence Against Women Act had upset voters to the point that continued protests were being held at his senatorial offices in Missouri, combined with much public activism. The voters turned him out.

In tight races, single issues which normally are not polled or recognized as major factors by parties or pundits, can make or break any candidate.

November 7th is your chance to make your position on domestic violence really count.

When you vote, be sure to tell the volunteers outside your polling place why you are voting for or against a candidate. This is important because it will be fed back to candidates, increasing their awareness about the magnitude of voter concerns.

++
Date of RADAR Release: November 6, 2006

Sign up today to receive RADAR's Alerts! Go to http://www.mediaradar.org/, enter your e-mail address in the upper right hand box, then hit Subscribe!

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Is Misandry Protecting Mothers Who Murder And Maim?

Matt · 7 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Latest from Teri Stoddard. Excerpt:

'MISANDRY
American Heritage Dictionary mi·san·dry
n.
Hatred of men.

I'm a woman and I used to believe what the media said about men. Now I know better.

The media constantly exposes us to inaccurate, negative impressions of and statements about men. In looking for the root of the problem I found a network of people who benefit from misandry. Many of these people work for or with the family courts or domestic violence services, often both. I wonder if the Violence Against Women Act funds misandry.'

Embezzling Social Worker Murders and Dismembers Husband

Matt · 7 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Shortly before Donald Gash was killed and his dismembered remains were scattered along a North Carolina highway, he allegedly told a relative to suspect his wife and son if anything ever happened to him.

Police immediately began searching for Gash's 41-year-old wife, Gail, who had recently lost her job with the local social services department because of fraud allegations.

...

The Gashes were financially strapped largely because of the $60,000 in restitution for a theft that Gail Gash was attempting to repay a former co-worker.

According to court documents, Gail Gash had also recently lost her job with the Henderson County Department of Social Services based on allegations of food-stamp fraud.

She stood to collect $150,000 in life insurance for her husband's death.

...

Assistant District Attorney Charles Walker would not comment specifically on why charges were not laid against the couple's son, except to say that the proof was not there.'

FL Football Player Stabbed by Girlfriend

Matt · 7 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) -- Florida receiver Nyan Boateng was stabbed in the leg by a female student, causing a minor wound and prompting a police investigation.

University of Florida police responded to a call Sunday afternoon and found Boateng and Shawna-Kay Peterkin fighting. According to a police report, Peterkin had already stabbed Boateng with a small knife.

Boateng suffered a minor wound and refused treatment by medical personnel. Boateng and Peterkin declined to press aggravated battery charges against one another, police said.'

First in History 24 Hour Radio Marathon Dedicated To the Plight of Non-Custodial Parents and Fathers

Matt · 8 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

11/07/06

(Denver, Co) November 8, 2006 launches the first 24 hour marathon in broadcast history designed to examine the issues of Non-Custodial Parents and Fathers.

To boost this cause Krightradio.com and talk show host Richar' Farr will go live at 12 noon Mountain Standard Time 2 pm EST Wednesday November 8, 2006 and broadcast continuously around the world for 28 hours from the Krights Studios in Denver, Colorado.

"Over 25 Million American Non-Custodial Parents and Fathers are organizing. Their leaders are assembling! Their rank and file are standing together to show American Elected Officials there is a creditable force to accomplish major Family Law Reform and greater accountability in Child Support Enforcement. There is a strong Constituency ready to accept nothing less than real change to an abhorrent system of Family Laws and abuses inside the Child Support Enforcement System", says Richar' Farr Syndicated Talk Show Host.

The Date is Wednesday November 8, 2006 for Krightsradio's, "MoV24 - The Marathon of Voices 24 hours", the first ever marthon to examine the issues of Non-Custodial Parents and Fathers concerning Family Law and Child Support Enforcement.The marathon launches 12pm (Mst) / 2pm(Est) 11/08/06. Visit www.krightsradio.com - MoV24 where every Noncustodial Parent and Father will have a voice.

www.Krightsradio.com for live streaming, video, pictures, and schedules.

Media Contact: Tammi Gresham/Jason Adams 303-741-4075 direct

Woman Confesses to Murder on Radio over Child Support Payments

anthony · 8 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

News entry here.

'Woman confesses to murder on national radio program because man wouldn't pay child support. It is not clear whether this is a case of someone getting away with murder or just a prank.'

Women's Television Network Glamorizing The Murder of Men

Anonymous · 9 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

In a completely unsurprising turn of events, the Oxygen Network runs a show glamorizing the murder of husbands. I'm just guessing that the murderer is the real victim on these shows, given that the name of the series is "Snapped", implying that women are only criminal when men make them that way. Obviously women can't be evil, violent or criminal all by themselves.

Same old misandry, new channel.

U.K. Male teachers has plummeted to an all-time low

anthony · 9 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The number of male teachers has plummeted to an all-time low, threatening a classroom discipline crisis as a generation of boys misses out on authority role models.

There are fears men are being scared away by the fear of false child abuse allegations while others are thought to be put off by the absence of male companionship in primary schools.'

Moms Have an Edge in The Workplace

anthony · 9 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Fortune 500 companies want to hire mothers these days, outlines Katherine Ellison in her book, "The Mommy Brain" because they know that mother's have "emotional intelligence" that will help them succeed at the "people" skills needed in their jobs. Ellison suggests four subsets of skills that mothers can claim, which put them at a distinct advantage in the marketplace: multi-tasking under pressure, dependability, leadership and caregiving.'

Woman jailed for making false rape accusations

anthony · 9 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman was today branded "wicked" and a "skilful actress" as she was jailed for one year for making false rape allegations against her former husband.

Jury Comment:

"You framed an innocent man, you accused him of the most serious offence to be brought against a man in the criminal calendar. The case against your husband was rot and the spotlight was turned against you."'

Also see this article on the story.

Mother not charged in child's death

anthony · 9 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

I wonder if the father would have been charged if the circumstances were reversed?

Excerpt:

"Prosecutors won't file charges against the Knoxville mother whose 3-year-old son died this summer when her unattended car rolled over him."

"It was just a tragic accident," said John Gill, special counsel for the Knox County District Attorney General's Office. "There wasn't a crime committed."

Woman Who Drowned Two Daughters Will Be Freed

anthony · 11 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman who drowned her two children in 2003 is now mentally stable and should be released from a state hospital, a judge ruled.
...
"Given Ms. Diaz's apparent swift recovery, Judge Rusch had no choice but to release her from the state hospital," Collin County First Assistant District Attorney Greg Davis said in a statement. "Today's decision underscores the need to reform the insanity defense so that intentional killers are held accountable for their actions and don't return to our communities."'

RADAR ALERT: Women Denounce the UN Violence Study

Matt · 11 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Last month the UN issued its Study on Violence Against Women: http://www.un.org/womenwatch/daw/vaw.

To say this study is flawed is a huge understatement. Now, women around the world are speaking out against this report.

Over the last two weeks, we have contacted our UN delegations, voicing our concerns. This week, we increase our request, asking Ambassador Bolton to make a public statement to the Third Committee denouncing the report.

Send an e-mail (usa-at-un.int) or fax (1-212-415-4443) to Ambassador Bolton. Here's the message – feel free to modify as appropriate:

Dear Ambassador Bolton:

I am writing about the recent Secretary-General Study on Violence Against Women. Women around the world are saying this report is extremely flawed and will never solve the problem of domestic violence:

Terri Lynn Tersak, president and CEO of the True Equality Network, says

"While the UN report purports to be an 'in-depth study,' it ignores the failings of the current system. Many severely-abused victims discover to their surprise that trivial and false claims are consuming the resources that should be going to those most in need."

Kris Titus of Fathers 4 Justice of Canada observes,

"Over 8 years ago I was told by a shelter worker I was lucky my boys were not 12 years old, because they would then be considered potential perpetrators and not able to stay in the shelter with me. Until we stop looking at this issue through gender specific-glasses, we will never solve it. A broken nose is a broken nose whether it's on a man or a woman."

Mary Cleary of AMEN (Abused Men) notes,

"AMEN, the lead organisation in Ireland dealing with male victims of domestic abuse, rejects the anti-man bias in the UN Report/Study on Violence Against Women. The basic presumptions of the report are contradicted by every independent study on domestic violence which show that men and women are both victims and perpetrators in almost equal numbers. The United Nations are, obviously, mis-informed on this matter."

The Secretary-General's report is rooted in a radical gender ideology. It is deeply flawed in its assumptions, methods, and conclusions. By ignoring the problem of physically abusive women, it will never solve, and may actually worsen, the problem of domestic violence. If the report is welcomed and implemented, that will give rise to false allegations of abuse and violate the civil rights of men. This will ultimately cause profound damage to families and children.

I am writing to urge you to make a Statement to the UN Third Committee, expressing your strong reservations about this harmful report.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

[your name and address]

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++
Date of RADAR Release: November 9, 2006

The UN Resolution Coalition is an alliance of over 110 organizations located in 13 countries that are supporting the Resolution Regarding the UN Study on Violence Against Women: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/UN-ViolenceReport-Resolution.pdf.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Men Are Scum, Even When They're Bashing Men, Say Feminists

Anonymous · 11 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A CU student wrote a satirical piece for a student newspaper about how to deny women pleasure during sex. It was intended to demonstrate what poor lovers men are. In other words, he was bashing men to save the feminists at the school some effort. Apparently self-immolation is the only acceptable action by a male on a university campus in this day and age, and this man was happy to comply.

Naturally this did nothing to stop the standard, estrogen-soaked feminist outrage and their typical trampling of the First Amendment (to the surprise of no one), fully supported by the university's administrators and code of conduct.

I'm just guessing that CU can't have much of a law school, if they have one at all, since they can't remember what the Constitution and its Amendments say. Of course, we are talking about the same school that spent several years trying to fire a professor for his deeply offensive but equally protected remarks about 9-11.

Prominant UK Magazine Points Out Male Discrimination In Divorce

Anonymous · 11 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

An article by UK site askmen.com has recognised the discrimination against men divorce suits. Excerpt:

'Seven out of 10 divorces are initiated by women. While there are no hard statistics, wouldn't you agree that maybe nine out of 10 marriage proposals are also initiated by women? A study done by two blokes name Kuhn and Guidubaldi found that a "gender bias" in the court system makes divorce an inviting idea to the ladies. Why wouldn't it? Women tend to keep the kids, the house, the dog, the car, and half the property. They get to keep the rock, too. This suggests that not only are men getting screwed by the marketing of the De Beers diamond corporation during the engagement, but the actual judicial system is also stacked against guys during the divorce.'

School Principal's Wife Charged With Sex With Of Student

anthony · 12 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The police said that they believe English teacher Carrie McCandless, who is also the wife of the principal at Brighton Charter High School, had an inappropriate relationship with a 17-year-old male student on the trip.'

'Female teacher, a male student - A forbidden sexual relationship'

anthony · 12 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'"I remember thinking, a long time ago, when I first saw Debra Lafave on the news, I remember thinking, how could she be so stupid?," she told NBC 15's Kim McCrea. "And to find myself in the same situation is unbelievable."'

You guys want a "valid" excuse?

'They have a relationship with that victim and in their mind, that relationship is often a loving relationship. It's a consensual relationship and they very much deny or minimize any kind of negative impact.'

Woman Indicted On False Rape Claim

anthony · 12 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A Rusk County grand jury has indicted the woman authorities claim lied about being raped - a lie that jailed an innocent man for three weeks."

"She had wrapped her 7-year-old daughter, neighbors and a friend into the lie and had them giving authorities information that led to Pierce's arrest."

New 'Humor' Book Released: "The Slime that Men Do"

anthony · 12 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Someone on this site once told me Canada has been infiltrated with feminist propaganda and misandry. I never heard of "Humble" Howard Glassman until I saw this article in the Toronto Sun. Excerpt:

"It's a newly released book compiled by former Mix 99.9 morning show host, fun guy Humble Howard Glassman, and bluntly called The Slime That Men Do."

"What's more, it's an altruistic project. For each book sold, a contribution will be made to the Canadian Breast Cancer Foundation."

Spain: Town gives women equal footing on road signs

anthony · 12 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I know its Spain, a country usually not mentioned on this site, but this story is too funny not to post. Excerpt:

'A Spanish town council has vowed to banish sexism from street signage by demanding half of all road signs and traffic lights show female figures with skirts and ponytails.'

Mom throws children into San Francisco Bay

anthony · 12 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Why do women choose drowning as a method to kill their children? What do you think gentlemen, demonized or diagnosed?

"She knew they couldn't swim and thought she was sending them to heaven. God had commanded her to sacrifice her three boys, her most precious possessions, Harris later told psychiatrists. Passersby said she seemed dazed, disoriented".

"She said Harris believes her children are in heaven -- her youngest now potty-trained, her eldest in school. She sends God postcards written in crayon."

Wrongful conviction lawsuit can proceed

anthony · 12 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Any money gained through a civil case can't take away the 19 years of suffering in prison.

'A federal judge refused yesterday to dismiss a civil rights suit brought against the city of Lowell and newly named Boston Police Commissioner Edward F. Davis by a man who spent 19 years in prison on a rape conviction before he was exonerated in 2003 by DNA testing.'

Woman Accused Of Sexually Abusing Child Released

anthony · 12 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Notice how she was released from a state mental hospital, not prison. The "Accused" comment somewhat confuses me.

'Although a woman accused in the sexual abuse of a five-year-old boy more than six years ago was not sentenced Monday, she was released from the state hospital.'

Tucson woman serving life for son's death to get hearing

anthony · 12 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Looks like another female convict is getting a second chance from our feminist court system.

"A Tucson woman who was sentenced to life in prison for the death of her toddler will get to argue to a Pima County Superior Court judge that her lawyer failed to properly represent her in an appeal."

India: New Sexist DV Law Criticized

Anonymous · 13 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The Indian parliament recently passed a new DV law. The law has been severely criticized by the MRAs, journalists, and senior lawyers, because 1. It's sexist (covers only violence against women by men), 2. The definition of DV is too wide, almost ridiculous, 3. Effectively shifts the burden of proof on the accused man.

Here's Ms Renuka Chowdhary - Minister of Women's welfare being interviwed by Karan Thapar - a journalist. She is not able to give any coherent reply to Karan's questions. Read it here.

Ed. note: The interviewer is rather famous in India. Read about him here. Also read about Renuka Chowdhary here.

Jamaica Observer: Man rape?

Anonymous · 13 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This story from the Jamaica Observer:

'Since [Jamaican rape] law speaks only to women, it eliminates the possibility of a woman being able to rape a man. Notwithstanding this, police sources pointed out that technically, a woman can 'indecently assault' a man or cause him to 'engage in sexual activity without consent'.

Reports from the Centre for Investigation of Sexual Offences and Child Abuse (CISOCA) though, is that to date, there has not been any reported case of 'indecent assault' of a man by a woman.
...
As one female Inspector of Police pointed out, "I know that this [indecent assault] can happen, but maybe the man end up liking it [sexual act], and since he benefitted from it, he doesn't bother to report it.'

Mother throws child into oncoming traffic, Father saves him

Canistor · 13 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

You can read this news article here.

A mother almost kills her child, but fortunately the father saves him.

'A Roselawn mother has been charged with doing the unthinkable, throwing her child into the street and oncoming traffic.

It happened early this morning on Seymour Avenue.

Police allege the suspect was involved in a verbal altercation with the young boy's father and that then the child allegedly became part of his mother's rage.

Police say she picked her child up and threw him out onto a busy road.'
...
'Gamble told 9News that the boy's father quickly retrieved the child out of the street, and the boy likely didn't even realize what had happened to him.

The boy's mother is facing one count of domestic violence and is scheduled to be arraigned on Monday.'

This is not domestic violence but attempted murder.

NYTimes.com: Health Disparities Persist for Men, and Doctors Ask Why

Matt · 14 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The NY Times continues to ride the fence, some days bashing men wholesale as if we are stones in a quarry and others pretending like they give a rat's you-know-what. Well anyway, here it is. Excerpt:

'In recent years, women's health has been a national priority. Pink ribbons warn of breast cancer. Pins shaped like red dresses raise awareness about heart disease. Offices of women's health have sprung up at every level of government to offer information and free screenings, and one of the largest government studies on hormones and diet in aging focused entirely on older women.

Yet statistics show that men are more likely than women to suffer an early death.

Now some advocates and medical scientists are beginning to ask a question that in some circles might be considered politically incorrect: Is men's health getting short shrift?'

Retired Husband Syndrome

AngryMan · 14 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The BBC continues to pour out a stream of anti-male propaganda. Check this story out.

"In Japan it is estimated that 60% of older women have a common problem - their husbands"

The story: Once salarymen retire and stay at home, their wives become ill because they are so disgusted with their husband's mere presence in his own house. Marriage makes women ill, and they do not have enough rights to abscond with their husband's hard-earned pension.

These privileged women spend their adult lives in luxury and solitude, spending their husband's money, and then when he gets too old to work any more, they find him an inconvenience. And the BBC presents this as a joke.

The Japanese have felt the need to coin the word 'karoshi', which means 'death from over-work'. Who is it that dies of karoshi? The husbands I think you will find.

Husband backs story from wife accused of sexual abuse of student

anthony · 14 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The husband of a teacher accused of having sex with a 15-year-old pupil said she had been groped and punched by pupils in the past.

Mrs Poole, 26, denies having sex with the teenager on up to eight occasions.

She claims he forced her to do so by holding a screwdriver to the back of her head..

Teacher has sex with 14-year-old boy

anthony · 14 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

What was most intriguing (and disturbing) about this article is she had sex with him in 4 different cities.

"She has been charged with sexual assault of a child and improper relationship between an educator and a student, both of which are second-degree felonies, according to a news release from Frisco police"

"The boy told investigators that that he and Torres had sex in four different cities, primarily in her F-150 pickup either at his Frisco apartment complex or at soccer fields in The Colony, according to an arrest warrant affidavit."

Male Firefighter Claims Discrimination

anthony · 14 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I believe I posted the original story about this woman. It seems more people are stepping forward as a result of her actions. Story here. Excerpt:

'A male firefighter is the latest person to sue the Minneapolis fire chief, a lesbian, claiming that she discriminated against him because he is a heterosexual man.

...alleges that Bonnie Bleskachek, the city's first female fire chief, and her partner, a fire department captain, gave him bad reviews, harassed him and denied him advancement.'

N.O.W. Anticipates Gender Hate-Crime Law

Roy · 14 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The National Organization for Women is orgasming multiply over the future of feminist legislation that they envision following the mid-term elections.

NOW Prez K. Gandy writes --

"Feminists continue to celebrate the results of the 2006 midterm elections and recognize the hard work and resolve that brought many new women's rights supporters to Congress. As much as we enjoy -- and quite frankly deserve -- a good celebration, it's not too soon to ask: What next? ...

The targeting of girls in recent school shootings reminds us that it's past time for Congress to finally add gender, disability and sexual orientation to the existing hate crimes law. As we saw in the Colorado and Amish school shootings, women and girls are sometimes singled out for cruelty and even murder because of their gender, yet federal law does not consider these acts to be hate crimes, as it would if the students had been targeted because of their race or religion."

Link at -- http://www.now.org/press/11-06/11-13.html.

RADAR ALERT: Fake Statistics Used to Claim that Wife-Beating is Men's "Birthright"

Matt · 15 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Throughout the world women in dating relationships are twice as likely as men to be perpetrators of serious domestic violence. In India, for example, 23.0% of severe aggression was instigated by women, 15.3% was male-initiated, and 61.5% was mutual - see http://pubpages.unh.edu/~mas2/ID41E2.pdf, Table 3.

But those facts didn't stop The Washington Times (TWT) from publishing an article that completely ignored the problem of women who physically abuse men:
http://www.washingtontimes.com/world/20061113-120817-8603r.htm.

It's not just that the article is one-sided - it also makes inflammatory and derisive statements about men. The story quotes Brinda Karat of the All-India Democratic Women's Association who claims that men "want to hold on to their birthright to beat up women."

How can any responsible journalist include such a derogatory claim about any group in society?

The TWT article does mention the problem of false allegations by women. But that does not compensate for the fact that the article doesn't give the exact source of a key statistic.

The article claims, "A 2005 U.N. Population Fund report found that 70 percent of married women in India were victims of beatings or rape." Somehow that number seems a little hard to believe.

So RADAR did an extensive search of the UN Population Fund's website. Nothing there.

Then a Google search. No luck.

So RADAR finally contacted the UNDP Information Office. The UNDP employee was unable to find a statement in any UNDP publication that even resembled that statistic.

Conclusion: The phony 70% figure was concocted by someone whose agenda was something other than reporting the truth.

Folks, we can't let this inflammatory story pass unnoticed. The editors at the Washington Times need to hear from a boatload of upset readers. Please tell them this message:

"The 'Abused Wives in India' article is biased, laced with anti-male rhetoric, and uses make-believe statistics. It ignores the well-documented fact that in India, women are twice as likely as men to engage in partner violence: http://pubpages.unh.edu/~mas2/ID41E2.pdf. The story is so systematically flawed that it resembles a propaganda piece. The Washington Times should promptly retract this article and do a follow-up article that tells the truth about domestic violence."

Contact:
Mr. Francis Coombs, Washington Times, Managing Editor
E-mail: fcoombs-at-washingtontimes.com
Telephone: 202-636-3000, then ask to speak with Francis Coombs.

Or send a letter to the editor at: letters-at-washingtontimes.com

++

Date of RADAR Release: November 13, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. - Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting - is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org.

Duke Case Update - New Evidence

anthony · 15 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

'Days before a woman said Duke University lacrosse players raped and beat her, she was passed out cold at a Hillsborough strip club and had to be carried to the parking lot, according to the club's former manager.
...
Haynes' account of that night at the club offers a possible explanation for the scratches doctors would later note on the accuser's body.'

Carey Roberts: 'Fathers No Longer Cost-Effective?'

anthony · 15 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

"There's a message here: persons have an enormous sense of gratitude for the many things - big and small - that dad did for them. I know, that's exactly how I feel about my father."

"But there is a small yet influential group in our society that views fatherhood as an anachronism and a stubborn obstacle to their utopian vision of the social welfare state. And they see divorce and award of child custody to mothers as a highly-effective ploy to achieve their goal."

Bush Needs to Rein in Feminist Operatives -- Carey Roberts

anthony · 15 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

Hillary in '08? Could be an M.R.A.'s worst nightmare.

"Under the Clinton two-for-the-price-of-one presidency, a bevy of feminist-inspired programs sprang up throughout the federal bureaucracy. A decade later, most of those programs are going stronger than ever, sucking up taxpayer money, violating men's civil rights, and destroying families."

"All this puts the Department of Justice feminists in high spirits, because with the stroke of a judge's pen, another family has been dissolved, a patriarch has been de-throned, and the statistics of "abused" women continue to mount."

UK - White boys from poorer homes worst in classroom

anthony · 15 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

'WHITE working-class boys are doing worse at school than any other ethnic group and risk becoming an “unemployable underclass”, according to a Conservative Party report.

Mr Duncan Smith says that lack of parental involvement is the prime factor behind white educational failure, not weak schools or poor teaching.'

Sorry Kim, Wendy is Correct

anthony · 15 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Gloatfest here.

"Concerned Women for America President Wendy Wright (second in line as official woman-hater right after the Coultergeist, of course) reliably responded: "Single women tend to trend Democrat. They usually rely more on government than married women."

But Kim Fights Back:

"...are in line to replace House Republican (and mostly white male) chairs of committees and subcommittees, and gain integral influence over legislation, budgets, programs and services important to women. How great is this?"

RADAR ALERT: Take 60 Seconds, Save the World from a VAWA Melt-Down!

Matt · 16 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Last month the UN issued its Study on Violence Against Women. The study recommends that every country around the world enact VAWA-like laws: http://www.un.org/womenwatch/daw/vaw.

Of course the UN feminists hoped the UN Third Committee would immediately "welcome" the Study so they could get on with the job. But thanks to your e-mails, phone calls, and faxes, the proposal has been delayed.

Now, time is running out – the UN Third Committee needs to reach a decision by this coming Wednesday, November 22. That's the date when the committee wraps up its session.

So this is it folks! This is our last shot! Let's not hold anything back!

Time is of the essence. So right now, please send an e-mail (usa-at-un.int) or fax (1-212-415-4443) to Ambassador Terry Miller, the US representative to the Third Committee. Politely explain that:

The Study on Violence against Women is deeply flawed. If the report is welcomed, its recommendations will cause lasting damage to families, women, and men. Please express your very strong reservations about this harmful study to the UN Third Committee. And vote to only "note" the report, but not to "welcome" it.

Or telephone UN Ambassador John Bolton directly at 1-202-736-7555. Remember to respectfully state your name, city, and state, along with your message.

The Secretary-General's violence report is rooted in a radical gender ideology. If the report is welcomed and implemented, that will give rise to false allegations of abuse and violate the civil rights of men. This will ultimately cause profound damage to families and children around the world.

++
Date of RADAR Release: November 16, 2006

The UN Resolution Coalition, headed by RADAR, is an alliance of over 110 organizations located in 14 countries that have signed the Resolution Regarding the UN Study on Violence Against Women: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/UN-ViolenceReport-Resolution.pdf.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Australia: Boys Education Becomes Priority

anthony · 16 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

I believe the U.S is woefully behind other nations when it comes to the educational needs of boys. When searching for articles regarding boys/education, I find very few from the States. It seems England, and now Australia might be the nations that start a needed revolution to educate our sons. I wonder what Australian feminist Germaine Greer thinks of this new educational initiative?

"A $19.4 million Australian Government initiative called Success For Boys aims to change all that in 1600 schools by 2008 - and four schools in the NSW Blue Mountains will be among the first to implement it."

"Success For Boys works on a number of fronts, including teachers' professional development, producing and sharing successful teaching and assessment strategies to take more advantage of boys' interests and strengths and developing male mentoring systems"

Doctors Opposing Circumcision

anthony · 16 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

This article, though not recent, offers information regarding the tragic affect circumcision has on some infant boys. The article also explains MRSA (methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus), an infection I never knew existed.

WARNING: SOME OF THE PHOTOS ARE VERY DISTURBING!!!!!!

"Doctors Opposing Circumcision consistently has advised parents that genital integrity (non-circumcision) is most likely to produce the highest state of health and well-being and is the preferred medical option for newborn boys. The arrival of community MRSA in epidemic proportions adds additional force to that recommendation."

Wendy McElroy: Audio Interview

anthony · 16 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I found a presentation by Wendy McElroy delivered to the National Coalation Of Free Men. The speech was given in 2002. I feel her comments are still relevant today regarding our issues as M.R.A's. I thought the speech was outstanding.

When you enter the site look for the following info to listen to her presentation:

"AUDIO Scrapping NOW: Time to Redefine Feminism (39 minutes, offsite link to 4.7 MB MP3 file), or read the transcript. Delivered for the National Coalition of Free Men, St. Paul, MN, 21 June 2002."

Planet Fitness Facing Legal Action

Anonymous · 16 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Contact: Jason Stern

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
Cell Phone: 917-922-0835
Office: 212-295-2287
http://www.BoycottPlanetFitness.com/

THE GYM "GRUNTER" STRIKES BACK
Grunter Retains Counsel; Intends to Wage Legal Battle

After being unceremoniously expelled from his Planet Fitness Gym for "grunting", New York orrectional Officer Al Argibay is fighting back. He has retained prominent New York civil rights attorney Jason Stern to represent him.

"This is the most absurd thing that I have ever seen," says Stern, who happens to be a former competitive bodybuilder. "Grunting is an involuntary breathing reaction to lifting heavy eights -- much like gasping for breath when running on the treadmill at a high rate of speed. To throw someone out of the gym or "breathing loudly" is ridiculous. If they don't want people "grunting", why does Planet Fitness have heavy weights? My client was squatting 500lbs. Show me someone who can squat 500 lbs without grunting and I'll show you a woman who can give birth to a baby in silence. It's pretty much impossible."

Planet Fitness's website claims that Planet Fitness is a "judgment free zone" with an "energetic environment" "where everyone feels respected and accepted." But that couldn't be further from the truth, Stern says. "The bottom line is that Planet Fitness is offering a cheap product intended to lure people who aren't serious about working out -- the New Year's Resolution type who will go 8-10 times a year, and the people who spend more time reading their self-help books in the gym than they do actually working out. They don't want bodybuilders or weightlifters or anyone else who is serious about building muscle."

Stern even has a name for what happened to his client: BIG-ISM. "They are discriminating against people with muscles. Their motto should be 'If your ideal physique is the guy who gets sand kicked in his face, then Planet Fitness is the gym for you.'"

While Mr. Argibay has stated that he has no desire to ever return to Planet Fitness, his attorney has stated that they are considering legal action against the gym.

# #

If you'd like more information aobut this story or to schedule an interview with Al Argibay or his counsel, please call Jason Stern at 917-922-0835 or email Mr. Stern at jasonstern-at-yahoo.com.

Murtari at 108 Days on Hunger Strike

Matt · 17 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Parents' Rights Activist Endures 108 Days Without Eating

Documentary 'Support? System Down' to Include AKidsRight.org Founder John Murtari

11/16/2006 11:43:00 AM

Contact: Teri Stoddard of A Kid's Right, 925-628-1206 or teri@akidsright.org

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Nov. 16 /U.S. Newswire/ -- Angelo Lobo, producer of "Support? System Down" will be arriving in Syracuse today, Nov. 16, to film John Murtari, founder of AKidsRight.org, in the Onondaga County Justice Center, on his 108th day with no solid food.

"John's story is special in that he has taken a stand against a system that desperately needs reform, on a national level," said Lobo, "He is a voice for thousands who are being incarcerated against their constitutional rights."

Murtari, 50, an Air Force Academy graduate, was sentenced to six months incarceration for willful failure to pay child support, a charge he disputes. Inspired by Gandhi, Murtari started the parents' organization AKidsRight.org and has been advocating for a Family Rights Act.

"The child support system is broken; their information is too frequently not accurate or complete," said Jane Spies of the National Family Justice Association. "If an honorable man like John can get locked up, anyone can," she continued, "How does this help his son? Why does his son have to suffer the loss of a loving father?"

Murtari urges parents who want change in family law to demonstrate faith, love and personal sacrifice, and to participate in peaceful protest. He once climbed the art structure in front of the Federal Building and displayed a large banner in his quest to get a meeting with Senator Clinton. Murtari stopped eating July 31, the day he reported to jail. "John is a hero to parents around the world," said Spies.

Lobo has interviewed parents across the country who have said it's time for change in family law. "This is the new civil rights movement," said Teri Stoddard, "Parents are demanding truth, justice and equality. They want their constitutional rights upheld."

Everyone is encouraged to join the AKidsRight.org mailing list http://www.akidsright.org/register/sign-up.php4

Murtari will be released on Dec. 1, and his first priority, is visiting his son.

For more information on AKidsRight.org visit http://www.akidsright.org

For more information on AGINELO Productions visit http://www.aginelo.com

---

http://releases.usnewswire.com/GetRelease.asp?id=76460

/© 2006 U.S. Newswire 202-347-2770/

--
mensinterests.com mensnewsdaily.com
sharedparentingworks.org

Male DV Victims in Utah

oregon dad · 17 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

In this report 54 out of 65 deaths attributed to domestic violence were males in the report from Utah.

--
Ed. note: Report includes suicide victims for the first time-- all but two are men. Interesting change of tabulation factors. Report also notes all of the homicide suspects were men. Curiouser and curiouser...

NYPD: Women Terrorists Real Threat

anthony · 17 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

"The NYPD is warning business owners to be on the lookout for female jihadists who can hide explosives by faking pregnancy or sweet-talk their way past security officers".

"What this means is that we don't have the luxury of ignoring 50% of our population in assessing whether someone is a threat," Weiner said.

Studies Investigate Female Sex Offenders

anthony · 17 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"Boys who are victims of female sex offenders, though, seem to receive less sympathy from friends, family and the public, who often look at having sex with an older woman as a conquest."

"Maston added that the male victims often think, "'(Am I) going to be in trouble? And, because they are the male, 'Is there something wrong with me?' 'Are they going to complain because they didn't like it?'"

"Often, young victims of these offenders do have difficulties, (including) depression, suicide attempts, drug use," Lewis said. "Those are things that can happen."

Attorney: Mother charged with killing twins needs treatment

anthony · 17 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"A mother accused of killing her twin sons has postpartum depression and should be released from jail to receive treatment, her attorney told a judge."

"Mothers do not go around killing their children. You know that. She needs help," attorney Steve Davis told the judge. Davis said White can't get the treatment she needs in jail."

Draft Bill to be Introduced

Anonymous · 20 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

File it under "Draft Watch 2007". The previous introduced bill (back in 2005) stipulated an abolishment of the male-only draft and military-only assignment of duties in favor of a "National Service" program wherein people of both sexes would be subject to induction and assignment to military or "other occupations". Guess we'll just have to see what January brings. My guess is it will be the same, with of course the unspoken, tacit assumption that it will be men moved into military/combat roles with women moved into something else, possibly domestic law enforcement or related.

RADAR ALERT: Truth and Consequences Campaign Reaches Over 2 Million

Matt · 20 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The Truth and Consequences campaign involved a high-intensity, coordinated nationwide effort that involved 62 organizations over a 21-week period. The campaign ran from June 19 to November 17, 2006.

The campaign was designed to reach political candidates, the media, professionals who work in the DV field, the public at large, and other groups. It is conservatively estimated that over 2 million persons were reached during the course of the campaign.

The theme of the campaign, Truth and Consequences: Election 2006, was designed to highlight the urgent need for elected officials and the American public to understand the truth about domestic violence, and to appreciate the harmful consequences of biased domestic violence laws on American families and children.

The campaign also included a “mini-campaign” regarding the United Nations’ Study on Violence Against Women.

Particularly strong efforts were mounted in California, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, and North Carolina. Campaign activities included the following:

- Media communications:
  - RADAR Special Reports: 3
  - Press releases: 8 (each sent to 17,000 media contacts)
  - Editorials: 18 (estimated readership for each editorial: 25,000)
  - Letters to the editor: 9
  - Newspaper articles: 10
  - Radio shows: 7
  - TV shows: 9
  - Weekly Alerts
- Conference presentations
- Distribution of materials at conferences and meetings
- Exhibits at conferences
- Meetings and discussions with candidates and staff members at the local, state, and national levels
- Communications to UN delegations
- Meetings with clergy
- Letters of complaint
- Rallies
- Anti-discrimination lawsuit
- Participation on domestic violence coordinating councils
- Revision of police DV manuals

Full details of the campaign can be found at this web address:
http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/TandC-Accomplishments.pdf.

The extraordinary success of the Truth and Consequences campaign reflects the growing grass-roots movement that is now dedicated to reforming the Violence Against Women Act and the state laws that it has spawned. These reforms are urgently needed to stop discrimination against male DV victims, to assure the rights of the falsely-accused, and to protect families and children from undue governmental intrusion.

As we approach the Thanksgiving holidays, we thank, salute, and honor each and every person who participated in the Truth and Consequences campaign. And indeed, the truth is getting out!

++

Date of RADAR Release: November 20, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Brigham woman will serve up to 5 years for killing husband

anthony · 22 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Initially charged with first-degree felony murder she pleaded guilty in September to second-degree felony manslaughter. Is it just me, or did she almost get away with murder (5 years?)

"Her attorney, Ronald Nichols, urged the judge to be lenient because Vickie Ruiz was under the impression that the .22-caliber handgun could not kill a person."

"She blamed alcohol for her rash actions, but then continued to party with friends, including a boyfriend, and seemed overly interested in how much insurance money she would get, her daughter told the judge. "To this day, she is still causing heartache and distress," Sherry Ruiz said."

Canadian women's gym gets OK to bar men

anthony · 22 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"In the circumstances of this case, treating Mr. Stopps the same as these women would actually result in an adverse consequences for these women," the tribunal wrote, saying that Stopps had the option of using other coed gyms."

"The gym is part of a fitness chain that has 40,000 women members. Of its 300 employees only four are men -- one of whom is the company's president and founder."

Indiana mother charged with murder of her 4 children

anthony · 23 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Apparently the husband claims the woman was "depressed" prior to the murders. She'll probably end up in a mental hospital playing ping-pong and checkers with Andrea Yates.

"A woman accused of strangling her four young children was charged with murder Wednesday, a day after hundreds of people attended the youngsters' funeral"

"Gonzalo Lopez, father of the two oldest children, has said Alvarez was depressed after losing her job and had been hospitalized for several days."

Mother Charged With Stabbing 3 Children Put On Suicide Watch

anthony · 23 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Things are looking very positive for this woman accused of murder. She'll have the usual mental illness and domestic violence claim as an excuse.

"A 22-year-old Hartford woman described by her attorney as having a history of mental health problems was placed on suicide watch Monday as she was formally charged with stabbing her three young sons."

"Public defender Laila Haswell said Ortiz has a history of mental health problems and has been a victim of domestic violence. The latter claim generated an angry reaction from several women who were ordered to leave the courtroom."

Alec Baldwin on Larry King

Matt · 23 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Alec Baldwin does a good job of discussing the short end men get in "family court", and does it on Larry King no less! The transcript is here, starting about a quarter of the way down the page. Excerpt:

'And I've seen many, many men, in particular, who they gave up. I'd be sitting in the first class cabin of a plane, I'd be in a bar, I'd be in a restaurant, I'd be somewhere, I'd be in a line at the baseball game, and I became kind of, you know, a lightning rod for this issue and men would come up to me and say, you know, I fought and fought and fought and I spend hundreds of thousands of dollars and countless, you know, units of my own psychic energy on this whole thing and then I finally quit and I would be heartbroken. I didn't quit.'

Segregating Children From Men by Wendy McElroy

anthony · 24 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Seating men as though they were sexual predators is a vicious and discriminatory practice that has no basis in fact or logic. Indeed, if the illogic of the policy were consistently spun out, it would mean 'women and children only' flights and the restricted seating of men at theaters or concerts."

"The policy harms children in a more subtle manner; they may no longer trust men per se enough to ask for help when they need it. They may hesitate to approach a policeman or fireman who are, after all, still men. That is the message airlines are sending to children. And how is that message being heard by the boys who will grow into men?"

"Stop segregating children from men!"

England: Mother who jumped from bridge with baby is jailed for 18 months

anthony · 24 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Steven Garth, defending, said that after struggling to cope with losing custody of her daughter she became increasingly concerned for the girl's welfare"

"A psychiatrist said she was suffering from a "depressive disorder" as a result of her lack of contact with the child."

"This is one of the most difficult cases I have ever had to deal with," he said. "It is difficult because on the one hand you are an intelligent woman, you have no previous convictions and you pleaded guilty at the very first opportunity."

Mother convicted of trying to kill child

anthony · 24 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Defense attorneys argued that Waremburg was insane at the time -- in part because of the emotional stress of having to raise the girl alone. She tried to commit suicide when she understood what she'd done, they said."

"The child, who is now 5 years old, has since fully recovered and is living with her father."

Dad's new role: "Dads are not only providers, but also nurturers"

anthony · 24 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Dads are doing a lot more nurturing," said Kevin Krippner, a licensed clinical psychologist with Twin Cities Behavioral Health in Normal. "You never used to see changing tables in the men's room."

"When dads are involved, the payoffs are big, with research showing it can boost kids' grades, improve behavior and increase the chances they'll be involved in extracurricular activities. And the role modeling benefits the next generation."

DNA Clears Yet Another Man From False Rape

blaze4metal · 24 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story found here. A man who was convicted of rape in 1992 was released when DNA testing cleared his name. The police labs refused to test him at the time. The woman in charge of the testing apparently has a record of doing this.

Woman Spends Thanksgiving On Billboard to Protest C/S Injustice

Matt · 25 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story covered here. Excerpt:

"Shelly Barreras says sometimes you have to do whatever it takes, in a peaceful way, to get results, especially when you’re dealing with government.

New Mexico Governor Richardson has apparently reneged on a promise to help the Barreras family recover $15,000 collected by the state as child support from Steve Barreras, for a child that never existed.

At half-past four Thursday morning Barreras climbed a ladder to her perch above I-40 to hang a large banner. Emergency vehicles and crews from three television stations arrived and the roads were closed."

A Woman Should Not Be Pregnant Against Her Will?

Roy · 26 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Ms. Magazine's editor Eleanor Smeal tells Bill O'Reilly in this recent youtube.com interview that – "You can't have someone pregnant against her will." Assuming that this is an expression of feminist integrity and commitment to gender equality, would it be logical to also expect feminists to agree that "no man should have to become a father against his will?"

Organization hopes male nurse calendar attracts men to profession

anthony · 26 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

For years feminists and the government have solely focused on careers where women are not "properly" represented. Rarely, if ever, do you see an initiative promoting the value of men in desired professions. Nursing is no joke, an RN in a major metropolitan area can earn upwards of $80,000 per year.

Organization hopes male nurse calendar attracts men to profession

"We hope that by showcasing some of New Jersey's very own men in nursing, their scope of practice settings and their personal and professional interests, that other men will be interested in nursing as a career," Debra Harwell, the institutes's director, told The Philadelphia Inquirer for Saturday's newspapers."

Ethiopians protest U.S. mutilation case

anthony · 27 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"During the trial, Adem testified he never circumcised his daughter or asked anyone else to do so. His attorney acknowledged that the girl had been cut, but implied that the family of the girl's mother, who emigrated from South Africa, may have been responsible"

"His trial was not fair ... how is it that Fortunate did not notice that her own daughter had been circumcised for almost two years? How is that possible? She only told the police when they got the divorce to hurt him — to get back at him," Adel Adem, Khalid's brother, told The Associated Press before the demonstration."

Male teachers slow to push dress code for fear of accusations

anthony · 27 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Is there any wonder why male teachers are on the endangered species list?

"The Minidoka County School Board in southern Idaho has resolved to more strictly enforce dress code rules after some male teachers said they were reluctant to deal with underdressed students for fear of being accused of sexual harassment."

Europe 'must end domestic abuse'

n.j. · 27 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

...for women only, of course. Story here.

This is not the first time the current Spanish government has supported the outdated, one-sided feminist definition of domestic abuse. Already a law was passed there that allowed electronic tagging after allegations of domestic violence. Gender neutral language was only used after some politicians protested. The wording then used was "persons especially in need of protection".

Dissident Domestic Violence Experts Form New Group to Challenge DV Establishment

Roy · 27 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Original announcement at GlennSacks.com.

'Current DV policies are so at odds with research and reality that many domestic violence researchers and treatment providers are rebelling against the DV establishment. Earlier this year over 50 of these authorities signed a letter urging the California legislature to stop the state's policy of excluding male victims and their children from DV services.'

Christina Hoff Sommers: Title IX shouldn't be used as an academic weapon

anthony · 27 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'If the Education Department and National Science Foundation were strictly to impose Title IX compliance standards on academic science, we could see men's participation in math, physics, technology and engineering capped at the level of female interest. That would wreak havoc in fields that drive the economy and where the USA already lags other countries.'

Chicago group counsels men on their rights in a divorce

anthony · 27 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

“We were getting a lot of fathers who were losing custody because of traditions in the courts favoring mothers,” Delorto said."

“It doesn’t go away. Even today we have a hard time getting equal rights for fathers.”

Lost Boys: The Anxious Years

anthony · 28 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

"...it is important to look past the stereotypes to celebrate and recognise the good things about being male. "Then there is a better understanding of what it means to be male, what sort of things you need to think of, about how we need to look after ourselves and the way we interact with each other as males...

It gives the boys the opportunity to talk about issues affecting men in a totally male environment. It's about them trying to find out who they are and why they are. They are learning what it is to be a man and they see what that means from their own father."

Father of girl slain by mother channels grief into new law

anthony · 28 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

'Anguish has marked John Giovanni's life since his ex-wife bludgeoned their daughter to death nearly two years ago. First there was the news of the killing, committed as the teen slept. Then there was the moment he looked into her casket and realized how badly damaged her body was even after morticians did the best they could.'

RADAR ALERT: Why is the Washington Times Dragging its Feet on the Flawed Abuse Article?

Matt · 28 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

On November 13 The Washington Times (TWT) ran an inflammatory article on “Abused Wives in India Pin Hope on Anti-Violence Law.” The article claimed, “A 2005 U.N. Population Fund report found that 70 percent of married women in India were victims of beatings or rape.”
That statement implies that 70% of all husbands in India are batterers or rapists.

Columnist David Usher analyzed the claim, and concluded it was “yet another classic example of the feminist rumor mill in action” that came from a study that is a “misrepresentation of science.”

In short, the claim is a fabrication and a hoax.

Responsible journalism dictates that key facts be confirmed before they are published, especially when they serve to stereotype and denigrate groups of persons. But The Washington Times did not do this.

The very next day after the article was run, RADAR released an Alert. But two weeks later, we are still waiting for The Washington Times to do the right thing, which is to retract the defamatory front-page article or at least print a correction.

Maybe the editors at TWT think that the issue will just go away. But it won’t. Because they have labeled 70% of Indian husbands as batterers and rapists.

Please contact the editors and ask them why they haven’t retracted the flawed story? And while you’re at it, politely request they run an article that tells the whole truth about domestic violence!

Please contact these people today:

David Jones, international editor:
E-mail: djones-at-washingtontimes.com
Telephone: 1-202-636-3000, then ask to be connected to his office.

Frances Coombs, managing editor:
E-mail: fcoombs-at-washingtontimes.com
Telephone: 1-202-636-3000, then ask to be connected to his office.

Please do it now. We can’t allow this slander to stand.

++
Date of RADAR Release: November 27, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Sorting out puzzle of male suicide

anthony · 28 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

"It occurred to me that if 86 percent of adolescent suicides were girls, there would be a national commission to find out why. There'd be front-page stories and Oprah shows and nonprofit foundations throwing money at sociologists and psychologists to study female self-destruction. My feminist sisters and I would be asking, rightly, "What's wrong with a culture that drives girls, much more than boys, to take their own lives?"

"Just as we enlisted fathers to empower their daughters, we need them now to empower their sons. We mothers can tell our sons to talk about their feelings, to teach them the signs of depression, to say it's OK to ask for help. But they learn how to be men from their fathers."

Lifeclass: 'I would urge any father to fight'

AngryMan · 28 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

A long and very sympathetic article about fathers' rights from Lesley Garner in the conservative-leaning London Daily Telegraph.

'A month on, desperate letters about fathers who have been denied access to their children continue to pour in to Lesley Garner

The sheer urgency and volume of your views on excluded fathers has compelled me to return to this topic for the third time.

When I wrote some weeks ago about Paul, a young father being excluded from his baby's life by the mother, I was deluged with stories from you, and they keep on coming.'

"Boot camp" Guards Charged with Murder

Matt · 28 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Apparently waiting for a male to get out of adolescence is too much patience to expect from certain "law enforcers" before torturing him to death for being "uncooperative". Seems inmate abuse is an age-adjusted equal-opportunity activity, particularly when it comes to males. Read it here. Excerpt:

"A second autopsy by Dr. Vernard Adams, the medical examiner for Hillsborough County, found Anderson's death was caused by suffocation due to the actions of the guards.

He said the suffocation was caused by hands blocking the boy's mouth, as well as the "forced inhalation of ammonia fumes" that caused his vocal cords to spasm, blocking Anderson's upper airway."

Canadian child care tax benefit social program forces dads to get a note from their wife

Anonymous · 28 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

From Revenue Canada's web site:
"The Canada Child Tax Benefit is a tax-free monthly payment made to eligible families to help them with the cost of raising children under age 18."

Just one catch... If you're a man, you need to get a note from the child's mom before you can even apply.

From the application form (.pdf file):

"[W]hen both a male and a female parent live in the same home as the child, we presume that the female parent is primarily responsible for the child and should apply, unless a note from the female parent is attached to this application that states that the male parent is primarily responsible for the child."

Imagine the uproar we'd hear if women were forced to get a note from men so that they collect on a government run program.

I haven't looked into it, but I wonder who gets the Child Tax Benefit if the parents have split custody? I think I know the answer, but it would be interesting to find out.

Police Say Mother Microwaved Her Baby

Evil White Male... · 28 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

China Arnold, 26, was jailed Monday on a charge of aggravated murder, more than a year after she brought her dead month-old baby to a hospital.

"China - as a mother and a person - was horrified that such an act could occur," her attorney said.

Arnold has three other children.

In 2000, a Virginia woman was sentenced to five years in prison for killing her month-old son in a microwave oven. Elizabeth Renee Otte claimed she had no memory of cramming her son in the microwave and turning on the appliance in 1999. Experts said that Otte suffered from epilepsy and that her seizures were followed by blackouts.

I KNOW IT'S SO CLICHE, BUT IF YOU'LL NOTICE THE LAST PARAGRAPH, I REALLY HAVE TO WONDER IF THERE HAS EVER BEEN ANY WOMEN THAT HAS EVER BEEN RESPONSIBLE FOR HER ACTIONS....

Glenn Sacks: Michigan NOW Declares 'Action Alert' Against Shared Parenting Bill

anthony · 28 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

"Michigan shared parenting advocates and the Michigan chapter of the National Organization for Women are squaring off over HB 5267, a Michigan shared parenting bill which will be heard by the House Families and Children Services Committee on December 6"

Panel recommends firing female fire chief over discrimination and harassment

anthony · 29 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here's another update on our favorite female fire chief.

"A city panel recommended Tuesday that officials fire Bonnie Bleskachek, the nation's first openly lesbian big-city fire chief, in the wake of firefighter lawsuits accusing her of harassment and discrimination."

"Three female firefighters have sued, alleging various acts of discrimination and sexual harassment. Two of the lawsuits were settled, but this month a male firefighter brought another lawsuit alleging he was denied advancement because he is male and not gay."

Men portrayed as monsters - article, Australian MX News

GaryB · 29 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Found this in the Australian (Sydney) MX News, a daily newspaper given away free to all commuters each day in Sydney. It's the drum I've been banging on about for ages, so really pleased to see it in at least a form of mainstream press.

QUOTE:

TITLE: TV Turns men into monsters, by Matt Sun

The portrayal of men on current affairs television has turned the average Australian male from goofy bloke to evil predator.
University of Western Sydney media researcher Dr Jim Macnamara said years of seeing images of men being shown as evil was influencing young boys, who either abandon men as role models or try to live up to the stereotype.

A six month study revealed 69 percent of reports on men were unfavourable - only 12 percent were favourable.

"Some recurring themes in media content portrayed men as violent, sexually abusive, unable to be trusted with children, deadbeat dads or commitment-phobic, and in need of reconstruction," he said.

"Men were predominately reported or portrayed in mass media as villains, aggressors, perverts, and philanderers. With more than 75 percent of mass media representations of men and male identity showing men in one of these four ways."

Macnamara accepted that many adults dismiss the negative portrayal as exaggeration or ratings grabbing, but said that those most likely to be overwhelmed by the images were boys with single parents.

"Highly negative views of men and male identity provide little by way of positive role models for boys to find out what it means to be a man and gives boys little basis for self-esteem," he said.

/END QUOTE

Personally I think it's about time somebody paid attention to it, and I'm only surprised the figure is so low - ONLY 75% of men in the press displaying us in the four evils...

Telegraph Asks: Are we guilty of ignoring fathers' rights?

Anonymous · 29 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The Telegraph asks: "Are the courts automatically biased towards mothers, even if they may not be the more suitable parent? What steps can be taken to force mothers to provide fathers with the necessary contact with their children?

Is there too much of a focus on a father's responsibility to make alimony payments, and not enough on his right to visit his child?

How do you think Britain compares to other countries in the way that it handles the rights of separated parents?

Has the adversarial approach to divorce law turned children into the spoils of marriage?"

The response from readers is absolutely overwhemling.

One day, a politician will catch on, offer equal rights to fathers in divorce, and scoop an election.

Wash Times: "70% abused wives in India statistics false" says the UN Agency

Anonymous · 30 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Notice here.

"70% abused wives in India statistics false" says the UN Agency..."

UK: Go soft on killer women, courts told

AngryMan · 30 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The situation in the UK continues to get worse. Check this story out.

Courts should go easy on women who kill abusive partners, a review of the laws on murder said yesterday.

Women who kill in cold blood can escape the mandatory life sentence imposed for the crime if they prove they were "provoked" by fear of domestic violence.

But the plan, delivered to ministers yesterday by the Government's law reform advisers, says that men who kill wives or girlfriends in anger over betrayal or family break-up should get more severe treatment.

So much for sexual equality.

Critics slam Tory decision to close most Status of Women offices

Anonymous · 30 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

"OTTAWA (CP) - The Conservative government is taking an axe to Status of Women Canada, closing three-quarters of its regional offices and outraging critics in the process.

Heritage Minister Bev Oda revealed Wednesday that 12 of the federal agency's 16 regional offices will be shut down by April 1.

[...]

'We don't need to separate the men from the women in this country. . . This government as a whole is responsible to develop policies and programs that address the needs of both men and women.'"

Story here.

India: "Dating Allowance" Case Draws Ire

bharati · 30 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The men's rights movement does exist in India. The sheer volume of population can give an idea that India is likely to have more men's rights activists then Australia in spite of the fact that the feminists have started to hit-and-bat at will only from year 2000 onwards.

Only a feminist can make dating allowance seem like a crime the link to this is here.

But unfortunately for her the MRAs were available and the reaction was swift in a day with SIF and Asha-kiran; it made front page news.

The first case of Domestic violence in India and it is proved to have been misused.

The reaction in the software capital of India is furious and the newspapers and TV channels do not give an indication of the fury that is in undercurrent at the law which seems to favour the women with the modern "Shurpankha principle". (In Indian mythology, Shurpanakha is a lady who does not even stop at murder for her illegal demand of adultery and she gets her first husband killed by a ruler by making false allegations.)

Finally we cannot but have gratitude towards David Usher for debunking the 70% myth and getting Washington Post to retract. The reporter had a tough tongue-lashing from us and that is why, with a malicious intent, she included a false interpretation of the study.

Court rules boy can't compete on girls' squad

Matt · 30 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. So girls can still play on boys' teams, but not vice versa. Excerpt:

"MADISON, Wis. (AP) -- A state appeals court on Thursday rejected a lawsuit by a boy who wanted to compete on his high school's girls' gymnastics team.

The District 4 Court of Appeals upheld a judge's dismissal of Keith Michael Bukowski's lawsuit against the Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic Association, which has a rule prohibiting boys from competing in girls' sports."

McElroy: Kofi's Legacy Misfires

anthony · 30 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"In October, the United Nations (UN) released its much-anticipated Secretary-General's Study on Violence Against Women (SVAW) - a global overview and update on the issue. The SVAW is a lumbering 139-page behemoth of a document that is embarrassingly inaccurate, ideological and biased against men."

"SVAW stresses that psychological neglect or abuse and lack of medical care are forms of violence against women. But, worldwide, men are 3.5 times as likely to commit suicide and their life expectancy is lower than women's"

30-year-old woman charged with sexual assault of 16-year-old boy

anthony · 30 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A warrant has been issued for a 30-year-old Bay City woman who is charged with sexual assault of a child, a 16-year-old boy who worked with her at a fast-food restaurant."

"The charges were made following an investigation that started Nov. 20 when the boy's mother went to police to express her concerns about the possible assault."

Ousted Female Teacher Admits 'Misconduct' with 13-YO Boy

anthony · 30 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"A former gym teacher has admitted to improper conduct with a 13-year-old boy at a Middlesex County middle school where she taught for nearly a decade."

"Under the plea bargain, Amy Burke faces up to four years in state prison and agreed to surrender her teaching certificates."

Woman accused of having sex with 14-YO boy

anthony · 30 November 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The teen told police Kalinowicz became pregnant and he thought he was the father, although Kalinowicz told police she'd slept with three other men. Kalinowicz had an abortion when she was five months pregnant, court records state."

Parent Activist Murtari to Be Released From Prison

Matt · 1 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Great news! Read it here. Excerpt:

"Contact: Teri Stoddard of AKidsRight.Org, 925-628-1206 or teri@akidsright.org

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Nov. 30 /U.S. Newswire/ -- Family rights activist and AKidsRight.Org's founder John Murtari will be released from prison Friday after spending four months incarcerated for "willful" failure to pay child support. Murtari denies the charge, saying support was calculated with a salary he no longer had, and travel expenses to see his son exceed the amount ordered after the courts allowed his ex-wife to move their son across the country.

Inspired by Gandhi and Martin Luther King, Murtari embarked on a peaceful protest July 31, the day he reported to serve his 6-month sentence. For 10 days Murtari had no food or water. Medical personnel tried to tempt him with candy, and threatened not to intervene. He lost 27 pounds and suffered dehydration, low blood sugar, low blood pressure and an irregular heartbeat before prison officials gave him a feeding tube."

England: Woman jailed over rape lies

anthony · 1 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"Liverpool fan Patricia Miller, 26, had consensual sex with the 19-year-old student Charles Brown hours after the Champions League final on 25 May 2005."

"But she told police she had been raped by Mr Brown at her flat in Acomb, York."

"Jailing her for nine months at York Crown Court, Judge Stephen Ashurst said Miller had told "a pack of lies".

Victim Now Accused of False Rape Report

anthony · 1 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"Now detectives have the accuser, Sherry Mullins, 35, of 318 Walker Road, Morganton, behind bars. Mullins is charged with filing a false police report."

"Detectives invested about 25-30 hours in the case, Huffman says. That time could have been spent on other, real cases, he says. Filing a false police report in North Carolina is a misdemeanor.

Globe and Mail Editorial: Status of Women is an "Agency Well Pruned"

Anonymous · 1 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The Globe and Mail, Canada's largest national newspaper, printed this editorial:

"From the opposition outcry over budget cuts to Status of Women Canada, Canadians might think the Conservatives had throttled women's aspirations for equality. That is simply incorrect. Instead, 35 years after the creation of a status-of-women cabinet post and 22 years after the recognition of women's equality rights in the Constitution, Ottawa has decided to close 12 of the agency's 16 regional offices across the country. The closings come as Ottawa pares $5-million from the agency's $23-million annual budget over two years. It's about time."

[...]

"Today, it seems more like a government relic, laden with jargon from old wars."

"Having It All": Book Review Drips with Misandry

Matt · 1 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Read it here, best on an empty stomach.

The urge to close the browser after the first one or two paragraphs is strong, but keep a-reading anyway. Some degree of reality seeps through in one paragraph (below), but the overall tone of this peice of writing is that men-as-fathers are vestigial organs at best and a necessary (for now anyway) evil that has to be carefully managed and allowed involvement in their own children's lives only at the permission and fine-grained-control management of the mother. All in all, a real barf-maker. The review's author has her own web site, here, which also lists a contact email address. Excerpt:

'Most of the heterosexual women Hertz interviews are "reluctant revolutionaries," women who would have preferred a male partner but who reached a point where they were willing to go it alone rather than miss out on motherhood. Her lesbian subjects, by contrast, consciously defied the idea that motherhood depends upon a heterosexual relationship. Neither group made these choices lightly. They enlisted the support of families and friends before embarking on this journey, and they have all had to grapple with their children's desire to picture their father and understand their kin connections. Contrary to some stereotypes, these women try mightily to include men in their children's lives. Hertz describes how they handle these thorny issues and gets the women to speak candidly about their trials, joys and dilemmas.'

Nurse Who Did Not Strike Teen in Boot Camp Death Case Still Charged

anthony · 1 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"A prosecutor will argue that she had a legal duty to intervene. They will say she should have known the boy was being severely hurt," said Jack King, spokesman for the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers."

"But King said a defense attorney could argue that there was little Schmidt could have done to stop the guards: "They might say she was just one woman surrounded by a bunch of crazed men, by these goons that were going crazy."

Call to Action: LA Times Bias Shines

Matt · 2 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Posted on behalf of Marc A:

Joseph D. just showed me this BIASED article by the L.A. Times on the "inequities of women." PLEASE, let's FLOOD them with letters immediately so we can get as many as possible printed! Email them at letters-at-latimes.com, and copy the author at carla.hall-at-latimes.com.

The article says things like:

"Most striking is that 40% of the estimated 88,000 homeless people in the county are women and children." But combining women and children together is totally deceptive. According to the Institute for Homelessness and Poverty's 2004 report, 77% of single adult homeless were male." Cite (.pdf)

In the year 2000, the homeless population was 23% children, 52% men and 24% women. Cite (.pdf)

The article talked about girls' doing worse in math and science but said nothing about the much worse status of boys in reading and writing, etc. It talks about Latinas but mentions nothing about how Latinos drop out more than Latinas.

There is so much bias and so many half-truths in this article it is unbelievable. It mentioned nothing of prison, suicides, occupational deaths, etc. Please write!

Marc

John Murtari Released!

Matt · 2 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Great news! Bet that was the best sundae he ever tasted. Good work, John! Story here.

Leving and Sacks: Michigan bill assumes male guilt

anthony · 2 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"The proposal actually makes it a crime for a man to "change or attempt to change an existing housing or cohabitation arrangement" with a pregnant significant other, to "file or attempt to file for a divorce" from his pregnant wife or to "withdraw or attempt to withdraw financial support" from a woman whom he has been supporting -- if it is determined that the man is doing these things to try to pressure the woman to terminate her pregnancy."

Female reporter in Florida stands up to praise, sympathize with boot camp nurse axolotl · 2 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

In this article which appears in todays St. Petersburg Times, reporter Abbie Vansickle does not highlight the fact that Kristen Anne Schmidt had 5 jobs in her first three years after graduating from nursing school.

Also it turns out that her husband divorced her in 1992, because she was having an affair with a fellow employee.

As well as telling us about Schmidt's virtually perfect work record, the article also has the obligatory sympathy-raising statements about Schmidt's personal life, telling us about Scmidt's two kids (who she has custody of, needless to say), and how her 'house is decorated with Christmas lights'.

New Live Radio Program For NCP's and Fathers

Matt · 2 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

And The Truth Continues...

We are very excited to announce Kright's Radio goes live with our new weekly panel show - "VLR Discussion's."

Beginning Saturday December 2nd / 3:30PM EST, 2:30PM CST, 1:30PM MT,

The topic of discussion for our Live Show will be:

"The State Of Noncustodial Parent's In America Today."

Guests:

Alicia Crow - WWW.realdadsstandup.com

Bessie Hudgins - WWW.three-sides-to-every-story.org

Jim Loose- WWW.pepintexas.org

Jim Semerad - United States Navy Commander and Family Readiness Officer

Moderator/Host: Richar' Farr

Adoptive mother held on torture charges

anthony · 3 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here

"According to the report, Williams used them as ashtrays, stabbed them with glass and knives, burned them with cigarette lighters and beat them with exercise equipment at her Toepfer Road home. They also said she forced them to sleep on the floor without blankets, choked them with a belt and bound their arms and legs with rope."

Attitudes sour on sex between boys, teachers

anthony · 3 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"Statewide, the number of females arrested – but not necessarily charged – for sex crimes against adults and children increased more than 50 percent between 2001 and 2005, while the number of males arrested during that period declined 7.1 percent. The number of female arrestees has increased from 1,169 in 2001 to 1,766 in 2005."

"Authorities say the problem is recurrent, and they believe the crime of female adults molesting minor males is not necessarily a rarity, but just underreported."

Woman Arrested for Stalking Debra LaFave's Attorney

anthony · 3 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

You guys can file this story as Weird/Irony.

"Attorney John Fitzgibbons is used to dealing with high profile cases and female criminals. His name and face has been plastered all over national news since the Debra LaFave case unfolded."

"Now Fitzgibbons is back in the news, except this time he's the victim."

War Trauma Hits Women Harder Than Men?

Roy · 3 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

'Studies of Vietnam and Gulf War veterans have documented post-traumatic stress in females - with higher rates than men, in some cases.
...
... anxiety - along with depression, irritability and feelings of isolation – also are common symptoms for men with post-traumatic stress, but some mental health experts believe there are distinct pressures for women veterans.
...
...the VA reports that slightly more than a third of 23,635 women veterans from Iraq and Afghanistan had a preliminary diagnosis of a mental disorder.'

By the way, of U.S. soldiers killed in Iraq, females represent 2.13% -- 67 of the 3,141 killed as of today. Of the more than 21,485 wounded, female injuries are 430. Cite here.

Another male celebrity falsely accused?

AngryMan · 4 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The British TV actor Ben Freeman has been charged with raping a 16 year old British girl in Barbados.

"Freeman was granted US$10,000 (£7,550) bail and had to surrender his travel documents.

The girl has returned to Britain. But hotel staff say she was seen sunbathing three days after the incident on Saturday.

A staff member said: 'You would have thought that after something as traumatising as that she would have wanted to get as far away from here as possible.'"

It will be interesting to see how this one develops...

Woman Sets Boyfriend on Fire, Starting with Groin

Matt · 4 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Glad to see the story is, at the moment anyway, at the top of CNN's "Most Popular" videos. Not glad to see that the story even exists, however. Watch it here (RealPlayer or similar required). Note toward the end of the report though that the reporter mentions that something must have gone "drastically wrong", since the assailant was more badly-burned than the victim.

What actually has gone drastically wrong of course is that women think they can do this sort of thing and get away with it, and that reporters seem more sympathetic with the assailant than the victim, provided the assailant is female and the victim male.

Anyone see a difference here?

Anonymous · 4 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

So - two stories on the same day from the BBC. Spot the difference:

Man jailed for sex with teenager

Jail term for underage sex woman

Mother Slashes Infant's Throat

Matt · 4 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Another video for you from CNN, here. This time the perp is the mother of the slain infant and the reporter comments something to the effect that at this time, police don't know what may have "pushed this mother over the edge."

More she-gets-a-pass commentary from the press.

Access rights mean little when spouse moves kids

Anonymous · 4 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The most surprising part of the breakup of Anthony Siminiuk's eight-year marriage is not the fact that he never saw it coming.

It is not that he drove his wife and two small children to the Regina airport for what he thought was a visit with family in Ontario, unaware she'd already cleaned out the closets, quit her job and planned on leaving for good.

It is not even that it has been eight months since he has seen his children, even though a court has granted him "liberal access ... either in Ontario or Saskatchewan" -- an entirely untenable option for someone on a modest sales salary.

What is most surprising is that it all seems to be perfectly legal."

Australia: Men fight the stereotype

Anonymous · 4 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"MENINISM is the catchcry of a movement of males who will storm the streets and burn their ties, rallying against the "all men are bastards" image that has an entire sex pigeonholed as violent, heartless and untrustworthy.

This is according to a new study saying there is a competing interest to the feminist struggle for equality; men and boys are now the target of negative stereotypes.

The research shows almost 70 per cent of social commentary on the male gender is unfavourable – portraying men as violent, sexually abusive, unable to be trusted with children, "deadbeat dads" and commitment-phobic."

Canadian judge struggles with kidnapping sentence

Anonymous · 4 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"The judge sentencing a French woman who fled Canada with her children and sparked a bitter international custody battle said on Friday the true victims in the case were the youngsters.

Judge Marvyn Koenigsberg said she believes Nathalie Gettliffe did not intend to remain in France permanently when she kidnapped her children, but that did not diminish the harm the case had caused.

Gettliffe fled to France with the children in 2001 after a Canadian divorce court rejected her request to take them there for 10 months. The court had ruled that would violate their father's right to have access to them.
...
"I don't think the greatest harm that happened to the children is not the five years (away), it's that they learned to hate their father," Koenigsberg said, admitting she was struggling with how to handle the case.

Gettliffe, 35, a dual Canadian-French citizen, pleaded guilty to a kidnapping charge this month before her trial was scheduled to begin."

Estranged wife allegedly threatened husband before SUV attack

anthony · 5 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Later that day, as Jon White was leaving work, his wife chased him back into the Woodland Towers building by driving her Ford Explorer through the glass doors and into the lobby, according to testimony. She struck her husband, causing him to flip over the vehicle and fall to the floor."

"Schatz said he may be able to argue at trial that Brenda White was suffering from "extreme emotional distress."

Wife already charged with killing husband accused of money crimes

anthony · 5 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman charged with murder in the slaying of her police officer husband was indicted Wednesday on dozens of charges stemming from alleged financial crimes."

"The 58 counts brought in Iredell County Superior Court against Misty Keller Witherspoon include allegations of embezzlement, identity theft and obtaining property by false pretenses."

"Female Suicide Bombers: Dying for Equality?"

anthony · 5 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"What drives a woman to strap a suicide belt to her body and blow herself up among a crowd of people?"

"Aside from highlighting the differences in Israeli and Arab coverage of the phenomenon, he reminds us that the lives of female suicide terrorists are no less tragic than those of male suicide bombers, yet the media accords women more sympathy and treats them with "kid gloves."

RADAR ALERT: Intensive Global Efforts Bring Two Victories in One Week!

Matt · 5 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This past week our hard work was rewarded with two victories. And both of them stemmed from flawed reports from the United Nations.

1. UN Study on Violence Against Women
   The first report was the UN secretary-general's Study on Violence Against Women. The document amounted to an ideological denunciation of the "patriarchy" and recommended that every country around the world enact VAWA-like laws: http://www.un.org/womenwatch/daw/vaw. Columnist Wendy McElroy described the report as "embarrassingly inaccurate, ideological, and biased against men." (http://www.ifeminists.net/e107_plugins/content/content.php?content.55)

   What happened next was nothing short of miraculous.

   RADAR drafted a resolution calling on the UN Third Committee to only "note," not "welcome" the report. The resolution was sent around the world, and within a few short weeks 118 organizations in 14 countries had endorsed it: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/UN-ViolenceReport-Resolution.pdf

   Alerts were issued and over a one-month period, an estimated 30,000 e-mails were sent to US ambassador John Bolton. The delegations from other countries were deluged with messages, as well.

   When the dust had cleared, the Third Committee decided to "note," not "welcome" the secretary-general's report!

   A change of a single word may seem insignificant, but it basically means that the Committee gave the Secretary General's report a failing grade.

   Please send Ambassador Bolton short "thank you" for voting to only "note" the flawed secretary-general's report at usa-at-un.int.

2. Washington Times Article on Abused Wives in India
   The second report came from a chart developed by the UN Population Fund. Whoever made the chart committed statistical malpractice, because it simply makes no sense. (http://mensnewsdaily.com/2006/11/19/feminist-takeover-of-the-un-is-an-issue-of-national-security)

   But that flawed chart gave rise to this statement that appeared in a front-page article in the Washington Times: "A 2005 U.N. Population Fund report found that 70 percent of married women in India were victims of beatings or rape." (http://www.washingtontimes.com/world/20061113-120817-8603r.htm)

   The statement was defamatory and beyond belief.

   RADAR issued two Alerts, and the complaints POURED in. Messages came from the United States, Canada, India, and elsewhere.

   So this past Tuesday, TWT finally ran the following retraction:

   "Using a chart published in a 2005 U.N. Population Fund report – which the UN agency now says was misleading – a London Daily Telegraph article published in Nov. 13 editions of The Washington Times incorrectly stated the frequencies of wife abuse in India. The agency says that it does not have sufficient data to provide such a figure and that the chart was intended to show that 70 percent of Indian women who were abused by their husbands think such abuse is justified in at least some circumstances."

(http://washingtontimes.com/corrections/20061128-102228-2806r.htm)

These are major victories. Kudos for the messages you sent to the United Nations that would have otherwise treated half-truths and innuendo about violence against women as absolute truth. And kudos to all who complained to the Washington Times for publishing its inflammatory propaganda.

This Alert is sent in the spirit of appreciation and thanks for a job well done. This is an example of how a cooperative effort involving over 100 organizations in 14 countries around the world can truly make a difference.

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++
Date of RADAR Release: December 4, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Canada: Judge assails mother for campaign of 'lies'

Anonymous · 5 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

VANCOUVER — A British Columbia judge lashed out at a French woman yesterday for a nationwide campaign of vilification against her ex-husband that castigated him and the Canadian justice system on newscasts and front pages across France.

Hostility was so intense that the Canadian embassy was forced into the fray to defend Canada's role in the bitter child-custody case, while the French village where Nathalie Gettliffe lived "seemed determined to lynch" her former husband, Scott Grant, according to Madam Justice Marvyn Koenigsberg.

[...]

"They also said he was guilty of abusive behaviour. . . . This persistent and deliberate alienation from their father . . . is a terrible burden for any child to bear and may mark them for life."

The maximum penalty for Ms. Gettliffe's crime is two years in jail, plus three years of probation. Judge Koenigsberg called her 16-month sentence a severe judgment, required because of her prolonged defiance of the courts and the serious harm to her children.

She receives credit for 10 months of time already spent in jail, leaving her with six months to serve.

Mother Of Boy Who Had Sex With Teacher Sues

anthony · 5 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"Mother Of Boy Who Had Sex With Teacher"?? Does this title somehow imply the boy was the aggressor and the woman was victimized? What about: "Teacher who raped boy being sued"?

Excerpt:

"The mother of a boy who had a sexual relationship with a teacher at Kent County High School is suing the teacher and the county Board of Education."

"The lawsuit claimed the boy suffered mental anguish and has incurred huge medical bills as a result of the abuse."

Barbara Kay Defends Men Again

afg · 6 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

National Post columnist, Barbara Kay, writes about how men are still being made to feel guilty over Mark Lepine's school shooting 17 years ago that killed 16 women. She states, "From this human tragedy of no inherent political significance, a political industry emerged, which produced in the massacre's name: gun control laws, lavish public spending on women's causes, feminist-guided school curricula and a high tolerance for overt misandry."

IWF: Women Know Best Why They're Not CEOs

Roy · 6 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Carrie Lukas at the Independent Women's Forum writes – "More than 40 years after Betty Friedan urged women to exchange their aprons for business suits, by many measures, women's progress in the workforce has stalled.

Certainly today more women work and hold more prestigious jobs than ever before: as of 2002, women accounted for 46.5 percent of the workforce and held more than half of managerial and professional specialty jobs. Yet few women make it to the very top of the business world...

Why is this? Liberal feminist groups, like the National Organization for Women (NOW), tend to insist that sexism and discrimination are the primary cause. Yet many individual women recognize that their choices — particularly the choices they make once they have children — make the difference."

(Rather balanced article; nice to know that women actually have/make choices; though it omits any mention of our unquestioned cultural expectations that men must become lifelong wage-slaves with fewer choices than women.)

Mother commits suicide by traffic and takes son with her, called tragic mystery

Paragon · 7 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Excerpt: "Andrea Johnson had just finished university, escaped the confines of a women's shelter and got her own apartment in April.

Though there were signs she was depressed, no one seemed to realize the pain the 30-year-old was living with — pain that would cause her to throw herself and her 2-year-old child from an overpass on to Highway 401."

This has been national headlines and front page news for days now in Canada. All coverage takes a similar tone - tragic that this poor woman has died and gushing with praise about what a wonderful person she was.

I just find it strange that when a father does this the articles are never quite as favorable.

Read the Toronto Star's latest on this story here.

From the 'hell hath no fury...' files: Tale of the ex-boyfriend who didn't clean house

Paragon · 7 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This little story from the Globe and Mail should serve as a reminder to all that feminism is sending the wrong messages to the young women of the world - in this case about the unequal distribution of household chores - and that women are violent and capable of awful acts of humiliation and degradation against those they feel has wronged them.

Excerpt: 'Four people, including the victim's ex-girlfriend, are in custody charged with kidnapping and forcible confinement after a Kingston man was grabbed at his home, confined and beaten.

There he was assaulted again overnight and forced to clean the apartment with the threat he'd be beaten with a baseball bat.'

Wonder what the coverage would be like if a man and a few of his buddies decided to abduct, beat, and force to clean house one of his ex-girlfriends?

"Manliness is Next to Godliness"

Matt · 7 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

In the old site software I would have posted this article under "Men and Religion". Anyway, this is an interesting development. Sort of like a "ManKind Project meets Promise Keepers" phenomenon. As an interesting observation, the authors of this piece are women. Excerpt:

'It's an apt anthem for a contrarian movement gaining momentum on the fringes of Christianity. In daybreak fraternity meetings and weekend paintball wars, in wilderness retreats and X-rated chats about lust, thousands of Christian men are reaching for more forceful, more rugged expressions of their faith.

Stine's daylong revival meeting, which he calls "GodMen," is cruder than most. But it's built around the same theory as the other experimental forums: Traditional church worship is emasculating.

...

"We know men are uncomfortable in church," says the Rev. Kraig Wall, 52, who pastors a small church in Franklin, Tenn. — and is at GodMen to research ways to reach the husbands of his congregation. His conclusion: "The syrup and the sticky stuff is holding us down."'

Death penalty sought in baby's microwave death

anthony · 8 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman suspected of killing her month-old daughter by putting her in a microwave oven was indicted on a charge of aggravated murder Thursday, and the prosecutor said he would seek the death penalty."

Ottawa Police, hired guns for the anti-male machine.

Anonymous · 8 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

OTTAWA (CP) - Diplomatic immunity is no excuse for domestic violence, says a consortium of police and government agencies that has launched a new website aimed at helping women and children who find themselves in such situations.
The multilingual site maintained by Ottawa police in partnership with the RCMP, the Department of Foreign Affairs and Immigrant Women Services Ottawa outlines the rights of all Canadians regardless of nationality."

Essay: Feminism has destroyed a generation of men

anthony · 8 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"My father's generation defined their wives: nowadays, the role has completely reversed and men are defined by women. As a result, their definition of themselves has faltered and society has been cruel towards their attempts to redefine themselves."

"Women, meanwhile, are groomed relentlessly to succeed. How did we get into such a predicament? No feminist I ever knew wanted to see a world in which men were beaten by women: a world in which one dominant group was just replaced by another."

Cathy Young: Are false abuse charges a common tactic in child custody battles?

anthony · 8 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"Child custody disputes are some of the bloodiest battlefields in the gender wars—battlefields upon which allegations of spousal and child abuse are widely regarded as a nuclear weapon. But there are two opposite views of this problem. Fathers' advocates claim abuse allegations are routinely used to deny divorced fathers contact with their children and to poison children's minds against their fathers, in what the activists and some psychologists call "parental alienation syndrome." Feminists argue that well-founded accusations of abuse are often dismissed and even turned against the accusing mothers."

Theologians Battle Female Circumcision

n.j. · 8 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

I do not need to explain the shortcoming of the above approach to the readers of this site.

But isn't it funny how people there complain about the involvement of doctors and the contradiction that lies in the act of religious people messing with God's creation, while the exact same applies to mutilation of boys if one is not blinded by excuses provided by culture and tradition, occasionally transformed into medical "studies"? One must ask oneself how much more ignorant and illogical it can get. Do some people want boys harmed for whatever reason?

Some time ago, organizer Ruediger Nehberg appeared in German media when the conference was announced, and claimed Islam saved his life. My personal assessment is: he refuses to believe something his beloved religion supports in communities around the world is harmful. An insulting reply to my attempt to inform him has affirmed this.

Kenya: Woman Rights Groups to Sue Over Law On Sex Offences

anthony · 9 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A group of women and children rights organisations are planning to sue the Government over a clause in the Sexual Offences Act which makes a false rape allegation a criminal offence. The contentious clause was inserted at the last minute as one of the compromises hammered out to ensure passage of the Bill in July."

GB: Male teenagers choose work, not homework

anthony · 9 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

An interesting fact:

"Girls are three times more likely to keep studying after school than to get a job, according to new figures which show boys lag far behind their female peers in extending their education."

4 -year-old Accused of Improperly Touching Teacher

Matt · 10 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

I believe this story requires no elaborate commentary from me except to say should anyone doubt that schools are boy-hostile, send them the link. Excerpt:

'BELLMEAD- A four-year-old hugged his teachers aide and was put into in-school suspension, according to the father. But La Vega school administrators have a different story.

Damarcus Blackwell's four-year-old son was lining-up to get on the bus after school last month, when he was accused of rubbing his face in the chest of a female employee.

The prinicipal of La Vega Primary School sent a letter to the Blackwells that said the pre-kindergartener demonstrated "inappropriate physical behavior interpreted as sexual contact and/or sexual harassment."'

College Going Coed Sued by Students

Matt · 11 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'LYNCHBURG, Virginia (AP) -- Randolph-Macon Woman's College will change its name to Randolph College when it admits men next year, officials said.

Trustees of the 115-year-old private college voted in September to make the school coeducational, and received more than 1,000 suggestions on a new name.
...
The school is going co-ed in an effort to achieve more financial stability, although nine students have filed a lawsuit seeking to delay male enrollment until at least after current freshmen have graduated.

About 100 people rallied Saturday to protest the name change and the college's transition to coeducation.'

Article also mentions that the number of women's colleges in the US is down to 60. It doesn't mention that the number of men's colleges is down to five. But hey, we all know men's colleges are bastions of sexism and male privilege, so that's different, right?

Two Women Arrested For Filing False Rape Reports

anthony · 11 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

Two women, in unrelated cases, were arrested Friday morning and charged with filing false rape reports:

"In the first case, Stephanie Ebbert, 20, called the sheriff's office saying a cab driver took her to a field and then forced her to have sex with him."

"Around 9 a.m. Carey Studybaker, 27, called deputies saying she went to a home in Pine Manor to buy some pills. When she went inside she says a man forced her to smoke crack and then raped her."

Italy: Fathers' rights activist's televised suicide attempt foiled

Evil White Male... · 11 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

An Italian fathers' rights activist says he tried unsuccessfully to self-immolate on live television to call attention to dads unable to see their kids. The ANSA news service reported Saturday that Nicola De Martino, who was recently re-united with his son after a 12-year separation, tried to set himself on fire Thursday night while appearing as a guest on the current affairs show, "Dieci Minute," or "Ten Minutes" on state television station RAI. ANSA said that the show's host, along with the distraught man's 18-year-old son "looked on in horror" as De Martino doused himself with gasoline and then threatened to light a match. Host Maurizio Martinelli and the studio crew frantically managed to wrest the lit match from De Martino's hands. He was then led away from the stage.

Video clip here.

RADAR ALERT: Flawed DHHS Report Offers Little Holiday Cheer to Men

Matt · 11 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services is planning to release a one-sided and biased report called the "Surgeon General's Call to Action on Women's Mental Health." The report is being developed by the Surgeon General's Women's Mental Health Project.

But if we take action now, we can turn this around.

This is our recommendation to Dr. John Agwunobi, the DHHS Assistant Secretary for Health:

Because the flaws in the draft report are so systematic, we request that a new report be commissioned that reflects a balanced and truthful perspective on the mental health problems faced by women and men.

The detailed critique is included in the letter below. Please put your name and address at the bottom of the letter and e-mail it to:

John O. Agwunobi, MD
Assistant Secretary for Health
Department of Health and Human Services
Email: john.agwunobi-at-hhs.gov

And send a CC of your letter to:

Janet East, Director
Office of the Executive Secretariat
Department of Health and Human Services
Email: JEAST-at-osophs.dhhs.gov

Think of the anguish and sorrow of fathers who will be spending the Holiday Season this year without their children due to false allegations of domestic violence. If allowed to come out, this report will cause lasting damage to families, children, and men.

Send your letter today!!

++

Dear Dr. Agwunobi:

I am writing in regard to the draft "Surgeon General's Call to Action on Women's Mental Health."

As this letter documents, the report includes false statistics about domestic violence, contains other inaccurate statements, and selectively reports the facts of mental illness. Its assumptions, conclusions, and recommendations are fundamentally biased.

Because the report is so deeply flawed, we request you commission a new report that reflects a balanced and truthful perspective on the mental health problems faced by women and men.

False Statistics about Domestic Violence

The draft report states on page 7 that women are "three times more likely to suffer from intimate partner violence." That flawed statistic comes from the National Violence Against Women Survey, which has been strongly criticized for under-reporting the true prevalence of partner violence and biasing the responses in favor of women.

Almost 200 studies on partner violence have reached the consistent conclusion that women are equally likely as men to engage in domestic violence:

- Irene Hanson Frieze concluded in the September 2005 issue of Psychology of Women Quarterly that “research indicates that women can be just as violent as their partners.”
- A 2000 meta-analysis by Dr. John Archer in Psychological Bulletin concluded, “Women were slightly more likely than men to use one or more act of physical aggression.”
- Dr. Martin Fiebert of California State University recently summarized his research, “women are as physically aggressive, or more aggressive, than men in their relationships with their spouses or male partners.” (http://www.csulb.edu/~mfiebert/assault.htm)

Other Inaccurate Statements

The report makes other statements that are vague, misleading, unsupported, and/or false:

Abuse: The report repeatedly makes the claim that women are at higher risk of being “abused,” without defining what this vague term means. On page 8, that claim is supported by citation number 58, a WHO report titled “Gender and Women’s Health: Gender and Disaster.” However, a search reveals that report is no longer located on the Internet. Since it cannot be found or verified, it should not be cited in a US government document.

If the report wishes to highlight the problem of child abuse, then it should cite the Administration of Children’s and Families report, Child Maltreatment 2004, which shows that boys and girls are subjected to abuse at almost identical rates: http://www.acf.dhhs.gov/programs/cb/pubs/cm04/index.htm

Trauma and Violence: The report often refers to women who suffer from trauma and violence. But by any public health indicator, it’s men who are at far greater risk of dying from trauma and violence. According to Health, United States 2006 (http://www.cdc.gov/nchs/data/hus/hus06.pdf), unintentional injuries claimed the lives of 70,532 men in 2003, compared to 38,745 women. Likewise, men’s death rate from homicide is 9.4 per 100,000, compared to 2.6 for women, more than a three-fold difference.

Depression: The report states, “women are nearly twice as likely as men to suffer from major depression” (page 5). That statement is misleading because it does not consider the fact that the diagnostic criteria for depression often fail to detect depression in men. That is one reason why the NIH National Institute of Mental Health established its “Real Men, Real Depression” program.

Socioeconomic Status: The report claims that women “face a lower average socioeconomic status compared to men” (page 8). That statement is supported by two citations. The first citation (number 59) is a report about natural disasters that does not cite even a single study to support any claim about women’s economic disadvantage (http://www.who.int/gender/gwhgendernd2.pdf). The second citation (number 60) is a 2005 workshop presentation that cannot be located, nor can its claims be verified. Neither citation is appropriate to include in a US government report that aims to be authoritative.

The truth is, there is no evidence to support the broad claim that women “face a lower average socioeconomic status compared to men.” In fact, that claim has been repeatedly disproved by economist Victor Fuchs, sociologist Martha Gimenez, and many others.

Selective Reporting of Facts

The entire draft report rests on the assumption that women are at greater risk of mental health problems. By failing to report key public health statistics, that assumption is never tested.

The following mortality statistics are strongly influenced by persons’ mental health status (Health, United States, 2006, Table 29):

Chronic liver disease/Cirrhosis (Deaths per 100,000)"
Men: 13.0
Women: 6.0

Suicide (Deaths per 100,000):

Men: 18.0
Women: 4.2

For both causes of death, men have substantially higher risk of dying than women. Of particular concern is the effect of divorce on fathers' suicide risk. Sociologist Augustine Kposowa found that divorced men were more than twice as likely to commit suicide as married men, and almost 10 times more likely to kill themselves as divorced women.

But these facts are never mentioned, much less discussed in the Surgeon General's report.

Finally, the major disparities affecting African-American men should be highlighted, a concern that has been highlighted by the Congressional Black Caucus. In 2003, the life expectancy at birth was:

Black men: 69.0 years
White men: 75.3 years

Black women: 76.1 years
White women: 80.5 years

These troubling lifespan disparities are caused, in part, by mental health problems.

Summary and Recommendation

In summary, the "Surgeon General's Call to Action on Women's Mental Health" includes claims and statistics that are one-sided, vague, unsupported, misleading, and/or demonstrably false. It does not adequately represent the extent of mental health problems faced by women. It misrepresents, downplays, or ignores altogether the mental health problems faced by men, particularly minority men. It does not provide a credible basis for setting public health priorities or establishing a plan of action for the Department of Health and Human Services.

Although women indeed face unique mental health problems, this report does not do justice to that public health concern. Rather, the draft "Surgeon General's Call to Action on Women's Mental Health" may actually end up discrediting this important issue.

Because the flaws in the draft report are so systemic, I am requesting that a new report be commissioned that reflects a balanced and truthful perspective on the mental health problems faced by women and men.

I look forward to receiving your response.

Sincerely,

{Your name here}

++
Date of RADAR Release: December 11, 2006

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner.

http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Verdict in Murder-Acid Barrel Case

Matt · 12 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. No mention of charges the wife is facing or has faced, or if she will at all (the latest mention of her I could find using Google is here, wherein she requests not to be charged because the prosecution couldn't provide a body in evidence). Excerpt:

'A jury on Tuesday found a former lab assistant guilty of murdering a Clovis man by stuffing his body in a barrel of acid.

James Fagone, 24, was convicted of murder after Fresno County Superior Court jurors deliberated for more than five hours over two days. The jury of six men and six women acquitted Fagone of a kidnapping charge.
...
Fagone testified last week that Larissa Schuster poured gallons of hydrochloric acid over her husband's body after they knocked him out with chloroform and a stun gun.

Fagone had worked at Larissa Schuster's lab in Fresno in late 2001 and most of 2002. He said he quit after Schuster became controlling and manipulative.'

Mom acquitted of murder in kids' drowning

Matt · 12 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Remember this case? Predictably, she was let go, with the suggestion that her 'abusive boyfriend' was pretty much all behind it. Excerpt:

'DECATUR, Illinois (AP) -- A woman whose three children drowned when the family car rolled into a lake was convicted Tuesday of child endangerment.

...

Authorities said Hamm was going along with her boyfriend's plan to drown the children to get rid of the strain they added to the couple's sometimes abusive relationship.

Maurice LaGrone, now Hamm's ex-boyfriend, was convicted in April of murdering the children and is serving a life sentence without the possibility of parole.

...

Skelton said the verdict means the jury decided Hamm did not help plan murders, but should have known LaGrone was a threat to her children.'

Tribunal to hear prostate screening complaint

Anonymous · 12 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

A human-rights tribunal will begin hearing a complaint today in Victoria against the provincial Ministry of Health that says the government discriminates against men by refusing to pay for prostate cancer screening tests on demand.

Victoria lawyer Laurie Armstrong is spearheading the case before the tribunal, arguing the province discriminates against him and other men on the basis of sex. Women do not have to pay for Pap smears or mammograms.

But men who want the early detection test, called the prostate specific antigen (PSA), have to pay $30.

Congressman calls for investigation of Nifong's conduct

Anonymous · 12 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

It's long overdue, but at last these innocent young men may get a morsel of justice. A North Carolina Congressman has asked the Dept. of Justice to investigate Nifong's handling of the Duke Lacrosse case. His reasoning is that Nifong has committed prosecutorial misconduct and violated the civil rights of all that have been charged in this so called, "case". Excerpt:

'A North Carolina congressman has asked the U.S. Department of Justice to investigate Durham District Attorney Mike Nifong's handling of the Duke lacrosse case.

In a letter to Attorney General Alberto Gonzales, U.S. Rep. Walter B. Jones said Nifong may have engaged in prosecutorial misconduct and violated the civil rights of the three lacrosse players charged with raping an escort service dancer hired to dance at a team party in March.'

DNA Tests Reportedly Clean Duke Players

Evil White Male... · 13 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'DNA testing conducted by a private lab in the Duke lacrosse rape case found genetic material from several males in the accuser's body and her underwear but none from any team member, including the three charged with rape, according to a defense motion filed Wednesday.
...
"This is strong evidence of innocence in a case in which the accuser denied engaging in any sexual activity in the days before the alleged assault, told police she last had consensual sexual intercourse a week before the assault, and claimed that her attackers did not use condoms and ejaculated," the motion read.'

British IVF Law Changes Raise Many Questions

032105 · 14 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'In London, government health officials announced that a child's need for a father will no longer will be a consideration when a woman seeks fertility treatment via sperm donation. They also stated that the creation of a human embryo from two women would be forbidden because it would make men obsolete in reproduction.'

If a human embryo can be made from two women, why shouldn't it be done? Why should men continue to waste time engaging in the procreational process if we are not needed? Why should we continue to donate sperm if it is unnecessary?

I'm not in the least intimidated by the notion of being cut out of the procreational process. I think the making of embryos by two women SHOULD BE allowed, and men should stop donating sperm. Men are not afraid of becoming obsolete in the procreational process! I'm curious to see how it all would turn out. I desperately hope London's government health officials overturn this inhibition.

What we need to do is go on a national campaign educating men about such reproductive technologies and encourage them not to donate sperm.

Ed. note: Also covered by the BBC here.

More Gov't Sponsored Endorsements for MGM

Matt · 14 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Circumcision appears to reduce a man's risk of contracting AIDS from heterosexual sex by half, United States government health officials said yesterday, and the directors of the two largest funds for fighting the disease said they would consider paying for circumcisions in high-risk countries.

The announcement was made by officials of the National Institutes of Health as they halted two clinical trials, in Kenya and Uganda, on the ground that not offering circumcision to all the men taking part would be unethical. The success of the trials confirmed a study done last year in South Africa.'

By this reasoning, it makes sense to cut off a baby's hands shortly after birth, too, as a means of reducing his risk of seeing arthritis form in his fingers later in life.

Teen Girl Lies about Her Age; BF Jailed

Paragon · 14 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Her daughter climbed out of windows late at night and slipped back in during the early morning hours. She brought a guy into her home while her mother slept. The sad truth is, this girl was not the victim of a sexual predator. She was dating. Thompson took her to meet his family.

If she found Thompson, she'll possibly find another date.

She and other girls who lie about their ages and get into inappropriate relationships that lead to serious trouble for others should receive juvenile summons themselves. That, at least, might force them to talk to someone about why they are compelled to seek out older guys. At best, it might deter young girls from playing adult games, putting themselves and unwitting males at risk.

Thompson, unfairly, will forever be linked to the sexual predators of society.'

So, now young men (who already lag well behind girls in reading, writing and vocabulary skills in school) need to be able to test a potential dates ability to communicate? What does that even really mean?

Didn't the author blame him earlier for not picking up that this girl had the "communication abilities" of a 13-year-old and that the differences are so distinct between 13 year olds and 16 year olds that he couldn't have missed it? But she was introduced to his whole family and they all bought her lies. They must also be all male and therefore stupid right?

Of course he does think girls who do this should be charged as well - but only so they can get some one to talk to. Only boys need 15 months (what this young man got) in jail.

This may have destroyed the rest of this young man's life and it clearly was not rape or non-consensual under any definition. Is this really the best way to deal with the issue of teen-aged sexuality?

Boy "Body-Socked" in School

Matt · 14 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here, video here. Excerpt:

'Body sox are designed to help kids explore their three-dimensional space, according to web sites about the device.

"I don't like it at all," said Patrick Holt, the boy's father. "I don't think it should be used on anybody."

Calming device or restraining order?
Watch and learn more about the body sock.

Holt felt that way after learning a Pre-K teacher at Pinellas Central Elementary put his 4-year-old son in a body sock Friday.

"My wife saw my son try to open up the body sock and the teacher's aide went ahead and had him put it back up," Holt said.

The Holts wondered what was going on, especially since they said their son was the only student in a body sock.'

England: Absent fathers to be named and shamed

anthony · 14 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Fathers who fail to pay maintenance for their children will be "named and shamed" on the internet as part of a Government drive to make them honour their family responsibilities.

Offenders with a record of non-payment could also be fitted with electronic tags, subjected to curfews or have their passports withheld.'

England: Fleeing dads start new lives

anthony · 14 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"I do find it interesting . . . how often when men fight for custody and don't get exactly what they want . . . those men just vanish from the child's life. And then you've kind of got proof that this was never about the father wanting to be involved with the child."

"Asked if men are leaving the country to get away from support payments, Debois responded with a link to a Global Television website promoting a documentary about two men's access struggles against a system they believe has a "deep and persistent gender bias against fathers."

Rutgers Sponsors Global Feminist Terrorism

anthony · 14 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Rutgers is an integral part of the U.N. Feminist Rumor Mill. Virtually all statistics and conclusions feminists make about abuse have been scientifically proven to be fantastical."

"In fact, the body of assertions made in the U.N. Secretary Generals Report on Violence Against Women were so outrageous that the U.N. Third Committee voted unanimously to only “note” the report, rather than accept it. In parliamentary language, this is a full rejection — a rare event at the United Nations."

Noted female coach charged with sexually assaulting student

anthony · 15 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'SOMERVILLE -- A former Immaculata High School physical education teacher and coach once described by an assistant coach as the "Vince Lombardi" of girls' basketball at the school was arrested and charged Thursday with sexually assaulting a female student, Somerset County Prosecutor Wayne J. Forrest said.

Pamela Balogh, 39, of Bethlehem, Pa., was arrested and charged with first-degree ggravated sexual assault, second-degree sexual assault, third-degree aggravated criminal sexual contact, fourth-degree criminal sexual contact and third-degree endangering the welfare of a child.'

Female teacher charged with sexually abusing five boys

anthony · 15 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Interesting that the words "rape" and "pedophile" do not appear in this story. Excerpt:

"A flirtatious Brandy Lynn Gonzales lured five boys from her fifth-grade classes into sexual acts at movie theaters, her apartment and even her classroom, prosecutors said Thursday."

"The charges involve four students in the same fifth-grade class and a fifth boy from a different class. The students alleged that Gonzales would touch them under desks during class."

Wendy McElroy: Abortion Bills Violate Men's Rights

anthony · 15 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Right to Life of Michigan describes the penalties for leaving. "A misdemeanor charge for actions that do not physically threaten a woman, but clearly constitute a coercive element (relationship, financial or housing arrangements) would subject the perpetrator to fines up to $2000…If the pregnant woman is under the age of 18 and the perpetrator of the coercion is the adult father of the unborn child, the punishment would be imprisonment for not more than 1 year or a fine of not more than $5000, or both."

Source: Duke rape accuser pregnant

anthony · 15 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The person who confirmed the pregnancy to the AP had no information about the father. Defense attorneys have stressed for months that no sex occurred at the party and they have cited DNA testing that found genetic material from several males in the accuser's body and her underwear — but none from any member of the lacrosse team."

Woman Shoots Husband Over Warm Beer

anthony · 15 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The wife allegedly admitted shooting her husband, who was about 70 years old, in the kitchen of their home. The man was shot four or five times in the chest after giving his wife a can of warm Stag beer."

England: Women are drinking more, and getting violent with it

anthony · 15 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Kirsten Maile is bright, attractive and eloquent. She wants to study to be an underwater diving photographer. She is also on probation for ABH - actual bodily harm - after she rammed a bottle into a girl's face.

Nor is it the first time that she has lashed out while drunk. She has twice been charged with common assault, and claims to have "wrapped a girl's ponytail around my hand and smashed her face against a basin". '

TVOntario: Do you think, in some circumstances, men are discriminated against?

Anonymous · 15 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

TVOntario aired an episode of The Agenda last night, including a segment, "Do you think, in some circumstances, men are discriminated against?"

The TVO Viewer Responses indicated an overwhelming Yes.

The show hasn't been posted to view yet, but it should be available here shortly.

Discussion included a number of expert panel members. The issues ran the gamut, including domestic violence, family law issues, and stereotyping of men.

TVOntario should be thanked and congratulated for addressing the issues. They can be contacted here.

Olympian wanted in the U.S. for child abduction

Anonymous · 15 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Canadian olympic athlete Myriam Bédard is wanted by police after taking abducting her child in violation of a child custody agreement:

"... Ms. Bédard is wanted by police for the alleged abduction of her daughter in contravention of a custody order. Quebec City police issued an arrest warrant after her former husband, biathlete coach Jean Paquet, complained that she had left the country and violated their child-custody agreement."

What's shocking isn't that she has abducted a child but that the police are actually pursuing legal remedies against her.

Story here.

Nifong hid DNA evidence

Anonymous · 15 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

You read that correctly. It now appears according DNA Security of Burlington, which did the DNA testing last March on the Duke Lacrosse players, that Nifong knew all about the results for NINE MONTHS and hid all of it from the trial proceedings up to this point. This is all the defense lawyers will need for a quick dismissal once this gets to the courtroom, if it ever does, and to get that scum bag Nifong fired, disbarred, and thrown in jail. Naturally, none of this will happen, "in the interest of protecting women". Men, it's time for a revolution. Story here. Excerpt:

'A private laboratory hired by the prosecution in the Duke lacrosse case failed to report that it found DNA from multiple males in the accuser's body and underwear, according to a defense motion filed today.
The lab, DNA Security of Burlington, found that the DNA did not match the three defendants, their lacrosse teammates or anyone else who submitted their DNA to police, including the accuser's boyfriend.
...
"This is strong evidence of innocence in a case in which the accuser denied engaging in any sexual activity in the days before the alleged assault, told police she last had consensual sexual intercourse a week before the assault, and claimed that her attackers did not use condoms and ejaculated," said the motion, which was signed by lawyers for all three defendants.

"There is not a single mention of this obviously exculpatory evidence in the final DNA Security report."'

Ed. note: Sidebar link addresses the matter head on; the title speaks for itself: Head of DNA lab says he and Nifong agreed not to report results

Class Action Suit Alleges Arrests of Men Targeted for Town Income Purposes

Matt · 16 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Sounds more like extortion, corruption, and abuse of official authority to me. They would not have done this to women, that's for sure! Thanks to Marc A. for pointing this one out.

Stone Park sued on vice arrests: Prostitution stings called moneymakers for western suburb

Excerpt:

'A federal lawsuit filed Thursday claims as many as 900 men arrested in prostitution stings were wrongly targeted by Stone Park police in an operation designed to generate income for the tiny village.

The class-action lawsuit, which names 12 plaintiffs, was filed in U.S. District Court and expands on a suit filed last year by nine men who claim an undercover officer posing as a prostitute arrested them even after they turned her down.
...
The stings occurred when men stopped at the Blue Dolphin, Horwitz said, and were approached by a female undercover officer who offered to perform a sexual act with them.

"They say, `No,'" Horwitz said. "And regardless of what they say, 30 seconds to a minute later, they'll be arrested."

Police told the men it would be their word against the officer's, Horwitz said. Several defendants were found not guilty, others fought the charges but were found guilty and several pleaded guilty under pressure that their names would be published in a local paper if they were found guilty after fighting the charges, according to the complaint.'

Many still don't see women as sex predators

anthony · 18 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The general public still does not let boys be victims like they do girls," said Hobbs, a 23-year veteran of the department. "And I don't think they hold the offenders as accountable when the offender is a female."

"Light sentences in some notorious cases brought public outcry from groups that say female offenders are getting a slap on the wrist."

Nifong's Law...by Doug Powers

anthony · 18 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"It has become painfully obvious that the accused are being used for some purpose other than the pursuit of justice. If it turns out that the prosecutor is continuing to press increasingly discredited allegations, severe action needs to be taken. If this is all a political game, Mike Nifong's last day in office should be the legal equivalent of Mussolini's involuntary inverted pinata therapy at the end of World War II"

Domestic Abuse: Does money fuel false allegations?

anthony · 18 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Proclaiming his innocence, the 41-year-old Vallejo man racked up thousands of dollars in legal bills before a judge dismissed the charges a month later, saying there was insufficient evidence of domestic violence."

"Even the cop was apologetic," said Joe, who asked that his identity be disguised because his divorce proceedings are ongoing. "She told me she didn't believe (my wife), but that she had to arrest me because the accusation had been made."

Ed. note: Article mentions RADAR. Good exposure!

Two women, convicted of killing 'abusive' husbands, get clemency

anthony · 18 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Two women who murdered their allegedly abusive husbands have had their life sentences commuted by Governor Jeb Bush and the state Cabinet."

"The panel agreed to release Sandra Patria of Manatee County and Sherry Perry of Seminole County. Patria has been in prison for nearly 23 years. Perry, who first claimed two men from Panama killed her husband, has been in prison for 10 years. It has not been said when the women will be released."

"As part of the arrangement, both women after their release will spend 18 months in a program designed to help victims of domestic violence. Those programs are in Gainesville and Tampa."

India: Husbands victims of dowry law abuse

anthony · 18 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"INDIAN husbands are becoming victims of an anti-dowry law which is being misused by their wives to extort money, a group representing men who have been accused of dowry abuse said today."

"Under the law, the accused can be arrested and jailed without warrant or investigation, the complaint cannot be withdrawn by the petitioner and it is non-bailable."

Christina Hoff Sommers: Boys getting short shrift

anthony · 18 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

This recent article demonstrates Sommers continued devotion towards the empowerment of boys.

“Masculinity with morals is constructive,” Ms. Sommers averred. “Without morals it is dangerous. In the healthy form, boys are helpful, achieving and protective. They sublimate their aggression into sports and other activities. Efforts to make them more like girls with dolls won’t work.”

An 1881 Man-Positive Christmas Story

Luek · 19 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Here is a holiday story that shows how important fathers were and still are. Hope you enjoy it. Starts with:

1881 Christmas Story

Pa never had much compassion for the lazy or those who squandered their means and then never had enough for the necessities. But for those who were genuinely in need, his heart was as big as all outdoors. It was from him that I learned the greatest joy in life comes from giving, not from receiving.

NYTimes: 'Women in Science: The Battle Moves to the Trenches'

Matt · 20 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Smelling blood in the water, they close in for the kill. By 2030, I predict you will have a really hard time finding a male scientist anywhere in America who is not at least 50 years old.

Article here. Excerpt:

'Women do better, [Dr. Madeline Heilman] said, in environments where they are judged on grants obtained, prizes won, findings cited by other experts, or other explicit criteria, rather than on whether they are, say, “cutting edge.” “There has to be very little room for ambiguity,” Dr. Heilman said. “Otherwise, expectations swoop in to fill the vacuum.”'

Translation: Trucking grants and awards to women over men is what must be done in the name of their self-esteem and of course, "equality". Accomplishments be damned!

MSN: "Men's Guide to Lazy Online Holiday Planning", "27 Laws of Shopping for Women"

Celarnor · 20 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

MSN has done it again, ladies and gentlemen.

Ginger Crowel and Laurie Sandel (both of whom, not surprisingly, are women) churn out the usual misandrist literature over a holiday via MSN Lifestyle. While it is commendable for them to have a 'mens lifestyle' set of pages for men as they do for women, the content is less than reassuring. Assuming that all men do nothing but sit on the couch and watch football until the 23rd of December, we have been given the `Men's Guide to Lazy Online Holiday Shopping`, and assuming that we aren't capable of doing our own thinking, we have been given the ubiquitous `27 Laws of Shopping for Women`, including the natural 'men are dogs' reference:

'27. Perform due diligence. Next time your girlfriend is paging through a magazine, listen to her instead of nodding vacantly. Ask to see the item she's drooling over. Make a mental note. Fetch.'

FTA: "But let's be honest, that's a lot of work and you have football to watch, food to eat and buddies to hang with. Here's how to do it all without leaving the warm confines of your office. You can thank us later." Um, no, I'm not going to thank you later. I don't have football to watch. I don't have buddies to 'hang with'--I term I have almost never used in my life. I'm fairly confident that I can fit eating into my schedule. In fact, I've bought all my gifts long since, thank you very much.

Swedish paper: "Swedish women to overtake stupid men"

Anonymous · 20 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Swedish men are less intelligent, lonelier and fatter than their female counterparts. Boys have fallen way behind in school, and there are more women than men studying some traditionally male university subjects.'

Another Female Teacher Accused Of Sex With Male Student

anthony · 21 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A 32-year-old female teacher from Parker, Colo., has been arrested and accused of a sexual relationship with a male high school student on a football trip to Glenwood Springs, Colo."

"The arrest affidavit alleges that the assault happened in Esson's hotel room as her two young children and a teenage babysitter were asleep in the same room."

Teacher Twins Charged with Crimes Related to Sex with Student

Matt · 21 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The 26-year-old twins work as teachers at the same California high school. And they're both facing felony charges as a result of an illicit sexual relationship with a female student. According to Riverside County sheriff's investigators, Franca ... had a sexual relationship with the underage girl, for which she was arrested yesterday and charged with lewd acts with a minor. While Antonia was not hit with a sex crime, she was charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor because she was allegedly aware of her sister's involvement with the girl. As so-called mandatory reporters, California teachers are required by law to report instances of child abuse or neglect."

Coroner: East Bay Foster Mother Withheld Food As Discipline

anthony · 21 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Excerpt:
"A preliminary autopsy report on a 2-year-old Pittsburg child who died two weeks ago found that the girl's foster mother regularly withheld food and liquid as an ongoing form of discipline."

"Deonna Green, who would have turned three on Jan. 2, died from sodium bicarbonate intoxication from eating baking soda."

"Pittsburg police are investigating Green's death as a possible child neglect case."

Possible child neglect case??????

McElroy: Immunity May Not Protect Duke Prosecutor

anthony · 21 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Michael Nifong, the prosecutor handling the Duke lacrosse rape case, may single-handedly cause a reconsideration of ‘absolute prosecutorial immunity,’ the legal doctrine by which certain acts of a prosecuting attorney are literally immune from lawsuits or criminal charges."

"People have tried to have Nifong sanctioned on a state and local level. To date, the North Carolina State Bar Association has received at least 17 complaints about Nifong. Because such complaints become public only when copied to the governor or attorney general, there may be many more."

School accuses 5-YO boy of sexual harassment

Evil White Male... · 21 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Charles Vallance, the boy's father, said he was unable to explain to his son what he had done.

"He knows nothing about sex," Vallance said. "There's no way to explain what he's been written up for. He knows it as playing around. He doesn't know it as anything sexual at all."

The incident was described as "sexual harassment" on the school form.
...
The incident will be included in the boy's file while he remains at Lincolnshire, but Mowen said those files do not follow students when they move on to middle school.'

THIS ABOUT SUMS IT UP: Washington County Public Schools spokeswoman Carol Mowen described the incident as a "learning opportunity."

Ed. note: This is a different story than the one posted on Dec. 10 regarding the boy accused of "sexual harassment" for hugging a teacher's aide.

Update on Children-in-Bay Murders: Insanity Defense

Matt · 21 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Remember this one? "Mom" is pleading not guilty by reason of insanity. Not at all unexpected, but thought you would weant to see it. Story here.

Notice the article calls her "mentally ill". Notice all her victims were boys. Excerpt:

"SAN FRANCISCO, California (AP) -- A woman who claimed God ordered her to make a human sacrifice chose to kill her three children instead of herself, making her guilty of murder, a prosecutor said Wednesday during closing arguments at the woman's trial.

Prosecutor Linda Allen asked jurors to use their heads, not hearts, to determine Lashuan Harris' fate.

The mentally ill Oakland woman threw her children into San Francisco Bay last year but has pleaded not guilty to three counts of murder by reason of insanity.

Defense attorney Teresa Caffese said Harris believed completely that she was sending her children -- 6-year-old Trayshun Harris, 2-year-old Taronta Greeley, Jr., and 16-month-old Joshoa Greeley -- to heaven when she threw them over a railing and into the bay's cold waters."

NYTimes Editorial Sticks Up for Jailed Man

Matt · 21 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks to Marc A. for the heads-up on this editorial in the NY Times. Excerpt:

'The library in Georgia where Mr. Wilson works is in prison. He is two years into a sentence for engaging in consensual oral sex with a 15-year-old girl at a New Year's Eve party when he was 17. He won't be eligible for parole until he has served 10 years, essentially sacrificing his remaining youth to an obvious miscarriage of justice.

As Shaila Dewan reported in The Times this week, Mr. Wilson has been convicted of aggravated child molestation even though he and the girl were both minors at the time. Even if he could win an early release, Mr. Wilson could not go home to his family. He would have to register as a sex offender and would be prohibited from living with his 8-year-old sister. It is all the more disgraceful because the Georgia Supreme Court last week refused to hear his appeal.'

Back Issues of NCFM's "Transitions" now available online

MR · 22 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Back issues of The National Coalition of Free Men's periodic magazine, "Transitions" are now available online through the San Diego Men's Center.

Back Issues of Transitions Available Here

NCFM's "Transitions" has a number of articles, not available elsewhere, and some of the letters to the editor provide insight into problems facing men around the U.S., and around the world.

For those of you with a penchant for more news about men's issues, you should find the additional information of value.

Rape charges dropped in Duke case!

anthony · 22 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'DURHAM, N.C. - Prosecutors dropped rape charges Friday against three Duke University lacrosse players accused of attacking a stripper at a team party, a defense attorney said. Joseph Cheshire, an attorney for one of the three players, said charges of kidnapping and sexual offense remain in place.

District Attorney Mike Nifong did not immediately return calls seeking comment.'

NYTimes: "Gender Pay Gap, Once Narrowing, Is Stuck in Place"

anthony · 23 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

Another article about the refuted wage gap. Typical "cherry picked" statistics that continue to manipulate society. I must be fair, some opinions in this article are generally more fair than typical wage gap articles. Excerpt:

"There is no proof that discrimination is the cause of the remaining pay gap, Ms. Blau said. It is possible that the average man, brought up to view himself the main breadwinner, is more committed to his job than the average woman."

"The other view is that women consider money a top priority less often than men do. Many may relish the chance to care for children or parents and prefer jobs, like those in the nonprofit sector, that allow them to influence other people's lives."

Family of Finnerty (Duke LAX Player) has 'a lot to celebrate'

anthony · 23 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Finnerty said Collin, 20, had completed final exams this week at Hofstra, where he enrolled after leaving Duke."

"It's tough on him ... It's taken a year out of his life and keeps him out of school and off the lacrosse field, so it's very unfair. But he's hanging in there, working hard."

You might want to check the toys you get the kids "twice."

MR · 24 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This is not current events, but is still timely, "Seasonally Correct."
You might want to check the toys you get the kids "twice."

the Barbie Liberation Organization

BLO #1
"Teen Talk Barbie proved to be the final straw. People who were already upset at Barbie's anorexic figure and her way of turning play into superficial consumerism couldn't believe their ears when Barbie's electric voice box giggled:
"Math is hard!"
"I love shopping!"
"Will we ever have enough clothes?"

and

BLO #1

"Thus, it seems inevitable that a group of feminists, anti-war advocates and culture jammers should have hacked Barbie's voice box this past December. The Manhattan-based Barbie Liberation Organization claims to have performed corrective surgery on 300 Teen Talk Barbies and Talking Duke G.I. Joes---switching their sound chips, repackaging the toys, and returning them to store shelves. Consumers reported their amazement at hearing Barbie bellow, "Eat lead, Cobra!" or "Vengeance is mine!," while Joe chirped, "Will we ever have enough clothes?" and "Let's plan our dream wedding!" A spokesman for the BLO told the New York Times, "We are trying to make a statement about the way toys can encourage negative behavior in children, particularly given rising acts of violence and sexism."

HO, HO, HO - Merry Christmas to all and to all a "Good Night!"

Cops: Woman lied about sex assault

anthony · 24 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A 23-year old Newton woman was arrested Thursday morning and charged with making a false rape report to authorities."

"On Nov. 6, Sereca Thomas, 23, of Spring Street, told Newton Police she was attacked and sexually assaulted in the lower Spring Street area by Hispanic men late Nov. 3."

"Thomas was charged with a disorderly persons offense."

F.Y.I... A lower misdemeanor type criminal matter is under the "Disorderly Person" offense

Mother Faces Attempted Murder, Abuse Charges

anthony · 24 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A 32-year-old woman has been arrested on charges of first-degree attempted murder and child abuse after being accused of forcing her 10-month-old daughter to drink bleach."

"Liverine Cajuste told Winter Haven Police Department officers that she tried to kill herself and her daughter, Luciene Beawbrin, because she was depressed."

Sun-Times: "False rape allegation an affront to women"

anthony · 24 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"This is a betrayal. If this rape allegation was false, then it is the lowest thing a woman can do to other women."

"It's not just about the Duke case. It's about all the other cases involving a sports culture that objectifies women and rewards a ridiculous hubris and machismo."

"A real problem exists in this sports culture, and a false rape accusation in such a public case serves only to hurt the real victims everywhere else."

--

Ed. note: The author of the article can be reached at gcouch-at-suntimes.com.

Letters to the editor can be sent through this form.

Nifong in trouble! Misstatements may cost him his career

Anonymous · 24 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Special thanks to Joseph Neff and Benjamin Niolet, Staff Writers at the News and Observer for this article. Excerpt:

'DURHAM - To press forward in the Duke University lacrosse case, District Attorney Mike Nifong must rely on scanty evidence while deflecting serious questions about whether he broke the law or violated the ethics rules governing prosecutors.

Nifong has acknowledged that the case now hangs on what the accuser says from the witness stand in a hearing scheduled for February. Meanwhile, pressure on Nifong continues to build.'

Lesbian fire chief demoted amid allegations of sexual harassment

anthony · 24 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The nation's first openly lesbian big-city fire chief was demoted without severance pay Friday amid allegations of discrimination and sexual harassment."

"She will be completely and permanently stripped of ever holding leadership or management in the city," the mayor said. "She has been severely and significantly demoted, and her pay will be cut by $40,000."

Court jails two Kuwaiti women for rape

anthony · 24 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The two women were convicted of raping the man by forcing him to have sex against his will, Al-Rai newspaper said, without providing their names or that of their victim."

"They were also found guilty of beating the man, who filed a medical report to the court."

California Attorney General's wife takes over as head of "Family Justice Center"

Anonymous · 25 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Nadia Lockyer, the wife of outgoing California Attorney General Bill Lockyer, has just taken over as Executive Director of the Alameda County Family Justice Center in Oakland California. Please take a look at this brochure (.pdf file).

For those of you who do not know, the "Family Justice" centers are one stop shopping for people who allege domestic violence. But though by law they have to be gender neutral, they are being funded by grants from the US Department of Justice "Office on Violence Against Women" -- the OVW.

At the centers, women who claim to have been abused get free legal help, not just counseling with prosecutors, but child custody, divorce, and even immigration lawyers. Under a special loophole in the immigration laws, if a woman comes here on a marriage visa, and breaks up with her husband quickly, but alleges domestic violence, she can apply for a special visa and gain permanent entry to the United States.

In Oakland, there are many, many activists in "domestic violence" and a local law firm, the Family Violence Law Center, has been able essentially to act as a surrogate for the prosecutor's office. Under some judges, there was no pretense of impartiality, the FVLC lawyers got many special privileges and status.

All these unfair practices have become increasingly mainstream, as many men well know. The most prominent example of this is the Family Justice Center, with big Federal funding, and the Attorney General's wife jumping on the bandwagon.

The only good news is, as a political opportunist, she may not be a man hating zealot like those who came before her.

It seems likely Bill Lockyer has violated state laws against elected officials using their influence to enrich their spouses. The wife is definitely under-qualified for the job, which pays $90,000 per year. Furthermore, the job used to pay $65,000 but the pay got upped another $25,000 after the wife got the job. According to FJC staff, they, "found some more money".

The zealots losing out to outsiders might have some good effects, but on the other hand, the fact that there is this much money and prestige in these phony organizations can not be a good thing.

Godfather of Soul Gets Last Laugh

Roy · 26 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

James Brown must be doing a soulful dance in heaven knowing that his bitch-wife #4 (who 911-d him with DV allegations) is learning how to sing the lyrics of his first hit song -- "Please,please, please!"

Article excerpt: "James Brown's widow said Monday she was denied access to the home she shared with the singer and their 5-year-old son, claiming the gate was padlocked at the request of Brown's lawyer and accountant. Tomi Rae Brown, 36, who was one of James Brown's backup singers, said she was at a retreat when her 73-year-old husband died shortly after he was hospitalized in Atlanta. "The last thing he said to me was, 'I love you baby and I'll see you soon,'" she told The Augusta Chronicle."

Wanted: Presidential Pardon For H. Beatty Chadwick

Anonymous · 26 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Since this is the season for Presidential pardons how about one for H. Beatty Chadwick? He has been in jail for 11 years now for contempt because some misandric tyrant in a black robe thinks he is holding out on assets in his long ago divorce case.

Link here.

Susan Estrich pretends only men rape men

Anonymous · 26 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

This op-ed purports to defend male rape victims, but Susan Estrich's feminist bias eventually emerges when she says things like, "boys need to be taught that it isn't their fault if a man rapes you," and also where she suggests that men's reluctance to report rape stems from "male ego."

Estrich also doesn't call it "female ego" when women are reluctant to report rape. Somehow that's only when it's a male. And she completely ignores female perpetrators, of course. She is certainly familiar with all the statutory rape being committed by female teachers. And women do forcefully rape men, especially physically or mentally disabled men, young boys, etc. One such case was just posted on this site, in which two Kuwaiti women were sentenced to 7 years in jail for kidnapping, beating and forcefully raping a man.

And at about this time last year, an HIV-positive woman was arrested for allegedly forcing herself sexually onto a 12-year-old boy in Arkansas.

According to Australia's Personal Safety Survey, among males who experienced sexual assault since the age of 15, 63.9% were assaulted by a female in the most recent incident.

Even in the prison context, where the vast majority of rape victims are men, 2/3 of inappropriate sexual contact with prisoners in the U.S. is committed by female guards, according to the U.S. Bureau of Justice Statistics.

As usual, when feminists tell the story, it comes out half-baked and dripping with misandry.

Apply to Do a Workshop at N.O.W. National '07!

Roy · 27 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Link here:

NOW invites all NOW members and INTERESTED PERSONS to submit a workshop proposal for the 2007 National Conference. We will be gathering in Dearborn, Michigan at the Hyatt Regency Hotel, July 13-15, 2007.

Proposals will be reviewed and accepted if they are timely, inclusive and directly related to NOW's feminist issues...

Panelists and topics should reflect DIVERSE populations and perspectives and each workshop should incorporate the following components if possible:

A. The nuts and bolts of the issue/topic from a FEMINIST perspective - with a focus on current policy discussions or skill building."

Interesting that the instructions state a need to reflect “diversity" ... from a "feminist perspective”!

Anybody want to propose a workshop on “Why N.O.W. Is Then?”

As in O-V-E-R? (The average age of a N.O.W. member is a big secret, because they have almost ZERO members under age 50!)

Duke Lacrosse Players seek federal intervention

Anonymous · 27 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Lawyers for the three railroaded Duke Lacrosse Players have sought federal intervention from the U.S. Attorney General. They have clearly demonstrated that their civil rights have been violated and that a higher branch of government must step in to protect it's citizens from out an of control local government. I can't help but wonder if this is history in the making? Perhaps we as MRAs will look back on these events as the beginning of our own revolution which has been so long in the making?

Germany: Woman fakes kidnapping to avoid work

anthony · 27 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A 21-year-old German woman who did not feel like going to work at a fast food restaurant sent her parents a text message saying she had been kidnapped.

Police in the Bavarian town of Straubing said Wednesday they had launched a massive search throughout the region for the woman who disappeared on December 23 but turned up unscathed the following morning, saying the kidnapper had set her free.'

Media Ban in Campione Case

Anonymous · 27 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

The wording in this article is very vague -- probably because of the media ban that has been put into effect.

Was Elaine Campione charged with murdering another one of her children before the two more recent murders that landed her in jail? Excerpt:

'A woman charged with murdering her newborn baby has regained the right to spend time with the child's surviving twin.

"The baby's father is devastated," the man's Toronto lawyer, Irving Solnik, said yesterday.'

RADAR ALERT: 2006: It was an Amazing Year!

Matt · 27 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

In 2006, RADAR greatly expanded its activities over the previous year, continuing to monitor for media bias and promoting advocacy efforts from the local level all the way to the United Nations. RADAR also maintained an active presence in the U.S House of Representatives and Senate.

During the year, RADAR issued 44 Alerts, 15 press releases, 8 Special Reports, and organized 3 major campaigns. In the process, an estimated 20 million learned the truth of domestic violence and how the Violence Against Women Act violates civil liberties.

RADAR also spearheaded a national consortium of concerned groups, the VAWA Reform Coalition, which grew to 62 affiliates by year end.

Passage of the Violence Against Women Act

On January 5, President Bush signed into law the 2005 Violence Against Women Act. The law contained the following non-exclusionary wording in Section 40002(b)(8):

"Nothing in this title shall be construed to prohibit male victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking from receiving benefits and services under this title."

Although the wording is weak and does not outline penalties for violation, it is better language than the previous law, which included no statement about male victims.

Media Efforts

In addition to the 15 press releases, RADAR issued Alerts regarding biased media coverage in The Oklahoman (Jan. 22), Contra Costa Times (May 21), Newsweek (Oct. 2), and the Washington Times (Nov. 13 and 27).

Public Broadcasting Service

Following numerous complaints generated by RADAR and other groups in 2005, PBS aired its long-awaited follow-up program, Kids & Divorce: For Better or Worse, in November 2006. The focus of the show was the effects of divorce on children, not domestic violence. Still, the program was seen as far more balanced than the earlier "Breaking the Silence" program.

Washington Times

As a result of thousands of complaints regarding a defamatory statement about husbands in India, the Washington Times issued this retraction on November 28:

“Using a chart published in a 2005 U.N. Population Fund report – which the UN agency now says was misleading – a London Daily Telegraph article published in Nov. 13 editions of The Washington Times incorrectly stated the frequencies of wife abuse in India. The agency says that it does not have sufficient data to provide such a figure and that the chart was intended to show that 70 percent of Indian women who were abused by their husbands think such abuse is justified in at least some circumstances.” (http://washingtontimes.com/corrections/20061128-102228-2806r.htm)

Campaigns

RADAR coordinated three large-scale campaigns in 2006, two focused in the United States and a third that was international in scope.

1. VAWA Civil Rights Awareness Campaign, March 20 – April 28
   RADAR organized a campaign designed to increase the awareness of the public and lawmakers about the civil rights abuses caused by VAWA. The centerpiece of the campaign was the release of 5 Special Reports:

a. VAWA: Threat to Families, Children, Men, and Women (http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Threat-to-Families.pdf)
b. Without Restraint: The Use and Abuse of Domestic Restraining Orders (http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Restraining-Orders.pdf)
c. VAWA Programs Discriminate Against Male Victims (http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Discriminates-Against-Males.pdf)
d. Justice Denied: Arrest Policies for Domestic Violence (http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/Justice-Denied-DV-Arrest-Policies.pdf)
e. Bias in the Judiciary: The Case of Domestic Violence (http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/Bias-In-The-Judiciary.pdf)

On April 27 a caller on the Sean Hannity radio show discussed the problems of VAWA, reaching 10 million listeners. For more information, see: http://www.mediaradar.org/accomplishments2006SpringCampaign.php.

2. Truth and Consequences Campaign, June 19 – November 17
RADAR organized a 21-week campaign designed to educate candidates, the media, and others about VAWA. The campaign featured 3 Special Reports that examined state-level domestic violence laws:

a. Expanding Definitions of Domestic Violence, Vanishing Rule of Law (http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/Vanishing-Rule-of-Law.pdf)
b. Perverse Incentives, False Allegations, and Forgotten Children (http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/Perverse-Incentives.pdf)
c. An Epidemic of Civil Rights Abuses: Ranking of States' Domestic Violence Laws (http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/Ranking-of-States-DV-Laws.pdf)

This campaign resulted in at least 3 newspaper interviews, 2 radio interviews, 3 editorials, and 3 letters to the editor. An estimated 2 million persons were reached. During the campaign, the resolution co-signers constituted themselves into the VAWA Reform Coalition, and by the end of the campaign the number of affiliates in the Coalition had reached 62: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Resolution.pdf.

After the campaign, the Vallejo Times Herald (CA) ran a lengthy article, "Domestic Abuse: Does Money Fuel False Allegations?" that highlighted how open-ended definitions and incentives lead to false allegations and unnecessary restraining orders: http://www.timesheraldonline.com/ci_4857258.

For more information on this campaign, see: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/TandC-Accomplishments.pdf.

3. UN Secretary-General's Study on Violence Against Women
In October, UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan released his long-awaited Study on Violence Against Women. In response to intensive efforts, 117 organizations in 14 countries signed a Resolution criticizing the report: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/UN-ViolenceReport-Resolution.pdf.

Five Alerts were issued and 4 editorials published. An estimated 30,000 e-mails were sent to Ambassador John Bolton. As a result, the UN Third Committee only "noted" the report, which is the diplomatic equivalent of disapproving a document.

Other Advocacy Efforts

Alerts were also directed to Roger Williams University (Feb. 12), the American Association for Retired Persons (Feb. 26), and the Department of Health and Human Services (Dec. 11). On October 16, an Alert was released to thank President Bush for including male victims in his annual proclamation for Domestic Violence Awareness Month.

In conclusion, RADAR acknowledges the hard work of thousands of men and women around the country who worked to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner.

++++++

It's Rape if the Woman is Drunk

AngryMan · 28 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

UK: Men face being charged with rape if they have sex with women who are drunk.

The proposal, contained in a Home Office report, is being considered by ministers in a bid to boost conviction rates for sex offences and bring more “date rapists” to justice.

The new law would mean a woman judged to be drunk at the time of having sex would be deemed incapable of giving her consent. That would potentially open the way for the prosecution of thousands of men for having sex with drunk women — regardless of whether agreement had been given at the time.

Time to emigrate, guys.

Police: Woman kills husband while he sleeps

anthony · 28 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"On Monday, the morning following the confrontation, Kathy Ward got a gun out of her car, went back inside and shot her husband while he slept, the documents allege."

"Kathy Jo Ward, 36, was being held without bond today in the Madison County Jail. A not guilty plea was entered on her behalf Friday by a county magistrate."

Mother pleads guilty to second-degree murder

anthony · 28 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Freeman and a defense attorney told the judge Branin suffered a syndrome, called Munchausen by proxy, which causes parents to manufacture illnesses for their children to win sympathy and attention"

"Amber Branin was sentenced to nearly eight years in prison for her daughter Reagan's death. The girl was suffocated last year, Assistant District Attorney Beth Freeman said."

Lawyers for female teacher accused of sex with student set out detailed rebuttal

anthony · 28 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Lawyers for a Trimble High School teacher fired for alleged sexual misconduct have filed a lengthy defense of the woman, in an appeal that's pending in Athens County Common Pleas Court."

"Stephanie Evans, 25, has asked the court to order the Trimble Local School Board to reinstate her with back pay, and to expunge records of a disciplinary hearing."

"In a motion earlier this month, Evans' attorneys repeated her denials that she had sex with a male high-school student, and pointed out that Evans got "glowing" evaluations during her one year of teaching."

Nifong Faces Formal Bar Ethics Complaint

Matt · 29 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Well, well, well, chickens finally home to roost in an official way for ol' Mikey. Guess he figured this case would be an easy way to win hearts and minds, get an easy sweep back into office, and maybe, who knows, on to bigger and better!

Guess he was wrong.

Story here. Excerpt:

'RALEIGH, North Carolina (CNN) -- The prosecutor in the Duke University lacrosse rape case violated ethics standards in statements to the media about the case, North Carolina's bar complained Thursday.

...

A 17-page complaint to the bar's Disciplinary Hearing Commission accuses Durham County District Attorney Michael Nifong of telling reporters that the Duke players were refusing to cooperate with the investigation and that the players were refusing to make statements to local law enforcement authorities. It also says he improperly commented on tests involved in the investigation.'

Woman Charged With Malicious Castration

Evil White Male... · 30 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman was charged with malicious castration for allegedly attacking a man during a Christmas party, police said. Rebecca Arnold Dawson, 34, is accused of grabbing the genitals of a 38-year-old man during a fight that erupted early Tuesday morning at a party hosted by the man's girlfriend. All three were heavily intoxicated, Lillington Police Chief Frank Powers said.

Dawson, who was released from jail Wednesday on $50,000 bond, also was charged with assault causing serious bodily injury, malicious conduct by a prisoner, and damage to government property for damaging a police cruiser. She also allegedly spit on an officer, Stevens said.'

YOU HAVE TO LOVE THIS: I WAS JAILED FOR FOUR DAYS AND A $200,000 BOND FOR A FALSE RAPE ACCUSATION. BUT I GUESS WE SHOULD BE HAPPY THIS DIDN'T TAKE PLACE IN THE UK, AS SHE PROBABLY WOULD HAVE GOTTEN OFF BECAUSE SHE WAS DRUNK AND WAS UNABLE TO TAKE RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE CRIME...

Statement by Doctors Opposing Circumcision re HIV Prevention

anthony · 31 December 2006 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Circumcision practices are largely culturally determined and as a result there are strong beliefs and opinions surrounding its practice. It is important to acknowledge that researchers' personal biases and the dominant circumcision practices of their respective countries may influence their interpretation of findings."

South Africa: Oprah Builds $40 million school- just for girls

anthony · 1 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

I'm not certain Oprah is a true humanitarian. While this school is certainly beneficial for girls, she has seemingly ignored the educational needs of boys. While the girls attend schools in an ultra modern facility, the boys will continue their education under third world conditions. I believe Oprah deserves much critisim for her decision to blatantly ignore boys, yet she is such a powerfull media figure, I fear her neglecting young boys will go virtually un-noticed. The woman she be exposed as a hypocrite. Excerpt:

'The tough talk comes as the famously philanthropic Winfrey unveils her Oprah Winfrey Leadership Academy for Girls in South Africa - a sprawling, 28-building complex for impoverished teens that features a yoga studio and beauty salon, among other luxuries.
...
Winfrey handpicked the 152 girls who will attend out of an application pool of more than 3,500. Winfrey has also supplied millions of dollars to educate needy children in the U.S. through the Oprah Winfrey Scholars program.'

--

Ed. note: Story covered more fully here.

India: Mother "slits" 5-YO daughter's throat

anthony · 1 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"In a bizarre incident, a woman killed her five-year-old daughter by sliting her throat with a sharp weapon, in the Kuli Bazar locality of Kanpur early on Sunday morning, all out of pique."

"Her daughter, Al Shifa's fault: She informed her grandparents that her mother, Bismillah Jahan, pushed her cousin from the roof of the house in order to kill him. However, the kid got entangled in ropes and fell on a dog, thus escaping critical injuries."

Duke Prosecutor's Fourth Victim: the Accuser???

anthony · 2 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"The fourth victim is unlikely to be so lucky; she will not be exonerated at trial, and she will not be able to move on with her life. She will be destroyed by this case, and while she is partly to blame for that herself, the other part of the blame rests squarely on Mike Nifong's shoulders."

"The defense attorneys will obliterate her, permanently painting her as the worst sort of nut and slut. We will not hate the boys, we will hate her."

Three-YO Son Wandering on Freeway, Daughter Eating Spaghetti on Filthy Floor

anthony · 2 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Drivers swerved their cars and trucks into other lanes to avoid a 3-year-old boy, wearing only a diaper and T-shirt, who was playing along a busy highway after wandering away from home while his mother slept, police said."

"Police said they traced the boy to an apartment at a nearby complex, where they found his mother, Nancy Dyer, asleep in a filthy apartment and his 2-year-old sister eating spaghetti off the floor. Dyer, 33, was arrested on two counts of child neglect and remained in custody Sunday, officials said."

Mean Girls Run Amok

digitalhermit · 3 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In this story we clearly see what happens to young women when they are not provided with proper boundaries by those who are supposedly in authority over them. This is an excellent microcosm of what is happening in society at large:

...according to the report. When one teacher told a squad member to quit chatting on her cell phone in class, the girl replied, "Shut up, I'm talking to my Mom." On a separate occasion, she offered this response to the teacher's reprimand: "Pull your panties out of a wad." "Gang members were nothing compared to these girls," the teacher told Jones. "They believe they cannot be touched."

But there's an added wrinkle to their tale: the Fab Five's alleged ringleader was the daughter of McKinney North's principal, Linda Theret. Amid charges that Theret gave the girls preferential treatment, the school district launched a $40,000 investigation conducted by Jones in the fall. His 70-page report, which harshly criticized Theret and assistant principal Richard Brunner, helped prompt Theret's resignation on Dec. 21 ... "Sadly, in this saga, I was struck by the reticence of many adults to accept the role of 'being the grown-up'."

Domestic Violence Is OK In Japan, As Long As The Victim Is Male

Anonymous · 3 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Or so it would seem, reading this misandric article about Japanese wives beating their husbands when they don't get their way.

Notice that the article concludes by blaming everyone but violent women for women's violence. Notice also the statement of statistics which claim women are almost twice as likely to be assaulted, right after the article points out that men are far less likely to report being beaten, i.e. the usual feminist smoke-screen.

As long as society continues to give violent women gold stars for their behavior, they will continue to be violent, and male victims of domestic violence will continue to be marginalized, thanks to sexist fools like the ones who wrote and published that article at MSN.

UK Times: Why getting hitched is the real hitch for women

Anonymous · 3 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"For those who like to begin every new year with predictions of the end of civilisation as we know it, here's a cracker: married women are officially in the minority for the first time."

[...]

"The change, without doubt, is on the part of women rather than attributable to any increased reluctance among men — as evidenced by yet more figures from the Office for National Statistics, showing that men who divorce are far more likely to give marriage another shot, while divorced women, once bitten, are twice shy of committing again."

[...]

Another selling point was protection: the wide-shouldered, steely-jawed, testosterone-fuelled barrier between a woman and harm's way. Today, if we are to believe research from some women's organisations, a quarter of wives will suffer at the hands of the protector himself.

[...]

And then, of course, there is the matter of money. Once, all manner of misfortune seemed a fair swap for the working man's wages that would compensate in measures of warm roofs and full stomachs. Now, at one end of the financial scale, we have women forlornly chasing the price of a hot meal from the Child Support Agency — or whichever phoenix is next planned to rise from its discredited ashes — while slowly realising that if they had remained single and on state benefit in the first place, life would be greatly eased.

Duke Invites Back LAX Players

Matt · 3 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I wouldn't blame them for not accepting this "invitation". I wonder if it comes with a paid scholarship and public apology from the president/chancellor? Story here. Excerpt:

'RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) -- Duke University has invited two of the lacrosse players accused of sexual assault to return to school as students in good standing, a defense attorney said Wednesday.

Collin Finnerty and Reade Seligmann had been barred from attending class during the fall semester while their case made its way through court. The third player charged in the case, Dave Evans, graduated in May, the day before he was charged with raping a stripper at a team party in March.'

Womensinfidelity.com Covers the Issue

Matt · 4 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks to nbdspcl for mentioning http://womensinfidelity.com/ in a comment in a recent post. I have never seen the issue addressed seriously like this anywhere else. Anyone read the book? Don't forget to read some of the posts on their message board. Anyone doubting this issue is real, just put on your reading glasses.

My own take on this issue is that marital/LTR infidelity has been with us since the dawn of humanity. It will always be with us, for many reasons. I am making this post not to be picking on women as a group on this topic, as infidelity is an equal opportunity employer! I am pointing the site out because too many people think that 'tis only men (or largely only men) who do not keep faithful to partners when infidelity exists, and this just ain't true!

MGM-fest in Africa Begins

Matt · 4 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Seems they couldn't wait to get chopping... story here. Excerpt:

'Growing numbers of Ugandan men are being circumcised, after medical research showed it could halve the HIV infection rate among heterosexual men.

A Ugandan paper reports that last year of 2,500 people circumcised at various clinics, half of them were male adults, compared to less than 400 in 2005.'

Suppose if some UN study concluded that FGM reduced the spread of HIV, there'd be extra clinic hours open for that, too? Would there ever be such a study? Answers: No and no.

Dont-marry.com Up and Running

Anonymous · 4 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The original dontmarry.com website, which failed due to various DOS and TOS attacks, is back up at:

www.dont-marry.com
www.dont-getmarried.com www.dontgethitched.com

Regards,
Lee Raconteur

SAFE (Stop Abuse For Everyone) International Newsletter Available

Anonymous · 4 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

If you would like the Premier Edition, end of the year "wrap up", please visit this link and request a copy or go to http://www.safe4all.org/ to download a copy from the SAFE website.

Let's hope for a productive New Year!

Lee Newman
Executive Director, SAFE International
Director, SAFE-NH

Duke lacrosse player files suit against university

Anonymous · 5 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The great part about this is that it's not even one of the three, "accused". Just wait until THEY file suit. Duke University is in deep trouble and deservedly so... story here. Excerpt:

'(01/04/07 -- DURHAM) - A former Duke Lacrosse player has filed a lawsuit against the University saying he was failed by an professor because of his membership on the lacrosse team.

Kyle Dowd filed the lawsuit Thursday against against Duke University and visiting associate professor Kim Curtis. Dowd, who graduated with David Evans in May 2006, was not indicted in the rape case but says that Professor Curtis gave him and another lacrosse player in class a failing grade in class as a form of retaliation after the Duke Lacrosse scandal broke. The two players were apparently receiving passing grades until the scandal, and Duke University revised their grades upward months after graduation.'

Ready Yourselves for the Nancy & Louise Show

Matt · 5 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Well someone has to say something about this 800-lb. gorilla in the room...

Unless you have been without modern communications of any kind for the past several months it will be no news to you that Nancy Pelosi was elected Speaker of the House of Representatives yesterday.

Those who read MANN with a less-than-sympathetic eye to MRAs may be quick to assume that the objection most MRAs have to Pelosi's ascension to the Speakership is that she is a woman. The problem is not that she is a woman; it is that she is a feminist. She and fellow travelers (such as Lousie Slaughter) are now in a position to pursue long-desired legislative agendas that are not likely to be in the interests of men and particularly, men-as-fathers.

There is a lot to do for this Congress, and a lot of internal fighting and struggle is likely to be the hallmark of the next two years (at least) of Congressional life, so what they can and can't get done remains to be seen. Nonetheless, it behooves MRAs to keep a close eye on the legislative pipeline in this Congress, particularly as it affects the issues we hold as being most critical to the rights and well-being of boys and men.

V8 Drink Commercial Demeans Men

mens_issues · 7 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This morning I woke up and listened to the news on the radio. After this, the usual annoying commercials came on. I was appalled to hear the latest one for V8 vegetable juice.

This radio commercial starts with a husband and wife apparently in some sort of courtroom. An incident is recalled where the wife couldn't get the husband to eat healthy, or to eat vegetables or drink V8, so the wife bopped the husband on the forehead.

This is accompanied by a comical "bop" sound used in previous V8 commercials - except that in those the person who "could have had a V8" slaps themselves on the forehead. The female judge then asks the husband what vegetables he has had recently, and he replies “Oysters." The judge then asks the man to approach, which is followed by the sound of her bopping the man on the forehead, and the comment "You could have had a V8!"

Ha ha, very funny (not).

The silly thing is that I, for one, already eat healthy foods and have been buying a large size V8 once a week. Unless the commercial is retracted, I will find another brand of vegetable juice to purchase in the future.

You can let V8 know what you think of their commercial here.

Steve

Ed. note: Anyone who can provide specific time and radio station information for the airing of this ad any time they have heard it, please post. It makes registering the complaint more effective.

RADAR ALERT: ABC Primetime Awarded "RADAR Accuracy In Journalism" Award

Matt · 7 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

ABC's News Show "Primetime" has been awarded a "RADAR Accuracy In Journalism" award for its December 26th, 2006 story Turning the Tables: How Do People React When There's Abuse in Public, But the Gender Roles Are Reversed.

The story took a look at what happens when women abuse men. A video segment consisting of two trained actors in a city park was filmed to document public reactions to female-on-male violence. Reactions by the public were limited to the extremes. 163 passers-by were indifferent. Four women sent an emissary to talk with them, but left after the actress said, "This is not your business". However, one of the women did report it to 911. In contrast, another woman made a fist as she walked by, muttering, "Good for you. You go, girl!" (See video here).

This story documents our biases about domestic violence. According to Carrie Keating, a psychology professor at Colgate University, women assaulting or abusing male partners "is a big problem in this country". Our cultural biases exist predominantly because few media outlets have addressed the issue neutrally.

While the CDC estimates there are more than 800,000 serious cases of female-perpetrated abuse annually, this figure is known to be low. Men often do not report abuse, and few hotlines accept or assist men even if they attempt to seek assistance.

America's failure to address domestic violence, regardless of the perpetrator, is damaging to family and society.

Please take a few moments to send a message to ABC Primetime at abc.news.magazines-at-abc.com, thanking them for their work. Sample note:

Dear Primetime,

I thank you for showing the truth about domestic violence in your documentary story "Turning the Tables: How Do People React When There's Abuse in Public, But the Gender Roles Are Reversed".

Please keep up the good work. Without change, social policy and law enforcement methods will continue hurting America's families and children.

Sincerely,
[Your Name]

++
Date of RADAR Release: January 8, 2007

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Barbados: One-third of 'dads' not real fathers

Anonymous · 8 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"NEARLY ONE-THIRD of the time, the man identified as the father of a child is really not.

According to findings being recorded at ChemScreen Laboratory Services Incorporated each month, in 31 per cent of the cases where the man has been named as father, he is not.

An average of eight to ten queries regarding fatherhood are made each month.

Manager of the lab, Tricia Boyce, who said it had been open "four to five years", added there were "a lot of people" unsure who the father of a baby was.

However, she said, what was interesting was that all the men seeking paternity tests were anxious that the result showed that they were indeed the child's father.

"Some of these men have built up a relationship with the child and may not want to do it, but still need to be sure," she said."

F4J: Judge targeted as fathers start new campaign

Anonymous · 8 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A SENIOR judge from a village near Melksham has been singled out by the pressure group Fathers 4 Justice in a campaign targeting judges they believe are treating dads unfairly.

The Judgebuster Campaign has singled out 10 judges who they label as Britain's worst judicial offenders'.

Their personal details, including addresses, have been published on the internet."

Toronto Star: Time to let dads in

Anonymous · 8 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.. Excerpt:

Fathers from all backgrounds want to help raise their children, and great programs show them how, writes Andrea Gordon

...

"Every week, dads in their teens and early 20s meet for an evening to shoot some hoops or play floor hockey, hare a meal and talk about what's going on in their lives.

For Billey and his children, the benefits of a father support network are huge. It's provided companionship, a chance to blow off steam through sports, and valuable advice.

This wouldn't surprise Ed Bader of Thornhill. The retired family therapist, former priest and grandfather was something of a pioneer in the [Greater Toronto Area] in promoting the father's role. In 1999, he launched Focus on Fathers, which offers free courses in York Region for new dads and immigrant fathers and, this year, teenage fathers. He says modern fathers are "negotiating new turf," often without role models. So mutual support is critical."

NYTimes: The Dems are in fact "too macho"

Matt · 8 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

On the heels of cartwheel celebrations over the ascension of Speaker Pelosi comes this latest from the NY Times, via a New Republic senior editor, castigating the Dems for being "too macho".

I don't recall the The Times or TNR castigating them for being "too fem" a few years back.

Politics makes for strange bedfellows; it also makes for some pretty bizarre editorials, too, especially when it's that peculiar brand known as "gender politics". In the mean time, issues get lost in the shuffle and other issues (eg: father's and men's rights) never get a chance to make it to the stage. Bread and circuses!

Myriam Bédard Case in Canada

Anonymous · 8 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

There is an interesting case in Canada with a former Olympic gold medalist who has been acting strange lately, and who is now charged with an abduction related to violating her ex-husband's visiting arrangements, a story which has pretty much gone under the radar in the US, while it's front page news here in Canada.

The whole story is a little convoluted, but I will try to summarize. Myriam Bédard came back a Canadian Hero after winning two gold medals in the 1994 Winter Olympics, and has been in the Canadian media off and on ever since. She had one daughter with her ex-husband, Jean Paquet. They divorced and she married a man from Iran. About two years ago, she was involved in a government scandal: last summer, her new husband, an artist, was accused of theft of paintings. There had been lots of reports in French media particularly (see http://www.radio-canada.ca/nouvelles/ and do a search for "BEDARD", if you can speak French), that she had been acting strangely, and wrote to all kinds of people (our prime minister, the US Ambassador to Canada, and to Kofi Annan and all the people of Earth) about suffering from "political terrorism", and threatened to go to the States to defend herself. Her parents and most of her family are now estranged, including her ex-husband. Her mother has said that her new husband has "destroyed" her daughter.

She left Quebec for the States in October 2006 with her husband and 12-year-old daughther. The girl's father only had 2 or 3 phone calls with her, which lasted less than 1 minute each, and which were mysteriously cut short. Myriam's family had said that the situation was clearly "not normal". The father filed charges on the basis that she violated visitation agreements, having not had any contact with his daughter in three weeks, and Myriam Bédard was arrested near Baltimore shortly before Christmas, around December 23rd.

What is strange, in my opinion, is that her lawyers are saying that the girl's father has not been consistent with visitation agreements, and never said that he wanted a visit with his daughter during the holidays and that the mother let everyone know that she was going to the States, even advising the prime-minister. He may be referring to her strange letter that was also addressed to Kofi Annan and all the citizens of Earth. It was also suggested that the father is often out of the country for work reasons.

The father, on the other hand, says that he has had virtually no contact with his daughter since October, he was not told where she was, and that he was concerned that his daughter had been pulled out of school since October, and that he had not seen her in two and a half momths. He waited a few weeks to see if the situation would resolve itself. The daughter stayed with her maternal grandmother, who is still on good terms with the father, and moved back with her father shortly around Christmas.

Myriam Bédard's American lawyers have said that she urgently had to see her daughter, as her daughter was not eating or bathing, in a show of solidarity with her mother, by imposing similar jail conditions onto herself; but, the mother's own sister and mother have said that this was not true, and that Maude, the daughter, was doing fine.

I think that the toughest thing that will have to be dealt with is taking her daughter out of school for two and a half months... how do you explain that? Who knows how long it would have been before she came back of her own free will?

Anyway, a REALLY strange case all-around with many elements: seemingly disturbed mother, hints of a manipulative new husband, political overtones, father being excluded from picture, etc... Myriam Bédard is supposed to appear in Court in Quebec City on Friday. Much more to come I'm sure!

Here is a link to the latest article, which also links to earlier reports and video.

Colorado: "Ladies' nights" held as discriminatory

Martian Bachelor · 8 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The Rocky Mountain News reports a crusader against ladies nights has won in a civil rights complaint against a Denver nightclub. However, the report says "state officials said rulings regarding discrimination in public accommodations apply only to the target of the complaint, not to all similar businesses."

Krights Special Video Report: Legal Requirement to Create NCPs Illegal and Immoral

Matt · 9 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

And The Truth Continues..

"The Creation Of A Sub Class Of American Citizens With A Diminished Access To Rights Equal To All Americans Through An Instrument Of The Court Is Unconstitutional and Illegal."

-- Richar' Farr, 2007

The Law: USC. 42 Chapter 7 Sub Chapter IV Part D 666 requires each state court in a divorce to create a non-custodial parent and place unequal duties upon this citizen. This is discrimination, This is Illegal, This Argument is enforceable.

Krights Special Video Report "Illegal and Immoral" - Tuesday January 9 - On The Krights Video Channel!

All the news for non-custodial parents and their families.

Army widow charged with murdering husband for money

Matt · 9 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

She couldn't wait, it seems, to get rid of the poor guy so she could have a nice little party for herself. What do you suppose the spin will be, she was abused? Or perhaps, negelected? Or just plain so overcome with grief, she couldn't think straight-- for weeks on end.

Story here. Keep a barf bucket handy.

Mother Murders Children, Brutally Assaults her Father

Matt · 9 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"ATLANTA, Georgia (AP) -- A woman charged with stabbing her two young children to death and severely beating her father was arrested in Atlanta early Tuesday, nearly a week after the attack, authorities said.

Police had been looking for Felicia Williams since Wednesday, when officers following a 911 call found the bodies of her children, Elexis Nicole Hill, 9, and James Ross Hill, 4, in her parent's home in Bethlehem, a tiny town in northeast Georgia. Williams' father was found injured in the home, authorities said."

PBS's "Breaking the Silence" Producers Forced to Apologize

Matt · 9 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This is good news, via Glenn Sacks' Jan. 9, 2007 e-Newsletter. The producers of "Breaking the Silence" have apologized for their misstatements. It takes them some time but at the end of the letter, they finally get to it, as follows:

"It was never our intent to accuse Dr. Loeliger of physically abusing his daughter or to create harm to his daughter. Although we believe that most viewers understand this, we sincerely regret if some viewers drew an inference from the film that we did not intend and do not endorse."

This is a victory-- but personally, I'd rather see this letter plus a full and public retraction of their anti-male/father biases (preferably on national TV and billboards all across America), with a full admission that they understand the whole truth about domestic violence and the rates of battery among all classes of people who live together.

Well, a fellow can dream, can't he?

SF Bay mother convicted of assault... acquitted of 1st degree murder

anthony · 10 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman who pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity after throwing her three children into San Francisco Bay was acquitted Tuesday of first-degree murder but convicted of assault.

Tuesday's verdicts, which came after seven days of deliberation, do not make any conclusions about the woman's sanity. After determining her guilt, jurors will then decide whether she was legally sane at the time of the deaths."

Here is one to watch - Star Athlete files DV claims in divorce papers oregon dad · 10 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

The article states that the woman threw things, name-called, displayed outbursts in front of kids, spends lavishly, and is abusive. Excerpt:

'NEW YORK — Hoops superstar Jason Kidd yesterday slapped his knockout wife with shocking divorce papers - claiming he's an abused spouse.

The New Jersey Nets' All-Star point guard - once busted for allegedly hitting his sexy bride, Joumana, in the face over a french fry - charges in the explosive court document that she has been punching, kicking and throwing "household objects" at him virtually since their wedding day in 1997.

"The defendant's behavior has left the plaintiff concerned for his well-being," say the sensational papers, filed in Bergen County Superior Court in Hackensack.'

37% of births in U.S. to unwed mothers

Anonymous · 10 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Preaching to the choir... article here. Excerpt:

"Never have fathers seemed so disposable, or so overlooked. A report out says 37 percent of all births in the United States last year were to unwed mothers. The figure is now at an all-time high, up a percentage point from last year.

But society does need to say something in defense of fatherhood. Long experience at dozens of honors banquets leads us to decisively say that children from traditional homes have advantages. Listen to an honors list, and you will be struck by how many winners come from those traditional mom and pop, Ozzie and Harriet homes.

The problem is particularly true for boys. A generation of boys has grown up without a father at home. The results have largely been disastrous. Men today constitute only 44 percent of college students. A boy is 30 percent more likely to drop out of school than a girl. A boy is three times as likely to be expelled from school as a girl. A boy is 10 percent more likely to skip school than a girl."

Judge Wants More Jail Time for Accused Female Sex Offender

anthony · 10 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Former teacher's aide Melanie Hackett was back in court eleven months after she reportedly bragged to a teacher at the Missisquoi Valley Union High School that she had sex with a 13-year-old male student at his home."

"Two months ago a judge rejected a plea deal that would have sent her to prison for 6 months. Monday a second judge rejected the same deal. He pointed out that the victim's age of 13 and Hackett's abuse of trust demands more prison time."

Female Ex-Teacher Gets Two More Years for Nude Photos Sent To Male Victim

anthony · 11 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A former teacher serving an eight-year prison sentence for having sex with a 13-year-old student agreed Wednesday to serve two more years for sending him nude photos of herself.

Rogers, 29, was arrested in February 2005 and pleaded no contest to having sexual intercourse and oral sex with the student. A judge suspended most of her eight-year sentence on the condition that she not contact the student or his family or use the Internet."

Six months ago, Circuit Judge Bart Stanley ordered Rogers to serve the rest of the sentence after she sent the photos to the boy, and prosecutors brought the new charges. The new sentence was added to the first term for a 10-year total."

Florida Woman Puts Baby in Heated Oven

anthony · 11 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"An Orlando woman was charged with turning on an oven and putting her baby in it.

Sharlyn Singh faces aggravated child abuse charges.

Authorities said a man helping the woman's boyfriend move out of their apartment after the couple broke up heard the baby crying and found it in the oven. Singh had left the apartment by that time."

Duke Case Update: Supplemental Motion to Dismiss Filed by Defense

Matt · 11 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The defense motion filed Thursday includes the investigator's report of the Dec. 21 interview, during which she made several other changes in her account of the March 13 party where she and another woman were hired to perform as strippers.
...
But the defense motion said the accuser's cell phone records show that she was on her phone during part of the time she now says she was attacked. Records also show Seligmann received a call on his cell phone during that period, the defense said."

Bulgaria: Mandatory DNA tests

Anonymous · 11 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Bulgaria has decided to create a DNA database of all fathers in the country in an attempt to make it easier for courts to rule in fatherhood cases."

Switzerland: Cabinet holds back paternity leave plan

Anonymous · 11 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The Swiss government has stymied plans by Economics Minister Doris Leuthard to introduce five days' paid paternity leave in her department with immediate effect.

In a statement on Wednesday the cabinet said it wanted to have the same rule for all ministries – currently only two days is allowed – putting its colleague's plans on ice.

As part of her agenda for 2007, Leuthard, who took up her post in July, announced on Monday that a raft of family-friendly measures would be introduced immediately within the economics ministry.

This included new fathers being able to take five days' paid and 20 days' unpaid paternity leave."

Arkansas: Supreme Court Says Non-Father Must Pay C/S

Matt · 12 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Status quo affirmed! Excerpt:

'LITTLE ROCK (AP) -- Even though a paternity test ruled out Anthony L. Parker as the father of a child in a child-support dispute, he still has to pay support owed the mother before he took the test, the Arkansas Supreme Court ruled Thursday.

The court reversed a decision by Pulaski County Circuit Judge Mary Spencer McGowan and sent the case back to her to determine the amount Parker must pay.

The opinion, written by Associate Justice Donald L. Corbin, said state law and prior court cases make it clear that an "acknowledged father" cannot be relieved of past-due child support.

State law only speaks to a man's future child-support obligations once that person has been found through testing not to be a child's father. And Associate Justice Robert L. Brown said in a concurring opinion that the court was "legislating by inference."'

DVStats.com makes the Fiebert bibliography searchable

Anonymous · 12 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Pychologist Professor Martin S. Fiebert created a long Web page a while back, which is a compendium of nearly 200 studies (as of December 2006), analyses and reviews showing that males are abused as often (and sometimes more often) as females. But this page was always so difficult for me to read. So I compiled it all into a database, and made it searchable.

Check it out:
http://www.dvstats.com/

John Dias

Ed. note: BRAVO!!! Thanks, John!

Divorced Dad's Handbook released in U.K.

Anonymous · 12 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Excerpt:

"If the law is gender neutral why do just 7% of fathers get custody of their children following a divorce? Many fathers believe the law is prejudiced against them, and Bob Geldof even went as far as calling it “state sanctioned kidnapping”. The situation is compounded by the lack of practical advice and guidance for dads to support them in their ‘new environment’. Most turn first to a lawyer, which often comes at a high price and with low reward.

Steve Davies is a divorced father who was forced to face these challenges back in 2000. He was so frustrated by the lack of support that he decided to write The Divorced Dad’s Handbook (published on 8th January 2007 by HowToBooks). The book introduces some stark and shocking facts about fathers’ relationships with their children post divorce, for example, 40% of all fathers lose contact with their children within two years."

Male Lawyer arrested for "Holiday Kiss"

anthony · 12 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A criminal defense attorney has been arrested on a disorderly conduct charge involving kissing as a crime.
...
Crozier said the video will prove he meant nothing sexual by the kiss, which he described as a peck on the cheek. He says the incident is an example of political correctness run amok.

'It was a Christmas greeting. I had no intention to annoy or harass anybody,' Crozier said. 'Every one of us knew we were on camera. This was a peck on the cheek. That was the extent. There was nothing here that was weird or sexual.'"

Nifong Asks State to Take Over Duke Case

anthony · 12 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Michael B. Nifong, the Durham district attorney, faxed the request to Jim Coman, head of the state attorney general's special prosecution unit, today, the official said. Mr. Nifong decided he had no choice but to hand off the case because he faces a conflict of interest with ethics charges pending against him for his public comments on the case, the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity because there has yet to be an official announcement of the request."

"Biden Wants Legal Brigade for Domestic Safety"

anthony · 14 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"That is why Biden--author of the 1994 Violence Against Women Act, which created and funded federal programs to help victims of domestic violence--keeps thinking about new ways to reduce violence against women. And now with his party in power in the House and Senate, he is in position to find more support."

"Biden, an attorney, has written a bill that would create an electronic network of 100,000 lawyers willing to do volunteer work on behalf of victims of domestic violence. The bill would also set up a fund to help a separate group of lawyers--those who spend a majority of their time working on behalf of domestic violence victims--pay back their school loans."

16-YO boy's legal nightmare for viewing internet porn

anthony · 14 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Police officers stormed into the house with guns pointed. "The first thing I thought was, someone's trying to break in our house," Matthew said. "And then there [were] police officers with guns pointed at me, telling me to get downstairs."

"Matthew did have an embarrassing confession. He had been sneaking peaks at adult erotic photos on the family computer. "I got the Web site from a bunch of friends at school. [It was] just adult pornography…Playboy-like images."

"Arizona child pornography laws are among the harshest in the country. As soon as Matthew was charged, he was put on virtual house arrest, and an electronic bracelet was attached to his ankle to monitor his movements 24 hours a day."

Multiple Female teachers punished In Utah

anthony · 15 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"It seemed like a bad week for female educators in Utah — three of them appeared in court over charges of sexual misconduct with underage male students. For prosecutors, this is a simple matter. A crime is a crime."

"But for some people, the idea of a female teacher engaging in sexual activity with a boy does not strike them as criminal."

"People just do not view males as victims in these types of cases, and it's especially true when it's a female victimizing the male," Searle said. "Some people say, 'How were you a victim in something every boy dreams about?"

Adultery could mean life, court finds

Evil White Male... · 15 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"In a ruling sure to make philandering spouses squirm, Michigan's second-highest court says that anyone involved in an extramarital fling can be prosecuted for first-degree criminal sexual conduct, a felony punishable by up to life in prison.
...
"Technically," he added, "any time a person engages in sexual penetration in an adulterous relationship, he or she is guilty of CSC I," the most serious sexual assault charge in Michigan's criminal code.
...
Definition (c) is the key:
Adopted by the Legislature in 1931, Section 520b of the Michigan Penal Code says, in part:
1) A person is guilty of criminal sexual conduct in the first degree if he or she engages in sexual penetration with another person and if any of the following circumstances exists:
(c) Sexual penetration occurs under circumstances involving the commission of any other felony."

How can a woman ever be guilty of penetration? I think we all know who will be persecuted and prosecuted with this law...

Marriage is officially passé

Matt · 16 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The NYTimes is reporting, in its usual fem-slanted way, that for the first time in recorded US history, 51% of the adult female population is NOT living with a husband (ie, either they are single or married but living apart for some reason). Article here.

It notes that 53% of adult men are married and living with their wives, but this is largely because of the fact that men die earlier than women overall and possibly due to the moderate general disproportion in the sex-ratio in the population (the article doesn't mention this but it would seem that it makes sense for it to be a factor).

My own take: The fewer marriages, the less work for divorce lawyers and the less chance a man has of being thrown out of his own home! How can you not like it? But anytime you have someone getting on your case about your single-hood (eg: parents, married friends, etc.), send them the link to this article. You can point out that married adults are now the exception, not the rule.

'From trophy wife to toxic wife'

Anonymous · 16 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Once upon a time, there was a truth, universally acknowledged, that a man with a powerful job and a beautiful house must be in want of a wife – preferably of the trophy variety. Domesticated, docile yet dazzling, she was the perfect finishing touch.

Not any more. According to research to be published in the journal Labour Economics, the earnings gap between married couples is narrowing. While in the 1980s it was the case that the higher a professional man's salary the fewer paid hours his wife would put in, men today are more likely to want a dynamic high-flier, an equal who wows him as much in the boardroom as in the bedroom.

A victory for feminism? Sadly not. The reason for this change, sisters, is nothing to be proud of.

Rich men, I believe, have finally cottoned on to the sinister side of the stay-at-home wife: unless you marry an equal who's going to pay her own way, you will end up with a lazy, indulgent, over-pampered slug. For the transition from trophy wife to toxic wife is as fast as the end result is furious."

"Duke Faculty" Posts Open Letter

Matt · 17 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Seems the faculty at Duke who rushed to condemn the LAX players felt it necessary to post a follow-up letter about it all. Does it include an apology? No. Does it include an acknowledgment of their own racism, classism, and/or misandry? Forget about it. The letter is at http://www.concerneddukefaculty.org/. However, the site is, as you can imagine, getting hit really hard as of this posting. I only just was able to load the page after several attempts. So, I am including it in its entirely under the "read more" section.

++
As of 1-16-07 9:40 PM EST:
http://www.concerneddukefaculty.org/:

An Open Letter to the Duke Community

In the spring of 2006, the Duke community was rocked by terrible news. We heard that a woman hired to perform at a party thrown by our lacrosse team had accused members of the team of raping her. Neighbors, we were told, heard racial epithets called out at the woman as she departed the party. The criminal proceedings and the media frenzy which followed are perhaps beginning to wind down. For us at Duke, the issues raised by the incident, and by our community's responses to it, are not.

In April, a group of Duke faculty members published an advertisement in The Chronicle. The ad, titled "What does a Social Disaster Sound Like?" was mostly a compilation of statements made by Duke students in response to the incident and its immediate aftermath. This ad has figured in many discussions of the event and of the University's response. It has been broadly, and often intentionally, misread. We urge everyone to read the original ad, available at http://listening.nfshost.com/listening.htm. We have. Some of us were among the ad's signers.

The ad has been read as a comment on the alleged rape, the team party, or the specific students accused. Worse, it has been read as rendering a judgment in the case. We understand the ad instead as a call to action on important, longstanding issues on and around our campus, an attempt to channel the attention generated by the incident to addressing these. We reject all attempts to try the case outside the courts, and stand firmly by the principle of the presumption of innocence.

As a statement about campus culture, the ad deplores a "Social Disaster," as described in the student statements, which feature racism, segregation, isolation, and sexism as ongoing problems before the scandal broke, exacerbated by the heightened tensions in its immediate aftermath. The disaster is the atmosphere that allows sexism, racism, and sexual violence to be so prevalent on campus. The ad's statement that the problem "won't end with what the police say or the court decides" is as clearly true now as it was then. Whatever its conclusions, the legal process will not resolve these problems.

The ad thanked "the students speaking individually and...the protesters making collective noise." We do not endorse every demonstration that took place at the time. We appreciate the efforts of those who used the attention the incident generated to raise issues of discrimination and violence.

There have been public calls to the authors to retract the ad or apologize for it, as well as calls for action against them and attacks on their character. We reject all of these. We think the ad's authors were right to give voice to the students quoted, whose suffering is real. We also acknowledge the pain that has been generated by what we believe is a misperception that the authors of the ad prejudged the rape case.

We stand by the claim that issues of race and sexual violence on campus are real, and we join the ad's call to all of us at Duke to do something about this. We hope that the Duke community will emerge from this tragedy as a better place for all of us to live, study, and work.

Click for list of Concerned Faculty

Now on YouTube: Men, maleness, and equality

Anonymous · 17 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

By popular demand, the TVOntario segment from The Agenda: Men, Maleness, and Equality has been posted on YouTube.

Part 1
Part 2
Part 3
Part 4
Part 5

For those interested in purchasing a copy, contact: tvosales-at-tvontario.org. TVO is a public broadcaster: you can their programs in the classroom. They accept donations.

Watch, comment, rate, and favourite these on YouTube... And help spread the word!

Study Report on Misuse of Dowry Law by Indian Women rudy3107 · 17 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Truth About IPc 498A

This is a Report based on 5 years Research and Study on dowry Prohibition act, its use and misuse.This Reasearch conducted by our own Experts of MyNation for Save Indian society,and not funded by any gender biased organisations. We studied 1500 Plus Families, these are feed backs from them and from the reports published by media.

What is IPC-498a?

Cognizable – The accused can be arrested and jailed without warrant or investigation
Non-Bailable – The accused must appear in the court to request bail
Non-Compoundable – The complaint cannot be withdrawn by the petitioner

The accused are guilty with women one word, and the burden is on the accused to prove innocence in the courts.

When an FIR under IPC section 498A (498a) is registered, the accused are automatically arrested and jailed without investigation. The Supreme Court of India has ruled several times that arrest should be an exception, and not a compulsory. Why is there no penalty for disobeying the Supreme Court's orders? Is it not mental cruelty to subject a person to arrest without investigation or reasonable cause?

As per our Study, we found out that, it is custom in india to give support to bride in the form of gold and valuables to support her future life with her husband, as husband take home his wifes Fathers burdon, as family of girl call themself.
as long as there are no Problems/cracks in marriage, all goes smoothly.As it is there are problems in every marriage, and olden days women used to manage these silly things in her marriage, but todays modern women is not ready to compromise even pretty issues.

Shoba [Name Changed] says, "Dowry is not an issue, ours was love arranged marriage, I know my father's capacity, and how much he can give, and after marriage there is not chance taking any money, so I only told my Husband what he can take. We are happy with that, it helped us to build our Family. We should not take Stridhan as dowry."

"When we get married, to make new house, start family we need money, from girl side her father should provide to start family, and man should not demand more than what girls family offer," says Priya [Name changed].

We are not talking about the dowry deaths or physical injury cases but about dowry harassment cases that require no evidence and can be filed just based on a single word, complaint by the wife. With an estimated 50,000 such accusations per year and an average of 3 members of the husband's family implicated in each of these 498a cases, about 150,000 people are directly affected by these false accusations.

Latest Statistics Published on IBN-CNN.

*In 2004, 58,319 dowry cases were registered
*1,34,757 men were arrested
*47,828 cases have reached the chargesheet stage
*10,491 dowry cases were not chargesheeted as they were based on frivolous ground.
*However, 5,739 men have been convicted but more than four times that number have been acquitted (24,127)

The controversial section not only covers dowry, but a wide spectrum of incidents including cruelty, causing injury and danger to mental or physical health. [Source: http://www.ibnlive.com/news/tortured-hubbies-victims-of-498a/27446-3.html]

As of June 30, 2005 those under sections 498 and 498(A): in the first six months this year, 3801 new cases under just these two sections were instituted.

Thanks to the awareness levels among women, many more are approaching the courts today than before. Consider this against the number of cases that are disposed. They are only 2432 cases. Of them, only 164 cases led to convictions. 1449 cases ended in acquittal with the aggrieved women considering further appeals. [Source: http://www.indianexpress.com/res/web/pIe/full_story.php?content_id=79802]

This poorly formulated law is inviting unscrupulous women to file false cases, and causing the imprisonment of innocent husband and his Family without investigation. These innocent people undergo stigmatization and hardship even before a trial in the court of law which leads to emotional, physical and financial burdon. Some of the falsely accused have committed suicide after being jailed, unable to bear the social consequences.

Result of False Accusation:

As per Recent Report From Ahmedabad, Rajesh Hasmukh Desai commited suicide. He was charged with 498A falsly. If a woman dies in any circumtenses, Authority by default Police will arrest man, but in this case police did not took any action nor they questioned his wife, nor took any action.

A study by Professor K. Nagaraj, senior economist at the Madras Institute of Development Studies (MIDS): The distribution of suicides by marital status reveals some interesting patterns. The rates do not vary much between the sexes for the never-married. Among those currently married, while the rate for males is about 17 per 100,000 persons, the rate for females is 11.4 per 100,000. Among those widowed, while the rate for males is 21 per 100,000 persons, the rate for females is also significantly lower, at 6.6 per 100,000. However, among divorced males the suicide rate is 164 per 100,000 persons, but even in this class, among females the rate is only 63 per 100,000. W hile the suicide rate for separated men is about 167, for females it is only 41 per 100,000 persons. [Source: http://www.hinduonnet.com/fline/fl1821/18210960.htm]

Despite the recommendations of the Supreme Court of India and Justice Malimath Committee that the legislative arm should modify the laws such that the innocent are protected, the suggested amendment to the law has been largely ignored. Unconstrained, this social evil is threating the foundaton of the Indian Family system.

Why do people misuse IPC 498a?

Legal Extortion – When marriage is on the brink of Divorce, she find no other weapon to harass husband than 498A.

Pre/extra-marital Affairs – She marries to satisfy her parents, without disclosing her past, when husband find out she has no option than file dowry case to blackmail him, same applies to extra marital affairs too.

Domination – Wife wants the husband to abandon his parents and siblings, and have total control over his finances and social behavior, including his life-style.

Custody - Deny the father and his family access to their child(ren).

Fraudulent Marriages - Many time girls family will not disclose actual facts of their daughter, which leads to divorce, then legal extortion follows.

In-Laws - When modern woman is unable to adjust with her In-Laws, to dominate her husband and make him dance as she says she goes for dowry case.

Consider a person who works extremely hard to make his career. Then he marry a wolf who drags him to court. There he is bound to lose all dignity, children custody and above all 50% of his income. He is forced out of family, money and all. Using his money all along, the wolf teaches to the child that father was bad, despite feeding the child on Fathers' money. He has nothing to look at when he grows old. And Indian judicial system is just not meant for any justice.

"This is nothing but sure cruelty. Extreme disaster, and unending mental trauma. Apart from this I've seen men bieng ditched by various girls before marriage. In cities it is common that girl have many boyfriends. And they choose the richest among them for marriage. Rest are ditched. And a few weaker among them commit suicide.", says Amit Agarwal, a Victim of 498A.

Nearly five crore married women in India are victims of domestic violence (DV). Only 0.1 percent (1 out of 1000 DV cases) of these are being reported. Out of 100 cases that are ordered for investigation under 498A, only in 2 cases the accused get convicted.

"People generally use this law to facilitate a divorce. And often, it's the lawyers who advise the women to implicate their in-laws under the provisions of this Act," says Shantosh Singh, chairperson of Women Welfare Counseling Cell. Often, the number of items given in dowry is inflated to claim a high settlement amount. "There are only 10 per cent cases based on truth, and people usually come to us and ask specifically to mention the element of dowry in their divorce petitions," says Amrikh Singh Kalra, advocate at Punjab and Haryana High Court.

Women mis(using) laws to get even?

NEW DELHI, Oct 18 (PTI) —Laws against violence at home may or may not have come to the rescue of battered women, but some of them have been accused of abusing them to get an easy divorce or settle other little domestic disputes. Souce: http://www.tribuneindia.com/1999/99oct19/nation.htm#7]

According to the available statistical information from the National Crime Records Bureau and information available from NGOs working with victims of violence, there is a general tendency to avoid seeking redressal among the victims of domestic violence. However, when a victim of domestic violence seeks help from any of the agencies, be it family, friends, NGOs, or lawyers, before registering a complaint, at each stage she is asked to reconcile the matter or to put up with the situation. Reconciliation in 498A cases takes place at every stage including the police station, Crime Against Women Cells and courts.

We found that in five cases filed under Section 498A the parties settled the matter after agreeing on maintenance and divorce.

In a majority of the cases before a victim filed the complaint under Section 498A, the minimum period she suffered physical and mental torture, was for about three years.

The trial process is quite lengthy and the proportion of pending cases is quiet high (out of the 40 cases based on victims' interviews which went for trial in court, 28 cases are still pending). In the cases tracked, the normal trial period was between five to ten years.

It was found that it was difficult to prove physical and mental torture. In all the eight cases in which the accused were acquitted, the victims were found to have suffered physical and mental torture, but as there was not enough evidence to prove torture, the accused were let off.

The cases where the accused were convicted had been filed under Section 498A along with section 304B and 302, which are applicable after the death of the victim. There were no convictions in any of the cases registered only under Section 498A.

It has been found that out of 30 cases there is not a single case where the accused has been convicted only under Section 498A. The accused have been acquitted (11 cases) by the court where the prosecutor failed to provide evidentiary proof of cruelty, mainly mental, inflicted on the victim as provided under Section 498A IPC.

The judicial authorities of India, in number of landmark judgments, have taken a serious view of the growing tendency to falsely implicate innocent members of the husband’s family in dowry cases. Describing misuse of IPC-498a law as “legal terrorism”, the Supreme Court said no one could be allowed to unleash frivolous proceedings on this count as the provisions of Section 498a “is intended to be used a shield not as an assassin’s weapon.

“The stringent dowry laws, meant to deter dowry-seekers, are being increasingly misused by the very people they are meant to protect. The last three years have seen a steep rise in the number of cases of harassment for dowry". [Source: http://cities.expressindia.com/fullstory.php?newsid=170603]

Only one out of six dowry complaints genuine [Source: http://www.tribuneindia.com/2004/20041013/cth1.htm#4]

Most of the time it's a burgaining tool for women when husband finds her infidelity. Adulterous women were responsible for divorces in every 3rd case.
[Source http://www.hindustantimes.com/news/181_1551427,000600010004.htm]

There are many heart-rending stories of innocent families being arrested without investigation and put in judicial custody. While IPC 498a is supposed to be a law to protect women, ironically it harms many more women. For every male accused of IPC 498a, there is at least one woman (his mother or sister) who is implicated in a crime that never occurred or they never stayed together. If there are more women in the family they too are accused irrespective of their age, health condition, marital status or their physical proximity to the complainant. There are many Reports, married sisters of husband,even they are pregnent or with small baby in hands are jailed without any investigations.or The entire family is ruthlessly arrested without investigation and there are no words to describe the financial hardship and emotional trauma that they have to endure. Children suffer whether they are jailed along with their mothers or are separated from them during that time.

Another striking feature of these victim stories is that the complainants, in collaboration with the police make sure that the arrests are strategically planned to harass and demoralize the accused, to make them succumb to the fear of being imprisoned and to extract huge amounts of money thereafter.

Here is list of few Victims are harassed for many years, without rays of hope to get Justice: http://mynation.net/db

Everyone knows there are loopholes in 498A, and media reports, Judges warn and Politicians admit openly.

An offence has been committed by the accused upon the sole testimony of the woman alleging abuse. Given that lying in court has never been taken seriously enough to invoke punishment, laws which presume guilt even before the trial has begun are prone to great misuse.

"98% misuse is OK Says Minister Renuka Chowdrey:
[Source: http://www.ibnlive.com/news/ill-empower-women-chowdhury/26051-3-0.html]

Even there is 98% misuse, why not there is any Change....?

Because it is not only against husband but his whole Family. The Western funded Supporter of this law, determined to ruin family system of India and sabotage Indian Society.

For: MyNation.net

Girls beat girl senseless, upload video to Internet

Matt · 17 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

As if actually waylaying and beating her wasn't bad enough, they have to upload it to some site on the Internet. CNN reports on the the whole thing here (video). Send this along to your friends who think "girls just don't/can't do that sort of thing".

"The gender gap in violence is declining"

digitalhermit · 19 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Found this interesting article on MSNBC, no doubt spawned by all the media attention in recent days to the teen girl fight video.

Though the article's authors are at times confused about where this violence could be coming from (for eample citing increasingly violent and misogynistic messages in the mass media) they do at least pay some lip service to the importance of a stable early family life. Excerpt:

“The initial causes of violence are found in the early learning experiences in the family, which includes weak family bonding, and ineffective monitoring and supervision,”

Glad the media is finally taking notice of this. It's only a matter of time until researchers start taking a closer look at the early family situations for these violent female offenders. Could there be a correlation with the much touted single-parent/single-mother family? Nahhh - that would be a threat to the brave new feminist world order. This must be pinned on men somehow in the same way DV already is.

Hillary Clinton Running for '08 Demo Nomination

Matt · 20 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

It's official-- no surprise though. Hillary is in for '08! Excerpt:

"Democratic Senator Hillary Clinton has taken the first step towards running for the US presidency in 2008.

Sen Clinton, 59, wife of former president Bill, announced her move on her website, saying 'I'm in to win'.

The former First Lady has set up a presidential exploratory committee, testing the waters for a full bid."

When a dedicated gender-feminist wants to be president of the US and actually stands a chance of getting there, MRAs need to be really attentive. Keep a close eye on what she says about things near and dear to MRAs in the months to come, and contrast them to what she has said in the past.

Attempted False Accusations Against Police Thwarted by Camera

bandersnatch · 21 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

As many MRA's already know, many women do make false accusations to punish men they feel wronged by or if it simply benefits them. In this clip of a show from MSNBC, covers two incidents where police officers were falsely accused of sexual assault by women and the only thing between them and some serious jail time was a surveillance camera installed in their cruiser which records them during their stops. Please save this clip and share it with as many people as you can! Whenever a feminist/woman-firster claim women aren't capable of this, show them this clip (10.8 MB .wmv file)!

--

Ed. note: Yes, a large file, and rapidshare makes you wait a minute to get the download. Still, it is worth it to get and see this clip. It is definitely a keeper.

Obama has a message for fathers

Anonymous · 22 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Without complaining, Obama relays that "as I got older I came to recognize how hard it had been for my mother and grandmother to raise us without a strong male presence in the house. I felt as well the mark that a father's absence can leave on a child. I determined that my father's irresponsibility toward his children, my stepfather's remoteness, and my grandfather's failures would all become object lessons for me, and that my own children would have a father they can count on.""

On one hand, Obama is spreading negative stereotypes about men. On the other, he's putting fatherlessness into the spotlight and on the American political agenda. Discussing the negative impact that fatherlessness has on women and children is, no doubt, the most politically palatable twist.

This story may be a blessing in disguise. Even though men are portrayed as evil in the discussion, Obama is shedding light on an important topic. Perhaps more importantly, his words may encourage more discussion. Let's see if other politicians to ante up.

Cathy Young: A fruitful 6 years for this 'dissident feminist'

Anonymous · 22 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Excerpt:
"While feminists have called for more male involvement in child-rearing, the women's movement has also championed blatant favoritism toward mothers in child custody disputes, often to the point of vilifying fathers. This seems to be a clear case of putting solidarity with women over equity. While the fathers' rights movement has often been depicted as a patriarchal backlash, it is in many ways more faithful to the true feminist legacy than are the women's groups which endorse maternal chauvinism.

I am very proud of the support I have been able to give to equality for fathers, and particularly of my work in exposing the inaccuracies and bias in the 2005 PBS documentary "Breaking the Silence: The Children's Stories," which painted fathers who seek custody of their children as presumptive abusers.

The issue of mothers losing custody to alleged abusers has received more media coverage since then -- much of it sensationalistic and slanted -- and seems to be the next big battlefield for feminists and fathers' rights activists. Sadly, the fact that children's lives are at stake, not just the interests of men and women, often gets lost."

RADAR ALERT: Tell Sen. Biden, "Fix VAWA, Not I-VAWA"

Matt · 23 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

It wasn't enough for Senator Joe Biden to destabilize American families with the passage of the Violence Against Women Act, an onerous law that has proven to be a disaster for fragile families, and, by its very title, is a venomous indictment of men.

Now Senator Biden wants to export VAWA to the rest of the world. This male-bashing law would be called the International Violence Against Women Act, or "I-VAWA." To learn more why I-VAWA would be a disaster, see this article.

But if we act now, we can convince him to drop this risky idea.

TODAY, please call/fax/write Senator Biden and politely ask him to:

"FIX VAWA, NOT I-VAWA"

Senator Biden needs to understand that VAWA is hurting families, men, and children. Before we even think about I-VAWA, we first need to fix VAWA – it shouldn't just be about violence against women. The problems with VAWA are extensively documented in RADAR's Special Reports, which can be viewed at: http://www.mediaradar.org/.

IT IS IMPERATIVE THAT BIDEN'S PHONE AND MAILBOXES BECOME VERY BUSY THIS WEEK WITH YOUR MESSAGES.

E-mail: http://biden.senate.gov/contact/index.cfm
Phone: 202-224-5042
Fax: 202-224-0139
Snail mail: 201 Russell Senate Office Building, Washington, DC 20510

Act now – we want Senator Biden to hear from thousands of concerned citizens this week!

++
Date of RADAR Release: January 23, 2007
Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Florida School Experiments With Single-sex Classes

axolotl · 23 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Notice in this article, that the woman reporter favors girls over boys in her listing of 5 strengths of each sex in the classroom (near bottom of article). Overall though, it seems to be positive news for boys, at least for now. But it is briefly mentioned that the improvements noticed, may be due to factors other than single-sexness, such as improved teacher motivation for the experiment.

Note: the link shows only the text of the article, no graphics or photos.

Principal Arrested for Blocking Student Alcohol Probe

Matt · 23 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

People used to get nervous when they saw male cheerleading squad coaches around all those girls. Maybe they should get nervous seeing female coaches (and principals) around them instead! Story here. Excerpt:

"Blackwell, 59, was arrested Monday and charged with obstruction of justice. She was released from jail Monday evening on her own recognizance, Frederick said.

Deputies believe Blackwell knew the coach was giving alcohol to students but did not report the information to authorities, Frederick said."

Points up a fact: anyone regardless of gender can do "the wrong thing". The classic feminist argument that with women in positions of greater trust in society, particularly vis-a-vis education and legal matters, there would be less misuse or abuse of power. It should be abundantly clear by now that such is not the case, yet this idea persists in popular consciousness.

Erin Prizzy: How feminists tried to destroy the family

AngryMan · 23 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Excellent article by Erin Pizzey, founder of the first battered wives' refuge, on how militant feminists - with the collusion of Labour's leading women - hijacked her cause and used it to try to demonise all men. Excerpt:

"My fascination with this new movement lasted only a few months. At the huge "collectives", I heard shrill women preaching hatred of the family. They said the family was not a safe place for women and children. I was horrified at their virulence and violent tendencies. I stood on the same platforms trying to reason with the leading lights of this new organisation."

Miami TV news anchorman seeks alimony from wife

Anonymous · 23 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Excerpt:
"Whether it's fragile male ego or the continuing disparity in incomes between men and women -- in the absence of any studies, lawyers are left to theorize -- men don't go after the money the law says they can have.

"A lot of lawyers feel uncomfortable even asking for alimony, even if [the men] are entitled, because it's a very tough row to hoe," said prominent divorce attorney Andrew Leinoff. ``They know a lot of judges raise their eyebrows at it."

However, as women increasingly outpace their husbands in earnings -- the percentage of women who earned more jumped from nearly 18 percent in 1987 to more than 25 percent in 2004 -- the number of men receiving alimony will surely rise, some say.

"When you look at the stats of where people make money, it's in small businesses, and most small businesses are owned by women," said forensic accountant Loretta Fabricant, who currently has two cases in which the husbands are seeking alimony. She says she once helped a West Palm Beach husband win $10,000 a month in support."

Man claims "Feminism Brings Benefits to All -- Men Included"

Martian Bachelor · 23 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Here's the link: Feminism Brings Benefits to All -- Men Included. (Originally published here.)

As unbelievable as this claim is, be sure to think before letting this honorary woman have a taste of the many 'benefits' - preferably there at AlterNet where lots of feminists can see `em. :>

CBC Toronto Radio One: What does it mean to grow up without a father?

Anonymous · 24 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

CBC Toronto Radio One, Metro Morning feature here.

Excerpt:
"What does it mean to grow up without a father?

A generation ago the mother-led family — while hardly rare — was still an anomaly. That's no longer the case.

For one community in particular, the reverse is true. About 40 per cent of black children in Canada grow up without a father. Among Toronto's Jamaican-Canadians, the numbers are even more dramatic: two out of three children grow up without a father (Statistics Canada, 2000).

In "Growing Up Without Men," young black adults tell us their stories. We also hear why so many fathers are absent from their children's lives and what it will take to turn the situation around."

CBC's feature mostly discusses how women and children are victimized by fathers' abandonment, but they did have Senator Anne Cools, a long time vocal equal parenting advocate, on the show this morning.

The final installment of Metro Morning's feature on this topic can be heard on Friday on CBC Radio One (99.1 in Toronto) or online here.

The feedback forum can be read here.

Jerusalem Post: Advantage - mothers?

Anonymous · 24 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

Excerpt:
"All the old psychological studies say the mother is the most important figure in the life of a young child and the father is less important," continues Frishtick. "This theory needs to be reevaluated; today there are many fathers who want to raise their children and custody needs to be decided based on what is best for the child.

"Fathers need to have more rights or the custody needs to be shared equally. There are development issues that are enhanced by shared custody. It needs to move in the direction of a partnership," he states, adding that the conference was for informational purposes only and "no concrete conclusions were reached on the matter."

Interestingly, one women's rights activist, Ruth Halperin-Kaddari, is quoted as saying:

'This [law] is the only area in which women have more power than men in divorce disputes," she says. "If this is supported, it will have a serious impact, taking away what little power women do have.'"

To Ms. Halperin-Kaddari, it is not about what's best for the children. It's all about ensuring women have power over men.

The Big List - Female Teachers With Students

Anonymous · 24 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Found this on World Net Daily... I'm still not finished reading! Starts with:

"Here is a list of the teacher 'sexpidemic' cases WND has documented where female teachers have been accused, or convicted, of assaulting students:"

Israel: Mother wins dead son sperm case

Anonymous · 24 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Excerpt:
The lawyer of an Israeli couple who won the right to use their dead son's sperm to inseminate a woman he never met says the case is a boost for family rights.

Irit Rosenblum told the BBC the landmark ruling meant family lines could continue even without the written consent of the male prior to death.

The dead man, soldier Keivin Cohen, was killed in the Gaza Strip in 2002.

A court ruled in favour of his parents who had the sperm extracted after his death, although he had not left a will.

"The drama is international, that mankind is able to continue after [a man's] death and his family can raise a new generation while he is no longer here," Ms Rosenblum said.

NYTimes on Singles: Outdoing Itself Yet Again

Matt · 24 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

There seems to be no end to how far the NYTimes can go in ignoring and/or minimizing men and our concerns. The latest is here. It's a commentary on a commentary. What's next, a commentary on that commentary? It's getting to be like an encyclopedia!

The whole time though, I can guarantee you that as long as the NYT is running it, it will not be pro-male. Check out the offensive "Frankendate" graphic the article includes, too. And in two pages of text, not a single discussion of the REAL reasons why men are avoiding marriage, but lots of stereotyping promulgated shamelessly. Excerpt:

'Commitment-averse men in their 20's and 30's, it turns out, look the same whether or not they have a college degree. In surveys and focus groups, they fit depressingly well into the old stereotypes: they fear marriage means a loss of liberty; they worry a wife will want to change them. They don't trust women to tell the truth about past relationships, or they are waiting for the soul mate who hasn't appeared. With the rising frequency of cohabitation, they can get sex without marriage, and they might lose their hard-earned money in a divorce, so what's the rush?

As a Marriage Project report concluded, with no biological or sociological clock ticking, "boys can remain boys indefinitely."'

Bloomberg: Britain's Angry Wives Target Bonuses in Divorce Cases

Anonymous · 25 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The climate is so favorable to ex-wives that divorce lawyer Jeremy Levison advises bankers and hedge fund executives to avoid the altar altogether. Pre-nuptial agreements offer little protection because U.K. judges aren't bound to follow them.

``Don't get married,'' said Levison, a partner at London- based family law firm Levison Meltzer Pigott. ``If you must, make sure your other half is as rich as you are.''"

"New York Silences Southern Belle"

Matt · 25 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

bull referred to this article in a comment he posted here. It seemed like it deserved its own entry, so it got it! Excerpt:

'One particularly disturbing day, my professor said, "All of you who are victims of rape or attempted rape raise your hands." As more than half the class raised their hands, I began to think weird thoughts. I wondered if my college required a solid SAT score and emergency room records for admission.

It took me weeks to realize their definition of rape was not exactly Webster's. We began to study Andrea Dworkin who said, "Romance is rape embellished with meaningful looks." And Catherine MacKinnon who said, "Politically, I call it rape whenever a woman has sex and feels violated." And Marilyn French, who famously said, "All men are rapists and that's all they are." You can imagine my disillusionment to learn Mister Rogers of " Mister Rogers' Neighborhood," and Mahatma Gandhi were predators.'

More orders coming down for men from on high

Martian Bachelor · 26 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

ABC News reports that Desperate Housewives' star Felicity Huffman has penned "a guide for guys who want to become good boyfriends (and the women who want to transform them)"... From the excerpts, this sounds like it may have succeeded in hitting a new level for rampant, unabashed misandry. Brace yourselves, `cause she's likely to get at least as much airplay as Maureen Dowd did fifteen months ago.

Um, wouldn't it be a whole lot easier for women to just choose someone they actually like to begin with? Be sure to click on the photo of Huffman looking 'fierce'.

Title IX Laws Continue To Destroy Male Athletics

anthony · 26 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"One of the main reasons Director of Athletics Kirby Hocutt gave yesterday, for eliminating lacrosse, men's swimming and diving and men's indoor and outdoor track and field from was the athletic program's inability to comply with Title IX.
...
These cuts were the first steps in the "development of a comprehensive gender equity plan..."
...
Mid-American Conference commissioner Rick Chryst said that he thinks the elimination of men's track and field and men's swimming and diving is a part of a national trend."

"Same-sex classes a growing trend in public schools"

Matt · 26 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"'All the girls there, they can talk out of turn," the 14-year-old said. "We get really off task and it's really annoying.'
...
Panos' classmate, Alyson Douglas, 15, said she likes not worrying about boys causing disruptions.

"Guys just make a bigger nuisance in the class," she said.
...
...They include New York City -- where there are nine single-sex public schools -- as well as Chicago, Dallas, Seattle and Washington, D.C.

Plans to open same-sex schools have been announced in Miami, Atlanta and Cleveland.

Nationwide, at least 253 public schools offer single-sex classes and 51 schools are entirely single sex...

Critics of same-sex classrooms argue that proven methods of improving education should be pursued instead of one that divides boys and girls. Separating boys and girls is tantamount to "separate but equal" segregation-era classrooms, they say.
...
Enrollment must be voluntary and any children excluded from the class must get a "substantially equal" coed class in the same subject, if not a separate single-sex class.
...
'I would suggest that for many of our kids and families, especially in Milwaukee, it's a question of choice,' Spence said. 'We have an array of choices in Milwaukee and I just think this should be one additional choice.'"

OK, most of you know how I feel about single-sex anything, so I won't beat the drums. I am just going to point out some things:

1. I have yet to see a story that discusses any of these "new" single-sex classrooms made of boys, except to mention perhaps in passing that they are available (word on how many boys are in single-sex classes has yet to be reported). "Voluntary single-sex classrooms" seems like they go down well as long as it's stressed they are classrooms "free of boy-created disruptions," or somesuch misandrist babblings.

2. I find it amusing if not also ironic that in this story, there are two different quotes, both from female students, one complaining about how much the girls in her class are talking out of turn and the other saying she is glad to be free of boys' interruptions. So where is the truth? There isn't one. It all depends on what kind of students you have in class and how good their teachers are at keeping them on track. The sexes of the students has nothing to do with it.

3. So "it's about choice" says one school board member. Funny it isn't about choice when men want to have single-sex anything but instead it's about sexism. Switch the sexes and PRESTO! the whole model gets re-interpreted.

"Ontario gov't website to embarrass deadbeat parents"

Anonymous · 26 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Ontario's Liberal government is planning to post the pictures of "deadbeat" parents who have refused to pay their child support on a new website. Parents would be advised that their picture is about to be posted, giving them one last chance to pay up; news article here.

Ontario's ombudsman recently lashed criticism against the Ontario Family Responsibility Office (FRO), for being "inept" and having a "lackadaisical" attitude when it comes to collecting outstanding support.

For Example, name change that kept a dad from collecting child support is just the latest in routine "carelessness" at the Ontario Family Responsibility Office tasked with collecting from deadbeat parents, Ontario's ombudsman said; news article here.

Erie County, PA: Female teacher charged with sex with student

anthony · 27 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Until the judicial system holds women accountable for such crimes, this disturbing trend will continue. Excerpt:

"Robin Lee Hecker, a teacher at Northwestern High School, was charged yesterday with five counts of corruption of minors. Police say she had sex with the tenth grader in August 2005 at her Albion home."

Official: Recruiter, coach had sex with students; principal tries to suppress report

Roy · 27 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"Former Ware Shoals High School coach Jill Moore, 28, took cheerleaders to a motel, where they met guardsmen for sex, according to Greenwood County sheriff's reports released late Thursday.
...
Moore, a married mother of two, also is accused of having sex with a male student on a different occasion, according to the reports. Because all the students involved were 16 or older, none of the adults will be charged because the teens were old enough to consent under state law, according to the sheriff's reports.
...
Principal Jane Blackwell also is accused of telling cheerleaders and a school staff member not to talk about the allegations against Moore, authorities said. She was charged Monday with obstruction."

Woman who had husband killed sentenced to life in prison

Evil White Male... · 27 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Cleland's attorney, Ed Murphy, asked that his client be allowed to serve her sentence in a psychiatric facility. The judge promised to file the request, but declined to recommend a specific location for her incarceration.
...
'It's crystal clear the only thing defendant Cleland ever wanted from Bruce was his money,' Deputy District Craig Hum told jurors during closing arguments in her trial last year.
...
Rebecca Cleland planned to have her husband murdered "to avoid being left with nothing if Bruce divorces her," he said."

NCFMLA makes its presence know in CA's Capitol - in Superior Court

MR · 27 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

On Thursday, members of the National Coalition of Free Men, Los Angeles flew and drove to Sacramento to attend a trial in Superior Court on Friday. The lawsuit was addressing areas of California law, where it alleges California discriminates against men in domestic violence law, and in programs & services available for Mothers (but not Fathers) in CA prisons. Here is a link to a story that ran in the Capitol weekly
Battered men seek equal protection

The reporter appears to have stated some info incorrectly, but overall it appears fairly accurate.

Also, here's an online link to the lawsuit.
Woods, et, al. vs. State of CA, et. al.

Here's a photo taken of a truck, belonging to one of NCFMLA's members, as the truck was setting in front of the State Capitol on Thursday. As you can see in this, and subsequent photos, it was somewhat overcast on Thursday and Friday.
D.V. SHELTER ACCEPTING ABUSED MEN

Here's another sign that was shown to the public and politicians in front of CA's State Capitol.
PRISON & GRAVE ARE NOT MEN'S SHELTERS

Several people from the Capitol building came up and talked about the meaning of the truck sign and the men's issues it addressed. They also took NCFMLA fliers that explained the organization's perspective on men's issues.

Friday morning, the NCFMLA member's truck was parked in front of the Superior Court bldg. on 9th street from about 7 - 9:30 A.M. - just before the trial started.
Sacramento Superior Court

A lot of people looked at the display, and some who looked, stopped and stared curiously. Here's what they saw from the steps leading to the Superior Court bldg.
Feminist Programs Get Billions While Men's Needs Go Begging

The National Coalition of Free Men was certainly presenting itself in a diplomatic and informative manner, yet trying to convey men's issues in a realistic light. Some might say the "victim card" was being played, yet many passers by appeared pleased to see men's issues being presented so honestly and openly in California's capitol

The 375 miles up to Sacramento on Thursday, and 375 miles back to Los Angeles on Friday, was a whirlwind trip, but one well worth making.. It was a trip that most likely needs to be made again, and again, and again, ad infinitum, considering the decades that gender feminist biases have been enshrined into California's laws.

Perhaps with the help of the National Coalition of Free Men, and its friends, and supporters, California will begin to write a new chapter in its history. Perhaps that chapter will be one that truly enshrines gender equality and gender fairness into law, instead of the misandry that California, in recent decades, has become so infamous for.

Parents Blast School's 'Body Sock'

anthony · 28 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Here is an update on this ridiculous notion of locking children in some kind of "body sock" prison. If a teacher cannot handle a student, leave the profession, don't incarcerate them in some virtual prison. First came Ritalin, now a 'body sock'? Whats next? Excerpt:

'A Florida family is outraged over a teacher's use of a big, baggy "body sock" to calm their 4-year-old son after he went on a crying jag in class."

Patrick Holt, of Pinellas Park, has since yanked his son from Pinellas Central Elementary and claims he never gave permission for teachers to place the boy in the Lycra pillowcase-like sack in mid-December.
...
"My wife saw my son try to open up the body sock, and the teacher's aide went ahead and had him put it back up," Holt said."'

Hillary Clinton and "Evil Men"

Matt · 29 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Reported from a speech by Hillary Clinton in Iowa:

'One questioner asked Clinton if her track record showed she could stand up to "evil men" around the world.

"The question is, we face a lot of dangers in the world and, in the gentleman's words, we face a lot of evil men and what in my background equips me to deal with evil and bad men," Clinton said. She paused to gaze while the audience interrupted with about 30 seconds of laughter and applause.

Meeting later with reporters, she was pressed repeatedly to explain what she meant. She insisted it was a simple joke.

"I thought I was funny," Clinton said. "You guys keep telling me to lighten up, be funny. I get a little funny and now I'm being psychoanalyzed."'

Is she referring to her husband, former president Bill Clinton, or perhaps other men she has dealt with in her political life? Or is she sending a not-so-subtle signal to voters (certainly female ones) in Iowa about what she thinks of male politicians, or men generally? Hmm, hard to say... is this an innocent, otherwise perhaps ambiguous comment, or a definite lash at a particular man, group of men, or men in general?

What do YOU think?

Adoptive parents prevail in father's custody battle

Anonymous · 29 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The Canadian legal system strikes again!

In a nutshell:
- Mom gets pregnant, doesn't tell dad it's his. They break up.
- Dad finds out shortly before his son is born that mom is planning to put child up for adoption
- Dad intervenes immediately. Takes legal action to be re-united with his son and stop the adoption
- Child lives with "adoptive" parents while this is sorted out through the courts; the "adoptive" parents even sue the biological dad for child support in the meantime
- Court ruling came down today on the custody of the child: the adoptive parents win. Dad can't see his kid for a year.

Story here.

'Woman-boy affair in TV and movies pushes fewer buttons'

anthony · 29 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

An interesting article that examines the media portrayal of older women engaging in sexual relations with under age males. Excerpt:

"The older woman and young boy affair has played out on the movies and television for years from Summer of '42 to The OC. Often there's no creepiness, no outrage, no mention of statutory rape."
...
"In the reverse, it's kind of sexy, every schoolboy's fantasy. Both are statutory rape. But the aggressive predatory woman is perceived much more of the stuff of allure and fantasy than the stuff of creepy."

RADAR ALERT: “Support and Defend the Constitution” Means Congress Must Fix VAWA

Matt · 30 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Senator and would-be President Joe Biden wants Congress to pass his International Violence Against Women Act (I-VAWA). He seems to want to do for the world what his VAWA law has done for the U.S. But what exactly has VAWA done for the U.S.? RADAR's latest special report,
A Culture of False Allegations: How VAWA Harms Families and Children (.pdf file) explains the harm caused by VAWA and the various state laws it has spawned.

1. It defines the term "domestic violence" in an Orwellian fashion that includes almost any action, whether or not actual violence is involved. In the hands of officials like Judge Daniel Sanchez, Chairman of the Northern New Mexico DV Task Force, even the ludicrous accusation that David Letterman had committed harassment by telepathy against a "victim" he'd never met, was sufficient for the judge to issue a restraining order.
2. It provides huge incentives to allege abuse while undermining due process protections against false allegations.
3. It encourages arrest and prosecution in cases where such treatment is not warranted. In doing so families that could have been healed by appropriate counseling are instead ripped apart forever.
4. It fosters ongoing animosity between parents and drives fathers out of their children's lives. As a result, it sentences these children to greatly increased rates of emotional and physical neglect and abuse from their mothers and their mothers' boyfriends. Children react by acting out in school. Their academic performance plummets. They're much more likely to get involved in violent crime. And for those children inclined to turn the pain inward, suicide rates more than double.
5. It uses your tax dollars to teach judges to ignore the due process rights of the accused. In one such training, that was actually caught on tape, the judge conducting the training instructed the judges attending his seminar, "Your job is not to become concerned about the constitutional rights of the man that you're violating as you grant a restraining order ... Throw him out on the street, give him the clothes on his back and tell him, see ya around ... we don't have to worry about the rights."

This week please contact both of your Senators. You can find out how to contact them at http://www.senate.gov/. Or call the Capitol switchboard at 202-224-3121. You may want to fax them a copy of RADAR's flyer Violence Against Women Act: Harmful to Families and Children (.pdf file).

When you contact your Senators, remind them that the voters did not send them to Washington to undermine due process protections in foreign countries, as I-VAWA would do. The voters sent them to Washington to "support and defend the Constitution of the United States." Being mindful of their oath, it's time for them to get to work on fixing the countless ways that VAWA undermines due process, subverts the U.S. Constitution, and endangers our most vulnerable citizens - our children.

++
Date of RADAR Release: January 29, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Update on Poisoned Marine Case

Matt · 30 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Referring to this prior post, the update is here. Excerpt:

"SAN DIEGO (AP) -- A woman accused of poisoning her Marine husband with arsenic to cash in on his $250,000 life insurance policy was convicted of murder on Tuesday.

Prosecutors argued Cynthia Sommer, 33, wanted a more luxurious lifestyle than she could afford on her 23-year-old husband's $1,700 monthly salary and saw the military life insurance policy as a way to "set herself free."

Sommer's friends and co-workers testified during the trial that she threw wild parties, got her breasts enlarged and had casual sex with multiple partners in the weeks after her husband's collapse.

Todd Sommer was in top condition when he collapsed and died at the couple's home on the Marine Corps' Miramar base in San Diego."

New warrant issued for female sex case teacher

anthony · 31 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Here we go again! This sociological ignorance based on a young boys supposed "fantasy" regarding sex with a teacher is the definition of a double standard. The teacher is attractive, but its still rape. Having two sets of rules based on gender is an example of the judicial system's leniency regarding women who commit crimes.

Excerpt:
"A Larimer County judge has signed a new arrest warrant for Carrie McCandless after prosecutors alleged that the former Brighton Charter High School teacher contacted the alleged victim in her sexual assault case.
...
McCandless, 30, faces charges of sexual assault and contributing to the delinquency of a minor. She was ordered not to have contact with the alleged victim - a former student - or any other minors as a condition of her release on $20,000 bail."

Government offers new help for fathers

Anonymous · 31 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

'KUSA – Community and faith-based organizations that help fathers can now sign up for a grant from the federal government.
...
The department calls the grant “groundbreaking.”

“From our perspective, it’s the first time that we’ve actually had funding and resources available to fathers, particularly here in Colorado,” said Ruth Glenn with the Domestic Abuse Assistance Program for the Colorado Department of Human Services, “that really is geared toward services for them in the areas of parenting skills and healthy relationship building and really geared toward the final outcome, which is healthy children.”'

Canada: 'Activists say fathers' rights ignored in custody battle, but experts disagree'

Anonymous · 31 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'REGINA (CP) - Fathers embroiled in custody battles for their children face an "unfeeling" and "unfair" justice system, an activist group charged Tuesday after a controversial court decision in Saskatchewan.

The group Fathers for Justice said the case of a Saskatoon man who lost custody of his biological baby son shows the system is plagued with problems, but at least one legal expert disagreed. "It's a horrendous experience," said Kris Titus, one of the group's founding members. "And I think a lot of people are losing custody of their children unfairly."

On Monday, a judge ruled it was in the best interest of the nine-month-old baby to stay with a Prince Albert couple who were given custody by the biological mother and have raised the child since birth.'

UK: Femme fatale who broke men's hearts in £250,000 scam is jailed

Anonymous · 31 January 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Excerpt:
"A SERIAL bride who left a string of broken hearts and plundered bank accounts after fleecing men she met through lonely-hearts adverts was jailed for two years yesterday.

Emma Golightly, 22, met her victims, seduced them and then stole their cash, spending the money on exotic holidays, chauffeur-driven cars and expensive hotels and restaurants."

Wendy McElroy: "Continuing to Defame the 'Duke 3' as Rapists"

anthony · 1 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"A paradigm of victimhood, especially of women who allege rape, is on the line. The core of the paradigm is the assumption that women do not lie about crimes like rape.

The widely used and accepted statistic on false accusations of rape is that about two percent of charges are false. However, legal scholar Michelle Anderson of Villanova University Law School reported in 2004 that "no study has ever been published which sets forth an evidentiary basis for the two percent false rape complaint thesis."

Father wins appeal in Dade County child custody case

anthony · 1 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A father seeking to regain parental rights to his son won an appeal this week in a Dade County case.
...
The judges found that the Missouri Department of Social Services did not contact the father or anyone on his behalf to get his position on the childs best interest. The father is not named in court documents."

'Stop feminising our schools - our boys are suffering'

anthony · 1 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Well, I'm sorry, but in the real world life is full of winners and losers. And right now, the losers are a generation of boys who have been betrayed by an education system that no longer recognises crucial differences between the sexes.
...
The simple truth is that by the time our boys have done 12 or even 14 years in the feminised environment of today's schools, they all ask: "What's the point?"'

Ed. note: These also from Anthony in a closely-related vein:
Job prospects fear as boys shun university
and
Boys flee 'feminised' primary schools

"Indians make up first all-women mission of UN"

anthony · 1 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"India has made history by sending the first all-women police unit to serve with the United Nations Peacekeeping Mission in Liberia.

The 103-member contingent, which arrived in Liberia yesterday, will help strengthen the rule of law and maintain peace in the West African country. The contingent also has 22 men but they would engaged in logistic work and not participate in operations.

...

The Indian women "are the right people at the right time to come here now," said Malor. "They are professional, skilled, capable, and they will be able to do the job just as well as their male counterparts are already doing on the ground if not better in some instances."'

NH Men's Commission Faces Legislative Struggle to Survive

Scott · 1 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men (CSM), the first state commission of its kind in the United States, is set to sunset (expire) in September of this year. Legislation is currently entering the NH House which would remove the CSM's sunset provision and add state funding. Currently, the CSM is prohibited from receiving any state funds, while the NH Commission on the Status of Women receives approximately $120,000 annually, allowing them to have a full-time staff member and budget for research projects.

Passage of this renewal legislation is expected to be difficult, as opponents of the CSM's work are well-entrenched in the NH political system. Furthermore, there is a worrisome lack of awareness about the Commission's work, something which we ask for your help in changing. Read More to continue...

Mom gets 10 years for drowning kids

anthony · 1 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

How many years in prison would a father have received if the circumstances were reversed?

Excerpt:
"A woman convicted of letting her three young children drown in a car that sank in a lake was sentenced Thursday to 10 years in prison.

Amanda Hamm, 30, was convicted in December in the deaths of Christopher Hamm, 6, Austin Brown, 3, and Kyleigh Hamm, 1, who were trapped in the car in Clinton Lake in 2003. She was cleared of first-degree murder charges that would have sent her to prison for life."

"Hitting back: the brutal face of domestic violence"

Anonymous · 2 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The new Women's Aid campaign, showing celebrities made up to look as though they have been battered, literally hits you in face. Honor Blackman with her eye bruised and bloodied. Fiona Bruce with her mouth puffed up and swollen.

It says, loud and clear, that domestic violence can happen to anyone. Even the rich, powerful and famous can fall victim to a man's fist."

Read the comments. They show a surprising awareness of domestic violence against men. The article and the campaign, however, do not.

Australia: Lobby groups muddy family law

Anonymous · 2 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

No end to what will be done to and what people will believe about men and fathers. Disgusting! Read here. Excerpt:

'Last year in Australia, amendments were made to family law to support children's rights to contact with both parents after divorce, changes which included extra protection for children from violence. Yet these welcome changes are under attack from women's groups afraid the new laws will undermine the licence given to mothers to shut fathers out of children's lives.

The cries of alarm began long before the changes made it into law. Look at the National Council of Single Mothers and Their Children, which makes clear its position on the irrelevance of fathers with its insulting slogan – "Half the couple, twice the parent".'

Warren Blackwell Interview

AngryMan · 3 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Interview with Warren Blackwell, an innocent British father who spent over three years in prison on trumped up charges of sexual assault as the result of a false accusation by a woman called Shannon Taylor, who has a history of mental illness and convictions for dishonesty. He talks about his experiences and offers advice for other men.

"Wild Ila" Finally Kills - Her Son is the Victim

Martian Bachelor · 3 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

A 45 year-old woman with a 25+ year record of domestic violence, child abuse, disturbance, and other 'petty' charges killed her 19 year-old son Thursday. Police "said there is no indication the argument was physical before the stabbing." Full story.

Notice there's no mention at all of any involvement with the local DV agency, "Tessa" (formerly The Center for Prevention of Domestic Violence) -- a supposedly award-winning organization with programs that serve as a model for other such agencies around the country, according to their website.

DV Equity Advocates Make The Capitol Weekly

Matt · 3 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks to Marc A. for letting us know about this.

Significant exposure for DV equity advocates in California here (.pdf file).

The Capitol Weekly is the newspaper of politics and government in California. Kudos to all involved, and a note of thanks to the reporter who wrote it can't hurt either!

Family Law Reform Advocates Rally To Get Film On TV

Anonymous · 4 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

A Divorced Dad goes to see his kids for a day of fun. But then...

Click here or here.

Can you relate to this man's plight? Are you a noncustodial dad? A noncustodial mom who deals with the exact same things? Is your husband or wife going through this? Do you have a son, daughter, brother, sister, uncle, aunt, friend or coworker who you suffers the same injustices?

If you click the second link above you can watch the short film Any Dad produced by Rich Farr of Krights, a well-known family law reform advocate. Any Dad is receiving positive reviews on current TV.

The more "Greenlights" you give it, the closer it gets to number one. At this time it is the number 11 position! Please take the time to register and vote. You can help get this accurate and moving film on television.

NH Men's Commission Fact #2: Prekindergarten Expulsion

Scott · 4 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In accordance with our grassroots awareness campaign, here is another fact.

FACT 2: The following is an excerpt from the Education section of the CSM's first biennial report:

> The challenges that boys face in school can be traced back as early as prekindergarten. A 2005 Yale University report showed that nationally, boys are 4.5 times more likely than girls to be expelled from prekindergarten programs. Also noteworthy in this study is the observation that "The increased likelihood of boys to be expelled over girls was similar across all ethnicities, except for African-Americans, where boys accounted for 91.4% of the expulsions." (Prekindergarteners Left Behind: Expulsion Rates in State Prekindergarten Systems. Walter S. Gilliam, PhD, Yale University Child Study Center. May 2005 Report.)

Like many other educational issues where boys are at a serious disadvantage, these facts are often overlooked by policy makers and the media. Compiling and promoting this information is another reason the state needs to keep its Commission on the Status of Men alive.

Districts Try to Increase the Number of Male Elementary School Teachers

anthony · 5 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Nationally, there is a huge gender gap dividing the ranks of public school teachers, according to 2005 figures from the National Education Association. Of the 3.7 million teachers today in the United States, just 25 percent are men, a number that has stagnated for years despite efforts to increase that percentage."

St. Petersburg College initiates new male enrollment program

anthony · 5 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The number of male students is dwindling quickly enough that SPC recently created a support group, tentatively called Men on the Way.

Through tutoring, scholarship counseling and maybe even social outings, Men on the Way is aimed at increasing the college's male enrollment."

"Women are not Oppressed" by Bernard Chapin

anthony · 5 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"It seems that nothing will ever satiate the activist's desire to unbalance the playing field as they have "championed blatant favoritism toward mothers in child custody disputes, often to the point of vilifying fathers" which has resulted in a stance best described as "maternal chauvinism."

"Are women treated as objects in our society? Of course not, the only justification for such thinking arises from their often being handled like religious relics. Pleasing them and meeting their needs is now the basis of our societal structure along with our domestic laws, consumer goods, and perhaps television"

RADAR ALERT: VAWA is Not Helping Women, Report Shows

Matt · 6 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

It's no secret that the Violence Against Women Act often ignores civil liberties and discriminates against male victims. But everyone assumed that at least VAWA was beneficial to women.

RADAR's latest Special Report, "Has VAWA Delivered on its Promises to Women?," reveals this belief may be false.

Packed with DoJ statistics, scientific studies, and actual examples, the report dissects, analyzes, and explodes the myth that VAWA is good for women.

The Special Report documents that:

1. VAWA programs have not affected overall trends of intimate partner abuse.
2. Aggressive prosecution policies are placing women at greater risk of subsequent violence.
3. Real victims of violence can't get the help they need because the system has become flooded with the laughable "David Letterman-type" cases.
4. "No-drop" prosecution policies routinely ignore women's wishes for counseling and repair of the relationship.
5. Ineffective DV policies may lull women into a false sense of security.
6. Draconian law enforcement and prosecution programs ensnare women.
7. Female perpetrators of domestic violence don't get the services they need.
8. Abuse shelters aren't meeting the needs of victims.
9. Overly-broad definitions of child abuse allow children to be removed from their homes.
10. VAWA policies and programs serve to escalate partner conflict and harm children.

This report is a must-read, no-holds-barred critique of our nation's domestic violence system. The report can be seen at: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Has-It-Delivered-on-Its-Promises-to-Women.pdf.

The report follows the RADAR report, "A Culture of False Allegations: How VAWA Harms Families and Children," which was released last week. That report documents how VAWA undermines families and places children at greater risk of abuse: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-A-Culture-of-False-Allegations.pdf.

So this week, we call on you to read the report, "Has VAWA Delivered on its Promises to Women?", then forward this Alert to all your friends, media contacts, and elected officials, so they know "It's Time to Fix VAWA."

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++
Date of RADAR Release: February 5, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Astronaut arrested in alleged kidnap attempt bull · 6 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

“An astronaut drove 900 miles and donned a disguise to confront a woman she believed was her rival for the affections of a space shuttle pilot, police said. She was arrested Monday and charged with attempted kidnapping and other counts.”

“Nowak raced from Houston to Orlando wearing diapers so she wouldn’t have to stop to urinate, authorities said.”

I can’t help but wonder if NASA has become desperate to find qualified females to fill token slots on their shuttle missions? How else could this “Astro-Nut” have been able to pass muster? Presumably, candidates are subjected to psychological tests to determine their fitness. Were there no signs of problems when she was evaluated?

The ever-expanding definition of rape digitalhermit · 6 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Here is an article detailing the expanding definition of rape to cover even intercourse after consent has been given.

As shown in the outlined court case, even if you pull out within a few seconds after she says 'stop', you can still be convicted of first-degree rape. The only rational choice that remains is to avoid sex altogether.

Talk on the Collapse of Fertility Rates at the CRC Conference

Thomas · 7 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Last November I had the pleasure of speaking as a member of a panel at the Children's Rights Council's Conference. The focus of the panel was on no-fault divorce, while my purpose was to address the role of the breakdown of male-female relationships in the international collapse of fertility rates (FRs). One of the main points that I hoped to make clear was that the often ignored concerns of men must be addressed in any attempt to correct the problem.

The video can be viewed here.

NH Men's Commission Fact #3: Men and Mortality Rates

Scott · 8 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In accordance with our grassroots awareness campaign, here is another fact from the NH Commission on the Status of Men's (CSM) first biennial report:

FACT 3: Men die at a significantly higher rate from all common causes of death investigated in a 2002 study by the Endowment for Health. This includes:

- Cancer
- Diabetes
- Heart Disease
- Injuries
- Suicide

Here is the full excerpt included in the Commission's report "The Status of Men in New Hampshire": (read more to continue)

"Mortality rates from all causes (cancer, diabetes, heart disease, injuries, suicide, etc.) are significantly higher for men than women. A number of studies document a disparity between men and women's health status and health seeking behaviors."

"According to one study, 70% of the uninsured men surveyed did not have a regular physician. Minority men are most likely to be uninsured and are at the highest risk. The study indicates that health care providers are missing opportunities to incorporate preventive care and anticipatory guidance in the illness or injury related visits most common among men."

"Additionally, screenings for prostate and colorectal cancers are not as well subsidized or funded as breast and cervical cancer screening for women."

"Other gender considerations include depression and suicidal ideation related to gender identification (especially in adolescents) and the issues of domestic and sexual violence."

Stop for a moment and think about these facts. Consider how they impact your loved ones and the people in your community - both men and women.

If we have a Commission on the Status of Women to promote awareness about women's health issues, don't we also need a Commission on the Status of Men to do the same for men's health issues?

Woman Arrested For Trying To Kill Ex-Husband With Wasps

anthony · 8 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A 50-year-old California woman has been arrested for allegedly trying to hire family friends to murder her ex-husband by putting wasps in his car, detectives say."

Anthes: Time has come to reconsider Title IX

anthony · 8 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Title IX strives to equalize all opportunities - not just athletic ones - but reached its greatest fame in sports. For one piece of government code, it has achieved great things.

But the jig is up. The sheen is gone. Title IX has run its course. It's time to say goodbye.

Title IX should be thrown away simply because it does not fulfill its purpose anymore. The text of the law prohibits discrimination based on sex, and a whole new round of discrimination is here. This time men are the victims."

Wife charged with beating husband

Anonymous · 9 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Deputies kicked down a door early yesterday to rescue a man who they said was being pummeled by his wife in his Spotsylvania County home.

Capt. Will Petry said dispatchers received a 911 call from a cell phone about 2:45 a.m. The call came from the Grantwood subdivision, but authorities couldn't immediately pinpoint the location.

A second call came a short time later, and this time dispatchers heard a man in the background screaming for help."

Substitute teacher caught using cocaine in classroom

Matt · 9 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Two fourth-grade students told administrators they believe they saw 59-year-old Joan Donatelli using drugs in the classroom last week.

Police were called in and found evidence of what they think was cocaine. She was charged with child endangerment and banned from the school."

Canada: Man Faces Life in Prison Based Only on Testimony

Matt · 9 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. The convicted man faces a possible LIFE SENTENCE based only on testimony, without proof or even evidence other than what the two accusers said. Let that sink in: LIFE IN PRISON based on uncorroborated testimony.

I am not saying he is innocent; I am saying, is it right that he was convicted for crimes which together carry a potential life sentence based solely on testimony, with no further evidence? Excerpt:

"A former linebacker in the Canadian Football League who is HIV-positive was found guilty of aggravated sexual assault for having unprotected sex with two unwitting women.

Trevis Smith, 30, was accused of not telling the women that he carried the virus that causes AIDS and of lying to one of them who even pressed him about persistent rumors of his malady.

Smith denied the allegations, saying both women were jilted lovers.
...
Sentencing in the case is expected on February 26. Smith faces possible life in prison, the provincial court clerk said.

Neither of the women has tested positive for HIV, said reports."

Feminist Civil War Author on Deck to Succeed Summers at Harvard

Matt · 9 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Hang onto your hats (bonnets), Harvard! Here she is!

Some reading:
Her amazon.com list of books

"For Radcliffe: A 'Founding Dean'", Harvard Magazine, May-June 2000

Harvard University announces Task Forces on Women Faculty and Women in Science and Engineering

Well, is it any surprise, REALLY??!

Time Magazine: Duped Dads Fight Back

Anonymous · 9 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Advocates for these so-called duped dads say such men should be treated as victims of fraud and liken the need for paternity-disestablishment amendments to truth-in-lending laws. They point to many an egregious case in which the law's marital presumption of fatherhood has ended up enslaving a divorced dad, like the Michigan man who proved he had not sired his son but was still ordered to send child-support payments directly to the boy's biological father, who was granted custody after the mom moved out of his place and left the kid there. Increasingly, policymakers across the country are turning a sympathetic ear to such complaints. Florida last year joined Georgia and Ohio in allowing a man to walk away from any financial obligations regardless of how many years he may have been acting as a minor's father if he discovers he was deceived into parenthood. Fathers' rights groups in Colorado, Illinois and West Virginia are pushing for similar legislation that would remove or extend existing time limits for challenging paternity."

Duped Dad Loses by unanimous decision in Florida Supreme Court

Anonymous · 9 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"TALLAHASSEE - Richard Edward Parker seemed to have the perfect evidence to avoid child-support payments: a DNA test showing the child isn't his.

But he lacked something more crucial: timing.

Florida's Supreme Court unanimously ruled Thursday that the Fort Lauderdale boat worker missed a one-year deadline to file a claim against his estranged wife, Margaret J. Parker, for fraudulently representing his paternity when a court ordered him to pay support for the 3-year-old boy in 2001.

Parker didn't even know he was the father until 2003 -- long after the deadline expired -- through a paternity test he ordered when his ex-wife sued him for failure to pay about $1,200 monthly in child support."

Canada: Liberals set to bar men in some ridings in bid to boost female candidates

Anonymous · 9 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal Leader Stephane Dion is prepared to take “extraordinary measures” to boost the ranks of women candidates in the next election, including barring men from seeking nominations in some ridings.

During last year’s leadership race, Dion promised that under his watch at least a third of the party’s candidates in the next election would be women.

But campaign organizers have concluded that the ambitious goal will be impossible to reach without some intervention to secure nominations for female candidates."

Patronizing to women, sexist toward men -- not to mention undemocratic. Nice combo.

Interesting that Stephane Dion didn't recommend that men be barred from running in the recent leadership race that he won.

F4J-USA: Fathers claim inequities in family court

Anonymous · 9 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Fathers 4 Justice, which protested with picket signs on Jan. 12, has scheduled a demonstration from 10 a.m. to noon Feb. 15 in front of the Lucas County Domestic Relations Courthouse, 429 N. Michigan St.

Judi Smith-Phelps, one of Fathers 4 Justice's national board of directors, said they want to educate the public on “real problems in family court.”

“The courts are assessing child support and alimony payments that put fathers in the poor house,” she said.

Smith-Phelps said if both parents are declared “fit,” children should have 50-50 access to them.

She said while some women are affected by court decisions, it is the men who are “overwhelmingly” affected.

“Most of the men would give every scrap of what they had to see their children,” she said.'

Man Freed by DNA Evidence to Get $3.9M

anthony · 9 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"LOUISVILLE, Ky. — A man who spent seven years in prison for rape before a DNA test exonerated him will get $3.9 million from the city, authorities said.
...
Bill Patteson, a spokesman for the county attorney's office, confirmed the $3.9 million settlement with the city."

Amazon.com Promotes Violence Against Men as V's Day Fun

Anonymous · 10 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Amazon.com is running a female-oriented Valentine's Day promotion on their homepage that promotes violence against men. As always, this hate is billed as "simply humor" and "not to be taken seriously". We all know the score on that one, but the fact remains that Amazon.com now has a photograph of the, "man-shaped knife holder" on its homepage.

You know what to do...

RADAR ALERT: Take Back Valentine's Day from the Abuse Industry

Matt · 11 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

We here at RADAR would like your help to make sure that Valentine's Day retains it's traditional value as a special time to celebrate and enjoy the love, honor and respect that most men and women still hold for each other.

We need your help because some revisionists are using 'The Vagina Monologues' play as a vehicle for hate and condemnation, and a new, inappropriate symbol for Valentine's Day. They want the V of February 14th to be remembered, instead, as a symbol condemning men as being insensitive, cruel, abusive, stupid and uncaring. Worse, 'The Vagina Monologues' is disingenuous. It rightfully condemns male/female rape, but wrongfully celebrates female/female rape. See: http://www.ifeminists.net/introduction/editorials/2004/0127.html.

Annually, hundreds of showings of the 'The Vagina Monologues are performed around the country every year – mostly on college campuses. And hundreds of editorials trumpet an unseemly level of respect for these hate-filled offerings.

What To Do:
Watch for announcements of 'The Vagina Monologues' productions and supporting editorials in your neighborhood. Compose an email to producers/editors and mail it using one or more of the below suggestions. Remember that Valentine's Day is Wednesday. So do this as soon as possible.

- Tell them that most men – contrary to the hypocritical message of hatred portrayed by the 'The Vagina Monologues' – actually love, honor and respect their women, and have done so for centuries.
- Tell them men have built magnificent temples and statues out of respect for women.
- Tell them the rape of a girl by a grown woman, as portrayed in 'The Vagina Monologues', should not be held in high regard while at the same time casting men as evil for doing the same.
- Tell them that St. Valentine has been a traditional symbol for the encouragement of love and affection between the sexes. 'The Vagina Monologues' serves only to encourage men and women to despise and distrust each other. This is a high insult to the St. Valentine's tradition of mutual love, honor, and respect, which deserves to remain exalted and preserved.

And remember to have a Happy Valentine's Day!

++
Date of RADAR Release: February 10, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Documentary Filmmaker Seeks Stories

Anonymous · 11 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Rick Sudborough is shooting a documentary on Divorce Horror Stories. He lives in Las Vegas. Anyone who wishes to tell their story on camera is invited to do so. Filming in done in Las Vegas. Rick can be reached at: 702-947-0806.

Ed. note: I called him and confirmed his number and intent to post the request.

Female Teacher Gets Jail Time for Sex Crime

anthony · 11 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Sarah Dickerson, 26, now of Morton, was charged last July with five counts of aggravated criminal sexual abuse. The former Spanish teacher was accused of having a sexual relationship with a 17-year-old male student.
...
Judge Kevin Fitzgerald sentenced Dickerson to 180 days in jail and 48 months of probation. She must pay a $2,500 fine and restitution to the victim's family for counseling fees."

"V-Day should stand for more than just vaginas"

anthony · 12 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"As Valentine's Day approaches, tradition suggests images of gentlemen ordering flowers for a special someone and of ladies planning a romantic night on the town. This year, however, students on many college campuses are rethinking these traditional displays of affection in favor of "V-Day." But don't bother looking for the term "V-Day" inside any of your Valentine's Day cards, because Cupid has been kicked off campus."

A Gift Lures An Unsuspecting Dad To His Death

anthony · 12 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Jarrod Davidson was gunned down outside of his Santa Barbara apartment in July 2004, after someone had left what he thought was a gift — a potted plant — at his front door.

As 48 Hours correspondent Maureen Maher reports, Jarrod, 27, was going through a nasty custody battle at the time of his murder.

...

Jarrod Davidson was going to go back to court to try to get full custody of that girl," says Sorenson. "And that is the last thing they wanted to have happen."

"They wanted him out of their lives. They wanted him out of the picture," the detective claims.

Just 19 days before that hearing, Jarrod was murdered.'

It's Official, and by Unanimous Consent: Faust is In!

Matt · 12 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Yep-er, Mme. Faust has received the nod from Harvard's Alumni Board of Overseers-- unanimously, no less!

The move as you can imagine does not come without its critics, yet even at Harvard. Take a look at this one brave soul's commentary. And this is what one blogger at IWF has to say.

Watch in wide-eyed wonder as events unfold.

NH Men's Commission Bill Scheduled for Hearing

Scott · 12 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Late last week, the bill to remove the September 2007 expiration of the NH Commission on the Status of Men and provide it with funding has now entered the NH House. It is now known as HB704.

The first step this bill must take is to be passed by the NH House Executive Departments and Administration (ED&A) Committee. This committee consists of 20 representatives. (read more to continue...)

Woman pleads guilty in womb attack

anthony · 12 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman pleaded guilty Monday to attempted homicide, assault and kidnapping for trying to cut a fetus from her neighbor's womb. Peggy Jo Conner, 39, was accused of plotting to steal Valerie Oskin's baby and pass it off as her own. Both Oskin and the baby survived after a boy on an all-terrain vehicle spotted the two women in a clearing."

Kenya: Uncircumcised pupils sent home

Matt · 13 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Warning for parents in sub-Saharan Africa: Failing to subject your sons to MGM can lead to denial of education, law or no law. Story here.

Wonder if there would be a mere shrug of the shoulders in response were these pupils girls? "But," some say, "what if circumcision actually does decrease HIV transmission?" Well, so would FGM, too, by the same reasoning: reduction of mucosa, surface area, etc. But that's no excuse-- or is it? Apparently when talking about boys, it is. Excerpt:

"The pupils were told not to return until they had completed the procedure.

'Please do the needful within two weeks and let your son report back to school with you immediately he is well,' a letter to parents from the school said.

Circumcision is not obligatory for admission to secondary school, but a study released in December said it reduced the risk of contracting HIV/Aids."

Male Russian soldiers (abused and) 'used for sex'

Evil White Male... · 14 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Why must "used for sex" be in quotes as the headline?! Here we have a group of men forced into prostitution, brutally abused and eventually had their genitals mutilated.

How soon will this end up in a UN human rights abuses report or as part of a major report on the sexual exploitation of men in the world.

Of course the question was rhetorical as we know the answer will be never....

Glenn Sacks' Latest Newsletter Reports Opportunities for Activism

anthony · 14 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This week's e-Newsletter from Glenn Sacks is filled with good stuff. Excerpt:

"Outrage: Detroit News Ad Warns Men--Get Her the Right Valentine's Day Gift or She'll Punch You in the Face

Jeff Brown, an astute reader, sent me the incredible ad above, which has been appearing on the front page of the Detroit News' website this week. It urges men to buy the women in their lives sufficient Valentine's Day gifts or they'll get a punch in the face (note the man's black eye). The caption is "Don't let this be her response.'
...
NOW Leader Tells Women to Divorce Their Husbands for Valentine's Day, Take Their Money, 'Hit Them Where It Hurt$'

Feminist family law attorney Sherri Donovan, National Counsel for the National Organization for Women, is urging women to greet their husbands this Valentine's Day with the words, "Happy Valentine's Day -- Let's Get Divorced!!"

Let your voice be heard!

Essay: Senate Republicans Should Fend Off U.N. Feminist Treaty

anthony · 14 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here.

Phyllis Schlafly...another individual who I personally feel is an ally towards our movement...

Excerpt:
"The notion is downright ridiculous that American women (the most fortunate class of people who ever lived) should submit to a treaty that dictates uniform rules for 185 other nations, all of which treat women worse than the United States. Ratification of conventions would be craven kowtowing to radical feminists, exceeded only by the treaty's unlimited capacity for legal mischief."

Female Teacher Gets "Probation" in Field-Trip Sex Case

anthony · 15 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

$500 dollars?

Excerpt:
"Janet Klatt, 44, of Charlotte, was charged with sexual activity between a school personnel member and a student, a felony offense. She entered an Alford plea and was given 30 months' probation and was ordered to have no contact with the male student and to pay a $500 fine and court costs."

India: Another false rape accusation

Anonymous · 15 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The falsely accused man (now acquitted) tells his story. His wife accused him of raping his daughter.

Story here. Excerpt:

"I later came to know from Khadesahib that Sangita was behind the entire conspiracy. She wanted to take possession of my Nallasopara flat (costing Rs 6 lakh), jewellery worth Rs 50,000, and also my job. She even applied BMC to give her the job in my place, since I was in jail for 'raping my daughter.' Fortunately, the BMC rejected her application, because as per rules, jobs are given only to kin after the employee dies in service. In the Palghar court, Sangita said she was unaware as to where I worked! At the same time, she wrote to the BMC for employment!"

Police: Woman ties up lover, drinks his blood

Evil White Male... · 15 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Tiffany Sutton apparently wanted to drink up her lover on Valentine's Day - literally, authorities said.

Police early this morning arrested Sutton, who they believe may have tricked her acquaintance into having "kinky sex" so she could drink his blood.

The victim, 45, and Sutton, 23, were lying in bed naked at early Wednesday when Sutton asked if he wanted to be tied up and he consented, police said.

But that's when Sutton reportedly pulled out a knife and cut the victim's leg, police said.

Sutton reportedly told him that she "likes to drink blood" and made several cuts to his upper body, police said.'

POOR DEAR, I HOPE SHE GETS THE TREATMENT SHE SO DESERVES...

Legalities around Health Costs Encourage Divorce Among Elderly

Martian Bachelor · 15 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

MSN.com has a story here primarily on the way high costs for long-term care and the counter-productive structure of Medicare/-caid have conspired to cause a huge surge in the divorce rate of the elderly:

"The population of divorced people over 65 has exploded in the past 15 years, and elder-law attorneys suspect money is at least partly to blame."

The comments of one expert to the effect that two-thirds of otherwise happily married older couples refuse to even consider the idea of divorcing for purely monetary reasons suggests the problem could be much worse. The current cadre of elderly is perhaps the last which was raised solely with traditional values about marriage being a life-long commitment, and they'll start to be replaced with Boomers with much different attitudes over the coming decade.

The article was written primarily from a personal finance planning perspective and didn't address possible changes in public policy, though you'd think this would be of concern to the family values and pro-marriage crowd.

Essay: Senator Joseph Biden: A Wolf In Sheep's Clothing

anthony · 15 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'Senator Biden needs to get his facts straight. On May 19, 2006 the Center for Disease Control confirmed that over 150 studies have found females are equally likely as males to engage in domestic violence and dating violence. The Senator is helping to continue to hide the other half of that "dirty little secret."'

Ralph Fiennes Finds out the Hard Way

Matt · 16 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Well, hard to feel too much sympathy for Mr. Fiennes; chalk it up I guess to lessons learned. She'll capitalize well off of it, but he is likely to pay! Story here. Excerpt:

"The Qantas stewardess who claimed she rejected an amorous Ralph Fiennes on a flight to India has admitted having sex with him in an aircraft lavatory.

...

Miss Robertson, 38, told friends she was so overwhelmed with the moment that she did not care who was listening, what they saw or what they assumed had been going on.

That is in stark contrast to what she told her bosses at Qantas.

In a statement, she portrayed Fiennes as the villain, claiming he had followed her into the lavatory where he made his intentions clear.

...

It emerged that the liaison with Fiennes could prove rather profitable for Miss Robertson, who was declared bankrupt three years ago.

She is said to have spent this week negotiating media deals to tell the story of her fling on flight QF123 and has gone into hiding.

...

Police sources said that she had suffered 'burn out' due to the pressure of her job posing as a drug addict to catch criminals.

She left the force in 2003 after two years of long-term sick leave.

Police sources said her condition was serious enough to leave her with a pension of 80 per cent of her wages for the rest of her life.

However, she later fell heavily into debt.

Sydney newspapers reported that she went bankrupt three years ago with debts of £200,000, and still has several months to wait before she is discharged.

Woman, 84, confesses to sex with boy, 11

RandT · 16 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Link to article. Excerpt:

"Officials: Woman pleaded guilty to attempted sex abuse. She will serve 36 months in prison after deal with prosecutors. Sex with foster child in her care admitted in a taped confession."

Will we be hearing about how "lucky" the boy must have been? Or perhaps we'll hear that you can't force a boy to have sex against his will, so he must have been "into it".

UK: Most spiked drink victims actually legless

Anonymous · 16 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Perhaps if a woman claims someone spiked her drink, we should ask if self-diagnosis by a drunk person is the most reliable source of information. Excerpt:

"Researchers at Wrexham Maelor Hospital who tested wobbly hospital patients who claimed their drinks had been spiked found most were simply legless, the BBC reports."

Here is the story.

Woman chops off boyfriend's nipple and penis on Valentine's Day

Anonymous · 16 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

There's a bit of gold in the article, a quote from the victim:

"Reynato said that if he had married his girlfriend like the mom wanted, she probably (the mom) would not have stopped nagging them anyway and he saw no need of marrying her as it kept their relationship much more alive that way."

That's the attitude we all shoud have, we just need to avoid women who "warned him that if he did not get her what she wanted after staying with him that long, then she would cut off a part of her body that he loved the most."

Article here

Man who isn't father must pay child support anyway

anthony · 16 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Once again, Missouri judges have ordered a man to pay thousands of dollars in child support for a child he didn't father.

This time, even the child's mother agrees the man is not the father. Yet a state agency says he is, because he was married to the woman when she gave birth.

The state wants David Salazar thrown in jail, and an appeals court on Tuesday agreed."

How VAWA separates children from fathers

anthony · 16 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"It has become de rigeur for women to claim false allegations of violence in order to gain the upper hand in divorce and custody courts. The mere allegation of domestic violence is enough in many states to affect the child's access to a noncustodial parent. Programs instituted by the VAWA often leave kids in jeopardy and promote a society of fatherless children."

Judge Judy Discusses Paternity Fraud On Larry King Live

anthony · 18 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Transcript here. Excerpt:

"Judge Judy:

If you have somebody who finds out two years, or three years, or five years, or 10 years after the event that he's not a child's biological father, and who wants to be relieved of that obligation, is it right to say to him, sorry, you may have been defrauded but the child's best interests require you maintaining that parental relationship with the child and, therefore, we are not going to order a DNA test? And even if we do, we are not going to say you're not the father. You're going to pay support forever. Unreasonable."

Another Female Teacher Accused of Having Sex With Teenage Boy

anthony · 18 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Kirsten A. Kinley, 27, a special education teacher at Marriotts Ridge High School, turned herself in to authorities Thursday after learning about a warrant for her arrest on charges of sleeping with a 15-year-old boy in 2004 and 2005.

She was charged with two counts of third-degree sex offense, two counts of fourth-degree sex offense and two counts of solicitation of a minor. She was released on $75,000 bond Thursday night."

Why yes, MSN, you are, in fact, better-off single!

Matt · 18 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

MSN's editorial character once again takes a turn and out comes this. It lists the many reasons one is better-off single but alas neglects to mention the legal-risk factor.

But even stranger, MSN also asks women if they are not afraid of commitment themselves, then lists the ways this can manifest itself! That article is here. Excerpt:

'For years, it was the men who had the monopoly on commitment-phobia. But what about commitment-phobic women? Yes, women! Raised to believe that men are the commitment-shy gender, many women coast through life completely oblivious about their own commitment anxiety—believing they want a relationship yet systematically pushing away one perfectly suitable candidate after another. Isn't it high time we looked at ourselves and admit that maybe, just maybe, we are the ones who have become commitment-challenged?'

Wow... mark this date in song and legend!

Black Widow Almost Escaped

Luek · 18 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

The link above is about the appeal of a black widow who was convicted of 1st degree murder in Michigan of all places and sentenced to LWOP. A political hack state circuit court judge overturned that sentence and reduced it to second degree murder which would have made her eligible for parole in a short time. However, that was appealed to the state appeals court which reinstated the original sentence of life without parole. The political "fix" may have been in because the female governor is rumored to be working behind the scenes to free this vicious killer.

NJ court ends father's parental rights because mother poses risk

anthony · 19 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The state Supreme Court today terminated a father's parental rights, ruling that he's unable to provide a safe home for his 4-year-old special needs son, largely because the presence of the alcoholic and mentally retarded mother poses a serious risk to the boy.

Experts found that the mother had the intellect of a child, periodically ran away from home for "alcoholic binges," and made repeated false charges of domestic abuse.

Although we are mindful of the mother's limitations, it is the father who established the dangerous situation at home, who maintains those conditions, and who is unable or unwilling to substantially alter those conditions," Zazzali wrote.

Teacher beats up on students in gym class

Matt · 19 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. What was she thinking, perhaps getting the little girls ready for Army training? Excerpt:

"PICO RIVERA, California (AP) -- A first-grade teacher was placed on leave after she allegedly hit and kicked fifth-graders who ran through her class during physical education, school officials said.

Ten-year-old Lauren Lopez said she and her classmates at Meller Elementary School were told by another teacher to run laps Thursday morning, and as they ran by the first-grade teacher's class she "just started tripping and kicking kids."

The girl said she and 11 other classmates had bruises and scratches. Pupils also said the teacher urged her first-graders to fight with the older children."

RADAR ALERT: Outrage Over Sen. Biden's Latest Put-Down

Matt · 20 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Presidential candidate Joe Biden has a habit of saying the wrong things at the wrong time, like his recent remark about Illinois Sen. Barack Obama being "clean." This past week, Biden had this to say about male victims of domestic violence:

"There is no doubt that we have made tremendous progress battling domestic violence in the past decade ... Everyday women, children and sometimes men, in Delaware and across the nation live in fear in their own homes."

"And sometimes men," Mr. Biden???

Men are just as likely as women to be victimized by partner violence – a fact that was already well-known to researchers back when Sen. Biden first wrote the Violence Against Women Act. But thanks to Sen. Biden's VAWA, men who need help are instead ridiculed and shunned. Or worse – they're labeled "abuser" simply because they're men, and their abuser is labeled "victim" and given a free pass.

Besides discriminating against victims based on gender, VAWA also routinely violates the civil rights of the falsely-accused.

This week, RADAR is asking every person who reads this Alert to make a 1-minute telephone call to your two state senators. Their phone numbers are listed below.

When the receptionist answers your call, state your name and city of residence. Then explain:
"The Violence Against Women Act has engaged in widespread discrimination against male victims of domestic violence. I am calling to ask Senator _____ to help reform this harmful law."

If the receptionist requests additional information, refer them to RADAR's Special Report, "VAWA Programs Discriminate Against Male Victims" (http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Discriminates-Against-Males.pdf)

Your call will make it easier for our lobbyists to get the face-time they need to explain why VAWA requires a total overhaul. And let's hope Mr. Biden makes for a better presidential candidate than constitutional law professor. See the RADAR site for a list of all the senators' phone numbers by state.

++
Date of RADAR Release: February 20, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to assure that the problem of domestic violence is treated in a balanced and effective manner. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

McMissile wielding mom gets 2 years in prison

Anonymous · 20 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This article describes a mother unable to control her violent reactions simply because she was cut off in traffic. She threw a fastfood cup full of ice into the other person's car. Thankfully no one was hurt but often times the law is supposed to consider not just what DID happen but what COULD have happened.

My favorite part however, which is something everyone should vote on, is their poll, in which one of the options is: "No. Nobody got hurt and society will be worse off with a mother in prison for this crime"

I wonder how the vote would go if it was a father, would society be worse off with him in prison? As an added bonus, the father is off serving his country in Iraq while the mother is getting herself arrested while she's responsible for 3 children.

Exposed: the myth of the World Cup ‘sex slaves’

Matt · 20 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. First it was DV increasing during the Super Bowl, then trafficked sex workers/slaves for the World Cup. All a bogus tissue of lies. Seems men getting together in large groups and enjoying themselves largely out of the company of women is so scary to feminists, they have to do whatever they can to spoil the fun. Good thing the BS-meters are working, though. Excerpt:

"Last summer, lurid headlines claimed that 40,000 women would be smuggled by sex slavers into Germany to be prostituted to World Cup football fans. The truth is very different indeed. Newly unrestricted European Union documents reveal that the German police uncovered just five cases of ‘human trafficking for the purpose of sexual exploitation’ related to the international football tournament.

Despite a huge ‘awareness-raising’ campaign, the setting up of telephone hotlines run by non-governmental organisations, and extra police checks on Germany’s borders, the prostitution scare stories, boosted by an unholy alliance of European left-wingers, feminists, police officers, Christians, the American right and US President George W Bush, have turned out to be pure fiction."

UK: Marriage rates plummet to record lows

AngryMan · 21 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'While the number of unmarried adults rose in 2005, the number who chose to wed dropped by 10 per cent, producing the lowest marriage rates since they were first calculated in 1862.

Figures released today by the Office for National Statistics show the marriage rate for men was 24.2 per 1,000 unmarried men aged 16 and over, down from 27.8 in 2004.'

Best of Craigslist: Man thwarts paternity fraud mens_issues · 21 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I found this rather interesting story on "Best of Craigslist" regarding a man whose girlfriend tried to entrap him into marriage (and child support) by getting pregnant by a "bad boy." Little did she know that he had had a vasectomy shortly before meeting her. The rest of the story is ... priceless!

Steve

UK: "Life for girl, 17, who stabbed pregnant love rival to death"

AngryMan · 21 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A teenage babysitter who stabbed her employer to death after becoming infatuated with her young boyfriend has been jailed for life

Kelly Ross murdered her rival, mother-of-two Tracy Ann Meade, in a fit of jealousy after becoming terrified she would lose her new lover.

...

Yesterday an Old Bailey judge told Ross, now 17, she would have to serve a minimum of ten and a half years in prison.'

Admin note: Spiked-drink submissions

Matt · 21 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

All,

We keep getting submissions for the recent spiked-drinks-aren't-really-spiked articles as reported in the UK press. Please note that this story has already been published here on MANN.

One reason a submitted story might not get published is that it or another posting covering the matter already has been. [Use the site search if you are not sure that a particular story has or hasn't been published yet on MANN.] But if you want to add a different link or other commentary you have for a particular issue, just post it in the 'Comments' section of the relevant MANN posting.

Supreme Court of India: Abuse, threat by wife ground for divorce

Anonymous · 22 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Complete story here. Excerpt:

'NEW DELHI: In probably the first case of its kind, a husband sought divorce from his wife on the ground of mental cruelty.

The latter was convicted by the trial court for murdering their three children, threatening to lodge false cases against her husband and even going to the extent of threatening to kill him.

On the day of her conviction by the trial court in Rajasthan, she threatened her husband with dire consequences. As she was pregnant at that time, she was granted bail and while on bail, she filed dowry harassment cases against her husband, which the police after investigation certified as false.'

Wimbleton to pay female atheletes more than male athletes

Anonymous · 22 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Don't let this article's title fool you. While they claim to be paying them an equal wage, women athletes at Wimbleton play fewer matches per set than the male athletes, so they're being paid more.

Iran plans "men-free" tourist island

Matt · 22 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In the name of religious purity, no men allowed on an island for no other reason than that they are men! Story here. Seems that Iranian women need a "men-free" island in order to be safe to enjoy their vacations. And it's in line with Islamic law, too (seems they are picking and choosing when to implement it and when not to, aren't they?).

"Men-free". Like "Rodent-free", or "care-free". Men-free banks, men-free subway cars, men-free hotels, men-free islands...

Another woman's solution to her driving woes: shoot first and ask questions later

Anonymous · 22 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

After the earlier article about the woman who couldn't handle being cut off, here's one who solved her problem of people tailgating her, with a gun. Excerpt:

'A 39-year-old armed Macomb Township woman couldn't handle the pressure of her morning work commute, police said today.

According to the Macomb County Sheriff's Office, Bernadette Head, 39, in a 1993 Chevrolet Cavalier, entered I-94 westbound from Hall Road about 8:10 a.m. Wednesday when a Dodge Ram pickup rode her tail.

When the 46-year-old driver from New Baltimore eventually pulled up alongside her, she pointed her 9mm handgun and fired one round at his tires.'

Update on "McMissile Mom": She gets probation

Matt · 22 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Looks like she won't be doing any time. As reported previously, the woman who McMissiled another driver is now getting probation.

Story here. The article authors bring up the speculation regarding ethnicity and class, but I rather think there is a more compelling "reason": she's a mother. When the perp is a father, it seems to have little effect in these cases, does it? Excerpt:

'She said that she stands by her decision to report the incident, believing that Hall's actions were potentially dangerous and certainly illegal, but that the punishment should fit the crime. She called the jury's sentence "excessive."

"Finally, while one can argue that incarceration may help to discourage others from this type of behavior, this would come at a very high price for Ms. Hall -- a price that in my opinion is too high," Fowle wrote. "Surely the publicity that this matter has already gotten should discourage any thoughtful person from following Ms. Hall's example."'

Sweden: Feminists get illegal state funding

anthony · 22 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Political party Feminist Initiative (FI) has received a state grant to which it is not entitled.

The state body charged with awarding grants to gender equality projects decided in January to give a total of 8.3 million kronor to 27 women's organisations. One of the beneficiaries was FI, which received an 'establishment grant' worth 400,000 kronor, opinion website Friktion.se reports.

The rules governing the distribution of state grants to women's organisations clearly state that political parties intending to stand for general election are not eligible."

Mother Accused of Beating 9-Year-Old's Head into Brick Wall in Front of Teacher

anthony · 22 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A 9-year-old boy was in protective custody after his mother slapped him and hit his head against a brick wall in front of a teacher, then dragged him in front of the class and invited his classmates to make fun of him, police said."

Woman Sentenced to Life Behind Bars For Death of 3-Year-Old Foster Child Locked in Closet

anthony · 22 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman was sentenced Thursday to life in prison with parole for killing her 3-year-old developmentally disabled foster son by binding him in blankets and tape and leaving him inside a closet for a weekend."

"A day earlier, jurors convicted Liz Carroll, 30, of murder and other charges. Under the life sentence for murder, she has no possibility for parole for 15 years. Some of the other sentences must be served consecutively."

UK: F4J Hijacks Stonehenge

Matt · 23 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks to Marc A. for the heads up on this story. Good work, F4J! Excerpt:

"“THREE men dressed as cartoon character Fred Flintstone evaded tight security and scaled Stonehenge in the latest protest by protest group Fathers 4 Justice.

“They climbed the ancient monument at 9.15 am today and unfurled a banner with the message ‘Drag the family courts out of the Stone Age.”

NH Men's Commission Bill Passes First Step: Gets 15-1 Support Vote in House Committee

Scott · 23 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

It is with a deep sense of gratitude I can report that HB 704, to renew the NH Commission on the Status of Men (CSM), passed its first test with flying colors. The CSM is due to expire in September of this year, and this bill extends it indefinitely. The bill passed the House Executive Departments and Administration Committee on Thursday with a 15-to-1 vote in favor of the bill. Not only that, but members of the ED&A Committee have expressed strong and sincere concerns that the Commission continue its work, and are likely to play an active role in promoting it further. I'd like to profusely thank everyone who sent the ED&A Committee e-mails asking them to support the bill.

Our work is not over yet, though. In order for the Commission to receive funding, its fiscal note of $60k/year must pass the House Finance Committee. I'll post details about that effort when I find out when we can expect the bill to move into that Committee.

NYTimes: "Mom's Mad. And She's Organized"

Matt · 23 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

NYTimes reports on the latest incarnation of we-deserve-it-all-and-our-way-too feminism. MRAs and fathers could take a lesson: organization and collective action are the key to successful lobbying. Alas the sad truth is that it doesn't matter if you're right or wrong, if what you want is fair or not to someone else-- squeaky wheels get the grease... and the money, and the attention, etc., etc. Of course it also helps to have chivalry working for you, too. Excerpt:

'A generation of mothers who are largely perceived as postfeminist in every way, from sex to economic discrimination, has begun a consciousness-raising that is almost old-fashioned were it not for the technology involved. Raised to believe that girls could accomplish anything, these women have reached parenthood, only to find they faced many of the same pay, equity and work-family balance issues that were being fought over decades before. From that awakening, they say, has come the inkling of a new movement.

In many ways, these groups are repackaging issues that have been around for nearly 50 years and have proven intractable despite the efforts of legions of activists, lawyers and elected officials.'

Anderson Cooper Gushes over Women in Prison

Matt · 23 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Read it here. Mr. Cooper is stunned at the number of women in prison and how so many of them are mothers, etc. Not a word about fathers in prison or the difference between how male and female prisoners are treated. He even points out how the prison he visited seemed more like a commune for women and children rather than a prison! Feel free to comment, folks! Excerpt:

'I'm not sure what I expected for a story about women in prison, but I have to say right off the bat that I had no idea it would be about mothers and their children. I was surprised to find that the majority of women behind bars are mothers who are very often the primary caretaker for their children. I hadn't thought so many children would be affected. I also had no idea that, according to the Women's Prison Association, 5,000-10,000 women enter prison already pregnant each year. Pregnant women are just not the visual that comes to mind when thinking about women behind bars.'

Dad wants custody of kids pulled from filthy home

anthony · 23 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The woman who was discovered living with her three daughters in a house filled with feces and other filth in Lindenhurst has been ordered to appear in court after her estranged husband asked a judge Thursday to have the children removed from her custody.

Food, clothing, shelter, heat -- I just want to make sure they're safe," said Ray Young Jr., who has been in a divorce battle with Deborah Young since 2003.

According to documents provided by Quatela, Deborah Young has accused her husband of sexually abusing first one daughter in 2004 and another in 2005. The New York State Office of Children and Family Services ruled that both allegations were unfounded."

The Price of War

Matt · 24 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This photo says it all.

Before you look, be advised, it isn't pretty. It's a wedding photo wherein the groom is an Iraq vet who, it appears, had a bomb blow up in his face. He will I am sure be getting plastic surgery as time goes on, but the picture today is heartbreaking.

Mexico: The Crime of Jealousy

Anonymous · 24 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Here is a new law enacted in Mexico where it criminalizes refraining from sex with your wife. Excerpt:

"Mexican men who display extreme jealousy or avoid sex with their wives could be tried in court and punished under a new law, the special prosecutor for crimes against women told a local newspaper on Friday.
...
Perez Duarte said indifference, jealousy or lack of love were crimes against women just as much as physical violence."

Women Can Be Abusive, Too

Scott · 24 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

We received the following article submission from Michael Geanoulis, Sr:

A revealing research paper on domestic violence (DV) published in the Florida State University Law Review provides a promising new twist to a thorny problem - assuming, of course, it can overcome stereotypcal attitudes and get the attention it deserves.

According to author and Indiana School of Law Professor, Linda Kelly, women can be batterers. Men can be victims. And abuse by females needs to be eradicated, as well as abuse by males. (Kelly, L, Disabusing the Definition of Domestic Abuse: How Women Batter Men and the Role of the Feminist State; Fla. St. Univ. Law Rev, Vol 30:791)

It will be interesting to see how Kelly's 65 page paper is received, as she treads on ground long held sacred and untouchable by women's rights goups, who, according to Kelly, have been influencing every states DV policy using double standards and biased data which discriminate against men. (read more to continue...)

As long ago as 1981, Straus, Gelles and Steinmetz discovered some of the data referred to by Kelly, reporting it in "Behind Closed Doors: Violence in the American Family." Nearly 1.8 million American women were assaulted annually by their husbands that year -- shameful data that was elevated for all to see via inciteful ads posted everywhere trumpeting the fact that "Every 17 seconds a woman is assaulted by her husband."

What the general public never saw, though, was the "real surprise," to quote the authors: 2 million husbands (200 thousand more) who were assaulted by their wives.

In what can only be described as a conspiracy of misinformation, the data on assaulted husbands was swept under the rug. No ads were ever produced depicting the average 16 second time span between assaults by wives on their husbands, or the fact that women are hitting men with higher assault rates.

And so it is, as Kelly warns against, with educational seminars like New Hampshire's annual Conference on DV sponsored by the Governor's Commission on Domestic and Sexual Violence which bills itself to "Improve the Investigative, Judicial, Administrative and Community Response."

Efforts to "improve" seems fair on its face -- except that judges who want to "improve" themselves should not be attending DV conferences loaded with sexist half truths, innuendo and special agendas.

The slide presentations of one Mary Bettley provides us with the best evidence of such bias. What judge could be expected to make fair decisions after being exposed to half truths like, "50% of men who assaulted their wives also abused their children"? Shouldn't judges also be taught the rate of child abuse for women who assaulted their husbands? And be made aware that women are twice more likely to assault their children than men are?

Only half the story, furthermore, was given for the cycle of violence: "He (the boy) sees hitting and learns," reports Bettley. Don't girls learn about hitting from their moms when they see it? Was it Bettley's intention to teach the hundreds of judges and criminal justice people gathered to "improve" themselves, that only males learn about, and do the hitting around the house?

Another example of questionable scholarship comes from Dr. James Knoll, who echoed the Rule of Thumb, a damaging bit of nonsense and myth that was debunked long ago as a libelous falsehood by "Who Stole Feminism" author Christine Hoff Sommers. The rule, which serves as an unfair character assassination that refuses to die and which never existed except in the mind set of the feminist state, held that "men could beat their wives so long as they used a stick no bigger than their thumb."

Dr. Knoll seemed loathe to acknowledge that men have a long record of loving, protecting and glorifying the fair sex -- building magnificent temples to honor women and installing them on high pedestals. Apparently it's more PC and profitable to malign men as cruel beasts, especially at federally-financed conferences constructed to teach that only men are responsible for DV.

Noticed for his absence from the conference was Murray Straus, PhD, director of the Family Research Lab at the University of New Hampshire and world class expert on domestic violence who lives and works in New Hampshire. He was not invited. Was this because of his position that female aggression should not be ignored? Or his revelation that men are compelled to stay in abusive relationships for the same reasons heretofore reserved for women? Or that his life might again be threatened for treading on untouchable topics?

Will Kelly be ignored, too?

DV is equal opportunity abuse that should demand all perpetrators be held accountable on an equal basis if only as a matter of safety for women. Let's hope that reasonable and objective people like Kelly and Straus, et al, can be part of the dialogue going forward.

(Michael Geanoulis, Sr. sits on the New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men. He can be contact by email at geancfc@juno.com)

More from the sports and forced prostitution camp

Matt · 24 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This from Barbados and this from Switzerland.

Looks like the machinery is in gear and soon sporting events will also double as campaigns against men, all in the name of fighting a problem that may exist in some places, just not at football games nor to the extent feminists would have you believe. Seems to me just another veiled attack on space men enjoy just to continue the assault on our senses.

Woman allegedly advised by "geese" not guilty in tot death

anthony · 24 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

It has become so easy for women to use the "insanity card" to escape jail time. Messages from a goose? Are you kidding me? Excerpt:

'A 53-year-old woman who claimed she received spiritual messages from geese before allegedly stabbing her toddler granddaughter to death was found not guilty by reason of insanity Friday.

A judge ordered Carol Lynn Pappas committed to the state mental health hospital, where officials will decide "when and if she will ever be released," said Kathleen Walsh, spokeswoman for the district attorney.'

Site Administration Updates

Scott · 25 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This evening I made a few changes to the software that runs news.mensactivism.org. We are now using image-based captchas for new user accounts and anonymous article submissions. These are those annoying dialogs where you have to type in the hard-to-read text from an image to confirm that you're a human being.

Unfortunately, a good deal of fake user accounts and spam article postings are sent in to us every day, and we need to do something to stop automated bot programs from deluging us with bogus accounts and stories. Logged-in users will not have to go through this system - it's only for people creating new user accounts or submitting news stories anonymously.

Anyone who has legitimately created a new user account which hasn't been unblocked should send a short email to admin@mensactivism.org, and we'll enable your account. Otherwise, in about a week or two I'm going to start culling dead accounts that have never been logged into.

Other related site updates might fix some comment posting bugs that have been reported to us recently. Enjoy.

Winkler Case Update: Murder trial for minister's wife set for April 9

anthony · 26 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Mary Winkler, 32, is charged with first-degree murder in last year's shotgun slaying of her 31-year-old husband, Matthew. Prosecutors have refused to give a motive for the shooting, but Winkler told authorities she shot her husband, a Church of Christ minister, after a night of arguing over finances and other family matters."

Polk Case Update: Wife gets 16 years for killing husband

anthony · 26 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman who fatally stabbed her millionaire psychotherapist husband, whom she met as a 14-year-old girl in treatment, was sentenced Friday to 16 years to life in prison for murder.

Susan Polk received the maximum sentence after acting as her own lawyer in a trial permeated with theatrics, including discussion of her psychic powers and cross-examination of her own sons. An attorney representing her Friday said she planned to appeal."

Air Force captain acquitted of rape charges

anthony · 26 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The defense challenged the veracity of the woman's claims about her behavior during and following the alleged rape. She told the panel she had not resisted or cried out during the alleged assault, and instead had pretended to be asleep because she had been frightened of Merwin. The woman later testified, however, that she also got up after the alleged attack, then returned and talked to Merwin, and accepted a ride home from him the following morning."

For the Falsely-accused

anthony · 26 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

http://www.falsely-accused.net/

Demosthenes Lorandos is a clinical psychologist and attorney at law. He is a nationally-recognized expert with many years of experience in defending those falsely accused of abuse.

Ed. note: Normally I don't post regarding sites that seem to have too much of a commercial ring to them. However there seems to be some good citations and advice on this site for the falsely-accused, so I am making an exception.

"Program Resonates with People: Giving women a chance to change"

anthony · 26 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"People don't understand women who have been in prison," said Penny Painter, executive director of Resonance. "They're not particularly violent. They are in for poverty- and drug-related crimes.

...Crawford said she first smoked marijuana in third grade and started drinking heavily shortly thereafter. She had nine assault-and-battery charges by age 14. She didn't miss a fight."

'Not particulary violent'? This woman had nine violent offense brought against her by the age of fourteen!

Glenn Sacks: Targeting Anti-Father, Anti-Male TV Commercials

anthony · 27 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'In November, 2004 we launched the Campaign Against Anti-Father Verizon Commercial, asking Verizon to stop running the commercial "Homework." In that ad a bumbling father tries to help his little daughter with her homework and is treated with contempt by both the girl and her mother, who orders the father to "leave her alone" and "go wash the dog." Our campaign made 300 newspapers, and the Verizon ad stopped running a few weeks later.

Today we are launching another campaign to combat anti-male advertising. Currently, several advertising agencies are competing for a $150 million advertising contract from Volvo. The agency which is the apparent favorite to win the contract is Arnold Worldwide, the creator of several anti-male commercials. Another, Euro RSCG, currently creates ads for Volvo, and created "Rosi," a popular, father-friendly Volvo ad.'

Veterans and Post-Care

Matt · 27 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Newsweek is covering the problems America is having with caring for its wounded veterans, who are overwhelmingly men.

I find it hard to believe there would be a bureaucracy so slow to move were the ratio of men and women wounded reversed. File this one under "male disposability", and start writing to your Congressoids. Excerpt:

'When he did call the following day, the response from the clinic was even more disheartening: the center was full. Schulze would be No. 26 on the waiting list. He was encouraged to call back periodically over the next two weeks in case there was a cancellation. Marianne was listening in on the conversation from the dining room. She watched Jonathan, slumped on the couch, as he talked to the doctor. "I heard him say the same thing: I'm suicidal, I feel lost, I feel hopelessness," she says. Four days later Schulze got drunk, wrapped an electrical cord around a basement beam in his home and hanged himself. A friend he telephoned while tying the noose called the police, but by the time officers broke down the door, Schulze was dead.'

Motions Filed in Duke LAX Case

Matt · 27 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Defense attorneys for Collin Finnery, Reade Seligmann and David Evans filed the 39-page motion at the Durham Courthouse Tuesday morning.
...
This new filing says they've not been given all the DNA evidence that excludes their clients but includes more unrelated male DNA.'

Do You Resist Women's Instructions?

Roy · 27 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

(For comic relief) - A study posted on msnbc.com finds that when a man fails to help out around the house, his poor performance might be related to a subconscious tendency to resist doing anything his wife wants…. He is displaying what psychologists term "reactance -- the tendency to do the exact opposite of what's requested by a loved one or boss... Says the study's co-author Tanya Chartrand: "My husband, while very charming in many ways, has an annoying tendency of doing exactly the opposite of what I would like him to do in many situations."

Imagine that, a man with the gall to refuse a command from a woman. That dog obviously needs behavior modification! ("Not tonight honey, I've got a headache ...")

Woman Trades Baby for Car

Matt · 28 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This story should make your skin crawl. The myth that only a man may see his children as dispensable is obviously well-refuted by this disgusting display. The truth is that both men and women can be defective caregivers or just plain sociopathic when it comes even to their own children. What will feminists say about this story, that she was forced into doing it by some man or by the oppressive circumstances of patriarchy? Excerpt:

'PUEBLO, Colorado (AP) -- Three people were arrested on charges of swapping a 5-month-old boy for a down payment on a used Dodge Intrepid and cash, police said Tuesday.

Nicole Uribe, 23, is accused of trading the baby to Jose-Juan Lerma, 47, and his wife, Irene, 27, in exchange for the down payment and an unspecified amount of cash.'

Lis Wiehl propagates false statistics

anthony · 28 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

Fox News contributer Lisa Wiehl has recently written a new book, which has been featured several times during Fox's primetime programs. "The 51% Majority" seems like a typical feminist publication. Wiehl's book is getting tremendous exposure with her appearance on the O'Reilly Factor. Promoting misandry and false statistics on a highly rated primetime cable news program is not good news for M.R.A.'s. Excerpt:

"But it is also the worst of times: women are still making just 73 cents for every dollar men make; we have only one woman sitting among eight others on the country's highest court; and domestic violence statistics have been reaching all-time highs. All this, despite the fact that women account for 51 percent — a clear majority — of the general populace."

More on Mothers-in-Prison

Matt · 28 February 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Watch it here on cnn.com, again from Anderson Cooper. So much sympathy... these women are in jail and they live in a giant nursery with their kids. They have kids, or commit crimes while pregnant, and they are "punished" by being given a great environment to raise their kids nearly 24/7. Meanwhile, how are the fathers of these children treated if in prison for the same thing?

England: "The mother of all betrayals"

anthony · 1 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A DOTING dad told yesterday how he brought up four kids as his own — only to find they were all fathered by his wife's secret LOVER.

Cheated Charles Bostock, 69, spent years thinking the three cherished girls and a boy were his children.

He only discovered the shock news when his 49-year-old wife Sarah fell pregnant with a FIFTH child by married love rival Richard Mills.'

RADAR ALERT: Crying "Wolf" Too Many Times

Matt · 1 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Years ago, radical advocates told America that Super Bowl Sunday resulted in very high rates of domestic violence. Last year, the world was convinced that 40,000 female sex slaves would be smuggled to Germany for the World Cup Finals. Radical women's studies departments and students annually celebrate "V-day", a dark substitute for Valentine's Day, to stop rape and sexual abuse of campus women purported to be endemic. Hysteria arose over claims that "date rape" is commonplace. And the Violence Against Women Act is built on the notion that if women are ever violent, it is solely in self-defense.

History proves all the above claims are substantively false. It is time for legislators and the media to expect more than theory or unsupported statistics before playing the fool for radical women's advocates.

Here is the truth on the above issues:

Domestic violence rates for Super Bowl Sunday are only marginally higher than normal (http://newsinfo.iu.edu/news/page/normal/977.html).

German police reported finding only five cases of sex slavery associated with the world cup (http://www.spiked-online.com/index.php?/site/article/2850).

V-Day has been proven to be little more than a self-aggrandizing event to promote feminist values and irrational fear of men.

More recently, the "date rape" myth has been exposed for what it is: a way for binge-drinking women to conveniently and profitably pass the blame (http://www.thisislondon.co.uk/news/article-23385868-details/Drug rape myth exposed as study reveals binge drinking is to blame/article.do).

No major study has ever demonstrated that domestic violence is caused by gender of the offender: men and women are equal initiators of serious domestic violence (http://www.csulb.edu/~mfiebert/assault.htm).

Politicians and journalists who disregard science do great damage to society, families, and children (http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Threat-to-Families.pdf).

Witch hunts have never helped anyone. Journalists can make front-page headlines and do a great service publishing the truth rather than serving as megaphones for the rumor mill so accustomed to leveraging ill-begotten federal entitlements by crying wolf.

Please send this Alert to your local media and politicians. It is important they learn to avoid being a part of the anti-family rumor mill.

++
Date of RADAR Release: February 27, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Women's Health Office Funds Cut

anthony · 1 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The office funds research on male-female biological differences to ensure that women receive the most appropriate drug doses and treatments.
...
"We fear this is the first step toward eliminating the Office of Women's Health," Nolan said. "We must not allow this office to be eliminated or reduced to an empty shell that has no program funding."

Office of Women's Health? I would accept her complaint if an "Office Of Men's Health" was ever implemented.

Argument with your man? Solve your problems with petrol

ItsDan · 1 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Wonderful article here, excerpt:

"In April 2001, Rene's boyfriend went to bed following a heated argument between them. As Guillaume Pungo snoozed, Rene doused the man's private parts with fuel and set them aflame"

Teacher "had sex with" five students

Matt · 1 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

No mention of stat rape in this article. Excerpt:

'CLINTON, South Carolina (AP) -- A middle school teacher accused of having sex with at least five boys -- some of them students at her school -- was arrested, authorities said.

Police began investigating Allenna Williams Ward, 23, after school officials recovered a note containing inappropriate messages, said Clinton Public Safety Director John Thomas.

Ward, who is married, had sexual encounters with the 14- and 15-year-old boys at various locations, including in the school, at a motel, in a park and behind a restaurant, from December to this month, according to arrest warrants.'

Experimenting on (black, male) prisoners is back on the table

Matt · 1 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

What isn't mentioned in this story (video) is that "the prisoners" in question will undoubtedly be all men, all of them or mostly all of them black ones, at that.

The racket is simple enough: incarcerate a man for x number of years and then after some time offer him an option to reduce his sentence in exchange for participating in a "harmless" experiment to test a drug or new product of some kind. Give him limited information, have him sign the forms in some small room with a tiny window looking out on some trees, then he's yours.

Great little system they had going back in the day and it looks like they want a redux. Suppose they'd try this evil scheme on women of any ethnicity? Doubt it.

MSN slideshow "Women who make us cringe"

ItsDan · 1 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This is an interesting insight into what MSN's writers classify as a woman who should make us cringe. I think we can agree with a lot of them, I'm just not sure how they narrowed it down to 10 from such a large field.

Nowak not to be charged with attempted murder

Matt · 2 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'ORLANDO, Florida (AP) -- Florida prosecutors charged an astronaut Friday with trying to kidnap a woman she saw as a rival for a space shuttle pilot's affections, but they declined to file an attempted murder charge that had been recommended by police.

Lisa Nowak, 43, was formally charged almost a month after she was arrested at an Orlando airport parking lot.

Police have said the Houston mother of three had raced 900 miles in her car from Texas to Orlando on February 5 to confront the woman. She reportedly donned a wig and trench coat, then sprayed a chemical into the woman's car when she wouldn't let Nowak in, police said.

In addition to attempted kidnapping with intent to inflict bodily harm, state prosecutors charged Nowak on Friday with burglary with an assault using a weapon and battery.'

Brother does time for incest, but not sister

Matt · 2 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This story (video) from Germany. Regardless of the substance of the crime (incest), the issue here is that it is against German law to have sex with a sibling. It doesn't say it's only illegal if a male does so, but you'd think that was the case. The story mentions only that the man did two years in jail, nothing about the woman.

Boys Education: Colorado schools closing the gender gap

anthony · 2 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Over the years, statistics show girls have surpassed boys in school. They are scoring better on standardized tests, achieving more academic honors, and receiving better grades. Educators call this a gender gap.

The Gurian Institute in Colorado Springs started examining why this is happening. Researchers found that boys' brains work differently than girls' brains, so they must be addressed differently in the classroom."

DV Expert Interview Available On-line

Matt · 3 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From Marc A.:

Springer Publications, a major publisher of public health materials, just posted an interview of the honest domestic violence expert John Hamel, author/editor of "Gender Inclusive Treatment of Intimate Partner Abuse," on gender-inclusive treatment and female violence. Excerpt:

-->Both of your books are based on the concept that men and women are equally capable of abuse against each other. This runs completely counter to conventional thinking, which insists that men are always aggressors and women are always victims. What first led you to this line of research, and what prompted you to begin writing about it?<--

In 1991, I took over a domestic violence caseload and was trained in a variation of the well-known “Duluth” model. In the Duluth theoretical framework, domestic violence is caused by a patriarchal society that sanctions violence by men against their female partners. Women are assumed to be either victims or, when they are found to aggress against their male partners, to be doing so in self-defense.

In group, many of the men I was working with claimed that their female partners were equally or more abusive than they were, and wondered why I wasn’t treating them as well. I had been trained to automatically disbelieve such claims as victim-blaming. However, while many of my clients did in fact seek to displace responsibility for their actions onto others, I found other claims to be quite credible, so I changed my assessment procedures and began to insist on interviewing victims separately. According to the victims themselves, the majority of these cases did indeed involve mutual abuse and, and some featured a dominant female perpetrator whose partner was arrested after fighting back. This clinical data contradicted much of what I had been taught, and led me to conduct an extensive review of the research literature. What I found more than corroborated my clinical findings.'

Erectile dysfunction drugs may protect against heart attacks

ItsDan · 3 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In fairness, the drugs for the most part were originally intended to treat heart conditions, but that's not exactly what they've become most well known for...

Article here. Excerpt:

"Erectile dysfunction drugs may be better than nitroglycerin in protecting the heart from damage before and after a severe heart attack, Virginia Commonwealth University researchers report today.

During a heart attack, the heart is deprived of oxygen, which can result in significant damage to heart muscle and tissue. After the attack, most patients require treatment to reduce and repair the damage and improve their chances of survival. With the exception of early reperfusion, there are no available therapies that are truly effective in protecting or repairing such damage clinically."

Drunk woman tries to crush boyfriend with car

ItsDan · 3 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'A 54-year-old Town of Plymouth woman was charged Friday after authorities say she ran over a man outside an Elkhart Lake restaurant while allegedly driving drunk in the early morning hours.

Anne M. Harvey, of N7041 Apple Lane, was in her car arguing with a 40-year-old Plymouth man — who was standing behind the car's open passenger door — when she accelerated backwards, knocking the man over with the car door and running over his legs, according to a criminal complaint.'

Woman commits fraud, man is charged

Paul J · 3 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'NASHUA, N.H. -- A Nashua man has been charged with selling a car to his sister, who was allegedly using a stolen identity.
...
Marios appeared in Nashua District Court on Friday. He told police that his sister told him that she had remarried and had a new name. He said she told him that the different first name, date of birth and Social Security were because she had left a battered women's program.'

No mention of charges against the female.

India Knight: 'Mugged by a toxic wife'

anthony · 4 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'Unfortunately I've begun to notice that over the past few years the situation has become rather complicated, thanks to the appearance of a whole new breed of woman: one who marries for money, spends her marriage spending money, aggressively takes her husband to the cleaners in a divorce and, having secured X million pounds, moves on to the next hapless sap having a midlife crisis (he sweetly believes that it's his double chin that's reeled her in) and starts the pattern all over again."

Teri Stoddard Essay: "Can't Find a Husband?"

Anonymous · 4 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay by Teri Stoddard here. Excerpt:

'I have bad news for the ladies out there looking for a husband. Today's men are afraid of marriage and having kids. This is most likely because their male friends and relatives have told them what usually happens in the event of a divorce with children. In fact, some men are calling for a marriage strike.
...
If we want men to embrace the idea of family life, we need to ensure they have equality in family law. Equal parenting laws, favored by 85% of people polled, need to be passed nationwide and a Federal Family Rights Act needs to be established immediately to protect families dealing with Child Protective Services and parents in divorce and child custody cases. The time has come to restore human and civil rights to all fit parents.'

USC student charged 2nd time in baby's death

ItsDan · 5 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

Prosecutors refiled murder charges against a USC student accused of abandoning her newborn son's body in a trash bin after a judge dismissed the original count.

Superior Court Judge David Wesley said Friday there was only sufficient evidence for Holly Ashcraft to stand trial on lesser charges of involuntary manslaughter and child endangerment.

Teacher Charged With Having Sex With Student

ItsDan · 5 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'A northwest Harris County junior high school teacher has been accused of having sex with a student, KPRC Local 2 reported Monday.

Harris County sheriff's officials said a deputy caught teacher Emily Willis with the 14-year-old male student near Greenhouse Road and West Little York Road at about 1:45 a.m. Saturday.'

RADAR ALERT: VAWA, I-VAWA, and CEDAW: Why Men Now Fear Marriage

Matt · 5 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Misery Loves Company - Have A Piece Of VAWA/I-VAWA Pie

In 1996 Congress found "Marriage is the foundation of a successful society." In 2005 the Deficit Reduction Act provided $150 million a year for healthy marriage promotion and fatherhood. So why was the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) extended in 2006, when it directly affects the stability of marriages and relationships between fathers and children in America? (http://mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Threat-to-Families.pdf)

The way VAWA is written, a woman can report that she's in fear, and with just her word she can get a temporary restraining order and emergency child custody order. Every day innocent fathers visit their children in jail-like supervised visitation centers and are forced into anger management classes, sometimes for years. (http://mensnewsdaily.com/2007/02/26/cant-find-a-husband)

American men are turning away from marriage and parenthood; many simply won't risk losing everything, including their children. John Burke speaks for many when he says,

"I can think of a dozen people off the top of my head that fear having children. I really wish the world would smarten up. I have often thought of giving up and just going to a third world country where these crazy lobby groups have not destroyed the countries yet."

Hopefully, it's not too late. Even though it's clear that VAWA is seriously flawed (see http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-A-Culture-of-False-Allegations.pdf),Presidential candidate Senator Joe Biden wants to export this wretchedness to other countries. Biden plans on introducing two bills, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW), a dangerous treaty promoted by the United Nations, and the International Violence Against Women Act (I-VAWA).

According to Domenico Fumagalli, President of Papa' Separati Lombardia, VAWA-influenced Pari Opportunita is already harming families. They are currently distributing a "highly violent" TV Spot, declaring that one out of two women in Italy are abused in their homes" (http://www.papaseparatilombardia.org/on_line/home.asp) With CEDAW and I-VAWA in place, we'd see more families destroyed, and more fatherless children worldwide.

Is this a gift we want to give our international friends? Members of Biden's own party have expressed concern that the U.S.' unilateral intervention in Iraq has grievously harmed the perception of the U.S. in world opinion. How much lower will our reputation sink in the eyes of our international friends if Congress arrogantly assumes the power to write laws for other countries, then uses the power of the purse to impose them by treaty.

If you want to protect our international friends from the heartbreak and devastation our citizens have to endure, send this alert to your local media and representatives. Tell them to REJECT CEDAW AND I-VAWA.

To learn more visit http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/RADARflyer-Why-Stop-CEDAW-IVAWA.pdf and http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/RADARflyer-CEDAW-and-IVAWA.pdf

++
Date of RADAR Release: March 5, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Sacks & Leving: Utah Bill to Punish ‘Deadbeat Dads’ Is Based on False Assumptions

anthony · 6 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"While fathers are usually blamed for divorce’s negative economic impact on children, what’s often overlooked is the simple fact that the income that once supported one household cannot support two at the same level, no matter how many punitive measures the government employs or how much fathers pay. Those who insist that the average child’s standard of living will not or should not decline after a divorce are kidding themselves."

Australia: Another baby boy thrown away - all 'concerned' about the mother

GaryB · 6 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This story on News.com.au is a classic. Woman dumps a baby in a public toilet, in a plastic shopping bag. But, of course, police hold 'grave concerns for the mother's wellbeing, fearing that she may be suffering emotionally'. Poor thing. And of course should a father ever dump his baby in a toilet, he'd be lovingly looked after. Right.....

Baby does best with dad off work, study finds

AngryMan · 6 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

'Children are more likely to suffer development problems if their fathers do not take paternity leave or spend enough time with them when they are very young, according to an analysis of thousands of babies born around the turn of the millennium.

A report published today by the Equal Opportunities Commission and based on research tracking 19,000 children born in 2000 and 2001 found emotional and behavioural problems were more common by the time youngsters reached the age of three if their fathers had not taken time off work when they were born, or had not used flexible working to have a more positive role in their upbringing.'

Mom Pleads Guilty To Using Baby As Weapon In Fight

ItsDan · 6 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

'A woman pleaded guilty Tuesday to swinging her 4-week-old son like a bat to hit her boyfriend during a fight, fracturing the infant's skull in the process.

Chytoria Graham, 27, pleaded guilty to aggravated assault and endangering the welfare of a child under a plea agreement with prosecutors.'

Sacks & Leving: Scott Peterson in a Space Suit

Matt · 6 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

First appeared in the Philadelphia Daily News, this by Sacks and Leving. Excerpt:

'Lisa Nowak is receiving widespread sympathy, in part because she is legitimately admired for being an astronaut. But a large share accrues because she's a woman, and our society—both men and women—views women's misdeeds more sympathetically than men's.

The media is soft-pedaling numerous aspects of the Nowak case. Practically every media outlet has explained Nowak's decision to wear astronaut diapers on her journey to allegedly attack romantic rival Colleen Shipman as a bizarre, freakish action indicative of her mental instability. In reality, Nowak acted with logic and calculation—she did not want to stop several times on the way from Houston to Orlando and leave a trail of convenience store camera records behind her. For the same reason, when Nowak arrived in Orlando she disguised herself, checked into a hotel under a fake name and address, and paid cash.'

Sen. Clinton Openly Plays 'Gender Card'

anthony · 6 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"WASHINGTON — Democratic front-runner Hillary Rodham Clinton called Tuesday for the majority of voters — women — to help her break the nation's highest glass ceiling by electing her the first female president.

'Today, women are a majority of the voters, a majority of students in college...'
...
The senator from New York is part of a generation of women who broke the so-called "glass ceiling" of advancement for females in the workplace, but she said the current government should do more to ensure that women receive equal pay for equal work."

Among Tech Execs, Men Face Gender Wage Gap

anthony · 6 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"But according to the report, female professionals actually surpass their male counterparts in salary among specific job titles. Help desk professionals, earned $40,937 on average, 4.8 percent more than men; technical writers at $73,816, made 2.5 percent more than men. IT executives (CEOs, CIOs, chief technology officers, vice presidents and directors) earned an average of $109,912, or 1.4 percent more than men."

Unfair system? Child support reform urged

anthony · 6 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Many non-custodial parents across the country are in similar or worse circumstances after being ordered to make child support payments that are high relative to their income.
...
David L. Levy, chief executive officer of the Children's Rights Council, a Washington D.C. based nonprofit advocating "meaningful and continuing contact" between children and both parents, said shared custody arrangements are better than systems that create a "custodial" and a "non-custodial" parent.'

Woman goes undercover as a Man

digitalhermit · 7 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

ABCNews is running a story about a woman who decided to go undercover as a man to discover how men really behave around each other. She discovered that (shockingly!) the differences between men and women were much more than skin deep.

Excerpt:

Her experience with these men turned some of her long-held perceptions about men being harsh and rejecting and women being warm and welcoming upside down.

"I mean, it was just the most wonderful rush to get these guys' handshakes, and I felt comfortable, I mean as comfortable as I could feel, right away. They just took me in … no questions asked," she said.

Ed. note: This is a reprint of a story ran in Jan., 2006. However, the content is so incisive, it bears repeating. If you missed it the first time, don't skip it now.

Ex-guard at juvenile center arrested in teen boy's sex assault

Martian Bachelor · 7 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Yet another story involving a woman in a position of trust/power... Excerpt:

'A former security guard at a Colorado Springs juvenile detention center was arrested Tuesday on suspicion of having sex with a 14-year-old boy who was held there in 2005, police said.

Erin Hutchinson, 31, was a guard at the state-operated Zebulon Pike Youth Services Center for 4½ years before she was fired in July, according to Mary McGhee, a spokeswoman for the Colorado Department of Human Services.'

Announcing XYVideo: A new YouTube Channel

Anonymous · 7 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

We are pleased to announce a new men's activism YouTube channel: XYVideo.

XYVideo puts the spotlight on issues affecting men.

http://www.youtube.com/xyvideo

We'll continue to post up-to-date news stories on issues that affect men, equality, and men's rights. Subscribe to the channel, offer your story ideas and links, comment on the videos, and help spread the word!

Help keep the channel current. Submit videos and story ideas by sending a note to 'xyvideo' on YouTube.

All comments and discussion on the videos are welcome and encouraged. Inappropriate or inflammatory posts will be removed.

Thank you for subscribing. We look forward to building one more channel for men and men's rights around the world!

Early Registration for Third National Men’s Equality Congress Open

Matt · 7 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This year's congress will focus on the theme 'Boys and the Boy Crisis' Visit http://www.trueequality.com/ to read about it. Early registration for the congress, including the three pre-conference workshops to be given by Matt O'Connor of F4J, Glenn Sacks and Warren Farrell, can be done here. This year's congress is going to be great! Register early for savings, and block the July 13-14 weekend on your calendar.

Read Joe Biden's Letter to Fully Fund VAWA

Roy · 7 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The following excerpt is from Sen. Joe Biden's latest letter to Congress soliciting support to fully fund the 2008 VAWA budget, at over $1 BILLION!

"In 2005, Congress reauthorized the landmark Violence Against Women Act (VAWA), which both continues successful and lifesaving programs and crafts new initiatives to end sexual assault, domestic violence, and stalking. While the federal fight to end these crimes is over ten years old, our resolve must not fade. Nearly 25 percent of u.S. women report that they have been physically assaulted by an intimate partner during their lifetimes and 1 in 6 have been the victims of attempted or completed rape.

The cost of intimate partner violence exceeds $5.8 billion each year, $4.1 billion of which is for direct medical and mental health care services. In fiscal year 2008, we must remain committed to ending domestic violence, sexual assault and stalking. Accordingly, we urge you to fully fund the VAWA programs in the Department of Health and Human Services at the authorized level of $320 million and fund the Department of Justice VAWA programs at the authorized level of $683 million."

The complete letter and other documents are viewable on the web site of the rad-feminist National Network to End Domestic Violence.

Nowhere in Biden's appeal is there any mention of a need to acknowledge male DV victims, let alone fund services for male victims of domestic violence.

Link here.

NYC Teacher accused of raping student

ItsDan · 8 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Yes that's right. Raping. R-A-P-I-N-G. Not "abusing", not "contributing to the sexual experience of a minor", not "making happy time with little Timmy", or one of the other ridiculous charges that come up when it's a female perpetrator. Article here. Excerpt:

"Marcia Amsterdam, 30, was charged with second-degree rape, second-degree sex abuse and endangering the welfare of a child, according to a statement released by the special commissioner of investigation for the New York City School District"

Submission Guidelines Added to Freq. Asked Questions

Matt · 8 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In response to an inquiry, we copied the guidelines for submissions from the old site archives here to the Freq. Asked Questions menu item (look to the left under "Main Menu" for this link).

Also, please when submitting a question to MANN admins, use the admin@mensactivism.org email address. This allows us to respond directly to you and also to respond faster, as well as guaranteeing that the entire MANN admin team will get to read your note.

Vids on anti-male DV laws, marriage

Matt · 8 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks to Deb C. for the heads-up on these two vids:

"Anti-male laws regarding DV":
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5-6ArB3Db9I

"Why men should not get married":
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=GaF1dSDTw4k

What is so great about these vids is that they were made by a young man. It shows he is aware of these issues and isn't going to let himself get fooled.

Want to save these to hard-drive? The how-to is here.

Letting a woman open a door for you may cost you

ItsDan · 8 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Ridiculous case about a woman suing after she was injured while holding a door open for someone. Excerpt:

'A woman who was injured while holding open the door for customers at the Edwardsville Pizza Hut filed a personal injury suit against the restaurant and the man to whom she extended the courtesy.

Amanda Verett claims she was walking out the door of Pizza Hut on Feb. 12, when she held open the door to allow herself and co-defendant Clarence Jackson to exit.

"Jackson grabbed the door in such a fashion that it caused the door to suddenly and sharply move," the complaint written by Edwardsville attorney Tom Maag states.

Verett claims she was injured as a result of the sudden and sharp movement of the door.'

Mother gives birth to child, stabs it in the neck

ItsDan · 8 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Police said Lauren Jones, 24, of Sarver, Butler County, admitted to giving birth to the newborn in the basement of her mother's home, and then stabbing it in the throat afterward."

India: First "Men's Day" to be Sept. 16

bharati · 8 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The news link is here. Ends with a slogan,
"We bear the double burden and that is why our day is also double."

LSU Women's B-Ball Coach Resigns Over Affair With Student Player

Martian Bachelor · 9 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Full Story.

She had taken the team to two Final Fours, was 90-14 as LSU's head coach, and making "close to $400,000 a year" (plus post-season bonuses). Excerpt:

'BATON ROUGE, La. -- Pokey Chatman resigned as the head women's basketball coach at Louisiana State on Wednesday after the university became aware of an alleged inappropriate sexual relationship between Chatman and a former player on Chatman's team, sources told ESPN.com.

The university, the sources said, learned of the relationship from an employee within the basketball program. It was unclear when the alleged improper conduct took place. '

A (fairly) balanced report on India's DV law

Anonymous · 9 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This is a surprisingly balanced story (in a US newspaper) on India's new DV law.

I sent this mail to Ms Jaisingh who drafted this law, and is quoted in this news item. Let's see if she responds to my mail!

"Dear Ms Jaisingh:

I read your comments on India's DV law in this US newspaper http://www.centredaily.com/220/story/35314.html This is what you say about the law Despite a few flaws, say lawyers like Ms. Jaisingh, crimes against women have always been dramatically higher than those against men. "The aim of this law isn't to go against men," she says. "It's to stop violence in homes."

Just two questions:

1. If the aim of this law is to really stop violence in homes, why not extend the protection of this law to ALL victims? This law applies only if the victim is a woman and the abuser is a male adult, or a relative of the woman's husband. Even if we assume that incidents of DV against men are few, that does not mean these are acceptable. Also, the definition of DV under this law is so wide (includes insults, ridicule), that it's hard to believe that men are not subjected to such violence.

2. You say that the aim of this law is not to go against men. But this law is heavily loaded against men. Under this law, a woman may file a case against any adult male in her family. The judge can issue a protection order based on mere prima facie satisfaction that DV has taken place, or is likely to take place. Later, the woman may accuse the man of violating the protection order. At that stage, it becomes a criminal case, and the judge may convict the man based on the sole testimony of the woman and send him to jail for upto one year, or impose a fine of upto Rs. 20,000, or both. So the underlying assumption here is `men are liars, women are truth-tellers'! Under this law, it's very easy for a woman to make a false accusation of verbal or emotional violence, and get away with that. At both stages (civil and criminal), the man can be held guilty of DV based on the sole word of the woman. Is it fair? Doesn't this amount to depriving the man of his personal liberty without the due process of law?

Hoping against hope that you'll be kind enough to give a clarification on these points.

In my earlier mail, I explained how this law denies protection to male victims. It also denies protection to certain female victims. e.g. If a woman (W) is insulted, ridiculed by her sister (S), this law is no help. Because S is neither an adult male, nor a relative of W's husband. Similarly, a daugher in law may harass her old mother in law, and this law is not applicable. So the protection of this law is given on a very selective basis.

Governor-General tells male soldiers to "get down on their knees" and thank the female soldiers

Anonymous · 9 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Canada's Governor-General (our appointed head of state) made a visit to Afghanistan yesterday too visit the troops for Women's Day.

After the photo op she "jokingly" told the male soldiers that they should "get down on their knees and pay tribute to women soldiers".

http://www.metronews.ca/story.aspx?id=34774

The GG has a blog with forums that users can post comments on here:

http://www.citizenvoices.gg.ca/en/forums/

Don't bother looking for a men's section to leave a comment on. Only "women", "general" and "belonging" appear to apply. But there's plenty of threads started relating to men's issues in those.

German man chainsaws house in two in divorce split

anthony · 10 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

This guy obviously went too far, but it does show how fed up men are with the inequities of divorce. Excerpt:

"A 43-year-old German decided to settle his imminent divorce by chainsawing a family home in two and making off with his half in a forklift truck.
...
After finishing the job, the man picked up his half with the forklift truck and drove to his brother's house where he has since been staying."

True Equality Network

Matt · 10 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

A new activist group has formed called the True Equality Network. They are already quite active in working to stop I-VAWA and other such institutionalized injustices. Please take a moment to visit their site and sign up for their e-newsletter.

'"The question to those who support VAWA is: What are the scientific, ethical, and moral bases being used to justify supporting a system that knowingly excludes the majority of abuse victims and their children from receiving any support or services, while ignoring the majority of the perpetrators?"
-- Terri Lynn Tersak, True Equality Network'

Why is it 'Manhunt' and not 'Womanhunt'?

ItsDan · 11 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Is it a bit ironic that the feminist movement has for years pressured politically correct speech, congressperson, mail carrier, etc, but none of them ever thought to push for a woman version, or gender neutral version of manhunt? Excerpt:

"The abduction sparked a manhunt and multiple Amber Alerts in Texas and New Mexico. Tips about the abduction came in from across the region and the country, Hudgens said.
...
Just before midnight on Saturday, Lubbock investigators received a call from a person who reported that a woman matching the description of the person who had abducted Mychael, Lubbock police said in a statement."

Had to read five paragraphs before it mentioned the kidnapper was a woman.

Women's anger: "it's genetic" oregon dad · 11 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This article gives women the ultimate aliby - "it's genetic" when they are angry, abusive, catty, bitchy, murderous? Excerpt:

'Not your fault

The results counter some common beliefs that women are to blame for their hostility. And genetic tests for anger could help predict a woman's likelihood of other anger-related diseases.

"Aggression and hostility are predictors of hypertension, glucose metabolism and heart diseases," Halder said. "The genetic marker we found for hostility also may be useful for predicting a person's predisposition to such diseases."'

Texas Mother Who Buried Infants Under House Charged With Murder

anthony · 11 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The mother of two young children whose decomposing bodies were found wrapped in plastic bags beneath a house this week was arrested Saturday and charged with capital murder.

Valerie Lopez, 19, was arrested early Saturday along with her boyfriend, authorities said.

Lopez confessed to beating to death Sariyah Garcia, her 18-month-old daughter, and hiding her body beneath her home, Police Chief William McManus said. Sariyah died Christmas Eve."

"The boyfriend, Jerry Salazar, faces a charge of injury to a child by omission. He was aware Lopez was abusing her children"

I wouldn't be surprised if he receives a longer prison sentence than the mother.

UK: E-petition for split custody on Downing Street website

Anonymous · 11 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I've posted an e-petition on 10 Downing Street's Website (UK) asking for the government to change the UK law so that when a relationship breaks down like in most of Europe the law presumes that custody is split. At present Uk law states that children automatically go to the mother. This is sexual discrimination enshrined in the law.

If the law said children went to the father instead I'm pretty sure women's groups would be up in arms, or if the law stated that certain jobs weren't open to women can you imagine the uproar! And rightly so. If the law were changed women would be more protected form less than enthusiastic fathers, grandparents would have greater assurance of seeing their grandchildren, fathers could be proper fathers instead of every other weekend. Above all children would be allowed the opportunity for balanced parenting and good male role models.

At present unless the mother agrees to split custody then THERE IS NOTHING a father or child can do to reverse this. Even when the child is 12 and the court will listen to their wishes more fully the expense of a court battle looms and it is unlikely that the court will force the issue leaving children in the impossible position of having to hurt one parent.

Please, look at the full petition, sign it if you agree but above all I'm trying to create a chain letter effect. So please put it on any forum you can, e-mail everyone you know and ask them to pass is on, tell everyone you know. Quite frankly any male reading this could be a victim of this discrimination in the UK at some point and many women will see the rough end of it too when new realtionships are being damaged by contact issues from previous ones or they have grand kids they can't see.

Come on folks, together we can make British culture change. If the law changes most people will follow the lead it gives.

Ed. note:
From the site: 'You must be a British citizen or resident to sign the petition.'

"Oprah's School" in S. Africa Earns Prison-like Reputation

Matt · 12 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Looks like "O" is showing her true colors via her girls-only, boys-are-bad, gulag-inspired "school". Just what is this woman trying to prove anyway? Excerpt:

'They would have aired their concerns during a satellite link-up with the chat show queen a week ago, but that was cancelled at short notice by the school's management body.

Meanwhile the school seems to have made the rules even stricter. Until now, the girls could receive visitors every fortnight, but parents can now only visit them once a month.

Frances Mans, foster mother of Gweneth Mulder, said last week she would take her daughter out of the school if the rules were not changed.'

RADAR ALERT: Tell Senator Lugar: "Don't Export Family Break-up. Say 'No' to I-VAWA."

Matt · 12 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Senate Foreign Relations Committee chairman and presidential-hopeful Joseph Biden plans on asking the U.S. Congress to legislate for the entire world! Author of the well-intentioned but deeply flawed Violence Against Women Act, Biden will soon be introducing an international version, dubbed "I-VAWA." This would be accomplished by awarding grants to other countries to implement VAWA-like initiatives.

For a reminder of how the U.S. version of VAWA has undermined the basic freedoms and legal protections that once characterized the U.S. as a free society, read RADAR's recent alert at http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20070129.php.

Many members of Congress have expressed concern that foreign countries' resentment of the U.S. has increased due to our unilateral action in Iraq. That resentment will pale in comparison to the resentment that will result if Congress passes I-VAWA, and thus assumes the right to impose legislation on other countries.

Thus it is especially important to tell Sen. Richard Lugar, the Ranking Republican Member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, that the U.S. should not be wasting hundreds of millions of your tax dollars to impose our own flawed policies on foreign governments through I-VAWA.

This week we are asking every one of you to call, fax, or email Sen. Richard Lugar's office:
Phone: 202-224-4814
FAX: 202-228-0360
Email: senator_lugar-at-lugar.senate.gov

In your call or letter, please emphasize the message:
"Don't Export Family Break-up. Say 'No' to I-VAWA." Since I-VAWA will directly affect citizens of other nations, we'd like to suggest that our friends outside the U.S. not hesitate to let Sen. Lugar's office know their opinion of this proposed law.

As always, be sure to express your opinion in a polite and respectful fashion.

++
Date of RADAR Release: March 12, 2007
Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Canada: Pregnant teacher accused of sex with boy

Anonymous · 13 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Toronto family studies teacher has been charged with sexual exploitation for allegedly having an inappropriate relationship with a student.

Police said Crime Stoppers received a tip early this month revealing a romantic and sexual relationship between a female teacher and a male student, aged 15 or 16.

...

The teacher, who is not married, is seven months pregnant.

"The board is aware that this teacher is pregnant, but any connection between this alleged offence and that, obviously we have no idea," Toronto District School Board lawyer Grant Bowers told CTV News.

But the student has since left the school, raising suspicions.

"Early indications are that the reason the student left school is directly related to that pregnancy," Toronto police Det. Peter Duncan told reporters.'

Interesting that he is referred to as a "student" -- not a "boy". No doubt, if the sexes were reversed, the teacher would be a "sexual predator" and the victim a "young girl".

Prosecutor: Women Conned Homeless Men Into Signing Life Insurance Policies Before Murdering Them

anthony · 13 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Checks and life insurance forms show that two women made millions from the deaths of two transient men they are accused of killing, a prosecutor said in a preliminary hearing Monday.

Helen Golay, 76, and Olga Rutterschmidt, 74, are accused of befriending the men, convincing them to sign the women's names on to their life insurance policies before drugging and running them over in secluded alleys.

Authorities said the women collected some $2.3 million after their deaths."

Ed. note: This is a follow-up to a previous story reported on MANN in May, 2006 here.

Teacher resigns for taping boy to seat

anthony · 13 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

First ritalin, now tape. Whats next, using a staple gun? Excerpt:

"Monje wasn't charged with a crime because police determined that incident was not child abuse, Cocoa Police spokeswoman Barbara Matthews said.
...
The boy's mother, Donna Negron, filed a report Feb. 23, after her son told her that his teacher had taped him to the table because he wouldn't put his head down."

Woman sentenced for beating six-year-old foster-son

Anonymous · 13 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

A Coeur d'Alene woman was sentenced to supervised probation today for beating her 6-year-old foster son so severely that he was hospitalized with a head injury.

Joyce D. Hibshman, 37, no longer has custody of the boy and two other foster children that were in her home, her lawyer said during today's sentencing hearing at the Kootenai County Courthouse.

Hibshman was arrested in July 2006 after bringing the injured boy to Kootenai Medical Center. Emergency room staff contacted police.

Another foster child in the home told police that Hibshman had beat the boy "for eating mommy's chocolate bars."

Percentage of Men with Eating Disorders Rises Substantially

Matt · 13 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Last month, Harvard researchers reported the results of the first national study of eating disorders in a population of nearly 3,000 adults and found that 25 percent of those with anorexia or bulimia and 40 percent of binge eaters were men.

...

Although disordered eating is well-known among teenage girls and young women, experts say the problem among boys and young men is frequently overlooked by parents and coaches and under-treated by doctors.

...

Eating disorders, Robb and other experts say, appear to be caused by a combination of genetic and environmental factors.

"Genes load the gun, and environment pulls the trigger," said North Carolina's Bulik. "But one of the problems I see for male eating disorder patients is just being taken seriously."

"Frankenstein" Authorship in Dispute

Matt · 14 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Camille Paglia reviews a book entitled The Man Who Wrote Frankenstein wherein the authorship of the book is disputed with evidence showing that Mary Shelley could not have written "Frankenstein", but that her husband, Percy Shelley, was the actual author.

So, what does this have to do with MRA issues? The answer is that Mary Shelley is often held up as a literary luminary by feminists and cited as a long-suffering, poorly-attributed and under-praised female author of a classic novel of modern English-language fiction, as well as being the daughter of an early feminist. That she is not, or may not be the actual author of "Frankenstein", is quite a revelation and one that should give the feminized academic establishment something to chew on. Note to university-bound MRAs: spread the word!

UK Plan to Scrap Women's Prisons

AngryMan · 14 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Women's prisons should be shut down and replaced with small secure units, according to a report commissioned for the Home Office. If adopted by the home secretary, Baroness Corston's approach would see Holloway and about 14 other all-female prisons in England and Wales shut down or converted into jails for men. Story here

Man forced to pay $3,000 for 'intimidating' fitness gym

ItsDan · 14 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here describes a case of not only a man being denied access to a gym because of it being just for women (which I have no problem with, so long as no one has a problem with men's only fitness clubs and other such facilities), but on top of that then being forced to pay $3,000 restitution to the gym for his "improper conduct".

A man behind a failed human rights complaint against a women's-only fitness centre in Burnaby has been ordered to pay the gym $3,000. Gordon Stopps claimed Just Ladies Fitness discriminated against men.

Current Events: Hate Crime or Not? Woman Tirades Against Store Owner

Matt · 14 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Watch the report here (video). This is one to keep an eye on. Will she actually be charged with the heavier hate crime offense? Will only her male companion be charged with it? Neither? Wait and see.

Sprint Commercial: Woman sends two men to the hospital

Demonspawn · 15 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

My letter to the contact listed under Financial and Corporate Communications:

Leigh.Horner-at-sprint.com

Leigh-

While watching the Discovery channel I saw a commercial for the Sprint Blackberry where a woman is searching for her phone. She states that she can't find her phone, and that it has her contacts, her email... The phone rings in one of the guys' pockets. They claim it was just a prank. She gives the guys an angry stare. After that, we see a text message being sent "Frank might be late" and then a scene of her with the two men seeking medical attention.

I have but two simple questions:
Would your marketing department have allowed the advertisement to air if a man caused two women to seek medical attention?

If not, how does your marketing department justify approving this commercial?

KCAL 9 News Promotes Prison Rape, Vigilante Beatings

Matt · 16 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Posted for Marc A.:
In this news video of the mugging of a 101-year-old woman, KCAL 9 News Los Angeles (CBS) reads and displays two letters from viewers, one of which calls for the guy to receive "prison justice" (rape), and the other hopes the guy is "beaten."

I sympathize and feel the anger too. But it is extremely irresponsible of KCAL 9 News to promote prison rape and vigilante beatings. If a seemingly homeless/destitute woman beat and mugged a 101-year-old man, fixing the victim's collar in between blows, would KCAL 9 News read and display letters calling for her to be raped and beaten? Or, instead, would their reaction include speculation about the woman's mental state? I sent KCAL 9 News (CBS) an email at kcbstvnews-at-cbs.com.

Their website has a feedback page at http://cbs2.com/contact.

Marc

Children win share of sperm donor's estate

ItsDan · 16 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

I hope stuff like this keeps happening, the sperm donor pool is going to entirely dry up. Not that I have any issue with sperm donations, but we need to reestablish the lines that are slowly being erased.

Excerpt:
'THREE children have won a share of the estate of a man said to be their sperm donor father after using tweezers to pluck his eyebrows for DNA testing as he lay dead in a hospital morgue.

In a landmark decision, the NSW Supreme Court yesterday granted administration of Willem Wijma's estate to one of those children, ruling against his family's wishes.'

Duke Update: Mum's the word from the accuser

Matt · 16 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Suddenly she is being quite circumspect. Story here. Excerpt:

'March 16, 2007 — The woman who accused three members of the Duke University men's lacrosse team of sexual assault is not being forthcoming with special prosecutors, law enforcement sources close to the case tell ABC News.

The accuser has met at least twice with prosecutors from the North Carolina attorney general's office, which took over the case from Durham District Attorney Mike Nifong in January.

In those interviews, she gave incomplete answers when asked about the alleged assault and the events surrounding it, according to sources.'

Essay: Anti-male Double Standard in Society

anthony · 16 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'Less common, however, is discourse on what words/phrases can be anti-male (such as man-slaughter or men-at-work which both imply that it is only men who experience undesirable afflictions like death and work). This semantic bias is also manifested in how the rules of gender discourse leave men at the door. It is indeed interesting to note that the term "masculism" is seldom acknowledged as a real term in mainstream media (one exception is Wikipedia)...The problem is that the very term “feminism” is sexist (at least on its own). Feminism is a female word, with a feminine prefix (fem-inism). This can implicitly create the taciturn illusion that feminism = equality. This is similar to how gender-feminists insist to define sexism in strictly female terms (despite men obviously being one of the two sexes)!'

McCain Uses Racial Epithet While Avoiding Question About Fathers' Rights

axolotl · 17 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

McCain was answering a question from a man who wanted to know if he would talk about fathers' having equal access to their children after divorce, CNN reported. The quote:

"For me to stand here before all these people and say that I'm going to declare divorces invalid because someone feels that they weren't treated fairly in court, we are getting into a, uh, uh, tar baby of enormous proportions" - McCain

The phrase 'tar Baby' is considered derogatory to Blacks.

Teacher Jailed for Sex with Student

bull · 17 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

"Judge ignores plea bargain and sentences teacher to jail for sex with student."

I get the impression from this video that society is starting to get fed-up with female teachers preying on male students and receiving little or no consequences for their behaviors!

Teen killed after affair with teacher; husband charged

bull · 17 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Of course the poor dear teacher will undoubtedly receive nothing but sympathy even though she preyed on the student and provoked her husband into a rage that resulted in his misfortunate reaction!

Score: 2 males down, 1 female walks!

Article here. Excerpt:

'KNOXVILLE, Tennessee (AP) -- In a tragic twist to a familiar story, a teenager who had sex with his married 30-year-old teacher was fatally shot outside the woman's home, and authorities have charged the woman's husband.

"You see all this stuff with teachers involved with their students. It just comes up time after time on the national news," said Norman McLean, father of suspect Eric McLean. But this time, he said, someone "actually died over it."'

Baltimore Police Arrest, Handcuff 7-Year-Old Boy for Riding Bike on Sidewalk

anthony · 17 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Apparently society treats boys with the same bias as men. Four year old boys accused of sexual harassment and now a seven year old is 'cuffed and arrested. Excerpt:

'Police arrested a 7-year-old boy, handcuffed him and hauled him down to the station house on a charge of riding a motorized dirt bike on a sidewalk."
...
Kikisa Dinkins said her son was sitting on the bike with the motor off on the sidewalk when an officer grabbed him by the collar and pulled him off.

"I told them to let go of my baby," Dinkins said. "Since when do you pull a 7-year-old child by his neck and drag him?'

Female teacher gets a 10-year sentence for rape

digitalhermit · 18 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

A female teacher convicted of molesting a 13-year-old male student actually gets a reasonable sentence for a change! Article here.

With the current extra media attention to female teacher statutory rape cases, it sounds like some judges may finally be getting the message and making sentencing decisions that are more equivalent to what a man would expect in the same situation.

Interesting to see how the defense is spinning it.... Holt's attorney, John S. Malik, said the sentence was much longer than what teachers convicted in similar cases got<. He reviewed 40 such cases and found the average was 18 months to two years. ('similar cases'-- AKA, the typical case when a female teacher is convicted of rape/molestation?)

F4J Announces First Major US Initiative

Matt · 18 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

PRESS RELEASE
14th March 2007

International campaign group Fathers 4 Justice (F4J) today announced plans for its first major US initiative to take place in 2008.

The project called 'Bridge Across America' will see a hand-picked group of fathers and children take part in a sponsored 'crossing' to raise money for young offenders from fatherless families. The unusual road-trip will cross the country from the East coast to the West Cost using a unique form of travel and wearing a 'Pythonesque' theme.

F4J say the crossing will be preceded this year by a series of high profile stunts in the United States as part of its awareness drive.

The group say that Founder Matt O'Connor will unveil details of the trip when he attends a fathers conference in Washington this July with UK activist Jolly Stanesby.

Said O'Connor, "This initiative is designed to do two things. Firstly to unite the fathers movement in the United Sates under a broad coalition. Secondly the aim to is unite fathers and their children using the country as a metaphorical bridge. Fathers 4 Justice is famous for climbing them. Now we need to bridge the social divide in America to make equal parenting a reality."

Fathers 4 Justice say that it is currently looking at sponsorship of the project.

Anybody who wishes to apply to become a volunteer for the trip should apply with their full CV and family case history to office-at-fathers-4-justice.org with the email marked 'BRIDGE ACROSSAMERICA'.

Applicants should allow for a total of 3 months away for the trip as well as time off for a training course and media training.

ENDS
For further information please contact 07795 547 374 or email office-at-fathers-4-justice.org or visit http://www.fathers-4-justice.org/.

True Equality Information Center Releases Paternity Fraud Disincentive Legislative Report

Matt · 18 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From their Mar. 18, 2007 newsletter:

Our report, Modifications to Federal Statutes Required to Disincentive Paternity Fraud (.pdf file) is now released to the public.

This report provides the changes to the sections of the United States Code required to stop paying the states to support paternity fraud.

There are two key changes made in this template;

1. Paternity Establishment can only be made via genetic testing.
2. Both paternity establishments and exclusions can be made up to the child's eighteenth birthday.

Under the current laws, paternity can be established in several ways, none of which actually prove paternity biologically.

http://www.true-equality.org/

Study: Circumcision might increase HIV infection in female partners

RandT · 19 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Link to article. Excerpt:

"In the evolving world of AIDS prevention, the giddiness over studies showing that circumcision reduces a man's risk of contracting AIDS from an infected female partner has died down a bit in the wake of subsequent research."

NYTimes Magazine: "The Women's War"

Matt · 19 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Seems the way out of fulfilling a duty she volunteered for is for a woman is to claim sexual harassment on top of PTSD. Then, going AWOL is fine. In fact, you get a 16-page nationally-syndicated news story about yourself written in a very sympathetic way.

Just try this if you're a man.

RADAR ALERT: RADAR Credits Victories to Lobbying by the "Wise Majority"

Matt · 20 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

We take pause this week to thank the thousands of true advocates for their hard work helping to block CEDAW and possible introduction of I-VAWA. We take note of organizations who devoted resources delivering this message, including the True Equality Network, the American Coalition for Fathers and Children, Stop Abuse For Everyone, the Indiana Civil Rights Council, Shattered Men, and the San Diego Men's Center.

Over the past two years, this "Wise Majority" has spoken, delivering millions of telephone calls and emails to politicians calling for reform of domestic violence laws that hurt innocent individuals and families while rarely helping those who really need it. RADAR is committed to helping the Wise Majority amplify their voices to bring about positive change. We thank you for your help and donations which, in turn, help us all succeed as a team.

Thanks to you, we have achieved much in just two short years of existence:

1. Forced PBS to withdraw the false documentary "Breaking the Silence", and replace it with a new documentary that is more reasonable. (http://www.mediaradar.org/alert_bts10.php)
2. Brought about the rejection of the United Nations Secretary General's Report on Violence Against Women, by the U.N. Third Committee. (http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20061204.php)
3. Forced the Washington Times to retract a false article about abused wives in India (http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20061204.php)
4. Made Reform of Domestic Violence laws a national political issue.
5. Recently launched a major initiative to block passage of CEDAW and introduction of similar legislation known as I-VAWA. (http://www.mediaradar.org/alert20070305.php)

This week we are giving the Wise Majority time off for home, family, and relaxation. You have all earned it. Be ready for an announcement of major significance next week that will give you more tools to work on bringing wisdom to our domestic violence laws.

++
Date of RADAR Release: March 19, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

"Anti-Rape" device set to hit market in South Africa

ItsDan · 20 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. I wonder if anyone has considered that a woman could use this on someone who believes the sex is consensual with equal ease? Excerpt:

'The controversy has raged over whether the device, which has fish-like teeth that attach to the head and shaft of the penis, is a medieval device built on a hatred of men or whether it is an easy-to-use invention that could free millions of South African women from fear of rape.'

No Mention of Taking McCartney for Millions

Matt · 20 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

She wows the audience with her 'courage'. Seems the inconvenient truth that she recently took Paul McCartney for millions is left entirely out of the article. Story here. Excerpt:

'The ABC dancing contest, returning for its fourth season, was a big hit in the past. But adding a new level of interest and curiosity this go-around is the presence of the 39-year-old activist and estranged wife of former Beatle Paul McCartney as one of the 11 celebrity contestants.
...
"You've got more guts than Rambo," said Bruno Tonioli, who went on to criticize not her legs but her top half -- her arms -- during the performance.
...
It may also be a chance to repair an image that has suffered during her bitter breakup with McCartney, from whom she separated last May after four years of marriage. The couple, who have a 3-year-old daughter, began divorce proceedings in July.'

Iowa Senate Judiciary Approves Law Presuming Joint Custody

anthony · 20 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"There is nothing new about politicians kissing babies, but politicizing children is a newer development. Iowa lawmakers have proposed a healthier alternative: The Iowa Senate Judiciary Committee unanimously approved Senate File 507, which would place into law the presumption of shared parenting in the event of divorce or separation.

This would result in more children having the love and care of both parents in their lives, regardless of their marital status."

Smart boys, bad grades?

anthony · 20 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

I hope the education system will not just identify this problem, but make legitimate steps to correct the inequity. The single sex class room experiment (though not mentioned in this article), is a positive step in the right direction. Excerpt:

'This is an issue that affects millions and millions of boys, said William Draves, co-author of "Smart Boys, Bad Grades," who was a speaker at the Building Boys Success Conference at Utah Valley State College.

"The grading system has become gender-biased and is skewed," he said. "There are millions of smart boys who are testing at a very high level and getting really low grades."'

Award for DV Solution Offered

Matt · 21 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

MANN admins received the following e-mail note. Looking at their web site, it seems like the organization is the typical feminist-inspired group. This solicitation represents an opportunity to educate them on the truth around DV. If you are a male DV victim, perhaps it is worthwhile to tell them your story and suggest how DV may be eradicted. Who knows, you might even win the prize! :)

Dear Sir or Madam:

I am contacting you regarding Changemakers Collaborative Competition “No Private Matter! Ending Abuse in Intimate and Family Relations.” We are in search of the most creative and lasting ways to eradicate this cancer in our world.

I am contacting you today to encourage you to consider participating in this collaborative competition. The work of mensactivism.org aligns very well with the goals of our competition and would be of interest to our judges and to our network of leaders in the sector.

You can proceed directly and complete our entry form on line or let me know if you have any questions and I would be happy to answer them. The deadline is quickly approaching; please submit your entry by March 28, 2007 in order to be considered for one of five final prizes of $5000. Please feel free to look over what others are doing in your field worldwide, you can even contact them directly via their contact info or simply commend them by leaving a comment. More important than the prize is you becoming a part of our Changemakers community!

We look forward to profiling your unique innovations to our over 40,000 weekly viewers and to a panel of thought leaders and funders in the sector.

I thank you in advance for your kind attention and consideration. Please do not hesitate to contact me with any further questions.

Warmest regards,

Tyler E. Ahn

Ashoka: Innovators for the Public Changemakers
1700 N Moore Street
Suite 2000
Arlington, VA 22209-1929 USA
(703) 527-8300
tahn@ashoka.org
www.ashoka.org

www.changemakers.net

Sadistic foster mother's 19-year reign of terror

AngryMan · 21 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

A foster mother was found guilty today of subjecting three young children to a "horrifying catalogue of cruel and sadistic treatment".

Eunice Spry, 62, routinely beat, abused and starved the youngsters in her care over a 19 year period. The devout Jehovah's Witness forced sticks down their throats and made them eat their own vomit and rat excrement.

As punishment for misbehaving, she would beat them on the soles of their feet and force them to drink washing up liquid and bleach.

Lover: Suitcase murder suspect wanted divorce

Matt · 21 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. One to watch. Excerpt:

'NEW BRUNSWICK, New Jersey (AP) -- The former lover of a woman accused of killing her husband and stuffing his remains into luggage testified Wednesday that they had both planned to leave their spouses and start a life together.
...
She is charged with first-degree murder in the killing of her husband, a 39-year-old state computer analyst.
...
Prosecutors allege that McGuire used the Internet to research gun laws, pesticides and ways to kill. They say her husband was drugged with a sedative, shot in the head and chest, cut into pieces in the couple's apartment and then put into three suitcases that were thrown into the bay.'

Violent Advertising with Women is Bad - With Men, the Jury's Still Out

bandersnatch · 22 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From The Hollywood Reporter:

'In the wake of a public outcry against Los Angeles billboards and New York taxicab tops advertising the upcoming movie "Captivity" with images of the abduction, torture and death of a young woman, After Dark Films said it will take down the offending ads by 2 p.m. today.

After Dark, its theatrical distribution partner Lionsgate Films and the MPAA received a barrage of phone calls objecting to the gratuitous depiction of the film's star Elisha Cuthbert being tortured and killed.'

I'm sure many of us can easily think of advertising examples with men being abused, killed, etc. Where's the public outcry then? While many don't think men matter, we can change their minds - support Glenn Sacks' campaign against anti-male, anti-father agencies.

Remaining Charges Against the Duke Lacrosse Players Soon to be Dropped?

Dittohd · 22 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Here's the latest on the remaining Duke lacrosse charges.

I hope Nifong permanently loses his license to practice law and he along with everyone else involved either is sent to jail and/or pays through the nose for the unwarranted destruction of the reputations of these three innocent guys, especially that woman who made up the rape charges in the first place.

Men's Rights March in Mexico

Matt · 22 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Posted for Marc A.:
This men's rights march in Mexico took place on Mar. 21, and made it onto Spanish national news (Univision). The website is in Spanish. We made contact with this Mexican movement, which is related to El Circulos, 3 years ago, and it looks like they're still in action!

16-YO Girl Arrested for Sexually Abusing 10-YO Girl

ItsDan · 23 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"A Watertown teen is facing sex and endangerment charges relating to a young girl she was babysitting.

Corinne Robin Lee Bennett, 16, of 21601 Floral Dr, is charged with Endangering the Welfare of a Child and Sexual Abuse 1st Degree in connection with incidents occurring in August and September of 2006."

EJF newsletter - Ottawa's notorious Bill 117 comes to Colorado

Matt · 24 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From the most recent newsletter from The Equal Justice Foundation:

Background

In the fall of 2000 legislators in Ottawa, Canada, introduced Bill 117 that provided that any woman could have a man restrained, imprisoned, and his property transferred to her all in the same day without any pretense of due process. Writing for the Ottawa Citizen, columnist Dave Brown noted:

"The new legislation is based on the premise women in abusive relationships can't escape because they are economically dependent. The intent is to correct this by making it possible to immediately transfer all property to her.

Written into the scheme are ex parte applications. The alleged abuser doesn't have to be present when the order seizing his property is made. Application for an Intervention Order can be made by anyone in a one-to-one relationship, including dating.

...It will take precedence over any acquittal, dismissal or withdrawal of a criminal charge, or any order under any statute, including the Divorce Act.

Transference of property will include leased property, even if she is only a date, and is binding on the landlord. If rent is in arrears, the landlord must collect from him. She will have no liability."

While I understand Bill 117 became law it has rarely, if ever, been enforced as the inherent violations of English law are so blatant that even today's courts would be likely to quickly void it. However, that does not mean the idea and process have faded away.

In Your Lucky Night, written in 2002, I put forth an example of how, under Colorado law, a woman can pick up a man in a bar and end up with all his property and possessions by obtaining an ex parte restraining order claiming abuse or domestic violence.

Since writing that essay many men have contacted the Equal Justice Foundation to tell us how something very similar was done to them. And EJF member Elizabeth has described how an illegal alien has done this to her father and is gaining U.S. citizenship in the process under VAWA, another all-too-common fraud.

Male victims of this fraud have naturally reacted to this outrage by not paying the rent, cutting off the utilities and phone, closing joint accounts and credit cards, canceling insurance, stopping car payments, etc. We have also advised a number of men that their best, and probably only option, was to let the bank foreclose on their house. And many women have found the promises of the DV and divorce industry were a financial and personal disaster for them and the children.

Apparently the number of men unwilling to pay some doxy's rent, or the mortgage on the house where his wife's new boy toy now lives because of false allegations of abuse has become unacceptably large and redfems have demanded draconian legislation to "correct" the situation.

Colorado's Democratic Peoples Soviet to the rescue

State senator John Morse* (D-El Paso County; e-mail:john.morse.senate-at-state.co.us) has been happy to oblige by introducing SB07-136 (.pdf file), which provides that Colorado courts can now require men to pay for:

"...rent and mortgage payments, telephone and utility services, child care costs, temporary possession of personal property, and insurance," when issuing an ex parte restraining order. Note also that there is no requirement that "child care costs" be limited to the man's biological children.

Currently the Colorado Senate has passed this bill unanimously and it is undergoing final passage by the House.

Upon signature by the governor any woman who is angry at her boyfriend, a "working girl" on South Nevada near Fort Carson in Colorado Springs, or a wife having an affair can claim they are "Victims of domestic violence...unable to access resources to seek lasting safety options;"

and have their living expenses guaranteed by filing an ex parte restraining order.

Of course, under Morse's scheme, a man who fails to pay the rent or mortgage, etc., will go to jail for violating the restraining order, no doubt losing his job and income in the process. By casting a man into the street with an ex parte restraining order, and then jailing him, the entire family is now left without support. While that suits the interests of the DV industry and the welfare bureaucracy, it is destroying our society. SB07-136 also claims that "Thirty-three states recognize existing legal obligations for support, payment, or ownership of personal or real property in order to protect victims in civil protection orders." However, Ottawa, Canada, is the only other case I've seen of such complete disregard of civil rights and apparently deliberate attempt to destroy families and marriage.

Feeding the DV and divorce industry

It is also of interest to note that the best estimate of actual domestic violence is from the National Crime Victim Surveys (NCVS) that suggests only 1 in 250 (0.04%) of households a year suffer what citizen's regard as a criminal DV incident. From that estimate there would be fewer than 8,000 DV incidents in Colorado a year. However, for fiscal year 2006 Colorado courts report 7,237 restraining orders were issued for domestic abuse (.pdf file) and 14,123 misdemeanor cases of domestic violence (.pdf file), wherein a restraining order is mandatory, for a total of at least 21,360 restraining orders (felony cases are not included). On the face of it there appear to be 2.5 times more DV court cases than citizens are reporting to the statisticians at NCVS. Clearly there is reason to suspect domestic violence laws are being grossly abused.

It cannot be claimed that false allegations by women in order to obtain a restraining order are uncommon or new. The June 11, 1998, edition of Denver's Westword documented a case of two sisters making a game of charging men with DV. The EJF has heard numerous cases of women getting a restraining order and giving their boyfriend's address as their residence, then selling off all his possessions. A woman in Colorado Springs was caught after her third round of that game. Other women have probably been even more successful. And, when caught, virtually nothing is done to these women.

Additionally, fewer than 8,000 cases of domestic violence a year in a state with a population of 4.7 million does not represent an epidemic and hardly mandates draconian legislation directing the ex parte seizure of men's property in direct violation of their civil rights.

The basis for such tyrannical legislation becomes clearer when we note there were 24,750 divorce (dissolution of marriage) petitions (.pdf file) filed during 2006 in Colorado, a number rather close to the 21,360 restraining orders issued. And what better way to encourage the destruction of marriages, families, and relationships than by guaranteeing a woman the house, the car, the kids, the bank account, and anything else she wants if she files a restraining order or calls 911 without giving a man the chance to defend himself.

The similarity of such measures as SB07-136 to the Russian Effort To Abolish Marriage after the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution seems so blatantly obvious that the Colorado soviet must be either brain dead or deliberately enacting the redfem ideology into law.

Charles E. Corry, Ph.D., F.G.S.A.

---

*The sponsor of this abomination,
John Morse is a freshman state senator without previous experience, who has chosen to dive off the deep end without checking to see if the pool is full of cow manure.

Morse lists his occupation as "executive" but a more traditional title for what he is doing would be commissar.

VAWA Funding Increased by $100 Million

Roy · 24 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

An excited e-mail from Lucy Melvin lmelvin-at-nnedv.org (National Network to End Domestic Violence) announces:

"VICTORY -- The Biden VAWA Budget amendment passed unanimously on 3/23/07! Our efforts paid off! The Biden amendment to the budget will increase the funds available for VAWA programs by $100 million. This is critical in our efforts to increase funding for VAWA in the Budget and Appropriations process for FY 2008. This is a HUGE SUCCESS -- and it is DIRECTLY due to your calls. Now that the Biden amendment has passed, the Senate Budget Resolution includes more money that can be available for VAWA programs."

Read all you need to know at http://www.nnedv.org/

Texas Bill Would Require Genetic Testing for C/S

Matt · 24 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Texas' HB 782 would require a genetic test before a man would be liable for paying C/S. This bill is a true joy to behold.

Please, especially Texas activists, do not hesitate to contact the Juvenile Justice & Family Issues Committee members in support of this bill, as it is currently there. Some very good news: the author if this Bill is Harold V. Dutton, Jr., who chairs this committee.

Brazilian Housewife Convicted for Killing, Frying Husband

anthony · 24 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A Brazilian housewife was convicted and sentenced to 19 years in prison Friday for killing her husband, chopping his body into small pieces and frying it.
...
Citing testimony from the woman's relatives, he said she may also have committed the crime "to avenge many years of humiliation from her husband." He did not provide further details."

Georgia jury convicts woman in murder-by-antifreeze

anthony · 24 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"DALTON, Ga. - A former 911 operator was convicted Saturday of murdering her boyfriend by poisoning him with antifreeze.

Lynn Turner could face a death sentence in the 2001 killing of Randy Thompson, a Forsyth County firefighter and the father of her two children. The same jury that convicted Turner will return to court at 9 a.m. Monday to decide whether to impose that sentence.

She is already serving a life sentence for the 1995 death of her husband, Glenn Turner, a Cobb County police officer. The murder charge in Thompson's death was filed after that 2004 conviction."

PODS Commercial Encourages DV

Anonymous · 25 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

An official sponser of the PGA Tour, PODS (Portable On demand Storage) is running a commercial during the WGC CA golf match. The commercial shows a wife kneeing her husband in the groin when she discovers he has to relocte for a new job and repeatedly punches him in the face when he has to relocate again.

I think we should let PODS what we think about domestic violence against men and also inform the PGA of our thoughts about this. You can contact PODS here.

This is a total outrage.

Ed. note: Can anyone supply a URL to the commercial on-line?

Pizza Boxes Used for C/S Wanteds

Matt · 26 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Seems like even pizza boxes are being enlisted in the war of fathers. A pizzeria in Cincinnati is now featuring child-support delinquent suspects on the covers. Wonder if they have any women? And why don't they use the same thing to find other suspects of some kind? Story here. Excerpt:

'CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) -- Customers at some suburban pizza parlors are getting something extra with their pepperoni and mushrooms -- wanted posters for parents accused of failing to pay child support.

The idea came to Cynthia Brown, executive director of the Butler County Child Enforcement Agency, while she was ordering pizza.

"It suddenly dawned on me that most people running from the law don't eat out, they order pizza," said Brown, whose county is north of Cincinnati.'

Why feminism 'could be bad for your health'

Matt · 26 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

A study done in Sweden suggests a deterioration of the quality of life for people of both sexes entailed by feminist-inspired changes in society.

No sooner is this the suggestion though than the author asserts the real problem is that not enough has been done to enact "the revolution" and so more must be done. Where have we heard this before?

Excerpt:
'The report said: "The results suggest an unfortunate trade-off between gender equality as we know it and public health.

"Sweden may have reached a critical point where further one-sided expansion by women into traditionally male roles, spheres and activities will not lead to positive health effects unless men also significantly alter their behaviour.

"Negative effects of this unfinished equality might be found both for women, who have become more burdened, and men, who as a group have lost many of their old privileges."

Anastasia de Waal, head of family policy at the British think-tank Civitas, urged caution in interpreting the findings.

"The danger is that the data will be interpreted as a warning against shaking up divisions of labour," she said.

"In fact, what Sweden needs is complete gender equality with, for example, men entering the private sphere to the extent that women have entered the public."'

Obama Calls for Independent Inquiry into Nifong's Actions

Matt · 26 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Well, this is good news! Excerpt:

'March 25, 2007 — Another voice has joined the call for a federal investigation into the handling of the Duke Lacrosse case — this one with the punch of presidential politics.

Sen. Barack Obama, D-Ill., in a written response to a constituent, said that an "independent inquiry is needed" into the conduct of Durham District Attorney Mike Nifong.

...

According to Obama's letter, Jones asked Gonzales to "review new evidence that Mr. Nifong withheld exculpatory DNA results from the defendants in order to determine if his conduct has illegally denied the students their civil rights as U.S. citizens under federal law."'

Men's Sports: Title IX challenge

anthony · 26 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"An advocacy group for men's sports that seeks to set aside the three-part test at the heart of Title IX regulations filed a lawsuit against the Department of Education on Tuesday in the U.S. District Court in Roanoke, Va. Equity In Athletics filed the suit in response to a decision by James Madison University to cut 10 teams — seven men's and three women's — effective July 1."

"A Girl’s Guide to Failure"

anthony · 26 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here.

This article challenges Lis Wiehl's new book: "The 51% Minority". Wiehl's book is being heavily promoted on FOX's primetime news lineup. The blatant hypocrisy of her book, combined with numerous fallacies has finally been exposed.

Excerpt:
"To say that women need more rights, as Lis Wiehl claims, is akin to saying that fish need more water. In fact, women, by hijacking the Constitution, are swimming in rights and consequently:

* Own reproductive rights
* Get presumed child custody, child support, and alimony
* Are rewarded for fraudulent maternity
* Can falsely and feloniously accuse men, with impunity, of domestic violence and rape
* Are legally protected when assaulting and injuring men."

Australia: More separated dads looking after kids

ItsDan · 26 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"In the six months to December 2006, fathers who were primary carers made up one-fifth of new cases to the Federal Government agency.

That's a significant increase from June 1997 when fathers were the primary carers in just 7.5 per cent of cases."

RADAR ALERT: I-VAWA Would Worsen a “Repugnant Violation of Fundamental Rights”

Matt · 27 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Domestic violence laws have been shown to be completely ineffective in stopping partner abuse, but highly effective in violating civil liberties, destroying families, and depriving children of their fathers.

Recently the Law on Gender Violence in Spaincame under scathing criticism from chief judge Maria Sanahuja, who said the law has brought about the “massive detention of men for scarcely any reason” which she condemned as “characteristic of totalitarian countries” and “a repugnant violation of fundamental rights.” See the judge’s comments here.

Two weeks ago we asked you to contact Senator Richard Lugar to speak out against the International Violence Against Women Act, a law that would export the U.S. Violence Against Women Act to countries around the world.

This week, we are asking you to contact Senator Lugar again, highlighting the massive civil rights violations that domestic violence laws are causing, both in the United States and abroad.

Please keep your message polite and short. Something like “Please speak out against I-VAWA, so the civil rights of the innocent are protected” is fine.

TODAY, please call or send a fax or e-mail. Here’s Senator Lugar’s contact information:
Phone: 202-224-4814
FAX: 202-228-0360
Email: senator_lugar-at-lugar.senate.gov

Our effort 2 weeks ago generated thousands messages to Sen. Lugar. Can we top that number this week?

++
Date of RADAR Release: March 26, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Woman's war story unravels

digitalhermit · 27 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

An Editor's Note confirms that pretty much everything a woman said about her tour of duty was a fabrication:

"The cover article in The Times Magazine on March 18 reported on women who served in Iraq, the sexual abuse that some of them endured and the struggle for all of them to reclaim their prewar lives. One of the servicewomen, Amorita Randall, a former naval construction worker, told The Times that she was in combat in Iraq in 2004 and that in one incident an explosive device blew up a Humvee she was riding in, killing the driver and leaving her with a brain injury. She also said she was raped twice while she was in the Navy.

... Based on the information that came to light after the article was printed, it is now clear that Ms. Randall did not serve in Iraq, but may have become convinced she did."

Notice the editor's presumption that the woman did not blatantly lie, no that's not possible. She must just have been confused about the truth. Poor thing!

AskMen.com publishes another pro-male article, please voice your support

bandersnatch · 27 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Several weeks ago, Askmen.com ran an article extolling feminism and its benefits. Several members from here posted their comments and voted on the article. After that, Askmen.com ran article about media bias against men. Several members from here again left their comments and voted on the article. Now, Askmen.com has run another pro-male article. Take the time today to leave a comment and voice your support.

Lawmakers Seek to Reintroduce ERA

Matt · 27 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. ERA is a controversal topic even among MRAs. Supposedly the wording insists on gender-neutrality for all laws and legal standards, which in many ways would be progress for men-- however, as we know, when it comes to equality under the law, women are viewed as "more equal" than men, if not out and out just not subject to the same standards at all. My own take is that there is no way a law, even a constitutional amendment, guaranteeing gender-blindness in the law will actually work in any way for men, as long as our society and legal system remains permeated by misandry. Excerpt:

'(CNSNews.com) - Liberal Democrats in the Senate and House plan to resume "the fight for women's equality" on Tuesday, when they reintroduce the Women's Equality Amendment.

Sens. Ted Kennedy (Mass.) and Barbara Boxer (Calif.) and Reps. Carolyn Maloney and Jerrold Nadler, both of New York, plan to join Eleanor Smeal, president of the Feminist Majority, in making the Tuesday afternoon announcement.'

"Antifreeze Killer" Spared Death Sentence

Matt · 27 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Disparities in sentencing based on gender?? Never! Well, maybe... read it here. Excerpt:

'Lynn Turner could have faced the death penalty for the 2001 murder of Randy Thompson, a Forsyth County firefighter and father of Turner's two children. Instead, the jury sentenced her to life in prison without parole.

She was already serving a life term following her 2004 conviction in the antifreeze death of her police officer husband Glenn Turner in 1995.

Lynn Turner maintained her innocence in both cases and did not testify at trial or during her sentencing hearing Monday.

Prosecutors said she was motivated by greed for the victims' life insurance money.'

Ex-wife's sex change doesn't end alimony obligation

ItsDan · 28 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

File this article in the 'bizarre' category. I had to post it mostly because the idiot agreed to pay $1,250 a month for the rest of his ex-wife's life (which is always fun when the guy statistically dies first, hey, she's still alive, who cares if the guy is dead, she needs her money). Especially when you consider how much sex-change operations costs, I wonder how the court justified her needing the money. Excerpt:

"Lawrence Roach agreed to pay alimony to the woman he divorced, not the man she became after a sex change, his lawyers argued Tuesday in an effort to end the payments. But the ex-wife's attorneys said the operation doesn't alter the agreement."

Iran says British woman sailor to be freed

Evil White Male... · 28 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A British servicewoman detained along with 14 other sailors will be released "within a day or two",...

Faye Turney is the only woman among the eight Royal Navy sailors and seven marines [taken prisoner]...'

BOY, THEY SURE PLAY THE WOMAN CARD WHEN IT SUITS THEM. MEN TRULY ARE CONSIDERED EXPENDABLE.

UN: Circumcision Is Recommended to Fight HIV

Evil White Male... · 28 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'U.N. health agencies recommended Wednesday that HETEROSEXUAL men undergo circumcision because of "compelling" evidence that it can reduce their chances of contracting HIV by up to 60 percent.
...
The public health impact is likely to be most rapid where there is a high rate of HIV infection among men having sex with WOMEN.'

SO BASICALLY ME MUST CONCLUDE THAT MEN SHOULD BE MUTILATED FOR THE SAFETY AND PLEASURE OF WOMEN. HMMM, ISN'T FEMALE CIRCUMCISION WRONG BECAUSE ITS DONE FOR THE BENEFIT OF MEN?

Woman-on-woman assault at NYTimes: No action taken

Matt · 28 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

At the risk of sounding like one of those MSM people who spend more time pointing up the flaws of other media outfits rather than reporting news, I just have to post this. Now given that the two combatants were female, what happens? No one is fired. Now of course had this been a male-female case, or a male-male case, one or both people (most likely all males) would have been sacked that day. But when the violaters are both women? The system freezes up and shuts down, incapabale of handling the paradoxes. Net result: an assault is not redressed, and the double-standard goes on merrily unchecked. Excerpt:

'A catfight at The New York Times Friday still has staffers in shock.

The dustup between two female editors in the Styles department disrupted work on the Thursday and Sunday Styles sections as co-workers froze at the fracas.

Fashion editor Anita LeClerc was the aggressor and her superior, deputy editor Mary Ann Giordano, the victim, sources say.
...
That's why some at the respected broadsheet are baffled as to why no apparent disciplinary action has been taken against LeClerc. A Times spokeswoman did not answer questions about the slugfest, or disciplinary action, by deadline. Calls to LeClerc, Giordano and Gabriel were not returned.'

Two Teachers Accused of 'Having Sex' with Six Students

ItsDan · 28 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here:

'The arrest of two women teachers on charges of having sex with their male students has brought cries of lingering racism in one of South Carolina's most conservative counties and evoked some of the South's oldest and deepest-seated racial taboos.

Both women are white. The boys - six in all - are black.

...

"If this had been black teachers, they would not be out of jail right now," said Corinnie Young, a 49-year-old bookstore employee who is black.

Some blacks shudder to think what would have happened if the teachers were black men and the students were white girls.

"I can assure you if it were an African American male who committed such an offense against a white female, history shows us that the charges, the punishment and the sentencing would be totally different," said state NAACP president Lonnie Randolph. "The system ain't blind when the perpetrator is an African American male or female or when the victim is a white female."'

Ed. note: Annoyingly, the linked page first makes you look at an ad, which you can skip, then when the story page loads there is an embedded streaming ad running at the side of the page. If you are using high-speed, this is no problem, but dial-up and low-test users will likely find it annoying. [Beyond the scope, but FYI you can disable streaming media loads by adjusting your browser preferences.]

Despite 'Safe Harbor' Laws, Mother Abandons Three Babies

Matt · 28 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Crazy, irresponsible, stupid, or all three? If caught, will she actually be charged with any crimes? Will the media fawn all over her? Stay tuned! Video report here.

Hillary Clinton receives endorsement from NOW

anthony · 28 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Presidential candidate Hillary Rodham Clinton declared Wednesday that if you look up the word "feminist" in a dictionary, you'll find her."

Asked if she viewed herself as a feminist, Clinton said by the standard definition, yes.

"If you look in the dictionary, the word feminist means someone who believes in equal rights for women in society, in the economy, the political process — generally believes in the equality of women. And I certainly believe in the equality of women," she said.

Man falsely charged with sexual assault by multiple women sues police

Anonymous · 28 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Maurice Kondell was helping out behind the counter at a Wendy's fast food outlet on May 19, 2004, when a team of police officers walked in, clamped handcuffs on his wrists and led him away to face sexual assault charges.

Reeling in shock and humiliation, Mr. Kondell -- the first black person to become a part-owner of a Wendy's franchise -- learned that a staff member claimed he had thrust his hand down her pants one evening during a cleanup."

Man falsely accused of rape later terrorized by accuser

Anonymous · 29 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A WOMAN terrorised a man she falsely claimed had raped her after a one-night stand five years earlier.

Debbie Oldham, 27, went to the man's flat in Glasgow's West End with three masked men and her rottweiler dog.

Oldham demanded cash, and the 25-year-old victim was threatened, assaulted and had possessions stolen and trashed."

NOW Sues Over Fatherhood Programs

ItsDan · 29 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'It's called the Promoting Responsible Fatherhood Initiative, and the Bush administration doles out up to $50 million annually to fund its programs to build job skills and help fathers connect better with their children. But the National Organization for Women says the effort is illegal because it's only about men.

NOW and Legal Momentum, another advocacy group, filed complaints yesterday with the Department of Health and Human Services alleging sex discrimination in the initiative that is funding about 100 programs this year.'

Woman bites husband's genitals

ItsDan · 29 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"A woman in America has been charged with assault and trespass after allegedly biting her boyfriend on the genitals while he slept.

According to authorities, 25-year-old Amanda Rall broke into her boyfriend's house while he was asleep on March 22. She then administered a bite to what reports describe as 'his private area.'"

A Larger Set of Facts on Child Support Services

Scott · 29 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Mike Geanoulis submitted the following to be distributed:

In a recent effort to justify the 17 million dollars it spends annually to force obligors to pay court ordered child support obligations or suffer the loss of certain privileges and freedoms, the New Hampshire Division of Child Support Services (DCSS) published, among other things, data showing that 64% of ordered support was collected for all accounts - no small achievement, it would seem. The report, designed to convey a sense of satisfaction for taxpayers fed up with the deadbeat problem, was picked up from the Associated Press by newspapers across the state.

For those familiar with the larger set of facts on the matter, however, the report seemed more like a misleading accounting of failure and ineptitude. (read more to continue...)

Was 64% supposed to be a measure of success? Collections rates were already 59% 20 years ago, when collection services were but a gleam in bureaucrat's eyes. Maybe DCSS could take credit for the increase of 5% over 20 years, but certainly not the 59% proven collectible by the ordinary methods of long ago. Since growing numbers of parents are more involved with their kids these days and so more inclined to pay by those methods, it's entirely possible to make the case that DCSS can take credit for little or nothing.

The average reader was not made aware, moreover, that draconian enforcement services have proven to be, to a considerable degree, unworkable for a variety of valid reasons, not the least of which are parental alienation, unrealistic attitudes about ordinary incomes, and the negative impact on living standards when households split in two - grist for another essay.

Worse still, were the false promises given by the promoters of that self-described "growth industry" to make things better for children and families. Twenty years ago, roughly 20,000 of the state's children were in the old variation of child support enforcement where negligent obligors were summoned and ordered to pay up or go to jail. Children had inadequate living standards then because they were insufficiently supported, to be sure.

Today, partly because of a child support philosophy that unwittingly promotes single parenting and discounts the value of marriage - an institution long ago discovered to be the best way to incubate the next generation - 40,000 children, or 100% more, are trapped in systemic poverty. Never mind, for the sake of financial argument, the attendant pathologies and low wellness levels associated with unstable conditions, the number of children seeking adequate financial support has roughly doubled over the 20 years DCSS assumed its role of enforcement and collections.

There seems to be a connection between the advent of enforcement services and the increasing numbers of single parents who see independence as a viable lifestyle. Whatever the truth, the fact remains that in absolute numbers, more children are mired in poverty under the purvue of DCSS administrators now than ever before, in spite of, or maybe even because of, the substitute-father role of DCSS, secular progressive attitudes about neo-families, and ignorance about a statistically insignificant increase in collections rates that arguably should have been credited, instead, to growing rates of parental involvement. DCSS should probably give itself credit for nothing except the decay of healthy family formation, growing fatherless rates, and higher numbers of children wallowing in poverty and instability.

Research from the University of Arizona (Braver) shows that obligor parents who feel like parents to their kids can brag of compliance rates exceeding 90%. Parents who feel like parents are more inclined to work harder to support their children. Maybe lawmakers should be made aware of that data so they might revise the way DCSS does business and accounts for their alleged successes.

Actually, we do not need DCSS in its present form. What we really need is a rediscovery of the importance of two natural parents in children's lives and a serious effort to educate young men and women about the importance of serious commitments as the best way to provide for the children they bring into the world - preferably by way of traditional marriage ceremonies complete with vows.

Mr. Geanoulis is a resident of New Castle, NH. He served on the first NH Governor's Commission on Child Support and currently sits on the NH Commission on the Status of Men.

Twin Sisters Charged After Taking Topless Photos in Front of 5-YO Boy

anthony · 29 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

It remains to be seen if they'll actually be punished, but the authorities must let society know, women must be held accountable when exposing sexuality in the presence of a child. Excerpt:

'Pam and Penny Crane, 29, are accused of snapping topless pictures in front of the child, a relative of the sisters.

The women were wearing thong underwear and hosiery, while the 5-year-old appeared in some of the photos and may have snapped one of the two sisters topless, Lt. Jeff Johnston said.

"Why they would take those pictures, I have no idea," said Sheboygan County district attorney Joe DeCecco, who called the case creepy. "But then to go one step further and to be exposing their breasts to the child and buttocks to the child."'

New York Mom Charged in 1980 Death of Child

anthony · 29 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

I wonder if "Sudden Infant Death Syndrome" is often used as an exuse to murder an infant. Excerpt:

"A 49-year-old woman who was long the focus of police investigating the suspicious deaths of three of her children was charged with murder Wednesday, accused of smothering one of her sons in 1980.

Ronald Winters III was five months old when he died in 1980 while the family was living in Otisco in Onondaga County. His death was attributed to Sudden Infant Death Syndrome."

Phyllis Schlafly Attacks The Feminist Movement

anthony · 30 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Kim Gandy has nightmares about Phyllis Schlafly. She is politically incorrect, and I love it! Even though she's 81 years old, the woman still knows how to battle the feminist hypocrisy. Excerpt:

"LEWISTON - For four decades, right-wing icon Phyllis Schlafly has been an anti-feminist spokeswoman for the national conservative movement.

Schlafly, now 81, brought her long-running campaign to Bates College on Wednesday night in a lecture titled "Conservativism vs. Feminism: The Great Debate," which played to a near-capacity crowd of more than 135 students and visitors at Chase Hall."

A Returning Salior and His Son

locksley2k · 30 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Just watch this and be prepared for tears. A returning US Sailor from Iraq and his boy. It's priceless.

CWFA: NOW 's Endorsement of Hillary Will Not Sway Women's Votes

anthony · 30 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Hillary needs a reality check if she thinks that a majority of women voters embrace radical feminism or will be swayed to vote for her because she has been endorsed by NOW," said Dr. Crouse. "Three out of four women describe the word 'feminist' as an insult, according to a CBS poll. Women recognize that the feminist ideology poses problems like abortion-on-demand, federally mandated day care, sexual orientation special agenda, and anti-masculinity. The movement is largely dead because their basic premise and icons are being rejected by mainstream America."

Grayson "Party Mom" Pleads Guilty...Jail Time Unlikely

anthony · 30 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Grayson woman accused of having sex with two teenage boys and supplying alcohol to teens at a party at her house pleaded guilty to criminal charges Thursday morning in Modesto.

Despite pleading guilty to three felony counts, Walker will likely serve little or no jail time and will not be required to register as a sex offender."

Hillary's Bitter Pill: Women Can't Stand Her by Carey Roberts

anthony · 30 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here.

Its been a while since a Carey Robert's post has appeared. Sit back and enjoy the read! Check out Hillary's "Equal Pay video" link. Excerpt:

'One answer can be found in Hillary's Equal Pay video that is featured on her website. There she repeats the wage-gap chestnut, "Here we are at the beginning of the 21st century and women still earn significantly less than men for doing the same jobs."

But pandering to the "gender wage gap" poses a threat to women's intelligence, and possibly their lifestyles.

That's because men and women don't do the same jobs. Men spend more years in the workforce, work longer hours, and are subjected to far more hazards - 93% of all workplace deaths involve men.'

Survey: 1/2 of N.H. women experienced sex or physical assault

Anonymous · 30 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In an attempt to conflate domestic violence statistics in NH, an important primary state for Hillary, local DV advocates/beneficiaries claim (based upon a single study) that more than half of New Hampshire's women have been abused in their lifetimes and almost one-fifth say they've been raped (?). Excerpt:

"The New Hampshire Coalition Against Domestic and Sexual Violence, the University of New Hampshire and the state worked together on the survey. It's the first time experts have tracked the prevalence of violence against women in the state. The hard data backs up what police, health and domestic violence workers have long known: victims are everywhere.
...
They said future abuse surveys could be expanded to include men."

Woman charged after husband kills the man she accused of rape

ItsDan · 31 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Darrell Roberson came home from a card game late one night to find his wife rolling around with another man in a pickup truck in the driveway.

Caught in the act with her lover, Tracy Denise Roberson — thinking quickly, if not clearly — cried rape, authorities say. Her husband pulled a gun and killed the other man with a shot to the head.

On Thursday, a grand jury handed up a manslaughter indictment — against the wife, not the husband."

"How the Failure of Welfare Reform Created Our Lawless Courts (Part Three)"

Matt · 31 March 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"...all of the gender inclusive language added in the 2000 reauthorization of VAWA and what was proposed by the Senate in 2005 was struck out, deleted... Throughout H.R.3402, every line of text that provided protection, support, and services to male victims of domestic violence from all the other bills of the 109th Congress and prior Congress' additions were completely removed or modified, excluding men."

Contrast what happened here to what NOW is trying to do to the Promoting Responsible Fatherhood Initiative. The blatant anti-male 2x-standards should come as no surprise, but they do continue to shock the conscience of the fair-minded.

Wikipedia Antifeminism Debate

Benjamin Studtmann · 1 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This isn't news, exactly -- it's just interesting. This is the kind of conversation that is happening behind the scenes as folks such as Wikipedia try to tap-dance their balls off in an attempt to discuss something which everyone knows exists but which no one is allowed to talk about.

Here the Wikipedia dweebs take on our beloved debate. I'd prepare popcorn if I were you.

Wikipedia Talk On Antifeminism

Announcing the Patriarchal Republic of New Deseret!

mens_issues · 1 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

It seems that our friend in The Patriarchy, Thomas Fullery, has now declared most of the southwestern United States as part of a new Patriarchal nation, to be known as the Patriarchal Republic of New Deseret.

The announcement follows:

Announcing the Patriarchal Republic of New Deseret!

As of today, April 1, 2007, I declare the formation of the Patriarchal Republic of New Deseret. The boundaries as such shall be those of the original Mormon State of Deseret from 1849 to 1850.

For more information on that earlier state, kindly go to:

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/State_of_Deseret

This republic's boundaries will, of course, need to be modified so as not to overlap with the great Republic of Cascadia, one of our future trading partners.

http://zapatopi.net/cascadia/

Yes, I was inspired by the original provisional and short-lived State of Deseret to create a new republic in which The Patriarchy may thrive. The capital of this new republic shall be my home town of Polygyny, which is conveniently located in the middle of the nation somewhere in southwestern Utah where you would expect such a place to exist.

I shall add that this great republic shall be under the wise direction and counsel of our Grand Chief Poohbah Patriarch, Plutius Maximus III, located in Patriarch's City in Rome!

I have, of course, appointed myself as the ruler of this new republic until a transition to democracy can take effect. It shall be a future nation of Tom Fullerys!

I will get around to appointing my own legislature, and then we can get on with the business of creating our own constitution. Two good men have already stepped up to the challenge. One of these is Mister Wonderful, my new Minister of Disinformation and Reeducation. The other is Karl E. Llewellyn, my new Minister of Defense.

"HAIL to The Patriarchy!"

Your loyal and humble leader,

Sir Thomas Richard Jacob Fullery the Younger, founder of the Patriarchal Republic of New Deseret, and supreme ruler of all beasts of the fields and vegetation of the land and fishes of the waters within its boundaries, and vanquisher of feminism therein.

(Above is the new formal title which I have taken)

P.S. My daughter April was particularly pleased to be part of the supreme family. Her full name is, of course, April Fullery.

Keep up with the latest happenings in The Patriarchy and the Patriarchal Nation of New Deseret by going to:

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ThePatriarchy

Ed. note: Who says MRAs have no sense of humor? Happy April Fool's, all!

Woman prostitutes her own 7-YO daughter

digitalhermit · 2 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

A woman in Detroit was caught in a sting where she offered her daughter to an undercover agent for the purposes of child pornography and sex/molestation.

"This is truly a horrifying case," Sheriff Warren Evans said in a statement. "To think that a woman would offer up her own daughter in this way impossible to comprehend."

And yet, this is exactly what we are forced to comprehend. A mother (probably single - there is no mention of a father being present) is revealed as the biggest threat to her own children.

Woman Arrested After 3-YO Boy Found Buried Next to Daycare Center

anthony · 2 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Heather Nicole Miller, 22, the girlfriend of the boy's father, told investigators she killed Isaiah Vargas Wednesday in her apartment. According to police, Miller said she grabbed his arm and pushed him into his bedroom after he refused to go.

"The defendant said she thought the victim fell down and struck his head on the floor," Detective Dominick Kaufman wrote in court paperwork. "The defendant then grabbed the victim and shook him."

Education: Gender Divide (Video)

anthony · 2 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Topic page here.

A three minute discussion on "Fox and Friends" on why girls are doing better in school. My problem with the video is not so much about the information provided, but rather it didn't appear the disparity was taken seriously. In fact, there was a lot of joking involved. There was no discussion on how to solve the problem.

To view the video, scroll down to "Education On Fox News Channel". The title is "Education expert on why women are beating men in college performance."

Ed. note: Check out those other vids, too, esp. Sen. Kay Hutchison on those "separate but equal" single-sex classrooms.

Update: NOW Demands Access to Program Geared to Fathers

anthony · 2 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. NOW's attack on father's rights continues. My legal knowledge is admittedly weak. My question: Can NOW actually win this lawsuit? Excerpt:

"The complaints cite 34 programs, including one run by the District and two others in the Washington area, that, they say, do not offer the services to women. That, the groups say, violates Title IX, the law that prevents sex discrimination in federally funded education programs and is best known for forcing universities to offer comparable sports programs for men and women."

Man exonerated after 22 years in prison for rapes he did not commit

patrick · 3 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Mar 29, 2007 - The "countdown to release" is on for the man who's spent more than two decades in prison for a crime he didn't commit.

There is hope that Anthony Capozzi could be a free man as soon as Friday. Local lawmakers have stepped up the pressure to speed up the process to set Capozzi free now that there's DNA proof he was wrongfully convicted of two rapes in Delaware Park back in the 1980s.'

Wage Gap: "A Bargain At 77 Cents To a Dollar?"

anthony · 3 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Women make similar trade-offs all the time. Surveys have shown for years that women tend to place a higher priority on flexibility and personal fulfillment than do men, who focus more on pay. Women tend to avoid jobs that require travel or relocation, and they take more time off and spend fewer hours in the office than men do. Men disproportionately take on the dirtiest, most dangerous and depressing jobs."

Female Top-Ten'er Collared

Matt · 3 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Watch the story here. She was a gang member suspected in as many as 50 shootings, a leader in one of the most violent and predatory gangs in her city. And a lady, too! Good heavens! Send this to anyone who thinks a woman isn't capable of ruthless, calculated violence, or exercising leadership in the context thereof.

BBC hunts for male-only clubs

GaryB · 3 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The BBC reports here with an opinion piece that seems incredibly sexist. Basically it's a hunt to find where women are being hard-done by in being excluded from male-only clubs. The entire tone of the piece is sexist, for example:

"In the ancient world all-male societies and festivals were common. And there was even the odd all-female event too." No mention of matriarchal societies, of course.

It's not until halfway through the article that they admit (almost sheepishly) that there are many female-only clubs, but in typical BBC style the headlines and intro are all one-sided (us evil evil men!)

You can comment on the piece, and the comments are worth reading - most support the idea that one-gender clubs are acceptable, even if the women are typically scathing of our reasons to want to be separated. The stereotypes abound; women want to be in their single-sex-club locales to avoid lecherous men hassling them, whereas us men want to be in our single-sex-clubs so we can belch, fart and generally be rude and obnoxious...

Glenn Sacks: Fathers' Movement Fights New 'Deadbeat Dad' Ads

anthony · 3 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Link to newsletter here. Excerpt:

'There have been several responses to this from the fathers' movement:

1) I debated Cynthia Brown on FOX News' nationally-syndicated Morning Show with Mike and Juliet on Tuesday--to watch, click here. Also see below for more information.

2) In the Associated Press article, Mike McCormick, Executive Director of the American Coalition for Fathers and Children, pointed out that this campaign to humiliate child support debtors can also be very humiliating for their children.

3) On Friday, Fathers 4 Justice US protested against one of the pizzerias which is putting the "deadbeat" posters on their boxes--see below for more information.

4) Yesterday, Stephen Baskerville, president of the American Coalition for Fathers and Children, debated Brown on CNN. I don't know of video being available yet, but when/if it is I will post it on my blog.'

Woman accused of murder told to stay away from son

anthony · 3 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"An Urbandale woman facing murder charges following the death of a toddler in her care has been ordered to stay away from her teenage son if she is released from jail on bond, according to a restraining order issued Friday.

Lucinda Winger, 40, was arrested Thursday evening on charges of first-degree murder and child endangerment in connection with the death of Joey Atkinson, who was found unresponsive in Winger's in-home child care facility in Urbandale on Feb. 28.

The 20-month-old child was rushed to the hospital with a serious skull fracture; he was declared brain dead the next day."

18-YO Female Hit And Run on a Cop Walks away from Jail

Benjamin Studtmann · 3 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Girl hits cop with car. Girl drives off. Girl goes home. Girl googles her situation to find news reports. Girl finds news article on her hit-and-run, finds a comment thread, and confesses to what she did apparently thinking she'd get away with it. Happily the police tracked her down via her IP address, giving us one spoiled little princess with a vewwy vewwy grumpy booking photo.

The snapper?

Five thousand dollars bond; 0 dollars required. She walked hours later, without paying a dime.

She's a girl, see. And she's really, really sorry. She said so! Look how sad she is! Awwwwwww!

How many of us Y chromosome bearers could pull off a stunt like that and not be quietly beaten to death with telephone books before the clock struck midnight?

Fark commentary, replete with original thread link

Women's Equality Measure Faces Long Odds

anthony · 3 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Democrats face long odds in their effort to revive an Equal Rights Amendment that failed three decades ago, even if unisex bathrooms are no longer much of a fear factor.
...
A proliferation of female doctors, lawyers and stockbrokers and the fact that women now receive nearly 60 percent of college degrees show that women don't need an ERA to succeed, she added."

Saving Dads Illegal? Get Real : by Helen Ubiñas

anthony · 3 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here.

Another update on NOW's assine lawsuit. I predict many more will expose Gandy's hypocrisy. Helen Ubinas makes some outstanding observations. Excerpt:

"The government has spent billions of dollars over the years on welfare-to-work job training programs that, if not specifically limited to women, benefit women almost exclusively. Women are specifically targeted for nutrition education in a variety of programs, including the federal Women Infants and Children program."

Woman Posing as Teen Boy Assaults Girl

Matt · 4 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Truth is stranger than fiction. Excerpt:

'Lorelei Josephine Corpuz, 30, lived for more than a year as a 17-year-old boy named "Mark," according to papers filed in Everett District Court.

As "Mark," Corpuz persuaded the girl's family to let "Mark" live in their home as the girl's boyfriend. Corpuz claimed to be an orphan, police alleged.

It wasn't until police arrested Corpuz on Sunday on an unrelated matter that the girl and her family learned that "Mark" was a woman - and almost twice the age they were led to believe, according to court papers.

That's when officers were told that Corpuz allegedly had beaten and sexually assaulted the girl.'

New York City Plans to Promote Circumcision

Matt · 5 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'New York City's Department of Health and Mental Hygiene is planning a campaign to encourage men at high risk of AIDS to get circumcised in light of the World Health Organization's endorsement of the procedure as an effective way to prevent the disease.

While the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta is just beginning to convene meetings and design studies to help it formulate a national policy, New York City is moving ahead on its own.'

Predictable, and very unfortunate. So with this hair-trigger reactive policy making, MGM gets new life breathed into it just as we were making progress at stopping it. They are saying they will target the effort to 'high-risk' groups. But I think we know what is actually happening here-- if MGM gets a cachet of "medical necessariness" re-instilled into it, we are sure to see efforts to ban its infliction upon infants stymied. Again, one could make the same case for FGM being useful in this fashion as well, but no one would dare.

"Gender Insurgency" in the Art World

Benjamin Studtmann · 5 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

It's a gender insurgency paid for with our money! Yay! It's it just so sisterly and loving and in-your-face and !@#$ing WONDERFUL? Excerpt:

'Call it the year of the woman ... in the visual arts! With symposiums, heavy-hitting shows on the East and West Coast, and a smattering of smaller exhibits around the country all dedicated to feminist art happening now, it's a veritable gender insurgency waged on the hallowed white walls of the art world.
...
The rest of this confluence was pure conspiracy. Activist patrons, artists, curators, and scholars organized these events to make a big publicity splash. And the Feminist Art Project (FAP) at Rutgers University in New Jersey, initiated in late 2005 by Judy Chicago and the late feminist art writer Arlene Raven, was its fountainhead. Organizers there are promoting feminist art's reach through 2009 with a series of publications, symposia, and exhibitions.'

Women fought and died at Vimy Ridge?

Anonymous · 5 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

My school in Edmonton, Canada recently had a trip to France to visit the Vimy Ridge Mermorial in France. This is the most important battle in Canadian history in World War I, where "a nation was born" because of Canada's single-handed battle and sacrifice to capture this Ridge from the Germans. When my school was there, the guide kept on saying "our men AND WOMEN who served and perished at Vimy Ridge on this fateful day in 1917...etc...etc" and "over 60,000 Canadian men AND WOMEN who fought and died in world war I showing canadian sacrifice... etc...etc."

This has got to be a feminist April Fools Day joke! So, when I got back home, interested by this apparently huge female sacrifice during their periods of oppresion in 1917, I looked up some history books and Google. After an hour of search, I found no records of even a single woman served and fought even as a field medic/nurse during the battle of Vimy Ridge. This is clearly just another attempt by feminist to give women credit where they DON'T deserve!

New housing solution for male sex offenders

digitalhermit · 5 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In another sign of the increasingly poor treatment of male sex offenders, Miami has decided to house some male sex offenders under a bridge.

Interesting that no women sex offenders appear to be subjected to this sort of housing discrimination. I doubt you'll ever see women sex offenders sleeping under a bridge being gnawed on by rats. Only men appear to be deserving of this dehumanized under-the-bridge "troll" treatment.

Glenn Sacks: Bill to Save Men's Commission Passes Committee

anthony · 5 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Today Richard Smaglick of http://www.fathersandhusbands.org/, who was working with the CSM to help save it, told me that HB 704 passed the Senate Finance Committee unanimously, and now looks like a good bet to pass the Senate.

Thanks to those of you who participated, and especially thanks to Richard and the CSM for their good work."

Year after being put in prison for rape, accuser admits fabricating the story

ItsDan · 5 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story speaks for itself:

'Perth Now reports that Patrick Waring, then a 15-year-old Catholic college student, was dragged out of bed by police a year ago and refused bail on the say-so of his 17-year-old accuser.

However, just before the trial started, the girl admitted lying about her sex life the whole time, Perth Now says. She had insisted she was a virgin.

DNA tests excluded Waring from her claims of rape.

Waring's accuser finally admitted she had had sex with a man at the back of a cinema the same afternoon, two hours before claiming Waring raped her at Joondalup's Central Park after following her from the railway station on 30 March last year.'

Teacher clothespins boys' mouths

Matt · 6 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Doubt she would have done this to chatty girls in her class. Story here. Excerpt:

'AMANDA, Ohio -- The Amanda-Clearcreek school district in Fairfield County permanently suspended a substitute teacher after confirming that she disciplined four kindergarten boys for talking in class by putting spring-type clothespins on their lips, Superintendent J.B. Dick said yesterday.'

20/20 Gushes with "A Wife Behind Bars"

Matt · 7 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Saw it last night on the tube. The video is on-line here. Synopsis: They portray the wife of dead Marine Todd Sommer as a victim of circumstance and faulty lab work. Plenty of up-closes with her crying as she sat behind a desk in jail. In short: the usual predictable stuff.

Right after her husband is dead from arsenic poisoning, she rushes to collect his insurance money, buys herself breast implants, parties at strip clubs and bars like a Girls Gone Wild'er, sleeps around like there is no tomorrow, and ABC has the nerve portray her as having a "unique way of processing her grief" and "trouble adjusting", and certainly not guilty of murdering him. Note to men: Don't try this yourself. You need to be female to even start thinking you can get away with it.

Contact ABC.com information is here.

Woman Arrested in California Hate Crime Stabbings

anthony · 7 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A female white supremacist gang member stabbed a black man and woman during an apparent race-related brawl late Thursday, authorities said.

Police arrested Mandie Kearns, 28, who they said had a bloody knife in her pocket and admitted to being a member of the racist gang, said Palm Springs Police Sgt. Mitch Spike.

Kearns is being held on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon and a hate crime charge and police are searching the area for additional suspects."

Mom's 110-mph run from cops ends in baby's death

anthony · 7 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman led police on a 25-mile high speed chase until she crashed into a concrete median, killing her 9-month-old daughter in the collision, authorities said.

Alexxus Riza was thrown Friday night from the SUV, which rolled several times under an Interstate 35 overpass, said Trooper Dub Gillum of the Texas Department of Public Safety. The vehicle struck a traffic light before hitting the concrete barrier"

Kathleen Parker: Rape of women is worse than of men, etc.

zeektheman · 7 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Kathleen Parker, the author of this article in the Washington Post says, among other things:

"Women are raped by men, which, given the inherent power differential between the sexes, raises women's rape to another level of terror."

Her e-mail address is included, and there's a section for reader comments.

My view is that if women want the privilege of staying home when there's a war, then men should have special privileges too. We could start with letting men play golf together free of harrassment or ridicule.

Shoot Me But -- Vagina Monologues is Funny!

Roy · 8 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Have any of you dudes actually seen the "Vagina Monologues": off-broadway play, campus renditions, or DVD edition?

Well, whenever I hear about some feminist abomination, I like to check out the original text, law, blog, post, screed, etc.

So I recently rented "The Vagina Monologues: Eve Ensler." (2002 DVD recording of her performance piece.)

This woman is funny! And smart, and ironic, and wicked, and self-critical, and insightful...

Not at all what I expected to see based on all the negative reviews on the MRA blogosphere.

She is far more critical commenting about women's psychotic self-inflicted foolishness than she is about men or the evil patriarchy.

My favorite quote ---

"You have to love hair... to love the vagina."

You'll probably have to live in NYC or LA or get a NetFlix subscription to rent this DVD.

Eve Ensler has been unfairly reviled. She is one very funny gender-politically-incorrect stand-up comic!

Of course, the whole "V-day" debacle is a poor reflection of her work.

I always wish to know my enemies before I condemn them, and Ensler is worthy of reconsideration.

Essay: The Wrong in Women's Rights

Matt · 8 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The Wrong in Women's Rights
April 7, 2007
by E. Abdiel

Abortion. A cornerstone in the woman's movement. It is a cornerstone that claims it is a woman's sole right to decide the outcome of the unborn child inside her. Yet when its assertions are applied consistently to their end, it contradicts premises used to assign responsibility to men to financially support children they did not intend to have.

Feminist ideology proclaims that what a woman does with her body has nothing to do with government policy, the judgments and dictates of men or conventional morality. She does what she wants with her body and her decisions are her own. Yet it's simple common sense to understand that if it is only her body and only her decision what she does with it (to abort or not abort), then congruently it is only her duty to be responsible for a decision that only she makes (child rearing). Feminist dogma stands in blatant disregard to a simple rule of natural law that no one disputes in any other situation that occurs in our lives. And that is, that there is an exact and direct correlation to the amount of authority we have in situations, to the amount of responsibility accessed to us for the decisions we make. It's completely illogical to say it's 100% my decisions to do as I wish with my body (premarital sex) but I'm only 50% responsible for the outcome of my decision to engage in sexual activity (pregnancy). And congruently it's completely illogical to say it's 100% my decision to make because it's my body (to abort or not abort) but I'm only 50% responsible for the outcome of that decision (child rearing). If you are 100% in control of your body, then it's 100% your decision to involve yourself in the risks associated with having premarital sex. And if it's 100% your decision to keep rather than abort an unborn child, then it's 100% your responsibility to raise and support that child after birth. Not 90 percent, not 75 percent and not 50/50 but rather a full 100 percent.

There is a ongoing trend in most feminist ideology that no one questions because it either suits there selfish need or because there is fear of societal retaliation. And that is on nearly every feminist issue, women get to have it both ways. To them, women should always receive the full benefits of a position they take but somehow never need to take the full responsibility that goes along with it. It's always partly or fully someone else's fault and responsibility (almost always a man's) when they use the rights they claim they deserve inappropriately and they have to deal with the consequences of their actions.

Even if women did take the position that it is 100% their right to decide the fate of the unborn and responsibility to provide support for the child after birth, I'd still say they were wrong. Because both science and God confirm that what is inside her is not a lifeless mass of cells but a human life. Life imparted by the sperm of a man. And if the sperm of a male is the life giving factor, why aren't his rights, from what is biologically half his, being represented? Why is a child only half his after a woman makes a decision that requires a man to financially support the child for at least 18 years? In case you missed the gravity of that question and a central argument against this injustice, I will reiterate it. Why is a child only half his after a woman makes a decision that requires a man to financially support the child for at least 18 years? In legal circles and Constitutional terms that is what they call a classic case of "being denied equal protection under the law". And although the Supreme Court has consistently acknowledged this infringement upon the rights of men, it will in the same breath refuse to do anything about it for what it calls "the greater good of society" (as if abolishing abortion altogether wouldn't be for the greater good of society). But most importantly, being that it is innocent life, the taking of it is murder. And no one has that right, man or woman; no one but God.

As someone said it best, "Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness" --- Thomas Jefferson

It's puzzling how they missed that. It's the first one.

Having said that, if women did claim it is 100 percent their bodies and responsibility it would at least be, from a legal standpoint, harder to disprove (although not impossible) their sole claim over a child's fate at conception. It would be closer to the truth and at least a little more honorable; albeit still wrong. And albeit, still murder. But because they don't claim this, it becomes obvious that their motivations are not to get to the truth or to do what is fair but rather they are self serving and deceitful in nature. There are always sacrifices to go along with the rights and privileges we have in life. So it behooves me to remind you that there is no such thing as a position that benefits you but doesn't require an equivalent amount of sacrifice and responsibility to sustain it. So if someone tells you their position does just that, proceed with caution.

And don't be misled. There is a difference between being the "willing party" and being the "responsible party". A man's willingness to participate in sex is irrelevant in accessing responsibility. Pointing out a man's willingness to participate sexually is a typical response used for accessing 50 percent responsibility to him.

Hypothetically, let's say there is a woman who owns a house and there is a man that doesn't. This man has purchased a large amount of illegal drugs and now wants to use these drugs in her house because he has no place of his own to do so. When he asks her, she tells him no and he leaves to go elsewhere. And what is his reason for leaving? Because it is established that it is 100% her house and therefore he has to abide by her rules. Because what goes on in that house, she is 100% responsible for. Not 90 percent, not 75 percent and not 50/50 but 100 percent.

Do you see the correlation so far? If so, then continue.

Now the man is obviously willing to use these illegal drugs in her house. You got that? He is willing. But the fact that he is willing to do these things has no bearing on the outcome of whether or not these things will occur. It is completely irrelevant. If she says no, it's not going to happen. It is her decision and her decision alone on whether or not to put herself and her house at risk. And if this same woman decides at any point that she too is willing to use drugs with him in her household, it still remains irrelevant that the man was equally willing. Because the man's willingness still isn't the determining factor but her complete authority to make that decision is. That's why it doesn't make it the man's responsibility when the police raid her home and the state government confiscates her house. No one would ever claim that a woman participating in behavior that led to the government confiscating her house is only 50% responsible for her loss, simply because a man, who had no authority to decide what went on, was equally willing to participate. In a court of law, no judge would even entertain that argument. Yet the obvious correlation between this and a woman stating a man is 50% responsible for her body getting pregnant is no longer even questioned by a hoodwinked society. Being equally willing in an act doesn't automatically mean someone is equally responsible for every consequence that occurs. Willingness is not the determining factor, what you have authority over and are responsible for, is.

As someone said it best, "The presence of willingness is irrelevant when the absence of responsibility is present." --- E. Abdiel

Yet some will say that if the man said "No" to using drugs to a willing woman, that drug use also would not have occurred. And that means he is equally responsible for stopping the drug use in her house. And therefore equally responsible for the negative results that occur. This is a continuation of the argument used to try and place 50% of the blame and responsibility upon men. Yet that premise is also completely false. And that also would never hold up legally in any court. Because to be responsible for what occurs in her house would presume that he owns at least some part of that house. And we all know the reaction a man would get by claiming he owns even 1 percent of a woman's body, let alone 50 percent. And the fact of the matter is, that he may be completely capable of stopping the drug use in her house, but being capable of doing it is completely different than being responsible for doing it. Which is why he would never be held accountable for what happened to her house in a court of law. And neither should a man be held accountable for what may happen to a woman's body (pregnancy), simply because he's merely capable of stopping sex from occurring. Because it is only a woman who has complete authority over what she does with her body before and after sex. Isn't that their premise?

There is one last argument that may be employed to refute my observations. Some may say that if the police raid the house, both the man and woman will get arrested. Therefore, there is blame and responsibility placed on the man also. This proves he too is accountable just as the woman is. This statement is true. But this doesn't disprove my point but rather confirms it. Because even though both the woman and man willingly did the exact same act that produced the police raid, there is one extremely important fact that separates these two individuals. The man went into the situation knowing what consequences his particular actions might cause him personally and the woman did the same. Yet if you compare the negative consequences, caused by similar actions, taken by equally willing partners, you'd see different results. Because only she is the 100% owner of the house. Therefore he might also be arrested and punished, but only for what he is 100% responsible for in that situation; which simply is himself. Not her and not the loss of her house, but just himself. She on the other hand is not only responsible for herself but also the negative consequences that affected her house. Because even though she did the same act, she knowingly took a bigger risk and therefore is paying a bigger price. She had more to risk and therefore more to lose. And she still made the decision to continue. Is that fair? Of course it is. It's her house and her responsibility as to what goes on in her house. And at no point does his individual consequences or his willingness to participate change that fact.

When you clear away all the feminist rhetoric and preconditioned talking points, it comes down to this: Feminist supporters have used the legal system to remove perceived injustices against women because they hate the fact that men naturally have less to lose for doing the same act. They refuse to see that by subverting the natural order of things, injustices are actually being carried out against men. Injustices done by laying the responsibility and blame in the incorrect place; thereby disparaging the character of all men. Injustices done by making that responsibility strictly a financial one, thereby telling men that the only important role that society wants them to play in a child's life is monetary. Injustices done by only giving lip service to men being equally important to their children, while stripping them of every ability and God given right to be fathers. Sure many women say they want men to be fathers to their children but on their terms; and on a limited basis. They are permitted the occasional suggestion with women holding ultimate veto power. Even in the best case scenarios of joint custody (with physical custody still given to women), men have little to no say in their children's protection, direction or upbringing. This is a direct assault to a man's pride, manhood and natural instinct to lead. At best, they are effectively relegated to the role of a friend, a relative or an older brother; but not a father. In short, they take away what truly makes him a man and then demand payment for it.. And then society wonders why men gravitate away from situations such as these instead of toward them.

But as in most feminist causes, they also do harm not good to those they are supposedly fighting for. They don't care in the slightest that they are destroying the lives of women also. That's because the women they declare they are trying to help, protect, and empower are secondary to their cause. I will say that again because it is vital for you to understand. Women are secondary to their cause. Secondary because they are committed to "ideas" rather than "actualities". "Agendas" rather than "realities". Adversity and unhappiness is now the reality for most women. But in their minds, the average woman's reality should continue to be compromised for the sake of their "idea" of the way it should be. If you are a woman, for your own good, understand that.

And understand this also: When feminist supporters use the media and the legal system to consistently reassign responsibility and blame to men, it causing women to become indoctrinated into a culture of entitlement that takes responsibility and then shame off of all their actions. This is how we've gone from a culture where being a single mother was something to be frowned upon, to a culture where saying "I'm a single mother" is a source of pride; a badge of honor; an accomplishment. It is now something that is said to inspire positive feelings and preferential treatment in those who hear it. This mentality, instilled by the women's movement, continually feeds into the exact attitudes that cause women to more and more likely not care if they entwine themselves in the precarious sexual situations that feminists are supposedly fighting to protect them from. Because now there is little consequence, less responsibility, no shame and therefore no deterrent to cease their less than honorable behavior. On the contrary, there are only reasons to increase it. But what they don't tell you about, is all the adversity, unhappiness and pain that comes with it too. This is the fruit born, not from men, but from the underpinnings of the women's movement. The great friend and protector of women. If you are a woman and you are reading this, it is something you truly need to think about.

As someone said it best, “With friends like these, who needs enemies.” --- Unknown.

In conclusion, it is apparent that women have been taught to feel oppressed by a natural biological fact of life that they can get pregnant and a man can not. And because it is impossible to direct their anger at God or “nature” for making them this way, they blame the only other possible suspect in this crime against them. Men. Men and their misogynistic plots to make them second class citizens. The problem with this recent revisionist perception is that a sacred truth about the ability to become pregnant has been forgotten. So consider this correlation and remember this truth: The responsibility of owning a house is a blessing, not a fact of life used to portray yourself as a victim because you choose to disrespect and misuse the gift of ownership. And in the same way being chosen by God to be the responsible vessel in the area of carrying a child is even more so a blessing, not a fact of life to be used to portray yourself as a victim because you choose to disrespect and misuse the gift of your body’s ability to carry a child and give birth. Yes it’s true it’s a responsibility that men don’t have. Because the more one is blessed with in a particular area, the more responsibility you have in that area. And make no mistake about it, it is a blessing. So don’t expect any sympathy here. If anything, I should be envious; as all men should be. Because to be blessed with a gift is to be chosen for a purpose and a reason. Chosen because, in this area at least, you are actually superior to men. So ironically what women try and caste off in order to “make themselves equal”, is one of the things that makes them equal in the eyes of God (because men are blessed with other gifts). And women are not just blessed with the gift of being able to carry a child and give birth, but also the temperament and disposition that predisposes them to be less likely to put themselves in inappropriate sexual situations. Therefore, more responsibility and less excuse is accounted to women for behaving in the exact same manner a man might in sexual situations. In short, if you are a woman and try and take a man’s shortcomings and aspire to those shortcomings instead of assuming your responsibilities, all in the name of equality, then you have defeated your purpose. For in terms of character and worthiness of respect, you have just effectively made yourself less than equal to men.

As someone said it best, “Be careful what you ask for, you might get it.” --- Unknown.

© Copyright E. Abdiel
eabdiel7@hotmail.com

DISCLAIMER: The conclusion expressed concerning how much responsibility should be accessed to men after a child is born, albeit closer to the truth, does not reflect my actual belief on what the final moral and legal solution should ultimately be. I am simply exposing that if the “My Body, My Choice” legal position is taken, then the principle needs to be consistent, and the full responsibility of that position needs to be taken also; not just the benefits. And if the responsibility aspects of that position is not taken, then the original premise behind that position must be flawed.

6-YO boy excluded from class on say-so of girl

GaryB · 8 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

News.com.au reports here on a story in Australia, where a 6-year-old boy has been excluded from his class after a girl he sat next to accused him of saying bad things and inappropriate touching. The boy denies it ever happened, but (of course) his denial counts for zip and he's been thrown out of class and can only return to school if he joins a new class, leaving all his mates behind.

It's interesting to see how the complete faith in womens/girls accusations has gone right down to the school and even pre-school level, with 'evidence' being an inconvenient and unnecessary distraction.

QUOTE: "In effect, Jonathan is being penalised and 'made to feel guilty' for acts which he denies occurred and for which there is no evidence other than the unsubstantiated allegations of the girl," the letter said.

Even if if DID do something inappropriate, surely you'd think some re-education and a new seat in the classroom would be more appropriate. But excluding him from his mates and teacher and shifting him into a new class, with the stigma of what he'd been accused of stuck to him like glue for the rest of his years at that school..? Man, I weep for my sons....

Dads facing discrimination in the workplace

GaryB · 8 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

News.com.au has a story (finally!) on the discrimination that fathers are increasingly facing in the workplace when we try to take advantage of the supposedly equal rights offered to us and women.

QUOTE: In 1995-96, there were eight complaints to the commission. Last year that figure jumped to 17.

Complainants include:

A DAD who left work early once to care for his child and was sacked because the employer believed child care was his wife's responsibility.

Acting Victorian Equal Opportunity and Human Rights Commissioner Slavka Scott said the number of complaints could be the tip of the iceberg because men were less likely to complain and attitudes had not caught up with the changing times. :QUOTE

I've faced the same issues at work - my wife left me with our three kids and I've worked a full-time professional job ever since (nearly 2 years back), but I've had my fair share of discrimination and exclusion.

Great to see this finally becoming a press-worthy issue.

Winkler case update

Matt · 9 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'NASHVILLE, Tennessee (AP) -- People in the small western Tennessee town of Selmer have been waiting for more than a year to find out why a quiet, unassuming preacher's wife might have killed her husband.

On Monday, the process that could produce answers begins with the opening of jury selection for the first-degree murder trial of Mary Winkler.

Her husband, Matthew Winkler, the popular 31-year-old minister at the Fourth Street Church of Christ in Selmer, was found dead on March 22, 2006, in the bedroom of the church parsonage by members of his congregation.'

NYC Mayor Doubtful About Circumcision Plan

anthony · 9 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Mayor Michael R. Bloomberg raised questions yesterday about an approach under consideration at the Health Department to promote circumcision as a way to reduce the risk of contracting AIDS.
...
Asked about the approach at a news conference, Mr. Bloomberg expressed support for seeking new ways to combat the disease, but suggested that he was unconvinced that government should be involved in promoting or providing circumcisions."

Ed. note: Want to thank the mayor? Contact info here.

More Excuses For Female Criminals

Anonymous · 9 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Note the headline: "No textbook crime - Teacher-teen affairs are unprofessional but not always criminal".

According to section 153 of the Criminal Code of Canada, they are always criminal. But this doesn't stop the media from trying to find new excuses for female misbehavior.

According to "conventional wisdom", boys mature more slowly than girls. Doesn't this mean that boys need greater protection than girls from sexual predators?

Now that female teachers are actually being charged, suddenly "there needs to be a distinction between a professional boundary violation and a sex crime." Of course there was no similar outpouring of sympathy when male teachers were being charged with exactly the same crime.

NCFM-LA Successful in Appeal for Father's Paternal Rights

Matt · 10 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Posted on behalf of Marc A.:
NCFM-LA's complaint against Judge S. Patricia Spear to the Commission on Judicial Performance here. The Commission's response stating corrective action was taken and thanking NCFM-LA here.

Last year in Los Angeles, a 10-month-old boy was about to be placed in foster care because his mom was unfit and his dad was unknown. During that time, the mom told the dad for the first time about the child. The dad immediately went to court, explained the situation and requested a paternity test and reunification services so that he could raise his child. In an asonishing (though not uncommon) denial of male reproductive rights, Judge S. Patricia Spear denied his request and said things like, "I don't think you're the father" and that he should have come sooner.

The man hand-wrote an appeal. The appellate court reversed and even chastised the judge. A family law attorney told us this judge is very misandrous and that this incident was not isolated. On 6/29/06 we complained about this judge to the Commission on Judicial Performance and attached the appellate decision. A few days ago the Commission wrote us saying they took corrective action (usually their letters say they took "no action") and thanking us for reporting this to them. They cannot tell us what action they took. Regardless, it is in her record and affects her career as a judge. The decision is available (free registration required) here (.pdf).

Following is a media story about the appellate decision.

Marc E. Angelucci, Esq.
President
Los Angeles chapter
National Coalition of Free Men
http://www.ncfmla.org/

Masculism: The belief that men have been systematically discriminated against, and that that discrimination should be eliminated. - Oxford Companion to Philosophy

---

http://www.metnews.com/articles/2006/jesu062806.htm

Excerpt:
'C.A. Overturns Denial of Claim to Paternity of Dependent Child

Denial of Alleged Father's Rights Without Allowing Blood Test Precipitous and 'Difficult to Understand,' Vogel Says

By STEVEN CISCHKE, Staff Writer

A man who claimed paternity of a young child immediately upon learning of the baby's existence was entitled to assert presumed father status in dependency court, the Court of Appeal for this district has ruled.

Div. One Justices Miriam A. Vogel, Robert M. Mallano and Frances Rothschild voted Monday to reverse Los Angeles Superior Court Judge S. Patricia Spear's order terminating the parental rights of a man identified in the opinion only as Jesus H.'

Study confirms male circumcision is genital mutilation

Matt · 10 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Posted on behalf of Marc A:
In this new study (.pdf) in the British Journal or Urology Int'l, scientists use fine-touch medical instruments to measure the sensitivity of the penises of circumcised vs uncircumcised men. The results confirm that circumcision significantly decreases penile sensitivity. (Morris L. Sorrells, James L. Snyder, Mark D. Reiss, Christopher Eden, Marilyn F. Milos, Norma Wilcox, Robert S. Van Howe, "Fine-touch pressure thresholds in the adult penis," British Journal of Urology International, v. 99, issue 4, p. 864, April 2007.)

The sensitivity provided by the male foreskin, or "prepuce," comes from thousands of highly-sensory nerve endings that are only found in our eyelids, lips and fingertips. The study results are consistent with previous psychological surveys of adult men.

Male circumcision is gynecologically equivalent to the removal of the clitoral hood, one of three forms of female circumcision all of which are forbidden in the U.S. and by international treaties. Although legal in the U.S., the American Academy of Pediatrics found there is no medical purpose for routine infant male circumcision.

For more information as well as responses to the recently-publicized studies about male circumcision and prevention of AIDS in Africa, see the latest news releases by California-based Attorneys for the Rights of the Child at http://www.arclaw.org/

Here are just a few other organizations OPPOSING routine male infant circumcision:

Stop Infant Circumcision
http://www.stopinfantcircumcision.org/

Circumcision Resource Center
http://www.circumcision.org/

Doctors Opposing Circumcision
http://www.doctorsopposingcircumcision.org/

Attorneys for the Rights of the Child http://www.arclaw.org/

Jews Against Circumcision
http://www.jewsagainstcircumcision.org/

Catholics Against Circumcision
http://www.catholicsagainstcircumcision.org/

Mothers Against Circumcision
http://www.mothersagainstcirc.org/

NoCirc
http://www.nocirc.org/

Story excerpt:

Study confirms male circumcision is genital mutilation
March 19th, 2007 by ICGI

A new study in the British Journal of Urology International shows that men with normal, intact penises enjoy more sexual sensitivity - as much as four times more - than men who have been circumcised. Circumcising slices off more of a male's sensitivity than is normally present in all ten fingertips.

Circumcision removes the most sensitive portions of the penis. This new study demonstrates what we have suspected for decades, that circumcision's result, if perhaps not its intent, is reduced sexual pleasure for men. As such, it is a violation of a male's right to bodily integrity.'

Unprovoked beatings of homeless soaring

patrick · 10 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Most homeless people are male. How do you get people to understand that this is an example of male powerlessness? You could try with this statistic from the article (but most people will probably just shut their ears.) Excerpt:

'Between 1999 and 2005, 82 people were killed in America because of their race, ethnicity, or religious or sexual orientation, according to the FBI, which has been collecting data on hate crimes since 1990.

There were 169 homeless people murdered during that same period, the National Coalition for the Homeless says.'

Missouri seeks to help 'duped dads'

ItsDan · 10 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Now, cases such as Salazar's are inspiring legislation in Missouri and across the country that would make it easier for men to use genetic tests to shed financial support.

Salazar doesn't have that option now. Under Missouri law, he was presumed to be a father simply because he was married to the mother when she gave birth.

The same law gives men, both married and unmarried, a limited time frame to challenge paternity. After those deadlines have passed, even DNA tests often aren't enough to shake paternity obligations.'

Woman loses final embryo appeal

ItsDan · 10 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The interesting case that's been going on for awhile about the UK woman wanting to use existing embryos against the father's consent seem to have been resolved, in favor of the would-be father. Excerpt:

'A woman left infertile after cancer therapy has lost her fight to use embryos fertilised by an ex-partner. Natallie Evans, from Trowbridge, Wilts, and Howard Johnston began IVF treatment in 2001 but he withdrew consent for the embryos to be used after they split up.

She turned to the European courts after exhausting the UK legal process.

Ms Evans, 35, said she was "distraught" after the Grand Chamber of the European Court ruling, but Mr Johnston said "common sense had prevailed."'

Female Prison Guards Are More Likely Than Males to Have Sex With Inmates

Matt · 10 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'According to government statistics, most sexual contact between corrections staff and inmates occurs between female employees and male prisoners.
...
Forty-seven percent of all cases of sexual abuse cases from 2000 to 2004 involved women employees and their male charges. Men were 4 percent less likely to abuse female inmates.'

Greek liner incident shows "men still considered expendable" lance · 10 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

While men and women are supposed to be consider "equal" under the law, no one seemed to pay any mind to the outrage that occurred last week during the Greek cruise ship disaster: the assumed expendability of the male passengers. While most people probably take for granted that a lot has changed since the days of the Titanic, when it comes to Maritime law, everything is still 1912. When the Greek liner went aground and began to sink, the dreaded "women and children first" slogan was announced over the PA, and men were not allowed to disembark before all women had been saved.

Not only is this sentiment purely sexist in its own right, but it pre-supposes (a) that the lives of women are worth more then the lives of men, (b) that women must be protected by men and therefore it is the duty of men to give up everything - life, rights, etc., and (c) that all of the children on board will have a female parent/guardian available to take care of them on shore while they wait for male parent/guardian to be released.

Of course in this case, few were in any real danger since if worst would have occurred, most could have swam to shore, but I think it indicates a much larger problem: while most people agree that women and men should have equal rights, this belief only seems to apply when it is convenient to women and that chivalry still holds sway.

Duke LAX Case Dropped

Matt · 11 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Finally, they have done the right thing. Story here. I hope those guys collect a fortune in lawsuit judgments. Excerpt:

'April 10, 2007 — The office of North Carolina Attorney General Roy Cooper will announce that he is dismissing all charges against three Duke Lacrosse players, ABC News has learned from sources close to the case.'

China to build "Woman Town" where disobedient men are punished

ItsDan · 11 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Absolutely bizzare. Excerpt:

The slogan: "A woman never makes a mistake. A man can never reject a woman's request" will be carved into the town gates.

Latest Sacks/McCormick Column: "Texas bill to create domestic violence offender registry will harm innocent men"

Matt · 11 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From Glenn Sacks:

My new co-authored column, Texas bill to create domestic violence offender registry will harm innocent men (Austin American-Statesman, 4/11/07), criticizes a new, draconian Texas bill which will ensnare and punish many innocent men. The column also criticizes the way law enforcement and the judicial system handle domestic violence cases. Excerpt:

'House Bill 3958, sponsored by Rep. Joaquin Castro (D-San Antonio), will set up a domestic violence offender registry similar to the Texas Sex Offender Registry. Castro is correct to identify domestic violence as an important issue; however, there are serious problems with the way law enforcement and the judicial system handle domestic violence. These problems will cause many innocent men to be ensnared by this bill.

HB 3958 would set up a central database containing information on anyone who has been convicted or "received a grant of deferred adjudication" for a family violence offense on three occasions. The three conviction requirement is defensible, but the inclusion of deferred adjudications — which are analogous to plea bargains — is a major problem.'

Mum who killed toddler by dosing him with methadone faces jail

AngryMan · 12 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

A junky mum who killed her toddler son by feeding him methadone to send him to sleep at night is facing jail.

Gemma Fennelly, 24, pleaded guilty to the manslaughter of 22-month-old Mitchell Bate by gross negligence at Teesside Crown Court.

The toddler died in Septmeber 2005 after an overdose of the heroin substitute.

Traces of heroin and cocaine were also found in the tot's hair.

Winkler Case: Like Clockwork, She was Abused

Matt · 12 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Did we not call it, O MANN Regulars? Excerpt:

'SELMER, Tennessee (CNN) -- The woman accused of killing her minister husband teared up as her attorney described how her husband abused and threatened her, and how she shot him and fled with their three young girls to Alabama.
...
Her attorney said in opening statements Thursday that she didn't know at first that ammunition from the shotgun she fired had hit him.
...
"We will show you proof that he would destroy objects that she loved, he would isolate her from her family and he would abuse her -- not just verbally, not just emotionally and not just physically -- in other ways too," Farese said.'

OK, show us the proof, counsellor... or is it really even necessary in a US court under these circumstances?

Ninfong apologizes to Duke Lacrosse players

Anonymous · 12 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Nifong knows he's in deep trouble now. After claiming for months he's, "done nothing wrong" now it appears he's racing to apologize after the NC attorney general cleared the three young men from the Duke Lacrosse team yesterday. This coward is shaking in his boots becuase he knows the lawsuit is coming from the innocent familys who lives he wrecked and he has no chance of winning it. Just rememeber Finnery, Evans and Seligmann: SORRY ISN'T GOOD ENOUGH! Excerpt:

'DURHAM, N.C. (AP) - The local prosecutor who charged three Duke lacrosse players with raping a stripper apologized to the athletes Thursday and said the North Carolina attorney general's decision to drop the case was right.
"To the extent that I made judgments that ultimately proved to be incorrect, I apologize to the three students that were wrongly accused," Durham County District Attorney Mike Nifong said.'

Woman guilty of chainsaw murder, faces death

anthony · 12 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman accused of killing and dismembering her former lover's friend was convicted Thursday of premeditated murder and could become the state's first female defendant to face the death penalty.

"Prosecutors accuse Daphne Wright, 43, of abducting, killing and dismembering Darlene VanderGiesen, 42, in February 2006. Remains were found in a Minnesota ditch and a Sioux Falls landfill. All three women were deaf and knew each other through the deaf community."

The feminist who fought sexism with fire bombs faces justice

anthony · 12 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"When Adrienne Gerhäuser was accused yesterday of belonging to a terrorist organisation, she resembled, in the words of her lawyer, “an ordinary 58-year-old female”, tired, shoulders hunched with tension, but somehow at ease with herself.

...

Committed to an urban guerrilla war against everyday sexism, Red Zora carried out more than 40 attacks, starting in 1977 with a bomb placed in the offices of the German Doctors’ Association to protest against the abortion laws. There followed attacks on sex shops and cinemas; on Siemens, Bayer and Schering; on the Philippines Embassy (blamed for the international trade in women); biotechnology institutes and the cars of pimps."

Police: Female Teacher Had Sex With Student

anthony · 12 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

This female teacher abuse will never stop until they are held accountable for sexual abuse. For some reason this is not perceived as a legitmate sexual crime. If this double standard continues, female teachers will still prey on boys and girls. Excerpt:

"Investigators said Jamie Lynn Armstrong, 23, was a teacher at Tara High School, where she met the 16-year-old female student.

Police said the alleged relationship was uncovered after the girl's father said he found his daughter's journal about a month a go.

The journal held details about the alleged relationship between the student and Armstrong."

Hearing set for female teacher accused of sex crime

anthony · 12 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

I can flood this site with female rape cases against male students. They are so easy to find. Excerpt:

"The 24-year-old female teacher appeared with her attorney, James Rumsey, in front of Douglas County District Judge Stephen Six.

The woman, who was in her first year of teaching at LHS, has been suspended from the school district, with pay. The teacher was arrested March 16 for allegedly having sex with the student between August and mid-March. She has pleaded not guilty to two counts of aggravated indecent liberties with a child and two counts of criminal sodomy."

The prospect of all-female conception

Evil White Male... · 13 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. EXCERPT: Creating sperm from women would mean they would only be able to produce daughters because the Y chromosome of male sperm would still be needed to produce sons. The latest research brings the prospect of female-only conception a step closer. "We're very excited about this discovery, particularly as our earlier work in mice suggests that we could develop this work even further," Professor Nayernia said.

NEXT, REDUCE THE MALE POPULATION TO THE MAGIC 10% NUMBER RAD-FEMS ARE LOOKING FOR AND WE'LL HAVE THE PERFECT WORLD.... FOR ME TO POOP ON!
(with apologies to Triumph the insult comic dog)

Moran Blog: "Don't Feel Too Sorry for the Dukies"

Evil White Male... · 13 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Blog here. EXCERPT:
"The three young men who she accused are truly innocent of the charges brought against them according to the North Carolina Attorney General and the investigation led by his office. But perhaps the outpouring of sympathy for Reade Seligman, Collin Finnerty and David Evans is just a bit misplaced."

THIS IS THE TYPICAL LIBERAL WHITE MALE "WUSSIE-POOPIE" TYPE OF FEMINIST LAP-DOG ARTICLE, BUT READ THE COMMENTS BELOW, THEY ARE MUCH MORE ON TARGET.

CNN's Martin: Imus might be spark for debate on sexism?

anthony · 13 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"Now is the time for this nation to undergo a direct examination of the depths of sexism. My media colleagues shouldn't go just for the easy target rap lyrics. That is no doubt a logical next step, but sexism is so much deeper. It is embedded in our churches, synagogues, mosques, schools, Fortune 500 companies and in the political arena. We should target our resources to this issue and raise the consciousness of people, and expose the reality."

Ed. note: There's a link at the end of the essay for submitting comments back on the essay. It's free to use!

"Equality and a man's right to choose"

TomP · 13 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Opinion column at the Cavalier, a student(?) paper at University of Virginia. The article can be found here. The author of the piece is Alexander Cohen, who presents some interesting arguments in support of C4M. I shall be interested to see any response letters.

Perhaps Men's/Father's rights are so far out of favor with the powers-that-be as to become interesting to the student population, traditional espousers of "fringe" causes. Or perhaps we have here another example of a young man awakening.

In any case, the column is interesting and perhaps offers some useful arguments.

Teen mother brutally murders newborn

Matt · 14 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A 17-year-old stabbed her newborn baby 135 times and disposed of her body in a garbage can outside her home in Oakdale, authorities alleged Thursday.

Nicole Marie Beecroft was charged Thursday with first-degree murder. The charge carries a maximum sentence of life in prison. She was being held in a juvenile detention facility. Bail was set at $1 million on Friday afternoon.

"She kills the baby and now her life will be changed forever," Washington County Attorney Doug Johnson said.

The Tartan High School senior told police she was in a "panic state" after giving birth to the girl on the floor of the laundry room in her home around 3 a.m. Monday, according to the criminal complaint filed in Washington County District Court. She told police she had seen the baby's finger move, and admitted stabbing the child, the complaint said.'

"panic state"-- Oh yes, I guess then we should be sympathetic then and just give it a pass.

Violence against guardians an 'alarming trend'

Matt · 14 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'In one pending case from northwest Harris County, a 16-year-old girl is being held on a charge of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon for allegedly shooting her stepfather in the head; the man, a financial consultant, survived.
...
When her mother, a teacher, drew the line at the boyish attire, the fighting got worse and and the girl started running away. Her stepfather took charge of the discipline, and then, about 4 a.m. on Feb. 16, the girl shot him three times as he lay with her mother in bed, Field said.

"She snapped," Field said, adding that the teen confessed to authorities a few hours after the incident.

Her stepfather still has a bullet lodged in the back of his head.'

So the idea in this case as that she told her folks she is gay. They didn't quite like it and so it created an "undercurrent of tension". She starts dressing too boyishly for her parents' tastes and her folks tell her to stop. Her step-father actually has the nerve to enforce their rules. For this she tries to murder him in his sleep and this is characterized as her "snapping".

Stories like this only reinforce my decision to remain single and child-free. I wonder what the stats are on how much of this "alarming violence" is done by daughters? Or against their fathers?

A woman's false accusations are "evidence in itself"

Anonymous · 14 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

More nonsensical reactions to the Duke scandal from a public official. (Link goes to page two of article, where this gem can be found - emphasis mine):

"I think the district attorney went to the grand jury far sooner than he should have. If the district attorney had waited and gathered more information and tried to understand it, I think he would have had a better understanding of what the case was, and what is was not. On the other hand, he did have someone that said she was sexually assaulted, and that creates evidence in itself." — Lewis Cheek, Durham County commissioner who lent his name to a campaign last November to unseat Nifong

A potentially false accusation not supported by any actual evidence (and with a 41% chance of being a lie) is "evidence in itself"? When is a man's word ever considered "evidence", particularly regarding crimes where the accuser has been shown to be lying nearly half the time?

Mary Winkler: "My ugly came out"

Matt · 14 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Mary Winkler testifies, "my ugly came out". Apparently after years of marital strife she just had had enough and murdered her husband. She never though to get counseling maybe, or just do what millions of other women do: just leave the guy? Perhaps she murdered him knowing that somehow she would do better financially after she did a couple years but wrote a best-selling book about it. Excerpt:

'Investigators have said she admitted shooting her husband on March 22, 2006, and that it had something to do with his constant criticism. On the tape, she says the couple's domestic problems had reached a boiling point after many years of conflict.
...
Winkler told Alabama Bureau of Investigation agent Stan Stabler on the tape that her husband had threatened her physically. "He said something that really scared me. I don't know, something life-threatening," she said, without elaborating further.

...
"Just say, 'The lady was a moron, evil woman,' and let's go on with it. That's fine. ... That's my point of view."
...
But Farese said Mary Winkler handled the family finances only because she did everything her husband told her. He said she was abused verbally, emotionally and physically.

Clinton gladly plays the gender card

anthony · 14 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Armed with mounting evidence that women are providing her a strong foundation in the crucial early months of the run-up to next year's primaries, Clinton's campaign is trying to organize almost every aspect of the Democratic women's voting bloc — including lining up the support of feminist elites and stoking excitement in teenage political neophytes.
...
"Now is the time to break the biggest glass ceiling in the land," a beaming Clinton said last week after her endorsement by the National Organization for Women's political action committee, one of several influential women's activist groups that have rushed to endorse her campaign."

Teacher Punishes Boys With Haircut, Pink Bows

anthony · 14 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

Another article supporting the fact that boys are treated like animals in the education system. These female teachers must have taken many women studies courses. What better way to abuse a boy than humiliating him with pink bows. Sickening! Excerpt:

"Debbie Hackman's son, Caleb, was one of two boys who came home from school this week with a new haircut -– and the barber was the boys' teacher at Milan Elementary School.

According to students, fourth-grade teacher Jennifer Blockman punished the boys by tying pink bows in their hair and cutting their hair in front of the class."

More Winkler Case Details Emerging

Matt · 15 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Looks like Mary Winkler had a problem with check-kiting in addition to having her "ugly come out" enough to murder her husband. I suspect by the end of this trial a lot of pretty ugly things about Mary Winkler will surface. Let's see if justice gets done. Story here. Excerpt:

'SELMER, Tennessee (CNN) -- The day before a Tennessee preacher was shot to death, a banker tried to reach his wife several times about an account in her name that was nearly $5,000 overdrawn, a corporate fraud investigator testified Saturday.

When Mary Winkler finally returned the calls to Regions Bank late in the afternoon on March 21, 2006, banker Mary Guest told her she was unable to deposit checks from another bank because there weren't enough funds to cover them.

"I told her what she was doing was called kiting checks," Guest testified she told Winkler.

Guest testified she told Winkler the practice could result in criminal charges, and reminded Winkler that she and her husband had an appointment at the bank the following morning to discuss the problem.'

"That Night at Duke"

Matt · 15 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

So Newsweek finally writes about what really happened. They had an entire year to do so; they only just got around to it now. Excerpt:

'Seligmann found the stereotyping especially painful. Recruited by Harvard and Yale, he had proudly chosen Duke. Now he was being portrayed, at least by implication, as a dumb jock. Some elements of the Duke community, like the girls' lacrosse team, rallied behind the players, but the faculty seemed to write them off as racists and thugs. "It was a very lonely feeling," Seligmann recalled. "You were looking for people to step up and be behind you when you most needed them. Certain people weren't there."'

Yep-- and you, Newsweek, may count yourself among them. But you are in good ocmpany; the rest of the MSM, academe, and the government all fall into that camp.

Women ogle more than men do - it's a fact!

GaryB · 16 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

News.com.au reports here on what we guys have always suspected and women have always strenuously denied - WOMEN OGLE MEN MORE OFTEN THAN MEN OGLE THEM!

Excerpt:
"WOMEN are more prone to ogling than men despite the widespread belief they are less focused on the physical, a study suggests.
Scientists used eye-tracking technology to pinpoint what people looked at when shown a series of sexy photos. They expected women to be more interested in faces, and men in genitals.

To their surprise, they found almost the reverse was true. Men were more likely than women to linger on the face before diverting their attention to other parts of the body. But women spent longer poring over images of couples performing sexual acts."

So next time you hear a woman accusing guys of always starting at women's breasts, just throw this fact in..!

American Airlines Has Women-Only Site

Matt · 16 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

That's right, you read that correctly. The news is reported here. The special sub-site is here. Excerpt:

'CHICAGO, Illinois (Reuters) -- American Airlines, the world's largest airline, says it can boost revenue by $94 million a year by tailoring some of its services to the growing number of women travelers.

The airline, a unit of AMR Corp., this week unveiled a version of its Web site for women (http://www.aa.com/women). The site aims to increase the number of women booking flights on American by 2 percent or more, said an AMR executive on Tuesday.

The site, as well as changes to American's planes and travel clubs, is the latest effort by a U.S. airline to distinguish itself in a competitive industry that has spent the last five years slashing costs and tweaking services.'

Woman-only special incentives? Woman-only special services? Woman-only customer service? Do you find this grossly offensive? I do. I think this requires a call to action. A big one. I think AA needs to hear from many men about this kind of thing in no uncertain terms. I don't fly much but will not travel AA when I do. Contact AA here.

Study finds women don't really work more than men

ItsDan · 16 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

There's a common belief that women work more than men because in addition to their jobs, they do most of the housework. This study found that while women do more work at home, averaged together men and women do on average the same hours of work per week. Of course it doesn't point out the obvious, that more hours on home-work and less on market-work means lower income.

Winkler case: Prosecution rests with testimony of preacher's daughter

Matt · 17 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'SELMER, Tennessee (AP) -- Prosecutors rested their case against a preacher's wife accused of murdering her husband with the heartbreaking testimony of the couple's 9-year-old daughter.
...
She told Tennessee authorities that her husband criticized her for "the way I walk, what I eat, everything. It was just building up to this point. I was just tired of it. I guess I just got to a point and snapped."

Brandy Jones, who described Mary Winkler as her best friend, said Monday she never saw any evidence of physical or emotional abuse. She had dinner with the Winklers a month before Matthew was shot, and the couple seemed happy, Jones said.
...
Earlier Monday, a forensic pathologist testified that Matthew Winkler was killed by a shotgun blast in the middle of his back; 77 pellets were removed from his body.
...
The prosecution has said the Winklers were in financial trouble and that bank managers were closing in on a check-kiting scheme that Mary Winkler wanted to conceal from her husband.'

PODS Replies At Last

Benjamin Studtmann · 17 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I just received a communication from Peter Warhurst, CEO of the advertising agency that created the amazingly offensive ads for the PGA tour. Full letter stored here.

"I am in receipt of the comments you recently provided regarding our television commercial. Upon further consideration of the spot, and with the feelings of our customers as well as the general public in mind, I have decided to pull it from its rotation and no longer air it. While the commercial was created to be lighthearted and comical, I am sensitive to the fact that we have failed in that it has proven offensive to some people. This was never our intent and I am truly sorry for any discomfort or unpleasantness it has caused. Thank you for taking the time to bring your concerns to us."

I hope he learns something when his wife tries to gut him like a fish and the 911 operator views his situation with the same flavor of lighthearted levity. I wonder if Mr. Warhurst would take comfort in that afterwards, in the arms of her whiffle-cut wire-rimmed feminist social worker, his wife expresses that she is, indeed, truly sorry for any discomfort or unpleasantness he might have experienced. Wouldn't that just make it all better?

Married female teacher had 'affair' with 15-year-old pupil

AngryMan · 17 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Check out this story. Yet another female paedo teacher. Excerpt:

'Jennie Saville-King, an assistant teacher would book hotel rooms for sex with the teenager who was just 15 when the relationship began, or take him to her home while her husband was at work in London, it was claimed.

Three days before she gave birth to her baby, Saville King who had also been responsible for the pastoral care of the youngster was continuing to have sex with him, a court was told.

...
"Full sex didn't happen until after he was 16. He says he stopped short of full sex because he didn't want her to feel bad about having sex with him whilst he was underage," said the prosecutor."'

'He' stopped short? 'He' didn't want 'her' to feel bad?

What do you think she'll get? A slap on the wrist and some nice therapy. I bet she won't even lose her job. What would a man get in the same position? Hard jail time for sure.

Chinese "Womantown" update: Men to be spanked in new town

George.Rolph · 17 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'CONSTRUCTION has started on the world's first Woman-town, where disobedient men will get a spanking.

The 2.3sqkm Shuangqiao district in China's Chongqing will have a motto proclaiming its philosophy: "A woman never makes a mistake, a man must not refuse a woman's request."'

Last Call for 'Rape-Crisis' Feminism?

anthony · 17 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'But "rape-crisis feminism" (as the writer Katie Roiphe dubbed it) replaced one set of prejudices with another, such as the notion that women virtually never lie about rape. As the radical feminist law professor Catharine MacKinnon wrote in her 1987 book, Feminism Unmodified, "Feminism is built on believing women's accounts of sexual use and abuse by men."
...
The Duke case also makes it clear that the feminist dogma on rape is far from benign. It is hostile both to men and to basic principles of justice.'

UK: "Mormon women ‘tortured children to instil discipline’"

AngryMan · 18 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Two Mormon women tortured six young children by forcing them to eat red-hot chillies and whipping them with nettles, a court was told yesterday. Deidre Carrington, 41, and Maria Keable, 60, are also alleged to have punched and kneed the four girls and two boys, hit them with wooden spoons and rolling pins, and gagged them."

Winkler Case: Slain preacher's wife denies pulling trigger

Matt · 18 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Supposedly her husband "made her" wear "slutty costumes" for sex and was going to kill their daughter since he wanted a son instead. Also, she didn't pull the trigger. The gun just went off.

Yes, indeed. It wasn't her fault in any way, shape or form. She should be released immediately. Uh-huh.

Man Claims Hate Crime Assault by Women

Matt · 18 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Man Describes Alleged Attack By 7 Lesbians In N.J.
Claims '06 Incident Was Hate Crime Against Straight Man

(CBS/AP) NEW YORK A man who was beaten and stabbed after a street fight with seven avowed lesbians testified Wednesday that he thought he was going to die after they jumped him last year.
...
Buckle, who has called the incident "a hate crime against a straight man," was testifying in Manhattan's state Supreme Court at the trial of Patreese Johnson, 20, Renata Hill, 25, Venice Brown, 19, and Terrain Dandridge, 20, all of Newark, N.J.
...
Three of the seven women pleaded guilty to assault charges in exchange for sentences of six months in jail and five years probation.'

RADAR ALERT: Nifong: The Tip Of The Iceberg

Matt · 19 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Your mission this week, should you decide to accept it, is to familiarize yourself with the Duke case.

- Read That Night At Duke, and watch the videos there. Terri Lynn Tersak of True-Equality Network can be heard in '2. Audio: Duke: Case Dismissed'.
- And you don't want to miss Duke Players, AG Speak Out.

"This woman has destroyed everything I worked for in my life," said David Evans, former Duke lacrosse player recently exonerated of sexual offense and kidnapping charges. Crystal Gail Mangum, single mom and "exotic dancer" put Evans and two other young men, as well as their families and friends, through 395 days of hell. And it easily cost these families a million dollars each; all to keep innocent young men from 30 years in prison.

Mangum was able to maintain her deceit for so long because she had the enthusiastic help of Durham County District Attorney Michael Nifong.

Evan's comment rings true for many men falsely accused of rape, sexual assault and domestic violence. Prosecutors and researchers say that half of all allegations of rape turn out to be false. In many cases, the D.A. goes ahead with the prosecution of the innocent, willfully ignoring the fact the accuser admitted she lied. And it's becoming common knowledge that some women file false charges against their partners to assure sole custody of children during divorce.

These offenses can only occur when due process is not respected; something that, unfortunately, is all too common. Yet mainstream media is portraying this as it it were an isolated case.

PREPARE YOURSELF NOW!

Watch the videos above. Then read the following related information:

- A Culture of False Allegations: How VAWA Harms Families and Children (http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-A-Culture-of-False-Allegations.pdf)
- Bias in the Judiciary: The Case of Domestic Violence (http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/Bias-In-The-Judiciary.pdf)

Stay tuned. Next week we'll launch our campaign to stop prosecutorial abuse in cases where sexual assault or domestic violence is alleged.

++
Date of RADAR Release: April 19, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Winkler Verdict: Vol. Manslaughter, Could Get 3-6 Years

Matt · 19 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. No, not murder. Not even close. She could get 3-6 years and get released. Sex composition of the jury: 10 women, two men. Justice served? Excerpt:

'SELMER, Tennessee (CNN) -- A Tennessee jury on Thursday found Mary Winkler guilty of voluntary manslaughter in the shotgun killing of her husband.

Winkler showed no emotion when the verdict was announced.

The judge ruled that she would remain free on bond until her sentencing, which is scheduled for May 18.

The manslaughter conviction could send Winkler to prison for between three and six years.
...
The 10 women and two men deliberated for about six hours, before reaching a verdict.

She could have been convicted of first-degree murder, which would have been punishable by 51 to 60 years in prison. Early in the case, prosecutors decided not to pursue the death penalty.'

Father denied justice by NZ courts, says UN

Matt · 20 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Posted on behalf of Marc A. Story here. Excerpt:

'The United Nations has slammed the New Zealand legal system for denying justice to a man accused of abusing his children.

The Government now has three months to explain itself to the international body and offer a solution to the man.

Human rights lawyer Tony Ellis took the man's case to the UN's Human Rights Committee saying his client's right to a fair trial had been ignored by the Family and then the Appeal Courts.'

Sadistic foster mother sentenced to 14 years in jail

AngryMan · 20 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Remember this?

Good news. She went down for 14 years yesterday. Excerpt:

'A sadistic foster mother who subjected three children in her care to horrifying physical and mental abuse over two decades was jailed for 14 years yesterday.

Judge Simon Darwall-Smith told Eunice Spry, 62, that it was the worst case he had come across in his career.

The judge said: "Frankly, it's difficult for anyone to understand how any human being could have even contemplated what you did, let alone with the regularity and premeditation you employed."'

MANN Announcement: Beta News Site Open for Testing

Matt · 20 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

All,

Today we announce that MANN is trying a user-centric approach to news article review and endorsement. Scott, thanks for setting this up and getting it going. You de man.

It's no secret some regulars feel that the editing of news stories is too exclusive. Well, being that their comments are directed largely at myself, I will refrain here from commenting on their comments. Nonetheless it is fair to say that a more democratic form of news story parsing and rating is in keeping with the spirit of the Internet generally. So MANN now has a beta news site using the Pligg software system of content review and rating-- entirely user-driven. So please, click on the Beta News Site tab at the top, register, and submit and review stories. If it turns out to be a popular means of posting stories here on MANN, we'll switch over to it entirely.

While it's true then that I'll be out of a job, it is also true that I'll have more time to do other MRA-related stuff. So all for the best no matter what.

Hope you all enjoy it, and get Pligging!

Matt

P.S./Update: Please contact Scott at scott@mensactivism.org directly if you are having problems with registering on the new system, etc. This is a new s/w package both on the site and it's also new to MANN admins, so please be patient. Getting the bugs worked out in stuff like this is one reason for deploying this as a beta site and not just replacing the current site with it.

Babysitter kills pregnant friend, cuts baby from womb, drowns 3 children

ItsDan · 20 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"BELLEVILLE, Ill. - A baby sitter already accused of killing a pregnant friend was charged Friday with drowning the woman's three children in a bath tub and then hiding the bodies in the family's washing machine and dryer.

Grand jurors indicted Tiffany Hall, 24, on three counts of first-degree murder in the East St. Louis deaths last September of DeMond Tunstall, 7, Ivan Tunstall-Collins, 2, and Jinela Tunstall, 1.

A county coroner's jury ruled the deaths of the children, their mother, Jimella Tunstall, and her fetus to be homicides."

Newsweek: The Games Boys Play

Matt · 20 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

Unexpected but needed saying; author advocates for allowing boys to play rough and tumble, cops and robbers, etc., and why it is better that they play at such things rather than live them out. Excerpt:

"Children, and particularly boys, are acutely sensitive to the violence around them. They play out violent themes to help relieve themselves of the natural fear and confusion they feel."

Please note I have also added this story to the beta site. Please take this opportunity to look at it, register, vote for it (or not), and consider submitting stories yourself. Personally I really like the way the software does so much of the headlining and linking work for you.

Male victims the subject of domestic violence conference

anthony · 20 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Men united for a just cause....another vital move in the right direction. The more we speak, the more people will listen. The MRA movement is gaining momentum. Let's be positive! Excerpt:

"CHARLESTON - Properly identifying and providing services to male victims of domestic violence and sexual assault will be the focus of a day-long conference next week in Charleston.

In observance of National Crime Victims Right's Week, a coalition of survivor support and political action groups, in conjunction with the U. S. Department of Justice's Office for Victims of Crime, are sponsoring "Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault: Not Just Problems for Women."

Women force toddlers to fight, escape jail

AngryMan · 20 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A mother who forced her two toddlers to attack each other with weapons and filmed the fight was spared jail.

Zara Care, with her sisters Serenza and Danielle Olver and her mother Carole Olver forced the two toddlers to punch each other in the face.

The four women also goaded the two-year-old boy and three-year-old girl, who cannot be identified for legal reasons, to hit each other with a magazine and a hairbrush and when one did not fight they called him a "wimp" and a "faggot".

The fight was filmed on a home video recorder and was found by chance by the children's father who is in the Army and had returned from a tour of duty in Iraq."

Check out the left-wing Guardian's coverage. "The incident was filmed on a video camera and discovered by chance by a person, who reported it to social services."

The American Daily publishes SAFE Executive Director article on Duke University Case

SAFE-NH · 21 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This is an excerpt from the American Daily Press Release: for the entire piece, please click here.

"If your son was falsely accused of rape, and when he was proven innocent, still was not able to legally hold his accuser accountable, had suffered loss of reputation, not to mention the emotional toll on him and the changes in his personality…and yet had no recourse, how would you feel as the parent of this young man?

If you are a man and you are falsely accused of domestic violence or sexual assault under the laws we currently have, you will find yourself exactly where these young men from Duke University are.

Even though they have no case against them, they will carry the stigma of the accusations with them forever. The same goes for those with false allegations of domestic violence and with false restraining orders placed against them.

Not only do they become instantly prohibited from entering their homes, seeing their children and sometimes even lose their jobs but they are also under the threat of arrest, based simply on the “victim” claiming that they called or happened to see them in a public place.’

Ultimately, if the restraining order is dropped by the “victim”, that does not mean that the defendant won’t be tried in a criminal court for having “assaulted” their accuser.

Even if they are proven to be innocent, they will suffer the stigma of having been accused and some people will always assume the worst. False accusations and lack of accountability ruin the lives of many and it’s time for a change!"

Restaurants to drop prices for women to reflect wage disparity

anthony · 22 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

This is out right discrimination. What about the male patron that has a low income? Is he still required to pay more money for a meal? What about the female that makes $100,000 a year? Feminists look at genders as a collective unit, ultimately ignoring individuality. The wage gap myth needs intensive research, or this disturbing issue could become a disturbing trend. Excerpt:

"At least five restaurants here say they will drop prices for women patrons by 23 percent Tuesday to reflect a conclusion that American women, on average, earn that much less than men.

The event sponsor, the American Association of American Women, says 23 percent of the year will have passed, and that that's how many extra days women would have to work this year to make what similarly trained and educated men would make. The association has a Baker County chapter."

--

NOTE: AAUW Executive's e-mail address is executive-at-aauw.org.

India: "Boys Cry"

bharati · 22 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

An article regarding the shocking status of boys in India here. Excerpt:

"Recently in Mumbai, a teacher paraded three six-year-old boys in their underwear to punish them for not doing well in school, but no action was taken, says Swarup Sarkar of the Save India Family Foundation, a self-financed forum for men. In April last year, a student of a prestigious school in Lucknow complained of sexual abuse by his class teacher. The matter is with the police, the child has sought refuge in his grandparents' house, and the issue is hanging."

Misandry at its worst badgerb · 22 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"[The bill]...would also address the issue of violence against women at its roots. (Those of you vigorously objecting here are being disingenuous. No, men do not need similar protection because, Lorena Bobbitt notwithstanding, there is really no widespread gender-specific phenomenon of violence against them."

A thoroughly sickening article. Pass it along to everyone you know in the Men's Movement. Maybe someone can come up with a learned response to this sicko. I have been banging my head against the wall trying to come up with one. Sadly my skills are lacking in that area.

200th exoneration in US due to DNA testing

Matt · 23 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'CHICAGO (AP) - A man who spent 25 years in prison for rape was exonerated Monday as a judge threw out his convictions because DNA evidence showed he couldn't have committed the attack.

Jerry Miller smiled and the courtroom erupted into cheers after Cook County Circuit Court Judge Diane G. Cannon read the ruling that cleared him of all charges.

Miller, 48, had been found guilty of rape, robbery, aggravated kidnapping and aggravated battery even though he testified he was at home watching television at the time of the 1981 attack. He was paroled in March 2006 and now works two jobs and lives with a family member in a Chicago suburb.

The exoneration is the nation's 200th based on DNA evidence, according to the Innocence Project, a New York group that works to free wrongly convicted inmates.'

Nurse convicted of dismembering husband

anthony · 23 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A jury convicted a nurse Monday of killing her husband and placing his body parts in three suitcases she tossed into Chesapeake Bay. Melanie McGuire, who sobbed as she heard the verdict, was convicted of murder, desecration of a corpse, perjury and a weapons offense."

Red Alert! Men May Soon Be Taxed More Than Women

032105 · 24 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here.

This sexist economic agenda, if acted upon, would severely disadvantage men in the workforce because employers would hire more women than men simply for the fact that women would be cheaper to hire. Such an act, therefore, would lead to mass discrimination against men by employers and would greatly reduce men's presence at jobs.

Young men would be less inclined to seek higher education (a problem already affecting boys) as a result of knowing that their chances of getting jobs would be far lower than women's chances; consequently, the educational crisis affecting boys and men could dramatically get worse sending society into utter economic chaos. This article should be sent to every men's group on the planet! This must be stopped at once!

Paper here.

Women earn 95% of what men do

ItsDan · 24 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I came across this article on CNN and discovered a hidden gem. The article spouts the usual numbers of 80%, 69%, etc, but then hides in an otherwise unexplained line that only a quarter of the paygap is specifically related to gender, and the rest is behavior based. Now despite women outperforming men in education, I can still take 20 and divide by 4, meaning here in a CNN article they admit the actual number is closer to 95 cents on the dollar than the 76 they like to claim. And if they were that wrong for so long, it won't be hard to suggest that even the last few % could be from behaviors the study didn't consider.

False rape accuser locked up

ItsDan · 24 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Granted it's only for four months, but that's more than many people get. Story here. Excerpt:

"A TEENAGE girl who lied about being raped by a taxi driver was sentenced to a four-month detention and training order today.

The 17-year-old, from Shipley, West Yorkshire, who cannot be named for legal reasons, pleaded guilty to perverting the course of justice at a hearing last month.

District Judge David Thomas, sentencing at Bradford Magistrates' Court today, told the girl she would serve two months of her sentence in custody.

...

The court heard that Mr Ahmed, who has 11-year-old twin daughters, no longer works at night for fear of further allegations.

His financial position is now such that he has had to put his house on the market.

His wife is now taking tablets for depression, the court heard."

RADAR ALERT: Beyond Duke: About Half Of All Rape Allegations Are False

Matt · 24 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The false allegations of rape that damaged the lives of 46 members of the Duke Lacrosse Team, nearly sent three to prison for thirty years each, and cost families many millions of dollars in legal fees was not a one-of-a-kind aberration of justice. Other infamous cases involving well-known individuals such as Kobe Bryant, John Fund*, and CNN's Tucker Carlson provide additional public evidence that false rape allegations are a major public problem - one where the perpetrator is rarely punished.

*4-26-07 Update: MANN admins received a note from Mr. Fund letting us now that he was never accused of rape, only assault, and that these charges were dropped after investigation. He maintains a site discussing this issue here.

While researchers and prosecutors do not agree on the percentage of false allegations, the consensus is that approximately 40% to 50% of charges are clearly false. This number does not include unresolved allegations held "in limbo" where evidence s too weak to try the case even under shield laws, relaxed rules, and comparatively weak evidentiary standards applied to rape cases:

- A survey of all the forcible rape complaints during a three-year period at two large Midwestern state universities found that 50 percent of the accusations were false.
- In a nine-year study of all resolved rape cases in a Midwestern U.S. city of 70,000, the accusers recanted their charges 41 percent of the time. The 41 percent figure does not include the other accusations that the police department recorded as unfounded, for which there was insufficient evidence to establish the assault.
- According to a report of the Defense Department Inspector General released in 2005, approximately 73% of women and 72% of men at the military service academies believe that false accusations of sexual assault are a problem.
- Linda Fairstein, former head of the New York County District Attorney's Sex Crimes Unit, noted, "There are about 4,000 reports of rape each year in Manhattan. Of these, about half simply did not happen. ... It's my job to bring justice to the man who has been falsely accused by a woman who has a grudge against him, just as it's my job to prosecute the real thing."

The culture of false allegations of violence bears unacceptably high costs. Families and innocent lives are destroyed by our wasted tax dollars, while real cases go ignored or unprosecuted. Judges and juries are fooled and make bad decisions.

Every American who believes in justice has an important task to do this week:

1. Telephone your representative in Congress and ask if he or she has released a statement about the Duke Lacrosse case. You can find your representative's phone number by going to http://www.house.gov/ and entering your zip code, or by calling 202-224-3121.
2. If the answer is "yes," then have them send you the statement. Forward your representative's name and statement to info-at-mediaradar.org.
3. If the answer is "no", then encourage your representative to take this issue seriously and request a statement regarding the case be released.
4. You may also wish to contact your representative in your State Legislature and make the same request.

MANN Ed. NOTE: A number of facts herein have citations. Please see the original newsletter on-line here for these citations.

++
Date of RADAR Release: April 23, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. - Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting - is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Glenn Sacks Speaks About Alec Baldwin on CNN

anthony · 24 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Newsletter here. Partial Transcript by Sacks:

"Parental Alienation campaigns such as what Kim has done to Alec Baldwin are very common. This campaign that she has done for the past six years has been so bad that even Basinger's mother has come out and condemned her daughter, and said that Alec is a good father, that he loves his daughter, that she loves him, and that Kim has done everything she could to drive him out of her life."

Video link is here.

The "wage gap calculator" on Hillary's website

anthony · 24 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Before I begin, Happy Equal Pay Day!

Hillary is perpetuating propganda with this assine wage gap calculator located on her political front page. Type your gender, race, education, and age and find out why we are involved in an up-hill battle regarding this myth.

Deaths spur dad to action

Anonymous · 25 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Frank Campione, the father whose wife (Frances Elaine Campione) is on trial for murdering their two children, is pushing for the Ontario Ombudsman's office to have more oversight of Children's Aid Societies.

The CAS repeatedly gave custody back to the mother, in spite of warning signs that she was a danger to the children. In the end, the mother killed both children by drowning them. Her trial is scheduled to begin in Barrie in a few weeks.

John Stossel: 'Alec Baldwin: Monster or Alienated Parent?'

anthony · 25 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Watch "Myths, Lies and Downright Stupidity" on a special edition of "20/20" Friday, May 4, at 10 p.m. EDT
...
The media (including the men, for psychological reasons involving guilt or other factors best left to Dr. Phil), see men as inviting, politically correct targets. When experts start trumpeting statistics that add up to "men are bad," reporters listen.

For years, I heard bad things about deadbeat dads. They were living it up, while their ex-wives and children had to scrape by. It's a recurring story, and the media regurgitates it regularly. It's also group slander."

"Inside youth prisons, scores of female guards violated boys"

Matt · 26 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Posted on behalf of Marc A.:

Last year, two Kuwaiti women got 7 years in jail for kidnapping, beating and raping a man.

Feminists like Jackson Katz claim women commit only 1% of rape. But that is NOT true especially when we count statutory and prison rape. A student survey found 43% of teacher sex abuse came from female teachers (though 92% of prosecutions are of male teachers), according to this article, which also quotes a John Hopkins expert saying boys face the same long-term effects as girls who are victims of sexual abuse.

Then there is the under-reporting. According to Wikipedia, "since the incidence of female-on-male rape is on record at much higher rates (around 30% compared to 10%) in Canada, it is likely being substantially under-reported in the United States."

And finally, there is prison rape/abuse, which women commit a substantial amount of, as the following recent article in the San Antonio Express News explains. (And of course, if we counted false accusations as psychological rape, the percentage of female rapists is even higher still). Excerpt:

'According to the Dallas Morning News, roughly two-thirds of TYC employees disciplined for sexual contact with youths since 2000 were women. Only five were convicted. In each case, the punishment was probation.

Incarcerating a woman for having sex with a male youth troubles some. "What's the crime," skeptics ask, "if the act was consensual?"

Lee Preston, clinical director at the San Antonio Rape Crisis Center, sees no difference between a man seducing a girl or a woman bedding a boy.

"Either way it's sexual abuse," Preston says. "You have an adult attempting to have sex with a minor."'

Grandmothers among those arrested over 'Satanic sex abuse' at school

AngryMan · 27 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Check out this story.

Excerpt: "Three women teachers were among six people arrested yesterday accused of sedating and sexually abusing children as young as 3 at a school near Rome.

The teachers — two of whom are grandmothers who had taught at the school and at Sunday school for decades — are said to have [taken] part in the repeated abuse of 15 children aged 3 and 5 for a year, filming them in sexual acts with satanic overtones at the teachers' homes and in a wood."

Female paedophiles? Or has the Satanic Panic reached Italy? Let's not forget the McMartin pre-school in the US and the Shieldfield scandal in the UK.

Sacks Column Submission: Baldwin Not the Only Culprit in Custody Battle with Basinger

Matt · 27 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From Glenn Sacks: My new co-authored column, Baldwin Not the Only Culprit in Custody Battle with Basinger (San Diego Union-Tribune, 4/27/07), makes the point that while Baldwin's voicemail tirade at his daughter was clearly wrong, we're ignoring the Baldwin-Basinger case's central truth—Kim Basinger's well-documented Parental Alienation campaign against Baldwin.

Beta News Site Traffic

Matt · 28 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

All,

I have noticed the Beta News Site for MANN is getting very little attention. Please take the time to register on it and try it out. It really is a good alternative to the current submit-edit-post/not post paradigm that we currently are using.

Think of the highly populist, democratic form such a paradigm represents. Put me out of a job, please! ;)

Matt

BBC thinks female-on-male violence is humorous

Steven Brown · 29 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I managed to catch this episode of Eastenders on Friday:

"Denise reveals that she was going to leave, but that Shirley's convinced her to go through with the wedding. She takes Kevin aside, knees him in the crotch, then they tie the knot."

Note the light-hearted way the incident is summed up.

I wonder when the BBC is going to feature some humorous male-on-female violence?
--
Ed. note: For the info. of non-UK readers, "EastEnders" is a very popular series in Britain, watched regularly by millions of people. Such a blatant example of woman-on-man violence in such a widely-viewed TV program is not insignificant and worthy of attention and action. "Have Your Say" link is here.

Hillary is "Patriarchy in sheep's clothing"??

Matt · 29 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

You may need to pick your jaws up off the floor after reading this, but there it is, in black and white. Excerpt:

'Hillary, by contrast, seems to want to be more like a man in her demeanor and politics, makes few concessions to the social demands of femininity, and yet seems to be only a partial feminist. She seems above us, exempting herself from compromises women have to make every day, while, at the same time, leaving some of the basic tenets of feminism in the dust. We are sold out on both counts. In other words, she seems like patriarchy in sheep's clothing.'

Lynch Says G.I. Jane Propaganda by Military Were Lies

Roy · 29 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

On her latest speaking tour including an appearance before Congress, Jessica Lynch says she's still confused about all the lies that the military's P.R. flacks ginned up about her supposed heroism."...

Lynch put up no resistance because she was immobilized in what amounted to a massive car accident. "I didn't even get a shot off," she told Newsweek.com this week, explaining that her Humvee was hit by a rocket-propelled grenade, causing the driver to lose control and slam into the back of another truck in their convoy. "My weapon had jammed. And I didn't even get to fire." She blamed the military for not setting the record straight and the media for spreading the bogus story. At the hearing last week, she said she was "still confused as to why [the military] chose to lie and try to make me a legend."

Well, where is the mea culpa op-ed by N.O.W.'s Kim Gandy, now that the obvious consequences of females in combat have been outted? The rad-fems cannot politically afford to admit that women are a liability in combat theatre. It would upset the myth of female supremacy...

American Airlines Not Relenting

Matt · 29 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I received a snail mail reply from AA re their women-only subsite at http://www.aa.com/women/. Among other things the letter reads:

"We have the responsibility to our stockholders to maximize their investment, and that means aggressively pursuing the business of those who travel frequently...[Women constitute a large portion of our market]...Good business dictates we pursue these travelers."

Basically, the same argument people who had "whites-only" sections in restaurants, etc., used to make.

AA's customer relations web address is http://www.aa.com/customerrelations/. Get cranking!

Fathers' Biking Trek Culminates in August Rally

Anonymous · 30 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'It is official! August 11th 2007 Robert Pedersen and Rob Mackenzie will start their over 600 mile bicycle trek from the Lansing Capitol to Washington, D.C.. This will be an intense multi-day bike trek through numerous states ending in Washington, D.C. where they will be greeted by thousands of people attending the national rally in Washington, D.C. on August the 18th.'

Related:
http://www.achildsright.net/
http://www.dcrally2007.com/

NY Sun Column Takes on Wage Gap Myth Directly

Matt · 30 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Nice to see this. Excerpt:

'Never mind that the 77% figure is flawed and bogus. The latest figures show that comparing men and women who work 40 hours weekly yields a wage ratio of 88% — before accounting for different education, jobs, or experience, bringing the wage ratio closer to 95%. Percentages of 88% and 95% are less dramatic — and would place Equal Pay Day in January or February, poor months for outdoor rallies.'

Note the author's bio:
"Ms. Furchtgott-Roth, a former chief economist at the U.S. Department of Labor, is a senior fellow at the Hudson Institute."

Alesina's sexist "man tax" getting publicity with no ethical objections

Marc A. · 30 April 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The Minneapolis Star Tribune just printed this story on Harvard professor Alberto Alesina's sexist "man tax."

The story mentions no ethical objections at all. Please get our objections heard in the media early on before this snowballs. Letters can be sent using this form.

RADAR ALERT: Duke Case: Unusual Only Because The Prosecutor Got Caught

Matt · 1 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Now that the Duke Lacrosse players have been declared innocent by the new district attorney, we're being told that this is an unusual case caused by one out-of-control prosecutor. It's not. The only thing unusual about this case is that the innocent victims of false accusation had the resources to defend themselves against the overwhelming power of the state. Just as rape is unquestionably a serious problem, so too are false accusations of rape. Too many prosecutors fail to recognize that it's not an either/or choice. Both are true.

Since most of those falsely accused of rape lack the resources to defend themselves, the system convicts many innocent men. Even when the accuser later owns up, the system resists correcting the injustice. Consider Illinois' notorious prosecution of Gary Dotson. Dotson's accuser spent half a decade guilt-ridden over having put an innocent man in prison. When she finally confessed, prosecutors didn't want to hear it. They had reason to stonewall. State police forensic scientist Timothy Dixon had given perjured testimony.

Wrongdoing by the city of Marlborough, Mass. resulted in a $13.6 million judgment against them for causing the imprisonment of an innocent man. Eric Sarsfield, who spent nearly a decade in prison for a rape he did not commit, says he and the rape victim were "manipulated, cheated, and betrayed by law enforcement officers more interested in closing a case and getting a conviction than in playing by the rules."

Nifong is no "rogue prosecutor". In too many places in the country, Nifong's behavior is standard operating procedure.

Our system has become so disinterested in protecting the rights of the falsely accused that some people now think making false accusations is a good business plan. In Sacramento, Calif., Jessica Langshaw falsely accused three men of rape and five others of sexual assault in order to extort $500,000 from them.

Objective research indicates that about half of reported forcible rape accusations are false.

That also means that about half are true. A blanket policy of treating all accusations as true causes just as much harm to innocent people as would be caused if the policy were to treat all such accusations as false.

In a democracy, we get the government we deserve. Make your voice heard!

Last week we asked you to contact your Congressperson to ask if he or she has issued a statement about the Duke case. This week we'd like you to ask your two Senators the same question:

1. You can find both your Senators' phone numbers by going to http://www.senate.gov/ and entering your state, or by calling the U.S. Capitol switchboard at 202-224-3121.
2. If your Senator has issued a statement, have them send you that statement, and then forward it and the Senator's name to info-at-mediaradar.org.
3. If not, politely request that your Senator issue a statement regarding the case.

 MANN admin note: Some of these statements have citations associated with them. See the original alert on the RADAR web site for these citations. **

++
Date of RADAR Release: April 30, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. - Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting - is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence.

http://www.mediaradar.org/.

iFeminists: Men are now being physically tortured, so they will "admit" to committing DV axolotl · 1 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Yes, that is happening in this here America.

The article addresses general DV issues and the VAWA, then gets more specific (read: graphic..this is not for the faint of heart):

"Torture victims have described events during their imprisonment where they were stripped naked and doused with cold water, and then "stun-gun/tasers" were applied to their testicles by law enforcement agents. This was repeated until they confessed/agreed to the fraudulent complaint filed against them."

"Over 800 cases of the prior listed types of torture have been reported to the victim's representatives in the United States Congress"

British Judge partially corrects the wrongs in alimony law bharati · 1 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Everybody is entitled to live the lifestyle for which they earn through their economic contrbution. It does seem like the winds of change towards recognising and stopping these economic parasites are blowing. The door towards "living according to ones capability without getting fleeced by economic parasites" has been opened. This needs to be firmed up and slowly the feminists' economic parasitism will be stopped. Excerpt:

'LONDON, April 14 - A British judge has ruled ex-husbands can not be expected to compensate their ex-wives for future earnings.

The judge ruled in England, which is known for favoring women in divorce proceedings, that a baker identified as Mr. H does not have to give Mrs. H a share of his future earnings after their divorce, The Times of London reported Saturday.'

Unauthorized Biography of Hillary Clinton Paints Familiar Picture

Matt · 1 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

It seems Carl Bernstein's recent biography of Hillary Clinton exposes some of what many of us already knew. Read the pre-publication review here. Excerpt:

'With the thoroughness for which he is famous, Bernstein spoke to more than 200 of Clinton's friends, colleagues and adversaries. He stops short of accusing the New York senator of blatantly lying about her past, but has unearthed examples of where she has played fast and loose with the facts about her "personal and political life", according to Knopf.

The book could revive the explosive charge, made earlier this year by David Geffen, a former Clinton donor and Hollywood mogul, that "the Clintons lie with such ease, it's troubling".
...
Bernstein's biography is likely to touch some raw nerves. One writer who has crossed swords with Clinton advises Bernstein to watch his back. "She has the most powerful war machine that has ever been developed and it is led by people who have been to hell and back.".

True Equality Conference 2007 Update

Matt · 1 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I called the Washington Court Hotel just today to ask about when would be the latest one could book a room under the special rate for the Boys and the Boy Crisis Conference scheduled for July 13-14, 2007. The scheduler said that bookings for rooms had to come no later than June 13 to get the special $115.00/night rate.

For those not familiar with DC area prices, TRUST ME, $115.00/night at the Court is a nice deal. Try looking up their regular prices and see what you find. This is also a very good time to find cheap airfare deals at sites like Travelocity, too. Don't wait 'til you're only a month out before booking your plane.

This is going to be a great conference. Tom has done a great job lining up speakers and workshop leaders. Don't miss this, guys!

The Truth About the Pay Gap: Feminist politics and bad economics

anthony · 1 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

These are aspects of the wage gap we already know. I hope these opinions are taken seriously, examined, and treated with equity before we demonize men. Hillary, take notice, NOW's philosphy on the matter is flawed. The American Asscociation of Unveristy Women might even be more of a perpetuator of this biased myth. When will the governement and society accept views regarding the wage gap that is not infected with feminism?

"As they get older, many women elect to work less so they can spend time with their children. A decade after graduation, 39 percent of women are out of the work force or working part time -- compared with only 3 percent of men. When these mothers return to full-time jobs, they naturally earn less than they would have if they had never left."

Female Teacher, 16-Year-Old Boy Had Sex In Vehicle At Church

anthony · 1 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

What about "Female teacher rapes boy in vehicle at church"? Excerpt:

"Janet Lea Hughes, 32, of Viera, was arrested Monday night after two undercover Titusville police officers found her with a student in a van parked at First Presbyterian Church.

Hughes was issued a $35,000 bond on one count of unlawful sexual activity with a minor when she made her initial appearance Tuesday afternoon. On a second count of attempted sexual activity with a minor, Judge Judy Atkin ordered Hughes to community supervision and to have no contact with the boy."

Teacher accused of student affair was sent home for ‘wearing revealing dress’

anthony · 1 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"In July of 2004 she is said to have begun a year long affair with a 15 year old student who was in year 10.

They would meet for sex sessions in her home in St Albans and in her car. When the boy turned 16, it's claimed they had full sex and would check in to local hotels.

The court has been told that when another girl at the school discovered a photo of the boy and the teacher taken on his mobile phone, she took a copy into the school and showed a teacher."

DePaul University Athletic director - Women superior to men chicago joe · 2 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Depaul University's first female athletic director and gender equity advocate, Jean Lenti-Ponsetto, claims female superiority over men in basketball.

Asked for her comments on the differences between coaching men and women in basketball for the "WomenNews" section of the Chicago Tribune she says:
(click "read more")

"My experience is that women are more coachable. They don't bring as much ego, and they function much better in a team-oriented concept. Guys sometimes have a tendency to fit their individual skills into the team model. Women always think team first... women are also faster and easier learners because they kind of check their ego at the door. Guys sometimes walk into a team setting and have the tendency to prove right away how good they are and how good their individual skills are."

Remember Mr. Larry Summers, president of Harvard? Isn't this the same thing? I guess when it's in reverse it's O.K. Join me in telling Mrs. Lenti-Ponsetto and Depaul University's president, Rev. Dennis H. Holtscheider how you feel.

jlentipo-at-depaul.edu
president-at-depaul.edu

Wage Gap Myth version II: Stay-at-home mothers' worth

Matt · 2 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Seems the measuring of financial matters when it comes to feminists truly knows no limits. The latest hilarity is to be found here. Wonder if stay-at-home dads get the same method of calculation?

Excerpt:
"NEW YORK (Reuters) - If the typical stay-at-home mother in the United States were paid for her work as a housekeeper, cook and psychologist among other roles, she would earn $138,095 a year, according to research released on Wednesday.

This reflected a 3 percent raise from last year's $134,121, according to Salary.com Inc, Waltham, Massachusetts-based compensation experts.

The 10 jobs listed as comprising a mother's work were housekeeper, cook, day care center teacher, laundry machine operator, van driver, facilities manager, janitor, computer operator, chief executive officer and psychologist, it said."

Sports Illustrated's Deford denounces Title IX - but blames men for poor academics garypc · 2 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Frank Deford, in his latest column, denounces the impact of Title IX on men's sports teams. At the same time, however, he also blames the lack of men on college on men's poor study habits and only being interested in sports. He makes no mention of the systematic problems in educating in men, and ultimately considered the current system fair. Excerpt:

"The current situation is fair. It is not the fault of girls that boys won't work hard in the classroom. However, it is really not healthy that, soon enough, most colleges will only have men's teams in football and basketball, maybe baseball."

France's Royal: Police women to be accompanied back home

Anonymous · 3 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Ms Royal attacked him over his plans for heavy cuts in the civil service and cited the case of a policewoman who was raped last month as she returned from work at night.

“Under my presidency every woman police officer will be accompanied to her home after work,” Ms Royal said. She scored points when Mr Sarkozy denounced the 35-hour maximum working week, introduced in 1999 by the last Socialist Government.'

Woman charged with kidnapping in child support scam

anthony · 3 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This is an update from a prevous post about this child support scam. Excerpt:

"An Albuquerque woman who for two years collected child support from a man for a baby that didn't exist is now facing a felony kidnapping charge.

In a court hearing in 2004, a judge demanded that Trevino produce the child in court. Instead, she showed up in the courtroom and tried to pass a child that wasn't hers.

...

If convicted of the state charges against her, Trevino could face up to 45 years in jail."

Australia: "Women pay tax at three times the rate men do"

GaryB · 4 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Recent research in Australia has shown that - astoundingly - women are paying tax at THREE TIMES the rate that men are. My god, does the horrendous attrocities women have to face never cease...?!

QUOTE:"MOTHERS do 70 per cent of the housework and more than 90 per cent of the childcare. Now it seems they're also paying tax at three times the rate of their husbands.

A tax symposium was told Australia has one of the most sexist systems in the world and it could be part of the reason we're facing a skills crisis.

Why is it that the male primary earner in a family on average pays just 10.3 per cent of his income in tax but his wife loses on average 32.7 per cent if she goes out to work?"

Of course it's complete crap, just feminazi juggling of figures to grab headlines and help attack men even more. Feel free to add your comments at the end and let them know just what utter bollocks this is....

Most teachers 'face false claims'

AngryMan · 4 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Most school heads and teachers have faced false allegations from pupils or parents, a head teachers' union says. The problem is under-played and incidents are less unusual than some claim, according to the National Association of Head Teachers. The union complains the names of the accused get into the media, while the alleged victim is often anonymous."

UK: 43% of women have had sex with male colleagues

ItsDan · 4 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Interesting statistics here. Excerpt:

"More than one in four have cheated on a regular partner with an office lover — but only seven per cent suspect their fella of the same at their workplace.

Twenty per cent would have NO hesitation in sleeping with the boss to get promotion — and 17 per cent had already done so. More than a third regularly go to work with no underwear — while 16 per cent visit the loo to relieve sexual frustration."

Cadillac/GM Joins the Misandric Advertising Club

Matt · 4 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Saw an ad for the Cadillac CTS recently. Like many companies these days, they post their ads on-line. To see this gem, go here and select "CTS" in the "SORT BY" drop-down box. Then click the third one in the first row (entitled "KHAKIS"), with the picture of the man and woman looking out from the elevator.

Observations:
- The woman passes by colleagues who didn't get the promotion-- all of them are men.
- The men act like frightened puppies.
- The last part of the ad sees the man she is in the elevator with suddenly lose all the ink in his fountain pen, staining his shirt-- an obvious allusion to the idea of him peeing his pants out of fear of the all-mighty woman.

All this in an apparent effort to appeal to female consumers. Seems like many other companies, Cadillac (owned by GM) thinks it needs to trounce men in order to win over women. Contact info is here.

NOW attacks father's right groups and parental alienation

anthony · 5 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"The truth is that Parental Alienation really is a dangerous and cleverly marketed legal strategy that has caused much harm to victims of abuse, especially women and children during and post divorce. This strategy, promoted actively by several "father's rights" groups, has convinced many people, including some in the judicial system and the media, that the actions of a protective parent (usually the mother) are more harmful than the actual mistreatment inflicted by an abusive parent. The end result is public support (and an excuse) for the teary-eyed abusive parent, plus a willingness to believe that so-called parental alienation, and not the parent's own behavior, led to the child's anger toward that parent."

CRISPE, F4J, & NCFMLA Stage Protest At Downtown Los Angeles Courthouse

MR · 5 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Members of Father's and men's rights groups (CRISPE, F4J, and NCFMLA) protested today outside the downtown, Los Angeles County Municipal Courthouse, that was hearing matters in the Baldwin-Basinger visitation dispute.

CRISPE, F4J, & NCFMLA Stage Protest At Downtown Los Angeles Courthouse

Lowry: "Clinton and Obama's Great Feminist Pander"

anthony · 5 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"The Obama-endorsed bill mandates equal pay for "equivalent jobs," while Clinton's bill would establish voluntary "guidelines to enable employers to evaluate job categories" -- all in the cause of increasing wages in female-dominated jobs beyond that determined by the market.
...
Never mind that the 77-percent figure is, in the words of Hudson Institute economist Diana Furchtgott-Roth, "flawed and bogus," failing to account for the most basic variables. The figure for men and women who work 40 hours a week is 88 percent. Baruch College economist June O'Neill finds -- adjusting for factors like schooling, lifetime work experience, and workplace characteristics -- that the gap almost disappears, with women making 95 percent of men's wages."

Mother Prostitutes Disabled 12-Year-Old Daughter for Crack, Won't Face Serious Charges

Anonymous · 5 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. From the article:

'Six men, ranging in age from 19 to 55, have been charged with several sexual assault-related charges. The 42-year-old mother was arrested earlier this week and charged with the rarely prosecuted offence of "corrupting children."'

'The Criminal Code offence of corrupting children makes it illegal to engage in adultery, sexual immorality, habitual drunkenness or "any other sort of vice," in the home of a child.'

And the fact that she sold her disabled daughter into prostitution to feed a drug habit? Where are the charges for those despicable crimes? Would a man escape those charges under the same circumstances?

As usual, the mother is facing very little jail time even if she's convicted. While she could have faced 14 years if convicted of living on the proceeds of prostitution or being involved in child prostitution she wasn't charged with those offenses despite selling her disabled daughter into sex to obtain drugs.

Naturally all of the men involved are facing the full weight of the law. Notice also that all of the men are identified by name, but the mother remains anonymous.

MSN: Deployed troops fight for lost custody of kids

Matt · 5 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. It leads with a the case of a female soldier losing custody when she was away, despite the fact that the vast majority of such cases will see male soldiers losing custody, which is hard enough for them to get anyway. Well at least this is getting MSM coverage. Excerpt:

"Iowa Guardsman Mike Grantham thought he was serving the best interests of his children when he arranged for his son and daughter to stay with his mother before reporting for duty in 2002. He had raised Brianna and Jeremy since his 2000 divorce, when ex-wife Tammara turned physical custody over to him.

After mobilizing, Grantham was served with a custody petition from Tammara. A trial judge temporarily placed the children with her. A year later, though Grantham had returned, the judge made Tammara the primary physical custodian.

An appeals court sided with Grantham, saying: “A soldier, who answered our Nation’s call to defend, lost physical care of his children ... offending our intrinsic sense of right and wrong.”

But the Iowa Supreme Court disagreed, saying Tammara was “presently the most effective parent.”"

12 year old fabricates rape story

ItsDan · 6 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"McGee said the girl skipped school Wednesday to spend time with a male friend. He said the girl realized she would be in trouble for skipping school, so she made up the story involving rape, abduction and physical abuse to cover her tracks."

NH Men's Commission Renewed, But Without State Funding

Scott · 6 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I apologize for taking so long to announce this news, but as of a couple of weeks ago, NH Governor John Lynch signed into law HB 704, which includes a clause to renew the NH Commission on the Status of Men. The Commission's existence no longer has a renewal date and can now exist perpetually. However, the fiscal note attached to the bill (for $60k/year) was rejected and so the Commission will continue to exist, as it has for the past four years, without any state funding.

Although the lack of funding still poses challenges to the Commission, it's great to see that it is no longer at risk of ceasing to exist completely.

RADAR ALERT: Ooooooops!

Matt · 7 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

We were mistaken. Recently RADAR attributed the following statement to Linda Fairstein, who formerly headed the New York County District Attorney's Sex Crimes Unit.

"There are about 4,000 reports of rape each year in Manhattan. Of these, about half simply did not happen. ... It's my job to bring justice to the man who has been falsely accused by a woman who has a grudge against him, just as it's my job to prosecute the real thing."

Numerous places on the web report that Ms. Fairstein made this statement in her 1993 book "Sexual Violence: Our War Against Rape". Because the number cited in the quote was in synch with other credible research and because a citation was included, we trusted that the quote was authentic.

A few days ago, a March 21, 2007 article on ABC came to our attention. That article quotes Ms. Fairstein as saying: "you have to acknowledge that false accusations do happen - though they are less than 10 percent of reported rapes."

Upon discovering that, we immediately did something that apparently none of the other websites that cite Fairstein's quote have bothered to do. We went to the library, borrowed a copy of Ms. Fairstein's 1993 book, and searched for the quote. Thus far we've been unable to find the quote anywhere in that book.

At RADAR, we do our level best to be prudent in the information we pass on to our readers. And when we become aware that we have repeated faulty information, our commitment is to inform you of that mistake.

Does mistakenly attributing the quote to Ms. Fairstein change our belief in the credibility of the research showing the rate of false allegation of rape to be in the neighborhood of 50 percent? It does not. RADAR still finds both the research of Purdue Univ. Sociology Professor Eugene Kanin and the research of Dr. Charles P. McDowell of the U.S. Air Force Office of Special Investigations to be credible. It would be easy to simply say they're credible and leave it at that. Instead, we'd like to take this opportunity to show what it is about their research that leads us to consider it credible. Please see http://www.mediaradar.org/mcdowell_kanin_credible.php.

A great number of advocates try to mislead the public with the logical fallacy that acknowledging the reality of false accusations somehow harms real rape victims. By appealing to emotion, they hope you'll abandon reason so they can lead you down the primrose path. In doing so, they demonstrate their own disdain for the suffering their policies cause to innocent people who find themselves falsely accused.

Acknowledging the fact that some men suffer horrendously as a result of a false accusation of rape does not in any way diminish the reality of the horrendous suffering of a woman who has been raped.

RADAR has nothing but compassion and sympathy for victims of rape. They deserve justice. But the victims of those who would make a false allegation of rape, a different but equally horrible crime, are no less deserving of compassion, nor are they any less deserving of justice.

++
Date of RADAR Release: May 7, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. - Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting - is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

A French Lesson for Hillary

Matt · 7 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From Women voters shun Segolene Royal:

'PARIS (Reuters) - Socialist Segolene Royal failed to win over a majority of women voters in France's presidential election and may have paid a price for focusing too much on her gender at the expense of promoting her policies.
...
The weak female support is a bitter personal blow for Royal, who had played up her feminist credentials throughout the campaign, frequently defending policies she would want "as a mother" and accusing critics of male chauvinism.
...
"The reason she did not have the female vote is not because there was no solidarity but because she was not up to it," said Tita Zeitoun, founder of the Action de Femme group which fights to get more women into top business positions.'

Hillary isn't up to it, either.

F4J is Coming to Los Angeles & NCFMLA Is Welcoming Them

MR · 7 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

F4J is Coming to Los Angeles & NCFMLA Is Welcoming Them

Fathers-4-Justice (F4J) and the National Coalition of Free Men, Los Angeles (NCFMLA) invite you to meet fellow grand-parents, children, women and men who are joined together to stop the unfair practices of lawyers and family court. Have lunch in the park with people like you who need to be heard and need to take action. Bring your story and join us for hot dogs, soft drinks and conversation. This is a great opportunity to meet new friends and realize that you are not alone in your experiences.

F4J & NCFMLA Photo Collage

The protest rally and picnic will be held, May 20, 2007 (Sunday), from 10:00 A.M. to 3:00 P.M. at the Van Nuys/Sherman Oaks Park in Los Angeles County. The picnic in the park will be located at the corner of Hazeltine and Huston in the S.E. corner of the park.

Van Nuys-Sherman Oaks Park

The address of the park is:
14201 Huston Street
Sherman Oaks, CA 91423
Click here for a Mapquest page for VNSO Park

Together we will make a difference!

People are starting to clue in on the wage gap!

bryanh · 7 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I came across this article just recently.

It tries to spread the same old lies about the pay gap, no surprise there.

What is surprising, however, is the comments on the article. It seems that people are tired of listening to these lies, and common sense is taking over.

Latest Column by Glenn Sacks: Tyler Perry’s Daddy’s Little Girls Tells an Important Truth About African-American Fathers

Matt · 7 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From Glenn:

My new co-authored column, Tyler Perry’s Daddy’s Little Girls Tells an Important Truth About African-American Fathers (Wilmington Journal & others, 4/6/07), explains how Perry's film illuminates the important but largely ignored barriers our family law system often places between African-American dads and their children. Excerpt:

"Tyler Perry's new movie 'Daddy's Little Girls' tells an important truth about African-American fathers. The film, which reached number 5 on the Media By Numbers list of top movies, is the story of Monty, a blue collar African-American father played by Idris Elba. Monty fights long and hard in family court to be a father to his three adoring little girls. Today African-American men are often excoriated--most recently by presidential candidate Barack Obama--for being irresponsible towards their children. Yet we don’t hear nearly enough about men like Monty."

US Hate Crime Laws To Include Gender

Anonymous · 10 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The Democrat-controlled US Congress has recently passed a bill which would extend existing federal hate-crime legislation to cover attacks based on gender - here's a reasonable discussion of the law. Given the easily demonstrated anti-male bias of both the civil and criminal justice systems in the US it's a fair bet that the law is yet another move towards criminalizing men and masculinity, and that the law (like many other criminal sanctions) would be used to selectively prosecute and penalize men.

Let's hope President Bush has the good sense to veto this law before it can used in the war against boys and men. It's too bad that his badly needed veto will likely be about state rights or religious issues rather than any sense of protecting men from selective and discriminatory law enforcement.

Woman Who Posed as Boy Pleads Guilty To Child Molestation

anthony · 10 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman who posed as an homeless orphaned boy, befriended a teenage girl and was taken into her family's home has pleaded guilty to child molestation.

Prosecutors say they would seek the maximum one-year jail term for Lorelei J. Corpuz, 30, who entered her plea Wednesday. Charges of third-degree child rape were dropped last month.

Authorities said Corpuz, who cropped her hair and stands 5-foot-3, passed herself off as 17-year-old Mark Villanueva after meeting the girl at a mall in September 2005. Her parents, immigrants who speak little English, later let Corpuz live at their home."

Bush May Veto Hate Crime Bill With Gender Focus

anthony · 11 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

Be prepared, this article is from "Women's E News". My suggestion to NOW, just come right out and speak the truth. This law is not aimed at gender hate crimes, its simply a way to manipulate society with the fallacy that all men hate women. Excerpt:

"It looks like it will be unlikely that it will become law, but we will keep working at it," said Olga Vives, a vice president at the National Organization for Women in Washington, D.C.

If the legislation becomes law, it would establish uniform protections for women and girls who are victims of hate crimes around the country. Currently, 28 states include gender in their own versions of hate-crimes laws.

If the bill fails, advocates say a hard-won opportunity to specifically address hate crimes against women and girls will be lost, or at least put on hold until a different president occupies the White House."

Zimbabwe: 'Promote Circumcision in Acceptable Manner'

anthony · 11 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"Acceptable manner" is simply a politically correct way of saying "lets manipulate this culture with propaganda". Excerpt:

"There are many socio-cultural issues surrounding male circumcision that need to be addressed in order for it to adequately contribute to HIV prevention. It is, therefore, important that promotion of male circumcision be promoted and delivered in a culturally appropriate manner that minimises stigma that may be associated with circumcision."

Glenn Sacks: Michigan NOW Fights New Shared Parenting Bill

anthony · 11 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

Sacks writes:

"In other words, it's more economically efficient for the child to live with mom in a household dad finances, and for the child to see dad in a park on Sundays and no more. This is hardly in the best interests of children. And since NOW is interested in economic efficiency, I would argue that it's more economically efficient to not get divorced to begin with, but since the vast majority of divorces are initiated by women, NOW is not about to come out against divorce."

Unbelievably good news for men's health in Great Britain!

Anonymous · 11 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I've just read on the menshealthforum site (UK) this breaking news:

"The Equality Act 2006 has created an important new duty for NHS organisations: the ‘gender duty’. NHS organisations’ compliance with the duty will be overseen by the new Commission for Equality and Human Rights and the Healthcare Commission."

"Men's Health Forum's president Dr Ian Banks believes ‘men are being badly let down because of the "one size fits all" approach to health care that has bedevilled the NHS since its inception.’ He says: ‘the Equality Act provides the biggest opportunity to improve male health since the foundation of the NHS."

This one is the best:

"The Men’s Health Forum will be monitoring the performance of the NHS and will not hesitate to use the new legislation to ensure compliance."

"Since men do worse in any areas of health, specific actions are needed to improve male health."

Check out the five main issues affecting men's health according to the MHF.

Please spread the news on every MRA' and men's site you know ! I think that this story is worth Glenn Sacks' newsletter with its more than 50,000 registered readers!

By the way every MRA should know the MHF site and show his support by emailing them! Just let them know their work is much appreciated!

"Advice Goddess" sticks up for men

Matt · 11 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Read it here, it's beautiful. Amy Alkon is syndicated in over 100 newspapers in the US. Excerpt:

'Warped thinking like yours makes me realize how lucky I am to be a woman and white as typing paper. Although I recently got stopped by a cop for going the wrong way on a one-way street (he rolled his eyes and let me go when he realized I wasn't drunk, just ditzy), I'm generally safe from automatic presumptions of criminality like Driving While Black or Living And Breathing While Male.

Here you are, parroting this outrageous man-bashing propaganda — "one in four women reports having been raped or molested during childhood" — maybe because you heard it repeated so often you assumed it was fact. This figure is a common misquote of a survey by radical feminist sociology professor Diana Russell. Although Russell presents herself as a truth-seeking social scientist, her work reflects a substantial bias against men, as evidenced by her claim, based on one of her studies, that "a considerable amount of marital sex is probably closer to the rape end of the continuum."
...
My advice to you? Pick up Christina Hoff Sommers' Who Stole Feminism? to get a better idea of the damage done by radical feminist activism tarted up as serious science.'

"Mothers File International Complaint Against United States"

TomP · 11 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"For more than 30 years U.S. judges have given custody or unsupervised visitation of children to abusers and molesters putting the children directly at risk," says Dianne Post, an international attorney who authored the petition. "These horrendous human rights violations have been brought to the attention of family court systems, and state and federal governments, to no avail. We turn now to international courts to protect the rights and safety of US children."

I might agree with the quoted attorney's sentiments, but I think she got the sex of the offenders wrong in way too many cases...

'Falsely accused paedophiles were actually victims of credit card fraud'

AngryMan · 12 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Hundreds of Britons accused of being paedophiles in the country's biggest Internet child pornography investigation were actually victims of credit card fraud, it was claimed last night. More than 7,000 - including rock star Pete Townshend - were said to have downloaded child-porn images from a U.S. website. But an investigation has found that many of those charged as part of the police inquiry codenamed Operation Ore were innocent and their card details had been used illegally.'

To listen to the original BBC Radio program, click here. It is available for 7 days until Thursday 17th May.

Pity Party For Soccer Moms?

Roy · 12 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. A new book "Opting Out" looks at American moms' struggles to balance both work and family and finds that women often aren't opting out — instead they're being shut out. Excerpt:

"Even the brightest women have fewer options around balancing work and family than society assumes. ... the stories women tell reveal not the expression of choice, but rather the existence of a choice gap, a gap that is a function of a double bind created primarily by the conditions of work in the gilded cages of elite professions. ... women go home because they have been unsuccessful in their efforts to obtain flexibility or because they found themselves marginalized and stigmatized for trying to hold onto their careers after becoming mothers."'

Woman who sold child sex jailed

AngryMan · 12 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A female pimp who lured girls as young as 12 into prostitution by getting them hooked on drugs has been jailed.
...
Walsh, of Kilburn, north-west London, was given a 10-year prison term after she pleaded guilty to four counts of child prostitution and supplying drugs.
...
Joanna Korner QC, prosecuting, said the two victims were vulnerable as they were from "dysfunctional, single parent family backgrounds".

"She cynically and cold-bloodedly befriended them in order to use them for her own purposes," she said.

"She exercised control over them through the belief she was their friend and by supplying drugs."'

Woman 'cried rape to justify lover's attack on ex-boyfriend'

Anonymous · 13 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman falsely accused an ex-boyfriend of rape after her current partner beat him up, a court heard yesterday.

Sharon Owers told police that keen yachtsman Chris Sullivan had raped her on her birthday on a pontoon at Swanwick Marina, near Southampton.

However, she made the allegation only when she and boyfriend Craig Abernethy were being interviewed over a frenzied attack on Mr Sullivan.'

"Boys Are Stupider Send Them To Jupiter"

Matt · 13 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Still out there... see it here. Looks like David & Goliath have just switched mediums for their anti-boy merchandise.

Woman sodomises ex-boyfriend

GaryB · 14 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

News.com.au reports here on a woman who tricked her ex into being handcuffed, then used a sex toy to brutally sodomise him, whilst also getting her new boyfriend to beat the crap out of him. The new boyfriend killed himself (presumably from the shame of what he'd done), but of course the girlfriend denies everything - and who knows, she's a woman so she's innocent and will probably get off.

QUOTE:

"A PERTH woman today denied in court that she tied and handcuffed her soldier lover to a chair and sodomised him with a sex toy in an hour-long attack.

Nicola Clunies-Ross, 19, is accused of luring the Darwin-based soldier, also 19, to her home on October 28 last year and tricking him into being tied to a chair and handcuffed."

Former Saturday Night Live Star behind bars with no trial on word of Wife

Anonymous · 14 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Since then, the actor has been behind bars, with no trial, at the maximum-security Quinte Detention Centre in Napanee, 30 kilometres west of Kingston, on charges of criminally harassing his wife during their marriage. It's alleged that his "reckless" behaviour led his spouse, Leah, with whom he has a now-2-year-old daughter, to be afraid for her own safety or others'."

Rosato's situation raises troubling questions. Why must he wait so long for a trial? And if he is suffering from mental illness, why isn't he in a hospital room instead of a jail cell?

'nuff said.

Florida Governor Supports Parental Alienation Awareness Day

anthony · 14 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

How about some good news, guys!

"The Parental Alienation Awareness Organization/www.Parental-Alienation-Awareness.com has made more progress in gaining recognition of April 25 as "Parental Alienation Awareness Day"--Florida has now become the 9th state to support PAAD."

Tons of more information at the above website!

DNA tests, new law could help some men escape child support payments

anthony · 14 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"John Walsh, 40, of Deerfield Beach, wants the same thing. He recently challenged his $400-a-month support requirement. He said two weeks after his 8-year-old son was born, he learned he was not the father. He has since had DNA tests indicating there is no biological relationship and filed a challenge to his support orders earlier this year."

Mens Health Forum as Resource for MRAs

Anonymous · 15 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In my opinion, the Men's Health Forum in the UK is one of the most important and positive things concerning men's rights and well-being that I've seen in years as it is an official, almost governmental body.

Check these links out (the second one is to show you how the Forum defends the male point of view when it comes to health):

Link 1

Link 2 (.pdf file)

Mom Accused Of Cutting Off Son's Genitals, Blamed Dog

Anonymous · 16 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

In Webster, Texas, a 25-year-old mother with a history of drug abuse says she woke up and found that her miniature eight-pound, dachshund had torn off her baby boy's genitals. (The woman's name is being withheld by the family, and she hasn't been charged yet.)
...
Police, child protective service officials, and the doctors who examined Holden told his dad that the injuries were not consistent with dog bites because the cuts were too neat. The only person who knows what really happened - Holden's mother - has checked herself into a drug treatment program and is not talking to police or family members.

On a positive note, the father, who has not had any contact with Holden's mother since the attack, says he is dedicated to the baby's recovery and to making sure Holden is safe and happy for the rest of his life."

UK Scheme aims to get boys reading

AngryMan · 16 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Secondary schools in England are being given free books for their library, in an attempt to get teenage boys reading.

The collection includes classic novels such as Daniel Defoe's Robinson Crusoe and factual books like Bill Bryson's A Short History of Nearly Everything. There are also spy and adventure books, as part of efforts to close the "reading gap" between boys and girls.

The scheme - Boys into Books - is principally aimed at boys aged between 11 and 14, because research suggests boys enjoy reading at primary school but lose interest after the age of 11."

Marriot Hotel to have "women only" floors

Dave K · 17 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I was very disappointed to read this regarding a Marriot Hotel being built in Michigan. It seems they're going to have a floor dedicated for women only.

I'm a huge fan of Marriot, and at this very moment I'm on the road in Wilmington NC... and staying at a Marriot extended stay hotel. Since the beginning of the year I've spent thousands of dollars on Marriot hotel stays. I've just sent them a message through their online site letting them know that if this policy goes into place I will never be staying at a Marriot Hotel again. I suggest that ANYONE who travels let them know that we won't put up with such blatant sexism and that it'll cost them far more than it gains them. Contact link here.

UK: Major change in IVF Law

Matt · 17 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Not only are a baby's needs for a dad no longer to be considered, but human/non-human hybrids can be implanted, also. Brave new world indeed. Story here. Excerpt:

'A major relaxation of IVF rules was announced by ministers today.

The changes will make it easier for single people and lesbians to receive fertility treatment on the NHS.

The move, which is part of a shake-up of laws on the use of human tissues, will also allow the creation of "Frankenstein" embryos - human and animal cells mixed together - for medical research.

Under current laws, fertility clinics have to consider the baby's need for a father before providing treatment. But today's draft Human Tissue and Embryos Bill says this is no longer necessary.'

Breaking Alec Baldwin news

Anonymous · 18 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From a credible source sent to us (DaddyBlogger.com) via email:

Alec Baldwin to become actively involved with Action 4 Justice.

Robert and Angela Pedersen
http://www.achildsright.net/
http://www.daddyblogger.com/

"Our sons don't need a father"

AngryMan · 18 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Anna Lloyd and Jane Harvey could be any middle-class mothers strolling with their sons in their local park. But behind their everyday appearance lies a story of a highly unconventional family - for they are lesbian partners, and Oliver and Charlie, aged two, are their twins.
...
Thanks to a shake-up in the law announced yesterday, NHS fertility clinics may no longer have to consider a baby's need for a father (or mother), so a gay woman would have as much right as a woman in a heterosexual relationship to walk into an NHS clinic and request fertility treatment in a bid to have a baby.'
...
"We thought of asking a male friend to donate sperm, so that we would know who the father was, but he might have wanted to be involved in the baby's life.

"We didn't want this; we wanted to raise our children alone, without having to answer to the father.

"Yet we don't feel they will miss out. These days many children grow up without their dads if they come from broken homes. At least Oliver and Charlie have two parents in a stable relationship who love them dearly."'

Sex abuse survivor: Male victims no different than female victims

anthony · 18 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"You may find that in 10 years this young man, or others in similar situations, will grow up with alcohol issues, relationship issues and anger issues but will never look at the root cause," St. John said yesterday, the same day that Gross, 24, of Mohegan Lake pleaded not guilty in Elmsford Village Court to having sexual contact with a 16-year-old boy inside a parked car."

There is a link to an organization I didn't know existed:

"Curtis St. John is president-elect of MaleSurvivor: the National Organization on Male Sexual Victimization."

http://www.malesurvivor.org/

System Overload: Father pays child support, still jailed

anthony · 19 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

I'm not happy with the term "Dead Beat Dads" used several times in this article. Excerpt:

"Every day, the state of Ohio processes more than 50,000 child support payments.

Has that volume led to unfair treatment of parents who are paying?

Derrick Adams is a deadbeat dad. Or so says the State of Ohio.

Deputies arrested him not once, but twice, even though the father of three boys is making child support payments."

NCFM Opposes Harvard Economist's Sexist Man Tax

anthony · 19 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"The National Coalition of Free Men (NCFM), the oldest and largest men's rights organization in the United States, vehemently opposes Harvard Professor Alberto Alesina's recently-proposed man tax.(1)

"A man tax is as wrong as a Jew tax," says NCFM's Marc Angelucci. "They both violate the fundamental Constitutional right to equal protection by unfairly targeting a birth group for discriminatory treatment.

"Even aside from equal protection, there is no justification for a man tax."

Newsweek: Is Title IX Sidelining the Boys?

anthony · 20 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Read some of the female perspectives about Title IX. An article in a major publication such as Newsweek (Outstanding!)

What do female athletes say?

"I know that I've heard from lots of female athletes who are starting to say that this law has outlived its purpose. They don't understand what this law means because they're seeing it limit the opportunities of the men they travel and train with and who make them better athletes. And they think it's insane. There's a big generational divide here. Some of the women who are of the "if you build it they will com"' mentality are older women and they lived at a time and went to college at a time when women were being given the short end of the stick in a major way. But these women today have had a very different experience and they don't agree with what this law is doing to their male colleagues."

Boy Dead: Female Day Care Worker: "I Bound Boy With Masking Tape to Keep Him Quiet"

anthony · 20 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Paramedics had tried to revive Joshua, who was found unresponsive after the in-home day care center's owner, Vicki Leigh Chiles, bound his mouth and hands with masking tape.
...
"You could see the bruising (on his face) where the tape had been," Robert Minton said."

Chiles, 42, told police that Joshua would not be quiet for nap time and that she used masking tape to bind his hands and cover his mouth to keep him quiet, her arrest report states.'

Men's Day in India

Anonymous · 21 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Indian MRAs have decided to observe November 19th as the Men's Day. This journalist is obviously upset! Article here. Excerpt:

'The numerous feast-days and rituals for brothers, sons and sons-in-law in the various Indian cultures are just not enough to soothe their sensitive feelings. The lads want their day out on November 19, the day their brothers in Trinidad and Tobago celebrate their ‘emancipation’ as well. They would all like to go international — women can do it — but they are a little confused about the date.'

RADAR ALERT: Education for Injustice

Matt · 21 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

It's widely known that the domestic violence policies and procedures of organizations across the country are outdated. If only that were the reason why so many men experience bias and violation of due process when accused. Unfortunately, it's not that simple. False "facts" from debunked studies, lies created by over-enthusiastic writers, and skewed statistics from unsound research are common in today's domestic violence trainings.

Demonstrating that current domestic violence trainings are deplorable, RADAR's new Special Report "Education for Injustice" documents that:

1. Judicial education programs nearly always refer to the perpetrator as "he," while victims are designated as "she."
2. A police officer describes the domestic violence training classes he attended as "so dripping with male hatred that everyone in the class felt uncomfortable, male and female officers alike."
3. The director of a domestic violence hotline admits that trainers instructed their staff to profile callers based on gender, treating all male callers as perpetrators, regardless of the actual circumstances.

This report is a must-read, no-holds-barred critique of our nation's domestic violence trainings. Not one educational program mentioned in the report reflects well-established research findings on intimate partner aggression - that women are at least as likely as men to engage in abusive behavior.

The report can be seen at: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/Education-For-Injustice.pdf

So this week, we call on you to read the report, "Education for Injustice". Then forward this Alert to all your friends, media contacts, and elected officials, so they know "It's Time to Educate For Justice."

++
Date of RADAR Release: May 21, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. - Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting - is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Woman retracts claims of abuse after boyfriend passed over in the NFL draft

ItsDan · 21 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here:

'Linebacker A.J. Nicholson was waived by the Cincinnati Bengals on Monday, hours after he pleaded not guilty to a charge that he hit his girlfriend. She insists she accidentally hit herself with a cell phone, and police misread what happened.

Nicholson was charged with misdemeanor assault Friday, and despite his girlfriend's claim the case will go forward. He remains free on $5,000 bond and a pretrial hearing was set for May 31.
...
"I was very emotional and I was mad at A.J.," Johnson said. "Like a lot of other couples, we had been arguing. But I am to blame here. I exaggerated the situation. The police officer misinterpreted my upset and emotional demeanor."'

India: 17-year-old girl jailed for false rape accusation

anthony · 21 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

I guess four months in prison will help this man put his life back together???? Excerpt:

"A teenage girl, whose false accusation of rape led an Asian taxi driver to lose his job and sell his home, has been sentenced to four months imprisonment by a British court.

The 17-year-old claimed ex-police personnel Aftab Ahmed, who hails from Pakistan-occupied Kashmir, attacked her in January last when she was driven home drunk after a night out.

She kept up the story for 14 months, during which Aftab lost his livelihood, had to sell his home and was shunned by friends."

Blogger's Choice award: Vote for Angry Harry

Anonymous · 22 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

AngryHarry, a political blogger who often discusses men's issues, has been nominated for best political blog in the Blogger's Choice Awards.

While you may not agree with everything AngryHarry says, he does a great job of exposing bias against men and misandry in popular culture.

You can show your support for AngryHarry by creating an account (if you don't already have one) and voting at: http://www.bloggerschoiceawards.com/categories/19.

Take this opportunity to make sure that men's voices are heard!

YouTube clip: Black Gay Men Discuss Role of Women in their Lives

MrReality · 22 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Do black men need black women? This is the title of a clip I recently viewed on YouTube.com. See the broadcast here.

The clip on YouTube is hosted by two homosexual black men. The clip surprised me as the two men did not engage in the usual male bashing and pro-feminist rhetoric that a good deal of homosexual activists usually engage in. Instead these men seemed to be pointing out that they have absolutely no need for women.

Not that I agree with their lifestyle. I just find it quite funny that women are now being slammed by the very people they use against men. For years the feminist movement has been placing the homosexual community in direct opposition to males in their petty war against men.

It is ironic that women's own weapon now seems to be turning against them.

Pennsylvania Woman Who Slashed Womb Gets Prison

anthony · 22 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'KITTANNING, Pa. — A woman who tried to steal a fetus by knocking her pregnant neighbor unconscious with a baseball bat and cutting her abdomen was sentenced Tuesday to 22 to 50 years in prison.

Peggy Jo Conner, who could have been sentenced to up to 80 years, apologized in court for attacking Valerie Oskin.

Oskin, 31, was rescued after a passerby spotted the two women in a rural area and called police. Her baby was delivered by emergency Caesarean section and put up for adoption, which had been Oskin's intention before the attack.

"I'm sorry for what happened to Valerie and for what part I had in it," Conner said. "I'm not that kind of person. I was on drugs then."'

Woman Charged With Abuse of Corpse After Baby Is Found in Her Freezer

anthony · 22 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman was charged with abuse of a corpse Thursday after police found the remains of a baby in her freezer.

Police charged Christine Hutchinson, 22, of Pittsburgh, after interviewing her Thursday evening, several hours after the remains were found in her apartment.
...
But later, Lt. Daniel Herrmann said the abuse of a corpse charge applies only to human beings. Under the law, he said, a fetus is not considered a human being."

Men's Health Forum awarded for its hard work

Anonymous · 22 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Check this out and spread the word! These British MRA's are doing a great job! Excerpt:

'The Forum has been awarded a £20,000 GlaxoSmithKline (GSK) Impact Award jointly judged by GSK and The King's Fund health charity. The award was made in recognition of the organisation's work to give all men and boys an equal opportunity to attain the highest possible level of health and well-being.

Chief Executive Peter Baker said: 'We are delighted to have been chosen by GlaxoSmithKline as an IMPACT Award winner. To me this award recognises the valuable work done by our very dedicated team. The funding that this award brings will make an enormous difference. We could employ another member of staff for a year. There is a lot more research that we'd like to do and this could enable us to do it."

Feminists File Human Rights Violations with IACHR

Anonymous · 23 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From DaddyBlog:

'The ultra radical and angry feminists are at it again! This organization clearly no longer supports EQUALITY, but has a radical agenda of only furthering the gender war! Their actions, as of late, clearly exposes their hidden agenda because more and more females are speaking out against this radical organization.

NOW must be greatly confused with current child custody statistics! Gender bias against women?...'

An earlier (balanced) editorial from the Telegraph India

mcp · 23 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

While the latest article was unabashedly one-sided, they published a very balanced editorial on Sept. 13, 2003. To be fair to them, I thought I'd post that too. It's here. Excerpt:

'Laws protecting women from domestic violence are sometimes unjust to men. This can be corrected only with great care

Men hate to admit they have been beaten up by their women. That the desperate desire to hang on to notions of muscle-flexing masculinity makes them so vulnerable could have been funny. But it is not, because the statistics of intimate violence perpetrated by women on men is now compelling all countries to rethink solutions, both legal and psychological, to domestic violence.'

Blood Diamonds: How women fund the enslavement of black men and boys

MrReality · 23 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

For years one of the biggest of fantasies for women has been the wedding. A much bigger fantasy though is what comes as a result of the wedding: A large diamond ring. Let's be honest, how many times have you seen women meet "the bride" right after the wedding and say "Let me see the ring!" The wife then flutters he hand around the misandric circle of women showing off her blood diamond.

The sad truth is that African MEN are forced into slavery in order for the new wife (a member of the royal sex) to walk around and showcase her new diamond. Which many times means more to her than the marriage itself.

How many times have you heard women claim they wish they could have "kept the ring" once they divorced the husband. It has recently been proven that all diamonds are in-fact "conflict diamonds" and thus any woman that nags her soon-to-be schmuck husband for one is a slave-master, just like her sisters. I would advise that no man buy a woman a diamond.

Read more on Blood Diamonds
here.

Woman, 3 Girls Arrested in Mall Beating

anthony · 23 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A 40-year-old woman and three girls are facing assault and battery charges in connection with what police are calling a "group beat down" of a 16-year-old girl at a mall.

Marilyn Camacho, 40, of Framingham and the girls, ages 16, 13 and 12, were arrested after the fight Monday that left the victim unconscious and requiring hospitalization, Lt. Brian Grassey said. He said the four attackers slammed the girl into a glass store window, knocked her to the ground and then stomped on her legs, back and face.

"This was an absolute group beat down," Grassey said. "It's an extremely unsettling event. The level of violence in this defies logic.'

Ed. note: Note also the video story as of this writing on the right side of the page entitled Teacher's Betrayal: Female substitute teacher charged with raping 14-year-old girl

Teen Girls Face Hate Crime Charges Over Anti-Gay Flier

anthony · 24 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A pair of 16-year-old girls face hate crime charges after they allegedly handed out anti-gay fliers targeting a classmate at their northern Illinois high school.

The girls were arrested May 11 after handing out fliers in the parking lot of Crystal Lake South High School that depict a male student kissing another boy and contain hateful language about gays.

Officials say the fliers targeted a male classmate, who is also a neighbor of the girls. The two girls had apparently been feuding with the boy."

New Zealand Education: Male-female gap 'bad for society'

anthony · 24 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"In the absence of detailed research into why this was happening, observers were left to speculate, he said. There were probably many factors involved, but one of the main ones was the gradual "feminisation" of education in New Zealand, in terms of policies as well as teacher gender. "In the long term this is not healthy for boys, but also not for girls either."
...
"He suggested that perhaps the drive to find equal opportunities for women had gone too far and there was a need to pull back a bit to restore that balance."

Carey Roberts: Pelosi Proclaims Women as "Peacekeepers of our Societies"

anthony · 24 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"This past week House speaker Nancy Pelosi used Mother's Day to launch her latest salvo against the Iraq war. And while she was at it, she indulged in some back-handed gender stereotyping, making the remarkable claim that "Women have always been the peacekeepers of our societies."

"So coming just a month after her ill-fated peace mission to Syria, it's regrettable the Speaker of the House would tap the occasion of Mother's Day to indulge in gender stereotyping and male-bashing. As my mother used to say, "If you can't speak well of someone, it's better to not speak at all."

Spotsylvania 'deadbeat' dads? by Stephen Baskerville

anthony · 24 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

An update on the this "pizza box" misandry. Excerpt:

"The entire child-support system has been hijacked by special interests, principally feminists and lawyers. Child support was designed for parents who willfully abandon their children. It has been perverted into a system for forcing parents to pay for the stealing of their own children."

Sacks and Leving: Equal Rights Amendment Yes, 'Women's Equality Amendment' No

anthony · 24 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"The most unequal and unfair treatment meted out to either gender is the mistreatment of men and fathers by family courts and by the domestic violence system. After a divorce or separation dads are often pushed to the margins of their children's lives, even though in most cases they've never been found culpable of any wrongdoing, and did not seek to dissolve their marriages. Family courts often deprive men of shared custody and generally allow them only a few days a month to spend with their children."

AG: Woman who leaves newborn in Wal-Mart toilet shouldn't be prosecuted

Anonymous · 24 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Saskatchewan's Attorney-General says women who abandon their babies should not have to fear the justice system after another abandoned child was found in bizarre circumstances this week.

On Monday, a manager at a Wal-Mart in Prince Albert found a minutes-old newborn lying in a toilet bowl inside the women's washroom. The baby's mother was nowhere to be found, and the baby, in serious condition in hospital, was fortunate to survive."

...

"I don't think it should be a justice system response," Mr. Quennell said. "A young, frightened woman confronted with a baby she just doesn't know how to cope with won't be prosecuted, particularly if she surrenders that child to a hospital or to social services.'

Because, y'know... She didn't have nine months to figure out how to get help or put it up for adoption or have an abortion or give it to the father or give it to her family or anything.

Feminism is why we're so delicate pursuing the "warm war"

MrReality · 25 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

David R. Usher writes: "In a Wall Street Journal editorial “White Guilt and the Western Past -- Why is America so delicate with the enemy? Shelby Steele suggests that America’s inability to fight war effectively was caused by “the world-wide collapse of white supremacy as a source of moral authority, political legitimacy and even sovereignty.”

Shelby’s theory is wrong. The collapse of white moral authority is not the problem. The replacement of male authority with feminism is. To Steele’s credit -- he was gazing in the general right direction – but missed the real target. In America, there is one place where white supremacy and radical feminism existed: The Ku Klux Klan."

Read the full article here.

Maine: Support Deadbeats Could Lose Snowmobile, ATV Registrations

anthony · 26 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The House of Representatives has endorsed a bill to allow the revocation of snowmobile or all-terrain vehicle registration from a person who has been certified as failing to comply with a child support order.

The bill, which still faces final House and Senate votes, also prohibits the issuance or renewal of a snowmobile and ATV registrations in those cases. It authorizes the Health and Human Services Department to review registration records in order to identify those who are in violation of child support orders."

Lis on Law: "The New ERA is Women's Equality Amendment"

anthony · 26 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"Nevertheless, Schlafly's parade of horribles trudges along. She cautions, among other things, that "the ERA would draft women into military combat, abolish the presumption that a husband should support his wife" and lead to the "sex-integrating" of prisons and the Boy Scouts.

According to Congressman Nadler, such arguments are "simply not borne out by history and the facts." Nearly half of all states have equal rights amendments or similar laws, he says, and none has experienced the legal chaos that critics like Schlafly have forecasted. "This is little more than sensationalist rhetoric designed to make us fear this utterly reasonable step to end discrimination," says Nadler."

NCFMLA Engages in Exchange with Caribbean Domestic Violence Advocates

Anonymous · 26 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Recently, a series of exchanges was printed in a local Caribbean News outlet (Caribbean Net News), regarding domestic violence in the Caribbean. At times, the exchange of perceptions was rather robust. One local Caribbean domestic violence advocate even went so far as to say this...

NCFMLA Engages in Exchange with Caribbean Domestic Violence Advocates

Mom pleads no contest over abused daughter

anthony · 27 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

A 22 year old woman who weighed 43 pounds? Absolutely tragic! I guess a year in jail is a fair sentence, considering this developmentally disabled woman was on the brink of death. How much jail time if it was dad that perpetuated such abuse? Excerpt:

"A woman whose malnourished, developmentally disabled 22-year-old daughter was found wearing only a T-shirt and four soiled diapers has pleaded no contest to second-degree abuse of a vulnerable adult

Terrell was arrested in December after police found her daughter on a mattress stained with urine and feces in a bedroom. The young woman weighed 43 pounds and was taken to a hospital.

She is living with her father and attending a school program for the developmentally and physically disabled."

First Men Graduate Wells College

anthony · 27 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

I wouldn't even bother opening the link. Following is the entire story. I would think a female graduating from West Point for example, would get a much bigger story. I suspect there was much more misandry than a "few cold shoulders". Here it is:

"The first men to attend Wells College in Cayuga County graduated Saturday.

Jason Atwell and Shea Hagstrom made history as the first men to receive a degree from the school. Wells was a women's college until 2005.

Atwell says that, except for a few cold shoulders, he was welcomed on campus."

Fifty-seven men to attend Randolph-Macon in the fall

anthony · 27 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Fifty-seven of the incoming freshman class of 172 students are men. That's more than twice what school officials had hoped to attract. They are also having to offer less tuition discounts to students in the form of scholarships. The discount for the average student has dropped from 68% to 55%.'

Ed. note:

Originally when the college announced its plans, the students went into a misandrist frenzy of protests and law-suits to keep the school all-female. It's some progress that justice prevailed instead of bigotry-- this time.

Study: Men's earnings shrink

anthony · 27 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Two for the price of one here. The male college crisis and though not mentioned, the "wage gap" hysteria that has hindered the income of many men. Some cites:

"Those in their 30s make less than dads did, a report says. Outsourcing and the advancement of women are cited.

American men in their 30s earn less than their fathers' generation did at the same age, potentially reversing longtime assumptions that each successive generation will be better off than their predecessors, according to a study released Friday."

"A stronger push to college also could help raise men's earnings."

"Education has always been the one staircase out of the class-stratified society," said Ellen Galinsky, president of the Families and Work Institute in New York. Yet among those under 50, 32% of women hold a four-year college degree, compared with 23% of men. That's a dramatic change from the past, when younger men were better educated than younger women."

Female Texas babysitter facing execution

anthony · 27 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"But just weeks after Henderson started working for the Baughs, 3-month-old Brandon was dead and Henderson had fled the state. The infant's body was found buried 60 miles away with his skull crushed, wrapped in his yellow-trimmed white blanket and stuffed into a box that previously held Bartles & Jaymes wine coolers.

Henderson, 50, is set to die in less than three weeks for the 1994 slaying that made her one of the most hated women in Texas. She would be just the 12th woman among the nearly 1,100 convicted killers executed since capital punishment resumed in the United States in 1977.

'She's the most sweet, endearing person in the world and put forward this good Christian front," Baugh said of Cathy Lynn Henderson, who lived two blocks away. "She could sell snow to an Eskimo.'"

How many times have we heard this excuse regarding a female murderer? Snow to an Eskimo? You must be kidding!

USAToday: "Our view on college sports: Schools axe men's teams, but don't take it out on Title IX"

anthony · 27 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Page here. Excerpt:

"The worst that can be said about Title IX is that it compounds these problems while succeeding in providing opportunities to female athletes (such as the estimable Rutgers women's basketball team that reached the NCAA championship only to be slurred by shock jock Don Imus). To label Title IX the lone culprit is to give state legislatures a pass on their obligations to finance higher education and to give colleges a pass for their infatuation with big-time men's sports.
...
The decline in men's attendance at college is a national problem that needs to be addressed. But in the short term, if women make up a majority of students, they deserve a majority of athletic slots."

Shouldn't Title IX dollars be distributed based on the individual students interest in playing sports? Opposing view here.

Geena Davis: "Children's media skew gender"

anthony · 27 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Letter here. Excerpt:

"We didn't realize at the time how odd it was that there were few female role models, or how marginalized or simply invisible female characters were, especially in children's entertainment. Today, gender distortion remains entrenched in movies and TV aimed at young children like mine."

Maybe the government will step in and create a Hollywood affirmative action program for female actors. Davis complains, while men are portrayed as idiots, pedophiles, and wife beaters throughout the media.

Wrongly Imprisoned Man Receives Bill From Government for Jail Time

AngryMan · 28 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Warren Blackwell, the law-abiding father of two who spent three years and four months in prison for a rape that never happened, has received a bill from the Department of Justice, charging him around £7000 for 'board and lodging' for the time he spent behind bars. He has yet to receive a penny in compensation. Meanwhile the false accuser remains anonymous, protected by law. Story here.

Australian gay pub bars heterosexuals

n.j. · 28 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Melbourne's The Peel pub has won the right to ban patrons based on their sexual orientation. Story here.

The Victorian state civil and administrative tribunal's president said groups of straight women found homosexual men entertaining but that such attention was dehumanising.

But when was the last time you heard about a lesbian bar banning all heterosexuals, including women? Establishments for homosexual women are automatically associated with feminism and women's rights. It's sad that gays still seem to feel they have to defend themselves against other men.

Or was it an excuse to gain the right to ban those "groups of straight women" who are very hard to target for bans on their own as a group nowadays?

Can You Get Me Back My Daddy?

Anonymous · 28 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Sunday before last, May 20th, 2007, from 10 A.M. to 3 P.M., the Van Nuys/Sherman Oaks park was the site of a Father's Rally and picnic as the National Coalition of Free men welcomed Fathers 4 Justice to Los Angeles.

Can You Get Me Back My Daddy?

Female Judge's Staff Abuse Legendary

Matt · 28 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Not that male judges can't be abusive. Just that this story defies the general assumption that the world will be a better place for one and all if there were more female judges simply because they are female. Excerpt:

'Buoyed by power, convinced everyone is against her, Elizabeth Halverson, 49, has achieved what seems to be her heart's desire: She is the center of attention. She's page one news, and she leads the nightly television news.

The voters now know Elizabeth Halverson, but she has 18 months left on the bench before they can vote her out of office. That's too long a wait. The Judicial Discipline Commission, which has the power to remove her from office, cannot confirm if a complaint has been filed. However, I'm told investigators are now working a complaint against her.'

Protest for Father's Rights in California's Capitol City

Anonymous · 28 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Last Monday, May 21, 2007, Fathers 4 Justice, CRISPE, and the National Coalition of Free Men, Los Angeles staged a protest in front of the Family Relations Courthouse in Sacramento, California.

The day preceding the courthouse protest, a couple of us (as private citizens accompanying another group) spent time in the state capitol, where we observed the functioning of our state government.

Protest for Father's Rights in California's Capitol City

Sperm donor was liable for support, court rules

anthony · 28 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Men who donate sperm for artificial insemination can be liable for child support, a court has ruled.

The three-judge Pennsylvania Superior Court panel said that since a sperm donor whose semen produced two children for a lesbian couple subsequently involved himself in the family and gave them money, he had assumed some responsibility for their support."

Suzanne Fields: "A New Woman in Combat. Not!"

anthony · 28 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here.

The following excerpt is the very definition of feminist hypocrisy:

"Feminists remain split in the debate. On one side, women argue that the female of the species is more caring than the male, and it's wrong to deliberately coarsen those who bear the children of the next generation. To make fighters of them seems unnatural and counterproductive. On the other side, women argue that the imposition of a stereotypical "gender" role is wrong and unfair. The fact that women -- on average -- are smaller and weaker than men, have less body strength and lack the aggressive killer instinct of men must go unmentioned."

Calif. prisons trying to reduce suicides

anthony · 28 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Though the title doesn't suggest this, it's really all about male suicide. Male suicide is, according to some, at epidemic proportions. I'm glad to see at least one sector of society trying to help these men. Excerpt:

"Guards have reported preventing more than 60 suicides in segregation cells so far this year — out of more than 170 suicides attempted during the past five months in the state's 33 adult prisons.
...
The sudden isolation, the stress from whatever incident prompted their transfer and the accompanying loss of possessions and privileges were found to be triggers for suicidal behavior, said Dr. Shama Chaiken, a chief psychologist with the corrections department."

Another Woman Murders Her Kids

Anonymous · 29 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

The headline itself hides the fact that this woman obviously is responsible for the crime.

I particularly get a kick out of the closing lines:

"Andrea Yates drowned her five children in the family's Houston bathtub in 2001. In 2003, Deanna Laney beat her two young sons to death with stones in East Texas , and Lisa Ann Diaz drowned her daughters in a Plano bathtub. Dena Schlosser fatally severed her 10-month-old daughter's arms with a kitchen knife in 2004.

All four of those women were found innocent by reason of insanity. Yates initially was convicted of capital murder, but it was overturned on appeal."

Show me a man who can get away with killing his children by reason of "insanity." Yeah, right.

Treatment of Stanford's "Imposter-Squatters" Points Up Double-Standards

Matt · 29 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Seems Stanford has been in the news lately not for just one case of "imposter-squatting", but two. The kick here is that in the second case, the administration knew about it and refused to do anything. Stories here:

Imposter 1

Imposter 2

Both are young, small Asian women. Both are being treated as either needing help, victims, or both. Guys, go ahead, try this yourselves and see what happens (just be sure to have a lawyer and medical insurance lined up ahead of time). Excerpts from the stories... (click 'read more')

#1:
'Azia Kim was like any other Stanford freshman. She graduated from one of California's most competitive high schools last June, moved into the dorms during New Student Orientation, talked about upcoming tests and spent her free time with friends.

The only problem is that Azia Kim was never a Stanford student.
...
Police are currently investigating the situation....

But after filing a report with the Department of Public Safety, Zhou doesn't think much will be done.

"The police just said, 'If we see her on campus, we'll evict her,' and say, 'Don't do anything anymore,'" Zhou said. "Even after hacking into my email account, they said there's nothing they can do unless she was using it to fraud anyone. I don't think they're going to do anything."'

#2:
'For the last four years, Elizabeth Okazaki has attended graduate physics seminars, used the offices reserved for doctoral and post-doctoral physics students and — for all intents and purposes made the Varian Physics Lab her home.

The only problem is that Okazaki appears to have no affiliation with Stanford and, according to physics professors and students, no real reason to be there.
...
"I feel really bad for her," said Alessandro Tomasiello, a post-doctoral scholar in theoretical particle physics. "I don't want to have a conversation with her that will actually hurt her."

Green partially attributed the lack of protest regarding Okazaki's four-year-long stay in the department to the fact that Okazaki is an Asian woman.

"If she were a large, intimidating man, there's no doubt that something would be done," he said. "There's a huge bias against appearances and it's prevented people from taking action. I can't see any reason why our department is special. This could really happen all over the place."'

'Teacher of the Year' Faces Student Sex Charges

Matt · 29 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The pictures tell the tale here. Excerpt:

Slide 1:
"An award-winning female middle school teacher accused of having sex with a teenage girl was in jail Wednesday on five sex-related charges, authorities said."

Slide 2:
"Kanesa Hopkins, 31, who was recently named the school's Teacher of the Year by her peers, is accused of having a sexual relationship with a former student several years ago, authorities said. The sexual assaults occurred at both Hopkins' and the alleged victim's residences, according to a sworn statement."

Plea Deal Expected For Woman In Teen Sex Case

anthony · 29 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Jeni Dinkel, the wife of a former Cincinnati Bengal Tom Dinkel, entered a not guilty plea Tuesday in court to third-degree rape charges.

Her attorney said Dinkel's plea is likely to change Thursday, when she is scheduled to face a judge again.

Kenton County Commonwealth Attorney Rob Sanders said the 15-year-old victim's family has expressed support for a plea deal."

11-year-old girl wins landmark right to play football with the big boys

anthony · 29 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

I she gets hurt, she'll sue the education system.

Excerpt:
"She's a tough tackler and a natural winner, as the boys on her team would tell you.

Now Minnie Crutwell has secured a famous victory - against the might of the Football Association.

The 11-year-old has forced the FA to reconsider its age-limit for mixed-sex teams, after recruiting Government ministers to her cause.

Minnie will now be allowed to stay with her team beyond her next birthday, instead of being forced to join a girls-only side. There will be a one-year pilot to see how older mixed sides work before the FA decides on a long-term policy."

"Women sex offenders living next door"

anthony · 29 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Finding out if there is a sex offender living near you is public information that is easily accessed, but many people do not consider checking out the lady next door.
...
There are 81-females on the sex offender registry that live all over Connecticut, but most of their neighbors are unaware.
...
"A lot of time with the female offenders there's always some sort of mental health treatment as a condition of their probation," said Anselmo.'

Justice Ginsburg's feminist background evident at Court

Anonymous · 30 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Speaking for the three other dissenting justices, Ginsburg's voice was as precise and emotionless as if she were reading a banking decision, but the words were stinging. "In our view, the court does not comprehend, or is indifferent to, the insidious way in which women can be victims of pay discrimination," she said.

Poor Ginsburg -- read as she laments being a lonely and frustrated woman on a Supreme Court filled with men. Ugh, give me a break.

Dissident Domestic Violence Experts Announce Ground-Breaking Conference: 'From Ideology to Inclusion'

Matt · 30 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Covered by Glenn Sacks here. Big step forward! Excerpt:

"The NFVLRC has just announced their upcoming conference--"From Ideology to Inclusion: Evidence-Based Policy and Intervention in Domestic Violence." The conference will be held Friday/Saturday, February 15-16, 2008 in Sacramento, California. Topics for the conference include: Use and Misuse of Restraining Orders; Effects of Mandatory Arrest Laws; Interventions in Disputed Child Custody Cases; Male Victims; Female Perpetrators; Power and Control in the DV Industry; Limitations of the Patriarchal Paradigm; Gender-Inclusive Interventions; and numerous others.

...

The conference is geared towards professionals who deal with the domestic violence issue in the mental health, family law, and criminal justice fields. Continuing education credits are available for LCSW's, MFT's, PhD's, Batterer Intervention Providers and Family Court Mediators/Evaluators. MCLE credits are available for attorneys. Conference co-sponsors are the Family Violence Treatment & Education Association (www.FAVTEA.com) and the California Alliance for Families and Children (www.cafcusa.org).

Democrats Hope to Reverse Supreme Court Ruling on Pay Discrimination

anthony · 30 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Here's more political nonsense about the wage gap nonsense:

'"All Americans deserve equal pay for equal work, and it is my hope that Congress can remove the technical hurdles that will prevent individuals from receiving what is rightfully theirs," said Sen. Hillary Clinton, D-N.Y., a Democratic presidential candidate."

"Many victims of pay discrimination who didn't immediately realize they were being paid less than others will have no remedy, even though the discrimination continues with every paycheck," Kennedy said. "With women earning only 77 cents for every dollar earned by men, the nation needs strong laws against pay discrimination. This is not what Congress intended when we passed the landmark Civil Rights Act of 1991, and we need to restore full protection against wage discrimination."'

National Post: Domestic Violence, Feminism

Anonymous · 31 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The National Post ran two articles and two letters to the editor today on men and feminism.

Barbara Kay, discusses the Peel School Board's approach to domestic violence, false statistics, and ignoring violence against men.

Two letters to the editor on feminism can be found here and here.

Another car maker: Misandrist ad -- again

Anonymous · 31 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

As if there weren't enough misandrist ads from automakers these days, Dodge Ram (who I thought would want to sell to men) brings out this little ditty.

"I now pronounce you unconscious" features a bride and groom at the alter. She delivers a violent headbutt right before "I do", then drags the unconscious groom out of the church.

I can take a joke. Really, I can. But this is really, really violent. Even a bit scary. Anyone would cringe at this ad -- MRA or not.

If you choose to comment on the video on YouTube, please be polite and civil.

If anyone has the contact info for Dodge's marketing department or ad agency, please put it in the comments here and on YouTube.

Feminist Jim Crow: Men’s Rights Activist, Define Thyself

anthony · 31 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"The intrusion of the federal government into the private business between proprietor and customer, employer-employee indeed, husband and wife - has led to the environment that allows feminists to work their mischief. If women want a women only floor, hotel, club, sports organization or business, they have every right to do that. Men should consider ventures such as this a “green light” to segregate their own organizations as they see fit, and leave it to feminist groups to object (as they surely will, with no trace of irony). By putting the onus back upon women to seek federal redress of the alleged inequity of such organizations, feminists invite unwelcome attention to their sacred cows."

True Equality Conference Reminder - Book your Room!

Matt · 31 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Sent by Tom to the MR2007 list, and re-posted here:

"Time to start thinking about finalizing your plans for the conference. We are only six weeks out! Don't forget that your hotel reservations need to be made by June 13th. After that you will have to pay the full rate which is considerably more expensive. Do it now!

We now have a brochure online for the conference:

http://www.trueequality.com/boys.pdf

We are hoping that you will have a look at it and download and print a copy or two to hand out to your local schools or maybe the local police departments or boy scouts. Wherever you think people might be interested in learning more about boys. You could also email the link to people you think might want to attend.

Soon we will have the conference schedule up and running.

Let me know if you have questions.

To register online go here:

http://www.trueequality.com/reg07

Tom

"Snips & Snails: A Book for Real Boys" by Christina Hoff Sommers

anthony · 31 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

I know some here have some issues with Sommers, but overall, she is the biggest ally towards the improvement of boys education. This is the same book Wendy McElroy has discussed and praised in the past. Excerpt:

"Parents and educators are wringing their hands over the poor academic performance of boys. Girls are better readers, earn higher grades and are far more likely to go to college. America does a much better job educating girls than boys. But now, out of nowhere, comes a book that may hold the secret to male learning.
...
They are mothers who happen to notice that their sons have fallen in love with this wonderful, wholesome, delightfully instructive anachronism of a book."

Feminist Play "Respect: A Musical Journey Of Women" Must Be Protested

anthony · 31 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Review here. Excerpt:

"Instead we were subjected to a two hour feminist screed against men. The opening line said it all "Oh my Johnny I love him so, but why he beats me I don't know". It gets worse from there. Scene after scene details in painful minutia how men are to blame for every ill that ever befell the authors life, and the life of every woman in history. Her Grandfather the alcoholic, her Father the abuser, the boys she dated, the boys who dated her friends, even the boys who dared to not call her in high school. We were both sickened. We stayed to support our friend, but I refused to applaud. Looking around, I noticed that almost every man in the audience was sitting stock still, a look of pained tolerance on his face. None applauded but the outwardly gay man in the front row."

Ed. note: Official site for this musical is http://www.respectamusicaljourney.com/.

UK: "Men helpers 'fear paedophile tag'"

Matt · 31 May 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Just over one in 10 men do not volunteer to work with children because they are worried people will think they are a paedophile, a survey suggests.
...
More volunteers will have to be checked because of a new child protection law being introduced next year.
...
In all, 13% of the men questioned said they would not choose to volunteer to work with children due to fear of being perceived as a paedophile.
...
Both the NCH and Chance UK are calling for men to come forward and mentor boys aged five to 11.

The NCH's chief executive, Clare Tickell, said: "Many children, especially boys, are desperately in need of a male mentor, which is why we urgently need men to come forward despite any fears they may have about public perception."

'The Harassment Of Online Women' by Wendy McElroy

anthony · 1 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

McElroy writes:

'I HOPE YOU GET GANG_RAPED 20 times and nobody believes you. So read the subject line of an email I received from a feminist who uses the name "Olivia Gonzales".

I merely point out that, in my experience, viciousness and hate-mongering are equally prominent in email I receive from women. If you disagree with gender feminism, then (surprisingly often) you will receive emails wishing you become a rape victim. Sometimes they go into detail. And, remember, for gender feminists being raped is a fate worse than death.'

Jim Crow, Gender Feminism IS NOT Welcome in California

MR · 1 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Court Revives Claim That Club Was Biased Against Men - June 1, 2007

"Business patrons alleging discrimination need not show that they demanded and were refused equal treatment in order to obtain redress under the Unruh Civil Rights Act, the California Supreme Court unanimously ruled yesterday."

"The justices reversed a ruling by Div. Five of this district's Court of Appeal, which held a group of male club patrons could not recover damages for allegedly discriminatory pricing because they had not asked to be charged the same rate as female guests."

Writing for the high court, Chief Justice Ronald M. George rejected the view that the "denial" of rights referred only to a business establishment's response to the demand for equal accommodation."

Woman Charged With Rape of 12-Year-Old Boy

anthony · 2 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Its about time the title of an article used the correct term, rape. It seems this boys mother prostituted her young son for money. It remains to be seen if she permanently loses custody. Excerpt:

"Police in Lancaster County say a 12-year-old boy told investigators he had sex with a 24-year-old former York woman — and his mother accepted money for it from the woman.

Columbia police Detective Dan Bell says the mother has since moved to another part of the state, and the boy has received counseling and is living with his father."

Men Sue Over Ladies Night Discrimination

anthony · 2 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Four men who were allegedly refused ladies' night discounts at a Los Angeles nightclub have the right to sue on the grounds of discrimination even if they never demanded equal treatment from the club, the state Supreme Court said Thursday."

Gang of women raping men at gunpoint

ItsDan · 3 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'First it was dismissed by police as a township rumour. But yesterday Tembisa police confirmed that it appeared there were women on the rampage in the area who were “raping men”.

One of the alleged victims was treated for a bruised penis at a local hospital after three women allegedly forced him to have sex with them.'

Of course the author can't even find enough compassion to not use quotation marks around "rape". After all, as everyone knows, men always want sex with any woman who comes along, so how can it be rape?

Paternity Fraud case covered in Long Beach Press Telegram, quotes NCFM-LA

Anonymous · 4 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

NCFM-LA helped this man from Los Angeles, Bert Riddick, get the laws changed in 2004 and filed the paperwork to overturn his 13-year nightmare paternity fraud case. His hearing is coming up soon. His story is remarkable. Excerpt:

'After 13 years of paying child support for a girl he did not father, Bert Riddick finally sees an end to an ordeal that nearly tore his life apart.

Now that a second DNA test has determined there is no chance he is the father of the girl, now 18, Riddick is again asking the court to dismiss the paternity case against him.

And, at a hearing scheduled for June 27, he's going to try to get back every penny seized from his wages since 1994, when the state began taking $1,400 a month from him.'

States and Family Court Systems are Pimping our Children For Profit

Anonymous · 4 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Listen to the shocking radio interview with Robert Pedersen and Carol Rhodes. Carol Rhodes is author of the famous book "Friend of the Court Enemy of the Family" and a former Calhoun County Michigan Child Support Enforcement Officer. This interview was done on the nationally syndicated radio talk show "The Message" with Richar Farr on KRights Radio.

--

Ed. note: Use of Internet Explorer and a relatively recent version of Windows is recommended for a better experience.

The Psychodynamics and Power of Feminism: By Howard S. Schwartz

anthony · 4 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This essay is a bit old (late 90's) but it still has relevance regarding todays modern gender issues.

"Male chivalry and the deeds it inspires represent men’s weakness before the image of female omnipotence. Serving female omnipotence, after all, is what chivalry is all about. But this observation illuminates a stunning paradox. It is that chivalry, which has as its aim the expansion of the sphere of the maternal, the project of making the word a safer place for the maternal expression of love, makes it impossible for men to resist the idea of putting women in combat. But war is hell, as General Sherman observed, and the power that the virgin wields in fantasy may well result in the slaughter of women in reality. Even if there were no other considerations involved, men’s understanding of their impotence in this regard would be felt as castration."

Psychology Today Research To Child Custody Divorce Courts, Father's Rights Groups: Dads Are Equal

Anonymous · 5 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The Psychological Today story: The Making of a Modern Dad, by Douglas Carlton Abrams illustrates in vivid, scientific detail how fathers are no different in their biological programming than mothers when raising children. That divorced dads who "feel" a need to be with their children, is not only an emotional reaction but a biological one as well. Article here. Excerpt:

'This evidence hits hard at social workers, family court judges and elected legislators who abide by archaic research and outdated laws which state that it is in the best interest of the child to be with the divorced mother - not the divorced father.

"Here is the first hard evidence that men are biologically prepared for fatherhood," says Psychology Today. "In fact, this is the first evidence that to nurture is part of man's nature."'

Slap on Wrist for Serial Child Abusers

AngryMan · 5 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The case we saw a couple of months back has concluded.

"Two Mormon women who beat children in their care with rolling pins and forced them to eat chilli powder were jailed for 19 months each yesterday.

Maria Keable and Deirdre Carrington forced six children to eat tablespoons of chilli powder and raw eggs for not keeping to a strict regime of chores between 1997 and 2006.

The children – all aged under 16 – were also stung with nettles and punched."

Hello? 19 months? A team of two men doing this would have got 10 years at least. Strangely, the judge seems to think he treated them harshly:

"Judge Nash said the pair's lack of remorse was a factor in sentencing."

Story here.

Female suicide bomber foiled in Baghdad

anthony · 5 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

My sincere condolences to the individuals who were eventually killed by another bomber. Thankfully the female suicide bomber was stopped before any other people were hurt or killed. I'm glad to see the US Military and Iraq Army are taking these bombings very seriously. They have identified women are capable horrific acts of violence and should not be ignored. Lives are at stake. Excerpt:

'Alert guards gunned down a black-clad woman at a police recruiting station Tuesday, a would-be suicide bomber who then exploded before their eyes. But another bomber succeeded, killing at least 15 people at a gathering of tribal leaders opposed to al-Qaida in the volatile Anbar province.

Khalaf said a woman clad in a black abaya, the traditional Islamic cloak, approached a group of police recruits in east Baghdad's Canal district about 10 a.m. Tuesday.

"She didn't obey the guards' orders to stop and they shot her and she immediately blew up," Khalaf told the AP.

A police officer witness, who asked anonymity as he was not authorized to talk to the media, said three police recruits were lightly injured.'

Female Teacher Gets 10 Years for Sex With 11-Year-Old

anthony · 5 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Here we ago again. "Sex with an 11 year old". The word rape is reserved for male sex offenders. Women? They simply had "sex". Doesn't his age suggest she is a pedophile? The age might be different in each state. Excerpt:

"Former South Carolina elementary school teacher entered a guilty plea to having sex with an 11-year-old student and was given a 10-year prison sentence. Wendie Ann Schweikert, 37, a former teacher at E.B. Morse Elementary School in Laurens County, refused a plea deal that would have sentenced her to 14 years.
...
Wendie Schweikert was one of two Laurens County teachers arrested within a short time of each other for having sex with students. Allenna Ward, 24, a teacher at Bell Street Middle School was charged with engaging in sexual acts with five boys, ages 14 and 15 years old."

Girls tell of abuse by mother: Jury Weeps with emotion

anthony · 5 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Barely able to see over the witness stand, twin 8-year-old sisters made a Macomb County jury cry Friday as they described the abuse they suffered at the hands of the adoptive mother accused of torturing them.

In sundresses and ponytails, the twin girls testified separately that 30-year-old Tamika Williams beat them with cable wire, shoes and exercise equipment; bathed them in bleach water; burned them with cigarettes; and dunked them in a toilet filled with urine."

"Women can be as violent as men" says feminist Doris Lessing

anthony · 5 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Doris Lessing, the novelist and feminist icon, said that women could be warmongers and as violent as men, in a speech yesterday.

Speaking at the Hay on Wye Festival, Lessing, 87, said that although history suggested women were peaceful, some of the worst crimes had been committed by females.

"There is a lot of sentimentality about women. We like to think that women are kind and motherly and are not going to go to war. But it's not true, is it?

"History suggests women are peace loving and law abiding - on the contrary some of the worst crimes have been committed by women," she said.'

UK Equal Parenting Conference and Men's Conference

Raymond Cuttill · 5 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Wendy Turner (EPA), Lisa Cohen (JUMP), Neil Lyndon, Barry Worrall, John Holden, EPA and more to speak at the United Equal Parenting Conference 2007 – The Best Interests of the Child. The conference, at The Warehouse, 1a Cumberland Road, Reading, RG1 3LB, UK will be on the weekend, 16th and 17th June. The conference will discuss the best interested of the child and will include the following speakers -

Wendy and Paul Turner
“A Child’s Right Not To Choose”
Wendy Turner, a tireless campaigner for equal parenting and recently appointed Chair of the Equal Parenting Alliance, will talk about the child’s right not to choose; that the child should not be forced to favour or select one parent only

JUMP
Lisa Cohen will be speaking for JUMP, Jewish Unity for Multiple Parenting, a support and lobby group. She will be talking about “My fight for my children" and the living bereavement it creates and how parental alienation affects the relationship with the parent. She is including a short film on the subject of PAS.

Neil Lyndon is the author of “No More Sex War: The Failures of Feminism" and will argue that the best interest of the child are the best interests of the state.
To quote Daniel Patrick Moynahan, "Family and Nation", 1965 - “There is one unmistakable lesson in American history: A community that allows a large number of young men to grow up in broken families, dominated by women, never acquiring any stable relationship to male authority, never acquiring any set of rational expectations about the future -- that community asks for and gets chaos... And it is richly deserved."

Barry Worrall is a men’s campaigner and author of “Without Authority”. He will talk about the ‘best interests of the child’ - a revolutionary & personal view by Barry Worrall and argue that best interests of child and of society is to be raised into good citizens, who can contribute to our society. How is this done? To be raised by people who brought them into the world & care most about them – their father & mother.

The Equal Parenting Alliance
The EPA will talk about the recent election and their part in it and about plans to have more candidates in future elections.

John Holden
A Father’s Report At The Childcatcher’s Conference”
John Holden, an equal parenting campaigner for some years, will talk about the latest professional initiatives in family courts and for children after separation, having attended a recent conference by people who think they know better than parents.

Others
A number of others will be speaking, but topic details are not yet finalised. Amongst others this will include a Sikh and a humanist on their position on equal parenting and the best interests of the child.

Booking is now being accepted for the conference online or by cheque.

For details see the website http://www.unitedconference.com/

To join the mailing list send a blank email to join-at-unitedconference.com

We would like to hear from other organisations and also individuals who would like to put their views to the conference. Suggestions for speakers to speakers-at-unitedconference.com

There are social events on Friday and Saturday evenings.

There will also be a separate half day conference on men's rights in general and is called ""Men's Hour Conference - The Men's Movement – Where is It?". Including Raymond Cuttill on "Why have 2 sexes anyway?" and Barry Worrall on "How to go forward from here".

Sacks Column: NY Electronic Tagging Device Bill--An Orwellian Measure

Matt · 5 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From Glenn Sacks: "My new co-authored column, NY Electronic Tagging Device Bill--An Orwellian Measure (Buffalo News, 5/30/07), criticizes Assembly Bill 5424, which requires “any person against whom an order of protection is issued…to wear an electronic monitoring device.” The article explains that New York Orders of Protection are often issued in an assembly line manner, and this bill will victimize many innocent men."

Male of 17 years goes to jail for receiving oral sex with a 15 year old female blaze4metal · 7 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This article here talks of a 17 year old receiving consensual oral sex from a 15 year old. Gets 10 years in jail! TEN YEARS! Didn't this website have an article about a woman who beat her kids for 6 years and got 19 months in prison? What the hell is wrong with our judicial system?

--
Ed. note: This is commentary on a case previously covered here on MANN.

Get-out-of-jail-fast card for Paris

Matt · 7 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The 800-lb. gorilla must speak... story here, just in case you have been away from TV, radio, newspapers, and the web for the past 24 hours. Now, let's analyze some.

Factors:
1. Pretty
2. Rich
3. Famous
4. White (bonus: blond)
5. Female (bonus: under 30) +

Three days (maybe) in stir...

...for disobeying a judge's orders, DUI, and who knows what else.

I once had a friend (male, middle-class, not famous) who got busted once for DUI. He did 6 months in jail for it. This isn't to say women don't go to jail for things like this, especially if they are not young or pretty or white or famous or rich. The point it, anyone with Miss Paris' list of "credentials" stands a very good chance of getting out fast for any charge, while anyone with the rather opposite list of "credentials" does not. Would a black man, any age, with little money, having committed the same offenses, get out after only 3 days of a 45-day sentence to a cushy house-arrest? Would any man of any age or ethnicity without a very good lawyer get out so fast?

Video: Bill O'Reilly debates Feminst Stripper

anthony · 8 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Click on this link. Scroll down a bit to the right and look for "FOX News Video". The title is "Student Stripper: Jenny Heineman". Or, use this link (20.2 MB .swf file) to save or load the video file directly.

California Woman Fakes Abduction to Get Out of Date

anthony · 8 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A bride-to-be who wanted to get out of a date with a man she met on a phone chat line sent officers on a wild chase when she faked her abduction, police said.

Sara White, 20, was charged Wednesday with a misdemeanor charge of abusing emergency dispatch services for telling authorities she had been hit on the head and dragged into the trunk of a car while sitting in a Sacramento park.

White said she concocted the story Monday after changing her mind about meeting the man, with whom she'd been talking on the phone for two weeks.'

Shocking Update: Mary Winkler Could Only Serve 60 Days

anthony · 8 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman who killed her preacher husband with a shotgun blast to the back as he lay in bed was sentenced Friday to three years in prison, but she may end up serving only 60 days in a mental hospital.
...
That leaves only two months, and McCraw said up to 60 days of the sentence could be served in a facility where she could receive mental health treatment. That means Winkler may not serve any significant time in prison."

Daly: Wife attacked me with steak knife

Matt · 8 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) - John Daly told authorities his wife tried stab him with a steak knife, and the golfer had red marks on his cheeks when he showed up to play Friday on the course where he lives.

Daly called police about 6 a.m. on Friday, Shelby County Sheriff's department spokesman Steve Shular said. When deputies arrived, wife Sherrie and the couple's children were not there. Deputies could not find the knife he claimed she used.

...

He did not speak with reporters, but issued a statement saying he was the "victim of an assault by my wife."

"I filed a complaint with the Shelby County Sheriff's Office. They are investigating, and I'll have no further comment on the matter while they pursue their investigation. My only concern at this point is for the safety of my children and myself," the statement said.'

Cops called to hunt for man taking daughter for a walk alen · 8 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Toronto father takes daughter for a walk.
Cops called, 4-hour manhunt ensues... excerpt:

"It's a classic case of how looks can truly be deceiving. After a frantic four hour-plus search through a heavily wooded area, police at last have an answer in a case that paralyzed part of the downtown core late Thursday. A young girl they believed had been abducted was found safe, sound and never in any real danger.
...
It was the finale many expected would come to pass because police never received any calls about a missing child, something that most certainly would have happened had a little girl been gone for that long.

In the end, it was a complete and expensive overreaction, but one that cops couldn't afford not to take."

8-Year-Old Charged For Sexual Conduct With Sitter

blaze4metal · 9 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Check this out:

"A mother is upset after a 14-year-old babysitter engaged in sexual conduct with her eight-year-old boy, and the eight-year-old was charged with lewd conduct.
...
Grosbeck says the Salt Lake County District Attorney told her both the child and teenager were equal participants. But Mrs. Grosbeck didn't believe that.

"My son is eight, he's a little boy. He does not have the ability to participate on the same level as a fourteen-year-old," she said.

Although the charges against her son were dropped, she is concerned that the same thing could happen to other victims of sexual abuse."

Why did they drop the charges on the boy? They had a serious sexual predator on their hands! I ask once again, what's wrong with the people in charge of our justice system?

'Army mom' gets honorable discharge over child custody dispute

Matt · 9 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"CONCORD, N.H. - A soldier charged with desertion while fighting for custody of her 7-year-old daughter has been granted an honorable discharge from the Army, her lawyer said Saturday.
...
Hayes, 32, was serving her second tour of duty in Iraq when she learned of possible domestic violence in the home of her ex-husband, Tim Knight, who had primary custody of Brystal.

According to police and Hayes, Knight was a victim in one domestic violence incident, and a second involved a fight between his mother and girlfriend. The judge who awarded Hayes temporary custody said Knight's problems with alcohol and a stormy relationship with his girlfriend made his home unsuitable for Brystal.
...
After her surrender at Fort Dix on Tuesday, Army lawyers helped her refile for a hardship discharge and it was granted within hours, Theroux said.
...
A custody hearing is scheduled Tuesday, Theroux said."

Domestic Violence Registry proposed in Pennsylvania: "Robin's Law"

Paragon · 9 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

First New York wants to put Dog Tags on men accused of domestic violence and then THIS. Excerpt:

"Two years after a man shot his wife and later killed himself in Quakertown, officials in the Upper Bucks borough will likely urge commonwealth legislators to create a state-wide Internet registry of domestic violence offenders to help prevent such tragedies from happening again.
Borough council expects to approve a resolution tonight calling on the Legislature to pass a bill known as “Robin's Law.”

Introduced in the state House on May 31, the bill would create a Megan's Law-style database. Instead of sexual predators though, the picture, address and crime of domestic violence convicts will be posted online for anyone to see, according to a preliminary draft of the bill."

The campaign to get every single man alive on some predator website continues with no end in sight. All fathers beware, it may be your picture on the Internet when your wife is ready to leave you but wants to keep the kids and the house. Don't for one second think that just because you've never laid a hand on any woman ever your picture won't end up on that site.

Lots of Lucre in False Claims of Abuse

Roy · 10 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

MRA commentator Carey Roberts asks – “In a country that prides itself on the "innocent until proven guilty" principle, how do we account for these legal travesties?

In some cases, the false accusers were emotionally unstable. Other times the women acted out of spite and vindictiveness.”

Four tales of false domestic violence allegations against innocent men, bilked of thousands of dollars to prove they committed absolutely no crime.

The DV INDUSTRY at work.

Baby-wielding mothers seeks withdrawal of guilty plea

Matt · 10 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Remember this one? Update here. Excerpt:

"ERIE, Pennsylvania — A mother who admitted swinging her 4-week-old son like a bat to hit her boyfriend, fracturing the infant's skull, wants to withdrew her guilty plea.

Chytoria Graham, 27, of Erie, asked to withdraw her plea Friday — the day she was to be sentenced to at least five years in prison.

Under an agreement with prosecutors, Graham had pleaded guilty in March to aggravated assault and endangering the welfare of a child; reckless endangerment and simple assault charges were dropped.

Graham now says she was not responsible for the injuries to Jarron Troop, who has since recovered."

Mothers upset when fathers step up as stay-at-home dads

ItsDan · 11 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"But almost four years into it, McClure-Metz began to feel her husband was maybe too capable. He had become more competent and assertive in the child-care arena and it showed in small ways."

"Man" in teen sex case should go free, judge rules

Anonymous · 11 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Everyone remember the boy that got 10 years for getting oral sex from a consenting 15 year old? Well, a judge effectively voided that sentence. Article here. Excerpt:

"A Georgia judge ordered the release Monday of a man sentenced to 10 years in prison for having consensual oral sex with a 15-year-old girl when he was 17."

I put "Man" in quotes because the guy involved is 17 years old. Nice try, mainstream media.

"Women rule" by Kathleen Parker

anthony · 11 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"Men have begun fighting back against what they now perceive to be bias toward women's health, lobbying the past few years for a federal Office of Men's Health. Ultimately, of course, no one wins the war of healthier-than-thou, while another layer of bureaucratic one-upmanship is just that.

A better means for improving men's health -- and saving the males -- is for women to recognize that males are in trouble and that a world without men, while perhaps calmer, would be far less interesting and fun.

As we've recently witnessed, when women want something, they usually get it."

South Africa: Incentives To Lie About Rape

anthony · 11 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Desperate women who fear they might be HIV-positive are allegedly laying false rape complaints with police to jump the queue for anti-retroviral drugs to prevent infection.

Port Elizabeth police say the increase in rape cases over the last year had been “incredible”, but the complainants seemed to disappear as soon as they were treated with post-exposure ARV drugs."

More Dangerous Books for Boys

marketpl · 12 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Blog entry here. Excerpt:

"Max Elliot Anderson's books are perfect for summer reading, especially for boys who might not like to read. If there is a boy in your family, or in your circle of friends, he will enjoy these action-adventures and mysteries."

Domestic Violence by Any Other Name

Anonymous · 12 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'I'VE always known AMY WINEHOUSE was a feisty lady, but she's going to end up in a cell next to PARIS HILTON if she keeps on misbehaving.

...

The Back To Black singer admitted she has a violent streak that comes out when she drinks — and she often uses new hubby Blake Fielder-Civil as a punch bag.

...

"I'll beat up Blake when I'm drunk. I don't think I've ever bruised him, but I do have my way. If he says one thing I don't like then I'll chin him.

...

"I don't think your ability to fight has anything to do with how big you are. It's to do with how much anger is in you."'

Teri Stoddard: How Can Feminists Hate Men When I Find Them So Loveable?

anthony · 12 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'It starts with the mainstream media; you won't find a lot of respect for, or truth about men there. Also, today's feminist-driven domestic violence laws don't address the reality of female-perpetrated child abuse, violence, partner aggression or psychological abuse. Battered (even bruised and bleeding) fathers have been arrested after calling the police for help with an out-of-control partner. "Primary aggressor" and "no-drop" policies are part of the problem.

The main problem is that no one is stopping feminists from stripping fathers of their rights. Right now they're claiming Parental Alienation isn't real. PA Syndrome hasn't been declared or denied at this point. I can tell you; there are many fathers, and some mothers, who are victims of parental alienation. I've heard from them.
...
I used to think feminism stood for equality. I've seen for myself it does not. Someone with a "loud voice" needs to take a look at the facts, someone who doesn't benefit financially by the outcome. Then they need to use that loud voice to talk louder than the father-haters.'

Ethics Trial to Begin for Nifong

anthony · 12 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The North Carolina State Bar has charged Nifong, the district attorney in Durham County, with several violations of the state's rules of professional conduct, all tied to his handling of the lacrosse case.

Among those expected to watch from the gallery of a packed North Carolina Court of Appeals courtroom are Reade Seligmann and Collin Finnerty, two of the once-charged and now cleared players. Several defense attorneys and family members of the three players are also expected to attend."

Last minute appeal in teen sex case sparks outrage

anthony · 12 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Jubilation turned to anger Monday after Georgia's top prosecutor vowed he would fight a judge's order that would have set free Genarlow Wilson, a Georgia man serving a 10-year prison sentence for a consensual sexual encounter he had as a teenager.
...
Monday, acting on a petition filed by his attorneys, Monroe County Superior Court Judge Thomas Wilson ruled that Genarlow Wilson's punishment was cruel and unusual and voided it on constitutional grounds. The judge reduced the sentence to one year and said Wilson should not be put on Georgia's sex offender registry, as the old law required."

In Time for Father's Day, "Time" Hatchets Dads

Matt · 12 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Seems Time magazine continues to reinforce its anti-male/-father reputation with its latest. Read about it here and take action. Excerpt:

'TIME magazine's new Father's Day hatchet job on divorced and separated fathers--"Daddy Dearest: What Science Tells Us About Fatherhood"--questions whether fathers "have done a good enough job to deserve the honor" of having a Father's Day. The contents page reads "Behavior: Why some animal fathers are more nurturing dads than many men are."'

MSN Surprises with Men's Health Week Coverage

Matt · 12 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Nice to to see it! Read How Guys Die. Excerpt:

"In recognition of National Men's Health Week (June 11-17), MSN Health & Fitness has culled some fundamental facts and figures to raise your awareness of the most fatal conditions facing men in the United States today. With any luck, we'll also raise your prospects for living a longer, healthier life.

You may be struck by how many risk factors for the life-threatening conditions below are within your capacity to control. We men could add years—even decades —to our lives by simply eating healthily, staying active and not smoking."

Alas, when covering Cause #3 for men's deaths, accidents, they skip over the huge difference in the numbers for men and women, instead quoting an aggregated statistic. Still, this is progress.

"A Rush to Injustice" Covers Duke Case

Matt · 12 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I just heard an interview with the author of this book: A Rush to Injustice: How Power, Prejudice, Racism, and Political Correctness Overshadowed Truth and Justice in the Duke Lacrosse Rape Case and it sounds like it has the inside story of what Nifong's actual motivations were for rushing to prosecute the Duke LAX players. Should be plenty revealing. If you have read it, please comment.

Essay: "Madame President"

Anonymous · 13 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

MADAME PRESIDENT
By P. T. Mycas

I have no objection to electing a female President of the United States. As a matter of fact, I believe there are millions of women who could do a better job than the current male President. But that's a pretty low bar. I would like to vote for the most qualified person for President, male or female. Because I do not believe Hillary Clinton would be President for all Americans, I do not believe she is qualified.

Politically, I like to think of myself as an Independent, but in order to vote in primaries, I declare as a Democrat. I am liberal. I hold the usual liberal views with one exception. I generally do not like feminism. Feminism is defined as equality between women and men, but the name itself belies this definition. It is like trying to coin a word which expresses the harmony and equality between Ford and Chevy owners and coming up with the name "Fordism." Chevy owners would not allow such nonsense. By saying feminism is about equality, feminists are hiding that much of feminism is about sexism. Why have we let feminists get away with this?

Of course, there are several varieties of feminism, some of which are fine. For example, I have little problem with equity feminism (is that an oxymoron?). However, I think radical feminists form, for the most part, a sexist hate group which has hijacked feminism.

Hillary Rodham Clinton appears to be far closer to the radical feminists than to the equity feminists.

Living History is her rather pompously-entitled autobiography. It is also a long campaign speech, in which she engages in blatant Presidential self-promotion, especially aimed at women. I found it a disorganized and rambling, stream-of-consciousness screed. It felt more like a diary.

As one might expect in a diary, there are many examples showing her emotional side. Perhaps these examples are to counter her reputation for being an ice queen. Or perhaps they are to appeal to female voters. But I feel they revealed weakness, insecurity, indecisiveness and superficiality. For example, she inadvertently showed her weakness when she said she couldn't eat or sleep and lost 10 pounds before testifying before the Grand Jury. Another time she mentioned being "flat on my back and unable to move" due to tension and high heels. And during the Starr investigations she mentioned that she thought Bill was sailing along, while she was "buffeted by every gust of wind." There were also many examples of her holding back tears and leaning on friends for support. She several times described her separation anxiety when Chelsea left for Stanford. She quoted Eleanor Roosevelt as saying, "A woman is like a tea bag. You never know how strong she is until she's in hot water." I do not think Hillary is a very strong tea bag. Indecisiveness showed in her slowness in marrying Bill, deciding on a career, moving to Arkansas, and running for the Senate. She often complained about how the press focused on her hair and clothes, but the book was peppered with examples of her focus on appearance and style, hers as well as others'.

My biggest objection to President Hillary is that she would only be President for about half of the people of the United States---the inny half. Living History reflects this. She constantly plays the gender card in the book. She is obsessive about her focus on women. Certainly different people could come to different counts, but I counted 315 instances of her playing the gender card---that's once every 1.7 pages. Some of the examples are fairly insignificant, such as using her maiden name, adding a bust of Eleanor Roosevelt to the Roosevelt Room, and telling us that so-and-so was the first woman to do such-and-such. Some examples may even exhibit pettiness. For example, she got a haircut and a perm to show solidarity with a woman whose hair was criticized. However, most examples are significant, and added together, they indicate a maniacal focus on women and women's issues.

In fact, Clinton states explicitly that working on women's issues is a prime focus for her. In the first paragraph she says she wasn't born a women's advocate but was free to make that choice. Later, she details the organizational and staff changes she made upon becoming First Lady, so that she could work on women's issues. She also mentions at one point that she "had been working for twenty-five years on improving the status and dignity of women...." At the Democratic Convention in 2000, she thanked the nation for allowing her to work here and abroad on issues that matter most to women. At another point, she mentions that Admiral Elmo Zumwalt told Chelsea that her mother will be remembered "for opening the eyes of the world" to women's rights.

While deliberating to run for the Senate, she writes, "I had traveled the world on behalf of women's rights...." She details in the book the many trips she has taken as First Lady (e.g., China, Mongolia, Africa, Ireland, South Asia, Australia, Italy, The Philippines, and Thailand) and the focus on women's issues of each trip. She met with women and women's groups, at girls' schools, women's banks, and maternity hospitals, and gave speeches to women's groups on women's issues. In fact, on her trips without Bill she focused almost exclusively on women's issues.

She also seems to only think of herself in gender terms. In her testimony to the Congress on health care she said, "I'm here as a mother, a wife, a daughter, a sister, a woman."

Her focus on women occasionally makes her overly sensitive. For example, after telling us that she is skilled at public speaking, she then relates how after she had testified before an Arkansas legislative joint session, a male legislator commented that perhaps the state had elected the wrong Clinton to the governorship. It's hard to know exactly how the legislator meant this, but it sounds like a compliment to me. However, Clinton took this as an insult to women. She thought the legislator was expressing amazement that a "woman" could be articulate and knowledgeable. She refers to this offense as the "talking dog syndrome." Apparently, this is a distortion of a quip by Samuel Johnson: "A woman's preaching is like a dog's walking on his hinder legs. It is not done well; but you are surprised to find it done at all." She was similarly offended after testifying before the U.S. House Ways and Means Committee on health care.

I am also concerned about her appointments, advisers, and staff if she becomes President. It appears nearly all of her advisers and staff when she was First Lady were women. Living History shows a group picture of her staff and only 2 of the 30 shown are men. She seems to surround herself with women, which included going to a women's college and attending an all-female prayer group. Cronyism has been a serious problem of the Bush administration. We do not need to continue the problem with Clinton hiring women just because they are women, when there may be more qualified men available.

As First Lady, Clinton often met with world leaders and their spouses. In Living History, she nearly always (25 times) describes the spouses in more glowing terms than the leaders themselves. The one exception to this rule is when she talks about meeting the female Prime Minister of Norway, Gro Brundtland. Brundtland's husband is not mentioned.

Clinton also shows some antipathy toward men. For example in Living History she says that in fifth grade she had a reputation for being able to stand up to the rowdy boys. Also, she twice refers to the Chinese saying that women hold up half the sky, but adds, "but in most of the world, it's really more than half." It appears she doesn't think much of men. She also twice quotes Joyce McCartan's condescending comment, "It takes women to bring men to their senses." After the Lewinsky scandal, she writes that she "wanted to wring Bill's neck." This also brings to mind her recent "joke" when asked how she would handle the evil men in the world. She implied she had experience from dealing with her husband. When confronted with the harshness of this "joke," she responded, "You guys keep telling me to lighten up, be funny. I get a little funny and now I'm being psychoanalyzed." Well, yes. Why did she choose to make fun of men? Was she really joking? If she thinks her husband is evil, what can the rest of the male population expect? Or was she just pandering to the lowest instincts of female voters?

In Clinton's speech to the UN Conference on Women in Beijing in 1995 she said, "...it is no longer acceptable to discuss women's rights as separate from human rights...human rights are women's rights...and women's rights are human rights, once and for all." Perhaps she meant this rhetorically, but it is odd that she demands equating women's rights with human rights considering she does quite the opposite throughout Living History. She constantly makes "women's rights" the focus of attention and treats them as separate from "human rights." In fact, the two phrases often occur in the same sentence, confirming their difference. I suspect her purpose in equating the two is to deny that women's rights are "special" rights, which is belied by her book. She does something similar when accused of feminizing politics, by insisting that she is humanizing politics. This is the same trick I mentioned earlier when "feminism" is defined as "equality." It is actually an attempt to deny her own sexism. And by saying women's rights are human rights, and human rights are women's rights, she is strongly implying that men have no rights, or that they are not human.

Living History is not the only example of her woman-centric attitude. Her Talking-It-Over columns during her years as First Lady often dealt with women's issues. Examples included topics such as birth control for women, low-income women, a woman-friendly workplace, encouraging women to vote, her trip to the United Nations Conference on Women, drive-thru deliveries, the U.S. women's soccer team, trafficking of women, renewal of the Violence Against Women Act, women's rights in Viet Nam, Irish women for peace, microcredit for women, the pay gap, and women leaders. And two of her last columns summarized her work on women's issues as First Lady. Her campaign website also has a page on women's issues, but none on men's issues. This page includes the incredibly popular but incredibly wrong statement that "women still earn only $.76 cents (sic) for every dollar men earn for doing the same work."

Clinton has often touted her concern for children. How much of this is genuine and how much is a smokescreen for her concern for women? In her speech to the Democratic convention in 1996, she listed eight ways for the government and citizens to help children: longer maternity hospital stays, home nurses and hot lines for new mothers, expansion of the new family leave law, flex-time, health-insurance for all, tax breaks for people who adopt, an end to racial preferences in adoption, and reading proficiency by the third grade. Most of these have more to do with helping women than children.

Contrary to what feminists want us to believe, American women have a tremendous amount of power today. They dominate politics because there are more female than male voters. Therefore, all elected officials must cater to women in order to be elected. Women control the economy because they spend nearly all of the money while their husbands are alive (the spending gap), and all of the money when their husbands die. The spending gap results in women controlling the media. Women also receive much power from chivalry and imposed guilt, which has probably increased during feminism. And let us not forget the ever-present sexual power that women have over men. Just think of all the powerful men humbled by women like Monica Lewinsky, Donna Rice, Elizabeth Ray, Fanny Fox, Jessica Hahn, etc.

I'd like to say more about the spending gap. The power in money comes not from making it but from spending it. So the ever-present controversy about the pay gap is misplaced. The spending gap is far more significant. Women spend roughly 80 cents of every consumer dollar. This gives them enormous power. Advertisers, as a result, aim their advertising at women. As a consequence of this, nearly all advertising media must also aim at women in order to attract advertisers. So, newspapers, television, magazines, etc., bias their content toward women. These media pander to women at nearly every opportunity, presenting woman as strong, intelligent, victimized, and superior, while presenting men as weak, dumb, victimizing, and inferior. This results in such media fiascoes as those associated with the pay gap, the Duke lacrosse team, girls' self-esteem crisis, domestic violence on Super Bowl Sunday, Jessica Lynch, and runaway bride Jennifer Wilbanks. The media seem to have new rules like: Focus on female victims. If female victims can't be found, focus on mothers or wives of victims. Focus on discrimination against women. If discrimination against women in the United States can't be found, focus on discrimination against women in the third world. Highlight all accomplishments of women. As well as becoming more and more tabloid to appeal to women, the media are also discriminating against men, resulting in the devaluing of men by society. I suspect female candidates for office are also receiving more beneficial coverage.

Another example of women's power is that chivalry results in an inordinate amount of charity going to women. For example, what disease receives more attention and funding than breast cancer? Why? Lung cancer kills more women and prostate cancer kills almost as many men. And why ignore pancreatic, liver, or brain cancers? Obviously, we value women's lives more than men's. Some criticized this inordinate amount of attention on breast cancer by pointing out that many more women die of heart disease. In response, a campaign was instituted to focus on heart disease, but only in women. The Go Red for Women campaign focuses only on women even though heart disease kills a comparable number of men and kills them 10 years younger.

Considering that we abhor gender discrimination, women's power has resulted in some odd legislation. For example, even though girls are doing much better than boys in schools and colleges, we have the Women's Educational Equity Act. Even though women participate in school extracurricular activities more than boys, we have Title IX enforcement only in sports, the one area where boys dominate. Even though men generally die five years earlier than women and die earlier in 14 of the 15 leading causes of death, we have the Women's Health Equity Act and the Women's Health Initiative focusing only on women's health. Even though men are victims of violence 2 to 3 times more often than women, we have the Violence Against Women Act giving women special protections and programs. Even though men receive harsher prison sentences than women for the same crimes, states have instituted women's commissions to study discrimination against women in the justice system. And the ironic fact about all of this legislation is that it was passed by, for all practical purposes, male legislators.

We constantly hear that the country is becoming more polarized, with more and more people unwilling to compromise. Clinton, with her openly women-based attitude, will add to this problem by separating the sexes and contributing to antagonism between them. We need a President to bring the country together.

All politicians pander to women. But I feel this pandering would become extreme under a Hillary Clinton Presidency. Women who were influenced by women's studies programs and feminism from an early age are now entering power positions such as CEO and President where they can exert much influence over policies and direction.
If these women bring radical feminism with them, men will become, more and more, second class citizens. Because of their chivalrous nature, I fear men will do little to stop this.

Some women are probably saying, "Good, it's about time." But I don't see how discrimination against our great-grandmothers justifies discrimination against our brothers now. I expect women to be more magnanimous than that. Let me remind you of Harry Burn. He voted for the 19th Amendment to give women the right to vote after his mother told him "be a good boy, Harry, and do the right thing." In fact, nearly all of the legislators who did the right thing and voted for the 19th Amendment were men. It is time for women (and men) to do the right thing. Hillary Clinton would be a disaster for half of the country.

New Glenn Sacks column: In this Turf War, Kids Are the Prize

Matt · 13 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

My new co-authored column, In this Turf War, Kids Are the Prize (Tallahassee Democrat, 6/13/07), defends the controversial concept of Parental Alienation against recent attacks from the National Organization for Women, the Family Violence Prevention Fund, and numerous other misguided women's groups.

The column, which appears below and is linked on my blog here, was written primarily as a response to NOW president Kim Gandy's recent anti-father editorial Sick Joke or Sick Reality?

New Men's Health Network Site Resource Available

Matt · 13 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From Tom: This is a heads up about an excellent resource via the men's health network web site: http://www.menshealthnetwork.org/stateofmenshealth/

It gives reports on men's health for the US with charts and graphs. Very nicely done. Most importantly it allows the user to select only their state and creates a custom report just on their state. This is good for knowing or checking on the stats but is even better as a lobbying tool. Just send a link to the custom report to your state legislator or the feds with a short email about suicide or prostate cancer or any of the other things the report highlights. It is a great backup to our concerns. Great way to get the word out.

Risk factors in school shootings

Anonymous · 13 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"It seems that after every school shooting, the usual suspects, often with vested interests, come out of the woodwork with their theories: guns, psychotropic drugs, violent video games, Satanic lyrics, Nazism ... But the Secret Service has determined that school assassins do not fit a “profile” — aside from the fact that they have all been boys. Therefore, a more productive approach would be to look for certain character risk factors:..."

Sign the European petition for Men's Health

Anonymous · 13 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Check this out. It's high time European governments took men's health more seriously! The International Men's Health Week (11-17 June) is the timely opportunity to advertise this petition.

Woman Charged With Murder After Trying to Blame Her Son

anthony · 13 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A Central Florida woman told her 19-year-old son that she loved him and would stand by him after he was arrested for killing her husband. But now authorities think she is the real killer and framed her son for the crime.

Rhonda Marie Sands' husband, Everette Lema, 50, was found stabbed to death on May 2, the Orlando Sentinel reported.

Prosecutors have dropped a murder charge against Sands' son, DeShane Sands. He was arrested the day after the killing, based largely on reports from his mother."

Delinquency: Boys Are Exposed To More Risk, Less Protection

anthony · 13 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Researchers trying to understand why high school-age boys are involved in serious delinquency more often than girls have found that males are exposed to higher levels of risk factors and lower amounts of protective factors.
...
The 22 protective factors measured included the teens' attachment to each of their parents, rewards for good behavior in school and social skills in dealing with other people. Risks included family conflict, low commitment to school, peer drug use and sensation seeking.

While boys experience higher levels of risk and lower protection for 18 of these factors, girls only reported higher risk for family conflict and less protection from attachment to their fathers. There were no gender differences for exposure to peer drug use and for peer rewards for delinquency."

More men becoming stay-at-home dads

Anonymous · 14 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'OTTAWA -- A growing number of men are ditching work for daddy duty at home in the weeks after the birth or adoption of a child, according to a new report.

The Statistics Canada study released Wednesday showed that since 2001, the proportion of women who took time off work for a child's birth or adoption has remained stable but the proportion of men who did so has increased.

"After government increased eligibility for benefits and extended parental leave in 2001 to 35 weeks, the proportion of fathers who took any kind of leave for the birth or adoption of their child, including parental leave, rose from 38% in 2001 to 55% five years later," the report said.
...
"Among men, factors related to finances, employment and career played a dominant role in the decision not to take leave. In fact, men were twice as likely as women to cite their financial situation as a reason," the study said.'

Toronto Mayor David Miller not convinced a father is needed in a child's life

Anonymous · 14 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"... when the Mayor [David Miller] was asked generally why so many young men who are involved in gun violence are also fatherless and part of a gangster culture, he downplayed the important role of fathers in the lives of boys.

Mr. Miller told [radio talk show host] John Oakley, who called him on this, that he had grown up without a father and that he is not convinced a father is needed in a child's life. That to even raise the issue is to blame the mothers."

Comment Captchas Enabled

Scott · 14 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Recently there have been some registered user accounts which have been used to post spam on the site using automated methods. For the time being I have enabled "captcha" image verification for comment posting. I know this will be inconvenient for the regular posters here, and I intend to look into alternatives or ways to whitelist some of the more regular commenters.

In the meantime, please keep an eye out for these spam posts (they will be obvious, usually containing dozens of links to other sites) and let us know when you come across them. Thanks!

Msnbc.com Profiles Absent Father Crisis

Roy · 14 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In a just-posted article, msnbc.com looks at the devastating effects of fatherless households, including comments from dads in "A National Survey of Dads' Attitudes on Fathering". It found that 91 percent of those questioned agreed there is a father-absence crisis in America. They listed work demands as the No. 1 barrier to being a good father. Other major impediments included the media and popular culture followed by financial problems. Fathers who were not married to the mother of their children cited a lack of cooperation from mothers as the chief obstacle to being a good father, followed by work responsibilities, financial problems and treatment of fathers by the courts.

Interestingly, the word "feminism" never shows up in this otherwise intelligent report.

Florida's Fathers' Adoption Rights

Anonymous · 14 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A state registry set up to make adoptions easier is under fire at the Florida Supreme Court. The high court heard an appeal Monday on behalf of a Tampa man who was denied the right to raise his own child after the single mom decided to give the baby up for adoption."

--

Ed. note: The story is really delivered via video. Click the "Florida's Fathers Adoption Rights" link next to the red camera icon just below the headline to watch it.

Woman sentenced to 4 months for filing false rape report

ItsDan · 14 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Amy Jones, 21, falsely claimed to police that her stepfather Rod Swainson had been abusing her since she was 12.

After she gave a lengthy statement to detectives, Mr Swainson was arrested and charged with rape.
...
Jones, of Bury, was sentenced to four months in prison after admitting perverting the course of justice."

Notice even in the headline they try to start making excuses, as if being 'lovesick' or a lesbian somehow explains why you tried to ruin an innocent person's life.

The Terror Of Oral Sex In Georgia

Luek · 14 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

We are all by now familiar with the sad saga about the 17 year old high school jock who was convicted of having oral sex with a 15 year old. And of course we all know this happened in the State of Georgia.

However, going back to the late 1980's there was IMO a much worse travesty of justice and misandric justice at that concerning the case of James David Moseley who was sent to prison for having consensual oral sex with his ex wife. The wife who consented was not prosecuted but he was. And of course this happened in Georgia too. Oral sex just seems to hold a special terror there for some reason.

Read about it here.

Boy Deliberately Humiliated by Teachers

Matt · 14 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'INDIANAPOLIS -- Sixth-grader Matt Porter didn't enjoy getting "Most Likely Not To Have Children" and "Sir Clowns-a-Lot" awards from two teachers at his school.

His parents aren't pleased, either.

Matt said he received the awards in front of classmates during a ceremony at the Decatur Intermediate Learning Center at the end of the recently finished school year. His mother and his stepfather have asked the Decatur Township school system to reprimand the teachers, and they want an apology.'

Likely they would have done this to a girl? Doubt it. You can be sure they would have been fired by the end of the day had it been a girl they targeted. I'll also bet next week's paycheck that the teachers who did this were both women.

Massive Media Break for the EQUAL Parenting Bike Trek event!

Anonymous · 15 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The EQUAL Parenting Bike Trek will be discussed on the ultra-popular Radio Lia Show! The Radio Lia Show has a national audience and also a growing fan base in Canada! Robert Pedersen and Robb MacKenzie will be interviewed on June 17, 2007 at 6PM on the Radio Lia show. More information can be found at http://www.daddy.typepad.com/.

We ask other websites and Bloggers to spread the word on this amazing break for the EQUAL Parenting Bike Trek. This will bring our issues to a nationwide audience!

Child Support Is More Than Just Money, Says Filmmaker, Angelo Lobo

anthony · 15 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Noncustodial parents, mostly fathers, say financial child support has been deemed by some officials as the most important thing they can contribute to their children.
...
The situation is beyond absurd. We have loving, fit fathers, who want to be there and support their children, who are unfairly prevented from doing so. On the other hand, we have men proven by DNA testing not to be the dad, yet they are forced to financially support children they may not even know and did not father."

Nifong Resigns and sheds Tears

anthony · 15 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Facing the loss of his law license, a tearful Mike Nifong said Friday he will resign as district attorney, more than a year after he obtained rape indictments against three Duke University lacrosse players who were later declared innocent by state prosecutors."

The Onion's Fathers Day cartoon

mens_issues · 16 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

At last, an editorial cartoon gets it right for Father's Day.

'nuff said.

Steve

Woman jailed for testicle attack

AngryMan · 16 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman who ripped off her ex-boyfriend's testicle with her bare hands has been sent to prison.

Amanda Monti, 24, flew into a rage when Geoffrey Jones, 37, rejected her advances at the end of a house party, Liverpool Crown Court heard.

She pulled off his left testicle and tried to swallow it, before spitting it out. A friend handed it back to Mr Jones saying: "That's yours."

Monti admitted wounding and was jailed for two-and-a-half years.'

Switzerland: Calls for paternity leave become louder

Anonymous · 16 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This year will be the first Father's day in Switzerland (congratulations, gentlemen!). Story here.

The little dig by the journalist at the end is a nice touch: "The demand for a change of the civil code comes more than 25 years after judicial equality between men and women."

It's disappointing that the Swiss Association of Single Parents called paternity leave "out of touch with reality". I can't seem to find their web site to see if they have further comment.

Fourth false rape claim - woman spared jail

Anonymous · 16 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This is false rape claim #4 for Nicola May of Auckland, NZ. No jail time, of course -- but she has to pay a whopping $20 per month to compensate police 10K of the $60K investigation.

This part of the article is rich: "There was no single victim but rather groups of victims including the community and the police, he said.".

No mention of the guys she falsely accused. Of course.

Woman jailed for false rape claim

Anonymous · 16 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Ruth Siggee, 21, falsely claimed that she had been the victim of a daytime sex attack in Norwich city centre on 28 June, 2004.

Siggee, of Tunstall Close, Norwich, pleaded guilty to perverting the course of justice at the city's crown court.

Handing down sentence Judge Daniel Worsley said: "The allegation of rape triggered a major police operation."

Siggee made three false statements to police before withdrawing her statements and saying she did not want the allegations to be pursued."

The BBC sugar coats it, but man who she falsely accused of a violent rape wasn't her husband. The Daily Record identifies the man as a former schoolmate.

Working Fathers Caught in a Trap

Anonymous · 16 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Fathers say they want to spend more time with their kids, but are stuck working. Day-to-day demands -- and middle managers -- trump much ballyhooed work/life policies and paternity leaves, experts say."
...
However, the majority of working dads (59 percent) would not take paternity leave if it were offered, according to the latest Workplace Insights survey by Adecco USA.

Reasons cited included fear it would harm their careers (31 percent); being too busy at work to be away for an extended period of time (28 percent); and being depended on too much by co-workers and clients (28 percent).

Happy Father’s Day – Dads Get Shafted Again

Roy · 16 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Another fluff news piece on msnbc.com shows why Mother’s Day is still the big cash cow holiday for buying gifts, while Father’s Day is a sorry loss leader for retailers. Excerpt:

“In a recent survey by the National Retail Federation, Americans spent $16 billion on Mother’s Day this year, but only plan on spending $9.9 billion on Father’s Day, which falls on June 17. Fathers and Families Executive Director Don Hogan says the discrepancy is just more proof that dads are overworked and underappreciated. “It seems that society places a greater value on mothers than fathers,” he says."

Ironically, it's suspected that of the $9.9 billion spent on Father's Day gifts, men earned $9.8 billion of that money and handed it over to their wives, kids, and girlfriends, who then bought them a $2.98 Hallmark card and spent the balance on themselves!

Funny that the word "misandry" is not used in this report. And, Kim Gandy, where's your N.O.W. editorial on the vile sexist "gift gap?"

Kathleen Parker: Happy Father's Day, jerk

anthony · 16 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Column here. Excerpt:

"A week before Father's Day, cartoonist Berkeley Breathed did a very cartoonist thing and caused a controversy to be stirred over a comic strip that seemed to slight fathers while celebrating lesbian moms.
...
But here's the biggest truth of all: Men and fathers have been on the receiving end of a male-bashing trend for the past 20 years or so, and they've had enough. Breathed's comic strip might have faded into the ethers if it didn't cut so close to the bone, if it weren't one more insult added to a history that long ago ceased to amuse."

--

Ed. note: The cartoonist's contact information is here. The cartoon in question can be viewed here.

Why fathers leave

anthony · 16 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Most fathers don't want to leave their children. They love their kids and want to be engaged in every aspect of their lives. Men hurt and feel pain when they cannot be with their kids. To suggest otherwise is not only insulting to men, it's a bold-faced lie.

Society routinely degrades fathers. Men are typically depicted by Hollywood as inadequate and useless beings who are nothing more than comedic props."

Tortured Boy, Missing Girl: Two Women Arrested

anthony · 16 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Two women living in the home — Candace Clark, 23, and Michaela Clerc, 20 — were arrested on charges of obstruction of justice and physical abuse of a child.
...
Police returned to the house and found the 11-year-old locked in the closet and covered with severe burns. Hahn told the Daily Register the boy had been tortured and burned with scalding and boiling water as punishment for failing to clean. It appeared he was regularly locked in the closet.
...
"The condition of the 11-year-old resembled pictures of those coming out of concentration camps at the end of World War II, Columbia County District Attorney Jane Kohlwey said".'

Duke Lacrosse Rape Case -- DA Mike Nifong DISBARRED!

WhipperSnapper · 17 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Finally. A state bar ethics committee has DISBARRED DA Mike Nifong, the villain who attempted to imprison three innocent young men who were blatantly falsely accused of rape.

Let's hope that this is only the beginning of the justice and revenge aspects of this and that also Duke University and the villainous "Group of 88" are also punished through lawsuits.

Sadly, the woman who filed the false charges will go completely unpunished, though I think the victims should attempt to bankrupt her and attach her future earnings through lawsuits while also relentlessly trying to convince the new DA to prosecute her. Mental instability is not an excuse for criminal behavior and she should be criminally prosecuted along with Nifong.

Robert Pedersen Wins Runner-Up In Hero Dad Contest

Anonymous · 17 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Robert Pedersen, a Michigan Dad who advocates for Equal Parenting Rights, wins runner-up in Best Life's Hero Dad Contest. Excerpt:

'My husband, Robert Pedersen, found out today (Father's Day) the most incredible news to date! He won the Runner-Up Award to Best Life Magazine's nationwide Hero Dad Contest!
...
Never forget! It is wrong to deny a child the fundamental right of EQUAL time, love, nurturing and education with BOTH fit parents. And yes we know they spelled his name wrong, it is something I can proudly say happens to me as well! Happy Father's Day to all! There are many Hero Dads! Robert's hero is his dad who, along with his hero mom, raised 4 boys!'

Fathers & Friends Protest for Father's Rights in Sacramento, California

Anonymous · 17 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Members of Fathers 4 Justice (F4J), Children's Rights Initiative Sharing Parents Equally (CRISPE) and National Coalition of Free Men, Los Angeles (NCFMLA) met at the Family Relations Courthouse in Sacramento, California on Tuesday to protest laws, policies and decisions that deny parents (mostly Fathers) equal (50/50) shared parenting.

The week before Father’s Day seemed an appropriate time to stage the Sacramento protest, but Father’s rights groups agree that no special day is needed to protest the egregious treatment of parents (mostly Fathers) by Family Relations Courts and CA lawmakers.

Fathers & Friends Protest for Father's Rights in Sacramento CA

Obama: Men Should 'Stop Acting Like Boys'

anthony · 17 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Thats right gentlemen. Obama insulted every father in this nation by attacking them on a Father's Day. I find this disturbing. A potential president has an anti-father ideology. Excerpt:

'Democratic presidential candidate Barack Obama said Friday that fathers have to share the responsibility for raising children and caring for families because their role doesn't end at conception.

Days before Father's Day, the first-term Illinois senator and father of two daughters delivered his life message as well as an assessment of what government needs to do in remarks at a Baptist church.

"What makes you a man is not the ability to have a child but the courage to raise a child," Obama said.

In his prepared text, Obama said: Men need to "stop acting like boys - who need to realize that responsibility does not end at conception.'

He Who Fathers Least, Fathers Best

anthony · 17 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Here's some more misandry on Father's Day. When you read the article notice how Hitler's name comes up. Excerpt:

"There is now much evidence that the role of the father, even his absence, is just as important in shaping presidents as is the role of the mother. Affirmed and empowered by their mother's love but also hurt and frustrated by their father's absence, a leader, including most American presidents, will strive to prove their value and worth with their great achievements."

"Women Above the Law?" by Carey Roberts

anthony · 17 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'When a female high school teacher deflowers a student, she gets a judicial wrist-slap. When a wife kills her husband, it's the dependable Battered Woman Syndrome defense to the rescue. When a woman falsely accuses a man of abuse and destroys his reputation and career, the chivalrous prosecutor turns the other cheek. If a mother tries to alienate a child from his dad, that's "protecting the child from a domineering father." And when a woman kills her unborn child, she's exercising her constitutional right to privacy.'

"Female infidelity is on the rise"

MrReality · 17 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Rudov, the author of 'The No Nonsense Man' has revealed a very disturbing rise in female infidelity.

He says: "Isn't it amazing that yet more evidence comes along to buttress the premise of my book, The Man's No-Nonsense Guide to Women: How to Succeed in Romance on Planet Earth, that men and women are virtually the same. No, it's not amazing. I've been telling you this for over one year." Read the article here.

Mr. Rudov has also revealed a website being promoted by major corporations that 'encourage women to cheat' you can find this site here.

Teacher Accused Of Having Sex With Student, 13

Matt · 18 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'(WCCO) A middle school teacher in Prescott, Wis. has been fired and the Pierce County Sheriff is investigating claims she had sex with a 13-year-old student.
...
The 38-year-old woman was a substitute at Prescott Middle School.

The student's father said he found the two having a middle of the night rendezvous together at the teacher's home after the boy stole his mother's car.

Sources said the woman's husband and 13-year-old daughter were home at the time.'

Must-see Humor

Matt · 18 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Every now and then, we have to laugh (or we'll cry, right)? I am betting these two pieces will send more than a few of you to the floor laughing.

No Sex Tonight (on craigslist.com)

Spoiled Rotten (on misanthropic-bitch.com)

Some of you may be blocked at work for these sites, so if so I'll suggest you wait to look at home. It's worth it though. Enjoy!

U.S. Circumcision Rate Drops

anthony · 18 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"According to a study by the National Health and Social Life Survey, the U.S. circumcision rate peaked at nearly 90 percent in the early 1960s but began dropping in the '70s. By 2004, the most recent year for which government figures are available, about 57 percent of all male newborns delivered in hospitals were circumcised. In some states, the rate is well below 50 percent.
...
The debate escalated in February, when studies found that heterosexual men in Africa who were circumcised had HIV infection rates up to 60 percent lower than uncircumcised men. Because of those studies, the American Academy of Pediatrics is taking another look at its policy."

Duke Reaches Settlement With Players

anthony · 18 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Duke University has reached an undisclosed financial settlement with three former lacrosse players falsely accused of rape, the school said Monday.
...
"We welcomed their exoneration and deeply regret the difficult year they and their families have had to endure," the school said in a statement. "These young men and their families have been the subject of intense scrutiny that has taken a heavy toll."'

England: Sex with a woman who is drunk may soon be rape

anthony · 18 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

This is an update from a story submitted few months ago.

Excerpt:

"Men who have sex with drunken women risk being convicted of rape - even if they appear to have given consent.

Ministers will unveil the controversial proposals this week in a bid to boost conviction rates for sex offences and bring more 'date rapists' to justice.
...
If a woman is deemed to have consumed so much alcohol that she is incapable of agreeing to make love, the man would be far more likely to be convicted of rape."

Who's to blame for divorce epidemic?

anthony · 18 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Author Stephen Baskerville, PhD., explores:

Why the "deadbeat dad" is not only a myth but a hoax, the creation of government officials and lawyers who plunder parents whose children they have taken away

How hysterical propaganda about domestic violence is destroying families, endangering children, and making criminals of innocent parents

The real causes of child abuse and how the abuse industry willfully ignores them

What drives the rash of "parental kidnappings

How family courts operate as if there is no Bill of Rights, denying parents their constitutional legal protections'

Study: Circumcision Removes Most Sensitive Parts

anthony · 18 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'For circumcised penises, the most sensitive region was the circumcision scar on the underside of the penis, the researchers found. For uncircumcised penises, the areas most receptive to pressure were five regions normally removed during circumcision—all of which were more sensitive than the most sensitive part of the circumcised penis.
...
Recent studies have also shown that circumcision can lower the risks of HIV infection by as much as 60 percent in sex between males and females.

But Robert Van Howe, a study team member at Michigan State University, thinks such claims are somewhat overblown. “The [health benefits] that have been consistently shown are very small, and there are less aggressive, less invasive, less expensive ways of dealing with the problems [circumcision] is supposed to address,” Van Howe told LiveScience.
...
Some previous studies found that circumcision led to little, if any, decrease in penile sensitivity, but Sorrells and his colleagues say such findings are suspect because many are based on self-reports from men who were circumcised to correct medical problems.'

Reproductive Choice – It's Not Just for Women Anymore

anthony · 18 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"Can the body of one person be used against their will to satisfy the desires of another? This is a simple question which no person who believes in justice, liberty or individual rights could possibly answer in the affirmative. Indeed, it is a question long settled with respect to all identifiable groups in the United States save one (men). Since the abolition of the institution of slavery, men have been exempted from this simple principle in at least two areas – the draft and reproductive freedom. The latter issue is before us at this time in the case of Roman v. Roman, now before the Texas Supreme Court."

6-YO Boy is Youngest Anorexic

Matt · 19 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Eating disorders are now striking little boys more often than little girls. Story here. Excerpt:

'A six-year-old is the youngest boy to be treated for anorexia, a study reveals today. It also shows more young boys than girls are being treated for eating disorders such as anorexia.

Figures show 51 hospital admissions last year of boys under 11 with eating disorders and 36 admissions of girls.
...
Lib- Dem MP Sarah Teather, who obtained the NHS figures, said: "Young people are under pressure from all sides these days.

"It is time for a debate about how childhood is changing and politicians should be concerned about the type of issues teenagers are having to deal with at a younger and younger age."'

Notice when the MP Teather is using an "inclusive" reference to children when there is evidence to show there is a problem among boys. Does she do the same when the topic includes largely or only girls?

Appellate court denies reimbursement to paternity fraud victim

Matt · 19 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Posted for Marc A.:
Appellate court denies reimbursement to paternity fraud victim; 1 judge suggests changing the law

---

In their decision (.doc file), the Court of Appeal just upheld the trial court's refusal to order the County of L.A. to reimburse paternity fraud victim Taron James, an NCFM-LA member. The denial of reimbursement is based on the statuary language. Justice Rubin, one of the 3 judges, wrote a concurring opinion in which he recongizes the fundamental injustice and suggests that the California Legislature change the law to allow reimbursement for men like Taron, who paid money to and would be reimbursed by the County (welfare reimbursement) rather than the mother.

Taron denied paternity from the start and fought this for over ten years while in a financial and psychological prison. The mom first sought benefits from the Navy while Taron was deployed in the Gulf War. Taron denied paternity and the Navy requested a paternity test from the mom, saying Taron would pay for it. The mom did not pursue the claim further but instead collected welfare from L.A. County, which Taron spent the next 10+ years paying for. Even after DNA excluded him as the dad, the County garnisheed his paychecks, his tax returns and unemployment.

In 2003, NCFM-LA sponsored Senate Bill 1030 to protect people like Taron. In response, Child Support Services helped introduce a competing bill, Assembly Bill 252 ("AB252"), which was later amended into a compromise bill, passed and became effective January 1, 2005, codifying Family Code §§ 7646-7649. This has relieved scores of men like Taron from false paternity judgments. But it still is not as strong as it should be. It gives judges too much discretion and denies reimbursement even in cases like Taron's, where, as Justice Rubin recognizes, reimbursement should be given.

According to the American Association of Blood Banks, out of about 300,000 DNA paternity tests reported yearly by accredited labs, 30% exclude the man as the father (http://www.ncfmla.org/pdf/na-fraud.pdf).
CBS News reported this same statistic in this video of Bert Riddick and NCFM-LA.

The appellate court failed to mention that the lower court specifically found Taron was a victim of fraud. The appellate court also falsely says Taron was served when in fact he was not.

We are considering seeking California Supreme Court review. Meanwhile, we're mindful of all the other paternity fraud victims, many of whom have come to us for help. We're hoping for further legislative changes in the future, such as the changes Justice Ruben suggests.

Marc E. Angelucci
President
Los Angeles chapter
National Coalition of Free Men

Trojan Condoms: Men are pigs if they don't wear a Trojan

anthony · 20 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Get ready for this advertisement (video). Several major TV networks have refused to show the ad.

American Academy of Pediatrics reconsiders policy on circumcision

anthony · 20 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The influential American Academy of Pediatrics is reviewing its neutral stance on circumcision following recent studies showing the procedure may have reduced HIV infection rates in African men.
...
Although the AAP has never strongly endorsed or repudiated circumcision, the organization has gone back and forth on the issue for decades. Most recently, in 1999, the AAP issued a statement that neither endorsed nor discouraged circumcision, noting that the surgery - particularly when performed without painkillers - resulted in "pain and physiologic stress.

Existing scientific evidence demonstrates potential medical benefits of newborn male circumcision," the Elk Grove Village, Ill.-based AAP states. "However, these data are not sufficient to recommend routine neonatal circumcision."'

Kathleen Parker on Nifong's legacy, feminism's shame

Roy · 20 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The always excellent Kathleen Parker writes today in Jewish World Review that:

'Nifong's legacy, which ultimately may hurt women more than the falsely accused men, will be long-lived. And the politically correct culture that allowed his charade to persist remains securely in place … It is tempting to convince oneself that Nifong's banishment means that all is right in the Dukedom. Doubtless, many among Duke's faculty and administration, as well as random race-baiters, campus feminists, various reporters, commentators and assorted armchair prosecutors would prefer that no one remember their roles in advancing the Nifong farce.'

"Male Circumcision Overstated As Prevention Tool Against AIDS"

Acksiom · 21 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

"In new academic research published today in the online, open-access, peer-reviewed scientific journal PLoS ONE, male circumcision is found to be much less important as a deterrent to the global AIDS pandemic than previously thought. The author, John R. Talbott, has conducted statistical empirical research across 77 countries of the world and has uncovered some surprising results."

The essential critical point is that the data in previous pro-mutilation/anti-male publications was erroneously manipulated to reflect relative national populations, while nothing was done to address the confounding problem of the signficantly differing rates of heterosexual prostitution between nations.

When the artificial weighting by relative population is removed, however, the apparent correlation between routine and ritual male genital mutilation and a potentially longer amount of time before AIDS/HIV+ infection disappears.

Read the rest of this Medical News Today article HERE.

Read Talbott's full PLoS article HERE.

Hillary's "Gatekeepers" Female to a Woman

Matt · 21 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

What do all of Hillary Clinton's most trusted advisors all have in common? All of them are female, without exception. Is there sex discrimination at work here? You be the judge. Story here. Excerpt:

"Fifteen years after Clinton first brought these women together at the White House, the "board" has officially reconvened to help map her unprecedented effort to follow in her husband's footsteps. They are acutely aware their work is making history. Once seen as a tight little sorority, today the group -- happily self-described as "Hillaryland"-- is at the center of a front-running presidential campaign. Never have so many women operated at such a high level in one campaign, working with a discipline and a loyalty and a legendary secrecy rarely seen at this level of American politics."

Los Angeles County Fraud Unit Uncovers MAJOR Child Support Scandal!

AbusedFather · 22 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The following information may be of MAJOR interest to anyone who is being abused by the Los Angeles County Child Support Services Deparment. The Los Angeles County Fraud Unit has just uncovered as MASSIVE scandal as a direct result of a complaint I filed against the Los Angeles County Child Support Services Department. The following is a press release that I've sent to as many newspapers, radio stations, and television studios that I can find in the Los Angeles/Orange County area. While the LA County Fraud Unit investigation is not over, I strongly urge ALL of you to contact them and file a report on their web site (http://www.lacountyfraud.com/) Click on the "Report Fraud" button to file your report! It's time to bombard LA County with complaints from everyone who has been harmed. Don't wait - file today! Also, don't forget to spread the word!

Fraud Unit Uncovers Sandal:

Los Angeles County Child Support Computer System has Major Deficiencies

. . .harming millions of innocent men

As part of an investigation into the ongoing corruption at the Los Angeles County Child Support Services Department, in which they have been illegally seizing the wages, as well as fraudulently reporting arrearages on the credit report of a father who has always paid his child support on time and in full, the Los Angeles County Fraud Unit (Department of Auditor-Controller, Office of County Investigations, located on the Internet at: (http://www.lacountyfraud.com)). That complaint resulted in an investigation being opened against them. As a result, the Fraud Unit has just uncovered another huge scandal in which it appears that millions of innocent fathers are literally being abused by LACCSSD. According to a voice-mail message, the Los Angeles County Fraud Unit informed the father that:

“. . .the Child Support Department has a major deficiency in their computer reconciling system it looks they have a large lag time of about two or three months which is why they are not showing any of your payments for the last two or three months”

The Los Angeles County Fraud Unit has also stated that they are “going to sit down with them [LACCSSD] in the next week or so and we’re going to recommend some major overhauls to their computer systems.”

In other words it is taking three months (or longer) for child support payments to be recorded by the county, while, at the same time, the County is viciously seizing the wages of innocent men who have; indeed, paid their child support. As noted, this scam has potentially impacted millions of innocent men who are having their wages garnished, tax refunds stolen, credit reports destroyed, professional licenses revoked, etc., etc. due to the ongoing incompetence at the Los Angeles County Child Support Services Department.

In the case of the father who made the initial report to the Los Angeles County Fraud Unit, LACCSSD has severely harassed him for the past year and a half by not only literally defying court orders (available upon request) that they cease and desist their fraudulent collection actions against him as well as determined, a year ago, that the father had overpaid his child support, but they also:

1. Illegally garnished his wages
2. Tried to have his teaching credentials revoked
3. Stole unemployment checks when he was laid off (he only works part-time because he is on disability)
4. Fraudulently reported him as being 90 days in arrears to the credit bureaus and have refused to correct them. (Just yesterday, another one of LACCSSD’s unethical attorney’s, Chris Stark, tried to blackmail and extort more money from that father by stating that LACCSSD would remove the negative credit ratings if he paid an additional $1400 which he did not owe (in fact, LACCSSD has stolen so much from the father that they owe him money). A complaint of blackmail and extortion has just been filed against Stark with the California Bar Association.

5. Stole two years worth of tax refunds
6. Six of LACCSSD's shysters (Lori A. Cruz, Dennis Coe, Deborah Echeverria, Alex Hunyh, Lisa Garrett, Cris Stark) have literally refused (some for more than a year) to respond to demands for a full accounting made by both the father and his attorney.

All of these were done in light of the fact that the father had significantly overpaid his support (much of which was stolen from him as a direct result of LACCSSD's vicious and unfounded collection activities). The father will provide members of the news media with full documentation (canceled checks, pay stubs, tax documents, credit reports, etc.) regarding payments made (or stolen) by LACCSSD along with the extortion letter just sent by LACCSSD's attorney, Chris Stark.

This latest scam is just one of many resulting from the unethical and illegal conduct of LACCSSD against innocent men. In a related matter, the United States District Court (Frank Mayer v. California Health and Human Services Agency et. al. - Case Number 2:05-cv-07195-JFW-SS) that LACCSSD had fraudulently damaged Mr. Mayer's credit report and subsequently refused to correct it. Based upon this latest news, it is conceivable that millions of men are being subjected to the same treatment.

"Indoctrinate U" takes on PCness on Campus

Matt · 22 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I just want folks to be aware of a grassroots movement to spread the word about what PCness is doing to the atmosphere and level of intellectual freedom on US (and other) college campuses. Some daring people have made a documentary on the topic. You can see a trailer for it here and request a local screening here. From the site:

"Speech codes. Censorship. Enforced political conformity. Hostility to diversity of opinion. Sensitivity training. We usually associate such things with the worst excesses of fascism and communism, not with the American universities that nurtured the free speech movement. But American higher education bears a disturbing resemblance to the totalitarian societies that are anathema to our nation's ideal of liberty. Evan Coyne Maloney's documentary film, Indoctrinate U, reveals the breathtaking institutional intolerance you won't read about in the glossy marketing brochures of Harvard, Berkeley, Michigan, Yale, and hundreds of other American colleges and universities."

White boys 'let down by education system'

AngryMan · 22 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'White boys are being turned into an unemployable underclass - as they fall behind children from other racial groups at school, new research shows.
...
White British pupils make up more than three quarters of low achievers in English schools and do worse than children from other ethnic groups with similar economic backgrounds, according to the study. The large majority of under-performers are boys.
...
There is a clear link between failure at school and a life of crime, the authors say. "Only about a fifth of the lowest achievers go on to a further education college and acquire any other sort of education or training.'

Nifong Faces Contempt Hearing

Matt · 23 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'(CNN) -- Three former Duke University lacrosse players are seeking criminal contempt of court charges against Mike Nifong, the disbarred prosecutor who pursued a flawed rape case against them.

In legal papers filed Friday, the exonerated players also asked a judge to order Nifong to pay their legal bills.
...
Besides asking that Nifong be held in criminal contempt and forced to pay costs associated with the players' defenses, the motion asks the court for any other disciplinary action it deems appropriate.

Possible penalties for criminal contempt include jail time or a fine.'

Boy in Trouble for Touching Girlfriend during Lunch

Matt · 23 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I wonder if they are as aggressive at enforcement with the girls? Story here. Excerpt:

'Fairfax County middle school student Hal Beaulieu hopped up from his lunch table one day a few months ago, sat next to his girlfriend and slipped his arm around her shoulder. That landed him a trip to the school office.

Among his crimes: hugging.

All touching -- not only fighting or inappropriate touching -- is against the rules at Kilmer Middle School in Vienna. Hand-holding, handshakes and high-fives? Banned. The rule has been conveyed to students this way: "NO PHYSICAL CONTACT!!!!!"

...

Hal's troubles began one day in March when he got up from his assigned cafeteria table and went to a nearby table where his then-girlfriend was sitting. He admits he broke one rule -- getting up from his assigned table without permission -- and he accepts a reprimand for that. "The table thing, I'm guilty," he said.

A school security officer spotted the hug and sent Hal to the office, where he was cited for two infractions. He was warned that a third misstep could lead to in-school suspension or detention.'

Trojan "Evolve" Theme Front of Trojan Condoms website - Time for Action!

Matt · 24 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

If you think the "Evolve, men!" theme from Trojan is limited only to an ad or a special sub-site, think again. Go to the Trojans main site at http://www.trojancondoms.com/ and have a look. 'Pigs-to-men if you use Trojans Evolve' is the theme from start to finish.

MANN calls on men and women to boycott utterly Trojan brand condoms and to let them know just why you are doing so. The Trojans brand is owned by Church & Dwight Co. (NYSE ticker: CHD), who can be contacted here. On that page, in the "Visit our Websites" drop-down box, note the other brands owned by C&D; perhaps they could use some time on the shelf as well.

FYI, CBS and Fox have rejected the ad (story here.) Please contact them (CBS, Fox [snail mail only)] and thank them for standing up to this sort of thing. However, note:

"The ad will run on ABC, NBC and nine cable stations, including MTV, Comedy Central and Cartoon Network's Adult Swim. In addition, print ads will appear in 11 magazines, including Cosmopolitan and Glamour, and on seven Web sites. All of the ads highlight a Web site trojanevolve.com, the Times reports."

Please let ABC, et al., know how you feel; contact links:
ABC
NBC
MTV
Comedy Central Adult Swim

New Book by Herb Goldberg Available

Anonymous · 24 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

What Men Still Don't Know About Women, Relationships, and Love

"In his first book in fifteen years, the author of the classic book on men, The Hazards of Being Male, explores the relationship dilemmas of contemporary men and women. What Men Still Don't Know About Women, Relationships, and Love uniquely addresses the timeless complexity of love and relationships. It is not uncommon for contemporary men to believe that they have done everything right in a relationship, only to find that even their best intentions have failed them. Dr. Herb Goldberg attempts to bridge the gap between a man's naturally distancing personality and his need for a close relationship. Explanations are given as to why it is actually men who take longer to get over a failed relationship and why a man's true relationship enemy is one that lies deep within himself. Many of the paradoxes and conundrums of men's relationship experiences are explored, with case histories presented and guidelines for change offered."

More on FOX, CBS Rejecting 'Evolve' Commercial

anthony · 25 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

As Matt mentioned, FOX and CBS have rejected the commercial. Several reasons are cited in the article, but nothing about misandry or media male bashing. Excerpt:

"Jim Daniels, vice president for marketing at Trojan, said the ad is more expensive than any previous campaigns, but he declined to give a specific amount. Daniels said the company's goal is to "dramatically increase" condom use in the U.S. "The 'Evolve' ad does a nice job of being humorous, but it's also a serious call to action," Daniels said, adding, "The pigs are a symbol of irresponsible sexual behavior and are juxtaposed with the condom as a responsible symbol of respect for oneself and one's partner"

So, a pig walks into a bar... by Tracy Clark-Flory

anthony · 25 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"I was shocked to find that there's plenty about the ad that actually offends my own sensibilities. For starters: The depiction of men as pigs. I can understand the idea behind it -- that men who do not respect their partners enough to protect them from pregnancy or disease are pigs. But filling an entire bar with the nastiest of male stereotypes implies that almost all men are pigs. I'm also not too hot about the underlying message that men are solely responsible for condom use."

Man pays $311,491 child support bill to get passport renewed

anthony · 25 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Los Angeles County officials say a deadbeat dad who tried to renew his passport while stuck in Hong Kong was forced to pay a $311,491 child support bill.

The man, whose name was not released, was forced by federal authorities to pay the amount -- thought to be the largest single child and spousal support payment ever made in the United States -- or risk losing his passport, effectively trapping him in Hong Kong, the Los Angeles Times reported Friday."

Wendy McElroy: "A conscientious objector in the Gender War"

anthony · 25 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"To counter male control of the dialogue, such feminists seek to suppress politically incorrect words and ideas. In the workplace, laws such as those against verbal sexual harassment control words. In academia, ideas are regulated by language codes which categorize criticism or "attacks" on categories of human beings -- other than white males -- as hate speech. Even children's textbooks are edited to remove politically incorrect references."

"In Praise Of Skinned Knees And Grubby Faces"

badgerb · 25 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In Praise Of Skinned Knees And Grubby Faces
Excerpt:

'When I was a teacher, I asked my head of department why every textbook seemed to have a girl achieving her dream of being a carpenter while the boys were morons. She replied that boys had had it their own way for too long, and now it was the girls' turn. Ouch.'

Jailed for waving at my daughter

AngryMan · 26 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Then his former wife was granted an injunction stopping him even gesturing to his children as they passed. 'It was incredible. She said it was harassment, and the court believed her. But I carried on waving.
...
'I was damned if I was going to be prevented from waving at my own children. Naively, maybe, I assumed the whole business would be cleared up at the next court hearing.'

It wasn't. Instead, Mark left that courtroom in handcuffs, sentenced to four months, having been told that waving was tantamount to stalking his ex. He couldn't believe what was happening."

Fathers' rights campaigner is jailed in child support battle

AngryMan · 26 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A legal clerk who refuses to pay child support to his ex-wife because their three teenage sons spend half their time with him has been jailed.

Michael Cox, 43, a prominent member of Fathers for Justice, has failed to pay maintenance for 12 years because he claims the system is "oppressive, unjust and discriminatory" towards men.

...

Mr Cox is paid nothing for the time he looks after his three teenage boys, but the Child Support Agency demands he pay their mother £365 a month for the time they are with her."

Bill banning teacher-student sex heads to full Senate

anthony · 26 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'"This is certainly not limited to male teachers," Downs said, because many recent reports of teachers having sex with students involved female teachers. "It says to a teacher, male or female, 'You'd better keep your hands off or there will be serious consequences."'

Female Teacher Accused of Sex With Male Student Told Teen to Deny Relationship

anthony · 26 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"An Arizona female teacher charged with having a consensual sexual relationship with a 16-year-old student was caught on tape telling the teen to deny the affair to his parents and asking her husband if he wanted to have children with her when the whole "mess" blows over.

Jennifer Mally, a 26-year-old high school English teacher and cheerleading coach at Paradise Valley High School in Phoenix, was indicted on 17 counts of sexual misconduct with a minor stemming from what police described in court documents as a long-term sexual relationship."

"The Mirage of Professional Gender Equality": By David R. Butcher

anthony · 26 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

The Woman's Century? Never heard that one, but nothing surprises me anymore. Notice the links towards the end of the article. Excerpt:

"The 21st century has been called the Woman's Century. Hillary Clinton is running for President, women are playing stronger roles in the workplace and the female profile is rising in many professional fields. So why does no one seem shocked that gender discrimination still lingers in the workplace today?"

Women Arrested, Accused Of Bathroom Sex In Front Of Children

Matt · 26 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Yep, women never do the kinds of perverted things men are accused of. No way. Uh-huh.

Story here. Excerpt:

'Two women in Seminole County, Fla., are accused of performing sex acts in front of children at a community pool bathroom while a third woman photographed them, according to a police report.
...
A woman told police that she was walking into the bathroom with her children, and noticed Hernandez and Jimenez naked and apparently performing oral sex. She said another woman was photographing the acts.

The pregnant mother said she tried to leave the area with her children but the women would not let her leave. She said she was threatened not to call the police.
...
Hernandez and Jimenez face lewd and lascivious exhibition charges as well as battery on a pregnant person, false imprisonment of an adult and child under 13 years old.'

UK: New legislation means mothers will soon be forced to register the name of their child's father

Matt · 26 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The consequences of feminism speak for themselves. Article here. Excerpt:

'Watching Mark playing with our children is simply wonderful. He'd do anything for them and that makes our family feel secure and special.

Yet the relationship he has with Ellie and Harvey often makes me pine for the father figure I never had.

Not only did I grow up without a father, my mother never even told him she was pregnant with me - as far as he is concerned, I simply don't exist.

After three decades, Mum thinks I should accept this situation and get on with my life, but I've felt the stigma of being fatherless all my life. I resent the fact she never gave him the chance to be named on my birth certificate.'

Woman shoots husband in the head, tries to cover it up

GaryB · 28 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The BBC reports here on a guy who went to hospital with a severe headache - only to find he'd been shot.

"Michael Moylan, 45, from the state of Florida, is quoted as saying he had woken up with a headache so severe he thought it was caused by an aneurysm.

His wife, April, took him to hospital but left when the bullet was found. She was arrested later over the shooting, but said it was an accident. "

Hey that's unusual - a woman being violent, shooting a man whilst he slept then taking zero responsibility for it - haven't seen THAT before...

Man forced to pay again, 30 years after divorcing unfaithful wife

AngryMan · 28 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A wealthy retired builder was ordered to pay more money to the woman he divorced nearly 30 years ago after a judge heard she had "fallen on hard times", the Court of Appeal was told yesterday.

Dennis North, 70, was divorced from his first wife Jean, 61, in 1978 - a year after finding out she was having an affair with the man she later went to live with.

...

A district judge awarded her a lump sum of £202,000 in April last year despite agreeing that Mrs North's money troubles had nothing to do with her former husband and he had no further responsibility towards her.'

Boys and the Boy Crisis Topics

anthony · 29 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This is a schedule of topics submitted by the individuals involved with the upcoming Boy Crisis Conference on July 13-14, 2007 in Washington, DC. There is a ton of information regarding issues that are vital towards our cause.

--
Ed. note: This booklet has been around since the first conference. The topics in it cover men's issues generally, though not exhaustively. Still, it serves as a good primer when someone asks "what are men's issues and why care?"

"Equal sexes before the law"

anthony · 30 June 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"In broader terms, this scandal should stimulate a reappraisal of gender favoritism in our criminal justice system. The scales of justice are out of balance. At a time when feminist activists who exploit these kinds of issues demand equal treatment for women in combat, they also insist on preferences and deference for "the weaker sex" when women accuse men of crimes."

Australia: One-sex political party what women want

anthony · 1 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A new political party has been launched just for women - and its NSW founder pledges to inject more "reality" into federal politics.

The idea of a single-sex party has already attracted controversy - with critics claiming it is sexist.
...
One woman will run for the party in the Senate in each state and territory, and a handful of women will run in key marginal House of Representative seats."

South Africa passes partial ban on circumcision for children under 16

Anonymous · 2 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

I say partial ban because exemptions exist for traditions and religious purposes. Still a move in the right direction. Also to my knowledge South Africa doesn't widely practice female circumcision, so this seems legitimately aimed towards males. Excerpt:

'Under 16s may not be tested for virginity or be circumcised, unless required by tradition or religion. A child is now regarded as an adult at 18, and no longer 21. This means 18-year-olds can now get into contractual agreements without parental consent. The section dealing with corporal punishment requires regulations and the act should be complete by March next year.'

Fox covers Title IX Controversy

Anonymous · 3 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This is a video report on Fox covering Title IX.

Happy Fourth of July!

Tony

Babysitter murders baby girl, blames boyfriend

AngryMan · 3 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A baby girl died at the hands of her babysitter after suffering injuries consistent with being swung and thrown against a wall, a court has heard.

Lynn Jeffrey, 37, of Nelson, Lancashire, is accused of murdering 11-month-old Courtney Ann Shales in a 'brutal and callous attack'.

...

Ms Jeffrey was arrested at the hospital and when interviewed by police maintained the account that Courtney had fallen down the stairs.

Mr O'Byrne said her account had since changed and she was now saying that Mr Elliott inflicted the injuries.

Tony Cross QC, cross examining, suggested that Mr Elliot had been in an aggressive mood because he had been asked to babysit."

NOW Prez Says More Female Execs = Greater Profits

Roy · 3 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

In a recent address promoting greater media diversity, N.O.W.'s president Kim Gandy claims that simply having more women in management creates increased profits:

'"And as you see in any business … more women in management increases the bottom line for stockholders. ... Let's face it --the men behind the curtain -- in this case the white men behind the curtain -- are most comfortable hiring people who look, and talk, and think just like them. And that's not good for the rest of us.

... having more women owners, executives, news directors and so on -- is its own reward for the women you are employing and for their families and for society as a whole. ... But the icing on the cake is that, in the end, employing more women in the media creates a more vibrant public marketplace of ideas."'

Hmmm. If that were true, why would any intelligent capitalist firm wishing to maximize profits employ male managers? (Also note Gandy's blatant sexism, racism, and complete lack of credible supporting data for her assertions ...)

Interview on Radio Lia Show regarding EQUAL Parenting Bike Trek available

Anonymous · 4 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Many of you asked when we would finally get the Radio Lia interview up on DaddyBlogger.com and we finally have it. Special thanks to Lia for sending a copy of the interview to both Robb Mackenzie and Robert Pedersen! For those of you not familiar with the Radio Lia show - this is a radio show heard nationwide and Lia has even been awarded a CMA Award for "Broadcast Personality of the Year". Her show is extremely popular for a reason and it is spreading like a wildfire across this country!

Listen to the unedited radio interview at DaddyBlogger.

Italy: No Men Allowed on Beach

Matt · 4 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

And the list grows of women-only places created with government sanction...

Story here. Excerpt:

'And it happens all the time. Boy meets girl and boy annoys girl. So, the Italians have enacted an interesting solution to this problem. They have created a beach strictly for women. No men, children or loud disco music are allowed.
...
Women can enjoy the sun, sea and sand without the lustful leers of men.
...
The beach does have one man.

"The lifeguard must be a man," Ravaglio said in a foreign newspaper interview. "You clearly need a man to save women in the sea. It's a question of muscles."'

Teenage Violence Linked To Later Domestic Violence

AngryMan · 4 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Researchers tracing the development of violent behavior have found a link between teenage violence and domestic violence. The study also found no independent link between an individual's use of alcohol or drugs and committing domestic violence. In addition it showed that nearly twice as many women as men said they perpetrated domestic violence in the past year. Story here.

New Zealand: If You Report Your Wife's Attacks on You, They Take Away Your Kids

anthony · 5 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Report here. Excerpt:

"The police appear reluctant to leave the children in the father's care, even though he's the victim of the alleged assault, with the result that the father refuses to make a statement, thus allowing the children to stay at home and the mother to escape the consequences of her actions.

"If the genders were reversed," says Mrs Turner, "and the father was charged with assaulting the mother, I'm certain the police would have no hesitation in locking up Dad and leaving the children with Mum."

Carey Roberts: Equal Pay for Equal Work at Wimbledon?

anthony · 5 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'So aficionados who wanted to see the quarter finals at Wimbledon ponied up $3,590 to see the men, compared to only $1,590 to see the women. Even at twice the price, the men's tickets sold out sooner.

Sports columnist Alan Mascarenhas has concluded that by almost all criteria, "women's tennis is an inferior product." So if the ladies are bringing in far less revenue but taking home just as much money as the guys, where is their money coming from?

You guessed it -- out of the men's pockets.

So next time you see Hillary climb on to her equal-pay-for-equal-work soapbox, let's ask her this question: "Does three equal five?"'

England: Do primary schools let boys down?

anthony · 5 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"'The teaching profession in primaries is dominated by women who, with the best will in the world, will tend to deliver a larger proportion of the curriculum in teaching styles that make most sense to them - and therefore favour the girls.'
...
Some experts suggest that teachers are deliberately getting pupils labelled as having special needs with reading, for example, because it is an easy way of getting a difficult child out of the classroom for a while."

"Boys Should Be Girls" by Dick Meyer

anthony · 5 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"In the big picture, I don't see that this is any special problem. I know there is a lot of worrying going on, though. There's even a view that colleges practice covert affirmative action for boys just to get them up to the unimpressive current levels. If women are better at school or if they develop faster, why is that a problem society needs to fiddle with? Except for historical bias against women educationally, they probably would have been in the majority ever since Socrates gave tutorials."

--

Ed. note: Can't seem to locate his email address. Anyone know it?

How The Women's Movement Taught Women to Hate Men by Erin Pizzey

anthony · 5 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"I got a letter from the women's liberation office, throwing me out and banning me from attending any of the collectives. The so-called women's liberation' movement spread like a cancer across the English chattering classes. I visited the houses of feminist women with my son who carried his action man toys. In their houses there was no vestige of anything 'boyish' at all. No Tonka trucks, no boys toys — nothing that could encourage a boy to think of himself as masculine. The whole idea of men and masculinity in those houses, we considered disgusting. We, the mothers, sat around the kitchen tables rearranging the world according to Marx."

Another Man Maimed By A Woman, Another "Cute" Headline, Another Slap On The Wrist

Anonymous · 6 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

After blinding her boyfriend by stabbing him in the left eye six years ago, the same woman stabbed him in both eyes earlier this year. The latest pair of attacks damaged his vision in the one eye she spared during the first attack and drew blood from the eye she destroyed six years ago. Story here.

Notice the "cute" headline? Or the fact that the woman only received a 6-month sentence for blinding the man in one eye and reducing his vision 20% in the other in a total of three attacks? Or that the courts chose to ignore a clear pattern of domestic violence resulting in grave injuries over a period of years when passing sentence on the woman?

Yeah, I'm sure that 6-month sentence will send a message - the same message it sends when the media chooses to make the murder, mutilation and maiming of men by their wives and girlfriends a joke. How anyone could expect men to take violence against women any more seriously than women are expected to take violence against men is beyond me.

Anti-Male Gadget attached to toilet seats in Germany

MrReality · 6 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The female activists are at it again--with their war on men--and this time they have even invaded public bathrooms. That's right PUBLIC bathrooms for MEN are being haunted by a new device known as Spuk which says in a rather rude voice(once the toilet seat is lifted) "Hey, stand-peeing is not allowed here and will be punished with fines, so if you don't want any trouble, you'd best sit down" or "Excuse me, but there's a penalty for peeing while standing in this house," it warns culprits. "You'd better not risk any problems and sit down!"

If the customer is adamant about retaining his right to use the bathroom the way men usually do he gets this(in a female flight attendants voice): "We welcome you aboard Never Come Back Airlines," the voice says. "We'd like to ask our male passengers in particular to sit down, buckle up and refrain from smoking."

The small gadget is made to look like a ghost. You can read more on Spuk (and see the actual gadget which fits under the toilet seat lid) here.

UK: Police apologize to male rape victim

anthony · 6 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"South Wales Police yesterday apologised to a male rape victim after the Independent Police Complaints Commission ruled officers did not at first appreciate the seriousness of the man's allegation.
...
By failing to properly preserve the potential crime scene South Wales Police did not serve Mr Cole or the people of South Wales well in this instance."

The report found an officer who should have attended the scene did not do so, another "was not conscientious and diligent" and another did not appreciate the seriousness of the allegation at first."

Father's case may be landmark legal matter

Anonymous · 6 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'LONDON, July 4 (UPI) -- An unmarried Irish father's request to the British High Court for the return of his sons may have longstanding legal implications in his native land.
...
The man alleges his former wife took their 2-year-old twin sons to Britain without his consent and in violation of Hague Convention terms.
...
Mr. G argued he was not given the opportunity to seek guardianship rights under Irish law before his ex-wife took the children out of the country.'

Israel: Govt. Committee To Look Into False Accusations

mcp · 7 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

An Israeli Knesset (parliament) committee has decided to investigate whether women who make false accusations go unpunished. Excerpt:

'"We contend that the police do nothing when it comes to light that women are lying in their accusations," said Gil Ronen, head of a group called Familists, which asked for Wednesday's meeting to follow up a similar one held last year.

Ronen said the failure to prosecute these women was particularly common in divorce proceedings, where, he said "lawyers advise their female clients to do this in order to win [key elements] in divorce cases."
...
"Many of these men's groups claims of discrimination are baseless," Kramer told the Post following the meeting. ...

She said she hoped that discussing the issue in an official forum would not deter female victims of rape and sexual assault from coming forward in the future.'

Male or female factor infertility -- men suffer just the same

Anonymous · 7 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Surprise, surprise: infertile men suffer, too. You would easily find out if you only cared to ask them.

From Eurekalert:

Lyon, France: Although most psychosocial research into infertility is centred round the unhappiness it causes women, men suffer just as much*, a scientist will tell the 23rd annual conference of the European Society of Human Reproduction and Embryology today (Wednesday 4 July). [...] "Perhaps surprisingly, though, we found that men in all four groups suffered equally. Infertile people appear to rely particularly on their social environment for support, and this seems to deteriorate over time. Couples should be made aware of the possible decline in their social support network and encouraged to organise support systems that no not solely include close friends and family."*

Man Arrested After Telling Women They Were 'Extremely Beautiful'

mens_issues · 7 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

How horrible! A MAN gasp told two different women they were beautiful. We've got to put these nasty predators in jail so they won't be a threat anymore.

Steve

US woman hired lover to kill Indian hubby

arindamp · 8 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"AKRON, OHIO: An American woman accused of offering her lover a share of her husband's multimillion-dollar estate if he would kill the 69-year-old Indian doctor was convicted of murder-for-hire and other charges.

The defence had argued that Donna Moonda's 25-year-old lover, Damian Bradford, had acted alone and that Moonda had tried to revive her doctor husband after Bradford shot him along the Ohio turnpike. Federal prosecutors said the two were in it together and portrayed Moonda as a perpetual liar, thief and drug user.

The 48-year-old former nurse could receive the death penalty or life in prison without parole. Bradford, the key witness, has admitted to shooting Dr Gulam Moonda in the side of the head on May 13, 2005, after his wife pulled over on the turnpike south of Cleveland, supposedly to let her husband take the wheel. The jury also convicted Moonda of interstate stalking and two counts of using or carrying a firearm in the commission of a violent crime."

Video and Additional Links: Equal Parenting Rights - Those who oppose most likely profit from the destruction of families!

Anonymous · 8 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Excellent Associated Content Video (Michigan Democrat Blog) on how those who oppose Equal Parenting most likely profit from the destruction of families and children. Additional links of interest as well.

Kammer's "Good Will Toward Men" Returns to Print

Scott · 8 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Jack Kammer let me know that his book Good Will Toward Men is going to be available again. It was originally published in 1994 but has been out of print for several years. As Mr. Kammer describes, "It's a collection of interviews with women who love, appreciate and understand men -- and who are happy and eager to defend men against the ill-feeling and ridicule that is so strong in America these days." You can buy Good Will Toward Men as either a printed paperback or as a PDF download.

Article: Male sexual harassment is not a joke

anthony · 9 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Many labor experts say men are less likely than women to speak up about such cases of harassment for fear of being mocked by coworkers, and even fewer would take the charges to a government agency and risk widespread knowledge of their plight.

“Many people mistakenly believe that harassment is limited to females,” says Roberta Chinsky Matuson, a human resource expert. “The truth is that this type of experience is just as damaging to men.”'

UK: Howell's School to accept boys

anthony · 9 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Is it me, or is the United Kingdom leading the way regarding the improvement of boys educational needs? In this case, equality in the enrollment process. Excerpt:

'HOWELL'S private preparatory school, in Denbigh, has announced that it will start accepting boys.

From September this year the prep school will be fully co-educational but it is very unlikely that this will ever be the case for the senior school.
...
"School Principal Rachael Hodgson, who joined the school last summer from a co-educational background, believes that the boys will add to the 'Howell's experience', whilst benefiting greatly from it themselves."

"The nursery, has been mixed from its inception; I am so pleased that we will no longer have to say goodbye to our boys. I am delighted that the splendid facilities will be used even more."'

Both kinds of sexism bad for workplace

anthony · 9 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"Here's the reality: I was the token male hired in a department of 13 women. These women resented my recognition from managers and practiced reverse sexism in the process. When I attended department meetings, I was ignored, as my perspective differed from the group-think status quo. I was hired only because of a mandate from human resource management to hire a male."

Wendy McElroy: Did Pedophilia Hysteria Cause Child's Death?

anthony · 9 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"In the article "Day of the dad: paedophilia hysteria leaves men afraid to help," The Telegraph raises a question that applies equally to North America. Have high profile cases of pedophilia created such public hysteria that the average decent human being, especially a man, is now reluctant to approach a child in need?
...
Child abuse must be addressed but it is worse than folly to punish those who help children. Our society is creating Clive Peachey -- decent men who will walk away from a child in need."

"Taken into custody"

anthony · 9 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Very few fathers file for divorce Why? Consider Massachusetts, where custody is granted to the father in only 2.5 percent of cases, but the mother gets it 93.4 percent of the time, and joint custody is permitted in only 4 percent. In a divorce, fathers lose regular access to their children."

Boston Globe: "The Daddy Track"

anthony · 9 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Across the United States, the number of households headed by single fathers almost doubled between 1990 and 2006, from 1.15 million to 2.1 million – or 20 percent of all single-parent families, US Census Bureau figures show. No longer willing to accept that the mother should automatically look after the children – the "pay up and shut up" narrative in divorce – fathers now are competing more aggressively for custody and are winning cases.'

Nebraska rape trial stunt

Anonymous · 10 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

A judge in Omaha has understandably barred a rape accuser from using the words "rape" and "sexual assault" at trial, since these words are inflammatory statements. Their has already been one trial on this case that ended in a hung jury. Of course, the woman wants to bring drama into this trial to make sure there is a conviction this time...so she's pulling a media stunt by saying that she will use these words anyway, defying the judges order. She skews the issue further by saying that she has first amendment rights to say whatever she wants in the courtroom. This article sickens me...yet another possible precedent to make sure rape accusers get to pull out all the stops and make their own rules (with the help of the media) to make sure there are more convictions (based on emotion not facts, of course).

I'm really afraid that she will get everything she wants and more.

Mccormick and Sacks: Obama's fatherhood bill

anthony · 10 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'U.S. Sens. Barack Obama, D-Ill., and Evan Bayh, D-Ind., recently introduced the Responsible Fatherhood and Healthy Families Act of 2007, which they say will address our "national epidemic of absentee fathers."

"Most "deadbeat dads" are low-income men who are unable to meet the demands of the child support system, because of their employment problems. Stepping up already draconian enforcement only makes it more difficult for them to play a meaningful role in their children's lives.'

Female circumcision a problem in Britain

Matt · 11 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

It's great they are taking this problem seriously. I just wish they would take MGM just as seriously, which instead of receiving widespread condemnation is in fact covered by most health insurance plans.

Story here. Excerpt:

'LONDON - Female genital mutilation, commonly associated with parts of Africa and the Middle East, is becoming a growing problem in Britain despite efforts to stamp it out. London's Metropolitan Police, Britain's largest police force, hopes a campaign beginning on Wednesday will highlight that the practice is a crime here.

To make their point, police are offering a $40,000 reward for information leading to Britain's first prosecution for female genital mutilation, Detective Chief Superintendent Alastair Jeffrey said.

In Britain, the problem mostly involves first-generation immigrants from Africa and the Middle East.

Police say they don't have comprehensive statistics about the number of victims. But midwife Comfort Momoh, who specializes in treating them at London hospitals and clinics and who works with police, told the news conference she treats 400 to 500 victims every year.'

UNFPA calls on men to take responsibility for maternal health

Anonymous · 12 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Release here. Excerpt:

"The United Nations Population Fund has chosen "Men as Partners in Maternal Health" as the theme of World Population Day.

UNFPA Executive Director Thoraya Ahmed Obaid says, "Men are equal partners in making the new life that the women will deliver." She added, "Experience shows that male involvement can make a substantial difference when it comes to preserving the health and lives of women and children."

Cheers to promoting men and women working as equal partners and looking after each other's health!

But you have to wonder... When the UN will make calls on women to take "responsibility" for men's health? When will they call on women to let kids can see their dads who make that "substantial difference"?

I couldn't help notice that they said "male involvement" as opposed to "fathers' involvement". Maybe I'm cynical, but I think those words were carefully chosen.

MYTH: Testosterone linked to violence...

Anonymous · 12 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This is exactly the type of posts that we don't need being hummed by feminists. The more these type of outdated posts continue the more it damages the image of men and the important role they play.

Duke University newspaper editorial says Duke owes LAX players nothing

Matt · 12 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Posted for Marc A.:

Item here.

We should send letters to the editor using the feedback link in the upper right. You can also email the editorial board through the article page. Marc

---
Excerpt:

"Duke is getting the short end of the stick on this one. They suffered a major blow to their reputation as a result of this ill-fated party and took the right actions, both when the allegations came to light as well as after it became clear that the young men were innocent of raping the woman.

Duke owes David Evans, Collin Finnerty and Reade Seligmann nothing."

The Political Gender Gap

anthony · 12 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"The angle Democratic candidates are taking is that women lack freedom. According to John Edwards, "Today, too many women are separated from the opportunities of our country because of their gender." Hillary Clinton declares that the Bush "administration has acted to deny freedom to women around the world." The Democratic Party's Web site asserts that, "George W. Bush has said many times that he stands for 'freedom for all Americans' yet his policies and the policies of the Republican Party deny equal rights to women."

So how much less free are women than men? Debates between reasonable people rage on this topic, but we seldom stop to ask women how free they actually feel. When we do so, we get a surprise: It is women, not men, who feel the most freedom in America today."

CNN Covers Paternity Fraud

digitalhermit · 13 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

CNN just put out a story Paternity Fraud in Florida. Excerpt:

"There are no perfect answers," says Susan Paikin of the Center for Support of Families in Delaware. "Deadlines (on contesting Paternity) are imposed so that when families are broken -- the legal process is handled quickly."

Susan Palkin is a hypocrite. While she hems and haws about there being "no perfect answers" and that "deadlines are imposed ... (so that) the legal process is handled quickly", she has little to say regarding deadlines on establishing child support in the first place.

A parent can apply for a court order for back child support at any time up to and even after the child has grown up and left the home. Where is the deadline there? Non-existent. So, in the interest of equality, challenging paternity and child support should have no time limits either.

Also, it makes perfect sense to require mandatory paternity testing at birth. Women often do lie about who is the father - in fact 30% of DNA paternity tests, nearly one in three prove that the man involved is not the father of the child in question. Time for women to take responsibility and stop sticking it to the "best" man (i.e. the one with a job and a career) even when he's not the father.

Woman Charged With Having Three Husbands

anthony · 13 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A Clinton County woman is charged with bigamy for failing to divorce her first two husbands before marrying a third.

April R. Carter, 22, of Frankfort started divorce proceedings for her marriages to Ryan Mendoza and Brian Clendenning, towns of residence unclear, but never completed them.

She then married Brandon Carter -- town of residence also unclear -- whom she says she is still with, according to the probable cause affidavit filed by the Clinton County prosecutor's office June 20."

True Equality Conference 2007 Ends Successfully

Matt · 15 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

"MR 2007" ended yesterday with a lot of good work getting done and new faces and names involved. More details are to follow I am sure, but having just gotten off the plane back from it, I can safely say that it may well be the most successful of the three such conferences held so far, by many measures.

Thanks to everyone who attended and to all the great work that has been, is getting, and will be done for our cause.

RADAR ALERT: Katie Couric Must Be Disciplined

Matt · 16 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Last week, it was discovered that Katie Couric physically assaulted a subordinate editor for using a word in a news story that she could not pronounce. A unidentified witness to the event said that Katie Couric slapped a fellow male editor in anger "over and over and over again on the arm". (http://nymag.com/news/features/34452/index6.html) "It had seemed like a joke at first, but it quickly became clear that she wasn't kidding".

Couric grudgingly admitted to the assault in a New York Magazine article: "I sort of slapped him around," Couric admits. "I got mad at him and said, 'You can't do this to me. You have to tell me when you're going to use a word like that.' I was aggravated, there's no question about that." (http://nymag.com/news/features/34452/index7.html)

CBS has not yet disciplined Katie Couric for an act which, if the perpetrator were a male, would have probably resulted in immediate termination. This sends the message to all CBS employees that workplace violence by women is acceptable.

Many large corporations have adopted "zero tolerance" workplace violence policies. Many Human Resource consulting firms recommend it, to prevent personal disagreements from escalating to serious violence in the workplace. "Zero Tolerance" is the one way corporations can protect themselves from lawsuits. We believe that CBS runs a great risk of future problems and lawsuits by permitting women to initiate physical altercations with male employees. In a large corporation, it is only a matter of time before an altercation spirals into serious violence.

The facts of violence between men and women dictate that CBS must take an aggressive stance on this problem.

* Men and women are equally likely to initiate and engage in partner aggression. (http://www.breakingthescience.org/RichardGelles_MissingPersonsOfDV.php)
* In about half of all cases, the aggression is mutual, meaning that there is no clear-cut initiator of the altercation. (http://pubpages.unh.edu/~mas2/ID41H3a.pdf)
* Although women are more likely to be harmed, males represent 38% of those who suffer an injury from partner aggression. (Archer J., "Sex Differences in Aggression Between Heterosexual Partners: A Meta-Analytic Review" Psychological Bulletin, Vol. 126, pp. 651-680, 2000.)

Just as Paris Hilton and Martha Stewart were held accountable for their misdeeds, Katie Couric must be held accountable for hers. In Couric's case, she must be held to the same standards of professional behavior that male employees are held to. Katie Couric must be disciplined and the public informed about the actions CBS has taken.

We encourage everyone to do the following:

1. Contact CBS headquarters in one of the following ways:
    1. Call 212-975-4321 and leave a message for CBS President Sean McManus, requesting that Katie Couric be properly disciplined for her act of workplace violence,
    2. Mail a copy of this alert to Sean McManus, CBS Television Network, 51 West 52nd Street, New York, NY 10019, or
    3. Submit a copy of this alert by going to http://www.cbs.com/info/user_services/fb_global_form.shtml. Where it asks "Regarding:", select "CBS Evening News".
2. Send a copy of this alert to your local CBS News station. Go to http://www.cbsnews.com/stories/2002/07/31/utility/main517034.shtml, click on the link for the station in your area. When the new page appears, select Edit > Find On This Page, and search the page for either "contact" or "feedback" to find out how to contact them.

Date of RADAR Release: July 16, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/

Newspaper in Malta recognizes the DV research, female-on-male violence

Matt · 16 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Posted on behalf of Marc A.:

I recently sent a letter to the editor of a newspaper in Malta, the Malta Independent, in response to their gender-biased article on domestic violence that left male victims invisible. I cited and linked the recent 32-nation study by the University of New Hampshire (Straus), which included Malta and which confirmed that female students initiate DV as often as male students and that controlling behavior is found equally in perpetrators of both sexes. [http://www.unh.edu/news/cj_nr/2006/may/em_060519male.cfm?type=n http://pubpages.unh.edu/~mas2/ID41E2.pdf]
The editor wrote back and said she would do a story on it. The story just printed, read it here. Excerpt:

"The study's results challenged the common assumption that violence between partners is mainly a male crime, and that "when women are violent it is self-defence".

It queried the assumption that violence by male partners is an effort to dominate and control while violence by female partners is attributed to self-defence or "as a justified response to an overwhelming pattern of domination and degradation"."

Modern Britain is 'pulling families apart'

AngryMan · 17 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Family life is under threat from rising divorce rates and the longest working hours in Europe, the Children's Society has warned.
...
It claims childhoods are being damaged by parental break-ups and growing pressure on mothers to return to work.
...
Experts who submitted evidence to the Children's Society inquiry arrived at 'some consensus' that children were ideally brought up by both parents together.

Living with married parents was linked to a range of positive consequences for children.'

Husband killer gets sympathy from media

Anonymous · 17 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Boy, don't you just feel sorry for this woman. She had to have a bowl of fruit ready for her husband when he came home…and, he made the household decisions (how abusive!!). And don't forget about her being depressed because of her father dying. She definitely had the right to have a hit man kill her husband. Of course, since the hitman "may" get parole by the age of 40, this woman justifiably should definitely not be given the death penalty or life in prison.

I personally think she should be sent to a mental hospital for 2 months and get her husbands full estate (perhaps I'm being sarcastic!). Yet another sickening article about a female trying to get a free pass from being convicted of a horrible crime. A man doing the same deed would be shouted at by the prosecution and victims for hours before sentencing. A man would get sentenced to additional time for telling about his emotions or difficult marriage!

Nebraska "rape word banned" trial update

Anonymous · 17 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Has anyone ever heard of protests during jury selection causing a mistrial? What happened here is that the judge declared a mistrial after protests filled with people with "taped mouths" made it supposedly impossible to find an impartial jury. Does anyone think that this had a motive? Is is possible that this woman and her attorney wanted this result so that she can take the trial to another city and perhaps get another judge who will let her say anything she wants during the trial (like sexual assault kit and sexual assault nurse examiner…I'm not kidding, read the article!)?

Another article on this states that the jury was almost evenly split during a previous trial (a new venue and judge will probably only increase the chances of the "right" verdict being decided). One things for sure, the press is definitely on the side of the defendant. This judge is now called the "word banning judge" by the Omaha World Herald.

Woman makes up rape story, videotape clears the men she accused

ItsDan · 17 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"A woman told police she was abducted in broad daylight, driven to an unknown location and repeatedly raped. But that woman, Mary E. Chafin, has been charged with filing a false report after detectives could find not evidence supporting her claim."

UK: Men left to clear up detritus of disaster of feminism

anthony · 17 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

“Women relied on men for their support. They still rely on men for their support but, sadly, that support is now being channelled via our tax system and the vast majority of taxes are contributed by men.

“The detritus left in the wake of 30 years of feminism is considerable, an international disaster. And, as with most other disasters, such as 9/11, it falls mainly to men to clear up the mess.”

Michigan governor urges women to help each other with careers

anthony · 17 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"It's harder for women to get elected to begin with because men have the networks already in place," said NOW president Kim Gandy. "So women have to keep building new networks over and over. It's certainly been an unexpected consequence of term limits.""

"Make room for a different daddy"

anthony · 17 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"The numbers tell the story: Fathers do 67 percent more housework and 50 percent more child care than 25 years ago, according to surveys by the Families and Work Institute, a nonprofit organization based in New York.

Decades ago, men responded to fatherhood by honing their ability to support a family. Now, more are making career sacrifices and adjusting their work days as they try to reconcile the roles of provider and parent.

Yet they don't always find sympathy at their jobs. Bosses and colleagues who nod knowingly when a new mother scales back may react with surprise when a new father wants to do the same. And the biggest career-oriented rewards, many experts say, still go to those with few home duties, who can devote their full energy to work."

Senator Vitter's Wife Jokes About MGM

anthony · 17 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"When Vitter's wife was asked about the marital scandals surrounding former Representative Livingston and former President Bill Clinton in 2000 she said, "I'm more like Lorena Bobbit than Hillary, if he does something like that, I'm walking away with one thing, and it's not alimony, trust me."

Duke case: Why Collin Finnerty, etc.?

anthony · 17 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Both Finnerty (Loyola College) and Seligmann (Brown University) have done the right thing. They've flushed their invite back to Duke right down the toilet! Excerpt:

"Collin Finnerty was declared innocent of bogus kidnapping, rape and sexual offense charges by North Carolina Attorney General Roy Cooper and is moving on to Loyola of Maryland, where he should be beyond the reach of the scoundrels at Duke and in Durham, North Carolina.
...
There's no doubt that former Durham County, North Carolina District Attorney Michael B. Nifong should have announced after investigation and receipt of the DNA test results that he had no case against any of the team members instead of manipulating grand jurors into issuing unwarranted indictments against the Three targeted by Ms. Mangum.

But there's also no doubt that what Ms. Mangum did should be investigated and why she did it should be determined.

Such an investigation may uncover a conspiracy to obtain enormous sums of money from the families of the Three."

Don't trust your man, Indian minister tells women

arindamp · 18 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'NEW DELHI (Reuters) - Indian men cannot be trusted in their sexual behaviour and are fuelling the country's HIV epidemic, a female government minister said on Monday, slamming the country's "hypocrisy" about sex.
...
"You cannot trust men or your husbands, with apologies to the men present here," Chowdhury told the inaugural meeting of the National Women Forum of Indian Network of People Living with HIV/AIDS (INP+), attended by a few men.

"If you believe that men will be careful, then you can forget about protecting yourself."'

Sign of the times: "Domestic affections" strained with "interesting" consequences

Matt · 18 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Lionel Tiger in The Decline of Males quoted a 19th century commentator, Charles J. Fox, in which he said that the rulers of the time had implemented policies that contributed to the "rapid decay of the domestic affections among the lower orders of society." Today the classist part of his observation would be criticized, but the general observation held then as it does now. Chalk this one up to that phenomenon in today's world.

What is perhaps most noticeable about the article is the way in which the president of the company openly states he seeks to support men's happiness. This is rare. One may dislike or find distasteful in one or more ways the subject matter of the article, but no one can deny that what is happening here is indeed... happening here. Excerpt:

'TOKYO, July 18 (Reuters Life!) - Real love is hard to find for one Japanese man, who has transferred his affection and desires to dozens of plastic sex dolls.

...
Orient Industry Co. now makes 80 dolls a month in an eastern Tokyo factory to nine designs that sell for between $850 and $5,500 each. The more expensive models are made of silicon and have 35 movable joints.
...
"Nowadays, women are sometimes more dominant than men in the real world, and they don't always pay attention to men," said Hideo Tsuchiya, the company's president.

"More and more men are finding themselves miserable so we're making these dolls partly in support of men."'

New age dads find success in family

anthony · 18 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Men generally work longer hours than women and the time spent in the office compared to a decade ago is increasing.
...
Federal Government statistics show fathers of children under 15 years who worked full-time in 2004-05 spent an average of 43 hours per week at work. In comparison, women worked 39.3 hours.

"Men are coming forward now and saying 'I want my kids to be able to relate to me' ... I want to stop the cycle," he said.'

Female Teacher Gets 10 Years in Prison for Sex With 13-Year-Old Boy

anthony · 19 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A sixth-grade science teacher who was accused of having sex with a 13-year-old student has been sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Rachel L. Holt, 35, had pleaded guilty to second-degree rape. She sobbed in court Friday as Superior Court Judge Calvin L. Scott gave her the mandatory minimum sentence.
...
Police accused her of having sex with the boy that many times during an intense weeklong affair. She was also accused of plying the boy with alcohol and allowing him to drive her car."

Two attacks, only one called "Domestic Assault"

