Anonymous · 19 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The first story is a woman assaulting her boyfriend with a baseball bat, and dousing him with lighter fluid and threatening to light him on fire. The second is a boyfriend that choked his girlfriend and automatically the "Domestic Assault" card comes out. In both articles, killing is mentioned, but they word the first article with "threatened to burn him to death" and the second they say “Threatened to kill her".

It's no wonder we can't get accurate stats on female-initiated violence. The news is just too biased. Excerpts:

Story 1:
'A Foley woman was arrested after sheriff's deputies said she doused her live-in boyfriend with lighter fluid and tried to set him on fire.
Jessica Bressie, 30, of the 200 block of Burr Oak, Foley, was charged with first-degree assault and was being held today on $50,000 cash-only bail in the Lincoln County Jail.'

Story 2:
"A 22-year-old Troy man has been arrested for choking his pregnant girlfriend, police said.

Bryant M. Riffle of the 100 block of Carol Drive, was charged with domestic assault. Bail was set at $25,000."

Misandrist Essay at its Worst

Matt · 19 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Just look at this, will you.... good heavens, the man is practically ready to implode with self-hatred! Excerpt:

'Use of science and technology proceeds along pathways chosen by man, detached from feminine sensibilities. Harmony eludes a male-dominated world that does not empower women. Women do climb the corporate ladder — we bestow superficial status on them — but behind this spurious camouflage, crimes against women proliferate.

Today, mankind attempts to explore galaxies and contemplates travel at the speed of light, while our women are still not safe on the streets, and many, not even at home. How is it possible to use terms such as "civilized" and "evolved" for our species? All our good intentions seem a lie. The truth? One-half of us are hurt by the other.

Our attitudes toward nature are synonymous with our attitudes toward women. All meaningful contact between the earth and us is broken. We do not understand the earth in terms of what she offers us or what she requires of us — and inevitably people destroy that which they do not understand.'

Comment forum here.
Letters to the editor: editor-at-DemocratandChronicle.com

Oops: Surgeon severs infant boys penis during botched circumcision

ItsDan · 20 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The family of an infant boy filed a lawsuit Wednesday against a doctor and a Mattoon hospital claiming negligence in a circumcision that apparently severed the boy's penis.'

I wonder what the parents will say when the boy is older and asks why they risked his health, and the only answers they'll have are "we wanted you to look like your father", or "we thought everyone did it".

Drunk Mother Murdered Baby With Microwave

anthony · 20 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Investigators looked throughout China Arnold's home to find whatever fatally burned the woman's infant, finally identifying a kitchen appliance, a detective said.

"That microwave was the murder weapon," detective Michael Galbraith testified Thursday at a hearing to determine if Arnold will stand trial on aggravated murder charges in the death of her month-old daughter, Paris Talley.

Arnold, 26, has pleaded not guilty in Paris' death on Aug. 30, 2005. Prosecutors are seeking the death penalty.

Galbraith testified that Arnold told him during his initial questioning: "If I hadn't gotten so drunk, I guess my baby wouldn't have died."'

Girls Charged With Animal Cruelty as Burned Cat Clings to Life

anthony · 20 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This story caught my attention because I'm a cat owner. Excerpt:

'A 3-month-old cat is clinging to life at a Sonoma County animal hospital after having been set on fire by two teenage girls who now face charges of animal cruelty.

The kitten, named Adam by hospital staff, has undergone two surgeries and had its tail and the tips of its ears amputated. The skin on its back was burned off in the attack, leaving nothing but raw tissue.

"The degree of injury is greater than our normal level of trauma that we care for," said Katheryn Hinkle, the head veterinarian and owner of the Animal Hospital of Cotati. "He's our most critical patient, and we're watching him constantly."'

Georgia Supreme Court hears teen sex case

Matt · 20 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'ATLANTA - The courtroom was packed with supporters and cameras Friday as Georgia's top justices heard arguments over whether a young man serving a 10-year prison term for consensual oral sex with a fellow teenager should be freed.

The long punishment spurred angry protests and led the state to change the sentencing law. A state judge in June ordered the young man freed, but because of an appeal by the state attorney general, Genarlow Wilson remains behind bars.

The Supreme Court justices will decide whether the state judge's order freeing Wilson should stand.'

Men Circumcised as Adults

forskinca · 21 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Link to post here. Excerpt:

"Only men circumcised as adults can experience the difference a foreskin makes. In the Journal of Sex Research, Money and Davison from the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine reported on five such men. Changes included diminished penile sensitivity and less penile gratification. The investigators concluded, Erotosexually and cosmetically, the operation is, for the most part, contraindicated, and it should be evaluated in terms of possible pathological sequelae.(1) Other men circumcised as adults regret the change."

Circumcision: Uncovering the truth about women's pleasure

anthony · 21 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

This is an interesting article. MGM as it relates to female sexuality. No mention of the psychological or physical impact it has on the man. No mention of common deformities related to circumcision. When it has an affect on the female, it becomes an issue. In this case, an entire book was written on the subject. Excerpt:

"For her book, O'Hara surveyed 139 women, drawn through classified ads in various publications. By a margin of 9 to 1, she says, they preferred the natural penis over his maligned, circumcised cousin. When the man is cut, O'Hara found, women are "almost five times less likely to achieve vaginal orgasm."

Duke lacrosse Lawyer goes under Microscope

anthony · 21 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"An attorney who represented one of three Duke lacrosse players prosecuted on false rape allegations appeared Friday before a special committee examining the Durham Police Department's handling of the case.

Durham Mayor Bill Bell and members of the Durham City Council called for the 12-member panel in May following an internal police department report that found, in part, that a tense relationship between then-District Attorney Mike Nifong and defense attorneys had hampered the investigation and that detectives had done nothing wrong."

Hillary Under Attack For Wage Gap Myth

anthony · 21 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The senator's claim of unequal pay is exaggerated and distorted. Worse, her remedy might cause employers to favor hiring men, to avoid the possibility of being sued or boycotted under federal "guidelines."
...
Although the guidelines in the Clinton bill would be "voluntary," this can be a slippery slope that leads to compulsory standards. President Hillary Clinton could instruct federal agencies to do business only with those firms that meet the guidelines.'

...I find that last sentence the most disturbing...

Education: 'The New Gender Divide'

anthony · 23 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"This is where Mortenson's third theory comes in: the declining presence of men in the home. While it's true that girls are as likely as boys to be raised by single moms, research suggests the absence of a father is more damaging to boys. In many homes, there is not only no male to offer guidance, there is no good male role model anywhere around."

Media/Blogger frenzy continues for the EQUAL Parenting Bike Trek

Anonymous · 23 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

View the current list of media and bloggers that are covering the EQUAL Parenting Bike Trek! The media frenzy continues! Help us spread the word of this event. Not just in the U.S. but world wide! No matter where you live - it is the fundamental right of a fit and willing parent to be an EQUAL parent after divorce!

We have only 19 days left...we need your active help in contacting any and all media which you think may be helpful.

Be sure to check out the two videos when you click on the Fox News 17 link!!

Please welcome Robert Pedersen and Robb MacKenzie when they arrive in Washington, D.C. on August 18th 2007. http://www.dcrally2007.com/

Mother invented 17 children to collect £30,000 in state welfare benefits

AngryMan · 23 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A mother who conned £30,000 in benefits by inventing 17 children has been spared jail as she suffers from post-natal depression and is pregnant with her third child.

Charlene Ostle claimed that by the age of 26 she had given birth to three sets of twins and two sets of triplets."

What a surprise. No jail time for the poor little lamb. And another surprise, it was really a man's fault. More:

"Alison Whalley, defending, said her client endured a lack of support from her partner and that, combined with pride, left her unable to ask for help."

So it was the fault of that deadbeat dad. Typical man! He should be in prison for this!

Four times as many children prescribed antidepressants

AngryMan · 23 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The number of prescriptions for antidepressants and other mind-altering drugs given to children under 16 has more than quadrupled in the last decade, according to official figures released today.
...
The new figures are revealed amid growing concern about rising levels of childhood depression and pressures faced by young people.
...
A Department of Children, Schools and Family spokeswoman said: "The government's Every Child Matters agenda commits to supporting every child to have a happy and healthy childhood.'

Really? Destroying the family and stripping children of their father is not going to help.

Father-free holidays

AngryMan · 23 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Many men now only join their families for a short part of the summer holiday.
...
These days, father is more likely to keep in touch by text or email, and mother is probably juggling summer childcare with a demanding freelance career, but otherwise, it seems, the long summer break - much of it spent without Dad - is back in fashion.
...
Absence of a parent can also have a detrimental effect on children, especially on young boys, if it's the father who's away. An interim report from the Children's Society, published last Monday, said that the UK has the longest working hours in Europe, and that 21st-century stresses are "pulling families apart".'

RADAR ALERT: D.A. Group Fuels the Problem that It Claims Doesn't Exist

Matt · 23 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

"THERE IS NOT AN EPIDEMIC OF ROGUE PROSECTORS IN AMERICA," claims a recent news release from the National District Attorneys Association, following the disbarment of North Carolina district attorney Michael Nifong.

According to NDAA president Mathias Heck, "The vast majority of prosecutors take their responsibilities very seriously. They seek out truth and justice, wherever it leads." (http://www.ndaa.org/newsroom/pr_duke_case_june_17_07.html)

If that's true, then the NDAA - the group that represents 30,000 district attorneys around the country - has some explaining to do. Because in two weeks, the National District Attorneys Association will be holding a conference called the National Institute on the Prosecution of Sexual Violence. Research shows that about half of all rape claims are false. That means that each year, 47,000 American men, disproportionately Black men, are wrongfully accused of this heinous crime: http://www.mediaradar.org/research_on_false_rape_allegations.php

But take a look at the conference description: http://www.ndaa.org/education/apri/natl_inst_prosecution_sv_annapolis_2007.html. Do you see anything how district attorneys need to sort out false allegations so true rape victims can get the help they need? Anything about the need to prosecute women who commit perjury? Or providing help to the men who are wrongly-accused? The answer to those questions is No, No, and No! Instead, the conference appears to enlist district attorneys in an ideological crusade by "overcoming rape myths" and exposing the "true predatory nature of the offender." The program repeatedly uses the word "victim," but never "alleged victim."

Is this how D.A.s "seek out truth and justice, wherever it leads"? Please e-mail or call the NDAA and ask them this simple question:

"The Michael Nifong case and scientific research show that false allegations of rape are widespread. If NDAA president Mathias Heck's claim that, 'the vast majority of prosecutors ... seek out truth and justice, wherever it leads,' were true, your upcoming National Institute on the Prosecution of Sexual Violence would teach prosecutors techniques for distinguishing between true and false accusations. So, why does your conference instead turn a blind eye to even the possibility of false accusations?"

Be polite and respectful, but be firm. And do it now. We must stop the epidemic of false allegations.

Contact:
Ms. Velva Walter, Media Director
E-mail: velva.walter-at-ndaa.org
Telephone: 703-519-1689

++++++

Man ordered to pay ex-wife alimony, despite domestic partnership klp · 23 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The article is here. Excerpt:

'A judge ordered an Orange County man to continue paying $1,250 a month in alimony to his former wife — even though she's in a registered domestic partnership with another woman.

State marriage laws say that alimony ends when a former spouse remarries. So Ron Garber thought he was off the hook for the payments when he learned his ex-wife, Melinda Kirkwood, registered her new relationship under the state's domestic partnership law.'

She's in a new committed relation (could this also have something to do with the marriage breakup?) and still gets support from her ex. What a deal!

At least it is alimony which is deductible for the payer and taxable for the payee.

Interestingly, the comments lean towards support for the ex-husband. Now remember this is in left-leaning San Francisco.

Unruly schoolboys or sex offenders?

anthony · 24 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The two boys tore down the hall of Patton Middle School after lunch, swatting the bottoms of girls as they ran -- what some kids later said was a common form of greeting.
...
Now, Cory Mashburn and Ryan Cornelison, both 13, face the prospect of 10 years in juvenile detention and a lifetime on the sex offender registry in a case that poses a fundamental question: When is horseplay a crime?
...
The outlines of the case have been known. But confidential police reports and juvenile court records shed new light on the context of the boys' actions. The records show that other students, boys and girls, were slapping one another's bottoms. Two of the girls identified as victims have recanted, saying they felt pressured and gave false statements to interrogators. "

Circumcision Urged in Curbing AIDS Spread

n.j. · 24 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"A U.S. health expert urged governments worldwide Tuesday to endorse circumcision to slow the spread of HIV, saying men without the procedure have a greater risk of contracting the virus from infected female partners.
...
Robert Bailey, a professor of epidemiology at the University of Illinois, said studies in Africa showed that uncircumcised men were 2 1/2 times more likely to contract HIV from infected female partners, though many health officials were still unclear about its benefits."

I think the professor should be taught about its strong drawbacks. Very likely, he was mutilated himself as a child and has no idea. Sad, yet another victim who supports what made him a victim.

Victory for wealthy ex-hubby

Anonymous · 25 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A WEALTHY retired builder won his appeal today over a court ruling that he must pay more money to the woman he divorced nearly 30 years ago.

Dennis North, 70, was ordered last year to pay his first wife, Jean £202,000 by a family judge who heard she had "fallen on hard times" after embarking on a lifestyle she could not afford.'

Ed. note: This is a follow-up to a piece posted June 28, 2007 here on MANN.

National Post Editorial: Why men earn more

Anonymous · 25 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'When activists want to make the case that their society is riddled with sexism, the first statistic they typically serve up is the one comparing earnings: In most Western countries, working women earn significantly less than working men.
...
The idea that factors other than discrimination drive pay discrepancy got a boost this week from across the Atlantic. On Wednesday, the European Commission released a new report showing that, despite Europe's progressive politics and famously intrusive workplace regulations, women still earn 15% less than men on average -- virtually unchanged from the 17% figure of 1997.'

"It's she-man John vs. he-woman Hil"

anthony · 25 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Op-ed here. Excerpt:

"Is work/family balance a "women's issue"? I suppose men just love slaving away 12 hours a day in mind-numbing jobs and cramped cubicles so they can come home to their bitter, exhausted wives and already-sleeping children.

Did I miss the memo that humans are now able to asexually reproduce? Otherwise I would assume reproductive rights also affect men - who, I was under the impression, often play a somewhat vital role in procreation.

And on the flip side of the coin, is "the war on terrorism" -don't even get me started on those semantics - a "men's issue"? Were the 160,500 American women who have served thus far in Iraq, Afghanistan and the Middle East since 2003 merely playing dress up?"

Can any of you guys verify the "160,500" statistic?

Give us back our children

OldManSenile · 26 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From the looks of the article, mothers are losing their children to adoption agencies for no good reason. There are two fathers mentioned if I remember correctly.

But I also know thousands of men lose their kids to vengeful mothers too. For some reason, its never an epidemic unless the female is on the losing end. I wonder if it will sink in that what these mothers are going through, men have been going through it since the start of radfem leadership.

Excerpt:
"Six weeks ago, the Mail told how social workers tore a baby from her loving family to put her up for adoption. Since then, scores of parents have contacted us with horrifying stories of children stolen by the state. How dare the courts continue to gag them?
...
This sweeping shake-up in social policy was designed for all the right reasons: to get older children in care homes into happy new families with parents.

But the reforms didn't work. Encouraged by the promise of extra cash, councils began to earmark those children who were most easy to place in adoptive homes - babies and cute toddlers - while the older children remained in care. (The number of over-sevens adopted has plummeted by half in less than a decade.)

Campaigners - including parents who have had their sons or daughters taken - say that social workers are tearing innocent families apart. Everywhere, I came across evidence to suggest that these claims are justified."

Nifong admits: No crime in lacrosse case

Matt · 26 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'DURHAM, N.C. - Disgraced former prosecutor Mike Nifong acknowledged Thursday there is "no credible evidence" that three Duke lacrosse players committed any of the crimes he accused them of more than a year ago, offering for the first time a complete and unqualified apology.

"We all need to heal," Nifong said. "It is my hope we can start this process today."

Nifong's apology came as a judge began considering whether to hold the former Durham County district attorney in criminal contempt of court for his handling of the case.'

Sexism of Jackson Katz and White Ribbon Campaign exposed in NH newspaper

Anonymous · 28 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The Caledonian Record, a newspaper that covers parts of New Hampshire and Maine, just printed two replies, here and here, to the White Ribbon Campaign's and Jackson Katz's anti-male sexism and misandry. These men go around misframing partner abuse to be primarily male-on-female, putting feminist ideology over social science so that female violence and male victims remain swept under the rug. They get away with it by playing off stereotypes and ignorance, and because very few people challenge them publicly.

Australia: Circumcision Urged in Curbing AIDS Spread

anthony · 28 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Michel Kazatchkine, the executive director of the Global fund, a leading international health agency, also called For increased funding.

"I believe that the evidence is overwhelming for the efficacy of circumcision," Kazatchkine told The Associated Press on the sidelines of the meeting. "And if countries come to us ... I see no reason at all why we wouldn't fund that."'

Time Magazine: The Myth About Boys

anthony · 28 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'"I don't think anyone will deny that girls are academically superior as a group. Girls are more academically powerful. They make the grades, they run the student activities, they are the valedictorians."

Christina Hoff Sommers, a fellow at the American Enterprise Institute, was explaining how she came to worry deeply about boys. In the book-lined parlor of her suburban Washington home, she ticked through a familiar but disturbing indictment: More boys than girls are in special-education classes. More boys than girls are prescribed mood-managing drugs. This suggests to her (and others) that today's schools are built for girls, and boys are becoming misfits. As a result, more boys than girls drop out of high school. Boys don't read as well as girls. And America's prisons are packed with boys and former boys.'

FATHERHOOD FIRST: Program helps men better lives, reconnect with kids

anthony · 28 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The Promoting Responsible Fatherhood Initiative is one of President George W. Bush's efforts to shore up families through marriage and parenting programs that help parents, especially men, overcome barriers to supporting their children financially and emotionally.

An estimated 47% of U.S. children live in homes without their fathers, according to the department.

"If you look at some of the statistics -- they're earth-shattering," said Tara Wall, a spokeswoman for the office in Washington, D.C.

"In 1960, fewer than 10 million children did not live with their fathers. Today, the number is nearly 25 million. A third of these children won't see their fathers at all during the course of the year."

Children who grow up without their fathers are far more likely to fail in school, engage in criminal activity and abuse alcohol and drugs, according to human services department and numerous studies.'

Is the System too Easy on Women or is the System too Hard on Men?

anthony · 28 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"Great, so if big-brother is a chivalrous fellow who treats men and women differentially under the law and elsewhere, now what? This is where differences of opinion are likely to burgeon (and perhaps political affiliations as well). Are women coddled too much, or are men punished too severely (generally speaking)? In other manner of speaking, should we lock women up and throw away the key like men are often treated for certain crimes? Or, should we send more men into counseling/psychological services instead of prison in an attempt to garner more empathy/sympathy for men in a similar way that women are sometimes treated?"

Another Man Exonerated From Rape Sentence

anthony · 28 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The victim incorrectly identified Briscoe. He refused a plea deal offering 20 years in prison. And then he was convicted, sentenced in his mid-20s to 45 years behind bars.
...
By then Briscoe had done 24 years behind bars and been denied parole because he refused to express remorse for a crime he didn't commit...

Two months before the parole hearing, two DA's investigators showed up at prison and handed Briscoe an envelope. In it was a long, white swab used for DNA sampling.
...
"They said in 24 hours we'll be back with the results. And the results were beautiful," he says.

He was free the next day.'

Update: Boys Face Sex Trial for Slapping Girls' Posteriors

anthony · 28 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

More on this disturbing charge against two 13-year-old boys facing possible jail time for an innocent teenage action. The outcome could require these boys the injustice of registering as life long sex offenders. Apparently, the junior high school students would innocently "smack" other students on the backside, a ritual other girls have admitted participating in. Excerpt:

'The boys spent five days in a juvenile detention facility and were charged with several counts of felony sex abuse for what they and their parents said was merely inappropriate but not criminal behavior.

But the boys, if convicted at an Aug. 20 trial, still face the possibility of some jail time or registering for life as sex offenders.'

Female Caregiver For Mentally Disabled Man Charged With Rape

anthony · 28 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Police in Washington County say a female caregiver raped a man for whom she was caring.

Alyson Bush, 41, of Washington, Pa., is charged with rape of a mentally disabled person, institutional sexual assault and related offenses.

Donegal Township police Chief Ethan Ward said the man's mother contacted them after her 32-year-old son told her that Bush had been forcing him to have sex with her.'

India: Equality or Privileged Treatment?

Anonymous · 30 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Do women really want equality or it's a mask for seeking privileged treatment? A good article by Chandan Mitra - a senior Indian journalist. Excerpt:

'At the risk of inviting the wrath of vocal women's activists in the metros, I must unambiguously state that I do not think there is any concerted or deliberate discrimination against women or in-built gender bias in the professions. In fact, India's record in this regard, be it politics, business, the civil services, law, medicine, academia - the list could be hugely long - is better than that of the West. Arguably, women do face some unequal situations in the home, but Indian laws are so draconian and unthinking that they have probably worsened the position of women in recent years. The Anti-Dowry Act (Article 498a) and the recently enacted Domestic Violence Act have done great disservice to gender harmony.'

RAF typist who hurt thumb is awarded eight times more than soldier who lost leg

AngryMan · 30 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

'A Royal Air Force typist who injured her thumb at work is to be paid almost half a million pounds by the Ministry of Defence.
...
It is eight times more than a soldier would receive for losing a leg and almost double the amount he could expect if he lost both legs.
...
The woman, believed to be in her 20s, developed a repetitive strain injury while typing computer data.

She claimed it left her unable to work and caused her to become depressed, and she started legal action against the MoD.'

RADAR ALERT: DoJ Must Investigate Nifong Now!

Matt · 30 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

There is no case of prosecutorial abuse more overdue for investigation than that of Mike Nifong, the prosecutor in the Duke Case who tried to convict men he knew to be innocent. Last week, Nifong finally admitted that the men had committed no crime.

There is abundant evidence that prosecutorial abuse is not rare. There are many individuals in prison for crimes they did not commit, while those who did commit the crimes roam scot-free. The Innocence Project has freed over 200 of them. This is just the tip of the iceberg.

The Department of Justice (DoJ) must investigate Nifong to uncover the incentives that motivated his unprofessional behavior. Many background elements, such as biased federal funding and training for prosecutors may be involved. RADAR has already revealed one training program by the National District Attorneys Association (NDAA) that demonstrates prosecutors' lack of concern about convicting the innocent by failing to include any sessions on how prosecutors should identify and handle false abuse and rape allegations.

Certainly, in light of the Duke case, the NDAA has a clear duty to prosecutors how to accurately serve justice in these types of cases.

At least seven bipartisan members of Congress have called for a federal probe into the Duke case. Is there any member of Congress that can permit prosecutorial abuses of their constituents? Clearly, a full investigation must be made, and recommendations for changes in federal law and funding practices issued.

Please contact your Representative today and ask the Department of Justice to launch a full-scale investigation to find out exactly what went wrong in the Michael Nifong case. Please do one of the following:

Go to http://www.house.gov/. At the top, enter your Zip code and look up your Representative's name, then go to your Representative's website. Or call the Capitol Switchboard at 202-224-3121. Then leave this message with the Representative's staff: “The Department of Justice must investigate the Michael Nifong case now!”

Seven Representatives and one Senator have already gone on record asking for a DoJ investigation. We need to keep up the pressure, to protect innocent Americans from prosecutorial abuse!

++
Date of RADAR Release: July 30, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

'Real roots of crime'

Kavius · 30 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

An article in the Calgary Sun recently addressed the killing of Ephraim Brown in a unique way. Excerpt:

'A boy named Ephraim Brown was killed recently in Toronto, caught in a crossfire between the vicious thugs who populate large cities. It is a wicked and sad thing.
...
...feminist theory forbids examination of the true roots of crime because it makes them uncomfortable and violates the sacred tenet of their creed, which says men are essentially disposable.'

The author (Ian Robinson) does a really nice job of raising points that no one else is considering in all of this. The knee-jerk reaction is to blame the tool and not look at the root cause.

Daughter Accused in NYC Genital-Mutilation Death

anthony · 31 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Even for seasoned detectives, the crime scene in an apartment last weekend was horrific: A man, gagged and handcuffed, had been killed and his penis was cut off.

Investigators believe the suspect, Brigitte Harris, "did it," said a law enforcement official. "We are trying to determine why."

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity because Harris had not been arrested or charged, said police were checking reports that Goodridge, 55, may have abused Harris as a child. Detectives were hoping to question the 26-year-old suspect at a hospital mental ward where she was admitted after the slaying, the law enforcement official said.'

Bail Denied for Maryland Mom Suspected in Deaths of Four Infants Found on Property

anthony · 31 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A mother of four who is facing murder charges in the death of her new baby last week and is suspected in the killings of three infants whose remains were found on her property was denied bail Monday after pleading with the judge to free her on bond.
...
The bodies of four small infants were found at the home of Christy Freeman, 37, a woman who denied having been pregnant, even after she was taken to a hospital and doctors discovered a placenta and part of an umbilical cord, police said.'

Adoptive Mom Accused of Abusing, Starving Foster Kids for Decades

anthony · 31 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'They were often handcuffed, tethered together with plastic ties and allowed to soil themselves, investigators say. They had scars on their wrists. Some had burns.

None appeared to have more than a fourth-grade education, not even the adults in their 20s. All were starving.

In all, nine teenagers and young adults were held like prisoners in Judith Leekin's home in what appeared to be a decades-long scheme to line her pockets with the government payments she received for adopting and raising them, police say.'

Sacks' Latest: 'Choosing Foster Parents over Fathers'

Matt · 31 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From Glenn Sacks:

'My new co-authored column, Choosing Foster Parents over Fathers (San Diego Union-Tribune, 7/11/07), discusses perhaps the worst verified child custody/family law injustice against a father and a daughter which I have ever seen--the outrageous Melinda Smith foster care case.' Excerpt:

"In the heartbreaking Melinda Smith case, a father and daughter were needlessly separated by the foster care system for over a decade. Last week, Los Angeles County settled a lawsuit over the case for an undisclosed sum. Yet a recent Urban Institute study found that the Smith case typifies the way the foster care system harms children by disregarding the loving bonds they share with their fathers."

"How to get through to a man"

Matt · 31 July 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Linked from the CNN main page as of this writing:
How to get through to a man taken from Oprah.com. Anyone else notice the link to Time.com on the top? Looks like CNN and Time are collaborating these days in their misandrist pursuits. Excerpt:

'Meet every protest and argument he makes, no matter how ridiculously false, with the observation that he is absolutely correct ... but you still want what you want. In boxing this is called rope-a-dope, and even if you don't know what the rope part means, the dope part sounds pretty applicable. This is called win-win -- except you did and he didn't.'

Proposed Ohio Abortion Law Would Give Fathers a Say

blaze4metal · 2 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Several Ohio state representatives who normally take an anti-abortion stance are now pushing pro-choice legislation - sort of.

Led by Rep. John Adams, a group of state legislators have submitted a bill that would give fathers of unborn children a final say in whether or not an abortion can take place.

It's a measure that, supporters say, would finally give fathers a choice."

Later on, the feminists get to say: "This measure is a clear attack on a woman's freedom and privacy."

What about the man's freedom to not have to pay child support for the next 18 years for a baby he didn't want to have? Say what you will about abortion, but if you want the baby, they you pay. If you don't and she does, she should pay.

Virginia wants to know if you might be a dad

anthony · 2 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The state Department of Social Services wants any man who is not married to a woman but could be the father of a child with her to voluntarily fill out a one-page registration.

The law, which went into effect July 1, is designed to protect men's rights in the case of a future adoption.

State officials emphasized that the confidential database is not an attempt to track sexual activity or partners. But it suggests men register "after relations with new partners or continued relations with the same woman."

Female Movie Directors Face "Struggle for Equality"

Female MRA · 3 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Excerpt:
"Hollywood is still an old boys' club and boys are bullies.

The ultimate symbol of the film industry is a man, Oscar, clutching a sword and standing on a reel of film because he's defending his turf," said Tom O'Neil, columnist for theenvelope.com Web site. "I think that says it all."

Read the rest here.

For Young Earners in Big City, a Gap in Women’s Favor

Anonymous · 3 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The New York Times reports that in Los Angeles, Dallas, and New York City, the gender wage gap among people in their 20's favors women.

For women in Dallas it is as extreme as 120%!
Excerpt:

'Young women in New York and several of the nation’s other largest cities who work full time have forged ahead of men in wages, according to an analysis of recent census data.

The shift has occurred in New York since 2000 and even earlier in Los Angeles, Dallas and a few other cities.'

On YouTube: Glenn Sack Talks About Bias in the Media

axolotl · 4 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Check out this 10 minute video, in which Sacks talks about several specific cases where television, movie and musical performers, reinforce the idea that violence by women is OK.

One of these really astonished me, it is a video of a woman getting revenge on her ex by tearing up his car with a knife and baseball bat. It turns out the video was the first one ever written and directed by a woman to achieve "video of the year" awards, and was voted number one on CMT. Incredible!

Tennesee Court of Appeals Favors Bastardy

Anonymous · 4 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Same old story: Man sleeps with female; she sleeps with other men; she gets pregnant; keeps bastard; she picks one as father; HE NAIVELY VOLUNTARILY SIGNS PATERNITY ACKNOWLEDGMENT; pays support; DNA proves he is not the bastard's father; juvenile judge terminates his financial slavery and orders female to pay him back; higher court overturns pro-male judgment. Upside: he does not have to pay anymore bastard support in the future; Downside: will not get back payments already made since he did VOLUNTARILY sign a paternity acknowledgment.

Lesson: DON'T SIGN ANY DAMNED THING WHEN A BASTARD IS SAID TO BE YOURS! If your signature was not necessary they would not cajole you into signing away your life! DON'T SIGN ANYTHING!

Judge tosses man's lawsuit over ladies' night

anthony · 4 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Steve Horner's crusade against ladies' nights at bars took a hit Thursday as a Denver County judge tossed his claim that newspaper ads for such promotions violate state civil rights laws.

"Too bad we didn't have an impartial judge," Horner said as Judge Brian Campbell adjourned the proceeding and walked away. "The judge missed a great trial."'

Fathers need to be in teenagers' lives

anthony · 4 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Letter here. Excerpt:

'Several "experts" surmise that sex education classes in Texas' schools is not working. I think there is another reason.

Countless studies show that a father's absence increases his daughter's risk of teen pregnancy.
...
If so, it sounds like these young girls may be seeking a father figure when they have unprotected sex. One way to keep young girls from looking for father figures is to give them fathers; biological birth-fathers.'

Bill Maher on Feminism

Anonymous · 5 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

On YouTube: "Bill Maher's take on how feminism has taken over America. He makes some very insightful points that prove America has become a feminized country. This is an excerpt from his special 'Victory Begins at Home'"

"Women for Rudy"

anthony · 5 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From a political standpoint this is an attempt by the Giuliani campaign to take some female votes away from Hillary. My concern is the non-existent political approach regarding issues that affect men. I follow politics very closely and have yet to hear one comment on issues such as father's rights, paternity fraud, boys' education and the unfair disparity throughout the judicial system (to name a few).

The American voting system is the pillar of democracy, yet modern society ignores mens issues and values a social welfare state for women. I really don't blame Rudy, he's wants the GOP nomination and ultimately the presidency. However, a true leader would stand up and announce gender equity regarding issues that are unique to men and women. My '08 vote is already tainted. Our next president will approach gender with the same ideology as feminists. Remember, politicians cannot challenge "cherry picked" feminist statistics (eg: the wage gap myth). Its politically incorrect and political suicide.

"Authorities puzzled about mother in deaths of children left in hot car"

Matt · 5 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'She made it to her job at a county-run group home July 29, a typically warm summer day. After eight hours, she called a supervisor and said she had to leave because of child-care issues.

According to her employer, she didn't tell the supervisor or a co-worker that for all that time, she had left her 1-year-old daughter and 4-year-old son in her Chevy Cavalier hatchback, parked on a residential street.
...
Her friends and her bosses -- and even the officers who arrested her -- say Heyward had been trying her best: working long hours and providing for her children.
...
She had been arrested twice in the past three years, but she was not prosecuted on a charge of hindering an officer and was found not guilty of first-degree criminal domestic violence in February 2006.
...
Her lawyer, Andy Savage, said he hopes a mental evaluation will shed light on what happened.'

Note how the story starts with how she didn't have any choice but to leave the kids in the car, etc. Can anyone imagine that level of sympathy being given to a man in that position? A mental evaluation for her? Would a man get that?

Men's Rights Issues in Thailand

mcp · 6 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Excellent article. This probably shows that violation of men's rights is now a global problem. Excerpt:

'In the interest of ensuring equality for women and men alike, it is time for men to stand together and request the abolishment of some accepted customs, such as boyfriends/fiances having to pay for everything, and definitely the age-old tradition of having to cough up a dowry. Now, some women might scream aloud at such a deplorable idea being floated by the "farang visitor", and would advise that this is a custom deeply embedded in Thai culture. Well, all well and good, but in that case, let us not be selective, and let's encourage adherence to all traditions and suggest that while showering money on his beloved, the man be accorded the right to take on a couple of mistresses at the same time.'

RADAR ALERT: Now the Senate Needs to Call for a DoJ Investigation

Matt · 6 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In last week's alert, we asked you to contact your Representative in the House and tell them to ask the Department of Justice to investigate what motivated prosecutor Michael Nifong's unwavering efforts to convict men he knew to be innocent. This week we need you to send your Senators the same message.

The critical points to make when you call or email your Senators are:

- This sort of prosecutorial abuse is not unusual. The only thing unusual about Nifong is that he got caught.
- If Congress doesn't bring pressure to bear, other prosecutors will continue to violate the law.
- Failure to require that prosecutors avoid unethical behavior causes the electorate to lose respect for government at all levels.
- The time for Congress to act is now!

Please contact your Senator today and ask them to have the Department of Justice launch a full-scale investigation to find out exactly what went wrong in the Michael Nifong case.

Here's what to do:

1. Go to http://www.senate.gov/. At the top, enter your state and look up the names of both your Senators. On the resulting web pages will be information on how to contact both of them either by phone or electronically.
2. Or you can call the Capitol Switchboard at 202-224-3121 and ask for contact information for both of your Senators.
3. Then telephone or email each Senator and let him know that you'd like him or her to add his voice to the Representatives and Senators who've already publicly called for a DoJ investigation.

++
Date of RADAR Release: August 6, 2007
Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

TIME's "The Truth About Boys" Retort

Matt · 6 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'According to the scholars who presented at this summit, "graduation rates are, at best, 70 percent nationally, and for black and Latino students, especially boys, closer to 50 percent."'

Boycott RONA

thegnroy · 6 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Canada's advertising watchdog has ruled that a TV commercial promoting RONA, the chain of building supply stores, is unfit for Canadian audiences because it discriminates against men.
...
The commercial features a woman going into a RONA store with an imaginary complaint call "homestressidous." A sympathetic female clerk suggests that the customer's husband never helps around the house. The customer confirms this and the clerk responds: "That's OK. They (husbands) are all like that."
...
Under the ad regulator's rules, RONA must either amend or pull the commercial. It may also appeal the decision.'

Ed. note: RONA is a large home building supply store chain in Canada.

New Maine DV Law Targets Primary Aggressors

Roy · 7 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

A new Maine law adopts "primary aggressor" (guess which gender qualifies?)and "past course of conduct" criteria to beef up DV prosecutions and penalties. Excerpt:

'According to state officials, Maine is among the first states to pass legislation that distinguishes domestic violence from other sorts of crimes.

The new law comes on the heels of another piece of legislation relating to domestic violence, signed in June. Designed to shield victims from legal recourse if they take defensive action, LD 1039 instructs the Maine Criminal Justice Academy Board of Trustees to develop a program that would allow law enforcement officials to identify the predominant aggressor in instances of domestic violence.

The governor also announced that STOP Violence Against Women Formula Grants Program, a grant established in 2005 to aid independent and government agencies develop violence prevention programs, had awarded $800,000 to the Maine Department of Public Safety.'

These new provisions make it virtually impossible for a cop to arrest a female perpetrator of DV without risking his/her career ... And, speaking too loudly to a woman will constitute "DV reckless conduct!"

New York City Councilwoman Seeks to Outlaw "B-word"

Matt · 8 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The New York City Council, which drew national headlines when it passed a symbolic citywide ban earlier this year on the use of the so-called n-word, has turned its linguistic (and legislative) lance toward a different slur: bitch.

The term is hateful and deeply sexist, said Councilwoman Darlene Mealy of Brooklyn, who has introduced a measure against the word, saying it creates “a paradigm of shame and indignity” for all women.
...
The measure, which 19 of the 51 council members have signed onto, was prompted in part by the frequent use of the word in hip-hop music. Ten rappers were cited in the legislation, along with an excerpt from an 1811 dictionary that defined the word as “A she dog, or doggess; the most offensive appellation that can be given to an English woman.”'

The slippery slope is in full slide, it seems. Once one word is ban-able, why not others? So they are off to the races.

Now I wonder when such words as "bastard" and "dick-head" will be outlawed? My guess is never.

Equal Parenting Bike Trek departs in a few days! Help spread the word and make this a success!

Anonymous · 9 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

PRESS RELEASE
August 8, 2007

For Immediate Release
Contact:
Angela Pedersen, R.N.
http://www.Cycling4Children.com/
269-420-3216

Cycling4Children and the Equal Parenting Bike Trek Receives National Media

Lansing, Michigan - August 7th 2007 - The 700 mile Equal Parenting Bike Trek is starting to receive national media attention. Recently Phyllis Schlafly wrote an opinion/commentary column which covered the Equal Parenting Bike Trek. Phyllis Schlafly's articles are syndicated in over 100 newspapers nationwide and her radio talk show can be heard on over 460 radio stations nationwide! Robert Pedersen and Robb MacKenzie have already appeared on the nationwide Radio Lia Show to discuss their 700 mile bicycle trek to bring awareness to children's rights.

Newspaper coverage has started to increase with the Lansing State Journal soon to report this inspiring human interest story. The Equal Parenting Bike Trek was recently covered by Human Events (since 1944), the Battle Creek Enquirer and made front page news in the Hastings Banner. Additionally, newspapers in Oregon and Philadelphia have already picked up this moving story.

TV News Coverage has been phenomenal to date with Fox News Channel 17, News 8 Wood TV, and Channel 3 WWMT TV News already producing incredible newscasts on this story. Even more are scheduled as the two cyclists pedal their way from Lansing, MI to Washington, D.C. (view videos via www.cycling4children.com)

Robert Pedersen and Rob MacKenzie will depart on their 700 mile bicycle trek for children on August 11th, 2007 near the Lansing, MI Capitol. The purpose of this intense 700 mile bicycle trek is to bring awareness to a child's fundamental right to be loved, guided, nurtured and educated by both fit and willing parents after a divorce. Thousands of people will greet their arrival in Washington, D.C. at a Family Preservation Rally www.dcrally2007.com on August 18th 2007. There will be numerous "A-list" speakers present at the August 18th 2007 Family Preservation Rally.

Carol Rhodes, the famous author of "Friend of the Court Enemy of the Family", and several others will follow the cyclists in a media/supply van the entire 700 miles of the Equal Parenting Bike Trek.

A dedicated website www.cycling4children.com will allow visitors to follow the cyclists via GPS (Global Positioning System). Visitors will also be able to view videos and photos that will be uploaded in real time.

The media can view a current list of media and blogger coverage of this incredible human interest story at www.cycling4children.com

To view a list of sponsors and obtain additional information on Cycling4Children and the Equal Parenting Bike Trek the media can visit www.cycling4children.com Please contact Angela Pedersen, R.N. for media requests in Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland and D.C. at 269-420-3216.

# #

England: CSA accused of rewarding mums who deny child access to fathers

anthony · 9 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The Child Support Agency was last night accused of rewarding mothers who deny former partners access to their children.

Tory family welfare spokesman Andrew Selous is planning reforms to give fathers fairer settlements.

Mr Selous wants to end a rule that cuts mothers' maintenance if they let children stay with their fathers for more than a set number of nights.'

Deadbeat parents sought by cell phone

anthony · 9 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Virginia is the first state to subpoena cell phone records to help locate parents who owe a total of at least $2.3 billion in delinquent child support payments.

Last month, the Virginia division was one of two state agencies in the country honored for innovation by the Council of State Governments. They will officially receive an award in November.'

MSNBC: False Rape Allegation Thwarted By Police Camera

anthony · 9 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

YouTube clip:

MSNBC: False Rape Allegation Thwarted By Police Camera

Fathers, The Third Victim of the Abortion Industry: By Carey Roberts

anthony · 9 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'In their book Men and Abortion: Lessons, Losses, and Love, Shostak and McLouth report that 44% of single men offered to marry the woman, 18% of the couples had discussed adoption, and half the men accompanied the woman to the abortion clinic - hardly the image of wholesale male abandonment.

When these men show up at the clinic, they are met with a chilly reception. Two-thirds of the fathers want to accompany their partner throughout the experience, and nine out of 10 hope to hold the hand of their partner in the recovery room. But in most cases abortion clinics prohibit men from such expressions of support.'

CRISPE Bus and the Equal Parenting Bike Trek Combine Efforts

Matt · 10 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

PRESS RELEASE
August 9, 2007

For Immediate Release
Contact:
Angela Pedersen, R.N.
269-704-5937
A Child's Right

The famous 42' CRISPE Bus and the Equal Parenting Bike Trek combine their advocacy efforts!

Their Mission: To help bring awareness to the child abuse that is occuring across the country when a child is denied their fundamental right to be loved, guided, educated and nurtured by both fit and willing parents after a divorce.

Lansing, Michigan - Ohio - Pennsylvania - D.C.

Robert Pedersen and Rob MacKenzie will depart on their 700 mile bicycle trek forchildren on August 11th, 2007 near the Lansing, MI Capitol. The purpose of this intense700 mile bicycle trek is to bring awareness to a child's fundamental right to be loved,guided, nurtured and educated by both fit and willing parents after a divorce.

August 12th, 2007 the Equal Parenting Bike Trek (cycing4children.com) will meet up with the CRISPE bus in Akron, OH for a rally to begin at noon.

August 13th, 2007 they will unite again in the afternoon for a rally in Pittsburg, PA

August 18th, 2007 they will unite one last time at the Family Preservation Rally (www.dcrally2007.com) in Washington, D.C.

The CRISPE (Children's Rights Initiative for Sharing Parents Equally) BUS is truly an impressive sight to see inside and out. View the specs on this massive 43' defender of children's rights. Learn more about the 501c3 non-profit organization CRISPE www.crispe.org

A professional film crew will also be documenting the united advocacy when the CRISPE bus and the Equal Parenting Bike Trek cyclists meet to rally for children's rights. For additional information about the rallies please visit the webpage for CRISPE.

Cycling4Children www.cycling4children.com

CRISPE www.crispe.org

Family Preservation Rally www.dcrally2007.com

###

Indian Gov't To Review Anti-Male Laws

Anonymous · 11 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Looks like MRActivism works. The Indian Govt has decided to review the DV law passed last year. Two proposed laws have been put on hold! Story here. Excerpt:

'One law that is reportedly being misused the most is the Domestic Violence Act passed by Parliament just last year. The Supreme Court called it a clumsily drafted law and since its inception, it has even been slapped against some top bureaucrats.'

Female DV Victim Fraudster Forfeits Lottery Winnings

Luek · 11 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This article is about a female who used her ex-boyfriend's dead mother's credit card to purchase the winning ticket in a state lottery. She at first claimed to be a victim of DV and asked lottery officials to keep her winning the lottery private. What got her caught was she still used the dead mother's stolen credit card after winning the lottery! I guess all that slapping around from DV caused her not to think too good huh? Excerpt:

'Prosecutors said Christina Goodenow, of White City, used a credit card that belonged to her then-boyfriend's dead mother to buy a winning $1 million Scratch-It ticket in Oct. 2005.

Goodenow asked lottery officials to keep her win quiet, claiming to be a victim of domestic violence. But police learned of the crime about two weeks later, as Goodenow continued to use the stolen credit card.'

Norway: Gov't Establishes Men's Panel

Matt · 11 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The 32 men in the sport's pub are members of the newly established Men's panel, set up by Bekkemellem to introduce a public debate on men's rights. Men are falling behind in the education system, rarely get custody over children after divorce, and face other health risks than women, the minister argued.

The Men's panel will discuss these issues and more, and will advise the Government on the drafting of a forthcoming white paper on men and equality, due next summer.'

Great News/Advance in Australia!

Acksiom · 11 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Snip 'not worth cost' -- CIRCUMCISION will be banned in Victorian public hospitals unless it is for medical reasons. The State Government has ordered the ban, which starts next month, following medical advice that circumcision of baby boys was unnecessary."

Our victory is inevitable, because truth, reason, and justice are all on our side.

Draft Clock ticks closer to midnight

Matt · 11 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The new "War Czar" has finally said it...
Bush War Adviser Says Draft Worth a Look

No mention of adding women to the Selective Service "draftables", either.

Relatedly, Democrats Say Leaving Iraq May Take Years. Yeah, no kidding.

Boycott Askmen.com

Anonymous · 12 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Askmen.com, an online men's magazine, has published this piece on their front page: Single Fathers' Rights.

The article starts with back-handed shaming ... (would anyone ever qualify an article by questioning a mother's love?)

"Everything discussed in this article is predicated on two main ideas: that you "know" that you're a good, loving father and that you want to play a significant role in your child's life, and that you're willing against all odds to get along with your ex -- the mother of your child -- to do so."

... Goes on to rhyme off sexist assumptions to justify anti-male family courts...

" * Usually it's the father who heads out to work while the mother spends the first few months at home with the child.
* The mother either continues to be with the child or sets out to coordinate other forms of daycare, and is a part of the child's early life in that way.
* Personally, aside from the practical, we guys must allow for primal considerations before going completely mental from access imbalance.
* Consider the child's natural affinity to the mother: The baby lived inside your ex for nine months and then spent another eight attached to her breast."

... And concludes with suggesting that men should "know their place" when it comes to family matters ...

"We great fathers, for the sake of peace of mind, must acknowledge that there are really compelling and valid reasons why the courts favor the mother. Instead of slowly committing emotional suicide, compromising our own happiness and -- more importantly -- that of our beautiful children, maybe it's time, against all odds, to e-mail your ex and write this sentence: "For the sake of our child, let's make peace.""

Be courteous, professional, and make yourself heard.
E-mail AskMen here.
E-mail the author at pehrlich-at-sympatico.ca

Wikipedia: Global Male Suicide

anthony · 12 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This is a global suicide chart provided by The World Health Organization. As expected, the numbers show an overwhelming gender disparity. This information, while morbid, should serve as a sobering reality regarding the least spoken of MRA topics. The numbers are disturbing.

Article Still Resonates

anthony · 12 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks to Tony for this link:

Men Are They Really That Bad?"

Published in 1994, but a good one for your collection. Excerpt:

'The assumption is that men are fair game. Any man insulting is retributive: a payback for the years, the centuries, of male domination and oppression. And for the continuing Awfulness of Men.

In a similar way, of course, the bourgeoisie deserved every bashing it took under Soviet communism: After the revolution, the Zhivago family had to retreat to a corner of their Moscow mansion and submit to the insults of the proletariat who moved in to abuse the former masters and break up the furniture for firewood.
...
But this is utopian dreaming. If we were to leave off argument and think kindly for a moment, on the premise that men and women will go on mixing with one another in the current mindless and anarchic way, we might spin the thought that good can come of each sex thinking the best of the other, and might see the converse truth: that only bad can come of each one thinking the worst. Tolerance and decency are creative, civilizing traits. A rising standard of expectation -- a mutual hope, a sympathetic mingling of desires -- will lift all boats. Quite a long time ago -- remember? -- we used to fall in love.

Forum: Criminalizing America's fathers?

anthony · 13 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'This plague of fatherless children is driven not only by culture but also by federal programs that subsidize single-parent homes through quasi-welfare entitlements for the affluent that welfare reform did not address.

In fact, the welfare subsidy on single-mother homes was never really curtailed so much as it was shifted. Reformers largely replaced welfare with child support, on the reasonable principle that fathers, rather than taxpayers, should support their children. But a profound unintended consequence has been the transformation of welfare from public assistance into law enforcement.'

On YouTube: Feminist Hate Speech

anthony · 13 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Vid here.

This speech was submitted to YouTube about six months ago. This woman reminds me of a date rape seminar I was forced to attend at Syracuse. Definitely check out the comment and response section. Feminism: A politically correct hate movement!

On YouTube: Kim Gandy Endorses Hillary Clinton

anthony · 13 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Clip here.

A YouTube video staring Hillary and Kim Gandy. This is NOW's endorsement of Hillary. This endorsement was reported on this site about three months ago. The video certainly expands on the articles submitted.

RADAR Alert: Attend the Pro-Family Rally on the DC Mall August 18-19

Matt · 14 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

RADAR will be participating in an important pro-family rally at the DC Mall on August 18th and 19th. Advocates from many kinds of religious and secular organizations will be speaking at the rally on topics such as marriage, shared parenting, divorce, and social policy reforms.

Domestic violence continues to be an important social problem. The existing gender-based approach to domestic violence has failed to impact domestic violence trends because VAWA does not address violence or its causes. It funds radical organizations who devote substantial resources to covering-up for women's violence, shifting blame for it onto men, and mischaracterizing minor disagreements among couples as serious domestic violence.

An authoritative array of studies report that men and women are equal instigators of domestic violence. And many experts believe that government-funded intervention in minor family disputes is actually quite destructive. VAWA must be reformed to recognize these facts, to take appropriate steps to prevent serious domestic violence while appropriately penalizing the party who initiates it regardless of gender, and also to guarantee that minor disagreements among couples are not treated as serious domestic violence.

This may be the most important policy reform rally ever held on the Mall. RADAR invites the organizations in the VAWA Reform Coalition and others to attend. For the latest information about the rally, please visit http://www.dcrally2007.com/.

See You There!

++
Date of RADAR Release: August 13, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/

Baby Left in Car Dies-- Mother not Charged

Matt · 14 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Poor Dearism taken to the point where even criminal negligence leading to infant homicide is excusable. Excerpt:

'A Wyoming County mother who left her young child in her car while she worked will not be charged with the baby's death.

Lynn Brol said she forgot to drop her 5-month-old son, Brayden, at day care on Aug. 2 and drove directly to her job at a credit union in Arcade.
...
The boy was found dead by his mother at the end of the workday, nine hours later.
...
The death was ruled accidental. Brol could have been charged with criminally negligent homicide, a charge that would result from conduct so reckless it results in a fatality.

An autopsy showed that Brayden was otherwise healthy with no bruises or suspicious marks.

Arcade Police Chief John Laird and his office investigated the death. "It was a tragic accident and I support the DA's decision," he said.'

Mary Winkler Released

anthony · 14 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'After spending a total of seven months in custody, the Tennessee woman who fatally shot her preacher was released on Tuesday, her lawyer told CNN.

Mary Winkler, a 33-year-old mother of three girls, was freed from a Tennessee mental health facility where she was treated for depression and post-traumatic stress disorder, lawyer Steve Farese said.
...
Farese said his client will not talk to the news media because she continues to wage a legal battle to win custody of her girls and faces a $2 million civil suit filed by the parents of of her slain husband, Matthew Winkler.

The Next Duke U. Case? G.I. Jane Claims Rape

Roy · 15 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Rape or party?

Excerpt:
'Airman 1st Class Cassandra Hernandez, 20, said she got drunk at a party the night of May 12, 2006, and she admits that her memories of the evening are fuzzy at best. Airman 1st Class Jerrel Apache, Airman Russell Basile and Airman Rotez Butler also admit they had been drinking for several hours.

But fuzzy memories alone can't explain the discrepancies between what they say and what she says happened after the party, in the early-morning hours of May 13, 2006.

Hernandez told investigators that the men gang-raped her in a dorm room. The men say Hernandez consented to have sex with each of them, and that she instigated the sex."

Father Tasered Trying to Leave Hospital with Infant

Matt · 15 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'HOUSTON (AP) - In a confrontation captured on videotape, a hospital security guard fired a stun gun to stop a defiant father from taking home his newborn, sending both man and child crashing to the floor.

Now the man says the baby girl suffers from head trauma because she was dropped.
...
David Boling, an off-duty Houston police officer working security at the hospital, and another security guard can be seen on the surveillance video arriving at the elevators and trying to talk with Lewis. Lewis appears agitated as he walks around the elevators holding his daughter in his right arm.

Within 40 seconds of arriving, Boling is holding the Taser. He walks around Lewis and whispers to the other guard, who moves to Lewis' right side.

About a minute later, Boling can be seen casually standing near Lewis, not looking in his direction, when he suddenly raises the Taser and fires it at Lewis, who was still holding his daughter.'

Remember men, a man holding a baby is ipso facto a criminal!

Has Spiritual Abusiveness Driven Some Men From America's Churches, “Volunteer” Organizations, and More?

MR · 15 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Men's News Daily has just moved most of its authors to blogworks, due to the way Google searches on news stories. Here's a first submission through blogworks.

Has Spiritual Abusiveness Driven Some Men From America's Churches, “Volunteer” Organizations, and More?

Excerpt:
'Much has been written about the spiritual and emotional abuse of Churches in America, but that abuse, targeting also Fathers and men, extends far beyond those supposedly safe havens. In today's world, the spirit of Fathers and men is deserving of respect and courtesy, but is assailed on all sides with insults, put-downs, unfair characterizations, judgmental attitudes, condemning comments, negative stereotypes and a host of other destructive imagery, and visualizations. The emotional and spiritual abuse of men extends far beyond the realm of America's Churches, into the institutional settings of education, law, entertainment, commercial advertising, news, and more.'

Nifong Turns in License

Matt · 15 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'AUGUST 15--In a pathetic end to the Mike Nifong saga, the disgraced North Carolina prosecutor who handled the Duke rape investigation has turned in his law license, noting that he never framed or displayed the document because it had been damaged "by a puppy in her chewing stage."'

The Late 30s are Men's Misery Years

Matt · 15 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Whether they are mourning the passing of their prime or struggling to cope with the demands of a job and young family, those aged 35-44 invariably hit a mid-life crisis when their happiness level plunges lower than at any other age, according to a study for the Government.

It makes them the least satisfied members of society, scoring well below teenagers, the elderly - and women of all ages.

Researchers found that it takes men until they reach the age of 65 to start enjoying life as much as they did in their late-teens and early-20s.
...
The biggest difference between the sexes was in the contentment of those not working, with women far happier than men to stay at home not seeking work.'

Father absence correlated to brain development impedence

Maurice Mok · 17 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Feminists have painted themselves into a corner by ignoring medical science. Soon to be published research: humans have a cross gender parenting brain, and then there is the maternal brain and the PATERNAL brain.

Men always knew how to father their children, it's hard-wired, even Dr. Spock advised and to paraphrase "Let fathers do with children what comes naturally to them."

The following citation to quote:

'On the behavioral level, a variety of studies in humans have reported a correlation between the absence of the father during childhood and the risk for alcoholism, poor educational performance, aggressiveness and criminality (Vaden-Kiernan et al., 1995; Baskerville, 2002).

...
The analysis of animal models, in which the impact of distinct familial constellations on synaptic maturation can be identified and quantitatively characterized, may serve as a basis for understanding the endocrine and neuronal factors, which mediate experience-driven neuronal and synaptic malformations and at later life periods result in the development of behavioral and cognitive deficits as well as mental disorders.'
AND
'Our results query the general assumption that a father has less impact on the synaptic maturation of his offspring's brain than the mother.'

IN OTHER WORDS, FATHER ABSENCE (WITHOUT CHILD-MOTHER ADVERSITY) PRODUCES BRAIN RETARDATION IN THE POSTNATAL INFANT BRAIN.

Germany Releases Terrorist - Female, of course

Matt · 17 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'BERLIN, Germany (AP) -- A German court said Friday it ordered the early release on parole of a former Red Army Faction member who was convicted in the 1985 murder of a U.S. soldier.

Eva Haule can be released August 21 after serving 21 years of her life sentence, the Frankfurt state court said in a statement.

...

In 1994, a Frankfurt court found her guilty of participating in the murder of Edward Pimental, a 20-year-old Army soldier, in the western German city of Wiesbaden, as well as in the bombing of the U.S. Rhein-Main air base.'

Boys on the side

Anonymous · 17 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

"When it comes to gender equality in the classroom, says one local educator, our public schools are earning an F"

Manthey's mantra, and rallying cry, seems to be: Don't blame the boys.

"When girls were behind in math and science, we said, 'We want to help these girls' and that there's something wrong with the schools," he says. "But when boys don't do well in school, we say there's something wrong with the boy."

Carey Roberts: Newark Triple-Murder Reveals Need for Fathers

anthony · 17 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'"Enough is enough," thundered Newark mayor Cory Booker at Saturday's funeral of Dashon Harvey. The weekend before Dashon, age 20, and two of his friends had been forced to kneel against a wall at a nearby school playground and shot in the head, execution-style.

Dashon had been a student at Delaware State University, eventually hoping to become a social worker.

City Journal commentator Steven Malanga reveals the social pathology that lies behind those murders: "An astonishing 60 percent of the city's kids are growing up without fathers. Studies have also found that about 70 percent of the long-term prisoners in our jails, those who have committed the most violent crimes, grew up without fathers."'

MSNBC: Did preacher's wife get away with murder?

anthony · 17 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Mary Winkler, the Tennessee woman who shot her minister husband to death while he slept, was released back into society this week after serving just 67 days, most of it in a prison hospital.

Did she get away with murder? Many think she did, including two TODAY experts, former judge and prosecutor Jeanine Pirro, and forensic psychiatrist Dr. Keith Ablow.

"You can't give Mary Winkler, in my opinion, any kind of clean bill of health that she won't be violent in the future," Ablow told TODAY host Meredith Vieira on Thursday.'

Male bar patrons to get urinal cake message

anthony · 17 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The effort is aimed at men ages 21 to 34, who are the most common offenders.

Male patrons will receive the following message from a female voice:

"Hey big guy, going out tonight? Having a few drinks? Make sure if you're drinking, you find a sober driver. Because if you drink and drive, the next urinal you use could be in jail. Remember, your future is in your hand."'

Related: Video: Urinals will warn against drunken driving

D.C. S.W.A.T. Team Called On F4J Protestors

axolotl · 18 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

On Glenn Sacks: This is probably not good publicity, but at least it shows that we're serious!

-ax

Excerpt:
'Fatherhood activist Bob Norton was present yesterday when two Fathers 4 Justice activists beached security and climbed onto the Lincoln Memorial in Washington DC. He sent me the following eye-witness account of the incident:

"I was at the Lincoln Memorial today and witnessed and filmed two F4J UK folks climb into Abe Lincoln's lap at the Lincoln Memorial. I was detained for about an hour by park police and a SWAT team arrived quickly thereafter. Although they were respectful to me, they patted me down three times and I told them I did not consent to any search.'

UK: Boys underachieving at school

anthony · 18 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'But today's study says white, working-class boys are most at risk of underachieving. Of the 33,404 white boys eligible for free school meals, just 37 per cent can read and write properly at 14. This compares with 57 per cent of working-class white girls and 46 per cent of black boys.

Chris Skidmore, the Bow Group chairman and the report's author, said: "This study reveals the shocking underachievement of boys at every stage. If we want to raise standards in schools, tackling these problems early on is crucial - the half of all boys who fail at 11 are the same half of all boys failing at GCSE and beyond.'

A June Video Interview with Donald Tenn of F4J, U.S. (arrested yesterday)

MR · 18 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I was shocked this morning to read the news that Donald Tenn and three (3) other Fathers are being held in custody in Washington, D.C., following an alleged attempt by the Fathers to exercise constitutionally protected free speech rights.

I listened to one of the posted videos of the event, and heard a guard repeatedly say, "Don't give them any attention," or words to that effect. I guess those words say a lot about the attitude shown to Fathers, regarding many of their rights.

Donald Tenn Interview - June 2007 -SYG website

Donald Tenn Interview - June 2007 -MND blogwonks website

Equal Parenting Bike Trek Cyclists Made Their 700 Mile Trek to D.C. in 5 days

Anonymous · 18 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Robert Pedersen and Robb MacKenzie made their 700 mile bicycle trek from Lansing, MI to Washington, D.C. in 5 days with plenty of time to spare before the August 18th Family Preservation Rally.

Visit http://www.cycling4children.com/ for more information.

View videos from their 700 mile trek here.

View photos at
http://cycling4children.typepad.com/photos/cycling4childrenphotos/index.html

More importantly look at the extensive media and blogger coverage of the Equal Parenting Bike Trek. The list is long and impressive!

http://cycling4children.typepad.com/cycling4childrencom/equal-parenting-bike-trek.html

Special thanks to all of our individual donors and also our organizational sponsors!

http://cycling4children.typepad.com/cycling4childrencom/cycling4childrensponsors.html

On YouTube: John Stewart on Duke/ Nancy Grace

anthony · 19 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Stewart gives his take on the Duke outcome and the biased coverage by CNN's Nancy Grace. Absolutely hilarious!

Lincoln Memorial Protest Covered by UK Media, not US

Matt · 19 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Curious, huh? The Lincoln Memorial protesters are covered in the UK MSM but not in the US. Wonder why? Story here. Excerpt:

'Two British Fathers 4 Justice activists were arrested at gunpoint by a Swat team at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington DC, said the campaign founder.

A support crew of four were also held as the memorial was evacuated by US authorities.

British activists Jolly Stanesby and Mike Downes organised and performed the protest, with support by US colleagues on the ground, a Fathers 4 Justice spokesman said.'

Go ahead, Google "Fathers 4 Justice Lincoln Memorial" and see if you get any US MSM coverage. Not a single hit.

Sexual Harassment charges against 13-year-olds dropped blaze4metal · 20 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Two 13-year-old boys accused of slapping girls' bottoms and poking or cupping girls' breasts at school apologized on Monday as a judge dismissed charges against the two, ending a six-month case that drew national attention.'

Great news! Not a complete victory though:

'The News-Register newspaper of McMinnville reported that a "civil compromise" reached by prosecutors and the defense called for both boys to apologize, to pay each of the four girls $250 and to complete a "boundaries education" program.'

Of course, the girls that were playing this game will not have to do the program or pay money (or will even be acknowledged as guilty as well). At least the boys will not be filed as sex offenders for the rest of the lives.

RADAR ALERT: Submit Video Questions For Republican CNN YouTube Debate

Matt · 20 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The Republican CNN YouTube Debate is currently scheduled for November 28, 2007. The YouTube format, in which anyone can submit a question for the candidates in a video uploaded to YouTube, presents a perfect opportunity for RADAR supporters to bring much needed attention to some of the issues RADAR addresses. As stated at youtube.com, http://www.youtube.com/debates, “The CNN political team will choose the most creative and compelling videos, and if yours is one of them, you may get the chance to fly to Tampa to watch the debate live and offer your reactions on video afterward.”

YouTube gives the following advice for your video being chosen:

- Be original -- choose your own approach.
- Be personal -- your perspective is important.
- Choose your focus -- you can address one or all of the candidates.
- Keep it quick -- your question should be less than 30 seconds (and, in the language of your choice).
- Make it look good -- speak loudly and keep that camera steady.
- Provide context -- in your question or video description, include your name & home town.

And, of course, all videos are subject to the YouTube Terms of Use.

We at RADAR request that you ask your own question (or questions) regarding a RADAR issue, such as false allegations of domesticviolence, male victims of domestic violence being ignored, overzealousprosecutors, and VAWA reform, and send your video to YouTube here: http://www.youtube.com/contest/RepublicanDebate

Thanks!

++
Date of RADAR Release: August 19, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/

Tim McKyer speaks at Family Preservation Rally on Equal Parenting Rights

Anonymous · 21 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

View the video that people are still raving about from the Family Preservation Rally on August 18th 2007. Speaker: Tim McKyer, 3-time Super Bowl winner.

GreenStone Media about to be shut down, Fonda and Steinem not paying employees

Anonymous · 21 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'GreenStone Media debuted with a splash a year and a half ago, with ambitious plans to target what was perceived to be a potentially huge market -- talk radio for women -- and high-powered financial backers.

The ending will be considerably quieter. Unless executives of GreenStone can cobble together a last-minute financial rescue, the network will sign off Friday.'

Relatedly,

Jane Fonda slammed for not paying female employees

'Veteran actress and feminist Jane Fonda has been slammed for not paying her female employees working in the actress' radio network Green Stone Media.

The twice Oscar winner and the radio network's co-founder Gloria Steinem have been accused of "putting their own reputations above their female employees' finances."'

New CDC study: "Men Shouldn't Be Overlooked as Victims of Partner Violence"

Anonymous · 21 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This article in Psychiatric News should be distributed to as many editors, politicians, educators etc. as possible. Excerpt:

'In addressing intimate partner violence, the focus is usually on women who are physically battered by husbands or boyfriends. However, women sometimes hurt their partners as well.

Women are doing virtually everything these days that men are - working as doctors, lawyers, and rocket scientists; flying helicopters in combat; riding horses in the Kentucky Derby. And physically assaulting their spouses or partners.

In fact, when it comes to nonreciprocal violence between intimate partners, women are more often the perpetrators.'

Sacks' Newsletter: Links to F4J Lincoln Memorial Vids

Matt · 21 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Glenn Sacks' most recent newsletter includes links to video of the F4J Lincoln Memorial protest, among other good reporting. It's the third entry down.

Men writing on gender issues: Beware!

Matt · 21 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Earlier this month, members of the International Academy of Sex Research, gathering for their annual meeting in Vancouver, informally discussed one of the most contentious and personal social science controversies in recent memory.

The central figure, J. Michael Bailey, a psychologist at Northwestern University, has promoted a theory that his critics think is inaccurate, insulting and potentially damaging to transgender women.

...

The hostilities began in the spring of 2003, when Dr. Bailey published a book, “The Man Who Would Be Queen,” intended to explain the biology of sexual orientation and gender to a general audience.

...

Dr. Dreger is the latest to arrive at the battlefront. She is a longtime advocate for people born with ambiguous sexuality and has been strongly critical of sex researchers in the past. She said she had presumed that Dr. Bailey was guilty and, after meeting him through a mutual friend, had decided to investigate for herself.

...she concluded that the accusations against the psychologist were essentially groundless.

...

“The bottom line is that they tried to ruin this guy, and they almost succeeded,” Dr. Dreger said.

...

“That was the worst blow of all, that we didn’t get much support” from Northwestern, said Gerulf Rieger, a graduate student of Dr. Bailey’s at the time, and now a lecturer at Northwestern. “They were quite scared and not very professional, I thought.”

No passports for 'deadbeats'

Matt · 21 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Video story here.

Basically, if a man (err, sorry, NCP) owes more than a certain amount by order of a court to his child's (or someone else's) mother, he doesn't get a passport. Without one of course, he can neither enter another country nor re-eneter this one. So much for the right of travel and passage that "all Americans" are supposed to have.

Fox Video: "Superheroes scale Lincoln Memorial"

anthony · 21 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Fox covers the Lincoln Memorial protest with video:

Superheroes scale Lincoln Memorial

School experimenting with gender separation

anthony · 21 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Separating boys and girls is an educational trend that has gained momentum from research showing profound physiological differences between the sexes at young ages.

Chris Raeker, principal at Carman Trails, began looking into single-sex education as boys' discipline problems rose and test scores dropped.

...

But critics, such as Kim Gandy, president of the National Organization for Women, argue that single-sex schools promote sexual stereotypes and lead to inequalities.

"Even when such classes start out on equal footing, when schools in America get split into genders, the girls always end up getting the short end of the stick," Gandy said. "There is still sexism in this society. There are still people who want to return to what they see as the proper role of the sexes."'

Essay: "Working women could use a wife"

anthony · 21 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Now that women have solidly earned their place in the work force, many find themselves still yearning for something men often have: wives.

"The thing I most want in life is a wife. I'm not kidding," said Joyce Lustbader, a research scientist at Columbia University, who has been married for 29 years. "I work all day, sometimes seven days a week, and still have to go home and make dinner and have all those things to do around the house."'

Female teacher sentenced to 60 days for sex with student

anthony · 21 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman who taught at Tenino High School was sentenced to 60 days in jail Monday for having a sexual relationship with a then 16-year-old female student, but she was not ordered to stay away from the teen upon her release.

...

Welter, 38, pleaded guilty to two criminal counts, both gross misdemeanors — communicating with a minor for immoral purposes and sexual misconduct with a minor — as part of a plea deal Monday in Lewis County Superior Court, Hill and Lewis County Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Colin Hayes said.

As part of the plea deal, Hayes agreed to dismiss two counts of communicating with a minor for immoral purposes and reduced another count of communicating with a minor for immoral purposes from a felony to a gross misdemeanor."'

Resource List of "Naughty Teachers"

Matt · 22 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Found it here. It lists the many "naughty teachers" appearing in the news today and links to the stories reporting them.

As long as they are called "naughty" and not "criminal", I suppose it'll just keep going on and on...

Mother upset that the 24 year old woman who had sex with her 14 year old son was given probation

ItsDan · 22 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

The really interesting twist is, the same mother's 23 year old son is currently in jail for having sex with a 14 year old girl. Excerpt:

'"If she was a man, she would already be in prison," the mother said. "She's only out because she's a woman. A criminal should not be able to hide behind the fact that they have a child."'

Newsweek: He's Dead, Winkler Free. What's Up With That?

anthony · 22 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'Mary Winkler is a free woman—free of her abusive marriage and free of jail. After 67 days in a mental-health facility in Tennessee, Winkler was released earlier this week and has returned to her hometown of McMinnville. But is she free of the posttraumatic stress disorder and depression that her legal team said drove her to gun down her preacher-husband, Matthew, last year? ...Winkler's critics wonder if she ever had PTSD in the first place and say the diagnosis was just a means of getting off easy.'

NOW Conference Videos from Detroit (July 7, 2007)

anthony · 22 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

My reasoning for posting these videos is simple. I believe it is vital for MRA's to fully digest what feminists have to say because it has a direct impact on our movement.

.....
Sample Quote: Writer and Producer, Jill Soloway:

"On why movies don't tell more women's stories] [Men in Hollywood] have nothing to do except be ambitious. We make babies, we make beauty, we make dinner, we make homes, we make gardens, we make people happy. Men come to Hollywood and wake up every morning thinking 'My story needs to be told."
.....

Sample Qoute: National Congress of Black Women Chair, Dr. E. Faye Williams

"We women are now learning that freedom is not free, and eternal vigilance is the price of freedom. . . . We will be respected, and we will begin by making sure that we respect ourselves, and that we respect our sisters. We will demand respect from the minority gender. Those who have problems with that, might as well get over it."
.....
Kim Gandy's Latest quote (not related to the video conference):

"With attitudes like this so common, I guess it's not surprising to learn that one in five high school girls had been physically or sexually abused by a dating partner, according to a 2001 study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association. The lead author of the study said the findings suggest that many adolescent boys "have adopted attitudes that men are entitled to control their girlfriends through violence." This control can have both immediate and far-reaching effects. For instance, girls who had been victimized were eight to nine times more likely to have attempted suicide in the previous year."

....Now I see, suicide becomes a problem when it involves girls. Boys four times more likely to commit suicide? Apparently not an issue for Gandy's perverse feminist goals....

School Suspends Boy for Sketching Gun

anthony · 23 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Let's put this in perspective. The boy simply sketched a picture of a gun. No bullets or threats were included on this drawing. Are we shocked? Society criminalizes men for the most assine reasons. The attack on boys is growing at an alarming rate: another reason why boys have become disinterested with school.

We need to educate the mothers of young boys. As any good parent, if they were aware of this boy crisis, they would demand massive changes throughout the education system.

Let's be honest, most women want their sons to succeed. That's why I gave my sister with two sons a copy of Sommer's break through book: "The War Against Boys." My sister was shocked and felt the book was so important, she gave several copies to other women affiliated with the P.T.A.

Beta Site Suspended for Securiy Concerns

Matt · 23 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

MANN Regulars,

The Beta site has been suspended because the software that it uses has had some security issues reported about it. Sorry, but it is better to be safe than sorry when these things come up.

OK, let the conspiracy theorizing begin! >)

Matt

OpenCongress Bill Tracker Now Available

Matt · 23 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Many MRAs are involved not just in men's issues but politics in general. I know few who have not at one or another time gotten very interested in the status of some bill weaving tis way through "The System".

The OpenCongress people have just created a new past-able web-widget to help you track the status of any given particular bill without having to search and re-search for it on the Congress' Thomas site. The idea is not unlike what you do to add a page hit counter to a web page.

Without further ado, go here.

Russia: Woman sets fire to ex-husband's penis

Matt · 23 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'MOSCOW (Reuters) - A woman set fire to her ex-husband's penis as he sat naked watching television and drinking vodka, Moscow police said Wednesday.
...
"It was monstrously painful," the wounded ex-husband told Tvoi Den newspaper. "I was burning like a torch. I don't know what I did to deserve this."'

No talk of what, if any, charges she will face.

Arizona Woman Allegedly Stabs Estranged Husband During Sex

anthony · 23 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'An Arizona woman has been charged with attempted murder after allegedly stabbing her estranged husband in the chest during sex, MyFOXPhoenix.com reports.

Falon Gonzales, 23, was released on $100,000 bond after being booked Tuesday night, according to the report. Her husband, Juan Carlos Gonzales, 26, was listed in serious condition at a local hospital.

...

Authorities said Juan Gonzales moved out of the couple's home about a month ago and asked to meet his wife and a home appraiser Tuesday afternoon. He later showed Falon Gonzales dissolution of marriage papers.'

Former Child Support Enforcement Officer Exposes the Corruption of the Child Support Industry

Anonymous · 23 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

View the video of Carol Rhodes at the Family Preservation Rally in Washington, D.C. Carol, author of Friend of the Court Enemy of the Family, exposes the corruption within the Child Support Agencies.

View more videos from the Family Preservation Rally here.

Essay: "There's a difference between military's men and women"

anthony · 23 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'During a recent Democratic debate, both Sens. Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama indicated that all female U.S. citizens should register for the Selective Service. Neither candidate was as ridiculous as former Alaska Sen. Mike Gravel, who said, when it comes to men and women being drafted, "What's the difference?" But the radical and dangerous implications of the front-runners' policies are not that far from Gravel's query.'

Men's News Daily: The State Of The Fatherhood Movement

anthony · 23 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Here is the good news: The rally demonstrated that we have very solid policy solutions to offer. There were some riveting talks worthy of national broadcast. We have stronger ideas, speakers, and an overarching sense of cooperativeness never seen before in the movement. The talks were supposed to be 25% about the problem, and 75% about the answers – but overall the percentage was at best 50-50. This is a remarkable improvement given our history.'

'Barbie Bandit' Suspect Pleads Guilty

Anonymous · 24 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Here is an update on the "Barbie Bandit" who robbed a bank for kicks. Excerpt:

'One of the two young women dubbed the "Barbie Bandits" after a videotaped bank theft pleaded guilty Wednesday and apologized in tears.

"I regret what I did. I wish I could take it back every day," Heather Johnston, 19, told the judge.'

Steve

Toronto Star: Where are the men?

Anonymous · 24 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Front page news on Sunday in the Toronto Star: Where are the men?. Excerpt:

'Most – like Smith, 36, with three children by different fathers – received no help from the men. A few have, including Zenith Isaacs, 35, who was helped by Julian Hinckson, 41, the father of her two youngest, until he was stabbed to death in June near their Sparroway home.

Throughout the city, single mothers are raising children on little money, often in public housing where kids are exposed to greater risks, because it's all they can afford. Too often, they live with fear and violence.'

UPDATE: Read the second installment: Where are the women?. Excerpt:

'Yesterday, the Toronto Star reported on a hidden crisis of single mothers, mostly black, mostly in public housing and routinely living with fear and violence. We asked everybody we interviewed to offer solutions.

Jordan's advice was as blunt as it gets: The problem lies as much with the women themselves as with men who turn out to be absent dads.'

Women Charged with Pandering: Aunt Hires Prostitutes for 12-YO Boy

Matt · 24 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Video here. Well it's good law enforcement seems serious about prosecuting "the aunt" as well as "the mom" (who may or may not have known about what auntie was going to use the money for), but I have to wonder-- if it were an uncle setting up a niece to have sex with whomever under whatever terms, how would the press be covering it?

Wall Street Journal: Are we teaching our kids to be fearful of men?

anthony · 24 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Child-welfare groups say these are necessary precautions, given that most predators are male. But fathers' rights activists and educators now argue that an inflated predator panic is damaging men's relationships with kids. Some men are opting not to get involved with children at all, which partly explains why many youth groups can't find male leaders, and why just 9% of elementary-school teachers are male, down from 18% in 1981.'

Essay: 'PC Feminism and the DV Courts'

anthony · 24 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'If the PC feminist theory of domestic violence was only being taught to womens' studies majors, that would be one thing, but it's being taught to judges charged with the responsibility of granting temporary and permanent DV restraining orders, and, to some degree, with the responsibility of deciding custody and visitation issues. In a report entitled "Education for Injustice," RADAR (Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting) identified a number of examples of this. Here are two: West Virginia's benchbook on domestic violence, the official judicial handbook, states, incorrectly, that "women are overwhelmingly the typical victims of domestic violence;" similarly, Alabama's benchbook puts forth the false claim, "National crime statistics show that about 95% of spouse-abuse victims are women." This "education" is funded by the federal government pursuant to the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA).'

Woman Pleads Guilty In Blood-Drinking Sex Encounter

anthony · 25 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Tiffany Sutton, 23, originally pleaded not guilty to nine counts of aggravated assault. On Friday, she changed her plea, pleading guilty to one count of aggravated assault and one count of dangerous aggravated assault.

Sutton was arrested Feb. 13 outside the Tempe home she'd been sharing with Robert McDaniel. Sutton claimed the two were living together, but McDaniel told police Sutton was a transient who'd been staying at his place for a few days.

McDaniel told police that he'd consented to being tied up during sex but became scared when Sutton attacked him with a knife.'

Mom's discipline not abuse, Isle judges rule

anthony · 25 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Here's the million dollar question: What if it was dad that abused his daughter using the same methods as this mother? Excerpt:

'The Hawai'i Supreme Court issued a major ruling last week on the question: At what point does the use of corporal punishment cross the line to criminal child abuse?

In a 3-2 decision, the high court ruled that a mother was not guilty of child abuse for hitting her 14-year-old daughter with a backpack, a plastic hanger, a small brush and the plastic handle of a tool. The high court reversed a jury's verdict that had convicted the mother.'

Nifong Gets $9,000 Bill for Disbarment

anthony · 26 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'DURHAM, N.C. (AP) - The North Carolina State Bar has billed disgraced former prosecutor Mike Nifong nearly $9,000 for hearings that led to his disbarment in the wake of the discredited Duke lacrosse rape case.

A three-member disciplinary commission stripped Nifong of his law license in June, finding he had committed more than two dozen violations of the state's rules of professional conduct while prosecuting three Duke lacrosse players on false rape, sexual assault and kidnapping charges. Nifong apologized to the players at the June hearing.'

Resolution 590: Why is Congress Ignoring the Needs of Abusive Women?

anthony · 26 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'The resolution states, "Whereas male children exposed to domestic violence are twice as likely to abuse their own partners." But research shows that girls exposed to domestic violence are also at much greater risk of perpetuating the cycle of violence -- why does the bill include no mention of that?

In some places, the resolution misleads, such as its claim that "adolescent girls who reported dating violence were 60 percent more likely to report one or more suicide attempts in the past year." But in truth, it's adolescent boys subjected to dating violence who are more like to attempt suicide, says the U.S. Centers for Disease Control.

A few years ago family violence researcher Murray Straus wrote an essay called "Women's Violence toward Men is a Serious Social Problem." Not only did women engage in partner violence at least as often as men, but women were actually more likely to deliver the first blow. Indeed, "every study finds that women initiate violence in a large proportion of cases," Straus noted.'

Ed. note: See RADAR Alert posting re this issue.

Duke Case Book Review: "Until Proven Innocent"

anthony · 26 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Review here.

This new book will be released on September 4, 2007.

'A chilling, gripping account of how our judicial system can go terribly wrong. This is an important book that brings the Duke story to life and exposes troubling facts about our justice system and our citadels of higher learning. You may think you know the Duke story—but you don't until you read this book." — Jan Crawford Greenberg, ABC News legal correspondent and author of "Supreme Conflict"'

RADAR ALERT: House Resolution 590 Sparks Outrage

Matt · 27 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Representative Ted Poe of Texas recently introduced a resolution on domestic violence. The resolution makes numerous claims that are one-sided, misleading, and even false.

This is probably the worst of the bunch:

“Whereas according to one study, during court ordered visitation, five percent of abusive fathers threaten to kill their spouses, 34 percent of abusive fathers threaten to kidnap their children, and 25 percent of abusive fathers threaten to physically hurt their children;”

That defamatory claim and many others in House Resolution 590 have triggered a surge of outrage across the country:

- “Why does Resolution 590 include no mention female-on-female violence? Could it be that domestic violence has become more of a political than a human issue?” – Paul Clements, DADD-New Hampshire
- “HRES 590 must be recalibrated to address the perpetrators of violence regardless of sex.” – David R. Usher, True Equality Network (MO)
- “House Resolution 590 is ill-conceived to protect children from abuse, because it does not recognize the majority of perpetrators are mothers!” – Carl Steppling, Florida Coalition for Families and Children
- If HRES 590 passes, National Domestic Violence Awareness Month will gloss over the problem of abuse committed by women against children. An abused spouse can leave a relationship; victimized children cannot.” – Don Mathis, The Fourteen Percenter newsletter (TX)
- “I have heard countless horror stories from men who have been evicted from their homes on the strength of unsubstantiated claims. Lawmakers need to review the facts before drafting domestic violence laws.” – Don Hank, Lancaster-York Non-Custodial Parents (PA)
- “When gender advocates use make-believe stats, families get hurt.” – Tom Smith, American Union of Men (CA)
- “Current DV laws destroy American families and particularly fathers. Now is the time to step up to the plate and say ‘No’ to HRES 590!” – Ben Vonderheide, DaddyJustice.com (PA)
- “We really need to fight Resolution 590. Let’s help RADAR, so we can turn back domestic violence laws that throw a man out of his own home with no evidence.” – James Semerad, Dads of Michigan PAC

You can see House Resolution 590 and RADAR’s analysis at http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/RADARanalysis-HRES590.pdf. And stay tuned for RADAR’s upcoming September 4 alert, when we'll tell you who to contact to stop this outrage.

H-RES-5-9-0,
Mis-an-dry Has Got to Go!

++
Date of RADAR Release: August 27, 2007

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

--
Ed. note: The bill is currently named H. RES. 590, not to be confused with a bill named HR590, which has nothing to do with DV.

Father's and Men's Issues Groups Rock the Valley

MR · 27 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Father's and Men's Issues Groups Rock the Valley

At the crack of dawn I awoke to get to the Van Nuys/Sherman Oaks Park and lay claim to the prime area of real estate that Fathers 4 Justice and the National Coalition of Free Men, L.A. would inhabit for the next 8 hours.

It would be no exaggeration to say that, during the course of the day, scores of people read our signs (at length), and hundreds of people got briefer views. I recall one woman, stopped at the light, who had her neck turned about 135 degrees and was staring intently at the "CAN YOU GET BACK MY DADDY" sign. She had an expression of real concern on her face. "Penny for your thoughts," I said silently to myself as I averted my eyes to allow her all the looking her heart desired.

Worst injured soldier ever to survive is awarded less than RAF typist with a sore thumb

AngryMan · 28 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Remember this?

RAF typist who hurt thumb is awarded eight times more than soldier who lost leg

It gets even worse.

Worst injured soldier ever to survive is awarded less than RAF typist with a sore thumb

Ben Parkinson volunteered to serve his country on the Afghan front line - and paid a terrible price. Excerpt:

'The young paratrooper suffered a total of 37 terrible injuries when he was blown up by a landmine.

He lost both his legs and sustained grievous damage to his spine, skull, pelvis, hands, spleen and ribcage, leaving him in a coma for months.

Incredibly, 23-year-old Ben is still alive almost a year later - according to his doctors the most badly-injured soldier ever to survive.

Yet as recompense for his ruined life, Ben has been offered only £152,150 - little more than half the maximum award for maimed military personnel and less than a third of the £484,000 doled out to an RAF typist who claimed she had suffered repetitive strain injury to her thumb.'

Woman arrested for throwing rocks at her boyfriend, while he was holding their child

ItsDan · 28 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'A Mesa woman was arrested Saturday after she threw rocks at her boyfriend because he did not defend her in an argument with neighbors, according to police.
...
Sandoval was upset that Howe did not take her side in the argument and threw rocks at him as he held their 9-month-old baby, according to witnesses.

Howe was struck by the rocks, but no one was injured. Sandoval admitted to drinking 10 beers and a few shots of alcohol that day, police said.'

Female Ex-astronaut planning insanity defense

anthony · 28 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Should this story come as a shock to anyone? Excerpt:

'Former astronaut Lisa Nowak is pursuing a temporary insanity defense on charges that she assaulted and tried to kidnap a romantic rival, according to a court document released Tuesday.

Nowak suffered from major depression, obsessive-compulsive disorder, insomnia and "brief psychotic disorder with marked stressors," defense attorney Donald Lykkebak wrote. He said the already-petite woman had also recently lost 15 percent of her body weight and struggled with "marital separation."'

"If women want to be heard, they just need to speak up"

anthony · 28 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'Valuable time is often wasted in the commentariat, in studies and in hearings bean-counting the percentages of women on corporate boards, in Hollywood studios, higher education, Congress and on op-ed pages. Number disparities can often be explained not by discrimination but by free choice, something liberal feminists claim to be fans of. Many women reading this column may be just as good or much better at writing or opinion-making than any man or woman they're reading or watching on talking-heads shows tonight. But maybe they chose to raise kids instead of taking that slot on Fox News or getting that editing job or starting that blog site. Choice happens.

Sen. Hillary Clinton, D-N.Y., could become president of the United States. But she's not going to win by trying to guilt men into it, by arguing that her election is a civil-rights movement in itself. She'll become commander-in-chief if she commands on the campaign trail, tackling the war, health care and education. She won't win by playing gender games.'

"My personal reflections of the Equal Parenting Bike Trek" - Robert Pedersen

Matt · 29 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Those of you who haven't done any cross-country cycling (including myself- longest I have ever cycled is 2 or 3 miles!) should read this to get an idea of it-- and also the huge risk and sacrifice these guys took on. Excerpt:

'Looking back at those 5 days I realize that there is nothing you can do to totally prepare for the hell Robb and I put our bodies through. We experienced several accidents which we have the scars to prove, but worse of all I suffered a heat stroke which was a horrible experience to say the least. It was so bad that several members of the Equal Parenting Bike Trek Chase Vehicle Crew debated over calling an ambulance. A couple of the accidents, if they would have gone differently, could have killed Robb and I. We reached a maximum speed of 54 mph on bicycles in the mountains of Pennsylvania! ... Hitting a single piece of road debris at this speed would have thrown us from the bicycle and most likely killed us instantly.'

Review of Duke lacrosse case halted

anthony · 29 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'DURHAM - The specter of massive civil lawsuits has stopped the work of a special committee probing the Durham Police Department's handling of the Duke lacrosse case.

The city's liability insurance provider said continued investigation by the committee could provide ammunition for a civil lawsuit by superstar lawyers.

City officials released a statement Monday saying that the committee is in "a holding pattern" until its attorneys meet next week with the counsel hired by the former lacrosse players falsely accused of rape by an escort dancer hired for a team party in March 2006.'

Nifong pleads innocent

anthony · 30 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Disgraced former prosecutor Mike Nifong pleaded not guilty Thursday to criminal contempt charges stemming from his failure to turn over complete DNA testing results during the now-discredited Duke lacrosse rape case

If found in contempt, Nifong could face up to 30 days in jail and a fine of up to $500.

As Durham County district attorney, Nifong led the investigation into a woman's allegations that she was raped at a 2006 lacrosse team party where she was hired as a stripper. He won indictments against three lacrosse players, but eventually recused himself from the case, and state prosecutors dropped all remaining charges, saying the players were innocent victims of a "tragic rush to accuse."'

Nowak Loses Tracking Anklet

Matt · 30 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'ORLANDO, Fla. - Former astronaut Lisa Nowak can remove an electronic monitoring bracelet from her ankle, a circuit court judge ruled Thursday ahead of her trial for allegedly attacking a romantic rival.

Nowak argued it was expensive, bulky and uncomfortable. Judge Marc L. Lubet said that didn't matter, but Nowak had behaved well enough over the past 7 months to earn release.

The woman Nowak is accused of attacking, Colleen Shipman, argued for the monitoring to stay, saying she still feared Nowak.'

"Expensive, bulky, and uncomfortable." So is an adult-sized diaper but that didn't stop her from wearing one all the way until she got to her destination, right?

UK: Divorce Rate Falls to 30-Year Low

Matt · 31 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here, but what is of equal interest is the picture of "the wife" threatening "the husband" with a plate during an argument. So the Daily Mail thought this is a perfectly fine kind of picture to use with this story? Well, at least they are being realistic. Some interesting content though... excerpt:

"There was speculation that high divorce settlements may have dissuaded men from divorce. Spectacular recent cases include those of Beverley Charman, awarded £48 million of her husband John's fortune in May, and Melissa Miller, who won £5 million of her husband Alan's £30 million wealth even though her marriage lasted only three years and there were no children.

But some analysts said that if high settlements had put men off divorce, they would have encouraged women in favour of divorce.

Robert Whelan of the Civitas think tank said: 'High divorce settlements are a reason for men not to get married, not a reason for them to steer clear of divorce.'"

Real Clear Politics: 'How the GOP Can Woo the Ladies'

anthony · 31 August 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

The more I read these political [gender] articles, the more I wonder if my 2008 vote has as much value as a woman's. From a political standpoint, how could any man feel differently? Indeed more women tend to vote. Maybe if politicians focused on issues of importance to men, it might motivate them to become voters. The problem is politicians don't know, and don't care what true male issues are. Why should they care? Its politically incorrect to focus on the needs of today's man. Excerpt:

'A smart Republican candidate would be doing Twister moves to deny Democrats those votes. Yet what's extraordinary is that no GOP contender has yet recognized the huge opportunity to redefine "women's" politics for the 21st century. That's a double failing given that the GOP could win modern women by doing little more than tailoring their beliefs in freer markets to the problems women struggle most with today.

This isn't to suggest Republicans treat women as a "special interest" or a monolithic bloc. But there are votes to be had for the candidate who owns the quotidian concerns of this population. And there are future generations of women voters to be won by the party that progresses beyond the stale rhetoric of women's "rights" and crafts a new language of women's "choice" and "opportunity" and "ownership."'

Nifong Found in Contempt

Matt · 1 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'DURHAM, N.C. — A judge has sentenced disgraced prosecutor Mike Nifong to one day in jail for lying to a judge while pursuing the Duke lacrosse rape case.

Nifong was held in criminal contempt of court Friday for lying to a judge when pursuing rape charges against three falsely accused Duke University lacrosse players.

Superior Court Judge W. Osmond Smith III immediately moved to consider a punishment for Nifong, who has already been stripped of his law license and has resigned from office. He faces as many as 30 days in jail and a fine as high as $500.'

He does one whole day in jail. Justice served?

Warren Farrell to Speak Before NH Commission on the Status of Men

Scott · 1 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men will have a well-known guest speaker during its September meeting. Warren Farrell will be giving a presentation, "The Boy Crisis" and discuss the cultural and academic challenges boys are facing today. The meeting is open to the public, and policy makers and educators are especially encouraged to attend. This is a rare opportunity to hear Warren speak in the Northeast.

The presentation will be held in room 206 of the Legislative Office Building in Concord, NH on Thursday, September 27, 2007 from 1-4 PM. No RSVP is necessary, and again, the public is welcome to attend. Here is a map of the meeting location.

Woman In Phony Rape Case Heads To Jail

ItsDan · 2 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Yep, a woman who lied about rape is going to jail. But before you get excited about this, she's not actually going to jail for lying about the rape. She just had her probation revoked for a drug related crime. Excerpt:

'The statute of limitations prevented Lummis from being charged with perjury. But on Friday, Lummis, 41, turned herself in after her probation was revoked last week. She will serve a four-year prison term imposed in 1998, when she pleaded guilty to fraudulently attempting to obtain prescription diet pills.'

From the pop-misandry files: 'Female singers deliver a lyrical beating towards men'

anthony · 2 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'And in "Gunpowder & Lead," from her album Crazy Ex-Girlfriend, country firebrand Miranda Lambert makes all that seem downright wussy. She lights a cigarette and lies in wait for an abusive boyfriend with a loaded shotgun at the ready: "His fist is big but my gun's bigger/He'll find out when I pull the trigger."
...
One example: 17-year-old Taylor Swift, whose single "Picture to Burn" finds her "sitting here planning my revenge." She gets it this way: "Go ahead and tell your friends I'm obsessive and crazy/I'll tell mine you're gay."'

Is Risk Management A Modern Fact of Life For Married, and Marriageable, Men?

MR · 2 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Is Risk Management A Modern Fact of Life For Married, and Marriageable, Men?

American men today, face marriage as an enormous risk, greater than at any other time in our history, in my opinion. Considering that a man's assets are in many ways subject to perils parallel to those many businesses face, are there ways to manage, avoid, reduce, or otherwise confront the "divorce risk" that men face today?

Who Will Underwrite Divorce Insurance?

MR · 2 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Who Will Underwrite Divorce Insurance?

What kind of financial insurance is available for people served with divorce papers, most of whom are men? There isn't any that I've been able to find. Could it be the risk of divorce is just too great, or catastrophic, for any potential insurer to underwrite? Have men just been conditioned to accept that risk, on penalty of being viewed as "unromantic?"

There's nothing more "unromantic" than being served with divorce papers and having your life stolen out from under you.

RADAR Alert: 'Stop the Lies! Say ‘NO’ to HRES 590!'

Matt · 2 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Rep. Ted Poe of Texas recently introduced a resolution on domestic violence in the U.S. House of Representatives. This is probably the most misleading, biased, and untruthful bill on domestic violence ever introduced in the House.

The resolution has 23 claims – 18 of them are one-sided, misleading, or simply false. One of the claims is a factoid from nowhere. You can see the resolution and RADAR’s analysis here (.pdf file)

The Resolution – known as “HRES 590” – has now been referred to the House Education and Labor Committee for consideration. The chairman of that committee is George Miller. He is the person who decides when – and whether – the Resolution will be brought up for a debate and vote.

The plain and simple truth is, we must stop this before it receives the stamp of approval from the House of Representatives. And we want to do it this week.

We are asking every person who reads this Alert to contact Mr. Miller, three times this week. We want Mr. Miller to receive thousands of messages to stop HRES 590.

You don’t need to write a long letter. All you need to say is, “Stop the Lies! Say ‘NO’ to HRES 590!” Do not be abusive or use foul language.

You can send your message by telephone, e-mail, fax, or a combination of those:

- Telephone: 1-202-225-2095
- E-mail: George.Miller-at-mail.house.gov (In the subject line, type “Say NO to HRES 590”)
- Fax: 1-202-225-5609 (In the subject line, type “Say NO to HRES 590”)

“Stop the Lies! Say ‘NO’ to HRES 590!”

Do it now. Do it often. Do it politely.

++
Date of RADAR Release: September 4, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Drunken mother arrested after she gets her five-year-old son to drive her home

Anonymous · 3 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Mother-of-two Holly Schnobrich knew she was too drunk to get behind the wheel of her car.

But her judgment was so clouded by drink and drugs that she asked her five-year-old son to be the designated driver.

After her 2002 Mitsubishi screeched to a halt outside her house, Miss Schnobrich even boasted to a worried neighbour: "He's a good driver."

But when five-year-old Weston Schnobrich was quizzed by police he was forced to admit he was "having a hard time because I can't reach the pedals".

The 24-year-old mother is now behind bars in Lafayette, Indiana, charged with child endangerment and public intoxication.'

Sunday Times: 'Pushing mothers back into work is wrong'

anthony · 4 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"This comes when women feel unprecedented pressure to go to work, whether they want to or not; more than half of all mothers of children under five do so, leaving 0.5m children in daycare. What this means, often and even in allegedly satisfactory situations, is leaving children in their most impressionable and formative years in the care of poorly educated, poorly paid, poorly qualified or unqualified women, who come and go at a high rate."

"Time to Scale Back the Pedestal?"

anthony · 4 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'Over the next 25 years, the fems engineered the passage of a series of laws and programs that afforded ever-expanding legal rights and services to women. Those laws included the Violence Against Women Act, the Women's Educational Equity Act, women's health programs, the 1996 welfare reform, and many more.

How did the Girls of Guile get away with their equality ruse, when in fact they were duplicitously scheming behind the scenes to foist a hierarchical society on the rest of us?

First, they relentlessly shaded the truth - consider Hillary Clinton's laughable canards that women suffer from wage discrimination, were routinely excluded from medical research, are more likely to be the victims of war, and so on.'

"Riding the Estrogen Express"

anthony · 4 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

This article is a bit old, but this entire website is full of interesting and thought provoking opinions. Example:

"When you think about it, the traditional way of dealing with a woman is to permit her to control your life. Men mistakenly believe they will have more peace that way. This moronic behavior, based on the false assumption that men must crawl through broken glass to get laid, leads to devastating consequences. It's quite scary to realize how much control over their lives men have conceded to women, with lots of help from misandric feminists and politicians."

Fox Video: Ruduv vs Wiehl on Trojan Ad

anthony · 4 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This debate originally aired on 6/25/07.

.....
This link gives many televised debates between Ruduv and Wiehl.

Newsweek: Duke: A Rush to Judgment

anthony · 5 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

More insight on the new book, "Until Proven Innocent". A book I plan to purchase tomorrow. The book review doesn't seem too positive. Excerpt:

"The authors make the Duke faculty look at once ridiculous and craven. For months, not one of the university's nearly 500-member faculty of arts and sciences stood up to question the rush to judgment against the lacrosse team. So much for the ideal of the liberal-arts university where scholars debate openly and seek the truth. ("This book provides one interpretation," says Duke spokesman John Burness.) The only group that shows any common sense in "Until Proven Innocent" is the student body. Aside from a few noisy activists who assumed the players were guilty, Duke undergrads mostly overlooked the political correctness of their professors."

ABC Primetime: Amy Bosley kills husband...gets only 20 years with parole

tac0965 · 5 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This ABC Primetime program ruined my evening. This woman is suspected of stealing checks from the family business run by her husband, keeping an IRS Audit secret from her husband (regarding the checks she was supposed to pay the IRS instead of herself), and then killing her husband. She plead guilty to second degree murder (parole in 15 years). She refused to tell the judge the details of the crime, but the judge accepted the plea anyway. Why was she offered this deal?...because the prosecutor didn't want the children to testify.

What? Why didn't they try her based on the evidence they already had? If a man did this, wouldn't he be put in prison for life or get the death penalty.

Of course, the defense now says that she didn't do this crime, she just wanted to "protect her children". How disgusting....why do we put up with this gents? The family of the husband suspects that she has the millions in checks she stole hidden for when she is released from prison.

WSJ: 'Avoiding Kids: How Men Cope With Being Cast as Predators'

Matt · 6 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'Ted Wallis, a doctor in Austin, Texas, recently came upon a lost child in tears in a mall. His first instinct was to help, but he feared people might consider him a predator. He walked away. "Being male," he explains, "I am guilty until proven innocent."

In San Diego, retiree Ralph Castro says he won't allow himself to be alone with a child -- even in an elevator.

Last month, I wrote about how our culture teaches children to fear men. Hundreds of men responded, many lamenting that they've now become fearful of children. They said they avert their eyes when kids are around, or think twice before holding even their own children's hands in public.'

RADAR ALERT: Reminder - Tell Congress this Week, "Say NO to HRES 590!"

Matt · 6 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In this week's alert, we asked you to contact Rep. George Miller, chair of the House Education and Labor Committee three times this week. His committee is the one that will be considering House Resolution 590, a resolution which RADAR believes to be the most misleading, biased, and untruthful bill on domestic violence ever introduced in the House.

We need to get this message through to Rep. Miller, loud and clear. If you've already phoned his office, please also email or fax him. And vice versa if you've already emailed or faxed. And if you haven't contacted his office yet, please do it now.

For a detailed analysis of the 18 claims in this resolution that are one-sided, misleading, or outright false, see http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/RADARanalysis-HRES590.pdf

Be sure to refer to "HRES 590" which is a resolution on domestic violence, and not "H.R.590" which is a completely unrelated bill on a totally different issue. And as always, be polite in all your communications with Congress.

Here's the contact information:

- Telephone: 1-202-225-2095
- E-mail: George.Miller-at-mail.house.gov (In the subject line, type “Say NO to HRES 590”)
- Fax: 1-202-225-5609 (In the subject line, type “Say NO to HRES 590”)

“Stop the Lies! Say ‘NO’ to HRES 590!”

Do it today!

++
Date of RADAR Release: September 6, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Abandoned Baby's Mother Won't Face Charges

tac0965 · 6 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Would a "scared" father get the same caring, understanding response from the Nebraska DA if he did the same act? Excerpt:

'The mother who left her newborn in the restroom of an Omaha hospital on Monday turned herself in to police Wednesday and will not be charged in the case.

She could have been arrested for child neglect, but County Attorney Don Kleine says no charges will be filed against the 18-year-old mother, saying there would be nothing to gain from proceeding with a criminal case.

Kleine doesn't believe her actions or intentions were criminal. Her name is not being released.'

Chile: Males Increasingly Reported As Victims Of Domestic Abuse

Matt · 6 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks to Marc A. for the heads-up.

Story here. Excerpt:

'While women's abuse has resulted in great public sympathy and a mild response by government, male victims of domestic violence appear to receive less sympathy and support in Chile's male dominated society. Universidad de Santiago psychology professor Eugenio Vargas argues that the challenges male victims must overcome before they will report incidents of abuse most likely lowers the number of complaints filed.

"In society, there are different perceptions and responses to abuse that affect women. There is a validation of the subject and there are networks of support." said Vargas. "These things do no exist for male victims...Sometimes, even a victim's friends will assume a critical position of their situation. This is the reason why men avoid talking about the subject."'

USA Today: U.S. girls' suicide rates jump, little notice of boys'

anthony · 6 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

No mention that boys are still four times more likely to take their own lives. Men: the disposable sex. Looks like boys also fall into that category. Excerpt:

"The suicide rate among preteen and teenage girls rose to its highest level in 15 years, and hanging surpassed guns as the preferred method, federal health officials reported Thursday.

The report from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention suggests a surprising reversal in recent trends.

The biggest jump — about 76% — was in the suicide rate for girls ages 10-14 from 2003 to 2004. There were 94 suicides in that age group in 2004, compared to 56 in 2003. That's a rate of fewer than one per 100,000 population."

Excellent Interview of the Equal Parenting Bike Trek Cyclists on Studio 1714

Anonymous · 6 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Studio 1714, which has a strong following in Michigan, interviews the Equal Parenting Bike Trek Cyclists about the 700 mile bike trek for EQUAL Parenting Rights. Title IV-D and the state of child custody laws in Michigan discussed.

View this video on YouTube.

View other videos from the Equal Parenting Bike Trek.

'Fast Food Dads' stereotype a myth according to new research

anthony · 6 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'When many people think of single, non-resident fathers providing meals for their kids, they conjure up the image of dad piling the kids into the car for a quick trip through the McDonald's drive through.
...
"Regarding the non-custodial father being the 'fast food dad,' we did not find evidence to support that stereotype," said Stewart, who is author of the book Brave New Stepfamilies: Diverse Paths Toward Stepfamily Living (Sage Publications). "We found that non-resident father involvement -- so kids with an involved, non-custodial dad -- actually eat better and more nutritious food than kids whose dad is not involved. They are less likely to skip breakfast and lunch, and eat vegetables more often. They also eat more simple sugars, but they're more likely to eat regular meals."'

Why Men Should Be Included in Abortion Discussion

anthony · 6 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'In the most comprehensive study of men and abortion to date, Arthur Shostak, a professor of sociology at Drexel University, who describes himself as "unswervingly pro-choice," found that men's single greatest concern was the well-being of their sex partner and, further, that a majority of men would like to accompany their partners throughout the procedure. Most clinics don't allow men beyond the waiting room, something Shostak says is evidence that many think of men as "coat holders and drivers.

...

The pro-choice movement, and feminists in general, seem to have historically shied away from the difficult but imperative task of involving men in conversations about abortion. It is understandable that the movement has been weary; no hot-button issue brings out more manipulation than this one. But it is time that feminists' commitment to equality, as well as the quality of both women and men's lives, trumps their fear that acknowledging men's hardships will only serve as fodder for pro-life spin doctors. There must be a way to talk about men's perspectives and experiences without compromising women's bodies.'

Canada: "New Democrats challenge government to work on women's equity issues"

anthony · 6 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'"Women today in Canada are so far behind the goal of equality," said Judy Wasylycia-Leis, chair of the party caucus. "The fact is we have a situation of being an embarrassment on the international scene because of our lack of progress."
...
Irene Mathyssen, NDP critic for the status of women said women in Canada "are now under attack economically, socially and politically.
...
"Many women in Canada are still not safe in their homes or on the streets. One in four women in Canada is the victim of sexual violence in her lifetime."'

Teacher: Girl, 16, lying for revenge

anthony · 6 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Court records show Seale has never been convicted of a crime in the Carolinas.

...he was fired from Chester High in 1992, after female students accused him of touching them on the hip and breast, making sexual remarks and inviting them to a hotel, according to a story in The (Rock Hill) Herald the next year. The Herald cited court records filed by the school district.

At the time, Seale denied the allegations saying the students had caused problems in his class and were retaliating because they had been disciplined."

Man Gets 12 Years for Fatally Stabbing Neighbor He Thought Molested His Daughter

anthony · 6 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Notice how mom stays out of prison with the reliable postpartum defense. Excerpt:

'A lawyer who stabbed his neighbor to death because he thought the man had molested his 2-year-old daughter was sentenced Friday to 12 years in prison for first-degree manslaughter.
...
Fairfield police also investigated the molestation allegation and said they found no evidence to back it up. They said Edington's wife, Christina, refused to cooperate with the investigation into the slaying, and prosecutor Jonathan Benedict has said a defense psychiatrist determined Edington's wife suffered from postpartum depression.'

Ed. note: This story was first reported on MANN here.

Australia: Teenage girl puts man in hospital - for mispronouncing her name

GaryB · 6 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Imagine this: A woman at a party says hello to a teenage boy, but mis-pronounces his name. The teenager then kicks her viciously in the stomach twice, making her bleed internally and sending her to hospital. The court lets him off with a caution, because it was really 'out of character' for him.

Of course it would never happen that way - but reverse the genders and you have this. Excerpt:

'He pronounced her name May-gan, instead of Mee-gan, prompting Conroy to get upset.

Crown prosecutor Dejana Kovac told the court Conroy asked the man if he was a "Kiwi", and when he replied to the affirmative, she told him to "Get fed".

She then kneed and kicked him in the groin twice, pushed him against a wall and demanded that he "say her name properly".
...
Judge Tony Rafter SC agreed the incident was out of character for the Woolworths deli assistant, taking into account her lack of criminal history and her obvious remorse from the dock.

He released her on a six month good behaviour bond and spared her a criminal conviction.'

Duke LAX Players Seeking $30 Million and Legal Process Changes

Matt · 7 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Good for them! Excerpt:

'RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Attorneys for the three players falsely accused in the Duke University lacrosse rape case are seeking a settlement of about $30 million and several changes to the state's legal process, a person close to the case said early Friday.

If the terms aren't met, the players' attorneys will file a civil rights lawsuit against the city of Durham early next month, said the source, who requested anonymity because not all of the details of the proposed settlement had been worked out.'

"Is There Anything Good About Men?"

anthony · 7 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Gender inequality seems to have increased with early civilization, including agriculture. Why? The feminist explanation has been that the men banded together to create patriarchy. This is essentially a conspiracy theory, and there is little or no evidence that it is true. Some argue that the men erased it from the history books in order to safeguard their newly won power. Still, the lack of evidence should be worrisome, especially since this same kind of conspiracy would have had to happen over and over, in group after group, all over the world."

Charges won't be filed against mom who left child in hot car

anthony · 7 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman whose 2-year-old daughter died in an overheated car last month had left the girl unattended before and had been warned about the danger that created, according to a police report.

The woman forgot she left the toddler strapped in a car seat when she went to work as an assistant principal at Glen Este Middle School, about 20 miles east of Cincinnati, authorities said. The child's body was discovered more than seven hours later, after outside temperatures reached nearly 100 degrees.'

But this same woman had been warned about this, three times previously.

And, the MSM has a great deal of sympathy for her. Watch here. Quote: "Mothers treated more harshly than fathers and spend more jail time."

Nifong Serves a Whole 24 Hours In Jail

Matt · 7 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The disgraced and disbarred former North Carolina prosecutor today walked into a Durham jail to serve a 24-hour sentence stemming from his disastrous handling of the rape case against three Duke University lacrosse players. Nifong, who posed this morning for [a] mug shot, was found guilty of lying to a judge about aspects of the Duke probe, which ended with all charges being dismissed against the accused athletes. The trio is now threatening legal action against the city of Durham over their prosecution.'

Yep, 24 hours on the rock will certainly serve to deter anyone else from doing what he did, uh-huh! I wonder what he would have gotten had his victims been anything other than who they were?

Police: Florida Woman Poured Boiling Water on Sleeping Boyfriend

anthony · 8 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Police did not know the motive but said Billie Reynolds admitted pouring the scalding water on Gregory Laughlin earlier this week. Laughlin suffered second-degree burns on over 20 percent of his body and remained hospitalized on Friday.'

More anti-boy stuff couched in 'humor'

Matt · 8 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks to Greg for the heads-up. Article here. Excerpt:

'It is all rather troubling, especially for the parents of little angels like my daughters. Evidently, it is impossible to satisfy the—apparently justified—parental demand to educate girls in single-sex schools and boys in mixed classes. (Not for the first time in my life, I conclude that the world doesn't have enough girls in it.)'

Marc Rudov: No more entitlements for women. Women can pay their own way

MrReality · 8 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Rudov says "Women can pay their own way."

Mr. Rudov always states that women want so-called "equality" when the money -- and benefits -- are coming towards them yet become 'oppressed' when it comes time for them to pay or refuse unjust female privileges.

I agree with Mr. Rudov as do many intellectuals. Yet the two women on the panel don't agree of course and nor does the chivalrous male wallet that is defending the exploitation of men by women in the following clip.

See the clip here.

Announcing Men's Issues at Gather

Trudy W Schuett · 9 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

First let me say this is in no way to be considered as competition for the excellent discussion group, Men's Issues Online. Or Mensactivism, for that matter. This is something else entirely. In fact if the guys from either of those would like to join us at Gather, they'd be quite welcome to promote the heck outta their valuable activist efforts!

Right now, there is no centralized location where people can get a handle on men's issues in a general-interest community. While there are many politically-oriented sites and groups that occasionally feature "our" issues, and most of you already have your own websites, networks and e-mail discussion groups, I thought you'd all like to have the opportunity to reach a new group of people.

This is at no cost to you in terms of dollars and cents. In fact, you might even make a few bucks! Here's Gather's PR site.

With these ideas in mind, I've set up a group at Gather, which is termed a social networking site, but is entirely unlike the kinds of social networking sites that immediately come to mind, such as Linked In or Facebook. Gather is not so much about simply connecting with people, but is more about publishing content a large number of people will read. (Not kids, either!) What intrigues me about Gather is that it is a growing community, and they're always coming up with new ideas to promote the site as a whole. Many on Gather are new to the internet, and for some this is their only online activity.

Unlike blogs, which need to be constantly promoted and updated at least daily, Gather provides the ability for individuals to publish occasional content, which is available to search engines. Both your individual postings as a member and the group as a whole also have RSS feeds, so your readers can keep track of new articles in their aggregators without adding to their e-mail load.

So far nobody else has yet set up a group for our kinds of issues. It's always good to be on the ground floor! Our group is described as: "The first centralized location to learn more about the variety of men's issues, from the leaders of the movement."
The way I have things set up, membership is moderated, which means that while everyone at Gather can read new articles from our group, only our invited members can post, which assures quality content.

You wouldn't even need to write anything new; you can use the group for simply re-posting what you've already posted to your blog or network, and taking advantage of a completely new audience to promote your work and/or your organization. As a Gather member, of course you can branch out into other groups, and when you post something, you can also post it on as many groups as you like within Gather -- or even set up another group of your own!

This is a whole new opportunity, and I hope you'll join us! There's also a post on who else is already there.

NOW Sues to Stop Fatherhood Programs

anthony · 9 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'"The National Organization for Women (NOW) has filed a lawsuit in federal court against fatherhood programs in Alaska, Idaho and Oregon. The objective of these programs is to provide career counseling to fathers in three tough categories: incarcerated, military and fathers with disabled children. NOW has objected because women are excluded from these programs 'solely because they are women.'

"There is an old saying that you should be careful what you wish for, since you might get it. I think NOW should think twice about trying to win this lawsuit. If they win, wouldn't that endanger the innumerable government-funded programs that benefit only women?'

Study: Real fathers fail to measure up to televised versions

anthony · 9 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Fathers in the USA are a lot less supportive and accepting than TV sitcom dads, even falling short of the low bar set by Homer Simpson, a study of college students' views suggests.

Many young people blame constant work demands — seldom portrayed on TV — for draining their fathers' energy and time from parenting, says Janice Kelly, a communications researcher at Marymount Manhattan College in New York.

...

She showed episodes from eight comedies to 108 college students. The programs were as diverse as The George Lopez Show, The Simpsons, My Wife and Kids and Everyone Loves Raymond. She asked the students to rate TV fathers and their own on such qualities as support, guidance, acceptance of other family members and oppositional behavior (for example, ridiculing children). On every measure, TV fathers were rated significantly better than the students' own dads.'

Ed. note: Just so happens I found this today: Survey: Working dads want more family time

Conflicting views emerge of mother who killed 17-month-old son

anthony · 9 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Shauna Mahoney posted a photograph of her baby online earlier this year and described herself as a proud mother.

But a different picture has emerged this week, one of a troubled woman who became the coldblooded killer of her 17- month-old son.
...
Some of those who know her, including the dead child's father, told The Buffalo News Thursday that Mahoney had been suffering from postpartum depression for some time."

"She never wanted anything to do with the baby," said the child's godfather, Michael Kriewaldt.'

"Gender balancing raises bar for women"

anthony · 9 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"After years of fighting for educational equality, it is disheartening to think that the college admissions' bar has been raised even higher for young women. My guess is that at some private colleges with balanced gender enrollment, women are getting the short end of the admissions stick."'

Related article: College Admission: Tough Times For Girls?

Thousands of GIs cope with brain damage

Matt · 9 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. On the heels of the college article, note there are no call for equalizing the numbers of brain-injured war veterans so that it's 50/50 male/female. Or adding women to the selective service act. Or anything else like that. Excerpt:

' NASHVILLE, Tenn. - The war in Iraq is not over, but one legacy is already here in this city and others across America: an epidemic of brain-damaged soldiers*.

Thousands of troops* have been diagnosed with traumatic brain injury, or TBI. These blast-caused head injuries are so different from the ones doctors are used to seeing from falls and car crashes that treating them is as much faith as it is science.'

* For "soldiers' and "troops", read "men".

RADAR ALERT: Tell Your Representative, Stop the False Accusations, Stop HRES 590!

Matt · 10 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

"... there is no other court in the land where the penalty for perjury does not exist - you can lie repeatedly and not only NOT be punished for it, but actually be rewarded for it. There is no other court where you are presumed guilty until proven innocent. And for non-custodial parents...especially fathers...going through a divorce...and the never-ending litany of custody issues and all the rest that goes with it...it can feel like eternal damnation."

So says a father of two from New Jersey, who has undergone an ordeal in which he was verbally abused by a judge, physically accosted by police officers, criticized by child welfare officials, shown the door by school administrators, and even turned away by life-long friends.

Situations such as this will be perpetuated by House Resolution 590. It allows for the continued abuse of domestic violence laws, creating a dynamic in which allegations are made solely for the purpose of obtaining an advantage in litigation.

Last week we asked you to contact Rep. George Miller, chairman of the Education and Labor Committee. This week, we're asking you to contact your own Representative and politely ask him or her to say "NO" to HRES 590.

To locate your Representative, go to http://www.house.gov/. At the top, enter your Zip code and look up your Representative's name, then go to the Representative's website. Or call the Capitol Switchboard at 1-202-224-3121.

Then leave this message with the Representative's staff: "It's time to stop the false allegations of domestic violence. Say 'No' to HRES 590!"

For further information on House Resolution 590 see http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/RADARanalysis-HRES590.pdf.

++
Date of RADAR Release: September 10, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Dadsontheair.net: FAMILY COURT HELL

Matt · 10 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

10.30-12.00 2G
DADS ON THE AIR
Tuesday 11th September 2007, 10.30am to 12 midday

2GLF FM 89.3 in Sydney
and ONLINE via live streaming at http://www.893fm.com.au/
or in MP3 format at http://www.dadsontheair.net/

FAMILY COURT HELL

With special guests...
Mark Harris, the English father who was jailed for waving at his daughters as they drove past in the family car, and author of a new book "Family Court Hell", a rare and unique insight into the secret British family court system.

"Family Court Hell" is one man's harrowing story of frustration and determination as he battled for access rights to his young daughters following the bitter break-up of his marriage. Incredibly, his was a journey that spanned almost ten years, with 133 hearings by 33 judges, and which reportedly cost the taxpayer over GBP1 million.

What should have been a "simple contact dispute" somehow resulted in this innocent family man effectively being criminalized by the family courts, resulting in a stretch on the A Wing of the infamous Pentonville prison, which housed convicted murderers, terrorists, gun runners and drug dealers.

Ed. note: Note that times listed are relative to GMT+10, "Australian time", so for people in other time zones, you have to do the math. These sites will help: World Time Zones and timeanddate.com: Sydney, AU. Also if you miss the show streaming live, you can always download the Podcast (a simple .mp3 file, playable on loads of other devices, including your PC) for it later.

Woman who wasn't allowed to use the word "Rape" in courtroom sues judge

tac0965 · 10 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Insisting that she has "First Amendment" rights in the courtroom, a Nebraska woman sues a judge who barred the word "Rape" at trial. There has already been two mistrials in this case. We'll just have to see if feminist protesters with tape on their mouths decide the outcome of this rape case, instead of the facts themselves. Can someone tell me why she just won't describe to the jury what happened? Why is it so important to her to use inflammatory remarks? Excerpt:

'LINCOLN, Neb. -- The 24-year-old woman at the center of a sexual assault case has sued the judge who barred the word "rape" and other words from being used during the trial.

Tory Bowen said in the complaint filed in U.S. District Court in Lincoln that Lancaster County District Judge Jeffre Cheuvront violated her First Amendment right to free speech.'

Part Two of Studio 1714's Interview of the Equal Parenting Bike Trek - Please help!

Anonymous · 10 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Studio 1714 has been very helpful to getting the Equal Parenting Rights issue to those who would not normally hear it! Let's help them by boosting their view count AND ratings on YouTube as a way of returning thanks to them. They are strong advocates of Equal Parenting Rights. Make sure to comment and also vote a 5 star!

Part Two - NEW

Part One

Jamaica Observer: "My wife beats me"

Matt · 10 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks to Marc A. for the tip.

Story here. Excerpt:

'MANY persons would have witnessed a St Thomas wife roughing up her husband on live TV aired Tuesday, after the man, appearing without his voters' ID for the general elections, refused to do the legal alternative and swear to the presiding officer.

The fellow, a tall, bearded man, who said he only swore to God, was draped up and dragged away by his chubby wife, who berated him for acting the fool.'

NCFM meets to Chart Course for the Future

MR · 10 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

>News Flash: National Coalition of Free Men, Board of Directors, Meets in San Diego to Chart Course for the Future!

Members of the Board of the National Coalition of Free Men (NCFM) met in San Diego, California over the weekend to chart a course for NCFM for the future. NCFM Board members came from as far away as Minnesota, and NCFM general members came from as far away as New York, to participate in (and witness) this historic meeting.

Over the course of the next two days, the assembled board members addressed issues pertaining to structure and direction for NCFM in coming months and years.

The coming year will certainly not be a boring one for the NCFM Board, it's members, and friends.

Update on John Murtari - he has been released (for now)

axolotl · 11 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Good People & People of Faith,

This is a brief status updated message for what has occurred this week. More background and details at the web site, http://www.AKidsRight.Org/clinton
There will be another message with more details and future plans to follow:

September 4, 2007 - At app 10 am, John returned to the Syracuse Federal Building with chalk. He wrote on the ground, "I Love you Dom" (Domenic is his son) & "Sen. Clinton Help Us!" in about three different locations. He was taken into custody and was arraigned by US Magistrate Judge DiBianco. The Judge asked him to sign a conditional release form stating he wouldn't come back to the building. John would not sign. He is currently being held at the Jamesville Correctional Facility near Syracuse. John hasn't been told how long he'll be there, but he had been told earlier that the maximum sentence is 15 days for each offense.

September 7, 2007- After being held for three days in jail. John was taken to Federal Court for another appearance in front of US Magistrate DiBianco. He again stated his reasons for refusing to sign a 'conditional release.' The Judge then signed another Order directing John stay away from the Federal Building grounds without prior mission of the Court. He told John that if he violated that order he could be found in Contempt of Court and be given a six month jail sentence. A trial data of October 3rd or 4th was set for the pending two incidents and it was also determined that John did not quality for assigned counsel. John was happy to be released and to be able to go home.

Open Letter from Stephen Baskerville re ACFC

axolotl · 11 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Full letter here.

The following is an excerpt from Baskerville's recent Open Letter to the Board of ACFC:

"In recent years, able individuals who have served in leadership positions within ACFC have departed in frustration and anger: Jane Spies, Diana Thompson, Stuart Miller, Murray Davis, David Usher, Ed Truncellito. Each cited leadership problems in his or her departure. These people quickly went from being respected and trusted friends to being anathematized as if they were enemies, much as figures appear and disappear in a Kremlin photograph."

(note: there is a single popup when first opening the page)

--

Ed. note: I debated with myself re posting this submission. Then I thought it through-- an open communication from the president of ACFC, even if it is critical of its own organization, is news in the context of MRA work and so there is no reason not to post it. But it's no secret that inter-group politics and conflicts of interest and personalities are found in MRA circles-- unfortunately, that part isn't news.

Video: Fathers4Justice, CRISPE and Equal Parenting Bike Trek Swarm a PA Courthouse

Anonymous · 11 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Fathers4Justice, CRISPE and the Equal Parenting Bike Trek Crew visited a PA Courthouse to spread awareness of a child's fundamental right to be loved, guided, nurtured and educated by both fit and willing parents.

The Parent-Child Relationship is a fundamental right that MUST be protected at all costs!

View this "in your face" style video now on YouTube.

Man-friendly author invades the romance novel genre

Trudy W Schuett · 11 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I've always had unusual ideas for promoting men's issues, and now I've got myself right into maybe the wildest idea yet! I've entered a romance novel competition, and I need a lot more votes before Friday if I'm going to make a showing there!

This is the First Chapters Romance competition at Gather, and the Grand Prize is a publishing contract with Simon & Schuster, which is not something to be sneezed at. Imagine the romance genre being invaded by a man-friendly author! There are no "beta male" characters in my books, no deeply-flawed bad boys, just (mostly) decent human beings who sometimes turn out to be heroes. As in real life.

I figure a lot of you have already joined up at Gather to check out the Men's Issues Group, so why not take it one step further and vote for my book here. Leave a comment if you like! You will have my undying gratitude…

Court reverses ruling that women can't be charged with indecent exposure

Matt · 11 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From Marc A.:

On August 28, 2007, the Appellate Division of the County of Riverside in California reversed the sexist decision of Judge Robert W. Armstrong that held the crime of indecent exposure only applies to men and not women. The case is People v. Alexis Luz Garcia, Riverside Appellate Case Number APP004054.

The defendant, an adult female, was charged with indecent exposure (Penal Code § 314(1)) after she allegedly unclothed in front of a boy because the boy continued playing basketball when she told him to stop. Judge Armstrong said the conduct may have been 'very silly and illegal' but that it did not warrant having to register as a sex offender. He also held that indecent exposure cannot apply to women because the statute says 'exposes his person.' On that basis, the trial court dismissed the case. The appellate division reversed, holding there is no logical reason why a woman cannot commit indecent exposure, and citing numerous authorities interpreting the statute to be gender-inclusive despite the word 'his.'

If an adult man unclothed in front of a young girl for playing basketball, anti-male sexist Judge Robert W. Armstrong would not call it "silly" and say the mane does not deserve to have to register as a sex offender. Sexist judge Robert W. Armstrong should be disbarred for his obvious misandry.

--
Ed. note: Link to the ruling on-line is not yet available (or at least I couldn't find one), so it isn't included here. If you find it, please post it.

Mary Winkler to do the Oprah Show

Luek · 11 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Yeah, it was predictable. The husband murderer was cleared by a hick judge to do the Oprah Show over the objections of her in-laws.

Lifetime Channel man hating movie of the month next for Bloody Mary? Sure, why not? Excerpt:

'A few hours after one Tennessee judge ruled that Mary Winkler could go on television and talk about why she killed her preacher husband, another denied her request to travel out of state to be on the show.
...
A press release issued earlier this month from "The Oprah Winfrey Show" promised that Winkler would open up about the abuse, reveal details from the day her husband died and explain why she has decided to speak up now.
...
After allowances for time served, Winkler spent about a week in county jail before being transferred to an unidentified mental health facility.'

--

Ed. note: MANN received multiple submissions of this story. Good eyes, guys! Related links submitted from other posts are as follows:

Mary Winkler to appear on Oprah
Mary Winkler's former in-laws move to stop her Oprah appearance

Female sex offenders reveal cultural double standard

anthony · 11 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The decade long wave of sexual offenses committed by women — teachers in particular have exposed a cultural double standard: The public is more willing to accept the female abuser's claim that she had a "relationship" with the victim. And in cases in which the male is a teenager, the sexual abuse is more likely to be dismissed as a rite of passage. The questionable, yet overriding assumption, is that women predators are somehow different from men.
...
"Men are demonized, women are diagnosed. Men are beasts, but women are troubled or mentally ill," said media scholar Matthew Felling in an interview with Fox News. In fact, accounts of women sexual offenders are often more titillating than harsh. Felling calls the news coverage of young, attractive teachers involved with their students "part crime drama, part Penthouse letter."

...
To watch NBC's "To Catch A Predator" you'd think all predators are men. The series uses decoys on the Internet to lure men hoping to hook up with underage teens. Robert Weiss, executive director and founder of the Sexual Recovery Institute in Los Angeles, who provided his expertise in one of the episodes, says sexual compulsions on the Internet are male-dominated.

But female predators are beginning to use the Internet — not in an anonymous way to find children but to stay in close touch with those they are involved with. Rice, the former Tacoma teacher, communicated online often with the 10-year-old she had sex with, according to court records.'

Corporal Punishment Double-Standard: 'Brush spanking mum walks free'

GaryB · 12 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Imagine a father ties his 14 year old daughter to a bed, pulls down her pants and spanks her with a heavy wooden brush until she wets herself. Would he walk free from court? Excerpt:

'A WOMAN who struck her teenage daughter's bare buttocks with a hearth brush until she wet herself left a Tasmanian court unpunished today.

Justice Peter Evans said it was unnecessary to punish Michelle Joyce Cooper because she already had to live with the consequences of her actions.

He placed her on a three-year good behaviour bond.

The Primrose Sands woman was found guilty in the Supreme Court in Hobart last week of assaulting her 14-year-old daughter.

Cooper, 46, tied her daughter to a bed, pulled down her pants and hit her with a wooden hearth brush after becoming angry with her for wagging school, the court had been told.'

Russians given day off work to make babies

AngryMan · 12 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Workers in a Russian region have been given today off to have sex in a bid to boost the birth rate.

Today has been declared the Day of Conception in Ulyanovsk, Lenin's birthplace, when couples are told go to home and multiply.

If they succeed they could win a car, cash or a fridge.
...
The scheme is championed by Ulyanovs's governor, Sergei Morozov.

"The leadership (of the country) is interested in the family," he told AP Television News.'

Other countries continue to value the family. This is just another of the many ways in which Feminism undermines our society.

Police officer berates and threatens young man - caught on camera

Matt · 12 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Look at this, will you. Do you suppose for even one second that had the young man been either female or a few years older that this officer (a sergeant, no less) would have behaved this way? And to think, we can elect representatives and all, and still, this happens. Notice how he taunts him with such phrases as "young boy"? Can you imagine him calling a woman a "young girl" like that? Never.

Rudov: "Women to rule men completely by the year 2010"

MrReality · 12 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Rudov writes "Just when you thought that legislative, judicial, law-enforcement, media, and reproductive biases in favor of women were the epitome of double standards, there is new evidence that "life control" is increasingly shifting to the female domain: in four years, women also will rule men financially. Remember this the next time the waiter brings the check to your table, and your woman insists that YOU pay it — or worse, you acquiesce."

Reality setting in yet gentlemen? Misandry, Greedy/spoiled women, Affirmative Action and chivalrous men have ensured that every man will be a legal slave by the year 2010. That's if it has not occurred already. Wake up guys stop coddling the enemy!

"Heinous act" vs. "forbidden love"

Matt · 13 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Take a look at this story. This is a teacher (male) being "hunted" now that he is suspected of having sex with two of his students. Not at all defending his actions, just wanting to contrast how police and the press handle the matter. Compare it to this story. Story 1 excerpt:

'Santaluces drama teacher hunted in student sex case

...
"It is a heinous act," Detective Sgt. Thomas Wallace said. "You send your children to school and expect them to get an education ⍰ and not a sex education ⍰ especially from the teachers."'

Story 2 excerpt:
'She's the former schoolteacher who had an affair with a student, Vili Fualaau, a relationship that began when the boy was just 12 years old.
...
Mary Kay LeTourneau sacrificed it all: husband, kids, her job and her freedom, all for the love of a schoolboy, Vili Fualaau.

...
In a 1995 home video from a school holiday party, Vili is shown in a black tank top. Within a year, *he would get his teacher pregnant. And she would face prison time.
...
The two were caught together, a scene re-enacted in a TV movie.

Once again, LeTourneau returned to court. Once again, she was pregnant.
...
So is this an incredible love story? Or is it a story of a child molester?

“Actually, it's both," Bremmer says.'

* Not "she would become pregnant as a result of her rape of the boy"

Disgusting, all the way around.

Real Clear Politics: Hillary Wants to 'Change Our Country'

Anonymous · 13 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

It's time for some political news. This is one of the better articles regarding Hillary's Marxist ambition as commander and chief. Excerpt:

"Remolding society." This is the terminology of a utopian socialist, one who seeks to remake society according to a narrow and dogmatic ideology that claims to eliminate injustice, poverty, and unhappiness, once and for all. Hillary's ideology is an amalgam of New Left marxism and grievance feminism, the kind of unwholesome stew that is commonplace on elite college campuses.
...
Another way will be to require employers to provide more paid time off to primary caregivers (mostly women) who have children or elderly family members to care for. Another way will be to require lenders to "increase access to capital and other support for women-owned business." Businesses which fail to comply with these increasingly stringent regulations will be subjected to punitive legal sanctions. Consequently, instead of one's income being determined by one's productivity, as measured by the marketplace, in Hillary's world it will be determined by government bureaucrats based on feminist-approved notions of "equity." The result, inevitably, will be to reduce economic liberty, growth, and prosperity for all Americans."

Is the Christian Men’s Marriage Movement Covering Up the "Dying Pains?"

MR · 14 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Is the Christian Men’s Marriage Movement Covering Up the Dying Pains?

Some voices in the Christian community have recently proclaimed a message, calling for men to participate in the promotion of marriage in America. One can only wonder what hapless thinking has inspired such irresponsible advocacy for so dangerous a venture.

"Why," reportedly is the last word uttered by Pastor Winkler in this life, after his wife shot him in the back with a blast from a 12 gauge shotgun.

It appears to me that the killing of Reverend Matthew Winkler has set a new low standard for treatment of Christian men, and non-Christian men, in the institution of marriage. Nowhere, in my opinion, is this new low more apparent than in Christian Fundamentalist Churches across America as evidenced by the killing of Reverend Matthew Winkler.

How Female Illegals Abuse the System

anthony · 15 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Every year thousands of Americans are victimized by a swindle known as the "immigrant abuse scam." What's amazing is this shake-down is paid for by the U.S. taxpayer under the guise of stopping domestic violence.

One of those persons was Roger Knudson, 64, of Arizona. When he discovered his wife was having an affair, he filed for divorce. Fearing the judge would learn her visa had expired and order her back to Mexico, she fell into a rage and attacked him.

But the DA refused to prosecute the assault. Then the illegal went to a local woman's shelter that provided her pro bono legal services and told her to accuse her husband of the very crime that she herself had committed. "I have spent thousands of dollars since 2002 clearing myself of the accusations," Knudson wrote sadly.

So here's how the scam works: A woman makes an accusation of abuse. The laws define domestic violence so loosely that she doesn't need to provide a scrap of evidence -- she only needs to scream "abuse!" So the judge issues a let's-play-it-safe order.'

Mom who abandoned baby in Omaha hospital restroom now wants the baby back

tac0965 · 16 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Yes, you guessed it gents. Girl abandons baby in hospital. In less than two weeks, she wants the baby back. As usual, an article with the normal female bias: "She is not a monster. She is just human like the rest of us. She just made a poor, bad decision." Let's just not talk about what would happen if a "confused and depressed" 18 year old father did the same thing. I can think of four things that would happen: felony charges, felony conviction, hard prison time, and no sympathy from the press and television news.

MSN asks: 'Is it OK to have a starter husband?' The Answer is Yes

Matt · 16 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

More from the demise-of-marriage dept.:

The Starter Husband. Excerpt:

'Within months of promising to love and honor and cherish Tucker forever, she knew she had made a huge mistake. The problem? He was boring. "Wholly uncomplicated," as she puts it. The kind of guy who reads Tom Clancy books on the couch and watches Adam Sandler movies while dreaming of white-picket fences. Going to depressing French movies, leapfrogging over the less ambitious on the company ladder — those were the things that excited Andi. "The idea of spending my life with someone like that seemed stifling," she says. "It finally just got to me that he was so . . . sunny."
...
It's easy to write these women off as callous or self-absorbed. And yet on some level, they just might be pioneers: Why stay put in an empty shell of a marriage — an arrangement on paper only — instead of calling it what it is? "This generation is reinventing marriage," says Paul.
...
Then she met David. He was supposed to be her rebound relationship. Three years later, she realized that she wanted to have kids with him — and that was the clincher.

Andi lifts her 2-month-old daughter up to her breast in the middle of the café. I ask if her second husband is The One, since they have kids and all. "I'm happy, but I try not to think about it," she says. "It's like, if I thought I had to have my hair the same way for the rest of my life, I'd freak out."'

Indian Supreme Court: False Rape Charges Not Uncommon

Anonymous · 17 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"While reaffirming the resolve of the judiciary to deal firmly with sexual assault, a Bench comprising Justices R Raveendran and B Sudarshan Reddy said that courts needed to be aware of the tendency to use allegations of rape to settle scores.

"The courts should, at the same time, bear in mind that false charges of rape are not uncommon," said the Bench as it acquitted one Radhu from Madhya Pradesh, who was convicted for forcibly confining a minor and raping her through the night more than 16 years ago.'

Resolution 590: Is Congress Not Aware of Male Victimization?

anthony · 17 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'This is an online open letter to the members of the 110th U.S. Congress.
...
Although the 110th Congress Resolution 590 claims that Congress wants to raise awareness of domestic violence, Resolution 590 accomplishes just the opposite concerning male victimization; i.e.: "Whereas one in four women will experience domestic violence sometime in her life" and "Whereas 13 percent of teenage girls who have been in a relationships report being hit or hurt by their partner." No awareness of male victimization there!'

Polygamous sect ousts boys for worldly vices

anthony · 17 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Over the past six years, hundreds of teenage males have been expelled or felt compelled to leave the polygamous settlement that straddles Colorado City, Arizona, and Hildale, Utah.

Disobedience is usually the reason given for expulsion, but former sect members and state legal officials say the exodus of males also remedies a huge imbalance in the marriage market. (The expulsion of girls is rarer.) Members of the sect believe that to reach eternal salvation, men are supposed to have at least three wives.'

Salon.com: Fear of a female planet

anthony · 17 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'The baby-girl boom is being blamed on the high levels of estrogen-mimicking, man-made chemicals in Inuit mothers' blood. Scientists found that the higher the amount of chemicals such as PCBs, flame retardants and DDT in an Inuit woman's blood, the fewer boys she gave birth to, suggesting that hormone-mimicking chemicals are triggering sex changes during the first three weeks of pregnancy. It was also discovered that boys who are born in Russian Arctic villages suffer from being underweight and premature.'

Michigan's HB 4564

Matt · 17 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From the Equal Parenting Bike Trek folks, this site. This is the bill pending in Michigan's House. Currently it is in the Family and Children's Services Committee. The members of this committee are shown here (.pdf file) on their latest minutes report:

"Members present: Reps. Clack, Dean, Hammon, Wojno, Sheen.
Members absent/excused: Reps. Accavitti, Stahl, Hoogendyk, Palmer."

MI House reps' contact info. is here.

You know what to do. :)

(Click "read more" for the bill's opening text.)

'THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF MICHIGAN ENACT:
Sec. 6a. (1) In a custody dispute between parents, the court shall order joint custody unless either of the following applies:
(a) The court determines by clear and convincing evidence that a parent is unfit, unwilling, or unable to care for the child.
(b) A parent moves his or her residence outside the school district that the child attended during the 1-year period preceding the initiation of the action and is unable to maintain the child's school schedule without interruption. If a parent is unable to maintain the child's school schedule, the court shall order that the parents submit the dispute to mediation to determine a custody agreement that maximizes both parents' ability to participate equally in a relationship with the child while accommodating the child's school schedule. A parent may restore joint custody by demonstrating the ability to maintain the child's school schedule.'

RADAR ALERT: HRES 590: Do You Know Where Your Taxpayer Dollars Are Today?

Matt · 17 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

You may already know about the outlandish (and unsupported) claims made against men and fathers in House Resolution 590 (HRES-590). RADAR has critiqued (.pdf file) these extensively. But a little-noticed aspect of HRES-590 is one of its final "Whereas" clauses:

"Whereas there is a need to increase funding for programs carried out under the Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005 (VAWA 2005) ..." (p.4)

The stated purpose of HRES 590 is to promote even more funding for VAWA programs, such as services that include emergency shelter, counseling, and legal services for victims. In the 2005 reauthorization of VAWA, Congress added a requirement that the General Accounting Office (GAO) investigate and report on just what services are being provided to which people under the act. This is important because nearly half of VAWA funds go to such programs ($507 million in fiscal year 2007 alone).

Two months ago, the GAO released a report to Congress entitled "Services Provided to Victims of Domestic Violence, Sexual Assault, Dating Violence, and Stalking." (http://www.gao.gov/new.items/d07846r.pdf) The findings in the report are damning. Programs that receive VAWA funds ("grant recipients") have not been providing reliable or consistent data about the people they serve. They have been accepting the VAWA money, but are not being held accountable for how they spend it. Per the report,

"... as a result of discussions with grant recipients, we could not be assured that any survey data we obtained would be consistent and reliable enough for analysis of the specific information required, i.e. the number, age, and gender of victims receiving each available service." (p.3)

What does all this mean? It means Congress is spending half a billion dollars each year on programs whose success it cannot adequately evaluate. It may mean that there is inadequate help for actual victims, or even that some victims (such as abused men) are being turned away with no reliable means of verifying or measuring this information. And now Congress is being approached with a resolution, HRES 590, which openly asserts the need to throw more money into VAWA.

Let's not throw any more VAWA money down a rat hole. Protecting actual victims means more transparency and accountability in the way we spend taxpayer dollars for that purpose. HRES 590 fails to recognize this fact, and if even for that reason alone, it deserves to be defeated.

We are asking you to call or fax Congressman Buck McKeon (R), ranking member of the Education and Labor Committee, and urge him to "Say NO to HRES 590!"

Phone: (202) 225-1956
Fax: (202) 226-0683

++
Date of RADAR Release: September 17, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence.
http://www.mediaradar.org/.

More from MSN: "Does the Reverse Glass Ceiling" Exist?

Matt · 18 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

All I can think is that MSN uses a committee to determine what articles get published. What we see in terms of MSN's flip-flopping of sympathies and interests probably represents an editorial struggle-- or an attempt to keep on the fence in the public's mind. Warren Farrell is quoted in several places as well. Article here. Excerpt:

'So-called women's clubs don't just exist in the travel industry. Stacy Kaiser has counseled plenty of men who have experienced resistance across the spectrum of female-dominated careers. "Men have said they felt that women can be uncomfortable having a man around in a female-dominated environment," she says. "Women may think … 'having a man around will change the dynamic.'"

Having a man or two at work in a room full of women does change dynamics, "but that doesn't mean it's bad change," Kaiser adds.'

"Walk a Mile in Her Shoes" Ignores Male DV Victims

Matt · 18 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Recently I heard that the Walk a Mile in Her Shoes "event" was happening in my city. Read about it here. The idea is this: Men wear women's shoes and walk a mile in them to raise awareness of DV. Predictably there is no mention at all of male DV victims during the event or on the web site.

Does this really frost your behind? It should. Contact page is here. Note the founder/organizer is a man, too. He has his email and phone number published right there on the contact page, but I am going to ask you all NOT to bombard him with phone calls. Send him emails sure, but not phone calls. That is likely to be counter-productive and make HIM out to be some kind of victim, and remember that it is possible he just doesn't have all the facts, and this may just need some enlightening on the matter.

Mom Arrested for Allegedly Setting 3 Daughters on Fire

anthony · 18 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

This story is disturbing. I pray these three young girls are able to fully recover. Excerpt:

'HALTOM CITY, Texas — A woman whose three young daughters were seriously burned was arrested, and neighbors said the mother told a fire investigator she had doused the children with gasoline and set them on fire.

The oldest girl, just 7, screamed, "Why mommy? Why mommy? Why did you do this to me?" after she and her sisters were pulled out of their burning house Saturday, neighbor Kevin Lopez said Monday.

The woman, Alysha Green, 29, had no answer for the fire investigator, Lopez said.

"She was crying and saying `I'm sorry' and she didn't know why she did it," Lopez told The Associated Press.

The girls — ages 7, 5 and 3 — remained in the burn unit of a Dallas hospital Monday; their conditions were not released.'

Men's Issues Presenters Encounter Hope and Biases At International Conference

MR · 18 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Men's Issues Presenters Encounter Hope and Biases At International Conference

"Sunday and Monday of this week I attended the annual, International Conference on Violence, Abuse and Trauma in San Diego, California."

"The morning went well, with an openness displayed by attendees that was reminiscent of our experiences from the day before. No one was overtly challenging our call to address the issue of domestic violence against men, and children. By late morning to early afternoon our booth was fully staffed and ready to meet the throng of conference attendees who had been in workshops for most of the morning."

"While the news from this conference can certainly be viewed in part as encouraging, the sad fact remains that huge segments of the domestic violence industry are still steeped in bigoted, man-hating, anti-patriarchy ideology."

Six-year-old boy accused of sexual abuse

Matt · 19 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The war on boys is unabated. Read this story and gawk at the insanity. Excerpt:

'THE Education Department has investigated claims a six-year-old student ran a "sex club" at an eastern suburban primary school, involving up to up to half a dozen grade 1 students.
...
The mother has been unable to make a police report because the law states sexual assault by a child under 10 cannot be prosecuted.

"Victims of a perpetrator who is under the age of 10 should still have the same rights as any other victim of a sexual crime," she said.'

"Crime"? At the age of 6 showing off your wanky is a criminal act that some think should be punishable as such? The article shows how the matter has become a political issue to be addressed in a legislature! When I was in grade school boys who showed off their wankies were sent to the principal's office, maybe they got a note to take home to show mom and dad, and that settled it. Now it has become a matter for legislators? Absolute madness.

India: State Agency Admits Men Are Often Victims

Anonymous · 19 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Orissa State Women's Commission accepts that male victimization is happening on a large scale. This is the first time that a government agency (in India) has accepted this fact so openly. Excerpt:

'In the past couple of years, there has been a perceptible increase in the number of such men - bullied and blackmailed, tormented and terrorised. It is true that we have a whole lot of wicked women who misuse their legal weapon." And here's the last word from her: "Contrary to popular belief, torture of men does not take place in urban areas only. It is rampant in villages also."

Also, here:
"This is only the tip of the iceberg. The number of such atrocities against men by women is rising in Orissa. Since May 2007, the Commission has registered 38 such cases," chairperson Namita Panda said.'

Lesbian couple sue - because they get two babies instead of one

GaryB · 19 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

News.com.au reports here on an interesting story.

Two lesbians pay a prominent doc for IVF. It succeeds. But then they sue, because the doc accidentally implants two eggs, and they get twin girls instead of one.

My favourite quote: "Their mothers, whose combined income is almost $120,000, want $398,000 to cover the costs of raising one of the girls, including fees for a private Steiner school in Melbourne."

So they get twin girls, but have to make the doc who got them preggers to pay for them to send the girls to a private school??? Man, the world is insane...

Men: Guilty until proven innocent

Matt · 19 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks to Marc A. for this one. Article here. Excerpt:

'Child advocate John Walsh advises parents to never hire a male baby sitter.

...

So when the topic of male nannies - mannies - came up in a conversation with friends, I didn't think too long before voicing my take on the trend.

I actually said - aloud - something to the effect of: "Even if we could afford it, I'd never hire a mannie. Too risky that he'd turn out to be a predator.'

...

Sexual molestations committed by women are seriously underreported in this country, Rice said. Such cases often involve adult women having sex with adolescent boys whom they know. Which, sadly, too many people still don't consider sexual abuse, but rather good fortune on the boy's part.

...

Rudov says statistics about male sexual predators are distorted because sexual abuse by women is not reported or not even considered abuse. He also cites federal statistics that show physically abused children are more often victims of female perpetrators.'

Larry Summers Hysteria Still Lingers

anthony · 19 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"What did Summers, a distinguished economist and a liberal Democrat who served in the Clinton administration, do to deserve such obloquy? In 2005, he suggested that it's worth researching whether, among other factors, innate differences between men and women may play a role in the greater prominence of men in the sciences -- a hypothesis that has some support in the relevant scientific literature.

Summers desperately tried to make amends, issuing an abject apology for even raising the subject. Nevertheless, and despite strong support for him among Harvard students, he was drummed out of the Harvard presidency by the Cambridge academic equivalent of a lynch mob.

Apparently his sins against feminist orthodoxy were so grave that he's still not welcome to give so much as a dinner speech to the UC Board of Regents more than two years later."

German women to be paid money, just for agreeing to live in a city

ItsDan · 19 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

Apparently a German town had been suffering a mass exodus of young people from it's bordered, so it's novel approach to a solution is to pay women almost $3000, just for agreeing to live in the city for 3 years.

Costa Rica: Some women swindle with domestic violence law

Matt · 20 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks to Marc A. for this. Article here. Excerpt:

'Women are kicking their mates out of the house in record numbers in Costa Rica. Some of them are enjoying it and using the law designed to protect women against domestic violence to swindle expats. Many expats come to Costa Rica in search of a relationship and end up shooting themselves in the foot by making bad choices.

Police in Heredia say women are abusing Law 8589 Article 7. The article states, “In order to protect the victims, they will be able to request, from the start of the complaint, the protective measures contemplated in the law against domestic violence, as well as the necessary precautionary measures foreseen in the penal code of procedure.”'

Winkler Permitted To Visit Children

anthony · 20 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A judge ruled Wednesday that a woman who killed her minister-husband with a shotgun can begin supervised visits with her three young daughters, but did not decide whether she can have custody of them.

Mary Winkler, who said she needs to help her children heal emotionally from the loss of their father, can visit with them starting Sept. 29, Judge Ron Harmon ruled."

Rwanda: Government Readies for Mass Male Circumcision

anthony · 20 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The government has at last officially supported male circumcision as a tool to fight against HIV/Aids. But the acknowledgement comes with a call for maximum caution from the health ministry.
...
The Health ministry says that Rwanda has adopted male circumcision as one of the preventive measures against the disease."

UK: False Accuser Jailed

AngryMan · 21 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman who falsely claimed to have been raped by two different men - forcing them to spend time behind bars - has been jailed for eight months."

Eight months seems lenient for attempting to destroy two families, and putting innocent men in prison. However, it is a positive development because:

(1) She is in jail.
(2) She has not been given the usual anonymity.

Maybe the tide is beginning to turn...

UK: Number of women making unfair pay claims reaches record levels

AngryMan · 21 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The number of women taking employers to court claiming unfair pay has risen to record levels.
...
Jenny Watson, chair of the Equal Opportunities Commission, said that this flood of pay claims was pushing the tribunal system to breaking point.

She said the surge of cases was due to women being recruited by no-win no-fee lawyers promising to win pay rises and backdated cash.

She warned that these lawyers may now target women working in the private sector, which is just as vulnerable to legal action.'

BBC: Young hotties only need apply

Matt · 21 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The BBC has decreed that its new 'bite-size' news bulletins must be presented by young and attractive women, according to claims.
...
Last night a BBC spokesman denied there was any explicit mention of pretty young women in the market research, but refused to reveal what it had said about the type of presenter viewers wanted.'

"Attractive male news readers wanted for one-minute newscasts"

Can you imagine the shrill accusations of sexism? It happens to men, and is greeted pretty much with silence.

Canada: National Association of Women and the Law closes doors

Anonymous · 21 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Canadian government cancels $300K yearly handout to feminist group: National Association of Women and the Law ("NAWL").

The closure is treated mostly as a non-event. It doesn't even make headlines in most of Canada's mainstream media.

NAWL news release here.

Toronto Star: Prints two articles here and here.

Ottawa Citizen: here.

Even the notoriously feminist Toronto Star buried the article in the back of its news section.

Woman found guilty of abduction with intent to deprive custody rights

Anonymous · 21 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"On the third day of deliberations, the six women and six men of the jury concluded that Ms. Bédard was guilty beyond a reasonable doubt of kidnapping her then-11-year-old daughter and taking her to the United States last fall with the criminal intent of depriving the father, her ex-husband Jean Paquet, of his custody rights."
...
"We will take into account the two weeks of provisional detention she spent in a United States jail," Ms. Lemieux said yesterday. Her comments were an indication that the Crown may request that Ms. Bédard, who faces a maximum sentence of 10 years in jail, be handed a much lighter sentence."
...
"In February, Ms. Bédard regained custody of her child in a ruling that reiterated Mr. Paquet's custodial rights."

Unmarried fathers in Ireland gain parental rights in landmark ruling

Anonymous · 21 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) - An unmarried father of twin boys must have his children returned to his custody from England, a Dublin judge ruled Tuesday in a landmark judgment for the parental rights of unmarried men.
...
Until now, Irish law recognized no custody rights for unmarried fathers, chiefly because Ireland's conservative 1937 constitution emphasizes that such rights flow from marriage and motherhood.

But High Court Justice Liam McKechnie said the man, a school teacher identified in court only as «Mr. G,» was the de-facto joint guardian of the twins before the mother took them without warning to Manchester, northwest England, eight months ago."

Canada: Universities now where-the-boys-aren't

anthony · 23 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'"It's an international trend that experts widely described as the "feminization of education."
...
"Martin blames the trend on the public schools, which he said switched gears through the 1970s to appeal to the learning style of girls because they weren't doing as well as boys.

"Boys are getting shafted," said Martin, starting in the early elementary school grades where there is "zero tolerance on horsing around" and boys are treated as learning disabled and put on medication if they misbehave."'

Woman Arrested for Making False Rape Charge

anthony · 23 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Make sure you check out the video for this story. Excerpt:

"A North Little Rock woman is arrested for making a false rape charge. Police say that on August 5th, 31-year-old Paula Renee Kay said she was raped in Burns Park. North Little Rock Police then spent many man hours and money -- including hiring a sketch artist -- to find that man. "It's a sad situation that we've had to arrest someone who alleged that they were a victim. But at the same time, our investigators were able to close this case. More importantly, we're able to give the community some sense of security again, that Burns Park is an okay place to go - it's safe," NLR police spokesperson, Sgt. Terry Kuykendall said. Filing a false report is a felony, punishable by up to six years in prison."

"Rigorous Imprisonment" For Woman In Fake Rape Case

anthony · 23 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A city court sentenced a woman to five years' rigorous imprisonment for framing four men in a fake rape case. The verdict comes on the heels of the Supreme Court's recent direction to courts for handling allegations of rape with 'caution'.

Meera, 49, had framed four men in a fake rape case and then extorted money from them during the trial. She was arrested after the court had established inconsistencies in her statements in court. The four men were freed in 2005 after court found them innocent "as the Meera had been making different contradictory statements at various stages, which was very difficult to believe".

Mother and Daughter Lure Boy To Home, Beat Him

anthony · 23 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'DES MOINES, Iowa -- Two women are in custody, accused of assaulting a 12-year-old boy who's also a relative.

"They assaulted him and caused serious injury," said Lt. Jeff Miller of the West Des Moines Police Department.

Police said Jaton Warren, 27, and her mother, Maia Beadeau, 51, are responsible for beating the boy Wednesday.'

CNN Protects Perpetrator Of Paternity Fraud

anthony · 23 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Fort Lauderdale, Florida-CNN has concealed the name of a perpetrator of "paternity fraud". Why?

Francisco Rodriquez is the victim of an ordinary case of paternity fraud. The state of Florida insists that he owes $10,000 in back child support payments for a fifteen year old girl who, according to DNA results, is not his daughter. The state even jailed Rodriquez for failure to pay.

Here is my twist on this otherwise ordinary case: In reporting this story, CNN refused to divulge the name of the mother – a perpetrator of fraud who wrongly named Mr. Rodriquez the father. Why did CNN protect her? She is not a victim. She is a perpetrator.'

Study: Men often coerced into sex

Scottie · 23 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Something interesting from the National Post... here's the link.

"The stereotype of the male stud who is always up for sex is being challenged by new research from the University of Guelph showing that men are almost as likely to be coerced in the bedroom as women.

A study of 518 university students found that 38.8% of men and 47.9% of women reported being pressured into a range of sexual activity, from kissing and cuddling to intercourse and oral sex."

RADAR ALERT: H-RES 5-9-0, Misandry Has Got to Go!

Matt · 24 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Since the beginning of September, we have called on you to contact members of the U.S. House of Representatives to "Say NO to HRES 590." And our efforts are working!

To date the House Education and Labor Committee not voted on this hateful resolution. Even better news, the bill hasn't been scheduled for debate! That's exactly where we want it to stay.

And now we have a great opportunity – not only can we deep-six the bill, we can also send a powerful message to several Representatives who are running for president. Four current house members are running for President in their parties' primaries:
Duncan Hunter
Dennis J. Kucinich
Ron Paul
Thomas G. Tancredo

Because they are current House members they will also have to vote on HRES 590. We can continue our efforts to stop HRES 590, and perhaps influence the Presidential campaign, by making these four Congressman the focus of our efforts this week. For a reminder of just what's so offensive about HRES 590, see RADAR's critique here (.pdf file).

The contact information for each of these presidential hopefuls is:

Duncan Hunter
(R)
California
202-225-5672 (tel)
202-225-0235 (fax)
http://www.house.gov/hunter/contact.shtml
Note: Hunter's website explicitly states that you must be a resident of the 52nd Congressional District to send him an electronic message.

Dennis J. Kucinich
(D)
Ohio
202-225-5871 (tel)
202-225-5745 (fax)
http://kucinich.house.gov/Contact

Note: Kucinich uses the "Write Your Representative" service on the House website, which requires that you enter an address in his district.

Ron Paul
(R)
Texas
202-225-2831 (tel)
not provided http://www.house.gov/paul/contact.shtml

Thomas G. Tancredo
(R)
Colorado

202-225-7882 (tel)
202-226-4623 (fax)
http://tancredo.house.gov/contact_tom.html

As always, be polite. Contact the candidate(s) you would consider voting for in a Presidential primary. Let them know you want them to vote against HRES 590 and why. At the end of the call, fax, or electronic message you can let them know that a no vote and maybe a statement against the abuses of VAWA would get your vote in your state's primary.

All 4 of these guys are second tier candidates and are looking for ways to shake things up. This is a good way to test the effects of our grass roots efforts. If we make as big an impression on them as we did on Rep. George Miller, one of these 4 may mention VAWA abuses in one of the presidential debates or on their website because they will see we are potential voters.

++
Date of RADAR Release: September 24, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

UK: 'British School Girls Beat Classmates Face ‘Beyond Recognition’'

Matt · 24 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Video here.

Some people, particularly casual visitors to MANN, might ask, "Why does MANN keep putting stories up about violent women and girls, high schoolers getting stat. raped by female teachers, etc., etc. We all know it happens, why keep on about it?"

Well the reason is just this: most of us wouldn't know about it unless someone pointed it out, as such stories are usually buried on page C15 rather than on A1, where the stories about male criminals are printed.

The urge to deny that women and girls are just as capable of violence and other criminal acts is very strong: a toxic mix of chivalry, bigotry, and cognitive dissonance keep the wheels turning. So MANN keeps posting these sorts of reports because the mainstream media keeps airing one spun-out excuse-making report for female criminal activity after another. In short: We won't stop until they stop.

New Zealand: "Government has radical plan on child abuse"

n.j. · 24 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The government of New Zealand does not seem to have heard of the fact that women can be (and frequently are) perpetrators of domestic violence. Here is their new, incredibly one-sided approach to the problem: women only are to be asked at hospitals if they "feel controlled" or if anybody has "hurt or threatened" them.

This plan is indeed radical - radical feminist.

Link here.

Related story here.

Women aged 21 to 30 working full time earn 17% more than men

Anonymous · 24 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

A New York Times article of September 23rd mentions an analysis, based on 2005 census data, of the wage gap between men and women aged 21 to 30. Women who are employed full-time in that age bracket earn 17% more than men. The following is excerpted from the article (registration is required to view the article in its entirety):

For the first time, women in their 20s who work full time in several American cities — New York, Chicago, Boston and Minneapolis — are earning higher wages than men in the same age range, according to a recent analysis of 2005 census data by Andrew Beveridge, a sociology professor at Queens College in New York.

For instance, the median income of women age 21 to 30 in New York who are employed full time was 17 percent higher than that of comparable men.

Professor Beveridge said the gap is largely driven by a gulf in education: 53 percent of women employed full time in their 20s were college graduates, compared with 38 percent of men. Women are also more likely to have graduate degrees. “They have more of everything,” Professor Beveridge said.'

The article goes on to describe the discomfort the economic disparity creates over the question of who pays for a date.

Winkler Gets Visitation, Oprah Treatment

Matt · 25 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here and here. Excerpts:

Visitation:
'HUNTINGDON, Tenn. — A woman who killed her minister husband with a shotgun can begin supervised visits with her three young daughters Sept. 29, a judge ruled Wednesday.

Judge Ron Harmon said he will draw up rules and locations for the visits within a few days and Mary Winkler can phone her children every other day.'

Oprah:
'As many of you know, Mary Winkler recently appeared on Oprah.
...
Oprah was annoyingly sympathetic to Winkler, and seemed to buy her abused wife shtick.
...
One of the few times on Oprah where Oprah did voice skepticism was when Mary described the morning of the crime. Winkler told Oprah she was angry at her husband and “just wanted to talk to him," and then she “heard a boom.” A more complete description of the incident would have been that she wanted to talk to him, waited until he fell asleep, retrieved the shotgun, pumped it, aimed it at his back, pulled the trigger, and then “heard a boom.”'

NYT: 'When Ties to a Parent Are Cut by the Other'

Matt · 25 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks to Maurice for pointing this out. Article here. And you guessed it, it starts out with a story about an evil alcoholic truck-driving father as the perp. Only about half-way down the article do they get to this:

'Dr. Baker said her research — both for the book and with several hundred subjects over the last five years — indicates a mother or father is equally likely to do the manipulating. It is “truly 50-50,” she said.'

Author Calling for Stories of Abuse of Men by Women

Matt · 25 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I thought I'd pass this along... a social worker is writing a book on relationships wherein the man stays with the woman even when he is being abused by her. The web site is aptly named http://www.mypsychobitch.com/. Excerpt from the "About" section:

'As the years went by, I became more experienced as a therapist. With more experience came more exposure to similar stories wherein, with seemingly little or no provocation, the woman was flat out abusive to the man. In one case, while working with a couple, I asked the woman, "What were you thinking when you threw the ashtray which struck your husband in the head, causing an emergency room visit and seven stitches?"

With incredulity, I recall he wife saying, "I don't know that was thinking anything." She then changed the subject and continued talking about something else unrelated to her attack. I asked the man about his thoughts and feelings on this topic. His response, "She didn't mean to hurt me."'

Help distribute NCFM news release before domestic violence awareness month

Matt · 25 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

http://newsroom.eworldwire.com/view_release.php?id=17670

Centers For Disease Control Finds Women Commit Half Of Domestic Violence, Reports National Coalition of Free Men

NCFM calls for accuracy in media during Domestic Violence Awareness Month this October

Contact: Marc E. Angelucci, Esq.
626-319-3081
marcangelucci-at-hotmail.com

For Immediate Release

LOS ANGELES/EWORLDWIRE/Sep. 24, 2007 --- October is domestic violence awareness month. In May 2007, the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) published its latest study which found almost one-fourth of relationships had violence, about half of which was reciprocal, and the researchers were "surprised" to find that "in nonreciprocally violent relationships, women were the perpetrators in more than 70 percent of the cases," and men incurred significant injuries (http://pn.psychiatryonline.org/cgi/content/full/42/15/31-a) (http://www.ajph.org/cgi/content/abstract/97/5/94).

The CDC's Web site also cites data showing: "In the United States every year, about 1.5 million women and more than 800,000 men are raped or physically assaulted by an intimate partner," and 24 percent of intimate partner homicide victims were male (http://www.cdc.gov/ncipc/factsheets/ipvfacts.htm)

Experts have expressed concern that male victims have been unfairly ignored due to gender-driven politics and that this contributes to the intergenerational cycle of domestic violence. When male victims are ignored or just "take it," their children suffer long-term damage by the exposure and are more likely to commit the violence as adults.

The mass media often contributes to this neglect by framing domestic violence as "battered women" or as primarily a male crime and by citing inaccurate crime data. The media says "men and women" when covering soldiers or fire-fighters; it should do the same for domestic violence victims. The National Coalition of Free Men calls on the media for fair reporting this October. As Dear Abby said, "Domestic violence is a human problem, not a gender problem."

In addition to the CDC data, a recent 32-nation study by the University of New Hampshire found women commit half of all partner violence and are just as controlling as men (http://www.unh.edu/news/cj_nr/2006/may/em_060519male.cfm?type=n) (http://pubpages.unh.edu/~mas2/ID41E2.pdf).

A University of Florida study recently found women are more likely than men to "stalk, attack and abuse" their partners (http://news.ufl.edu/2006/07/13/women-attackers/).

The University of Washington recently found similar results (http://www.sciencedaily.com/releases/2007/06/070625111433.htm).

In fact, although men are less likely to report the violence - which distorts crime data, virtually all randomized sociological surveys show women initiate domestic violence as often as men and use weapons more than men, that men suffer one-third of injuries, and that self-defense explains only a small portion of domestic violence by either sex. Professor Martin Fiebert of California State University summarizes this data in an online bibliography at (http://www.csulb.edu/~mfiebert/assault.htm).

A recent study in the Journal of Family Violence found many male callers to a national hotline experienced severe violence from female partners who used violence to control them (http://www.springerlink.com/content/a7q0032j88817218/fulltext.pdf).

A University of Pennsylvania emergency room report found 13 percent of men were assaulted by a female partner in the previous 12 months, 37 percent with a weapon, and 14 percent required medical attention (http://www.aemj.org/cgi/content/abstract/6/8/786).

Contact: Marc E. Angelucci, Esq.
(626) 319-3081

HTML: http://www.eworldwire.com/pressreleases/17670
MOBILE: http://e4mobile.com/view_release.php?id=17670
PDF: http://www.eworldwire.com/pdf/17670.pdf
ONLINE NEWSROOM: http://www.eworldwire.com/newsroom/312078.htm
NEWSROOM RSS FEED: http://newsroom.eworldwire.com/xml/newsrooms/312078.xml
LOGO: http://www.eworldwire.com/newsroom/312078.htm

CONTACT:
Marc Angelucci
National Coalition of Free Men
P.O.Box 41291
Los Angeles, CA 90041
PHONE. 626-319-3081
FAX. 626-319-3081
EMAIL: marcangelucci-at-hotmail.com
NCFM's website: http://www.ncfm.org/
Los Angeles chapter website: http://www.ncfmla.org/

News.com.au asks: "Why do married men stray?"

GaryB · 26 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

If you really fancy getting angry, read this.

A famous cricketer in Australia has just been in the press for cheating. Technically he didn't cheat - he had, in the past, on several occasions, but this time he was actually separated from his wife when the fling occurred. But that's not important to this writer, who basically uses it as an excuse to attack all us men and tar us with the same brush.

What's more interesting is the comments below the story, a lot of guys (me included) have attempted to bring some sanity back into this.

Mother & Daughter Gang up on Boy on Schoolbus

Matt · 26 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story and video here. Excerpt:

'St. Petersburg, Florida - Police arrested 34-year-old Karen Barber and her 15-year-old daughter each on one count of simple battery.
...
Surveillance video shows what happened when Barber, wearing a red shirt, got on the bus. She confronted a 13-year-old boy who had allegedly punched her 12-year-old son on the bus the day before.

Proffitt says it appeared Barber was about to leave the school bus but then she turned back to the boy and poked him in the forehead.

The tape shows Barber also slapped the boy on the left side of his face.'

New Men's Website

jjgarage · 26 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Dear Administrators and Readers,

This is to inform you of our new website dedicated towards promoting men's issues. It is called JJ's Garage and can be found at http://www.jjgarage.com/.

Our site wants to coordinate and promote the thoughts and opinions of the average man. It has dedicated itself to this concept. Any man that enjoys writing his thoughts and opinions on any subject concerning male life in America can utilize our website for this purpose. Some of the subjects we highlight are "She Did What?" which gives men a chance to tell their side of broken relationships without the usual "men are bad, women are good" sexist slant found in most main stream media outlets. Our sight also highlights a section called "Fathers and Children" which offers married and divorced fathers a chance to offer their thoughts and opinions concerning the challenges and rewards of fatherhood. And finally, "Your Soapbox" is a section dedicated to the writings of men concerning any subject – sort of like a venting room.

We also offer other forms of media such as a podcast called JJ's Garage-Semi-Live which is a talk show version of our website, and we offer 24/7 news coverage via videos from major news organizations such as AP, Reuters, CBS, etc.

JJ's Garage also has a sense of humor. Humorous submissions are welcomed to keep spirits high and deter drowning in all the negativity we men encountered.

We look forward to working in coordination with similar sites to expand the causes and knowledge of men's issues. We can be contacted at theguys-at-jjgarage.com.

The Guys at JJ's Garage

Indiana Mother Sentenced to Life in Prison for Killing 4 Children

anthony · 26 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"An Elkhart woman who pleaded guilty to strangling her four young children was sentenced Monday to life in prison without parole in each child's death.

Angelica Alvarez, 27, told Elkhart Circuit Judge Terry Shewmaker she repented for what she had done and accepted responsibility for the murders of Jennifer Lopez, 8, Gonzalo Lopez, 6, Daniel Valdez, 4, and Jessica Valdez, 2, on Nov. 14, 2006.

Alvarez pleaded guilty to four counts of murder on Sept. 4 in return for Prosecutor Curtis Hill Jr. agreeing not to seek the death penalty."

New York Times: Men Are Now Happier Than Women

anthony · 27 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Over the same span, women have replaced housework with paid work — and, as a result, are spending almost as much time doing things they don't enjoy as in the past. Forty years ago, a typical woman spent about 23 hours a week in an activity considered unpleasant, or 40 more minutes than a typical man. Today, with men working less, the gap is 90 minutes."
...
"Government policy isn't the only problem, either. Inside of families, men still haven't figured out how to shoulder their fair share of the household burden. Instead, we're spending more time on the phone and in front of the television."'

Families getting child support unhappy about new fee srandy · 27 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'WASHINGTON — Millions of families that turned to federal and state governments for help in collecting child support payments will now have to pay more for the service.

Beginning Oct. 1, families will have to pay $25 annually when states have collected at least $500 on their behalf. Families that previously received public assistance will be exempted.

The $25 will help reduce the federal deficit and compensate the federal government and the states for providing a child support program. Two-thirds of the fee will go the federal government; one-third to the state.
...
For Claudia Fauntleroy of Petersburg, Va., the notice about the additional fee was akin to getting a $25 parking ticket in the mail. Her immediate reaction? “You’ve got to be kidding me.”'

Baby Boy Found with Pacifier Taped in Mouth, Nursery Shutdown

anthony · 27 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A 4-month-old boy was found in a darkened room at a day care center with a pacifier taped into his mouth, the Tennessee Department of Human Services announced Wednesday.

According to the suspension order, caretaker Angela Day Gentry told police the taping incident had occurred before, and that placing the tape on the child was a "mutual" idea between herself and Kim Ball, the other caretaker in the room."

"The child literally could have ingested the tape, aspirated, or had breathing problems very quickly (among other possibilities) without an adult's knowing of any crisis," the report stated.'

The Face Of Men Abused By Women

anthony · 27 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Steven said he knows some people will think he's weak, and he wants them to know after years of abuse at the hands of his mother, it was all he knew. He said he is now happily married to a wonderful woman.

He added, "Men's hearts and feelings are like women's hearts and feelings. They feel the same. It doesn't matter if that heart is covered with muscles or breasts, the pain cuts deeply and the losses crowd in. And it doesn't matter if the world thinks men don't feel. You still hurt."'

Senate Pushes Gender Hate Crime Bill

anthony · 27 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Under current federal law, hate crimes apply to acts of violence against individuals on the basis of race, religion, color or national origin. Federal prosecutors have jurisdiction only if the victim is engaged in a specific federally protected activity such as voting.

The House bill would extend the hate crimes category to include sexual orientation, gender, gender identity or disability and give federal authorities greater leeway to participate in hate crime investigations. It would approve $10 million over the next two years to help local law enforcement officials cover the cost of hate crime prosecutions."

Circumcision Atrocity Suit Filed Against Coles County Hospital

Anonymous · 27 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. As long as Type-I male genital mutilation is legal, much worse mutilations will occur. Support the MGM bill: http://www.mgmbill.org/

Excerpt:

'MATTOON, Ill., July 18 /PRNewswire/ -- The day after birth on February 15, 2007, an infant at Sarah Bush Hospital had a standard circumcision procedure performed by Dr. Sherif Malek. However, what should have been a forgotten memory for the boy became a lifelong nightmare. Due to negligence, Dr. Malek severed the entire glans, commonly termed the head, of the infant's penis. Today, Jerry A. Latherow of Latherow Law Office on behalf of plaintiffs Boy Doe (the infant) and his mother, Jane Doe, filed a complaint for compensation for damages against Sarah Bush Lincoln Health System, Inc, 1000 Health Center Drive, Mattoon, IL, and Sherif Malek, D.O. in the Circuit Court of Coles County, Illinois.'

"Women in their thirties exhausted and unhappy"

Anonymous · 28 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Women in their thirties who appear to "have it all" compared with previous generations are in fact exhausted and unhappy, a survey has claimed.

The demands of being a homemaker, mother and holding down a job is leaving them "physically and emotionally" wrecked.'

"Nifong example raises good questions"

Matt · 28 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks to Marc A. for the heads-up. Op-ed here. Excerpt:

'To Nifong: To exploit social stereotypes in order to pursue and compound an injustice against the falsely accused.

When future generations of prosecutors gather around campfires, the Saga of Mike Nifong no doubt will be a frequently told tale.
...
...What if those charged had been poor black men and the alleged victim a suburban white woman? Consider if either those charged, or allegedly victimized, were men, women, straight, gay, Asian, Latino, Native American, black, Caucasian, middle class or poor. Would this have influenced your response?

These are questions worth raising in our hometown as we consider whether justice would truly have been blind.'

On friendships: "Where Have All The Men Gone?"

Matt · 28 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Came across this article and thought it was a good topic to toss out there. It discusses the 'vanishing friendships' that men have with each other and how that just ain't good for us. Excerpt:

'Men who have been managing their careers for years but who find themselves, midstream, feeling bereft of the kind of friendships they once had seem to have made four critical life mistakes, according to experts. The first and biggest problem involves time constraints...

The second problem is a little more insidious and involves the way men tend to forsake their male friends and elect their wives or girlfriends as their new and primary best friends in their social worlds. Call it the Yoko Ono effect.

...
Following hard upon this is problem number three: the tendency for men to entrust their social lives to their girlfriends or wives.
...
The fourth mistake takes us to the problem of male friendship at its widest circumference. It has to do with the sense of manhood we inherit from our fathers and from the movies, a sense of manhood that is standard issue, handed out, as it were, when we were boys, and it is symbolized by the lone rider, brave, independent, and self-sufficient — the Clint Eastwood effect.'

N.Y. judge known for tirades vs. men to step down

Scottie · 28 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'NEW YORK - A Family Court judge whose alleged courtroom tirades included calling one man a "pig" and another "dysfunctional" has agreed to step down at the end of the year.

Judge Marian Shelton will finish out her 10-year term and agreed not to seek reappointment. A monitoring agency called the State Commission on Judicial Conduct, said Thursday it would not seek sanctions against her under the deal.'

Edwards Predicts Doom for African-American Males

anthony · 28 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Does Edwards really care about men, or is he simply looking for minority votes? Either way, its the first comment from a presidential candidate regarding the status of American males. Make sure you check out the video. Excerpt:

'Democratic presidential candidate John Edwards said if he isn't elected president, the population of African-American males is likely to either wind up in prison or dead.
...
We start with the president of the United States saying to America, 'we cannot build enough prisons to solve this problem. And the idea that we can keep incarcerating and keep incarcerating — pretty soon we're not going to have a young African-American male population in America. They're all going to be in prison or dead. One of the two."'

Author of Books For Boys to Release Free Sample Chapters

Anonymous · 29 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

On Monday, October 1, Max Elliot Anderson will post a sample chapter from one of his action-adventures or mysteries, written especially for boys 8 – 13. Mr. Anderson grew up hating to read. “Now I write the kinds of books I would have enjoyed as a child,” he said.

Each chapter will come from one of his seven published books. “It’s an opportunity for children, teachers, and parents to get an idea of what my books are all about.”

These chapters can be located on his blog, Books for Boys, at http://booksandboys.blogspot.com/.

Chapters will come from Newspaper Caper, Terror at Wolf Lake, North Woods Poachers, Mountain Cabin Mystery, Big Rig Rustlers, Secret of Abbott's Cave & Legend of the White Wolf, which are compared by readers and reviewers to Tom Sawyer, The Hardy Boys, Huck Finn, Nancy Drew, Tom Swift, Scooby-Doo, Lemony Snicket, and adventure author Jack London.

“I’m interested in getting more boys to read,” Anderson said. “There is a tremendous need to write books that will capture and hold their attention. I believe I’ve written books like that.”

Others agree.

A mother recently wrote, concerning her reluctant reader son, “I love the way you write and make us want to read on! By the third book, he didn't wait on me anymore! He was off in his room reading away all by himself! I feel like I owe his success of reading to you. YOU gave him the love of reading!”

Another parent said, “I can't believe it…as the concerned mother of two struggling readers (boys ages 13 & 16)…who is also the daughter of a children's librarian…I think I have purchased every book recommended for reluctant readers. however, they have ALL fallen short until today. We were able to purchase Newspaper Caper and we're hooked !!! I can't thank you enough for your efforts. I actually think I caught my husband listening too!!!”

Not only are his books written to appeal to boys, they look different. “The type is larger,” Anderson said. “You won’t find huge blocks of words. I use shorter sentences, with lots of dialog, and humor. The pages are of higher quality with plenty of white space, so readers won’t lose their place on the page. And most chapters end with a cliffhanger.”

These books appeal to girls as well. Anderson believes that once young readers read one of these sample chapters, they’ll want more. “I’m going to post a new chapter, from a different book, every Monday from October 1 through November 12.”

“And remember,” Anderson concluded with a smile, “Christmas isn’t that far away.”

Knicks Sex Harassment Case Going to Jury

anthony · 29 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"In their closing arguments, defense lawyers argued that Browne Sanders was doomed by her own failure to adapt to an organizational shake-up that began with Thomas's hiring in 2004. A series of clashes with Thomas and star guard Stephon Marbury, poor job performance and personal financial woes put her in a precarious position that prompted her to make false claims, said MSG attorney Ronald Green.

It's up to a jury to decide whose version to believe in a $10 million sexual harassment lawsuit. Deliberations were expected to begin Friday."

UConn: Taking A Look At Men's Studies

anthony · 29 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Gouws' interest in "men's studies," as he described the field, developed during his stint at graduate school. The classroom environment, said Gouws, sometimes enabled bigotry under the guise of feminism with nasty consequences. During a class on gender sociology, the instructor presented a paper describing a female 'wild zone' that represented an area of thinking that women alone could experience due purely to their sex.
...
The importance of male-positive masculinities cannot be understated, said Gouws. "The manhood question" - how men define themselves in relation to their gender - is an essential one, and it deserves the same attention that "the woman question" has received. And since he's not retiring just yet, Gouws and his students will have plenty of time to delve further.'

Site Upgrade

Scott · 29 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Bear with us, this site has now been upgraded to the latest and greatest version of Drupal. That of course means old bugs are fixed and new ones are introduced. Please keep us posted on problems you may encounter with the new system to admin@mensactivism.org.

"Duke Apologizes to Lacrosse Players"

Matt · 30 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke University President Richard Brodhead apologized Saturday for not better supporting the men's lacrosse players falsely accused in last year's highly publicized rape scandal.

Brodhead, speaking at the university's law school, said he regretted Duke's "failure to reach out" in a "time of extraordinary peril" after a woman accused three players of raping at a March 2006 party thrown by the team.'

Too little, too late. Brodhead, it's time for you to step down.

Does Anyone Use the Planet Blog Reader?

Scott · 30 September 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Along the top of this site are links to other services I've been experimenting with offering to the community. The wiki has been very active lately, but the Planet Blog Reader is in need of some maintenance that I don't really have the time for. I'd like to know if anyone would feel upset to see it go?

RADAR ALERT: DV Awareness Month: Nighty-Night to DV Fairy Tales!

Matt · 1 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

October is Domestic Violence Awareness Month, and this year RADAR and many members of the VAWA Reform Coalition are sponsoring activities designed to counteract the fairy tales the DV industry delights in spreading around.

This year RADAR has selected the theme, "It's Time to Tell the Truth about Domestic Violence." Throughout the month, RADAR will be releasing reports that highlight how the DV myths often preclude effective approaches to reducing partner abuse, and sometimes make the situation worse!

RADAR strongly encourages you to attend at least one Domestic Violence Awareness Month event held in your area. To find a listing of local events:

1. Go to http://www.usdoj.gov/ovw/statedomestic.htm.
2. Identify the domestic violence coordinating council for your state.
3. At the coordinating council's website, look for activities listed under the Calendar of Events

Always be sure to present yourself in a polite manner. And if you really want to have fun, why not show up at the event early, dressed up as a storybook character:

- The Wicked Witch who tricked Snow White into eating a poisonous apple.
- Pinocchio, whose nose grew an inch every time he told a lie.
- The Sly Old Fox, who misled the Gingerbread Men by saying he wouldn't eat them if they let him carry them across the river.

Pass out copies of the flyer (.pdf file) that RADAR designed specially for Domestic Violence Awareness Month. Try to take pictures. If you come up with any good shots, post them on a website like http://flickr.com/, http://imageshack.us, or http://divshare.com/, and send the URLs for your best shots to info-at-mediaradar.org.

Finally, RADAR will be issuing several press releases throughout the month. This week's press release focuses on the many inaccuracies on the U.S. Department of Justice website, asking that federal agency to "Tell the Truth about Partner Abuse." The release is posted here on the RADAR website.

So we invite you to join the festivities! This week, send a friendly message to the DoJ Attorney General and highlight the many fairy tales on the DoJ website, urging him to "Tell the Truth about Domestic Violence.".

Send your e-mail to: AskDOJ-at-usdoj.gov or call the Office of the Attorney General Comment Line: 202-353-1555.

The truth is our greatest weapon. This month, we're going to make the most of it – and have a lot of fun in the process!

++
Date of RADAR Release: October 1, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

India: Battered men scurry for cover in Orissa district

Matt · 3 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Story here. Excerpt:

'Kendrapara (Orissa), Oct 1: As women continue to storm the male bastion, quite a few men from this part of the state are crying foul and demanding protection from their aggressive spouses.

With anti-dowry law largely favouring the women resulting in its gross misuse, allegations pour in from husbands who are at the receiving end of persecution and harassment meted out to them by their spouses.

The beleaguered husbands driven up the wall have begun seeking the state women's commission to intervene and save them from rowdy wives.'

Times & Daily Democrat cites the accurate data on gender and domestic violence

Matt · 3 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Posted on behalf of Marc A. Story here. Excerpt:

'Citizens by and large deduce that women are the primary victims -- and that remains true. But in solving the problem of domestic violence, there must be realism about its nature.

The same CDC study concludes that in about half of the cases, the violence is reciprocal between a man and woman. That's not hard to believe in examining police incident reports, where woman most times do the reporting as a victim but in which men frequently state they were attacked during the incident as well.

What surprised CDC researchers even more was that "in non-reciprocally violent relationships, women were the perpetrators in more than 70 percent of the cases," and men incurred significant injuries.'

RADAR ALERT: Act Now to Prevent a Repeat of HRES 590 Disgrace

Matt · 3 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Despite our heroic efforts to stop HRES 590, RADAR has just learned that the bill passed the House of Representatives last Tuesday.

HRES 590 is jam-packed (.pdf file) with half-truths, distortions, and lies. Passage of this biased resolution is a national embarrassment.

We did succeed in stopping the bill from being debated by the House Education and Labor Committee. But it appears the House leadership did an end-run on us, taking the bill out of committee directly to the House floor. Not only that, the leadership cut the debate short, requiring a two-thirds vote for a voice vote.

Yes, it was a disgraceful short-circuiting of the democratic process, but that's what they did. So we have to learn from the experience and plan to do much better next time.

What lesson did we learn? That stopping a flawed bill like this requires a MASSIVE outpouring of voter discontent. To do that, we need to substantially increase the number of people signed on to the RADAR E-lert list.

So here's what we're asking you to do –

Think of all the listservs and organizations you belong to that are concerned about the destructive effects of VAWA. Pass along this Alert to those groups with this simple message:

"Join the growing effort to reform the Violence Against Women Act - go to http://www.mediaradar.org/join_vrc.php and sign up to receive the RADAR E-lerts."

Do it now. We must not allow a repeat of the HRES 590 disgrace.

++
Date of RADAR Release: October 3, 2007

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Virginia Tech Collegiate Times editorial: "Men Often Victims of Sexual Assault"

Matt · 3 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Story here. Excerpt:

'In a May 2007 study, the Centers for Disease Control found that more than 800,000 males in the United States are raped or physically assaulted by their female partners every year.

The National Coalition of Free Men (NCFM) is expressing concern during domestic violence awareness month this October that this study has been unfairly ignored because of the media's gender stereotyping.
...
CDC studies show the gravity of IPV for men and women alike. In the year 2004, IPV resulted in 1,544 deaths with 25 percent being men. Updated in 2003, the corporate cost of IPV in the United States was $8.3 million from medical care, mental health services and lost productivity.'

Jewish "Intactivists" In U.S. Stop Circumcising

Matt · 3 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here, HOORAY!! This represents real progress in getting this hopelessly outdated practice eliminated from our list of anti-male "socially acceptable" things. And, it's in an MSM publication, two reasons to cheer! Excerpt:

'But, like an increasing number of Jews in the United States, she has decided not to circumcise her son, rejecting the traditional notion that it is a Biblically prescribed sign of the Jewish relationship with God.

"I see circumcision as a blood ritual that I can let go of," said Anderson, who lives in Southern California.

Her position is in harmony with a wider decline in circumcision in the United States.
...
Among those talking about it is a gaggle of young, male, Jewish commentators. This year alone, in books, online and in magazines, authors Neal Pollack, Sam Apple, Jonathan Safran Foer and Shalom Auslander have all fretted about doing to their sons what was done to them. The title of Auslander's memoir, scheduled for publication in October, is "Foreskin's Lament."

Circumcision is even before the courts. In November, the Oregon Supreme Court will rule on whether a convert to Judaism can force his 12-year-old son to undergo the procedure.'

Article says: "If boys will be boys, men will beat women"

Matt · 4 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Posted for Marc A.: This disgustingly anti-male, sexist article by Gretchen Cochran cites the old lie that 95% of domestic violence is male-on-female, quotes a bunch of gender bigots like Frank Ochberg saying it's in men's genes to use force against women, and posts the phony "power & control wheel."

Please RESPOND by writing to the editor, etc. at:

citypulse-at-lansingcitypulse.com letters-at-lansingcitypulse.com gretchen-at-lansingcitypulse.com thomas-at-lansingcitypulse.com publisher-at-lansingcitypulse.com

Fall/Winter DAHMW Newsletter Release

Scott · 4 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Jan Brown of the Maine-based Domestic Abuse Helpline for Men and Women forwarded me a copy of their Fall/Winter newsletter. You can download a copy of it here. The newsletter discusses the recent DV study by the Centers for Disease Control and mentions a new public service announcement they've released.

New York: Golden Retriever Given Order of Protection

Matt · 4 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Story here. Excerpt:

'NEW HAVEN, Oct. 1 — It was a typical scene for a divorced couple: As the police tell it, Cassandra Reynolds pulled up in the driveway of her ex-husband's home in South Windsor to pick up a few belongings.

A dispute ensued. Her ex-husband's golden retriever approached her, so she kicked it, the police said. The dog yelped. Ms. Reynolds was arrested.

That was on Sept. 23. The next day, a Superior Court judge ordered Ms. Reynolds, 39, to stay away from her ex-husband and his new wife. The judge also ordered her to stay at least 100 yards away from Riley, the golden retriever — or face up to five years in prison and a fine of up to $5,000.'

"Woman allegedly had relationship with boy, 8"

Matt · 4 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Note the headline: "..had relationship". "HAD RELATIONSHIP"?? Well, yes, I guess they did, the same way a hungry tiger has a relationship with a slow gazelle. Strictly speaking, they do have "a relationship", but there are far more precise terms one can use to describe it. Excerpt:

'LAS CRUCES -- A 30-year-old Las Cruces woman was in custody Wednesday, charged with having sexual contact with an 8-year-old boy, Las Cruces police reported.

Michelle A. Tufts, 30, of the 2800 block of east Idaho Avenue, was arrested Monday and is charged with two felony counts of criminal sexual penetration of a child younger than 13 and one count of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.'

"Home Is Where the Hurt Is"

Matt · 5 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Boy Genteel. Article here. Excerpt:

'"Our policies are geared in one direction -- not only unfair to male victims, more importantly, it's not very effective. We're not treating the whole problem; we're only treating part of it. Right now our policies are driven by battered-women's advocates. While they certainly should have a place at the table and their voice is important, they shouldn't be determining policy. There are mental health professionals, attorneys, people involved in family law, children's advocates and social workers who have a different take on domestic violence; and their voices are just not considered in the same way as battered-women's advocates.'

Duke Case: Lacrosse Players File Lawsuit Against City of Durham

Matt · 5 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Greensboro — Three former Duke lacrosse players falsely accused of rape have filed a federal civil lawsuit against several defendants, including former District Attorney Mike Nifong and the city of Durham.

The 155-page lawsuit does not mention a specific amount of damages, but does ask for numerous reforms to the way the Durham Police Department handles criminal investigations.'

Victims of false domestic violence reporting detail experiences

Matt · 5 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Story here. Excerpt:

'CHARLESTON - The release of a study indicating that most of the petitions for domestic violence protection orders may be used for leverage in a divorce or child custody proceeding comes as cold comfort to those who've experienced it firsthand.'

Problem Fix Coming: Story Submission

Scott · 7 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I'm aware that users have been unable to submit stories to the site since the upgrade. I apologize for this and will fix it soon. However, I've been on the road and will not be able to get to this for a few days. Please bear with this, I realize how critical it is for us to be able to accept stories from you.

Visa program gives victims chance to help law officials

Matt · 9 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Story here. Excerpt:

'Under the program, immigrants temporarily can live and work in this country legally as long as they help law enforcement officials investigate and prosecute the offenders.

The "U" visa, approved by Congress in 2000 as part of a law providing investigators and prosecutors legal muscle to fight the growing human trafficking industry, was mired in delays as the government analyzed local, state and federal criminal laws to decide which immigrants would be eligible.'

RADAR ALERT: RADAR Report Shows DV Programs May Worsen Partner Abuse

Matt · 9 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Today RADAR is releasing an explosive new report that reveals most domestic violence programs are ineffective, and some actually worsen abusive situations. "Why Have Domestic Violence Programs Failed to Stop Partner Abuse?" analyzes the research on four widely-used strategies to reduce partner abuse:

1. Treatment services for abusers:
   While treatment services based on the so-called Duluth model are flatly ineffective, gender-specific services for female abusers are generally unavailable, the report reveals.
2. Restraining orders:
   Two to three million restraining orders are issued every year in the United States. But such orders are generally ineffective in preventing physical violence. Researcher Lora Dugan concluded in one study that protection orders are associated with "increases in the number of black women killed by their unmarried partners."
3. Mandatory arrest:
   Mandatory arrest laws are now on the books in 37 states, but according to a recent Harvard University study, such laws increase subsequent partner homicides by 60%. "Mandatory arrest laws are responsible for an additional 0.8 murders per 100,000 people," concludes Harvard researcher Radha Iyengar.
4. No-drop prosecution:
   No-drop prosecution policies, now in effect in two-thirds of jurisdictions around the country, likewise have no proof of their value.

The report will surely disappoint those who keep calling for ever-harsher law enforcement measures to curb domestic violence. We urge you to read this milestone report, which can be seen here (.pdf file).

Then we encourage you to distribute this flyer (.pdf file) at the next Domestic Violence Awareness Month event that you attend.

Let's begin to get the word out that VAWA badly needs to be reformed!

++
Date of RADAR Release: October 9, 2007

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Where the boys aren't: In college

Matt · 9 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via anthony. Story here. Excerpt:

'Factors such as changing societal norms, women's superior high school academic performance and higher career expectations could be responsible for the increase, Frank Guzik, associate director of admissions at IPFW, says.

"It's not just the numbers," he says. "It's the reason why. Most colleges and universities, ourselves included, have made efforts to make college admission more accessible to women. And we've been really successful at it."'

Teacher guilty on sex count

Matt · 9 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via anthony. Story here. Excerpt:

'Pleading guilty to six counts of indecent treatment of a boy under the age of 14, plus 20 counts of indecent treatment of a boy under the age of 17, King then had to sit in the court dock on tenterhooks for almost three hours as her lawyer Tony Kimmins argued why she should not go to jail.

In the end he was successful, with Senior Judge Gilbert Trafford-Walker sentencing King to three years' jail on each count, to be served concurrently – but all wholly suspended for three years and six months.
...
Ms Brisick said at the time of the offences, from 1977 to 1982, carnal knowledge of a female by a male was an offence but not that of a female against a male, which is why the charges had proceeded along indecent dealing lines.'

Police: Rape case a hoax

Matt · 9 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via anthony. Story here. Excerpt:

'Renesia D. Smart, 18, Humble Avenue, Cairo, was arrested late Thursday and charged with giving false information to the police.

“While we were doing the investigation into the reported rape (Thursday) some of the details conflicted with what some of the evidence was showing us,” said Sandefur. “As evening progressed and we spoke with other associates of the reporting party, we discovered that this was a fabrication.”

...

Her charge is a misdemeanor offense; Sandefur said Smart must go in front of a state court judge.'

"Women Who Batter, Proudly"

Matt · 9 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via anthony. Article here. Excerpt:

'A recent survey by the Centers for Disease Control found that among physically aggressive couples, 71% of the instigators in nonreciprocal partner violence were female. And last year Renee McDonald of Baylor University published a study in the Journal of Family Psychology with almost identical results.
...
The problem isn't just gals who clean their boyfriends' clock in a drunken rage. These high-testosterone females abuse their men and then come clean with a swaggering braggadocio.

A few months ago ABC Primetime did an experiment. The producers hired two actors - male and female - to feign partner violence in a public park. They wanted to see what passers-by would do when they spotted the woman pounding her boyfriend with a rolled-up newspaper.'

U Conn Student Paper: "The Hidden Side Of Domestic Violence"

Matt · 9 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I believe this is a direct result of our news release. They don't mention NCFM but they cited the same data we did, and in the same way. Marc A.

Article here. Excerpt:

'Cultural stigmas attached to males prevent society from recognizing domestic violence cases the gender suffers from.

Kathleen Holgerson, the director of the Women's Center, said that the cultural stigmas attached to men often keep male victims from reporting their domestic violence cases.

Men are stereotypically "tough" and thus many men feel it is considered a weakness on their part to allow their partner to subject them to such abuse.'

More student paper exposure re DV

Matt · 9 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Story here. Excerpt:

'Angelucci said only two shelters exist in California that serve male domestic violence victims as well as female. In the past, many domestic violence shelters would even train their staff to treat all male callers as perpetrators no matter what the circumstances, Angelucci said.

Martin Fiebert at Cal State Long Beach said the mass media often contributes to this neglect of male victims by framing domestic violence only as "battered women" or primarily as male crime, and by citing inaccurate data.'

Ed. note: The Sundial is the student paper of California State University, Northridge.

Story Submission Back On-line

Scott · 10 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks again everyone for your understanding - web-based story submissions are now working again. I don't say this often enough, or often at all, but the news story submissions from our users are the thing that makes Mensactivism.org what it is today, and I greatly appreciate all the time and effort people put into creating content for this site.

I realize at the same time there are improvements we could make to help resolve the inevitable disputes that have occasionally come up regarding what content gets posted as stories and what doesn't. I want you to know that I'm continuing to look into solutions that will better address these problems. Keep an eye out for more site changes along these lines by the end of this year.

Husband 'burned while wife got washing in'

Matt · 10 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Gary. Story here.

Gary writes: "Hmm, does it really take Sherlock Holmes to work this one out? Man is worth two and a half million pounds, tells his wife he wants a divorce. Wife says “You will NOT divorce me”.

Husband goes out to shed, which then mysteriously explodes, burning him to death. Whilst he is burning to death, the wife BRINGS IN THE WASHING!

She then takes the cash and moves to Australia with the riches to buy a house where she sets up with her boyfriend.

Now, I wonder who did it – couldn’t have been a woman, MUST have been a man..."

Excerpt:

'As Jennifer Chubb professed her innocence in Bellingen yesterday, a British court was told she allegedly rushed to take washing off the line while her husband Andrew burned to death when his backyard shed burst into flames in 2001.

Andrew Chubb, 58, died in the shed fire after he apparently told his wife he wanted a divorce so he could move in with his lover Kerry Sparrow.

Neighbours yesterday told the inquest into his death that Mrs Chubb was very concerned about the washing on the line, told everyone she thought her husband was committing suicide and, before the fire was even out, was talking about insurance payouts.'

Wrongly Imprisoned Man Freed in Texas

blaze4metal · 10 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A man who spent a dozen years in prison for a rape he didn't commit was freed Tuesday, the third inmate to be released because of problems with the Houston Police Department's crime lab.
...
Houston officials have been struggling to fix the crime lab for years. An independent audit in 2002 raised concerns about DNA analysis procedures. In June, a former U.S. Justice Department inspector hired by the city cited hundreds of "serious and pervasive" flaws in forensic cases handled by the lab.'

Woman seeks rich husband, banker says "crappy" deal

Matt · 10 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Every now and then, something is written in the sub-MSM world that just about sums it all up. This reports on a recent exchange between a woman seeking to become a trophy bride and a man who explains why he wouldn't take the deal. Original posting duplicated here. You will enjoy it.

Hillary in her own words: Gender is all she has to run on

Matt · 11 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'But Clinton is campaigning in large part on her gender; she noted during a swing through the state this week that she couldn't run as anything else. She is making appeals to women and the voters who support them in subtle and direct ways.

She says she's not running because she's a woman, but because she is the most qualified and experienced person for the job. But at every stop, she used her potential to break through the ultimate glass ceiling as part of her closing argument for voters to elect her.'

More "femme fatale" pedaling of murder-by-proxy

Matt · 11 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Oh how the press eats it up! Sexy ex-stripper goads fiance #2 to kill fiance #1 using a Hollywood script and her own "wiles". Has all the makings of not one but five Oprah episodes and dozens of made-for-TV movies.

Body count: 2. Fiance #1 dead, fiance #2 in jail

Meanwhile a sociopath gets all the limelight she can handle. Let's see how much time if any she actually gets. She'll probably make a fortune on book deals and appearances.

Excerpt:

'ANCHORAGE, Alaska - In the 1994 movie “The Last Seduction,” a femme fatale coaxes her lover into killing her husband for money. Prosecutors say a beautiful stripper obsessed with the film followed the script to its murderous end.

Mechele Linehan, 34, is on trial on charges she masterminded the decade-old slaying of her fiancé in hopes of collecting $1 million in insurance.

Life and art were so similar, prosecutors say, that they even sought, unsuccessfully, to have the movie shown to the jury.'

Mother disfigures boy to spite his father, gets jail

GaryB · 11 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This is a horrendous story, but a positive outcome in that (for once) she isn't seen as the victim and needing help.

The mum was angry because the boy's father hadn't turned up to see him on this particular day - so she boils a kettle, calls him into the kitchen then pours it over the boy, scolding him over 20% of his body.

Excerpt:
'The judge at Cardiff Crown Court told the 36-year-old, who cannot be named, that she had "failed her first and greatest responsibility as a parent". Judge Phillip Richards added the mother had become "the danger" to her son.

The victim had told the court that he was still full of rage over his mother's actions and wanted to make her pay.

He said he did not tell anybody about the incident until the autumn of 2004, because she had told him she would kill herself if he did.'

Like I said, unbelievable she would do it to her own son but so positive that she's facing serious jail time and (at least in this article) nobody is rushing to defend her and make her out to be the victim.

Best Political Blog: Vote for Angry Harry

Anonymous · 12 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The Blogger's Choice Award will be awarded on November 10th. Vote today!

Whether or not you agree with Angry Harry's approach, he raises important MRA issues. AngryHarry is a front-runner for Best Political Blog.

Vote for Angry Harry here.

Of course, the cadres of women studies majors and government-sponsored feminist organizations have started ticking away at their keyboards, organizing to artificially inflate the numbers for Feministing.com. But the grassroots movement of equality-seeking men and women are making their voices heard: You'll also find Feministing nominated for Worst Blog of All time, and Most Obnoxious Blogger.

Korean Papaer Covers Pay Gap - and Reasons for It

Matt · 12 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

' Apart from the longer overall hours put in by men than women, Warren Farrell, author of ``Why Men Earn More: The Startling Truth Behind the Pay Gap - and What Women Can Do About It,'' said male workers are more likely to be open toward factors that lead to higher pay.

Relocating or traveling extensively for work, taking on more hazardous assignments, working in the hard sciences, taking jobs requiring greater financial risk and working in unpleasant environments are some of the conditions Farrell mentions in his book.'

Book review: A man's guide to avoiding psychos

Matt · 12 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

'His divorce did nothing to put him off the fairer sex and he has a long-term partner.

So why is he co-authoring a book called That Bitch (Protect Yourself Against Women With Malicious Intent), a title guaranteed to get a knee-jerk, hackles-rising response in the most placid-natured members of the gender?

"It is a provocative title," he concedes. "We can't use it in America. They can't deal with the directness. It is going to be called Venus: The Dark Side. But the book is aimed at guys and as everybody says guys don't do subtlety we thought we are not going to pussy foot around here.

...

The book is a survival guide for men (and women) on how to protect themselves against a (Roy is at pains to stress) small group of vindictive, violent or self-serving women who use and abuse partners, colleagues and even children.'

Bill Cosby's New Book Condemns Fatherless America

Roy · 14 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The entire first chapter of comedian Bill Cosby's new book is on-line:

In "Come on People, On the Path From Victims to Victors" Cosby condemns the epidemic of fatherlessness in the black community and in the nation at large that has devastating consequences:

"A house without a father is a challenge. A neighborhood without fathers is a catastrophe, and that's just about what we have today. ... Why is the problem so grave? A mother can usually teach a daughter how to be a woman. But as much as mothers love their sons, they have difficulty showing a son how to be a man.... We can't speak honestly of black culture in America unless and until we honestly address the issue of the estrangement of fathers and their children."

There's humor as well, with Cosby taking on the gansta rap culture that too often celebrates the street as real education -

"You can't land a plane in Rome saying, "Whassup?" to the control tower. You can't be a doctor telling your nurse, "Dat tumor be nasty."

198 Methods of Nonviolent Action

Scott · 14 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In the spirit of covering activism topics, I recently came across this list of 198 nonviolent forms of protest activism authored by Gene Sharp. It's something worth distributing to fellow activists to help inspire ideas for activism projects.

Former Duke Lacrosse Coach Sues School

axolotl · 14 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) -- The former Duke University men's lacrosse coach who resigned last year amid allegations that three of his players raped a stripper has sued the university."

"Mike Pressler's lawsuit apparently stems from a financial settlement the school reached earlier this year with him.."

Baby-throwing mom convicted blaze4metal · 15 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'A jury has convicted a woman of swinging her 4-week-old son at her boyfriend during a fight and fracturing the infant's skull.

Chytoria Graham, 28, fell into the fetal position when the judge told her she faced a five-year mandatory minimum prison sentence after she was convicted Wednesday of aggravated assault, reckless endangerment, simple assault and child endangerment.

"Oh my God," Graham cried. "Oh my God, Oh my God. No, no, no."'

Why is she so upset? A man would have gotten at least 20 years minimum for the same thing. Oh well, good riddance.

Isiah Thomas: Guilt by genitalia

anthony · 15 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Nowhere is female privilege more evident than within the star-chamber like confines of the "Sexual Harassment Industry." In this arena, feminist lobbyists have erected a charnel house to exterminate the expression of random, unscripted male behavior in the workplace. It has even created a ludicrous female right not to be offended…by anything said or done in their proximity. This right can be brandished upon men who accidentally forget to don their automaton costumes before punching the clock."

Politico: Dems must woo white men to win

anthony · 15 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"In 2008, Democrats are assembling behind a front-runner, Hillary Rodham Clinton, with singular problems among white males. Polls show her support among this group is approaching the record lows scored by Democrats during the peak of Ronald Reagan's popularity in the 1980s. Some recent hypothetical matchups — which are highly fluid at this stage of a contest — showed Clinton winning roughly a third of white males in a race against Republican Rudy Giuliani."

Also from anthony, an interesting contrast: Clinton's team says women will carry win.

Opening This Week: "Feminist Farm" CafePress Shop

sgaver · 15 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This week-end I will be opening up a new CafePress shop, Feminist Farm Online Store, devoted to "... lampooning feminism and exposing feminism's long history of misconceptions, absurdities, distortions, half-truths and outright lies."

The store's headline reads: "The best way to drive out the devil . . . is to jeer and flout her, for she cannot bear scorn." And that's what we plan to do: make fun of feminism, with humorous and (hopefully) pointed illustrations that mock and scorn feminism.

Although the shop will open with only four items, I've hired artists from as far away as India, and have about a dozen additional illustrations now on the drawing board that should be ready for the store in 1 or 2 weeks.

Please check it out! http://www.cafepress.com/feministfarm

Feedback and suggestions are always welcome!

Rudov: Man sues over being forced to take female hormone pills

MrReality · 16 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

According to the latest debate on Fox News some corporations are now forcing men to take female hormone pills because -- according to them -- it makes men "less aggressive." The war against men is still going full steam and behind the wheel are women and men whom would rather argue with, and impugn other men, than expose women's double standards and lies.

You can watch the debate here.

Nebraska mom who abandoned baby will get full custody by December tac0965 · 17 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Sorry to keep bringing this story up on the board (this will be the last), but it appears there will be no consequences for a woman who left her baby in a hospital restroom. She will probably get the baby back by the end of the year. Notice how much sympathy is in some of the comments to this story. Many of those who commented mentioned how they felt when they were pregnant and 18. They seemed to be strangely implying that they understand this woman's actions (??). Article here.

tac0965
"Don't get married, don't put your girlfriends name on any of your property, and hide your assets!"

Baltimore Sun prints Glenn Sacks' column re false rape rape accusations

Matt · 17 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

'The University of Maryland is under fire for denying activists from the Clothesline Project, a campus rape-awareness event, permission to publicly name alleged rapists. The university cites the danger of lawsuits from those named, and that's certainly a reasonable fear. Yet the university should also oppose naming alleged rapists because it could defame and harm innocent men.

A significant percentage of allegations of sexual assault are false. According to a study conducted by former Purdue sociologist Eugene J. Kanin and published in Archives of Sexual Behavior, in more than 40 percent of the cases reviewed, the complainants eventually admitted that no rape had occurred. Mr. Kanin also studied rape allegations in two large Midwestern universities and found that 50 percent of the allegations were recanted by the accuser.'

RADAR ALERT: Equal Protection?

Matt · 17 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Civil rights are those rights which we create through the application of the law. They are distinct from "human rights" which many assume to be common to all people, everywhere. In the United States, the constitution guarantees equal protection under the law (under the 14th amendment). This was necessary because prior to the 14th amendment, individual rights were only protected from violation by the federal government (but not state governments). The individual states had wide latitude in how draconian or arbitrary their laws were, and the application of state law could discriminate against citizens for the most capricious of reasons. The 14th amendment's "equal protection clause" was meant to correct that, and provide due process (and many other rights) to all citizens, regardless of the state they lived in.

Today, restraining orders against men are usually granted to women for the asking, with the only obstacle being a legal pleading. Approximately 15 percent of restraining orders are imposed upon women, while men are restrained 85 percent of the time. The due process provided by a trial is denied to the one subject of the restraining order, even though an alleged violation of the order carries with it a criminal penalty. Violating a restraining order is not always a willful or malicious act. A man subject to a woman's restraining order need only answer his telephone when she calls him, and that could be a violation (with jail time as a penalty – no jury trial involved).

When domestic violence has been alleged, restraining orders carry with them the financial obligation to continue making rent or mortgage payments on the house that one is now prohibited from approaching. Again, failure to meet this obligation can carry criminal penalties including jail time.

Restraining orders are a phenomenon of the states – a draconian measure that compromises civil liberties of the accused, denying him (or her) a jury trial. It is the various states that are, in this case, compromising civil liberties of any person unfortunate enough to be falsely accused on any level. Despite the protections of the 14th amendment's nearly 130-year-old "equal protection" clause, protection is anything BUT equal – especially protection of falsely accused men. This problem is only exacerbated under VAWA, which provides funds for programs, personnel, and promotion of policies that continue the unequal treatment of male defendants. It eeds to stop.

RADAR has issued a press release on this subject: http://www.mediaradar.org/press_release_20071016.php

We are asking you to print out and distribute the following flyer about such civil rights violations as described above: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/RADARflyer-VAWA-Promotes-Civil-Rights-Abuses.pdf.

A good place to distribute the flyer is at public events held in honor of Domestic Violence Awareness Month, which happens to be October! Attendees at such events will already be focused on domestic violence, and some just may have an open mind. Please pass out the above flyer at such events! To find the event closest to you, simply visit the following guide provided by the U.S. Department of Justice: http://www.usdoj.gov/ovw/statedomestic.htm

We have to stand up for civil rights for all Americans, regardless of gender, regardless of location. Our fundamental rights to a jury trial and due process are being subverted. Your help is appreciated!

++
Date of RADAR Release: October 17, 2007

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Harvard Medical School recognizing frequency of female domestic violence

Matt · 17 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From Marc A.:

The article below printed in the 9/07 issue of the Harvard Mental Health Letter (V. 24, N. 3) and is on the Harvard Medical School's website. It is by the researcher from the Centers for Disease Control, Dr. Whitaker, whose recent reseach found 24% of heterosexual relationships had violence, half of it reciprocal, and that women committed over 70% of the non-reciprocal violence and initited the reciprocal violence more than men, and women suffered more injury but men suffered significant injury as well. The abstract of the study is at http://www.ajph.org/cgi/content/abstract/97/5/941.

The Psychiatry Online article on the study is at http://pn.psychiatryonline.org/cgi/content/full/42/15/31-a.

Dr. Whitaker was "surprised" by this research, which means probably isn't aware that virtually ALL randomized sociological research shows the same thing, including the National Family Violence Survey going back to 1975, plus nearly 200 other studies summarized by Professor Fiebert at http://www.csulb.edu/~mfiebert/assault.htm.

Dr. Whitaker's presumed lack of awareness may explain why he still refers to the more severe battering forms of domestic violence (which he admits is the less common form) as "male battering." He evidently has not seen the research showing even severe battering can and is committed by women, in both gay and straight relationships. E.g., a recent study in the Journal of Family Violence found many male callers to a national hotline experienced high rates of severe forms of violence from very controlling female partners. See http://www.springerlink.com/content/a7q0032j88817218/fulltext.pdf.

And, of course, since children are damaged just by witnessing it, the severity rates cannot possibly justify the gendered approaches the predominate.

Still, the recognition in a journal like this is progress. As the saying goes, "It ain't where we want to be; it ain't where we will be; but it ain't where we WAS."

Marc

Steinem Interview Neglects Male DV Victims

Matt · 18 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Posted for Marc A.

The Capitol Times in Wisconsin just printed an interview with Gloria Steinem.

They asked about NCFM's claim that male victims were neglected in the domestic violence discussions. True to form, Steinem downplayed the seriousness of the problem and said male victims are mostly elder abuse. Amazing! Steinem knows that isn't true, of course. In addition to all the research we have sent her from the Centers for Disease Control, etc., Harvard Medical School just recognized that women initiate domestic violence at least as much as men among heterosexuals between ages 18-28 (hardly "elderly").
See Harvard article here.

Judith Davidoff, the interviewer, must have seen all the data and links we provided to the Centers for Disease Control data and major universities (and Steinem is certainly aware; I've sent them to her many times). Why didn't Judith mention the research? You can ask her yourself by emailing her at jdavidoff-at-madison.com.

And you can send a letter to the Capitol Times editor at dzweifel-at-madison.com.

Marc

Ohio Proposes Paternity Consent for Abortion Law

Roy · 18 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In a bill that feminists are calling unconstitutional, the Ohio state legislature has introduced H.B. 287 which would require that a woman seeking to terminate a pregnancy must obtain the written consent of the father. In cases where she does not know who the father is (due to having multiple sex partners), a paternity test would be mandatory. Obviously this poses an aggressive legal challenge to the feminist monopoly over birth control and “choice” in reproductive rights.

LiveScience: Competing over women for sex may cause men to die earlier

MrReality · 19 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This article says "In humans and many other animals, males age faster and die earlier than females. New research suggests this might happen because of intense competition over sex."

So competing over women for sex may cause you to die early? Even more of a reason NOT to do it. Chasing women is bad for your health. Thank you LiveScience!

"Feminists Have More Fun"

Anonymous · 19 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Latest news from feminist academia:

"Feminism boosts sexual satisfaction for both men and women, a new study suggests.

Busting stereotypes that peg feminists as men-haters, a new study shows that having a feminist partner is linked with healthier, more romantic heterosexual relationships.

The study, published online this week in the journal Sex Roles, relied on surveys of both college students and older adults, finding that women with egalitarian attitudes do find mates and men do find them attractive. In fact, results reveal they are having a good time, maybe a better time than the non-feminists."

Hillary's Shakedown of Chinese Immigrants

Anonymous · 19 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Wow, read this. So she got all that money from poor Chinese immigrants? Or were they just told to say they gave her that money, or was it given to them to give to her?

Egad. I haven't seen news like this since Chicago in the 20s (not that I was alive back then, but...). Excerpt:

'All three locations, along with scores of others scattered throughout some of the poorest Chinese neighborhoods in Queens, Brooklyn and the Bronx, have been swept by an extraordinary impulse to shower money on one particular presidential candidate -- Democratic front-runner Hillary Rodham Clinton.'

AP: Sexual misconduct plagues US schools

Matt · 20 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Almost no reference at all to female teachers molesting students. Only one mention in the entire article:

'• Rebecca A. Boicelli, a former teacher in Redwood City, Calif. She conceived a child with a 16-year-old former student then went on maternity leave in 2004 while police investigated. She was hired to teach in a nearby school district; board members said police hadn't told them about the investigation.'

Stephen Baskerville's "Taken Into Custody" interview on WJR-Michigan

Anonymous · 20 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This is a MUST listen interview of Dr. Stephen Baskerville and Mark Havas on WJR-Michigan.

Not only is Dr. Baskerville's new book shocking but so is the information provided in this interview.

Male-Friendly Domestic Abuse Helpline Seeks Support

Matt · 21 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Support the Domestic Abuse Helpline for Men and Women! On October 27, 2007 the Domestic Abuse Helpline for Men and Women (DAHMW) marks it's seventh year of offering supportive services to victims and survivors of domestic violence. We have emergency sheltered victims and their children, paid for transportation expenses so that victims could escape abusive situations, advocated in court on protection from abuse matters, bought food and clothing for those in need and given support, referrals and information through our toll free nationally available helpline. Through our all volunteer non profit organization we have been able to continue offering these invaluable, free and confidential services thanks to the generosity of our supporters. Please consider making a donation today so that we can continue to assist many more of these often turned away, ignored and "invisible" victims.

To donate please go to our website and click on the paypal link or mail your donation to:

Domestic Abuse Helpline for Men and Women
P.O. Box 252
Harmony, Maine 04942
If you have any questions please email us at:
dahmwagency-at-gmail.com

Thank You!

Study on Male Victims - Your Participation is Requested

Matt · 21 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

A study is being conducted on men who are in relationships with abusive women. If you are a man between the ages of 18 and 59 and have been physically assaulted at least one time in the last year by your current or former female intimate partner please call our helpline or email us about participation in this important study.

The number to call is 888-7HELPLINE (888-743-5754) or you can email us at: dahmwagency-at-gmail.com for more information. Your call or email will be kept strictly confidential, no personal identifying information will be required from you if you decide to participate in this study.

Feminist Farm CafePress Site is Officially Open for Business!

sgaver · 21 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Please visit (and feel free to buy something to show your support for men's rights!) at http://www.cafepress.com/feministfarm.

As some people pointed out in my earlier posting, I'll surely get a lot of crap from MSM, feminists and "idiot men". I can hardly wait. I'll share samples of my hate mail in future postings!

One thing I forgot to mention in prior post is that, as noted at the bottom of each Feminist Farm CafePress page, proceeds from the site will go to men's and women's organizations that work for fair treatment of women AND men.

CafePress has an affiliates program that pays 20% of each product's markup price (i.e. NOT 20% of the product price). Please contact me at feministfarm-at-cox.net if you or your group is interested in becoming an affiliate member.

Thanks!

Mother murders boy, stuffs him in suitcase

GaryB · 21 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This story has horrified us here in Australia.

A few days ago kids playing in a park found a suitcase floating in a pond. They landed it and opened it, to find the body of a young boy, naked, with a plastic bag over his head.

Police have now arrested the mother, who is on parole, and it turns out the boy was the subject of a custody battle.

Interestingly, not a single quote or comment relating to the father all the way through the article - I guess father's don't really count too much, when their children are murdered - we don't really have feelings, do we guys?

Shock: Women suffering a housing crisis

GaryB · 21 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I was horrified to read this article, from News.com.au (Australia).

Apparently, women have been marginalized and abandoned in the housing crisis, which is currently affecting Australia. Currently rental prices and new purchase prices are getting higher as a percentage of average income, making it hard for many people to get a place - but apparently this affects women more than us pampered, in-control men.

Excerpt:
'A report by Flinders University's Australian Housing and Urban Research Institute found that two-thirds of those who received government rent assistance were women. This was related to the fact that there were six times the number of female primary carers than male.

Researcher Selina Tually said that "joining the dots" between other statistics - including how women comprise more than 66 per cent of public housing tenants and generally have fewer assets, lower income and less superannuation than men - reinforced the vulnerability of women to housing stress, especially in cases of family breakdown.

"Women will need many more affordable purchase and rental housing options," according to the report, Too Big to Ignore.'

To me this says 'women choose to move out, take the kids and get the Government and their ex's to pay for it - but that isn't enough cash, so we need to give them more, so they can live in the style to which they have become accustomed' - but then again that could just be my own spoiled, well-off male opinion...

Father learns about son's death on the news, as ex-wife left no new address

ItsDan · 22 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'He said he was serving in the Army at the time, and had returned home on leave one weekend to find that his ex-wife and children had moved house, leaving no new address.

Mr Prestwich said he had tried to trace them through the Child Support Agency (CSA) but was told details could not be given out due to the Data Protection Act.'

RADAR ALERT: Agenda for VAWA Reform Defines Issues for 2008 Elections

Matt · 22 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Two weeks ago RADAR released an explosive new Special Report (.pdf file) that reveals domestic violence programs are usually ineffective, often unwanted, and sometimes harmful in reducing partner violence.

Today RADAR is releasing the Agenda for VAWA Reform, a blueprint for reforming the Violence Against Women Act. Although the focus of the Agenda is on VAWA, most of the problems also apply to state-level laws.

The Agenda for VAWA Reform is based on extensive research of the effects domestic violence laws, as well as recommendations from members of the VAWA Reform Coalition. The Agenda for VAWA Reform identifies 8 problem areas:

1. VAWA programs have been ineffective in reducing partner abuse, and in some ways have placed victims at greater risk of violence.
2. VAWA undermines basic notions of civil liberties and the presumption of innocence.
3. VAWA programs have had a disproportionate negative effect on minority and low-income populations.
4. VAWA undermines the family, escalates partner conflict, and discourages reconciliation.
5. VAWA fosters sex-based discrimination.
6. VAWA promotes half-truths, myths, and falsehoods about domestic violence.
7. VAWA encourages immigration fraud.
8. VAWA programs lack accountability and allow wasteful use of taxpayer dollars.

The complete Agenda can be seen here (.pdf file).

With the primary elections for the 2008 campaign starting in just two months, it is critical that the Agenda for VAWA Reform be shared with as many political candidates as possible.

We encourage persons to ask candidates their views on how they believe federal and state laws on domestic violence - which are now known to be ineffective and even harmful - can be improved so domestic violence can be curbed.

++
Date of RADAR Release: October 22, 2007

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Summations in Case of Baby Cut From Womb

Matt · 22 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. As usual, the excuses abound. Excerpt:

'KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Defense attorneys say Lisa Montgomery is a mentally ill woman who sincerely believed she was pregnant when she killed an expectant mother and cut the baby from her womb.

Prosecutors call her a liar who spent months researching Caesarean sections on the Internet before attacking Bobbie Jo Stinnett on Dec. 16, 2004, in the northwest Missouri town of Skidmore. They say Stinnett was conscious and trying to defend herself as Montgomery used a kitchen knife to crudely cut the baby from her womb.

Both sides will make their cases to jurors during closing arguments Monday.'

UNC Asheville Student Paper: Male domestic violence victims overlooked

Matt · 22 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'"Statistically, the only two major differences between men and women in domestic violence are that men are far less likely than women to report it, and men inflict more physical injury on average," said Marc Angelucci, president of the Los Angeles chapter of the National Coalition of Free Men. "In my non-profit work and as an attorney, I have worked with many male domestic violence victims, and I know for a fact that this is a major problem."'

Another falsely-accused man released after 22 years

Matt · 22 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Video here. Give it a little time to load.

"Willie 'Pete' Williams tells CNN.com's Thom Patterson about spending half his life in prison for a rape he didn't commit."

Woman kills husband, gets convicted, gets 35-50 years, then governor commutes sentence to 10 years

tac0965 · 22 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This Iowa woman kills her husband and leaves the body in the house for over a year. She gets convicted by a jury and gets 35 to 50 years in prison. She becomes a disciplinary problem in prison, but this doesn't stop the governor from doing the politically correct thing. He commutes her sentence to no more than 10 years. Give me one example, just one, where a man received the same deal for a similar crime against his wife. Of course, the article makes sure that all the wonderful things she is doing in prison are noted. Excerpt:

'A Shelby County jury found Duty guilty in 2004 of second-degree murder for shooting Shanahan to death. Iowa's mandatory sentencing guidelines meant Duty would spend at least 35 years of her 50-year sentence behind bars. Former Gov. Tom Vilsack reduced that to 10 years before leaving office. Duty will be eligible for parole in 2014 at age 47.
...

Today she spends her time tending the prison lawn and gardens. She's joined a women's quilting class and belongs to Women Helping Others, an in-prison organization that makes items for children in need. She has also started taking college correspondence courses and hopes to have a social work degree when she leaves prison. Duty said she wants to help other domestic violence victims.
...
According to Duty, on Aug. 30, 2002, he said he would kill her and the baby. Duty said Shanahan beat her with his fists.

"I tried to protect myself," she said.'

2008 Family Preservation Festival and Equal Parenting Bike Trek

Anonymous · 22 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The dates for the 2008 Family Preservation Festival and the 2008 Equal Parenting Bike Trek are set in stone! Make sure that you ask off for the dates now. 2008 promises to be bigger and better than 2007! More information can be found on DaddyBlogger.com.

New Book: "The Neglected Voter: White Men and the Democratic Dilemma"

Anonymous · 23 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

THE NEGLECTED VOTER: White Men and the Democratic Dilemma

From the book site review:

'The White Male Gap, as Kuhn terms it, comes to explain not only why these workingmen “left the party they had once built,” but why they came to believe Democrats stand for everyone but white men. He tells the story of the effect of terms like “angry white male,” explaining that these men did not want to be viewed as victims but “were no longer comfortable being portrayed as the reason everyone else was a victim.” Kuhn tells of the effect on men as factory jobs are lost, as pensions wither, as families’ breakdown, as popular culture mocks regular guys as “dumb down dads,” while the same men are told they should feel powerful due to “white male privilege.” In telling the story of how those deemed powerful came to feel powerless, he weaves the reader through the political battles of our time.'

NYTimes: 9/11 Is Seen as Leading to an Attack on Women

anthony · 23 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Review here. Excerpt:

"With “The Terror Dream,” Susan Faludi has taken the momentous subject of 9/11 and come to the conclusion that it led to ... an assault on the freedom and independence of American women. In the wake of 9/11, she argues, the great American cultural machine churned out a myth meant to “restore the image of an America invulnerable to attack” — “the illusion of a mythic America where women needed men’s protection and men succeeded in providing it.”

Behind on child support? Forget getting a hunting license in Kansas

anthony · 23 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'During the past week, the Kansas Department of Wildlife and Parks has mailed letters to individuals identified as owning significant (usually $5,000 or more, according to Ponce, although the amount is not set by law), and notifying them they will not be able to purchase recreational licenses. When they apply for a license through the state's electronic system, their name will come up with a "denied" message.'

Hidden Harm: The Granting of Domestic Violence Restraining Orders

anthony · 23 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Although it is not politically correct to say so, women can and do use false allegations of domestic violence to gain sole custody and to get their children to hate and fear their fathers. Even when a restraining order doesn't snowball into complete parental alienation, a judge's declaration that a father is an abuser can permanently tarnish his image in his child's eyes. The damage to father/child relationships and to children's mental health caused by the overzealous entering of restraining orders, however, is seldom if ever reported, while the harm caused by overtly violent acts following the failure to enter restraining orders most certainly is.'

Woman claims cheating husband 'walked into' knife

anthony · 23 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'After an argument with her cheating husband, an Iowa woman says she grabbed a knife to protect herself and he walked into it

...

Dr. Richard Nelson, a prominent Iowa pediatrician and a medical college dean, had died of a stab wound to the heart.

His wife of 33 years, Phyllis Nelson, was charged with his first-degree murder.

...

She'd pleaded not guilty, claiming it was an accident.

She said she'd held the blade straight in front of her in a posture of self-defense when she rounded a blind corner and her furious husband walked right into the blade.'

NOW Leader Slams Glenn Sacks over Column on False Rape Accusations

anthony · 23 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'However, some of her assertions lack validity. My assertion in the column that the Clothesline Project is a feminist event which encourages women to "rage at the patriarchy" is correct. More importantly, Boguski dredges up the old feminist myth that "false allegations of sexual assault occur at the same rate as false allegations of other violent crimes, at just 2 percent of charges.'

Encouraged by Women's Response, Clinton Stresses Female Side

anthony · 23 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'At the next Clinton stop, a town hall meeting in Derry, N.H., Leslie Harrison, 52, said the fact that Clinton is a woman is important as she considers how to vote in the New Hampshire primary. "Men have been making a mess of things for a long time," she said. "A woman would be more sensitive to sending our children off to war."
...
At the same time, in a theoretical general election test against Republican front-runner Rudolph W. Giuliani, Clinton has a lead that is almost entirely attributable to women. She also has a gaping lead among self-described feminists, according to the same poll. Men and women who call themselves feminists preferred Clinton 64 to 30 percent, while those who did not were evenly divided between Clinton and Giuliani, 48 to 46 percent.'

"Childlessness Bothers Men More Than Women"

anthony · 23 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'"That male attitude may come from their most primal being, explained Barry Ginsberg, a Pennsylvania psychologist specializing in relationships. "For a man, the loss of having a family and carrying on the gene pool makes men helpless, because they can't give birth," Ginsberg said.

From an "evolutionary standpoint, men would go around impregnating all the women they could find, so that at least one of those women would survive and produce a child," he explained.'

Male educators in elementary schools are rare, but embraced

anthony · 23 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'According to a recent article in Newsweek magazine, the number of male teachers has reached a 40-year low. In elementary school, only 9 percent of teachers are men, down from 18 percent in 1981.
...
"Like the other male teachers interviewed for this story, Rosa says he's careful to do "sideways" hugs with his students and to abide by other guidelines when it comes to touching them. (High fives are definitely OK.) The male teachers were all cognizant of the fears about pedophilia, a subject that's gotten high-profile media attention, but none so far has experienced a problem. Some male teachers are married; some aren't. Some have kids of their own, some don't. All speak about how deeply rewarding a teaching career is. Ghafoor says he plans to earn a master's and possibly become a principal, but the rest say their place is forever in the classroom.'

Woman convicted in killing akin to movie's plot

Matt · 23 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Update to this story is here. Excerpt:

'ANCHORAGE, Alaska - A stripper-turned-soccer-mom accused of borrowing from a movie plot to kill her fiancé for money was convicted Monday of first-degree murder.
...
"This person manipulated the circumstances with her guile and deception," prosecutor Pat Gullufsen had told the Superior Court jury. "All she needed was someone to kill him."'

We'll see in January what sort of time she gets.

Wrongly Convicted Man Sued for Child Support

ItsDan · 24 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Dwayne Allen Dail, 39, was cleared in August of the 1987 rape of a 12-year-old Goldsboro girl. The girl identified him as her attacker and hair found at the scene was similar to his. But DNA evidence found on a fragment of the girl's nightgown years after the trial proved Dail wasn't involved in the attack.
...
Dail, who now lives in Florida, was served Tuesday with a lawsuit by Lorraine Michaels, the mother of his son, who is seeking back child support. The suit does not specify how much money she wants, as is normal in North Carolina, but asks a "reasonable sum for the care and maintenance of the minor child." Dail did not provide while he was in prison.'

Gender Politics Key to Hillary's Political Calculation

anthony · 24 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'There, Clinton recounted her time working as a lawyer when she became pregnant with her daughter, Chelsea. "I kept getting more and more pregnant, and the lawyers just kept sort of walking down the hall looking away."

She also lamented women could be discriminated against today for getting pregnant. "Women can be fired just for being pregnant, if their employer has no leave policy," she said. "If that sounds horribly outdated that's because it is."

...

When pressed for details on how she managed Mr. Clinton's infidelity she said, "I never doubted that it was a marriage worth investing in even in the midst of those challenges, and I'm really happy that I made that decision."'

YouTube: Hillary How Do I Deal With Bad Men? (Redux)

anthony · 24 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

YouTube: Hillary How Do I Deal With Bad Men?

This comment by Hillary was reported to MANN several months ago. The article was great, but you really need to watch the video to see her true feminist ambition.

Ann Coulter's Take on Hillary & The Feminist Movement

I am not an Ann Coulter fan, but this is an interesting segment from HardBall with Chris Matthews.

YouTube: Kim Gandy on CNBC debates wage gap myth

anthony · 24 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This is must see TV! The premise of the debate is about congressional and senate hearings on the proposed "Paycheck Fairness Act" This is a bill heavily supported by Hillary Clinton. Another woman does an outstanding job schooling Gandy on the wage gap fallacy. Its good to see the MSM giving equal time to others who challenge feminist propaganda.

VAWA Budget Increased By $10 Million!

Roy · 24 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Press release here. Excerpt:

'Last week the US Senate passed a $10 million increase for VAWA programs. The amendment, sponsored by Senator Barbara Mikulski (D-MD), Richard Shelby (R-AL) and Patty Murray (D-WA) includes the following increases:
* $5 million to partially restore the cut the Senate CJS committee had previous proposed to Grants to Encourage Arrest and Enforcement of Protection Orders for a total of $60 million.
* $4 million for Engaging Men and Youth in Prevention Efforts.
* $1 million for a National Resource Center on Workplace Responses to Assist Victims of Domestic and Sexual Violence.'

(Note - The 'Engaging Men and Youth in Prevention Efforts' is of interest to those who follow how VAWA funding is used to indoctrinate boys into a kind of Duluth Model feminism-lite DV brainwashing effort through school and church workshops. "Youth" is fem-speak for "boys." You won't see any attention paid to partner and dating violence initiated by girls.)

North Dakota State University newspaper covers male victims of DV

Matt · 24 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'October is Domestic Violence Awareness Month, and some researchers are urging the public to take a closer look at both sides of an issue that's often presented from one viewpoint.

The media often frames domestic violence as a women's issue, with stereotypes of "abusive husbands" and "battered women" prevailing in many stories on the topic. However, abuse by the female half of the relationship is just as common, studies are reporting.

The National Coalition of Free Men, a nonprofit organization that examines the way sex discrimination affects men and boys, issued a press release citing recent research into domestic violence.'

Woman stabs ex-boyfriend 7 times, says prosecutor

Anonymous · 25 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'CAMBRIDGE - After Anna Tang and her boyfriend broke up three weeks ago, prosecutors say, the Wellesley College junior began sending him e-mails telling him she would kill him.

Yesterday, police said, she almost succeeded.

At about 6:30 a.m., Tang sneaked into his dorm room at MIT, climbed on top of him as he slept, and plunged a knife into his back, Assistant District Attorney Suzanne Kontz said in Cambridge District Court yesterday, where Tang was arraigned.'

Update: "Woman stabs tied-up lover to drink blood"

Anonymous · 25 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"A woman who stabbed her tied-up lover so she could drink his blood has been sentenced to 10 years in prison. Tiffany Sutton told Maricopa County Superior Court Judge David Udall that she was sorry for the incident and said she never meant to hurt anyone, but received the stiff sentence anyway after he called the crime especially heinous."

"Robert McDaniel, agreed to be tied up during sex but became alarmed and asked to be untied when Sutton pulled out a knife and said she liked to drink blood."

--

MANN's most previous entry on this story is here.

Special ed teacher "has sex with" one of her ninth graders

Anonymous · 25 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Police say a special education teacher at a Tampa high school has been arrested and charged with having sex with a ninth grade student.

According to investigators, 33-year-old Christina Butler, who teaches at Middleton High School, faces charges of lewd and lascivious battery after detectives say she had sex with a 15-year-old boy who is reportedly one of her students.

Detectives say they discovered the relationship after they caught the boy driving Butler's car on Tuesday night.'

Texas Prop-13 to jail innocent men without bail

Kargan303 · 25 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Texas voters will decide on November 6 whether to approve Proposition 13, a dangerous measure which will harm innocent men by greatly eroding the rights of those accused of domestic violence. The measure grants judges the ability to hold without bail those accused of nonviolent, trivial, or accidental violations of temporary restraining orders.'

"The Big O's" All-Girls' School Makes Headlines for Child Abuse

Matt · 25 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Watch it here. Sounds more like a girls' reformatory to me. Note how openly she advocates only for black children, girls in particular? There is nothing to be proud of with this racist, sexist "institution". She is happy to provide for children provided they are the "right" ethnicity and gender, but it looks like those kids are paying a price they didn't count on. "The Big O" can add this to her list of accomplishments, right after the one that describes her profit-making venture in Africa that relies on the "culling" of the foreskins of African men and boys for her very expensive skin cream.

God, she makes me sick.

Genarlow Wilson ordered released by Georgia Supreme Court

Matt · 26 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Story here. This is great news, "some justice" as they say. Excerpt:

'ATLANTA -- Georgia's Supreme Court on Friday ordered the release of a young man who has been imprisoned for more than two years for having consensual oral sex with another teenager.

The court ruled 4-3 that Genarlow Wilson's 10-year sentence was cruel and unusual punishment.

Wilson, 21, was convicted of aggravated child molestation following a 2003 New Year's Eve party at a Douglas County hotel room where he was videotaped having oral sex with a 15-year-old girl. He was 17 at the time.'

YouTube: Stephen Colbert on Feminism

anthony · 28 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

If anyone needs a laugh, check out this video! I'll say it again, this is a classic for the archives. (I'll be shocked if Matt actually posts this).

Ed. note: Well I am not completely without a sense of humor! :)

It's time to tell the truth about Domestic Violence

MrReality · 28 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This article states: 'October is Domestic Violence Awareness Month. The month is designed to increase awareness of how to make our homes safe from partner violence. So what is the truth about intimate partner aggression? Nearly 200 scientific studies point to one simple conclusion: Women are at least as likely as men to engage in partner aggression.

Irene Hanson Frieze, in Psychology of Women's Quarterly, says "Research indicates that women can be just as violent as their partners." Don Dutton from the University of British Columbia notes that "Recent evidence from the best designed studies indicates that intimate partner violence is committed by both genders with often equal consequences." And the Journal of Family Psychology in 2006 tells us that "Differences were observed in the rates of male and female partner violence, with female violence occurring more frequently."'

Baskerville, Sanjari and Rhodes Interviewed on Ronald Smith's RadioShow

Anonymous · 29 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Shocking and true! Dr. Baskerville, Dr. Sanjari and Carol Rhodes interviewed on Ronald Smith's Radio Show. Carol Rhodes is author of "Friend of the Court Enemy of the Family" and was part of the 2007 Equal Parenting Bike Trek Crew. Listen to this interview with zero download time on DaddyBlogger.com.

RADAR ALERT: Tell the Associated Press (AP) to Publish Facts -- Not Disinformation

Matt · 29 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Virtually every week you read, hear, or see stories about female teachers having sex with their pupils. Yet, contrary to the experience of everyone reading this alert, the Associated Press just published a multi-part series on sexual predators claiming that 9 out of 10 were male. The false 9 out of ten claim was in the lead and longest story.

The empirical research reality is found in a report by the U.S. Department of Education (.pdf file) which notes on page 24 that 2 large survey studies found that about 43% of students reported that their abusers were female sexual predators.

Additional information can be found on Google under "Female Sexual Predators."

Finally, sexual abuse by adult females is not a victimless crime. The best evidence can be found in the transcript of a BBC Documentary titled "The Ultimate Taboo: Child Sexual Abuse by Women" described by the Canadian Children's Rights Council as "a vivid and horrific programme in which the victims of sexual abuse by women told disturbing stories of emotional and physical damage:".

So, what to do?

We urge you to send emails or letters to the Director of Media Relations for the Associated Press. Tell him they've already caused great harm by printing a multi-part series that misleadingly promotes the myth that only 10% of sexual predators are female. Tell him that the only way they can undo that harm is for them to follow up with a multi-part series on female sexual predators and the harms they cause to their victims. As always, be polite in your calls and emails.

Go to http://www.mediaradar.org/press_release_20071023.php to read RADAR's press release on the AP's claims.

Then write, email, or call. Do it today!

Paul Colford, Director of Media Relations
Associated Press
450 W. 33rd St.
New York, NY 10001
pcolford-at-ap.org
1-212-621-1500

++
Date of RADAR Release: October 29, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Amazon.com stops selling "Taken Into Custody"

Chuck7 · 30 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Nov. 1, 2007 Update:

PLEASE NOTE: It seems Amazon.com had simply run out of the book due to its high sales volume (a good thing), so while this original post is being kept, note that the substance of story was basically an incorrect assessment of the situation. -- Matt

---

It appears Amazon.com is no longer offering "Taken Into Custody" by Stephen Baskerville. I cannot think of a good reason for this. The book was selling well.

This is a huge obstacle to this important book getting the exposure it needs.

Taken Into Custody listing at Amazon.com

UC Irvine prints: "Women More Abusive Than Men, Study Shows"

Matt · 31 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'According to recent study by Professor Murray A. Straus of the University of New Hampshire, men are less physically abusive than previously thought. In fact, the examination showed that women were found to be more abusive in mutually abusive relationships.

The study, which observed 13,601 university students over a 12-month period, showed that nearly a third of both male and female students physically assaulted their partners over time. The study also shows that young men and women are particularly prone to aggression.

According to Marc E. Angelucci, Esq., president of the Los Angeles chapter of the National Coalition of Free Men, a non-profit group that examines sex discrimination affecting men and boys, the reason that these findings did not surface previously is that men often fail to report domestic abuse, making crime statistics unreliable.'

U Conn Student Paper Covers DV to Include Men

Matt · 31 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A.: "Some of the blunders in this article are humorous. They actually take a quote from me and say Dr. Witaker of the Centers for Disease Control is the speaker. They also quote me as saying the "the National Family of Violence industry," of which there is no such thing and it is a mixup of my comment about the "domestic violence industry" with my comment about the "National Family Violence Survey." But I'm still very thankful to this reporter for doing a fine job and having more guts than most journalists. Marc"

Article here. Excerpt:

'The term "domestic violence" is generally linked with violence against women in today's society. But what isn't usually thought of is the fact that men are victims of violence in relationships as well.

A recent study by Daniel J. Whitaker, Ph.D., Tadesse Haileyesus, M.S., Monica Swahn, Ph.D. and Linda S. Saltzman, Ph.D. of the National Center for Injury Prevention and Control, showed that men and women can be violent in a relationship and that injury occurred more often than not when the violence was reciprocal.'

Burmese Boys Impressed into Military Service

Matt · 31 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Will we see this in the MSM in America or Britain, I wonder? Excerpt:

'Add to the many hardships in Myanmar today one more danger: being a boy. According to a report that was to be released Wednesday, the military, struggling to meet recruiting quotas, is buying, kidnapping and terrorizing boys as young as 10 to join its ranks.

The report by Human Rights Watch, the New York-based rights group, says military recruiters and civilian brokers scour train stations, bus stations, markets and other public places for boys and coerce them to volunteer. Some may simply disappear without their families' knowledge and spend years on the front lines of a brutal war against ethnic insurgencies.'

'Breaking the Silence': An Assault on Fatherhood

MrReality · 31 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The article states:

'Breaking the Silence: Children's Stories, which aired on many PBS affiliates on October 20 and subsequent weeks, is a direct assault on fatherhood. The film portrays fathers as batterers and child molesters who steal children from their mothers.

Breaking the Silence aims to reverse the minimal, hard-won gains shared parenting advocates have made in protecting children’s right to have both parents in their lives after divorce or separation. The film is extremely one-sided, and presents a harmful and inaccurate view of divorce and child custody cases.'

--

Ed. note: This is not old news. PBS is at it again, re-airing the same "documentary" it did in 2005, which drew widespread criticism, even from within PBS.

"Multicultural" event excludes dads

Matt · 31 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A SCHOOL was yesterday accused of MAKING teachers dress up as Asians for a day – to celebrate a Muslim festival.

Kids at the 257-pupil primary have also been told to don ethnic garb even though most are Christians.

The morning assembly will be open to all parents – but dads are BARRED from a women-only party in the afternoon because Muslim husbands object to wives mixing with other men.

Just two members of staff – a part-time teacher and a teaching assistant – are Muslim.'

Feminist Art = Pickled Penises In a Jar?

Roy · 31 October 2007 · Archived copy · Original

For anyone interested in the cutting edge of misandry in feminist art, a quick glance at Chicago artist Mary Ellen Croteau's piece titled "Men I Have Known" is instructive. The link includes a photo of her "art" -- basically a mason jar stuffed with (simulated) pickled penises.

Here's the feminist interpretation of this inspired bit of hateful sexism:

"Croteau often uses laughter as a subversive force in her determination to destabilize patriarchal institutions and the systematic oppression of women. In Men I Have Known, a mason jar stuffed with what appears to be pickled penises, Croteau foreshadows the themes of Saint Lorena. Offering to the viewer an unsettling mixture of humor and rage, Croteau renders the homely Ball jar suddenly uncanny, a site/sight of ravenous hungers and strange trophies. In this way, she undermines the kitchen's -and femininity's-- association with passiveness, safety, hearth, and haven."

Who says there are no women artists capable of true genius?

Huffington Post: "Russert Leads Boys in Hillary Hit Job"

anthony · 1 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

After Hillary's disastrous performance at the most recent democratic debate, supporters are crying victim! Apparently the "boys" [including moderator Russert] were being unfair with political attacks on the front runner. Its about time Obama and Edwards chivalrous fear of Hillary has eroded. I suspect when things get more difficult for Hillary, the victim card will be a constant theme. Excerpt:

"When you throw in the continual hammering by Edwards, who had his best night, not on issues, but because he played attack dog towards Clinton, not to mention Obama jumping in when he could get up the courage, last night's boy brawl showed more about Clinton than anyone is willing to say. She can take anything dished out at her. The innuendos didn't stop her. The attacks didn't phase her publicly, though at one point I thought she was going to really come out and call it what it was, nothing short of a two-sided attack, with Clinton the target, including from "moderator" Tim Russert who had no business taking sides. But he did anyway."

Politico: Voters' choice in 2008: Mom versus Dad

anthony · 1 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'In 1986, a Gallup poll found that 56 percent of women called themselves a “feminist.” By 2001, that number had fallen roughly 30 points, to a quarter of American women.

“My sense of [Clinton] is that she is, before everything else, a supreme pragmatist,” Faludi said. “She is certainly careful to avoid spouting women’s lib rhetoric, and that goes back to her being a realist, and that goes back to where the culture is.”

Republican pollster Kellyanne Conway said Clinton is “an icon of the feminist movement who must run a campaign to appeal to women living in a post-feminist era.”'

Business as usual for female teacher who takes 13 year old male student out of town tac0965 · 1 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

A Nebraska teacher takes student out of town (or state), no amber alert is issued, rape is not mentioned in the article, and the last three sentences of the article seem to try to minimize this problem. In other words, everything is pretty much business as usual when it comes to the bias between male and female sex crimes. Oh, and rape isn't mentioned once in the article. And, remember, she only POSSIBLY faces child abuse, kidnapping, and contributing to the delinquency of a minor. I'm sure the whole thing will disappear from the media after they are found. Excerpt:

'The search is on for a Lexington, Nebraska middle school teacher and the 13-year-old student believed to have gone away with her.

An arrest warrant has been issued for 25-year-old Kelsey Peterson, who faces possible charges of kidnapping, child abuse and contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Peterson taught sixth-grade and coached basketball in the Lexington schools. She has now been suspended by the district.
...
Fennel says all teachers need to have a balance between their public and private relationships with students.'

Kim Gandy & N.O.W. Want More Women-owned Mass Media

Roy · 1 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Kim Gandy, President of N.O.W., testified before the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) yesterday on Halloween to petition for more female-owned mass media.

She stated in her testimony:

“I believe that the paltry level of female ownership affects the coverage of women's issues and how women are portrayed in the media.”

Yes, like all of mensactivism's readers, I’ve noticed that women’s issues are pretty nearly invisible and ignored in the MSM.

I’ve also heard that the poor dears can hardly find a retail store that caters to their needs!'

Baskerville's "Taken into Custody" Available Again on Amazon.com

Matt · 1 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Thanks to Angela P. for the word. Book link here.

As a consequence, a previous story saying that the book had stopped being sold seems to have been false, so it will be updated to show this. A good reminder I guess about jumping to conclusions!

NCFM-LA List of Media Mentions for DV Awareness Month

Matt · 1 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

We turned up the heat for DV Awareness Month by sending an NCFM news release and writing letters to editors every day re biased DV articles.

As a result we generated 6 university newspaper stories on DV, had a spat with Gloria Steinem in the Capital Times, were on Dr. Phil, and printed at least 17 letters to editors (LTEs). The LTEs listed are the ones we know printed; there are more we don't know of. For each LTE that printed there were about 5 that didn't. Many LTEs were sent in the past few days so there will be more printing soon, but this list is limited to October. Thank you everyone who participated or who had their own projects (RADAR, etc.). For a more complete list and links see our media page. -- Marc A.

"Democratic Debate Proves You Can Hit a Girl"

anthony · 1 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Thanks primarily to former Senator John Edwards, Tuesday night's Democratic debate was different. He was out to prove it's OK to hit a girl. He hit Clinton so many times that as the night wore on, she began to seem punch drunk, unsure of what was on or off the table and which tough issues needed yet another study by a fuzzy bipartisan commission tied up with a blue ribbon.

...

Rick Lazio of New York, who entered the 2000 Senate race after Rudy Giuliani got out after announcing he had prostate cancer and that he was separating from his second wife.

When Lazio decided to get aggressive by walking across the stage at a debate to wave a piece of paper practically under Clinton's nose, it backfired. The only thing worse than being too soft is being too hard if your opponent is a woman.'

Relatedly, Obama chides Clinton for playing gender card and The pants vs. the pantsuit.

NCFM-LA Truck Advises: "Report Your Abusive Wife Or Girlfriend"

MR · 2 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Report Your Abusive Wife Or Girlfriend

"Domestic violence awareness month, according to the gender feminist calendar, was officially over today. Yet the beginning of bringing awareness to the obfuscation caused by all the gender, feminist domestic violence propaganda continued today in earnest.

A popular truck sign that has never been parked in official protest in Los Angeles County, took to the streets today to continue bringing refutation to the biased gender feminist perspective that has destroyed so many innocent men's lives."

Undistributed Collected Child Support - Listen to the shocking and informative interview of Richar Farr

Anonymous · 2 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Zero download time - Listen to the interview of Richar Farr on Ronald Smith's talk show with co-host Robin Denison. The topic of discussion is undistributed collected child support - the corruption is exposed!

Full Interview is here on DaddyBlogger.com.

'Advice Goddess' Reports Backlash to Defending Fairness for Male DV Victims

anthony · 2 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"There's no excuse for domestic abuse"...right? Well, not unless the abuser has a vagina. I wrote an Advice Goddess column, Marrying The Hatchet, condemning a woman for throwing an ashtray at her husband, and condemning the double standard that has people shrugging off domestic violence against men.'

Ed. note: Amy Alkon writes a syndicated column entitled "The Advice Goddess" that is found in over 100 papers across the country.

Hillary Condemns Discrimination in Speech... at Women-only College

Roy · 2 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In remarks at her alma mater Wellesley College, Hillary said that women have always had to fight discrimination in career advancement, and still do. Excerpt:

'"So let's roll up our sleeves and get to work together," she told the cheering, standing-room-only crowd of more than 1,000 women and a smattering of men in Alumnae Hall at Wellesley, which is one of the historically all-women colleges known as the Seven Sisters and is still limited to female students. "We're ready to shatter that highest glass ceiling."'

It's funny that when men are excluded from an institution it's called "limiting," but when women are excluded it's called "discrimination."

Currently Mrs. Clinton polls a less than 50% favorable rating among women voters.

North American circumcision rate down to 41%

Anonymous · 3 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'For the first time in seventy years, the circumcision rate in North America has fallen to 41% based on medical reports in the United States, Mexico, and Canada. Three out of five parents are choosing to leave their son intact, something the boy would presumably want for himself, as they learn more about circumcision's complications and long-term harm.'

Two-mother family is to be enshrined in UK law

Anonymous · 3 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here . Excerpt:

'The Human Tissues and Embryos Bill, to be announced in the Queen's Speech next week, will give both women in a lesbian relationship the legal status of parents when one of them gives birth following fertility treatment.
...
The Bill lays down that where two women are in a relationship and one has fertility treatment in order to conceive then the partner should be treated as the other "parent" even if they are not in a civil partnership. In those circumstances no man — such as the sperm donor — can be treated as a father, the Bill says, to avoid a child having three legal parents.
...
The Bill says that where there is reference to the father of a child such as on birth certificates this is to be read as reference to the female parent who did not give birth.'

Update: Nebraska teacher, student arrested in Mexico

anthony · 3 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Was the boy actually arrested as the title suggests? My prediction: She'll receive 6 months in prison and 3 years probation. Excerpt:

'Dawson County Attorney Elizabeth Waterman said Kelsey Peterson, a 25-year-old sixth-grade math teacher and basketball coach at Lexington Middle School, was arrested in Mexicali. The boy was turned over to family members who had traveled to Mexico, Waterman said.

Peterson and the boy fled after police began investigating whether the pair had an intimate relationship, authorities said. Court documents said the boy was last seen Oct. 26.

A judge issued an arrest warrant Monday charging Peterson with kidnapping, child abuse and contributing to the delinquency of a minor.'

WVFC Q&A with Presidential Candidate Hillary Clinton

anthony · 3 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Transcript here.

Notice during this Q&A session the interviewer mentioned the longevity gap. Hillary ignored the fact and kept rambling about the health care needs specifically for women. Another interesting quote was Hillary's claim that women suffer from severe depression twice as often as men. [Does anyone have info. to refute her claim?] We all know men are much likely to commit suicide. I'm not a psychiatrist, but I would think severe depression causes suicide and suicidal ideations. Whats Hillary's plan? The US already spends a disproportionate amount of health care dollars on women. Will this increase during her administration?

Quote Hillary: "Insurance companies will no longer be permitted to charge large premium differences based on age, gender or occupation"

When Hillary mentions gender, she is referring to women. Wait a second, men already pay higher premium rates for health insurance. This is because we have a shorter life span. Maybe the reason is because men's health means very little when compared to a womans.

Oprah School Update: Arrest made

anthony · 3 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

So much for Oprah's utopian school for girls. I suspect this woman will eventually be on Oprah's show while both women share tears. It should be a touching moment. Excerpt:

'A police spokesman, Supt. Lungelo Dlamini, said the 27-year-old woman, a former dormitory matron at the Oprah Winfrey Leadership Academy for Girls, was arrested on Thursday by the Family Violence, Child Protection and Sexual Offenses Unit.

"Several charges including alleged assault, indecent assault, criminal injury and soliciting underage girls to perform indecent acts are being investigated against her," Dlamini said.

At least seven victims have submitted statements, he said.

The woman was being held by police and was expected to appear Monday in Sebokeng magistrate's court, south of Johannesburg, he said.'

Another Man Sued for C/S after Release from Prison due to DNA Exoneration

anthony · 3 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Dwayne Dail was sent to prison 18 years ago, convicted of raping a 12-year-old girl he had never met. At the time he was in a relationship with Lori Michaels, who would give birth to his son, Chris, shortly after he was sent to prison.

Recently DNA evidence exonerated Dail. He was innocent after all. Having been cheated out of his son's childhood I suspect Mr. Dail was quite happy when Chris, now 18, moved to Florida to be with his father. Under state law he can receive compensation of $20,000 for each year he spent in prison while innocent or around $360,000 in total.

Now Lori Michaels reenters the picture filing a law suit against Dail for back child support. And her attorney is the law partner of the man who prosecuted, and convicted, Dail for the crime he did not commit. Dail said: "To use our son as a pawn in this painful way is an attempt to blame the failures of her life on me. It is beyond my understanding and belief that someone could stoop so low."'

Australia: Sperm donor reform would create donor registry

ItsDan · 4 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here:

The ART bill required sperm donors to add their names to a register enabling their children to make contact once they turn 18.

The bill isn't all bad. The bill doesn't require donors to have actual contact with the kids. It gives donors say in how their donation is used, who can receive it, etc. Still, their expectation that donations won't drop is unlikely to be true. They don't seem to be talking about revealing existing donors, just future ones when they donate, so let them reap what they sow.

Judge Removed by High Court After Denying Restraining Order Based on False DV Charges

Matt · 5 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Covered in Sacks' most recent newsletter. Excerpt:

'The Shull case and the recent Virginia Supreme Court decision are an infuriating example of how lightly our legal system takes false accusations against men. In this case, everyone agrees that Judge Shull was placed in a very difficult situation, and that he had to make a tough call where children could have been in imminent danger. Nobody even disputes that he got it right--and yet it doesn't even matter.'

L.A. Times: Feminist says Hillary Clinton plays the 'victim'

Matt · 5 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'WASHINGTON -- A prominent feminist, allied with the presidential campaign of former Sen. John Edwards, accused Democratic front-runner Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton on Saturday of "disingenuously playing the victim card" by infusing her campaign with messages about gender.

"When unchallenged, in a comfortable, controlled situation, Sen. Clinton embraces her political elevation into the 'boys club,' " Michelman, the former president of NARAL Pro-Choice America, wrote in a posting on a blog of the liberal group Open Left.

"But when she's challenged, when legitimate questions are asked, questions she should be prepared to answer and discuss, she is just as quick to raise the white flag and look for a change in the rules," Michelman said. "It's trying to have it both ways."'

[Michelman's bio/fem-creds can be found here. Google her name to get more info.]

Well finally, someone from "the other side" calling the Hildebeast on her game. Dare I ponder that this woman will one day announce support for C4M? I can dream, can't I?

Protecting children by portraying Men as Monsters

Matt · 5 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'A columnist for that newspaper asserted that grown-ups were teaching children to fear men in an effort to keep kids safe from abusers and would-be abductors.

That paper noted that children who get lost in public places are encouraged to look for a "low-risk adult" — such as a pregnant woman, or a mom pushing a stroller — to help them. It pointed out that airlines place unaccompanied minors with female passengers, not male ones.'

US House of Reps Bill Supporting Joint Custody

Matt · 5 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This bill was recently introduced. This is a good opportunity for activism indeed-- write your rep! Excerpt:

'Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That Congress expresses support of the States passing joint custody laws for fit parents, so that more children are raised with the benefit of having a father and a mother in their lives, careful to protect victims of domestic violence, abuse, neglect, children from potential kidnapping by a parent.'

Female absenteeism is apparently not just due to child care

Chuck7 · 5 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

It has been found that women are twice as likely to be absent from work as men. This is mostly due to child care, however studies show that doesn't account for all of it. The real answer is still unknown. However that doesn't stop the author from chalking it up to something else.

You guessed it. Sexism.

Don't hesitate to sound off the message boards. A few women are waving their feminist flags high along with a good dose of man bashing.

Politico: Feminists split on Hillary sexism defense

anthony · 5 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'But the debate is still churning in feminist circles, where some women's activists said she had every right to invoke sexism and gender stereotypes as a defense on the campaign trail — and predicted that this tactic will prove effective against fellow Democrats and against a Republican, if she is the general election nominee.

“It goes beyond logic — it’s a gut response,” Eleanor Smeal, president of the Feminist Majority Foundation, said of the spectacle of Clinton onstage confronting seven male rivals and two male moderators at a debate in Philadelphia on Wednesday night."'

RADAR ALERT: DVAM: An Amazing Blow-Out Month!

Matt · 6 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

October was Domestic Violence Awareness Month, and the theme was "It's Time to Tell the Truth about Domestic Violence." And this year 10 organizations came together to assure the truth would ring loud and clear throughout the land.

During October these groups arranged for 1 gigantic billboard, did 2 days of lobbying, released 3 reports, participated in 4 rallies, issued 6 press releases, fostered the publication of 9 editorials, distributed information via flyers and displays 9 times, published 18 letters to the editor, and stimulated 22 articles and interviews.

WOW!!

During the course of the campaign Fox News 2 in Detroit aired a segment on October 22 titled, "Men Also Suffer from Domestic Violence."

The Christian Science Monitor (and many other newspapers) published letters to the editor on male victims.

The blogosphere was buzzing, as well:

- Carol Lloyd - What's so Funny about Abusive Girlfriends? (click "Next" to get to an ad, then "Enter Salon" in upper right corner when it appears, and then the article will load)
- Chris Norris - Women Who Hit Men
- Buzzfeed - Abusive Girlfriends

Read a complete list (.pdf file) of the activities of all the participating groups and activities.

Thanks to all who participated in Domestic Violence Awareness Month, and who made sure the truth got out.

++
Date of RADAR Release: November 6, 2007

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Biden introduces I-VAWA

Kargan303 · 6 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Folks, we need to fight this. Release here. Excerpt:

'BIDEN/LUGAR Introduce the International Violence Against Women Act Groundbreaking Legislation Integrates U.S. Efforts to End Gender-Based Violence on a Global Scale

Washington, DC –Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Joseph R. Biden, Jr. (D-DE) and Ranking Member Richard Lugar (R-IN) introduced the International Violence Against Women Act, groundbreaking legislation which will, for the first time, integrate the United States' efforts to end gender-based violence into U.S. foreign assistance programs.
...
One in three women worldwide will experience gender-based violence in her lifetime, and in some countries, that's true for 70 percent of women. Every day around the globe, women and girls face domestic violence, rape, forced or child marriage, so-called "honor" killings, dowry-related murder, human trafficking, and female genital mutilation. The United Nations estimates that at least 5,000 "honor" killings take place each year around the world and more than 130,000,000 girls and young women worldwide have been subjected to genital mutilation. A 2006 United Nations Report found that at least 102 member states had no specific laws on domestic violence.'

Also submitted by MANN user MrReality:

'The article states: "Feminists have cooked up a new plan to raid the U.S. Treasury for more feminist pork. They want Congress to pass the International Violence Against Women Act.

They are using a report issued in October by former U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan called "In-Depth Study on All Forms of Violence Against Women." The report is said to be based on interviews with 24,000 women conducted by the World Health Organization.

Who better to introduce the act than Sen. Joe Biden, D-Del., the leading advocate of ratification of the United Nations Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women? Biden never saw a U.N. treaty or a radical feminist spending bill that he didn't like.

The WHO report asserts that one in three of the world's women, in some countries as many as 70 percent, experience violence in their lifetime, usually from their own partner, which is the rationale for calling it domestic violence. I'm surprised feminists don't claim 100 percent, because "violence" is broadly defined to include nonphysical "psychological and economic" actions."'

Mother Who Claimed Carjacker Killed Her Son Charged With His Murder

anthony · 6 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'COLUMBIA, S.C. — The mother of a 7-year-old boy who claimed a carjacker killed her son was arrested Monday and charged with murder in her son's death, Greenville County Sheriff Steve Loftis said.

Amanda Reagan Smith was arrested nearly three months after she told authorities that a knife-wielding carjacker forced her to drive to a secluded, wooded area in Greenville on Aug. 12. Once there, she said the carjacker locked the car doors and pressed a pillow to the face of her 7-year-old son.

"Investigators have concluded that Amanda Smith is responsible for the death of her son," Loftis said during a news conference in Greenville. "We are confident that we have the suspect in jail now."'

Great Article on Circumscision

blaze4metal · 7 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I stumbled upon this article that discusses circumscision in a (gasp) negative light.

Example:

Circumcised men are said to suffer from, wait for it, "significant penile sensory deficit", although – get this – a Men's Health magazine survey in 2000 suggested that uncircumcised men lasted an average of four minutes longer during sex than their circumcised peers.

I Don't Agree... But I like It!

Dittohd · 7 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Of course it's rare, but I love to see women receiving the stupid, paranoid treatment we men are subjected to on a consistent basis.

Some may say that two wrongs don't make a right (spare me!), but in the stupid atmosphere we are in in the U.S. these days, nothing will get corrected until women have to put up with the same treatment we men are so often subjected to. Excerpt:

'MASCOUTAH — A 13-year-old junior high school student was given two days of detention after school officials spotted her hugging friends after school last Friday.

Megan Coulter, an eighth-grade student at Mascoutah Middle School, was hugging her friends goodbye after school Friday when vice principal, Randy Blakely, saw her and told her she would receive two after-school detentions.'

National Post: An Embattled Champion Of Male Values

Anonymous · 7 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Go National Post! You're two for two in one day!

"As Remembrance Day approaches, the media's wartime love affair with our troops serves as an ironic reminder of how rarely in the fourth estate one sees sympathetic editorial treatment of manhood.

Most of the year, men -- not as individuals but as representative of their sex --are far more likely to be portrayed negatively: as control freaks, perverts and in general people to fear. Only for a brief annual pre-Nov. 11 interlude do we ever see glowing tributes to the traditional male virtues of honour, gallantry, steadfastness, stoicism, brotherhood and chivalry."

Thanks to Barbara Kay for this article.

Makes you wonder, though... Why is it that only female journalists can write about men's issues, but male journalists are silenced?

Former Teacher Charged with Sexual Assault of Daughter's ex-bf

anthony · 7 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

"Mom allegedly slept with daughter's pal, 13": Video here.

Video only, no text.

"Breaking the Silence": Call for References

Anonymous · 7 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Does anyone have any information as to which PBS channels recently rebroadcast the unfair and biased 'documentary' "Breaking the silence'?

A spokeswoman for PBS and their ombudsman are both interested in knowing this information so that they can investigate the matter. Our pressure is beginning to make an impact. I hope someone will post the stations that did the dastardly deed on the website so that I can inform the spokeswoman and ombudsman of PBS of this information. We should keep up the pressure to make sure this does not happen again.

Court rejects 'Roe v. Wade for Men'

anthony · 7 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'LANSING, Michigan (AP) -- A federal appeals court has upheld the dismissal of a lawsuit nicknamed "Roe v. Wade for Men" filed by a men's rights group on behalf of a man who said he shouldn't have to pay child support for his ex-girlfriend's daughter.

A three-judge panel of the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, in a decision released Tuesday, agreed with a lower court judge that Matthew Dubay's suit was frivolous.

Dubay, 25, had said ex-girlfriend Lauren Wells knew he didn't want to have a child and assured him repeatedly she couldn't get pregnant because of a medical condition.

He argued that if a pregnant woman can choose among abortion, adoption or raising a child, a man involved in an unintended pregnancy should have the choice of declining the financial responsibilities of fatherhood.

U.S. District Judge David Lawson in Bay City disagreed, rejecting Dubay's argument that Michigan's paternity law violates the U.S. Constitution's equal protection clause because it didn't extend reproductive rights to men.'

Circumcision: Time story omits recent research

Matt · 8 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A.

The Time story omits recent research showing circumcision removes the most sensitive part of the penis. See:

http://www.nocirc.org/touch-test/bju_6685.pdf
http://www.livescience.com/health/070615_penis_sensitivity.html

Letters can be sent to Time at letters@time.com.

Female U.S. corporate directors out-earn men: study

Matt · 8 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Also via Marc A.

Story here. Excerpt:

'NEW YORK (Reuters) - They may be a small minority in corporate boardrooms, but women directors typically earn more than men, a new U.S. study has found.

Female directors in corporate America earned median compensation of $120,000, based on the most recently available pay data, compared with $104,375 for male board members, research group The Corporate Library said in its annual director pay report on Wednesday.

At the same time, the study said, women in corporate boardrooms are outnumbered eight to one.'

20-YO woman gets 4 years for raping 12-YO boy

Marc A. · 8 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A 20-year-old West Chester Township woman not only stole a 12-year-old boy's innocence, she also robbed him of dignity when she had sexual contact with him, his mother told a judge this week.

"He was very disturbed, embarrassed and ashamed," an assistant prosecutor said, summarizing a statement the boy's mother read during Jennifer L. Whitson's sentencing in Butler County Common Pleas Court on Tuesday.

Whitson's lawyer, Christopher Alexander of Mason, said he questions whether the encounter was the boy's first sexual experience. He also said his client used no force, that the contact was "very quick" and stopped short of intercourse. Even so, Alexander said, "I'm sure it's going to have a lasting effect on that young man."'

Hillary and the Estrogen Card

anthony · 8 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Former Democratic vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro raced to her defense as well, stating to the New York Times that Clinton had been unfairly “attacked” during the debate: “It’s OK in this country to be sexist,” she said, and “I don’t think Barack Obama would have been attacked for two hours.

Herein lies the sexism. There was not a single question asked of her during the debate that would have been stated differently if she were a man. She says she wants to be treated as an equal, but really, she wants to be treated differently: more gently, and as a superior. That’s because SHE believes she’s superior by virtue of her “womanhood.”

...

But she’s not getting away with the double-game this time. Either she’s a fragile woman who needs special courtesies, or she’s tough-as-nails and ready to be commander-in-chief. Can’t be both. Pick one, Senator. And let’s see if you can stick with it.'

Study: 1 out of 4 homeless are veterans

anthony · 8 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

The word "veterans" could easily replaced by simply stating men. Most of these homeless men are Vietnam Vets. Many of these men suffer from Post-Traumatic Stress disorder. Now the Iraq war is contributing to this crisis. These men are not properly treated and live a life on the streets eating out of garbage cans. I suspect with the increasing number of female military personnel, this issue will become a serious topic. Society will never tolerate homeless female veterans. A military clerical position held by a woman would probably be more of a priority than the man who served in heavy combat. I would not be surprised if the victim industry pushes for a Congressional bill preventing any female vet. from becoming homeless. Such a bill would probably be initiated by man hater, Joe Biden. As for the men, find a warm spot on the streets during the winter and good luck! Excerpt:

'Veterans make up one in four homeless people in the United States, though they are only 11 percent of the general adult population, according to a report to be released Thursday.

And homelessness is not just a problem among middle-age and elderly veterans. Younger veterans from Iraq and Afghanistan are trickling into shelters and soup kitchens seeking services, treatment or help with finding a job.'

Woman Charged With Biting Off Ex-Boyfriend's Lip During Kiss

Anonymous · 8 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'SEATTLE — A woman accused of biting off two-thirds of her ex-boyfriend's lower lip as they were kissing in bed was charged Wednesday with second-degree domestic-violence assault.
...
Brummel said he and Cutler kissed several times when, without provocation, she bit off his lip and spat it out, deputies said. Doctors at Highline Hospital were unable to reattach the lip and said the man will likely be permanently disfigured.'

Book: "Does Feminism Discriminate against Men?: A Debate"

Matt · 9 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Dear Editor,

This may be the first time there has been a very positive review from a mainstream national newspaper (Canada's National Post) praising a male-positive perspective over a feminist perspective. It is a review of Does Feminism Discriminate Against Men?: A Debate between Warren Farrell (with Steven Svoboda) and James P. Sterba. You can read it here.

More important, "Does Feminism Discriminate Against Men?" is the first time one of the two main academic presses (Oxford U Press and Harvard U Press) has attempted to introduce a male-positive perspective to feminist gender studies professors in the U.S. and Canada. If we each contact a local university to suggest this book, its adoption will encourage other academic presses to introduce more books incorporating male-positive perspectives.

How badly is this needed in universities? Look at this email I received yesterday...

From: ...
Subject: RE: your book prohibited from.....
Date: November 6, 2007 1:15:55PM PST
To: warren@warrenfarrell.com

Dear Dr. Farrell,

I have been prohibited from quoting your book in A University of Massachusetts classroom. The class is titled, Women in Psychology. The class actually teaches feminism. The class was told that your book is a compilation of lies, and your theories do not deserve to be addressed. Furthermore, I may not cite your book in any research papers.

I wrote you to ask your advice on how to handle this situation. You have undoubtedly come across this before. I would hope you could share a few ideas on how I could handle myself in such a hostile environment.

Thank you
{name}

Please feel free to distribute this so that the universities have an alternative to men-as-oppressors feminism.

Warren Farrell, Ph.D.
www.warrenfarrell.com

Australia: Law 'turns boys into rapists'

anthony · 9 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Tough new rape laws which make it clear being drunk does not constitute consent have been condemned by barristers, who insist: "It will turn our sons into criminals."

The NSW Bar Associations reckons the "No means no" law goes too far and will lobby Upper House members to vote against it when it is up for debate next week.

The law will define the meaning of consent for the first time, making it clear that being drunk or under the influence of drugs does not mean consent has been given.

It will also introduce an "objective fault test", meaning a man can no longer use the defence that he thought he had consent if the circumstances appear unreasonable.'

Purdue Student Paper: "Females initiate some abuse"

Matt · 9 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A.: "This is the 7th university newspaper story (we know of) that resulted from our news release in the past month."

Article here. Excerpt:

'Men are not always necessarily the initiators of domestic violence.

A recent study has shown that men and women commit acts of domestic violence at similar rates.

"Domestic violence is a human problem, not a gender problem," said Marc Angelucci, president of the Los Angeles chapter of the National Coalition of Free Men. "But unfortunately it has been misframed as a gender problem for decades by the media and by gender-driven political ideologies."'

Sexist jokes can increase discrimination

Chuck7 · 10 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

Surprise...it only about discriminating against women, despite the fact it would have been incredibly simple to do the exact same experiment with both genders. And of course, no mention of the rampant misandry and man-bashing in the media.

"2007 Women's Expo"

Matt · 10 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Another woman-only event! Events like these can be found all over the country at various times. This one is just an example. Now imagine a "Men's Expo", men only please. Or maybe a "Whites Expo", or "Blacks Expo", etc.

While it may be true these kinds of things exist for one purpose only: to sell stuff to people -- nonetheless, just as with "women's banks", women-only hotel floors, women-only beaches, etc., the message is this: we don't like men and don't want them around, for whatever reasons. This is just one way that gender feminist separatists are bringing their new world order into being.

Aside from the current state of affairs with the divorce and custody issues, selective service, male genital mutilation, misandry in society and the media, all the current major groups of issues taken as a starting point, I can think of nothing else that is arising in our social atmosphere that so threatens the well-being of men than the rise of "woman-only {whatever}". This is so simply because it is easy to ignore the condition of others with whom you share no space or time with. Once the gender fems can get separatism established in enough places in enough ways, what few rights the average man currently has can be much more easily taken away and his servitude can be made complete.

When you see things like this, find out who is organizing them, then call or write, organize protests, do whatever you can to get people making money off this trend to realize the error of their ways and cease and desist.

Woman Stabs Estranged Husband to Death, Faces Two Assault Charges

Matt · 10 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Manslaughter? Even unintentional homicide? No. "Assault". Story here. Excerpt:

'November 9, 2007 2:20 pm — An apparent domestic dispute led to a man being fatally stabbed about 9:45 p.m. last night at 42 Wilcox St., just off Monroe Avenue, in the city.

Roman Demary, 28, of Rochester, was transported to Strong Memorial Hospital with life-threatening injuries. He underwent surgery, but died about five hours later, police said.

Denise Ortiz-Demary, 25, of Rochester, the victim's estranged wife, was charged today with two counts of first-degree assault, according to Public Information Officer Deidre Taccone.'

Depending on what degree of assault, she is facing either a Class B or D felony, or a class A misdemeanor. Possible time then is this: 5-25 years, 2-7 years, or up to 1 year. Suppose she'll go to trial? Or be found guilty? If so, how much time (if any) will she get?

Another wait 'n see case.

Discrimination against women... in coffee shops?

Chuck7 · 11 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

That's right people, a story about coffee shops discriminating against women. Apparently they have to wait a whole 20 extra seconds for their drinks on average.

The study is unscientific. It only covered eight coffee houses, so that data is quite questionable. The author's sexist solution? Women-only coffee shops. Note that the author is male.

Man who was deceived about paternity retains custody

anthony · 11 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The Kentucky Supreme Court has ruled that people who deceive their spouses into thinking that a child is theirs cannot later contest their right to custody -- even if DNA tests show they are not the parent.

The court unanimously upheld a lower court ruling granting primary custody to Ren Ricky Hinshaw, whose wife led him to believe he was the father of their child until they divorced and she produced genetic testing showing the child wasn't his."

RADAR ALERT: Only Two Weeks Left to Submit Video Questions for Republican YouTube Debate

Matt · 12 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The deadline for submitting a question for YouTube/CNN's Republican debate is Sunday, November 25th, just two weeks away. The debate itself is scheduled for the following Wednesday.

Seldom is there such an opportunity to focus the candidates' attention on the issues RADAR addresses -- issues such as:

- The system's willingness to give credence to false allegations of domestic violence, as exemplified by Santa Fe Judge Daniel Sanchez' signing of a temporary restraining order against David Letterman based on a woman's allegations that she'd been receiving coded messages from Letterman on his nightly broadcasts for more than a decade. If the accused had not been a rich celebrity, there's every likelihood that Judge Sanchez would have made the order permanent.
- The culture among prosecutors nationwide that encourages unconscionable behavior on their part, as exemplified by:
  1. North Carolina D.A. Mike Nifong's collusion in the suppression of exculpatory DNA evidence so he could continue his prosecution of three innocent men,
  2. Georgia D.A. David McDade's prosecution of a teenage boy (Genarlow Wilson) that resulted in a jail sentence of 10 years for having had oral sex with a willing girl less than two years younger than himself,
  3. Oregon D.A. Bradley Berry, whose response to two 7th grade boys' participation in their middle school's unofficial butt-slapping day was to charge them with sex crimes that could have resulted in 10 years in juvenile detention and a lifetime on the sex offender registry.

Here's what YouTube suggests you do to increase the chances of your video being selected:

- Be original -- choose your own approach.
- Be personal -- your perspective is important.
- Choose your focus -- you can address one or all of the candidates.
- Keep it quick -- your question should be less than 30 seconds.
- Make it look good -- speak loudly and keep that camera steady.
- Provide context -- in your question or video description, include your name and home town.

Full information on how to submit your video can be found at http://www.youtube.com/contest/RepublicanDebate

++
Date of RADAR Release: November 11, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Separate classrooms for boys and girls more popular in US

anthony · 12 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Students in single-sex classrooms tend to concentrate on their lessons better, the National Association for Single Sex Public Education claims. Proponents say that this is in part because the lessons can zero in on different interests and developmental levels between boys and girls of the same age.

Educators have long known of differences in learning methods between boys and girls, but now many public schools in the US are making the move to educate their children separately.

Studies show that American boys concentrate less, have more problems with reading and are overall weaker students than girls, leading more boys to fail than their female counterparts."

"overall weaker"?

England: "Girls learn best with no boys"

anthony · 12 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

Boys are already considered second class citizens throughout the education system. Now they're blaming boys for impeding the girls' education. Excerpt:

"Pupils in all-girl independent schools are almost 24 per cent more likely to get an A grade than girls in private co-ed schools. The difference is particularly marked in subjects such as physics, chemistry, biology and maths.
...
Supporters of single-sex education say girls in mixed schools can be held back because boys monopolise teachers' time, girls are less likely to study "male" subjects such as maths and sciences and they have fewer leadership opportunities."

Former educator: Boys now the ones stumbling

anthony · 12 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"In 1992, a controversial report claiming girls were being shortchanged by public education prompted initiatives credited with improving their academic performance.

Schools hired more female teachers, especially in math and science. Interaction with students in the classroom was tracked and teachers who focused on boys were trained to pay more attention to girls. And girls were encouraged to take more math and science and Advanced Placement classes.

...

"Girls outnumber boys in the National Honor Society, take more Advanced Placement courses and have higher grade-point averages, Hilton points out. Among the general population, boys are more than twice as likely as girls to be suspended from school and more than three times as likely to be expelled. They are more frequently diagnosed with learning disabilities. "It was like a huge problem that somehow had been hidden. I can understand why it was hidden. It wasn't on our radar screen — girls were on our radar screen in the 1990s," Hilton said.'

States urged to open adoption records

anthony · 12 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This is an update regarding a similar article recently submitted to MANN. Excerpt:

'In a comprehensive report being released Monday, a leading U.S. adoption institute says the answer is "Yes" and urges the rest of America to follow the path of the eight states that allow such access to all adults who were adopted.

States' experiences in providing this information make clear that there are minimal, if any, negative repercussions," said the Evan B. Donaldson Adoption Institute. "Outcomes appear to have been overwhelmingly positive for adult adopted persons and birthparents alike."

Opponents of open access argue that unsealing birth records violates the privacy that birthmothers expected when they opted to give up their babies. They raise the specter of birthparents forced into unwanted relationships with grown children who have tracked them down.'

Woman who falsely cried rape eight times spared jail

Anonymous · 13 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman who has cried rape eight times has been spared jail.

Gemma Gregory repeatedly claimed that she had been raped or sexually assaulted by around seven men over a six-year period.'

She made the allegations against ex-boyfriends who ended up being quizzed by detectives about what she had alleged against them.

The 28-year-old was given a one-year jail term suspended for two years by a judge who said she must receive mental health treatment.'

Attorney for female teacher: Teen is 'no victim'

anthony · 13 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The attorney for a Nebraska middle school teacher who fled to Mexico with a student who was an illegal immigrant said Monday that the woman could be guilty of nothing except poor judgment.

James Martin Davis said that a kidnapping charge against Kelsey Peterson should be dropped because the boy went with her willingly, and that the boy shares more responsibility for their relationship and flight than authorities allege.

Peterson, 25, fled Lexington with the boy, a former student of hers, on October 26. They were found in a mall parking lot in the border town of Mexicali, Mexico, on November 2."

Ed. note: A separate submission referred to this case, only with more quotations from the attorney. Read it here.

Justice hires staff strictly on merit, calls gender quotas 'dehumanizing'

anthony · 13 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

I suspect NOW will have something to say about Clarence Thomas"s comments. They've been after him like rabid wolverines since he was found not guilty in regards to the Anita Hill hearings during the 1980's. Excerpt:

'"I don't hire women law clerks," Thomas said. "I hire the best law clerks. And it turns out that 30 percent of them happen to be women."
...
"If a woman graduates from law school and I say I'm going to hire her because I need a woman, that seems to me dehumanizing, and the job would be tainted," he said. "That's my attitude."'

Feminist Trained Judges Lack Integrity

MR · 14 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Feminist Trained Judges Lack Integrity

"When judges [who are trained through STOP grants funded by the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA)] address domestic violence according to a gender feminist paradigm, instead of constitutional law, they are grossly lacking in integrity."

"When America's judiciary functions with as little integrity as it does today in the area of domestic violence law, the entire legal system reeks with a foul stench of rottenness, wafting in from that area of tyrannical injustice."

Teacher suspended over sex act with teenage pupil

Anonymous · 14 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'This is the female teacher banned from working with children after she was suspended and cautioned by police over a sex act with a teenage pupil.

Married Jo Gorman, 28, was cautioned for "intentional sexual touching" with a male student at Paignton Community and Sports College in Paignton, Devon.

Police launched an investigation after rumours began to circulate the school about an improper relationship and the headteacher alerted social services.'

Rudov: Please don't tase me, babe!

MrReality · 14 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Women are being provided with tasers to use against men. Marc Rudov wrote an interesting article on this subject. Excerpt from the article:

'Enter the “Taser for ladies,” available in metallic pink for $350 from Taser International, Inc., in Scottsdale, AZ. A news item on Fox News described the latest fad: women having Taser parties, redolent of Tupperware parties, where they get each other to purchase these weapons. Do women sometimes find themselves in dangerous situations where they need protection? Absolutely. Because of VAWA, do women have the potential to fraudently use Tasers, with impunity -- in arguments, in rages, out of jealousy, for spite, in revenge, etc. -- to commit legal assault and battery on innocent men? You bet they do!
...
Here's a scenario to ponder: If a maniacal wife attacks her husband, as so often happens, and he tases her, what do you suppose would happen to him? Ha! How many lawyers would it take to defend him, to “prove his innocence”? Not to mention being pilloried by the media as a wimp (when a woman attacks a man, it is just emotion; let it go).'

Column on the judicial bias vs. boys statutorily raped by female teachers

Matt · 15 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

'A New Jersey Superior Court Judge shocked observers during the sentencing hearing of a 43-year-old female teacher who had pleaded guilty to second-degree sexual assault with a 13-year-old boy many times over a six-month period.

...

I will give one example, but there are many cases, of bias against male sexual offenders versus females. A male teacher who had sex with three teenage female students was sentenced to 26 years in prison while the next day, a female swimming coach who had an “affair” with an 11-year-old boy and sexual “encounters” with two others got 30 days. Not only is there bias against male offenders, there is the mistaken belief that male victims do not suffer short-term and long-term trauma. It is egregious to think that boys suffer less harm when sexually abused at such a young age than girls. Children, boys as well as girls, are losing their childhood.'

Editor says "if your wife beats you up, you probably deserve it"

Anonymous · 15 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

On September 13, 2007, I sent the Ledger-Enquirer a letter asking why they ignored male victims of domestic violence in their article “Getting out isn't easy“ (9/13). In response, editor Ben Holden wrote: "We didn't mention it because anyone with an ounce of common sense (and without a meanspirited private political agenda) knows that as a general proposition, men hurt women in domestic situations, not the other way around. Besides, I always figure if your wife beats you up, you probably deserve it. That's the way it works in my house. Regards, Ben" (The email exchange is below.)

Of course, we all know that's just another stereotype. Even Harvard Medical School just recognized that half of heterosexual domestic violence is reciprocal, half non-reciprocal, and that the men are more often hurt in the non-reciprocal violence, which women commit 71% of.

It's scary that Ben Holden is not only an editor but holds himself as some kind of spokesperson on dating violence, as you can see from this recent article.

Sensationalism, myths and stereotypes sell better than social science, and Ben Holden must be very pleased about that.

Marc Angelucci

Subject: your article ignored MALE victims of domestic violence; Ledger-Enquirer
Date: Thu, 13 Sep 2007 10:57:35 -0400
From: bholden@ledger-enquirer.com
To: marcangelucci@hotmail.com

Mr. Angelucci:

We didn't mention it because anyone with an ounce of common sense (and without a meanspirited private political agenda) knows that as a general proposition, men hurt women in domestic situations, not the other way around. Besides, I always figure if your wife beats you up, you probably deserve it. That's the way it works in my house. Regards, Ben
-v-
Ben Holden
Executive Editor
Ledger-Enquirer
(706) 571-8560 - Phone
(706) 576-6290 - Fax
www.ledger-enquirer.com bholden@ledger-enquirer.com

-----Original Message-----
From: Marc Angelucci [mailto:marcangelucci@hotmail.com]
Sent: Thursday, September 13, 2007 9:32 AM
To: Holden, Ben - Columbus

Dear Editor,

Why did your article, “Getting out isn't easy“ (9/13), leave male victims of domestic violence invisible?

Virtually all sociological research shows women initiate domestic violence as often as men and use weapons more than men, and that men suffer about one-third of the injuries, even though men are less likely than women to report the violence in crime data, as Professor Martin Fiebert of California State University shows in this online bibliography at http://www.csulb.edu/~mfiebert/assault.htm

For example, the Centers for Disease Control's May 2007 study found women commit 70% of nonreciprocal domestic violence - about half of all domestic violence. http://pn.psychiatryonline.org/cgi/content/full/42/15/31-a

A recent 32-nation study by the University of New Hampshire found women commit partner violence as often as men and that controlling behavior exists equally in perpetrators of both sexes. http://www.unh.edu/news/cj_nr/2006/may/em_060519male.cfm?type=n

And a recent study in the Journal of Family Violence found many male callers to a national hotline experienced high rates of severe forms of violence from female partners who used violence to control them. http://www.springerlink.com/content/a7q0032j88817218/fulltext.pdf

Even if male victims were in the minority, that would still be no excuse to ignore them. Decades of neglect has left them swept under the rug while their children suffer long-term damage by the exposure. This is a serious but hidden problem. That's why concerned experts formed a global coalition to promote honest, research-based, inclusive solutions, and their website confirms the above statistics at http://www.nfvlrc.org/

Marc E. Angelucci

Australia: Santas warned 'ho ho ho' offensive to women

blaze4metal · 15 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Santas in Australia's largest city have been told not to use Father Christmas's traditional "ho ho ho" greeting because it may be offensive to women, it was reported Thursday.'

USAToday: "Girls get extra school help while boys get Ritalin"

blaze4metal · 15 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

It's pretty common sense to anybody with their eyes open, but it hit a traditional media outlet so I thought I'd share it with you guys. Excerpt:

'Most startling is that little is being done to correct the imbalances. All of the major players — schools, education colleges and researchers — largely ignore the gender gap. Instead of pursuing sound solutions, many educators merely advocate prescribing more attention-focusing Ritalin for the boys, who receive the drug at four to eight times the rate of girls, according to different estimates. "Too often the first reaction to an attention problem is 'Let's medicate,' " says Rockville, Md., child psychologist Neil Hoffman. "Some schools are quick to recommend solutions before they've fully evaluated the problem."'

Benefit cheat mother invented seven children in just 18 months

Anonymous · 16 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'[A woman] swindled more than £40,000 in benefits payments with a bogus brood of seven babies in the space of 18 months.

Ironically, efforts to prosecute her were delayed by the fact that she was genuinely pregnant this time.
...
Judge Roger Thomas QC warned her: "You have pleaded guilty to the vast majority of the charges against you. The next step is for sentence to be considered.

"There is a lot of overpayment on the face of it and it looks like a very deliberate deception to obtain tax credit."

The case was adjourned until December 5 to allow pre-sentence reports to be compiled before Young is sentenced.'

"Israeli women soldiers recount army trauma in film"

Matt · 16 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

I once heard someone say at an MRA event that it's OK to acknowledge the traumatic experiences of women but not men. Another time I heard a therapist mention that the grief of men was taboo but not of women. Things like this documentary only point up these observations. Traumatized men are casualties. Traumatized women are victims. It matters not, it seems, whether the person wears a uniform, but only if that person is male or female.

Ohio Woman Charged for Having 15-Year-Old Father Her Child

Matt · 16 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Video report here. Some good lines include:

"...it was not a student-teacher relationship." (So it wasn't so bad then? "Relationship".)

"... is accused of having sex with a 15-year-old boy..." (There it is again, "having sex with", as predictable as the tides.)

Democratic Debate: Clinton Plays the Gender Card for a Win

anthony · 16 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Clinton was playing the gender card -- even if she denied doing so.

"I'm not playing, as some people say, the gender card here in Las Vegas, I'm just trying to play the winning card," the candidate chirped. "I understand very well that people are not attacking me because I'm a woman. They're attacking me because I'm ahead."

The senator was having it both ways. Even as she cashed in on the fact that she is mounting a historic campaign for the presidency -- not the first by a woman, but the first in which a woman might prevail -- Clinton said she was not "running because I'm a woman." Rather, she said, "I'm running because I think I'm the best qualified and experienced person to hit the ground running."'

3-YO Boy Tortured/Murdered by Convicted Mother

Anonymous · 17 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Authorities said Kennedy plunged her son into the water on Christmas Day 2005. The boy suffered severe burns and went a week without treatment before dying.

"You took away his life in a way that was preventable," Circuit Judge Jeffrey Levinson told Kennedy. "You subjected him to pain, you subjected him to suffering, and you let him wither."'

First-grader suspended over drawing

Matt · 17 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'EAGLE POINT — A first-grader was suspended Tuesday for drawing a stick figure shooting another in the head with a gun and allegedly threatening students.

Little Butte School officials sent 6-year-old Ryan Weathers home after receiving complaints from parents saying he threatened their children, said Douglas Weathers, the boy's father.

...

The disciplinary report given to Weathers stated the reason for the suspension was the boy "threatened to shoot two girls in the head."

The drawing was inspired by an episode of "The Simpsons," Weathers said. In the television cartoon, a character displays a drawing of a student being shot by a gun.

Weathers said he understands the concerns other parents may have, but felt the school went too far in suspending his son for one day.

"You can't blame the parents," he said. "I told the principal that I agreed that he shouldn't have done the drawing, but suspending him seems like a policy with no intelligence behind it.

"They didn't seem to care that he's only in the first grade."'

Male And Female Adolescents Equally Victims Of Physical Dating Violence, Study Shows

Matt · 17 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'ScienceDaily (Nov. 12, 2007) — Physical dating violence (PDV) affects almost one in every 11 adolescents, according to research presented at the American Public Health Association's 135th Annual Meeting in Washington, D.C.

The study, which looked at data from the 2005 National Youth Risk Behavior Study, also found that contrary to common general perception, males and females equally report being victims of PDV. The researchers found that in their study population of 6,951 male and 6,807 female students in grades 9 through 12, 9 percent of boys and 9.2 percent of girls responded yes to the question "during the past 12 months, did your boyfriend or girlfriend ever hit, slap, or physically hurt you on purpose."'

Rudov: Men are in danger as more women buy tasers

MrReality · 17 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Rudov calls women that buy tasers "Jane Bond" with a license to kill men. Mr. Rudov points out a few incidents where men have been murdered via the 50k volts that tasers deliver to men and now women are being sold these weapons to use against men with impunity. Taser International does not require that these women have permits for these weapons. Men are now at the whim of women whom are armed with weapons to use against anyone they choose.

Marc Rudov recently debated feminist Lis Wiehl concerning this matter.

The debate can be viewed here.

Ed. note: If you have trouble loading the video via the the target page to the link above, the direct link is here

"Shyness & Love: Causes, Consequences, and Treatment"

Matt · 18 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

A friend sent me a link to this on-line version of part of the book "Shyness & Love: Causes, Consequences, and Treatment", which is now out-of-print. I read some of the parts available for reading and found the author's direct candor about men and where they are at very refreshing, though a number of his comments seemed clouded by "normative expectations" and the kind of judgmentality seemingly reserved more for men than women. Food for thought and debate for sure; doubtless you will read it and agree to some stuff, disagree with others. Excerpts:

From the chapter The Male Lesbian, read:

'Specifically, a "male lesbian" is a heterosexual man who wishes that he had been born a woman, but who (even if he had been a woman) could only make love to another woman and never to a man. Unlike the transsexual, the "male lesbian" does not feel himself to be "a woman trapped inside the body of a man". Moreover, none of the love-shy men studied for this research entertained any wishes or fantasies of any kind pertinent to the idea of obtaining a sex change operation. All wanted to keep their male genitalia; all wanted to remain as males. However, all deeply envied the perogatives of the female gender and truly believed that these perogatives fitted their own inborn temperaments far more harmoniously than the pattern of behavioral expectations to which males are required to adhere.'

From the chapter Envy of Female Privilege read:

'Another major area wherein females were often bitterly envied had to do with the draft and the military. This subject will be dealt with in a later chapter. At this juncture suffice it to say that the love-shy feel that they are human beings too, just as females are; and that males have emotions and feelings just as females do. Hence, the love-shy deeply resent the United States military treating males, but not females, as "dispensable pawns", and forcing them to suffer severe physical pain and injury, and exposure to enormously anxiety-provoking situations. They also resent the way military organizations endeavor to standardize male personalities, and the way they put males, but not females, through a host of degradation ceremonies--such as hair cutting.'

Washington Times: "Gender pay gap myths and 2008"

Matt · 18 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

'The Reuters report stands in stark contrast to the politically correct — but empirically incorrect — Associated Press story that blanketed the nation on April 23, 2007. The AP story was based on the advocacy press release of the American Association of University Women (AAUW) that claimed after one year out of college women earned 20 percent less than men and that the gap widened 10 years later to 31 percent. The AP did not tell the nation that statistical analyses accompanying the press release reduced the two purported gaps to 5 percent and 12 percent respectively...'

RADAR ALERT: OVW Response to RADAR Shows Many Male Victims Neglected

Matt · 19 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In a report to Congress on services provided to domestic violence and sexual assault victims, the U.S. General Accounting Office identified a number of grant programs whose funds are used to provide direct services to victims.

RADAR then submitted a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request seeking data on the services provided to victims, categorized by gender. On October 23, 2007, the Office on Violence Against Women responded to the RADAR request.

Sydney Morning Herald on paternity fraud, men's rights groups

Matt · 19 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

'MEN'S groups are calling for mandatory paternity testing of all newborns as it emerges a record number of men are finding they are not the fathers of children they believed to be theirs.

Almost a quarter of paternity tests conducted by one of Australia's largest DNA laboratory companies show the man submitting a sample is not the father, compared to an estimated one in 10 "exclusions" 10 years ago.

...
Thousands of men are turning to DIY testing kits - available online - to discover whether they are the biological father while they are still in a relationship and without telling their partners about their suspicions.
...
Professor Margaret Otlowski, deputy director of the University of Tasmania's Centre for Law and Genetics, said: "I don't think mandatory testing is a good idea.

"I can see the argument from the point of view of creating certainty about parentage, but it would stem from a very suspicious premise and there would be huge implications in terms of relationships."'

Three 8-9 YO Boys Arrested For Rape digitalhermit · 19 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Police say the boys -- who are 8 and 9 years old -- are in a Cobb County youth detention center but face adult criminal charges.
...
Police reports show the girl went to authorities Saturday for the alleged attack, which she says happened Thursday.'

I know none of the details of the case but my gut says that there is some hysterical overreaction going on for what were most likely innocent childhood games. No matter what happened, I can't conceive any valid reason to charge boys this young as adults.

Israel: Knesset Subcommittee Examines Discrimination Against Fathers

Matt · 19 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Story here. Excerpt:

'(IsraelNN.com) A new Knesset subcommittee for fathers' rights in divorce and child-custody proceedings held its first meeting Monday.

The Subcommittee on the Family Crisis in Israel was presided over by its chairman, MK Chaim Amsalem (Shas). Committee member and initiator Avraham Ravitz (UTJ) delivered the opening statement which ignited a stormy clash between government representatives and rights groups.
...
Dr. Orli Iness of the University of Haifa told the committee that “when the Knesset adopted legislation on the matter of protecting women from violence, it was reported that about 20 percent of complaints filed were false, but it adopted the legislation as the price to pay in order to protect the weak… Presently, there have been reports that in some precincts the figure [for false complaints] is as high as 50%. If that had been the case at the time, the Knesset would have thought differently about the matter.”

...
[The committee chairman] also announced the establishment of a cross-ministerial committee on the phenomenon of discrimination against men, and promised to use the power of the Knesset to research the system’s response to complaints and failure to prosecute false claims.'

Ed. note: Notice related link, Battle of the Genders Hits the Knesset, discussing a similar meeting back in October. Nice to see that the issue "just isn't going away."

MHA asks: "Do we ignore violence against men?"

Matt · 20 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From a press release from Men's Health Australia:

'This Sunday is White Ribbon Day (WRD) and the start of the 16 Days of Activism to Stop Violence Against Women. However the 2005 Personal Safety Australia survey found that in the past 12 months almost twice as many men as women (808,300) were victims of all types of violence; twice as many men as women (485,400) were victims of physical assault; nearly a third of sexual assault victims were men; 864,300 men were harassed and 110,700 men were stalked. The same study found that men were almost as likely as women to experience physical violence within the home (half from females, half from males) and were just as likely as women to experience physical violence from perpetrators who were known to them. Yet the WRD campaign focuses solely on the prevention of violence against women by men.

An international coalition of professionals and academics has come out in unequivocal support of anti-violence initiatives, but is concerned that this annual spotlight on violence against women tends to conceal the fact that males are far more likely than females to be assaulted or killed and make up a significant proportion of victims of domestic violence. They are calling on the media to be aware that crime statistics, based on reports to police, are an inaccurate reflection of the extent of domestic violence within the community, as men who are physically assaulted by women are less likely to report it than are women assaulted by men...'

The full version is here (.pdf file).

UK TimesOnline: Of course children don't need fathers

Anonymous · 21 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Column here. Excerpt:

'...commentator Melanie Phillips is adamant: “What we know beyond a shadow of a doubt is that children need their fathers.”

Really? Why? What for? And when did anybody last even ask? It might be very nice indeed for a child to have a dad around the house — provided, naturally, that he's the proper kind: the devoted, sober, gentle giant much given to manly rites of passage like the proud purchase of a brace of season tickets to Arsenal. But nice is not the same as need and certainly not as “rights”; further, if the hands-on presence of a father were actually so imperative, our species would have died out in the primordial swamp.'

Australia: Adelaide, Salisbury & Murray Bridhe Community Consultation Events

Matt · 23 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

ADELAIDE, SALISBURY & MURRAY BRIDGE COMMUNITY CONSULTATION EVENTS

With Elizabeth Broderick, Sex Discrimination Commissioner and Commissioner responsible for Age Discrimination.

Have your say on building a fair and equal society for women and men in Australia.

The Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission (HREOC), in partnership with the Hawke Centre, the Equal Opportunity Commission of South Australia and Safe Work SA invite you join HREOC's new Sex Discrimination Commissioner and Commissioner responsible for Age Discrimination, Elizabeth Broderick, for a community consultation.

This consultation is part of Commissioner Broderick's national Listening Tour. The Listening Tour is an opportunity for people all over Australia to make their voices heard on the issues that matter to them.

Mon Nov 26, 5.15pm for 5.30pm start to 7.30pm
UniSA Hawke Building - Level 5, Bradley Forum,
50-60 North Terrace, Adelaide
08 8302 0215

Thu Nov 29, 12 noon - 2pm
Council Chamber,
Local Government Centre,
2 Seventh Street, Murray Bridge
08 8539 1100

Fri Nov 30, 2pm - 4pm
City of Salisbury Council Office
12 James Street, Salisbury
08 8406 8312

HREOC have established three female-focused themes for the tour:

* economic independence for women
* work and family balance across the life cycle, and
* freedom from discrimination, harassment and violence.

Discussion of other issues will also be welcome. Information collected from this consultation will be used to inform the agenda for the Commissioner's 5 year term.

We would urge anyone who cares about men's and boys' health and wellbeing to come along to these events to remind the new Commissioner that her responsibilities cover two sexes!

We would encourage you to make some of the following points (for a bit of background information on men and work-life balance click here (.pdf file)):

* Males have much higher illness, injury, accident and death rates and die 5 years earlier than females, yet research funding for male health is less than one-third of that for female health
* Males suicide at almost four times the rate of females. More males kill themselves each year than the entire Australian road toll
* More than twice as many males as females experience workrelated injuries and illnesses, and over ninety percent of workrelated deaths are males

* Young men are three times as likely as young women to be victims of violence, however, there are no public health campaigns to address this very serious issue
* Men are also victims of intimate partner abuse, however, there are no support services for these men, nor treatment services for abusive women
* Boys in Australia are much more likely to drop out of school than girls. In NSW, the difference between boys' and girls' average Tertiary Entrance Rank is almost 20%. Males currently make up just 37% of university graduates
* In Australia today, only women have reproductive rights. Upon becoming pregnant, a woman can choose to have the baby, or have an abortion, or put the baby up for adoption. A man has no choice whether to become a father or even to be notified that he has become a father
* Men are more likely to be convicted and receive longer sentences for the same crimes, compared to their female counterparts
* Following family court proceedings, children are far more likely to be given little or no time with their father than they are with their mother
* The current inequitable parental leave schemes, favouring mothers, reinforce fathers in the traditional 'breadwinner' role rather than supporting them as being 'hands-on' dads (which all the research shows gives better outcomes for children and their parents)
* Australian women are responsible for spending 90 cents in every household dollar

Please circulate this email and the attached, printable flyer, to your contacts in or near Adelaide. You can also download a copy from here (.pdf file).

More information about how to contribute to the Listening Tour will be posted at http://www.humanrights.gov.au/ in coming weeks, along with details of other events as the HREOC team make their way around the country. Can't make it to the consultation? An interactive website is currently being constructed which will allow online contributions.

Kind regards,

Greg

Greg Andresen
Research & Media Liaison
Men's Health Australia
http://www.menshealthaustralia.net/
Tel: 02 8003 5813
Mobile: 0403 813 925
Post: P.O. Box 1292, Bondi Junction NSW 1355, Australia

Mother who gave birth after one-night stand wins right to keep baby secret from the father

Anonymous · 23 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman who became pregnant after a one-night stand yesterday won the right to keep the existence of her baby a secret from its father.

In a landmark decision, three Appeal Court judges agreed that the 20-year-old single mother has "the ultimate veto" over whom should be told about the child, who is being put up for adoption.

Describing the case as "on any view extraordinary", Lord Justice Thorpe ruled there was no justification for "breaking open the mother's secret".

And Lady Justice Arden said this was not a violation of the father's rights to family life under the Human Rights Act because he had no rights to be violated.'

I-VAWA supports women's abuse of domestic-violence laws

anthony · 23 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Radical feminists have devised a scheme to cash in on the flow of taxpayer money in a big way. Their good buddy, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., has just introduced Senate Bill 2279, called the International Violence Against Women Act.

The act earmarks at least 10 percent of its program funds to be granted to a certain type of women's organizations. Biden's press release identifies the favored groups: NOW's Legal Momentum, Family Violence Prevention Fund, Women's Edge Coalition, and Center for Women's Global Leadership.
...
Orders of protection were designed to be a "shield" to protect against domestic violence. This article bluntly describes how a petitioner can use an order of protection as a "sword" to obtain child custody in an expedited manner, to restrict a father's visitation with his children and to gain exclusive use of the home.'

Newlywed arraigned in husband's murder

anthony · 23 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'On his wedding day three months ago, Michael Forbes made a special announcement to his guests: He and his new wife would be moving into a beautiful home in Merrick.

"Everyone thought it was nice, was happy for him," his uncle, Cecil Dudley, said Thursday.

No one realized how horribly wrong things on Frankel Boulevard would turn.

On Wednesday morning, Kelly Forbes grabbed a long, orange, heavy-duty electrical cord, put it around her husband's neck and strangled him, Nassau police said. Forbes, 29, called 911 on a cell phone from the house. When paramedics and police arrived, they found Michael Forbes, 50, on the floor in a room next to the master suite. He was unresponsive and died about an hour later at 10 a.m. at Nassau University Medical Center in East Meadow.'

On YouTube: Warren Farrell's Wage Gap Myth Interview on 20/20

anthony · 23 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

A fascinating segment from 20/20 on YouTube.

He confronts the false assumptions underlying the belief that "men are paid more".

On YouTube: Feminists Disrupt Forum On Battered Husbands

anthony · 23 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Gentlemen, this is why MANN needs national exposure. We need to report blatant misandry and educate all men and women! This video shows the embedded hatred feminists have towards men.

Note: Google spell check can't identify the word "misandry"

Gay man fights for parental rights after being deceived by female "friend"

Anonymous · 24 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Topeka man is fighting a legal battle over parental rights, because his babies' mother says he is just the sperm donor.
...
Hendrix is a gay man who didn't think he would ever become a father. Then in 2004, the Topeka resident said a longtime female friend named Samantha Harrington approached him and asked if he would father a baby for her through artificial insemination...

So Hendrix said he agreed to the deal. "I thought everything was perfect and I said, 'Do we need anything in writing?" he said. "She said, 'Daryl, we've been friends for 10 years. I'm an attorney. Kansas is an oral agreement state. There will be no problem.' And I took her word for it."
...
Hendrix said, "When she found out she was pregnant, she called and said, 'Congratulations Daddy."

The twins were born in May 2005 at Stormont Vail Hospital in Topeka. Hendrix said when he went to the hospital to see the infants, a boy and a girl, he was turned away.

That's when he learned that Kansas law gives sperm donors no parental rights unless there is a written contract.

The next day, Harrington filed legal documents asking that Hendrix have no parental rights. Hendrix too went to court".'

RADAR Alert: Tell "Media Matters" the Truth About Domestic Violence

Matt · 24 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In his latest Fox News debate, VAWA Reform Coalition member, Marc Rudov stated that HHS and CDC statistics show women and men commit domestic violence equally. The website "MediaMatters for America" has responded by calling Marc a liar.

In actual fact, the latest CDC research, indicates that women are as violent, if not more violent than men. In March 2007, the peer-reviewed scientific journal, "American Journal of Public Health" published a report by Centers for Disease Control researchers Whitaker, Haileyesus, Swahn, and Saltzman entitled "Differences in Frequency of Violence and Reported Injury Between Relationships With Reciprocal and Nonreciprocal Intimate Partner Violence".

This research analyzed data on 11,370 young heterosexual adults aged 18 to 28. About half of the violent couples reported that both partners were violent to one another (reciprocal violence). Of the violent couples in which only one partner was violent (non-reciprocal violence), the woman was the perpetrator in 70% of the cases.

Yet the comments at the MediaMatters website are uniformly self-righteous and hateful toward men. The readers of this website need to be informed of the facts. You can add your own comment by going here. Scroll to the bottom to post a comment. You will first need to sign up for a free account.

The MediaMatters webpage has a "Take Action" section on the right where they encourage their readers to complain to Fox News about Rudov's supposedly inaccurate information. So after you've posted your comment on the MediaMatters webpage, it would be a good idea to also send your comment to Fox news at Comments-at-foxnews.com.

--

Ed. note: Since this alert went out, MediaMatters has shut off comment posting for the article in question.

Former 'Bachelor' contestant arrested for domestic assault

Matt · 24 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'SEMINOLE, Fla. - A former cheerleader for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers who was proposed to on the reality TV show "The Bachelor" was accused of punching a man she lives with in the mouth, authorities said.

Mary Delgado was taken into custody just after midnight Wednesday on a battery charge and was under the influence of alcohol when she was arrested, according to a police affidavit.

Delgado received a proposal on the show in 2004 from professional bass fisherman Byron Velvick. The two appeared together Tuesday in a special episode of "The Bachelor" called "After the Final Rose."'

Video: Mother who killed son wants alimony

anthony · 25 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

CNN's Jim Acosta looks at the New York-area woman who still wants her alimony after beating a child who later died. This woman wants upwards of $4000.00 per month after her release from prison.

Fathers Rights Activists Grow Stronger - Hold Rally

MR · 26 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Fathers Rights Activists Grow Stronger And Hold Rally To Make Family Law Accountable

A reckoning is in order in family courts all across America. F4JLA and NCFMLA are intent on seeing accountability brought back into a legal system influenced heavily by gender feminism and judicial chivalry. Presently, America's family law system appears to exist to serve primarily the gender feminist agenda, and of course, itself.

The day started out with a bang, when a woman stopped her car at the corner of the intersection, directly behind the blue truck, then briskly approached us exclaiming, "I have seven kids and an ex-husband who hasn't paid child support in five years. What can you do about that?"

RADAR ALERT: "Media Matters" Censors Inconvenient Facts

Matt · 26 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In his latest Fox News debate, Marc Rudov stated that HHS and CDC statistics show women and men commit domestic violence equally. The website "MediaMatters for America" has responded by calling Marc's statement false. (See article and video here). Media Matters claims that the ratio is 62% to 38%.

Media Matters bases its claim on excerpts from a CDC handout about domestic violence (.pdf file), which cites as its source the CDC-funded 1996 National Violence Against Women Survey. The 1996 survey was conducted using a modified version of a research instrument known as the Conflict Tactics Scales. Dr. Murray Straus, the pre-eminent researcher on domestic violence is the inventor of the Conflict Tactics Scales. Straus has objected (.mp3 file) to the 1996 survey because the modifications made to the Conflict Tactics Scales would artificially suppress the percentage of male victims.

Unlike the 1996 National Violence Against Women Survey, the latest CDC scientific research shows much higher perpetration rates for women. In March 2007, the peer-reviewed scientific journal, "American Journal of Public Health" published a report by Centers for Disease Control researchers Whitaker, Haileyesus, Swahn, and Saltzman entitled "Differences in Frequency of Violence and Reported Injury Between Relationships With Reciprocal and Nonreciprocal Intimate Partner Violence". This study reports that women are the sole perpetrator in 70% of cases where the other partner was non-violent!

Murray Straus, co-founder of the Univ. of New Hampshire Family Research Laboratory, was the first leading scientist to call for federal domestic violence laws. Today, he also calls for women to stop abusing men, and for policy changes to effect reforms in violence policy to address this major, unaddressed national problem.

Dr. Straus scientifically explains (.pdf file) why Media Matters is wrong in "The Controversy Over Domestic Violence by Women". Straus reconciles the vast differences between the findings of crime-based studies such as the National Crime Victimization Survey (NCVS) and empirical studies based on the Conflict Tactical Scales (CTS). In a nutshell, studies based on crime data and women's advocacy surveys report what we expect: Men often win major spousal altercations and men are the ones arrested (without considering who initiated the altercation). CTS-based studies more accurately report the nature of family violence and who is causing it. Today, there are over 200 major studies reporting that women initiate at least half of domestic violence, and little credible scientific evidence to the contrary.

Apparently truth doesn't matter to Media Matters. Although their article invites reader comments, their editors must approve comments before they are posted. The editors apparently would rather shoot the messenger than listen to the message. Media Matters' editors approved a comment saying of Rudov, "like so many right-wing macho men, he probably has a little, itty-bitty pee-pee". Meanwhile comments that referred readers to the aforementioned American Journal of Public Health article and other credible sources of objective research were disallowed.

This should come as no surprise to anyone who has read their "About Us" page where they proudly announce they systematically monitor media outlets for news or commentary that is not accurate, reliable, or credible and that forwards the conservative agenda. Apparently falsehoods told by anyone else are just fine with them.

Since Media Matters has asked their readers to complain to Fox News, we urge you to send emails or letters emphasizing that Marc Rudov's statement was based on solid research:

1. Send an email to Neil Cavuto at cavuto-at-foxnews.com
2. Send letters, emails, or make calls to Fox News at:
   FOX News Channel
   1-888-369-4762

Comments-at-foxnews.com
1211 Avenue of the Americas
New York, NY 10036

3. Copy Marc Rudov: http://mediamatters.org/rd?http://thenononsenseman.com/page10.html

++
Date of RADAR Release: November 26, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence.
http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Usher on "Media Matters"

MrReality · 27 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'Wiehl's dangerous position explicitly reveals the in-vivo tragedy of VAWA: Where one's subjective state of "fear" is the legal standard justifying most any action by a woman (as opposed to a "real threat" standard), there is no telling what women will do (and try get away with). Civil Rights advocates need to wake up on this issue: racist white women can throw high-tech war parties too.

The problem with tasers as a "standard female accessory" is the unconstitutionally-low standard for female behavior established by the Violence Against Women Act. In the VAWA environment, use of a taser to prevent a rape is no different than abuse of a taser for an entirely scurrilous reason. VAWA makes it impossible to discern the difference between the two.'

India: MRAs fight back

Matt · 27 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

'On August 26 this year, International Women's Equality Day, yet another demonstration was under way at Jantar Mantar, the centre of gravity for social protest in the nation's capital. No one driving by would have spared the protesters a second glance, except that the bunch shouting slogans-- "Hai Hai", "Down Down"-- was an incongruous one: software engineers, corporate managers, officers of the merchant navy and marketing execs. More incredible were the signs they were carrying: 'Stop Legal Terrorism. Stop Husband Suicides', and 'Protect the Elderly from the NCW', NCW being not the National Commission for Women but 'National Criminal Wives'. On Women's Equality Day, the centrestage belonged to one of the most unexpected byproducts of the women's rights movement: a movement for men's rights.'

RADAR ALERT: "Media Matters" Before and After

Matt · 28 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In RADAR's Monday, November 26th alert we discussed Media Matters for America's article entitled "On Your World, Mark Rudov falsely claimed 'women are equal-opportunity domestic abusers'". We explained that RADAR knew that a number of factual comments on this article had been submitted but not approved for publication by Media Matters' editors.

After RADAR's alert was posted, Media Matters approved an additional 31 comments submitted between last Wednesday and last Friday. All of the previously withheld comments were critical of Media Matters' position. The chronology of events, as best we can reconstruct it is as follows:

- Tuesday, November 20 - Media Matters posts article saying the claim that "women are equal-opportunity domestic abusers" is false.
- Tuesday through Friday - Media Matters editors post 32 of the 63 comments submitted.
- Sometime Friday or Saturday - Media Matters disables posting of any further comments on this article.
- Late Sunday night - RADAR issues an alert, notifying the public that Media Matters is not allowing factual comments that disagree with them.
- Sometime Monday - After RADAR's alert is distributed, Media Matters' editors post an additional 31 comments critical of their position, 29 of which had been submitted the previous Wednesday, 1 submitted Thursday, and 1 submitted Friday.

A number of people who received our alert have asked who Media Matters is. The best information we've been able to find is here.

Go here on RADAR's site to read the comments that appeared on the Media Matters article as of late Monday night, November 26. The 31 comments that the Media Matters' editors didn't allow through until after RADAR's alert are shown on a pink background.

++++++

Reject Domestic Abuse Law Male-Bashing

MR · 28 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Reject Domestic Abuse Law Male-Bashing

Considering there were already laws on the books to address violence against men and women, the time has come for this worthless piece of taxpayer bilking legislation (VAWA) to be purged of all gender feminist ideological connections, or revoked. If we are to survive as a free nation with liberty and justice for all, we can no longer tolerate a piece of hate-based legislation that can't offer a solution to violence against one gender without bashing and abusing the other.

AntiguaSun on violence against men

Anonymous · 28 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Unfortunately, the issue of domestic violence in not gender based, and many times society fails to accept the fact that men are victims of abuse too.

...

There are many reasons why we don't know more about domestic abuse and violence against men. First of all, the incidence of domestic violence reported by men appears to be so low that it is hard to get reliable estimates. In addition, it has taken years of advocacy and support to encourage women to report domestic violence. On the other hand, very little has been done to encourage men to report abuse. The idea that men could be victims of domestic abuse and violence is so unthinkable that many men will not even attempt to report the situation."

Teaching problems: Same newspaper, same day

Kirk · 28 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This story about a teacher who will likely never teach again after a false accusation.

No mention of any action against the false accuser. Note also the suspension without pay since 2005 for an allegation of touching.

Then this story in the same paper same day. All about how diverse classrooms have become but a bit of tweaking is in order to ensure a few more minorities - talk about the importance for society to be reflected in schools, such as more female janitors required, but nothing about the incredible lack of male teachers.

Hulk Hogan is the latest victim

Matt · 28 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Hulk Hogan joins the ranks of high-profile celebrity men who are getting the boot from their wives with a hefty bill attached. I feel for the poor guy. While it's true no one can always know the entire story, it is true that there seems to be a very well-defined pattern to these things: Marry a famous guy who is or is bound to get rich, have kids, get to a certain age and decide he isn't right for you for whatever reason, then leave him. Rinse and repeat. Paul McCartney learned the hard way, but only since she could get away with it, his particular sweet little cupcake bailed early.

In this latest high-profile pump-and-dump (video), the soon-to-be former Mrs. Hogan seems well-prepared in advance with an onslaught of demands for property and money. As Oprah would say: "You go girl!"

Barf.

Rudov: "When woman hits man"

MrReality · 29 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Rudov was recently vilified by Media Matters for stating the truth about women being as violent -- and many times "more violent" -- than men. The Media Matters website then blocked comments that solidified Marc's fact-laden position.

Mr. Rudov recently wrote a response -- on his blog -- to Media Matter's slanderous statements.

The blog reads: "Our societal attitude is: When man hits woman, it's violence; when woman hits man, it's emotion. This hypocritical attitude, resulting in the unconstitutional Violence Against Women Act (VAWA), gives women a free pass to accost men and to falsely accuse them of violence and rape. Aside from the occasional arrest, such as what happened to "bachelorette" and former Tampa Bay Buccaneers cheerleader, Mary Delgado, for punching "bachelor" and fiance Byron Velvick (both appeared in the 2004 season of ABC's The Bachelor), most women who hit men do so with impunity.

I've received letters from men saying that the only way they could get their abusive wives and girlfriends arrested was to secretly tape-record the violent acts. When the police hear a woman screaming at and slapping a man, they have no choice but to arrest her. Generally speaking, women don't have to tape-record anything for the police, just accuse and claim fear. The bar for a female arrest is indeed set very high."

More junk science from LiveScience

Matt · 29 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Look at this, will you. Read the interpretation of findings. First off, does anyone think these findings are really defensible? And second, it seems whenever men talk more it's about domination and when women talk, it's about "connecting".

"JunkScience", as I am now calling it, is owned by Imaginova, Inc. It seems they also own a number of other science-related news sites as well. However there are scant details of who is running things. Anyone have knowledge?

Roe v. Wade for Men Shot Down Again

Roy · 29 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Should a man be able to avoid the obligations of parenthood when he became a father involuntarily? No, according to the recent ruling from the U.S. Court of Appeals which has dismissed Matt Dubay's "Roe v. Wade" for men case.

On appeal, the court considered one basic question: Does the U.S. Constitution's Equal Protection Clause prevent a state from making men support children whom they did not desire to produce? The court decided "no," because the Equal Protection Clause does not prohibit all differentiations on the basis of sex. It guarantees only formal equality - the right of likes to be treated alike.'

Law professor exposes Human Rights Commission for ignoring male domestic violence victims

Matt · 29 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Letter here. Excerpt:

'It is probably true that male victims, victims in same-sex relationships and the children associated with them do not face a postcode lottery - there are next to no services. The Scottish Government is funding a small-scale project to raise awareness of domestic abuse in same-sex relationships but it will not come to a magazine or billboard near you soon.'

Debunk Domestic Abuse Junk-Science

MR · 30 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Debunk Domestic Abuse Junk-Science

To describe the effects of the systematic, domestic abuse theory discrimination (perpetrated against all men in America today) as a "tragedy" is actually employing a euphemism. Given the scale of destruction done to the targeted male population, it is more accurate to describe it akin to the beginnings of the holocaust in Nazi Germany, or the institutional persecution of African-Americans in the decades before the civil rights movement.

Tremendous abuse has been inflicted on innocent men through America's misandrist, and corrupt domestic abuse laws. What we see being done to men in our domestic abuse courts, family law courts, colleges and universities, mass media and other societal institutions in the name of domestic abuse law is a gross national disgrace.

Misandrist capitalizes off rape hysteria

MrReality · 30 November 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Rapex created by the misandrist Sonnet Ehlers is a medieval torture item that women can insert into their vagina that hooks into the skin of a man's penis.

The creation of this medieval torture item is based off of fraudulent rape hysteria stirred up by women's organizations and the politicians that serve them.

Judge rules sperm donor liable for child support badgerb · 1 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. One only needs to look at the gender of the judge to know what the decision was going to be and how traumatic is it going to be to give an eighteen year old a DNA test.

"Family Court Judge Ellen Greenberg ruled Nov. 16 that despite the mother's willingness to have the child's DNA tested, the man could not seek a paternity test to determine if he is the biological father because the results could have a "traumatic effect" upon the child, who is now 18 and lives in Oregon with the mother.'

NEVER EVER become a sperm donor.

Child Support Not Reaching Children - Gov't Just Keeping Most Money

jjgarage · 1 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

A new report shows what MRA's have always advocated - the current child support system is a scam, a cash cow only for those who implement, collect, and manage the support payments.

According to this latest report, fathers, and the children/mothers they are supposed to be helping, are ALL suffering - embroiled in a futile, crooked system that promotes itself as "helping" children receive stability and justice from deadbeat parents. Who's the real slime bags? The alleged deadbeat parents, or the crooks taking the child support payments and putting it in their own pockets rather than the children's?

J Soltys
JJGarage.com

Rudov: Misandry on Madison Avenue

MrReality · 2 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

From Marc Rudov's blog : "Your spellchecker doesn't recognize misandry, the hatred of men, because the developers at Microsoft, when creating Word, weren't conscious of it. But, they sure knew about misogyny, right? HR sensitivity programs ensured that. Bashing women is so verboten in Corporate America that people can lose their jobs over it. Excoriating men, on the other hand, is so infused -- and apparently profitable -- that, like breathing, most people accept it without question. And, nowhere is misandry practiced more than on Madison Avenue, the advertising capital of the world, the source of the male-bashing TV commercial.

Today's TV spots are moronizing and marginalizing men, with impunity. Why do they persist? Quite simply, most Americans -- including a lot of self-hating men -- approve. The genesis of every TV campaign begins by matching an advertiser's sales objectives with an assumption about the zeitgeist. The advertiser bets that a TV campaign's message will resonate with its targeted customers, who, hopefully, will respond by purchasing the promoted products or services. When earning my MBA at Boston University, I obviously missed the lecture on how to boost revenues of cameras and mutual funds by alienating men and fathers."

'A bookshelf of wounded manhood' belittles men's rights issues

Matt · 3 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Posted for Marc A.: This ignoramus just printed an op-ed in the Philadelphia Inquirer making all the typical clueless arguments against the men's rights movement and even making typical straw man attacks, mis-framing our movement completely. Please let's slam the editor with letters in response to this. Please write to the editor at Inquirer.Letters-at-phillynews.com and copy oped@phillynews.com and the author at alubrano-at-phillynews.com. Be sure to give the Inquirer your name address and phone.

Excerpt:
'Feminism is not stealing children from men during divorce, as many of these books contend. Feminism helped bring about gender-neutral laws, which led to joint custody of children being considered the best option in today's family courts.

Thirty years of equal-rights talk has gotten the women haters nostalgic for the old days, when our moms vacuumed like demons, baked cookies and lost their minds alone with the kids all day.'

One in Four UK children do not consider their father to be close family

Anonymous · 3 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"One child in four does not consider their father to be close family, according to a study published today.

More boys view footballers as role models than their fathers and only one child in 10 said they would go to their father first if they had a problem.

Even among traditional families, fathers are much more in the background of children's lives than their mothers, the research carried shows."

Fireman who donated sperm to lesbian couple fights demand for child maintenance

AngryMan · 3 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Andy Bathie, 37, a firefighter from Enfield, agreed to help Sharon and Terri Arnold after they assured him he would have no involvement in the children's upbringing and no financial commitment.

But he is now having his pay docked to pay thousands of pounds in child maintenance even though he has no legal rights over the boy and girl the couple had.

He was stunned when the Child Support Agency contacted him last November to demand payments because the women had split up.

Officials made him take a £400 paternity test and began docking his pay.

He says the payments mean he and his wife cannot afford to have children of their own.

He is now bringing an unprecedented legal challenge so that he is not recognised as a legal parent to the children.'

The Onion: "Man Finally Put in Charge of Struggling Feminist Movement"

Roy · 3 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

America's Finest News Source reports – "After decades spent battling gender discrimination and inequality in the workplace, the feminist movement underwent a high-level shake-up last month, when 53-year-old management consultant Peter "Buck" McGowan took over as new chief of the worldwide initiative for women's rights. "All the feminist movement needed to do was bring on someone who had the balls to do something about this glass ceiling business," said McGowan, who quickly closed the 23.5 percent gender wage gap by 'making a few calls to the big boys upstairs.' "In the world of gender identity and empowered female sexuality, it's all about who you know."

RADAR ALERT: Sword or Shield: Illinois Bar Journal Exposes Restraining Order Abuse

Matt · 4 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In the November 2007 issue of the Illinois Bar Journal, Scott A. Lerner, Esq., takes a critical look at the Illinois Domestic Violence Act (DVA) in his article "Sword or Shield: Combating Orders-of-Protection Abuse in Divorce".

"There's no question that victims need protection from abusers," he writes. "But not all parties to divorce are above using OPs [orders-of-protection] not for their intended purpose but solely to gain advantage in a dissolution." And "the greatest potential for abuse of the system," in Lerner's opinion, "is in visitation."

As Lerner points out, "It is far easier to restrict visitation via an order of protection then by seeking the same relief under the IMDMA [the Illinois Marriage and Dissolution of Marriage Act]. Under the IMDMA, 'A parent not granted custody of the child is entitled to reasonable visitation rights unless the court finds, after a hearing, that visitation would endanger seriously the child's physical, mental, moral or emotional health.'"

Under the DVA, however, "the trial court in an order of protection hearing has wide discretion to restrict visitation," as "the serious-endangerment standard does not apply to the restriction of visitation under an order of protection." Lerner's opines: "This is an invitation for parents to use the DVA to circumvent the IMDMA."

Lerner's advise to defendants facing an order-of-protection-take the threat very seriously and fight it with everything you can afford-is sound, but unfortunately putting on a great defense is all for naught if the game is fixed, a possibility he only hints at ("Judges, certainly, have a responsibility to act as gatekeepers by making sure they do not grant an order of protection except to protect the petitioner or the children.... Still, abuse will happen.").

The fact that the Illinois Bar Journal is addressing order-of-protection abuse is a very positive sign. Slowly but surely the word is getting out about the potential for abuse of domestic violence laws. It's only a matter of time before legislatures take steps to reform a system out of control, and limit restraining order protection to actual victims, not those looking for leverage in a divorce.

Phyllis Schlafly provides a nice summary of the article in "Feminist Abuse of Domestic Violence Laws".

++
Date of RADAR Release: December 4, 2007

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Statutory Rapist Debra Lafave Busted Again

anthony · 4 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Tampa cops today busted teaching temptress Debra Lafave for allegedly having illegal contact with a teenager at their job."

Lafave, 27, is best known for having a lewd-and-lascivious affair with a 14-year-old boy in 2004, and now she's serving three years of house arrest.

Lafave's allowed outside to work, and while on the job at a Danny Boy's restaurant is Ruskin, Fla., she allegedly had one-on-one contact with a 17-year-old female co-worker, state correction officials said."

The spoke privately about personal issues, in violation of Lafave's probation. Lafave was released without bond, but she'll have to face a judge about this alleged violation.'

Canadian universities gender blind recruiters

Anonymous · 5 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The National Post reports:

Despite a growing gender gap on Canadian campuses, universities are balking at a fledgling movement in the United States to make special efforts to attract more men, such as adopting affirmative action initiatives that favour male applicants over female ones.

Campus recruiters and admissions managers from Memorial University of Newfoundland to the University of British Columbia in Vancouver say they are taking no extra steps to target male students.

Father Christmas fired for saying 'ho ho ho' - because it is 'offensive to women'

Anonymous · 5 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A Santa in an Australian department store said today he has been sacked for saying "ho ho ho" and singing Christmas songs to children.

Employment company Westaff, which supplies stores with red-robed, white-bearded Father Christmases, had earlier asked its Santas to say "ha ha ha" because the word "ho", which is American slang for whore, could offend women, media reported."

This actually IS a joke, or was. Take a look at the MRA blog Heretical Sex from last December.

This joke has actually come true...

Innocent Man Sent To Jail For "Missed" Child Support

anthony · 5 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Systemic problems allowed an innocent Massachusetts man to be labeled a deadbeat dad and sent to jail.
...
Caliri was sentenced to 90 days in jail after he was accused of falling eight weeks behind on child support payments.

"There was a balance of $2,240," Caliri said.

He has proof of a good payment history. But problems came last spring with his new job at Daniel's Townline Pizza in Weymouth.

Townline Pizza garnished child support from Caliri's wages but never sent the money to the Department of Revenue for his ex-wife and three children.

He went to court last month to explain it all but instead went to jail.'

MSNBC: Dads don’t come from labs, readers say

anthony · 5 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'It seems guys don't need to worry about their paternal job security. As part of our special report “BabyQuest: The modern pursuit of parenthood,” we asked readers to respond to an MSNBC.com story about how scientists made artificial sperm from human bone marrow and asked, “Will science render men unnecessary?”

Reader Comment:

"Men and fathers are needed. They aren't just sperm donors but an essential part of our society. My son lights up when “Daddy” gets home and I can't imagine not having his male influence on my son."'

Mother Drugs, Suffocates Her 5 Young Sons-- Goes to Psychiatric Facility

anthony · 6 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'BERLIN — Autopsies were being performed Thursday on the bodies of five young brothers who investigators believe were slain by their mother as authorities searched for clues as to how and when the children were killed.

The bodies of the boys, ages 3 to 9, were found in their home on Wednesday after their 31-year-old mother told a doctor where they were, prosecutor Uwe Wick said. It is believed that they were killed either on Tuesday or on Wednesday, he said.

...

The mother, whose name has not been released, was ordered held in psychiatric care after the grisly discovery and was to go before a judge Thursday for a ruling on a request by authorities that she be held during the investigation.'

Fox News: Sexism May Still Be Hillary's Greatest Challenge

anthony · 6 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Writing in Newsday this week, Robin Gerber, a senior faculty member in the Gallup organization and an expert on Eleanor Roosevelt, argues that Hillary “should play the gender card to the hilt” to deal with a “trust” problem that Ms. Gerber lays directly at the door of her gender.

Gerber argues, pointing to studies of the challenges women face in corporate America, that Hillary faces the same problem many high-level women do, who find that being aggressive and self-promoting leads both men and women to respond negatively to them, in ways they don’t to men with similar traits."

Op-ed: It's a man's fault

GaryB · 7 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This piece is sickening, and needs everyone to add their comments (most of them are already on the right track).

Basically, this is the situation: A woman gets into politics, the woman gets made deputy party leader, the woman gets offered her choice of cabinet positions, and the woman CHOOSES the position she wants. And of course, the fact that she doesn't choose what some people feel to be the best position, is A MAN'S FAULT.

Almost every single comment supports the MRA viewpoint, which is great to see - I wonder how long it will be before sexist hags like this are removed from the press?

Mom Gets Probation for Attempting to Sell Son to Pay for Wedding Dress

klp · 7 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

What bonehead let this girl (I hesitate to call her woman as that implies maturity) have custody of the kids?

And for a $200 tab? Couldn't she just get some short-term gig to cover that? Excerpt:

'DAVENPORT, Iowa — A Davenport woman received five years of probation Thursday for attempting to sell her 4-year-old son to help pay for a wedding dress.

Marcy Gant, 32, was convicted in October of purchase or sale of an individual and could have been sentenced up to 10 years in prison.

Gant was arrested in October 2006 after offering her son to a retailer to settle a $200 bill for the dress. Police said Gant offered the trade at least twice.'

UK: Store withdraws man-shaped punching bag after objections

Matt · 7 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Story here. Excerpt:

'The Hers Boxing Set comes in pink packaging and contains a man-shaped punchbag and a pair of boxing gloves.

ManKind Initiative said owners were encouraged to insert photos of a man for the punchbag's face.

A picture on the product packaging shows an arrow pointing to a man's groin, saying "kick him here".

Mark Brooks, chairman of The ManKind Initiative, said the fact that Superdrug did not sell a similar product for men suggested domestic violence against men was more acceptable.'

Hypocrisy of Reproductive Choice

Roy · 8 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

How come a man who accidentally gets a woman pregnant and doesn't want to be father is condemned as a "selfish, inhuman, deadbeat dad"; while a woman who accidentally gets pregnant and has an abortion is celebrated for being "pro-choice?"

Glenn Sacks comments on a recent editorial cartoon by Steve Kelley.

Clinton Team Turns Iowa Focus to Women

anthony · 8 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

It's panic time for Hillary. Obama mow leads most Iowa polls and has narrowed the gap in New Hampshire and South Carolina. If Hillary loses the first three primaries, her presidential changes would become severely diminished. It's now time for Hillary to ride her husband's coat-tails by having him speak at more campaign sites. This apparently isn't working. Now it's time to play the gender card. Excerpt:

'DES MOINES -- Seeking to steady her campaign in Iowa, Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton will bring a wave of prominent women to blanket the state and target female voters in the final weeks before its first-in-the-nation caucuses.
...
"It's obvious that Obama has made some inroads with women," said one senior Clinton adviser, who spoke on the condition of anonymity. The campaign, the adviser said, is responding with new television advertisements, additional paid calls and new mailers targeting women."
...
"WE NEED YOUR HELP!" Dana Singiser, director of women's outreach for the Clinton campaign, said in an e-mail to the "Women for Hillary" list sent out Friday morning pleading with female supporters to come to the Clinton headquarters in Arlington, Iowa, over the weekend to make calls to women in the electorate."'

A Rich Dilemma: To Nup or Not Pre-nup?

Roy · 8 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. As Google co-founder and Chief Executive Larry Page (net worth $20 billion) prepares to walk down the aisle today, attorneys familiar with billionaire marriages urge their clients to proceed with care and caution. Excerpt:

'"A billionaire has to treat an upcoming marriage as a merger. But it's a merger with a potential enemy," says New York divorce lawyer Raoul Felder. Prenuptial agreements are important, but they're no guarantee of a satisfactory split if things go south. Consider the divorce of Steven Spielberg and his first wife Amy Irving. She claimed their prenup was invalid because it had been written on a napkin and she hadn't had legal representation. A judge tossed it out; Irving got $100 million.'

12 Warning Signs Of An Abusive Female

Luek · 9 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

1. Did she grow up in a violent family? People who grow up in violent families where they have been abused as children grow up learning that violence is normal behavior.

2. Does she tend to use force or violence to solve her problems? Does she have a quick temper or overreact to little problems and frustrations, such as not finding a parking space or having a bad seat at the movie? Is she destructive when angry, throws things?

3. Does she abuse alcohol or other drugs? There is a strong link between violence and problems with drugs and alcohol. Be alert to her possible drinking/drug problem, particularly if she refuses to admit that there is a problem or refuses to get help.

4. Does she think poorly of herself? Does she prove her feminist independence by trying to act tough and independent? She may think that she is "acting like a liberated woman" but in fact she may be acting like a batterer.

5. Does she have rigid ideas about what a man should be and what a woman should be? Does she think that a man's only role is to take care of his wife, anticipate her wishes, and follow her orders?

6. Does she use knives, guns, or other lethal weapons? Does she talk of using them against people or threaten to use them to get even?

7. Does she expect you to follow her orders or advice? Does she become angry if you do not fulfill her wishes, if you cannot anticipate what she wants?

8. Does she go through extreme highs and lows, almost as if she is two different people? Is she extremely kind at one time and extremely cruel at another?

9. Is she jealous of you - not just of other women you might know but even of your male friends or family? Does she keep tabs on you? Does she want to know where you are all of the time?

10. When she gets angry, do you fear her? Are you afraid to make her angry? Do you find that not making her angry has become a major part of your life?

11. Does she treat you roughly? Does she physically force you to do what you do not want to do? Abuse during dating is almost a guarantee of later abuse and of more violent abuse.

12. Do you feel threatened by her? Are you afraid of her because she might hurt you? Have you changed your life so that you won't make her angry? Are you keeping aspects of this relationship a secret from your family and friends because as a man you are ashamed of admitting that you are intimidated and/or physically abused by a female?

Presidential Candidates Address Equal Parenting

Anonymous · 9 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Here is a video from this summer in Iowa, where Presidential candidates are interviewed regarding equal parenting. The interview is taped by William Wagner and is posted on his website, onsecondthoughttv.tv

Should any of these Presidential candidates move up in the "Presidential process," this bit of videotape could be huge in educating the public to the issue of equal parenting, and where the candidates stand on that and other issues.

Near the end of the video, one of the candidates can be heard saying he would do away with the Federal law known as VAWA, although it appears he may not have understood all the horrors against men that VAWA has created. Clearly more education of the public is needed, regarding the misandrist Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) and how it discriminates against Fathers and men.

Now then, where do the other candidates stand on the equal parenting issue and other Fathers' and men's issues?

Michael Flatley awarded $11 mil. over false rape claim

TomP · 9 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. It appears that, if you have enough money and time, and access to good attorneys, you actually can win a false rape case! Looks as if this woman is a serial litigator, maybe this will slow her down a bit. Excerpt:

'"Lord of the Dance" star Michael Flatley has been awarded an $11 million settlement against Tyna Robertson, the Joliet woman who accused Flatley of rape in 2002, according to published reports.

The settlement was reached Friday after the California Supreme Court ruled that accusations of rape made by Robertson, who has a son with Chicago Bear Brian Urlacher, were not credible, and part of an extortion scheme, the BBC and London's Daily Mail reported Saturday. '

LiveScience article on male victims of domestic violence

Anonymous · 9 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

LiveScience.com, a mainstream popular science news site, has published an online report entitled Men: Hidden Victims of Domestic Violence. This indicates increasing acceptance of scientific findings on domestic violence which run counter to domestic violence stereotypes. Such stereotypes portray men as the exclusive unprovoked perpetrators of domestic violence, and portray women as victims or else justify female violence against men as self defense in every case where it occurs.

From the article:

Studies have shown that women assault men about as often as men assault women. While men tend to cause more damage because on average they are stronger, not all men are bigger than their partners, and women can even the odds with weapons such as knives, high heels, and sharp nails.

Men may also fear that if they fight back in self-defense, they themselves will be accused of abuse because of society's assumption that men are always the aggressor.

National Post covers divorce on front page

Anonymous · 10 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This weekend, the National Post ran a series of articles on divorce and family law, featured on the front-page.

The full index to all articles covers off most of what was written in the print edition.

As usual, and in fantastic form, Barbara Kay's article takes on the plight of divorced dads and misandry in general.

Canadian media is buzzing. Even the Toronto Star has been talking about the plight of victims of divorce, and while most of it has their familiar Toronto Star twist...

- Divorce damages environment, study finds
- Family court in crisis

...one article in the Star stands out: Down in the divorce trenches.

Ed. note: At the time of this posting, there seems to be a server issue with these sites. When you click a link, it asks for the password to the staging server. Just click "Cancel" and the page should load. I am sure the server admins are on it and maybe by the time you read this, the problem will be resolved. But after clicking "Cancel", the pages load fine.

Cougar Feminism: Kenya’s Sex Tourism-for-Women

Roy · 10 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The Concerned Women for America are expressing moral outrage that rich women are flocking to Kenya to get their grooves on, by paying young African men for sex. CWFA’s Dr. Janice Crouse calls it "the ugliest kind of feminism ... a throwback to colonialism and the days of slavery." Since these "relationships" happen between consenting adults, the Kenyan government says there’s nothing illegal going on. Audio can be listened to or downloaded from here.

(Note – “Cougar”: Noun. "An older woman in her sexual prime who prefers to hunt rather than be hunted. Man is cougar's number one prey.")

Duke LAX Team runs for Innocence Project

scottkirk · 10 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

College males are realising how easy it is to make a false rape accusation, and how difficult it is to defend against one. Story here. Excerpt:

'Just before 4 a.m. this morning, men's lacrosse player Reade Seligmann '09 planned to lace up his running shoes, throw on a bright-yellow traffic jacket and run laps around the Main Green.

Seligmann, the former Duke lacrosse suspect who was vindicated earlier this year, will be jogging for the Brown team's fall charity project: a 36-hour run-a-thon to raise funds for the Innocence Project, a nonprofit organization dedicated to exonerating innocent prisoners through DNA testing.

Seligmann pitched the idea of a lacrosse team charity event for the Innocence Project even before he committed to transferring to Brown this spring. Head Coach Lars Tiffany '90 liked the idea and organized the event this fall after team members approved, much to the delight of the New York City-based organization.'

Saudi rape case: Boyfriend was raped too, and given same sentence, but media focuses only on female

Matt · 10 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A.:

I know this is a month old but it's still worth noting. The woman's boyfriend was also raped and received the same sentence that she received. But he gets nowhere near the same media attention. Almost everyone who talks about the injustice only mentions the woman. Marc

Excerpt: "The woman's offence was meeting a former boyfriend, who she had asked to return pictures he had of her because she was about to marry another man. The couple were sitting in a car when a group of seven men kidnapped them and raped them both, lawyers in the case told the Arab News. The woman and the former boyfriend were originally sentenced to 90 lashes each for being together in private. The attackers received sentences ranging from 10 months to five years in prison, and 80 to 1000 lashes each."

"A Father's Choice"

Matt · 10 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via email:

I wanted to make you aware of an independent film from William Fain Productions (WFP). The movie, "A Father's Choice", is based on a true story about a father's struggle with the legal system of the United States in how his daughter, who was born out of wedlock, was treated differently than other children; as well as fighting for his rights to have a say in said daughter's life. If you go to http://www.myspace.com/afatherschoice, there are several clips of the movie you can watch. There is also a soundtrack that is for sale through 3 Jack Entertainment. Songs can be heard at http://www.myspace.com/3jacksentertainment.

William Fain, the founder of 3 Jack and WFP, would love the opportunity to discuss the movie and the issues it addresses. Through film, he is attempting to bring more attention to the problem that is happening not just in the U.S., but all over the world. He is offering the option to groups to have the opportunity to share in the money from sales of the soundtrack. If interested, please reply and I'll be happy to give you more information. Mr. Fain can be reached through email, williamfain-at-yahoo.com.

Sacks/McCormick Column: Biden's misguided violence bill

Matt · 11 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'WHEN IT COMES to domestic-violence legislation, the road to hell is paved with good intentions - and Sen. Joe Biden, D-Del., owns an asphalt company.

Biden's latest foray into the issue is the National Domestic Violence Volunteer Attorney Network Act, which amends his Violence Against Women Act to create an extensive network of volunteer lawyers to help abused women. They would provide free legal help in crafting divorce or separation agreements and winning child custody.

According to Biden, S. 1515, soon to be heard by the Judiciary Committee and is co-sponsored by Pennsylvania Sen. Arlen Specter, will enlist 100,000 volunteer attorneys. The bill is supported by the American Bar Association, the Family Violence Prevention Fund and the National Organization for Women, which is running a campaign in support of the bill.'

"The 5 Biggest Dating Mistakes That Men Make"

anthony · 11 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

List here. Just one goes like this:

"Men Aren't Chivalrous. The lines here are not always clear. We want you to treat us like equals, but we also want you to treat us like women. It's nice when a man picks up the tab or makes sure his date gets home safely. It may be old-fashioned, but a number of women report that dating a gentleman matters."

Reader comments follow the list.

NYTimes: "The Siren Song of Sex With Boys" blaze4metal · 11 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

A nice little read from the NYT. Take note of the gender of the author and how the piece basically dismisses the idea that women should be treated as equally bad when she has sex with a minor. Excerpt:

'The researchers questioned the practice, common in many studies, of lumping all sexual abuse together. They contended that treating all types equally presented problems that, they wrote, "are perhaps most apparent when contrasting cases such as the repeated rape of a 5-year-old girl by her father and the willing sexual involvement of a mature 15-year-old adolescent boy with an unrelated adult."

In the first case, serious harm may result, the article said, but the second case "may represent only a violation of social norms with no implication for personal harm."

They suggested substituting the term "adult adolescent sex" for child abuse in some cases where the sex was consensual.'

Minister's parents balk at convicted mother visiting kids

anthony · 12 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

What does Mary Winkler tell her children when they ask "where's daddy". I would love to be a fly on the wall during that discussion.

'(CNN) -- The parents of slain Tennessee minister Matthew Winkler on Tuesday asked the state's Supreme Court to overturn a lower court's order giving his widow -- who was also his killer -- visitation rights with the couple's children.

At the least, they want the visits to go on only under a counselor's* supervision.
...
Winkler initially received a three-year sentence, but a judge required her to serve only 210 days and gave her credit for the five months she had already served behind bars.'

*A "counselor"? I have an idea to save these children. Prevent the woman who killed their father from having any contact with them.

Female Teacher was "depressed" when she "had sex with" male student

anthony · 12 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'LISBON, N.Y. (AP) A 33-year-old high school English teacher charged with rape told police she was suffering from depression when she had sex with a 15-year-old student.

Accompanied by her husband, Christel Gravlin cried Monday as she was arraigned on felony counts of third-degree rape and third-degree criminal sexual act and misdemeanor endangering the welfare of a child.

The affair became public when the highly intoxicated teacher announced it to students and others nearby during a school basketball game on Nov. 30. Deputies accused Gravlin, who has taught at Lisbon Central School since 2003, of having both oral sex and intercourse with the boy on Nov. 25 during a brief relationship that began a week or two earlier.'

Self-proclaimed sexist judge gives new meaning to Parental Alie-“NATION”

Anonymous · 12 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story/thread here. Excerpt:

'A complaint was filed with the Georgia Judicial Qualifications Commission last month against Chief Superior Court Judge Sidney L. Nation of the 4th Judicial district (Rockdale Co.)for stating that he was a “Sexist” in court. The complaint was predominantly centered the judges failure to provide a fundamentally fair hearing, to perform his duties impartially and diligently, and failure to perform his judicial duties without bias or prejudice'

"Judges are a girl's best friend when extortion's afoot"

Matt · 12 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Story here. Excerpt:

'Rights? What rights? No one at the court ever listened to him. The judge set a preliminary hearing for Sept. 27, but on the day of the audience, the judge canceled the hearing and set a new date of Nov 1. This was maddening for the expat. He had arranged to travel back to the United States to accompany his elderly mother through some medical treatments and did not expect to be back in Costa Rica Nov. 1. His father passed away last year leaving his aging mother alone. He wrote a petition to the judge asking for an earlier court date. What a mistake. The judge set the hearing back even more to Dec. 4, three long months from the date he was forced out of his own home by a live-in girlfriend.'

Nevada Lawyer Fights Sex Discrimination in Gyms

Celarnor · 12 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

An article in the New York Times discusses a Nevada lawyer's fighting against a gym who offered his wife a better price on a membership based solely on her gender. Various people interviewed by the reporter said that this sort of gender discrimination in favor of women is "[...] pretty much accepted [...]" and "a business decision by individual businesses and they ought to be left free to do that."

From the article:
"Imagine a whites-only country club or whites-get-in-free deal or something like that," said Mr. Phillips, 45, who has homes in Nevada and California.

Fox TV Plans to Air "If Women Ruled the World" Reality Show

Roy · 12 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Due to the current writer's guild strike and some extra time slots to fill, Fox TV will premiere the reality series “If Women Ruled the World" in March. Reported here. Excerpt:

'If Women Ruled the World" will feature 12 unsuspecting chauvinistic men becoming slaves in a new primitive Survivor-like "society" ruled by 12 "strong, educated and independent" women who are "tired of living in a man's world."

... arriving on an island with only partially-completed living accommodations, the group will have to complete their shelters and find their own water and heat. However unlike the CBS reality show, only the male contestants -- who will have to "accede to the women's every command, 24/7" -- will be doing any of the work.

One of the men will be "traded for supplies" -- aka eliminated -- during each episode of the 11-episode series, with the last man standing winning $250,000.'

Angry Harry: All Men are Bastards Knife Block

MrReality · 12 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Angry Harry writes: "The directors of this company are just very greedy people. They simply want to make money by making fun out of men being stabbed, and they are contributing to the already-widespread notion that violence against men is something to laugh about.

They are clearly very greedy people indeed.

So, are you actually going to do something about this sort of thing? - perhaps by emailing them with your views?

Or not?"

Read the article.

Ed. note: This has been covered before, but with "the holiday season" upon us, orders for things like this only go up. So should objections to them.

UK Guardian covers India's men's movement

Anonymous · 13 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Read it here. Excerpt:

'The cautionary tale appears to be part of a trend in middle-class India where male angst is on the rise. Men complain that they have lost their traditional role as providers as women work more. Further, women with independent incomes are refusing to submit to the traditional ideal of marriage where an obedient wife accedes to a husband's every wish.

The outcome is an undisguised backlash against Indian feminism and women's rights. One men's organisation is demanding a ministry for men, arguing that 82% of taxpayers are men but that no money has ever been allocated for "male welfare".

The protection enshrined in Indian law for harassed wives has also led to a deep-seated sense of male victimhood. The men's movement in the country has been fired up by what it claims is the "legal terrorism driven by radical groups ... which has resulted in the blatant violation of men's rights".'

Rudov: Female Violence Against Men in South Africa

MrReality · 13 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Rudov: "This commercial from a South African florist warns the typical husband that, if he forgets a special occasion -- like an anniversary -- his wife will respond with violence, such as scrubbing the toilet with his toothbrush. If a man would do this to his wife, he'd go to jail. The message: violence against men is OK. You also must hate the men responsible for creating, producing, funding, and airing this crap.""

View the YouTube clip.

RADAR ALERT: Boston Herald Fans Domestic Violence Hysteria

Matt · 13 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

In an article entitled "Domestic violence at point of 'crisis'" published last week, the Boston Herald quoted Essex District Attorney Jonathan Blodgett claiming that "domestic violence is murder waiting to happen" and demanding the Mass. Legislature "enact an emergency bill that would potentially double jail time for serial batterers before they maim or kill."

D.A. Blodgett clearly wants the terms "domestic violence" and "serial batterer" to conjure up a mental image of a menacing brute who beats women just because he can. But all across the nation, "domestic violence" has been defined down to the point where simply raising one's voice makes the accused a "batterer". RADAR has documented (.pdf file) how the systems in place act as perverse incentives to induce women to make false accusations.

And Elaine Epstein, former president of the Massachusetts Women's Bar Association, has warned that "Everyone knows that restraining orders and orders to vacate are granted to virtually all who apply."

So, when Blodgett says "serial batterer" he's just as likely to be talking about the innocent husband or boyfriend of a vindictive woman as the slavering beast he wants you to imagine.

As the nation learned from Mike Nifong, innocence is no defense when the D.A. needs to grandstand in order to win an election. And unfortunately for the innocent, most of the Nifongs out there aren't dumb enough to get caught.

Please call the Boston Herald and ask them to run a follow-up article to correct the unbalanced and inaccurate portrayal of domestic violence created by the Herald's publication of this article.

The follow-up should highlight the facts that:

- false allegations of domestic violence are now rampant,
- men are just as likely to be victims of their wives' or girlfriends' violence,
- victimized men are routinely turned away when they seek help from domestic violence service providers

The Boston Herald's editor, Kevin Convey, can be reached at 617-619-6403. The Herald's comment line is: 617-619-6789. As always, state your opinion in a polite and courteous manner.

++
Date of RADAR Release: December 12, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Woman guilty of murdering husband with acid

Matt · 14 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Remember this one? I do. Excerpt:

'LOS ANGELES - A biochemist who killed her husband by knocking him out and pouring hydrochloric acid on him was convicted Wednesday of first-degree murder.

A Superior Court jury found Larissa Schuster, 47, of Clovis, guilty of murdering Timothy Schuster with the special circumstance that the murder was committed for financial gain. His half-dissolved body was found a few days after his 2003 death in a barrel that was inside a storage unit that his wife had rented.

Schuster faces a mandatory term of life in prison without parole at sentencing, set for Jan. 16.
...
The Schusters co-owned a chemical lab and were in the midst of a bitter divorce.

Prosecutors said Larissa Schuster and her former lab assistant kidnapped her 45-year-old husband on July 10, 2003, knocked him out with a stun gun and chloroform-soaked rag, then dumped his bound body headfirst into a barrel while he was still breathing.'

Justice served.

Study: Children often fabricate stories of sexual abuse

MrReality · 14 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

An excerpt from the article:

"Dr Rawls told how a team of lawyers, police and psychologists got an unpleasant surprise when it assessed a study group of 30 five-year-olds - seven reported they had been sexually abused.

All 30 had been in the care of one man. The seven told of genital touching, the man putting his hands under their upper clothing, of his touching their bottoms and making them touch his.

The revelations were an unpleasant surprise because the assessment team knew there had been no abuse. The children had invented the incidents. Their every moment with the man had been videoed."

With cases such as the one in the article it is a no-brainer as to why men no longer want to be alone with children. One lie from the "little angel" and off he goes even though no evidence was provided. A lying mother and child is a formidable juggernaut in the misandric court systems.

Thus this is another problem men must tackle. It seems as if everyone else -- meaning women and children -- can just make something up(no matter how absurd) and men go to jail. The notion that women and children don't lie about sexual abuse or battery needs to be confronted and debunked.

Peter Zohrab: "The Frontman Fallacy"

MrReality · 14 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

An excerpt from the article: "The general point is that Feminists assume that men always promote their own interests over those of women. This is not, in fact, true. But, on the other hand, it does seem to be true that, when Feminazis score some political victory, they almost always use their newly-won power to benefit females exclusively. This is because of their persecution-complex.

You could even argue that democratic countries are actually matriarchies, and that male politicians are the paid servants of the Feminists. The litmus test would then be whether the (mainly male) politicians enacted legislation that favoured men's interests more than women's interests. And the history of the last two hundred years in the West is peppered with examples of mainly male governments enacting legislation that benefited women more than men.

It is true that most decision-makers in society's political institutions have tended to be men. But they have not usually acted solely in men's interests, or solely to the detriment of women's interests. To the contrary -- they have tended to act severely against men's interests, and in favour of women's interests."

Men Carry Breast Cancer Genes, Too

anthony · 15 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Doctors are encouraging a new group of people to consider getting tested for genes that raise the risk of breast cancer: men. Male relatives of women with such genes often do not realize that they, too, may carry them, and face greater odds of developing male breast cancer, as well as prostate, pancreatic and skin cancer, new research suggests.
...
After seeing breast cancer in several male patients who did not know they were at risk, Daly conducted a small study, which was presented Friday at a conference in Texas. She now is trying to convince more fathers, sons and brothers of women with the genes to get tested."

UK: Minister for Men Petition Dismissed

Matt · 16 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Blog entry here. Excerpt:

'There has been a government e-petition calling for a Minister For Men. It received over 380 signatories. The petition is set out below and the site has been alerted to the government's response. It is, as to be expected from this government which puts ignoring men at the centre of its policies, completely and arrogantly dismissive. It doesn't even answer the question why there is a Minister for Women and not one for Men.'

Baskerville on the Deadbeat Dad Industry

Roy · 16 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

An excellent and comprehensive new essay (.pdf file) titled “From Welfare State to Police State,” by Stephen Baskerville argues that - "Through child support,(state) governments throughout the U.S. found they could turn a profit from the growth of single-parent homes. ... Child support became politicized by the early 1990s, when parents who allegedly fail to pay — "deadbeat dads" — became the subjects of a national demonology, and child support went from being a minor matter affecting a few people on the margins of society to a sacred political cow in the national vocabulary."

Dearth of male teachers likely to continue

anthony · 16 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Teaching traditionally has been dominated by women. But the gap has widened. The National Education Association recently announced that nationwide, 24.9 percent of teachers are men -- a 40-year low. In elementary schools, just 9 percent of teachers are men.
...
Some researchers said the lack of male teachers does not matter.

But Fusi and other educators said it's a disturbing trend because no,more than ever, children need a strong male figure to look up to.

Boys also have fallen behind girls in graduation rates and have more trouble reading and writing, leading some to wonder whether more male teachers would improve boys' classroom performance."

SFSU Student Paper: Female voters, women's issues more important in '08

anthony · 16 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'From first lady to presidential candidate, Hillary Clinton has nearly come full circle in her image transformation. By running for the democratic ticket, she is challenging her contenders to work harder to appeal to women voters.

“I think that the effect of that is to keep women on the front burner,” said James Martel, associate professor and chair of SF State’s Political Science Department. “I think that it helps to focus people,” he said.

Martel said that women tend to vote for men’s issues, but men do not necessarily vote for women’s issues. “This will work to galvanize that,” he said.'

["women tend to vote for men’s issues" -- Can any of you guys think of one single male issue that's been at the fore front of any political campaign that was of great importance to a female voter?]

On You Tube: Banned Commercial - Verizon (stupid dad)

anthony · 16 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Verizon is on MANN's boycott list because of this commercial. Now its finally banned! I've been unable to find any written text that expands on this video and why its banned. Maybe some of you guys have some information that I've not been able to find.

Police: Woman Charged After Trying To Smother Child

anthony · 16 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'SAN ANTONIO -- Two days after a San Antonio mother was arrested for smothering her 4-year-old daughter to death, another local mother was arrested on charges that she attacked her 8-year-old daughter in a similar way.

KSAT's Charles Gonzalez reported that police went to the apartment of Ann Marie Burlock, 30, after getting a call from a concerned relative.

The relative told police that Burlock's 8-year-old daughter had frantically called to say that her mom was trying to smother and choke her.

...

Burlock was charged with injury to a child, a third-degree felony, and she is in jail under $15,000 bond.'

False rape case hinged on fabricated lab reports

scottkirk · 16 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here....This man could (and should) have a lawsuit the size of Texas..The police knowingly and willfully perverted the truth..To get another rape conviction! Excerpt:

'There was one major problem with the Santa Clara County crime lab report that implicated a San Jose man of sexual assault:

It wasn't true.

The document was a fake, created by a San Jose police detective. The crime lab analyst who purportedly prepared the document doesn't exist. The number used to identify it was false.

Even so, detective Matthew Christian testified as though the phony report were authentic.'

--

Ed. note: Free registration required on the story's site.

UK: "Hold tight, daddy wars are here"

Matt · 16 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'As I head off for my day at home, I feel for them at the office coalface, required to toil away long after their kids are in bed. In an age of equality where dads are expected to shoulder as much of the home burden as mums, it feels unfair.

Inevitably there is a backlash. Spearheading this are the self-employed, or flexi-working fathers who can wear their caring-daddy status with pride. The types who proudly tell you they can't work as they are doing the kids. They are the male equivalent of the stay-at-home-mum brigade.'

Essay: "Sisters who are doing for themselves will find that making fathers an optional extra is a big mistake"

Anonymous · 16 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

A refreshing viewpoint from a female journalist in Ireland's Sunday Business Post. Excerpt:

'But it’s downright dangerous for our children, who have a right and a need to be allowed to develop a healthy, secure and mutually-respectful relationship with their fathers. At its most extreme manifestation, the risks for the children who are brought up without knowing anything much about their father, beyond the colour of his eyes, have been well-documented: research shows that they are twice as likely to drop out of high school, and twice as likely to become parents as teenagers themselves.'

India: Divorce, Alimony Laws Stacked Against Men

Anonymous · 17 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

What's nice about this story is the feminist version is totally absent, which does not happen too often. Excerpt:

'Sections 498A and 406, feels Sharda, have ensured that people are afraid of getting married. Under these sections, the husband's family can be harassed and booked on charges of 'cruelty'.

"Lawmakers have divorced themselves from reality. The Law Commission needs to examine this," Sharda added.

"Men get slapped with charges of neglecting guardianship and domestic violence during a divorce and Section 498A is often used as a bargaining chip for higher alimony," said lawyer Tarun Goombar."'

Book: Courts from Hell - Family Injustice in Canada

MrReality · 17 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Description here.

"Since the introduction of the so called “No Fault Divorce” in Canada, the divorce industry has evidenced unprecedented growth estimated at $6 billion per year. The problem is that the Legal / Court industry thrives off the $B’s generated by Tax payers and Families in crises. For this they provide no value and in fact cause destruction of families by unnecessarily removing fathers from children’s lives and lowering the standard of living for all family members. This is done through unnecessary litigation, biased decisions and unreasonable support orders which escalate conflict to perpetuate the status quo in support of their self serving business. The Solution is to update divorce laws to reflect parental equality and get families out of court eliminating significant grief and $'s wasted by families and taxpayers. An alternative to courts is identified in the book."

Fighting for Entitlements: NYC nightclubs defend ladies' nights

MrReality · 17 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

An excerpt from the article:

"NEW YORK - Men are not discriminated against by "ladies' nights" at Manhattan nightclubs, just as people in their 20s do not suffer because some restaurants let children eat for free or have "early bird" specials for older customers, according to nightclub lawyers fighting a federal lawsuit.

Roy Den Hollander has sued clubs including Lotus and the China Club, saying he was discriminated against by ladies' nights, which offer women free or discounted admission and drinks.

Deborah Swindells Donovan, a lawyer for Lotus, called the lawsuit frivolous in papers filed Friday in U.S. District Court.

She wrote that if his "ill-conceived theory is applied to restaurants, then 'early bird' specials for the elderly or promotions allowing children to eat free would be discriminatory on the basis of age."

Vanessa R. Elliott, a lawyer representing the club AER Lounge, said in court papers Friday that nightclubs recognize that men might not want to visit the clubs if they fail to attract enough women.

"Under this theory, male customers may actually benefit from ladies' nights in other ways and be encouraged to attend the club on those nights," she wrote.

The price charged to men is not so burdensome that it amounts to denying them entry, Elliott argued."

Women are fighting for their entitlements while claiming to want to be "equal." Will men finally stand up to their blatant hypocrisy?

RADAR ALERT: Lies, Damned Lies, and DV Statistics

Matt · 17 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Two weeks ago the Boston Herald ran an inflammatory story claiming "by New Year's Eve 57 people will have died this year in Massachusetts because of domestic violence - a toll not seen in 15 years." The death toll information was compiled by the Massachusetts Coalition Against Sexual Assault and Domestic Violence, a.k.a. Jane Doe Inc. The spokeswoman for Jane Doe Inc. declared the situation a "crisis" and predictably called for more funding. This flawed article was the focus of RADAR's December 12 Alert

This past week the Boston Globe ran a copy-cat story quoting a Jane Doe Inc. spokeswoman who made the same claim.

But the Jane Doe spokeswoman neglected to mention one critical fact: Jane Doe Inc. started counting domestic violence homicides differently in 2006 -- see http://www.janedoe.org/involved/Narratives%202007.pdf.

Jane Doe Inc's projection of 57 "domestic-violence-related" deaths by year end is based on the 42 deaths they'd counted under their new rules as of September 21, 2007. Among the deaths Jane Doe Inc. included were 3 people killed in Florida who had once lived in Massachusetts as well as 9 perpetrators who committed suicide.

So the Boston Globe article erroneously reports, "Over the past two years, the number of domestic violence homicides has almost tripled, from 15 in 2005." But obviously you can't compare numbers based on different counting methods. By using their new counting method, Jane Doe Inc. has artificially inflated the count by 40% over what it would have been using the methods in effect in 2005.

There's more to the disinformation.

Based on figures published in the Globe's annual Dec. 31 "In Memoriam" editorials, the number of DV-related deaths in Massachusetts fluctuates dramatically from year to year. These fluctuations are unrelated to changes in funding. Although there were 6 fewer DV-related deaths in Mass. in 1998 when Violence Against Women Act funding jumped by 63%, maintaining the funding at the newly increased level didn't prevent 12 additional deaths the following year.

And when Federal funding dropped by 10% in 2001 due to across the board budget cuts, the number of DV-related deaths in Mass. decreased rather than increased as compared to the previous year. (See http://holt.house.gov/pdf/CRSonVAWADec2005.pdf for the Congressional Research Service summary of VAWA fund allocations.)

The following graph shows the death counts given in the Globe's "In Memoriam" editorials. In some years the number has dropped as low as 14, while the number in the year before or after is double that. The 2007 count fits that same general pattern.

[Click here to view the graphic.]

Even one death is one too many. But there has not been a threefold increase, as Jane Doe Inc., is claiming.

The conclusion is clear: Jane Doe Inc. is playing fast and loose with the numbers to create a crisis atmosphere and pressure legislators to enact more DV laws.

Please contact the Globe and politely inform them that the projected threefold increase in DV-related deaths is based on a flawed apples-to-oranges comparison designed to sway Massachusetts lawmakers:

- Call the City Editor at 617-929-3100 and request the Globe to run a correction.
- Send an email to the letters editor at letter-at-globe.com.

Please also send a copy of your email to RADAR at info-at-mediaradar.org.

++

Date of RADAR Release: December 16, 2007

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

US woman launches 'Taserware' parties

anthony · 17 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This isn't a new development; Mark Rudov debated this issue on Fox news. Notice at the end of the article there is a section called "related stories". One particular story reads "Tasers can be instrument of torture, says UN"

"An enterprising Arizona woman has redefined the Tupperware party paradigm for the 21st century, and is hosting girlie get-togethers where security-conscious women can get to grips with the US's fave non-lethal lethal weapon - the Taser.
...
Shafman explained: "I felt that we have Tupperware parties and candle parties to protect our food and house, so why not have a Taser party to learn how to protect our lives and bodies?"

Her customers agree. Debi McMahon, who attended the first Taser party in Scottsdale, described herself as "excited" by the electrifying Taser experience. She said: "I feel like I'm 6 feet tall and 250 pounds. I'm going to buy one for my mom. It's going to be her 81st birthday present."

YouTube: DV Against Men in England Encouraged

MrReality · 17 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This commercial promotes violence against men.

How long will society support the misandric double standard where violence against women is unacceptable, yet violence against men is promoted daily?

Misandrist Filmmaker Eli Roth Strikes Again

xtrnl · 18 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I must warn all the readers that this post will likely disturb you. The first Hostel was bad enough, but sadly, a sequel was made (which was banned in New Zealand and not even for the reasons I mention) which pushes misandry to it's limits and then some. Though the trailer leads you to believe that women will be the main victims of this movie, it is actually three men who suffer the worst fates; one is eaten alive by dogs, another is eaten alive by a cannibal, and the third is sexually mutilated at the hands of one of the would-be victims, completely uncensored. Had it shown a woman being mutilated sexually, it would have never made it into theatres. In a suprising twist, a poster for the movie depicting the body of a dead woman was pulled because it was deemed "misogynistic", yet the movie itself, horrifically misandric, was still allowed to be released. Can anybody else think of a greater example of a double standard in movies? We need to work together to get this filth banned!

Police say woman groped Santa

Matt · 18 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Is nothing sacred? Story here. What's unusual is that she's even being charged. That's progress. Excerpt:

'DANBURY -- A 33-year-old woman was charged with fourth-degree sexual assault Saturday after allegedly groping a man playing Santa Claus at the Danbury Fair mall.

Sandrama Lamy, 33, of Danbury, is charged with fourth-degree sexual assault, according to Danbury Detective Lt. Thomas Michael.'

Sweden’s Army Castrates Its Lion Symbol

Roy · 18 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Protests from female soldiers have led to the Swedish military removing the penis of a heraldic lion depicted on the Nordic Battlegroup's coat of arms.
...
"We were given the task of making sure the willy disappeared," Christian Braunstein from the army's 'tradition commission' said.
...
"The army lacks knowledge about heraldry. Once upon a time coats of arms containing lions without genitalia were given to those who betrayed the Crown," said Sagerlund.
...
"We were forced to cut the lion's willy off with the aid of a computer," he added.

The Nordic Battlegroup is one of eighteen such military groups in the European Union."

CNN discusses prostate cancer following Fogelberg's death

Matt · 18 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Video here. It's good they at least covered it. But anyone else notice no one commenting was either 1) male or 2) a medical professional?

[If that particular video isn't the one that comes up, look for it in the listing on the lower half of the page.]

Three more Duke LAX players seek justice

scottkirk · 18 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Hell hath no fury like a false rape accusation, and a Klan-type mob outside your door! Excerpt:

'RALEIGH, N.C. — Three current and former Duke lacrosse players who were not indicted in the discredited rape case have filed a lawsuit against the university, disgraced prosecutor Mike Nifong and dozens of others for inflicting emotional distress.

Ryan McFadyen, Matthew Wilson and Breck Archer also accuse the defendants of negligence, fraud and conspiracy for pursuing the case despite evidence that the allegations were false.'

Judge orders false rape accuser to pay $11 million

scottkirk · 19 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Are women starting to find that false rape accusations and big payout days are waning? Excerpt:

'Los Angeles, CA (AHN) -- Michael Flatley on Tuesday was awarded $11 million by a superior court judge who ruled early this month against a woman who accused the Irish-American dancing champion of rape.

Real estate agent Tyna Marie Robertson attempted to extort a "seven figures" sum from Flatley last year on the threat of charging him for sexual assault. When Flatley refused, Robertson filed a $33 million civil lawsuit claiming he raped her in a Las Vegas hotel room in 2002. The charges were dismissed and Flatley filed a $100 million countersuit against Robertson for extortion and defamation.'

Murderess Gets Probation

Matt · 19 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A.: "That's right. She murders her husband at gunpoint for the life insurance proceeds so she can continue her affair with a co-workers, she's convicted of first degree murder, but then she gets only probation and a fine. Genarlow Wilson gets 10 years for consensual oral sex with a 15 year old when he was 17, but this adult gets no jail time for 1st degree murder. I guess she's too pretty for jail. And she has two sons. Of course, if a father of 2 sons murdered his wife, he'd be thrown right in jail and wouldn't even get visitation."

Story here. Excerpt:

'Traci Rhode spent two days in jail and will pay $10,000 for the crime of murder.

The jury that convicted the Fort Madison, Iowa, native of killing her husband in their Brownsville home four years ago also set her free Thursday, to the delight of her lawyer and the dismay of local prosecutors.
...
It took jurors two days to deliver their guilty verdict and another three days to sentence Rhode to 10 years supervised release. Judge Ben Euresti tacked on a $10,000 fine to her punishment and she was released from the Carrizalez-Rucker Detention Center within a few hours.
...
She has maintained her innocence throughout the trial, claiming Scott Rhode shot himself in their bedroom while she showered after a morning walk.

The prosecutors counter that Traci awoke at about 5 a.m. on Oct. 15, 2003, and shot her husband with a .45-caliber handgun while he slept.'

Girl, 13, charged as sex offender and victim

ItsDan · 20 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Looks like perhaps some of the laws really are starting to affect some women. This girl (as well as her boyfriend, although thats in small print, HER victim-hood is in big print) is being charged as a sex offender, and labeled as a victim, for consensual sex with her 12 year old boyfriend. Excerpt:

"Utah Supreme Court justices acknowledged Tuesday that they were struggling to wrap their minds around the concept that a 13-year-old girl could be both an offender and a victim for the same act - in this case, having consensual sex with her 12-year-old boyfriend.

The Ogden, Utah, girl was put in this odd position because she was found guilty of violating a state law that prohibits sex with someone under age 14. She also was the victim in the case against her boyfriend, who was found guilty of the same violation by engaging in sexual activity with her.
...
"A child (victim) cannot also be a perpetrator in the exact same act," Richards said.

The Utah Supreme Court will issue a ruling later.'

Women Charged With Sexually Assaulting UNC Football Players

Matt · 21 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Nah, not possible. "Women just don't do this kind of thing!" Read it here. Excerpt:

'Hillsborough — Three UNC football players were the victims in a kidnapping, robbery and sexual assault incident involving two women, the university confirmed Thursday afternoon.

Chapel Hill police said the assault happened about 3:30 a.m. Sunday at an apartment complex in Chapel Hill where all three victims were bound with tape and then assaulted by the suspects.

...

Prosecutors said the victims met the suspects – Monique Jenice Taylor, Tnikia Monta Washington and Michael Troy Lewis – at a downtown bar and that they all went back to the victims' apartment to hang out.

Whitney said that at a certain point, Lewis was standing naked in a hallway with a knife and later put it to one of the victims' necks.

Taylor then pulled off the victim's pants, pushed him down on a bed, attempted to tie his hands with his belt and started to fondle him against his consent.

"The more that he wrestled, Mr. Lewis put his knife further, or closer, to the victim's neck," Morgan said. "He repeatedly said no, and as he continued to resist, Ms. Taylor and the codefendant, Ms. Washington, began to beat him in the face."

...

"This is a very unusual case," Gerding said. "Almost unbelievable, at first blush."

Just can't believe it, huh? Yep, yep, yep...

Women to Enjoy “Get Out of Jail Free” Card in Wisconsin

Roy · 21 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Sometime next year, La Crosse County may let all its female prisoners out of jail.

Instead of sitting behind bars, the women will be in a new community-based program ...

...using electronic home monitoring, and providing job counseling, literacy training and other programs through the YWCA.

“It’s a better way than locking them up,” said Supervisor Jill Billings.

Some questioned how the county could possibly go without a jail for women.
...
Keith Belzer, a criminal defense attorney, said in 15 years he’s never represented a woman who was put in jail because she’s dangerous. Belzer said women are almost always in the system “because of some kind of relationship with a man.”'

Clinton's "World-class genius" comments spark riotous gales of laughter

Matt · 21 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Yes, read it here. Bill Clinton is quoted as saying:

'"The reason she ought to be president, over and above her vision and her plans is that she has proven in every position she has ever had in life, whether it was in elected office or not, that she is a world-class genius in making positive changes in other people's lives," he said.'

"World-class genius". Just ask the people of upstate New York whom she supposedly represents what they think of her. First project she undertook after getting elected was to plan for running for the presidency. "World-class" indeed.

Detectives: Wife gave kids ear plugs before Bravest husband slay

anthony · 21 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

This story was on the front page of The New York Daily News morning print edition. Usually these types of stories are buried on page 52. Excerpt:

"Investigators believe the wife of a slain FDNY fire marshal gave her daughters earplugs so they would sleep while she allegedly pumped three bullets into her husband, sources said Thursday.
...
Detectives believe she used the two hours between the shooting and the 911 call to clean up the scene, put a blanket over her husband's head and place the murder weapon - the marshal's service revolver - back on a shelf."
...
Investigators are awaiting test results on blood found under Janet Mercereau's fingernails. She told detectives it was her menstrual blood, a source said.

Janet Mercereau filed for divorce last year only to stop the proceedings months later, officials said. She told detectives her husband was abusive and that she took out an order of protection against him last year."

Hillary: Deadbeat Politics Comes Home

anthony · 21 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"The New York Daily News reports that Hillary's youngest brother, Anthony Rodham, is a deadbeat to the tune of $158,000 in child support, alimony, and interest. It is known that Rodham is "cash strapped", as is customary in the majority of feminist-styled "deadbeat dad" cases.

Anthony married the daughter of radical-feminist legislator Barbara Boxer. Needless to say, a marriage made in pink hell will probably also end that way.

Perhaps Democrats and Republicans alike can learn important lessons from this case. For starters: feminism eats all men for dinner — regardless of party affiliation – including guys on both sides of the aisle who were stupid enough to be foot-servants or henchmen helping feminists destroy the institution of marriage. That's what men get for allowing themselves to be dragged around by the male appendage."

Rape claim was cover for cheating on husband, charges allege

anthony · 21 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A St. Paul psychologist who claimed she was raped by a patient in her office in October 2006 has instead been charged with falsely reporting a crime.

Authorities say that Jill Ajao, 41, made the rape claim to conceal an extramarital affair and to "protect herself and her family." The false report prompted a detailed police investigation, the release of a suspect sketch and surveillance photo and the sifting through of hundreds of tips, according to the criminal complaint filed last week.
...
"It's extremely rare. It's rare because we don't want victims not to report" a crime, he said. "But it's very clear that this young woman was not sexually assaulted. And given the fear that she created in our community, we felt that this action was necessary."

Movie: 'Antwoine Fisher' sheds light on abusive women

MrReality · 22 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The movie Antwoine Fisher is nearly six years old -- it came out in 2002 -- but I believe it to be relevant to men's rights due to it's content.

The film is a true story about a young black boy that was mentally and physically abused by two black women. It was directed by Denzel Washington who stars in the film as Fisher's psychiatrist. Although the movie received some excellent reviews it was never as widely promoted as the scores of fictitious films that promote "women" as victims. You would think that a film that showcases and actual account of abuse against a young boy would have been promoted better.

To the contrary the film was criticized by a few shoddy comedians for its factual content. Rather than being yet another fictional feminist-inspired film about some woman getting raped; this film actually revealed how abusive some women really are towards young male children. It also shows the headjobs these women do on a young man's sense of self-worth at an early age.

The film exposed something society refuses to accept: women are abusive and can (and do) psychologically cripple young men with misandry. No wonder a handful of pop-culture pundits hated the film; it tells the truth.

The Pink Bible – The Huntress Mentality Exposed

Roy · 22 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Came across this amazingly honest "how-to-snag-a-husband" manual called "The Pink Bible". The authoress is a hot Mormon chick who's maybe a bit too candid.

Excerpt:

"The seasoned huntress can afford to be selective. There are many fish in the sea, but very few are keepers. ... Some guidelines:

* Good looks are not the only qualification for a trophy husband. Do not forget popularity, money, clothes, and car.
* Nerdy men can be a pain, but they are easy to catch and will usually support you.
* Avoid fixating on how much money a guy has. Devote equal attention to his earning potential and the economic status of his family.
* Only let him see you at your best. Keep your real personality hidden.
* Never complain, and he'll assume nothing bothers you.
* Never act sad, and he'll imagine you're always happy.
* Never mention your ambitions, and he'll figure you're a pushover.

By the time he discovers it was all a mirage, it will be too late."

Clinton makes closing argument to women

anthony · 22 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Does Hillary realize men also vote? Her "vote for me because I'm a woman theme" and ignoring men is insulting. Excerpt:

"With daughter Chelsea and mother Dorothy Rodham in tow, Clinton's four-event schedule highlighted what could be a history-making nomination. As her campaign released a list of 3,500 female supporters, she said there are too many challenges facing working mothers.

"We put so many burdens on families trying to do the right thing, trying to take care of their families," Clinton said."

Female Teacher Admits to Sex With 16-Year-Old Female Student

Matt · 22 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

News video clip here.

Caption reads: "A high school teacher and coach admitted to having a sexual relationship with a female student who moved in with her after graduation. The girl -- now 20 -- was 16 years old at the time the relationship began."

Mary Winkler's right to visit kids upheld

anthony · 22 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The Tennessee Supreme Court on Wednesday refused to modify or overturn a lower court's ruling allowing Mary Winkler, convicted of killing her minister husband, visitation rights with the couple's three daughters."
...
In September, a lower court granted Winkler visitation with her daughters pending the outcome of the custody battle. The court specified the visits be supervised by a guardian ad litem appointed to represent the children's interests and supervised by members of the couple Winkler is living with or by her sister. A subsequent appeal by the grandparents was denied, leading to their Supreme Court appeal."

Sudden Divorce Syndrome

anthony · 22 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Things turned sh---- very fast. His wife took out a temporary restraining order, accusing him of attempting to kidnap their youngest son. The claim was never proved in court. Then, with the aid of some high-priced lawyers, she extracted from him a whopping $50,000 a month — a full 75 percent of his monthly income. Barred from the house, he was not allowed regular access to the office he used to generate that income. (On the few times he was permitted inside, his wife did not let him use the bathroom. She insisted that he go outside in the woods.) "My lawyer kept telling her lawyers, 'You're killing the Golden Goose,'" recalls Paul. "But they didn't care."
...
Oftentimes, men have a divorce sprung on them in midlife, when their kids are more self-sufficient and they've finally started to think they were over the hump. Like Martin Paul, they could start to relax. But that's exactly the time of life when the instance of divorce begins to swell (another occurs shortly after marriage). Joe Cordell, of the law firm Cordell and Cordell, which specializes in representing men in domestic cases, attributes this to wives deciding as they approach age 40 that it's now or never for getting back into the marriage market. It's the same phenomenon as rich guys trading in their long-time partners for trophy wives. Only it's the women who are shedding men."

Book: "Female Serial Killers: How and why women become monsters"

MrReality · 22 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

The book is listed on Amazon here.

'Book Description: "The first book of its kind-photographs included.

Mothers, daughters, sisters and grandmothers-fiendish killers all.

Society is conditioned to think of murderers and predators as men, but in this fascinating book, Peter Vronsky exposes and investigates the phenomenon of women who kill-and the political, economic, social, and sexual implications.'

Wife stabs husband because he opened a Christmas gift early

ItsDan · 23 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here:

'Misty Johnson, 34, was arrested and charged with aggravated assault and battery, a felony, and misdemeanor domestic battery. Her husband, Shawn Fay Johnson, 34, was treated at a hospital for a wound to the chest, police said.

Misty Johnson made an initial court appearance Thursday in which she requested a court-appointed attorney, authorities said. She was released after posting bail, which was set at $7,500.'

Harry's News: 'Spin Sisters' How the Media Sells Misery to Women

MrReality · 24 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Myrna Blyth's book Spin Sisters reveals how a crusading group of bitter women in control continously sell fear and misery to other women.

An excerpt from the article: "Throughout the 1990s, women's magazines became focused less on fashion and more on features about violence against women and children, "even though crime statistics were plummeting across the country," Myrna Blyth notes in "Spin Sisters: How the Women of the Media Sell Unhappiness and Liberalism to the Women of America."

Research studies of women's magazines such as Cosmo, Family Circle, Good Housekeeping, Glamour, Marie Claire, Redbook, Vogue, Woman's Day and Ladies Home Journal show that during that decade stories and cover lines that touched on social issues and victimization skyrocketed.

"In almost all of the stories, the message was the same: We have a big problem. It's scary and could affect any woman or her children. … we need government action, and we need it now!"

Blyth says that a major tool of the media is to grossly exaggerate the challenges facing ordinary women as far more difficult and even tragic than they really are to make a political point.

This was a technique employed even by the Clinton administration. Blyth told NewsMax.com that Bill Clinton's team had something called the "Redbook Strategy," purportedly to reach all those so-called soccer moms.

The networks began to mimic the magazines, writes Blyth, with "hyped-up stories of murder and mayhem, usually at the hands of abusive husbands or boyfriends, evil corporations, or incompetent doctors. It could be you!"

Television executive and "20/20" creator Av Westin, which helped pioneer many news magazine shows, told Blyth: "We started every story with a victim. That's what we said. We need a victim. Find me the victim."

Blyth urges readers to notice that shows such as "48 hours" and "Dateline NBC" "all have the same format: high volume on emotions, low volume on facts … because they all want you to feel afraid."

Deathtime

And then, of course, there's the "mother network of all victim television": Lifetime Television Network for Women, a forerunner of "Sex and the City," whose programs tell women that "all men are unfaithful rats, abusive monsters, dishonest scumbags, or all of the above." Women, however, are "ubervictims.""

"No man is an island"

anthony · 25 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"There is only one scenario that would permit the female race to carve out a future in which men are not as essential as women to the procreation and nurturing of children. That would be if men themselves were robot machines, unaffected by the loss of connection to humanity's essential means of regeneration, untouched by the loss of a role at the very core of human existence. But thankfully, that scenario is not available.

It's time for us all -but particularly women in this case - to join up the dots. The very men that we are seeking to disempower are the dear sons of the women we fought to empower all those years back. Excluding men can only lead to more alienated, disconnected, macho behaviour and violence. It's time for those women that can empathise, include and nurture, to do just that."

Sydney Herald Blog: "Man Haters"

anthony · 25 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Ask ten people on the street what the opposite of misogyny is and eight will probably say "polygamy" or "trigonometry"; in fact the term for a hatred of men is "misandry" and it's so rarely used Microsoft Word's spell check doesn't even recognise that combination of letters (go and try it, I'll wait.)

The fact is, if you were to apply the same criteria to misandry that some feminists use for misogyny and its "pervasiveness" in Western culture, you couldn't turn on your TV, open a newspaper or attend a hens night without being swamped by our "hatred for men".'

Rudov on Christmas: "Women get Diamonds, Men get the Shaft"

MrReality · 25 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Watch the video.

The holiday is here and you can't go half an hour without seeing a commercial about how men should be buying women's affection and how the woman should be sitting back simply "receiving gifts." Jewelers -- and the female-controlled media -- spend millions to advertise the "diamonds are a girl's best friend" ideology that most men fall victim to.

The misandrist, capitalist corporations have accidentally exposed the bleak reality that women -- and the men that pander to them -- have turned modern day relationships into nothing more than a transaction between a prostitute and her customer.

Lis Wiehl of course disagrees, as you will see in the video. Her position is pretty weak as always. Marc Rudov wipes the floor with her. He even manages to win over Neil Cavuto after Lis blatantly lies and acts as if she would be happy if her husband (i.e. Slave) only bought her "slippers" only to go back and say she would be angry if that was all her male doormat bought her. Pathetic.

Coming To A Theatre Near You: Feminist Torture Movie

anthony · 26 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Read it here.

Watch the trailer for a feminist torture movie opening on January 18. The movie is called "Teeth".

Yahoo Movie description:

"High school student Dawn works hard at suppressing her budding sexuality by being the local chastity group's most active participant. Her task is made even more difficult by her bad boy stepbrother Brad's increasingly provocative behavior at home. A stranger to her own body, innocent Dawn discovers she has a toothed vagina when she becomes the object of violence. As she struggles to comprehend her anatomical uniqueness, Dawn experiences both the pitfalls and the power of being a living example of the vagina dentata myth."

Study: Black Misandry on Historically White Campuses

MrReality · 27 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

"Assume the Position . . . You Fit the Description"

A new study reveals hatred towards black men both on and off of the college campus. The study also concludes that "black misandry" -- wherein black men experience discrimination simply because they are black men -- is more hostile than that directed at other groups.

The study states: "The present study examines the experiences of 36 Black male students, in focus group interviews, enrolled at Harvard University; Michigan State University; University of California, Berkeley; University of Illinois; and the University of Michigan. Two themes emerged: (a) anti-Black male stereotyping and marginality (or Black misandry), which caused (b) extreme hypersurveillance and control. Respondents experienced racial microaggressions in three domains: (a) campus—academic, (b) campus—social, and (c) campus—public spaces. Black males are stereotyped and placed under increased surveillance by community and local policing tactics on and off campus."

The title of this story was gleaned from this related article.

Men Are Disposable, Psychology Today Cover Shows

discover1 · 27 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Cover graphic here. Article here.

Here is the letter I sent Psychology Today about the December cover (their letter submission form is here):

"Dear Editor,

The December cover was blatantly sexist and portrayed men as disposable objects. It showed a woman who was proud of herself for disposing of a man. Because the man was lying on the ground after falling, it implied that violence against men is not only acceptable, but something desirable.

Perhaps you think I lack a sense of humor? My sense of humor in these matters has steadily declined as I've become aware of the perfuse portrayal of men as buffoons, lazy bums, disposable objects, and objects of violence in the media. Many of these are supposed to be funny. Such portrayals of women would never be tolerated, nor should they be.

As a card carrying member of the ACLU, I have a strong commitment to equality. Without a doubt, your cover is sexist and offensive and degrades men. You should apologize for it--to both men and women. If you can't muster an apology, at least explain to everyone why you would think this type of sexism was acceptable for your cover."

UK Schools told to teach boys netball and dance

Anonymous · 27 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Schools have been told to encourage boys to play netball and take dance lessons in the name of equality.

Thousands of schools are being forced to ensure that pupils are more "gender balanced" as part of discrimination legislation introduced this year.

They must also ensure more girls study traditionally masculine subjects such as science, while increasing numbers of boys take options such as drama or dance..."

...Mick Brookes, the general secretary of the National Association of Head Teachers, said: "It doesn't make any sense to promote things to boys that they don't want to do, simply so you can tick a box on a form."'

Gendered Justice - Man Charged with Fetal Homicide Faces Life in Prison

Roy · 27 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Wisconsin man accused of causing his pregnant girlfriend's abortion by spiking her drink with RU-486 (the "morning after" pill) is being prosecuted under the Wisconsin fetal homicide law that classifies unborn children as potential crime victims.
...
"All preborn children deserve equal protection under the law, without exception," she added. "Ironically, under Wisconsin law, if the woman had taken RU-486 by her own hand, there could be no charges. God willing, more law enforcement officials will work to protect the lives of preborn children in our state, wanted or unwanted." '

Wisconsin is one of 37 states with a "fetal homicide" law. Under the 1998 law, anyone who attacks a pregnant woman and injures or kills her fetus could face life in prison.

Men say wives use India's pro-women laws to torment them

Matt · 27 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

'EVERY Saturday evening, a group of male victims meets outside a courthouse here to swap stories about vicious wives tormenting them under India's pro-women laws.

The men, members of the Save Indian Family Foundation, believe they have been at the receiving end of vengeful women for long enough and are campaigning for "men's rights".

At the last weekly support meeting, Avinash Datta, 32, related how his wife threatened to have him and his elderly mother thrown into jail by falsely accusing him of demanding more dowry after their marriage two years ago.'

Melbourne Community Consultation Event with Elizabeth Broderick, Sex Discrimination Commissioner

Matt · 27 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Via Greg Andresen:

MELBOURNE COMMUNITY CONSULTATION EVENT

With Elizabeth Broderick, Sex Discrimination Commissioner and Commissioner responsible for Age Discrimination

Have your say on building a fair and equal society for women and men in Australia.

The Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission (HREOC) and the Victorian Equal Opportunity and Human Rights Commission invite you join HREOC's new Sex Discrimination Commissioner and Commissioner responsible for Age Discrimination, Elizabeth Broderick, for a community consultation.

This consultation is part of Commissioner Broderick's national Listening Tour. The Listening Tour is an opportunity for people all over Australia to make their voices heard on the issues that matter to them.

Thursday 24th January 2008
Victorian Equal Opportunity and Human Rights Commission
Level 3, 380 Lonsdale Street, Melbourne, Victoria
9.30 am - 11.30 am
RSVP by Monday 21 January to Virginia McKay on 02 9284 9861 or email virginiamckay-at-humanrights.gov.au

HREOC have established three female-focused themes for the tour:

* economic independence for women
* work and family balance across the life cycle, and
* freedom from discrimination, harassment and violence

Discussion of other issues will also be welcome. Information collected from this consultation will be used to inform the agenda for the Commissioner's 5 year term.

We would urge anyone who cares about men's and boys' health and wellbeing to come along to these events to remind the new Commissioner that her responsibilities cover two sexes!

We would encourage you to make some of the following points (for a bit of background information on men and work-life balance click here (.pdf file)):

- Males have much higher illness, injury, accident and death rates and die 5 years earlier than females, yet research funding for male health is less than one-third of that for female health
- Males suicide at almost four times the rate of females. More males kill themselves each year than the entire Australian road toll
- More than twice as many males as females experience work-related injuries and illnesses, and over ninety percent of work-related deaths are males
- Young men are three times as likely as young women to be victims of violence, however, there are no public health campaigns to address this very serious issue
- Men are also victims of intimate partner abuse, however, there are no support services for these men, nor treatment services for abusive women
- Boys in Australia are much more likely to drop out of school than girls. In NSW, the difference between boys' and girls' average Tertiary Entrance Rank is almost 20%. Males currently make up just 37% of university

graduates
- In Australia today, only women have reproductive rights. Upon becoming pregnant, a woman can choose to have the baby, or have an abortion, or put the baby up for adoption. A man has no choice whether to become a father or even to be notified that he has become a father
- Men are more likely to be convicted and receive longer sentences for the same crimes, compared to their female counterparts
- Following family court proceedings, children are far more likely to be given little or no time with their father than they are with their mother
- The current inequitable parental leave schemes, favouring mothers, reinforce fathers in the traditional 'breadwinner' role rather than supporting them as being 'hands-on' dads (which all the research shows gives better outcomes for children and their parents)
- Australian women are responsible for spending 90 cents in every household dollar

Please circulate this email and the attached, printable flyer, to your contacts in or near Melbourne. You can also download a copy from here (.pdf file).

More information about how to contribute to the Listening Tour will be posted at www.humanrights.gov.au in coming weeks, along with details of other events as the HREOC team make their way around the country. Can't make it to the consultation? Please post your thoughts on HREOCs online blog.

Kind regards

Greg

Essay: Feminism is a society killer

MrReality · 27 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

An excerpt from the article: "Over the past several decades, feminist leaders like the late Betty Friedan, who was a founder of the National Organization for Women, and Gloria Steinem of Ms. magazine fame have decried the roles of women as mothers and housewives, suggesting they are forms of sexual exploitation. The modern feminist movement, as a result, has placed a higher value on women's place in the working world -- and its influence has had far-reaching consequences.

For example, Joseph D'Agostino, vice president for communications at the Population Research Institute, sees feminism's influence on nations' birth rates. He notes that modern societies now are organized around economic production, not the production of the next generation of human beings. The result? D'Agostino says feminism "destroys" every single society it touches.

"It is the most socially destructive movement perhaps in the history of the world -- and I mean that in the scientific sense," he emphasizes. "Every single culture, every single nation that's adopted feminism [as a dominant philosophy] is now dying out. Feminism means death.""

Discrimination in a 'Saudi 'hood'

Anonymous · 28 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

We need to fight for equality of everyone, and MRAs know that better than anyone else.

It's saddening, then, to see the rules put in place that limit women's freedoms in some countries. It's equally saddening when men's freedoms are limited. Add to that the burdens of legal responsibilities solely put upon men in many countries, and the perception from the West that only women are oppressed, and you have the perfect storm.

Western women and men speak out for women's rights in other countries. They complain that women can't vote, that women can't drive, and women can't leave the house without a man. I always have had a great deal of sympathy for those women, and I continue to, but this Letter of the Day in the National Post opened my eyes to burdens that men suffer in those countries. We only hear one side of the story.

Letter of the Day in the National Post here.

Excerpts:
- "[Anne Applebaum] laments that Saudi women still cannot vote. True enough. But she omits the important fact that Saudi men cannot vote either."
- "[She] is correct, at least, that Saudi women are not allowed to drive. But to be fair, she should also have noted that Saudi women have rights not accorded to Saudi men -- like the legal right to be supported by their nearest male relative"
- "Most parks are designated "for women and children only"; no dogs or men allowed. On the buses, the men must sit in the back; women sit where they like. Men must surrender their seats to women."

National Fatherhood Summit Jan. 4, 2008: Press Release

Matt · 28 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

National Fatherhood Summit
Jan. 4th 2008 Grand Rapids, Michigan
Grand Rapids, Michigan - Release Date: 12/28/07

2008 National Fatherhood Summit - Jan 4th 2008 - 8:30am-4:30pm

Location: Abundant Life Ministries, 1725 Division SE, Grand Rapids, MI 49503

Contact Information: Minister Ronald Smith 616-301-1515

Numerous elected officials, authors, religious leaders, family preservation organizations, experts, advocates and a Michigan District Court Judge will be speaking at this historic event!

The Jan 4th 2008 National Fatherhood Summit will bring together husbands, wives, mothers, fathers and grandparents in an effort to begin the New Year recognizing the need for repair of fatherhood nationwide. The 2008 National Fatherhood Summit is the first event leading up to the 2nd Annual Family Preservation Festival which is to take place on August 15th-17th 2008 at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C.

SPEAKERS (10am-12pm)
Judge Willie Lipscomb 36th District Court Detroit
Edward Bartlett - RADAR
Carol Rhodes - Author "FOC Enemy of the Family"
Cmdr. James Semerad - Dads and Moms of Michigan
Apostle Arthur Bailey - Abundant Life Ministries
Bishop W. Durham - Families for Justice and Equality
Robert Pedersen - Best Life Magazine's National Hero Dad Runner-Up Winner & Equal Parenting Bike Trek Cyclist
Mike McCormick - ACFC
Dr. Stephen Walker - ACFC
Rev. Edward Pinkney - BANCO
Lary Holland - Get off the Bench
Tony Taylor - Dads Custody Support Group
Bessie Hudgins - Three Sides to Every Story, Inc
Minister Ronald Smith - Children Need Both Parents, Inc
Mr. Sal Frasca
Representative Rick Jones Judicial Committee
Representative Tom Pearce - Child and Family Services Committee Representative Jack Hoogendyk Child and Family Services Committee
Senator Mark Jansen
Representative Glenn Steil Child and Family Services Committee
Representative Robert Dean Co Chair Child and Family Services Committee
Dr. Michael Ross - Family Rights Coalition
Robin Denison - Parental Alienation Awareness Organization
Torm Howse - United Civil Rights Councils of America
Alicia Crowe, Esq. & Author "Real Dads Stand Up" TENTATIVE SPEAKERS
Dr. Olu Shabazz
"Possible Address Via Taped Interview"
Dr. Linda Neilsen - President of ACFC & Author "Embracing your Father"

AGENDA
January 3rd Registration and Fellowship 3:00 PM - 8:00 PM
January 4th Agenda:
8:30 AM - 9:30 AM - Prayer Breakfast
10:00 AM - 12:00 PM - SPEAKERS
12:00 PM - 1:00 PM Lunch - Book Signing

1:00 PM - 3:00 PM
BREAKOUT SESSIONS
Domestic Violence Law Reform
501(c)(3) instructions - Organizing Medication of Children
Spiritual Aspect of Fatherhood
Title IV-D
Parental Alienation
Family Preservation and Reconciliation Act

3:00 - 4:30 PM
PRAYER - FELLOWSHIP - UNITY

Sponsored By
Children Need Both Parents - an ACFC affiliate
Dads and Moms of Michigan - an ACFC affiliate Abundant Life Ministries

UK: Nurseries are told playing with toy guns is good for boys

ItsDan · 28 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

I find this to be very encouraging news. Someone is actually looking at how certain interactions ACTUALLY affect boys, and not just making assumptions based off of some notion of political correctness. Article here.

'Playing with toy weapons helps the development of young boys, according to new Government advice to nurseries and playgroups.

Staff have been told they must resist their "natural instinct" to stop boys using pretend weapons such as guns or light sabres in games with other toddlers.

Fantasy play involving weapons and superheroes allows healthy and safe risk-taking and can also make learning more appealing, says the guidance.'

Police Using Topless Sunbathers to Lure Men in Parks

Matt · 28 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Not content to arrest men for wearing speedos in a McDonald's, law enforcement now has to start luring them into sexual situations in parks and arrest them. Story here. Excerpt:

'Robin Garrison, an off-duty 42-year-old firefighter, was walking in Berliner Park in Columbus, Ohio, in May when he saw a woman sunbathing topless under a tree.

...

Eventually, she asked to see Garrison's penis; he unzipped his pants and complied.

Seconds later, undercover police officers pulled up in a van and arrested Garrison; he was later charged with public indecency, a misdemeanor, based on video footage taken by cops who were targeting men having sex or masturbating in the park. While topless sunbathing is legal in the city's parks, exposing more than that is against the law.

...

At Garrison's trial, his attorney argued that it was a case of entrapment. "Columbus police utilized this topless woman to snare this man," said Sam Shamansky. "He sees her day after day. He's not some seedy pervert."

The argument failed to sway a Franklin County Municipal Court jury that found Garrison guilty of public indecency last month. He was ordered to stay away from the park, placed on a year's probation and fined $250. Currently, Garrison remains on paid desk duty while the fire department conducts an internal investigation into his behavior.'

Middle-aged Princess Laments: Feminism Ruined My Life

Roy · 29 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

A confessional essay truly worth reading. Excerpt:

"I had become a fat, unpleasant, middle-aged princess because I had refused to grow up. Sure, I had taken on grown-up responsibilities (marriage, career, house, motherhood) but at the core of my psyche was a 13-year-old girl who stamped her feet and whined when she didn't get her way. Of course, I had stopped whining years ago but I simply replaced the whining with emotional manipulation and ornery bitchiness. No wonder I was still single and my two teenaged sons spent all their free time with their father... being a dilettante feminist, I swallowed the standard line that women can have it all... I had lots of blame to dole out. There was no way that the current state of my life was the result of my decisions. My single girlfriends all told me that, many, many times over copious cocktails in sundry singles bars. I read a lot of women's magazines and the advice I got said pretty much the same thing - a woman is never to blame... Looking back in brutal honesty, I was a stark, raving bitch."

Kenya: First Lady Mama Lucy Slaps a Male Staffer

Anonymous · 29 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

And the story defends her actions! Excerpt:

"When it comes to Mama Lucy, Kenyans have a male chauvinist view of how a First Lady should behave. Nobody ever asks themselves why she slapped Musyimi. Nobody asks why Mama Lucy visited the offices of the Nation Media. Do we know what pressures she works under? Why are we against her freedom of expression? Don't we as human beings have the right to be angry?

THERE WERE ALWAYS ALLEGATIONS that during his rule, Kenyatta whipped his ministers and yet that was never an issue. We do not recall President Kibaki being criticised by liberally using the word pumbavu (fool). When will these double standards end?

It is arguable that when women beat up men they are doing so in self-defence. The collective violence that is visited on mothers, sisters, daughters and wives must be resisted. Mama Lucy has been a victim of violence by men and she has the right to defend herself."

LaCrosse, WI Gets Feedback from MRAs

Roy · 29 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

If you read nothing else to celebrate the New Year, check out this link.

The MR movement turned out in force with letters to the editor of the newspaper in LaCrosse, Wisconsin -- interrogating to the max the misandrist and gender-biased policy of letting women out of jail... because they are women.

Really read these dozens of posts and take some heart that MRAs are starting to hit the mainstream radar screen!

(And BTW -- a lot of you MANN guys are "guilty" of sending in your comments, because I have parsed your writing styles and can identify you at any airport.)

Good work!

Missing woman returns after $250,000 Search

Matt · 29 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'CHICAGO - Family members arranged a meeting at an undisclosed location between investigators and a married woman from Illinois whose disappearance on Christmas Eve prompted a $250,000 search.
...
Cell phone records indicated Solanki had left voluntarily with a 23-year-old male friend from California, authorities said earlier Friday. Mayberry did not know whether the friend, Karan C. Jani, had returned with Solanki.
...
Solanki's husband, who lived with his wife near suburban Des Plaines, was not aware of her friendship with Jani, Cook County Sheriff Tom Dart told reporters.

...
Dart said authorities did not know how Solanki and Jani met, but the cell phone records suggested they had been in contact for about a year.

Anu Solanki called a friend Monday afternoon and said four men were following her, then called back saying they were not following her anymore, relatives have said.

Jani placed several cell phone calls to Anu Solanki while she was at work at a Wheeling hotel Monday morning, the sheriff's office said in a statement. Solanki may have met Jani a short time later that day, then left the area with him, officials said.'

Rudov: "Hello Kitty for Boys Will Feminize Them"

MrReality · 30 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Rudov destroys yet another woman's pathetic, misandric argument on Your World with Neil Cavuto. In a debate over women wanting boys to wear "Hello Kitty" shirts -- which were originally made for girls -- and play with dolls.

According "to the woman taking part in the debate" boys are extremely violent and playing with girls toys, wearing girls clothes -- and basically becoming girls in everyway possible -- will make them "less violent."

At one point the woman asks for proof that mothers are more violent towards their children than men. Mr. Rudov cites a government statistic that supports his claim and as always the woman then dismisses it as not being relevant.

I suppose even the network got tired of hearing her fraudulent, pathetic, biased, pro-woman argument because the station cut her off towards the end of the debate!

Also, is that Lis Wiehl "hosting" the debate?

Watch the video.

Happy Holidays Include Fathers

MR · 31 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Happy Holidays Include Fathers

I had a bit of a grinch like attitude earlier in the month as I contemplated skipping this month's rally, and pursuing the usual holiday merriment instead, but a little voice in my ear kept whispering that a rally for Dads was needed this month - more than ever. I'm not sure exactly what the suicide statistics are for men and Fathers in the month of December, but given the disgracefully high numbers for a typical year, and the disgraceful lack of care from America, I couldn't in good conscious let this month go by without saying to the world, "Dads, you're more than wallets. You're a blessing, and a gift, for your children, at the holidays and all throughout the year."

Boys and books: How do you get them together?

anthony · 31 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'According to Education Minnesota, the teachers' union, the percentage of male teachers in Minnesota has decreased from 43 percent in 1980 to 29 percent in 2005. That's why finding books for boys is a problem.

Female teachers and librarians don't gravitate toward the books that boys like, which Baxter says are about "disasters, wild animals, spies, machines, dinosaurs, and creepy-crawly things."

Showing boys male reading role models also helps catch boys' interest. In Apple Valley, two female teachers host the book club, but each month a different male teacher reads to the club.

Theresa Back, one of the female teachers that started the club, said that boys interact well with the male leaders. "We just didn't have the 'boy connection,' " she said about the female teachers.'

Judge declares mistrial in castration case

anthony · 31 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'LILLINGTON — A judge has declared a mistrial this afternoon in the case of a Harnett County woman who was accused of castrating a man with her fingernails at a Christmas party last year.
...
The foreman indicated this afternoon that the jury was split 8 to 4 on two charges: malicious castration and assault with intent to inflict serious injury.

According to juror Harvey “Bart” Bartlett of Coats, four jurors favored not guilty and eight voted for guilty. He was among the four who believed Dawson was not guilty.
...
Defendant Rebecca Dawson is accused of using her fingernails to tear off a man’s scrotum at a Christmas party last year. In closing arguments Friday, the defense said Dawson tore Kevin Russ’ scrotum in self defense. But the prosecutor said Russ was the victim, and described the injury as a vicious attack from an angry, drunken woman.'

FYI: The Jury was comprised of eight women, four men and one female alternate.

Case of thrown baby heads to trial

anthony · 31 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A mother accused of throwing her young son off a balcony three months ago waived her right to a preliminary hearing Thursday, sending the case to trial.

Rita Sativa Kraft's 18-month-old son Connor suffered multiple skull and facial fractures after he fell 21 feet off a balcony at the family's Lompico home on the morning of Sept. 12, according to authorities. The boy, who suffered significant brain trauma, was unconscious and not breathing after landing on the packed dirt below the balcony.

He was resuscitated by a housemate who had medical training, then airlifted to a trauma center over the hill.

The child has since been released from the hospital into his father's custody. Doctors say it may be some time before the full extent of his brain injuries are known.
...
Kraft's attorney, Jon Minsloff, previously told the Sentinel his client was suffering from postpartum depression when the incident occurred. He also told the paper that Kraft has a family history of mental illness."

District Attorney's office files formal charges against mother

anthony · 31 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Three days following the death of seven-month-old Jillian Engelman, the Fresno County District Attorney's office files formal charges on her mother, Lisa May Brown...

Brown is now facing one count of murder and one count of child abuse, causing death.

Both counts carry a minimum sentence of 25 years to life.

According to the search warrant served to brown on Monday, Brown told officials that she drowned the baby because it was possessed by demons and that the devil told her to do it.
...
Hickey says, "More often than not, women who kill their babies like this usually suffer from some form of mental illness."

Hickey says this case reminds him of Texas mother, Andrea Yates, who, back in 2001, was charged with drowning all five of her children in a bathtub.

Hickey says, "It's not uncommon for someone to come down with postpartum blues, have very deep depression, have deep psychotic breaks, have hallucinations, hear voices sometimes."

ACFC Announces New President

scottkirk · 31 December 2007 · Archived copy · Original

Announcement here. Excerpt:

'The most significant change going into 2008 takes place with respect to the office of ACFC President. As many of you know, Dr. Stephen Baskerville has returned to academic pursuits, taking a position as associate professor of government at Patrick Henry College in Virginia.
...
Our search committee members considered and discussed the position with several candidates and are pleased to announce ACFC's new President for 2008, Dr. Linda Nielsen.

For the past two decades Dr. Nielsen has been a proponent of Shared Parenting. She is a tenured faculty member at Wake Forest University in North Carolina. Her background as a social researcher combined with her training as an adolescent psychologist, make hers a voice which cannot be ignored in the expanding debate over the need for Shared Parenting and the important necessity of a Fathers contribution in child rearing.

UA Law Student, Beauty Queen Kidnaps & Tortures Boyfriend

Roy · 1 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A University of Arizona law school student and beauty queen has been indicted on charges that she and three others held her former boyfriend captive for 10 hours while torturing and robbing him.

Kumari Fulbright was indicted Dec. 18 on five felony charges – armed robbery, aggravated robbery, kidnapping and two counts of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon... According to court documents, Fulbright and three men used plastic cable ties and duct tape to tie up a 24-year-old man on Dec. 8 and held him captive...'

PS – check out the several posted reader comments asking “what HE did” to provoke her!

Essay: "A crack in the glass ceiling?"

anthony · 2 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"What price equality? It's apparently always too high for those who mistakenly believe they have the most to lose. One in four Norwegian businesses allegedly face the threat of closure because they have failed to ensure that 40% of directors are female - abiding by a law passed in 2003. Business heads have had five years to meet the quota - and a great deal of change has resulted.
...
Feminism was never about women competing in a male world. It was about changing the system. Women need an income and some also need a career that's paramount in their lives just like men - but at the same time, if capitalism isn't going to thoroughly destroy all that matters, feminism has also argued that it's important to fight to make the workplace more humane, the work ethic less all-pervasive, the rewards fairer and the personal sacrifices less damaging to children and relationships."

Woman who cried ‘rape’ may have to pay back county

anthony · 2 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The San Mateo woman who will be serving 90 days in county jail for a false rape report in June may also be required to repay the county agencies that spent time and resources investigating her false claims.

On Monday, 24-year-old Karyn Adele Galila pleaded no contest to one count of filing a false police report, a misdemeanor, Chief Deputy District Attorney Steve Wagstaffe said.

She was charged with two counts of filing false reports for her initial claim and a subsequent follow-up interview with a detective and a district attorney in which she again told the rape story.
...
“Our belief is that the reason she made this false report related to family matters, trying to avoid coming up with an explanation for where she was,” Wagstaffe said.'

RADAR ALERT: In 2007 We Set the Stage for DV Reform!

Matt · 2 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

In 2007 domestic violence programs around the country continued to encourage false allegations, undermine families, force children into single-parent households, ignore the civil rights of the falsely accused, and discriminate against male victims.

And as RADAR's Special Report "Why Have Domestic Violence Programs Failed to Stop Partner Abuse?" reveals, these programs have been flatly ineffective in reducing abuse rates – and in some cases placed victims at greater risk of violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/RADARreport-Why-DV-Programs-Fail-to-Stop-Abuse.pdf

In response RADAR and the VAWA Reform Coalition continued to make the case for reform. Highlights of the year included:

1. Expansion of the VAWA Reform Coalition to about 90 organizations in 32 states: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/VAWA-Reform-Coalition-Declaration.pdf
2. Sponsorship of 5 high-profile campaigns:
   - Time to Tell the Truth about Domestic Violence (Domestic Violence Awareness Month): http://www.mediaradar.org/time_to_tell_truth.php
   - House Resolution 590: Half-Truths, Distortions, and Lies: http://www.mediaradar.org/hres590.php
   - Nifong: Tip of the Iceberg: http://www.mediaradar.org/nifong_tip_of_iceberg.php
   - Stop CEDAW/I-VAWA, Protect the Family: http://www.mediaradar.org/cedaw_ivawa.php
   - International-VAWA: Exporting Family Break-Up: http://www.mediaradar.org/international_vawa.php
3. Extensive media activities:
   - 42 Alerts: http://www.mediaradar.org/prior_alerts.php
   - 16 press releases: http://www.mediaradar.org/press_releases.php
   - Numerous interviews and op-eds: http://www.mediaradar.org/prior_headlines.php
4. Release or updating of 6 Special Reports that document the problems: http://www.mediaradar.org/radar_special_reports.php
   - Has VAWA Delivered on its Promises to Women?
   - A Culture of False Allegations: How VAWA Harms Families and Children
   - Why Have Domestic Violence Programs Failed to Stop Partner Abuse?
   - Education for Injustice
   - Justice Denied: Arrest Policies for Domestic Violence (update)
   - VAWA Programs Discriminate Against Male Victims (update)
5. Release of the Agenda for VAWA Reform: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/RADARdocument-Agenda-for-VAWA-Reform.pdf
6. Freedom of Information Act request revealing a widescale lack of services for male victims: http://www.mediaradar.org/ovw_foia_data.php
7. Major expansion of information on the RADAR website
8. Sustained lobbying presence on Capitol Hill

But 2007 was just the beginning.

2008 is a presidential election year and the candidates need to hear from everyone about the necessity to reform domestic violence laws - they especially need to know about the Agenda for VAWA Reform: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/RADARdocument-Agenda-for-VAWA-Reform.pdf

Get involved in the critical effort to protect families and children. We will make a difference in 2008.

++
Date of RADAR Release: January 2, 2008

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting
– is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

England: Victim of false rape claim must pay £12,500 for bed and board in jail

anthony · 2 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A man wrongly jailed when a woman cried rape has failed to prevent being charged £12,500 for his "board and lodging" while in prison.

Warren Blackwell, 38, spent three years in jail as a convicted sex attacker until his 'victim' was unmasked as a fantasist.

It was revealed he has been awarded £252,500 compensation for his lost years - but minus the estimated cost of his food and accommodation while behind bars."

Comment Policy Changes

Scott · 3 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The MANN comment sections have been buzzing a lot lately. Unfortunately a lot of this buzz has been the result of many personal attacks and unproductive anger.

We've seen this problem come and go in cycles in the past, but this time it seems to have become especially bad. The administrators of MANN have become concerned about this and feel it's become necessary to take a more proactive stance to try to bring the MANN comment boards out of this rut. We can't simply sit by and watch the site become little more than a place for individuals to flame and entertain each other by trying to write shock-entertainment posts. Mensactivism.org was created to be more than that, and we need to return to a reasonable level of decorum. Read More to continue...

Not only is this trend counter-productive, but it is discouraging genuinely interested parties from taking the site seriously as well as discouraging actual, substantive debate. When debates that are basically about ideas degenerate regularly and quickly into name-calling and over-use of profanity, especially targeted specifically to other posters, the value of any site is damaged.

The 'A' in MANN stands for something that is intended to be our primary goal - Activism. While we are willing to accept a certain amount of venting and frustration, the point of this site is to create a space where people can come to the realization that we can make gains for men's rights and support each other to that end.

Of the solutions we have looked into, we feel that a new policy regarding comment moderation needs to be established. From now on, new users registering with the site will be placed on moderated status, and their comment posts will need to be manually approved by a site administrator. Once a new user has demonstrated with a few posts that they are here to contribute constructively, not destructively, to the community, their account will become unmoderated.

As for existing users, we will start by warning people via email when a specific posting crosses the line in this way. You have the responsibility to check the email account you registered with on a regular basis, and if the situation doesn't improve, your account will be put into moderated status.

To date the administrators of this site have taken a very laissez-faire approach to user comments, whether they're on- or off-topic. This hasn't been working so well lately, so we've been willing to re-evaluate this policy. Likewise, if things cool down and the signal to noise ratio improves, we are willing to re-evaluate the need for this policy.

And please, let's not have any finger-pointing or accusations about "who started what" - in the end it's really irrelevant. With this post, let's start with a clean slate and get back to productive discussion and debate.

Rudov: "Chivalry is Benevolent Sexism"

MrReality · 3 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Author and Men's Rights activist Marc Rudov talks about what's wrong with chivalry and women's feeling of entitlement.

Watch the Video.

Beware of the office piranha: Male bosses warned of man-eating women who are preying on them

Anonymous · 3 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Mrs Benussi runs a large matrimonial law firm in Birmingham specialising in high-value divorce cases and has almost 30 years' experience. She said piranhas "want a highearning, high-flying, high-virility man" who will place a ring on their finger.

"Office parties are a brilliant opportunity for them to lead a colleague astray. The alcohol is flowing, they can wear sexier clothes and they just generally loosen up.

"There are women who join companies with large amounts of male employees with the sole intention of looking for a partner, and by that I mean an equity partner - one of the owners of the business."

She said that for such women, joining a large firm of accountants or solicitors can be more advantageous than signing up with a dating agency.

She warned: "A piranha will hang on for the kill and will rip any man to shreds."'

Survivor shows that breaking the cycle of violence can be done

MR · 3 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Survivor shows that breaking the cycle of violence can be done

This article says, "She wants to empower women she meets through her company and at the domestic violence center."

As this article strongly indicates, men are wasting their time seeking shelter at this taxpayer funded domestic violence shelter. It seves only women.

A more honest title for this article, IMO, would have been, "Survivor shows that breaking the cycle of violence can be done - unless you're a man."

Here is my letter to the editor, and the author (below), at these two emails addresses. I redacted my address and phone number from this post. Feel free to use whatever parts of this post you choose if you choose to send them an email, which I hope you do. It appears they limit publishing of letters to the editor at 150 words.

dnopinion@dailynews.com

jerry.berrios@dailynews.com

"Your article, "Survivor shows that breaking the cycle of violence can be done" is inaccurately and tragically worded for male victims of domestic violence.

If the author had bothered to check he would have seen that men are victims of domestic violence as often as women, with injuries often as serious, because women use knives, guns and other weapons to "level the dominant aggressor" playing field.

http://www.ncfmla.org/dv_data.html

http://www.mediaradar.org/

It is a shame that the some domestic violence shelters brag about how they serve victims of domestic violence, when in fact they sexistly refuse male victims, based on nothing more than the fact they are male. The entire domestic violence industry follows a false, and thereby corrupt, feminist ideological fantasy that all males are powerful Patriarchal oppressors of women, and thereby incapable of being domestic violence victims. How long will this fraud continue to go on at domestic violence shelters, and in the vast majority of the domestic violence industry?"

Court rules man who donated sperm not liable for child support

ItsDan · 3 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This is actually kind of significant. This isn't an anonymous donor, and most of us will be familiar with the fact that often 'friendly' donations for invitro are often not enough to establish non-liability.

The Pennsylvania Supreme Court ruled that a woman who promised a sperm donor he would not have to pay child support cannot renege on the deal.

The 3-2 decision overturns lower court rulings under which Joel L. McKiernan had been paying up to $1,500 a month to support twin boys born in August 1994 to Ivonne V. Ferguson, his former girlfriend and co-worker.

DNA wins freedom for man after 26 years

anthony · 3 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A man imprisoned since 1981 for sexual assault was freed after a judge recommended overturning his conviction.

Charles Chatman, 47, was released on his recognizance after serving nearly 27 years of a 99-year sentence. He was freed on the basis of new DNA testing that lawyers say proves his innocence and adds to Dallas County's nationally unmatched number of wrongfully convicted inmates.

Chatman became the 15th inmate from Dallas County since 2001 to be freed by DNA testing. That is more than any other county nationwide, said Natalie Roetzel of the Innocence Project of Texas, an organization of volunteers who investigate claims of wrongful conviction.

Texas leads the country in prisoners freed by DNA testing. Including Chatman, the state will have released at least 30 wrongfully convicted inmates since 2001, according to the Innocence Project."

Mother Charged After Ramming Father's Car, Running off with Child

anthony · 4 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Cincinnati police have charged a woman with child endangering after a strange incident on Tuesday afternoon.

Officers said that Danielle Kah chased after her child's father's car on Sedler Street, ramming it from behind until he stopped.

When the father stopped, police said, Kah opened the door of his car and took their 4-year-old daughter, then fled into a nearby wooded area.

Police said the child was not dressed for the freezing temperatures.

Officers were able to find Kah and her child and take them into custody. The child was not seriously hurt.

Bond for Kah was set at $2,000 on Wednesday."

New Hampshire Primary Campaign Appearances

Anonymous · 5 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The New Hampshire primary campaign appearance schedule for all of the major candidates is available here.

Contact Richard at societypmm-at-fathersandhusbands.org if you'd like to collaborate in making our concerns heard by the candidates.

Anniversary of 'Larry Summers and the feminist purges of academia' scottkirk · 5 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

A day of infamy... 3rd anniversary of 'Larry Summers and the feminist purges of Academia'! Analysis here. Excerpt:

'Unlike most religious fundamentalists, these feminists were pursuing a careerist, self-serving agenda. This cause can put money in their pockets.

Summers's suggestion—now ignominiously retracted, with groveling, Soviet-show-trial-style apologies—was that sex discrimination and the reluctance of mothers to work 80 hours a week are not the only possible explanations for gender imbalances in the math-science area. He noted that high school boys have many more of the highest math scores than girls, and suggested that this might reflect genetic differences. He also stressed the need for further research into all three possible explanations.'

Male-only aneurysm screening programme to be introduced in UK

Anonymous · 5 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The Government is poised to introduce screening for a condition which kills more than 3,000 men a year as part of its new "predict and prevent" approach to health.

Pilot projects to screen for abdominal aortic aneurysms (AAAs) will be set up this year, with national screening to follow...

...Health Secretary Alan Johnson said: "Successful prevention would mean significantly fewer early deaths, less long-term ill-health, and a reduction in health inequalities. We are doing a lot of research to assess the potential cost-effectiveness of a 'predict and prevent' approach...

...Mr Johnson said within five years he expected to have 60 centres operational around the country, covering all 270,000 men aged 65.

It will be the first male-only screening programme, for a condition which causes roughly twice as many deaths as cervical cancer for women, which has its own screening."

UK: Two out of three teachers in UK are women as men shun the classroom

Anonymous · 5 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"Fewer men are teaching in schools than at any time since records began and in one in ten primary schools there are no men on the staff at all.

More than two out of three teachers are now women, leading to fears that the kind of male role model embodied by the classic fictional creation Mr Chips has been lost to a generation of boys...

...In the space of a generation, men have gone from taking a majority of jobs in secondaries to a dwindling minority.

They now make up 43 per cent of secondary teachers, down from 49 per cent in 1996 and 54 per cent in 1986.

Experts say it is increasingly likely that a boy will go through his entire education without being taught by a man".

Picture caption:

"It is thought more men are chasing higher salaries in the City and put off teaching because of false abuse allegations"

A New Candidate for the Boycott List Emerges

xtrnl · 5 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I was recently watching television, and I couldn't help but notice a new Molson Canadian commercial. This ad has had a few predecessors, in which a man who claims that Canadians have bad taste when it comes to beer is tied up and put on an airplane, put in the path of a raging bull while holding a red flag, and wrapped in plastic wrap from head to toe, with marker marks all over his face. These ads weren't too bad, in fact, I would even consider them comical. But this new ad, in my opinion goes too far. In this new commercial, it shows the same man tied up to a hockey net. Four targets appear in the exposed corners of the net, then the caption "Take Your Shot at MolsonCanadian.ca", and a fifth target on the man's crotch appears. I rolled my eyes when I saw this, because I think it's sad that people still consider this type of thing to be comedy. Will they ever make a commercial with a woman strung up to a hockey net, with a target on her crotch? It's extremely unlikely, even though the same scenario is less painful for a woman. Looks like the old double standard monster has struck again.

Ed. note: Anyone have a link to a video of this ad?

UK: Most boys missing GCSE targets

Anonymous · 6 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"Barely a third of boys in comprehensive schools are gaining the GCSEs they need to obtain a job or stay on at school, new league tables will reveal...

...However, for boys in comprehensive schools, the proportion struggling to achieve decent results increases. Just over 62 per cent of boys in "community schools" - as they are officially known - failed to achieve the target of five A* to C grades at GCSE, including the two vital subjects.

...Many of the boys who fail to achieve good GCSEs will go on to become Neets - young people not in education, employment or training.

The number of Neets has increased to 11 per cent in the past decade - 210,000 16-to 18-year-olds. It is estimated that the army of Neets costs the taxpayer £2 billion in benefit payments, lost tax revenue and the increased likelihood of them committing crime and having health problems."

Rape Case Abandoned Due to Language Ban by Judge

Roy · 6 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Prosecutors have decided not to pursue a third trial in a sexual assault case that gained national attention because the judge barred the words "rape" and "victim" in court.

The first two trials of Pamir Safi ended in mistrials. He claimed he met Tory Bowen in a bar in October 2004 and had consensual sex with her, but she said she was too intoxicated to give consent and he knew it.
...
"To this day, I have not been able to testify truthfully in a court of law," said Bowen. "To me, that's justice denied."

...explaining the language ban, [the judge] said he would allow the term "sexual assault" to be used but not "rape" because "rape" often connotes a vicious and violent sexual assault. In Safi's case... [the judge decided] the charge was based solely on lack of consent."

So, is it safe to buy a woman a drink again on Ladies Night at the local pub?

National Fatherhood Summit - A Smashing Success

Anonymous · 7 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The Media Coverage of the 2008 National Fatherhood Summit in Grand Rapids, MI was truly impressive! Four different TV News stations, 7 Radio Stations and 6 different newspaper reporters were present at this event!
...
There were people from all over the United States! Alabama, California, Maryland, Ohio, Pennsylvania - just to name a few. Many different organizations were present at this outstanding event."

UK: Survey finds men have lost their role in society

Anonymous · 7 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"More than half of men believe the world is dominated by females and that they have lost their traditional role in society, according to recent research.
...
The research also shows that just as many women feel their work-life balance has been stretched to breaking point.
...
Men say they "feel handcuffed" by political correctness - only 33 per cent feel they can speak freely and say what they think, whereas two thirds find it safer and easier to keep their opinions to themselves."

Man Loses Job For Failing To Register For Draft: Sues Demanding Equal Protection

JVC · 7 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

In an article appearing in the Saturday January 5th, 2008 edition of the Boston Globe the story of a man being filed for failing to register for the draft appears. After working for the IRS since 1991, Michael Elgin was fired when it was discovered that he had not registered for the draft. Despite letters written on his behalf by Senators Kennedy and Kerry, and a son who completed an 18-month tour of duty in Iraq, Michael Elgin's termination by the IRS was enforced.

New MRA Web site

Matt · 7 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Congrats to MrReality! I am looking forward to seeing it grow and become another great source of news and information for MRAs. The site is http://www.wine-cellar.com/mrreality/.

India Post: "Draconian 498- a law that affects NRIs"

Matt · 7 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

'The Domestic Violence Act which was passed in 2005 at the instigation by radical feminist groups, especially the National Commission on Women, who have the quiet sponsorship of the ruling party in India. This law states that "only a woman can file a complaint against her male partner". A man who is a victim of domestic violence has no recourse under the law.

And comprehensive studies by various groups have found that women are no less abusive as men in intimate relationships - yes even in India. Giving such sweeping legal powers to women also tends to give quite a few of them the opportunity to take advantage of the law and hold men to blackmail and legal terrorism. This part of the law is nothing else but systematic legal victimization of men as it is one sided and withholds legal protection to male victims.'

Teenager is jailed over taxi rape lie

Anonymous · 8 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

A teenager who falsely accused a taxi driver of rape has been jailed after the man proved his innocence by producing a recorded conversation of her repeatedly asking him for sex.

In court she pleaded guilty to perverting the course of justice and was jailed for eight months by Judge Roger Thorn, QC, who told Campbell that her lies might have had devastating consequences. Story here.

Domestic Abuse Helpline for Men and Women Competes in "Giving Challenge"

Boy Genteel · 8 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

(from Jan Brown, director of the DAHMW)

Hello!

DAHMW is competing in America's Giving Challenge sponsored by the Case Foundation and Parade Magazine. Please help us reach our goal of being one of the 100 nonprofits with the greatest number of unique donations! The challenge ends January 31st at 3pm EST so please hurry!

Please help DAHMW by either making a donation or passing this message along to others or both if you are able. Every donation counts! Thanks!

Visit our Charity Badge and donate!

Jan Brown, Founder and Executive Director
Domestic Abuse Helpline for Men and Women
1-888-7HELPLINE (888-743-5754)
Bus: 207-683-5758
www.dahmw.org

There are people who make things happen, there are people who watch things happen, and there are people who wonder what happened. To be successful, you need to be a person who makes things happen..

Men Claim Post-abortion Syndrome: “We Had Abortions”

Roy · 9 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Is this a men’s rights issue?

"Jason Baier, 36, still longs for the child who might have been, with an intensity that bewilders him: "How can I miss something I never even held?"

His fiancee's sister told him about the abortion after it was over. Baier remembers that he cried. The next weeks and months go black. He knows he drank far too much. He and his fiancee fought until they broke up. "I hated the world," he said.

These days, he channels the grief into activism in a burgeoning movement of "post-abortive men." Abortion is usually portrayed as a woman's issue: her body, her choice, her relief or her regret. This new movement -- both political and deeply personal in nature -- contends that the pronoun is all wrong."

A Law Firm for Fathers

Anonymous · 10 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This article in the St Louis Post-Dispatch is about a law firm specializing in helping men!! Writen with a woman reporters bias, it still gets the message across. FATHERS HAVE RIGHTS! Excerpt:

'The firm's founder, Joseph Cordell of Wildwood, is quick to say he is not a political activist. But he doesn't shy from controversy, nor his belief that feminists have ruled family court.

"Exacerbating things further is the feminist movement and its shrill insistence on women's interests to the utter exclusion of the underlying merits of a given case," he writes on his personal website, fathersworld.com.'

School Refuses To Let Boy Join Cheerleading Squad

anthony · 10 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Bobby's mother filed a discrimination claim with the Kentucky Commission on Human Rights two years ago, and now a settlement has been reached.
...
[Bobby's mother]... said she has sworn statements from other parents stating the coach admitted cutting Bobby because she didn't want a boy on her team.

...the coach was also the school's human resources counselor.
...
In the settlement agreement, the school admits no wrongdoing but the commission has ordered mandatory training for the principal, teachers and coaches at the school.
...
As for the woman who cut him from the team, she is no longer the cheerleading coach."

Paglia: "Hillary without tears"

Matt · 10 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Hillary's willingness to tolerate Bill's compulsive philandering is a function of her general contempt for men. She distrusts them and feels morally superior to them. Following the pattern of her long-suffering mother, she thinks it is her mission to endure every insult and personal degradation for a higher cause -- which, unlike her self-sacrificing mother, she identifies with her near-messianic personal ambition.

It's no coincidence that Hillary's staff has always consisted mostly of adoring women, with nerdy or geeky guys forming an adjunct brain trust.
...
Hillary's disdain for masculinity fits right into the classic feminazi package, which is why Hillary acts on Gloria Steinem like catnip. Steinem's fawning, gaseous New York Times op-ed about her pal Hillary this week speaks volumes about the snobby clubbiness and reactionary sentimentality of the fossilized feminist establishment, which has blessedly fallen off the cultural map in the 21st century. History will judge Steinem and company very severely for their ethically obtuse indifference to the stream of working-class women and female subordinates whom Bill Clinton sexually harassed and abused, enabled by look-the-other-way and trash-the-victims Hillary."

Romney Asks for Restraining Order Abuse Stories

Matt · 11 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Covered here on Glenn Sacks' blog. Excerpt:

'We've often discussed the way restraining/protection orders based on false allegations of domestic violence are frequently used to separate fathers from their children. At a recent New Hampshire gathering, fatherhood activist Richard Smaglick asked presidential candidate Mitt Romney about the problem.

In response, Romney, who was governor of Massachusetts from 2003-2007, said that he could not recall a circumstance where such a thing had occurred, but said, "If you’re familiar with such, let us know."

We appreciate Romney's offer, and will take him up on it. If you have had your parental rights interfered with because of a restraining order or a false allegation of domestic violence, please send me your name, phone number, and a brief (100 words max) description of yourself by clicking here. We have a method of getting the letters to Romney.'

Harvard 'scholars' Advocate Higher Taxes for Men

Matt · 11 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. "They're still at it" was his comment in his note to me. Read it here. Excerpt:

'Gender-based taxation induces a more balanced allocation of home duties because it increases the implicit bargaining power of women within the marriage by improving their outside option. Despite the change in bargaining power, if family members share enough of their market earnings, gender-based taxation could even be welfare-improving for both spouses. And in the long run it will induce a more balanced participation of men and women in the market, both in term, of levels and elasticities. Currently, women and men work exactly the same amount, but women more at home and men more in the market in all countries for which data are available.'

X-TRNL Unveils His New Rap Song "XY"

xtrnl · 11 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Hello fellow MRAs. I don't think I've told you guys before, but I'm an avid fan of hip hop and to date have written over 50 rap songs. I've recently been inspired to write a new song regarding men's issues, and I've recently finished it. It actually turned out to be the longest rap song I've ever written, as I found I had a lot to say in it. I would like to share the lyrics with you. Click "Read More" to read them. The song is called "XY". I hope you enjoy it.

XY
by Evan AKA X-TRNL

Chorus:
XY means I'm a bad guy
XY means I'm a bad guy
They think women never lie
XX is what's on their side
Many women commit crimes
And are free right after they're tried
But XY means I'm a bad guy
XY means I'm a bad guy

All right, all right, lemme get this straight
You would never laugh when a girl is raped
But you do when a man is struck
Anywhere on his body including his junk
Hate it to break it to you, but that ain't entertainment
Maybe it is to someone like Satan
To laugh at that, makes you like a rapist
How did the world get full of so many saddists?...
Now let's imagine the gender's reversed
And you see a woman getting beat or worse
Getting hit several times in her boobs and box,
By punches and kicks and flying rocks,
For some reason, you don't laugh at her
But you did at the man, what a double standard!
It's about time the world woke up and see
That our society is filled with misandry

Chorus

You wanna hear about a law that's just absurd?
Imagine being freed from prison cause you're a girl
While the men are left there to rot
Cause they were born male, and they don't got a twat
People who think up laws like this should be shot
Cater to half, the other half's forgot
Think you can pull a stunt like this and not be caught?
Some succeed at shit like this, thus, I'm distraught
How about women who murder their own kids?
But they cry depression and the case is dismissed
Or if they kill their husband for no reason

They can cry abuse, or claim that he was cheatin'
Cause she's a woman, they believe her statement
They're too stupid to want corroboration
Where if it was a man in the same situation
The death penalty would be cried for by the nation

Chorus

If a woman wants money, she doesn't need luck
She don't need to play the lottery, she gets knocked up
Then she'll have money for 18 years
And get as much as she wants by shedding fake tears
It don't matter if the kid isn't even his
Or if he can't afford to pay for this bullshit
Or if he never ever gets to see the kid
The man's trapped in a scenario that's misandric
Then the bitch will go and poison the kid's mind
The kid will hate his father in a matter of time
The kid will grow to hate the man who gave him life
Thanks to all the lies told by his ex-wife
Women wanting equality is just plain phoney
Proof of this fact is allimony
If you're as capable as your male counterpart
Why do you need to extort him for all he's got?
Heaven forbid you'd actually have to earn
Everything that you want, then again you learned
From a young age you can get it all on a silver platter
If you have to be a prostitute it just doesn't matter
You were taught that men are of no use
Unless they have lots of money to lose
Wasting it on you, and it's a waste indeed
Cause you don't want a man, you wanna take his seed, cause

Chorus

I just don't know why, people hate me for being a man
But I can see why, misandry is what's ruling our land
You take a spoiled child, and cater till she's a woman
She'll grow to act wild, and get what she wants by playin the victim

Another double standard we gotta break
Is innocent men locked away for rape
When the charge is based on a false allegation
From a bitch with an overactive imagination
Then there's the issue of domestic violence
I think it's bout time someone breaks the silence
In more than half the cases a man's the victim
If the men need help, sometimes the cops won't listen
Who would have thought violence was gender-biased
If you say a woman hit you, they think you're a liar
Women can be vicious and speak vicious words
Some have beliefs resemblin Hitler's

Men are pieces of meat, and we're the ones to blame
For all the world's problems, but just the same
If all men died today, the people left would stumble Mankind would die, the economy would crumble, still

Chorus (2x)

Hillary: "No woman is illegal"

Matt · 11 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Seems the would-be president is ready to allow any woman to come to America with or without papers. Wonder what she feels about men in the same condition? Read it here. Excerpt:

'In broken English, one woman told Clinton how she wasn't making money as a broker anymore.

"I have no income at all," she said. "So how will I survive?"

Choking up with emotion, the woman said, "In my neighborhood, there are brand-new homes, but the value is nothing. I'm glad you are here so I can tell you, because you're going to be the president, I know."

A man shouted through an opening in the wall that his wife was illegal.

"No woman is illegal," Clinton said, to cheers.

Summing it up at the end, Clinton said, "We've only talked to a few people, but each of them talk about some part of the problem we are confronting. This is a problem that is only going to get worse if we don't address it."'

Wisconsin's Equal Placement bill gets committee hearing

Matt · 11 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Hello

I would like to bring to your attention and ask for your support for AB-571 which will be a big step forward for dads and children involved in custody battles in family court here in Wisconsin.

http://www.legis.state.wi.us/2007/data/AB-571.pdf

The bill has 23 sponsors, both democrats and republicans. It will be heard by the Assembly's Children and Families committee on Jan 24.

Any help you can provide in getting the word out, especially to your Wisconsin subscribers, about this important piece of legislation would be appreciated.

Anyone can contact me for more information.

Thanks

Steve Blake
President
Wisconsin Fathers for Children and Families
PO Box 1742
Madison WI 53701
608-584-6508

NOW's New Anti-Father Initiative

anthony · 11 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Read it here. Excerpt:

"Users will find information on the phony Parental Alienation Syndrome (PAS) that is being used against protective mothers to revoke custody of minor children, with little evidence. Judges frequently ignore evidence of a father's violent behavior and grant him custody of children."

New Orleans: "The Vagina of America?"

Anonymous · 11 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

It should be no surprise to anyone that Eve Ensler et al are gearing up to once again corrupt the sappy, romantic holiday of Valentine's Day into another feminist hate-day as V-Day, or Violence Against Women Day.

However, I just had to laugh when I read this stating an effort this year to also include the New Orleans tragedy in their "festivities," calling the beleaguered city "the vagina of America."

Estranged wife arrested in shootings

anthony · 12 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Nearly two weeks after a man was fatally shot and his girlfriend wounded in a Frisco home, police arrested his estranged wife in connection to the crime.

Vera Elizabeth Guthrie-Nail, 42, was arrested at the intersection of State Highway 121 and Hebron Parkway in Carrollton after dropping her six-year-old daughter at school.

Craig Nail, 36, and his girlfriend, Therisa Hofman, were both shot while at his him on December 26. While Nail was fatally injured, Hofman survived a bullet to the head that was shot as she walked into the garage of Nail's home in the 8500 block of Pebblebrook Drive.

Frisco police had a history of responding to disturbances between the Nails when they were married. Once, they arrested Guthrie-Nail for family violence."

Mother Charged With Murdering Kids Says They Were 'Possessed by Demons'

anthony · 12 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Authorities estimate the four girls — ages 5 to 17 — had been dead for at least two weeks. Jacks told police they were "possessed by demons" and had died in their sleep, one by one, within a week of each other, court documents say.

Jacks was charged Thursday with four counts of first-degree murder. She said nothing during a hearing in Superior Court, where Magistrate Judge Karen Howze ordered her held without bond. Her attorneys had argued that she should be released to the custody of an adult relative pending trial.

Jacks could receive a maximum sentence of life in prison if convicted."

Men 'find it harder to climb social ladder'

Anonymous · 12 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Men's chances of rising up the social scale in Britain have stalled because of greater competition from women and a slower rate of growth for top jobs, a study published yesterday reported...

...Worse still for men, Labour's goal to promote "equality of opportunity" failed to mention that any increase in social mobility was likely to create as many losers as winners, with men losing out to the increasing number of women pursuing careers...

...For men, the numbers who were downwardly mobile increased slightly while for women there was little change. The researchers said: "For the first time for men we are getting a situation where upward mobility is falling off and downward mobility is increasing...

...Dr Jackson, from Oxford's Centre for Research Methods in the Social Sciences, said: "The possible cause for concern is not a decline in the total mobility rate but the fact that, for men, the composition of this rate is tending to change, and in an unfavourable way."

Mom Allegedly Puts Son in Oven

anthony · 12 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Police arrested a woman Friday after her 7-year-old son told authorities she burned him in an oven, and a day-care worker was arrested for not reporting the attack, authorities said.

The mother, 26-year-old Tiffany Fraser of Tallman, was charged with assault and endangering a child, authorities said.

Police began investigating after the boy was spotted alone at a shopping center and told officers he had run away because "his mother had put him in an oven and burned him as a punishment," according to police reports.

The day-care worker, 37-year-old Joelle Lherisson, was charged with failure to report child abuse. Both Fraser and Lherisson were arraigned in Airmont Village Court and released until their next court dates."

Men's Movie Guide

Matt · 13 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

For those who don't know, you can read movie reviews and rates for their entertainment value as well as their male sensitivity (misandry vs. male positive) value at the Men's Movie Guide. You can also review and rate movies yourself based on these factors.

Marc

Activists Inject Fatherhood Issues Into Romney Campaign Stop

Anonymous · 13 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Read about it here. Darrick Scott-Farnsworth, Angela Pedersen and Robert Pedersen were able to get the Governor's ear on fatherhood issues. Pictures - Robert Pedersen speaks with Mitt about VAWA and Fatherhood Issues.

Finley on Hillary's "No Woman is Illegal" Pronouncement

Anonymous · 13 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'So, as a man, I am kind of wondering how this would work if Senator Clinton became President Clinton. Presumably, every mode of transportation would be full of women from every corner of the earth flocking to America because they would not have to worry about trifling matters such as immigration status, citizenship, and health care. Presumably also, any man swimming upstream against the inflowing tide of women would be declared “illegal” and sent back to wherever. Do I read it right: “Men need not apply?” Men, you still are illegal?'

Children: Unsafe for Men to Be Around

Roy · 13 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'In a society where pedophiles are outed and shamed as part of prime-time entertainment, it has come to this: Tony Taylor, a Pittsburgh father, says he wouldn't come to the aid of a crying child lost in the mall.

"For a guy to think he can walk up and say, 'Can I help you, kid?' he obviously does not watch the news," said Mr. Taylor, a retired military officer who lives in Turtle Creek...

...

It can be tough being a man seen around children these days, Mr. Taylor and other men's rights leaders would argue. Gotcha shows such as "To Catch a Predator" and front-page stories about pedophiles have fueled such a fervor that just being around a child can raise unfounded suspicions.'

Not too surprising that only 9% of elementary school teachers are men.

Hillary Clinton in 1998: "Women have always been the primary victims of war"

Anonymous · 13 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Men's activists might pause to consider, as part of the "thirty-five years" of experience that Hillary Clinton has brought to the presidential race, statements that Clinton made in 1998 in an address to the First Ladies' Conference on Domestic Violence in San Salvadore.

The experience that you have gone through is in many ways comparable to what happens with domestic violence. Women have always been the primary victims of war. Women lose their husbands, their fathers, their sons in combat. Women often have to flee from the only homes they have ever known. Women are often the refugees from conflict and sometimes, more frequently in today's warfare, victims. Women are often left with the responsibility, alone, of raising the children. Women are again the victims in crime and domestic violence as well.

Clinton made her remarks during the conflict in Kosovo; it is unlikely that she would have been unaware of the violence against battle-age, non-combatant males at the time. The extent of the violence against non-combatant battle age males--the overwhelming victims--during the conflict, along with the widespread tendency of the mass media to deemphasize the gender of male victims of violence and emphasize the gender of female victims is documented in "Effacing the Male: Gender, Misrepresentation, and Exclusion in the Kosovo War" by Adam Jones, Ph.D. Published in Transitions: The Journal of Men's Perspectives, 21: 1-3 (2001).

This is the abstract.

The Kosovo war of 1999 offered an excellent opportunity to analyze the representation of gender and violent victimization in the mass media. The present article focuses on the motif of "gendercide," or gender-selective mass killing -- in this case, of "battle-age" ethnic-Albanian men. A broad sample of media commentary is presented to demonstrate that "unworthy" male victims tend to be marginalized or ignored entirely in mass-media coverage. A trio of common marginalization strategies is discussed, and a theoretical framework of "first-order," "second-order," and "third-order" gendering is proposed to clarify the deficit in coverage. This deficit is then contrasted with the attention given to the victimization experiences of "worthy" victims, such as women, children, and the elderly. Finally, the small handful of responsible and insightful media reports on gender-selective atrocities against Kosovar men is evaluated for the alternative it may offer to "effacing the male" from coverage of war and violence.

NY Daily News: Jess Weixler treads tricky sexual ground in the comic horror film 'Teeth'

anthony · 13 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I read a "spoiler" review that offers a graphic view of the most intense gore scenes. I won't even mention them during this story submission. I consider them that offensive. I guess this movie is considered somewhat of a comedy because it deals with male genital mutilation. I suspect we'll be hearing a lot more about this movie as it approaches its release date. I'll keep you guys updated. Excerpt:

"I do see her as a superhero," says Weixler, 26, who grew up in Louisville, Ky., before attending Juilliard. "She's anatomically unique. Her power has to be learned, to use it for good. She doesn't seek out victims."

Then Weixler pauses and laughs: "Of course, this is also a ridiculous dark comedy. I took it seriously while we were making it, because I thought the concept was important and special. But it's also funny."

But it may be a tough movie to sell exactly because of its anatomically unique character, and because of a cultural atmosphere that can find even names of body parts offensive.

"I don't know if I'm surprised that people are still uncomfortable with [that] word in 2008," Weixler says. "I guess that anything that's a great source of power scares people. And sex is intoxicating - and anything that overwhelming is threatening to some people."

Carey: "Hillary's Pity-Pot Politics"

anthony · 13 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Every day Mrs. Clinton talks up her candidacy as the Great Turning Point in History, the moment in time for women to shrug off 500 (or is it 5,000?) years of patriarchal domination and show they are the equals to men. The solution, of course, is more government programs, set-asides, and gender quotas.

I suspect the voters are beginning to tire how Mrs. Clinton parades her hurts as a badge of honor. In a recent interview she shamelessly worked the female victim angle: "But you know, our scars are part of us, and they are a reminder of the experience we've gone through and our history."

This is shaping up as the first presidential election in history in which the candidates' qualifications are defined not by their personal character or legislative accomplishments, but rather by who is the greater victim."

Fathers 4 Justice and the Coalition of Free Men Expand Outreach

MR · 14 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Fathers 4 Justice and the Coalition of Free Men Expand Outreach

Fathers' for Justice, L.A. and the National Coalition of Free Men, L.A. expanded their educational outreach in Los Angeles County today, with a rally in Columbia Park in Torrance, California. Once again, a significant number of folks read our big signs and stopped by to talk with us about "the issues." Even a couple of Torrance Park Rangers stopped by to say "hello" and find out more about us. Judging by the responses of the citizens of Torrance today, there appears to be a definite need for educational outreach through F4J and NCFMLA to those good people.

Men Are Brainwashed by “Bachelorism”

Roy · 14 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Suzanne MacNevin at the Feminist e-Zine has a serious beef with the men’s marriage strike:

“There is a growing plethora of anti-feminist websites out there ... (claiming) ... that feminists are out to get pregnant and get alimony/child support payments from their deadbeat dads/husbands.
* "Marriage is a trap designed to enslave men."
* Feminists use divorce to take away a man's children and his money."
* "Bachelorism is the only way to fight feminism."

If the men in question actually believe these kind of bullshit statements there isn't a lot we women can do to change their minds. They have essentially become brainwashed by the philosophy of bachelorism and thus can't commit to a relationship (and likewise would probably make horrible parents and adulterous husbands)."

Thought you would enjoy the reading.

Police say girl lied about school attack

anthony · 14 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A sixth-grade girl at Perry Hall Middle School lied about being sexually assaulted this week in a school restroom, Baltimore County police said yesterday.

Based on their investigation, police concluded that the incident did not occur, said Bill Toohey, a county police spokesman.

...

The girl described her alleged attacker as a construction worker employed on a renovation project at the school, but police determined that he had no involvement, Toohey said.

Police said their investigation included interviewing the girl and the worker and reviewing video from one of the school's 18 surveillance cameras."

Who's Tired of Pink?

MR · 14 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This is quite a misandrist harangue, IMO, by Erica Jong:

Who's Tired of Pink

"I am so tired of pink men buying bombs and cheating schools. I am so tired of pink men having wives who stand behind them and nod sagely on television. I am so tired of pink men expecting that someone--a brown, black, yellow or white woman--will trail behind them changing light bulbs, taking out garbage, washing laundry, keeping food in the house, taking care of kids of all ages, of parents of all ages. I am so tired of pink men whose wives double or triple the family income thinking they can spend it without doing a damn thing at home."

RADAR ALERT: Ask the Candidates How They Stand

Matt · 14 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

With the advent of YouTube, everything a presidential candidate says on the campaign trail is potentially important. As Big Media loses credibility and the homemade content of YouTubers and bloggers gains credibility, more and more people are turning to the Internet for news and information. Remarks that once went unnoticed are now fodder for online analysis and commentary.

The rise of alternative Internet media presents an opportunity for RADAR supporters to educate the nation about some of the problems with the domestic violence industry and where the various candidates stand in relation to those problems. RADAR has crafted two questions, one for Democrats and one for Republicans, that you can ask the candidates when they come to your area.

Democrats:
False allegations of domestic violence have become widespread in our country and disproportionately disadvantage minority communities. Restraining orders obtained through false allegations of domestic violence rip parents out of children's lives. If you are elected president, what will you do to stop these violations of civil rights?

Republicans:

Many believe domestic violence programs are weakening the traditional American family. For example, restraining orders obtained through false allegations of domestic violence rip parents out of children's lives. As president, what would you do to protect mothers and fathers from false allegations of domestic violence?

Please find out when and where a presidential candidate will be meeting with the public in your own state, and ask them a question. Don't forget to bring a friend who can videotape your question and the candidate's answer so you can post it on YouTube. Of course, if you do have the opportunity to ask a question of a candidate, please notify RADAR and provide the link to the video.

If you don't have a video camera or are unfamiliar with posting videos on YouTube, please ask a question anyway and let us know the response.

Now is the time to put the spotlight on the candidates--a time when your opinion is not only valued, but sought after. Please ask one of our questions and make a CHANGE for domestic violence victims ... and their children.

You can find out where the candidates will be appearing by going here:
http://projects.washingtonpost.com/2008-presidential-candidates/tracker

Thank you!

++
Date of RADAR Release: January 14, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

MRA Horror Movie Script Available

xtrnl · 14 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Hello guys. I am truly sick and tired of all the misandric BS in horror movies like the abhorred upcoming abomination, "Teeth" (and they said women had better verbal skills? lol), thus I've decided to offer my fellow MRAs another of my brainchildren, "You Should Know Better", a horror movie written for men. At the current time, it's just a rough script, but I'm sure you guys would probably enjoy it. I do intend to make it into a movie someday. And all the deaths are not only deserved, but the victims bring them upon themselves. Karma's a biatch. lol. I will warn you though, most of the victims are men, but I didn't do that on purpose. There is a female victim, too, but she gets it the worst, IMO. So I did that to kind of build up to the last scene. I must also warn you that the second last death seems really bad when you read it, but there's a twist that makes it more bearable. If you'd like to read it, Email Me and I will send you the script.

National Post: The plight of divorced dads

Matt · 15 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

'Of the myriad forms of discrimination men cite, one looms over the rest: The egregious treatment meted out to fathers in the throes of contested child custody following the "no-fault" divorces most of them did not initiate or desire. My files bulge with stories of disenfranchised fathers ripped from their children's arms and lives. They have lost their homes, their careers, fortunes, friends and reputations, often on the basis of false allegations of abuse (for which their female accusers are virtually never punished). I wouldn't mention such anecdotal evidence, if the anguish in these testimonials didn't jibe with objective data confirming the shameful gender bias that dominates the family law system.'

Holstein Presents Romney with 300 Falsely Accused Fathers' Stories

Matt · 15 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'In response, Romney, who was governor of Massachusetts from 2003-2007, said that he could not recall a circumstance where such a thing had occurred, but said, "If you’re familiar with such, let us know."

We appreciated Romney's offer, and decided to take him up on it. We only had a couple of days to act, since it is widely believed that Romney will drop out of the presidential race if he is not successful in Michigan's primary, which is Tuesday, January 15. Ned Holstein, Executive Director of Fathers & Families, put out an email asking for cases, and I posted my Call to Action! Romney Asks for Cases of Falsely Accused Fathers on Thursday. Your response was overwhelming, and on short notice we collected 300 cases to present to Romney.'

Czech Republic: Men suffer from domestic violence as much as women

Matt · 15 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

'Prague, Jan 14 (CTK) - The term of domestic violence does not necessarily have to invoke the picture of a battered woman since the number of maltreated men is almost equal, and every third Czech man has experienced some kind of domestic violence, the latest issue of the weekly Tyden writes.

While dozens of studies focusing on male victims of domestic violence have been made abroad, only one survey on this subject has been conducted in the Czech Republic, without the media even noticing it, Tyden writes.'

Politics and Misogyny (or should it be misandry) mens_issues · 15 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Wow, this guy Bob Herbert is a classic example of a male feminist. See his NY Times Op-ed. An excerpt:

"With Senator Hillary Rodham Clinton's win in New Hampshire, gender issues are suddenly in the news. Where has everybody been?

If there was ever a story that deserved more coverage by the news media, it's the dark persistence of misogyny in America. Sexism in its myriad destructive forms permeates nearly every aspect of American life. For many men, it's the true national pastime, much bigger than baseball or football.

Little attention is being paid to the toll that misogyny takes on society in general, and women and girls in particular."

Mike Nifong Bankrupt

Matt · 16 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The wages of sin... bankruptcy. Read it here. Excerpt:

'JANUARY 15--Disgraced and disbarred, Mike Nifong is now bankrupt. The former North Carolina prosecutor, whose career imploded with his botched handling of the Duke University rape case, today filed for bankruptcy, listing liabilities in excess of $180 million.'

Men Forced to Pay Allimony to Child Murderer, and Child Support to Rapist

xtrnl · 16 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"New Jersey appeals court recently ruled that an ex-wife who brutally killed the son she had with her ex-husband does not automatically lose the right to collect alimony from him.

Linda Calbi is currently in prison, serving a 3-year term for beating her 14-year-old son Matt to death. She will be eligible for parole in November 2008..."

This case reminds me a lot of one I previously read about in which a woman had sexual intercourse with a man while he was drunk and unconscious, then bragged to some friends of hers that she had saved herself a trip to the sperm bank. When a man has sex with a drunk and unconscious woman, few people have trouble calling it what it is: rape.

The woman who had sex with an unconscious man in lieu of going to the sperm bank got pregnant, as she intended, and then sued the man for child support. The court ordered him to pay it.

This is just another example of how ridiculously misandrist the U.S. judicial system is. Apparently a woman can murder her own son and still receive alimony from the father, while in prison, no less. If this isn't bad enough, a woman was also awarded child support after she raped a man and became pregnant with his child. Excuse me while I go throw up.

Molson Replies Regarding Misandric Ad

xtrnl · 16 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Well, fellow MRAs, I finally got a response from Molson regarding their misandrist Molson Canadian ad. Here's the response I got:

Dear Evan:

We appreciate the time you have taken to share your concerns over our recent Molson Canadian advertisement and we welcome the opportunity to respond. The ad was intended to be funny in nature and it was never our intention to offend anyone with our advertising. We understand there will be differences of opinion and no advertising campaign will suit everyone's taste, just as no product will appeal to everyone.

The bottom line is this: we hear you. We know going forward that while we will never please all of the people all of the time, we must consider all the various opinions and weigh them when approaching advertising from year to year. We will continue to work to find the balance between our broad spectrum of consumers. To that end, we will ensure our marketing and advertising executives review all consumer comments for our advertising for consideration in the development of new advertisements. If you have other questions or comments, Evan, please contact us again either by e-mail at www.molson.com or by calling the Consumer Information Center Hotline at: 1-800-665-7661. The center is open weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Eastern Standard Time, and the staff will welcome your comments.

Sincerely,
Sophia J. Guerrero
Consumer Information Representative
Consumer Relations
consumers@coors.com

That's not quite the response I was hoping for, but at least they agreed to take this into consideration when making new advertisements. That is a small victory, IMO.

India: Domestic violence act to be reviwed

bharati · 16 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

India plans to review the domestic violence act in wake of serious criticism about the act.

My blog mentions the major criticisms of Domestic Violence law.

While not much can be expected out of the conference planned by the government. It is first time that there is talk now in the government about the misuse of the Domestic violence act which is important. Of course the battle will take years with the improvements in every country acting as positive loop.

Murtari Arrested-- Please write to Hillary

MR · 16 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

John Murtari has been taken to jail (once again) for daring to present father's issues in public in New York. Is this the kind of treatment that peaceful protesters, petitioning their government regarding fathers' and men's issues, can come to expect under a "Clinton Presidency?"

Please write a letter to Senator Clinton, and please be polite.

A Kids Right

press release

Here is Senator Clinton's contact info and my letter (below) to Senator Clinton, who will soon be campaigning for your vote in CA, and your state (if she hasn't already been there). Feel free to borrow whatever parts you like from the letter below, then send it to her, politely please.

==========

General Fax: (202) 228-0282
Syracuse Local rep, Jay Biba
fax: 315-448-0476
New York City Office:
fax: (212) 688-7444
Washington Scheduling Office, Lona Valmoro (Senior Advisor to the Senator),
fax: 202-228-0121

Senator Hillary Rodham Clinton
United States Senate
476 Russell Senate Office Building
Washington, DC 20510

Senator Hillary Clinton:

Please meet personally with parents who feel their Civil Rights have been violated. This is about getting the Civil Rights of parents and children to be together, recognized and protected. Is there anything more important and foundational to our nation than the family? It should not matter what state you live in.

We need Congressional hearings into reform. Please, why don't you take the time to meet with parents hurt by the system? Even though I am not a parent, I am a citizen of America, very, very concerned about the above. "Senator Clinton help us."

Sincerely,

Technology for a Male-less Matriarchal Society

anthony · 16 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Scientists in the United Kingdom believe that women may be evolving as humanity's sole representatives.
...
What does all this mean? It means scientists are more than willing to attempt to create a baby without the need for male involvement. It is proof positive that the push to destroy traditional families and morality continues all out. And it shows the intent that parenthood be reduced to nothing but a legal responsibility and not a human biological one. It also means that the state is willing to set a precedent, redefining a child's biological origins in total opposition to the natural law."

Teen says sex abuse by female teacher scarred him; files suit against district

anthony · 16 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"An 18-year old who claims he was sexually abused by a Hilton Head Island High School teacher in 2003 filed suit Friday against the Beaufort County School District and the school board.

The suit states that the district and school board members were negligent because they did nothing to prevent the abuse from occurring and under-reacted afterward.

The teacher, Rebecca Robertson-Shaffer, now lives in San Diego, Calif., according to the attorney who filed the suit, Thomas A. Holloway of Beaufort. She resigned as a Spanish teacher in February 2004 after being charged with having sexual intercourse with the plaintiff, then 15, and contributing to the delinquency of two other students.

Robertson-Shaffer, then 25, subsequently pleaded guilty to committing a lewd act on the boy and received an 8-year suspended sentence and three years of probation. She was allowed to move out of South Carolina with her husband, who was in the military, but must register as a sex offender for the rest of her life.\"

Orwell + False Allegations = Bad News For Men In California

axolotl · 17 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"A proposed database listing the names of abusers convicted of domestic violence could help Californians find out if a potential partner has a dangerous background."

Ax's Take: The theory behind this thing, is supposedly to enable the screening out of violent people prior to starting a relationship with them. The reality is that, since women commit DV as often as men, but so few are convicted, hence the database is all but useless to men.

13-year-old girl arrested for alleged school bus assaults

Anonymous · 18 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'PALMER ——A 13-year-old Sutton girl is being held in the Mat-Su Youth Facility after two boys said she sexually assaulted them on a school bus.

The boys, also 13, of Sutton, said the girl touched them over their clothing, Palmer Police Det. Kelly Turney said. Police went to Palmer Junior Middle School Jan. 9 to investigate and ended up arresting the girl.
...
“Reverse the genders and if a boy, generally speaking, if a boy touches a girl inappropriately on the school bus and the school district and the police don’t take action, can you imagine the outcry there would be?” Turney said.'

READ THE COMMENTS -- THEY ARE PRICELESS. MY FAVORITE?

"The real headline of this story should read, 'Two 13-year old boys turn in girl for doing something we all wanted to happen to us when we were there age.' I hope they get beat up and when they are older, live in misery and wonder why they were such pussies. "

Baby sitter charged with boy's murder

anthony · 18 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A judge in Hartford arraigned Torres on a murder charge Thursday and set her bail at $1 million in the child's death last weekend. Torres told investigators his head smacked a door frame as she ran around with him slung over her shoulder in a sleeping bag.

...

Adkins-Gasque, 23, said she met Torres two months ago through a friend and asked her to watch her son as much as five days a week. She noticed fresh bruises on him four or five times, but she said Torres told her Elijah sometimes fought with her son over toys.

"I thought she was letting her son get out of control," Adkins-Gasque said. "I thought that's just the way it was."'

Prostate exam fees not sexist, human rights tribunal rules

Scottie · 18 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

The short version is that men have to pay for a certain type of prostate exam (vs. women, who pay nothing for most types of breast cancer screens), but it's not sexist because of differences in the reliability of each screening method.

OK, so the problem isn't necessarily that the fee structure sucks, but the question is raised as to why screening methods for prostate cancer suck so badly compared to those for breast cancer? Its not really a question. Excerpt:

'After considering several expert opinions, tribunal member Kurt Neuenfeldt dismissed the claim, citing questions about the effectiveness of the PSA test as a general method of screening for prostate cancer.
...
The test measures a substance produced by the prostate, called prostate specific antigen. It's especially useful for monitoring established prostate cancer and as a diagnostic aid, in combination with other tests, for early detection of prostate cancer in men with urinary symptoms or suspicious digital rectal examination findings, according to the cancer society's web site.'

Man sues after wrongful rape conviction

anthony · 18 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'An Indianapolis man is suing the Marion County superior court after he was wrongfully accused and convicted of rape.

For 13 years David Buntin sat behind bars as an innocent man. The prime of his life he says was taken from him. And now, he wants retribution. At 38, Harold David Buntin has been through an incredible ordeal and his torment isn't over yet.

...

While behind bars David earned two associates degrees and hired an attorney. Dna tests later showed that he wasn't the rapist. But from 2005 through April 2007, Buntin remained in jail. Turns out, court records that would have ensured his release were never filed. For two years, David sat behind bars as an innocent man.'

UK: The UK Independent covers Erin Pizzey

Matt · 18 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Story here. Excerpt:

'Erin Pizzey, the campaigner who pioneered treatment for abused women by setting up Britain's first refuge centre for victims of domestic violence in the 1970s, is now turning her attention to another group of often overlooked victims: men.

Launching an online campaign and research project aimed at bringing the issue out in the open, Ms Pizzey is hoping to raise awareness of abuse perpetrated by women against men – a subject she describes as "one of the last taboos". She has put a questionnaire on the website femininezone.com that allows women to answer questions anonymously about how they treat men.'

Victim or abuser?

Matt · 19 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

'The statistics on male victims of domestic violence in heterosexual relationships show the instances are very low, she said, while acknowledging that men are much less likely to admit they are victims.

There are some studies, however, that claim the opposite.

Psychologist Martin S. Fiebert at California State University compiled a list of 491 studies that show that women are far more likely to be violent in a relationship than men, but the numbers of men willing to identify themselves as victims is very low.'

UK Study: Bad girls less likely to be told off than boys

Anonymous · 19 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Boys are five times more likely to be told off in a primary school class than girls even though they are just as likely to misbehave, according to new research.

They are also less likely to be praised or picked to answer a question, despite raising their hands just as often as girls, it is claimed.

The "prejudiced" views of some teachers could be damaging boys' self-belief, it is feared, causing them to do badly at school...

...Dr Swinson said that this "prejudice" could explain why girls get better exam results than boys. "Perhaps some boys get disenchanted with lessons because they are being told off too much," he said.'

Review: Paglia Gave 'Teeth' Its Fangs

anthony · 19 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

I did watch the movie last night and it is a ridiculous excuse of modern cinema. The movie was so asinine it was hard for me to take it seriously. I find the review's Paglia angle somewhat intriguing. Excerpt:

'Mitchell Lichtenstein, director of the upcoming horror satire Teeth, told SCI FI Wire that a literature class taught by feminist author Camille Paglia first introduced him to the concept of "vagina dentata."
...
"Women are a subjugated group in many cultures and repressed, and since we are living in a more puritanical time, it would seem like fun to make this myth a reality and turn the girl into a hero rather than a victim," Lichtenstein said in an interview.
...
Fortunately, Lichtenstein was able to persuade the Motion Picture Association of America to grant the film an R rating, rather than a more restrictive NC-17. "They thought it would be a good cautionary tale that parents should take all their teenaged sons to see," he said. "It's a very moralistic story. If your intentions are bad, then you face the consequences."'

Japanese Railway Bans Male Chest Hair in Poster

Roy · 19 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Japanese rail company JR East banned an ad poster featuring a man's moderately hairy chest - an image it considered so shocking to Japanese women that it constituted an open-and-shut case of sexual harassment. The poster "wasn't just out of line because there was nakedness; the pictures showed things that were particularly unpleasant for women, such as chest hair, and it was decided that showing them things they didn't want to see was sexual harassment".

So, now a woman can be sexually harassed just by SEEING something unpleasant? Will they circumcise Mt. Fuji next?

Woman Killed Self, 2 Children When She Walked Into Traffic on Interstate

anthony · 19 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman with a history of mental illness purposely walked her young niece and nephew into oncoming interstate traffic to commit a double-murder suicide, a prosecutor said Friday.

Marcelle Thibault, 39, was driving south on Interstate 495 in Lowell last week when she turned the car sharply, drove across the median and northbound lanes and began driving against traffic in the breakdown lane, authorities said.

She then stopped the car, removed her clothes and undressed the children, took both of them into her arms and walked onto the highway. She and the children were struck by two cars and killed."

India: Save Indian Family Protest Successful

bharati · 20 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The Save Indian Family Foundation held a protest demanding a men's welfare ministry for implementing its 21-point agenda.

Over 150 people attended the protest this was covered by The Statesman, Enadu, and The Times of India newspapers. In addition, TV 9, Kasturi, and ETV covered the event.

Photographs are posted here.

Also look at this photo in more detail to understand the battered men. The developed countries are brainwashed as men bad, women good. Just look at this photo.

Special thanks for two associates of RADAR who also attended this protest.

Fathers' Rights Activist March In San Diego MLK Day Parade

MR · 20 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Fathers' Rights Activist March In San Diego MLK Day Parade

"CRISPE, the Children's Rights Initiative for Sharing Parents Equally, and its supporters, marched today in the City of San Diego's Martin Luther King Day parade."

"It was an exciting moment when our turn finally came to "step forward" and join in the parade. We eagerly moved out in unison. Kids, and Dads, and Moms, and friends walked side by side, proclaiming a message extolling 50/50 shared parenting."

Essay: The Demise of the American Male

THE MAN · 20 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Read it here. Excerpt:

'As this essay begins, one should be at once grieved and saddened by the state of affairs for Men in the United States of America. For the reality of the situation is this - the American Male is under attack: psychologically, emotionally, and spiritually, by the very people whom he was created to protect - American Women.
...
Every single admirable quality of the American Male is now suspect - responsibility means inflexibility, strength of character equates to stubborness, standing one's ground equals abusiveness, courage and fearlessness is now insanity.

If a Man exhibits any of these qualities to his wife or girlfriend, she can easily destroy him by lying about abuse, rape, verbal haranguing, anything, and he can be arrested, prosecuted, and convicted of a crime.'

The pink vigilantes: The Indian women fighting for women's rights

Anonymous · 20 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"They may dress in candy-pink saris but their reputation is far from sweet.

These woman are the Pink Vigilantes, members of a group sworn to root out corruption in the police force and deliver ruthless summary justice to anyone believed guilty of domestic violence or sexual abuse. The women, who operate in India's northern state of Uttar Pradesh, wear pink as a kind of makeshift uniform - and their ranks have swelled to several hundred strong.

They arm themselves with lathi - traditional sticks - which they have used to beat men who have abandoned or abused their wives and policemen who have refused to register claims of rape."

Women turn on ‘traitor’ Oprah Winfrey for backing Barack Obama

Anonymous · 20 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

It started with a message on her website entitled “Oprah is a traitor” and rapidly expanded to include several discussions that attracted hundreds of comments.

In the original post, a reader called austaz68 said she “cannot believe that women all over this country are not up in arms over Oprah’s backing of Obama. For the first time in history we actually have a shot at putting a woman in the White House and Oprah backs the black MAN. She’s choosing her race over her gender.”

WOMEN APPEAR TO BE THE MOST RACIST AND SEXIST OF US ALL...

Please support MASH Project

Matt · 20 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via a TrueEquality relay from RADAR.

Please vote for GiveMeaning to sponsor the Men's Alternative Safe House Project. Please consider donating to it if you can. Once at least 68 people have voted for the project, it will get hosted on the site. Note that to vote you must supply a name and email address, then confirm the vote via the link they send you.

The project is described here. Project proposal:

'From the time that my friend experienced domestic abuse at the hands of his wife back in the mid-80s, I've watched him experience depression - not only from the abuse, but also from the lack of support as he searched for services but found little. Then one day about 10 years ago, he told me about wanting to start a men's safe house for male victims of domestic abuse. Today, the house is a reality, but still needs to open. My friend and his female friend have purchased a house in Calgary Alberta. Now they need help funding it. The challenge is that in a country that supports female victims of domestic abuse through more than $300 million dollars, no dollars are specifically provided to support male victims. Thus the need for your help to pay the home bills, provide food and counseling.... and help my friend provide the support that was denied him through his struggles.'

UK: Lover 'took revenge in bedroom for cheating'

Anonymous · 21 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A soldier was handcuffed to a chair and then tortured by his jealous girlfriend, a court was told.
...
Sipping champagne, Nicola Clunies-Ross smiled at the man and told him, “I am going to destroy you”, as she allegedly sexually assaulted him in an hour-long ordeal that was photographed and videotaped.
...
The court was told that Mr Gurdulic took photographs and short videos of the attack and threatened to publish them on an army computer hard drive, accessible to all soldiers, if the soldier did not do as he was told.'

RADAR ALERT: RADAR Civil Rights Project: Act Now to Stop Sex Discrimination!

Matt · 21 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Have you or someone you know been caught in the clutches of domestic violence and needed help?

Everyday hundreds of men in America experience this situation. If they dare to approach a program funded by the Violence Against Women Act for help, far too often they are RIDICULED AND SENT AWAY.

So in spite of the Congressional mandate that VAWA not discriminate against male victims, less than 10% of persons served by VAWA-funded programs are male - see http://www.mediaradar.org/ovw_foia_data.php.
NOW IS THE TIME FOR ACTION TO STOP THIS TRAVESTY!

Today we are unveiling the RADAR Civil Rights Project. The project is devoted to the simple notion that men who have suffered from partner violence are just as deserving of help as females.

This Alert is our call to action.

Have you ever experienced sex-based discrimination by a DV service provider? Have you called for police help, and told to go away because they said you were probably the abuser? Has friend of yours ever been given a straight-arm by a VAWA-funded program?

This is the closed-minded attitude we are dealing with: "Whenever I speak of male abuse, I am met with disbelief and, even worse, laughter…I notice in talking with other shelter staff throughout the state that this attitude prevails in the other shelters, too."

– Jan Dimmitt, Kelso, WA

So go to the RADAR website at http://www.mediaradar.org/civilrights_discrimination.php. You will be asked to fill out two forms asking the Department of Justice to investigate your case. We will ask you to also mail a copy of your complaint to RADAR. We will compile the complaints and take further action as needed.

Let's stop complaining how bad things are. For the sake of our families and our children, take action now.

++
Date of RADAR Release: January 21, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

New book: "The Woman Racket"

Matt · 21 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

From an announcement sent by email from the author:

"My book, The Woman Racket, is out from February 4. It's the very first to draw on the recent scientific findings re the actual root of sex difference, and all of the other research showing hitherto unexpected massive sex differences; with major implications for our view of men-women. Most importantly, we now know that there is no 'power' interaction of any kind between the sexes, so the notion of men 'oppressing' women is a non-starter. Right from first principles, and evident in all of the social research, it is axiomatic that not women but men -- or, rather, the majority of men -- must always be the principal disadvantaged sub-group in all societies. This properly scientifically based analysis, when it 'filters through', will mean the complete discrediting of 'political correctness' and effectively the end of it."

Boys need to be taught separately from the age of five, says expert

Anonymous · 23 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Boys need to be taught separately from girls from the age of five to prevent them being damaged by the education system, an expert claimed yesterday.

Dr Leonard Sax argues that boys are "turned off" by starting formal education too soon when they are expected to sit down and keep quiet in class...

...Dr Sax, a research psychologist in the U.S., claims this has led to an epidemic of unmotivated boys and under-achieving young men.

He said: "With boys you have to start right away. If you wait until secondary school, you have waited too long. From the age of five, there are clear advantages in all-boys' education when teachers know how to take advantage of it."'

Custody battle continues for Kelsey Peterson

anthony · 23 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This is an update about the woman who abducted a 13 year old boy and fled to Mexico. A custody battle has developed between the biological father and Peterson's parents. Excerpt:

'In late November, 25–year–old Kelsey Peterson pled not guilty to a charge of crossing a border to have sex with a minor.

Now Peterson's former boyfriend William Long is fighting to gain custody of the couple's 8–year–old daughter.

"He really feels that they have an established relationship and that at this time that would be the best thing for his daughter," said Attorney Jason Ossian.'

Hillary's Henchmen Neuter Chris Matthews

anthony · 23 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

What Chris Mathews said is 100% correct in my opinion. It's obvious the Clinton campaign used these feminist supporters to counter-attack Mathew's opinion. Is there any doubt Hillary is playing the gender card? If Hillary becomes president will feminists try and censor every negative comment directed towards her? Excerpt:

Last week, the host of MSNBC's "Hardball" issued an odd semi-apology for allegedly "sexist" and dismissive comments he made about Hillary Clinton on the network's early-riser show, The Morning Joe. Matthews told that show's panel:

'"[T]he reason she's a U.S. senator, the reason she's a candidate for president, the reason she may be a front-runner is her husband messed around. That's how she got to be senator from New York. We keep forgetting it. She didn't win there on her merit."
...
And the leadership of the feminist movement made an attempt at censorship.

In a letter to Steve Capus, president of NBC News, a coterie of prominent feminists openly invoked Don Imus, pressuring, "NBC has a responsibility to demand appropriate conduct and dialogue in its programming." The letter was signed by Gloria Steinem; Kim Gandy, president of the National Organization for Women; Eleanor Smeal of the Feminist Majority Foundation; Lulu Flores, president of the National Women's Political Caucus; and Carol Jenkins, president of the Women's Media Center.'

Woman allegedly kills husband, two children

anthony · 23 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

A friend of mine told me about this story. It took me a half hour to find it. When a man commits a crime its reported to CNN within minutes and becomes the headline later that evening. Excerpt:

"A 35-year-old Fontana woman was arrested Sunday for allegedly killing her husband and two small children, according to the Fontana Police Department.

Bertha Martinez was booked on three counts of murder in connection with the killings of her husband, Marcello Martinez, and her children Amy, 7, and You may, 8 months, said Fontana Police Sergeant Jeff Decker.

Police found Marcello Martinez deceased on the floor of the living room at the family's residence in the 16600 block of Orange Way. He had suffered head trauma apparently caused by blunt force, police said.

The two children died as a result of suffocation or asphyxia, police said. The children were found in their beds covered with blankets."

--
Ed. note: The page didn't render well in Firefox, but did fine in Internet Explorer.

UK: Serial Murderess Enjoys Comfy Life-Sentence

Matt · 23 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The pictures showed a smiling, overweight Rose West strolling into a cell which boasts a TV, DVD player and stereo.

Curtains hang across the window, while shelves hold books, pictures and cards from well-wishers.

She is also reported to have access to a sewing machine and embroidery kit, and to have the run of Bravo wing at the prison, where she works loading and unloading washing machines in the laundry room.

...
Yet those still in contact with her say that, far from showing contrition, she still maintains her innocence and even believes she, too, should be counted a victim - not just of her husband Fred but also of an "evil" Establishment conspiring to keep her locked up for the rest of her life.
...
When Rosemary West was convicted of ten counts of murder in November 1995, the trial judge Justice Charles Mantell told her: "If attention is paid to what I think, you will never be released."
...
Her life now might indeed be peaceful. What a tragedy that her victims, and indeed the children who survived her murder spree, have not been afforded such an opportunity.'

Former prosecutor faces sex charges

anthony · 23 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A former prosecutor who is also the wife of a suburban police chief has been charged with having sex, smoking marijuana and drinking with high-school-age children.

Beth Modica, 44, a former assistant district attorney in Rockland County and Queens, N.Y., pleaded not guilty Tuesday to counts that included statutory rape, sex abuse and endangering children. Her hands were cuffed in front of her in court, where the indictment was unsealed.

Bail was set at $75,000."

On YouTube: Marc Rudov Debates O'Reilly

anthony · 23 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Rudov has entered prime time. Many hate O'Reilly but he does have the highest rated show within the 8-9PM time slot. There has been some debate between myself and other MANN contributors in regards to Rudov. I need to state that I definitely feel he is an MRA ally. Clip here.

CNN Interview Shows Diversity Except When It Comes To Gender

Anonymous · 24 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Anderson Cooper: Race or Gender?

The main thing to be noticed about the article, and the interview it discusses, is how all the people involved, including the author, are women (except for Cooper himself, who does not give his own opinion, of course). This is absolute proof positive that all gender issues are defined from the perspectives of women (In this case the interviewees are of different races, but of the same gender as mentioned).

Women-only buses in Mexico City

Matt · 24 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Groping and verbal harassment is an exasperating reality for women using public transportation in this sprawling capital, where 22 million passengers cram onto subways and buses each day. Some men treat women so badly that the subway system has long had ladies-only cars during rush hour, with police segregating the sexes on the platforms.

But that hasn't helped women forced to rely on packed buses, by far the city's most-used form of public transportation — until this week.

Acting on complaints from women's groups, the city rolled out "ladies only" buses, complete with pink signs in the windshields to wave off the men.
...
While only seven female public bus users complained last year, she said the real number of offenses was probably much higher, because women rarely protest openly against sexual harassment.'

"Single, Male and not a stereotype"

TomP · 24 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here: Excerpt:

'... some proud, single men say they're better off alone.

"A man is a sperm bank, a meal ticket, a handyman and an early retirement plan," Gulvin says.

For those reasons and others, he has decided to go through life without committing to one romantic relationship.'

This is an AP story that appeared on the back page of the local paper today. The treatment is not as even-handed as one would like, but is better than I would have expected from my local Leftist/Feminist fish-wrap. I think the reporter wasn't sure how to sneer at men for being single by choice when women have been lauded for "independence" for so long.

Men are learning to take a long, cold look at the women that are trying to manipulate them into a "relationship", and ask the key question, "what's in it for me?". Most of the time, the answer is going to be "Not as much as it is going to cost you." This story is about some men who have asked the question and come up with a realistic answer.

"A Tale of Two Rapes"

anthony · 24 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'In that decade, I found myths and lies about “Violence Against Women” with respect to both rape and domestic violence were both de rigeur, and vehemently defended by many who knew good and well they were defending myths and lies, and would privately admit as much. Their justification for this dishonesty was simple and pragmatic - police work is after all, a political job. Anyone who seeks advancement to positions that involve more face time with cute reporters and television cameras than with burglary reports and false alarm calls will keep their ears open for the latest tune being called by the politicians. “Violence Against Women” has been a buzzword for at least a generation now, and any police officer of any rank that exposes a reality not in concert with the absurd statistics and draconian measures put forth to combat this “epidemic of violence” is unlikely to advance.'

Police: Mother Tried To Kill Son Before Killing Herself

anthony · 25 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Is it any surprise the term clinically depressed is mentioned by the third paragraph? Excerpt:

"On Thursday, they laid out in elaborate detail the story of how the clinically depressed Tegtmeier carefully made sure she was home alone with her 20-year-old autistic son, tried unsuccessfully to kill him and then committed suicide.

Investigators said on Jan. 4, Tegtmeier called Ankeny Schools at 7:30 a.m. and said her son Rory Jr. was sick and she cancelled his bus pickup. Tegtmeier also called a siding company that was coming to work on her home and told them not to come because of a family matter. She then called her husband at his Ames office and left a message that she could not keep their 11 a.m. lunch appointment.
...
During interviews with Rory Jr., 20, who has autism, investigators learned that Rory Jr. struggled to get free from the cord and forcefully pushed his mother away. He then hid in the basement, later telling investigators he was scared of his mother."

911 Tapes Released in Former Beauty Queen's Ex-Boyfriend Torture Case

anthony · 25 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

To listen to the tape simply look for the link above the womans picture. I thought the 911 operators were completely incompetent.

"Tucson police have released the recordings of several 911 calls that were made last month in connection with the kidnapping and torture of a former Pima County beauty queen’s ex-boyfriend.

In the recordings, callers reported hearing gunfire along with a man screaming for help.

Kumari Fulbright, 25, a UA law student who has since been suspended from school, is accused of kidnapping the 24-year-old man, binding him with plastic cable and duct tape and holding him captive in two homes."

5-year-old boy handcuffed, taken to psych ward for misbehaving

anthony · 25 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A 5-year-old boy was handcuffed and hauled off to a psych ward for misbehaving in kindergarten - but the tot's parents say NYPD school safety agents are the ones who need their heads examined.

His mom and a school source said Dennis threw a tantrum inside the Ridgewood school at 11 a.m. on Jan. 17.

Dennis was taken to the principal's office, where he apparently knocked items off a desk.

Rather than calling the boy's parents, a school safety agent cuffed the boy's small hands behind his back using metal restraints, the school source said."

When baby-sitter Sandy Ortiz arrived, Dennis was still handcuffed, she said. School safety agents also were holding his elbows even though the boy was calm, Ortiz said. Dennis is about 4-feet-3 and weighs 68 pounds.

"I hugged him. I said, 'OK, release the cuffs, I'm taking him,'" she recalled. "They told me, 'No, Miss. You're not taking him anywhere.'

MASH project reaches goal

Matt · 25 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This is good news! Hope things go well for it.

"Congratulations! The project you voted on, Mens Alternative Safe House has collected enough votes and is now eligible to receive donations through the GiveMeaning website.

Please visit the following link to check-in on your project.
http://www.givemeaning.com/project/mashproject

There are two ways to support your project:

Make a donation: 100% of your donation will be given to your project and your privacy is totally protected. The process is totally secure.

Spread The Word: Forward this link to anyone who you think will support this project. We suggest you include a brief note about why you voted for this project and what it means to you."

Readers respond to "Study finds women a violent as men" in universtity newspaper

Matt · 25 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A.:

On 12/6, the campus newspaper at Webster University in Missouri printed an article titled Study finds women as violent as men that quoted NCFM-LA extensively.

Today the newspaper printed 5 letters in response to the article. All of them are on our side except for one misandric feminist who didn't dispute the DV stats but instead ranted on with the usual garbage about patriarchy and who even attacks NCFM as "misogynistic" but provides no backing for that at all. Comments about the letters can be read and posted as well.

Marc

Equal Parenting Resources in Canada

anthony · 25 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Site here. From the "About" page:

"Nearly all of the individuals and groups listed support "Equal Shared Parenting".

We have included most Canadian groups concerned with equal parenting including men's rights, second spouses, women's groups, grandparent's and children's rights groups and related Issues.

Groups listed here without a link are known to people who have submitted the names but the groups haven't been found to have a website, or contact information."

England: "White Men Are Banned"

anthony · 26 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"FIRE chiefs were accused last night of discrimination by trying to ban white men from joining up.

They were condemned after barring white males from recruitment sessions in an attempt to boost ethnic minority and women applicants.

The bosses held five open days to attract new recruits – with four strictly limited to either women, ethnic minorities or both. They insisted they had acted lawfully. But the move sparked outrage among MPs, serving firefighters and racial equality groups."

Malaysia Islamic State to Enforce Separate Lines for Women, Men at Supermarkets

anthony · 26 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Authorities in the northern state of Kelantan — governed by the opposition Pan-Malaysian Islamic Party — will fine supermarkets and shops if they let men and women use the same lines at checkout counters, said party spokesman Anual Bakri Haron.

Chief Minister Nik Aziz Nik Mat has called for stricter enforcement "to safeguard the ladies" from being harassed and to avoid close proximity between opposite sexes while lining up to buy groceries, Anual said. "He wants the enforcement to be looked into thoroughly."

Dad Fights to Circumsize Son Against Mom’s Wishes

Roy · 27 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The wishes of a 12-year-old boy should be considered in a dispute between his divorced parents about whether he should be circumcised, the Oregon Supreme Court ruled Friday.
The father, James Boldt, converted to Judaism in 2004 and wants the boy to be circumcised as part of the faith. The mother, Lia Boldt, appealed to the high court, saying the operation could harm her son physically and psychologically.

The state Supreme Court ruled that earlier court decisions failed to determine whether the boy wanted the circumcision, as his father contended, or opposed it, as his mother alleged.

The Supreme Court sent the case back to the trial court to answer that question.

If the trial court finds the child agrees to be circumcised, the Supreme Court said, it should deny the mother's requests. But if the trial court finds the child opposes the circumcision, the court has to determine if it will affect the father's ability to care for the child."

Tell Reviews and Everyone Else What You Think About TEETH

Boy Genteel · 27 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

TEETH opens this weekend, and several critics seem to be relishing the male-genital-mutilation revenge story. I think it would be beneficial to hit these people hard and let them know what we think. Below are some reviews (where you might be able to leave a comment and/or send a letter to the editor), and where it was available I've included the reviewer's e-mail address.

VILLAGE VOICE

VARIETY
Todd McCarthy: tmccarthy-at-reedbusiness.com

TV GUIDE

NEW YORK TIMES

LOS ANGELES TIMES
Carina Chocano: carina.chocano-at-latimes.com

Hollywood Reporter

AP News
Christy Lemire: clemire-at-ap.org

PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER
Steven Rea: srea-at-phillynews.com

Metacritic -- find more reviews and make comments/send e-mails

Request Comments on "You Should Know Better"

xtrnl · 27 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Hey guys,

I've been hearing many positive comments on my script from several sources; family, friends, coworkers, and some of my fellow MRAs. I was just wondering what those of you who read any of my script think of it. [See MANN post here.]

I would love to hear how far you are into it, and any comments you have regarding it. Please comment on it using this thread. For those of you who haven't read my pro-male horror script which deals with karma destroying evildoers through their own intentions, and would like to, e-mail me at xtothat-at-hotmail.com and I will send you a copy.

"States get tough on classroom sexual misconduct"

Matt · 28 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. We'll see just how tough they get. Excerpt:

'Heeding a steady drumbeat of sexual misconduct cases involving teachers, at least 15 states are now considering stronger oversight and tougher punishment for educators who take advantage of their students.

Lawmakers say they are concerned about an increasingly well-documented phenomenon: While the vast majority of America's teachers are committed professionals, there also is a persistent problem with sexual misconduct in U.S. schools.

When abuse happens, administrators too often fail to let others know about it, and too many legal loopholes let offenders stay in the classroom.'

Documentary Exposes Family Court Corruption in America

Anonymous · 28 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

View the four shocking trailers now! To help this documentary reach the masses please read how you can help. From the site:

"Support? System Down. View the shocking trailers of this documentary which exposes the corruption of family court systems throughout America. Family Courts compared to the mafia? Fathers killing themselves because they were forced by family court systems to go from a full-time father to seeing their children only 4-6 days a month. This is court sponsored child abuse!"

Czech Fathers Protest

bharati · 28 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

There is growing impatience all over the world. This Czech news story seems to be the beginning there.

There does seem to be attempt to demonize and silence. Echoes of Gandhi who started the civil disobedience movement in 1921-24 and 1931-36 by saying "no taxes without representation."

Our protests, though well attended, seem tame in comparison what Czech fathers have achieved. Excerpt:

"Prague- Labour and Social Affairs Minister Petr Necas fiercely criticised the members of the K213 group, associating divorced fathers who are banned from seeing their children, who have been blocking the entrance of the child protection office, he told journalists today.
...

K213 has also challenged Pavlova's past. Pavlova is a "feminist defence counsel of extremist feminist groups Profem and Koordona, which promote opinions that are totally incompatible with the citizens' equality idea," K213 says in a statement.
...
The Office for the International and Legal Protection of Children is in charge of exacting alimonies and supervising international adoptions of children, and acts as children's guardian in the cases of international abduction of children of mixed couples."

Movement in Sweden to Ban “Sexist” Ads

Roy · 28 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Sweden, considered a world leader in gender equality, should ban all advertising that could be considered sexist, according to a new government-commissioned report that suggests the creation of a law "banning advertising containing sexist content." Sexist advertising is defined as any message distributed "with a commercial aim" that can be "construed as offensive to women or men."

Imagine the possibilities for banning! No more feminine hygiene commercials, and no more beer ads either! This law will never fly, not even in Sweden, the world's most celebrated gynocracy.

And, who knew that advertising "has a commercial aim?"

Misantric article attacks "Men and Women Against Domestic Violence"; needs responses

Matt · 28 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. This misandrist feminist article cites crime data instead of sociological data to attack the billboard put up by fair-minded anti-DV advocates. If you want to respond with a letter to the editor, these are the email addresses I used, though I'm not sure whether they're all good: mailreadersvoice-at-wvgazette.com, letters-at-wvgazette.com, editor-at-wvgazette.com

Marc

Excerpt:

'Domestic violence occurs within a broad spectrum of relationships, but this billboard clearly portrays an unfair depiction of women as typical perpetrators of domestic violence homicides. Women killing their male partners are especially rare. The U.S. Department of Justice cites that only 3 percent of male murder victims were killed by an intimate partner.

Another disturbing message was "Help protect all victims" juxtaposed against the image of the handcuffed women. This is clearly a veiled inference that there are no supportive services for men in our state.'

Australia: Canberra Community Consultation Event

Matt · 28 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

CANBERRA COMMUNITY CONSULTATION EVENT

With Elizabeth Broderick, Sex Discrimination Commissioner and Commissioner responsible for Age Discrimination.

Have your say on building a fair and equal society for women and men in Australia.

The Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission (HREOC) and the ACT Human Rights Commission invite you join HREOC's new Sex Discrimination Commissioner and Commissioner responsible for Age Discrimination, Elizabeth Broderick, for a community consultation.

This consultation is part of Commissioner Broderick's national Listening Tour. The Listening Tour is an opportunity for people all over Australia to make their voices heard on the issues that matter to them.

Tuesday 5 February 2008
Theo Notaras Multicultural Centre 2nd floor, North Building 180 London Circuit, Canberra City
12:00 - 2:00 pm

A light lunch will be provided
RSVP by Monday 4 February to Jorge Kapeen, ACT Human Rights Commission
02 6205 2222 or email: human.rights-at-act.gov.au

HREOC have established three female-focused themes for the tour:

* economic independence for women
* work and family balance across the life cycle, and
* freedom from discrimination, harassment and violence

Discussion of other issues will also be welcome. Information collected from this consultation will be used to inform the agenda for the Commissioner's 5 year term.

We would urge anyone who cares about men's and boys' health and wellbeing to come along to these events to remind the new Commissioner that her responsibilities cover two sexes!

We would encourage you to make some of the following points (for a bit of background information on men and work-life balance click here (.pdf file)):

- Males have much higher illness, injury, accident and death rates and die 5 years earlier than females, yet research funding for male health is less than one-third of that for female health
- Males suicide at almost four times the rate of females. More males kill themselves each year than the entire Australian road toll
- More than twice as many males as females experience work-related injuries and illnesses, and over ninety percent of work-related deaths are males
- Young men are three times as likely as young women to be victims of violence, however, there are no public health campaigns to address this very serious issue
- Men are also victims of intimate partner abuse, however, there are no support services for these men, nor treatment services for abusive women
- Boys in Australia are much more likely to drop out of school than girls. In NSW, the difference between boys' and girls' average Tertiary Entrance Rank is almost 20%. Males currently make up just 37% of university graduates

- In Australia today, only women have reproductive rights. Upon becoming pregnant, a woman can choose to have the baby, or have an abortion, or put the baby up for adoption. A man has no choice whether to become a father or even to be notified that he has become a father
- Men are more likely to be convicted and receive longer sentences for the same crimes, compared to their female counterparts
- Following family court proceedings, children are far more likely to be given little or no time with their father than they are with their mother
- The current inequitable parental leave schemes, favouring mothers, reinforce fathers in the traditional 'breadwinner' role rather than supporting them as being 'hands-on' dads (which all the research shows gives better outcomes for children and their parents)
- Australian women are responsible for spending 90 cents in every household dollar

Please circulate this notice and the attached, printable flyer, to your contacts in or near Canberra. You can also download a copy from here (.pdf file).

More information about how to contribute to the Listening Tour will be posted at http://www.humanrights.gov.au/events/ in coming weeks, along with details of other events as the HREOC team make their way around the country. Can't make it to the consultation? Please post your thoughts on HREOCs online blog.

Kind regards,

Greg

RADAR ALERT: Are You Ready For Some Football ... Mythology?

Matt · 28 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

It's Super Bowl time, and you know what that means. Wings, beer, new commercials, more beer, play stealing, and, oh yeah, domestic violence mythology. There's a statistic that's trotted out this time of year – "More women are victims of domestic violence on Super Bowl Sunday than on any other day of the year" – that has no basis in fact but is fervently believed and/or promulgated nonetheless. See just one example here.

And more than a decade after it was shown to be a fabrication, the people who make our laws clearly still believe it. Read one example of this here.

Snopes.com, the scourge of urban legends everywhere, has a good article on the apparent origins and subsequent debunking of the myth.

According to the folks at Snopes, "The claim that Super Bowl Sunday is 'the biggest day of the year for violence against women' demonstrates how easily an idea congruous with what people want to believe can be implanted in the public consciousness and anointed as 'fact' even when it has been fabricated out of whole cloth."

Even though the claim has been thoroughly discredited, it's so immediately plausible to those already inclined toward anti-male ideology – inside every man is a slavering beast waiting for a surge of testosterone to be released – that it gets repeated as fact.

So, everyone, please be on the lookout for the spreading of Super Bowl mythology. If your local media spreads the myth, please tell them to check the Snopes article mentioned above for a factual account.

++

Date of RADAR Release: January 28, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your better? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence.
http://www.mediaradar.org/.

"Mom Acquitted But Tortured by Son's Death"

anthony · 28 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Notice how the father is indirectly blamed for the death. Apparently Dad incorrectly installed a baby seat which prevented Mom from checking on her sons health. Excerpt:

"A Virginia jury acquitted 36-year-old Raelyn Balfour of involuntary manslaughter Friday in the death of her infant son, Bryce, but the pain of his death made it difficult for her to appreciate the exoneration.
...
Balfour's nightmare began March 30, 2007, when she returned to her vehicle after work and realized her 9-month-old son was still was strapped in his car seat.
...
Police said the temperature inside the sport utility vehicle could have reached 98 degrees in 40 minutes, which is more than enough to kill an infant.
...
During her trial, Balfour took the stand and explained how her husband had placed a spare baby seat where Bryce sat normally, so she didn't see him in the other seat behind her. "

Paternity Fraud is "In the Best Interests Of The Child"

TomP · 28 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Another man lied to about his relationship with "his" child. The courts support the liar/defrauder. He pays, the mother collects, the child is lied to/defrauded - what could be more fair (to a gender feminist, maybe...)? Comments are interesting, so far tend to be supportive of the man in this case.

Any man considering a long term relationship needs to ask himself "What's in it for me?" here is an example of what could be in it for a man who doesn't ask that question. Excerpt:

"Paternity doesn't count when it comes to a Hunterdon County man's bid to lower child support payments for a child that's not his.

An appeals court upheld a lower court which denied the man's request in 2006 after he said he discovered he was not the father of the 10-year-old girl.

The appeals panel found the judge put the best interest of the child first."

Misandry in recent "City Journal"

rowdy · 29 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Read the full and bigoted article entitled "Child-Man in the Promised Land" here.

The response that I sent to the author is here:

"Misandry. Ever hear of it? Because your article was full of it. Did it ever occur to you that men don't marry because the rules are rigged against men? If a divorce follows, who gets the kids? And who gets to deny their former spouse access to those children? If any allegations of domestic violence is made, who automatically gets kicked out of the house (no evidence required)? And who doesn't?

Indeed, your article even stooped to old-style social Darwinism. Chromosomally challenged? Surely it has occurred to your superior intellect that while the male population has EVERY gene that the female population has, they also have additional genes that no females have access to? How does that fit into your superiority paradigm?

And it would be very easy to write a long list of public policy of recent vintage that are clearly anti-male. Which gender gets routinely sexually mutilated at birth? And which does not? Which gender dominates the Ritalin 'drug solution' for school-age children, and which does not? Which gender suffers from much greater rates of school-age violent deaths? And which gender gets more funds to fight school-age deaths? Which gender dies younger (on average)? And which one has more federal and state funding for health care? Between prostate cancer and breast cancer, approximately equal numbers of men and women die, yet which cancer gets 7 times more research funding? In general, which gender's gender-specific health issues gets 50% more federal and state research funding? And which gender, do you suppose, suffers 93% of all workplace fatalities?

And on TV and movies, which gender is routinely sexually injured for 'laughs'? And which is not? Which gender is routinely cast as an idiot? And which is not? Which gender is routinely cast as violently 'evil' or the 'bad guy', and which is not. Lastly, which (allegedly immature) gender, would you speculate, is more likely to risk their lives to help a stranger?"

Man Claims Battered Spouse Defense

Luek · 29 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

A man who claims he was repeatedly battered by his wife is on trial for killing her. The jury trial began yesterday, 28th January. He once had a restraining order against his wife and she was also arrested on suspicion of domestic battery against him so there is a paper trail of abuse against him.

Watch this one.

Where Are All the Battered Women?

Roy · 29 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

A curious British journalist asks:

"If one in four women are battered in their own homes, you would expect to see some evidence of it. If you work with eight girls in an office, two of them are being battered, or have been, or will be. Yet, where is the evidence? There just isn't any.

I'm not saying that DV never happens. It does. In fact, I've been on the receiving end of it myself. (What? You're a man! Impossible! You must have imagined it!)

The scale of the problem has been grossly exaggerated, and the facts grossly distorted by the feminist movement.

So why do they tell so many lies about it?

Power."

Jury Hears Testimony About British Teen Who Filmed Herself Trying to Kill Parents

anthony · 29 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A British girl tried to kill her parents — and filmed her murder attempt — according to testimony presented to a jury on Tuesday, the Daily Mail reported.

The girl, then 15, allegedly tried to strangle her mother in the living room of the family's house in St. Neots, about 57 miles northwest of London, while she was working on the computer.

She also is accused of planning to stab her father with a pair of scissors once he realized what was going on, according to the Mail.

The girl, who is 16, has pleaded not guilty to two counts of attempted murder."

Texas Kindergartener Accuses Two Female Classmates of Sexual Assault

anthony · 29 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

I can't stand it when 5 year old boys are accused of sexual harassment. I would also defend a 5 year old girl if accused of harassment at such a young age. This incident is a much different. This is a disturbing case of sexual assault. Excerpt:

'A Texas kindergartener is accusing two of her female classmates of sexual assault, MyFoxHouston reported on Monday.

"She said two of the girls at school put glue in between her legs, in her private parts," the mother of the 6-year-old girl told the station. "Someone hurt my baby; she just seems different now."

The alleged attack took place inside a school bathroom, according to the report.

Doctors confirmed the unidentified girl suffered vaginal trauma and that glue was present when they examined her, the station reported.'

Woman guilty of attempted murder of her husband on their anniversary

GaryB · 29 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This story on the BBC is a nightmare to read - the poor guy is almost deaf, blind and has brain damage - but it's good to hear firstly that she was found guilty, and secondly that not a single word in this article attempts in any way to reduce her culpability or make it out to be in some way 'his fault'. No 'woman as victim' crap.

It boils down to this - she researched methods of killing him on the Internet, settled on poison by anti-freeze, cooked him a meal and laced his wine on their anniversary, and did it all just to pay off some debts, even bragging about it to neighbors. If she doesn't get the book thrown at her it'll be a travesty.

Mother Defends Dog After Attack on Son patriotsofamerica · 30 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

This woman allows her 2 year old to "annoy" the dog instead of removing him from a situation that she knows he could get hurt. She blames it on her 2 tear old son. Pathetic. She is the adult and should know better. Excerpt:

'A little Australian boy's face was horribly scarred by the family dog - but his mother vowed to keep the pet, blaming the attack on her son.

Two-year-old Noah Newbold is lucky to have the sight in his left eye after being mauled by his family's mastiff-staffordshire cross.

Deep cuts and scratches cover the left side of his face.

But, the toddler's mother, Alicia Cottier, said she was keeping the dog despite the attack because it had been provoked by her son pulling the dog's ears.'

Feminists Say There Is No "Boy Crisis" in Education

Roy · 30 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The authoritative National Coalition of Women and Girls in Education (NCWGE) has issued a comprehensive new report (.pdf file) on the benefits of Title IX and "gender equity" in education. Among their findings:

“The real story is not bad news about boys doing worse; it’s good news about girls doing better. In fact, with a few exceptions, American boys are scoring higher and achieving more than they ever have before. But girls have just improved their performance on some measures even faster. As a result, girls have narrowed or even closed some academic gaps that previously favored boys, while other long-standing gaps that favored girls have widened, leading to the belief that boys are falling behind.”

Oh, I get it. If I just don't BELIEVE boys are falling behind, then I can start thinking clearly.

"Are Boys Losing Out?"

anthony · 30 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Dr Sax, who is founder of the National Association for Single Sex Public Education in the U.S., claims that boys are suffering a toxic mix of failing to be engaged by the curriculum, over-prescription of attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) drugs and a lack of suitable role models. They no longer experience the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat due to a lack of competitive sport in schools. And they often return home to play computer games that make them disconnected from the real world as they displace family activities such as having dinner together."

Experts unsure why more women than men are graduating from college

anthony · 30 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"U.S. Census Bureau data released this month reflects the disparity. About one-third of women between age 25 and 29 had a bachelor's degree or more education last year, compared with 26 percent of males in the same age bracket, according to the bureau.

Enrollment and graduation figures from public New Hampshire and Maine colleges and universities are in line with those statistics.

Enrollment within the University System of New Hampshire has been just under 60 percent female to just more than 40 percent male for at least the past 10 years, according to spokesman Matt Cookson. The system includes UNH, Plymouth State University, Keene State College and Granite State College.
...
Economic changes are partly to blame for boys' performance, he said, since a loss of agriculture and manufacturing jobs have put many men out of work and into trouble. He said this has increased the number of boys who grow up without fathers and male role models."

Yet Another Female Teacher Sleeps with A Minor

blaze4metal · 30 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'A Mississippi teacher admitted to cops that she had sex with a 15-year-old male student to whom she sent explicit text messages and trysted with in her Jaguar, which bore the license plate "GRRRRR."
...
Bogard, pictured in the mug shot at right, is facing felony sexual battery charges. She has been suspended with pay and is free on $50,000 bail.'

Will she be let go because of some "emotional" issue? She's already back on the street and most likely will get her job back if she gets off.

Female Bigamist Trageted Military Men

Matt · 31 January 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video story here.

Get the commentary: the reporter says the woman "suffers from Munchausen syndrome..."

"Suffers from"? So if a man runs around and marries, then divorces or abandons a string of women, is he considered a psychiatric case or a criminal? Well this woman is facing criminal charges, but because she is pregnant with her 4th child (by as many men), I doubt she'll do the same kind of time a man would. And what if she didn't have the kids? I doubt she would then, either.

Men get jails, women get diagnoses. Keep an eye on this one.

Where have all the men gone?

Anonymous · 1 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"British women in their thirties want mates. They can't find any. Why? Because most eligible males are selfish, mixed-up man-boys chasing no-strings sex, says our correspondent."

Angry, man-hating rant from another feminist entitlement princess. There is a section for posting comments below. Tell her what you think.

XBox Live supporting sexist "women-only" nights

MrReality · 1 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Politically correct nonsense -- based on anti-male claims -- invade XBox Live. Now males can't even play video games without being labelled as predators. I suppose since they are losing in the real world arena -- with ladies nights being banned across the country -- they move to video games? Pathetic.

Here is an excerpt from the webpage (Notice the woman flexing a muscle. This was actually adopted from a feminist rendering): "Monday nights are for the ladies! Each Monday, Xbox GamerchiX gather to play together on Xbox LIVE®. This isn't a chance for the guys to find girls to play with, fellas, this is strictly for the girls. (If you're a dude looking for a chance to game with girls, check out Frag Doll Friday!)"

So male gamers are banned from playing with female gamers on this night because women claim they are afraid of being "hit on" by men.

Somehow this pro-female ideology flies in the face of articles written by women that chide men for avoiding women. Feminists have attacked bachelorism many times. (Read here.)

So if men are avoiding women to the point where women get angry over it how is it that they are "constantly hitting on them" at the same time? Feminist ideology is being utilized to give women preferential treatment and it needs to stop.

Males pay the same fees for usage of XBox Live Gold that females do so they should be able to play anytime they want with whomever they want.

Working-class white British boys falling behind everyone else at school

Anonymous · 1 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"White working-class boys are doing significantly worse at school than almost all other groups of pupils.

A mere 15 per cent finish compulsory education having mastered the three Rs, official statistics show.

For black boys from similar backgrounds, the figure is 22 per cent while for Asians it is 29 per cent and Chinese 52 per cent."

Woman who sodomized man before killing him granted parole

ItsDan · 1 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Murderer Yvonne Johnson was granted day parole Thursday, but despite her years in prison, the family of the man she tortured and strangled say they haven't found justice.
...
She was one of four people who attacked Skwarok, believing him to be a child molester. She sodomized him with a wooden stool leg and strangled him with a telephone cord."

NOW to Monitor Super Bowl Ads for Offensive Content

Roy · 1 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"The NOW Foundation is going on the offensive this year with our 2008 Feminist Super Bowl AdWatch," said NOW Foundation President Kim Gandy. "Almost as many women as men watch the Super Bowl, and millions of girls and boys are glued to the screen as well," said Gandy. "That's why our feminist ad-watchers will be paying close attention to the commercials and ranking them based on their portrayal of women and other groups who often see themselves stereotyped, ridiculed or just plain missing in high-profile ads."

Somehow I suspect that there won't be enough lesbians represented in the beer commercials. Just a hunch...

Carey Roberts: "American Heart Association Plays a Cruel Trick on Women"

anthony · 1 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"So men are at far greater risk of heart disease, and their premature deaths portend institutionalization and financial hardship for their wives.

You'd think the American Heart Association would have programs designed especially to help men. They don't.

But not to worry, the AHA does have a gender-specific program - "Go Red for Women."

That's right, the Heart Association has designated this Friday, February 1 as National Wear Red Day. Here's the latest fashion tip from the AHA:

"National Wear Red Day has its own dress code. Wear your favorite red clothes or accessory - a red blouse, a red dress pin, a fabulous red handbag."

Witness: Ohio Mom on Trial Said Baby 'Fit Right In' Microwave

anthony · 1 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman who shared a jail cell with a mother accused of killing her baby by burning her in a microwave oven told a jury Thursday that the mom confessed to the crime, saying the month-old girl "fit right in" the oven.

Linda Williams testified that she developed a sexual relationship with defendant China Arnold when the two were cellmates in the Montgomery County Jail in March and that Arnold confided in her about what happened to her baby.

She said Arnold feared her boyfriend believed he wasn't the father of the child and was going to leave her.

"She said she put the baby into the microwave and started it and left the house," Williams said."

Woman gets two and half years for sex offences

Sheldon · 2 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article can be read here.

Interesting development up here in Canada. A female sex offender is getting 2 and a half years recently for sexually assaulting a 12 year old boy. It's good to see justice being served in such cases for a change. What's particularly encouraging about this case is the opinions of both the prosecutor, Chris Nicholson, and the Judge, Margaret Stewart. Nicholson is quoted as saying in reference to the gender of the perpetrator, "in these days of "equality" [my quotation marks], it shouldn't make any difference". The prosecutor also said,"if a man committed a similar offence, he would almost certainly get prison time", and apparently the female judge agreed. Even more impressive is Judge Stewart's criticism of her not taking responsibility for the crime and laying the blame on her ex-husband.

Murder-by-Proxy: Hit man faces murder charge while estranged wife of victim does not

Matt · 2 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Does it get any more classic than this? A woman hires a man to murder her estranged husband because she is afraid she will not do well in the divorce, or whatever. They get caught. She and another man (will presume it is her boyfriend but the article doesn't say) face criminal solicitation of murder while the hit-man faces capital murder charges. Correct me if I am wrong here, but doesn't it generally happen that when there is a murder conspiracy all the conspirators face the charge of murder? Unless of course one of them is female. I wonder what the second man will get for prison time vs. the woman, assuming both or either are found guilty? Excerpt:

'Police in Frisco, Texas, have arrested a man accused of killing a former Brighton resident Craig Nail in Texas the day after Christmas.
...
Mark Lyle Bell, 52, of McKinney, Texas, was charged with capital murder, a felony, said Sgt. Gerald Meadors of the Frisco Police Department. Nail was found shot to death in his home on Dec. 26. He was a 1989 graduate of Rush-Henrietta High School and had two children.

Nail was reportedly close to finalizing a bitter divorce dispute with his estranged wife.
...
Guthrie-Nail, 42, and Thomas Edward Grace, 55, both of Carrollton, Texas, were each charged with first-degree conspiracy to commit murder, a felony, Meadors said. Bell, Guthrie-Nail and Grace were each being held on $1 million bail, he said.
...
Earlier this month, Guthrie-Nail was also charged with first-degree criminal solicitation murder, a felony, Meadors said. She is accused of attempting to hire someone to kill her estranged husband. That man, who was not identified by police, was not among the men men charged this week.

A second victim, Therisa Hofman, 38, of Plano, Texas, was also shot multiple times, but survived. Meadors said she was Nail’s girlfriend.'

Nun Sentenced for Sexual Abuse Against Boys

oregon dad · 2 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'"When are we going to start dealing with female rapists and give them the same sentence as male rapists?" he asked.
...
Prosecutors had asked for more than $28,000 in restitution, mainly for therapy costs, but the judge noted Giannini had taken a vow of poverty 60 years ago and had virtually no assets.'

Boys and Phonics

Matt · 3 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Submitted via note:

Hi, I have read an article about education and boys on your site and thought this may be useful to you. It is a system employed in some Scottish schools which eradicated the gap between gender and even social classes furthermore, boys actually came on top in some areas; but would the education system ever support a system where boys do better then girls even when the girls themselves do better with the system?

Articles here:
Article 1
Article 2
Article 3

Comment from one article:

"The size of the tiny, almost missable article on the shocking fact that 9 out of 10 working class boys fail to even get good basic GCSE's shows how much attention society is prepared to place on boys. Scottish schools which tested classical methods of using synthetic phonetics in teaching reading saw a truly remarkable improvement – with girls reading improving by 14 months at age 7, but wait for it - boys improving by 20 months, boys caught up to girls in comprehension and further more they actually beat girls on spelling and recognition.

In fact the current gap between different social classes even diminished! But will feminist influenced educationalist tolerate a system were boys do better then girls, even if actually the system means girls are actually improving themselves (by 14 months!) but simply not as much as boys. I doubt it so don't expect to see these techniques in British schools. I don't even know if Metro will think this comment is even worth publishing.

For years polices have been directed ONLY at girls, the result, boys particularly middle class white boys were neglected. Education for girls for decades sparked national campaigns, even world leader conferences for girls only and not boys yet as soon as boys started to do worse then girls as result of neglect, boys were forgotten. A recent government report said helping bridge the gender gap for boys is “counter-productive”. This simply highlights the double standards against middle class white boys – why were the three decades of helping girls until they outperformed boys not counter-productive? Furthermore, why don't these same people think schemes to increase the number of women in many fields such as science and engineering are counter-productive? Why is all universities having departments specifically for admission of women and women's studies not counter-productive? Ahh that's right because men can't be the victims of sexism. Just remember if you think that about men that's one thing but remember the people in question here – young children."

Ohio HB 287: "NOW's the time for dad's rights"

Anonymous · 4 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"You know you've done something right when you wind up on the Internet homepage of the National Organization for Women.

Allow me to introduce you to House Bill 287, offered for consideration in the Ohio House last summer by Rep. John Adams, R-Sydney. HB 287, in short, requires a pregnant woman to get the consent of the baby's father in order to obtain an abortion.

Just listen to the estrogen boil!"

Bill tracking here.

Women Run Over Husband with Car

anthony · 4 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Two Ronkonkoma women were arrested yesterday after they intentionally hit with their car a man who lived at the same residence, Suffolk police said.

The car's only passenger was the victim's wife, who was a willing accomplice in the effort to mow him down, police said.

...

Lester's car jumped the curb, striking Corso. He suffered a broken collar bone, broken ribs and a head laceration, police said. Corso's wife, Christina Latorre, 34, was in the vehicle and police are investigating why the two women set out to hit him.

"It's unusual that two women would go out and one would hit their husband intentionally," said Det. Sgt. Michael Komorowski. "We're still investigating the reasons for the crime."'

Female Teacher Arrested for Having Sex with 8th Grader

anthony · 4 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Sarah Elizabeth Joel, a former teacher at Narccoossee Community School, was recently arrested and charged with three counts of lewd and lascivious battery on one of her former students. The woman is 31 years old and she is represented by an attorney that has already asked the media and the public not to prejudge his client before “all the facts come out.”

Sarah Elizabeth Joel was arrested on Saturday at school-district headquarters in Kissimmee, but she was granted $22,500 bail during a first appearance hearing. It seems that the young woman admitted to having sex with the boy twice during Christmas holiday. However, the teen, who is now 16 years old, told the police that they had sex once before in September. Back then he was 15 years old.'

The feminist fight over male circumcision

anthony · 4 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Last week I wrote an item about the recent court decision in Oregon on whether or not a 12 year old Olympia boy should be circumcised. The court ruled the lad should have a say in the matter. My concern was whether the dispute itself--public litigation between his divorced parents--could itself be psychologically damaging to the boy. My brief post quickly went to the top of the Crosscut charts. One reason: men arguing the pros and cons of the procedure. Emotions ran high: some men liken the experience to being raped. Now the debate has spilled over into feminist circles. That right, a girl fight over penises."

Law keeps man from daughter

anthony · 4 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'James Rodesiler carries outdated photographs of the daughter he lost.

The girl is alive and evidently doing well in Coldwater. But Rodesiler, an Addison resident who is postmaster of Hanover, was cut from her life when the baby was 2 months old. She is 3 years old now.

He learned the hard way that he has no legal rights as a parent because the girl's mother was married to another man when the baby was born.

"The fact that you've got a DNA test, the fact you've held your daughter in your arms, that fact you want to take care of her doesn't matter," Rodesiler said. "The state recognizes the marriage certificate."'

Michigan law always presumes a husband is father of his wife's children, regardless of biological facts."

Feminist Leaders Oppose Hillary, Endorse Obama

anthony · 4 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'"Choosing to support Senator Obama was not an easy decision for us," the group stated, "because electing a woman president would be a cause for celebration in itself." They "deplored" the "sexist attacks against Senator Clinton that have circulated in the media." But, they stated, they nevertheless supported Obama because his election "would be another historic achievement" and because "his support for gender equality has been unwavering."'

Hillary's Program For Helping Fathers - No, This Is NOT A Joke!

axolotl · 5 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

From Glenn Sacks: Hillary Clinton's Youth Opportunity Agenda Will Help Low-Income Fathers

Excerpt:

"The Urban League's 2006 report on the state of black America concluded that the child support system and its abuses are a major problem for African-American men. The report found that the system represents a large, hidden "tax" on the already meager earnings of many black men."

Ax's Take: As with any campaign promise, it remains to be seen if she will follow through on it should she win. She might just be trying to steal some of the black vote from Obama, since he has stolen women voters from her.

Former NY Yankee estranged wife arrested after refusing to leave his home

anthony · 5 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"EVANSVILLE, Ind. -- The estranged wife of Los Angeles Dodgers coach Don Mattingly was arrested and charged with public intoxication and disorderly conduct after police say she refused to leave his property in Indiana.

Police arrested 45-year-old Kim Mattingly after they were called to the home of the former Yankee first baseman to investigate reports of a person refusing to leave on Saturday, a probable cause affidavit said. The affidavit, signed by a Vanderburgh County Sheriff's Deputy Chad Howard, said she smelled of alcohol and screamed at officers.

The couple filed for divorce in November on the grounds of irreconcilable differences. The divorce has not been finalized, and no further action has been taken.

Kim Mattingly was released from the Vanderburgh County Jail after posting $50 bond shortly after her arrest and made her first court appearance Monday on the charges. She is scheduled to appear next on March 3."

New Sara Evans Video Objectifies Men

xtrnl · 5 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

In this modern day and age, you always hear women complaining about how they're objectified in advertisements, TV shows, movies, and music videos (namely hip hop). I find this interesting, as they seem to look the other way when it comes to men being objectified. And, quite appropriately, the music genre that is usually guilty of this is the complete opposite of hip hop. That is, country. As Carrie Underwood showed us, country is frequently used as an outlet for women to complain about men, but of course with fictitious complaints or general complaints which are never backed up with facts. Now, Sara Evans has a new video in which she orders men, which arrive at her house in a parcel, to do house work. Could u imagine if a man made a video where he orders women to come to his house as objects in a parcel to do chores for him? But then again, what do you expect from the same artist that gave us the ever horrid "Guys Do It All The Time" song and video? If you would like to view the video I'm talking about, click here. That being said, if women want hip hop to stop objectifying them, they should quit supporting country artists that objectify men. Otherwise, they're nothing more than hypocrites.

"Feminism has turned men into second-class citizens"

Anonymous · 6 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"What does it mean to be a man in the 21st century?

If you'd asked a man living in the mid-20th century - someone like my dad for instance - he would have breezily given you a quick answer.
...
But according to a recent survey, today's young men don't share their forebears' sense of entitlement.

Indeed, 52 per cent of them believe they have to live by women's rules, and a staggering 82 per cent feel they have lost their traditional male role in society.

For most of them, this means feeling undervalued, their voices and opinions unheard.

This is an astonishing reversal, and one that we can no longer ignore, underscored as it is by several facts. For example, for the first time in history a majority of American women are not living with a spouse."

UK: The silent epidemic of male suicide

anthony · 6 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Whatever the individual reasons that drive people to suicide, the one thing that puts you most at risk is being a man under the age of 35.

Of the 13 people who killed themselves in South Wales over the past year, all but one were men aged under 27."

Bush Requests VAWA Cut

anthony · 6 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Domestic violence advocates are outraged by President Bushs Budget Request for Fiscal Year 2009, saying the measure deals a devastating blow to women and children. The Budget Request released yesterday proposes cutting $120 million from life-saving domestic violence services created by the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA).

We are appalled to see the President proposing such devastating cuts to vital programs that save American lives, said Sue Else, President of the National Network to End Domestic Violence (NNEDV). VAWA has been proven to save millions of lives and over $15 billion in health care, law enforcement, other social costs. It is fiscally irresponsible to propose such cuts and it turns a blind eye to the most vulnerable citizens of our country."

Parker: "Wrath of feminism scorned"

anthony · 6 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"In the minds of women with nothing left to protest, true betrayal is supporting a man when a woman is running. How dare he. It's all rather ... frock-ish. Perhaps precious? In 21st century America, feminist outrage has morphed into feminine pique.
...
But such thinking reveals an ugly truth about feminists and identity groups in general. They don't want what's best for the country; they want what's best for them. NOW wants a woman not because she's the best candidate, but because, by damn, it's their turn."

Add Pepsi And Budweiser To The Ban List

xtrnl · 7 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Many of us watched the Superbowl ads, and many of us noticed two companies which really stood out because they allowed misandry to rear its ugly head in their advertisements. The companies are Pepsi and Budweiser.

In the offending Pepsi commercial, Justin Timberlake is rammed crotch first into a mailbox post not once, but three times. Although the manner in which this type of violence is performed is unrealistic, it still is violence, and advertisements should not try to pass this off as entertainment or comedy. Sadly, this is like Sesame Street compared to how bad the Budweiser ad is.

In the Budweiser ad, or more specifically, the Bud Light ad, a man gets his dog to fetch him a bottle of another man's Bud Light, then asks the other man what his dog can do. The other man then instructs his dog to bite the first man in the testicles as revenge for trying to take the Bud Light. I wrote Budweiser regarding this. My letter read:

Hello. I'm writing you because I recently saw an ad for Bud Light on YouTube, which I found to be most offensive. Other users said that this ad aired during the superbowl. The ad, which is often referred to as "good dog" tries to make light of the sexual mutilation of a man, as a dog bites his crotch (not to mention the owner of the dog instructs him to). I find this offensive, and misandric, because if this were to happen in real life, surgery could be needed to fix the injury. It's certainly not something that makes me want to laugh, nor buy your product. As well, I would like to add that your commercial implies that people who buy your product are more likely to be the vitims of violence. It's not good business practice to alienate half to all of your potential customers by portraying one of the worst fates they can suffer as comedy. Is this ad still running?

They replied:

We appreciate that you took the time to express your views regarding our advertising.

Anheuser-Busch has found using humor in our advertising to be extremely successful through the years. In various polls, consumers have rated several of our humorous campaigns among the most popular in advertising history. We've conducted consumer research on the ad you've e-mailed us about, and it has proven to be popular with adult consumers.

We regret that you did not enjoy these ads, but we do appreciate your input and will keep it in mind as we develop future advertising. While we realize that not all advertising will appeal to everyone, we thank you for sharing your thoughts with us.

Again, thank you for contacting Anheuser-Busch. Please let us know if you have additional questions or comments.

This was nothing more than a blowoff (not even a fancy one). So I wrote back:

I appreciate your reply, but you did not answer my question. Is the ad still running?

I read on YouTube that it was banned. I regret to hear that people are ridiculously immature, to the point where that ad is actually popular. Could you imagine if instead you had women in the ad, and one woman's dog jumped up and bit the other woman's boobs or crotch? Obviously, this ad would not be welcomed. How about if the owner of the vicious dog was a man, and the victim still a woman? Or what if the man who got bit was black, while the dog's owner was white? Do you think this would fly?

I think it's about time that companies realize that using male bashing in their advertisements is not a good way to sell their products. Even if the ads are successful, they promote hate and violence, and try to pass it off as humour. This makes me sick. I have purchased Budweiser in the past, don't expect me to ever buy your products again if you continue running this ad. I will choose to buy other brands due to the fact that your company considers one of the worst forms of male suffering to be entertainment. I would also like to inform you that I will inform as many Men's Rights websites about this ad as possible, and get their members to boycott your products as well.

I'm going to send a letter to Pepsi as well, regarding their advertisement. In the meantime, let's do our part as MRAs and get those letters firing, and boycott these male-hating companies!

Good summary/handout re DV vs. men

Anonymous · 7 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Find it here. Excerpt:

"Very little in known about the actual number of men who are in a domestic relationship in which they are abused or treated violently by women. In 100 domestic violence situations approximately 40 cases involve violence by women against men. An estimated 400,000 women per year are abused or treated violently in the United States by their spouse or intimate partner. This means that roughly 300,000 to 400,000 men are treated violently by their wife or girl friend."

MensActivism Readers - "Support? System Down" Needs Your Support

Anonymous · 8 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

All readers of MensActivism - the filmmaker for "Support? System Down" needs our help now. PLEASE do not brush this post off... united we can help Angelo Lobo achieve nationwide distribution of his documentary on family court corruption. There is significant resistance to the release of this film and as you can guess many do not want its release.

Please consider: 1) Buy a T-shirt or 2) Make a donation of any amount.

View the four shocking trailers here.

The filmmaker of this high quality movie will NEVER see a dime, however he feels compelled to release it for nationwide distribution because of all who have suffered. Thank you for any help you can provide.

Enshrined in Law since 1930: Only men can be slaves

Matt · 8 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Been looking for more "cold hard evidence"? It's right here. Excerpt:

"C29 Forced Labour Convention, 1930
Convention concerning Forced or Compulsory Labour (Note: Date of coming into force: 01:05:1932.)
...
Date of adoption:28:06:1930
...
Article 1

1. Each Member of the International Labour Organisation which ratifies this Convention undertakes to suppress the use of forced or compulsory labour in all its forms within the shortest possible period.

2. With a view to this complete suppression, recourse to forced or compulsory labour may be had, during the transitional period, for public purposes only and as an exceptional measure, subject to the conditions and guarantees hereinafter provided.
...
Article 11

1. Only adult able-bodied males who are of an apparent age of not less than 18 and not more than 45 years may be called upon for forced or compulsory labour.

...
2. Nevertheless, for the purposes of this Convention, the term forced or compulsory labour shall not include--

(a) any work or service exacted in virtue of compulsory military service laws for work of a purely military character;"

Note that as Marc A. pointed out in his note to MANN, this convention specifically excludes military service from its scope. In other words, this document is not the smoking gun with regard to the modern international standard for forced military service, but is the smoking gun regarding any forced service exacted by an authority from the population-- and it specifically says only able-bodies males between 18 and 45 are subject to it.

NH Men's Commission Releases Second Biennial Report

Scott · 8 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The New Hampshire Commission on the Status of Men has just released its second biennial report: The Status of Men in New Hampshire. This report summarizes the work of the Commission during the past two years and serves as a guide to policymakers on some of the most pressing problems facing men today.

The report covers topics including the education of boys, NH college enrollment statistics, the status of fathers, parental alienation syndrome, birth certificate laws, family law, prostate cancer, and domestic violence. It includes summaries of testimony heard from NH state agency representatives, education experts, family violence researchers, and psychologists.

The Commission hopes that the distribution of this report will be used to raise awareness about the problems facing men and their families, and inspire productive efforts to correct these injustices.

"The Men's Experiences with Partner Aggression Project" Needs Participants

Matt · 8 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

"The Men's Experiences with Partner Aggression Project" is a research study at Clark University in collaboration with the Domestic Abuse Helpline for Men and Women (DAHMW). This study is funded by the National Institute of Mental Health.

The goal of the study is to better understand the experiences of men who are in relationships with women who use violence. Extensive research has shown that men are at risk for sustaining partner violence in their relationships, yet few studies have investigated their experiences, and there are few resources available to such men. By conducting this research project, we hope to provide much needed information on these men, their relationships, and their needs.

If you are a man between the ages of 18 and 59 and have been physically assaulted at least one time in the last 12 months by a current or former intimate female partner you may be eligible to participate in this study. If interested in please call the DAHMW at 1-888-743-5754 or email dahmwagency-at-gmail.com. If eligible you make take the survey online or by phone. Your call or email will be kept strictly confidential and no personal identifying information will be required from you if you decide to participate in this study. You may also visit DAHMW's website at: http://www.dahmw.org/ or the project's website at http://www.clarku.edu/faculty/dhines/ for more information.

"Home circumcisionist" faces child abuse charges

Matt · 8 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. This guy is quite a piece of work on many levels, but the significance of this story is the reason for his facing of charges. It's good news that that is what he is being charged with and why; it's bad that he did it at all. Now if we could only get the same attitude about it in other contexts. Excerpt:

"Detective Shelly Hartley said Marlowe doesn't like hospitals and denied the women prenatal care in both cases, then circumcised the boys when they were 8 days old.

Marlowe later moved to Gaston County and is serving a 150-day jail sentence there on charges of resisting a public officer, assault on a female and multiple counts of child neglect."

Police collecting men's DNA at traffic stops

Matt · 8 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Any excuse, the more sensational, the better, to introduce the unending documenting and tracking of men. I think when Patrick McGoohan produced the TV series The Prisoner back in the late 1960s, he may not have been thinking it could get this bad this fast. But here it comes, even faster than Orwell would have thought. Read it here. Excerpt:

"DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. -- Police officers in Daytona Beach are swabbing the mouths of persons of interests during traffic stops with special DNA kits in the hunt for an elusive serial killer, sources close to the investigation told Local 6.

Investigators said they believe the same man has killed four women execution style in the Daytona Beach area.

A profiler said the serial killer is likely clean cut and probably has a wife or girlfriend.

And, the Daytona Beach police Chief, Mike Chitwood, said detectives have the killer's DNA.
...
The DNA kits are also being used in prostitution stings in the area.

Chitwood said over time, modern technology will lead to the killer."

Ex-wife arrested for murder over custody outcome

Matt · 8 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. So I suppose when a man does something like this it's another example of patriarchal oppression and when a woman does it, it is her natural instincts at work and she shouldn't be blamed for it. Or maybe it was really just payback for years of abuse? No matter, she has a vagina, and therefore, can't possibly be guilty of anything. Notice it's a murder-by-proxy case too; she got someone else to actually do the deed. Excerpt:

'The ex-wife of slain dentist Daniel Malakov was arrested Thursday on charges of plotting to kill him on a playground in front of their 4-year-old daughter.
...
Borukhova exchanged 65 calls with suspected triggerman Mikhail Mallayev, 50, in the days before the Oct. 28 slaying - one of them placed from near the crime scene, prosecutors have said.

...
"We've been looking at her from the outset because she knew Malakov would be in the park with his daughter," a police source said.
...
They speculated the murder was payback for Malakov's victory in a custody battle for their daughter, Michelle, who turns 5 next week.
...
Police say Mallayev approached Malakov, who was with Michelle and Borukhova, at the Annadale Playground in Forest Hills, Queens, and pumped three bullets into his chest at point-blank range.

He then calmly got into his Dodge Durango SUV and drove 14 hours back home to Tucker, Ga., police say.

Mallayev, who has denied killing anyone, is being held without bail.'

Strippers Welcomed Back to Duke... as "Paid Artists"

Roy · 8 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Duke University has come under fire from some students and conservative commentators this week for hosting a performance that involved strippers and burlesque dancers, two years after an infamous case in which lacrosse players at the school were falsely accused of raping a stripper at a team party.

The Sex Workers' Art Show, a traveling act that features discussions about the sex industry as well as performances by strippers and burlesque dancers, performed on campus on Sunday. The event was sponsored and paid for in part by the Student Health Center, the Duke women's center, the Women's Studies department and the sexual assault support services, among other groups.
...
Larry Moneta, Duke's vice president for student affairs, said the performance "raised issues for discussion." Asked about the difference between the art show and the lacrosse team's hosting strippers, he said, "one served the purpose of personal gratification and the other had educational value."'

(Bottom line - students paid fees that were used to hire educationally-inclined strippers. Does that make all the students pimps?)

Lolita love affair scandalises Italy

Anonymous · 8 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Italy is up in arms because a 34-year-old Italian man who had sex with a 13-year-old girl has had his sentence cut by a two-thirds because a court decided there was "real love" between the pair. Excerpt:

'However, Simonetta Matone, a judge in Rome, said the law must "always look to be reasonable in these cases".

She added: "Every relationship is a relationship and the real maturity, whether physical or psychological, of the minor must be weighed, with the help of experts."

The court decision has unleashed a wave of condemnation in Italy, and even authors of teen novels stepped forward to caution their readers against early sexual encounters.'

OK EVERYONE, LET'S PLAY REVERSE THE GENDERS... AND SO IT GOES...

"Love in the Air for Sugar Mamas & Boy Toys"

JVC · 8 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Older rich women (must be at least 35 years old and earn at least $500,000.00), are now being provided with young men as boy toys. The only criterion for men is that they be good-looking. I guess "This is Only Bad If Men Do It". Excerpt:

'Women who pursue men more than seven years their junior are sometimes derogatorily referred to as “cougars,” because of the perception that they’re on the hunt. But times are changing.
...
“At a certain age, the trophy wife syndrome is so prevalent," says Vivian Cha, a 47-year-old physician and speed-dating contestant. "The older man, in his 40s or 50s, goes for the younger blond bimbo, who’s 20 or 30 years old. We older women sort of get thrown to the dust, so I think this is a great idea.”

Attractive young men seeking their own Mrs. Robinson jumped at the chance to meet a woman with more “experience.”

“I’m definitely interested in being surprised or wowed," says Paul Janka, a 32-year-old writer who authored an online guidebook for men called "Getting Laid in NYC."

"If anyone’s going to do it, it’s some of these women who have the assets and the resources to put together exceptional getaway vacations.'

Budweiser's Reply Regarding "Good Dog" Bud Light Ad

xtrnl · 9 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Hi fellow MRAs. I recently posted a story about a Bud Light commercial, in which a man is viciously assaulted where it hurts most by a dog. I'm happy to say that the only place this ad can now be viewed is YouTube. Here's what Budweiser had to say:

"Dear Evan,

Thank you for responding to Anheuser-Busch. We apologize if your question was not answered, and also because there seems to be some confusion surrounding the ad.

For starters – no, the ad is no longer being aired. It actually has not appeared on television for a few years now, and the YouTube version was posted online without our company's permission. This is typical of most videos on sharing sites, an in addition to not being able to control posters' actions, we also cannot control the information they provide along with the spot.

If you have concerns about this ad appearing on YouTube, we encourage you to contact the poster directly.

Again, Evan, thank you for contacting us. Please let us know if you have additional comments or questions.

Your Friends at Anheuser-Busch

1-800-DIAL-BUD (1-800-342-5283)"

We can all take a nice sigh of relief knowing that this commercial will never air again. I was happy to hear this news, and I replied accordingly:

"Thank you very much for your reply. It was a lot more helpful than the last one I received.

I'm happy to hear that your advertising team came to their senses and realized that the ad is offensive. I came across the ad when I went on YouTube, looking for this year's Superbowl ads. I mistook the ad as one of your recent ones. I understand that you're not able to control what goes on YouTube; and I want you to know that I'm not upset that it's on YouTube. I was upset when I saw it because I thought it was still running.

There is a terrible plethora of companies out there that still use male bashing in an attempt to sell products. I just thought that if it was still running, I would inform you that ads like the one we're discussing ultimately lose as many customers as they gain, as I'm not the only one who finds ads like this offensive and denigrating.

You may recall a similar ad that was made in 2002 for Progressive Insurance, in which an angry woman, through a voodoo doll, sexually abuses her ex-boyfriend, by using pliers on his genitals. This ad was not well-received, and lost the company many customers and potential customers. Eventually, they ran another commercial with the pliers scene cut out, because they lost customers and received many complaints.

That being said, I would like to say that your ads have improved dramatically since the one we're discussing was made. Your recent advertisements for Bud Light are not only male-friendly, but they're really funny. I saw the ones that were made for the Superbowl this year, and I laughed at all of them. Please continue making clever, humourous, nonviolent(slapstick violence is okay, as long as it doesn't go overboard i.e. genital abuse) ads. As long as your ads continue following this trend, I will continue to purchase your products.

Thank You For Hearing Your Customer's Concerns

Sincerely,
Evan Springler"

There you have it. If you wanna throw back a Bud Light now, feel free to. Apparently, this company has realized the error of its ways. I would also like to apologize for the misunderstanding I caused amonsgst us. I thought this ad was a recent one. I'm happy to say that it is now nothing more than a memory. As Stewie on Family Guy would say "Victory is mine!"

"Flirty women victimize well-dressed men"

Matt · 9 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Imagine if this were a cadre of "flirty men vicimizing well-dressed women" how that would be presented. Excerpt:

'DALLAS - Well-dressed men at posh Dallas hotels and bars are being targeted by a ring of flirtatious women who may be drugging them before swiping their watches and other expensive items, police said.
...
About a half-dozen men have reported falling victim to the scheme, Dallas police detective Mark Jenkins said. Many were business travelers, and Jenkins suspects there are others too embarrassed to file police reports.
...
"I don't know if so much it's that the men are being attracted to them, as that (the suspects) are more or less forcing themselves on the men," Jenkins said.
...
The women have histories as prostitutes, Jenkins said.
...
The women may be slipping drugs into the drinks of their victims, police said.'

Hillary & Obama Met Hollywood with Fathers 4 Justice outside Kodak Theater

MR · 9 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Hillary & Obama met Hollywood this past week at the Kodak Theater (home of the Academy Awards), while Fathers 4 Justice stood outside.

Female Teacher Allegedly Tapes Special Education Student to Chair

anthony · 9 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Chicago teacher faces dismissal after allegedly wrapping masking tape around a special education student to keep him in his chair when he wouldn't sit down, authorities said.
...
The teacher was in a classroom of four or five students on Tuesday when one 9-year-old boy would not sit down. The teacher restrained him with the tape, Vaughn said.
...
"It appears the allegations will be substantiated and we will fire her," Vaughn said.

The unnamed teacher obtained her credentials last June, Vaughn said.'

Mensactivism.org Wiki to be Shut Down

Scott · 9 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

In a little while I will be taking down the Mensactivism.org wiki. It's a project that I haven't had the time or energy to properly nourish, and it requires frequent attention to maintain due to its open nature.

I would not even consider taking it down if it weren't for the fact that some of the participants in that wiki have mirrored its contents at another site. So don't worry - no information will be lost. Instead, I encourage you to bookmark the Equalism Wiki and get involved there.

In particular, I'm really grateful to the folks who participated in compiling a comprehensive list of which colleges and universities have Women's Studies departments but not Men's Studies departments (or classes). That's going to be an important resource when someone finally files a lawsuit to establish Men's Studies as a legitimate academic department and major.

NOW-NYS Strikes Again, Deems MSNBC Anchor's Comment 'Abuse'

Roy · 9 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'NOW-NYS President Marcia Pappas, who denounced Sen. Ted Kennedy for picking Barack Obama over Hillary Clinton, calling it the "ultimate betrayal" of women, just issued a statement slamming MSNBC's David Shuster for suggesting the Clinton campaign "pimped out" Chelsea Clinton by having her make calls to superdelegates, saying: "This awful name-calling is nothing short of abusive."

"When male abusers feel they are failing to reach their spouses, they often go after their children," Pappas wrote. "Every day across the country battered women and their children suffer at the hands of abusers."'

Now the media itself is adopting this batterers' technique. This Schuster remark speaks volumes about the larger picture for mothers and their children. It's not just about hate speech; it's about power and control."

(PS - Shuster has been suspended and may likely be fired for his remark.)

13-YO boy arrested on a battery charge after he threw a pencil in class

anthony · 9 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Police arrested a 13-year-old boy on a battery charge after he threw a broken pencil in class that hit another boy in the back of the head, according to a report released Thursday.
...
Two witnesses in class said the suspect, also a seventh grade student, threw the pencil piece.
...
When he threw the pencil at one of the witnesses, the witness ducked and the pencil hit the victim."

Ruov: Boycott Valentine's Day

MrReality · 11 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

An excerpt from Compelled to Give:

"It's February again. This can mean only one thing: the dreaded, compulsory Valentine's Day is just around the corner. If you forgot, fear not: the onslaught of TV and radio commercials will remind you and remind you and remind you. There is no escaping them, and they all share a common theme: women are entitled to receive; men are compelled to give. Nothing quite captures the essence of love like female entitlement.

Ask the typical woman to define romance. I'll lay odds that she'll describe a man buying and/or doing something for her, without a word about spoiling him. Why such narcissism? Simple. Most women are raised to be self-absorbed takers, and insecure men continue to tolerate and enable them.

Are men worthless? Only if they never demand fairness and reciprocity from women — and many men don't. Valentine's Day, and all of its pathetic rituals, represents the failure of men to stand up to women — who, ironically, don't respect these eunuchs and don't sexually crave them, either."

Is It Hiring Discrimination to Ask About Having Babies?

Roy · 11 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This piece offers pro/con views about whether employers should be able to consider a woman's plans to have babies when hiring her:

(Pro) - "From a position of no equality at all, women are now granted absolute privilege. ... because an employer is forbidden from asking if a woman plans to have children, experience tells them she'll sign up then rush off and start a family, brandishing her contract as a declaration of human rights."

(Con) - "Women have different skill sets from men, not least the ability to multi-task - a skill which defeats most men. If we weren't such good multi-taskers, the human race would not have survived. A woman should be given a job on ability... nothing else matters."

Ed. note: Before our North American readers post that "the article is dated Nov. 2, 2008, how can that be?" remember that date formats in most non-North American publications are "day-month-year" instead of "month-day-year".

Are girls wired not to win?

oregon dad · 11 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. An interesting admission that shows women often choose to not "have it all" so they can be with their families. All the while, industry is desperate to put women in top positions...and the girls are turning down the offers... excerpt:

'She also spoke about the pressures on women to take top jobs: “The company’s desperate – they want women at the senior executive level.” To get more gender balance at the top, she told me, offers too good to refuse were being made to other deserving women, as long as they were willing to move and, if they were successful, to move again a few years later. She had known just one who had said yes – someone without a family.
...
Most women in the West are now in the workplace and young women are doing exceptionally well at school and university in comparison with their male peers. But gifted, talented women with the most choices and freedoms don’t seem to be choosing the same paths, in the same numbers, as the men around them. Even with barriers stripped away, they don’t behave like male clones.'

RADAR ALERT: Call the CDC Today, Tell Them to Stop Goofball Research

Matt · 11 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

How many times have you heard of researchers who jimmy the data in order to slant their findings of partner violence? Well, this time we caught them red-handed. And this time, we're not to let them get away with their underhanded tactics! Here's the scoop ...

The federal Centers for Disease Control does a survey called the Behavioral Risk Factor Surveillance Survey. This past Friday the CDC reported on its latest survey on intimate partner violence. This is what they reported:

- Percentage male victims: 11.5%
- Percentage female victims: 23.6%

Every legitimate survey of partner violence has found that women are at least as likely as men to engage in partner violence. So how did the CDC come up these results?

Simple.

The widely-used Conflict Tactics Scale focuses on actual acts of violence.

But the CDC researchers decided on their own to expand the questions to include any "attempts" or "threats" of violence, plus that catch-all question, "any unwanted sex," which means a lot of different things to different people.

Today, RADAR is sending a complaint letter to CDC director Julie Gerberding. We are also issuing a press release to publicize the CDC's biased survey. And the CDC needs to hear from you - TODAY!

Email Dr. Gerberding at jyg2-at-cdc.gov and politely tell her that last week's CDC report of intimate partner violence uses invalid questions that grossly inflate and distort the true incidence of partner violence.

Urge her to immediately stop use of the flawed questions and to convene a panel of qualified university-based researchers.

Also feel free to call her office directly at 1-404-639-7000.

We've had enough of advocacy researchers who put out flawed data to prop up a corrupt DV industry.

TAKE ACTION NOW!

The RADAR letter to CDC can seen here (.pdf file)

The CDC study can be read here.

++++++

Judge declares mistrial in microwave baby case

blaze4metal · 11 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

I remember this story being submitted on this site so here's an update: she's been given a mistrial. I'm guessing she's getting the Yates 5-star treatment. Thoughts? Excerpt:

"DAYTON, Ohio (AP) - A judge in Dayton has declared a mistrial in the case of woman accused of killing her month-old daughter by burning her in a microwave.
...
The judge heard testimony privately from a juvenile who said he was at the apartment complex of defendant China Arnold on the night her baby died in 2005. The judge did not give details about juvenile's testimony.
...
The judge continued a gag order in the case, so neither prosecutors nor defense attorneys would comment.'

Ed. note: MANN post on this story here.

Torrance, California is Site of Second Fathers' Rights Rally

Anonymous · 12 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Torrance, California is Site of Second Fathers' Rights Rally

"While a clear blue sky and lush green grass presented a pleasant setting for beaten down Dads to gather, the pleasantry of the setting could not take away from the serious reason for Sunday's rally. Fathers across Los Angeles County, California, and America are being grossly abused by family law courts that do little to dispense just resolutions to family law litigant Fathers who come before them."

Wanted: Geeks with Boobs

Roy · 12 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This article suggests that high tech products would be better designed if more women were recruited to the information technology field. It recycles some traditional feminist myths about women's natural abilities to enhance teamwork and understand "user interfaces…". Excerpt:

'Women control more than 83 percent of all consumer purchases, and they outpace men when it comes to buying consumer electronics, but they hold only 27 percent of computer-related jobs...

"One of the biggest criticisms of technology today is that user interfaces are poor," explains a professor of information systems at the University of Arkansas. Men, he says, largely don't do a great job making the products easier to use because they concentrate more on the "geek" factor of technology. "I think women have more of an intuitive sense of designing interfaces."'

Movie Released: "A Father's Rights"

Matt · 12 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via email submission: A Father's Rights is a movie based on a true story about a father's struggle with the legal system in how his daughter, who was born out of wedlock, was treated differently than other children while fighting for his rights to have a say in said daughter's life. Please go to http://www.williamfain.com/ to find out more about the company and see clips of the movie.

[WFP would like to make you aware of a fundraising opportunity. The soundtrack CDs retail for $15.00; however, WFP will sell them to you for $7.00 so you can resell them for $15.00.]

Hillary learns the hard way-- or maybe she doesn't

Matt · 12 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I saw this and this and laughed. "She who lives by the PC-sword apparently also dies by it." Well if you're going to keep taking the approach that skin color-ethnicity and/or gender are, or should be, significant factors in decisions that don't really have them as a proper input, I suppose when things don't go your way, you must accept the consequences. I hope she learns something from these happenings but somehow, I doubt she will.

To truly take on a point of view that says to judge people by the content of their character rather than anything else apparently has yet to really make its way into the collective psyche. MLK Jr. would be disappointed, but really, what did he expect? This human race it seems has a long way to go in pulling its collective head out of its collective you-know-what.

Not wanting to count chickens before they are hatched, and barring something really unexpected, I think The Hildebeast has, for all intents and purposes, been slain (see Yahoo's Interactive Map for primary results and forecasts in states that have not yet voted). What's funny is that between her and her husband, they've pretty much done it to themselves.

Prominant European economist refutes Alberto Alesina's "man tax" pseudo-science

Marc A. · 12 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Professor Gilles Saint-Paul of Toulouse, France just published this fantastic article refuting the pseudo-science behind Harvard Professor Alberto Alesina's "man tax." Excerpt:

'This proposal has long been associated with a fringe of radical feminism, so it surprises me to see it coming out of mainstream economics and the academic establishment. In fact, it is becoming so mainstream that Spain's allegedly conservative Partido Popular has a tax break for female workers in its platform for the next election. Given that the ruling Socialist Party is unlikely to oppose such a "progressive" measure, the Spaniards will have gender-biased taxation whether they like it or not. This will probably remind them of the good old days of Franco.

...
...But this can be achieved by a gender-neutral reduction in the tax rate on the secondary earner's hours (which could well also apply to the primary earner's marginal hours such as overtime)...
...
Such a gender-neutral scheme would be all the more appealing, relative to the gender-discrimination gender-based tax proposed, since the view that men's labour supply is less elastic than women's is quickly becoming obsolete. It is associated with a traditional household where women are secondary earners. Only a minority of people are in such a situation. In many countries, for example the US or the UK, more than 50% of adults are single. Furthermore, women earn more than men in a large minority of married couples (30% in Canada). The rapid deterioration of men's educational achievements relative to women suggests that this figure is going to increase. And, if men do provide lower effort in the university system (perhaps because they are less likely than in the past to have to provide for a family), this suggests that their behaviour can indeed be quite elastic.
...
So, what game is being played here? "Equality before the law" was written in constitutions by the people of the Enlightenment not only because they genuinely believed in it, but as a safeguard to prevent democracy from degenerating into tyranny. Absent of individual rights, a majority can impose arbitrary harm to a minority. The constitution defines the rights that the individual has that cannot be overturned by majority rule. Now, given that men and women have many stakes in common, a men vs. women split could seem unlikely. But the decline of marriage and the fall in fertility have reduced these common interests; and the rise of "political correctness" has led us to a situation where men are the only minority that can be played against for electoral gains. So I believe we are in fact entering a dirty – and most dangerous – round of divisive identity politics.'

Yet Another Beer Company Tries To Profit Off Of The Sexual Abuse of Males

xtrnl · 13 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Hey guys. I'm sad to inform you of yet another beer company that thinks the sexual abuse of males is comedy. If this isn't proof that beer must have a detrimental effect on brain cells, I don't what does. In this ad for Rolling Rock, a baseball deflects off of the scoreboard, hitting not one, not two, not three, but about ten men in the crotch. You can view the ad here. I must warn you though, your IQ will probably be cut in half from watching it, as this is the most immature commercial I've ever seen. I decided to write the company.

I sent them this letter regarding the ad:

Hi. I recently saw an ad which your company made on the internet. In this ad, a baseball player hits a baseball which deflects off the scoreboard then proceeds to hit around ten men in the crotch. I'm just writing to let you know that advertisements like that are offensive to some, as they try to make light of men's genitals getting abused. It would be like if you made a commercial where several women got hit in the boobs or box by the baseball. That wouldn't be acceptable. So why is this? Speaking of which, why is that only men are the victims of the slaptstick violence in this ad? Since you had several victims, you could have included women as well. I find ads like this one offensive and denigrating, and I have no interest in purchasing your product.

They responded:

Evan,

Thanks so much for the e-mail. I'm sorry you were not amused by our recent ad, but hey, to each his own. That's what makes this country great.

Please keep in mind, we've got a lot of new ads coming down the pike, which will hopefully be better suited to your tastes. And if not, that’s cool. Rolling Rock isn’t sold in Canada right now, anyway.

Take care.

Good thing there's plenty of room on the boycott list. We've got another candidate!

Dads DO matter: Why children brought up by BOTH parents are happier and more successful

Anonymous · 13 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Children behave better, learn more and are better adjusted if their father is involved in their lives, a major study shows...

...Anna Sarkadi, of Sweden's Uppsala University, where the research was carried out, said: "Our detailed 20-year review shows that overall, children reap positive benefits if they have active and regular engagement with a father figure.

"We found various studies that showed that children who had positively involved father figures were less likely to smoke and get into trouble with the police, achieved better levels of education and developed good friendships with children of both sexes.

"Long-term benefits included women who had better relationships with partners and a greater sense of mental and physical well-being at the age of 33 if they had a good relationship with their father at 16.

"It may seem obvious that what's worked for centuries is good for individuals and society, but that's what we found."

Woman Indicted After Dropping Child Twice From Second Story

anthony · 13 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A suburban mom accused of dropping her infant daughter twice from the indoor, second-story balcony in her home has been indicted on a charge of attempted capital murder.
...
The child did not suffer serious injuries and is in her father's care.
...
She has been suffering from schizophrenia since the birth of her daughter, said Howard Shapiro, one of Enjeti's attorneys."

Restraining Order Issued for Woman Who Sent Ex-Boyfriend 10,000 Text Messages in Two Months

anthony · 13 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Exxerpt:

"Timothy Mortimore's Valentine's Day may be less than romantic this year. Mortimore, 37, tells the UK's Daily Mail he has been unable to lead a normal life since his bitter ex-girlfriend, Lee Amor, 23, bombarded him with 10,000 abusive phone and text messages in two months — an average of one every eight minutes.

Mortimore took Amor to court after she followed him and his current girlfriend, approached him at work demanding they talk, sent a piece of glass she had used to cut herself and tried to convince him he was the father of her unborn child.

Amor pleaded guilty to harassment and was fined, as well as being slapped with a restraining order barring her from contacting or approaching Mortimore, the Daily Mail reports."

Female Deputy Dumps Quadriplegic Man From Wheelchair

anthony · 13 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The Hillsborough County Sheriff's Office said Tuesday that one of their own deputies is in trouble after she was caught on tape dumping a quadriplegic man out of his wheelchair while he was being booked into jail, and three supervisors were nearby at the time but did nothing.

Investigators say Deputy Charlotte Marshall Jones is suspended without pay after the January 29 incident, which involved 32-year-old Brian Sterner, who is a quadriplegic. Video shows Deputy Jones dumping Sterner out of his wheelchair and onto the floor while she is booking him into the Hillsborough County Jail. The tape also shows the deputy then searching Sterner as he lay on the floor."

YouTube: "Chivalry and Equal Rights"

MrReality · 13 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I figured we could use some comedy in this forum. A friend of mine from YouTube sent this to me. It's good to see men starting to open their eyes.

Please contact NH's Gov. Lynch re the NH Men's Commission

Matt · 13 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

'The terms of two people on the state Commission on the Status of Men expired as of Sept. 1. It's been almost half a year, and Gov. Lynch still has made no new nominations to replace them.
...
The women's commission has existed for 40 years, most of that time with full staffing and funding. The men of New Hampshire have a right to equal treatment not only by the Legislature but also by the governor.'

Contact information here.

A letter to protest tax-funded misandry

anthony · 13 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This intriguing letter was written by Deborah Fellows, president of the New York Civil Rights Council. Excerpt:

'"Women" studies appeared overnight and everywhere. Statistics like "One in Four females will be sexually molested by the time their 21" or "Super bowl Sunday incidences of domestic violence raise by a factor of four" started to appear. They were repeated so much they did become the truth. But when true and factual reports came out to counter balance the manipulated reports they had to come up with another way of getting their message of hatred and prejudices across. They infiltrated the Governments. They had to manipulate the questions to fulfill their data. Henceforth – Propaganda was again born.'

DHS, FBI Warn of Possibility of Female Homicide Bombers

anthony · 13 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The growing use by terrorist groups of women — some disguised as expectant moms — to deliver deadly homicide bombs has prompted the Department of Homeland Security and FBI to issue a rare warning that such attacks could take place on American soil.

"Female suicide bombers may have an advantage over their male counterparts in accessing targets," the analysis cautioned. "The means to conduct a suicide attack vary widely, but a key element in maximizing the lethality of a suicide bombing is the bomber's ability to get close to the target."

The assessment also strongly warned that potential female homicide bombers could use "prosthetic devices that mimic the look of a pregnant woman.'

Bravo's "Millionaire Match Maker" No Place for Men

Matt · 13 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via email submission:

Hi my name is Dan. I'm a big fan of your blog and I have a lot of respect for you and what you are doing. I recently sent a letter to the website for the Bravo television network about a show they have called Millionaire Match Maker. Like I'm guessing most of you, I have grown tired in the last couple of years of TV shows depicting women being rude or condescending towards men. I see it in TV commercials, programs and reality shows. Well, a couple of days ago I was watching the above-named show and decided I was going to write the network and tell them about how I felt. Here is copy of the letter:

======

I am a member of a growing group of men's rights activists and I found your show to be offensive to men and irresponsible.

Your show depicts a woman who is demeaning and condescending towards the men in the show. The show is called Millionaire Match Maker that airs on the Bravo TV network. In the show, a woman (Pattie) who runs a dating service, is supposedly hired by various wealthy men in Los Angeles to find a woman that they might fall in love with. However, Pattie is show to mostly have a rude, catty attitude and takes it upon her self to tell these men what she thinks of them, criticize and order them to make curtain changes in there lives, wardrobe, attitude, etc. so that they might be lucky enough to marry one of her "independent women" that belong to her service.

She is usually show to have an irritated, judgmental demeanor and to be generally arrogant. In your latest episode called "rocker guy", Pattie meets a guy called Julian that lives in a house that appears to be a upper-middle class dwelling, but because it is apparently not big or extravagant enough, refers to the house and neighborhood as a "ghetto", and because the house does live up to her standards, she further refers to him as a "cheep, lazy, s.o.b." At one point, she is standing outside his house and says, "this is disgusting, this is not a millionaire". Before meeting Julian, she reviews a video tape interview of him in her office and tells some of her female co-workers that she is going to whip him into shape before he will be allowed to meet any girls, she says that she is going to "slap this bitch" into shape, referring to him as her "bitch". After walking into his house she tells Julian that "no woman would date you while you live in a house like this". Julian then asks her if a woman who would think something like that, would be right for him in the first place, she responds "trust me, no woman with a spine would date you in this house, your a cheapskate", "you live in a dump", "get it together".

She finally and reluctantly tells Julian that she will work with him but that "you need to change you attitude", and "you need to decide to fall in love" before I will help you and before you can meet any girls in the dating service. There are many other examples of sarcastic, condescending behavior exhibited by the woman in your show, but I don't have time to list them all (these were just a few that stuck out and I remembered). The point is, there may be a lot of people at your company and in the public that enjoy watching a woman being rude and demeaning towards a man, but keep in mind that your show is broadcast on cable for everyone to see including children who are young and impressionable.

The kind of interactions and interplay between sexes that you show on TV mean a great deal to young people. In my opinion, your show is sexist. If you question that comment, simply reverse the rolls where a man is depicted to shape these women up to be suitable and good enough so that someone might do them a favor and want to marry them, all the while saying things like, "i'm going to slap this bitch", "this place is disgusting", "your a cheep, lazy, s.o.b." "you live in a dump". I think there would be more than a few woman's rights activist upset. Further, with Pattie's behavior, you broadcast to the world examples furthering the stereotypes of women being materialistic. With comments like, "no woman would date you living in a house like this"(an upper-middle class house in California, by the way), and "this is disgusting, this is not a millionaire".

It is important that we portray women in a positive light, not further stereotypes of cattiness, bitchyness, rude behavior or materialism, as your show does. Young men and women need better roll models than that. They need examples of men and women respecting and caring for one another, not examples of behavior that is divisive and gender polarizing. I am going to copy this email and post it on various men's rights blogs in witch I am a member. If you would like to respond to it, please do not send a standard message thanking me for my input and feedback saying you were sorry I found it offensive, rather I would like to know if someone at Bravo TV has the courage to address and defend showing misadry and negative female stereotypes to millions of people, and how it could effect children that might end up watching your show and if you were really responsible, you could respond to the specific examples of behavior and quotes of Pattie's that I laid out in the letter.

With all the TV shows in past decades that were sexist towards women, depicting men talking down to, demeaning, condemning and criticizing women, I would think that in this new age where women are liberated, you would be more mature, responsible and compassionate to not perpetuate the same bad behavior, only towards men now.

====

P.S. I was in quite a hurry when writing this, but there were many other examples of underhanded, matter-of-fact ways of condescension and sarcasm toward the men in the show by Pattie. As well, there are many other episodes of this show that air every day on Bravo TV and can be viewed on their website. The link to view this particular episode is http://video.bravotv.com/player/?id=212367#videoid=212367.

Why Jane, the C Word?!

Matt · 14 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

More to laugh at for you guys here on "V Day"; Jane Fonda is busted on live TV (on "The View", no less), talking about The Vagina Monologues, when she uses "the C word" in context! And on Feb. 14!! Incredible!

Why read fiction when you have reality?

Newsweek: "How to Train a Husband" parkranger · 14 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I found this article on Newsweek.com. I was angered by the comparison of men to animals. There were some interesting comments added by both men and women. I just thought it was intriguing how women seek to train/fix men of their inherent problems. Excerpt:

'DiSesa, who was the first female chairman of the ad agency McCann Erickson, argues that women should use their femininity to manipulate the men they work with and advance their careers. Instead of criticizing an employee's ad proposal, she flatters him for his "brilliant" idea, then sweetly asks if he had any other inspirations. "Women use these tactics with men all the time," she says. "We're mothers, wives, girlfriends, sisters. We know how to handle men, we just don't do it at work."
...
And, she says, we shouldn't admit to our manipulations. "If people think I'm being conniving, I am," she says. "But if men see it coming, they'll duck." Sutherland's husband eventually caught on to her experiment (it didn't help that she wrote a book about the animal-trainer school), and even started using the techniques back on her. Now they use the word "shamu" as a verb, as in "Did you just shamu me?"

Ed. note: This is not a repeat of an older post; alas, this is a concept that just keeps getting put out there. The dateline for the article is the Feb. 18, 2008 issue.

Boy babies 'worse for depression'

Anonymous · 14 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Giving birth to a boy can increase the likelihood of severe postnatal depression, a study suggests.
...
They suggested a negative attitude to a son might be a legacy of unsatisfactory relationships with important male figures in their life, such as their father, or partner.

Professor de Tychey said: "The overwhelming finding of the study was the fact that gender appears to play a significant role in reduced quality of life as well as an increased chance of severe postnatal depression."'

WONDERFUL. NOW WE HAVE "SCIENTIFIC PROOF" SO WOMEN CAN GO ON KILLING AND ABUSING THEIR SONS...

Popular Blogger asks: "Why Bother"?

sgaver · 15 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I'm seeing more and more articles about how men are staying away from marriage -- or even from women altogether. Here's one that I bumped into on Craig's list, of all places. This guy sums it up pretty well in the following passage:

"All the great advantages of the women's liberation movement have created an environment which, frankly, does not leave men with much. We can't flirt with women at school, college or at the office anymore, because one man's "flirting" has become another woman's "sexual harassment" and the punishments for such transgressions are not only severe, they're permanent—crippling a man's career and prospects thereof.

When a woman can get pregnant outside wedlock, and still hound a man forever for child support (with the enthusiastic support of the State), is it any wonder that men, even though ruled by their sex drive, might actually step back a little and think with their heads? And once married, if a divorce becomes a later reality, he stands a real risk of losing access to his kids forever, because if Milady is feeling vengeful—and most do, in a divorce—the merest suggestion of "endangerment" or "violence", and he is completely screwed, forever, even if the allegation is a complete falsehood."

But I think my favorite part was the following:

"I am not interested, incidentally, in hearing the female side of this."

This guy's got the right attitude! We've heard ONLY the female side for 35+ years... who CARES about their side anymore?

Equal Parenting Cyclist interviewed Friday Feb. 15 on KRights Radio

Anonymous · 15 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Robert Pedersen will be on the radio show "The Message" with Richar Farr! February 15th 2008 -- This Friday 9:15 PM EST, 6:15 PST

You can hear this live on your radio in Las Vegas, Nevada and parts of California.

If you live elsewhere you can listen LIVE on KRights Radio.

Robert will reveal a secret detail of the 2008 Equal Parenting Bike Trek departure from Lansing, MI! August 7th 2008 12 Noon - departure of the 758 mile Equal Parenting Bike Trek from the Lansing Capitol. The media and supporters will fill the Lansing Capitol Lawn simply to see what Robert will reveal on this Friday's interview.

List of Media Coverage for the 2007 Equal Parenting Bike Trek here.

Boys continue to be 'recruited' into 'military service'

Matt · 15 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'"In spite of the impressive progress, I regret to report that the overall situation of children affected by conflict remains grave and entirely unacceptable," Coomaraswamy said.

She urged the Security Council, charged with investigating the use of child soldiers, to expand its focus to other issues affecting youngsters, starting with systematic sexual violence.
...
The council expressed concern at "the widespread and systematic use of rape and other forms of sexual violence against children, in particular girls, in situations of armed conflict" and called on all parties to take special measures to protect girls and boys from sexual and gender-based violence.'

Why is the word "boys" mentioned just once in this article, and only in the cited paragraph above? Otherwise it's all "child" and "children".

And for 'recruit' read 'forced'; for 'military service' read 'slavery'.

"In Treatment": A drama series actually shows women's infidelity

Anonymous · 15 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I don't watch much TV, and only happened across this series at a friend's house. I don't even have cable. Anyway, an HBO series called "In Treatment" is not only really well-acted and -written, but the infidelity of women is shown without flinching. And better yet, you can watch it for free on HBO's web site. Well worth the time.

Ed. note: I can vouch for this endorsement. Great show, one of the few I'll watch myself.

Female Deputy Charged for Dumping Paralyzed Man

anthony · 16 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A sheriff's deputy who was videotaped dumping a paralyzed man from a wheelchair onto a jailhouse floor has been charged with abuse of a disabled person, a sheriff's official said Friday.

Surveillance footage from Jan. 29 shows Hillsborough County deputy Charlette Marshall-Jones, 44, dumping Brian Sterner out of his wheelchair and searching him on the floor after he was brought in on a warrant after a traffic violation."

Marshall-Jones is charged with abuse of a disabled person, a third-degree felony, said Hillsborough County Sheriff David Gee.

If convicted, she could be sent to prison for five years."

CNN Video: Angry Ex Triess To Get Man's Dog Killed for Valentine's Day

anthony · 16 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video here. Caption:

"A woman brought her ex-boyfriend's dog to be "axed" for a Valentine's Day promotion."

Ireland: Sport stars have backed plans to develop Munster's first men's health clinic.

anthony · 16 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Hurling legends Joe Deane and Tomás Mulcahy along with broadcaster and rugby pundit George Hook will front a gala charity function in Cork later this month to help raise funds for the clinic.
...
It will raise funds for the MUH's Men's Health and Prostate Cancer Fund, as well as raising public awareness of men's health issues.
...
About 1,150 men develop prostate cancer each year in Ireland.

The figure is similar to the number of women diagnosed with breast cancer each year.

Prostate cancer is responsible for 500 deaths annually or 11% of all cancer deaths among men.'

Article: "Why Do So Many Men Dread Feb. 14?"

anthony · 16 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'"I think for a lot of men, they just feel so much pressure it really sucks all the enjoyment out of it; it's sort of like your wedding day in a lot of ways," said Lisa Daily, a Sarasota-based dating expert and author. "I think for a lot of people it's a sort of do-or-die day, and instead of judging the relationship on a whole, we judge it on a night, and there's a 15-step process and if you get any of them wrong you're in big trouble.
...
The pressure on men comes from many sources, including the advertisements of jewelers, greeting card companies, florists and chocolate makers. But Daily said the expectations of wives and girlfriends fuel the process.'

Saudi Arabia Told to Get with Feminist Program

Roy · 16 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Saudi Arabia must create laws to protect women from violence and also allow them to play a bigger role in society and the workplace, the United Nations said on Thursday.

"The lack of written laws governing private life constitutes a major obstacle to women's access to justice," said Yakin Erturk, the U.N.'s human rights expert on violence against women.

In a statement she called on Saudi Arabia to create a legal framework based on international human rights standards, including a law criminalizing violence against women.

That would also include a family law on marriage, divorce and minimum age for marriage, said the Turkish sociology professor...

"The need to address women's rights will grow increasingly urgent as the voices of women in Saudi society are heard," she said.'

Dance4Equality Will Be Present at the 2008 Equal Parenting Bike Trek Departure

Matt · 16 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via email:

August 7th 2008 12 Noon - Lansing Capitol Lawn - Lansing, MI.

There will be a media frenzy over the excitement surrounding the 2008 departure for the 758 mile Equal Parenting Bike Trek... Lansing, Michigan to Washington, D.C.

We are very excited to announce that Dance4Equality will be at the departure for the 2008 Equal Parenting Bike Trek. This will be at the Lansing Capitol on August 7th 2008 12 Noon.

UK Telegraph: "Why is Hollywood going for bloke?"

anthony · 17 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Casting your eyes over this year's roster of film award contenders, you'd be forgiven for wondering why women, more than ever, have been relegated to the margins. The stories Hollywood wanted to tell last year were about fathers and sons, the American west, and machismo run amok.
...
Where are this year's The Queen, Erin Brockovich, Far From Heaven, The Hours? Even this year's Chicago? Oscar-watchers can only point to the best picture nominees Atonement and Juno as examples of female-led cinema, and neither of these will quite do.
...
It does seem that Hollywood has been overwhelmingly working out maleness issues, rather than feminine ones - whether it's rampant capitalism (There Will Be Blood, Michael Clayton) or essays on violence (No Country For Old Men, Jesse James) or paeans to male solitude (Into the Wild)."

Ed. note: Could not locate an email address for Tim Robey. However "letters to the editor" contact info is here.

'Dads on the Air' to Host Author of "The Woman Racket"

Matt · 17 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

DADS ON THE AIR

http://www.dadsontheair.net/

Local Sydney Time: 10.30am to 12 midday Tuesday 19th February 2008
USA Eastern time: 6.30pm to 8pm Monday 18th February 2008
USA Pacific time: 3.30pm to 5pm Monday 18th February 2008
UK GMT time: 11.30pm to 1am Monday night (Tuesday morning) 18th February 2008

2GLF FM 89.3 in Sydney
and ONLINE via live streaming at http://www.893fm.com.au/
or in MP3 format at http://www.dadsontheair.net/

THE WOMAN RACKET

With special guests

* Steve Moxon
* John Flanagan

Steve Moxon's ground breaking book The Woman Racket, published this month, will fundamentally alter the contemporary debate about gender. Don't miss this fascinating interview. A decade of research has gone into the book, which claims to be the first to draw on the recent scientific findings re the actual root of sex difference - males acting as the 'genetic filter' for the whole lineage - and of all of the other research showing hitherto unexpected and massive human sex differences; with major implications for our view of men and women.

"Most importantly, we now know that there is no 'dominance' interaction of any kind between the sexes, so the notion of men having 'power' over and 'oppressing' women is a non-starter," he says. "Right from first principles, and evident in all of the social research, it is axiomatic that not women but men - rather, the majority of (necessarily lower status) men - must always be the principal disadvantaged sub-group in all societies. This properly scientifically based analysis, when it filters through, will mean the complete discrediting of 'political correctness' and effectively the end of it.

The book has had glowing praise from Bruce Charlton, the evolutionary psychologist at the University of Newcastle (UK), and was previewed as part of a two-page profile of Moxon in The Evening Standard (London) and by The Independent (UK).

Content preview on Amazon available here.

2/18/08 Update: Looks like Amazon US pulled the preview down... wonder why? Amazon UK still has it though, here.

Mills/McCartney Judge to Decide Split Terms

Matt · 18 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

As if anyone needed further evidence that when you marry someone you are placing the disposition of everything you own or ever worked for into the hands of two other parties: your spouse and the state -- read it here.

Wonder what the court's "administrative fee" will be for this one? Probably go into the millions of GBPs. Excerpt:

'Mills, 40, smiled as she left London's Royal Courts of Justice with her entourage. McCartney, 65, did not attend, although he was in court to face his estranged wife every day last week.

Media reports have suggested McCartney offered his wife around S$50 million and that she was seeking at least double that amount.

...

The couple married in June 2002 — four years after the death of McCartney's first wife, Linda — and their daughter Beatrice was born in October the following year. They announced their separation in 2006, and McCartney filed for divorce alleging "unreasonable behavior" by his wife.'

Oh yeah, what 'unreasonable behavior'? Read about it here and here among other places.

Heather may look like Linda (GRHS), but as you can see, these are two very different women from two very different generations indeed.

Grandmother Accused of Beating Boy Unconscious

anthony · 18 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A Florida grandmother was arrested Saturday after police said she beat her grandson at a busy intersection so badly that the child lost consciousness, WESH.com reported.

Dolores Henderson, 55, was described by witnesses as beating the 2-year-old as she was pushing him in her stroller and slamming the child into the curb, WESH.com reported. As officers arrived at the scene, police said the woman was continuing the beatings.

“As he drove up, he saw her hitting the child in the head,” Cocoa police spokeswoman Barbara Matthews told WESH.com. “She was slapping him with her open hand," Matthews said. "The officer described it as looking like a rag doll. She threw him back in the stroller and started to hit him again.”

Young Male Vets Most At Risk For Suicide In Oregon

anthony · 18 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A report out of the state of Oregon reinforces the results of a CBS News investigation from last November that found high rates of suicides among those who served in the military.

The state health report, “Violent Deaths in Oregon: 2005” found 18 to 24-year-old male veterans had the highest rate of suicide among all males in the state from 2000 to 2005 – almost 5 times higher than non-veteran males the same age. (The bar chart above shows the figures.)'

Historic Domestic Violence Conference Includes Male Victims

Anonymous · 18 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Historic Domestic Violence Conference Includes Male Victims

"From Ideology to Inclusion: Evidence-Based Policy and Intervention in Domestic Violence," a conference addressing issues pertaining to domestic violence, was held in Sacramento, California or Friday, February 15, 2008 and Saturday, February 16, 2008.

Shortly before 7:30 A.M. on Friday, the "Terrace Room" began to fill and shortly thereafter, the room was full, but people were still standing in the lobby and standing on the "terrace," waiting to register. So many people attended this event that an overflow room was opened to handle the crowd.

The highlight of the conference, in my opinion, came on the second day, when Erin Pizzy spoke. Pizzy was the founder of the first battered women's shelter in the world. Preceding her speech, Pizzy was presented with a lifetime achievement award by Phil Cook, for all of the work she'd done to care for victims of domestic violence. Pizzy remarked. "This is a first."

Clinton's struggle vexes feminists

MR · 19 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Clinton's struggle vexes feminists

Excerpt:
"WASHINGTON - As Hillary Clinton struggles to regain her momentum in the presidential race, frustrated feminists are looking at what they see as the ultimate glass ceiling: A female candidate with a hyper-substantive career is now threatened with losing the nomination to a man whose charismatic style and powerful rhetoric are trumping her decades of experience."

On YouTube: Men's Movement Revealed - Sex Culture and a Mission

anthony · 19 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I hope you guys enjoy this video as much as I did. It's a series of different male issues played through music and realistic images.

The video manages to address some of the most important MRA issues citing legitimate statistics.

Toxins 'cause defects for future generations'

Anonymous · 19 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Men who smoke, drink heavily or are exposed to pesticides while trying for a baby could harm not only their baby but future generations of offspring too, scientists say...

..."They said traditional assumptions that the health of fathers was less important than that of mothers in determining how healthy their babies would be should be revised.

Dr Cynthia Daniels of Rutgers University, said: "If I were a young man I would not drink heavily and I would not be smoking two packs of cigarettes per day while trying to conceive a child.

"Studies have shown significant associations between male toxic exposures and increased rates of infertility, miscarriage, stillbirth and childhood health problems."

Middle School Teacher gets Six Years for "Sex with" Teenage Boys

Matt · 20 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video report here. The story reports she was originally facing 60 years in jail total, but the judge reduced it to six (of course). One comment:

"Typical. If a man had raped 5 teenage girls he would have been sentenced for much, much longer. But a woman raping young boys does not receive the same level of attention or reprimand. She is a sexual deviant and justice has again been denied."

Posted by "Scott". Hmm, is that our very own Scott, I wonder? :)

RADAR ALERT: Randy Moss's "Trial by Rumor" and the Patriot's Super Bowl Loss

Matt · 20 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Just as the New England Patriots were looking to cap off a perfect season, Boston Patriots wide receiver Randy Moss was hit with a claim of "serious injury." The allegation made by Rachelle Washington over an alleged altercation on January 6, 2008.

Washington is an old paramour of Moss's who was unemployed and behind in her rent payments. Reports suggest that Washington had a soft-tissue injury to her finger, but how it occurred remains a mystery. Hospital X-rays were negative.

A temporary restraining order was quickly entered against Moss.

According to Moss' agent, attorney David K. McGill demanded a $500,000 payment and threatened to reveal "lots of dirt" about Moss if the money was not paid by January 11th. McGill has refused interviews and has not explained the specifics of the allegations.

Jane Doe, Inc., the Massachusetts Coalition Against Domestic Violence, demanded the benching of Randy Moss for the AFC Championship game, pending a January 28th hearing. Jane Doe claimed, without evidence, that this is the "common protocol" used by employers. The January 28th hearing was postponed by agreement of the parties until March.

In a January 17th interview, a distraught Moss said the woman was hurt by accident and called the allegation "false."

According to the Boston Globe, Moss was "mad at this situation of extortion." He claimed Washington was seeking "six figures" to keep the alleged battery "hushed."

For the season, Moss easily led the Patriots with 1,493 yards and an average of 15.2 yards per pass. But the pressure on Moss appeared to have caused a profound effect on his game performance.

For the AFC championship, "Randy Moss was a non-factor for the second straight game and the highest-scoring team in NFL history sputtered all afternoon," according to the Associated Press report.

Two weeks later, Moss headed to Super Bowl XLII with a "black cloud" hanging over his head: "I brought it to Coach and said, 'Look, Coach, I'm being threatened to do something that I have no idea of what I need to be doing.'"

During the Super Bowl, Moss caught only one pass. The stunned Patriots lost 14-17 to the New York Giants.

Had Moss not been distracted by the allegation of partner violence, Super Bowl XLII might well have turned out differently.

Sports fans must call for sensible reforms of domestic violence laws. We cannot permit extortion and trial-by-rumor to destroy the careers of athletes and to sway the outcomes of games.

We urge you to call your local radio sports shows and write letters to your local newspapers emphasizing that:

1. There is no evidence to date that Randy Moss abused Rachelle Washington.
2. The combination of pressures on Randy Moss impaired his focus and playability for Super Bowl XLII.
3. The outcome of Super Bowl XLII may have been thrown by the domestic violence industry.

++++++

BBC Radio 5 Feature on Male DV Victims, Sunday Feb. 24 2008

The Rights of M... · 20 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

BBC Radio 5 Live in the UK (693/909 MW and digital) will be running a feature on male DV victims from 10pm on this Sunday (24th). It may come on later than 10pm so you may have to listen for a while.

Please tune in and if there is a phone-in/text-in on the show then please take the opportunity.

It should be available for those outside the UK via http://www.bbc.co.uk/fivelive/

The Nuclear Option: How Men's Constitutional Rights Are Obliterated in Family Courts

Anonymous · 21 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"In acrimonious divorce and child custody disputes emotions are tense and tempers flare. Buoyed by litigious attorneys, each side engages in strategic maneuvers to gain the greatest legal advantage. Sometimes a parent, fearing a loss of control or custody over a child, crosses the ethically acceptable bounds of legal warfare. An unfortunate but all too frequently used tactic by mothers is to accuse the father of sexually molesting their child. The mere accusation is sufficient to strip the father of all his custody rights and launch a criminal investigation. Even when no evidence is found to substantiate the allegation, family law courts typically "err on the side of caution" and award full custody to the mother. While national statistics reveal that the majority of all child sex abuse reports are legitimate, when such claims are made by a mother in the context of custody litigation, an estimated 77% of allegations are determined to be unfounded (Tong, 2002).A false child sex abuse allegation made during child custody litigation is a destructive legal stratagem."

Rudov: "Mills doesn't deserve a dime"

MrReality · 21 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Rudov debates Lis Wiehl concerning why Heather Mills should not receive a dime from Paul McCartney. Congrats to Marc for not pulling any punches.

Watch the video.

Ed. note: If the video doesn't come up with the link above, click this search results link and select the video.

Middle school teacher faces 5 counts of sexual misconduct

Matt · 21 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video here. Right at the end of the video the reporter notes the judge ordered a "psychiatric evaluation". In the Related Media list, this article also appears on the site; it was a special to the Seattle Times. Good to see it even if it is dated Sept., 2007. Excerpt:

'The decade long wave of sexual offenses committed by women — teachers in particular have exposed a cultural double standard: The public is more willing to accept the female abuser's claim that she had a "relationship" with the victim. And in cases in which the male is a teenager, the sexual abuse is more likely to be dismissed as a rite of passage. The questionable, yet overriding assumption, is that women predators are somehow different from men.

"Men are demonized, women are diagnosed. Men are beasts, but women are troubled or mentally ill," said media scholar Matthew Felling in an interview with Fox News. In fact, accounts of women sexual offenders are often more titillating than harsh. Felling calls the news coverage of young, attractive teachers involved with their students "part crime drama, part Penthouse letter."'

Dozens of Unindicted Lacrosse Players File Federal Lawsuit Against Duke

Matt · 21 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'DURHAM, N.C. — More than three dozen current and former Duke lacrosse players plan to file a federal lawsuit against the university, the city of Durham and others involved in the case.

A spokesman for Washington-based attorney Charles J. Cooper said the civil lawsuit will be filed Thursday on behalf of 38 players who were not charged in the notorious case.

Spokesman Robert Bork Jr. declined Wednesday night to release the specific allegations made in the 30-count, 100-page lawsuit.'

Serbian girls prove looting is an equal-opportunity profession

Matt · 23 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Well I suppose it'd be one thing if they hadn't eaten in days and they were taking food staples like rice and bread to avoid ravenous hunger. But no. No sooner does the social order come apart when they are letting their fingers do the walking to make off at a 100% discount with all manner of luxury goods. Just amazing, really. Take a look here. What is truly remarkable is the utter brazenness and total lack of self-consciousness.

High School Teacher Arrested for Sending Students "Adult Photos" via Cell Phone

Matt · 23 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Watch it here. Caption: "A 24-year old high school teacher has been arrested for allegedly sending photos of herself in various stages of undress to students."

Female Bus Driver Faces Possible Charges for Assault on Student

Matt · 23 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Another "girl fight" story, caught on camera, with an adult woman involved. Watch it here.

People may ask why MANN reports on stories of "women behaving badly" so much. The reason is just this: People of both sexes apparently need to see the proof of the capacity of females to engage in dangerous, anti-social, and/or criminal behavior repeatedly to undo the prejudice that says that "women just don't do those things." It has to be repeated again, and again, and again, in order for it to sink in: Women are just as capable of violent, dangerous, criminal, etc. acts as men and do indeed engage in such behavior at rates comparable. It is only the fact that they are female that allows people to forget so quickly what they have just seen.

Double-think, as Orwell imagined it, comes in many forms, and the persistent but false belief that women can behave this way, or do so only with some "very good reason" (usually based on some purported reaction to what a man, or men, do), is one of those beliefs that we just need to keep hammering at.

DV shelter for men opens in Ohio

Anonymous · 24 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

A domestic violence shelter for men has opened in Ohio! It is a church-run shelter in Fostoria.

Those needing help or would like to help donate supplies or make a monetary contribution to The Bridge and First Step, call Terri Mercer or Esuga Abaya at (419) 435-7300.

Boy, 16, has sex with girl, 13, and now is a registered sex offender for life.

blaze4metal · 24 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

When Ricky was 16, he went to a teen club and met a girl named Amanda, who said she was the same age. They hit it off and were eventually having sex. At the time Ricky thought it was a pretty normal high school romance.

Turns out she's 13 (so she lied about her age). Ricky is now a convicted sex offender for life. This flawed system has ruined yet another life. It's almost to the point where if a sex offender moves near you, you shouldn't even have to worry. Good job, judge!

More DV Propaganda for VAWA

Roy · 24 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The National Network to End Domestic Violence (NNEDV) has issued an urgent press release (.doc file) asking people to contact their Congressional representatives because President Bush wants to “slash” VAWA’s budget. The appeal includes a sample letter to write your state’s reps, with the typical feminist lies like this one – “Domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking directly affect at least 1 in 4 women in the United States and touch the lives of nearly all individuals.”

(I would agree that these feminist lies "touch the lives" of everyone; though the actual nature and extent of domestic violence is very much in dispute.)

Article: "Female sex predators hard to understand"

anthony · 24 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Days before, a 29-year-old Galveston City Hall worker was charged with sexually assaulting of 13-year-old boy who was a longtime friend of her stepson.

Within the same week, a Deer Park High School teacher was charged with having sex with a teenage student.

None of these woman have been convicted of any crimes."
...
"But in cases like the two recent Galveston County arrests, the women are rarely pedophiles, Reamer said.

Instead, the women are mentally close in age to their victim and rationalize their pursuit.

“In her mind, she’s relating to a guy her age,” he said. “Developmentally, they are much younger. They got stuck in older teenage years.”'

Female Teacher Sentenced To Ten Years After Raping 11-YO Boy

anthony · 24 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Wendie Ann Schweikert, a former elementary school teacher, began serving a 10-year sentence in June for having sex with an 11-year-old Black boy.

Ward, the daughter of a preacher, admitted to having sex at the school where she taught, a park, a motel and a restaurant after school officials found a note she had written to one of the boys. She was sentenced to 15 years in prison for each of three counts of lewdness against the 14- and 15-year-old boys, but they were reduced to six years in prison, to run concurrently."

Essay: "Male bashing for fun and for profit"

anthony · 24 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"While feminist advocates have been quick to lambaste vocabulary perceived as being male-normative-the use of "man" instead of "person" to describe an occupation, SSMU's tactful decision to bolster "non-males" in order to enforce gender parity or references to Senator Clinton's first name instead of last-less imaginative anti-male implications are frequent and unchallenged. Portrayals of men as brutish, callow and altogether uncultured are rampant throughout film and television productions, usually along with the implication that theatre, literature, poetry and other fine arts are somehow un-manly.

...

The feminist movement has rightly achieved much to correct Victorian prudishness toward female sexuality as part of the larger campaign for women's rights. That trend is now being reversed for men. While media publications seek to belittle and homogenize male sexual intentions, more radical movements seek to directly assault the male sex drive by likening it to violent assault. Both buck efforts for real sexual equality. Men's rights may not be the popular social movement, but its issues are real and present."

Expert: Men's role at root of violence

anthony · 24 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The problem, Katz contended, is a culture that glorifies violence, which lures boys into thinking being violent will give them the power and control they crave. He pointed to the videos released by Virginia Tech gunman Seung-Hui Cho in April that showed him waving two guns around "like a bad Rambo caricature."
...
"The term 'male-basher' offends me," Katz responded. "Holding adult men accountable for their violence is an act of solidarity with young men and boys as well as women and girls ... Some men are in a place where they have the self-confidence and such that they can honestly look at this and not be defensive, and others aren't."'

Ask Dr. Helen: Is Male Bashing Curable?

anthony · 24 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Column here. Excerpt:

"A few years ago Lionel Richie allowed his wife to knock him around a bit. When the media started to question his masculinity he reminded them that it didn't matter what line of defense he took, the media would turn it on him; if he hit his wife back in defense or retaliation, he'd become a woman-beater and abusive husband, but if he sat there and took it, he's labeled as less than a man. It doesn't matter what we do, we're vilified through the narrow focus of society and the media. The world has changed and it's folly to believe that our gender hasn't changed with it."
...

[Dr. Helen's Partial response]

"Is maleness worth fighting for, can the culture be "cured" of its malebashing nature, or is the fight just not worth the hassle? Would it be better to let women take over the burden of running things? Also, any personal experiences with negative male stereotypes and how you handled the situation would be welcome."

India: Woman kills her teenage sons to facilitate affair

anthony · 24 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Maharashtra's Nagpur town has been booked for allegedly poisoning to death her two teenage sons as she considered them a hindrance in her love affair, the police said Wednesday.

Geeta Wadekar, 36, has confessed to the crime after professing innocence initially and her friend Sanjay Bagade, 32, has admitted to having an illicit relationship with her, the police claimed.

"Geeta first told us her sons - 16-year-old Mayur and 14-year-old Ritesh - died of food poisoning after consuming stale tea Monday morning. But on being confronted with an empty bottle of Indosulfan recovered from her home, she admitted to having mixed the insecticide with their morning tea," Wadi police station officer D.J. Chavan told IANS."

Upsurge in cases of gynecomastia in teen boys

Matt · 24 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video report here. More on the condition:

About.com article
Keepkidshealthy.com article

Well I am no doctor but can imagine the upsurge in this condition possibly having something to do with all the BCP estrogen and industrial chemicals getting into the water. But that's just layman's speculation.

This American Life: Testosterone

Matt · 25 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Episode from 2002 re-aired tonight: Testosterone. Interesting listening; be sure to share it with your favorite fem-bot! Description:

"Stories of people getting more testosterone and coming to regret it. And of people losing it and coming to appreciate life without it. The pros and cons of the hormone of desire."

Keep listening; in the beginning you may be inclined, like me, to dismiss it as yet another feminist-inspired anti-male piece of garbage. But just keep listening. The show is available free for streaming, click the orange "Full Episode" link under the picture of the needle.

Friends? We Don’t Need No Stinking Friends

anthony · 25 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"Men’s Rights Activists, for all of our differences, can (in large part) unite behind one simple and easy to grasp idea - Feminists are the enemy. Some go further and say that all women in contemporary society have benefited from the excesses of feminism, whether they are aware of their having benefited or not. While men were imprisoned in droves in response to rape and domestic violence hysteria, while men’s lives and livelihoods were ruined by ridiculous charges of sexual harassment, punitive alimony and child support enforcement, and all the other arrogant inequities of a family court system that seems to see them as sperm-doning wallets who had their fun and now they are going to pay, pay, pay - women did not rise in outrage and what was happening to their sons, brothers, fathers and potential life partners. If women are now beginning to feel a backlash in society in the form of marriage strikes, prenuptial agreements, an unprecedented aversion to chivalry on principle, and increased indifference on the part of men to the challenges they face in society, call the National Organization for Women. This was all their idea.

...
But what about the women who have tried for years to do something? What about women like Kate O’Beirne, Christina Hoff-Sommers, Charlotte Hayes, Carrie Lukas, Cathy Young, Erin Pizzey, Esther Vilar, or Wendy McElroy? This is not an inclusive list, mind you, but these are names that come off the top of my head when asked to name women who have stood damn tall in facing down institutional misandry. They did so when an awful lot of so-called men- in military leadership, in government, in academia, in the judiciary - were crawling on their bellies, willing to sell out every principle they had sworn to uphold to convince the feminists “they get it.” For their trouble, these women have lived with death threats, threats of rape, censure, loss of income – the whole litany of consequences the entrenched feminist culture has at their disposal to punish heretics. Are they the enemy?"

Steroids: Growing problem among girls?

anthony · 25 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video report here.

It doesn't take long for the MSM media to take an issue that has a negative effect on men and somehow turn it into some new crisis among girls. It seems the importance of one girl on steroids is the equivalent to a 1000 boys taking the drug.

Mother charged with murder of her three children

anthony · 25 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A New Cassel woman was charged Sunday with killing her three young children after years of family members' efforts to remove them from her care.

Nassau police charged Leatrice Brewer, 27, with one count of first-degree murder and three counts of second-degree murder for the deaths of Jewell Ward, 6, Michael Demesyeux, 5, and Innocent Demesyeux, 1.
...
Brewer will be arraigned Monday either at her hospital bedside or in First District Court in Hempstead, Smith said. Doctors will perform mental and physical evaluations to determine whether Brewer, who friends and family members said works part-time jobs as an office assistant and as a cashier, is well enough to leave the hospital or whether she should be transferred to a psychiatric facility, Smith said.
...
Brewer's grandmother, Maebell Mickens, said she was trying to take legal custody of the children from Brewer. And the father of the two younger children, also named Innocent Demesyeux, said he "tried his best to take them away."'

Campus paper article: "Feminists lose sense of objectivity"

anthony · 25 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"In one of the most popular cases of the new feminist agenda, the New York City Fire Department was sued by a woman who claimed that the physical examination to become a firefighter was too taxing for women. She won. The FDNY was forced to create new physical testing tailored toward women so that they may be allowed easier access to the profession. Here, the goal of feminists to kill objectivity is clear. They are not concerned that tests of that nature are specifically devised to make sure, for example, that one would have the ability of pulling a 200-pound man out of a building and down a ladder. To these feminists, the safety of citizens was second to gender representation."

Prominent Feminist Say Blacks Should Wait 8 Years for Presidency

anthony · 25 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Letty Cottin Pogrebin was disappointed because Hillary was being over-shadowed by a "whipper-snapper" named Obama. She said Obama was inexperienced and not ready to be President and that he should wait his turn- say maybe another 8 years, but in the mean time what she wanted was Hillary Clinton in office as President for the next 8 years!

While a black man should wait his turn!

Why, women have paid a long hard price for this moment! And how dare a 'whipper-snapper' upstart like Obama upstage the long awaited crowning of woman! This is what all women have been waiting for! Waiting and working hard for the opportunity to choose a President who is not a white male! But NOT a black man! This is NOT what the feminists wanted when they said they wanted a choice! Waaaaaaaaaah! Not a black man! (Cry some more here)

Just when a woman is about to win for once, then comes the first black man! Heaven forbid! Or, did heaven sic 'em on her?"

Shared Parenting Advocate Announces Candidacy for the Michigan House of Representatives

Anonymous · 25 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

On February 25, 2008 Scott Hudson of Waterford will formally announce his candidacy for State Representative for the 43rd District.

Hudson believes that the integrity of the family must be respected and that the role of the family in America is vital. The mother and father both need equal and full access to their children, and that the role of the state must be secondary to children having both parents in their lives.

No matter where your location is please email Mr. Hudson with your words of encouragement.

He is a very strong advocate for EQUAL parenting rights and like so many men have been damaged by a biased family court system.

RADAR ALERT: Call Your Senator Today, Spare the World of I-VAWA!

Matt · 25 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

At a time when Violence against Women Act (VAWA) is increasingly criticized for its ineffectiveness and harmful effects on American families, Sen. Joseph Biden recently introduced International Violence against Women Act (I-VAWA).

RADAR's analysis of I-VAWA (Senate bill 2259) reveals it would:

1. Harm the family.
2. Impose ineffective and harmful programs on other countries.
3. Create a new federal "super-agency" that would control many aspects of U.S. foreign policy.
4. Ignore violence against men and other forms of violence.
5. Funnel millions of taxpayer money to ideologically-driven organizations.

More information on the problems with I-VAWA can be found here.

I-VAWA is almost identical to VAWA, a law that has already contributed to the destabilization of American families and caused immense harm to children.

Before VAWA was introduced and American courts dealt with cases of real abuse and real justice was served. Then the definition of "violence" was expanded to encompass almost every aspect of human interaction between spouses, including raising one's voice or arguing.

VAWA harms children who need the love of both parents. With its creative definitions of "psychological abuse," VAWA has been widely used to cut off the natural bond between children and their fathers, to the detriment of both.

Is this what we want other countries in the world to adopt? Is this the best that America has to offer? Do we want to pay for this with nearly a quarter of a billion dollars our tax money?

The National Organization for Women recently sent out an Alert telling its members to contact the Senate to support I-VAWA. We must make it clear to our Senators that I-VAWA is bad for families and harmful to children.

Please telephone or fax your Senator today and tell that person to "Spare the world of I-VAWA, Say 'No' to S. 2259!". Your Senator's contact information can be found here.

It's up to us to save the family and protect our children.

++
Date of RADAR Release: February 25, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence.
http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Group president: Men, kids ‘invisible’ victims

Matt · 25 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

NCFM-LA gets quoted in correcting a paper over its facts. Excerpt:

'COLUMBUS -- A common and popular belief that women are the vast majority of domestic violence victims came under fire recently in a response to The Telegram’s story entitbled “Safety top priority in domestic violence calls” which published Feb. 17.

Marc E. Angelucci, president of the Los Angeles chapter of the National Coalition of Free Men, responded by e-mail and a blog post to the story and provided access to several studies by prominent medical, research and governmental agencies to back up his claims.

The various studies call into question the commonly held belief that female victims far outnumber male victims of intimate partner violence and/or that women do not typically initiate the violence, but only react or respond to violence committed against them.'

LA Times: What campus rape crisis?

Anonymous · 26 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"It's a lonely job, working the phones at a college rape crisis center. Day after day, you wait for the casualties to show up from the alleged campus rape epidemic -- but no one calls. Could this mean that the crisis is overblown? No. It means, according to campus sexual-assault organizations, that the abuse of coeds is worse than anyone had ever imagined. It means that consultants and counselors need more funding to persuade student rape victims to break the silence of their suffering."

Letters to the editor can be sent via this link.

Georgia School District Goes Single-Sex

Anonymous · 26 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Some people are upset, but the data shows that this will improve performance of both boys and girls. Let's see what happens! Excerpt:

'GREENSBORO, Ga. - Nearly four decades after this rural Georgia county stopped segregating its schools by race, it wants to divide students again — this time by sex.

Greene County is set to become the first school district in the nation to go entirely single-sex, with boys and girls in separate classrooms — a move born of desperation over years of poor test scores, soaring dropout rates and high numbers of teenage pregnancies.'

Michigan Governor Declines Proclamation of Parental Alienation Awareness Day

Anonymous · 26 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

News item here. Excerpt:

'Governor Jennifer Granholm has destroyed Michigan's economy, families and now our children. A Proclamation to officially recognize April 25th as Parental Alienation Awareness Day was denied by Governor Granholm.'

"Ideology to Inclusion" Conference Follow-up

anthony · 26 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Reprted on MANN here. The flyer to the conference is here (.pdf file).

Dee Dee Myers' new book: What if women ruled the world?

anthony · 26 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Dee Dee Myers was former White House Press Secretary during the Clinton administration. She has been all over the news claiming sexism and victimization in regards to Hillary's attempt to become the next President. This is a book written by a woman who exemplifies misandry! Excerpt:

"It's easy (and perhaps a bit facile) to argue that men haven't done such a great job. The last century was the bloodiest in human history, and so far, this one has been a tale of war, terrorism, religious extremism, abject poverty, and disease. I'm not saying it's all men's fault. But let's just say, they've been in charge, and it doesn't seem we're much closer to finding answers to these profound and vexing problems.

...
Wouldn't it? Yes, I thought; it would. In fact, if there were more women in positions of power, not just in Congress, but across the United States and around the world, lots of things would be better. Not perfect. But better. We'd have more representative government; a stronger economy; and a healthier and more sustainable planet. We'd be better able to resolve conflicts and keep the peace. We'd have stronger families."

Botswana has "Men Sector" to deal with men's issues/rights

Matt · 26 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

'The law in Botswana currently leans towards women when it deals with custody of children born out of wedlock.

As a result, some women, out of bitterness or for whatever reason, end up denying men access to their children.

The men, in that case, can't get legal help. While women's rights organisations booming all over the world advocate for women's rights, represented locally by Emang Basadi, men seem to be lagging behind in organising to form an organisation which can deal with men's rights and other issues that affect them.'

DV shelter for men in Ohio follow-up

Matt · 26 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

It made it to mainstream! Story here. (Originally on MANN here.) Excerpt:

'Now First Step has taken its next step by opening a shelter for male victims of domestic violence and fathers who are struggling to maintain relationships with their children.

Officials say they believe "The Bridge," as the new shelter is called, is the first of its kind in Ohio.

"We're stepping out. We're doing something that has not been done before," said Terri Mercer, executive director of First Step. She and Esuga Abaya, the agency's community resource coordinator, say First Step has worked with an increasing number of men in recent years. The agency has, at times, made arrangements for male victims to stay at hotels or find other safe housing, but the options were limited.'

Wrongfully accused sex offender making documentary journey · 27 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I am a filmmaker. My passion is to tell people's stories and give them a voice. It was difficult for me to decide if I wanted to expose myself and be publicly known as a alleged sex offender; going against my family and friend's advice, I decided that going public was the right thing to do. I need to do this, because it is only way to expose this injustice and mistreatment towards men in our justice system. I was arrested solely based on accusation without any other evidence, other than a single eye witness who is her friend. My hope is whatever the outcome, people become more aware of this issue. I am determined to make my case by showing other men who have had a similar experience and how their lives have changed, and give them a voice from a men's and accused's perspective.

I wanted to share my journey towards clearing my name, and every step of it: from a obtaining a lawyer, how my day-to-day life has been affected, to the final court hearing. I want anyone else who is wrongfully accused to not be ashamed and to speak up, and to address this issue.

My first goal for this film are to expose the injustice to men who are charged with this crime from the first-hand perspective. Secondly, I want society to accept that there are indeed innocently-accused men, and bring to light how their lives have changed and how society can help them with a change of attitude.

Parents Join Duke Lacrosse Team in Lawsuit

anthony · 27 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Seven parents have joined 38 members of the 2006 Duke University's men's lacrosse team in suing the university, the city of Durham, N.C., police investigators, and a sexual assault nurse examiner at Duke University Hospital for harm resulting from being falsely accused in the case of a stripper who claimed several team members raped her after a drinking party in 2006."

On domestic violence, no one wants to hear the truth

Matt · 27 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

'Holding women responsible for their violence was so at odds with the received wisdom of the movement's activists that, for her whistle-blowing pains, Pizzey's dog was killed and her entire family received death threats. Undaunted, she pursued her equal-responsibility crusade in the United States for many years in a fusillade of articles and books.

While dramatically extreme, Pizzey's story is nevertheless emblematic of the hostility truth-tellers confront in the domestic violence industry.'

NCFM attorney wins $400K class action against Club Med for anti-male discrimination

Matt · 27 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Orange County Superior Court Judge Ronald L. Bauer just signed a settlement agreement ordering Club Med to pay NCFM attorney Alfred Rava of San Diego over $400,000.00 in attorneys' fees, plus other monetary sums, in settlement of a 257-member class action against Club Med for discriminating against men by giving free or reduced airfare only to women but not to men. You can read the judgment here (.pdf file).

Marc E. Angelucci, Esq.
President
Los Angeles chapter
National Coalition of Free Men
http://www.ncfmla.org/

Teacher's Aide Quits After Hosting Sex and Drugs Party for High School Students

anthony · 27 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A teacher's aide quit her job on Monday after police discovered teenage students in her hotel room with alcohol and drugs.
...
Police found condom wrappers, crack-cocaine, empty beer cans and alcohol in Swogger's hotel room last week. Swogger did not show up to work on Thursday or Friday."

BBC Feature On Men Falsely Accused of Rape

The Rights of M... · 27 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The BBC has surpassed itself this week on male issues.

Firstly on male domestic violence victims (Radio 5 Sunday on 24th Feb) available here. [Ed. note: This is a 3-hour show and the host covers other topics in it.]

Secondly, on a feature about men falsely accused of rape. Excerpt:

'At the age of 19, Ben Guerin had his life ripped apart by one allegation.

Three years after he'd had a sexual encounter with a girl from school he was arrested for assault, rape and paedophilia.
...
But witnesses who had been with the couple came forward on Ben's behalf and inaccuracies were found in the girl's story. The charges were dropped and instead the girl was eventually sentenced to a year for perverting the course of justice.'

"Thousands of babies who should have been boys are being born as girls"

Anonymous · 28 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Should this not be a pivotal agenda for MRAs? Governments seem to be unwilling to tackle or even acknowledge this problem. Article here. Excerpt:

"And, whether or not this is the cause, male sperm counts have been dropping precipitously both here and across the world.

Studies in more than 20 countries have shown that average amounts have fallen by well over half in the past 50 years, from an average of more than 150 million per millilitre to 66 million.

The result is that men are now less than half as fertile as hamsters.

The counts are continuing to plunge by two per cent a year, and no end to the decline is in sight. At this rate, the average man will be unable to father children within decades.

Increasingly the sperm crisis is being blamed on a whole host of chemicals, not just synthetic oestrogen, but a wide variety of substances that have become ubiquitous in daily life.

Scientists at Rotterdam's Erasmus University have found that boys born to mothers exposed to PCBs grew up wanting to play with dolls and tea-sets.

And research at the University of Rochester in New York State has shown that the male children of women exposed to phthalates have smaller penises and other signs of feminisation of their genitals.

Communities exposed to high levels of these and other gender-bender chemicals, from the Great Lakes of North America to the Russian Arctic, have been found to give birth to twice as many girls as boys.

This may offer a clue to the cause of a mysterious shift in the sex of babies worldwide.

Normally 106 boys are born for every 100 girls, in what is thought to be nature's way of compensating for the fact that males were more likely to be killed hunting or in conflict.

But increasingly this ratio is slipping - it is calculated that 250,000 babies who would have been boys have been born girls in the U.S. and Japan alone."

Anti-freeze poisoner gets 30 years

Anonymous · 28 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A callous wife who poisoned her husband with anti-freeze on their seventh wedding anniversary was today jailed for 30 years.

Kate Knight, 28, spent weeks scouring the internet for the best way to kill Lee before lacing his curry and red wine with the highly toxic substance.

The 37-year-old JCB worker lost six pints of blood, spent 16 weeks in a coma and was left blind, deaf and brain-damaged.

Astonishingly, his supposedly devoted wife even tried to finish him off with spiked drinks as he lay fighting for life in an intensive care unit.'

White Men Shifting From Hillary Clinton To Barack Obama

JVC · 28 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

In an article published today, it appears that "White Men" have been a crucial block that has shifted from Hillary Clinton To Barack Obama in the Democratic Primary. They are also anticipated to be a crucial swing vote in the presidential election. Apparently, after years of being presented as an unthinking collective of racist lemmings, it now is apparent that white men have taken Martin Luther Kings I have a dream plea to heart and have decided that Barack Obama exhibits the kind of character men hope will inhabit the White House.

"I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character."

Record-high ratio of Americans in prison

Matt · 28 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'NEW YORK - For the first time in history, more than one in every 100 American adults is in jail or prison, according to a new report tracking the surge in inmate population and urging states to rein in corrections costs with alternative sentencing programs.
...
The report said prison growth and higher incarceration rates do not reflect a parallel increase in crime or in the nation's overall population. Instead, it said, more people are behind bars mainly because of tough sentencing measures, such as "three-strikes" laws, that result in longer prison stays.

"For some groups, the incarceration numbers are especially startling," the report said. "While one in 30 men between the ages of 20 and 34 is behind bars, for black males in that age group the figure is one in nine."'

You guys will get a kick out of this: "violence against men not nearly to scale with violence against women"

Anonymous · 28 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"At a symposium in October 2007 on "Politicising Masculinities", organised by the Institute of Development Studies (IDS), it was noted that this issue of false equivalence surfaces frequently in discussions of men's own experience of violence. It is not uncommon to hear the statement that "men are also victims of violence at the hands of women". Such comments can be profoundly unhelpful, not least because this violence is nothing like on the same scale as the many forms of violence experienced by women from men."

"Why can't girls have it all?"

Anonymous · 28 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'We know a lot about how to create life in laboratories, but very little about the feelings that go with having kids. In our bid for complete equality, women have denied that it's a transforming experience: rather, we've sidelined that, along with other "feminine" feelings, as being beneath intelligent people.
...
I'd once have been embarrassed at acknowledging motherhood as pivotal in life, but life changes you. Even clever people struggle with having it all, and after 40 years the world of action is still geared toward men and single women, despite the rhetoric: the odds are still stacked against mothers.

To prove my point, a new woman politician is about to be sworn in as a Labour MP. Louisa Wall is a former champion netballer and rugby player, Maori, bright and personable, just five years younger than Mrs Rich – and gay. For her there won't be heart-wrenching crying in the night, conflicted loyalties, the guilt of saying goodbye to small children. She can have the best of one world – which is fine – but we persist in claiming that women can realistically hope for two.'

Italy Bans Crotch Touching by Men

Roy · 29 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

'The Italian supreme court has outlawed men from touching their genitals in public.

Crotch-grabbing is an ancient superstitious habit in Italy that is believed to ward off the evil eye - it is traditional for men to do it if passed by a hearse or when discussing serious illness or disasters. The phrase "Io mi tocco" ("I touch my") is as common as crossing fingers for good luck.

However, the supreme court ruled that an unnamed 42-year-old man from Como had broken the law by "ostentatiously touching his genitals through his clothing".
...
The judges pointed out that if men needed to grab their crotches, they should wait until they were in the privacy of their own home.'

(This will surely be the end of Italian hip-hop culture...)

More whining from Camp Hillary

Matt · 29 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

She just can't help herself, can she? A trail of male bodies lies behind her and she's still on about how hard it is out there for a woman in politics! Report here. This is getting so old. Excerpt:

'In an interview with ABC News' Cynthia McFadden to air on this evening's "Nightline," Sen. Hillary Clinton, D-N.Y., says it's tougher for her to run as a woman than it is for her male opponent.
...
"Every so often I just wish that it were a little more of an even playing field," she said, "but, you know, I play on whatever field is out there."
...
I also wonder if former Sen. John Edwards, D-N.C. -- and all the other men vanquished by Clinton (and Obama) so handily -- think that they had an easy go of it.'

Young Men at Risk Project announces finalists

Matt · 29 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Good news here. Please review and cast a vote.

Teacher Allegedly Sends Boy Topless Pictures

anthony · 29 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A Catholic school teacher on Friday was facing charges after allegedly e-mailing topless pictures of herself to a 15-year-old male student, MyFoxStl.com reported.

English teacher Melissa Moss, 27, was fired from her job at the Barat Academy in November after school officials said the teen's parents, Robert and Kelly Pfeiffer, found the controversial pictures while monitoring his Internet use."

More on White Male "Swing" Voters

Matt · 29 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

From the stranger-than-fiction dept: video report here. After irrevocably alienating male voters does anyone think The Hildebeast can possibly woo undecided male voters (of any ethnicity) at this point to vote for her?

Maybe men who have been living out in the woods without TV, radio, Internet, or newspapers, but other than them...

I think it's clear who is going to be the Democrat candidate for 2008. And obviously we know who is going to take the GOP nod. I think it's a good time to start thinking about which of these two candidates will be best for the interests of men in general. Does McCain have a history at all of voting male-friendly? I know we don't have quite the record on Obama, but has he said anything that seems it will address in any way the concerns of men, especially men-as-fathers? Thoughts?

Murray Straus and Corporal Punishment

Matt · 29 February 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Notable about this story is that the report includes discussion of females' use of force to coerce sex.

The fact that Dr. Straus was even allowed to deliver these findings at an APA summit is quite remarkable. Bit by bit, the reality of men as DV victims is getting more and more recognition. Excerpt:

'Men who had experienced corporal punishment were four times more likely to physically coerce a partner into having sex, than those who had not experienced a lot of corporal punishment.

Physical coercion includes holding someone down or hitting them. Women who had experienced corporal punishment were also more likely to coerce sex from a partner than those who had not been spanked.
...
Both men and women who had experienced corporal punishment as children were less than 10 percent more likely than those who had not been spanked to verbally coerce sex from a partner.'

Duke U. Trying to Shut Down Lawsuit Web Site

Roy · 2 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Duke University is asking the courts to shut down a web site that lacrosse players and their families have created to publish news about the ongoing lawsuit, alleging that the information posted on the site might prejudice a jury. That is an amazing testimony to the hypocrisy of the Duke administration given their former lack of concern about widespread media condemnation of innocent young men. Duke has offered large monetary settlements to shut down the upcoming lengthy trial, but their bribes have been declined by all litigants.

Washington Post: Women vs. Women

anthony · 2 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Take Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton's campaign. By all measures, she has run one of the worst -- and, yes, stupidest -- presidential races in recent history, marred by every stereotypical flaw of the female sex. As far as I'm concerned, she has proved that she can't debate -- viz. her televised one-on-one against Obama last Tuesday, which consisted largely of complaining that she had to answer questions first and putting the audience to sleep with minutiae about her health-coverage mandate. She has whined (via her aides) like the teacher's pet in grade school that the boys are ganging up on her when she's bested by male rivals. She has all but wept on the campaign trail, even though everyone knows that tears are the last refuge of losers. And she is tellingly dependent on her husband.

Then there's Clinton's largely female staff, often chosen for loyalty rather than, say, brains or political savvy. Clinton finally fired her daytime-soap-watching, self-styled "Latina queena" campaign manager Patti Solis Doyle, known for burning through campaign money and for her open contempt for the "white boys" in the Clinton camp. But stupidly, she did it just in time to alienate the Hispanic voters she now desperately needs to win in Texas and Ohio to have any shot at the Democratic nomination.'

Women Tell the Truth about Their Lies

Anonymous · 2 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

More confirming data. Yes, the sweet, fairer sex. We need to rid the world of this type of baloney!! Excerpt:

'Barash interviewed 500 women nationwide who answered her Craigslist ads seeking females to confide what they fib about. Among her findings:

* 75 percent lie about how much money they spend. For instance, they sneak purchases inside their homes after shopping or hide the price tags.

* 50 percent harbor "mixed feelings about mothering." One told Barash, "I look at these children and I crave sleep and free time. They wear me out and make me jealous of working women who have no children, no husbands."

* More than 60 percent cheated on their husbands. A 32-year-old mother conducted her trysts while telling her trusting husband she was working late. Even in asking for a divorce, she withheld the truth: "I didn't say I had fallen for another man. He was better off with my lies."'

Daughter, 16, charged in murder of mother, brothers

anthony · 2 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A family's opposition to a teenage daughter's romance is suspected of leading to a fiery attack that left the girl's mother and brothers dead and her father critically wounded, investigators said Sunday.

Four suspects, including the 16-year-old daughter, remained in custody on capital murder charges Sunday, a day after the pre-dawn attack on the rural East Texas home of Terry and Penny Caffey.

Terry Caffey, who was shot in the head, was able to crawl about 300 yards to a neighbor's house to seek help, while flames consumed his home with his wife and two young sons inside, the Rains County Sheriff's Department said.

Penny Caffey, 37; Tyler Caffey, 8; and Mathew Caffey, 13, had been shot and stabbed multiple times, according to the statement."

Harvard Sets Women-Only Hours for Gym, Complying With Muslim Students' Request

anthony · 2 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'In response to a request by female Muslim students, Harvard University has created women-only workout hours at one of its campus gyms. The decision has angered some students at the Ivy League university.
...
These hours are necessary because there is a segment of the Harvard female population that is not found in gyms, not because they don't want to work out, but because for them working out in a co-ed gym is uncomfortable, awkward or problematic in some way," she told Boston University's Daily Free Press.'

Los Angeles Marathon "won" by Russian woman

Matt · 2 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Headline: "Russian woman making marathon debut wins Los Angeles Marathon"

Actually it was won by a man from Kenya. But you won't see that mentioned here. Excerpt:

'LOS ANGELES (AP) -- Russia's Tatiana Aryasova made a smashing marathon debut Sunday, taking advantage of a head start on the male runners to capture the Los Angeles Marathon.

She held off a group of Kenyan men and finished in 2 hours, 29 minutes and 9 seconds. She gave little thought to the men in pursuit.
...
Kenya's Laban Moiben won the men's division in 2:13:50. Aryasova and Moiben each received $20,000 and a car for winning their divisions.'

In addition to double-think and cognitive dissonance, as well as cowardice, the reporting of this story betrays an unbelievable lack of basic arithmetic skills. The female runners got a 20-minute head start. The first man to cross the line did so at 2:13:50; the first woman, at 2:29:09. So even with a 20-minute head start, she came in about 13 minutes after the first man. Add the 20 minutes to it and she came in about 33 minutes after him.

Yet the headline says she won the marathon.

I got one word for this: BARF

More from the "Lyin' Eyes" Department

anthony · 3 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Most females lie "more cleverly and successfully than men" about everything from cheating on their spouses and shopping binges to barhopping and facelifts, according to a new book published this week.

"Women lie as a survival technique, but also to get what they want," Susan Shapiro Barash, author of "Little White Lies, Deep Dark Secrets: The Truth About Why Women Lie," told the New York Post.

Barash interviewed 500 women nationwide and found 75 percent lie about how much money they spend, while more than 60 percent admitted to cheating on their husband.'

UK: Ordinary families would get £100 a week MORE benefits if they lived apart

AngryMan · 3 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Three out of four ordinary families would be better off living apart than sharing a home under Labour's benefits system.

Tax credits and benefits are increasingly skewed towards single mothers, a study has shown.
...
For some families, such as those with one child and a wife who stays at home, the premium would be almost £100 a week.
...
The findings will add to anger over how the benefits system increasingly penalises families.

They will lead to calls for changes to Government policy to encourage more couples to stay together.

David Cameron has promised to end the bias in favour of single parents by alterations to benefits which could mean some families receive £3,000 more.'

Forged signature in IVF deception leading to legal case

AngryMan · 3 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A husband is threatening legal action after his estranged wife twice gave birth without his consent by using frozen embryos created while they were still together.

The woman deceived a world-renowned IVF clinic into fertilising her on two occasions by forging her husband's signature on a consent form.'

Lovestruck female parishioner convicted of harassing 'traumatised' priest

AngryMan · 3 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"48-year-old Cheryl Burston's romantic dreams - which saw her give Father Timothy Menezes chocolates and a teddy bear - turned to harassment when he rejected her advances.
...
The obsessed parishioner put a public notice about the 37-year-old priest in a local newspaper and wrote to his superiors in the Roman Catholic Church."

Burston denied harassment but was convicted by magistrates in Coventry.

PS: See the comments from women at the bottom of the story.

Killer mom fights to keep child tax credit

anthony · 3 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman who murdered her four-year-old daughter is appealing Revenue Canada's decision not to allow her the child tax benefit.

Astrid Margaret Literski, who is incarcerated at the Nova Institution in Truro, pleaded guilty in February 2005 to the second-degree murder of Eveleigh Rain Bringsli by feeding her sleeping pills and then smothering her with a pillow. The mother, then 34, killed her daughter on Sept. 1, 2003, one day before the little girl's first day of kindergarten.

Ms. Literski is slated to appear at a tax court appeal hearing May 2 in Halifax to argue that she deserved the child tax benefit cheques she received before her daughter died."

Juggling life as both Mr. Wallet and Mr. Mom

anthony · 3 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Deadbeat dads, ghost dads, Disneyland dads, Santa daddies: The divorce culture is rich in labels, especially ones that reduce men to negative stereotypes.

Some may be warranted, but the trouble with simplistic labels is that they rarely shed light on the complex truth of reality.

What is forgotten is that fathers have their own painful adjustment to divorce that is different than that faced by mothers.

I have heard some of that truth from men who write to me and agree to tell their stories.

If the stereotype is that men have a tendency to suffer in silence, the reality is that they no longer want to."

Some justice: 15-YO girl convicted of murder

AngryMan · 3 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A 15-year-old girl who stabbed a young mother to death while high on drink and drugs was convicted of murder today.
...
Madgin, who was an aspiring model and on the books of an agency based in Newcastle, suffered 10 stab wounds - one to the face, four to the left arm, two to the right arm and three to the chest.
...
As the jury of eight men and four women announced its unanimous verdict, Madgin's friends and family in the public gallery cheered and shouted, "Thank God".

Addressing the defendant, Judge David Hodson said: "In the light of the jury's verdict that you are guilty of murder, the court has one sentence and one sentence only it can pass and that is that you be detained at her majesty's pleasure.

"It is important that the courts now determine the minimum term you must serve in custody before you can be considered for release by the parole board."'

Note: In the UK, 'detained at her majesty's pleasure' means jailed indefinitely, and is given to people under 18 for serious crimes. But she will probably be free after 2 years, with good behaviour.

"Young girls should be surrounded by girls with the same heritage" mcc99 · 3 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Entering its sixth year, the event has a new partner — the University of Rochester.

The college is now a prime sponsor of the rally along with advocacy group Latinas Unidas. Free rally events were held on the university's River campus.

...

"Young girls should be surrounded by girls with the same heritage," said Perez, 17. The Hilton High School senior plans to pursue a career as a criminal investigator.'

Mine is the second comment, posted of course by 'mcc99'.

RADAR ALERT: Courageous Radio Host Challenges New York Domestic Violence Propaganda Campaign

Matt · 3 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

A year ago, it was Rebecca Odor, director of Virginia's Dept. of Sexual Assault and Domestic Violence, who was spending taxpayer dollars on a propaganda campaign to vilify any father who might hold his little girl's hand. The more things change, the more they stay the same. This year, it's Amy Barasch, Director of New York State's Domestic Violence Office who's spending taxpayer dollars on a publicity campaign (Coaching Boys into Men) that ignores objective research and instead promotes the falsehood that all domestic violence is male-on-female, and that men are inherently disposed to abuse women.

In the face of such an overwhelming, government-funded propaganda assault, radio WGY's Al Roney recently did a show on the topic that was a breath of fresh air. In the show, interviewee Deborah Fellows described New York's "Coaching Boys into Men" campaign as "discriminatory, prejudiced, and actually encourages violence against boys and men".

One caller, a retired police officer, said that when they enforced DV laws against abusive women just as they did against abusive men, the domestic violence organizations would send representatives to court to pressure the District Attorneys to dispose of any cases against abusive women. The advocates also pressured the police departments, and as a result he and his fellow officers were instructed by their supervisor that when they encountered a domestic violence situation in which the violent party was a woman, they shouldn't make the arrest.

You can listen to the show by going here and scrolling down to "Domestic Violence Campaign (pts.1 & 2)"

So, this week we'd like to ask you to send a big "thank you" to Al Roney and his producer for helping to publicize the outrageousness of these state-enforced biased policies. You can contact them at:

Al Roney - al-at-wgy.com

Al's producer - justin-at-wgy.com

++
Date of RADAR Release: March 3, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence.
http://www.mediaradar.org/.

What's to blame for differing test scores between the sexes?

Anonymous · 3 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Educational consultant Joe Manthey, who led a workshop through the Napa County Office of Education about educating male students, cites the almost nonexistent gender gap for home-schooled students in English as proof that schools are part of the problem.

The reason that home-schooled boys score as well as their female counterparts in English is twofold, said Manthey. First, they are more likely to be given a choice in their reading material. Second, “they’re less likely to fall through the cracks,” he said.

Manthey’s research shows that boys are more inclined to read nonfiction than fiction, and are more likely to relate to subjects related to science, sports and stories that revolve around male characters.

“Then you see boys required to read books like ‘The Joy Luck Club,’” he said, referring to the book by Amy Tan about immigrant mothers and daughters.

It’s no wonder, said Manthey, that boys tune out in English class."

Clinton Surrogate Steinem Attacks McCain's War Record

anthony · 3 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Entry here.

I understand MANN has guidelines in regards to political submissions. My position on Steinem is not political just disgust over her disrespect for men in combat. I think as MRA's we can respect the suffering a man endures during war. While McCain was beaten and tortured as a POW Steinem was burning her bra during some silly feminist protest. Excerpt:

'The New York Observer reports that in Austin, Texas, over the weekend, feminist icon Gloria Steinem belittled Sen. John McCain's five-and-a-half years as a POW and said the media would treat that war record differently if it were a woman veteran's record.

"Suppose John McCain had been Joan McCain and Joan McCain had got captured, shot down and been a POW for eight years?" Steinem asked, suggesting the media would ask "'What did you do wrong to get captured? What terrible things did you do while you were there as a captive for eight years?" ...

Referring to his time in captivity, Steinem said, with bewilderment, "I mean, hello? This is supposed to be a qualification to be president? I don't think so."'

Follow-up here. Excerpt:

"Joy Behar defended the indefensible on "The View," Gloria Steinem's anti-military comments, and Elisabeth Hasselbeck came out strong against them. For those that missed it, the famous feminist implied Hillary Clinton is more qualified than John McCain because Senator Clinton did not serve in the military. Steinem rhetorically asked "killing people is a qualification for ruling people?" She continued to wonder how it may have been different had John McCain been a female prisoner of war."

"Real Family Law"

Matt · 3 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Good site to visit: http://www.realfamilylaw.com/. About the site and its owner:

"Lisa Scott is a family law attorney based in Bellevue, Washington. Tired of having her stuff rejected by elitist bar publications and politically-correct newspapers, she decided to start her own website. Co-founder of TABS: Taking Action Against Bias in the System, she has been fighting for equal justice and gender equality in the family courts for years."

Jennifer Lopez's anti-male video

MrReality · 4 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I just saw this on Glenn Sack's blog. J-Lo is on the rampage in this video; She pushes men down the stairs, shoves them, kicks them, etc.

You can check out Jennifer Lopez's anti-male video here.

I don't think we have to worry about her for much longer though as her sales are pretty poor and she's about to be dropped from her label.

Ed. note: Lots of good stuff in the current issue of Sacks' newsletter. Whole thing is here.

Judge orders woman to refund C/S payments after paternity fraud uncovered blaze4metal · 4 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Judge David Roper said he felt badly for Kenneth Samuels when he learned the child he had fathered for 11 years wasn't his.

Justice was also shortchanged, the judge said, because Mr. Samuels had been paying child support all of those years.

Last month, Judge Roper ruled that Jamie Hope, the child's mother, and Oba Wallace, the child's biological father, would have to repay Mr. Samuels $14,460 in child support he had paid since 1997.'

Although this is fair justice being served, I highly doubt that the woman would have had to pay back anything if Oba Wallace, another male, wasn't involved.

Female Soldier Accused of Killing 2, Pouring Acid on Bodies

anthony · 5 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Fort Lewis soldier killed two other soldiers — a married couple — and poured acid on their bodies in an attempt to dispose of them, a prosecutor said Monday.

Spc. Ivette Gonzalez Davila, 22, was ordered held without bond for investigation of aggravated first-degree murder as well as kidnapping. She was accused of taking the couple's 6-month-old girl.

...

The victims were identified as Timothy Miller, 27, and Randi Miller, 25. Timothy Miller was apparently shot in a bathtub at the couple's suburban Parkland home, while Randi Miller was shot on a bed and then moved to the bathtub, Murphy wrote.

According to the declaration, Davila took the baby to a home-improvement store after the killings, bought muriatic acid, returned to the home and poured it on the bodies.

The baby was not harmed and is now in the care of the state's Child Protective Services.

Davila told the soldier that "Randi Miller was in a relationship with Davila's ex-boyfriend," Murphy said in his declaration."'

Harvard's Women-Only Hours Makes MSM Reporting

Matt · 5 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. The report starts out with opinions saying it's wrong, but quickly tuns into an apology and ends with:

'Harvard's policy is no different from commercial gyms that cater partially or even exclusively to women, said Ibrahim Hooper, a spokesman for the Washington-based Council on American-Islamic Relations.

"The Muslim bashers portray it as the world coming to end, but if women have a couple hours a week to work out in private, I don't see it as a major issue," he said.'

Yeah, it's not so bad. One little building at the end of campus, just for a few hours a week, that's all. And it'll be OK too when black kids say they're uncomfortable in the gym with white kids, then they can get their own hours too. Same for white kids. And gay people. Gay men might be uncomfortable being naked in the men's locker rooms so maybe they need their own. Same for lesbians. And Hispanics. Hell, maybe everyone needs their own little gym with their own private shower and bathroom too, all out of sense of modesty, in the name of religious belief.

Yeah, I can see that. Sure, I understand. And it's just like single-sex gyms too. So what's the harm? Single-sex/single-religion/single-sexual-orientation/single-ethnic group, etc. it's all perfectly fine as long as the group in question wants it. Then it's fine. Sure. And if in granting this request for special times and resources being set aside, and if the community at large has to pay for it, then that's OK too. "Separate but equal" and it's not only OK if the entire campus has to pay for it, but objecting means you are a bigot. So shut up and pay up.

Indeed...

Colorado Rockies face mediation over 'Ladies Night'

anthony · 5 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The Colorado Rockies have been ordered into mediation by state authorities after a man complained that he was denied a free "Ladies Night" game pass because of his gender.

The ruling comes from the Colorado Civil Rights Division, which concluded that the man, Stephen Horner, had a valid concern and it needs to be addressed, according to a report from KDVR-Television in Denver.

Horner reported he attended a Major League Baseball game with the Rockies in Denver in 2007 when employees of the team were handing out free vouchers to a future game – to women only. He said he asked for a voucher but was told he couldn't have one because he is a man.

He complained, but got no results, he claimed in a subsequent gender discrimination complaint with the Colorado Civil Rights Division."

All proceeds from new book benefit the Domestic Abuse Helpline for Men & Women

Trudy W Schuett · 5 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Friends to the End is a book that sent me off on a path I'd never imagined.

When I first started writing it in late 1999, my main intention was to write something a bit unusual; a book that wasn't appearing in the dozens by different authors under different titles in every bookstore in the country.

I began writing this book about a male victim of domestic violence, under the same misapprehensions that most people held at the time, and still hold today -- that there is the same help available for male victims as there is for women. All anyone in this kind of situation need do is pick up a phone and help will surely come, is the conventional wisdom.

More on the book here.

Book available here.

Teenager files civil lawsuit in De Anza baseball rape case

anthony · 5 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'SAN JOSE, Calif. -- A teenager who told authorities she was gang raped last year by members of the De Anza College baseball team has filed suit against the players.

The civil suit was filed Monday in Santa Clara County Superior Court. It comes a year after the girl reported she was raped - and nine months after the Santa Clara County District Attorney decided not to file charges.

The teenager seeks an unspecified amount of money from nine former players and another young man who attended the party. ...She is not identified in the suit.'

Michelle Malkin: "The Death Cry of Gloria Steinem"

anthony · 5 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Behold with me the politics of gynocentrism. What a depressing and desiccative sight it is. Just look at Gloria Steinem.
...
American women are the freest, wealthiest, most educated in the world. They are liberated enough to choose someone for president other than a female candidate out of uterus-based loyalty. This should be viewed as progress, not heresy. But the old-guard feminists — the "ruling people" — deeply resent this independence as they cling to what's left of their power base and their shrinking absolute moral authority card."

More hooey from the housework crowd

Matt · 6 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. If you're a good boy, more num-nums for you! No mention of repairs to faucets or the fact that men are expected to, and far more often than not, have their incomes treated as 'family property' while their wives' incomes are 'her own money'. The whole tone of this article makes me want to reach for the trash can. It just drips with contempt and is filled with garbage. Excerpt:

'NEW YORK - American men still don't pull their weight when it comes to housework and child care, but collectively they're not the slackers they used to be. The average dad has gradually been getting better about picking himself up off the sofa and pitching in, according to a new report in which a psychologist suggests the payoff for doing more chores could be more sex.
...
"There's a generational shift that's quite strong," she said. "The younger set of dads have their own expectations about themselves as to being helpful and participatory. They haven't quite gotten to equality in any sense that a women would say, 'Wow, that's equal,' but they've gotten so much farther down the road."'

Mom videotaped power-washing little girl

Matt · 6 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

More than just yet-another-child-abusing-woman story, this one is asking for leads. If you were in that area and have any ideas, please report them. Story here. Excerpt:

'ORLANDO, Fla. -- Investigators are searching for a woman on Thursday who was videotaped while spraying a girl with a pressured water hose at an Orlando car wash.

Surveillance cameras captured the woman holding the girl with one hand and holding the hose in the other hand at an arm's length distance.'

Norway enforces a law that 40% of directors must be female

AngryMan · 6 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman comes in, a man goes out. That's how the quota works; that's the law," says Kjell Erik Øie, deputy minister of children and equality, in the centre-left "Red-Green" coalition government in Oslo. "Very seldom do men let go of power easily. But when you start using the half of the talent you have previously ignored, then everybody gains."
...
So what is stopping companies from appointing women to their boards? Catalyst, an influential New York thinktank, has published a list of the barriers to female advancement to board level. Top of the list is women's lack of management experience, closely followed by women's exclusion from informal networks; stereotypes about women's abilities; a lack of role models; a failure of male leadership; family responsibilities; and naivety when it comes to company politics.
...

....The quota was presented less as a gender-equality issue, and more as one driven by economic necessity. He argued that diversity creates wealth. The country could not afford to ignore female talent, he said. Norway has a low unemployment rate (now at 1.5%) and a large number of skilled and professional posts unfilled. ...
...
In June, the TUC and the CBI are due to publish a joint paper, Talent not Tokenism, arguing in favour of promoting diversity on a voluntary basis. The goal is the same as Norway's, the road however may take much longer to travel. "It's a natural instinct to recruit those who are like you," says Marion Seguret, the CBI's senior policy advisor. "Men need to be trained to look to the other 50% of the population."

Back in Oslo, the irrepressible Fagerland says she plays a game with her daughters based on the Swedish fictional character Pippi Longstocking, a girl who believes in herself and is utterly unconventional. "We break all the rules. Everything is turned upside down. We wear pyjamas in the garden and eat sweets before dinner. They love it.'

More on Women and Lying on The Today Show

Anonymous · 6 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This video clip on the Today Show covers new research about why women lie -- pretty much about everything: sex, marriage,fidelity, motherhood, work, finances, etc. Of course the experts' explanations are that "society" conditions women to lie and be deceptive and so it's not women's fault. This segment is almost as funny as Tom Leykis' "Chicks on Politics." And of course it ends with remarks about how men lie too -- but they are not as good at it as women. The fairer sex caught in a truthful moment?

Article: "Hillary Plays the 'Gender Card,' Again "

anthony · 6 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Hillary Clinton has made clear she will insist on the nomination even if she trails in elected delegates, and Obama's side is sure to be furious if the "establishment" rips the prize away from its candidate. Whoever emerges the bloodied victor will face a daunting task of reuniting the party and defeating Republican John McCain in November.
...
On the morning of the New Hampshire primary, feminist Gloria Steinem added fuel to the "identity politics" fire by arguing in a New York Times op-ed that American women have suffered more political and economic discrimination than American black men.

...
Steinem's historical arguments threw down a gauntlet to a bitter debate over who's the bigger victim, blacks or women.

American blacks could reasonably cite their experience with generations of slavery followed by generations of brutal segregation in making the case that giving black men the vote after the Civil War was relatively meaningless.
...
After her New Hampshire comeback, Clinton insisted she would never play the "gender card" – even as she continued playing it.

"You have a woman running to break the highest and hardest glass ceiling," she said in a Jan. 13 appearance on NBC's "Meet the Press" before adding: "I don't think either of us wants to inject race or gender in this campaign."'

Lesbian 'vampire' lovers jailed for life

AngryMan · 7 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. File under "Justice Served", at least in this case. Excerpt:

'Jessica Stasinowsky, 21, and Valerie Parashumti, 19, pleaded guilty to murdering 16-year-old Stacey Mitchell in Perth in western Australia in 2006 because she was annoying, Australian news agencies reported.
...
"Even more appalling are your admissions to the effect that at the time of the murder you were each sexually excited by the violence of the event," said Judge Blaxell.

The killers made a mobile phone video of the murder scene, laughing and mocking their victim, and then dumped her body upside down in a garbage bin in a back shed.

A psychologist found Parashumti, who drank blood as part of a vampire subculture, had very strong sexual sadistic tendencies and was sexually aroused by physical torture and violence.'

Sadly I can imagine these girls getting jailed for 10 years or less here in America.

UK: Five-time false rape accuser spared jail

AngryMan · 7 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman who made a string of false rape claims, leading to the arrest of five different men and wasting massive amounts of police time, has walked free from court.
...
Judge David Hodson sentenced Brooks to 32 weeks imprisonment suspended for two years with a three month curfew from 10pm to 7am.'

Alas, unlike the previous story, justice denied.

Daily Journal covers Al Rava's win against Club Med

Matt · 7 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Mark A. Article appears here, but this is a subscription-only site. It covers legal issues and is widely-read by attorneys.

FROM BOTH SIDES NOW: LAWYER WINS AS COUNSEL AND PLAINTIFF

By Don J. DeBenedictis
Daily Journal Staff Writer
This article appears on Page 1 of Verdicts and Settlements.

SANTA ANA - If attorney Alfred G. Rava hadn't won an important civil rights ruling from the California Supreme Court last year, lead plaintiff Alfred G. Rava might not have won a hefty settlement in an unrelated men's rights class action last week.

The settlement ends litigation by Rava and other men challenging a promotion by Club Med Sales Inc., the French vacation-resorts company, that offered women, but not men, $400 discounts on airfare to either of two Club Med locations. Rava v. Club Med Sales Inc., 03CC09858 (Orange Co. Super. Ct., filed Aug. 4, 2003)

Rava, a San Diego lawyer and activist for men's rights, had won a unanimous ruling from the Supreme Court last May in a case challenging "ladies' nights" at a nightclub.

The issues in that case were a little different from those in the suit against Club Med, but "once that case [came down], this case almost immediately settled," said Eric C. Jenkins, Rava's winning attorney against the resorts.

One of Club Med's attorneys, Michael P. Acain, conceded as much.

The unanimous opinion by Chief Justice Ronald M. George in Rava's case, Angelucci v. Century Supper Club, 41 Cal. 4th 160, (Cal., 2007), "did confirm that the Supreme Court takes that strict approach" to gender discrimination issues, Acain said.

The Club Med settlement may set a record for settlements under California's Unruh Civil Rights Act and under the newer Gender Tax Repeal Act, Rava and Jenkins believe. As approved Feb. 25 by Orange County Superior Court Judge Ronald H. Bauer, the settlement demands $520,000 from Club Med, including a whopping $400,000 in attorney fees for the plaintiff class.

A total of 257 men purchased vacation packages during the "Ladies Fly Free" promotion, but Club Med could only locate 54 of them, and only 50 submitted claims in time to join the class. Each of those 50 men will receive $1,200 in cash plus three $400 air-fare discount coupons.

Jenkins and Rava said their research did not uncover any larger settlements under the two rights acts.

Their lawsuit claims Club Med committed "intentional acts of discrimination against men" by not offering them the same airfare deal as women, denying the men "equal treatment under the law."

Jenkins, of Fuller Jenkins in La Jolla, said the resort company's liability under the state rights acts was clear.

"Certainly, the California state Legislature doesn't like gender discrimination," he said. "The [Uhruh act's] penalties keep going up."

With results like this, "hopefully ... the word will get out that you cannot discriminate based on gender," Jenkins added.

Acain, of McKay, Graham & de Lorimier in Los Angeles, said the big problem for his client was the Unruh Act itself.

"It's always been Club Med's contention that ... [there was] no intent to discriminate," Acain said. "The Unruh Act is so broadly worded that it takes intent out of it."

Meanwhile, Rava never made it to a Club Med resort. He and his girlfriend had purchased vacation packages to the Cancun club on July 7, 2003. He paid $1,407 and she paid $1,007.

But because his attorneys filed his class action on Aug. 4, Rava decided not to take the scheduled trip in October. He said he was concerned about how a plaintiff might be received at the resort.

Still, he wishes he could have gone. "We made all the plans to go," he said.

263539100

Trendwatch: "French women 'are the sexual predators now'"

Matt · 7 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'French women are becoming increasingly assertive in their sexual habits, while one-in-five younger French men "has no interest in sex", according to one of the most comprehensive surveys of the nation's love lives.
...
"The good old dichotomy (male predators, females patiently awaiting the warrior's return in front of the cave entrance) is in big trouble", said Le Nouvel Observateur.

Female sexual emancipation has been a hot topic in France ever since President Nicolas Sarkozy met Carla Bruni, the Italian model and singer. The couple married last month.

Ms Bruni recently declared monogamy "terribly boring"...
...
At the same time, she reinforced old stereotypes that link status and virility, by reportedly declaring: "I want a man with nuclear power."
...
One of the more surprising findings was that one-in-five French men aged between 18 and 24 "manifests no interest in sexuality", while abstinence rates for men under 35 was twice as high as for women.'

"Predators"? I am sick of seeing/hearing this word to describe people who just plain like to have sex. A "sexual predator" is not a promiscuous person, it is a person who deliberately victimizes other people in a sexual way via sexual abuse, selfish and significant exploitation of emotion, or in other ways clearly repugnant from a moral* standpoint. Merely being promiscuous does not make anyone a 'predator'.

But what is significant from the men's issues perspective here is the drop-off in interest in sex among men in France. I doubt it's much different in other western worlds. The study doesn't go into what may be the cause of it (ie, is it environmental, connected with the "feminizing chemicals" in our environment, or is it sociological for some reason?), but arguably that is outside the scope of the study. I would be interested in seeing a follow-on that tries to handle that.

But so much for my prejudicial view of the French around the topic of sexuality. My how times change.

---

*I am using "moral" as defined the second way on the linked page: "In its second, normative and universal, sense, morality refers to an ideal code of conduct, one which would be espoused in preference to alternatives by all rational people, under specified conditions. To deny 'morality' in this sense is a position known as moral skepticism [1]."

Dems Duel & Women Debate Shoulder-pad Feminism

Roy · 7 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The always lovely Maureen Dowd has an excellent piece in the NY Times today about the issues posed by the Obama-Clinton contest:

'Some women in their 30s, 40s and early-50s who favor Barack Obama have a phrase to describe what they don't like about Hillary Clinton: Shoulder-pad feminism.

They feel that women have moved past that men-are-pigs, woe-is-me, sisters-must-stick-together, pantsuits-are-powerful era that Hillary's campaign has lately revived with a vengeance.

And they don't like Gloria Steinem and other old-school feminists trying to impose gender discipline and a call to order on the sisters.

As a woman I know put it: "Hillary doesn't make it look like fun to be a woman. And her 'I-have-been-victimized' campaign is depressing."'

Homeschooling Ban in California

Anonymous · 7 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I am submitting this to the site because of the overwhelming evidence that shows boys do equal to or better than girls in all areas when home-schooled and worse when FORCED to be indoctrinated in the feminist public "education" system. Excerpt:

'A California appeals court ruling clamping down on homeschooling by parents without teaching credentials sent shock waves across the state this week, leaving an estimated 166,000 children as possible truants and their parents at risk of prosecution.
...
Parents can be criminally prosecuted for failing to comply, Croskey said.

"A primary purpose of the educational system is to train school children in good citizenship, patriotism and loyalty to the state and the nation as a means of protecting the public welfare," the judge wrote, quoting from a 1961 case on a similar issue.
...
Heimov said her organization's chief concern was not the quality of the children's education, but their "being in a place daily where they would be observed by people who had a duty to ensure their ongoing safety."'

Extensive list of "women behaving badly"

ItsDan · 7 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

List here.

The site contains a rather long list of women involved in sex crimes with children of both genders. The length of the page stunned me right away.

International Women's Day: Code for 'Advancing Radical Feminism Around the Globe'

anthony · 8 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'"Today's feminists and CEDAW advocates view 'progress' as government-run day care, greater access to abortion, the elimination of 'Mother's Day' because it promotes an 'negative cultural stereotype,' decriminalization of prostitution in China, and government-mandated workplace benefits that men do not enjoy, just to name a few," said Schlafly. "Their goal is not equality, but preferential treatment."

"The radical feminists want to remake our laws in order to eradicate everything that is masculine from our culture and create a gender-neutral society," concluded Schlafly. "The United States should seriously reconsider lending its stamp of approval to future IWDs."'

New report from RADAR

Matt · 8 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Each year the federal government spends $1 billion for domestic violence programs. But there is no evidence that these programs actually reduce abuse. Worse, one widely-used strategy – mandatory arrest for partner assault – has been shown to place victims at greater risk of violence.

To find out what's gone wrong, RADAR combed through numerous reports from the GAO, OMB, and Office of the Inspector General to find out how well federal agencies administer domestic violence (DV) programs. We reached 3 conclusions:

1. DV programs are largely unaccountable to the public.
2. Federal agencies frequently mismanage DV grant monies.
3. Recipients of federal money often engage in financial misconduct, embezzlement, and fraud.

These conclusions are explained in RADAR's upcoming Special Report, "$1 Billion for DV Programs that Misuse Taxpayer Money and Place Victims at Risk."

Today we will be meeting with staffers on Capitol Hill to discuss the report, and on Monday we will be issuing a national press release.

The report is available here (.pdf file).

Watch "Indoctrinate U" Today

Matt · 9 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via email:

We're very happy to announce the arrival of the Indoctrinate U online store!

You can download the film today and watch it on your computer or TV.

The film is available as a high-quality MPEG-4 file or as a Virtual DVD, which allows you to burn your own DVD copy of "Indoctrinate U" and watch it on your TV. (The Virtual DVD is a standards-compliant ISO file.)

The MPEG-4 file and the Virtual DVD are compatible with Mac, Windows and Linux.

ALSO:

There are a number of new screenings that have been added to the schedule over the coming weeks.

Note: Physical DVDs are not yet available, and will not be available for a number of weeks. If you can't make it to a local screening, downloading the MPEG-4 file or the Virtual DVD is the only way to see the film soon.

RADAR ALERT: Unaccountable DV Programs Misuse Tax Dollars, Place Victims at Risk

Matt · 10 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

"We have no evidence to date that VAWA has led to a decrease in the overall levels of violence against women."
–Angela Moore Parmley, PhD, U.S. Department of Justice

Very often, bad public policy accompanies bad fiscal policy. The Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) is no exception.

The quote above comes from a Justice Department official with no ax to grind. VAWA is ideological public policy in which true debate is considered politically incorrect. None of the discussions in Congress leading up to the passage of the original 1995 VAWA bill, the 2000 reauthorization, nor the 2005 reauthorization involved any real debate about the merit, or lack of merit, of the programs to be funded. The predictable result is that VAWA is filled with waste, fraud, and abuse. In short, ideology has been given priority over efficacy, and Congress' expenditure of roughly $1 billion tax dollars per year on domestic violence programs is yielding very poor results.

These problems are outlined in RADAR's latest special report: $1 Billion for DV Programs That Misuse Taxpayer Money and Place Victims at Risk.

The report identifies three major flaws in the way domestic violence programs are administered by both the Department of Justice and the Department of Health and Human Services:

1. Lack of Accountability
2. Federal Mismanagement of Grant Monies
3. Grantee Misconduct and Fraud

Please take the time to read RADAR's new special report here (.pdf file).

Educate yourself and your organization, and share the report with other groups in your state, especially those concerned with government accountably and waste. We need to start now to build a coalition to ensure adequate debate for the next VAWA reauthorization.

++
Date of RADAR Release: March 10, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence.
http://www.mediaradar.org/.

CNN Video: Arrest made, 2nd woman involved in tot carwash case

anthony · 10 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video here.

"CNN's Sunny Hostin talks about the case against a mother caught on surveillance cameras power washing her toddler."

Boys School In Works For Fall

anthony · 10 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Hartford is poised to jump headlong into single-gender education, with an all-boys school being planned for the fall and a girls' school to follow a year later.

They would become the first entirely single-gender public schools in the state, said Tom Murphy, spokesman for the state Department of Education.

...

The girls take up an extra row at graduation ceremonies, Weaver High School Principal Paul Stringer said. "I think it's because there are so few male role models and fathers in homes of kids growing up in poverty-stricken areas." He said a school dedicated to boys could help, and he offered to return to such a school after he retires at the end of this year to mentor the principal, teachers and students.'

Feminist Rule: We Must Vote For Clinton

oregon dad · 10 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

It highlights that gender based voting requirements may actually be a threat to democracy. Excerpt:

'"I paused for a long time," says McFadden. "Then I told her I voted for a boy - I wasn't going to lie." McFadden, who has worked on women's issues for twenty years, says the room went silent and the board chair chastised her. "It was clear that I had betrayed feminism by voting for Barack Obama. It became obvious - if you didn't vote for Hillary Clinton, you were less than a feminist and only marginally a woman."'

F4J/NCFM Activism: Fathers Are Great Teachers

MR · 11 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Fathers Are Great Teachers

"Once again, we were able to debut a new sign (far left in photo), countering the Father vilifying mainstream media. Once again, we were able to express our commitment to speak well of Fathers. February is President's month so who better than Abe Lincoln to emphasize the fact that "Fathers Are Great Teachers.""

Interview with 'Feminists Say the Darndest Things' author

oregon dad · 11 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Interview here. Excerpt:

"I support a woman's right to have equal opportunity. But I do not applaud a woman's right to be just like a man. That is different. Increasingly, college women are - under the guidance of feminists - acting more and more like college boys who just want to get drunk and have sex without commitment.

I believe that feminism has become a political movement that seeks to obtain unlimited rights for woman without corresponding responsibilities via the suppression of feminism."

UK: Cash incentive for mothers to start businesses in works

Anonymous · 11 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Mothers could be offered a financial incentive to start up their own business after having children, in a Government attempt to boost the number of women entrepreneurs.

They would be given advice on how to run a firm, pitch for bank loans and prepare business plans under the enterprise strategy being launched tomorrow...

...The enterprise strategy will be aimed at women who are either young, out of a job, from an ethnic minority or eager to work after having children. Mothers using children's centres will also be targeted with business advice."

One day as a perfect 1950s wife

Anonymous · 11 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

"What has brought this on is a survey, published last week, which compared the perfect 1950s housewife with her 2008 counterpart and asked 2,309 men what kind of woman they preferred. The majority seemed to prefer living with feisty modern babes rather than glorified butlers who change for dinner. But can that be right?

Chez Millard, in any case, it is 1955. For one day. And we are about to put the survey to the test."

Check out the comments at the end.

Spitzer, Dates, and Paying for... what?

Matt · 11 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I read these four articles (click 'Read more' to get to the links) and my mind sort of boggled. It's amazing how ambivalent, confused, and "double-standarded" westerners are about such things. But all in all, and I think it's hard to dispute, the underlying message is still the same: It's OK for men to pay for "the company" of a woman provided it is not an explicit this-for-that transaction, and if it is, the woman is the victim and the man the evil-doer. In other words, there always has to be this uncertainty about the outcome, and then it's OK.

This system allows a woman to bail on the whole thing-- ie, it's OK for her to be uncommitted to any form of payment for time and trouble while it's OK for a man to be.

But at no time in any of these articles is the fundamental assumption that men paying (or being expected in some way to pay) for a woman's company, with the implication being that the nature of the contact be at some point physical, ever questioned. I am reminded of what Robert Bly wrote in "Iron John", to paraphrase, that we are like fish raised in a polluted pond; we don't even know what clear water looks like, making it that much harder to measure progress at efforts to clean it up.

The whole thing just plain makes me ill. The articles:

Slate.com (Jurisprudence: The law, lawyers, and the court):
Why Is Prostitution Illegal?
'The case for making it against the law to buy sex begins with the premise that it's base and exploitative and demeaning to sex workers. Legalizing prostitution expands it, the argument goes, and also helps pimps, fails to protect women, and leads to more back-alley violence, not less.
...
In 1999, Sweden made it legal to sell sex but illegal to buy it—only the johns and the traffickers can be prosecuted. This is the only approach to prostitution that's based on "sex equality," argues University of Michigan law professor Catharine MacKinnon. It treats prostitution as a social evil but views the women who do it as the victims of sexual exploitation who "should not be victimized again by the state by being made into criminals," as MacKinnon put it to me in an e-mail. It's the men who use the women, she continued, who are "sexual predators" and should be punished as such.'

Sunday Times (UK):
The truth about toy boys

'For women like me – single, successful and of a certain age – the ideal dating partners aren't the divorced-dad brigade, as everyone assumes. Who wants another embittered divorcé looking for a second mum for his kids? If you already have children (I have two) and your own money (I run a company with more than 100 employees), and you're finally finding the time to enjoy yourself, you want someone who is looking for the same no-strings-attached fun as you. So boys in their twenties are perfect.
...
I set up a fake profile – not to entrap him, but just to see – and, sure enough, after a mere two days he made an approach.
...
Probably for all these reasons, my friends were sceptical at first. They presumed these boys would only be after money and/or sex and consequently mess me around.'

No mention of who pays for the date-- but notice that once finances are not a factor for the author in her equation, her 'priorities' seem to change quite rapidly.

MSN.com (Dating & Personals):
Who Pays for the Date?

'There are also women who tell me that when a man indicates to the woman that she should pay half the check, it’s a sign that he isn’t interested in her, and he’s just being practical...
...
Men are equally confused about how to handle the check. They often worry they’ll offend a woman by offering to pay the whole check, or worry that they’ll offend her by genuinely not being able to afford the whole check. ... Create your own set of rules about how to respond*.'

* Notice the man's opinion is irrelevant; it's all in her court.

MSN.com (Lifestyle: Men):
When It's Okay Not to Pay subtitle: "Women are better educated and likely to outlive you. And yes, you still have to pay—with these exceptions.*" | *Still, it doesn't hurt to offer.

'On your birthday or any other day celebrating you.

For a wedding gift for one of her friends, or the expenses accrued during said wedding.'

But as for the current Spitzer case in particular, well, my opinion is that he who lives by the sword and dies by it has nothing to gripe about. It'd be one thing if he had had no long history of prosecuting hookers and johns, but he does. It's his hypocrisy that makes me feel no sympathy for him, not his paying for sex. After all, he has done so all his life, as has every heterosexual man who is not a celibate since who-knows-when, so why should it be any different before or after he assumes a public office?

Woman gets 6 months for 'sex with' teenage boys

Matt · 11 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Gates mother of three who pleaded guilty to having sex with two teenage boys will do six months in jail. Today a judge sentenced Dena Greene and also gave her 10 years of intensive probation. She's also required to register as a level-one sex offender.'

Another one off-linked: Fairmont Woman Accused of Having Sex with Teen Boy. "The criminal complaint says Watkins admitted to having sex with a 14 year old boy two times last month..."

Ferraro defends her commentss about Obama's race, cites sexism vs. the campaign, racism vs. her

anthony · 11 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Sen. Barack Obama's top strategist Tuesday demanded that Sen. Hillary Clinton sever ties with Geraldine Ferraro, a top Clinton fundraiser who said Obama was a major presidential contender only because he is a black man. Excerpt:

'(CNN) -- Geraldine Ferraro defended her controversial comment that Sen. Barack Obama's campaign was successful because he was black, telling an interviewer Tuesday that she was being attacked because she was white.
...
"Racism works in two different directions. I really think they're attacking me because I'm white. How's that?"
...
"I said in large measure, because he is black. I said, Let me also say in 1984 -- and if I have said it once, I have said it 20, 60, 100 times -- in 1984, if my name was Gerard Ferraro instead of Geraldine Ferraro, I would never have been the nominee for vice president," she said.

In her first interview with Daily Breeze, published late last week, Ferraro said, "If Obama was a white man, he would not be in this position. And if he was a woman, he would not be in this position. He happens to be very lucky to be who he is. And the country is caught up in the concept.

She also said Hillary Clinton had been the victim of a "sexist media."'

First National Teen STD Study Ignores Boys

anthony · 11 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'At least one in four teenage girls nationwide has a sexually transmitted disease, or more than 3 million teens, according to the first study of its kind in this age group.
...
Dr. John Douglas, director of the CDC's division of STD prevention, said the results are the first to examine the combined national prevalence of common sexually transmitted diseases among adolescent girls. He said the data, from 2003-04, probably reflect current rates of infection.

"High STD rates among young women, particularly African-American young women, are clear signs that we must continue developing ways to reach those most at risk," Douglas said.

The CDC's Dr. Kevin Fenton said given that STDs can cause infertility and cervical cancer in women, "screening, vaccination and other prevention strategies for sexually active women are among our highest public health priorities."'

Ho-fessional Explains the Business

Roy · 12 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This video clip interview with a $3,000 per hour prostitute is very interesting. Calling herself a "Ho-fessional," the twenty-eight year old female explains that she is a business woman making a half-million per year selling herself as a commodity and enjoying every minute of it.

This is the ultimate Raunch Culture Girl and she is the future of what little is left of femininity in America.

Boys, 4, cuffed for refusing nap

anthony · 12 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Parents of two four-year-old boys in New York are suing officials after their sons were allegedly handcuffed for refusing to take a nap.

Lawyer Scott Agulnick says a substitute teacher took Jaden Diaz and Christopher Brito to an empty classroom.

Then, a school safety officer allegedly entered the room, cuffed the boys' wrists - and told them they would never see their parents again.'

RADAR ACTION ALERT: Stop funding increase for wasteful, ineffective DV programs. Call your Congressperson today!

Matt · 12 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Just yesterday RADAR announced the release of our new special report (.pdf file), "$1 Billion for DV Programs That Misuse Taxpayer Money and Place Victims at Risk". Our report could hardly have been more timely. Just today we've learned of a major campaign to pressure legislators to increase the VAWA appropriation in the President's 2009 budget.

Please contact your Representative on Capitol Hill and tell them that Violence Against Women Act funds have been subject to widespread waste and fraud. Furthermore, scores of research studies show that a great many domestic violence programs are ineffective at best and harmful at worst. The National Academy of Sciences describes these programs as "driven by ideology and stakeholder interests rather than by plausible theories and scientific evidence of cause." Tell your Representative you want to see funding spent on programs that actually work.

Refer them to RADAR's press release here and RADAR's Special Report at here (.pdf file) for further information.

To find your Representative's phone number, call: 202-224-3121. Or you can look it up at http://www.house.gov/.

Your call will help counteract the campaign being organized by http://StopFamilyViolence.org/.

Please call today!

Battered men jostle for space in crowded Danish shelters

Matt · 12 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'COPENHAGEN (AFP) — Battered women in Denmark have a multitude of shelters to choose from but men in need of a haven after divorce, losing their job or fleeing abusive wives have to elbow for room in just three brimming crisis centres.

Overlooking a canal in the picturesque Christianshavn neighbourhood of Copenhagen sits a red brick building with large bay windows: Mandecentret, the Scandinavian country's newest centre for men in distress.
...
Winnie Bendtson, a counsellor at the centre, notes that the men are not usually physically beaten.

"But it does happen that women throw anything within range at their husbands, even threaten them with knives," she says.

The men who seek help are often the victims of "very domineering" women, and some are "forbidden from using their own money, seeing their family and friends, forced to come home at a set time and locked out if they're a few minutes late."'

‘Sea change’ seen in spouses’ financial roles

Matt · 12 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A.: This story helps show what we've said all along - that it is not "patriarchy" or male dominance, but choices, that lead to men "earning more" in relationships. Men generally have no problem with their wives outearning them, and they're realizing the breadwinner role is more of a burden than a privilege. If anything, women still seek men who outearn them so they can choose between career and childraising. That option is a power women have, not a disadvantage. This story also gave the "housework" myth, ignoring new studies showing men put in more than their share of hours when combining work inside and outside the home, which is generally true worldwide. Marc

Excerpt:
'It seems we’ve officially left “Leave It to Beaver” behind.

In the new dynamics of home economics, it’s not just that men want women to contribute financially to a marriage: The vast majority of men say they wouldn't even mind if their wives brought home the bigger paycheck.
...
“The male ego as head of household seems to have diminished to the point of disappearance,” said Rosanna Hertz, chair of women’s studies at Wellesley College and one of the researchers involved in the Elle/msnbc.com study. “However, men are still dragging their feet in terms of domestic responsibilities.”'

Woman sits on boyfriend's toilet for 2 years

anthony · 12 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This situation redefines the word "weird". Excerpt:

'Deputies said a woman in western Kansas sat on her boyfriend's toilet for two years, and they're investigating whether she was mistreated.

Ness County Sheriff Bryan Whipple said a man called his office last month to report that something was wrong with his girlfriend.
...
“She was not glued. She was not tied. She was just physically stuck by her body,” Whipple said. “It is hard to imagine. ... I still have a hard time imagining it myself.”

He told investigators he brought his girlfriend food and water, and asked her every day to come out of the bathroom.

“And her reply would be, ‘Maybe tomorrow,’” Whipple said. “According to him, she did not want to leave the bathroom.”
...
“She said that she didn’t need any help, that she was OK and did not want to leave,” he said.'

--

Ed. note: If this were the old board software, I'd've listed it under 'Humor'.

Woman Accused Of Driving Over Ex-Boyfriend

Matt · 12 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'SACRAMENTO COUNTY, Calif. - Police are searching for a woman accused of running over and injuring her ex-boyfriend with a car Friday morning, the Sacramento County Sheriff's Department said. Authorities said the assault occurred around 8:30 a.m. on Wildhawk Drive. The man is expected to survive.

The man was standing in his front yard between the sidewalk and front door when police said his ex-girlfriend drove up the driveway and hit him.

Deputies said they are seeking 25-year-old Faith Powell, who was last seen driving a gray Dodge Magnum.'

Men Naturally Unfaithful?

SpikeRants · 13 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Dennis Prager says that men are naturally unfaithful, and that for those of us who AREN'T cheating on our wives currently, we should expect a hug for them.

So, men naturally cheat? I'd disagree, as all my exes have cheated on me. My wife listened to it today, and she got mad about it. If it irks a woman, I'm sure it'll irk a man.

It's about eight or nine minutes in. Audio here.

Newsweek: "His Cheating Brain"

anthony · 13 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'He's Hormonal. Alpha males are high on testosterone, the hormone that underlies almost all the typical traits of the politico-sexual animal: high levels of testosterone make for a high sex drive, a love of risks, aggressiveness and competitiveness. "These people have a strong need to win at games, which is obviously important in power politics," says Zuckerman. Success sends their testosterone spiraling up, while a loss brings the levels down— a phenomenon that's been documented in the lab as well as in athletes and chess champions.
...
Women's testosterone levels also rise when there's competition on the line, but the actual act of winning—or, for that matter, losing—doesn't have any effect on the levels either way. It's the game, not the outcome, that makes the difference for women. Success, then, may not set them off-balance the same way. Evolutionary psychology also suggests that women leaders wouldn't be as likely as men to get caught in sex scandals. "Men and women play different roles in reproduction, so I don't think that you'd see the same kind of pattern where high-status women would be more likely to seek out lots and lots of men," says Daniel Kruger, a research scientist at the University of Michigan who has studied risk-taking behavior. "That's not going to really benefit them that much because they're limited in the number of children they could have." Men, on the other hand, have more of a biological imperative to spread their genes far and wide--the kind of privilege that often comes with being an alpha male.'

"Why I was forced to abandon my son and didn't see him again for ten crucial years"

Matt · 13 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. What's unusual is that this link appeared under the "Femail" heading on the DM website. Excerpt:

'I see the long-term harm done by absent dads and the lack of appropriate male role-models, and I experience the damage caused by unsocialised boys - both to themselves and to others - and their inability to function as men.

And yet I abandoned my own son, just at the time when he was starting junior school, and I didn't see him again for those ten crucial years when character development is at its most vulnerable. And I'm still not exactly sure why.
...
Fortunately, I knew that if I withdrew from his life, Joe wouldn't lack for male role-models: on his mum's side he has uncles aplenty and they're mostly of that warm, jocular, physical brand of masculinity that is easy and uncomplicated and supportive. They'd do, I thought. They're not me, but they'd do.

And this is how you abandon your children. Not with fireworks, not with emotional catharsis or some lingering cinematic close-up, but incrementally, with sadness, tiredness and an "OK, they'll do".'

What a painful thing to read. It's cognitive dissonance in action, only on a deeply, profoundly emotional level, pushed onto men and their children by a legal system and society that cannot wait to get rid of them. Sometimes I just plain wonder how our civilization continues.

Child protection? No, ruination

Anonymous · 13 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

"Two men are incarcerated by the State, when they should be the stability in two children's lives."

This excellent article discusses two recent notorious cases in the UK. Excerpt:

'The system is merciless to people who question the system. Charles Roy Taylor, whom I wrote about at Christmas, is in a similar situation. Mr Taylor is a 71-year-old with a heart condition. He was sent to prison for 20 months for being in contact with his stepgrandson, who has been in care since his mother died and who has repeatedly run away to see his grandparents. By breaching an agreement not to answer the door to him, Mr Taylor stands accused of “undermining the care plan”. But he and the boy's grandmother are the teenager's only living relatives. They will presumably be his first port of call when he comes of age and is thrown out of the care system. Mr Taylor may not survive that long: last week he suffered an angina attack that put him in hospital for four days. Is that in the interests of the boy?'

Australian Woman Kills Boyfriend Who Stopped Her From Playing Springsteen

anthony · 13 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

An Australian woman stabbed her de facto husband to death after he stopped her playing her favorite Bruce Springsteen CD.

Karen Lee Cooper told arresting police: "I couldn't even play Bruce Springsteen on my stereo -- can you believe that? Can you believe that?"
...
In the Supreme Courty in Brisbane Thursday, Cooper, 50, was jailed for eight years.

She pleaded guilty to the manslaughter of Kevin Lee Watson on July 8, 2006.
...
The court heard Cooper stabbed Watson through the aorta after they had been drinking at their Cedar Grove home, south of Brisbane.'

MSNBC Video: "Why men go to call girls"

anthony · 13 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The Today show asks "Is your mate cheating and how can you tell?" Absolutely no mention of women's infidelity or how prevalent that is. Replace 'mate' with 'husband'. Video here.

School clears kids in contraband candy caper

Matt · 13 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Notice the wording; he's 'cleared' of the crime of possessing a bag of unauthorized Skittles! Heck, revoke his recreation privileges for two weeks and no Kool-Aid at dinner, neither!

School = prison... for boys, anyway. You know, with every such case of feminist-inspired abuse of boys and men, MRAs win another convert. Think the LAX players at Duke had ever heard of "men's rights" before their ordeal? You can bet they have now, and are ardent supporters. The target of this particular feminist attack will certainly, too, and he's only in 8th grade!

Keep it up, ladies (and manholes). Just keep it up. You're the best recruiting tool we in the Men's Rights Movement have. Excerpt:

'Michael Sheridan, an eighth-grade honors student who was suspended for a day, barred from attending an honors dinner and stripped of his title as class vice president after he was caught with a bag of Skittles candy in school will get his student council post back, school officials said.

Superintendent Reginald Mayo said in a statement late Wednesday that he and principal Eleanor Turner met with student Michael's parents and that Turner decided to clear the boy's record and restore him to his student council post.

Michael was disciplined after he was caught buying a bag of Skittles from a classmate. The classmate's suspension also will be expunged, school officials said.'

West Virginia Legislature Passes Bill Criminalizing False Allegations of Child Abuse

johndias · 13 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Bill would criminalize making false allegations of abuse
March 13, 2008

Via ANCPR:

MARTINSBURG, WV -- Nine times, one aggrieved father says he fought to protect his name and his relationship with his daughters after he was accused of child abuse in a custody dispute.

The man, whose name we will not use to protect the identity of his daughters, said he is pleased that West Virginia legislators last week passed a bill that slaps criminal charges on those who falsely report child abuse or neglect in order to influence a custody case.

On Thursday, state senators passed House Bill 3065, after the measure met overwhelming approval in the House of Delegates last week. The bill charges those who make a false abuse report with a $1,000 fine, or forces the plaintiff to pay for the defendant's legal fees. The misdemeanor crime would also carry a punishment of up to 60 hours of community service.

The man, previously a resident of Huntington who now lives in Burlington, Ohio, said in 2003 and 2004, he was accused of breaking and entering, assault and sexual and physical abuse against his two daughters. Faced with serving at least one year in jail and losing custody of his daughters, the man fought the charges.

"They were never proven to be false. They were said to be ‘unsubstantiated.' They found me not guilty. But I know I'm innocent. I want the satisfaction of knowing that on my record it was a lie, but I'll never get that," said the man, who said he spent thousands of dollars in legal fees to prove his innocence. "People have no idea how much time and money this wastes in the system."

In West Virginia, from March 2007 to March 2008, West Virginia Department of Health and Human Resources Child Protective Services received and did paperwork on 37,165 incidents of child abuse. From those, 26,904 cases were further investigated, said John Law, spokesperson for WVDHHR. Only 3,998 cases were found to be substantiated, or less than 20 percent of all investigated incidents.

"There are circumstances of false reports. If it's done intentionally, certainly it's wrong. But there are also circumstances where someone says something and it is later found to be unsubstantiated. It doesn't mean people lied, it means they reported in good faith something they perceived as child abuse," Law said. "A lot of (cases) are proven to be unsubstantiated."

Law said HB 3065 is a bill DHHR will be looking at "very closely."

The lead sponsor of the bill, Delegate Jeff Eldridge, D-Lincoln, said that based on the statistics shown to him, the state spends as much as $18 million per year investigating and processing false abuse allegations.

"So much paperwork and so many man hours are spent investigating abuse allegations and some of them lack sufficient evidence. This bill makes people follow through with their allegations. If they file charges, then there will be a hearing on it," he said.

Eldridge said the bill is a victory for people who truly are abused, and if passed, would save state taxpayers money.

"If the fathers or mothers are truly abusing the spouse, this bill will hold them accountable. At the same time, if they're not truly abusing them, then there will be penalties for whoever filed it. There are consequences to this behavior."

Sen. John Yoder, R-Jefferson, voted in favor of the bill.

"I think it's only reasonable that people who deliberately make false reports of child abuse should be held accountable because it causes a very high degree of disruption to the family and encourages further fighting," Yoder said. "We hold the people who go into the courtroom accountable for their words and we can charge them with perjury. I don't see why someone who swears out a false complaint should not also be held accountable."

Ron Foster, Region 4 coordinator for Men and Women Against Discrimination, or MAWAD, said HB3065 came about because more and more people have been using false allegations in Family Court to have one or more parents removed from the house.

"This is a huge issue. The children get hurt when false allegations are made because they're denied the opportunity to spend time with the parent at a time when they need the parent the most," he said.

The false allegation sets the stage for how much time the accused parent spends with the child after the alleged abuse occurs, and is a tool used regularly in cases involving sexual abuse, child abuse and domestic violence against the spouse, Foster said.

"This bill will definitely benefit child custody proceedings," he said. "We are wasting an inordinate amount of court time. We believe this bill will have a significant effect on the number of cases that go through the court system."

A study conducted in 2007 by MAWAD reviewed all requests and cases involving protective orders in Cabell County Family Court for 2006. The study determined that 76 percent of all cases were dismissed for one reason or another.

Berkeley County Family Judge Sally G. Jackson acknowledged that some of the allegations of domestic violence that she hears are proven false, but said that doesn't mean the person making the accusation lied.

"What somebody thinks is domestic violence, I may not, and I may dismiss the case. But that doesn't mean they're lying," she said. "I have to say sometimes there are cases where it seems people file charges not for very good reasons."

Jackson said many times parents bring domestic violence petitions because a child says something about one of the parents and describes the incident different than it actually was. And what a child says to one parent may not be the same thing said to another parent, she said.

It's for this reason, Jackson said, that parents must communicate with one another.

"Generally, the first thing a parent should do if a child comes home from visitation (and says something happened) is call up the other parent to see what happened," she said. "Parents need to keep their lines of communication open. Parents get so wrapped up in hurting each other, that they forget they're hurting their kids."

For the man, the bill may be too little too late, but that's because he now lives in Ohio.

"I have little to no faith in the judicial system any longer," he said. "Every time I turned around I was being arrested for something I never did. I see how easy the system was to manipulate. I don't want this to happen to anyone else. I don't want someone to go through the hell I went through."

He described his relationship with his children as "great," but every now and then, he said, they ask him why he went to jail.

Now, he said he uses the experience as a teaching tool to show his children the problems that are caused when people lie.

"I use it to teach them to be honest," he said. "I went to jail because someone lied."

Schoolboy found hanged in his bedroom after Ritalin prescription was increased

Anonymous · 14 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A schoolboy who was taking Ritalin has been found hanged in his bedroom.

Anthony Cole, 15, had Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder and recently had his prescription for the drug increased.

Recent research claims that Ritalin, also used to combat hyperactivity in children, has led to many developing "manic and psychotic" symptoms.'

Female Teacher Charged for 'Sex' With 14-Year-Old Student

anthony · 14 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A Hillsborough County middle school teacher has been arrested and is charged with having sex with a 14-year-old student.

Deputies arrested 28-year-old Stephanie Ragusa around 5 p.m. Thursday.

According to the Hillsborough County Sheriff's Office, Ragusa had a sexual relationship with a 14-year-old boy at Davidsen Middle School from October of 2006 to May of 2007.
...
Ragusa is charged with five counts of lewd and lascivious battery."

"If you want a real man, just vote for Hillary"

anthony · 14 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Ms. Clinton wants to have it both ways. Her pitch is that she's the best person, regardless of gender, to answer the White House phone. But she is also shameless about playing the gender card. Women ought to vote for her because, not only does she know what it's like to be a leader who can pick up the hotline, she also knows what it's like to be a 60-year-old waitress who's had to work hard all her life and put up with a cheating man. And besides, it's about time for a woman to be president.

She thinks her gender card is entirely legit, but that Mr. Obama's race card - which he's too smart to play - is really, really unfair. Geraldine Ferraro, a former Democratic congresswoman who's working for the Clinton campaign, told a newspaper this week that Mr. Obama has benefited disproportionately from his race. "If Obama was a white man, he would not be in this position," she said. "And if he was a woman, he would not be in this position. He happens to be very lucky to be who he is. And the country is caught up in the concept."

Newsday: Spitzer scandal shows gender politics' inequality

anthony · 14 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"If a female political leader did get caught in a sex scandal, having her husband stand silently by the podium while she sought forgiveness would probably make matters worse. Many Americans would conclude that she was a castrating witch married to a wimp.

Maybe it's a sign of progress that men are now supposed to beg their wives' forgiveness for infidelity. Through most of history, wives were expected not to forgive adultery but to pretend it never happened."

Time to hit the 'Comments' section, guys!

Baker Sheriff: Woman Borrows Gun From Neighbor, Kills Husband

anthony · 14 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman is charged with the shooting death of her husband before dawn Monday in their home south of Macclenny, according to the Baker County Sheriff's Office.

Investigators said Meloney Jackson borrowed a gun from a neighbor, entered the house in the 7000 block of John Rowe Street and shot Kevin Jackson.

...

"She was telling me how her husband had threatened her and they were going to court on Tuesday, and she needed a gun right now," Krall said.

He said he knew something was not right and went directly to the sheriff's office when the woman left his store.

Channel 4's John Dunlap was told that the Jacksons were in the process of getting a divorce. It was to be finalized at a hearing set for Tuesday.'

MSM Alert: 20/20 Friday March 14: 'Double Standard When It Comes to Underage Sex?'

anthony · 14 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Movies and television often portray having sex with an older woman as an exciting conquest. The Comedy Central show "South Park" shows police officers impressed that an elementary school student slept with an attractive teacher. One cop jokes to the another, "The crime is she isn't doing it with me!"
...
There are differences between men and women, but is there something about that difference that makes it less serious when a woman sleeps with a younger boy? Studies do show that most teenage boys who had sex with older women say that the sex was voluntary and the experience positive.
...
Regardless of what science or popular opinion say, the law makes no distinctions. When adult woman are caught having sex with younger boys, they are usually punished just as severely, sometimes more severely than men.'

Check your local listings for broadcast on ABC, 10:00 PM, US Eastern Time.

Female teacher admits having sex with upstate NY student

anthony · 14 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A suspended high school English teacher is facing up to six months in jail after admitting she had sex with a 15-year-old student.
...
The relationship became known when she went to a school basketball game while intoxicated and announced the affair to nearby students and spectators. Gravlin blames her actions on depression, alcohol, prescription drugs and pressure from the victim."

Ohio U Post: "Despite feminist denial, sexes are wired differently"

anthony · 14 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'With this level of censorship, it's no wonder that scientists are expected to hide research that suggests men and women are innately different. We can rest assured that a book like The Female Brain will never be assigned reading in a college classroom. Meanwhile, sociology and women's studies textbooks are filled with laughably false assertions about gender. Legitimate scholarship is being sacrificed on the altar of political correctness.
...
Of course, not all feminists reject scientific explanations for gender differences — but they're often out-screamed by the ones who do, allowing the denial to reach absurd new heights. In their book Professing Feminism, women's studies professors Daphne Patai and Noretta Koertge described a confrontation with a fellow feminist. The feminist was angry over suggestions that women should breast-feed babies, because — in her words — "research shows that men can lactate, too."'

UK Budget 2008: Start up your own business - if you're a woman empirical · 14 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Women and the over-50s are being targeted in a new government drive to increase the number of people starting up and growing their own businesses.

The Treasury is investing £12.5m in a venture capital fund that will back women-owned businesses and provide support.

It is also piloting new women-only business advice based in children's centres and is planning a national mentoring network for women.'

The only way for women to start business is with special benefits eh? Well why change a habit of a lifetime...

Women Wanted in Boyfriends' Murders

anthony · 15 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Murder suspects Hazel Head and Sherry Denise Halligan couldn't be any different. One was a hard-drinking, hard-living drifter who took advantage of lonely men she found in wanted ads. The other appeared to be a fragile victim forced into a crime of passion. But police say they shared a common bond: both women allegedly shot their lovers and left them to die.

In 1998, Hazel Head parked Charles Barker's 1994 Lincoln Continental near Shreveport Regional Airport in Shreveport, La. after, police say, she left Barker slumped over in his trailer with a fatal gunshot to the head.

Investigators say Barker was just one of many in a long line of men Head hustled for money. She was already wanted in Nebraska for burning down a boyfriend's trailer seven years earlier.

Head typically targeted older men, usually truck drivers she met while hitchhiking across the country or working odd jobs like waitressing.'

Click here for the FBI most wanted information about these two women.

Woman Throws Two Sons from Highway Overpass

SpikeRants · 16 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

It's sad. This tragic act happened in Dallas, and I didn't see a lick of it on any national news outlets. If the genders were reversed, well... remember the bloke who threw his kids out of the hotel window a few years back? Of course. It made international news. This is just a snippet in an archive on the NBC affiliate. Excerpt:

'Police said Busby was headed to a friend's home with her parents and stopped for gas when an argument broke out and, while her father was paying for gas, she walked over to the bridge and threw the children onto the interstate before jumping, Lt. C.L. Williams said in a Wednesday morning news conference.

"It appears the children were trying to stave being thrown over the edge, but they were overpowered by their mother," he said.

Busby's father had to make a U-turn to follow her in the car, but by the time he drove up, she "had picked up the kids and thrown herself over," Dallas police spokesman Sgt. Gil Cerda said.

"She was not fleeing for her safety," Cerda said. "She just threw them over and decided to throw herself over."'

Update here.

International Men's Day: Why can't we agree on a day to celebrate?

bharati · 16 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

International Men's Day: Can we not agree to a date and celebrate it? We celebrate International Men's Day on November 19th, following the lead of the first day when it was celebrated in Trinidad and Tobago in 1999.

The website is here.

The most comprehensive reportage on why is found there. Yes, it is vernacular and English is used sparingly. Aajtak the Hindi news channels cannot be ignored, as it is the most watched news channel in India, where the most famous MRA in India talks of suicide, marital issues, alimony as reverse dowry, and when he is not hectored, can talk calmly on many issues.

In print, we have almost 10 articles appearing all over the country. Some of them are here.

The International Men's Day presentation which left every reporter moist in eye is here. Why we need to celebrate is discussed here.

At that time we talked of 16th September; later we changed it to November 19th because the first such celebration happened for the first time in Trinidad and Tobago on 19th November and Wikipedia showed more countries, including Canada, showed 19th November as the day of celebration.

What is required is very simple: just cut the cake and take your project team to the movies, or an outing. Visit a prison and distribute sweets. Go to family courts give men support. "We don't need no official sanction!"

Feel important, feel good, feel happy, and remember the unfortunates and fight for them. Indulge in male ego to the utmost; ask your girlfriend to cook for you in the most chauvinistic fashion. :) This is the most important day of your life, let others allow you to indulge.

McCartney Divorce Settlement: $50 Million

Roy · 16 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Apparently Sir Paul and the former hooker* he foolishly married have settled on an award to Heather Mills of $50 million.

I guess there are a couple of ways to look at it: clearly that was a very expensive piece of ass. But $50M is only about 1/20th of his net worth, so he can probably live with the loss.

I'm sure there will also be a "gag rule" put on Heather so that she is not permitted to write a book or go on the talk show circuit to trash talk Paul. I think that has been the source of the legal acrimony all along, rather than the money.

Can't wait to hear Sir Paul's next album of "silly love songs"!

--

*Ed. note: "former" hooker?

Sweden’s "Get the customer" approach gets traction elsewhere

anthony · 16 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Selling sex isn't illegal in Sweden, but buying is — a radical approach to prostitution that faced ridicule when it was introduced nine years ago.

Now, while Americans are preoccupied with the downfall of New York Gov. Eliot Spitzer in a prostitution scandal, some countries are considering emulating the Swedish model, which prosecutes the client but views the prostitute as an exploited victim.

"We don't have a problem with prostitutes. We have a problem with men who buy sex," said Kajsa Wahlberg, of the human trafficking unit at Sweden's national police board."

Relatedly:

Story here. Excerpt:

'Many cities believe targeting johns to cut demand is the best way, among them Chicago, Raleigh and Durham, N.C., and Arlington, Texas, where pictures of those arrested for soliciting prostitutes have been posted on police Web sites. Other cities that have tried the shame approach include St. Paul, Minn., Chattanooga, Tenn.; Cincinnati, Denver, Detroit, Los Angeles, Knoxville, Tenn., and Omaha, Neb.

Some cities have seized the cars of those who solicit sex. Some have sent "Dear john" letters to their homes so their families can learn what they've done.
...
Other cities have required men to stay out of areas where prostitution flourishes or to attend schools like the one Norma Hotaling formed in San Francisco.

A one-time prostitute, Hotaling started SAGE (Stand Against Global Exploitation) 13 years ago, and the organization runs a class aimed at preventing recidivism among the clients of prostitutes. The program educates first-time offenders about the dangers of prostitution and trains them to build real intimacy out of their fragile personal relationships.'

House Ways and Means Personal Statement of Record

Anonymous · 17 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I found this quite amazing. Excerpt:

'Careful study and review shows that Gramscian Marxist Communism encompasses today's "feminist" movement. Feminism's goals are to use women to undermine and destroy the culture by abandoning marriage and by not carrying on the critical task of "transmitting the culture" to the next generation. Today's feminists use women to advance the destruction of women, children, and families while convincing them they are somehow a "victim" of the patriarchal structure. And the patriarchal structure is nothing but Orwellian NewSpeak for the social structures and institutions that have kept Western civilization together long before the social decay we see today.'

--

Ed. note: I went looking for information about the author, assuming he was a House rep. I haven't been able to find any such references. Can anyone say who he is and what if any role he has in government? Is this statement a general submission of record or was it made during a hearing, and if so, a hearing on what?

UK: Equality law could bar white men from jobs

Anonymous · 17 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'White men could be legally blocked from getting jobs under new anti-discrimination laws being considered by Labour.

Employers would be able to give jobs to women or ethnic minority candidates in preference to other applicants, under the plans unveiled by equalities minister Harriet Harman.

If two candidates were equally qualified for a position, employers would be able to reject the white person or the man in favour of a black person or a woman.

But the plans are due to be criticised by business leaders and last night, even equalities campaigners expressed doubt.'

RADAR ALERT: Avon Sales Reps and Reese Witherspoon Hurting Women Worldwide?

Matt · 17 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Recently, Hollywood's highest-paid actress Reese Witherspoon became Avon's lead spokesperson promoting a "women's empowerment bracelet" in support of enacting the International Violence Against Women Act (IVAWA).1

Avon is a financier of International Women's Day and promoter of UNIFEM, a radical NGO section of the United Nations focused on "empowering women".2,3,4

"Empowering women" and "violence against women" are two entirely different issues with two entirely different agendas.

(Note: The hyperlinked refs above only work when the article is expanded by clicking "Read more".)

I-VAWA is based on factoids fabricated through a technique that has been dubbed the "woozle effect" by noted family violence researcher Richard Gelles who is Dean of the University of Pennsylvania's School of Social Policy and Practice.5 As such, it is dangerous federal legislation intended to directly finance an autonomous, independently-funded division of the United Nations operated by radical social activists whose scope of activism goes well beyond reasonable interests in reducing family violence. I-VAWA would change the world by inflicting America's flawed Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) on the rest of the world, before Congress reforms the program to help women and families.

Reese Witherspoon, Avon sales representatives, and customers need to think very carefully about what they are supporting doing business with Avon. Supporting radical political change that has hurt more American women than it has helped is certainly not a smart decision:

- VAWA has had no positive impact on domestic violence in America, and places women at greater risk of subsequent violence.6
- VAWA programs are rife with fraud, corruption, and misuse of federal funds.7
- VAWA may be increasing partner abuse.8
- VAWA programs make men fear women and marriage.9
- U.N. and UNIFEM attempts to promote gender-based advocacy approaches have been denounced by women around the world.10 In 2006, the U.N. Third Committee unanimously rejected the Secretary General's Report on Domestic Violence after RADAR discovered that the report's primary basis, a UNFPA "study", was a grossly-inaccurate advocacy survey conducted by a marketing research firm that was never published in any peer-reviewed journal.11,12,13
- Despite the fact that women are just as likely as men to commit serious acts of spousal violence,14 85% of the 2-3 million ex-parte restraining orders issued annually are issued against men, and half of all restraining orders are issued without any allegation of physical abuse.15
- Reliable research shows about half of all rape allegations are false. A false rape allegation is likely to destroy the family of other women and place children of the alleged perpetrator in poverty.16
- In India, VAWA-like laws transmitted via the U.N. are under attack by Indian women who have "been disempowered and whose basic human rights are being violated by the police and judiciary in the name of women's rights, protection and empowerment".17

How You Can Help

1. Find your local Avon representatives by entering your zip code on Avon's "Find Sales Representative" page (http://shop.avon.com/shop/find_a_rep.asp). Many of the representatives have their email or phone number listed under the "Contact Me" link. You can get the address and contact the rep directly, or send them an email and the rep will email you back.

2. Forward this alert to them. Please assume that the representative is unaware of the problem. Teach them about the issues and get their support. Suggest the Representative take this up with Avon, and consider taking more aggressive measures if Avon does not listen.
3. If you are an Avon customer, refuse to purchase anything from Avon until they stop forcing radical social agenda on America and the rest of the world.
4. Forward this alert to your friends and ask them to help change Avon for the better.

++

1 http://shop.avon.com/shop/product_list.asp?couponCode=&level1_id=300&level2_id=380

2 http://shop.avon.com/shop/landing/IWD_site/2008_IWD_site.html

3 http://shop.avon.com/shop/landing/global_summit_2008/2008_global_summit.html

4 http://shop.avon.com/HelloTomorrowFund/

5 I-VAWA (S. 2279): Foreign Policy Based on a Woozle?; http://mediaradar.org/docs/RADARflyer-IVAWA-Foreign-Policy-Based-on-a-Woozle.pdf

6 VAWA is Not Helping Women, Report Shows, RADAR, February 5 2007; http://mediaradar.org/alert20070205.php

7 Unaccountable DV Programs Misuse Tax Dollars; Place Victims at Risk, RADAR, March 10, 2008; http://mediaradar.org/alert20080310.php

8 RADAR Report Shows DV Programs May Worsen Partner Abuse, RADAR, October 9, 2007; http://mediaradar.org/alert20071009.php

9 VAWA, I-VAWA, and CEDAW: Why Men Now Fear Marriage, RADAR, March 5, 2007; http://mediaradar.org/alert20070305.php

10 Women Denounce the UN Violence Study, RADAR, Nov 9, 2006; http://mediaradar.org/alert20061109.php

11 UN Violence Report: Three Strikes and You're OUT!, RADAR, Oct. 30, 2006; http://mediaradar.org/alert20061030.php

12 Feminist Takeover of the U.N. is an Issue of National Security, David R. Usher, Nov. 23, 2006; http://www.newswithviews.com/Usher/david38.htm

13 U.N. Rejects Report on Violence Against Women, David R. Usher, Nov. 30, 2006; http://www.newswithviews.com/Usher/david39.htm

14 Research, RADAR, http://mediaradar.org/research.php#waj

15 Almost Anything Now Counts as Domestic "Violence," Report Finds, RADAR, Sept. 6, 2006. http://mediaradar.org/alert20060906.php

16 Beyond Duke: About Half Of All Rape Allegations Are False, RADAR, Apr. 27, 2007; http://mediaradar.org/alert20070423.php

17 Women Against Misuse of Women-Protection Laws, Uma Challa, March 5, 2008; http://uchalla.wordpress.com/2008/03/05/women-against-misuse-of-women-protection-laws-2

++

Date of RADAR Release: March 17, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

As predicted, Mills collects

Matt · 17 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Not content with her GB£24 million payout, she needs to launch into a courthouse-step rant as icing on the cake and declare her allegiance to charitable causes, etc. Excerpt:

'Heather Mills launched an astonishing tirade on the steps of the High Court today as she emerged triumphant after securing a multi-million pound pay day.

The former model took the opportunity to round on Sir Paul McCartney, the legal system, the media and her many critics.

While Sir Paul McCartney initially offered £15.8 million, Miss Mills eventually reached a settlement of £24.3 million in the divorce deal.

The lump sum of £16.5 million is made up of a sum of £14 million as the capitalised figure for her income needs, which the judge assessed as £600,000 per annum, and a sum of £2.5 million for her to buy a property in London.'

Publicly ranting about charity work doesn't make her any less of a whore, however. It just makes her a sanctimonious, attention-grabbing whore, that's all.

Changemakers announces Young Men at Risk winners

Matt · 17 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Visit the page to see the winners and what you can do to help.

Ontario women in shelters told to provide sex to the shelter workers, suffer other abuse

Matt · 17 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Another video in the women's shelter series in which a mother from Ontario, Canada describes her horrifying experience residing in women's shelters in Ontario. In the shelters where she and others were residents, women were beaten, robbed, intimidated and sexually exploited. Children were exposed to violence, swearing and abuse by the women and often witnessed their mothers being abused and humiliated by shelter staff.

Children are being taught that being "Canadian" and respecting yourself means to hate fathers, lie to your own parents and to call the Children's Aid Society on your mother if you don't get your way. When is the government of Ontario going to put an end to women's shelters being used as indoctrination centers where lesbian women prey on vulnerable women? When is the Ontario government going to make these women's shelters accountable and professional? When is all this government funded madness going to end?

This is yet another video in the series from Canada Court Watch and is based on an interview with another former resident of an Ontario women's shelter. In this particular interview, the mother speaks about how she and other residents in the women's shelter were psychologically and sexually abused by the woman's shelter workers and children witnessed violence and abuse. The message given to this woman, among others was 'give sex to the workers or get out'. In case you missed the last video expose on the women's shelter series from March 2nd the link is here.

As Canada Court Watch announces in their campaign to expose this outrage they are "Exposing the women's shelter industry one video at a time!" Other similar videos exposing the hypocrisy of the shelter industry and criminal waste of taxpayer dollars can be can be found here.

Distributed by:
Jeremy Swanson
Fathers and Men's Rights Activist
Ottawa, Ontario

Study: Male Fertility Problems May Develop in Womb

anthony · 17 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"New research from the University of Edinburgh suggests that male fertility problems such as low sperm count and testicular cancer are likely linked to hormone levels early in the mother's pregnancy, BBC News reported.

Research published in the Journal of Clinical Investigation found that levels of male hormones, like testosterone, in a "critical window" of eight to 12 weeks into pregnancy determine the male's future reproductive health, according to the article.

Common reproductive problems for young boys include cryptorchidism, where the testes do not descend properly into the scrotum. Disorders such as low sperm count and testicular cancer are thought to be along the same path, researchers suggested."

UK Telegraph Opinion: United States can't afford to elect a 'woman president'

anthony · 17 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Simply put, I don't want a woman president. Not if she's running to be a "woman president" and not the leader of the United States.
...
Instead, she bought into their script: Women are victims, and it will take a woman to ascend to the presidency on the shoulders of the feminist movement for the glass of oppression to break.
...
Sadly, real politics this year hasn't fallen too far from the Ms. Ridiculous tree. Given that we're at war, I'd like a candidate who is not playing an identity politics game. I'd like a candidate whose executive experience is more than pillow talk with a president of the United States. I'd like a candidate who is a grown-up and doesn't let her surrogates try to steal her opponents' GI Joes. But I have the audacity to hope the next woman who runs will run because she's qualified to be commander in chief, not because she's a uterine-American.'

Boy Made to Urinate in Lunchbox at Teacher's Order

Matt · 17 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'ORANGE COUNTY, Fla. -- Orange County Public Schools is investigating claims that a student was forced to use a lunchbox as a toilet in front of his class at Meadowbrook Middle School.

The teacher will not be coming to school. She will be relieved of her duty with pay as the school district investigates, officials said.

...

Orange County Public Schools wouldn't specifically comment about what happened. The district says teachers have to allow students to use the restroom.'

"Why top jobs elude women"

GaryB · 18 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This was published in Australia on News.com.au today.

Apparently, top jobs are still held back from the poor women, the glass ceiling just never goes away does it. So okay, maybe women don't want those jobs, and maybe they prefer more flexibility in their life, but hey that's no reason for them not to get them, right?

The interesting thing is, there's no comparison based on choice. For example I'm a male single parent low-level manager with young kids, in a dynamic fast-moving company. I 'could' choose to go for a higher level management role, but I wouldn't as it would cost me too much in time with my kids - and equally I wouldn't get picked, because management know I'd always be saying no to extra events and evening functions. So, how is that different from how women are treated..?

A direct comparison piece of research is needed here...

Please vote for SAFE International's Razoo SpeedGranting Proposal on Facebook

Matt · 18 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

If we get enough votes we can win a $1,000 prize that would help us sustain and expand our mission to, Stop Abuse For EVERYONE"! [If you already have a Facebook account, just click here, sign in, and add the Razoo app. If not, you can sign up for one and add the app afterward.]

Lee Newman
Executive Director: SAFE International
http://www.safe4all.org/
Business Phone: 503-853-8686 (not a crisis line)

Obama Speech: "demand more from our fathers"

Matt · 18 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Matt Drudge managed to get a full text copy of Barack Obama's speech given today in Philadelphia on the subject of race; currently it is here. (If that link is cold, try this one.)

It is utterly history-making, in my judgment. However I have one peeve with it that MRAs should take note of; the quote is here:

'And it means taking full responsibility for own lives – by demanding more from our fathers, and spending more time with our children, and reading to them, and teaching them that while they may face challenges and discrimination in their own lives, they must never succumb to despair or cynicism; they must always believe that they can write their own destiny.'

It seems he is laying something at the feet of fathers that perhaps isn't quite fair. Fathers are torn from children by court systems, vindictive ex-wives, and employers' demands, not a desire to be apart from them. Perhaps one thing Mr. Obama should be looking into is ways to alleviate these factors. But still, such a great speech should not be condemned for one line in it that one objects to. It is bound to be one for the history-books, as well it should be, doubtless to be counted among the other great speeches made in our nation's history.

Furious Mills throws water over McCartney's lawyer

anthony · 18 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Thankfully they weren't drinking coffee. Excerpt:

"Heather Mills threw a glass of water over the coiffured hair of Sir Paul McCartney's lawyer after McCartney was ordered to pay her just 24.3 million pounds ($61 million) to settle their divorce, according to British media reports.

Mills emerged from court declaring she was happy with yesterday's ruling, despite it being less than a fifth of what she had demanded.

But The Sun newspaper reported that as the hearing came to an end, Mills calmly walked over to McCartney's lawyer Fiona Shackleton and soaked her.

Shackleton appeared outside court smiling but with wet hair."

Man-Bashing Art in Family Court Taken Down

TomP · 18 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Because a man finally objected.

Story here. Intro paragraph reads:

Photo collages on the walls of the Thurston County Family and Juvenile Court building were taken down Monday after an Olympia resident complained they discriminated against men.

The graphics in question have been hanging for four years, passed daily by men on their way to Faimly court to lose their children, their homes, and their life's work. When men raised objections, they were finally taken down. Interestingly, the story doesn't mention who ordered them put up. Ah, the anonymity of bureaucracy!

Read the comments - the implication is that only one man objected, but that does not appear to be true.

Tim Lott: Orange Prize for women is sexist

Anonymous · 18 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The country's leading literary award for women novelists is sexist and should be scrapped, a prominent male novelist claimed yesterday.

Tim Lott said the £30,000 Orange Prize - founded 13 years ago amid claims that women writers fared poorly in awards such as the Booker Prize - was "discriminatory, sexist and perverse".

He said: "I know that I face derision and ridicule but a lot of writers I have spoken to find it [the prize] ridiculous and unfair..."

...Girls in schools are more literate than boys, and pupils are taught reading mainly by female teachers promoting mainly female writers.

"Could the establishment of a men-only prize, with men-only judges, be justified given their level of relative exclusion in schools and the marketplace? Can you imagine the derision with which it would rightly be met?"

Decline of marriage is destroying our pupils, say teachers

Anonymous · 19 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The decline of marriage is leading to widespread underachievement and indiscipline in schools, teachers warned yesterday.

Children with "chaotic" home lives turn up at school too troubled to learn, wrecking their prospects of success in exams, they said.

Growing numbers are being brought up in splintered families by mothers with children by different fathers, leading to behaviour and mental health problems including eating disorders and suicidal thoughts, a teachers' conference heard.'

True-Equality.org Releases Anticipated DV Study

Matt · 19 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

From Terri Lynn at True-Equality.org:

[Click 'Read more' for links to files referred to herein]

The attached is my latest investigative report. It discloses -- through candid video interviews with former shelter residents linked to in the report -- how women are being forced into sexual servitude (forced to have sex with the female shelter staff and others) in order to remain in the shelter. In addition, a former San Diego prosecutor is caught on video all but bragging about how “everyone would be in jail” for perjury if false claims of domestic violence were prosecuted (a link to that interview in included as well).

It is being called my best piece yet. Preview copies sent to radio show hosts have landed me nine shows (booked in one day).

Please accept this one - it pulls no punches for anyone.

I have attached three copies. One Word file includes the charts and tables that support the information proffered in the work. The other has hyperlinks to the charts and tables, no graphics. The third is the HTML.

[Links to documents cited above:
Word (charts): Use this link.
Word (no charts): Use this link.
HTML: Use this link.
Adobe PDF: Use this link.]

Yours truly,
Terri Lynn Tersak
President & C.E.O.
True Equality Network

Member - Spokesperson
R.A.D.A.R.: Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting
P.O. Box 14214
Research Triangle Park NC 27709

http://www.True-Equality.org/
http://www.mediaRADAR.org/

Female veterans report more sexual, mental trauma, and get special woman-only clinics

anthony · 19 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Women are not in combat roles yet female veterans are suffering from higher rates of mental health issues?

What do you guys make of this "military sexual trauma" rhetoric?

Should I be surprised the VA has started health clinics specifically for women? Excerpt:

'In 2007, the Department of Veterans Affairs found that women are reporting signs of mental health issues when they return home at a higher rate than their male counterparts.

The VA diagnosed 60,000 veterans with post-traumatic stress disorder. Of those, 22 percent of women suffered from "military sexual trauma," which includes sexual harassment or assault, compared with 1 percent of men.

"PTSD is actually something that shows up over time, and so the natural recovery process doesn't happen," said Dr. Darrah Westrup, who counsels female veterans at the VA-run Women's Health Clinic in Menlo Park, California.'

US: National 'Fatherless Day' Rally - June 13, 2008 Nationwide

Anonymous · 20 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Please help us spread the word of this event! Blog it! MySpace it!

National Fatherless Day Rally - nationwide on June 13th 2008

Flyer for printing, posting, information, etc. is here.

Thank you for your support and ACTIVE help.

Boyfriend of woman stuck to toilet charged

Matt · 20 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Suppose if the sexes were reversed, she would be facing charges? In either case the other person would have been in the wrong for not doing something sooner. And either person would rightly be called, well, stupid. But the question here is equal treatment/protection under the law. Is a man getting equal treatment as compared to what a woman gets in a comparable situation? Excerpt:

'NESS CITY, Kan. - A man whose girlfriend authorities say spent nearly two years in a bathroom in their house, sitting on the toilet so long that the seat adhered to her body, has been charged with mistreatment of a dependent adult.
...
McFarren told authorities that Babcock feared leaving the bathroom and may not have left it in two years, although said he was unsure how long she was in there. He said that he took her food and water daily, and that he repeatedly asked her to come out but that she usually replied “maybe tomorrow.”

“The only thing I am guilty of is I didn’t get her help sooner,” McFarren told The Associated Press nearly a week ago.

Ness County Attorney Craig Crosswhite said the mistreatment charge most closely fit the situation.'

It strikes me they had to dust off the penal law books to scrounge up something to charge him with. And they did.

Marc Rudov to host his own radio talk show

johndias · 20 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Marc Rudov, an advocate for men and fathers and frequent guest on FOX News programs (as well as many other media appearances worldwide), has begun his own radio talk show. Per his recent newsletter:

- -

"On Thursday, 03.27.08, at 2PM ET (11AM PT), I will begin hosting a new radio talkshow, "The Marc Rudov Show." This show will succeed ONLY if YOU call me on the air. I'll use this platform as another weapon in my arsenal -- besides my Web site, books, podcasts, articles, and radio/TV guest appearances -- to inspire men to take action, to improve their lives.

"Go to www.MarcRudovRadio.com for details. The call-in number is: 877.474.3302. Use it!

"Also: Tell your friends around the world to tune in. WSRadio will archive all the shows."

Cops: Two Female Teachers Arrested for Fighting During School

anthony · 20 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Two female middle school teachers were arrested Wednesday on charges they got into a fight in front of students, officials said.

Eighth grade teachers Tawana Horton, 30, and Cambrella Pinckney, 28, bumped into each other during a hallway class change Friday afternoon at St. Andrews Middle School and began fighting, according to a report by the Richland County sheriff's department.

The two teachers told an officer that they had an ongoing personal dispute, the report said.

The teachers were charged with disturbing schools and have been placed on administrative leave, deputies said."

Woman Gets Five Years for Trying to Hire Hit Man to Kill Husband, Son-in-law, and another Man

anthony · 20 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman was sentenced to five years in prison after pleading guilty to trying to hire a hit man to kill her husband, her son-in-law and another man.

The sentence came Wednesday after Ivy Jean Davis, 67, pleaded guilty to five counts of criminal solicitation to commit murder and admitted to giving $200 to an undercover officer she thought was a hit man. The money was for him to buy an untraceable gun.

Clarke County Superior Court Judge Steve Jones also told Davis to serve 20 years of probation with special conditions and pay a $1,000 fine.
...
"I wouldn't hurt nobody," Davis said. "I didn't get a chance to do nothing. I'm a very compassionate person."
...
A sting was set up and authorities said Davis gave the undercover officer pictures of her husband and her son-in-law, as well as instructions and a map to their homes. She also tried to have her boyfriend's son killed, police said.'

Senate approves funding for Biden VAWA program

anthony · 21 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'WASHINGTON -- The Senate voted to add funding for two of Sen. Joe Biden's signature programs, the Violence Against Women Act and the Community Oriented Policing Services program.

President Bush's fiscal 2009 budget proposed a reduction in funding for VAWA and eliminating funding for COPS.

But the Delaware Democrat's measures to increase and restore funding passed the Senate last week as amendments to the Senate budget resolution, which sets the parameters for congressional spending. The House and Senate will have to work out differences between their resolutions.

The COPS program has funded the hiring of community police officers nationwide while the Violence Against Women Act supports programs related to domestic, sexual and dating violence and stalking.'

Woman sentenced in Redmond for false rape accusation

anthony · 21 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman who made a false rape accusation against a college professor pleaded guilty in King County District Court in Redmond to making false statements.

The judge sentenced 22-year-old Katherine Clifton on Tuesday to eight days in jail and ordered her to pay the professor's attorney fees. The former Woodinville woman now lives Ellensburg.

Judge Peter Nault says her case will make it harder for real victims to seek help.

The professor spent nine days in jail and was suspended from his job during the rape investigation."

Woman accused of false rape report

anthony · 21 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman who claimed she was sexually assaulted while employed at two different Denver metro businesses and may have authored almost 100 derogatory letters about herself and sent them to those employers has been arrested on charges of false reporting.

Lori Anne Koehler, 37, was taken into custody Tuesday morning after an investigation by authorities in Broomfield and Aurora and by Hobby Lobby and Family Dollar stores.

Koehler claimed that on Feb. 20 a man entered the Hobby Lobby store at 5105 W. 120th Ave., bound her to store shelving and sexually assaulted her.

But in a four-page arrest warrant, investigators said they believe Koehler staged the robbery and assault."

England: False rape claim will mean jail

anthony · 21 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A 21-year-old woman who admitted making a false allegation of rape has been told she will be jailed.

Oxford Crown Court heard today that Amanda Lang, formerly of Carterton but now of Bamber Bridge, Preston, had wrongly accusing Phillip Trowell of raping her between November 2006 and February 2007.

Judge Julian Hall told her: "You must prepare to be going to prison."

Lang, who pleaded guilty to attempting to pervert the course of justice, was bailed until March 31."

Hillary's Upcoming Religious Scandal

Roy · 21 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Hillary Clinton now has some explaining to do about her affiliation with a right-wing religious organization known as "The Family," with ties that go all the way back to the Nazi regime.

This group has reinterpreted Christian doctrine to endorse an elitist philosophy where the politically powerful are the truly annointed ones. Big surprise, huh? A right-wing feminazi in disguise running for President as a Democrat? Excerpt:

'There's a reason why Hillary Clinton has remained relatively silent during the flap over intemperate remarks by Barack Obama's former pastor, Jeremiah Wright. When it comes to unsavory religious affiliations, she's a lot more vulnerable than Obama.

You can find all about it in a widely under-read article in the September 2007 issue of Mother Jones, in which Kathryn Joyce and Jeff Sharlet reported that "through all of her years in Washington, Clinton has been an active participant in conservative Bible study and prayer circles that are part of a secretive Capitol Hill group known as the "Fellowship," aka the Family. But it won't be a secret much longer. Jeff Sharlet's shocking exposé, The Family: The Secret Fundamentalism at the Heart of American Power will be published in May.'

--

Ed. note: I was so in shock at this that I immediately started Googling, and found that the article is on-line here at the MJ web site. [MJ is known for very intense investigative journalism and operates as a non-profit.]

The substance of this story still has me in utter shock.

Bad Behavior

Matt · 21 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

All,

I received a note from Terri Lynn Tersak at True-equality.org regarding the MANN post of 3/19 announcing the release of her study.

She said she has received phone calls at the number previously appearing in that post that were not just rude but in some cases hostile to an unacceptable degree, and that those callers have referred to mensactivism.org as the source of the reason for their calls.

I am not suggesting that anyone in the thread associated with that post are among them; indeed I don't know who made such calls if they did. But I am saying that if indeed it is true she has received such calls, it makes MRAs look very, very bad and does absolutely nothing to further the cause.

The approach to take with people who you disagree with is to argue in favor of your position based on factual points and reasoned opinions. If you look at how the typical feminist responds to people who disagree with her (or him), they are usually quickly moved to a very irate state, something that used to serve them but quickly stopped doing so after men caught on to what they were doing. [After that their new approach was dissemination of false information and intense lobbying of legislators with smiling suggestions that such would lose "the women's vote" if they didn't support such-and-such a piece of legislation.]

We have seen this in action repeatedly on Fox News when Marc Rudov takes on some feminist. And each time that happens, Marc walks away looking better than when he came on, more people out there in TV-land have their sympathies and opinions swayed closer to the MRA cause, and he gets more air time from Fox as each such encounter occurs. It's true he sometimes gets annoyed but does he ever say things to the other party that could be interpreted as menacing in any way? Not that I have seen.

Think before you act, guys. It's about the cause, not the catharsis. If you want to vent, vent here.

Matt

Follow-up: Note the post here. Whatever individual or individuals who made such calls should now be wondering very much what got into his head to do so. I would suggest to him or them to start looking for a good lawyer or two now. And, I hope they find you.

Man hangs himself after being falsely accused of raping women and children

anthony · 22 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A man who lost his job after being falsely accused of a horrific sex crime has been found hanged in a shed.

Ian Adams, 51, was suspended and then sacked from his job at a local IKEA store after his employers received a letter saying he had raped a woman and her two children.

The writer claimed to be a journalist on a local newspaper, but the name and address in the letter were false and the author has never been traced.

Police confirmed that Mr Adams, from Highams Park East, London, had never been arrested or convicted of a sexual offence or had any complaints made against him.

Mr Adams' life went downhill as he struggled to recover from the accusations.

He failed to get his job back after being sacked in January. His drinking led to problems with his partner and he spent the last few nights of his life sleeping in a storage shed at the bottom of the block of flats in which he lived.'

Widow of FDNY fire marshal arraigned for murder

anthony · 22 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The disheveled widow of an FDNY fire marshal showed no remorse and mischievously grinned her way yesterday through an arraignment - even winking to her family - as prosecutors charged her with "coldbloodedly" murdering her husband in his sleep.

Looking haggard in sweats with her hair in a ponytail, Janet Redmond-Mercereau, 38, was slapped with second-degree murder and other charges for allegedly shooting Douglas Mercereau three times in the head at close range with his 9 mm revolver last December.
...
As she was led away by police, she continued to flash her deadly smile, although she looked a mess in a gray hoodie emblazoned with the letters "LBI" - for the Jersey Shore vacation spot Long Beach Island.
...
Through her lawyer, Redmond-Mercereau has said her husband had been verbally abusive after she gained weight because of a thyroid condition.

The couple - married for 12 years - had a rocky relationship over the past few years.

Prosecutors don't buy her claims.

"We believe [the abuse] not to be true," said Staten Island DA Daniel Donovan.'

Defining Parental Alienation

anthony · 22 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Parental alienation is a topic often discussed on MANN. The Alec Baldwin incident exposed this ignored topic throughout the MSM. Feminists such as Kim Gandy have written articles filled with false statistics to refute the fact. I thought it would be interesting to post Wikipedia's assessment of parental alienation. Its a concise overview and offered me some extra knowledge on the subject.

The M.O. of False Child Sex Abuse Allegations

anthony · 22 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'These false abuse allegations are almost always made by a divorcing woman against her husband in the midst of an acrimonious divorce or custody dispute. A false sex abuse allegation is the perfect weapon for mom to use against dad. Here's why:

1) It is easy to make a false sexual abuse allegation.

2) The mother is given instant sympathy and support while the father is instantly ostracized because society hates child abusers.

3) It almost always guarantees the immediate removal of the father from the mother and child's life.

4) It usually results in the mother being granted immediate, temporary sole custody.

5) It establishes a status quo living arrangement for the children that will yield a precedent for continued primary physical custody by the mother.

6) The mother is given moral vindication for the divorce.

7) It is nearly impossible to prove that the mother made the allegation in bad faith.

8) There is virtually no punishment for mothers who are found to have made a false child abuse accusation.'

New American mums expect 'push presents'

Anonymous · 23 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"It has always been the way that the only reward expected by women from the trials of childbirth has been the gift of life, in the form of a new baby. But American mothers are increasingly demanding more material compensation for pregnancy and labour: diamonds, other jewellery, or an expensive holiday.
...
Spurred by the examples of Hollywood stars such as Pierce Brosnan and Ben Affleck, and encouraged by a growing range of gifts designed especially for such occasions, the motherhood industry has given birth to the concept of "push presents" - so-called both because they are a reward for the act of giving birth, and because mothers are pushing their husbands to dig deep into their wallets.

Fathers now not only have to make it to the delivery room on time, but had better come brandishing more than a bunch of flowers. A survey by the parenthood website BabyCenter.com found that almost four out of 10 new mothers received "push presents". An even larger number, 55 per cent, said that they expected them - so presumably some had been disappointed."

White House Press Secretary: Men know more about war ‘by osmosis.’

anthony · 23 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

File this one under 'Humor'...

"On Fox News Sunday today, White House press secretary Dana Perino was named the “Power Player of the Week.” She explained to host Chris Wallace that, in addition to the pressure to look good, she faces an extra challenge as a woman — understanding military jargon:

Some of the terms I just don’t know, I haven’t grown up knowing. The type of missiles that are out there: patriots and scuds and cruise missiles and tomahawk missiles. And I think that men just by osmosis understand all of these things, and they’re things that I really have to work at — to know the difference between a carrier and a destroyer, and what it means when one of those is being launched to a certain area."

RADAR ALERT: On False Rape Allegations, A Judge's Pious Words Are Not Enough

Matt · 24 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

On March 19, 2008, the Seattle Times reported on a story whose ending could have been much worse but should have been much better. The story is of a woman, Katherine M. Clifton, who manufactured false evidence to frame a man and then lodged a false rape charge against him. As a result of the allegation, the man spent nine days in jail and was placed on leave from his teaching job at a college.

A March 21, 2008 article in London's Daily Mail illustrates just how much worse the ending to this story could have been. It reports on another innocent man, but in that case, the false accusation of rape drove him to suicide.

In the Seattle case, when Judge Peter Nault accepted the woman's guilty plea to the charge of making a false rape accusation, he stated: "That we hurry to castigate a person who turns out to be entirely innocent ... I don't know how it could be worse."

So, what was wrong with the Seattle story's ending? Consider how Judge Nault chose to punish Clifton's opprobrious actions. According to the article, he sentenced her to 365 days BUT suspended 357 days and he ordered her to pay a $5,000 fine BUT suspended $4,750.

Thus, an innocent man ends up in jail for nine days and the woman who made the false accusation, and clearly spent a lot of effort fabricating false evidence, will only have to serve eight days. The innocent man was placed on leave from his job. The woman who planned and carried out the crime has to pay $250.

Please contact the Seattle Times and ask for a follow up story regarding why Clifton only received a slap on the wrist for a crime that, after murder and rape, is about as heinous as they come. Please emphasize the following points:

1. The innocent man served nine days in jail and faced the loss of his teaching career;
2. Judge Peter Nault (please mention him by name) knew that the accuser had gone to some effort to fabricate phony email and a phony court order implicating the innocent man;
3. Considering the egregious circumstances surrounding the case, Judge Nault's decision – to require the villain to serve less time than the innocent man served and to require her to pay only $250 for her crimes – means that his statement "That we hurry to castigate a person who turns out to be entirely innocent ... I don't know how it could be worse" turns out to be nothing more than empty piety.

Here's the contact information:

1. Suki Dardarian
   Managing Editor, News Coverage and Enterprise sdardarian-at-seattletimes.com
2. Carole Carmichael
   Assistant Managing Editor, Features ccarmichael-at-seattletimes.com
3. Letters to the Editor:
   Letters Editor
   The Seattle Times
   PO Box 70
   Seattle, WA 98111
   opinion-at-seattletimes.com [Include your full name (no initials), home address and daytime and evening telephone numbers for verification.]

Again, please mention Judge Peter Nault by name. If judges realize that they're going to be remembered by name, they may start making their actions fit their pious words.

++
Date of RADAR Release: March 24, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Males Are Fragile?

Roy · 24 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This article is about much more than male "fragility" and argues for close consideration of all the new research on sex differences and gender preferences in life choices. Excerpt:

"Males are more vulnerable to maternal stresses and pollution in utero — female preemies are almost twice as likely to survive as male preemies. Boys are twice as likely to have attention problems, four times as likely to have language or reading disabilities, and ten times as likely to have Asperger syndrome. Males are more susceptible to almost all chronic diseases, including heart disease, cancer, liver disease and AIDS. They have much shorter life spans.

They are more aggressive and take more risks, which is one reason why there are more male prisoners (the ratio of male to female prisoners is 10 to 1) and male suicides. Victims of work and school violence are 93 percent male. Men catch postsurgical infections more than women do, and 70 percent of them die from this peculiar vulnerability (compared to 30 percent of women). If this is not a picture of fragility, I don't know what is."

Police: Wife tried to drive over man 20 times

Matt · 24 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla. - A woman in Port St. Lucie faces charges of chasing her fleeing husband around their yard in a minivan, in attempts to drive over him about 20 times.

Their baby, who was in the back seat of the minivan, was buckled up and was not hurt, deputies said.

Deputies said it started over a dispute over $300 on Friday between Leslie Ann Brown and her husband, Nicholas.'

1 In 4 Teenage Girls Having Sex Have An STD, "Boys Not Excused"

anthony · 24 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. A couple of weeks ago I posted a story about teenage girls and STD's. I was annoyed that the survey ignored boys but this article goes a step further. Lets blame the boys! Pay close attention to the picture in the story. Excerpt:

"This has got to be one of the most alarming studies of teenagers or is it? A recent study by the CDC (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention) shows that one in four teenage girls has an STD (Sexually Transmitted Disease) with the most common infection being HPV (human papilloma virus). An alarming 18 percent of teen girls apparently have the virus and if you compare that to the 40 percent of the girls ages 14-19 in the study who were sexually active, that's almost half of all young women who are having sex have contracted the disease.
...
Though this study was on teenage girls, it in no way excuses teenage boys, men can, and do, get HPV and other diseases. All teens and parents are encouraged to be more aware."

--

Ed. note: Comment link, with backtrack to article, is here. The backtrack only works though if you already have an account. If not, just open the link in the story above again and log in, then you're good to go.

Currently there are no comments. Have fun, gents. :)

Exciting Additions to the 2008 Equal Parenting Bike Trek

Anonymous · 24 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Mensactivism Readers We Need Your Help!

Help us spread the word of this exciting event online by blogging, posting in forums and MySpace and sharing on Facebook. Social Bookmark the main page for the Equal Parenting Bike Trek so that others might find it. Email the main page link to friends and family. Not in the US? It doesn't matter - last year we had significant support from those in other countries and it gives our cyclists the extra boost of energy.

We need to create some serious online buzz for the 2008 Equal Parenting Bike Trek. Five fathers will pedal 758 miles for their children and to spread awareness of all of our concerns. The massive CRISPE bus will be at the departure event for the 2008 EPBT. Dance4Equality, an American Indian shared parenting organization, will be performing their pow wows and more at the departure for the 2008 EPBT. Thank you for your ACTIVE help.

More Information here.

‘Barbie bandits’ sentenced for bank robbery

Matt · 25 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Remember these girls? Well the "wheels of justice" turn slowly but eventually... you get a nice cushy sentence, if you're a pretty girl... excerpt:

'MARIETTA, Ga. - The “Barbie bandits” who went on a shopping spree after they were videotaped wearing sunglasses and laughing during an $11,000 bank heist were sentenced Monday, one to prison and another to probation.

Ashley Miller, 19, will have to serve only two years of a 10-year prison sentence and must complete the rest on probation. She pleaded guilty to theft and drug charges.

Heather Johnston, also 19, was sentenced to 10 years’ probation for her role in the February 2007 heist in Acworth, northwest of Atlanta.'

If it had been me, you'd never see me again.

Hillary's "Full Dinner Jacket" moment

Matt · 25 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This video speaks for itself.

Remember the Bush/Quayle ticket and the jokes associated with it? "A Vietnam era movie was made with Dan Quayle as the central character; it's called 'Full Dinner Jacket'". Same thing here. Only at least with Quayle, he didn't lie about his experience. He just tended to look dumb when answering questions. So while you could accuse him of being not-too-bright, you couldn't accuse him of lying bold-facedly to the camera.

"$100 Million for 10,000 Women"

anthony · 25 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Thousands of women entrepreneurs in developing countries have started their own businesses in the past few years, many with help from local microfinance banks and nonprofits that issued them small loans and financial support. The concept has taken off, but there has been one key flaw in the model: Most of the women have little, if any, formal education and lack the management skills and financial savvy to take their business to the next level. On Mar. 5, investment bank Goldman Sachs (NYSE:GS - News) announced it would change the equation by pumping $100 million into educational projects for these women over the next five years.

...
Dubbed "10,000 Women," for the number of women it intends to reach by 2013, the program is designed to build on existing programs and create new ones by supporting partnerships between U.S. business schools and universities and schools in developing countries. The program is aimed at women, organizers say, because closing gender gaps in education and employment yields greater returns in economic growth in developing countries. For instance, Goldman estimates that improving female education in the BRIC nations (Brazil, Russia, India and China) and another 11 developing countries can boost per-capita income by as much as 14% over baseline estimates by 2020.'

"Secret lives of breadwinner wives"

Matt · 25 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. What, not going to take even six months or so to really try it out?

I recall reading someplace, years ago as a teenager, that some sociologist predicted this kind of thing would happen if things kept going the way they were going. I sort of laughed at the idea and thought he must be wrong if a group of people want something so badly. Wouldn't they be happy once they got it? Well, maybe not. It's right up there with that old Chinese curse: "May you get what you want." A lot of wisdom behind that. Anyway, excerpt:

'It wasn't so long ago that my heart would race with pride and excitement when I heard upbeat statistics about women's earning prowess:
...
I'm over that now. As the mother of a nearly two-month-old son whose husband is leaving his job to take on most of the child care and prep for graduate school, the title "breadwinner" has come to feel an awful lot like "albatross."'

And of course, whose fault is it? Hubby's. He doesn't cook and clean enough, apparently. But further on, read:

'MP: And then there's me. Despite the fact that my husband does the lion's share (or is it the lioness' share?) of the domestic duties -- and I count my blessings that he doesn't resent the fact that my career, right now, is more lucrative -- I am a conflicted mess of gratitude, pride and steaming resentment.

To the outside world, we probably look like the storybook version of a spunky female career gal who falls for the supersmart artsy guy -- and together (cue the harps and a nice big sunset) they make it all work!

But in reality, I guess I was kinda sorta hoping this arrangement would be temporary.'

So is there anything that will make today's typical first-world woman truly happy? I don't think so, not for the average one. The list of wants and complaints just seems to know no bounds.

Los Angeles Times: New program targets 'Top 10' deadbeat dads

anthony · 25 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Modeled on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted list, a county program officially unveiled today will use wanted posters in an effort to find the 10 "most egregious" child-support-payment evaders, officials said.

The posters will be put up countywide."

'Barbie Bandits' ringleader gets 10 years

anthony · 26 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. More on this 'Barbie' story. It seems the judicial system has identified a man as the mastermind. Though he didn't commit the robberies his sentence was more harsh than the two women. Excerpt:

'A man convicted of being the mastermind behind the so-called "Barbie Bandits" bank theft was sentenced Tuesday to 10 years in prison.

Michael Chastang's term was added to the 15 years he already is serving on drug charges.

"For the theft, you used the others," Superior Court Judge Mary Staley told him. "You orchestrated it. You sat in the back and put the pawns out to do it."'

MSNBC Video Teacher Accused Of Rape Of 16-YO Boy

anthony · 26 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video report here. Apparently this woman gave him a pair of her underwear and was caught with incriminating text messages.

Bernard Chapin: "Submissives for Hillary"

anthony · 26 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"What's the latest outrage from The New York Times? Perhaps it's Kate Zernike, a reporter there (from what I can gather I found no google reference to a specific title) who wrote an opinion column entitled "Post-feminism and Other Fairy Tales" which appeared in their "Week in Review" section.
...
In fact, there is so much wrong with her perspective that I am not sure where to begin …but begin I must. Zernike's basic theme is that feminism should not be dead because women still have it bad in America and that more statist feminism is the method by which to redress their needs. Why would she posit such an absurd claim? For five reasons and I'll go through now. First, some hecklers told Hillary Clinton to "iron their shirt" at a rally. Second, Hillary had to defend her likeability to critics. Third, the actress portraying her on Saturday Night Live was "shut out" of a fictional debate…on a television program. Fourth, that Governor Spitzer cheated on his wife, and fifth, some Americans deem prostitution to be a victimless crime."

Glenn Sacks: Feminist 'Hate Statistics' on Display at George Washington University

anthony · 26 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'How should we describe the false, male-vilifying statistics that are ubiquitous on the modern college campus? Christina Hoff Sommers, author of Who Stole Feminism? calls them "Hate Statistics." That seems apt.

To follow the recent controversy over the feminist "1 in 4 college women are raped" myth, see my recent blog post "It's a lonely job, working the phones at a college rape crisis center...you wait for the casualties to show up but no one calls".'

Boys - Casualties of the Gender Wars

anthony · 26 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Male children are showing deterioration in achievement, lowered acceptance into colleges, increasing diagnosis of various “hyperactivity” or “attention deficit” disorders (with concomitant medication of such alleged “disorders”); and decreasing attendance at school. Furthermore, reports indicate boys between the ages of 5 and 14 are 200% more likely to commit suicide than are girls, and that, within that age range, boys are 36% more likely to die (of all causes) than their female counterparts.

...

Despite the current wisdom, males are at distinct disadvantages in our cultural milieu. Boys are “feminized” in the early years of their education and socialization, and by the time that they reach adolescence, many are conflicted as to their roles in society, and especially as to their interaction with the opposite gender. The shockingly high incidence of suicide among adolescent males is a reflection of this conflict.

Rather than trying to “neutralize” our male children, we should be developing methods within our schools to utilize the characteristics of both genders, each to their strengths, and not employ principles of “reverse discrimination” in order to rectify past inequalities. Such discrimination, like that used in regard to racial and/or religious differences, is destructive to our boys, and makes for adult men with handicaps which are destructive to our society as a whole."

Mother Makes First Court Appearance After Allegedly Trying To Kill Teen Son

anthony · 26 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Largo police say 52-year-old Celeste Minardi tried to kill her own son over the weekend. He's only fifteen years old. And, the way she allegedly did it, even has police officers shaking their heads in disbelief.

It happened during a Saturday afternoon court-appointed visit at a Largo psychiatrist's office. This is where Minardi and her son have been going for the past 3 years. Visits under supervision. It is still a mystery as to why this mother is under guard with her child on these occasions.

Police say, when a nurse who was present turned her head, Minardi took a 15-inch decorative dagger and a drywall knife out of her purse, and began slashing her son."

Female Pilot "selected" to make first landing at new Heathrow Terminal 5 robrob · 26 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Read about it here. Excerpt:

'British Airways' first female pilot has been selected to fly the first plane to land at Heathrow's new Terminal 5.

Capt Lynn Barton, 51, became BA's first woman pilot in 1987. She will be the flight commander on BA026 from Hong Kong, landing at 0450 GMT on Thursday.

"I was incredibly proud to have been British Airways' first ever woman pilot and now I have another first to my name," Capt Barton said.'

I wonder how BA's 3,000 male pilots felt about having this opportunity. Ms Barton is one of 176 female pilots.

"He Had It Coming": A Book Men Heading for Divroce Need to Note

Matt · 26 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Driving in today, I heard a radio "interview" with the author of this book. It was done in the style of a late-night infomercial where the interviewer seems to be skeptical and take up Devil's Advocate but of course is quickly won over. (The interviewer worked for the radio station, too.)

I found little surprising in what was said simply because I have heard it so much before. Still, somehow, the glaring foolishness and sheer mercenary thinking espoused (no pun intended) by such people still shocks me. The author is very direct and specific about the importance of doing certain things to make sure the wife "gets the house" (note: 'the house', not 'his house', which is the case most times, as he is paying for it). And she also of course had to declare women still get the 'short end of the stick' in divorces.

Title? "He Had It Coming: How to Outsmart your Husband and Win Your Divorce". Not content to make a fortune doing divorces, the author also had to make money on it by writing a strategy book (geared to women only, of course) on the topic.

But, like Hillary, I am sure she is just a lovely person when you meet her in person. >)

Modern men feel emasculated, study claims

Anonymous · 26 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Many men believe the world is now dominated by women and that they have lost their role in society, fuelling feelings of depression and being undervalued...

But the hunter-gatherer role is still a strong male instinct. Once fatherhood arrives, men say they would prefer a more traditional role of either being the sole breadwinner with their partner a full-time mother and homemaker (34 per cent), or the main breadwinner with their partner working part-time (24 per cent)...

...What they apparently want is what some American academics have dubbed a "menaissance" - a return to manliness, where figures such as Sir Winston Churchill were models of manhood...

...Harvey Mansfield, a Harvard professor and America's best known political philosopher, who tackles the topic in his book Manliness, says the issue is ignored.

"A man has to be embarrassed about being a man. I am trying to bring back the word manliness. It's not respected," he said.

'Pregnant' man stuns medical profession

Anonymous · 26 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"A man who used to be a woman is five months pregnant, according to an article he has written for an American magazine that features a picture of him at 22 weeks, with facial hair and a man's flat chest above his swollen stomach.

Thomas Beatie, who was born a woman, describes himself as a "transgender male" in the piece which says his decision to have a child "has been met with discrimination and outright derision by health care professionals".

...According to the piece, Mr Beatie went through a sex change but decided to have only chest reconstruction and testosterone therapy, stopping short of making any changes to the reproductive organs he was born with.

Mr Beatie is legally male and lives with his wife, Nancy, in Bend, Oregon.

..."How does it feel to be a pregnant man?" he writes in the article.

"Incredible. Despite the fact that my belly is growing with a new life inside me, I am stable and confident being the man that I am. In a technical sense I see myself as my own surrogate, though my gender identity as male is constant. To Nancy, I am her husband carrying our child. "I will be my daughter's father, and Nancy will be her mother. We will be a family."

Marriage Rates at all time low in England

oregon dad · 26 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Looks like the boys are getting the message in Britain. The McCartney settlement sure didn't much help those girls that would like to marry.

Marriage is not a good proposition in England or the USA right now - and is likely not to be for some time to come.

Carey Roberts: The Intellectual Perversion of the VAWA Mafia

anthony · 26 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Artilce here. Excerpt:

'When professor Suzanne Steinmetz published the results of her survey on domestic violence, no one had prepared her for the firestorm that would ensue. You see, feminists take it as an article of faith that only husbands abuse their wives.

So when Steinmetz revealed that women are often as violent as their husbands, the fem-fascists started a whispering campaign designed to block her promotion at the University of Delaware. When that didn't work, they phoned in a bomb threat at her daughter's wedding. Cowed by the threats, Steinmetz soon suspended her pioneering research.

Erin Pizzey of England had impeccable credentials -- she was the founder of the first abuse shelter for women. So a few years later she published Prone to Violence, a book that revealed these women are often as physically aggressive as their mates.

That provoked threats of violence by the women who said women can never be violent. Pizzey was forced to seek police protection as she traveled around to promote her book. She was met by jeering protesters with placards that read, "All men are bastards."'

Petition to reform underage sex laws

Matt · 26 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The petition is here. As we know, boys are much more likely to be prosecuted under differential underage sex laws than girls. In the case in question, it has a 16-YO boy branded a sexual predator for the mistake of believing a 13-YO girl when she told him she was nearly 16. Excerpt:

'The public defender that represented Ricky made it clear that going to trial could very well result in a 20 year prison term for the sexual abuse felonies he was charged with. Ricky was advised that if he pled guilty to one count of lewd or lascivious acts with a child, there would be a deferred judgment, he would not have to state a felony conviction on job applications and he would not have to register as a sex offender. But minutes before the plea hearing, Ricky was informed that the laws in Iowa had just changed and that the plea deal would include the requirement that he be registered as a sex offender for a period of 10 years. He wept at this devastating news but decided to take the plea deal anyway to avoid the possibility of a long prison term. A deferred judgment was issued on the charge of lewd or lascivious acts with a child and Ricky was sentenced to two years probation and was registered as a sex offender.'

More Pseudo-science: Men (particularly whites) are "less empathetic"

Matt · 27 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

It's official. Read it here. More than that, white men in particular are less empathetic than... everyone else.

This "experimental report" includes two fractionate categories: "white men" and "everyone else". No experimental bias here! And by the way, just how does one measure "empathy" in an objective way? What "newly-devised test instrument" did they use that the author mentions? Well anyway, excerpt:

'In several previous posts, I've discussed Simon Baron-Cohen's theory of autism as a symptom of an "extreme male brain" ..., and also Mary Bucholtz's hypothesis that nerdity is defined by "hyperwhite" behavior ... I'm ashamed to say that it never seriously occurred to me to cross-pollinate these two theories, ...
Thus, in their sample at least, the difference between males and females in two empathy-related measures was smaller than the difference between whites and non-whites.
...

I'm not suggesting that there are innate racial differences in empathy*, nor that autism is caused by excessively caucasian genetics. Rather, I'm suggesting we should be cautious about attributing stereotypical male-female differences too quickly to the (developmental or immediate) effects of sex hormones.'

*Yeah, sure.

Confirms what we've know all along: men, and white men in particular, are brutal conquerors incapable of the kind of understanding and empathy with others that comes easily to everyone else. Centuries of sun deprivation and a need to be aggressive to compete for scarce resources bred Europe-dwelling men into tall, white, strong, ruthless creatures with little concern for others and a serious superiority attitude complex that shows no signs of going away despite decades of activism. Just listen to "The Immigrant Song" by Led Zeppelin; that's all you need to know.

Ooogha! Valhalla, I am coming! Arrggghhhh!

Wonder what the word is for "bullshit" in ancient Swedish?

Pharmacy chain markets DNA paternity tests in 30 states nationwide

anthony · 27 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"After two decades, Sean Reid of Surrey, British Columbia, discovered that he had a son. Fred Turley of Des Plaines, Ill., learned he didn't have a daughter. And Wendy Lieb of Lewis Center, Ohio, made certain she wasn't going to be a grandmother quite yet.

In all three situations, crucial genetic information altered the lives of the people involved. And in each case, it came not from a doctor or other medical source, but from a $29.99 kit on a drugstore shelf.

Reid, Turley and Lieb are among more than 800 customers who responded to the first wave of marketing for do-it-yourself DNA paternity tests sold as Identigene by Sorenson Genomics of Salt Lake City."

Conference to Explore Registry of Sperm, Egg Donors

TomP · 27 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. The argument seems to be that the registry would be helpful for health reasons (It's For The Children![tm]) and that would override privacy considerations, because no one, least of all the government, would ever consider inappropriate use of this information, and what kind of scum are you not to want your children to able to find you, anyway, sir?!

Seems to me such a registry would have health benefits for the children of recipients of egg and sperm donations, but I am somewhat concerned about privacy. What if you wound up being a DNA parent to 30 - 40 infants, all of whose mothers demand CS? Talk about a Family Court feeding frenzy!

In principal, I think sperm donation is a bad idea - regardless of promises of anonymity, the prospect of being suddenly liable for back CS for one or more children that are only yours in a biological sense is daunting, to say the least. Looks as if men in the UK and Australia are already finding out about how much their privacy is worth in the face of a CS order. I don't want to see it happen here. But if you insist on being a donor, consider the prospect of the children derived from that donation being able to find you and demand a portion of all you have worked for, in exchange for....?

The question every man should ask, before every interaction with a woman (or a sperm bank, for that matter) is "What's in it for me, and what are the risks?"

Report: Heather Mills Trying to Prove Paul McCartney Worth More Than $800M

anthony · 28 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Heather Mills is trying to prove Paul McCartney is worth much more than the $800 million he claimed in their divorce battle, the Daily Mail reports.

She has told friends she is employing a team of forensic accountants to examine her estranged husband's finances, the Mail says.

Such information, she hopes, will lead to the divorce ruling being overturned and see more money go to their 4-year-old daughter Beatrice, according to the Mail.

In her impromptu press conference after the divorce hearing at the High Court in London, Mills said: "We all know he's worth $1.6 billion. He's been worth $1.6 billion for the last 15 years."'

Ohio Woman Sought for 'Having Sex' with 14-Year-Old Girl

anthony · 28 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Ohio Crime Stoppers has issued a reward of up to $2,000 for information leading to the arrest of a Bexley, Ohio, woman accused of having sex with a 14-year-old girl, 10TV.com reports.

A search warrant revealed the girl was at Becky Jo Tatum's house earlier this month and said she "had been drinking and had a buzz" prior to the alleged sexual conduct.

...

According to Tatum's daughter, her mother has engaged in sexual activity with a number of her friends, Townsend reported.

"(She's) done this before with my friends; I'm kind of used to it," Tatum's daughter said.'

Woman Involved in University of Louisville Hostage Situation Charged With Killing Her 2 Children

anthony · 28 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A mother killed her two children and later went to the nearby college she attended and brandished a gun Thursday before handing the weapon to a health counselor, police said.

The threat at the University of Louisville ended with no injuries about half an hour after it began, but police who were then asked by school officials to check on the children found them dead with gunshot wounds.

Gail Lynn Coontz, 37, is charged with murder in the deaths of 14-year-old Greg Coontz and 10-year-old Nikki Coontz, said Louisville police Officer Phil Russell.'

Serial shoplifter convicted for 175th time given yet ‘another chance'

Anonymous · 28 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Shoplifter convicted for the 175th time was spared a prison sentence after magistrates decided to give her another last chance.

Joanne Jones, 31, has faced more than 200 court hearings and served 34 jail terms over the past 16 years, at a cost to the taxpayer of more than £700,000.

But she walked free from the court after Canterbury magistrates decided there was a "chink of light" to suggest she could change – despite the fact that she was on bail when she committed her last offence and is still hooked on heroin.'

11-YO Girl Attempts Murder, Gets Tasered

SpikeRants · 28 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Florida School Security Officer Tasers 11-Year-Old Girl

That title seems a bit more in keeping with what REALLY HAPPENED than the title of the Fox News article:

So, the girl attempts to MURDER a fellow student, ASSAULTS a teacher, and the article is made to indicate that the poor girl was tasered for NO GOOD REASON.

If it was a guy, I bet it would have used my title.

Dad Allowed to Take Leave From Prison to See His Dying Little Girl

Matt · 28 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Progress, at least in the way the story is worded. Usually it's "Mom allowed to see child..." Instead, it's "Dad allowed to...". But things would be better if such a story never needed to be run. Excerpt:

'OMAHA, Neb. — A 10-year-old Nebraska girl with terminal brain cancer had a simple last wish: to have her dad by her side as she lay on her death bed.

On Wednesday, seemingly against all odds, Jayci Yaeger's wish came true.

Her father, Jason Yaeger, who has been locked up in a South Dakota federal prison on methamphetamine charges, was allowed to see his daughter for what may be the last time.'

Keep tissues handy; it's a sad story indeed.

Give dad the boot, this is what you get

Matt · 28 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Britain has, if not the highest incidence of single motherhood in the First World, then one of the highest, and the highest crime and alcohol and drug abuse rate among children of both sexes. Time covers the whole awful mess in this week's issue, here. By making marriage (or at least stable long-term relationships) as unattractive as possible to its young men with one feminist-inspired piece of legislation after another and by the same mechanism marginalizing/criminalizing the fathers of children, it is sewing what it has reaped: social chaos.

America and other countries are on the path: France, Germany, Australia, Spain, the list goes on. In 50 years, western countries have gone or are going from vibrant, powerful, and generally prosperous and content to being economically stagnant/declining, uninspired, and dangerous places for law-abiding people to live.

What of drugs? There were plenty of drugs back in the 1950s: heroin, marijuana, cocaine, etc. And bad examples from Hollywood and the rest of the MSM? Plenty abounded back then, too. But the emotional and behavioral stability fathers gave their children made most kids strong enough to recognize what these things were and not indulge (or at least not plunge themselves into using like they do now). Respect for dad's prohibitions kept children away from the bad stuff until they were old enough to do it without paternal guidance. Now, for so many kids, those crucial few years where life-long patterns of behavior and judgment get set, are without this moderating influence.

Hear that avian crowing and cackling? Those are the chickens home to roost. Roosting comfortably and securely in a nest sculpted by feminists and their socio-political lap-dogs.

Australia: Men and Fathers' Health Forum Report Available

Matt · 28 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via e-mail:

A report on the Men and Fathers' Health Forum, held at Parliament House, Canberra, last Wednesday 19th March 2008, can be downloaded here (.pdf file). Please distribute it amongst your colleagues and networks. In particular we would encourage you to write and/or email the parliamentarians listed in the report with a 'thank you' note from yourself as an individual, organisation or group.

This will do two things. Firstly it will encourage the individual parliamentarians. They work hard on our behalf and rarely get thanked. Secondly, whilst men are the largest minority 49.2% in the nation, they are also the most silent. Thankfully this is starting to change. We believe the men and fathers' movement affected the course of the last election quite profoundly. Our Men and Fathers Family Friendly Forum on 20th June 2007 might have changed the course of electoral history. The proposal for the National Men's Health Policy was triggered at that forum.

The fact that the Labor Party announced a National Men's Health Policy helped them get over the line to form a government. That news was broadcast widely within the men's movement. We believe that Work Choices was the major determinant in the swing towards Labor but the Men's Health Policy was also a key component in their electoral success. At this stage they do not understand this fully. Your individual 'thank you' note will help the parliamentarians understand the truth behind their electoral success and/or failure.

Again, many thanks to the Forum delegates for all your hard work and sacrifice in coming to Canberra. To those many advocates for a Men's Health Policy who couldn't make it to Canberra this time around, we honor you for all your hard work over many many years, and hope that you will all be involved in the shaping of the final Policy. There are too many to thank here. Let us continue the struggle for truth, justice, health and wellbeing, for men, women and children in a true spirit of mutual respect and love.

Kind Regards,

Warwick Marsh, Fatherhood Foundation
Greg Andresen, Dads on the Air / Men's Health Australia

Progress Is Progress...

bikeking8 · 28 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

First of all I'd like to say how proud I am to be a part of this organization. I have noticed male bashing in the media for years and frankly I'm getting sick of it along with all the other injustices we've been victims of such as divorce law and child support policies.

Anyways, it seems Australia is on the forefront of gasp! treating men like human beings! This article from news.com.au relays the good news that the child support policies are getting a major improvement. Included in the changes are the determination of child support payments taking into account the income of both parents, as well as the amount of time the children stay with the non-resident parent. Tax benefits have been altered, as well, giving non-resident parents monetary incentive to spend time with their children. Like a parent needs to be paid for incentive to see their children. It's still a nod to MRA groups, though. So keep your fingers crossed and your heads high.

How to Disagree

Scott · 29 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Paul Graham just published an insightful essay on How to Disagree. This isn't an article on men's issues or double standards based on gender, but I'm submitting it here because I think spending some time understanding this essay could improve the quality of discussion/disagreement in the men's rights community. Gender issues tend to be very divisive and emotional topics to discuss, and I think the overview Graham gives of effective disagreement can serve to strengthen pro-male discussions. Check it out.

WSJ: At the Barricades In the Gender Wars

mens_issues · 29 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I saw this in today's Wall Street Journal at the supermarket, and looked it up online. I couldn't get through the whole thing without puking. The article misstates the reasons why men are reluctant to vote for Hillary, and frames the resistance as "sexist backlash" instead.

Uh, what about men's issues, Hillary. I'd vote for a woman who was evenhanded with regard to men's and women's issues. Excerpt:

'When Sen. Clinton started her presidential campaign more than a year ago, she said she wanted to shatter the ultimate glass ceiling. But many of her supporters see something troubling in the sometimes bitter resistance to her campaign and the looming possibility of her defeat: a seeming backlash against the opportunities women have gained.
...

With the Pennsylvania primary looming on April 22, it's unlikely that workplace tensions over Sen. Clinton's candidacy will abate. On March 5, the day after Sen. Clinton won Ohio, Jackie LeViseur, a fund-raiser at Youngstown State University, arrived at her office to find her female colleagues, mostly secretaries, high-fiving each other and cheering in the hall.

The men, most of them bosses, remained in their offices, looking, says Ms. LeViseur, like their team had lost the football game.

"They might have been a little afraid to speak up," says Ms. LeViseur.'

Magazines 'harm male body image'

MJE · 29 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

After decades of railing against the damage teen magazines inflict on girls' self-esteem, someone finally thought to stand up for the boys, too.

"'Lads' Magazines have been increasingly successful in recent years, and have attracted criticism for an alleged potential to exploit women rather than cause problems for their readership.
...
Professor Naomi Fineberg, a consultant psychiatrist who runs a treatment service for people with obsessive compulsive disorder, said that men and women suffered equally from body dysmorphic disorder."

Also, it's good to see that they specifically pointed out (scathingly!) the tendency to put women's rights before men's. "[A]n alleged potential to exploit women". I couldn't have chosen a more appropriate word.

I'm glad to see further evidence that not all women are blinded by their sex; both of the women mentioned in the article seem rather enlightened about gender equality.

Evidently Filming Fully Clothed Cheerleaders During a Public Performance is a Felony

blaze4metal · 30 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. While female teachers are banging their students, the police are arresting men for filming public cheerleading events and calling it child pornography. Excerpt:

"WOODLAND – Gilbert Chan, a business reporter at The Bee, pleaded not guilty Friday to a felony charge of possession of child pornography.

Chan, 52, of Davis was arrested after trying to conceal a camera he was using to videotape a youth cheerleading competition at UC Davis on Feb. 3, police said."

Cops: Neglected Boy, 4, Wasted Away to 10 Pounds

anthony · 30 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Authorities in the Florida Panhandle say they have arrested a woman suspected of severely neglecting a 4-year-old boy.

Santa Rosa County Sheriff's Sgt. Scott Haines says the boy weighed only 10 pounds when he was hospitalized earlier this month but his condition is improving.

Deputies on Friday arrested 19-year-old Erin Brittany Markes, identifying her only as the boy's caregiver."

More trash from "junkscience.com": 'Clueless Guys Can't Read Women'

Matt · 30 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Misandrist B.S. here. Excerpt:

'More often than not, guys interpret even friendly cues, such as a subtle smile from a gal, as a sexual come-on, and a new study discovers why: Guys are clueless.

More precisely, they are somewhat oblivious to the emotional subtleties of non-verbal cues, according to a new study of college students.

"Young men just find it difficult to tell the difference between women who are being friendly and women who are interested in something more," said lead researcher Coreen Farris of Indiana University's Department of Psychological and Brain Sciences.'

England: Year's jail for 'wicked' false rape accusation

anthony · 31 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman who falsely accused a soldier of rape has been described as "wicked" by the judge who sentenced her to a year in jail.

Amanda Lang, 21, had consensual sex with Lance Corporal Philip Trowell after drinking with him at RAF Brize Norton, Oxfordshire. The act took place in Lang's bedroom which she shared with her pilot boyfriend.
...
"For a few days this man's life was turned upside down. You persisted with your story for 15 months so all the time he thought he was going to have to give evidence to prove you were lying.
...
"That is the evil of what you did - it undermines the whole process. This is a case where a message has to be sent out to everybody that false allegations of rape are insidious to a degree."'

College 101: More women than men enrolled - some look to even the score

anthony · 31 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'"The enrollment gap is undeniable," said Sanford Shugart, president of Valencia Community College, "but our belief is that raising the achievements of all students will help close that gap."

Shugart and other administrators say they have no plans to launch recruitment drives to increase male enrollment, nor do they envision reaching a point where they would.
...
At least one of those schools is trying to get a few more good men.

St. Petersburg College opened The Male Outreach Center last year -- modeled in part after a nearly 30-year-old on-campus drop-in program for women -- to recruit and retain male students, especially blacks and Hispanics, who statistically tend to struggle more than others in college.

Some think more schools should open similar programs because of the rising need among men for career training. Changes in the economy are eliminating well-paid blue-collar jobs that once allowed men to earn a living wage without a college degree.'

Opinion: "Feminism may go too far in girls vs. boys"

anthony · 31 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'But as I sat in the stands of my local indoor soccer facility, watching my son's under-12 boys team being physically abused by a girls team, I couldn't help but wonder if perhaps feminism has finally gone too far.

During the game, I saw a female player actually punch one of our boys in the back of his head (the ref did not see it) and later, I saw my own son's face being smashed into the boards by another young lady. (The ref did see that.) I noted the parents of the girls' team smiling smugly whenever one of their players managed to knock over one of our boys.

...
We drill it into our boys' heads from a very young age that they should never push, shove or hit a girl; if anything, they are to step to the defense of a girl when necessary. Then we put them all out on the soccer field -- basketball court, wrestling mat, pick a sport -- together where the boys are supposed to be as physically competitive with girls as they would be with boys. We are confusing our boys.

If men abusing women is never appropriate, why should the reverse ever be all right? Our culture seems to be blurring the lines between feminism and offensivism.'

Anti-Feminism: What Is It?

anthony · 31 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Anti-feminists on the other hand propound that women have advanced in all spheres and share equal status in the world and due to this reason feminism is not required.

The view of anti-feminists that women are not dependant on men and that they share equal status, shows that this ideology is very different from male chauvinism.

Masculinism is associated with men's rights and seeks to promote them. Masculinism, like anti-feminism, is also a response to feminism, but masculinism gets into concerns of equal child rights and social issues affecting men's rights.

Masculinism is thus a counterpart of feminism and seeks to empower males in society and redress discrimination against them. Anti-feminists differ from masculists as anti-feminism is an ideology against feminism rather than an advocacy of male rights."

Study shows that circumcision does not shield men from STD

blaze4metal · 31 March 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

Even though it's common sense to anyone with a brain, a study shows that you are still able to catch STDs no matter how mutilated your penis is.

Excerpt:

Circumcision does not appear to shield men from the types of sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) common in the developed world, according to new research by Dr. Nigel P. Dickson and colleagues in the Journal of Pediatrics.from New Zealand.

RADAR ALERT: The CDC Admits its Mistake, But Doesn't Stop Junk Science

Matt · 1 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Two months ago RADAR blew the whistle on a junk science report from the federal Centers for Disease Control. The report purported to show that in their lifetime, women are more than twice as likely as men to suffer from intimate partner violence – 23.6% vs. 11.5%.

The problem is the CDC researchers loaded the questionnaire, counting any "attempts" or "threats" of violence, or "any unwanted sex," on the same level as actual acts of violence – and then lumping all the answers together!

So on February 11 we put out an Alert – and thousands of you responded!

Then the CDC rechecked the raw numbers. OOOPS! Turns out the numbers were wrong – but the CDC didn't explain why. The percentages are actually 26.4% for women vs. 15.9% for men. So on March 7 the CDC issued a correction.

But here we are almost two months later, and the CDC has not fixed the main problem – three of the four questions they used have not been validated.

The CDC needs to hear from you – TODAY!

Email CDC director Dr. Julie Gerberding at jyg2-at-cdc.gov, or call her office at 1-404-639-7000.

- Politely ask her to explain why the numbers the CDC originally reported turned out to be incorrect.
- Urge her to appoint an advisory panel of qualified university researchers.
- Tell her the CDC needs to stop using invalid questions that inflate and distort the true incidence of partner violence.

Take Action Now! WE CAN STOP JUNK RESEARCH!

++
+

RADAR's February 11 Alert: http://mediaradar.org/alert20080211.php

RADAR letter to the CDC: http://mediaradar.org/docs/RADARletter-CDC-BRFSS-Distorts-Data.pdf

CDC's original study: http://www.cdc.gov/mmwr/preview/mmwrhtml/mm5705a1.htm

CDC's correction: http://www.cdc.gov/mmwr/preview/mmwrhtml/mm5709a7.htm

++
++
Date of RADAR Release: March 31, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Hillary: Men's Issues Matter Too

mens_issues · 1 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Men's Issues Matter Too - by Hillary Clinton*

April 1, 2008

The following is a transcript of the speech given by presidential candidate Hillary Clinton at the California Men's Center this morning:

Welcome. It is good to see you all here this morning.

Firstly, I would like to thank the National Coalition of Free Men, and Harry Crouch, director of the California Men's Center, for inviting me here to speak today.

As you all probably know, I have long been an advocate for women's rights and issues. However, it has become increasingly clear to me during my presidential campaign that I have overlooked the issues that American men face. Well, I have done some soul searching on these issues, and have had a change of heart in my approach toward gender politics. After all, men's issues matter too, and I will now detail my new ideas here.

I have said that it takes a village to raise a child. And a vital part of that village is men and fathers that are valued for their involvement in the families of that village. As president I will urge the states to reform their family courts to encourage shared parenting so that fathers are no longer routinely excluded from their children's lives or treated as criminals in family court.

After all, no man is illegal.

I have said that women are the primary victims of war. After men, that is. Really, men have borne the brunt of war for time immemorial. Just look at the law that requires Selective Service registration for 18-year-old men, but not 18-year-old women. It's high time that young women in America did their part for national defense by registering as well, and as president I plan to promote legislation to this end.

I have spoken of a woman's right to choose. It's only fair that reproductive rights be extended to men as well. Stop paternity fraud! Choice for men, now!

I have been an advocate for health care reform, but regrettably have neglected to see the male angle to this. It is unconscionable that there is a federal Office of Women's Health without a corresponding Office of Men's Health, when men have a life expectancy nearly 6 years less than women.

While I'm at it, the Violence Against Women Act needs to be reformed to include male victims. I feel a bit contrite here, as it was me that slashed my husband's face in 1993 simply because Barbara Streisand was visiting the White House. There was no excuse for my violence against Bill, and as president I plan to make it up to the men of America who have been unrepresented in domestic violence services for too long.

And what about IMBRA – that is, the The International Marriage Brokers Regulation Act? How did this unconstitutional law ever get passed? Surely American men as a whole are a decent lot who deserve the opportunity to look for love and marriage overseas without the presumption of being abusers. As president, I will not only repeal this anti-male law, but will push for legislation to protect American men from financial exploitation by unscrupulous foreign women. American men deserve protection too!

Furthermore, as president I will not allow radical feminists to pressure me or Congress into ratifying CEDAW, or the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women, in the United States. Not only is this law unnecessary in the United States, but it would be an imposition on the sovereignity of this nation by a small clique of idealogues. Phyllis Schlafly was right about this one.

Now, some of my so-called advocates have tried to pit women's issues against black issues, and claimed that the former is more important than the latter. Well, all I can say is that there is no comparison between being subject to centuries of slavery followed by another century of Jim Crow laws, and being asked to make coffee.

And what about the boys of this nation. It isn't fair that the education system in the United States is rigged to favor the learning styles of girls. The Department of Education has pursued this unethical policy for too long, and it needs to be reformed. Our boys don't neet Ritalin – they need an education system that works for them.

We also need to overhaul Title IX. It's absurd to eliminate college men's sports teams to create women's sports teams that aren't necessarily wanted in order to comply with a rigid quota system. Let's return Title IX to what it was originally intended to do.

And once our young men enter the workforce, they are discriminated against once again by preferential hiring practices that favor women. Women should be hired on the basis of merit, not favoritism. Also, I no longer believe in the wage gap myth, which fails to take into account the fact that men tend to work longer hours at more dangerous jobs than women.

In conclusion, what I have referred to in the past as the ultimate glass ceiling really only tells half the story. The glass cellars of male disposability, as Warren Farrell terms it, are the other side of the coin that has been overlooked for far too long. The so-called boy's club of presidential politics in reality has been more about passing legislation to help and protect women than it has been about serving the interests of the common man. As president I plan to return the favor by promoting legislation that helps men for a change.

Thank you, and I hope to receive your vote in November!

*Not really. Happy April Fool's Day!

Women Cheer New Yahoo Shine Website

anthony · 1 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Yahoo is taking aim at the distinct content and buying power of women with a new Website called Shine.

Women in the male dominated technology business said there is a real need for Web content that speaks directly to women. They said Websites like Shine and Channelweb Women of the Channel are necessary to educate young girls to compete in corporate America.

Steward said she hopes Shine addresses how woman think differently than men. "Understanding how woman work is critical," she said. "We work differently. Woman are extreme multitaskers. Because of this the way we do business is very different. We leap ahead five or ten steps."

CONTRAST:

Study: More girls than boys are blogging or writing online

Hitchens on Hillary's Falsified 'Bosnian Combat Record'

Matt · 1 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Love him, hate him, respect him, reject him, you have to admit the man can write, and he is unflinchingly fearless in the application of his trade. Article here. Excerpt:

'The punishment visited on Sen. Hillary Clinton for her flagrant, hysterical, repetitive, pathological lying about her visit to Bosnia should be much heavier than it has yet been and should be exacted for much more than just the lying itself. There are two kinds of deliberate and premeditated deceit...
... Sen. Clinton has managed to commit both of these offenses to veracity and decency and how in doing so she has rivaled, if not indeed surpassed, the disbarred and perjured hack who is her husband and tutor.

...
Were I to be asked if Sen. Clinton has ever lost any sleep over those heaps of casualties, I have the distinct feeling that I could guess the answer. She has no tears for anyone but herself. In the end, and over her strenuous objections, the United States and its allies did rescue our honor and did put an end to Slobodan Milosevic and his state-supported terrorism. Yet instead of preserving a polite reticence about this, or at least an appropriate reserve, Sen. Clinton now has the obscene urge to claim the raped and slaughtered people of Bosnia as if their misery and death were somehow to be credited to her account!'

Anti-male double standards at Colorado College

Matt · 1 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A.:

Feminists at Colorado College can distribute material about "male castration," but if men distribute a satirical response, they get charged with violating a campus code. You can post comments under the story and email the Bulletin at publisher-at-thebulletin.us and jkidd-at-thebulletin.us.

Excerpt:

'A Colorado college has found two students guilty of violating the conduct code against violence after the students distributed a satirical flyer poking fun at the college's Feminist and Gender Studies program. Chris Robinson and a second student who wished to remain nameless now must hold a campus forum to discuss the very issues that landed them in hot water.

The controversy began when Colorado College's "Feminist and Gender Studies Interns" distributed their newsletter entitled The Monthly Rag. The newsletter contained information pertaining to the women's studies program and also highlighted information on a lecture to be delivered by a "world-famous prostitute and porn star," information about gender identity issues and a comment concerning "male castration."

In response to the newsletter, the two students, under the pseudonym of "The Coalition of Some Dudes," created and distributed "The Monthly Bag," a satirical response to The Monthly Rag. In the parody, the two students included a comment about "female violence and abuse" from a battered men's Web site, as well as a statement of "chainsaw etiquette" and a "Tough Guy Wisdom" quote by Theodore Roosevelt.'

Australia: Lack of representation on men's issues at 2020 Summit

Matt · 1 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

As you may be aware, there appears to be a distinct lack of representation on men's issues (male health, fatherhood, boys' education, etc) at Prime Minister Kevin Rudd's 2020 Summit.

Only one men's health advocate made it onto the list as far as I am aware - Professor Gary Wittert from the University of Adelaide. At the same time, many women's issues appear to be strongly represented (as they should be).

Warwick Marsh and myself are collating a list of unsuccessful nominees with a view to putting out a press release in the next day or so. If you, or any of your colleagues who work in the men's, fathers' and boy's sector, were nominated for the summit but were unsuccessful (or successful for that matter), could you please let me know via email at your earliest convenience?

Many thanks.

Kind regards,

Greg

Greg Andresen
Research & Media Liaison
Men's Health Australia
http://www.menshealthaustralia.net/

Woman in YouTube 'rape' is arrested over underage sex

Matt · 1 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The three-minute clip, filmed on a mobile phone, apparently showed a young and unconscious mother being gang raped as she lay helpless in her own home.
...
The alleged victim claims it shows her being raped by three boys in front of her screaming children, aged two and four, after being drugged.

But yesterday it was revealed that the 24-year-old woman has now been arrested on suspicion of unlawful sexual intercourse with a 14-year-old and perverting the course of justice.

Scotland Yard confirmed it will take no further action against two 16-year-olds and a 14-year old arrested in February in connection with the video.'

Requesting Help with article on the 2008 Equal Parenting Bike Trek

Anonymous · 1 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

We are asking for your help in a very simple task which requires NO ACCOUNT. Simply visit this article on the Lansing State Journal website and click on “Recommended” which is towards the top and to the right of “Read Comments”.

Doing this helps because it drives the article towards the top of their news online. The exposure for the Equal Parenting Bike Trek is tremendous and very helpful. This article has funneled new traffic that is equivalent to that which the Protein Wisdom article on the Bike Trek provided. The Michigan Government seems to visit it very frequently. :) Currently we lost our #1 ranking on their website and have fallen to #2. We truly need your help for this very simple task, which again requires no account.

If you are ambitious you can also comment but this requires an account.

Thanks,
Robert and Angela Pedersen
2008 Equal Parenting Bike Trek

Glenn Debates Swedish Official Who Claims Men Are Primarily Responsible for Global Warming

anthony · 1 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The fact that women travel less than men – measured in person- kilometers per car, plane, boat and motorcycle – means that women cause considerably fewer CO2 emissions than men and thus considerable less climate change.

"If women's consumption levels were to be the norm, both emissions and climate change would be significantly less than today. To put it differently, if men were to change their behavior, emissions and climate change might be a much more limited problem as compared to what it is today."--Gerd Johnsson-Latham'

Men who need breast reduction face multiple ways to cope

anthony · 1 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This video identifies male breast reduction. This is an issue discussed once before on MANN. I thought some extra information on the subject might help men who suffer from this condition.

Equal Pay Day is April Fool's Day

Matt · 2 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Hillary Clinton repeatedly introduces the Paycheck Fairness Act on Equal Pay Day (in 2008, it will be April 22). This distinguishes her from both Barack Obama and John McCain.

But Dr. Warren Farrell, author of Why Men Earn More, says both the Paycheck Fairness Act and Equal Pay Day rest on a false assumption: that the gap in male-female pay reflects discrimination. He feels, therefore, that they would more appropriately be introduced on April Fool's Day.

Equal Pay Day was originated by the National Committee on Pay Equity (NCPE) in 1996. April 22 represents how long into 2008 a woman would allegedly have to work to earn as much as her male counterpart could have earned for the same work in 2007 alone.

Dr. Farrell, the only man ever elected three times to the Board of Directors of the National Organization for Women in New York City, and an organizer of protests against pay discrimination against women, changed his mind about the pay gap reflecting discrimination after he spent about a decade researching the subject. Instead, he discovered twenty-five measurable differences between men and women's work-life choices.

When each of these differences was accounted for (e.g., hours worked; willingness to do jobs that were hazardous, or jobs that required overnight travel; relocating; working evenings and weekends; or working in fields with more formulas and fewer people, like engineering), his best estimate was that the women out-earned the men.

Farrell sees opportunities for women in these twenty-five dimensfferences: "Twenty-five ways to higher pay." But, Farrell says, before anyone pursues the higher pay, she or he needs to understand that "The road to high pay is a toll road. The male-female pay gap can just as easily be seen as discrimination against men: the expectation men will pay more tolls to get higher pay." (Farrell says an Equal Tolls Act would rest on an equally false assumption, because women work more in the home.)

Farrell feels the pay gap can best be understood by understanding the division of labor once children arrive. For example, Farrell cites the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics data that women who have never been married and never had children earn 117% of their male counterparts.

Farrell found that each of men's twenty-five decisions leads to men earning more than women, but each also leads to women having more balanced lives--balanced between work and family/friends/exercise, spiritual time and alone time. Dr. Farrell concludes, "most people find balanced lives to be happier. The real sexism is the assumption that only women should be learning from men. In fact, men should also be learning from women how to have more balanced lives. That's the challenge a candidate with courage would offer voters."

For more about Dr. Farrell on the pay gap, see http://www.warrenfarrell.com/

The Tyranny of Title IX

anthony · 2 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Judges, bureaucrats, and college administrators have interpreted the law to demand "statistical proportionality" - so if a school's student body is 60% female, then 60% of its scholarship athletes must be too. Never mind that, from earliest childhood, boys are far more interested in athletic competition than girls are, or that everyone else is generally more interested in boys' competition too.
...
The Title IX problem is just going to get worse, as schools' student bodies become increasingly majority-female. More programs will be eliminated. Until ND cuts to the chase and re-names its teams the Peacing Multiculties, we're still the Fighting Irish. Wrestling's the only intercollegiate sport that even comes close to fighting. Let's bring it back to Notre Dame."

New U.K. Law Bans Barmaid Banter

Roy · 2 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Britain appears to be competing with Canada for the top spot in feminist tyranny -- story here. Excerpt:

'New discrimination laws to make employers liable for customers behaviour may make banter with the barmaid a thing of the past.

Landlords who allow sexist jokes or even words like “darling” or “love” at the bar could be taken before tribunal and handed unlimited fines.

Operators will need to show they have tried to combat sexual harassment of workers by customers if they are to guard against the risk of compensation claims.

Pubs have been advised to put up warning notices telling punters that staff harassment will not be tolerated.

The new rules, pushed through by Women and Equalities Minister Harriet Harman, allow tribunals to award damages for injury to feelings if a case is proved. The regulations will come into force on Sunday.'

(More criminalization of normal heterosexual behaviors? Injury to feelings? If the barmaid tells the customer to bleep off, is that also an injury to HIS feelings?)

Woman Files Assault Charge on 5-year-old Boy

SpikeRants · 2 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video here.

So, a FIVE YEAR OLD has assault charges on him? This poor woman was threatened by a FIVE YEAR OLD? This is sick.

The mother has a blog of this event on the website as well. Not very well spelled or worded, but she was probably upset.

The Fatherhood Project requests input

Matt · 3 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The Fatherhood Project will be represented at Prime Minister Rudd's Australia 2020 Summit on 19 and 20 April by one of our newly elected board members Margot Cairns, a brilliant mind. She will be on the economics committee and we need to show the economists and financiers why and how fatherhood has a massive impact on our economy.

I am compiling a dossier to aid her presentation on what economic benefits accrue from supporting actively engaged fathers and fatherhood organisations.

If you have any hard evidence about...

1. The real costs to government of fathers being separated from their children

2. The real costs to the corporate world of fathers being separated from their children

3. The economic impact of fathers staying connected with their children

4. The economic benefits to the nation both corporate and government of programmes for fathers, support for fathers in all its myriad forms and how that economically impacts on family

5. Any other aspects of this discourse that will assist those working with fathers to be funded

...please let me know a.s.a.p. by using our contact form at http://www.fatherhood.net.au/contact.html.

Highest regards,

Colin George
The Fatherhood Project
http://www.fatherhood.net.au/

Woman sentenced to 99 years for masterminding murder

TomP · 3 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. 35-year old mother, good looking, hard luck story, supportive husband, she didn't pull the trigger and she is still sentenced to 99 years for masterminding a murder. Even tears and appeals to psychological "experts" didn't help. She won't be eligible for parole for 33 years.

Looks as if the default assumption of "Man-Bad/Woman-Good" is beginning to fray around the edges.

A remark from the presiding judge is worth noting:
"In my mind I can find no principled distinction between the puppet who pulls the trigger and the puppeteer who pulls the strings," Volland said of Linehan's role. "And in my judgment, Ms. Linehan was the puppeteer who pulled the strings."

Some interesting stuff in the comments section, too.

Supermodel Naomi Campbell 'dragged off plane in handcuffs'

AngryMan · 4 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Foul-tempered supermodel Naomi Campbell has been released on bail pending further inquiries after being arrested on suspicion of assaulting a police officer on a British Airways flight.

Police were called, and witnesses claim she was "virtually dragged" out of the First Class cabin and off the plane in handcuffs.

...

A witness said: "She was screaming and shouting, effing and blinding and complaining that she did not have her clothes for her television appearance.

"I've never seen anything like it."

Another said: "She attacked a male police officer and spat at him."

Miss Campbell, who is known for her fiery temper, was arrested on suspicion of assaulting a police officer and taken to Heathrow police station.

She re-emerged late last night. So far no charges have been brought.'

Too many women doctors 'will be bad for patients'

AngryMan · 4 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Too many women doctors working fewer hours than men will ultimately result in a major shortage of GPs, a leading specialist warns today.

Growing numbers of female graduates threaten to put men in a minority in the profession, with serious consequences for patients, according to Brian McKinstry, senior research fellow at Edinburgh University.

The unwillingness of women GPs to work unsocial hours played a part in the ending of out-of-hours care by the vast majority of family doctors, he argues.

But part-time working, maternity leave and plans by many women doctors to retire early will have even more "negative consequences" in future, writes Dr McKinstry in the British Medical Journal.

White teenage boys are the new poor in Labour's Britain

AngryMan · 4 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'White boys from sink estates are the new poor in Labour's Britain, an official report said yesterday.
...
Among the losers are families with stay-at-home mothers, who were found to make up a growing number of the poor.
...
A study for Tory leader David Cameron by senior party MP Iain Duncan Smith identified in 2006 the growing failure among white boys.

It said family breakdown, family indifference, drink and drug abuse by parents and peer pressure was holding them back.'

Anti-male misinformation about domestic violence

Anonymous · 4 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

A professor at the University of Maryland School of Medicine has the following slide presentation (.ppt file) that falsely says 95% of domestic violence victims are women (see slide 9 in the file), a figure that is so outrageously old and false that I haven't even seen it in a long time.

She also cites other myths that ignore and downplay male victims and female violence. Please email her at asisley-at-umm.edu.

For quick stats to use see http://www.ncfmla.org/dv_data.html.

Ed. note: Polite notes, please, informing her that the stats and other parts of the presentation are false or out-of-date and that it would serve the public interest to update her presentation. She may just be poorly-informed as many people are, including medical people. We're a lot more likely to see that presentation get corrected and win an ally if we appeal politely rather than bombard her with flame-mail.

MSN: Ex-husbands getting alimony-- quick, hide your money!

Matt · 4 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Today's 'Hot Topic' on MSN is how some men are getting alimony from their higher-earning ex-wives (gasp!), and how this can be avoided. No sooner it seems do certain women gain economic superiority than they search for ways to avoid the responsibilities that most men have been shouldering without attempt to shirk it for millenia. Story here. Since this is an oft-changed web page, the unusual step of citing the whole piece is shown below:

'Who's making alimony news? Men, and not just K-Fed. Former "Young and the Restless" star John Castellanos gets $9,000 a month. As The Wall Street Journal points out, alimony-receiving men just want R-E-S-P-E-C-T.

What else do Web searches tell us about splits? The top settlement searches, in order, are divorce, child support, custody and then alimony. Plus: alimony calculators

.Women outearn their husbands in almost one-third of American households, according to the latest U.S. Census Bureau figures. Which brings us to some questions — and answers, of sorts.

Let's say you're a top-earning woman and you're about to get married. What should you have before you walk down the aisle? (Answer.)If you don't get the above signed and sealed before exchanging "I dos," what's your next step? (Answer.)

Don't quote us, but where can you, er, put your money for safekeeping, just in case? (Answer.)'

Related prior article here.

Jury acquits Dayton man accused of rape while making service call

anthony · 4 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Darke County jury has acquitted a Dayton man accused of raping a woman while making a service call to turn off the power to her home.

Ali Drew Warner, who was working for a DP&L contractor at the time, had been indicted in November on a felony count of rape and a felony count of aggravated burglary.

...

She asked how to avoid having the power disconnected, according to the document. Warner told her she could have sex with him. When she refused, he allegedly raped her. Her 2-year-old daughter was home at the time.

Warner, 27, was released Thursday, March 27, after nearly five months in jail. The jury deliberated about 90 minutes Thursday before finding him not guilty on both counts.

Warner's attorney, Mia Wortham Spells, said the case came down to credibility, noting the alleged victim owed DP&L thousands of dollars and had used bad checks.'

More from Junk_science.com: "Men Create More Housework for Women"

patriotsofamerica · 4 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Here is the story. Men create more housework for women??? Men are doing MORE around the house PLUS we do the outside work and home improvements!

How often does a wife want a new washer installed? How often does a wife want a new kitchen faucet installed? How about snow removal? How about a car that needs to be worked on? How about a room that needs painting? I can go on and on. http://www.move-off.org/

Excerpt:

'Having a husband creates an extra seven hours of housework each week for women, according to a new study. For men, tying the knot saves an hour of weekly chores.

"It's a well-known pattern," said lead researcher Frank Stafford, an economist at University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research. "Men tend to work more outside the home, while women take on more of the household labor."'

Police say mom gave baby meth

anthony · 5 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A 3-month child was racked with seizures caused by the illicit drug methamphetamine when it arrived at The Children's Hospital, and the infant's mother is facing serious child abuse charges today, according to Denver Police.
...
The baby's mother, Katreice Trujillo, 27, was arrested Wednesday on charges of child abuse resulting in serious bodily injury.

Trujillo has a Child Abuse lengthy criminal record in six counties, including arrests for assault, failure to appear and traffic offenses, but no drug-related offenses, according to public records."

Mother Charged with Murdering Infant Son Arraigned in Court

anthony · 5 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A mother accused of murdering her infant son was arraigned in court today. Savannah-Chatham police said she drowned her baby and drove around with him in a trash bag.

A judge arraigned 21-year-old Virkisha Warren Friday in a Chatham County courtroom. Investigators said she drowned her 3-month-old son Brandon Warren Thursday morning. At first she claimed she just found the baby not breathing.

...

Police said it was intentional and that's why the baby's mother is now charged with murder. Detectives said Warren drowned the infant boy at her home on Mistletoe Court, put him in a black trash bag and drove around with him in her lap for almost an hour. Police said she passed hospitals, not once asking anyone for help. She then 'drove to the baby's father's house.'

Public Fed Up With Female Teacher Sex Cases

anthony · 5 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Sometime during the overexposure of Debra Lafave - the Barbie-like teacher turned sexual predator - people started to think differently about female teachers having sex with students.

And that, we would argue, helps explain the number of female teachers being arrested for sexual misconduct - a string of trysts that has kept Tampa in the national headlines.

At Freedom High, a fellow instructor turned in English teacher Mary Jo Spack and at Martinez Middle School, a colleague who heard rumors of an affair involving math teacher Stephanie Ragusa blew the whistle. In Pasco County, the father of the boy who was allegedly having an affair with Mitchell High School substitute teacher Lisa Marinelli alerted authorities after spotting his son getting out of the teacher's car."

The Feminist Language Police

Anonymous · 5 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A row has broken out over the translation of a best-selling novel by the British author Mark Haddon after a "feminist" attempted to make some of the characters female...

..."As we corrected her text, we realised that she was systematically translating neutral words into feminine ones, and masculine words into feminine or neutral forms," said Moisés Barcia, the editor at Rinoceronte. "She chose to make the narrator's pet rat a female, even though its name was Toby," he said. In another instance she changed "men" to "xente", meaning people.

First grade boy suspended for harassment

anthony · 5 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A first grader was suspended for three days after school officials said he sexually harassed a girl in his class by allegedly putting two fingers inside the girl's waistband while she sat on the floor in front of him.

The boy's mother, Berthena Dorinvil, said she "screamed" about last week's suspension from Downey Elementary School, and added her son doesn't know what sexual harassment is.

...

The principal told Dorinvil the girl complained to the teacher after her son touched the girl's waistband, hitting her skin, in a room full of children.

Dorinvil said her son told her he touched the girl's shirt, not her skin, after the girl touched him.'

Breakdown in families 'as destructive as effects of global warming'

AngryMan · 6 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Britain is suffering from an epidemic of family breakdowns affecting all levels of society from the Royal family downwards, one of the country's most senior judges will say today.

Mr Justice Coleridge, who presided over the preliminary divorce hearings of Sir Paul McCartney and Heather Mills, will accuse Gordon Brown of prioritising the abolition of plastic bags over support for families, and say the Government is "fiddling while Rome burns".

...

Mr Justice Coleridge, 58, who is married with a daughter and two sons, is expected to say that the family justice system - comprising social workers, local authorities, mental health specialists and legal experts - is all that stands between the present dire situation and "social anarchy".

It is understood he will call for laws relating to unmarried couples to be modernised, giving cohabitees legal rights on separation, enforceable pre-nuptial agreements, and for reform of divorce law to remove the "fault" element and blame from the process.'

Woman asks Michael Jordan for third paternity test

anthony · 6 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman who claims Michael Jordan fathered her child wants the former NBA star to submit to a third paternity test.

Lisa Miceli also is asking a judge to lift a temporary restraining order imposed after Jordan filed a harassment suit against her.

Miceli, 35, of Meadville, claims Jordan fathered her 4-year-old son, but Jordan's lawsuit says a pair of 2005 paternity tests rule him out as the boy's father."

Japan's 'geisha guys' the latest accessory

anthony · 7 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The woman, a successful executive, has joined a growing number of professional women in Japan in forking out from $1,000 to $50,000 a night for male companionship.

They meet their "hosts" in hundreds of clubs that have sprung up around Tokyo - the industry says only compliments are exchanged. The women pay for a man to lavish them with undivided attention.

"There's nothing wrong with a woman paying to be entertained by a man," one female client says. "It's just another step in equality."

It's a dizzying reversal of traditional gender roles in a country long known for geishas pampering male clients with conversation, singing and dancing. Now a new breed of entertainer has cropped up -- think of them as male geishas.'

"I was raped" T-shirt

anthony · 7 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video here. [As of this writing there are two entries for this video on the right side of the page. The first when activated says the video has expired. The second however runs just fine.]

Such a T-shirt may well rank among the most direct and insidious forms of misandry one could ever see. No doubt this item will be sold throughout college campuses and soon girls will be all huddled together in great big crying circles wearing their "I was raped" T-shirts. When pressed, if at all, to say when and where, more than a few I fancy will say she wasn't (or at least not that she knows of, but maybe after talking about it for awhile, she will 'suddenly realize' that she was), but that she is doing so "to support the many other women who were raped."

Rape, rape, rape. Rape is everywhere. Check under your desk, someone is probably getting raped there, too.

Forcible sexual contact is criminal. Capitalizing off rape hysteria however is not. If in making money off it, you undermine the believability of actual real claims of rape, well, so what. It's all about the money.

MSN: "Women make better doctors"

Matt · 7 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Female patients seem to have different criteria for choosing a doctor, gender included. When Erin Cooper, a psychiatric study coordinator from Washington D.C., gets a sore throat, “I will see anyone. I’m confident any board-certified physician is competent to treat me.”

But if the medical issue heads into “female issues” territory, the 25-year-old gets a little more opinionated. There is no question, she says: “Having a female doctor in this case is a top priority.”
...
Male physicians have also bested female physicians in a surprising subspecialty: gynecology. Two separate studies have suggested that male gynecologists are more thorough, and more emotionally responsive, than female gynecologists. Researchers say this finding is the result of an intense pressure male gynecologists now feel within their profession. Today, an increasing number of patients are now requesting female gynecologists. As a consequence, male gynecologists may be going above and beyond to emotionally connect with their patients.

And though this brainy battle of the sexes may seem like a scientific toss-up, researchers generally seem to agree on one point: Female physicians are, on the whole, better communicators.
...
So Murtha switched to a female pediatrician. The move helped her feel more confident as a new mom, she says.

“Being more comfortable with my son's pediatrician translates to better care for him—and not just from his pediatrician, but also from me,” Murtha says. “I’m glad we switched. It was definitely the right choice for me.”'

So what this article tells me is that despite the average male gynecologist seeming to be better at it overall, many women would still rather have a female gynecologist tend to them.

Of course this isn't sexist. This is just about feelings and so it's perfectly fine. Another example of "His rights end where her feelings begin," but with a twist: there's nothing wrong with deciding what dr. you want treating you regardless of the reason. What is unfortunate is that it's not just one life affected by this sort of bigotry but three: the patient's, the infant's, and the infant's father.

Also note that the dad isn't even mentioned in this article.

Wife, Mother Battle Over Deceased Soldier's Sperm

anthony · 7 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

The widow of a soldier killed in Iraq this week is in a fight against time and her mother-in-law to harvest her husband's sperm before he is embalmed.

Army Sgt. Dayne Darren Dhanoolal was killed on Monday when a roadside bomb tore through the Husky mine-detecting vehicle he was driving in Iraq. The 26-year-old combat engineer was assigned to Fort Benning's 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment and was scheduled to come home just weeks before his death.

On Friday, Kynesha Dhanoolal got a federal court order restraining her husband's mother from embalming the body until she can get his sperm, which she hopes to use to have a child through artificial insemination.

Girls Record Brutal Attack On Teen To Allegedly Post On YouTube

anthony · 7 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Video was released late Monday afternoon showing a brutal beating at the hands of a gang of teenage girls. Their motivation for the attack was apparently so they could post the video on YouTube.
...
When 16-year-old Victoria Lindsay arrived at her friend's house where she had been staying, six girls were waiting. Immediately, they started yelling and one girl began pummeling the victim."

Mother kept son in a wheelchair for five years so 'he would never leave her'

AngryMan · 8 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A single mother kept her young son in a wheelchair for five years because she feared he would become independent and leave her, a court heard yesterday.

The 31-year-old tricked doctors into believing the child, now 11, was ill and could not walk as part of the bizarre child cruelty plot."

Still think single mothers do a great job?

Boys and their toys? It's biological, not social

AngryMan · 8 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Boys prefer playing with cars to dolls because of basic biological differences rather than social pressures, scientists say.

Researchers observed young male monkeys spent more time playing with vehicles than with cuddly toys.
...
Their conclusion contradicts those of the dominant psychological theory that the preference of boys for vehicles and toy soldiers and that of girls for dolls is down to social rather than innate influences."

Debra Lafave to Be Released From House Arrest Early

anthony · 8 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Teacher-turned-sex-offender Debra Lafave will get to spend her final three months of house arrest on probation instead.

A judge ordered Tuesday that the 27-year-old former middle school teacher be released from house arrest on July 11. She'll serve straight probation instead, which is less restrictive and doesn't require her to wear a monitoring bracelet.

She was sentenced in November 2005 to three years' house arrest and seven years of probation for having sex with a 14-year-old student."

Reports: Naomi Campbell Banned From British Airways

anthony · 8 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Naomi Campbell has been banned from flying British Airways after her arrest last week at Heathrow Airport, according to reports.

The 37-year-old model, who had a spat with a police officer after one of her bags was lost last week in Terminal 5 of the British airport, hoped the dispute with the airline could be resolved "amicably," Reuters reported.

British Airways declined to comment on Campbell's case, but according to Reuters said: "all incidents of abuse against passengers or staff are taken extremely seriously by BA and will not be tolerated. We deal with cases on an individual basis and will take whatever action we feel is necessary."'

Fox: Circumcision as 'cleanliness' option debunked

anthony · 8 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

WARNING: Some material could be considered offensive by some

Excerpt:

'4. Being uncircumcised is unhygienic.

For decades, parents in the U.S. have been circumcising their infant sons in the name of “cleanliness.” Only recently have parents started to second-guess the idea that having a foreskin is unhygienic. As research has shown, as long as the foreskin is retracted during bathing, uncircumcised males are no more likely than circumcised males to develop problems like inflammation, phimosis (a condition where the foreskin cannot be fully retracted from the head of the penis), or adhesions.'

NAACP Wants Probe Of "Barbie Bandits" Case

anthony · 8 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The head of the Georgia NAACP called for the state to investigate the sentences given in the so-called "Barbie bandits" bank theft case, saying the two white defendants got less prison time than two black men.

Edward DuBose said Monday he will ask state Attorney General Thurbert Baker to look into the case.'

Woman took out £4,500 home improvement loan to pay for a hitman to kill husband

AngryMan · 9 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman took out a £4,500 home improvement loan to pay for a hitman to kill her husband.

Zoe Kenealy was given the cash by a finance firm after claiming she wanted to install a new bathroom.

In fact, she had recruited her lover Lee Waite - who lived next door - to arrange her husband Timothy's murder for £10,000.'

"How to Give a Man Hug"

Matt · 9 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

LMAO!

Video here. Enjoy! I have a feeling this is America's next "viral video".

Mom Kills Daughter Because She Thought She Was Possessed By a Demon

anthony · 9 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"An Illinois mother told police she fatally stabbed her daughter because the 6-year-old was possessed by a demon.

Nelly Vasquez-Salazar, 25, who claims her daughter, Evelyn, attacked her, was charged with two counts of first-degree murder in her death, myFOXChicago reported.

A judge set a $5 million bail for Vasquez-Salazar, who says her daughter recently began sleepwalking."

Teen Girls Killed in Wreck After Attempting to Rob Cab Driver

Matt · 9 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'LOS ANGELES — Two teenage girls involved in a botched robbery attempt died when the taxi they were in crashed during a high-speed chase after one teen slashed the cab driver's face, Los Angeles police said.
...
The two 17-year-old girls had flagged down the cab early Tuesday and asked to be taken to a nearby housing project, where one girl said her boyfriend would come and pay the fare, police said.

Instead, a man shoved a handgun through the taxi window...
...
"One of the females pulled out a box cutter and began cutting the taxi cab driver, and that's what caused him to crash," Officer April Harding said.
...
Hector Jasso and Daniel Martinez, both 20, were arrested for investigation of murder because the girls' deaths occurred during the alleged commission of a crime, Lee said. Both were being held without bail. The third occupant of the car was released.

Bayer to donate $10 to prostate cancer research for every MLB strikeout

anthony · 9 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Major league pitchers will soon have added incentive to strike out batters.

Drugmaker Bayer AG will announce plans Wednesday to donate $10 to prostate cancer research for every strikeout during the regular season this year.

Major League Baseball estimates the four-year partnership could add up to a little more than $300,000 per year. There were 32,189 strikeouts during the regular season in 2007, according to the Elias Sports Bureau.

Bayer, based in Leverkusen, Germany, will give an additional $1 million to the Prostate Cancer Foundation if a pitcher sets a new record by striking out 21 batters in a game."

American Airlines STILL has woman-only subsite - tell them what you think

Matt · 9 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

MANN veterans will I hope remember this story, published almost a year ago today. Well, American Airlines is STILL publicizing woman-only special services at http://www.aa.com/women.

Today, AA had to cancel 1,000+ flights to check the wiring on their planes, leaving huge numbers of travelers stranded or scrambling for alternate transportation. This is, as they say, bad press. Does AA really need to be exacerbating their customer-relations problems by continuing to vend out a set of services and discounts that excludes half of the human population (and probably a majority of their customers) because of one indelible trait? No.

Personally, this issue really gets under my skin. AA is a common carrier that is blatantly saying "We like having women on our planes so much we'll give them discounts to fly on them!" Do they do this for any other group of people typified by a born characteristic, such as skin color, eye color, etc.? No, they don't. Men as a group can be gleefully discriminated against-- not by denying services explicitly to us but by granting special treatment to everyone but us. Same old song and dance, anyway you slice it, men are the 'bad smell' in the room, or in this case, main cabin; they don't mind men flying planes, servicing planes, managing planes, it's just that well, they rather like the nice perfumy smell of ladies about, and so... well, you understand, right?

No, I don't.

What's funny ("funny"?) about this is that most people on the Bd. of Dirs. of AA are men! Men once again screwing over men... just lovely.

Contact information for American Airlines is as follows:

Customer service web-mail form here. (Update 4-10-08 9:30 AM ET: It seems the webmail form is not loading. Perhaps between the irate passengers and us, they decided to take it down. No matter, we still have their direct e-mail addresses and fax number. Don't let a little thing like an inaccessible web page stop you from exercising your First Amendment rights!)

Bd. of Directors listed here. The Chmn and CEO is Mr. Gerard J. Arpey whose bio is here. I think he should hear about this matter directly, don't you? Contact him at gerard.arpey-at-aa.com and be sure to cc Investor.Relations-at-aa.com and customer.relations-at-aa.com.

Fax number: (817) 967-4162

If you prefer phone, here are a few ways to call in:
(817) 963-1234
(817) 967-2000
(800) 433-7300
Dial 00, then say "yes" when asked about speaking to an agent.

AA's listed investor relations number is 817-931-3423. Will YOU be buying AA stock any time soon?

And finally, snail mail:

AMR Corporation - Investor Relations
MD 5651
P.O. Box 619616
Dallas/Fort Worth Airport, Texas 75261-9616

American Airlines Customer Relations

P.O. Box 619612 MD 2400
DFW Airport, TX 75261-9612

Note that since AA has canceled so many flights today, it is likely their phone lines will be jammed with irate stranded passengers for the next two or three days. That's OK, that is what e-mail is for. And fax machines. And you can always call tomorrow or Friday-- businesses just LOVE getting tons of customer complaints at week's end, especially right after they have had major operational problems! Timing is everything. :)

And remember, these people live in their wallets-- tell them why you don't think their discriminatory policies are good for business and how AA can ill-afford, and the airline business in general, to treat customers in such a blatantly discriminatory fashion. And customer-favoritism is discrimination-- just the shinier side of the "bigotry coin", but the same coin nonetheless.

Officials say student lied about Hispanic attack

patriotsofamerica · 9 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A 13-year-old East Texas girl who claimed Hispanic schoolmates attacked and beat her in response to an anti-illegals sign she made for a history class now has been accused of filing a false report.

The parents of Melanie Bowers, a student at Athens Middle School in Athens, about 70 miles southwest of Dallas, reportedly have apologized to school administrators, according to KTLV-TV in Tyler, Texas."

Girls at a young age know all to well about making false accusations. I wonder what the punishment will be for this girl, if any.

Carey Roberts: Do Female Politicians Represent an 'Ethical and Pure' Force?

anthony · 9 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Hillary Clinton has famously claimed that "Research shows the presence of women raises the standards of ethical behavior and lowers corruption." Ironically it's Mrs. Clinton who has now come under withering criticism as her ethical lapses and make-believe claims become legion.

...

Being the expert of Freudian psychology that she is, Steinem derides men because they "tend to feel they are regressing to childhood when dealing with a powerful woman." Playing the victim for all its worth, Steinem concludes that "Gender is probably the most restricting force in American life."

So as Hillary Clinton tells voters to forgive and forget her Bosnia folktale and as Nancy Pelosi's autocratic regimen reigns, we should recall that despite whatever other virtues they may possess, female politicos are cut from the same frayed ethical cloth as the rest of us mere mortals.'

Girl-On-Girl Fight Trend Growing Online

anthony · 9 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. (For the video report, click "Girl Fight Trend Growing" under the "Related to Story" box.) Excerpt:

'Behavioral experts said girls are the worst offenders for the type of bullying associated with a recent attack described as "animalistic" in which a group of six girls pummeled a classmate for 30 minutes until she passed out.
...
A search for "girl fight in Florida" in YouTube uncovered a series of violent fights in Brevard, Volusia and Orange counties.

Experts classify the beatings as cyber-bullying, saying the girls can continue to torment their victims long after their bruises heal by posting the beatings online for the world to see.

Behavior experts said girls are the worst offenders for this type of bullying, Local 6's Lauren Rowe reported.'

Violet Blue takes on 'feminist porn' concept

Matt · 10 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

For those who don't know about her, Violet Blue may be one of the few syndicated sex-advice columnists who also actually knows how to write. (I can count on one hand the number of such people.) Anyway, she has bravely taken on the concept of "feminist porn", and while some of what she says in this article is propagating negative stereotypes about both sexes, men in particular, she is taking the issue head-on and making some good observations. I doubt either feminists or MRAs will find themselves in full agreement with the article-- good! It keeps things interesting. Excerpt:

'Feminist porn. For many, seeing those words together is like putting together the words "comfortable flight," "lightly scented" and "Bill O'Reilly: journalist." We now have Jet Blue and Virgin America, not everyone can smell your panty liners, and there's no debate about the irony of the last bit — but pretty much everyone wants to know, what the hell are porn and feminism doing in bed together?'

Two young girls are accused of brutally attacking a classmate

anthony · 10 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Two young girls accused of brutally attacking another girl on a playground are too emotionally immature to understand the criminal charges against them and the charges should be dismissed, their attorneys said.

The girls, ages 10 and 11, face aggravated assault and other charges for the attack on another 10-year-old girl at an elementary school playground the evening of April 3. The girls are accused of stomping on the victim and breaking her hip, police said."

Teacher ‘petrified’ after being attacked by Female student

anthony · 10 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Six days after she was sucker punched and beaten in her own Baltimore classroom, high school art teacher Jolita Berry still finds it almost impossible to watch the MySpace video of the attack. And she can’t make herself go back to work.

...

The attack happened last Friday morning in Berry’s classroom in Reginald F. Lewis High School in Baltimore. One of the girls in the class approached the 30-year-old teacher and got nose-to-nose with her and threatened her.'

“I told her, ‘You’re in my personal space, back up. If you hit me, I will defend myself,’ ” Berry said. “Before I knew it, she hit me in the face.”'

On You Tube: O'Reilly Debates Defense Attorney In Regard To Teenage Girl Attack

anthony · 10 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video here.

The female defense attorney compares this incident to a couple of girls fighting on the back of a school bus. She also believes community service is an acceptable punishment.

CNN: "Women rule Texas town"

anthony · 10 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Texas politics and business have long been reputed to operate within a good ol' boy network. There isn't a chance of that in this small Panhandle town where six women now rule.

Postmaster Diane Manuel's somewhat tongue-in-cheek rationale: "We have people skills, and we're a lot better to look at than most guys."

She added, "You know why else women run this town? They're not as cocky."

Chet Boler, who's worked for the town for six years, most recently as its public works director, is sold on McLean's female leadership.

"The women do a lot more investigating than the men did in making an educated decision," he said. "They want to do everything by the book, which is the way it needs to be."'

Child custody cases often suffer from neglect patriotsofamerica · 10 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I found this article from the Rocky Mountain News. I wish more news services would do as this one does. A great article, must read. Excerpt:

'By now, our young man had rented a nice house in a nice neighborhood, a home for the girls, and petitioned for custody. The Judge in his wisdom denied the petition, denied additional time in the summer months, and raised the child support.

In court this mother bragged about the fact that she lives essentially rent free in this house, is on food stamps and LEAP for propane and meets every other need with his child support (the father of the teenager is unknown and she receives no support from the father of the baby) there is another teenage son who lives with his father and spends summers with them, presumably also sharing that one bedroom. She proudly proclaimed that she stays home 24 hrs a day with her children.'

Woman, 55, Charged With Robbing Florida Banks Dressed as Ninja

anthony · 11 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Florida police say they've found their ninja robber, and she is a 55-year-old mother and former nursing assistant.

Betty Hudson was charged Wednesday with armed robbery after police said DNA on a ninja-like mask linked her to two bank robberies in central Florida, MyFOXOrlando.com reported.
...
Hudson already was in jail on earlier robbery charges accusing her of robbing a bank in Gainesville, Fla., using the same disguise, the station reported.'

Update on "Murdering Grannies of Los Angeles" story

Matt · 11 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Remember this one from 2006? The suspects are currently on trial. Video report here.

Second child-sex charge for female teacher

anthony · 12 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman already charged with sexually assaulting a 13-year-old boy now faces a second charge involving a different boy.

Sabrina Marie Simpson, also listed in police records as Sabrina Murphy, was in jail Friday, under bonds totaling $500,000.

...

The new charge stems from claims by an island boy, 14, that Murphy drove him to East Beach and performed at least two sex acts with him, according to the affidavit used to obtain an arrest warrant.

...

In that case, Simpson faces a charge of aggravated sexual assault of a child, which carries a possible prison term of five to 99 years, as well as a fine of up to $10,000.

...

Police said the investigation was ongoing and that more charges could be coming.'

Schoolgirl escapes prosecution after false rape claim, Man wants justice

anthony · 12 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A 14-year-old schoolgirl has escaped being prosecuted after she falsely claimed a man brutally raped her as she walked home from school.

Now the fuming man, Cleveland Kennedy, intends to take out a private prosecution against her after being wrongly labelled a paedophile.
...
After the 'attack', terrified Mr Kennedy was arrested and kept in a special sex offender protection unit in prison on remand for 75 days.

Meanwhile as a 'treat', his accuser was taken abroad on holiday to get over her 'ordeal.' But then she agreed she had made it all up.

However, the CPS ruled the girl should be given a final warning after a police investigation that she had perverted the course of justice, leaving Mr Kennedy furious.

He said: "I am going to prosecute her. She should have been prosecuted. I still want her prosecuted. And I want compensation and an apology from the Chief Constable.
...
"I faced the possibility of life in prison for something I did not do. It was a terrifying ordeal for me. I was set up - stitched up."'

Australia: Female Politician Suggests Contract To Combat False Rape Accusations

anthony · 12 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A SOUTH Australian politician, a female one at that, suggests women should sign a contract before sex to combat false rape allegations.

...

Ms Bressington says sex contracts may be necessary to protect men if proposed new laws are passed in her state.

On ABC radio last week she said: "This Bill makes men guilty until proven innocent and they will have no defence."

...

She said these contracts could also contain personal details, such as the woman's address and licence number, as well as her marital status and whether she has children.

...

This is the silliest piece of legislation I have encountered. Ms Bressington's suggestion misses the point that women are the vulnerable ones here.'

For Little Children, Grown-Up Labels As Sexual Harassers

anthony · 12 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The Virginia Department of Education reported that 255 elementary students were suspended last year for offensive sexual touching, or "improper physical contact against a student." In Maryland, 166 elementary school children were suspended last year for sexual harassment, including three preschoolers, 16 kindergartners and 22 first-graders, according to the State Department of Education. Statistics for the District were not available.

In 2006, a kindergartner in Hagerstown, Md., was accused of sexual harassment after pinching a female classmate's buttocks. A 4-year-old in Texas was given an in-school suspension after a teacher's aide accused him of sexual harassment for pressing his face into her breasts when he hugged her.

Ted Feinberg, assistant director of the National Association of School Psychologists in Bethesda, said he had never come across a case of sexual harassment in elementary school in his three decades in the schools. To label somebody a sexual harasser at 6 "doesn't make sense to me," he said. "Kids can be exploratory in behavior, they can mimic what they see on TV."

How do you repay a man for a crime he didn't commit?

anthony · 12 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Florida is among 28 states that have no compensation system for the wrongfully imprisoned. "If you're a convicted felon, when you finish your sentence they give you $100 cash and a bus ticket when you leave prison," said Michael Olenick, one of Crotzer's attorneys. "But if you've been wrongly convicted and they let you out, you don't get $100 or the bus ticket."

It's up to wronged individuals to lobby the Legislature for compensation, an inconsistent and maddening process. Last year, the Senate didn't take up Crotzer's claims bill. So far, only one of Florida's nine DNA-exonerated inmates, Wilton Dedge, has gotten a claims bill passed ($2 million in 2005).

A less capricious system could soon arrive, with the Legislature considering a broader bill (HB1025) that would set an automatic process for the wrongfully convicted. It would cap payment at $50,000 per year of imprisonment or $2 million."

Listen To Kim Gandy Discuss The Wage Gap Myth

anthony · 12 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Show page here. It's the third segment down, "Women and the Workforce".

"For decades, women made less money than men, even as they began to make up a bigger part of the workforce. These days, there's debate about whether that wage gap still exists, with some experts arguing that young women in big cities now make more than their male counterparts. But others say wage disparities are merely more insidious than in the past. Join Kojo as we look at wages, the work-life balance, and other issues confronting women in the modern workplace."

Policeman sues woman, says her claims of sex, drugs were false

anthony · 12 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A St. Louis police officer sued a woman on Friday who he says falsely accused him of having sex and doing drugs at a restaurant where he was working a second job as security officer

Michael Haman, 44, a patrol officer in the department's 2nd District, says a St. Louis police internal affairs investigation cleared him of the accusation.

Now he seeks $75,000 from Cassandra Harris, 27, of St. Louis. Harris could not be reached for comment Friday. She has not been charged with a crime in connection with any accusation.

...

Haman works security at Johnny Gitto's restaurant, 6997 Chippewa Street. The night of Feb. 26, Harris was an unruly customer whom he escorted from the premises, the suit says.

She called 911 later to report Haman was having sex and doing drugs in the restroom, touching off an internal investigation that left Haman feeling humiliated, the suit says.'

NY court: man must pay support for ex-wife's sperm-donor baby

Matt · 12 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. It seems in New York that despite whatever legal agreements signed and laws passed to moderate the abuse of men (what few there may be) in the context of reproduction, all that matters is that the state find a way to make sure baby-mama doesn't apply for welfare benefits. But if this man is the actual legal father of the child, despite him not being the "biological father" (and the required legal agreement not having been executed prior to her getting inseminated), shouldn't he also be eligible for joint custody-- or even try to get it? Not that it would matter. What happened here is that baby-mama wanted to have a kid and wanted to be sure her estranged soon-to-be-ex-husband got stuck with the bill. And, it worked. You go, girl!

Excerpt:

'ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) -- An upstate New York man is the legal father and must pay child support for the baby his ex-wife conceived through artificial insemination with another man's sperm near the end of their marriage, an appeals court ruled Friday.
...
The justices cited "a presumption of consent" by husbands and "the compelling public policy of protecting children" conceived through artificial insemination.

...
The couple were married in 1995, had two children, and he had a vasectomy. In 2004, Laura WW. became pregnant through insemination at a doctor's office. A few months later, the couple separated.
...
They also rejected the man's argument that he wasn't legally obligated since he had not signed the consent form specified under state Domestic Relations Law for authorizing his wife's insemination and claiming paternity.
...
"This common-law rule is shared by numerous jurisdictions which have held, even in the absence of statutorily required written consent, that 'the best interests of children and society are served by recognizing that parental responsibility may be imposed based on conduct evincing actual consent to the artificial insemination procedure.'"

Are you a man? Do you have eyes? Well then Maine may not be a state you should go to

ItsDan · 12 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

Apparently if some hyperprotective parent thinks you're looking at their kids, it's about to become a felony in Maine. Excerpt:

'Under the bill, if someone is arrested for viewing children in a public place, it would be a Class D felony if the child is between 12 to 14 years old and a Class C felony if the child is under 12, according to Alexander.

Hill said she believes the move was necessary to correct what she called a "loophole" in the state's criminal law statutes.'

Police: New York City Teacher Arrested After Biting Student, 11, at Elementary School

anthony · 13 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'NEW YORK — Police say they have arrested a Bronx teacher after she bit an 11-year-old student on the shoulder at the child's elementary school.

Police say the 44-year-old teacher is charged with third-degree assault and endangering the welfare of a child. Both are misdemeanors.
...
A spokeswoman for the Department of Education says the teacher will be reassigned away from the school and students, pending the outcome of the case.'

Dr. Phil Show Bails Out Teen Charged in Vicious YouTube Attack

anthony · 13 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'As Mercades Nichols, one of the girls charged in the videotaped beating of a Polk County teen, left jail Friday night, a representative from the Dr. Phil show tried to block the Tampa media from getting shots and asking questions. He keeps repeating 'we have exclusivity!' and directs the family not to answer any questions. Dr. Phil's show put up bail money for Nichols' release.'

RADAR ALERT: Family Law Advocates Need to Counter DV Falsehoods

Matt · 14 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Department of Justice statistics show domestic violence (DV) in married, intact couples is only 2%. So why do the public and state legislators believe that partner violence is out of control?

Each year the federal government bankrolls the domestic violence industry to the tune of $1 billion. That money is authorized by the Violence Against Woman Act (VAWA) and other laws.

Much of that money is awarded to state domestic violence coalitions. In at least three cases – New Hampshire, Maine, and West Virginia – these coalitions have denied membership to organizations that proposed to provide domestic violence services to male victims of domestic violence in spite of Section 40002(b)(8) of VAWA 2005 which states, "Nothing in this title shall be construed to prohibit male victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking from receiving benefits and services under this title".

State DV coalitions often sponsor biased training programs to legislators, judges, and the public, falsely claiming that domestic violence is "overwhelmingly" perpetrated by men. (For examples, see RADAR's Special Report, "Education for Injustice" (.pdf file)

In addition, state DV coalitions have become lobbying organizations. In many states they have successfully pressured legislators to weaken protective order standards and enact all-encompassing definitions of DV. They have also pushed state legislatures to adopt mandatory arrest polices, no-drop prosecution, and primary aggressor laws.

Federally-subsidized state DV advocates have used the domestic violence issue to defeat family law reforms, as well:

- North Dakota's shared parenting initiative in 2006
- West Virginia's shared parenting bill in 2008
- New Hampshire's mutual consent divorce bill in 2008
- Virginia's bill that would have required evidence and a separate finding to restrict a parent's access to a child in a spousal protective order in 2008

2008 did see one successful attempt to restore fairness and balance to family law. A West Virginia bill was proposed to impose criminal penalties for false accusations of DV and child abuse. The West Virginia bill was recently signed into law, albeit somewhat watered-down from the original version.

It has become clear that family law reform will not succeed until the half-truths and falsehoods of intimate partner violence are addressed.

We encourage persons concerned about family law reform to work together to assure the truth of domestic violence gets out. RADAR has developed a flyer, "It's Time to Tell the Truth about Domestic Violence"(.pdf file). We encourage persons to share this information with legislators and others in your state, so family law reform becomes a reality.

++

Date of RADAR Release: April 14, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

"No way! Girls don't do that kind of thing!"

Matt · 14 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Title IX meets religious vandalism... Report here. Excerpt:

'YORKTOWN, N.Y. (CBS) — A quiet summer time synagogue nestled in the woods along Lake Mohegan has suffered extensive damage from vandals. Walls have been defaced with slogans, a torah scroll was left torn and twisted on the floor, an antique menorah was ripped from its stand, and swastikas were scrawled on the walls.
...
Police quickly apprehended three suspects - teenage girls for the vandalism.

Barbara Nokaj, 18, Michelle Bushell, 17, and a 15-year-old whose name was withheld because she is a minor.'

(Male) Horomones 'may fuel market crises'

MJE · 15 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Hormone surges among City traders could be partly responsible for driving 'boom and bust' economics, say researchers.

The Cambridge study measured testosterone levels in a small group of male City of London traders at both 11am and 4pm, and matched these to the levels of profit or loss recorded for that day.
...
'At times like these, economics has to consider the physiology of investors, not just their rationality.'"

Wait. So men are now also responsible for economic crises? How good to know.

They don't come out and say, "More women should be hired to minimize the risk posed by men," but it's certainly implied. And even a quick glance at the article makes clear the very unscientific manner in which this "research" was carried out.

Glenn Sacks in 'Advertising Age': Men Are Not Idiots

anthony · 15 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"The way the advertising industry portrays men has drawn increasing scrutiny in both the trade press and the mainstream media. Defenders of the status quo -- in which men are depicted as irresponsible fathers and lazy, foolish husbands -- are starting to feel outnumbered. It's an understandable feeling.
...
Defenders of the advertising status quo generally put forth the following arguments: Males are "privileged" and "it's men's turn," so it's OK to portray them this way, and that men simply don't care how they're portrayed. Both of these arguments are highly questionable.

Young males certainly aren't privileged. The vast majority of learning-disabled students are boys, and boys are four times as likely as girls to receive diagnoses of attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder. Girls get better grades than boys and are much more likely than boys to graduate high school and enter college. According to the National Center for Education Statistics, women earn 60% of all bachelor's degrees and 60% of all master's degrees."

Do boys and girls learn better apart? Two takes

anthony · 15 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Girls and boys learn differently, so they should have an option to be taught separately.
...
Both genders are more likely to take courses they might not have traditionally taken.
...
Boys or girls can get less of a quality education if they don't have access to the same resources.
...
Research hasn't proved an academic benefit."

Contrast the preceding to this article:

"Parents, please note -- co-educational schools are better as the presence of girls in the classes "calm" boys and improve their academic performance as well, a new study has revealed.

A higher percentage of girls also lowers the amount of classroom disruption and fosters a better relationship between students and their teachers, the researchers in Israel have found in their study.
...
In fact, the study found that primary school classrooms with a female majority showed increased academic success for both boys and girls, along with a notable improvement in subjects like Science and Mathematics."

Israel Fathers Child Custody Rights Groups Intensify Demonstrations

anthony · 15 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Fathers and children rights custody groups in Israel protesting gender bias discrimination in court custody cases have intensified their public demonstrations.

Last week hundreds of divorced and single fathers met in Tel Aviv to demand joint and or equal custody in a non-violent protest covered by both Israel TV and several local newspapers. The fathers are demanding that the Israel Knesset, Israel family court judges and Israel child welfare departments adopt reforms in the existing Israel Family Custodian Act of 1962 which states that all children under the age of six will automatically have custody under their mother, unless the mother is violent, drug abuser or negligent.

Fathers 4 Justice Israel hijacked all media attention at the Ra'anana annual marathon race this past weekend, with both fathers and their children lining up at the starting line of the Ra'anana run with signs stating: "Children Need Fathers, Not Visitors".'

Opinion: "Senator Obama didn't say that"

anthony · 15 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Its great to see a student publication acknowledge fathers' rights. Excerpt:

"After thanking the group for their work and making reference to his campaign, Obama told the group, “I think about my own two daughters, Sasha and Malia; and, sometimes it makes me stop and it makes me wonder, ‘What kind of America will our daughters grow up in? What kind of America will our daughters grow up in? Will our daughters grow up with the same opportunities as our sons? Will our daughters have the same rights, the same dreams and the same freedoms to pursue their own version of happiness?’”

Frankly, the idea that sons have any rights-- much less equal rights-- in the abortion decision is to live in the archaic notions about the role of a father in the family. Sons and, therefore, fathers, have no rights or protections regarding the decision to abort a child."

Bowling Green Student Paper: Anti-Feminist "Bake Sale" stirs controversy

anthony · 15 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"There was no shortage of cookies or controversy yesterday at the College Republican's "Anti-Feminist Bake Sale."

The event was met by a crowd of protesters who accused the Republicans of misrepresenting the facts about feminism.

As part of Conservative Week, the College Republicans held their bake sale on the front steps of the Education Building, selling cookies, brownies and other treats for 50 cents each.

Members of the club also handed out a sheet of quotes, which they labeled "The Radical Feminist Agenda."

Some of the quotes included:

"All men are rapists, and that's all they are," said by author Marilyn French.

Other quotes compared marriage to slavery, and life as a suburban housewife to life in a concentration camp."

--

Ed. note: There is more than one Bowling Green University/College. The one whose student paper this story references is in Ohio; its web site is here.

A Report Card on the Women’s Rights Movement

anthony · 15 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"The women’s rights movement has now proven to be the most destructive force on the face of the earth. Before 1920, feminists made promises and based their arguments on things for which they have never been held accountable, nor produced. To the contrary, their actions have brought the opposite results. Let us therefore grade feminism and see how it has fared..."

Gender debate revived at Harvard

anthony · 15 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The controversy sparked by former Harvard president Lawrence H. Summers in 2005 when he questioned women's "intrinsic aptitude" for science may be over, but the issue continues to provoke lively debate on campus. more stories like this

Yesterday afternoon, Rosalind Chait Barnett of Brandeis University and Steven E. Rhoads of the University of Virginia offered students vastly different takes on women's scientific prowess and why they make the professional choices they do, during a seminar titled "What Larry Summers and Nancy Hopkins Didn't Say: Women in Science."'

Idaho’s laws make prosecuting rape difficult from all perspectives

anthony · 15 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'“Once a citizen is labeled a sex offender, it’s the same as a civil death penalty,” he said. “We’ve made the penalties so severe that offenders now are disillusioned to admit wrongdoing, and as a result we’re having many more trials and many more acquittals.”

He believes that the laws have consistently grown in favor of the accuser for the past 20 years. One thing that makes rape charges hard to defend against is the rape shield law. Under this law, the sexual history of the accuser is not allowed to be used in the defense of the accused, unless the accuser has made false allegations of sex crimes in the past, the accused believes that someone else was the source of semen, the accused has a history of sexual behavior with the accuser or if the accuser was engaging in sexual behavior with other parties at the time of the alleged attack.'

Yet another way to get at those darned Deadbeat Dads' money wls · 15 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. I'm surprised they were not able to do so already. The next goal will be able to literally take the shirt of their backs. Excerpt:

'For the first time, Maine has the authority to seize state and federal income tax refunds for deadbeat parents who still owe child support for children over 18 - even if that child is now 50.

Economic stimulus checks are up for grabs, too.'

Study: Divorce, unwed parenting costs billions

anthony · 15 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Divorce and out-of-wedlock childbearing cost U.S. taxpayers more than $112 billion a year, according to a study commissioned by four groups advocating more government action to bolster marriages.

Sponsors say the study is the first of its kind and hope it will prompt lawmakers to invest more money in programs aimed at strengthening marriages. Two experts not connected to the study said such programs are of dubious merit and suggested that other investments -- notably job creation -- would be more effective in aiding all types of needy families.

"We're now nearing 40 percent of kids in America born out of wedlock," she said. "I can't fathom that those marriage programs, even with increased investment, are going to reduce that."

Blankenhorn said it was "fair criticism" to note that the study made multiple references to marriage-strengthening programs while not proposing other strategies for reducing the cost of family fragmentation.'

Daily Mail: Why men should NEVER be at the birth of their child

mens_issues · 15 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This Michel Odent guy is a real jerk. Here is his anti-male and anti-father diatriabe.

Unfortunately, there aren't any angry emoticons to attach to this message.

Steve

911 Call Released in YouTube Beating of Florida Teen

anthony · 16 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A newly released 911 call recounts the aftermath of the videotaped beating of a central Florida teen. The 16-year-old victim tells the 911 operator: "I got jumped."

The girl called from a friend's house in Lakeland after the March 30 beating. The friend's mother got on the phone and told the operator: "She's got blood in her mouth a big old knot on her left eye, and we think she's got a tooth broke."

Female Teacher arrested again on sex charges

anthony · 16 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Hillsborough County detectives say a teacher has been arrested for a second time on charges she had sex with another student.

This time, investigators say 28-year-old Stephanie Ragusa allegedly had sex with a 15-year-old student at Davidsen Middle School where she was a teacher, and they say the pair had at least 20 encounters over the course of several months.

In all, detectives believe Ragusa and the 15-year-old boy had sex more than 20 times between February 2007 and March 2008. They also say Ragusa gave the boy condoms and alcohol over the course of the relationship.

Last month, Ragusa was charged with having a sexual relationship with a 14-year-old Davidsen Middle School student. She was arrested on March 13, and deputies say in that case she had a number of different encounters with the boy between January 2007 and March 2007."

MSN: Wife and Husband's "Bills of Rights"

Matt · 16 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Wife's

Husband's

Compare and contrast... the list for husbands asks for small ways in which he is "allowed" to be alive and just be himself without getting whacked. The wife's list is the ways in which she is allowed to curtail his life and decide how he is to behave toward her.

Reminds me of some of those "duties of the master/slave" lists that have popped up throughout history.

SueEasy has circumcision entry

Matt · 16 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I just found out about this web site. One of the actions is a class-action suit over circumcision.

Successful or not, it will be a good way to show that there are many of us who are not at all happy about it and we are not staying silent. The case looks like it has been started by a user 'gburlin'. gburlin, if you're out there, please post in comments.

'Girls risk falling behind in the classroom'

Anonymous · 16 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Girls risk falling behind in the classroom because government policies focus on the education standards of boys, a report claims.

A "significant proportion" of girls are struggling to read but many are not getting enough help, it is claimed...

...A study by the National Literacy Trust, a reading charity, says many young girls were "in danger of being overlooked by current policy drives"."

"Divorce by Youtube"

Matt · 16 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Watch the video-- see how the two desk reporters handle the issue. Excerpt:

'NEW YORK -- A New York woman involved in a divorce battle spilled secrets about her husband, his family and their intimate life in a "scary, new step" in user generated content, attorneys said.

Tricia Walsh-Smith can be watched on YouTube lashing out at her husband, Broadway executive Philip Smith, in a teary and furious clip that has been viewed more than 150,000 times.
...
Other divorce experts said the video will likely come back to haunt her. They said the clip probably won't help her in front of a judge.'

The video itself? here.

Soon -- No More Daddies Needed

Roy · 16 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A scientific technique that could allow same-sex couples to create their own biological child in a laboratory should be allowed under law, a group of influential scientists said on Monday.

The experts, all international leaders in embryology research, called on ministers not to restrict such "important" research.

The laboratory creation of eggs and sperm from other cells could offer hope to thousands of people unable to have children of their own.

Although the creation of both sperm and eggs in a laboratory is still at an early stage, the Hinxton group, made up of 40 world-renowned experts, estimates that the procedure could be used to create human foetuses within 15 years.'

Update: Feminist thought police at Colorado College

el cid · 16 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Two men at Colorado College satirized a feminist rag and ended up in a "star chamber"-like inquiry.

The editor of the Rocky Mountain News took CC to task.

The director of the CC Feminist and Gender Studies Program responds that feminists just want a dialogue .

The RMN editor responds to her here.

Excerpt from original editorial:

"Chris Robinson is a one-man free-speech movement. Colorado College, where Robinson is a senior majoring in political science, believes free speech on certain topics is worrisome and must be corralled. So its thought police subjected Robinson and a fellow student (who has chosen to remain anonymous) to an inquisition last month after they published a parody of a campus feminist flier known as The Monthly Rag."

Some good comments and you can add your own.

Update: Elderly Women Guilty In Homeless Murders

anthony · 17 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Two elderly women accused of killing two homeless men to collect millions of dollars in insurance payouts were convicted Wednesday of conspiracy to murder, and one of them was convicted of the murders themselves. Excerpt:

'Prosecutors said the women collected $2.8 million from insurance policies on the lives of two homeless men who were killed in staged hit-and-runs.

Golay's convictions carry potential sentences of life in prison without possibility of parole. The single conspiracy count returned against Rutterschmidt carries a sentence of 25 years to life.

...

In his closing argument, Deputy District Attorney Bobby Grace called the women "the worst of the worst."

"They didn't need this money. They weren't poor and destitute. They went out of their way to target men who had nothing," the prosecutor said."'

"She Stole My Voice" - Ground-breaking documentary on lesbian rape

Matt · 17 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This new documentary, She Stole My Voice, is utterly ground-breaking. I've seen it so I can say that with a clear conscience. It takes on femnist misandry and distortions head-on and exposes a reality that people of both sexes are oblivious to or in denial of.

Warning to viewers, it has some graphic parts. This is a serious documentary and it should be referred to whenever someone tries to throw the old "rape is only or primarily a crime against women done by men" line at you. The producers are both women and they have interviews with women in rape crisis centers as well, stating that this problem is real and is more common than anyone expects. It also refers to the coercion some women experience by staff and/or other women living there in "women's shelters" to have sex with them, and if they don't-- there's the door.

For certain many of your own preconceptions will get challenged by it, too. One of the facts that emerges is that 30% of lesbians have been sexually assaulted by other women. And is the MSM on this? No. Is mainstream feminism on it? No, in fact, they are in denial since it fails to buttress their fundamental set of lies. In short-- it's must-see not just for MRAs but also feminists, people involved in violence abatement, therapists, and pretty much anyone else. Victims of this class of rape would I am sure take great solace in seeing the truth come out, too.

A note: The documentary has taken some criticism not for what it is saying but how it is saying it. Some people have said that at times it seems unnecessarily graphic to the point of prurience. While I can see this criticism being justified when looking at it through the eyes of someone who thinks a woman cannot rape or assault another woman, then sure, any such scene would look that way. But when you look at without these blinders on, the scenes are quite disturbing and indeed, ought to be. The truth ain't pretty, but as MRAs, we already know this.

Predictably, previews that have been released are on Youtube, one here. (Seems everything is on Youtube these days.) Read the comments, very telling.

DNA Samples will now be collected at the federal level from all those who are arrested tac0965 · 17 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Thanks to VAWA, Federal officials will start collecting DNA samples from all those arrested for federal crimes (including arrests for tax evasion). Those not charged and those who are acquitted "may" be able to have the samples deleted from the database; however, they can only request it. Per Federal regulations, samples cannot be disclosed to third parties such as insurance companies and hospitals (however, doing so is only a misdemeanor).

Yes, gents, since all of us are potential rapists, we must all have our genetic information recorded in a database for when we do rape someone. Excerpt:

'The U.S. government will soon begin collecting DNA samples from all citizens arrested in connection with any federal crime and from many immigrants detained by federal authorities, adding genetic identifiers from more than 1 million individuals a year to the swiftly growing federal law enforcement DNA database.

The policy will substantially expand the current practice of routinely collecting DNA samples from only those convicted of federal crimes, and it will build on a growing policy among states to collect DNA from many people who are arrested. Thirteen states do so now and turn their data over to the federal government.
...
The database expansion was authorized by Congress as an amendment to the Violence Against Women Act and was billed primarily as a way to track down serial rapists, murderers and other offenders. "We know for a fact that the proposed regulations will save the lives of many innocent people and will prevent devastating crimes," said Sen. Jon Kyl (R-Ariz.), a sponsor of the legislation. "These regulations are long overdue -- we should have done this 10 years ago."'

Indoctrinate U's NYC premiere wrap-up report

Matt · 18 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via e-mail:

'There have been so many exciting developments lately!

* "INDOCTRINATE U" HAD ITS NEW YORK CITY DEBUT on Monday night, playing to a capacity crowd at the Director's Guild of America theater in midtown Manhattan. (See below for some words from the director following the wildly successful NYC premiere.)

* THE DVD IS NOW AVAILABLE (FINALLY!) - At long last, the much-requested DVD can now be yours. Visit the "Indoctrinate U" online store.

* THERE ARE MORE SCREENINGS COMING UP AT CAMPUSES all over the country. For the most up-to-date information on future screenings, go to: http://indoctrinate-u.com/pages/screenings.html'

Police: Indiana girls beat 12-year-old, posted video online

anthony · 19 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A group of southern Indiana middle school girls videotaped the beating of a 12-year-old schoolmate and posted it on the Internet in an attack that authorities believe was inspired by a similar one in Florida, police said.

No charges have been filed and police said they have not yet interviewed all the girls, ages 12-14, who are students at Clarksville Middle School. The girls' identities were not released because they are juveniles.

The victim, who was treated for cuts and bruises at a hospital, was the daughter of a police officer, said Police Chief Dwight Ingle.'

The War on Boys starting now at birth

Matt · 20 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

With MSN leading the charge, of course. Read the crap here. Excerpt:

'Depression is one of the most common postpartum medical problems that new moms face. New research suggests that the risk is even higher for those who give birth to boys.

Most moms will readily admit that rambunctious little boys are a bit more challenging to parent than little girls, who are generally quieter and less physically active. But the impacts of gender on parenting don't necessarily start once the little ones start toddling.

New research out of France found that women who gave birth to boys were significantly more likely to suffer from severe postpartum depression than women who gave birth to girls. The findings weren't limited to severe depression: Women who gave birth to boys were also much more likely to report a lower quality of life than women who gave birth to girls.'

Working up the case for gender-selection "for the good of the baby and the mother". Meanwhile the preference for boys in India and China will remain denounced as pro-female selection gets built up over here in the supposedly more-enlightened West. The difference? Boys bad, girls good. Geez, ought to be obvious by now, right?

Maryland: Definition of rape widened

Matt · 20 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The state's highest court ruled yesterday that a man can be charged with rape if he ignores a woman's calls to stop - even if she had previously consented to sex.

With this expansion of the legal definition of rape, Maryland joins seven other states whose courts have determined that a woman can revoke her consent after intercourse begins.

...

All seven judges agreed that a woman has the right to revoke consent, but reached that conclusion in different ways. Yesterday's ruling returns the 2004 rape case of Maouloud Baby to Montgomery County for a new trial.

...

The victim testified in Montgomery County court that she agreed to sex "as long as he stops when I tell him to." As he began, she told him to stop because he was hurting her, but he kept going for five or 10 seconds, she said.

...

Mel Feit, director of the National Center for Men, based in Long Island, N.Y., said the facts of Baby's case have been lost in the larger argument about a woman's right to say no.

"The courts got it wrong then, and they are getting it wrong now," said Feit, who has followed the Maryland case. "There is no way that anyone is ever going to convince me that a five-second delay is first-degree rape."'

New York Bachelors seeking to Become Single Dads

Anonymous · 21 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"As a surge in surrogate births sweeps the country - up 28 percent in the past five years - baby-loving city bachelors are getting into the act, finding egg donors, providing sperm and paying surrogates to give birth to their offspring.

James Shrybman, a surrogacy lawyer in Dickerson, Md., advised about 10 bachelors last year. Such clients were once "non-existent," he said.

New Jersey lawyer Melissa Brisman has helped at least five city men through the process in the past year."

Bank offers refunds in false rape case

anthony · 21 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Peoples Bank is offering a refund to people who donated to a fund for the woman who falsely claimed she was abducted and raped while running at Little Squalicum Beach last month.

Bellingham Police announced Wednesday that the woman fabricated the story.

The Squalicum Beach Runner's Fund was established after the alleged March 2 incident by community members who wanted to supplement state victim assistance funds to help the woman cover her lost wages, living expenses and other costs associated with surviving the supposed attack."

Student's nightmare over false rape claim

anthony · 21 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A man's life was left in tatters by a woman who falsely cried rape.

Louise Ndikum spun a 10-month tissue of lies which ended with innocent Alexesi Chua having to appear in court.

He broke down in the witness box as he was forced to give evidence even though the single mum had admitted perverting the course of justice.

Ndikum –originally told police she had been raped in the street by a stranger. And when confronted by detectives she continued to lie – this time claiming she had been raped by a man in his house.

Ndikum admitted lying to police but maintained her charade until the bitter end at Portsmouth Crown Court."

"Time to stop man bashing"

anthony · 21 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Letter published here. Excerpt:

"The message is clear - men have improved a little, but still don't do enough, and women are still getting a raw deal.

This is an unfair distortion because it disregards the fact that men are usually their family's primary breadwinners, and often make great sacrifices in that role.
...
In the home, men generally do the more dangerous work such as fixing the broken roof tiles or fixing the plumbing, yet this is never included in the definition of housework - why?

Because it would reflect the reality that men do perform a lot more than the media wants to pretend we do - in order to please certain hostile groups with a clear agenda to demonise one sex in preference of the other. This man bashing is known as misandry.

This is the male variant of misogyny - a hatred of men, and is perpetuated in part by the media with its endless adverts filled with dumb, stupid husbands and reports which forget' to include various factors. It is high time men stood up for themselves and demanded to be treated fairly by the media."

Advertising Age's Jonah Bloom: Peddler of organized misandry

anthony · 21 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"Jonah Bloom, the editor of Advertising Age recently took an outrageous position backing advertising that either severely denigrates men, pictures them as subjects for sexual or social abuse, or portrays them as fools in a world of wonderful women.

In his article "When It Comes to Whining About Ads, Father Knows Best", Bloom makes the grave mistake pontificating there is something wrong with real live men who object to men being generically treated like manure by writers unable find one ounce of respect for anything other than women. Perhaps Bloom would so ardently support agencies if they crudely portrayed women as brain-dead sex objects, or broad-brushed blacks with Klannish racist insults?

Mr. Bloom has an expensive lesson to learn. It should start by costing him his job. Both racism and sexism are unacceptable under any circumstances. Since Mr. Bloom has ardently endorsed sexism, Advertisers must call for him to step down."

Namibia: Boys Included in Education Initiative

anthony · 21 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'"We are officially launching an exciting new component of the United States Ambassador's Girls' Scholarship Program by welcoming this first group of boys into the program marking an important step forward in our effort to increase educational opportunities for Namibian children."
...
According to her the programme will over the next year support a total of 200 boys in grades 1 through 7. The boys in this program will receive school uniforms, school supplies, boarding and lodging fees, as well as counseling. "I'm very pleased that we have the opportunity to invest in the education of these bright young boys - who have worked so hard - that we help them succeed in school and move on to the next level of education. Helping girls and boys stay in school and do well in school prepares them to meet life's challenges. It also will help them contribute to economic development and the spread of democratic values in Namibia, and to become a positive influence for future generations," she said.'

Loss of job hits men harder, emotionally and otherwise

anthony · 21 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Picture a scenario where the male breadwinner of a family has lost his job but is so afraid to come clean to his loved ones that he carries on faking his commute to work, complete with business suit, tie and briefcase. It's one that has been imagined in various books and films - such as Falling Down, in which Michael Douglas plays a character who pretends to his mother that he still has a job to go to.

But could you ever imagine a woman behaving in that way? While the gender gap has been bridged in many areas of working life, experts say that when it comes to job losses, women are far better equipped than men to deal with the bitter blow of redundancy. And with forecasts last week predicting that the credit crisis could lead to up to 40,000 job losses in London's financial service sector over the next two years, it's a theory which many could soon find themselves putting to the test.

An international study of male suicides in 22 countries between 1974 and 1988, found that unemployment was a leading factor. Further studies in the UK confirm the links between unemployment, suicide and attempted suicide. The link between suicide and unemployment appears to be particularly strong for young men."

Chores for two: Why men don't pitch in WakeUp · 21 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Chores for two: Why men don't pitch in. From the article:

"The fact that guys, when left to their own devices, rarely rush to offer more toilet-scrubbing and diaper-changing is not in itself surprising. As Martin Luther King Jr. once observed, “We know through painful experience that freedom is never voluntarily given by the oppressor; it must be demanded by the oppressed.”
...
"Yes, dear readers, it’s true: Maintaining some semblance of parity in your marriage requires you to deploy the same kinds of nasty tactics you swore you would never stoop to as a parent but nonetheless found yourself using the minute you actually had a kid. Bribery and punishment work; so do yelling and complaining. Threats are also effective, as long as everyone knows you mean business. With husbands, tender blandishments and nooky are particularly useful, as is the withholding of the aforementioned.
...
...Unfortunately, all too many women are still teaching their children that “woman is the nigger of the world,” as John Lennon and Yoko Ono put it so memorably in a song lyric years ago."

First she is superior, in control, makes the rules and has the right to threaten. Then she complains she is oppressed and compares herself to Martin Luther King, Jr. and uses the "N" word inappropriately. I checked into it, Leslie Bennets, the author, is white.

Lawsuit: Veterans Affairs Has Failed to Prevent Suicides

anthony · 21 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs isn't doing enough to prevent suicide and provide adequate medical care for Americans who have served in the armed forces, a class-action lawsuit that goes to trial this week charges.

The lawsuit, filed in July by two nonprofit groups representing military veterans, accuses the agency of inadequately addressing a "rising tide" of mental health problems, especially post-traumatic stress disorder.

But government lawyers say the VA has been devoting more resources to mental health and making suicide prevention a top priority. They also argue that the courts don't have the authority to tell the department how it should operate.

...

An average of 18 military veterans kill themselves each day, and five of them are under VA care when they commit suicide, according to a December e-mail between top VA officials that was filed as part of the federal lawsuit.

"That failure to provide care is manifesting itself in an epidemic of suicides," the veterans groups wrote in court papers filed Thursday."

Finally, we hear from "the men"

Matt · 21 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. And I thought we'd never see an interview with any of the adult male suspects in this case, much less one that doesn't immediately call for their executions. It does fall short of the highly sympathetic tone interviewers are giving "the mothers" in this whole thing. And predictably, the interview quickly turns to the subject of sex. Excerpt:

'Rodriguez conducted the interview Sunday night with three men whose children were among more than 400 removed by authorities from the sect's compound in a raid earlier this month.

It was the first time since the raid that any male members of the sect spoke with a member of the media.

In the wide-ranging interview, Rodriguez asked, “After all this, can you see why society looks upon you and says, ‘A girl who's younger than 18 shouldn't be married and having sex?’ Has this forced you to reconsider?”'

RADAR ALERT: Tell GW Law School to Investigate Joan Meier's Fabrications

Matt · 22 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Over the past three weeks, a notable public faceoff occurred in the Washington Post.

An editorial (1) by David Levy, Executive Director of the Children's Rights Council, commenting on a recent tragic incident in Maryland, pointed out that child custody battles can incite domestic violence by driving parents "nuts."

The following week the Post ran an opposing editorial (2) by Joan S. Meier, faculty member at George Washington University Law School. The op-ed contains numerous one-sided statements and fabrications about child abuse. She repeatedly uses the phrase "dangerous fathers" and "violent and abusive fathers," without ever mentioning the problem of "violent and abusive mothers."

According to the US Administration for Children and Families:

- Mothers are more than twice as likely as fathers to kill their children: http://www.acf.hhs.gov/programs/cb/pubs/cm06/figure4_2.htm
- Mothers are more than twice as likely as fathers to abuse their children: http://www.acf.hhs.gov/programs/cb/pubs/cm06/figure3_5.htm

Without providing any research evidence, Meier goes on to make the improbable claims that most custody disputes "arise in the context of mothers seeking to end abuse or protect their children" and "mothers have few means of protecting their children from dangerous fathers". Meier's statements represent a serious misrepresentation of a well-known government statistics, and are highly defamatory of fathers.

Meier's falsehoods violate George Washington University's research misconduct policy (3) which states:

"Research misconduct includes, without limitation, fabrication, falsification, or plagiarism in proposing, performing, or reviewing research or in reporting research results. All employees or individuals associated with The George Washington University should report observed, suspected, or apparent misconduct in research to the Associate Vice President for Health Research, Compliance and Technology Transfer."

George Washington University is in a unique position to influence Congress, including the upcoming VAWA renewal. We ask you to take a few moments of your time to contact the two following individuals at George Washington University with a polite note urging GW Law School to take action about the numerous fabrications and misrepresentations by Professor Joan Meier in her April 13 editorial in the Washington Post, as well as her formal articles and law papers:

1. Frederick Lawrence, Dean of the GW Law School: Email: flawrence-at-law.gwu.edu
2. Anne Hirschfeld, Associate Vice President Office of Health and Technology Transfer:
   Email: resanh-at-gwumc.edu

---

1 David Levy's original editorial:
http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2008/04/04/AR2008040402922.html

2 Joan Meier's response:
http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2008/04/11/AR2008041103152.html

3 GW University Research Misconduct Policy: http://my.gwu.edu/files/policies/ResearchMisconductPolicy.pdf

++

Date of RADAR Release: April 21, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Update: Convicted Wife and Murderer of Marine Released

Matt · 22 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Remember this case? She was convicted for murdering her husband, a Marine, with arsenic. Well, they've let her out of jail after the D.A. retroactively dismissed the charges against her, thereby vacating the conviction. Story here. Excerpt:

'Sommer, 34, was first accused of poisoning her Marine husband, Sgt. Todd Sommer, with arsenic in order to cash in on his $250,000 life insurance policy.

...

After jurors heard the scientific evidence and stories about her frolicking with her husband's Marine buddies on the night of his funeral, Sommer was convicted of first-degree murder last year and sentenced to life in prison.

But last Thursday, after Sommer had served 876 days, San Diego County District Attorney Bonnie Dumanis unexpectedly moved to dismiss the murder charges.

...

During the trial, prosecutors presented motive by citing Cynthia Sommer's behavior following his death. They said she used insurance money for breast augmentation surgery and presented evidence of her participation in wet T-shirt contests and intimate relations with some of Todd Sommer's fellow Marines.

In an NBC News report aired during her prison stay, Sommer explained her conduct by saying, "I wanted my husband back and I missed him and I didn't have him and the closest thing I could have were his friends."

...

According to court documents, prosecutors learned last month that some of Todd Sommer's untested tissue samples had been stored at San Diego Naval Medical Center. They were tested this month in Quebec and no arsenic was found and, as a result, contamination in previous tissue samples was possible.

...

"I think the lesson is that the judicial system is flawed," said Sommer, who has four children. "I've seen more than just myself that this has happened to. I've been fortunate enough to be able to be in the spotlight and to be able to have a voice."

...

"What this should end up as is somebody realizing in this case, as it relates to Cindy, the system broke," Bloom said. "What should really end up in this case is to make sure it doesn't happen again."'

Women can influence the sex of their child

Anonymous · 23 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The first evidence that women can influence the sex of their child by what they eat before they become pregnant is published today.

The study, which links higher energy intake around conception to the birth of sons, provides the first explanation of why the number of boy babies is in decline in the west, suggesting it is the result of women consuming low fat foods and skipping breakfast, among other things.

...Dr Mathews says this could explain why over the last 40 years there has been a small but consistent decline, of about one per 1000 births annually, in the proportion of boys being born in industrialised countries, including the UK, the US and Canada.

..."This research may help to explain why in developed countries, where many young women choose to have low calorie diets, the proportion of boys born is falling," says Dr Mathews, adding that there is also a link between higher national incomes and fewer boys."

TMZ: 'New Gladiator Hard to Beat -- Just Ask Her Hubby'

anthony · 23 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Erin Toughill, a new star for "American Gladiators," allegedly beat husband Clark Bevans on their honeymoon. Always a bad sign.

Bevans, who filed a restraining order against Toughill last week, claims Toughill went "insane" with jealously, and accused him of being "a pedophile, sociopath and homosexual." Aside from allegedly beating him on several occasions, Bevans claims Toughill smashed the windshield of his RV. He also says Toughill "bodychecked, hockey style" a trainer at Gold's Gym he had dated years before.'

MSN: "Senate Republicans kill pay disparity bill"

anthony · 24 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Senate Republicans killed legislation Wednesday aimed at removing limits on how long workers can wait before suing their employers for pay discrimination.

Democrats, speaking to key constituencies of women, minorities and swing voters this election year, said they weren't finished trying to pass the bill.

"Women of America: Put your lipstick on, square your shoulders, suit up" and get ready to fight, Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., said moments after the bill's opponents denied supporters the 60 votes needed to proceed to full debate and a vote on passage. "The revolution starts tonight."
...
Democratic presidential rivals Hillary Rodham Clinton and Barack Obama swung through Washington to speak from short, prepared statements in favor of the legislation. It was the first time in months that both candidates spoke on the Senate floor, an indication of the bill's importance to voters the two are fighting for in their ongoing battle for their party's nomination.'

Police: Woman Filed False Rape Report, Could Face Five Years In Prison

anthony · 24 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A Greenwood County woman is facing up to five years in prison after she admitted filing a false police report claiming that she had been raped.

Deputies said that at about 10:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Regina Murray Medlock drove to the rear of the sheriff's department and told a deputy that she had been raped. The deputy said Medlock told him that while she was stopped at a red light, a man climbed into her car, held her at gunpoint, and forced her to drive to the area of a train yard. She said she was forced to undress and was raped three times on the ground outside the car.
...
Both the Greenwood Police Department and the Greenwood County Sheriff's Office charged Medlock with filing a false police report.

In addition to jail time, Medford could be fined up to $1,000 if convicted."

India: Woman kills complaining husband in Jharkhand

anthony · 24 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Ranchi, April 20 (IANS) A woman in Jharkhand killed her husband with an axe after he complained about the stale dinner, police said Sunday. According to the police, Chamni and her husband, Buran Munda, residents of Harbul village located around 25 km from Ranchi, together drank `hadia' (local liquor) Friday night.

She served dinner to her husband, who complained that the food was stale. Irked, Chamni picked up an axe and hacked her husband to death. Her four children witnessed the crime."

Israel: "Who's your daddy?"

anthony · 24 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Whenever the term "single parent" comes to mind many of us automatically assume it means a household run by a woman, a mother. And yes, in Israel – as in many countries around the world, the person heading the single-parent-household is, in many cases, a woman, but many of them are headed by fathers.
...
When mothers petition to have their children removed from their fathers' custody on grounds of violent behavior, mental defect or just an overall negative attitude, we all feel for them; and most of us would like to see the courts remove the untoward father from the presence of his vulnerable children.

But when the shoe is on the other foot – when it is the father who claims the mother is abusive, indifferent or mentally impaired, and wants the court to give him sole custody of his children, then what? He is put through the proverbial ringer and is usually forced to hire a roomful of lawyers to prove his case, and worse – he has to prove that does not prove him to be an unfit father.'

F4J Flag Protest Foiled

anthony · 24 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Police and staff at the Nevis Range ski resort had been on high alert after plans for a protest on Aonach Mor by the Fathers 4 Justice group were leaked to the LN last week, but protesters failed to show up as the Lochaber News went to press yesterday (Wednesday).

A document outlined plans for the stunt which sought to disrupt the gondola system at Nevis Range, with protesters encouraged to conform to a St George and English flag dress code.

The memo alluded to one group member's intention to attempt to paint a flag of St George on the side of Aonach Mor.

The protest appeared to be linked to the English local elections. Founder of Fathers 4 Justice, Matt O'Connor is a candidate in the London Mayoral election, while another leading member of the group is seeking election to the London Assembly."

Christina Hoff Sommers Sparks Lively Discussion at Men's College

anthony · 24 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Feminist critic Dr. Christina Hoff Sommers sparked a lively discussion about the effects of gender feminism on young men Thursday night in Baxter 101.

Dr. Sommers' lecture was based on her 2000 book, The War Against Boys: How Misguided Feminism is Harming our Young Men, in which she utilizes extensive social data to challenge the notion of the shortchanged female and the emotionally repressed male. Her talk Thursday focused primarily on what Sommers described as the hypocrisy and false information perpetuated by some gender feminists.

"As I was writing my book, all I heard about was how girls were shortchanged victims and were falling behind," said Dr. Sommers, who described herself as an equity feminist. "The area where I found the most egregiously false record of information was about education. I was reading that girls were victims, but I saw girls were dominant, not just in going to college more: they were winning all the awards. They were the valedictorians. They were getting the best grades. There was one area where you find more boys than girls: sports. Boys are falling farther and farther behind and girls are flourishing."'

"Male Castration = Good; Guns = Bad"

anthony · 24 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'Feminists especially love this kind of special treatment. They can say anything they want about men; they can slander them, smear them, and paint them all with a very nasty brush just for the "crime" of being men. Valentine's Day is canceled in favor of "Victory over Violence" Day to somehow fight domestic abuse. Love between a man and a woman is bad; women must stick to the sisterhood! Consensual sex is likened to rape; flirting to sexual harassment. Man-hating has become synonymous with feminism, and the most radical of these harpies usually reside on college campuses. Men, meanwhile, are supposed to just grin and bear it. One joke about women is deemed sexual harassment and can get a male student kicked off campus. Double standard? Nope, it's just "fighting for women's rights".'

"Who do white men hate more, blacks or women?"

anthony · 24 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'Why is it that liberals think that, if white men decide not to vote for Obama, it means they HATE black people? Or that if they don't vote for Hillary, they HATE women? Did it ever occur to them that they, like all intelligent people in the United States, don't like their politics? Gee, what a thought.

And what's interesting is how Ephron sneers at the "suffering" white men receive at the hands of mean women, and points out how these white men are "somehow" able to rise above affirmative action, feminism, and the myriad of benefits handed to minorities simply for... being a minority. The difference, my dear Nora, is that most white men don't see themselves as victims. A lot -- but not all -- of minorities, feminists, and liberals do. Therefore, when white men are presented with overwhelming obstacles, they find a way to overcome them. A lot of people who are women and/or minorities do this, too, but it doesn't fit into the "WHITE MEN IN POWER!!" screed.'

Fox joins deadbeat dad myth-boosters

Matt · 24 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Fox can be as bad as MSN. The network all too often drips with the same kind of chivalrous claptrap only trussed up in different terms and styles. Marc Rudov is one of the few men's voices that are allowed even to be heard (when he isn't being screeched at by some feminist), and while we can thank them for that, unfortunately it seems the rest of the time they are playing to many of the same prejudices we see on other channels. Well anyway, here is their latest. Excerpt:

'After embracing the dark side of reality television with its marriage-busting hit "The Moment of Truth," Fox's newest project taps the power of its unscripted division for the forces of good.

The network has ordered a pilot from 3Ball Prods. in which an avenger of penniless single mothers hunts down deadbeat dads and forces them to pay child support.
...
As for the aggressive tactics, child support is not considered a debt per se, but an order of the court. Collectors are therefore not subject to following the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, which regulates what tactics a collection agency can employ to collect a debt.

...
"I've seen 'Cops,' and I want to watch more than a crack addict with his pants around his ankles running away from a police car," Roth said. "These guys owe money, and they should pay."'

Let's nip this in the bud. Contact "the Reality" people for that part of the network here and let them know what "the Reality" really is on this topic.

Juggling life as both Mr. Wallet and Mr. Mom

Matt · 25 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Deadbeat dads, ghost dads, Disneyland dads, Santa daddies: The divorce culture is rich in labels, especially ones that reduce men to negative stereotypes.

Some may be warranted, but the trouble with simplistic labels is that they rarely shed light on the complex truth of reality.

What is forgotten is that fathers have their own painful adjustment to divorce that is different than that faced by mothers.'

Instapundit and over 90 blogs are buzzing over the 758 mile Equal Parenting Bike Trek

Anonymous · 25 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Instapundit is considered one of the most influential news and polical blogs in the world! Instapundit averages 250,000-500,000 visitors daily and all of them are being exposed to Equal Parenting. This is a huge media win for our movement.

Check out the constantly updating list of blog, new media and traditional media coverage of the 2008 Equal Parenting Bike Trek.

NOW is the time to help us make make more noise about this event!! Men can parent just as well as women!! It is time for Judges and the laws to reflect this. Get behind this effort and lets make some serious noise guys!!

Be sure to visit Instapundit and tell them why you are thankful that they covered this.

Thanks - Robert and Angela Pedersen

Falsely implicated for rape, he's still in jail arindamp · 26 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Full story here. Excerpt:

PUNE: "Do only girls have reputation and dignity? Don't boys have them too," asks Pushpa Muralidhar Bhise (48), mother of Sagar (19), who was falsely implicated by a minor for raping her.

Sagar was arrested on March 17 after the minor girl from Wadgaonsheri alleged that he and three of his friends raped her in a house in Dehu Road. The police had also detained another minor following communal pressure as the girl belonged to a minority community."

What is most outrageous is that only men are being arrested. The main culprit, the woman is still at large. Why is this sexist double standard?

Christina Hoff Sommers: "The Gender-Equity Hammer Comes Out"

anthony · 26 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Women have surpassed men in most areas of education, but men continue to be more numerous in fields like math, physics, and engineering. For more than a decade, feminist groups have been lobbying Congress to address the problem of gender “injustice” in the laboratory. Their efforts are finally bearing fruit. Federal agencies are now poised to begin aggressive gender-equity reviews of math, science, and engineering programs. Groups like the National Organization for Women must be celebrating — but American scientists should brace themselves for the destructive tsunami headed their way.

At a recent House hearing on “Women in Academic Science and Engineering” Congressman Brian Baird, a Democrat from Washington State, asked a room full of activist women how best to bring American scientists into line: “What kind of hammer should we use?” The weapon of choice is the well-known federal anti-discrimination law “Title IX,” which prohibits sex discrimination in “any education program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance.” Title IX has never been rigorously applied to academic science. That is now about to change. In the past few months both the Department of Education and National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) have begun looking at candidates for Title IX-enforcement positions."

More from Fox: "The Top 10 Sex Mistakes That Men Make"

anthony · 26 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

Some information in this article could be offensive to some. Excerpt:

"Gaining weight and still thinking you're attractive. "For better or worse" should include weight fluctuations, but don't let yourself go completely.

You don't know how many women have complained to me about the double standard in staying attractive: Women are expected to stay hot-to-trot, men aren't.

So if you want continued star treatment for your rock star performances, know that Meat Loaf isn't the singer to emulate."

Remind Fox of their own story: "Moms Can Be Deadbeats Too"

Matt · 27 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Ran back in 2002 here. Excerpt:

'Single dads are sick and tired of being labeled "deadbeats" when it comes to paying child support. And data suggest they have good reason to be upset.

The percentage of "deadbeat" moms is actually higher than that of dads who won't pay, even though mothers are more consistently awarded custody of children by the courts.

...

"It’s not the exception anymore," Wood said, adding that before he became a single dad two years ago, "I would have almost bought into that stereotype" the dads are usually the deadbeats. But "that philosophy is just 30-40 years out of date."

...

And moms who don’t have custody of the kids often remarry and have more kids, and often choose to not work.'

I doubt they would run this today. Apparently feminists hadn't taken over the editorial room back then.

Huffington Post: "White Men"

anthony · 27 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"But now there are two and we're facing Pennsylvania and whom are we kidding? This is an election about whether the people of Pennsylvania hate blacks more than they hate women. And when I say people, I don't mean people, I mean white men. How ironic is this? After all this time, after all these stupid articles about how powerless white men are and how they can't even get into college because of overachieving women and affirmative action and mean lady teachers who expected them to sit still in the third grade even though they were all suffering from terminal attention deficit disorder -- after all this, they turn out (surprise!) to have all the power. (As they always did, by the way; I hope you didn't believe any of those articles.)

To put it bluntly, the next president will be elected by them: the outcome of Tuesday's primary will depend on whether they go for Hillary or Obama, and the outcome of the general election will depend on whether enough of them vote for McCain. A lot of them will: white men cannot be relied on, as all of us know who have spent a lifetime dating them. And McCain is a compelling candidate, particularly because of the Torture Thing. As for the Democratic hope that McCain's temper will be a problem, don't bet on it. A lot of white men have terrible tempers, and what's more, they think it's normal."

Ed. note: At first I thought it was serious. Then I realized... about the author.

Vancouver Sun: The 'real gender gap': a discussion that's overdue

anthony · 27 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Female behaviour favouring empathy, friendship, family and cooperation have been undervalued in workplaces in which women try unsuccessfully to behave like men, Pinker said. She suggested that it's time we take a look at both genders and realize that neither's needs have been understood.

Pinker also is an avowed feminist, but she said the drive for equality was misdirected, distorted by the belief that women should do all the things that men do. "I think it was necessary at the beginning, equating equality to sameness," she said. "Essentially all feminist writers say we want what they want, so we've got to be like them. The science tells us, no, we're not like them ... unless biology changes."

"Why women don't want top jobs, by a feminist"

anthony · 27 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

"The social critic Camille Paglia once wrote: "There is no female Mozart because there is no female Jack the Ripper."

Men are simply more variable - there are more really stupid ones and more very smart ones than women; more extremely lazy ones and more who are willing to halfkill themselves with overwork."

National Post: The media's invisible victims

anthony · 27 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Heterosexual men can't catch a break from the media. When they're aggressors, they're condemned. When they're victims, they're ignored. Conversely, when women -- gay or straight - and gay men are victims, they're pitied. And when they're aggressors, they're also pitied.
...
The invisibility of heterosexual male victims I speak of shows up in the article's first comment on domestic violence: In asserting that "Canadians know full well that domestic violence is a major problem," Anderssen cites examples of a woman beaten by her boyfriend, and three children murdered by their father. To this journalist (and to be fair, to most others too), men hurting women and men killing children are what Canadians "know" about domestic violence.

What Canadians would know if the article was better researched is that men are almost equally likely to be assaulted by their female partners, and that children are statistically more likely to be abused or killed by their mothers than fathers."

LA Times Readers Comment: Concern and regret over circumcision

anthony · 27 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Letters here. Excerpts:

'I regret circumcising our son. When I asked if the procedure was painful, my obstetrician shook his head and said no, the baby just goes "waah" once, and it's over. That is not true, as I learned later when I saw the operation performed at a friend's Jewish bris ceremony.'

/////

'Your article also failed to mention an article published last year in the peer-reviewed British Journal of Urology International titled "Fine-Touch Pressure Thresholds in the Adult Penis". The results indicated that intact penises were four times more sensitive than cut penises.

This is not a medical issue, nor a hygiene issue, nor a look- like-daddy issue. This is a civil rights issue. There is no room in a civilized society for the unnecessary amputation of infant genitalia.'

Women patronizing male prostitutes

Matt · 27 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This article from back in 2007, linked to from this at the HuffPost. Belies the myth that only men seek the services of prostitutes, or that the difference in motivation is so significant as to free women from any sort of "unacceptable" motivations. Excerpt:

'I'm sure I'm not the only person who hides such a guilty secret, and I'm equally sure that anyone in my position would guard it as ferociously as I do.

Once, sometimes twice, a month I meet up with Justin, a 36-year-old divorcé. We go out for a meal and maybe to a club before spending the night in a hotel. I am a divorced mum and work part time to spend as much time as I can with my four children. Justin also has four children. But what differentiates our dates from the norm is that I pay for Justin's company, including having sex with him.
...
This way I'm very satisfied sexually, which makes me a much calmer and happier person, and I do like the secrecy element of this arrangement. I keep both lives totally separate and Justin doesn't know where I live, what I do or even my real surname. I get a real buzz out of my elegant, controlled image and the fact that no one knows I've got a secret side – one that would shock everyone.'

RADAR ALERT: Sen. Barack Obama Supports I-VAWA!

Matt · 28 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Senator Barack Obama may well become the next president of the United States. But in a recent letter to one of his constituents, he affirmed his support for the International Violence Against Women Act, and reiterated many of the half-truths and falsehoods of domestic violence – see complete letter below.

I-VAWA – Senate bill 2279 – is a dangerous bill that would break up families, harm women, and openly discriminate against male victims.

In India, domestic violence laws have become so harmful that they are commonly referred to as "legal terrorism"1. For more information on the Pandora's Box of I-VAWA, see the RADAR analysis "I-VAWA: The Destruction of Families Worldwide"2.

THIS AN URGENT REQUEST TO TAKE PROMPT ACTION.

Please contact Sen. Obama's office today.

Telephone: 202-224-2854 – politely tell the receptionist your name, city, and state, and say, "I am asking Sen. Obama to withdraw his support from S. 2279, the International Violence Against Women Act. I-VAWA is anti-male and anti-family."

Or submit a message through his website – http://obama.senate.gov/contact – or send a fax – 202-228-4260 – politely emphasizing these points:

1. According to the World Health Organization3, men are twice as likely as women to die from violence-related causes. Why is Sen. Obama ignoring the plight of men?
2. According to a 32-country survey4, women are more likely to engage in domestic violence than men. Why is I-VAWA ignoring the plight of men?
3. VAWA has had a devastating impact on African-American communities in the United States5.

PLEASE DO THIS NOW AND SAVE A FAMILY. Thank you!

---

1 http://uchalla.wordpress.com/2008/02/08/stop-legal-terrorism-save-the-indian-husbands

2 http://www.mediaradar.org/why_ivawa200801_campaign.php

3 World Health Organization. World Report on Violence and Health. Geneva, Switzerland, 2002, http://www.who.int/violence_injury_prevention/violence/world_report/en/summary_en.pdf

4 Straus, Dominance And Symmetry In Partner Violence By Male And Female University Students In 32 Nations, Children and Youth Services Review, http://pubpages.unh.edu/%7Emas2/ID41-PR41-Dominance-symmetry-In-Press-07.pdf. Table 2, p. 260: Overall, 21.4% of any type of physical violence was female-perpetrator-only as compared to 9.9% male-only. Table 3, p. 261: Overall, 29.4% of severe physical violence was female-perpetrator-only as compared to 15.7% male-only.

5 http://aavreform.org/index.php

==========

LETTER FROM SEN. BARACK OBAMA

Date: April 4, 2008

Dear _____:

Thank you for sharing with me your concerns about support for international victims of domestic violence and S.2279, the International Violence Against Women Act (I-VAWA).

I am concerned with the suggestion that I-VAWA is anti-male and anti-family. Indeed, I recognize the importance of having our children grow up in stable and nurturing homes, preferably with both a father and mother as active parents. Our children need role models, both male and female, to help them reach their potential. Having said that, these homes must be safe and loving environments, not ones where a child lives in fear of abuse and neglect, or worries that a parent will be victim to abuse. I do not believe that I-VAWA lessens or belittles the significance of the two-parent family, but rather puts in place programs to support families when violence creates an unhealthy and unsafe home environment. Gender-based violence affects individuals from every walk of life, in every part of the world. According to the World Health Organization, approximately 1 in 3 of the women in the world will experience violence in her lifetime, with rates of up to 70 percent in some countries. The breadth of this problem is staggering, as we know many cases often go unreported. Women and children are often at greater risk of physical violence, exploitation and sexual abuse in crisis situations, such as in the wake of the Asian tsunami or in the Darfur region of Sudan.

I am deeply concerned about the escalation of sexual violence in the eastern Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), where the United Nations reported 27,000 sexual assaults against women and girls in the South Kivu province alone in 2006. Recently, I wrote to Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice expressing my concerns about the growing number of systematic sexual assaults against women in the DRC, and asked a series of questions about what the United States is doing to help curb this violence against women. A copy of that letter is enclosed for your review.

We can and must do more to address this devastating human and moral problem, as well as to combat persisting forms of discrimination that women and girls from all walks of life face daily. On October 31, the Chairman and Ranking Minority Member of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, Senator Biden (D-DE) and Senator Lugar (R-IN), respectively, introduced the International Violence Against Women Act of 2007 (S. 2279). This bill would establish key offices at the Department of State and the U.S. Agency of International Development tasked with addressing international women's issues and integrating gender into relevant policies and programs. The bill would also ensure that adequate foreign assistance is directed at measures that prevent and respond to acts of violence against women. S. 2279 has been referred to the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, a panel on which I serve. I hope this letter helps you understand why, as your U.S. Senator and the father of two young daughters, I hope the Senate will take to take swift action in considering this measure.

Thank you again for writing. Please do not hesitate to contact me in the future regarding this or other issues of concern to you.

Sincerely,

Barack Obama
United States Senator

++
Date of RADAR Release: April 28, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Woman alleges she was raped over the phone

Matt · 28 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Yes indeed, folks, we have a classic example here of a man using his Magic Patriarchal Phallus-Power to rape a woman over a telephone. He used some kind of evil dark mystical power, possibly in collusion with Satan himself, to commit this dastardly deed. Story here. Excerpt:

'TUNIS, Tunisia, April 27 (UPI) -- A Tunisian family alleges their daughter was raped during a telephone conversation with a man, a lawyer for the family said.
...
"The intercourse did take place with all its details but verbally only," he said. "The sexual act did not really happen because the physical proximity factor is not there, yet it happened because there is a direct physical impact – the loss of virginity."'

Boys 'better at English in single-sex classes'

Anonymous · 28 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Boys would get better English results at primary school if they were taught in single-sex classes, a study has found.

Researchers said boys perform "significantly" better in English tests if they are taught in classes with fewer girls. The study by Bristol University used results from every state primary school and found that as the proportion of girls increased, boys' performance in tests fell..."

Tokyo: Woman jailed for killing, cutting up husband

anthony · 28 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

You can file this story under: 'You Gotta Be Kidding Me!'

'An abused wife who killed her husband, cut up his body and dumped the parts on a street and in a park was jailed for 15 years by a Tokyo court on Monday, a court official and Japanese media said.

Doctors had said Mihashi was insane at the time of the murder but the court ruled that while she had been seeing hallucinations she was mentally capable of making decisions, Japanese media said.
...
A Tokyo District Court official confirmed the sentence but declined to give details of the crime.'

Washington Post v. RADAR

anthony · 28 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Over the past three weeks, a notable public faceoff occurred in the Washington Post.
...
Without providing any research evidence, Meier goes on to make the improbable claims that most custody disputes "arise in the context of mothers seeking to end abuse or protect their children" and "mothers have few means of protecting their children from dangerous fathers". Meier's statements represent a serious misrepresentation of a well-known government statistics, and are highly defamatory of fathers.'

iRobot Roomba: Husband is an ass

MJE · 28 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I'm surprised this hasn't made it onto the Boycott List yet. Video found here.

The iRobot Roomba is a vacuum cleaner, and of course the commercial depicts a frustrated wife complaining about her dirty home.

"I don't know about you, but I live with a bunch of animals. My kids are pigs, and my husband is a . . . [image switches from the woman to a donkey]."

Obviously, it is cute and humorous for a wife to call her husband as an ass.

iRobot Corporation website found here.

Local Fathers' Activism Heats Up

MR · 29 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Local Fathers' Activism Heats Up

"Caring people attempted to offer a small antidote to the abusive and vilifying ways that gender feminists and local politicians poisonously treat good Fathers (and men). Far too many Dads have entered the beat dead Dads' graveyard, but with dedicated efforts to focus attention on the issues facing Fathers and men, activists are hopeful of changing the despicable way good Fathers (and men) are being routinely abused in Los Angeles (and American) society."

Flirters will be shorn!

Matt · 29 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. We all knew that in strict Muslim countries, talking to members of the opposite sex to whom you are not related and for non-commercial or other very practical reasons is forbidden. But apparently, this doesn't stop nature from taking its course. So instead of locking everyone up, one particular political leader has decreed that men caught talking to or trying to talk to women in public will have their hair cut off.

I suppose it's better than getting tossed into jail. Or is it? There are cultural implications in the Middle East to having one's hair forcibly shorn that perhaps may make it more distressing than spending a few days in lock-up.

No mention of what happens to women who respond to a man's greeting, though.

Excerpt:

'RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) - A governor in northern Saudi Arabia has ordered authorities to punish men who flirt with women in public places by cutting their hair, local media said Tuesday.

Prince Fahd bin Badr, governor of the northern al-Jof region, ordered police to carry out the punishment after seeing a group of men with long hair pestering* female students as they left school in the northern al-Qurayat province, Al-Hayat newspaper said.
...
He said Fahd has ordered that the punishment against the men "who emulate women" should be carried out at the scene of the infraction, according to the paper.

"The decision, however, doesn't include all men with long hair," al-Rushoud was quoted by Al-Hayat as saying.'

---

* "Pestering"? What exactly were they doing?

Serial killer of college-aged men suspected

Matt · 29 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Gannon and Duarte have done something that no other law enforcement agency has ever done in this case -- they looked at the big picture and visited each site where the young men disappeared.

While most local investigations focused on where a body was recovered, Gannon and Duarte tried to figure out where the body went into the river.

City after city, when they'd find the spot where the body went into the water, they would find something else: The symbol of a smiley face.

...
In Michigan, they found something strange among the group's graffiti: the word 'Sinsiniwa.' They couldn't figure out what it meant until a few months later when they arrived in Dubuque, Iowa to investigate the death of Matt Kruziki.

His body was found on Sinsiniwa Avenue. Plus, they've discovered the nicknames of people in the group at more than one location.
...
They have already taken all of this evidence in the Jenkins case to Minneapolis Police and Hennepin County prosecutors--so why haven't they taken action? We will ask them.'

Suspended School Teacher Arrested a Third Time on Charges of Having Sex With Students

anthony · 29 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A suspended middle school teacher out on bail for allegedly having sex with two students will be back in court Tuesday after police say they caught her having sex with one of them again.

Stephanie Ragusa, 29, was arrested for the third time in about six weeks on charges of sex with a minor, MyFOXTampa reported. She was being held without bond at the Orient Road Jail.
...
Officers discovered Ragusa and the now-16-year-old boy at his house about 12:20 p.m. Monday, the arrest affidavit states. Ragusa had gone to the teen's house to discuss the criminal case but wound up in bed with him, police said.

Detectives nabbed the woman as she was leaving and getting into her boyfriend's truck. Ragusa remained behind bars Tuesday, charged with two counts of unlawful sexual activity with a minor."

About.com Covers the Equal Parenting Bike Trek

Anonymous · 30 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

ABOUT.COM, owned by the New York Times and recognized as a top 15 content site, just covered the 2008 Equal Parenting Bike Trek. In less than 24 hours, thousands of readers have visited the main event page for the Equal Parenting Bike Trek! This is a big win following the coverage by Instapundit!

Please take the time to thank author Wayne Parker for covering this important human interest story. Commenting does NOT require you to sign up for an account so it is very easy. Don't cite your personal case even though we all have a painful one to share - thank Wayne and tell him why children deserve BOTH fit and willing parents after a divorce. If you utilize Stumbleupon, Digg!, Mixx or other social bookmarking please do so on Wayne Parker's story.

Thank you Men's ACTIVISM readers!

Plaintiffs Sought for Class Action vs. VAWA

MR · 30 April 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I received this email through the California Men's Centers San Diego, then got email permission from Mr. Den Hollander to send this to Mensactivism for posting. I wish him every success in this endeavor.

Subject: Plaintiffs for Class Action VAWA

"Hello,

I'm expanding my search for additional named-plaintiffs for the VAWA class action suit. The requirements are

1. Male and a U.S. citizen.

2. You married an alien wife.

3. You sponsored her for a temporary green card which she got.

4. You did not sponsor your wife or ex-wife for a permanent green card.

5. You believe or know that your wife or ex-wife used or is using or will use the VAWA self petitioning procedures that accuse you of abuse in order for her to obtain a permanent green card.

6. You are willing to contribute to the expenses of the class action. Expenses do not include any attorney's fees. Expenses include copying, mailing, filing fees, depositions, and appeals. The more named plaintiffs, the less the individual expenses, which could go over $5,000. Named plaintiff means your name goes on the papers, and you have control along with other named plaintiffs over the decisions that are made in the case. I provide the legal advice but you guys make the final decisions.

7. You can live anywhere in the U.S.

If any of you are interested in joining as named-plaintiffs, please let me know as soon as possible, and I mean soon.

Thanks

Roy
--
Roy Den Hollander
Attorney at Law
New York, N.Y.
rdhhh@yahoo.com

UNL Student Paper: Women-only gym hours not likely - but still, it'd be OK if they had them

dooquidis4ever · 1 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. The story starts out by saying that women-only hours at the gym are not likely at UNL. Then it says that Kalamazoo College has had women only hours for about 3 years. The funny thing is at Harvard everyone justifies the discrimination against men by pointing out that there are other gyms on campus. At Kalamazoo College, there is no other gym! Excerpt:

'Several of the schools' women-only gym hours were made to satisfy the women's religious desires. A group of Muslim women from Harvard, Orthodox Jews from Queens College and Christians from Wheaton College successfully lobbied their schools to implement women-only hours. Kalamazoo College offers women-only gym for an hour and half Tuesday evening and early Sunday morning to make their women feel more comfortable.

"The religious rights brought this issue to the forefront," said Jan Deeds, director of the women's center at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. "But many other women could also relate."

Daniela Bravo and Stephani Ruiz are two UNL students who were flummoxed when asked their opinions on women-only gym hours.

...

Not necessarily. The schools that offer women-only gym don't have men-only hours.

"Oh, wow," Ruiz said. "Then I might use it. It depends."'

Oh and by the way, the boys may have been abused, too

Matt · 1 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'SAN ANTONIO - Authorities investigating whether teen girls in a polygamist sect were forced into underage marriages and sex said they are also looking into possible abuse of young boys — allegations that drew a sharp rebuke by sect's members.

...

In a written report, the agency said interviews and journal entries suggested young boys may have been sexually abused, but didn't elaborate.

Cockerell also said 41 of the 463 children seized from the Yearning For Zion Ranch in Eldorado had evidence of broken bones. Some of those children are "very young," he said.

...

Before Wednesday's disclosure, the state had argued it should be allowed to keep the boys, not because they were abuse victims, but because they were being groomed to become adult perpetrators in the sect. Men in the sect take multiple wives, some of whom are allegedly minors.'

The Mid-Ohio School to Host Women's-Only Honda Adult Defensive Driving Program

dooquidis4ever · 2 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Why is it OK to have women-only events? This one described here.

Imagine the following story: "THE MID-OHIO SCHOOL TO HOST MEN-ONLY HONDA ADULT DEFENSIVE DRIVING PROGRAM"

Women would burn down the school! Excerpt:

'DUBLIN, Ohio (May 1, 2008) - The Mid-Ohio School, the comprehensive driving and riding instruction company owned by TrueSports, Inc. and based as Mid-Ohio Sports Car Course in Lexington, Ohio, will host up to 18 women in the school's first-ever Women's-only Honda Adult Defensive Driving Program, June 7.
...
'"We've occasionally found at The Mid-Ohio School that women are intimidated to enroll in our programs, mainly because they occur at a racing facility where men tend to dominate the landscape," offered David Roush, general manager of The Mid-Ohio School. "While many women still do come through our various programs, we thought it necessary to target this demographic that may have previously been unaware of our offerings. On a day-to-day basis, women are likely to log more driving miles, and most often with passengers in the vehicle, so it's important to give them these life-saving skills in order to avoid a collision or recover from a loss of control situation."'

Netherlands: "Magazine wrong on women-only policy"

dooquidis4ever · 2 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Score a victory for the men and hallelujah, it's about time!!!

Story here. Excerpt:

'Feminist magazine Opzij must be open to employing men when it has job vacancies and cannot reserve all editorial jobs for women, the equal opportunities commission said on Tuesday.'

A trilogy of horror here...

Proud_to_be_a_man · 3 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

All stories from the last month or so, found by simply searching for 'penis' on Google news...

Story 1

"The victim, aged 39, was rushed to hospital in northern France in June 2005 with his penis sliced off."

"Police never recovered either a weapon or the missing body part."

Story 2

"A PAKISTANI woman chopped off her lover's penis after he wedded his cousin in a marriage arranged by his parents."

'She invited him to her house last Wednesday and after serving some intoxicant cut off his sexual organ.'"

Story 3

"Lenly, the police said, suspected her husband of having affairs and having tired of it, planned to stop her husband from seeing other women."

"So before they went to sleep on Wednesday night, Lenly kept a knife near her and when the opportunity rose, cut off her husband's penis."

Remember stories like these (and way way WAY too many similar stories in the past) every time someone tries to tell you that women are the caring, gentle sex... Yeah right.

Woman Who Falsely Cried Rape Convicted of Manslaughter

Academic Aggression · 3 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Woman's violence-by-proxy gets jail time. Are we reaching the point where we are now holding women accountable? I hope so! Excerpt:

'FORT WORTH, Texas — An Arlington woman who caused her lover's shooting death by falsely crying rape was found guilty Friday of involuntary manslaughter.

Tracy Denise Roberson, 37, cried slightly when the verdict was announced after jurors had deliberated for more than a day. The punishment phase was set for Monday, and she faces two to 20 years in prison.

In late 2006, Darrell Roberson came home from a late-night card game to find his scantily clad wife with another man in a pickup truck in the driveway. Tracy Roberson was with her lover but cried rape, and her husband fired four shots into the truck as Devin LaSalle was driving off, killing him.'

Canadian woman found guilty in Mexico treated as a queen in Canada

Saira · 3 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

We have been given yet another demonstration of Canada's feminist jurisprudence as a chartered government jet was sent to Mexico to fetch a convicted female criminal. She is now enjoying the facilities at the Grand Valley Club Fed for women. Maybe she will have another shot of becoming the prison queen as well? See the article and picture by Megan Smith, Sat. Apr. 12, 2008, called "Canadian prisoner Brenda Martin unwinds during beauty pageant"

She has been tried and found guilty in front of a court of competent jurisdiction, even if that court happens to be in Mexico. The only "evidence" of her innocence is her word alone.

Many Canadian men, who equally claim innocence, are languishing under horrendous conditions, including torture, in foreign, as well as Canadian, jails. I have yet to hear any of them having had their fines paid by the government, flown home in a private chartered jet, served cappucino and fresh fruit while being wished happy home coming. All curtesy of us taxpayers, mainly men.

Ironically, while the tear-jerking drama of the "abuse of justice in Mexico" was being played to the hilt, we also were privy to see Robert Baltovitch found not guilty of the murder of his girlfriend, for which he spent 8 years in jail. Her body has never been found. No-one offered him a cup of cappucino. Read an interview with the Premier of Ontario, Dalton McGuinty on this subject. Excerpt:

'... Paul Cook: "What about financial compensation. Would you consider offering Baltovich some form of compensation, even though he has not specifically requested it yet?"

Dalton McGuinty: "Well, again I'm sure that is something his lawyers are going to consider and I would be surprised if that kind of request was not forthcoming. Again, I think the responsible thing for us to do is carefully weigh that...again, I'll turn to my attorney general and say what do you think is appropriate in these kind of circumstances. As a society, from time to time, people get caught in our justice system here, through no fault of their own, so what we got to do is ask ourselves is how do we make this thing that went wrong right. That's fundamentally the question that the attorney-general's going to have to advise me on."'

Then read the treatment offered to Brenda Martin: "Martin back on Canadian soil" Fri, May 2, 2008 By JOE WARMINGTON, SUN MEDIA. Excerpt:

'TORONTO -- Fresh fruit and a cappuccino greeted Brenda Martin as she stepped onto the Canadian Challenger jet yesterday that brought her home from her two-year Mexican prison nightmare.

And moments after the wheels left Mexican soil Canadian officials also removed her handcuffs and told her to enjoy her flight to her homeland and eventual freedom.

... McTeague said if there is one lesson to be learned, it's to ensure Canada improves its consular structures and protocols for Canadians incarcerated abroad. ...
"She is going to get mental and physical help," said her mom. "And she needs it."'

Have a peep inside Grand Valley: Grand Valley Institution for Women (GVI). From the site:

'Grand Valley Institution was originally modeled on a "village" concept, with ten 8-inmate sloped-roof cottages surrounded by a grass lawn, and all the administrative services shared in a separate wing on the east side of the prison. Each cottage includes a public living room, dining room, porch, and kitchen, and a private laundry, study, and bathroom. The architecture resembles its strict programmatic division: administration, visitation, casework, gymnasium, education, and health care are all self-contained within their own units, and are all connected by a loggia that faces the common area outside. Instead of the traditional panoptical ring of cells surrounding a central security and observation booth, the prison surrounds a multipurpose (politically-correct) chapel. According to the Architectural Record, the design involves light-filled corridors, sloped grounds, subdued colours, natural maple millwork, and indirect lighting, giving the facility an "uninstitutional" quality.

To promote self-sufficiency, prisoners in each cottage of Grand Valley cook their own food, and tend their own gardens. Because of self-sufficiency, a wooden infrastructure instead of a concrete infrastructure, and the potential higher level of inmate-pride in housekeeping, each unit costs 30% to 50% less than traditional penitentiary designs, according to Correctional Services Canada.'

The cost of housing an offender each year by security levels:
- Maximum security: $121,294
- Medium security: $80,545
- Minimum security and farms: $83,297
- Women's facilities: $166,830
- Average institution: $93,030
- Community correctional centres: $54,276
- Parole: $21,565
- Average community: $23,076
- Average cost of maintaining offender: $74,261

Source: Correctional Service of Canada

Police: Woman Flew To Upstate For Sex With Boy

napnip · 3 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

From the story:

"PICKENS COUNTY, S.C. -- A 28-year-old woman has been indicted after deputies say she flew from Wisconsin to the Upstate to have sex with a 15-year-old boy.
...
The Attorney General said that Schneider started having conversations with the boy over the Internet and phone using Web cams and having telephone sex.

She eventually set up a time to meet the boy for sex, but his parents found out and had deputies arrest her when she came to the home."

HOKA HEY! Welcome back, Thundercloud!

Matt · 4 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I am happy and relieved to see Thundercloud has returned to the MANN site after a way-too-long hiatus, and not for cheerful reasons. Our friend was involved in a very bad motorcycle accident but has lived to tell about it. Old-timer regulars (no offense, guys!) of MANN will recall him and be glad I am sure to see him back, just as I am. And new regulars, well, he is one helluva great guy, as you will learn from his posts.

Thundercloud, you are all that! Welcome back to MANN!

-- Matt

Mother arrested after three babies found in basement freezer

AngryMan · 5 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The bodies of three infants have been found bundled into the freezer of a large family home in Germany, it was revealed today.

Police investigating the gruesome find said they were attempting to determine whether the children had been alive when they were put in the freezer.

A 44-year-old woman, believed to be the children's mother, has been arrested on suspicion of murder.'

PD James: Political correctness ruining society

AngryMan · 5 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Modern life is bedevilled by political correctness, PD James, the crime author, said last night.

There was a growing risk that Britons would live in "ghettos" and experience little contact with other people, she said in a speech on policing in the 21st century.
...
"Our society is now more fractured than I, in my long life, have ever known it.
...
"...And in our relationships we are bedevilled by the cult of political correctness."
...
It would be "unfortunate" if the police became "enamoured" of political correctness, which she described as "a pernicious if risible authoritarian attempt at linguistic and social control".'

RADAR ALERT: Ask NPR to Interview Neil Munro about his Article "Domestic Politics"

Matt · 5 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

National Public Radio offers a webpage in which the general public can suggest topics for NPR to cover.

The thesis of Neil Munro's April 7, 2008 National Journal article "Domestic Politics" - "The question of how to respond to family violence has become controversial, as ideology and research collide" - would be an excellent topic for NPR to cover, and Mr. Munro would be an excellent guest for one of their shows to talk about it.

Neil Munro specializes in the politics of science and the high-tech economy for National Journal. According to Wikipedia, "National Journal is a weekly magazine that reports on the current political environment and emerging political and policy trends.... It is read by members of Congress, Capitol Hill staffers, the White House, Executive Branch agencies, the media, think tanks, corporations, associations and lobbyists."

Please go to the NPR pitch page and kindly ask NPR to interview Neil Munro about his recent article "Domestic Politics." Include a link to the article (http://news.nationaljournal.com/articles/080407nj1.htm) and his e-mail address (nmunro-at-nationaljournal.com), but otherwise use your own words to entice NPR to do so.

NPR gives the following advice on pitching an idea:

* Surprise us. Like all journalists, we are looking for true stories, events or people that present something new, important and interesting to a nationwide audience.
* Is it for us? Would your story be more interesting to your neighbors than to people across the country? If so, contact the news department at your local NPR member station.
* Keep it short. One paragraph is best. In all cases, it needs to fit in the space below. The box will hold about 200 words.
* Be specific. Tell us why your story would interest our listeners: e.g., "For 100 years scientists have assumed they knew all the orders of insects. Biologist Jim Witherspoon has just proved them wrong."
* Give us a peg. Let us know whether the story is time-sensitive: e.g., "Witherspoon's story will be published in this week's edition of Insects Today." Or: "This would be a great story to run with the anniversary of the Smithsonian next month."
* Don't write us with your opinions. This space is for story ideas, not opinions. You can send your opinions about NPR programming to the Ombudsman. If you want to submit a commentary, contact a show directly.
* Please, no attachments. You cannot include any attachments with your message. You can include links to web sites. But don't just send the link. If you only write, "Hey, look at this!" and include a link, your idea will not get much attention. Pique our interest with a message.
* Provide contact information. Give us your name, email address and daytime phone number so we can get in touch with you if we need to. We will not share this information with anyone outside NPR.

Please make sure your request to NPR is polite and positive.

Thank you.

++

Date of RADAR Release: May 5, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Horray! Five years for homicidal false rape claim

SpikeRants · 6 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'FORT WORTH -- A Tarrant County jury sentenced Tracy Roberson to five years in prison because she made a false claim of rape that got her lover killed. Jurors deliberated two hours before reaching a decision on her sentence.'

Okay, not so "horray", but it's better than what her misandrist lawyer wanted: probation.

About time they start penalizing women for this.

Washington U. takes heat about honoring Schlafly

anthony · 7 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Washington University's decision to bestow an honorary degree on conservative political activist and author Phyllis Schlafly has stirred outrage among some students and faculty.
...
Mary Ann Dzuback, the director of the women and gender studies department at Washington University agreed, said it was "grossly inappropriate" for the university to honor Schlafly with a degree.

"She's spent her entire career speaking against women in the workforce and for them remaining in the home," Dzuback said of Schlafly, who rose to prominence during the successful campaign against the Equal Rights Amendment in the 1970s."

Mom Regains Custody Of Pot Smoking Toddler

dooquidis4ever · 7 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. If a father had been videotaped encouraging his toddler to smoke pot, he would never be able to visit his kid again! Excerpt:

'The three adults were all smoking marijuana inside a Menomonee Falls home, but it wasn't the drugs that got them in trouble. It was what police found on one of their cell phones.

The cell phone video shows a 2-year-old boy taking a marijuana blunt and smoking. The video shows his mother's friends teaching him how to do it.

...
Weber is taking parenting classes, but she still has custody of the boy.

Weber's attorney says his client has maintained complete sobriety since her arrest last fall. "She is gainfully employed and has been doing everything in her power to better her life and the life of her son."'

Men are losing jobs...what is happening to us?

jim4146 · 8 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Folks, I came across this story, surprisingly, on MSN.

As much as I hate saying it, perhaps it has to get real bad for men to prod us into the kind of revolt needed to force changes in our system. How much longer? Excerpt:

'They eat from the same dishes and sleep in the same beds, but they seem to be operating in two different economies. From last November through this April, American women aged 20 and up gained nearly 300,000 jobs, according to the household survey of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. At the same time, American men lost nearly 700,000 jobs. You might even say American men are in recession, and American women are not.

What's going on? Simply put, men have the misfortune of being concentrated in the two sectors that are doing the worst — manufacturing and construction. Women are concentrated in sectors that are still growing, such as education and health care.'

MSN: "8 Things She Hates About You"

WakeUp · 8 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

More and more double-standards in relationship articles show up when I log out of Hotmail.

From the article: "And we women can continue not telling you why we're mad, because we'll figure, "Hey, he should know already!" Besides, who said this would be fair?"

From the article: "If he wants to come on to me, he needs to ditch his gross dress socks and gym clothes and make an effort. Otherwise he ain't getting any."

From the article: "When it so happens that we're the one who wants sex and you're the one who doesn't, we find your refusal to be confusing and irritating. Reassure us that we're attractive and that you love us, but that you just aren't in the mood. It helps to throw out a hint at what's going on--that you're tired, depressed, anxious at work, whatever, says Aline Zoldbrod, Ph.D., a Boston-area psychologist. That way we won't obsess or be too pouty or aggressive. If we happen to be fresh off a girls' night out liquored up and ready for sex, which you're refusing, tread extra carefully. Horny can change to emotional, crying wreckage very quickly when your girl has a couple of glasses of Prosecco in her."

She feels entitled to deny sex when she wants, but to receive it when she wants, too. If he refuses he is expected to say how he feels about it and explain what is wrong after she made the point that she has the right to be unfair and not express herself to he knows what's up. I can not find a single reason why both shouldn't communicate and be understanding of what they hear from the other one.

Study: Stay-at-Home Mom Worth Nearly $117,000 a Year

anthony · 9 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here:

If a stay-at-home mom could be compensated in dollars rather than personal satisfaction and unconditional love, she'd rake in a nifty sum of nearly $117,000 a year.

That's according to a pre-Mother's Day study released Thursday by Salary.com, a Waltham, Mass.-based firm that studies workplace compensation.

The eighth annual survey calculated a mom's market value by studying pay levels for 10 job titles with duties that a typical mom performs, ranging from housekeeper and day care center teacher to van driver, psychologist and chief executive officer.

This year, the annual salary for a stay-at-home mom would be $116,805, while a working mom who also juggles an outside job would get $68,405 for her motherly duties.

Ed note: No mention is made of what's men's unpaid work is worth. One can imagine that plumbing, auto repair, carpentry, painting, and landscaping work would add up pretty quickly too.

MSN Encarta: Boys vs. Girls Maximizing Your Child's Potential

WakeUp · 9 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here about segregation in classrooms based on gender.

From the article: "According to Gurian, at the elementary school level, for example, boys tend to lag in language arts (history, social studies and reading)."

From the article: "Many teachers also have caught on to the advantages of letting boys be boys, which means encouraging physical movement. Short of letting them run screaming through the school yard, teachers can assign boys tasks, such as passing out papers or cleaning the chalkboard. If you have an especially active son, ask the teacher if he can play with a softball while working at his desk."

From the article: "Girls especially benefit from the mixing of methods, and teachers can change things up in the classroom, encouraging writing, role-playing and other activities -- even in math classes -- to help girls absorb the material."

What's next? Back to white kids in one room and black kids in another? Which race would have to clean the chalkboard and pass out papers?

Also, this article makes boys with A.D.D. sound like stupid cats with a balls of yarn who need to be distracted while girls need to he helped. Why not actually help the boys, too, AND teach the kids to play nicely in mixed classes?

Arizona Teacher Gets Six Months in Jail for Sex With Student

dooquidis4ever · 9 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

dooquidis4ever submitted this article noting a lenient six-month sentence for a female high school teacher who was charged with 17 counts of sexual conduct with a minor. At least she won't be able to return to teaching again, as she gave up her teaching certificate as part of this plea deal - one which a male teacher no doubt would never have been offered.

Feminists sharply divided between Clinton, Obama

anthony · 10 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"No constituency is more eager to see a woman win the presidency than America's feminists, yet — despite Hillary Rodham Clinton's historic candidacy — the women's movement finds itself wrenchingly divided over the Democratic race as it heads toward the finish."

"At breakfast forums, in op-ed columns, across the blogosphere, the debate has been heartfelt and sometimes bitter. Are the activist women supporting front-runner Barack Obama betraying their gender? Are Clinton's feminist backers mired in an outdated, women's-liberation mind-set?"

"We're squandering an opportunity to be seen as a voting bloc that turns elections," Feldt said. "Unless we are working together, in a strategically thought-out effort to vote in our own best interests, we are in danger of never having another election where people will say women can determine the outcome."

Ed note: Given that women make up an ever increasing majority of voters, how can one say women do not determine the outcome of elections?

Woman gets only 15 years (with parole) for stabbing boyfriend to death

tac0965 · 11 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

How can a woman who stabs her boyfriend to death...AND....has stabbed him on two previous occasions get charged with only 2nd degree murder? You got it...she says that he approached her in a "threatening" manner. A man would have gotten LWOP'd for doing the same thing to his girlfriend. By the way, in Nebraska she can get patrolled after serving only half of the lower term (3.75 years). Excerpt:

'Trial testimony indicated the pair had argued over Porter's desire to attend a party, a statement from the U.S. Attorney's Office said. Grant admitted stabbing Porter, saying he was approaching her in a menacing manner.

Evidence showed that the couple had a "turbulent relationship" and that Grant had stabbed Porter on two previous occasions and had threatened to stab him three other times, the statement said.'

Gang of girls 'blew up house with home-made bomb over row about boy'

AngryMan · 11 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A gang of teenage girls may have blown up a house with a home-made liquid bomb, which killed a man in a neighbouring property, after arguing with another girl about a love rival.

Purple liquid was poured through the letterbox of the Victorian house before the an explosion destroyed three houses.

Their intended victim, Charlotte Anderson, was caught in the blast and was rushed to intensive care suffering with severe burns.'

Daughter fails test, dad goes to prison

patriotsofamerica · 11 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A northern Kentucky man is in jail today – serving a 180-day sentence – because his 18-year-old daughter failed a math test and didn't get her General Equivalency Diploma, or GED, as a previous court order required.

Brittany Gegner, the daughter, says if anyone should be jailed, it should be her.

"It's like I should, if anybody should be punished for this," Brittany told WCPO-TV in Cincinnati. "I would way rather me go to jail than my dad."'

It seems to me that anything that can be thought up to put a father/man in jail is being done. A father does not even have to commit a perceived crime to be put in jail anymore. Will this ever end? What's next I am afraid to ask?

www.move-off.org
patriotsofamerica@move-off.org

Fire-bombs, mugging and gang warfare - just what has gone wrong with girls?

AngryMan · 12 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'For several years, there has been a disturbing rise in the number of girls committing violent crimes at ever younger ages.

Last month, rival girl gangs used snooker balls in socks to batter each other in a mass brawl at a railway station at Shoreham, West Sussex.

In March, a 15-year-old girl was jailed for using a mobile phone to film two drunken teenage male friends beating a man to death in Keighley, West Yorkshire.

Last October, a gang of teenage girls stoned a 72-year-old woman and forced her into a busy road, leaving her with a broken nose and two black eyes.

There has also been a string of murders committed by girls, often sickeningly sadistic.

In 1999, for example, two 15-year-old girls murdered 71-year-old Lily Lilley, binding her mouth so tightly that her false teeth were pushed down her throat and giggling as they wheeled her body through the streets before throwing it into a canal.

In the same year, a girl gang was found guilty of murdering mentally-ill Angela Pearce after torturing her. And so on.'

'Mentally ill' cannabis mother released by social services to stab two-year-old daughter to death

Anonymous · 12 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'An Old Bailey judge today criticised social workers after a mother stabbed her young daughter to death days after a police doctor raised questions over her mental health.

Galtricia Ntsimbi, 23, was left to knife two-year-old Trycia Balhous five times before turning the blade on herself.
...
Ntsimbi arrived in London from Paris in late 2006 after splitting from her partner, who claimed she was "unhinged from reality."

He had reported his former lover's state of mind after he had seen her throw the baby against a wall and heard a knife banging on the floor. But French authorities refused him custody of the child and granted it instead to Ntsimbi.'

RADAR ALERT: NY's Restraining Order Bill – Orwellian Law to Ensnare the Innocent

Matt · 12 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

One of the founding principles of the U.S., espoused by Benjamin Franklin, is that it is better that one hundred guilty persons should escape than that one innocent person should suffer. Others such as Pol Pot believed the unjust punishment of innocent citizens is inconsequential so long as the guilty do not escape.1

A bill before the New York State Assembly, which reportedly has wide support, would require every individual subject to a restraining order to wear an electronic monitoring device so the state can track them at all times.2,3 Leaving aside fears of a coming surveillance state, the proposed legislation ignores a fundamental problem with DV restraining orders – the large number of them that are unwarranted.

Considered in conjunction with the low standard of proof required for issuing a restraining order, this proposal does such violence to the principles of due process that it undermines the very foundation of a free society. The restraining order process circumvents the ordinary protections intended to protect the innocent. The standard of proof is not "beyond a reasonable doubt" but merely "a preponderance of the evidence". A restraining order is issued if a judge believes there's a 51% chance that the accusation is true.

Not long ago, the accusation of a deluded fan who thought NY resident David Letterman was harassing her telepathically was sufficient for a judge to issue a temporary restraining order against him. For anyone without Letterman's resources, the temporary restraining order would almost certainly have been made permanent.

A great many people targeted by restraining orders are not the monstrous brutes Hollywood would have us believe, but are rather innocent victims of the scorched earth tactics that are all too common among divorce attorneys.

- In the Illinois Bar Journal, attorney Thomas Kasper speaks of restraining orders being used as "part of the gamesmanship of divorce."
- Elaine Epstein, former president of the Massachusetts Bar Association, has warned, "Everyone knows that restraining orders and orders to vacate are granted to virtually all who apply ... In many cases, allegations of abuse are now used for tactical advantage."

But surely judges who are sworn to uphold the Constitution will give the accused a fair hearing, won't they? Consider this – How fair a hearing can one expect from any judge who's been through a training like the one in which the instructor, Judge Richard Russell, was caught on tape telling family law judges:

"Your job is not to weigh the parties' rights as you might be inclined to do. Your job is not to become concerned about all the constitutional rights of the man that you're violating as you grant a restraining order. Throw him out on the street, give him the clothes on his back and tell him, 'See ya' around.' ... we don't have to worry about the rights."

How many other trainings like this, that weren't caught on tape, have polluted family law judges' concept of justice?

Less than half of restraining orders involve an allegation of any violence, according to a study by the Massachusetts Trial Court. RADAR estimates that in the U.S. every year, half of the roughly 2-3 million restraining orders issued are not based on even an allegation of physical violence.4

Thus a great percentage of restraining orders are issued against innocent people. And now the New York State Assembly wants to require all those innocents to wear an electronic monitoring device 24 hours a day, and no matter how uncomfortable these devices are, if they should "tamper" with it in any way they'll instantly become felons.

New York legislators face a stark choice: fashion New York law according to Pol Pot's vision or according to Benjamin Franklin's.

Please tell the leaders of the New York State Assembly that a huge percentage of all restraining orders issued are issued against innocent people. Ask them to oppose Assembly Bill A05424 and Senate Bill S04796.

N.Y. Assembly:
Hon. Sheldon Silver
Speaker, New York State Assembly
speaker-at-assembly.state.ny.us
Legislative Office Bldg., Rm. 932
Albany, N.Y. 12248
518-455-3791
FAX 518-455-5459/4502

Hon. Malcolm Smith
Minority Leader, New York State Senate
masmith-at-senate.state.ny.us
Legislative Office Bldg., Rm. 907
Albany, N.Y. 12247
518-455-2701
FAX 518-455-2816

N.Y. Senate:
Hon. Joseph L. Bruno
Majority Leader, New York State Senate
bruno-at-senate.state.ny.us
Legislative Office Bldg., Rm. 909
Albany, N.Y. 12247
518-455-3191
FAX 518-455-2448

Hon. James N. Tedisco
Minority Leader, New York State Assembly
tediscj-at-assembly.state.ny.us
Legislative Office Bldg., Rm. 933
Albany, N.Y. 12248
518-455-3751
FAX 518-455-3750

==========

1 Blackstone's Formulation, http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Blackstone%27s_formulation
2 New York State Assembly Bill A05424, http://assembly.state.ny.us/leg/?bn=A05424
3 New York State Senate Bill S04796, http://assembly.state.ny.us/leg/?bn=S04796&sh=t
4 RADAR Special Report, A Culture of False Allegations: How VAWA Harms Families and Children, p. 6, http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/RADARreport-VAWA-A-Culture-of-False-Allegations.pdf

++

Date of RADAR Release: May 12, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Freedom for woman who kept trying to kill disabled husband

Anonymous · 13 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman who tried repeatedly to kill her disabled husband was spared a prison sentence after a court accepted that she had been unable to cope with the strain of caring for him.

Shirley Watts, 61, first tried to strangle her husband, Michael, with a dressing gown cord on Christmas Day last year. Over the following three days she put a pillow over his face, held his head under water in the bath and put a running shower hose into his mouth.'

Labor Strike For Men's/Father's Rights: Do you really want to make a difference or just talk about it?

rexx123456 · 13 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Many Men's rights organizations talk about how they are tired of the anti-male U.S. justice system along with it's family courts. But, non of them seem to have a likely solution to all this bullshit.

It seems like no matter what any man does even as a group, the lawmakers of this country (the U.S.) continue to pass more anti-male laws and continue to let feminism and misandry thrive in the media as well as the court system.

Here is my idea:

If men’s rights groups across the country where to plan a nationwide men’s labor strike as a move to persuade lawmakers and big media to stop badgering us while ignoring our issues, do you think it is worth a try? Many labor unions have had there members go on a labor strike in order to get wage increases, better benefits, etc. and plenty have been successful at it. Sometimes the threat of crippling a company, industry or region and hurting the bottom line of big business (which in turn may affect some politician’s pockets) is the only way to get someone’s attention.

If you have never heard of the Men's Rights Movement or think that things are just fine the way they are because they do not effect you... then you must be on CRACK.

There are even plenty of women who are skeptical of the way the U.S. treats its hard working, self sacrificing men. So this is not just some misogynist ploy.

This is important for you, the sanctity of your family, your brother, sons, and grandsons.

Everyday this issue gets worse and we must ban together to try to stop it. If you think that you cannot make a difference, then you have already failed. Remember the proposal over the internet regarding a possible gas strike. The plan involved millions of citizens across the U.S. to fill up their tanks the day before and not purchase any gas for one entire day. The purpose of this plan would have been to stop gas prices from rising so fast. It would have definitely hit big oil's bottom line.

So why didn't this plan get carried out?

Because plenty of Americans thought the idea was "stupid" and would not work. It's notions like these that support how Big Business, Big Media and Foreign Suppliers think of Americans... that we are gullible people who are too stupid to organize and stand up for what we know is wrong and fight to have it corrected. The same goes for the men's movement and how the U.S. senate and politicians react to our issues as men. They KNOW that we are to absorbed in our money, chasing after women, violence on each other and football - basically not having the intelligence it takes to organize.

And, they are RIGHT. But you can change all of this, YES YOU. Imagine if every single man who thinks he can't make a difference decides to give this a shot, IMAGINE THAT.

Please send me your responses to tmfcomm-at-optonline.net or post them on this forum. I would like to know what you think.

James

US: Anonymous rape tests are going nationwide

Matt · 13 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'ELKTON, Md. (AP) - Starting next year across the country, rape victims too afraid or too ashamed to go to police can undergo an emergency-room forensic rape exam, and the evidence gathered will be kept on file in a sealed envelope in case they decide to press charges.
...
The practice is already followed at some health clinics, colleges and hospitals around the country and by the state of Massachusetts. But many other jurisdictions refuse to cover the estimated $800 cost of a forensic rape exam unless the victim files a police report.
...
"Of course we encourage reporting. That's what we would like. But when they're adamant they don't want to report—if we think, `She's going to walk out if she has to go through with this,'—that's when we offer it," Lenz said.'

NCFM speaks at Torrance High School on DV to rebut feminist presentation to students

Marc A. · 14 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

On May 13, 2008, National Coalition of Free Men members Marc Angelucci, Harry Crouch and Fred Sottile (also the Los Angeles rep of Fathers4Justice) were invited speakers at Torrance High School in Los Angeles County, where they spoke before 30 members of the student body government about male victims of domestic violence and other issues. This was a counter to the presentation previously given to the students by a feminist domestic violence shelter organization that distorted the issue and falsely told the students 95% of domestic violence is male-on-female, a myth that is not supported by any current credible data at all.

After the feminist presentation, a father of one of the students was outraged by the misinformation given to his son, so he contacted NCFM, who helped him stage a small protest outside the school and speak at the school board and city council meetings. As a result, the school invited NCFM to present the other side. NCFM discussed the experiences of male victims and why they are neglected and covered up for political and ideological reasons, handed out studies on dating violence including those linked below, explained the history and politics surrounding the problem and why covering up half the violence actually fosters the intergenerational cycle of violence even more. The students were receptive, and some were outspokenly supportive. NCFM also briefly introduced issues like paternity fraud and false accusations of abuse as forms of domestic violence, and briefly introduced other men's issues as well and the men's rights movement overall. NCFM handed out NCFM's flyers and other materials, as well as the following studies/articles:

Science Daily, Male And Female Adolescents Equally Victims Of Physical Dating Violence, Study Shows (11/12/07)

California State University (Long Beach) bibliography by Professor Martin Fiebert (page 1) http://www.csulb.edu/~mfiebert/assault.htm

University of New Hampshire, Men are More Likely Than Women to Be Victims in Dating Violence, UNH Expert Says

Journal of Adolescent Health, Gender Differences in Dating Aggression Among Multiethnic High School Students (5/08).

Thank you to all who helped out and donated toward the travel costs, and to Dennis, the father of the Torrance High School student, who contacted NCFM made it all happen.

FOXNews: 10 Sex Mistakes Women Make

anthony · 14 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'You wanted it. So I'm giving it to you. When "The Top 10 Mistakes Men Make" ran a couple of weeks ago, readers were like: "Fair enough. But what about the mistakes women make?"

No worries, we're not leaving the ladies off the hook. From getting sloppy with seduction to carnal constraints, women, too, make some errors with the erotic.

...

7. Trash-talking other women.

Sure, you think she looks like a prostitute. But guess what? He does too — and is most likely loving it. Putting down other women in front of him serves as no more than a sign of insecurity. And that makes you unattractive. Rather than worry about what another gal looks like, focus your energies on keeping his eyes on you.

8. Assuming you'll be monogamous.

You're not monogamous till you have the talk. Having sex is no guarantee of anything, including reciprocal feelings, love, and a future. So don't make any assumptions. Be honest about what you want. Don't use sex manipulatively. Head games should stay below the belt.'

Man Claims Jet Blue Forced Him To Sit In Bathroom to Accomodate Uncomfortable Stewardess

anthony · 14 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Manhattan man is suing JetBlue, claiming he was forced to sit in an airplane bathroom for hours during a cross-country flight.

Gokhan Mutlu was flying standby from San Diego to New York in February.

He says he had a seat initially, but was woken up 90 minutes into the flight. He says the pilot told him that he would have to give his seat up to a flight attendant, who had complained that her jump seat was uncomfortable.'

National Groups Want Judge In GED Case Removed

anthony · 14 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Here's some more information on the father in jail because his daughter failed the GED. Excerpt:

"There's a new development regarding a Butler County juvenile court judge's controversial ruling.

Judge David Niehaus sentenced Brian Gegner to six-months in jail because his daughter didn't get her GED.

Two groups, the National Coalition of Free Men, and the California Alliance for Families and Children want the judge removed from the case."

Teacher Arrested for 'Cruelty' to Third-Grade Boy

anthony · 14 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The parents of a student at East Iberville School filed a complaint against 46-year-old Julie Landry of Plaquemine, accusing her of forcing their son to unclog a restroom toilet with his hands May 7th.

Landry has been placed on leave with pay."

--

Ed. note: Notice the quotes around the word 'cruelty' in the headline. Notice also how short the story is. Would it be like this if this had been a female student, and especially if it were a female student and a male teacher?

Action alert to help father jailed because daughter failed to get her GED

johndias · 14 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The California Alliance for Families and Children today issued the following action alert:

CAFC ACTION ALERT UPDATE

This Monday we saw an incredible story thanks to Glenn Sacks' newsletter about a father in Ohio who was jailed for 6 months due to the failure of his daughter to pass a GED test. This was in spite of the fact the daughter was now an adult, 18 years old, and was staying with her mother for the past two years during her problems with school.

The story was almost too unbelievable to be true and the injustice overwhelming. After scanning the media, we could not find anybody talking about the story and its gross injustice -- we felt compelled to act. At 3 p.m. on Monday the California Alliance sent out a press release to all of the major news outlets calling for a national protest and removal of the judge from the case.

One day later, Tuesday, the story exploded on the national media scene with over 240 news articles and newscasts including all of the major markets.

This Friday a rehearing will be held at the request of the father's attorney.

A Call to Action

Our thanks to those of you who responded to our initial calls to action. As a result we have a national discussion of the actions of this judge and his outrageous actions. CAFC has also been in contact with the Senate and Assembly members for the districts covering Butler County in addition to the Governor of Ohio.

We now urge all of you to contact the Court and Governor to urge the judge to end this blatant injustice. Judges need to know that gross injustice will not be tolerated.

Judge David J. Niehaus
Phn: 513-887-3318
Fax: 513-887-5592

Governor Strickland:
http://www.governor.ohio.gov:80/Default.aspx?tabid=448
Phn: 614-466-3555
Fax: 614-466-9354

American housewives not-so-desperate after all: 1 in 3 having affairs

Matt · 15 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The survey, "Sex and the American Mom," revealed that 34% of these married moms is in the midst of, or has already had, an affair. Think of three married moms you know and ask yourself, "Which one is cheating?" We tried this and Colleen came up empty. Taylor could think of one or two, but not one out of three--that number seems staggering. Are we just naïve? In the dark? Out of touch? Which of our friends has managed to stray without anyone knowing (and when do they find the time and where they hell do they go?)?

Another somewhat mind-blowing result of this survey was that 77% of the respondents said they want more sex. That's more than three quarters of the 30,000 women asked who said they aren't getting enough. Again, we ask, who are these people? And are we to conclude that so many stray because they are not sexually satisfied?

Cheating seems to be a direct result of not getting what you need, be it sex, attention, openness, what have you. If there is a void, and it can be filled by someone else, chances are it will be. Affairs used to almost guarantee a trip to divorce court. Today, however, the "cheatee" might experience a sense of betrayal, but the "cheater" is not necessarily stigmatized socially, and often both agree to at least attempt reconciliation. It has even been viewed as a "wake-up call" -- one that can actually save a marriage, with each person expressing a sense of shared blame.'

A "wake-up call" with each person expressing a share in the blame. Translation: It's OK when women do it and really, it's the husband's fault. When HE does it however...

Amber alert issued for missing 10-month-old boy, taken from hospital by non-custodial mother

johndias · 15 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"California police have issued an Amber Alert for a 10-month-old boy believed to have been taken by his mother from the Children's Hospital of Orange.

Officials believe Alakahi Thompson was taken by his mother, Ida Marybel Torres, on Wednesday night. Alakahi's father has legal custody of the child.
...
Torres is described as a 5-foot-4, 125-pound Hispanic woman with brown hair and eyes. She is believed to be driving a rented silver Chrysler Sebring with the California license plate 6AHA682.
...
Anyone with information as to the child and Torres' whereabouts are asked to call the Orange County Sheriff's Office at 714-744-7444."

National Center for Missing and Exploited Children

UK: Breasts not for looking but pecs are okay

AngryMan · 16 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'It is perfectly legal to ogle a man's chest but not a woman's breasts, according to an unusual ruling on what constitutes voyeurism by a panel of leading judges at the Court of Appeal yesterday.

Only women's breasts can be regarded as "private parts", whereas the male chest – even if the male in question has man breasts, or "moobs" as they are known – cannot, the judges say.

The distinction between the sexual status of the female and male chest area was made during the quashing of a conviction for voyeurism at a public swimming pool.'

Cleared by DNA for rape, man tries to reclaim his life

anthony · 16 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'James Woodard is slowly returning to life. He is starting over after spending 27 years behind bars. He was wrongly imprisoned and cleared by DNA.
...
He may be free, but he doesn't have his life back yet -- or even proof of his life. He crisscrosses the city looking for the birth certificate. Watch Woodard make the rounds

He can't open a bank account with a prison-issued I.D. He can't get a state I.D. card without a birth certificate or Social Security card. It's not easy starting over. Woodard calls it an "adventure."

Woodard was convicted of raping and murdering his girlfriend in 1981 and sentenced to life in prison. He was released on April 29, the 17th Dallas County inmate to be exonerated by DNA testing.
...
The Innocence Project is a national litigation and public policy organization, based in New York, dedicated to exonerating wrongfully convicted people through DNA testing. Its Texas branch has been instrumental in handling the Dallas cases.'

New Zealand: Boys about to catch up with top scholars

anthony · 16 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Late maturity and competitiveness may explain why boys are narrowing the academic divide when it comes to Scholarship exams.

And the head of a successful all- boys college says single-sex education better serves boys because their self-belief is not dented by seeing girls win more awards.

Girls consistently outperform boys at all three levels of the National Certificate of Educational Achievement, but latest Scholarship figures show the top male pupils are fighting back."

Male Circumcision Ineffective in HIV Battle According to Future HIV Therapy Report

anthony · 16 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Circumcision proponents, hailing from English-speaking countries, have been intensely lobbying world health agencies to adopt male circumcision as an additional HIV-prevention tool based on the release of three African randomized clinical trials reporting reduced HIV infections during their study periods.

Many sources of data contradict the claim that circumcision protects against HIV. The United States has one of the highest rates of circumcision and HIV infection in the developed world. European nations, which rarely practice circumcision, have very low rates of HIV. Numerous regions in Africa show higher rates of HIV in circumcised populations compared to uncircumcised populations.

For example, 2004 data from Lesotho show HIV infection of 15 percent for uncircumcised males and 23 percent for circumcised males. A 2007 study showed that, once commercial sex worker patterns were taken into consideration, circumcision status was irrelevant in HIV infection rates."

Father to Be Freed From Jail After Daughter Fails to Get GED

anthony · 17 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A judge says he will release a man who was jailed last week for failing to make sure his daughter earned her high school equivalency diploma.

Butler County Juvenile Court Judge David Niehaus' decision Friday would let Brian Gegner out of jail if his 18-year-old daughter Brittany attends a GED preparatory class and schedules the test before the next court date.

Gegner received a 180-day sentence for contributing to the unruliness or delinquency of a minor.

He had been ordered months ago to make sure his daughter, who has a history of truancy, received her GED — something that hasn't happened yet. His daughter has said it's not fair that her father was punished for her behavior."

R.I. Woman Convicted of Killing 3-Year-Old Nephew for Making a Mess

anthony · 17 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman who beat her 3-year-old nephew after she came home from a night of drinking to find a mess in her Woonsocket home has been convicted of murder.

Katherine Bunnell was convicted of second-degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder Friday for the 2004 death of Thomas "T.J" Wright. The jury in Providence Superior Court began deliberating three days earlier.

She was found not guilty of first-degree murder.

Sentencing was set for July 16, and she faces 10 years to life in prison.

Bunnell's defense attorney had argued that while she hit the toddler, her live-in boyfriend, Gilbert Delestre, delivered the fatal wounds. Delestre also is charged and will be tried separately."

Chemist gets life for husband's acid vat murder

anthony · 17 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'FRESNO, California (AP) -- A biochemist was sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole Friday for killing her estranged husband by knocking him out and stuffing him into a vat of acid, possibly while he was still alive.

Larissa Schuster was convicted in December of murdering Timothy Schuster with the special circumstance that the murder was committed for financial gain. At the time of his death in July 2003, the Schusters were in the middle of a divorce after nearly 20 years of marriage.

Just days after Timothy Schuster was reported missing, his half-dissolved remains -- intact from only the belt buckle down -- were found inside a 55-gallon barrel concealed in a storage unit his wife had rented.

Kristin Schuster, the couple's adult daughter, told the judge that she felt safer knowing her mother would be behind bars.'

News Busters: Are Men as Dumb as the Media Say We Are?

anthony · 18 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"In today's media, anti-male sexism is the rule far more than anti-female sexism. Whether it's calling men "idiots," creating smart mom/stupid dad TV shows, publishing books with titles like "Are Men Necessary," our culture is full of what some scholars are calling the "WAW effect," short for Women are Wonderful. These days, it's tough to catch a break if you're an unapologetic male."

Scotland: Crimes of violence by women 'on the rise'

anthony · 18 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'MORE women are committing violent offences including organising knife attacks on other women, Scotland's top law officer told MSPs yesterday.

Elish Angiolini, the Lord Advocate, said that in the past young women were more likely to have been "collaborators" with their boyfriends, hiding weapons and cleaning up after attacks, but were now carrying knives of their own.

...

Ms Angiolini said: "Many women are not just simply the collaborators, going along with a dominant male partner, being an accessory, carrying knives for boyfriends, assisting in cleaning up after a murder, hiding weapons etc – but are actually prime movers in some cases."

She continued: "We have seen some appalling acts of torture by women against women, we have seen increasing signs of groups of young girls using knives, against predominantly other young girls."'

Thaindian News: Most female child molesters are victims of abuse themselves

anthony · 18 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Most female child abusers have themselves been victims of sexual abuse, says a new study.

The finding, published in the April issue of the Journal of Interpersonal Violence, has the potential to help break the cycle of abuse by improving treatment for offenders and their young victims.

Strickland said the sexual abuse of minors by women has been largely ignored by the general public, the legal system and by academic researchers.

Many people believe that women are not capable of committing such acts, she said, and the abuse of boys by women is often dismissed as the boys sowing their oats or even being lucky.

The truth is that both boys and girls are molested by female perpetrators and these victims often suffer a myriad of consequences affecting their sexuality, relationships and beliefs about themselves and others.'

FOX: Postpartum Depression: It Happens to Dads, Too

anthony · 18 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"During my sixteen years practicing psychiatry I have treated dozens of men experiencing major depression after fathering a child. These men have come to my office with symptoms like low mood, tearfulness, decreased self-esteem, impaired sleep and decreased concentration. Some have even struggled with suicidal ideation. It was enough to make me suggest to my publisher a year or so ago that we consider my writing a book on male postpartum depression.

Now, my clinical experiences have been borne out by a scientific study from the Center for Pediatric Research at the Eastern Virginia Medical School in Norfolk. Dr. James Paulson and his colleagues found that about 10 percent of new fathers displayed symptoms of major depression, far more than the three to five percent of men in the general population who suffer with the condition.

For the men I treated, becoming fathers represented far-ranging changes in their views of themselves. Many felt ill equipped psychologically or economically or both to be valuable to a child. For some, the birth of a child had made them dwell on their own fractured relationships with their dads. For others, becoming a father made them feel as though their sex lives would be forever changed or even non-existent, lost in the translation from coupling to parenting."

Ohio Council for Fathers Rights Prepares for 'Dead Beat Dad' Lawsuit

anthony · 18 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A parental rights group says it is mounting a lawsuit against the Hamilton County Sheriff's Department for listing 'dead beat parents' on its website. The "Ohio Council for Fathers Rights" says it wants to sue for libel and character defamation. Local 12's Angela Ingram spoke with the group that says some parents are unfairly targeted.

The group says this list doesn't make a distinction between people who really don't make any effort to pay a dime of child support and parents who have fallen on hard times. The list seems to go on... and on. They are names of men and women who owe back child support, and now, they're on the sheriff's website. But, it's the label "deadbeat" that a parental rights group says amounts to libel."

Australia: Teacher dismissed for "secret affair" with boy

anthony · 18 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A TEACHER at a West Australian Christian school had a secret sexual relationship with a teenage student for six months before the boy's girlfriend raised the alarm last month, police said yesterday.

The woman, who cannot be named for legal reasons, is alleged to have had the sexual relationship with the boy, who was a student at the school in the state's southwest where she taught, from July last year, when he was 14, to January this year.

...

She has been charged with four counts of sexual penetration of a child between the ages of 13 and 16."

Video: No Jail For Woman Who Stabbed Boyfriend During 'Rough' Sex

anthony · 18 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The video debates whether this situation is an accident or assault. Reverse the genders, the man does significant jail time.

RADAR ALERT: Mission Critical! Stop I-VAWA in its Tracks Now!!

Matt · 19 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The International Violence Against Women Act (I-VAWA) has been introduced in the U.S House of Representatives. I-VAWA has an innocent-sounding name that belies a radical social agenda and will export the failed polices of VAWA. Under the guise of curbing domestic violence, I-VAWA would also:

1. Harm families around the world by promoting American rates of divorce and single parent homes.
2. Impose radical cultural imperialism by coercing other countries to adopt harmful programs that have nothing to do with domestic violence. As one example, I-VAWA pushes an ideological Western conception of reproductive rights on countries that have very strong cultural and religious traditions.
3. Create a new federal 'super-agency' that would control many aspects of U.S. foreign policy.
4. Promote failed economic programs such as "comparable worth" where wages are decided by unelected government cronies.
5. Funnel millions of taxpayer money to ideologically-driven organizations such as Legal Momentum (N.O.W.'s Legal Defense Fund), to the tune of $175 million a year.

For more information go to http://mediaradar.org#ivawa200801

It is much easier to stop new legislation than modify existing legislation. If we can show real grassroots opposition we can defeat this bill. Congressman Howard Berman (D-Ca) Chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs is the sponsor of I-VAWA.

A common strategy in passing bills is to have the Chairman of a committee sponsor the bill and then get the ranking member from the other party to co-sponsor the bill. The ranking member of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs is Congresswoman Ros-Lehtinen's (R -Fla). She has not signed up to be a co-sponsor of the bill and we need to keep it that way.

We are asking everybody to contact Congresswoman Ros-Lehtinen's (R -Fla) and ask her to oppose I-VAWA bill # H.R. 5927. Her contact info is:
Phone: 202-225-3931
Fax: 202-225-5620

Please phone or fax her and use any or all of the reasons above to make your case. If you are from Florida please mention this in the call. As always be polite and courteous.

++
Date of RADAR Release: May 19, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Equal Parenting Trek Makes Front Page of Detroit News

Matt · 19 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Robert Pedersen was devastated three years ago when a divorce judge said he could see his two children only a few days a month.

Pedersen's divorce agreement now includes long weekends, a Wednesday overnight visit and half of summers, holidays and spring breaks with his children. It's almost enough time to make him feel that he can provide an equal amount of parenting to his kids.

Michigan law recommends that custody decisions be based on which parent has been the primary caregiver unless it can be shown that another arrangement is more appropriate, but Pedersen and other noncustodial parents are fighting to modify the law so joint physical custody becomes the norm. They view equal parenting access as a civil rights issue, but opponents say equal time isn't always best for children.'

MAJOR KUDOS TO ALL INVOLVED!

Research suggests women uninterested in careers in hard science, engineering and IT

Xlp Thlplylp · 19 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This article discusses recent studies indicating that, on the average, women select themselves out of careers in the hard sciences, engineering and information technology.

For example, one study, published in the Journal of Economic Psychology in November 2007, found that "...personal preference was the single largest determinative factor in whether women went into IT." The study found that that "preference accounted for about two-thirds of the gender imbalance" in information technology.

Another study of mathematically precocious men and women found that men were "much more likely to go into engineering or physical sciences than women," whereas women "were more likely to go into careers in medicine, biological sciences, humanities, and social sciences."

CNN: DNA cleared them, but they'll never feel free

anthony · 19 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'DALLAS, Texas (CNN) -- Wiley Fountain is homeless just five years after he walked out of prison an innocent man. He is one of the 17 men wrongfully convicted in Dallas County, Texas, then cleared by DNA evidence.

He was one of the lucky few to receive financial compensation from the state, but the $190,000 or so that made it into his pocket is long gone.

For awhile, Fountain wandered the streets of Dallas, looking for aluminum cans to trade in for cash. He earned the occasional meal by cleaning the parking lot of a restaurant. At night he had nowhere to go.

Blackburn said these wrongly convicted men get "a double-whammy screw job." He said there's little help from the government to transition back into society and they're still viewed as criminals once they're out of prison.'

Please vote in survey on Equal Parenting Rights, and special thanks

Anonymous · 20 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Please vote here as soon as possible.

Detroit News also saw the traffic, comment, etc and moved the online story to not only the news section but also on the Detroit News homepage. Thank you! Help us make #1 story by 12EST see home page - On the right side "Most Popular" (http://www.detnews.com/apps/pbcs.dll/frontpage)

Also, because of the traffic online, comments, survey votes Detroit News has added yet another box to the right of the article titled “More information”. Prior to this they only had the “related content” box. They also linked to the DC Rally as well.

Those who have helped out so far with comments, traffic, survey votes, etc need to be commended for seeing the value in acting promptly. Your wisdom is greatly appreciated.

If you have not yet helped with this please feel free to help out as soon as you can. Special thanks to all! This media “win” has grown into more of our information being seen by those who are unaware of our struggles.

29% of US men are domestic abuse victims arindamp · 20 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'WASHINGTON: Almost a third of men have been victims of domestic violence, though their trauma is often hidden and understudied — just as in the case of women 10 years ago, according to a new study.

The American study, which involved phone interviews with over 400 randomly sampled adult males, came up with some surprising findings.

As many as five percent of the men had experienced domestic violence in the past year, 10% in the past five years, and 29% over their lifetimes.'

Also see article here.

Erectile dysfunction warns of worse problems

anthony · 20 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Men with diabetes already know that erectile dysfunction can be a distressing side effect of the illness, adding insult to injury for about 80 percent of those who have the disease.

But sexual symptoms may also signal problems that go beyond impaired intimacy, according to new research that shows diabetic men who struggle with impotence face twice the risk for potentially deadly heart problems.

In fact, erectile dysfunction can predict cardiovascular troubles that include chest pain, heart attack, stroke — and death, according to two new studies published in the latest issue of the Journal of the American College of Cardiology."

New York Times: Girls' Gains Have Not Cost Boys, Report Says

anthony · 20 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The American Association of University Women, whose 1992 report on how girls are shortchanged in the classroom caused a national debate over gender equity, has turned its attention to debunking the idea of a "boys' crisis."

"Girls' gains have not come at boys' expense," says a new report by the group, to be released on Tuesday in Washington.

...

"Many people remain uncomfortable with the educational and professional advances of girls and women, especially when they threaten to outdistance their male peers," the report says , citing Christina Hoff Sommers's 2000 book, "The War Against Boys: How Misguided Feminism is Harming Our Young Men."'

Wendy McElroy: A feminist defense of men's rights

anthony · 20 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

There's nothing like a McElroy article to stir some heated debate. Have fun guys! Excerpt:

'This is a transcription of a speech delivered before a man's rights group.

"When they speak, their voices sound similar to those of women in the 60's when the feminist movement, called Second Wave feminism, swept through our culture like a force of nature and left it changed forever. The women demanded of men, "Give us equal rights, give us respect." Forty years later -- two generations later -- the situation has been reversed. It is now men, not women, who are protesting against systematic discrimination against their sex. Even the issues around which the complaints gather are similar to those raised in the '60s. Men are saying they are not taken seriously by the police as victims of domestic violence. Similar to female rape victims from decades ago, society tends to stigmatize and blame men who are victims of spousal abuse."'

Mom forced to live in car with dogs widely reported-- homeless men still ignored

anthony · 20 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This story has been all over the news. It has been the top headline on CNN's news site. As usual, we hear very little in regard to the massive disparity of the male homeless population. I work as a psychiatric social worker and take it from me, the vast majority of the mentally ill individuals I place in supportive housing are male. One particular man was living behind a 7-11. During the winter he had his foot amputated because of frost bite. The man was so happy when my agency purchased him a wheel chair. You'll never see such male suffering anywhere on cable news. Excerpt:

"John Quigley, an economics professor at the University of California-Berkeley, said the California housing crisis has left many middle-class families temporarily homeless or forced them to go to food banks to feed their families.

"Part of the reason why it's so painful in Santa Barbara is there's so little in the way of alternative housing," Quigley said. "If there were alternative low and moderate housing and rental accommodations that were reasonably close by, you can imagine it wouldn't have this desperate look to it as people living in their cars."

At the only lot for women in Santa Barbara, it's a tough existence. There are no showers or running water. On the night CNN visited, a half-dozen women already were in the parking lot before nightfall."

Operation "G-WAR"

Thundercloud. · 20 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I've been thinking long and hard about the state of men in this country and in the Western world, generally.

Each and every day through media, family courts and other places. The constant belittling, dehumanizing, mockery and gynosexism and over all bigotry against men our "civilization" is bathed in and beaten over the head with. And increasingly, I see the effects on not just men but women, too. The damage is severe. It has been nearly completely absorbed into the public Psyche, things that would now be considered unacceptable to be said or done to ANY group of Americans, and called "bigotry" and "un-American" is said and done to men on an ever flow basis.

We call America a "free country". with "Freedom and Justice for ALL". I don't care WHAT you've been told, this country is NOT "liberty" OR "JUSTICE" for "ALL".

If it were, Native Americans would not be starving to death, living in 3rd world conditions on forgotten wastelands called "reservations". And, if it were, hate speech against MEN would not be tolerated any more that it would be WOMEN.

The constant barrage from the media, News or "Entertainment" of such vile and literal Naziesque vitriol would be tolerated by NO ONE, Men, Women or who EVER.

Yet it is tolerated against Men.

If America WAS about "JUSTICE for ALL" would that not mean EVERYONE regardless of who they are? If America deprives even one group of Americans of Justice. It can no longer make such a claim about itself.

My Brothers (and few sisters), I say that America has and is waging WAR against it's own citizens. It's MALE citizens, in this case. Feminism and propaganda, are the primary weapons for the moment. but what ELSE in the future? And yes it IS a war. Look at the ever increasing DAMAGE that is being done to this once great nation. Some of it irreparable. WOMEN (or at least a good majority) are compliant with this war.

I say we (FINALLY) start to fight back. And I believe I may have away to do just THAT, with no casualties on either "side". Except for Neofeminism, perhaps.

I call it "operation G-WARS" AKA "Gender war".

Of course it is not a war that would harm or oppress ANYONE.

We have been complaining for DECADES about the ill treatment of Western men. But very few of us have done anything about it

I may have a way we can stand together without necessarily being in the same room, state or even country.

If Scott posts this submission, I will go into detail, if not I may just bring it up, when it's again appropriate on another thread.

Thanks.

Your favorite neighborhood,

Thundercloud

Police: Woman Left Newborn Son to Suffocate in Trunk of Car

anthony · 20 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'GASTONIA, N.C. — A Lincolnton, N.C., woman has been charged with felony child abuse after police said she left her newborn son in the trunk of a car to suffocate.

Authorities said 22-year-old Sharena Waynette Bess is scheduled to appear in Gaston County District Court on Tuesday. The infant is expected to make a full recovery.

Police said Bess gave birth in Charlotte on Friday, then drove herself to a women's health care facility in Gastonia. She was taken to a hospital where police say she told personnel she left the infant in a box at another hospital. A search turned up nothing.

Police later searched her car and found the baby in the trunk wrapped in a towel and placed in a book bag. An arrest warrant said Bess "left him there to asphyxiate."

Bess is being held at Gaston County Jail on $100,000 bond.'

Fathers' Rights Groups Celebrate One-Year Anniversary of Rallies in the Park

MR · 20 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Fathers' Rights Groups Celebrate One-Year Anniversary of Rallies in the Park

"Last May 2007, some people now living in Los Angeles weren't even born. A little, eight-month-old girl who attended our May '08 anniversary celebration is shown in one photo, being held in her Daddy's arms."

"A Los Angeles County District Attorney, running for a Judge's Office in the June election, stopped by unannounced to solicit our votes. "I'm with you guys," he said. "I almost got divorced a few years back and it was a real eye opener," he said."

Boy Lured by Photo of Pamela Anderson's Breasts Into Sex With Co-Worker

anthony · 21 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. This woman somehow justifies her actions because he was a 'big strong boy'. Absolutely sickening! Excerpt:

'A 32-year-old woman sent a picture of Pamela Anderson's breasts to a 15-year-old workmate shortly before beginning a sexual relationship with him, the Supreme Court in Launceston has heard.

Courtney Isabella Bailey, now 34, told police that the boy had tested her asking her for a picture of her breasts – but she sent a picture of the Baywatch star's breasts instead.

Bailey received a four-month suspended jail term today after pleading guilty to five counts of unlawful sexual intercourse with a person under the age of 17 in January 2007.'

Bailey had remarked to his parents that he was a "big strong boy" for a 15-year-old."

Prostate Cancer Petition

Vince · 22 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Please sign the petition on this website if you haven't done so already:

http://www.prostatecancerpetition.org/

Over 4,000 people have signed so far -- spread the word and let's make it 5,000 by the month's end!

Many thanks to you all.

CNN: Some ex-wives have to pay 'manimony'

Matt · 23 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'For most of the history of marriage, money changed hands before the ceremony, often in the form of dowries. But as divorce started to become more common in the 1900s, so did post-separation monetary agreements.
...
The Uniform Marriage and Divorce Act of 1970 gave men as well as women the right to ask for alimony. Up until the 1980s, however, there were only a handful of cases in the U.S. in which a woman was ordered to give money to her spouse in a divorce case. However, "in recent years there's been a greater movement towards gender equality," says Phillips.
...
Jeffrey Leving, an Illinois divorce lawyer and author of the book "Fathers' Rights" attributes a rising trend in women paying spousal support in part to an increased number of fathers serving as primary caregivers.
...
Chemtob says close to one-tenth of her clients are women who pay alimony to their exes. "When I first started 14 years ago, that number was zero," she says.'

How my mother's fanatical views tore us apart

AngryMan · 23 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

"She's revered as a trail-blazing feminist and author Alice Walker touched the lives of a generation of women. A champion of women's rights, she has always argued that motherhood is a form of servitude. But one woman didn't buy in to Alice's beliefs - her daughter, Rebecca, 38.

Here the writer describes what it was like to grow up as the daughter of a cultural icon, and why she feels so blessed to be the sort of woman 64-year-old Alice despises - a mother."

Feminism has betrayed an entire generation of women into childlessness. It is devastating.

But far from taking responsibility for any of this, the leaders of the women's movement close ranks against anyone who dares to question them

Florida mother buys 20 years for caging son

AngryMan · 23 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Florida mother has been jailed for 20 years for keeping her teenage adopted son in a cage.

The 17-year-old weighed 22kg (3st 7lb) when child welfare workers found him in 2005.

He suffered from severe medical and emotional problems. His mother, Brenda Sullivan, told a judge at the time that authorities told her to keep the boy in a crib.'

Teacher has class vote "disgusting, annoying" mentally-handicapped boy out of class

Matt · 24 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Can you just imagine a teacher of either sex having the class dot he same thing with a mentally handicapped 5-YO girl? Excerpt:

'PORT ST. LUCIE — Melissa Barton said she is considering legal action after her son's kindergarten teacher led his classmates to vote him out of class.

After each classmate was allowed to say what they didn't like about Barton's 5-year-old son, Alex, his Morningside Elementary teacher said they were going to take a vote, Barton said.
...
Barton said her son is in the process of being diagnosed with Aspberger's, a type of high-functioning autism. Alex began the testing process in February for an official diagnosis under the suggestion of Morningside Principal Marsha Cully.
...
The child's mother filed a complaint with the school resource officer, who investigated the matter, said Port St. Lucie spokeswoman Michelle Steele said. But the state attorney's office concluded the matter did not meet the criteria for emotional child abuse, so no criminal charges will be filed...'

Happy Memorial Day

Matt · 26 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

To all our veterans, living and dead:

Thank you for the many sacrifices you have made and endured to ensure the safety and security of our nation and its people. Your bravery and tireless efforts are remembered today and every day.

With utmost respect,

Men's Activist News Network

RADAR Alert: Stop I-VAWA Now!

Matt · 27 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The International Violence Against Women Act (I-VAWA - HR 5927) has recently been introduced in the U.S House of Representatives available here (.pdf file).

I-VAWA is intended to export America's failed VAWA program, which credible scientific researchers and advocates say needs substantial reform. Statistical claims contained in I-VAWA statement of findings were taken directly from a U.N. Secretary General report that was not accepted by the U.N. Third Committee. For example, I-VAWA falsely claims that approximately one in three of the women in the world will experience violence in her lifetime, with rates of up to 70 percent in some countries; and that one in five of the women in the world will be the victim of rape or attempted rape in her lifetime. Credible science shows that the international statistics are far lower.

I-VAWA would:

1. Harm families around the world by promoting American rates of divorce and single parent homes.
2. Impose radical cultural imperialism by coercing other countries to adopt harmful programs that have nothing to do with domestic violence. Gender-based programs redefining marriage, gender, birthright, parenting, and family are the core policies contained in I-VAWA.
3. Create a new federal 'super-agency' that would control many aspects of U.S. military and foreign policy.
4. Promote failed economic programs such as "comparable worth" where wages are decided by unelected government cronies.
5. Impose absurd diagnoses on problems. For example, under I-VAWA acts of war are re-defined as domestic violence in order to divert $175 million of taxpayer money annually to ideologically-driven organizations that obviously have no capability to prevent wartime atrocities – organizations such as Legal Momentum (N.O.W.'s Legal Defense Fund).

To help RADAR stop I-VAWA, please contact your House Congressional Representative and urge opposition of I-VAWA (bill number H.R. 5927). You can quickly find the telephone, fax, and email contact information for your Representative at http://www.house.gov/ and entering your zip code in the upper left corner. In your communications, please be polite and courteous, while expressing the great importance of rejecting I-VAWA.

For more information and a faxable document you can use to voice your opinion, please refer to RADAR's flyer located at here (.pdf file).

++

Date of RADAR Release: May 27, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

DAHM Launches Public Awareness Campaign for Abused Men

Matt · 27 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

As part of our ongoing effort to bring more public awareness to the plight of abused men and spread the word about our toll free helpline and services for men in relationships with abusive women, we have created an informational poster. (See here.)

The 11 x 17 poster is printed on 80lb gloss cover paper and at the bottom right hand corner of it is a small pad (48 sheets) and each sheet has our agency's name, helpline number and website address printed on it so that someone in need or a family member or friend can easily tear a sheet off and take the information with them.

Help us spread the word by putting these up in your local area today!

Place them along side other social service informational posters i.e. in court houses, hospital ER's and church bulletin boards etc. Let everyone know that when men are emotionally, psychologically and/or physically assaulted by their intimate female partners it's also domestic violence and unacceptable.

The suggested donation for each poster is $4.50. Any money we receive from the sale of these posters will go right back into public awareness and services for victims. To find out more, ask a question or obtain copies to put up in your local area to bring more awareness to this much ignored and hidden side of domestic violence please write us at: dahmwagency-at-gmail.com. Please note: We are only shipping inside the USA.

Finally, please take a quick minute to browse our fundraising webpage by going to http://www.SupportOurGroup.com/ZF1061

We really appreciate your help - Thanks for your support!

Sincerely,

Jan Brown
Founder and Executive Director
Domestic Abuse Helpline for Men and Women
1-888-7HELPLINE (1-888-743-5754)
http://www.dahmw.org/

Report from Women's Advocacy Group Threatens to Derail Efforts to Help Troubled Boys

anthony · 27 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"The report gave no clue that boys generally receive lower grades on their report cards, or that boys are far likelier to be suspended or held back a year, or that boys account for two-thirds of children in special-education programs. Attempting to portray boys as youth's favored gender, brimming with confidence and self-esteem, the AAUW also failed to account for the particular self-destructiveness of adolescent males: Not only are boys two to four times likelier to commit suicide, depending on their age, they also stand much greater risks of being murdered, killed in car accidents, or incarcerated later in life, according to data compiled by the National Center for Health Statistics and other federal agencies."

Ed. note: You may need to scroll down about 1/10 of the page to see the article. Another way to get to it fast is to search on "Friday, May 23, 2008".

38,000 troops diagnosed with PTSD, says Army

anthony · 27 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Newly diagnosed cases of post-traumatic stress disorder among U.S. troops sent to Iraq and Afghanistan surged 46.4 percent in 2007, bringing the five-year total to more than 38,000, according to U.S. military data released on Tuesday.

The statistics, released by the Army, showed the number of new PTSD cases formally diagnosed at U.S. military facilities climbed to 13,981 last year from 9,549 in 2006.

PTSD is a health condition that can result from wartime trauma such as being physically wounded or seeing others hurt or killed.

Symptoms range from irritability and outbursts of anger to sleep difficulties, trouble concentrating, extreme vigilance and an exaggerated startle response. People with the condition can persistently relive the traumatic events that initially induced horror or helplessness."

British Columbia: 3 of 4 of street boys sexually exploited by women

Anonymous · 28 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'VANCOUVER - Canada's largest study into the sexual exploitation of street kids and runaways has shattered some myths about who the abusers might be - with the most surprising finding being that many are women seeking sex with young males.

"Some youth in each gender were exploited by women with more than three out of four (79 per cent) sexually exploited males reporting exchanging sex for money or goods with a female," said Elizabeth Saewyc, associate professor of nursing at the University of British Columbia and principal investigator for the study conducted by Vancouver's McCreary Centre Society.

...
The stereotypical model of the child being abused - a teenage female being sexually abused by a male - was wrong, said Saewyc.
...
But the study found that young males were being preyed upon by sexual predators of both sexes, yet the social systems in place to deter and prevent sexual predation were only designed to help females and the criminal justice system wasn't concerned with what was happening to young males.

"Women seeking young men and boys offer transportation or other things and some go to nightclubs and bars where they can pick up under-age youth. And a certain percentage have been picked up by couples," she said.'

'You're no criminal': Judge frees jealous wife who laced her cheating husband's cake with rat poison

Anonymous · 28 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A former hospital chef who laced her cheating husband's cake with rat poison in a bid to "stop him leaving the house to see his mistress" was spared jail today.
...
She pleaded guilty to trying to poison Mr Godwin, 63, a retired builder, but the court heard she had only used a teaspoon of rat poison in his fruitcake.

She would have needed to up the dose to more than 3lbs to have killed him, Gloucester Crown Court was told.

Family members gasped and cheered when Judge Jamie Tabor said Godwin would not have to serve an immediate prison sentence.

The 56-year-old was instead handed a 12-month prison sentence suspended for 24 months.

Judge Tabor said Mr Godwin, who sat in court apart from the couple's children, had asked his former partner to go back to him.

But the judge ordered her not to see her husband for 12 months as a condition of her sentence."

Limbaugh Transcript: Joe Biden and Lawyers for Feminists

anthony · 28 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Transcript here. Excerpt:

'CALLER: You're slacking a little bit on your feminazi stuff. Right now Senator Biden is proposing a new amendment to the Violence Against Women Act. He's proposing a hundred thousand free lawyers across the nation to any woman who claims that she was abused to be able to gain custody. So women will now have free lawyers to be able to --

RUSH: Wait, wait --

CALLER: -- fight custody battles.

RUSH: Wait a minute. Have you heard anything about this, Snerdley? I really haven't heard anything about this, Quentin. Proposing a hundred thousand free lawyers across the country to any woman who claims she was abused?'

Ed. note: This is really good exposure. The Limbaugh show had at least 13.5 million weekly listeners according to Arbitron as of 2006. That's a lot pf people finding out about this.

CNN: Opposite sex drives you crazy -- the causes

anthony · 28 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'3. Women make mountains out of molehills

What you think: Women obsess about every little thing; men seem to have it all under control.

What the experts say: Men are problem-solvers and tend to bring up a problem only in order to search for its solution, says Schwarz. The "eureka" moment of problem-solving increases the level of dopamine, a pleasure-inducing chemical, in the brain. (This also explains why men will wait until it's absolutely necessary to stop and ask for directions.)

Women relieve stress by talking and relating their problems to others, which produces serotonin, said to enhance moods and ward off depression.'

Ed. note: So this explains it! =)

Parents petition to fire teacher who voted autistic boy out of class

anthony · 28 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Hundreds of parents of autistic children are signing an online petition to get Florida teacher Wendy Portillo fired for her alleged tactics toward a 5-year-old boy that mirror the reality show “Survivor.”

Morningside Elementary School in Port St. Lucie, Fla., alerted Melissa Barton this year that her son, Alex, suffers from a high-functioning form of autism called Asperger's Syndrome, FOX 29 reported.

Barton claims that Alex was punished for symptoms of his disability, such as humming and eating his homework. She says Portillo went too far last week when she kicked Alex out of class, and then allowed the other students to vote on whether he should be allowed back in.

...

But the state attorney's office decided the matter did not meet criteria for emotional child abuse, so no criminal charges will be filed, Steele said.'

"Is your guy hooking up at work?"

Matt · 28 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Appearing in that bastion of genderal equity and journalistic excellence, "Cosmopolitan" magazine, and republished by MSN (surprise!), this article asks if "your guy is hooking up at work?" (Original article found here). Excerpt:

'In fact, statistics show that the workplace has become the number one breeding ground for cheating. According to a study done by infidelity expert Shirley Glass, PhD, 62 percent of men who admitted to having an affair had done so with someone they met at work. "You often spend more time with coworkers than with your partner, which can create intense bonding," says Bonnie Eaker Weil, PhD, author of Can We Cure and Forgive Adultery? To ensure your guy is doing his job rather than his coffee-break buddy, follow these tips.'

No mention of female infidelity or how it is also true that if a woman is going to cheat, it's likely also to be with a coworker. See MANN posting here, or simply search on "infidelity" in the Search box.

Rally announcement for people negatively effected by family courts in Los Angeles

MR · 28 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Friday, June 13, 2008 there is a must-attend rally for people who've been negatively effected by family courts. Here is the Youtube Announcement / Invitation if you can make it to the Los Angeles area that day.

Rally Announcement

The Los Angeles rally is our local effort. As most of you may be aware, this is a part of a larger nationwide effort scheduled for that day.

Get active! Get involved! Speak up! Demand change!

Teacher Caught on Tape: Kindergartner 'Ignorant, Pathetic, Self-Absorbed'

patriotsofamerica · 28 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

How much more proof does the world need to see that there truly is a war against boys? It is being shown on the main stream media now!!! Do we need anymore proof? The people of this country really have no more excuses to turn a blind eye. WAKE UP!!! Video report here.

The Male Crisis Explained

mayfieldga · 29 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Submitted by Rick Lynn mayfieldga-at-bellsouth.net

This is one part of my learning theory that shows how our individual environments greatly affect thinking, learning, and motivation to learn. The complete theory with graph and figure will go to all upon request by e-mail.

====

There is a growing gulf in communication between men and women. The nineteenth century belief man should be strong has allowed increased aggression upon Males from day one. Along with this aggression allowed is the idea of pulling oneself up by the bootstraps that denies much in terms of mental, emotional, social, and academic supports from day one. The help usually given involves something to help make Males be strong as in sports or other physical competitions. While this type of treatment may have proved useful in the more physical nineteenth century, it is working opposite of need in the information age where it requires much more accumulated mental, emotional, social and academic skills acquired over time. In these areas, Males are being seriously shortchanged.

There is another area this kind of treatment is doing harm to Males in the information age. The increased aggression they receive from day one, creates two bad things for Males: 1. It creates higher average layers of mental frictions (redefined from higher average stress) which inhibits thinking, learning, and motivation in mental areas. This can lead to a Male student falling years behind mentally, emotionally, socially, and academically. 2. It also creates the Male ego or defensive cushion that the Male develops from an early age to protect them from the aggressions they receive from society. This Male ego or defensive cushion has the negative consequences of further alienating the Male from “any” various mental, emotional, social, and academic supports they “might just” receive from society. This can also lead to a large deficit for Males in learning various social and academic skills over time.

Also society’s accepted aggression toward the Male from an early age onward creates so much mental, emotional, and social modeled and treated aggression in body language, tone, inflection, words, and even physically, that it poisons the well in their minds to various degrees for interacting, accepting, and enjoying mental, emotional, and social - knowledge, support, and skills from others. This poisoned well (mental defensiveness or tune out) is more destructive in areas of education where their ability to grow academically depends on much mental, emotional, social, and academic interaction, support from parents, teachers, and peers. This defensiveness along with more continued aggression from society and little if any good mental, emotional, social support from society creates a recipe for a very large lag in development - mentally, emotionally, socially, and academically over time. This is why the current, ever growing, international Male Crisis. It may not appear this way seeing many Males because they have learned to create a facade or false face to hide their lack of abilities in many areas. This is probably why some Males say or do certain inappropriate things at times. They are simply reaching into their bag of social tricks and coming out with the best they can think of at that time to cover their real insecurities.

When Males experience various forms of verbal and/or physical aggression from parents, siblings, peers, and others in society as appears to be more often than not, this sets up a mental preparation or wariness of facing similar things in the future. This defense mechanism is really tough on many Males in education for when they have mental, emotional, social knowledge and academic skills paired with firm words and/or treatment, it then calls that defensive mindset to the fore to prepare not for learning for more aggression. When such words and/or treatment come from teachers over time, this can cause the child to tune out of much instruction and other learning that can along with the combination of higher layers of mental frictions can cause a Male child to fall years behind their peers socially, emotionally, and academically. So in a way the firmness and authoritarian atmosphere could be really be hurting students, especially many Male students.

The combination of higher layers of mental frictions and defensive cushion are working to create an impediment to learning that accumulates in harm over time. In society today, men are given love, honor, respect, and support or the essentials of their self-worth only on the “condition of sufficient” achievement, money, power, status or image. They must fight through the still present, nineteenth century confrontations allowed by society upon them from an early age to achieve those benefits and feelings of self-worth.

For women, the nineteenth century belief woman should be protected and still in effect, has created much overprotection and even indulgence for many women today. This is creating very low layers of mental frictions collectively for women. This makes thinking, learning, and motivation in mental areas much easier. This accumulates over time to create more acquired mental, emotional, social and academic advancement in many areas. In addition to this protection there is the continual mental, emotional, social, and academic support from day one that provides a virtual high speed expressway that accumulates over time to create much training and advancement in information age skills. These two continual supports from society over time create everything a person needs today to succeed in the information age. Since women are given through overprotection, the benefits of love, honor, respect, and continual support, all the benefits of self-worth from an early age without qualification (simply because they are girls), they are working with much more continual support, attention, and interaction to accumulate more mental, emotional, social, and academic knowledge and skills that can be transformed easily into money, power, status, and image. Even after this support, society’s protection, continued support and view toward beauty and charm continually helps them in the information age.

This differential treatment has now created a tremendous gulf between men and women today. Women are now surging ahead academically and economically due to this protection and men are still puzzled as to why they are falling behind in those areas. You see if you remove the old money from older men, the girls are making more.

The current beliefs believed by both men and women today is that Males learn differently and/or simply do not try hard enough. These beliefs only add to the gulf between men and women today. The men who believe this and have not information to the contrary may believe they are somehow mentally inferior or just not working hard enough. Somehow, humans, men included, tend to reflect the treatment in their lives upon others and do not know or not allowed by society to say how differential treatment is hurting them. This may lead Males to give up in developing various mental, emotional, social, and academic skills over time. They may limit their interest and desires to smaller windows of fulfillment in their social connections. They will continue to dress up for display, their Male defensive cushion to at least present a plausible image when dealing in areas where they are not as competent. Worse for these Males, they may advance their beliefs and feelings onto their sons from an early age, thus enabling the continuation of the harmful belief of inferiority in the information age.

As for women, they having been told the same teaching that persons are naturally better in some areas or simply work harder. They may truly feel they are simply more intelligent or have worked harder to achieve what they have achieved. In our world, again women like men often reflect their environment and treatment upon others and so do not appreciate difference in treatment. Also, in our world of insecurities, it is no wonder when women achieve, to boost their insecurity, as affects everyone, they will believe this achievement is due to more intelligence or greater effort on their part and not due to any environmental variables even if they feel such variables are at work.

This differential treatment has now created a tremendous gulf in communication between men and women. You see, as Males develop from allowed aggressions over time, this treatment operates upon their body language, words, tone, inflection, and voice stress. Over the years, due to this kind of treatment, there is a type of richness added to their words, tones, and inflections that denotes perhaps a higher form of feeling and compassion for others, again reflecting their lives upon others or just valuing others more so. Of course there are also Males due to so much aggression over time who have turned their values around so that nearly any means are okay to justify an end usually for self gain.

As for women, the overprotection given women from day one collectively operates upon their body language, words, tone, and inflection over time. As such attention can do to anyone, this will usually create words and tones that are more light and less rich in tone, inflection, and voice stress. To the Male, (including myself) this may appear less substantive or less rich in feeling or compassion when trading such words of conversations with women. Such words can even unintentionally feel patronizing if given too lightly or with less feeling at various times.

I believe as a result of such differential treatment, men are now looking at women only within the window of areas in which they truly feel there is mutual interest and competency. I do not need to explain this part. I feel however, women due to not having knowledge of those differences in treatment, may too often reflect their values and desires upon men with the woman's much larger window of acceptance. Here is where women make their big mistakes. The men hide their shortcomings very well to achieve their small window of interest, while women hide their feelings of superiority to achieve their window or interest. Many women truly believe they are more intelligent and can control things to achieve a happy family with the man as a supporting member. However after the men have achieved their end, they will not be able to hold up their false defensive cushion on a continual basis. The women due to feelings of intellectual superiority will usually then become more open in their natural advanced mental, emotional, social, and academic development. These two truths will collide eventually, leaving one or both sides either perplexed or angry.

Young girls tend to choose inappropriate marriage mates because boys who honestly portray their instability (due to society accepted mistreatment)are more rejected by the girls. Since the boys know this, the boys who are usually selected come from three groups: (A) boys who have been sheltered and have not yet received their confrontations; (B) boys who put on the appearance of stability in order to sway the girl; and (C) boys who manage to acquire a somewhat stable life by emptying their life of a measure of circumstances, responsibilities, and weights or values. Young and older girls are usually the last ones to learn this information. Girls have not been told these differences exist.

The girl can protect herself by mapping out how her perspective mate deals with his angers, circumstances, responsibilities, along with weights and values he applies to elements in his life. These are natural human emotions and traits; they should flow naturally. A boy who does poorly in these areas or worse, appears to hide these traits, is unconsciously giving the girl a message of warning. This information is vital and necessary for preventing teen-age date and domestic-marriage violence.

Today, the gulf in communication between men and women is growing more deeply each day. For men, those who are trying to lead a more decent life, from the confrontations they have experienced, they are usually very compassionate and caring persons, whose words are rich in tone and inflection. For many men though, there is the value of the world, where society’s lack of values toward them have made them less caring or compassionate. Such ones may develop a very fluid personality designed to create whatever image is necessary to accomplish their immediate ends. Too often women make the mistake of seeing the more compassionate men as weak and the more brisk or bold (more like the overprotect women) as strong.

For women there are many who desire to have both a family and a career. They are filled with the language of social and academic education they have been supported with from day one. They reflect their lives from their close reflection of themselves upon others and then look for Male companions that match their lives. However, their lack of true compassion and feeling for others that comes from such overprotection spills out continually through their body language, words, tone, and inflection. The freedom of expression allowed for women to give verbal, silent abuse, an hollow kindness even toward a third party (such a waiter), also presents a huge obstacle for women, especially when such comes out when dating. You see if men see it one time, they can expect it again toward them some day.

A biggie for financially successful women: men have faced confrontations from day one. Men do not expect goodness and support from society. They have learned from continuous aggressions from society to expect more aggression from individuals where they are perceived as weaker in some way. This is why men cannot allow themselves to present weakness in some manner for it invites only more aggression from society. They are given love, honor, respect, and support only when they demonstrate to society sufficient achievement, money, power, status, or image. When they see a successful woman, more successful than themselves, they learned to expect verbal, silent abuse, or hollow kindness/ patronization (lol; I have received this kind of treatment simply from just their perception of me as more humble and mild).

For those women who are less educated and attempting to lead a more caring life, perhaps by experience of more hardships there is greater sincerity of words, tone, and inflection. These differences are felt. These women are truly to be commended for they are bucking the model that is presented in the media today. They may still be susceptible to men who put forth an image seeking only a small window of interest.

For me, I see so many insecure persons, both men and women, who are trying to survive. I see the media hurting everyone by fostering the idea of power struggles without care or consideration for others. I see the rewarding of strength at all cost and domination as the key to maintaining viewer interest and support.

Due to the advancement of the information age and the continual increase in domination by Females in white collar positions, I see the media now much more dominated by women who have saturated the airways from very light, tinish, and seemingly (lol, or very real) patronizing words, tones, and inflections to very strong, hard biting words. Society's protection for women allow these kind of expressions with impunity. I do not value such words. Due to the confrontations I have experienced, I find them less valuable, even counterfeit. Perhaps this is why many other Males are tuning out from the media. I am though a very caring person. I feel for everyone. However, I know there are many persons, who respect only strength and power and see mildness, kindness, and goodness as some weakness. I see bank tellers, postal clerks, grocery check out persons, and even civil servants, using their society protected freedoms of expression to give verbal, silent abuse, and hollow kindness, usually to those individuals who the most sincere. I feel this gulf between men and women cannot continue for very long. I am intelligent and can deal with anyone. I just will not allow my words to be exchanged for counterfeit words. LOL; Fortunately for me, I grew up with a speech impediment so rejection is something I have a great deal of experience.

It is incorrect to view the Male Crisis on role models. The lack of role models is the result of the problem, not the cause. If you had a bag full of sand with a hole in the bottom, you would "not" say there is less sand in the bag; you would say there is a hole in the bottom of the bag. Indeed, we should fix the hole in the bag by providing Males with tools to develop long-term, mental/emotional stability so they can better compete mentally and emotionally in the information age. One professional was attempting to find more role models for Male children. He boasted that a Male child's esteem goes up when they have one positive role model. What he was unknowingly saying was that Males have such little attention that when they do receive that attention, they are very grateful. This creates the large rise in esteem. The fight for attention could be creating misbehavior in Male children.

Today, many men are becoming angry because they losing more than jobs and status, they are losing out on those things they are seeking most of all, love, honor, respect, support, the essentials of self-worth. The little bites they receive in the various media and the workplace accumulate over time and create much anger that touches on and erodes their feelings of self-worth. As a person loses feelings of self-worth they also lose regard for consequences. If men fall behind more collectively, they may begin to retaliate more collectively, thus ending the present shield of over-protection for women. This will mean much more abuse and crimes against women. It will do well for all parents, teachers, employers to those in various media to be more kind to others, including Males.

I feel there is a perfect social storm that may be accumulating in strength over time. I see overprotection as creating a faulty value process for women who may be reflecting their stability upon men and wrongly considering men to be treated more on an equal basis, so no perceived imbalance. In addition, the medical model that presents learning as all genetic and effort and not individual environments, may present women with the false idea they have simply worked harder and/or genetically more intelligent than their Male counterparts. I feel both the overprotection and wrong perceptions are creating measures of accumulated harm to their Male counterparts.

1. As for overprotection, this creates a large gulf or void of understanding and compassion or feeling for Males since Females have not faced the free aggression from society from early in their lives through adulthood (as early as nine months, a difference occurs). Over time, the overprotection and even indulgence for many women has operated on their body language, words, tones, inflections, and voice stress to make their words sound hollow and counterfeit, even to the point of unintentionally sounding patronizing. The problem with communication between men and women is the large differential in treatment between them over time. This has created a large gulf in appreciation for men who have faced confrontations. The women's protected freedom of expression can hurt because they have not experienced sufficient confrontations to respect those who have. Over time, such freedom of expression and lack of understanding or feeling could accumulate a mounting sense of hurt and anger for Males. This makes it more difficult for men to trust the expressions of women in general.

2. Part two, is the false belief of simply working harder or not genetically equal could lead many women to use their words in more pointed, condescending, patronizing, and aggressive ways. Such acts also accumulate in hurt and anger for Males. Over time, the combined effect could create a perfect social storm if Males fall behind collectively. This could create a joint appreciation for this hurt and anger. This in turn could create more accepted aggression toward Females in general. I see both traits of needless aggression by women in the media and in the work place all the time. Note, these various social bites or mini-hurts are not dealt with individually and forgotten, but accumulate to create psychological suffering. These bites accumulate to create psychological suffering from the media, the workplace, and at home that when combined, leads to violent reactions. As their feelings of self-worth are eroded, so are their fears of consequences for actions. The media and mental health agencies should take heed of this possible scenario and its accumulated, harmful effects on Males. Could society remain oblivious to this growing problem until that critical point is reached? Perhaps the election of a Female President will bring that storm closer perhaps even hit society immediately. This is why it is important to understand and prepare for this possible outcome. For Males it is like seeing someone cutting across the track and winning while they are running an obstacle course and losing. Then they are told to follow those so-called winners and accept their patronization.

We need to begin teaching both Male and Female children and adults how our individual environments do greatly affect learning, skills, and abilities, over time. We really do need to show Males and Females how differences in treatment do exist in the information age and have hurt Males over time. By providing this understanding, both Males and Females will begin to have much more appreciation for the other in terms of their differences in environment. Males will recognize how their environments are creating their difficulties and remove from their shoulders the false belief they are somehow genetically inferior or simply not working hard enough. Females will perhaps also recognize both how differential treatment has hurt the Male and speak with greater care and understanding rather than the current society allowed verbal, silent abuse, and patronization they presently give to those they feel an advantage over. Only providing this understanding will the two groups be able to exist in more harmony and maintain better relationships.

To reduce and eliminate this problem and help Males have a more equal footing, parents, teachers, administrators, and all forms of media need to be taught this critical point and its many areas of Male aggression will begin to increase to a "much higher level" than presently seen. We need to begin teaching parents, teachers, and others who teach and model to children that the extra aggression they have given Males is hurting the Male children's ability to grow mentally, emotionally, socially, and academically over time. They need to be taught how to treat those students and other Males in society with as much respect and care as they presently provide Female students. This is the only way to help Males begin to catch up in all of the many social areas they are presently lagging. This new way of thinking will be very difficult for the Male parent, teacher, administrator, or other professional for they have been raised with the old, more aggressive ways for many years and have come to rely on their feelings of self-worth based upon their money, power, status, and image. They have also experienced years of aggression, which has been woven into their mind and spirit to create their defensive posture or Male ego that is now more or less imprinted into their personality. Such a spirit will almost invariably imprint this same posture or spirit into the Male children men are raising. For many Males it will require much cognitive understanding of the problem and a willingness to begin treating Male children with the same respect and give the same positive attention to the Male children as they do with Female children. For women, this means also learning how to not use Male children as emotional scapegoats as society has allowed them to do in the past. In addition, women need to begin realizing that using adult Males as emotional scapegoats (with current feelings of protection by society) when they have power over them in some way is a very hazardous way to approach Males. You know, with continuous indulgence so directly related to mental, emotional, social, and academic knowledge and skills over time, society would practically have to treat Female and Male children the same in many areas to achieve equality between genders. I see Males and society losing in the end, but this end may be pushed off much farther into the future provided there is much more understanding and action in this area over time.

This problem will only get worse unless action is taken now. My complete theory with many social applications are free to all by e-mail at mayfieldga-at-bellsouth.net

Sandhurst Gurkha fighting for life after wife slits his throat

Anonymous · 29 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A Gurkha serving at Sandhurst is fighting for his life after his throat was slit by his wife at the military academy.

Detectives are looking at whether the soldier's own Kukri blade - a traditional Gurkha weapon - was used in the attack.

The 40-year-old was last night described as being in a serious but stable condition, while his 42-year-old wife was detained under the Mental Health Act.

It is believed the couple's 10-year-old daughter witnessed the bloody attack on her father. Following the incident, paramedics rushed the stricken soldier to Frimley Park Hospital in Surrey."

Note to non-Brits: The Royal Regiment of Gurkhas is a unit of the British Army. A remnant of the British Empire, it consists of soldiers from Nepal in the Himalayas. They are renowned for their toughness, and they retain their traditional tribal knives as well as using modern weapons.

DNA exonerates Chicago man who spent 12 years in prison for rape

anthony · 29 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Cage became the 29th Illinoisan to be exonerated by DNA evidence. He was convicted in 1996 and sentenced to 40 years in prison for the rape of a 15-year-old girl.

Yesterday, Chief Criminal Court Judge Paul Biebel dismissed the conviction at the request of the Cook County state's attorney's office. Cage was released from Illinois River Correctional Center in Canton and went straight to his mother's home for an all-night celebration with family."

New marriage fee targets domestic violence

anthony · 29 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Beginning next week, Illinois counties will begin collecting an extra $5 from those seeking marriage licenses. The money will be used to pay for legal counseling and services aimed at the state's growing number of domestic violence cases.
...
The fee isn't the first time victim rights advocates have sought to secure more money to help people escape abusive relationships. In 1981, lawmakers approved a tax on marriage licenses and divorce filings to generate money for women's shelters and domestic violence assistance."

Soldier suicides hit highest rate

anthony · 29 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"WASHINGTON - Army soldiers committed suicide in 2007 at the highest rate on record, and the toll is climbing ever higher this year as long war deployments stretch on. At least 115 soldiers killed themselves last year, up from 102 the previous year, the Army said Thursday.
...
Other findings in the 2007 report included:

93 of the 115 suicides were active duty troops; 22 were members of the Army National Guard or Reserve who had been mobilized.

Five were women."

ABCNews.com: "Girls in Sexist Societies Worse at Math" mens_issues · 29 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Another MSM article about girls, math, and so-called "sexism." Excerpt:

'Researchers believe they may have found at least one answer: where girls live. Girls living in countries where there is more gender equality perform better in math, sometimes outpacing boys, than girls who live in countries with more male-dominated societies.
...
Generally, there are two explanations for the gender gap in math, according to Sapienza: biological and environmental. The biological reasoning says that boys are naturally better in math based on research involving spatial tests.

"It's not very strong evidence because we don't have strong correlation between spatial abilities and math scores," she said.'

My reply can be found here. Search on the phrase: 'The term "sexist" as used in the article has no meaning to me'

Metropolitan Museum of Art: Superheroes Exhibit

Anonymous · 30 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The New York Metropolitan Museum of Art is exhibiting "Superheroes: Fashion and Fantasy"

They have an interesting take on female superheroes:

"Superhero comics have tended to promote an ideology that is both masculinist and driven to mastery. Nowhere are these biases more blatant than in the representation of female superheroes. With unabashed and unapologetic obviousness, women are portrayed as objects of male desire and fantasy with absurdly exaggerated sexual characteristics."

Surely, muscle-bound Superman is a caricature of masculinity just as Catwoman is a caricature of femininity. Why do they think that the exaggerated characteristics of male superheroes don't make them objects of female desire and fantasy? Why is the ideology "masculinist" and "chauvinistic"? Male superheroes, more often than not, use their powers to protect women and seek a woman's approval. Female superheroes are liberated from that, and have no such constraints put upon them and aren't held to the same moral standards.

A male superhero's physique is equally unattainable by a man as a female superhero's is to a woman.

Without a doubt, there are far more important issues that men need to fight for interpretations of fictional characters in a museum. We simply don't have the luxury that feminists have to even bother engaging in this kind of discourse: there are real legal and social issues that need to be resolved first. But they're interesting questions, nonetheless, and point to how mainstream society still feels that only women can be sexualized (and thus victimized by sex) and that men are naturally hyper-sexual.

Interestingly, the museum chose to use female figure for all of its thumbnails, rather than the male superhero figures contained in the articles themselves.

Humor: Isolated tribe Spotted in Brazil; NOW dispatches emergency team to liberate tribal women

Matt · 30 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This is a joke, guys, not a real story. Here goes:

'WASHINGTON, DC: N.O.W. spokesperson Menar Allbad answered questions from reporters today after the organization announced it would be dispatching its Emergency Women's Liberation Response Team to Brazil to enlighten, re-educate, and if need be, rescue by force, at least one woman being held captive in a primitive tribal setting in Brazil.

"We were deeply disturbed about the recent BBC story regarding a plane's overflight of a remote Brazilian village inhabited by so-called indigenous people," offered Ms. Allbad. "And while we don't wish to sound Eurocentric in our thinking, and respecting their cultural standards, we must also acknowledge such a place is certain to be filled with male chauvinist-oppressors who, by providing for and standing in defense of women in the tribe, contribute to the on-going, endless oppression of women and children.

"You have only to look at the picture of the two men painted in red with bows and arrows, by their very natures violent and dangerous to all, standing between the woman covered in some kind of black paint (an obvious attempt to keep her unseen) but of course likely to claim to be in a position to protect her. Note the absence of children as well. Obviously they are being kept hidden away from the world, so that the men can train the boys to be oppressors and can abuse the women and girls in unspeakable ways."

A pause here, as a shudder moved through the crowd.

"The apparent protective stance of those two men really hides a sadistic and innate urge to control and exploit the women and girls of the tribe," she continued. "This has been proven time and again. The same thing only in a supposedly more-refined way is seen here in our so-called western civilizations. You can be sure those arrows would be pointing at that poor woman under any other circumstances.

"We can waste no time. Our Emergency Women's Liberation Response Team is on its way now. Once at the tribal compound, they will through whatever means necessary liberate the women and children from the clutches of their evil men-folk and bring them to safety here in our offices in Washington, where we will begin the process of re-educating them and training them in the enlightened version of femininity that N.O.W. is so proud to support. And the men in that tribe? Well, we have special plans for their re-education. But more on that later."

With that, a helicopter landed near Ms. Allbad and five women in military fatigues, carrying what appeared to be Thompson submachine guns, beckoned Ms. Allbad aboard. AP later learned that she was part of the Emergency Women's Liberation Response Team being sent to Brazil. This might explain her cry of "Liberate the Brazilian so-called indigenous women from tyrrany! On to the jungle! Arrgghhhh!" as the helicopter made its way toward Dulles Airport.'

Female English Teacher Accused Of Having Sex With 3 Students

anthony · 30 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Singh was an English teacher at Richmond Hill High School. Authorities said she slept with the boy in Brooklyn. They said that on the same occasion she also had sex with the boy's two 18-year-old cousins. It's not clear whether the three were students at Singh's school.

Singh's lawyer said her client was victimized. She said the boy and his two 18-year-old cousins took advantage of her.

The lawyer said Singh has been on medical leave since November after suffering a nervous breakdown and was on medication at the time she had sex with the teenagers"

New Zealand: Boys education failure continues to be ignored

anthony · 30 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"United Future deputy leader Judy Turner says that the education gap between girls and boys demands immediate action. Her comments follow a report showing that boys are behind at every level in reading and writing, and that more needs to be done to provide a male-friendly learning environment.
...
Females are more likely than males to gain an NCEA qualification at all levels."

Huffington Post: Who Says the Boy Crisis Is Over?

anthony · 30 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"The Boy Crisis in education, if there ever was one, is over. Or so says a report issued last week by the powerful and influential American Association of University Women. For the last 18 months, I've criss-crossed the country, talking to parents, teachers, and policymakers for a book I'm writing about boys and schools. What is abundantly clear is that there's large and growing group of people who just aren't buying the AAUW's position and that they're not who you might think they'd be. Some of the very same (mostly female) teachers and librarians who helped raise up the achievement of girls over the last fifteen years are now struggling to find ways to get boys re-engaged with learning. And there's a growing constituency of smart, empowered, and increasingly vocal women -- mothers of school-aged boys -- who are intensely concerned about what's happening to their sons in school."

Florida kindergarten teacher defends having class vote 5-year-old boy out

anthony · 30 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A kindergarten teacher told police she wanted a 5-year-old boy to hear how his behavior was affecting his classmates.

After students shared their view, Morningside Elementary teacher Wendy Portillo had them vote, but said the vote was only to keep Alex Barton out of class for the day, not for good.

"Portillo said she did this as she felt that if (Alex) heard from his classmates how his behavior affected them that it would make a bigger difference to him, rather than just hearing it from adults," according to a report released Thursday morning by the Port St. Lucie Police Department.'

ifeminsts: Raped by a woman

anthony · 30 May 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"A few short observations of my own from soul searching:

---I doubted myself and the events, afraid that I'd be laughed at or worse, accused of making a false allegation.
--I knew my masculinity would be called into question and that I'd be ridiculed.
--I doubted myself and thought maybe I misunderstood the nature of rape and that men really can't be raped.
--I was afraid she'd make good on her implied threat and accuse me of rape or claim it was consensual. Then I could possibly be charged with both rape and child endangerment (or a related charge) due to her pregnancy. I wasn't going to go to prison for a rapist.
--I knew that such an allegation would endanger my status in the Marine Corps.
--I knew that my consumption of alcohol (underage) would be used against me as well."

CBS: Women Fight For Right To Join Al Qaeda

anthony · 1 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Muslim extremist women are challenging al Qaeda's refusal to include - or at least acknowledge - women in its ranks, in an emotional debate that gives rare insight into the gender conflicts lurking beneath one of the strictest strains of Islam.

In response to a female questioner, al Qaeda No. 2 leader Ayman Al-Zawahri said in April that the terrorist group does not have women. A woman's role, he said on the Internet audio recording, is limited to caring for the homes and children of al Qaeda fighters.

His remarks have since prompted an outcry from fundamentalist women, who are fighting or pleading for the right to be terrorists. The statements have also created some confusion, because in fact suicide bombings by women seem to be on the rise, at least within the Iraq branch of al Qaeda."

Is There Really a Bias Against Women in Politics? History Suggests Otherwise

anthony · 1 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Are women really discriminated against in politics? Sen. Hillary Clinton surely thinks so.

Indeed, she believes this year's presidential campaign has shown that sexism limits women's influence in politics. She claimed last week that "every poll I've seen shows more people would be reluctant to vote for a woman [than] to vote for an African American."

It's possible that Democrats are particularly sexist, but with women making up the majority of voters, one would think that politicians were ignoring women at their own peril.

In 2004, women made up 54 percent of voters. At least through early February of this year, women made up a much greater share of Democrat primary voters — accounting for between 57 and 61 percent of the vote in primaries and caucuses.

But whatever difficulties Clinton might be having, it seems that the policies adopted are much more important than who puts them into action, and the evidence indicates that women have long gotten their way."

CNN Video: Free lawn mowing for single moms

anthony · 1 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

"A Cape Coral, Florida, lawn care company is mowing the lawns of single mothers for free. WBBH reports."

Video here.

Mom's behavior impacts father's child rearing: study

anthony · 1 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'NEW YORK (Reuters Life!) - How much a father is involved in the daily care of his children is largely up to his wife or partner, according to new research.

Scientists from Ohio State University and the University of Illinois, who studied 97 couples, said mothers are play an important role in determining how active a role the father plays.

"Mothers can be very encouraging to fathers and open the gate to their involvement in child care, or be very critical and close the gate," said Sarah Schoppe-Sullivan, a professor of human development and family science at Ohio State University and a co-author of the study.'

Teacher 'wanted to be boy's sex slave'

patriotsofamerica · 2 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A FEMALE teacher who allegedly told a 15-year-old male student to treat her like a sex slave has been charged with sexually penetrating a child.

Nazira Rafei, 25, a Melbourne high school teacher, is charged with one count of sexually penetrating a child under 16 and four counts of an indecent act with a child under 16.'

This is happening more and more isn't it? Yet, these women are being portrayed as victims. There is no such thing as taking responsibility for their actions. No one holds these women accountable.

I don't care about the people that say "good for the boy!" or "where were these teachers when I was a boy?" That is NOT the point! The point is this: SO CALLED EQUALITY. If YOU (women) want to be treated as equal, then make it so on everything.

True, maybe some boys won't be traumatized and some will. The point is legal age of consent. If a man must adhere to the legal age of consent, then women wanting to be like man must adhere to the same laws.

www.move-off.org

RADAR ALERT: Mad Hatter Justice at the ABA Commission on Domestic Violence

Matt · 2 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Did you read the story about Alice in Wonderland? Remember when the Queen of Hearts issued her verdict?

"Sentence first! Verdict afterwards."

This Mad Hatter concept of justice is not just a child's fantasy tale – it's also found at the Commission on Domestic Violence (CODV) of the American Bar Association. Comb through its website – and read its publications. You will never find the words, "due process for the accused," "false allegation" or "innocent until proven guilty."

The CODV has published a two-page flyer (.pdf file) called "10 Myths about Custody and Domestic Violence and How to Counter Them." The flyer consists of a series of 19 claims about DV and child custody.

Scan the CODV claims and then compare them with the actual research. Folks, get ready for an Alice-in-Wonderland experience.

For example:

- Claim 1.1 states, "Studies show that 25-50% of disputed custody cases involve domestic violence." The truth is, up to three-quarters of disputed custody cases involve only an allegation of domestic violence.
- Claim 9.3, "Mental health testing cannot distinguish a batterer from a non-batterer" turns out to be the exact opposite from what the research shows – in fact most batterers can be diagnosed to have a psychopathology.

Of the 19 CODV claims, 17 are found to be misleading, unsupported, or completely false. Only two of the claims are true. Even Alice would be amazed!

These findings are documented in RADAR's latest Special Report, "Myths of ABA Commission on Domestic Violence: Summary Report," which can be found here (.pdf file).

If you want to see the blow-by-blow analysis, see the Detailed Findings report here (.pdf file).

RADAR has sent these two reports to the American Bar Association, requesting the flyer be removed from its website. RADAR is also putting out a press release to 17,000 media contacts. This week we are not asking you to contact the ABA, only to peruse the RADAR Special Report, in case we need to take action later on.

And while you're at it, you might want to pull out your old copy of Lewis Carroll's "Through the Looking Glass":

Queen of Hearts: "Now then, are you ready for your sentence?"
Alice: "But there has to be a verdict first."
Queen of Hearts: "Sentence first! Verdict afterwards."
Alice: "But that just isn't the way."
Queen of Hearts: [shouting] "All ways are...!"
Alice: "...your ways, your Majesty."

++

Date of RADAR Release: June 2, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Lying 13-YO puts two men in jail

klp · 2 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This piece of work claimed to be 19 and divorced on her MySpace page. She was, in fact, 13. Two guys were sentenced believing her to be legal. Her family admitted that she is promiscuous and did not yet change her MySpace profile. Excerpt:

'ORANGE COUNTy, Fla. -- A 13-year-old girl's sexual shenanigans have put a second man behind bars. Morris Williams, 22, told the judge he thought the girl was 18-years-old, but he found out Tuesday that ignorance is not a defense.

...

Williams said Dean picked him up on the street and after a few conversations they had sex. When he heard she was not 18, he went to her father.

"He was like 'well, she's 13,'" Williams said of a conversation with Dean's father.

...

Dean's family admits Alisha still stays out late and has yet to delete her misleading MySpace page.

Williams will serve six years probation with the first year in jail. The other five years he will have to wear an ankle monitor. His attorney says he will come back to court to ask again for a shorter sentence.'

Justices say Legislature wrong on felony child support

anthony · 2 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'West Virginia legislators violated state and national constitutions when they forced fathers facing felony child support charges to prove they couldn't pay, the Supreme Court of Appeals decided May 23.

The Justices unanimously erased a law stating that in child support prosecutions "the defendant's alleged inability to reasonably provide the required support may be raised only as an affirmative defense, after reasonable notice to the State."

The law "unconstitutionally shifts to a defendant the burden of disproving an element of the offense," Justice Robin Davis wrote. "We have previously observed that it is a foundation of criminal law that the State must prove all the elements of a crime beyond a reasonable doubt.'

Woman 'left toddler imprisoned in a kitchen while she went out to party all weekend'

AngryMan · 3 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A boy of two was left on his own for the weekend, imprisoned in a flooded kitchen, after a woman went out 'to party', a court heard yesterday.

It was only when water from a running tap seeped into the flat downstairs that the sobbing toddler was discovered, shaking with cold and covered in filth.

Police, called in by concerned neighbours, arrived to find a horrifying scene.'

Hayman fire starter out after 6 years

el cid · 3 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. The woman who started the Hayman fire spent six years in prison and must now pay restitution in the millions of dollars.

Here's what the fire did:

"The June 2002 blaze torched 138,000 acres, destroyed 133 homes and 466 outbuildings, and forced the evacuation of 8,000 people. Five firefighters were killed as they traveled to Colorado to fight the blaze."

Most are saying the sentence was not long enough. I suspect the "female sentencing discount" myself.

Men prefer being solo over a bad marriage: study

Matt · 3 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'SYDNEY (Reuters Life!) - Bachelor Carl Weisman got fed up of being classified as a playboy, a loser or a commitment-phobe so he set out to find out exactly why he and a growing number of eligible men were steering clear of marriage.

Weisman, 49, conducted a survey of 1,533 heterosexual men to research a book aiming to give women an insight into why some smart, successful men opted to stay single -- and help lifelong bachelors understand why they are still the solo man at parties.

...
Weisman also found that financial issues, both positive and negative, played a large part in men's fear of commitment.

"Those with little money said they would have nothing to offer a partner, with some suffering self-esteem issues and withdrawing from the dating pool," said Weisman, an engineer-turned-author with two books now published.

"While those who are financially sound were terrified what a bad divorce could do to them."

Weisman said his research blew away any idea that single men were unhappy.

"A compelling issue was how many of them had found contentment in a never-married life," he said. "They had created lives full of careers, friends and ambitions. It was not like they walk around all day worried about not being married."'

"Violent Partners" offers better solutions to DV issues

Matt · 3 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Dr. Linda G Mills, a member of SAFE's Speaker's Bureau releases her new book "Violent Partners". From the book site:

'A radical new take on the crisis of intimate abuse, Violent Partners argues that as a culture we misunderstand the root causes and basic effects of abuse, and until that changes there is no hope of fixing the problem. Dr. Linda Mills challenges assumptions, tears down myths, and offer solutions, all the while telling riveting stories of couples who have conquered violence in their relationships. In Violent Partners, she describes several programs that hold promise for addressing intimate abuse, including two nationally known and groundbreaking treatment programs- Peacemaking Circles and Healing Circles.
...
Linda G. Mills, J.D., Ph.D., is Founder of the Center on Violence and Recovery at New York University, where she is also a Professor and Senior Vice Provost.'

Study: Women are almost as likely to cheat and leave spouse for new partner

Matt · 3 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Mentioned in Glenn Sacks' latest newsletter and discussed here. Dr. Neilsen's academic site is here. The subject study is available here (.pdf file). Excerpt:

'Indeed women are now almost as likely as men to commit adultery and are more likely than men to get divorced because they have fallen in love with someone else. Some women also leave their husbands for a man with whom they have had little, if any, actual sex. So while claiming that they did not technically “commit adultery”, these wives have nonetheless betrayed and been unfaithful to their husbands (Adler. 1996; Pittman. 1990).
...
Most divorced fathers are extremely lonely, overwrought, and disoriented - mainly because they have lost daily contact with their children. Unlike mothers, almost all fathers are essentially rendered childless as soon as their marriage ends. In part because men are so reluctant to let people know how miserably unhappy and depressed they are or to ask for help, many people - including their own children - do not appreciate the extent to which most men suffer after a divorce.'

"ABA's predatory feminist lawyers" on WorldNetDaily

Matt · 4 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

TEN's Senior Policy Analyst, David R. Usher lands premier exposure on WorldNetDaily for his latest piece, ABA's predatory feminist lawyers. Backed by RADAR's latest special report (.pdf file), Dave exposes some of the inner workings of the American Bar Association's (ABA) attack on American parenthood for profit. This no holds barred piece is a must read, as will be the follow-up pieces forming his first major investigative series. Excerpt:

'The ABA Domestic Violence Standards of Practice displays overt sex bias obvious to even an untrained individual. The victim is repeatedly defined as female. For example: "The lawyer should discuss with the client her wishes regarding temporary custody and visitation, keeping in mind jurisdictional issues."

The additional commentary attached to ABA Standards of Practice document extends sex biases even further: "May a client flee for safety to another state with her children without being charged criminally?"

Justice is not served by pre-defining victims as female. The wide body of 209 empirical reports measuring both female and male-perpetrated violence indicate women are at least as likely as men to be perpetrators of serious domestic violence. In cases of non-reciprocal IPV, women are the initiators of 70.7 percent of domestic violence.'

Safeway's Annual Prostate Cancer Awareness Month Starting

JSoltys · 4 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Safeway Inc...kicks off its annual prostate cancer fundraising and awareness campaign this week. This marks the eighth consecutive year that Safeway has been raising awareness and funds for prostate cancer research. Since the effort began, the company has raised nearly $30 million for prostate cancer research at some of North America's top cancer centers. The company has teamed up with the Prostate Cancer Foundation (PCF), the world's largest philanthropic supporter of prostate cancer research, to distribute the funds. This year's campaign will focus on early detection and screening as a way to reduce mortality rates."

How the 'feminization of America' destroys boys, men – and women

anthony · 4 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'"Terrible"? As this edition of Whistleblower shows, there is nothing wrong – and a very great deal right – with boys and masculinity. As maverick feminist Camille Paglia courageously reminds her men-hating colleagues, masculinity is "the most creative cultural force in history."'

Letter to the editor on child support and casino winnings

el cid · 5 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I managed to get a letter published on the new law in Colorado requiring casinos to withhold winnings to pay CS. My argument is that the problem in collecting support is not recalcitrant dads, but a system that is biased against dads. The sponsor stated he was going after dads. When a specific group is targeted by law, that is a clear form of bias, even if the law is written in gender neutral language.

You can view the letter and make comments here.

Right now, most comments are providing opposing viewpoints. I would welcome a few supportive comments. Thanks.

Teacher Straps 9-Year-Old to Chair With Masking Tape

Matt · 5 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Another candidate for Teacher of the Year shines here.

“I sat down in my seat and she came over and taped me and I said, ‘What are you doing?’”

Female Teacher Accused Of Having Sex With Four Teen Boys

anthony · 6 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'BARTOW, Fla. -- A Polk County middle school teacher was arrested Thursday for allegedly having sex with young boys. Currently, 32-year-old Danielle Jones of Auburndale is still being paid by the school board.

Two of the boys were her former students and then they started sharing their sexual trysts with their friends. One of the boys told another teacher at Stambough Middle School (see map) last year. When investigators started peeling back the layers, they found there were at least three other boys Jones was allegedly having sex with.

"It's painfully obvious to us that she is a pedophile," said Polk County Sheriff Grady Judd.

Jones was arrested Thursday and charged with two counts each of unlawful sexual activity with minors and lewd/lascivious battery."'

Guilty: Mother who locked two-year-old son in flooded kitchen during weekend of partying

AngryMan · 6 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A mother was facing jail last night for leaving her toddler son alone in a flooded kitchen while she spent a weekend partying.

Kelly Tollerton, 22, was warned that prison was 'almost inevitable' after a judge heard how she left the two-year-old boy, caged in the kitchen by a baby gate, to fend for himself.

He had been forced to sift through bags of rubbish for food 'like a dog'."

Is She Really A Feminist?

JSoltys · 6 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Rebecca Walker is the founder of the Third Wave Foundation, a feminist group that works nationally to support young women and transgender activists. So I found it hard to believe she wrote this for an article at CNN:

'But with a Democratic house divided, now is the time for healing, and this can only happen if Hillary's staunch female supporters let go of the reverse-sexist ideology that women are inherently better, wiser, and more compassionate leaders.

They will have to acknowledge that sometimes the best woman for the job is actually a man -- if it's the right man.

It is time to turn the page on myopic gender-based Feminism and concede that while patriarchy is real, so is female greed, dishonesty and corruptibility.'

If "third wave" feminism emphasizes this kind of logic, halleluiah!

Virginia court upholds women's college move to coed

anthony · 7 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A former all-women's college did not break a contract with female students when it decided to enroll men, a divided Virginia Supreme Court ruled Friday.

In a 5-2 decision, the court rejected a claim by nine female students at Randolph College — formerly Randolph-Macon Woman's College — that promotional materials and other publications promised them four years at an all-female institution.

Chief Justice Leroy R. Hassell Sr. wrote in the majority opinion that the court could find nothing in marketing materials promising the school would stay single-sex."

Female teacher who banished boy to dark closet fired

anthony · 7 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A teacher who punished a student by putting him in a storage room without supervision has been fired by the Palm Beach County School Board.

Palm Beach Central High School teacher Rutha Scott lost her job Wednesday after an investigation found she placed a student in a closet for misbehaving, the second time the teacher had been accused of sending unruly students to a closet and the sixth time she had been accused of misconduct.

Scott sent the student to a classroom storage closet for as long as 15 minutes after she was interrupted during roll call in February. The student said the lights were off in the closet, which measured 16 feet by 6 feet."

MSNBC: The rise of the female suicide bomber

anthony · 7 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A girl strapped with explosives approaches an Iraqi army captain, who dies in the suicide blast. A woman posing as a mother-to-be to disguise a bulging bomb belt strikes a wedding procession as part of a coordinated attack that kills nearly three dozen people.

The attacks last month were among the latest blows by female suicide bombers — and further evidence of shifting insurgent tactics amid an overall drop in bloodshed around Iraq.

U.S. military figures show the number of female suicide attacks has risen from eight in 2007 to at least 16 so far this year — not including a suicide bombing Friday near Ramadi that Iraqi police believe was carried out by a woman. That compares with a total of four in 2005 and 2006, according to the military."

UK police protect female stalker because she is a judge

Anonymous · 8 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. A 22-year-old civil engineer has accused his former girlfriend, Lucy Tate, who was made a JP at 19, of bombarding him with hundreds of phone calls and texts after he ended their relationship. (JP: 'Justice of the Peace', the lowest level of judge in the UK).

He also said she abused his new girlfriend, stalked him and hacked into his Friends Reunited entry and announced she had given birth to his baby. Excerpt:

"Police have been accused of an 'Orwellian' attempt to silence the man.

In what was viewed by politicians last night as an attack on the freedom of speech, detectives made him sign a statement promising not talk to the Press about the case - after details appeared in The Mail on Sunday.

But when asked what grounds they had for their actions, a police spokeswoman refused to comment.
...
The man's father said: 'They said they had been asked to "nip the situation in the bud". But the question is who was asking them to do this? They wanted to stop him speaking further about the case."

Fathers4Justice campaigners stage roof protest on Harriet Harman's house

Anonymous · 8 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Two Fathers 4 Justice campaigners dressed as comic book heroes scaled the roof of Deputy Labour leader Harriet Harman's house today.

The demonstration was intended as an "early Father's Day strike" against the Government over fathers' access to their children, the protesters said.

Another two campaigners are believed to be inside the building.

Actress Anne Heche ordered to pay child support to ex-husband

Roy · 8 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Bisexual actress Anne Heche (Ellen DeGeneres' ex-partner) has been ordered to make a one-time payment of $275,000 to her ex-husband, Hollywood cameraman Coleman Laffoon, as well as monthly child support payments of $3,700 for the care of their six-year old son. Laffoon filed for the divorce, citing irreconcilable differences.

Well, I guess there is a certain satisfaction in seeing a gender reversal in a divorce drama, where the wife was the higher earning partner and she now gets to pay. Still, I have to ask whether this case presents the truly ridiculous notion that it takes $3,700 a month to support a child. It has long been the case that the Family Court system requires no accountability or verification that child support in any way goes directly towards providing for the child's needs.

$3,700 per month is an annual income of $44,400 – just about what the average American family of four lives on.

UK: "Road Rage Killer" to be released

Matt · 8 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'One of Britain's most notorious female killers has been given her first taste of freedom 11 years after she was convicted of her fiance's shocking murder.

Tracie Andrews, given life in 1997 for stabbing her partner to death and then claiming he was the victim of a road rage attack, was allowed out of jail as she prepares for her permanent release.

Handcuffed to a prison guard, the 39-year-old murderess - who has had a string of passionate lesbian affairs behind bars and who now calls herself Tia Carter - enjoyed a day trip in the sunshine wearing smart new clothes and sporting a fashionable shoulder-length hairstyle.

The aim of her outing, say prison sources, is to help Andrews eventually reintegrate back into society and she could free as soon as July 2011

It was in December 1996 that Andrews murdered her fiance Lee Harvey, who bled to death from more than 30 wounds in a remote country lane.'

Australia: First Ever National Men's Health Policy

Matt · 8 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Announcement here. Excerpt:

'8 June 2008

The Rudd Government will develop Australia's first ever National Men's Health Policy – in recognition of the fact that men often have poorer health than women, are likely to die earlier, and are at greater risk of suicide.

To mark the start of International Men's Health Week, Minister for Health Nicola Roxon is launching the paper Setting the scene: developing a men's health policy for Australia.'

MSN's "Top 10 Animal Dads" needs new judgment criteria

Matt · 8 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Take a look at this, off-linked from their main page today. Read through the decriptions of the various "animal dads" and ask yourself what kind of values were used to come up with this list. This is about as overt an exercise in anthropomorphization as any I have ever seen, valuable less for what it tells us about the natural world but more about what it tells us about how paternity is viewed. For example, in describing #9, the Antechinus, the text reads:

'The antechinus can spend up to 12 hours mating! In fact, this super mouse gets so distracted he forgets to eat, drink and sleep. Between that and the steroids that build up in his blood, he doesn't stand a chance. His mate makes the most of it, filling herself up with sperm until the end of the breeding season. But don't feel too sad about the passing of dear old dad. With him out of the picture, there's more food for those left behind -- plus he likely died a very happy mouse!'

Read that last line: "With him out of the picture, there's more food for those left behind - plus he likely died a very happy mouse!"

If you can't see what's wrong with that kind of statement, well, I dunno what to say to you. But it isn't limited to #9-- something like that is found in all these descriptions, from how good "dad" is that he raises the kids despite his mate's infidelities to acting as the fearless and unwavering protector. As I said above, what's most interesting is not the animal species in question but the animal specie that is observing them.

Aussie Women Bemoan Lack of Marriagable Men

Roy · 8 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

More anecdotal evidence of a men's Marriage Strike? Story here. Excerpt:

“... for many women in their 30s - that decade of life in which we hope everything falls into place - being single feels nothing at all like choice. And it frustrates and angers them when it is suggested they are too picky to get a bloke. They say the truth is rather the reverse, and are likely to launch into tales of how the rare single men they meet are quick to bolt for the exit when things get within coo-ee of commitment. ...

There are downsides for a generation that has delayed committed partnering, whose members have remained unhooked - and the major one is the real possibility of ending up alone. … Whether or not you'd say there's a man drought depends ultimately on how you define a drought. But many single women have good reason for believing, as they look to the horizon, that it's not exactly raining men."

Judge’s ban on the use of the word ‘rape’ at trial reflects trend

Matt · 9 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'It’s the only way Tory Bowen knows to honestly describe what happened to her.

She was raped.

But a judge prohibited her from uttering the word “rape” in front of a jury. The term “sexual assault” also was taboo, and Bowen could not refer to herself as a victim or use the word “assailant” to describe the man who allegedly raped her.

The defendant’s presumption of innocence and right to a fair trial trumps Bowen’s right of free speech, said the Lincoln, Neb., judge who issued the order.'

RADAR ALERT: Stop H.R.6088, the National Domestic Violence Volunteer Act

Matt · 9 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Phyllis Schlafly's June 6, 2008 article at WorldNetDaily.com1 comments upon RADAR's recently released analysis2,3 of the ABA Commission on Domestic Violence's flyer "10 Myths About Custody and Domestic Violence and How to Counter Them." It states "'10 Myths' denies the big problem that false allegations of domestic violence and child abuse are frequently used ... to win child custody, and ... ignores the problem that family courts regularly deny custody and issue restraining orders against men based on a woman's unsubstantiated say-so and without giving the man fundamental due process rights."

It also discusses a nasty bill that passed the Senate Judiciary Committee in May 2008: "Sen. Joe Biden, D-Del., has rushed to the aid of women who want free lawyers to help them make domestic violence accusations, and of lawyers seeking income from those cases. He is the lead sponsor of an extravagant new boondoggle called the National Domestic Violence Volunteer Attorney Network Act (S.1515)." The House version of the bill is H.R.6088.

H.R.6088/S.1515 would create a network of 100,000 lawyers willing to do volunteer work on behalf of alleged victims of domestic violence and, for those who devote the majority of their time representing alleged domestic violence victims, the bill would set up a fund to pay back their student loans. According to an article favorable to the bill, "Biden Wants Legal Brigade for Domestic Safety"4, "The Congressional Budget Office has not estimated the total cost of the lawyer bill, but a Biden staff member expected the loan forgiveness portion of the bill to be about $20 million in the first year. An additional $8 million would be needed to recruit volunteer lawyers, operate a referral system, launch a pilot program and roll out a national program." According to the Schlafly article, the bill would channel $2 million a year to the ABA commission that wrote "10 Myths" and an estimated $55.5 million to lawyers.

It is much easier to stop a law from getting passed than to repeal or amend an existing law. By demonstrating strong opposition, we can defeat H.R.6088. Right now, the bill is in the House Judiciary Committee. We would like it to die there.

This week, we ask everybody to contact Congressman Lamar Smith, the Ranking Republican Member on the House Judiciary Committee, and ask him to oppose H.R.6088 (the National Domestic Violence Volunteer Attorney Network Act). He has stated: "As the Ranking Republican Member on the Committee, I am committed to ensuring that ... taxpayer dollars are utilized effectively and efficiently." Clearly, a bill that would benefit lawyers at the expense of families should be right in his line of fire.

Congressman Smith's contact information is:
2409 Rayburn House Office Building
Washington, DC 20515
ph: 202-225-4236
fax: 202-225-8628

He can also be reached electronically through his website: http://lamarsmith.house.gov/contact.aspx?section=Mail.

If you are from Texas, be sure to mention that. And, of course, be polite and courteous.

Indicated references are on the RADAR web site, linked as above.

++
Date of RADAR Release: June 9, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Profile of Mark Harris of F4J

Anonymous · 10 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Mark Harris, one of the protesters who sat on the roof of Harriet Harman's house at the weekend, is profiled in this excellent article. He is the guy who was put in jail for waving at his own children in the street. Excerpt:

"No one condones invading private property, but read the moving story of the man on Harriet Harman's roof who spent years fighting for the right to see his daughters ... only to find THEY wanted to live with HIM

On Sunday morning, just hours before he scrambled on to the roof of Harriet Harman's home dressed as a superhero, Mark Harris kissed and hugged his daughter Lisa and set off from the South Devon home they share.

'I told him I was proud of him,' says Lisa, a 21-year-old wages clerk. 'I said that however long he managed to stay up there, I would be cheering him on and sending him my love.'"

UK: How half a million lonely old men are paying the price of the divorce boom

Anonymous · 10 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Half a million elderly men lead lonely lives with no friends and no contact from their families, a report warned yesterday.

It found that one person in five with an elderly father is no longer in touch with him. One in four claims to be too busy to maintain contact.

Divorce and family break-up has left millions of men without ties to their children and with few or no family links, said the charity Help the Aged.

Retirement deprives many of the company of work colleagues and others are left alone by bereavement or their own poor health.'

Wife jailed for hiring hitman to kill husband

Anonymous · 10 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman who took out a home-improvement loan to pay for a hitman to kill her husband was jailed for seven years today — but has already been forgiven by her partner.

Zoe Kenealy, 44, asked her lover, who lived next door, to hire the killer so that she could claim the life insurance money. But today her husband, Timothy, said he forgave her and would resume their relationship when she is released.'

And get this - she is a 'care worker'.

Article: "Hillary's Racism & Misandry Won't Be Missed"

Matt · 10 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

'Some people will miss the daily blow-by-blow between Hillary Clinton and Obama. Some will miss the hopefulness of Hillary's charge to be the first female president. And, still others will miss the shock value of the extent to which Hillary was willing to go to win.

However, there are a few things that I won't miss about the primary campaign.
...
I won't miss Hillary playing the gender card, even shedding crocodile tears over her alleged mistreatment. I wonder where those tears were when her husband's cheating was played out on the world stage.

I won't miss Clinton playing the "white woman in distress card," with those same tears and hints of being attacked by a Black man.'

BBC's Woman's Hour perpetuates sports-and-trafficking myth

Matt · 10 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

From Tom in London: "I am sure you are aware of the trumped up hysteria around 40,000 'sex trafficked' into Germany for the 2006 World Cup, whilst EU papers showed only 5 alleged cases of sex-trafficking in the event. For a reminder, see http://www.glennsacks.com/blog/?cat=57.

Well, despite this reality check, BBC Radio 4's Woman's Hour continues to perpetuate the myths, with an 8 minute discussion (between three sex-trafficking myth peddlers, with no serious challenge to their waffle) - available here.

If you don't listen to Woman's Hour already, it is well worth downloading the necessary media player, as their shows are split into segments and archived on their website, going back 3 years.

I have called the BBC's complaints line, to have them write a letter to me explaining why they chose to put on three sex-slavery myth deniers, and I recommend MANN readers should do the same.

Thanks!

Tom, London.

Who talks more? Why men and women are lost in translation

Roy · 10 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Samantha Brett of the Sydney Morning Herald ponders whether George Clooney was right to dump his jabbering girlfriend, because research shows that women really do talk too much.

A few excerpts:

* "You talk too much!" is apparently the reason bachelor of the moment George Clooney gave the world for dumping his waitress-turned-model girlfriend Sarah Larson. … If only we could keep our chit-chat under stricter control, perhaps the men wouldn't be scared away ..."

* “Scientists have often proved what we've long suspected - that women talk a whopping amount more than men chalking up 20,000 words a day while men utter just 7000.”

* “When women talk, a rush of serotonin fills our brains, giving us emotions akin to what a heroin addict would feel on a high. (No wonder we like to do it so much!) And yet,when we do talk at the end of our day, it's not to find solutions but it's to discharge the problems. Hence making no sense to the men whatsoever.”

So, the cell phone is basically an aural syringe so women can cop another fix?

Man arrested over C/S after re-marrying ex-wife

Matt · 11 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. This is why I don't bother reading fiction anymore. The actual news fulfills the role nicely, only it isn't fiction. The horror stories are actually real. Excerpt:

'A honeymoon turned into a child-support nightmare recently for one couple.

After returning from their three-day honeymoon cruise in the Bahamas in May, newlywed Joel Coursen was taken from his bride, Amy, in Cocoa, Fla., and arrested for nonsupport on a Buchanan County warrant.

The couple had remarried after being divorced for less than a year. Mr. Coursen said he fell behind on payments because of a discrepancy in the date of the court order. But he said that he got caught up enough to be eligible for a passport and had no knowledge there was any warrant for his arrest.

“It was never anywhere close to $5,000. After I was arrested, they just said it was for felony nonsupport,” Mr. Coursen said. “To my knowledge, I didn’t know there was a warrant issued. It was a big surprise.”'

UK: Pre-nups on way to legal recognition

Matt · 12 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Pre-nuptial agreements could soon be legally binding in Britain.

The divorce system has previously resisted allowing the contracts - popular in the U.S. among celebrities and the super-rich - although judges can take them into account during divorce proceedings.

But senior judges and lawyers say the system should be modernised and the contracts should receive legal recognition.'

Semi-humor: "So women think about shopping once a minute?..."

Matt · 12 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. The article is funny, anyway. Excerpt:

'According to the study, three out of four women - blessed as they are with education, opportunity, independence and income of which poor Miss Davison could scarcely have dreamed - use their minds, once in every minute, to think about… shopping. That's 960 times a day, 6,720 times a week, and damnably close to the once every 52 seconds that men are believed to think about sex.

At least they can claim to have been programmed that way; the caveman had the propagation of a species to worry about. The modern woman with a fixation on shopping has nobody save herself to blame - and no, don't drag up the old excuse that she's under pressure from the fashion magazines.
...
They see the desperation, smell the fear, sense the insecurity and seize another opportunity to tar all women with the same brush: obsessive airheads, one and all. Surveys like this week's example, of course, do a splendid job of reinforcing the image and attitude towards us that inevitably follows. So, to all the compulsive shopping sisters out there, I ask this: next time a researcher innocently asks you how often you think about shopping - please, for all our sakes, just lie.'

Fatherhood Initiative Launched for Father's Day

Anonymous · 12 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I'm doing outreach for two new public service announcements from the Ad Council about fatherhood just in time for Father's Day. As you know, children with involved, loving fathers are significantly more likely to do well in school, have healthy self-esteem and avoid high-risk behaviors such as drug use, truancy, and criminal activity compared to children who have uninvolved fathers. I'm hoping that you can share this important message with your readers. Here are the two informative (and entertaining) videos:

Fatherhood Involvement - Cheerleader

Fatherhood Involvement - Super Soaker

Thanks so much for your help and Happy Father's Day!

If you have any questions or want more info about the campaign, drop me a line at dorothee-at-see3.net.

Teen Sleepover Turns Into Sex Party

patriotsofamerica · 12 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. I know that some people are getting tired of talking about women having sex with young boys. I think that this news story takes the cake and should be looked at. I cannot imagine how much media this would get if it were men. Instead it is women, yes WOMEN (plural, more than one) in this incident. I have not seen this on any major news outlet yet. I wanna see where this one goes. www.move-off.org

Excerpt:

'Police said two Bucks County moms have been charged after a sleepover involving six teenage boys took an alleged illegal sexual turn.

Angela Honeycutt, 38, and Lynne Long, 45, are facing numerous charges after a series of alleged incidents on April 14.

Authorities said the teens, ages 14 to 16, were attending a sleepover at Long's Lower Makefield home when Honeycutt, a mother of two young children, allegedly had sex with a 14-year-old and performed sex acts with a 15-year-old. Long allegedly watched, listened and instructed the teens not to say anything.'

Ed. note: Watch the video. At the end the reporter says the two women were released after "signing their own bail". "Sign on bail" ("S.O.B." for short-- how apt!) as it is sometimes called means in lieu of putting up the actual bail money, the suspect signs a form saying that if required to, he (or in this case, she) will post bail any time it is demanded in future before trial. As a matter of course however, it is almost never demanded. In short, the police just released them "under their own recognizance", as it used to be called. (That phrase is no longer used because it is actually an accurate description of what is happening rather than an obfuscation. Can't have the truth out there, can we?)

Would this have happened if this had been two men with a group of teenagers of either or mixed sexes?

Teen's life badly affected by wrongful rape accusation

Anonymous · 13 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The son of former haulage boss Eddie Stobart yesterday told how his life had been made hell since he was wrongly accused of rape by a 15-year-old girl.

Edward Andrew Stobart, 19, said he had been beaten up and told to 'dig his own grave' following the case.
...
But although the prosecution was abandoned, she retains her anonymity, unlike Mr Stobart, who says he was attacked by a 15-strong mob at the weekend.
...
'Every time I go out I am shouted at and I have been spat at and called names like "Scum".

'I don't think it is fair that someone who accuses another of rape is given anonymity even if it is proven that it did not happen.'

The teenager is in hiding and says he cannot get a job because of the allegation. '

Rise of the gold-digger: The young women who shamelessly pursue older men for their money

Anonymous · 13 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"When did it become acceptable to be a gold-digger?

After all, isn't a woman who sleeps with a man for money - or at least for extensive use of his credit card - called something else?

But then, 'prostitute' doesn't have quite the same glamorous, diamond-encrusted platinum ring to it, does it?

A new French film opens in the UK this week called Priceless.

It tells the story of a woman who selects her mates entirely on the basis of the size of their wallets.

Who needs sexual chemistry when you can have cold hard cash?

...
A man exists not as an equal partner in a kind, loving, relationship, but merely as someone to be fleeced for as much money as possible.

How depressing and how insulting to the millions of women who don't live their lives according to these mercenary rules."

UK: Private members' clubs to be banned from treating women as 'second class citizens'

Anonymous · 13 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Private members' clubs will be banned from treating women as 'second- class citizens' under new laws.

Equalities minister Harriet Harman wants to make it illegal for golf clubs and working men's clubs to restrict women's access or deny them the right to vote as full members.
...
However, the new measures will not affect single-sex clubs such as the Women's Institute.

They will only affect mixed-sex clubs where women have lower membership status than men. The Equality Bill is also expected to give women the right to breastfeed in public places. While the contents of the Bill are yet to be confirmed, ministers have also suggested forcing businesses to conduct 'pay audits' - reviewing salaries to ensure men are not paid more than female colleagues."

Woman arrested in cold case has other dead spouses

Matt · 13 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"For two decades, Al Gentry begged investigators to take another look at the mystery of who killed his brother, Harold, and left his gunshot-ridden body sprawled on the floor of the home he shared with his wife.

He visited the sheriff's office dozens of times and made just as many phone calls. And when authorities finally listened, they wound up arresting the person Gentry had always suspected: his brother's now 76-year-old former wife, who was charged last month with hiring a hit man to gun him down.

...

After Gentry's death, Neumar remarried two more times. Once was to 79-year-old John Neumar, who died in October. Authorities in Neumar's hometown of Augusta, Ga., are examining the death, and detectives went to her home two weeks ago and seized an urn with his ashes, said Richmond County, Ga., sheriff's investigator Lt. Scott Peebles."

US: Rally at State Capitols for Equal Rights for Fathers

Matt · 13 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A.:

All,

Today is FRIDAY THE 13th from 12:00pm till 3:00pm those who want family court reform and EQUAL parenting legislation are UNITING at their State Capitols in all 50 states and DEMANDING a change. At last count, we have in excess of 40 states participating in the landmark event!

Here in Sacramento we anticipate the largest gathering of those who want family court reform ever. The 42' PURPLE CRISPE BUS has driven up from San Diego. William Wagener from On Second Thought TV is driving up from Santa Maria. Many are traveling from all over the state to meet with our legislators.

The media has guaranteed they will be present, call me to confirm that you will be present and you wish to speak to our legislators BOTH in Sacramento and Washington DC. This event will be video taped nationwide and copies will be sent to our employees in Washington DC informing them that we are now UNITED nationally and we want family court reform.

Here is a link to our promo video:
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ggMNUQ4Nc5U.

If you want change, I will see you at the NORTH STEPS of the Capitol tomorrow, we will be lobbying from 9:00am till 12:00 then our rally runs from 12:00pm till 3:00pm.

with your help...

JUSTICE IS COMING!!!

Donald Tenn is…
Christopher, Leesha and Madison's DADDY and Member, F4J National Board of Directors
Member, UCRCoA National Board of Directors
California State Coordinator
Fathers-4-Justice/US
Families-4-Justice/US
Electronic Mail: donald-at-f4j.us

Newsweek refutes "women and science" myth while simultaneously promoting it

Matt · 13 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

You know, there is little better than the women-in-science stuff to offer as an example of bizarre dual-process thinking espoused by the MSM-feminist press. Newsweek declares "Nerdgirls" are taking over the sciences but at the same time bemoans the absence thereof from the fields of science, pinning the reason for this of course on the men therein and "popular culture".

Article here. Try not to think too much about the contradictions, your head will start to throb painfully. And be sure to watch the video of the Nerdgirls posing in high-fashion clothes and heels for photographers, running around doing nothing but good in the world for everyone, and of course declaring their confidence, power, independence, etc., etc. Oh yes, and also about how "guys are afraid of smart women."

"Guys"... "Women"

Excerpt:

'In 2007, girls won both the team and the individual categories of the Siemens Competition for high-school students in math, science and technology for the first time in the competition's history. A recent Pew Internet & American Life project found that among users 12 to 17, girls dominate the blogosphere and social networking sites; they're also beating boys when it comes to creating Web sites of their own. Even women gamers far outnumber men ages 25 to 34, according to a 2006 study by the Consumer Electronics Association.

...
Yet there is still a dichotomy between the culture and the workplace. Forty years ago women made up just 3 percent of science and engineering jobs; now they make up about 20 percent. That sounds promising, until you consider that women earn 56 percent of the degrees in those fields. A recent Center for Work-Life Policy study found that 52 percent of women leave those jobs, with 63 percent saying they experienced workplace harassment and more than half believing they needed to "act like a man" in order to succeed. In the past, women dealt with that reality in two ways: some buried their femininity, while others simply gave up their techie interests to appear more feminine.
...
She may not be in the majority now, but if her fellow geek girls have anything to do with it, she will be. Outreach programs such as TechBridge, an after-school workshop for middle- and high-school girls, and MAGIC (More Active Girls In Computing), a national mentoring program for aspiring computer scientists, are among the dozens of programs aimed at getting girls to think about futures in science and technology."

Fathers Groups Go Front and Center at Los Angeles Courthouse

Anonymous · 13 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Fathers Groups Go Front and Center at Los Angeles Courthouse

"The corner of 1st St. and Hill St. is always a bustling intersection and this morning it was a little busier than usual. All across America, today is Fatherless Day, and folks are taking to the streets to call attention to the way family law and family law courts mistreat Fathers."

"Sadly, there is much fear that government still does not get the message that Father's rights advocates are sending, that the war on Dads will no longer be tolerated. More and more Dads, and their relatives, and friends are speaking up, demanding that this tyranny end."

Co-ed gets 5 years for iron-branding recalcitrant one-night stand

anthony · 13 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A college student who branded a former lover's body with a scalding piece of metal as payback for never calling her after they had sex was sentenced to five years in prison Friday.

Kristina Caban, 23, had no comment as state Supreme Court Justice Michael Obus sentenced her for what he called a crime that was "not remotely justifiable."

Assistant District Attorney Nicole Blumberg told Obus that Caban was the "mastermind behind the plan" to sear the torso of Samir "Sammy" Sara, then 23, for having sex with her once in 2004 and never calling her again.'

Ed. note: NY Post story here. In it there are more details, including that the perp initially told police it was payback for date-rape, a story that after further scrutiny she recanted and confessed her real motive for the assault.

Note she got two other men to do the dirty work. Let this be a lesson to men who would mount their white horses and chivalrously do the bidding of an angry woman bent on violent revenge for some wrongs, real or imagined: those old fairy tales that have you programmed into thinking you should have also been born with your own white horse and suit of armor are nothing more than the software society tries to program you with so you can be a useful idiot one day to someone. Just say 'No'.

Women Vets Get Worse Care, Review Finds

anthony · 13 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Women veterans aren't receiving the same quality of outpatient care as men at many Department of Veterans Affairs' facilities, according to an agency review obtained exclusively by The Associated Press.

The review appears to validate the complaints of advocates and some members of Congress who have said the health care system needs to focus more on women's health.

Women make up about 5 percent of the VA's population, but that number is expected to nearly double in the next two years as more women return home from Iraq and Afghanistan and seek care.

The review of the quality of care at VA facilities, which was mandated by Congress, found that at about one-third of its facilities, the quality of outpatient care given to women wasn't as good as what was offered to men."

No jail for jealous wife who stabs husband

Anonymous · 14 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Except:

"When Susannah Pearson heard her husband of 27 years had been having an affair, she was livid and confronted him as he lay in bed.

She then went to the kitchen, returning with an eight-inch carving knife, and stabbed Tory councillor Oliver Pearson, 53, three times in the back as he desperately hid behind a duvet.

He was taken to hospital for emergency surgery while his wife, 59, was arrested. But yesterday she escaped jail after her husband wrote to the court pleading for leniency.

Thanks to the letter, Pearson was given a ten-month sentence, suspended for a year, after admitting unlawful wounding.

Mr Pearson also wrote that he hopes the couple, who have four children, can rebuild their marriage."

CRISP National Father's Day Rally in Banglore, India

bharati · 14 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Father's Day rally in Bangalore, India photos here.

Yes Micky, The Lion King and Donald Duck had also attended the show.

Around 100 people attended. Interestingly, 70-80 children from the neighboring school joined after there school had closed; they will remember their father on the Father's Day.

The main slogan:

'Child Says "I want Pappa"
Mommy Says "No Pappa"'

June is National Men's Health Month

Matt · 15 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I didn't know, either. Anyway, the official web site is at http://www.menshealthmonth.org/. Thanks to MANN regular Luek for mentioning it in a comment here. From the site:

"Goal of Men's Health Month

The purpose of Men's Health Month is to heighten the awareness of preventable health problems and encourage early detection and treatment of disease among men and boys.

This month gives health care providers, public policy makers, the media, and individuals an opportunity to encourage men and boys to seek regular medical advice and early treatment for disease and injury. The response has been overwhelming with hundreds of awareness activities in the USA and around the globe."

The war on fathers

patriotsofamerica · 15 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This is something I think we all should read I found on World Net daily. www.move-off.org

Excerpt:

'"Father knows best."

How do those three words make you feel? Turn them over in your mind a couple of times and be aware of the subtlest of feelings. Be honest.

Do they make you feel slightly squeamish? A little discomfort in your solar plexus? Is something deep down inside you repelled by those words?

If so, you're not alone. Contempt for male authority – as if to say, "Give me a break, father sure didn't know best in my life" – is everywhere around us. We're swimming in it. You see, men, boys and masculinity itself have been under withering national assault for decades.'

"Urban Dictionary" sees vote-war over the definition of "feminism" paulajones · 15 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Feministing.com is invading Urban Dictionary to change the definitions of feminism. They put a link to the definition page and have had thousands of their followers skew the vote against anti-feminist definitions.

The anti-feminist definitions were WAY ahead until a few days ago and now they are behind by the thousands.

I hope you can help by visiting the Urban Dictionary definition of feminism and helping to outvote feministing.com.

Also, notice the crazy man-hating comments left by feminists who visited the site!! This is entertaining stuff!

Thanks again for your support!!

"In my experience, women are far harder to work with than men."

Proud_to_be_a_man · 15 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Good opinion piece here. Well worth reading it all. Excerpt:

'In my experience, women are far harder to work with than men. Men don't give you a crap task because they're jealous of your shoes or mistrust you for months because you have good highlights or stand about "nursing her wrath to keep it warm", as Robert Burns put it. Sometimes women don't get jobs because they're not very nice.
...
Few women are prepared to make that kind of sacrifice. This is entirely their right and good on them. However, it is surely both dishonest and intensely stupid to apportion blame - in the form of so-called corporate discrimination - to what is essentially a completely personal choice: power versus being there at bath time, conferences versus the park, business trips versus getting home in time for homework, giving "110%" versus sleeping more than five hours a night.'

Fathers: Get Ready for “Fix VAWA Now!” Campaign

Matt · 15 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

One-quarter of all divorces now involve an allegation of domestic violence. In about 80% of cases, the allegation is unnecessary or false. The accusation begins a series of legal maneuvers and decisions in which the son or daughter eventually loses daily loving contact with dad.

Needless to say, this is a negation of justice and a terrible thing to do to a father and a child.

On July 4 RADAR will be launching its biggest campaign ever: "Fix VAWA Now!" The five-month campaign will feature a media blitz, lobbying, grass-roots education, release of Special Reports, and much more.

Each month will be devoted to a different topic:

July – Impact of VAWA on the legal system
August – How VAWA harms the African-American community
September – Illegal immigration
October – Impact of VAWA on the family
November – Discrimination against underserved victims

We want every American voter to understand that the Violence Against Women Act is one of the most harmful pieces of social legislation ever introduced. That will give us a fighting chance of reforming the next version of VAWA, which Sen. Joe Biden will be introducing in early 2009.

For more information, sign up to receive RADAR’s weekly E-lerts -- see the upper right hand corner of our home page at http://www.mediaradar.org/.

2 women arrested in 'unbearable abuse' of 5-year-old boy

Matt · 15 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The mother of a 5-year-old-boy and her live-in girlfriend have been arrested in connection with what authorities describe as "unbearable physical and psychological abuse" of the child, police said Saturday.
...
The boy, who was in guarded condition at a local hospital, was rescued Monday by a stranger who found him abandoned and called authorities.

On that same day, the two women had an appointment with the Department of Children and Family Services and had brought the healthy child of a mutual friend and tried to pass him off as Brown's son.
...
Lt. Vincent Neglia of the LAPD's Abused Child Unit said in a statement Saturday that the abuse was "akin to a level of torture we hope our military personnel would never encounter."'

Newport News girl, 15, charged after false rape accusation

Matt · 15 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'NEWPORT NEWS - A 15-year-old Newport News girl has been charged with filing a false police report after she admitted to detectives that she fabricated a rape accusation against her mother's boyfriend.
...
A detective investigated and determined that the girl's story was false, Tepper said. The girl then admitted she had fabricated the story because she did not want to live with her mother, Tepper said.'

From Tupperware to Tasers: Film of "taser party" with man as demo model

Matt · 15 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video report here. Caption: "Women choose a taser demonstration for their party's entertainment. WXIA reports."

The men putting on this "party" for these women need to spend some quality time here on MANN, methinks, especially the "demo model" guy.

It's Father's Day! Can you tell by reading the paper?

Matt · 15 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Take a look at the various MSM web sites-- could you tell it was Father's Day by reading them? Maybe there is a small article here and there, but headlines, the kind Mother's Day garners-- where are they? Not there at all. No coverage in many papers. Zip, zilch, nada. Some examples:

NY Times
LA Times
CNN
Detroit Times
SF Gate

Happy Father's Day!

Fathers Groups Go Front and Center at Los Angeles Courthouse

anthony · 15 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Fathers 4 Justice, Los Angeles (F4JLA) and the National Coalition For Men, Los Angeles (NCFMLA) stood front and center this morning at the entrance to a downtown Los Angeles Courthouse. The corner of 1st St. and Hill St. is always a bustling intersection and this morning it was a little busier than usual. All across America, today is Fatherless Day, and folks are taking to the streets to call attention to the way family law and family law courts mistreat Fathers.

The Hill St. Courthouse is the site where many a famous Hollywood celebrity has experienced the pangs of divorce and family law tyranny.

Picketers with their large signs were on the sidewalks by 7:15 a.m., and by 8:00 a.m., there was no ignoring their presence in front of the courthouse. Folks from all across Southern California showed up for this event. Protest organizers were surprised and pleased when Harry Crouch of the California Men's Center San Diego pulled into the parking lot to join them. Crouch drove over a hundred miles to join the protest. Sons, daughters, 2nd wives and others also drove long distances and made other sacrifices to join this protest and express their strong dissatisfaction with family law and family law courts.'

More Empty Preaching & Daddy Blaming?

Roy · 15 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Talking tough on Father's Day, Sen. Barack Obama challenged African-American men on Sunday to play more of a role in raising their children and warned them that "responsibility doesn't just end at conception."

"Too many fathers are MIA. Too many fathers are AWOL," he told a huge African-American congregation in Chicago. "There's a hole in your heart if you don't have a male figure in the home that can guide you and lead you and set a good example for you."'

There is not a single sentence in the article about women's responsibilities, men's total lack of rights in reproductive choices, the destruction of inner city jobs or how the social welfare system is rigged to reward multiple unwed births and exiling fathers from their children's lives and homes.

Oh, I forgot. Obama has never actually lived in "the 'hood".

Never mind.

All-female Buffalo law firm accentuates the feminine in its ads

Matt · 16 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'An all-female Buffalo law firm is getting a mix of cheers and boos for a series of ads that tout its woman power. “Ever Argue with a Woman?” reads the headline of one of the ads for Schroder Joseph & Associates LLP.
...
A Buffalo attorney who served on the New York State Bar Association’s task force to establish lawyer ad guidelines that went into effect in 2007 said he’s “a little uncomfortable” with the tone of the Schroder Joseph ads.
...
A State Bar spokesman said the Buffalo law firm’s ad have not resulted in any formal action against the firm tied to its year-old advertising guidelines. Those rules were put in place to govern misleading and inappropriate attorney ads, with particular focus on embellished testimonials, silly nicknames and inaccurate fee information.

Schroder Joseph employs four female attorneys and an all-woman support staff at its Ellicott Street offices.'

Video footage from Fatherless Day rally in Sacramento, CA (June 13 2008)

johndias · 16 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Here is footage from the Sacramento rally of the National Fatherless Day. There were also rallies planned in the capitols of all 50 states. This one was from the California capitol.

The video may appear grainy at first (it was captured via a cell phone). To improve the viewing quality, in the lower right corner of the video, click on the "Google Video" button. Select "Original Size" and it will no longer be grainy.

Fred Hayward
Men's Rights Inc.
http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=-1447184631954907767&hl=en

Donald Tenn
Fathers 4 Justice
http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=2873327521476125063&hl=en

Larry Kerkman
Children's Rights Initiative for Sharing Parents Equally (CRISPE)
http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=-4775576415756315926&hl=en

Betty Williams
National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Sacramento Branch
http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=8253697192337867377&hl=en

On YouTube: Man talks about male bashing commercials

Anonymous · 17 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

We all know about this, but I thought it may be interesting.

Schoolgirl 'stabbed to death in fight with teenage love rival over boy'

AngryMan · 17 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Sian Simpson, 17, was found dying in the street surrounded by a crowd of girls shouting at each other after a knife had been used 'all too depressingly' to settle a row, the court heard.

The A-level student collapsed after being stabbed in the chest by 18-year-old Chelsea Bennett, jurors were told.
...
...her death by stabbing was the culmination of an afternoon and evening of an escalating fight between two groups of young females."

City lawyer 'faked nervous breakdown to claim record £19m sex discrimination payout'

AngryMan · 17 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A lawyer in line for a record £19 million payout over claims that a sexist bullying campaign ended her career was yesterday described as a liar.

Gillian Switalski, 51, said harassment and sexual discrimination at a finance company had left her 'mentally disabled' and effectively unable to work.
...
Monica Carss-Frisk QC, for F&C, told an employment tribunal: 'The new evidence shows that she simply did not tell the truth, and was a very plausible liar.'

The tribunal had been told at an earlier hearing that Mrs Switalski's treatment at the City firm had left the self-confessed workaholic suffering from depression and unable to concentrate enough to even read a newspaper.

But yesterday's hearing was told she had applied for three jobs, including a demanding role on the organising committee of the 2012 London Olympic Games, while on sick leave.

One businessman who met her during the interview process said he was struck by her 'huge energy and drive'.

Mrs Switalski previously won an employment tribunal against the firm over her claims that she was undermined, bullied and marginalised while head of legal affairs."

Family secrets: I wish I had married for money, not love

AngryMan · 17 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. A new perspective on the pay gap. Excerpt:

"When Bill and I got married his relaxed attitude to money amused me. He's a teacher and enjoys his job. I work in medical sales: more stressful, but it pays well. I have, however, become secretly, overwhelmingly, envious of my friends, who can rely on their husbands as the breadwinners.
...
I feel resentful, especially as it's the men who bring in the money; and even if Bill were a head teacher, he wouldn't come close... Feminism's fine, but there's a lot to be said for having your bills paid."

Ed. note: An off-link to this story should come as no surprise. But note the blame for the separation is shifted now to the man.

Man kills children, self, over divorce battle

Matt · 17 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Tragic indeed, and on Father's Day. This is the state of things here in the west. Excerpt:

"A father found gassed with his two children had been in despair over a bitter divorce battle.

Security guard Brian Philcox, 53, had lost his job and feared he would have to hand over his house to his estranged wife Evelyn, 37.
...
The pressure group Fathers 4 Justice confirmed that he had been in touch last week telling of his desperation. He had also told neighbours that the divorce had left him at the end of his tether and would leave him penniless.

He told one friend: 'I've lost my wife, I've lost my kids and I've lost my job. Now I'm going to lose my house. But I'd rather burn it down than see that bitch get it.'
...
Matt O'Connor, founder of Fathers 4 Justice, said: 'From time to time we get calls from people in an extremely agitated state. He called last week and was in some distress.

'There was some dispute over his house but the kids were the main issue for him and he was worried about losing all custody.'"

The story also says that it is alleged the man was violent toward his stepson and that was the main reason for his wife's seeking a divorce. Well I can't say one way or another as to the veracity of that claim. But I am familiar with the karate world and I doubt a man prone to violence to solve problems in any context would get to the level he was at in the karate world without showing remarkable discipline and mastery of his impulses, emotions, and reactions. I could be wrong, but I am just saying, it would come as a surprise to me. And not to be gruesome here, but note the means of killing his kids and himself was fundamentally "non-violent", though unfortunately all-too-effective.

Understand though that in no way am I excusing him for these actions. Alas plenty of men have had wives leave them and nab house and children and they have not resorted to this kind of action. It is true to say that for men who may be pushed too far by "The System" it isn't too hard to see how some would succumb to even this level of irrationality.

DV research suppressed when it implicates women

Matt · 17 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Part of Glenn Sacks' most recent newsletter, the issue is detailed here. Glenn's newsletters always have great stuff, but some things stand out as important to underscore because of their value as resources for reference. This is one of them. Excerpt:

"I recently discussed the way that the research showing that women are just as complicit in family violence as men has been suppressed and obscured in this blog post. In the blog posts below, researcher after researcher details the impediments they faced in conducting and/or publicizing scientifically sound and honest research on women's family violence..."

RADAR ALERT: Tell Your Congressman – "Don't Earmark Money for Lawyers, Oppose HR6088"

Matt · 17 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

vol·un·teer1 (noun): "a person who performs a service willingly and without pay"

Here's a riddle: When do volunteers get paid $55 million dollars?

Answer: When the "volunteers" are lawyers paid by Congress with your money.

Under the guise of combating domestic violence, House bill HR 6088, the misleadingly-named "National Domestic Violence Volunteer Attorney Network Act" would funnel your tax dollars to lawyers. It would be bad enough if the intent of this bill were merely Congressional pork for lawyers. But the intent of this bill is to place Congress' thumb firmly on the scales of justice to guarantee the conviction of the innocent along with the guilty.

Over and over again, researchers not bound by preconceived beliefs have concluded that domestic violence is a human problem, not a gender problem.2,3 If the recipient of the lion's share of the funding under HR 6088 were an organization that subscribed to honest research, the bill might have a legitimate premise. But the $55 million the bill authorizes is specifically allocated to:

1. the ABA Commission on Domestic Violence,
2. organizations that are to be created by the ABA Commission on Domestic Violence, or
3. organizations that are required to collaborate with the ABA Commission on Domestic Violence.

One would expect the American Bar Association to respect basic concepts of American jurisprudence, like "innocent until proven guilty". But the ABA Commission on Domestic Violence (ABA-CODV) has demonstrated nothing but disdain for that most fundamental principle of American liberty. The overriding theme in their publication "10 Myths about Custody and Domestic Violence and How to Counter Them"4 is the presumption of guilt of the accused. The document is so larded with falsehoods that, of its 19 claims, only 2 are actually true.5,6

This week, please get in touch with your own Representative in the House. To locate the contact information, go to http://www.house.gov/, enter your zip code, and look up your Representative's name. Or you can call the Capitol Switchboard at 1-202-224-3121.

Please tell your Congressperson:

- No earmarks for lawyers who believe in "guilty unless proven innocent"!
- Oppose HR 6088.

Noted references are available on the RADAR web site by clicking their links.

++

Date of RADAR Release: June 16, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence.
http://www.mediaradar.org/.

"Why women quit technology careers"

Matt · 17 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Submitted by "C D" over email: "This study looks very bogus, particularly the 63% face sexual harassment claim. How was sexual harassment defined? How were questions worded? Did participants know what the study was about and its intended consequences before being questioned? Were males asked about sexual harassment using the same definition (for a control group)?"

Check out the comments!

Washington Post: 'Fathers and Druthers'

anthony · 17 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"So how was Father's Day for you? Did you get a new tie and a Sinatra record? Oh, you got a game for your Wii and the new Death Cab for Cutie? Cool. Pretty great to be treated like a king after a long week at the office, right? What, your wife's got the full-time job? No, it's your partner, Fred, who does? Still, family's first and it's a great day for . . . Your ex got full custody and you spent the day pretending it was any other Sunday? Sorry to bring up a sore subject. So remind me again: What exactly was it we were celebrating a couple of days ago?

Fatherhood isn't just challenging; it's changing. It's probably been changing ever since Adam had to confront his sons' challenging behavior, every generation doing it a little differently. But some ideas of what a father is have hung on pretty tenaciously: He's a provider; he's a role model. Here are some others: He's not big on expressing love; he's probably off working somewhere during the piano recital; he can barely boil water or wash his own clothes, so don't even think of leaving the kids alone with him."

Merrick woman found guilty of strangling husband

anthony · 17 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Kelly Forbes collapsed and let out a guttural wail as the jury foreman read the verdict yesterday in Nassau County Court: guilty of manslaughter in the first degree.

Jurors deliberated for just two hours before reaching their verdict, rejecting Forbes' claims that she was defending herself when she strangled her new husband, Michael, with an electrical cord last November.

In a courtroom divided between the bride's family on one side and the groom's family on the other, a jolting shout of "Yes" came from one of Michael Forbes' supporters. As court officers quieted the man, Kelly Forbes' parents sat stone-faced, then bolted from the courthouse immediately after the verdict.

Forbes, 29, faces a maximum 25 years in prison when Judge Jerald Carter sentences her July 18."

Girl, 15, torched in gruesome attack by love rival

AngryMan · 18 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A 15-year-old girl was set on fire using white spirit in a street ambush by a love rival who was jealous over a kiss.

Schoolfriends have said she turned up to a meet a friend when her attacker allegedly leapt from the bushes and doused her in the highly flammable liquid hidden in a Coca-Cola bottle.

Police say that as she flicked a lighter, the attacker said: 'You won't look pretty anymore.'"

First British woman killed in Afghanistan

AngryMan · 18 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The first British woman was killed in action in Afghanistan in a blast that also claimed the lives of three other soldiers.
...
Three of the soldiers were killed in the blast, while the fourth was pronounced dead on arrival at Camp Bastion, the Ministry of Defence said.

It is understood that the woman was serving with the Army's Intelligence Corps."

Ed. note: Note that her gender makes her death headline news. Meanwhile, thousands of men from allied countries have been killed and at best, they get numbered.

Soldiers are soldiers, casualties all tragic. A person's sex should not matter a whit how the press treats them. Either the press needs to treat all casualties as numbers or as actual people with lives lost (I prefer that second approach), but not either-or based on the dead person's sex.

Japanese designing robotic girlfriends

Matt · 18 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Why bother reading fiction when you have the news? It's just sad. So, it's come to this. Excerpt:

'A Japanese firm has produced a 15-inch tall robotic girlfriend that kisses on command, to go on sale in September for around $175, with a target market of lonely adult men.

Using her infrared sensors and battery power, the diminutive damsel named "EMA" puckers up for nearby human heads, entering what designers call its "love mode."'

This is only the beginning, a test-marketing of sorts, as if they needed to do one. In a few decades, assuming the world doesn't implode on itself, a life-sized "fully-functional, 99% passable" android will be available. Think I'm kidding? Look how far electronics and robotics have already come in just 10 years!

Can relations between the sexes generally get any worse? Robotic replacements for one another is about as bad I think it can get short of gunfights in the streets.

MSNBC also has a video report. It can be seen here, but comes on after the story about the camel that walked away from a collision with a car.

Again, why bother with fiction when you have the news?

"Advice Goddess" Stands Up for Men

Roy · 18 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Advice Goddess Amy Alkon replies to a feminist blogger who accuses her of being a “colluder” with men’s rights advocates. From her site:

(Blogger) “A colluder is a woman that disavows feminism for men's rights.They feel that feminism has reached all of its goals, and that the women that are complaining today aren't interested in equality...oh no, we are interested in ruling men. Since females in roles of power are counter gender norms, this simply cannot be tolerated.”

Ms. Alkon replies - “If you're against discrimination and injustice, you're against discrimination and injustice of all kinds. And you don't create discrimination and foment hate, just as long as the discriminatee has a penis, which is what feminism tends to do. … I'm against feminism because I'm against discrimination against men or anyone, and feminism is, far too often, a big whine for special treatment under the guise of equal treatment. It's also, very often, a cover for man-hating… feminism is about promoting injustice not stopping it. Which is why I'm a proud "colluder."

Save the Males interview

Anonymous · 18 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Excellent interview of Kathleen Parker here regarding her new book highlighting some of the sections of the book. This will be of general interest to MRAs. Excerpt:

'Kathryn Jean Lopez: Well count me among those who think men matter. Why do they need saving though? Don't they usually do the rescue missions?

Kathleen Parker: Men are, indeed, excellent rescuers. We like that about men. In fact, Western men rescued women once upon a time from their status as pack mules. As my friend Matt Labash might say, I like to call that Western Civilization. Men also created the big-idea documents that ultimately resulted in women's suffrage and equality under the law. Women have demonstrated their gratitude by reaching the summit and basically pulling the ladder up behind them. "See ya, guys. You're on your own now. Oh, and we're taking the kids."'

Scotland Toughens Rape Laws & Proof of Consent

Roy · 18 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Plans to toughen laws on rape, consent, spiking drinks and offensive e-mails and texts have been unveiled as part of an overhaul of sex crime legislation. Under the Scottish Government bill, consent would be defined in law, creating a broader statutory offence which includes male rape. There would also be new offences for sexually offensive e-mails and texts and spiking people's drinks.
...
As well as a broader definition of rape, the bill creates a range of statutory sexual offences and a definition of consent based on "free agreement", with illustrative scenarios. One of these scenarios would be where a victim was incapable of consent through alcohol or other substances."

The article is unclear about what documentation proving consent would protect a man accused of rape.

NIMH-funded research project seeks contributors to DV study

Matt · 18 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via email:

"I am doing a research study on male victims of partner violence. We are looking for male victims of heterosexual partner violence who sustained some kind of aggression within the previous year to fill out a confidential, anonymous, online survey about their experiences with partner violence, their health, and their experiences with seeking help for their partner violence victimization. Here is a copy of our IRB-approved advertisement for this study:

"Researchers at Clark University and Bridgewater State College are conducting a study on men who experience aggression from their girlfriends, wives, or female partners. If you are a man between the ages of 18-59 and have experienced aggression from your partner within the past 12 months, you may be eligible to participate in this study. We invite you to follow this link to the study webpage where you can complete an Internet survey about your experiences. Link: http://www.clarku.edu/faculty/dhines

Our aim is to have about 500 male victims complete this survey so that we can provide sound, empirical information about male victims and their experiences, in the hopes of making domestic violence services more widely available to them.

Denise Hines
Research Assistant Professor Clark University
Department of Psychology
dhines@clarku.edu
http://www.clarku.edu/faculty/dhines

Asst. Principal Makes Boys Drink Urine

SpikeRants · 18 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Yup. They played a childish prank, pouring urine down the water fountain drain, and the teacher made the boys drink out of the fountain. This is abuse, plain and simple. What proof did the teacher have? What if it was a girl who did it? Excerpt:

'A Banks county assistant principal is facing potential trouble. Parents say she went too far in disciplining several students. Reaction is strong following accusations from parents, an assistant principal at Banks County Elementary School forced several 5th grade boys to drink from a urine tainted water fountain.

One parent said, “I think it’s ridiculous that we trust these people with our children’s health during the day and they let something like this happen.”'

Barbara Kay on how courts disenfranchise fathers

Anonymous · 19 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'...In 90% of disputed custody cases mothers walk away with “primary care” (in effect sole custody) of their children because, deservedly or not, judges feel sorry for them and find a technical or legal opening to issue the judgment they have already made in their hearts.

The introduction to a book presently nearing completion, called "Deadbeat Judges: How Courts Disenfranchise Fathers", outlines the triple cause of the syndrome. In the absence of constitutional protection of parental rights, and masking their power-grab under the guise of “best interests of the child,” courts have usurped disputatious parents’ natural right to equal guardianship of their children. Add to that judges’ superannuated impulse toward chivalry for the perceived underdog — virtually always the mother in their eyes — bolstered by a legal culture dominated by third-wave, anti-father feminism.

The result is a perfect storm favouring judicial activism for mothers: “Our Lords and Ladies reflexively defer to women in court, especially mothers. Motherhood is sacred; the role of our noble knights in shining armor on the Bench is to protect it at almost any cost.”'

"How DARE anyone make excuses for fathers who murder their own children"

AngryMan · 19 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'When a story unfolds that is as obscene as the deaths of Amy and Owen Philcox by the hands of their father Brian, most of us try to work our way through the unthinkable steps of it: how carefully he planned the murders and how cruelly he hinted at what was to come.

...

Some men, and their children, are certainly dealt a lousy hand in matters of custody, maintenance and access.

But I also believe that among all the men I have known who bellyache about their lot, almost without exception their real grievance is rooted in their relationship with their former wife - and 'anguish' about 'missing' the children is just a stick with which to beat her.

It's amazing how many men get over the 'grief' within moments of finding a new woman.

Going to the lengths of killing the children is the ultimate extreme and, of course, most members of Fathers 4 Justice wouldn't dream of harming a hair on their darlings' heads just to punish the mother they have come to hate (or for whom they still yearn).'

Male Victims in India, always doomed

Matt · 19 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

'RECENTLY, THE Aarushi murder case made quite a sensational headline With all the major news channels running bizzare with their never ending assumptions and stories. Minister of Women and Child Development, Renuka Choudhary also took the police force to task for not handling the case properly and using derogatory language for Aarushi and demanded a Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) probe into the same. But what everyone conveniently forgot here is the fact that there were two murder victims, the second one being the male servant, Hemraj. But barely do we hear any news of the unfortunate male victim in the twin murder episode in Noida.

But whilst there has been a lot of gung-ho about delivering justice to a 14-year-old Aarushi, which is fairly acceptable as well, but such a provision does not mandate depriving a male victim his share of justice as well. People, society, authorities, government, media, all the sundry involved, have conveniently forgotten the male victim in the whole episode. Also, the father has been made the easily sell-able scapegoat accused as per the convenient male victim theory. Even the CBI taking custody of the father Rajesh Talwar for about close to two weeks now, has failed to find any evidence against him and he has spent two weeks in jail.
...

Every year, on an average 75, 000 men are ending their lives as opposed to 35,000 women. Yet these figures never make their way to the public. The fourth pillar of democracy, the media has to take this responsibility to highlight the plight of men in this country who are living in a very delirious situation at the point of being target to injustice any moment.

Men need to understand the scenario and they need to highlight their woes to the government to get their grievances redressed.'

Politically Incorrect Soccer Injuries

Matt · 19 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Suppose you ran a physical education program and discovered that girls were much more likely to suffer serious injuries than boys are. Before recruiting any more girls, would you want to alert them to this fact?
...
I'm not surprised at the advocates' reluctance, because for decades it's been politically incorrect to discuss certain gender differences when it comes to sports. The pendulum swung from one extreme — telling girls that they were too weak to compete — to the other extreme portraying girls as just smaller versions of boys: just as interested in competitive sports, just as likely to benefit from the long training required to become elite college athletes. What started out as an understandable desire to give girls equal opportunities turned into a campaign to legally mandate equal outcomes. If girls seemed to show less interest than boys did in competitive sports, it was blamed on discrimination.

...But in order to keep the number of male and female players balanced to comply with Title IX, the men's lacrosse team had to cut men from its roster.

"The men's coach has been turning players away while the women's coach has been literally begging women to fill out the roster," Ms. Yow said. "I want to encourage women athletes, but we can't ignore the real issues we face."'"

RADAR Release: "Fix VAWA Now!" -- We need state VAWA Reform Captains

Matt · 19 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Exactly 15 days from today we will be launching our Fix VAWA Now! campaign. We’re making great progress in getting ready for this incredible blow-out event – contributions are coming in, columnists are promising to write op-eds, and people are getting psyched!

But we’re lagging in one department – state-level VAWA Reform Captains. Right now we have 6 volunteers in California , Michigan , Oklahoma , Colorado , and Utah . But we’d like to have at least 25.

The VAWA Captains will distribute the flyers at political rallies, speeches, meetings, libraries, etc. We’re also working on a poster. The main thing is, the message to Fix VAWA Now! has to reach all corners of society.

So please let us know, as soon as possible, if you can spare 1-2 hours a month between now and Election Day to make a difference in the lives of families and children. RADAR's contact page is here.

Best,

Ed

P.S. This just came in – we will be organizing a Fix VAWA Now! vigil at the Democratic National Convention in Denver in August. Momentum is building!

Japanese men committing suicide and record rates

Matt · 19 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Japanese professionals in their thirties are killing themselves at unprecedented rates, as the nation struggles with a runaway suicide epidemic.

Newly published figures show that 30,093 people took their own lives in 2007 — a 2.9 per cent increase in a year — leaving the country as the most suicide-prone anywhere in the developed world and rendering government efforts to combat the problem a failure.

Suicide rates remained highest among men — at 71 per cent of the total — and very high among Japan's rising population of over-60s. Geographically, most suicides took place in the prefecture of Yamanashi, where the forested foothills of Mount Fuji continue to attract the suicidal from around Japan.

...
The crisis of despair gripping young working Japanese has triggered plenty of official and media hand-wringing, though little in the way of change in corporate Japan. Wages remain low, and hierarchies rigid.

"We live in an uncomfortable and restrictive society where trivial matters are important," said Professor Kiyohiko Ikeda, a veteran social commentator at Waseda University. "The young feel a sense of deadlock; society does not accept minor mistakes."'

Wife Accused In Dentist Killing Can See Daughter, Judge Rules

Matt · 19 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'NEW YORK -- A woman accused of orchestrating the killing of her husband at a Queens playground in front of their daughter can have jailhouse visits with the 5-year-old girl.

Queens Family Court Judge Linda Tally ruled Wednesday that Dr. Mazoltuv Borukhova can see her daughter, Michelle, in a "child-friendly" visiting room at Rikers Island.

Borukhova was arrested on charges that she paid an uncle to kill her estranged husband, Daniel Malakov. The uncle has been charged in the killing.'

More Misandry from the Horrid Country Music Genre

xtrnl · 20 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Who can deny that country music is anti-male? Carrie Underwood has a song about destroying her boyfriend's truck, Miranda Lambert has a song about setting a man's house on fire, the Dixie chicks have a song about helping their friend poison her husband and dispose of the body, and the Forrester Sisters have a song complaining about men, without any validity whatsoever. I'm now sad to say that a couple videos have also decided to now include the sexual abuse of males. I'm talking about groin shots. Apparently, some country artists think that rape against males is comedy.

The two guilty of including this in their videos are Gretchen Wilson and Toby Keith. Gretchen shows a man getting struck in the groin in her video for All Jacked Up and for no reason whatsoever. He's just playing guitar when these two midgets walk up and hit him in the groin with their guitars.

I understand that it's meant to be comical, but seriously, it's about as appropriate as if they walked up to Gretchen and hit her in the box or breasts the same way. But heaven forbid they ever show that kind of thing happening to a woman in a video, even though it doesn't affect reproductive integrity like the male groin shot, which has been done to death.

Unfortunately I can't remember the name of the Toby Keith video, but in this video a woman knees a man in the groin. I was unable to find a copy of it online.

You might ask, "if you hate country so much, why do you know so much about country videos?". It's because I work in a casino in which most the tvs are always on CMT (which I'm now sure stands for crappy misandric television), and I catch a glimpse here and there of the videos.

It's interesting that country isn't even trying to deny that it's anti-male anymore. So the next time you hear a woman complain about hip hop being misogynistic, if she listens to country, let her have it for being a misandrist. At least hip hop artists don't have songs and videos about destroying the property of their significant others, and at least they don't depict woman being sexually assaulted in their videos, nor do they have videos for songs about killing significant others. We can't say the same for country when it comes to the male gender.

Naomi Campbell pleads guilty to assaulting police at Heathrow

AngryMan · 20 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Supermodel Naomi Campbell has pleaded guilty to assaulting two police officers at Heathrow Airport.

Miss Campbell, 38, admitted six offences relating to the fracas after she was removed from a British Airways flight to Los Angeles in April.
...
She could be jailed for up to six months and fined up to £5,000 for each count of assaulting a constable."

UPDATE: She avoids jail time, predictably. Story here. Excerpt:

"Shamed model Naomi Campbell avoided jail today, despite admitting kicking and spitting at police officers on board a plane at Heathrow."

Men and women think differently, study shows

AngryMan · 20 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Men and women really do think differently, according to researchers who say the explanation lies in subtle genetic variations in our brains.

A new study has suggested that some patterns of behaviour regarded as typical of each sex - such as the ability to read a map - could be founded on nature as well as nurture.

Researchers at the University of Uppsala, Sweden, have determined that there are hundreds of biological differences between the male and female brains when it comes to gene expression.

Many mental traits and skills are said to differ between the sexes, including empathy, aggression, risk-taking and navigation."

Czech women torture, kill and eat boys in cellar

AngryMan · 20 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"An eight year-old boy was skinned and his flesh fed to cannibal relatives after his mother kept him locked in a cellar, a court has heard.

Evil Klara Mauerova - a member of a sinister religious cult - wept in court as she admitted torturing her son Ondrej and his ten year-old brother Jakub.

...

The court heard how the family had sexually abused them and even made them cut themselves with knives. They said they were kept in cages or handcuffed to tables and made to stand in their own urine for days.

The sick abuse was discovered when a man in Brno in the Czech Republic installed a TV baby monitor to keep watch on is newborn child."

She was assisted by her sister Katerina and by 34-year-old Barbora Skrlova. But wait: It's all a man's fault

'The court has also heard claims that the abuse of the boys was co-ordinated by a man known only as "the Doctor" who sent mobile phone text messages to the Mauerova sisters telling them how to abuse the two boys.'

Ex-teacher charged in sex case; eight male victims identified

Matt · 20 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Julie Pritchett, 34, is charged with two counts of second-degree sodomy and one count of second-degree sexual abuse in the cases of two boys under 16. The victims in the cases with which she is charged are under the age of consent.

Charges are not being brought in the other identified incidents because the boys are of consenting age or unwilling to cooperate with authorities...
...
Pritchett was the sponsor for the high school's Diamond Dolls, the hostesses for the baseball team. It was through that position, Christian said, that she came into contact with some of her former students who were involved in the high school sports program.

Christian said Pritchett started a sexual relationship with a 15-year-old former student. That relationship led to sex acts with his friends, Christian said.

The sex acts were initiated by Pritchett, who used several methods of approaching the boys, Christian said. Some of the acts took place on the school's campus and others at the homes of the victims.'

Men could be deciding factor in US election dschmidt · 20 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

CNN calls it a "big surprise" that men could be the deciding factor in the next US presidential election.

Think that'll get our issued heard? Naw!! Excerpt:

"(CNN) — After the long, bruising primary battle with Hillary Clinton, a lot of Democrats were concerned Barack Obama would have a problem getting support from women, but the big surprise is that it could be men who become the deciding factor this election cycle.

According to the latest CNN Opinion Research Corporation Poll Obama is running nearly even with John McCain among men. McCain has a slight edge with 49 percent to Obama's 47 percent. Meanwhile, Obama leads McCain by 9 points among women 52 percent to 43 percent"

Top Ten Male Bashing Ads

badgerb · 20 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The "Top 10" ads are found here. Excerpt:

"You've seen him plenty of times on sitcoms; he's the dumb, bumbling, idiot dad, husband and boyfriend who appears useless at everything but bringing home a paycheck. The message: Guys are dumb and women have to lead them around.
...
Dumb, incompetent male characters are portrayed in abundance on television commercials. From being completely henpecked to having two working brain cells, our top 10 list of the worst male-bashing ads represents the whole spectrum. If all this negativity turns your stomach, you can easily strike back with your wallet and avoid these products. For the simpler, more immediate protest, however, use your thumb and change the channel."

Court quashes dad's grounding of 12-year-old daughter

Matt · 20 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A father plans to appeal after a Quebec court ruled that he didn't have the right to punish his 12-year-old daughter by barring her from a school trip.

Quebec Superior Court Judge Suzanne Tessier ruled Friday that the girl should be allowed to attend the three-day trip within Quebec this week.

Initially, the father forbade his daughter from going online after the Grade 6 student posted photos on a dating site, the Globe and Mail reported in its Thursday edition.

The girl's parents are divorced, and after she had an alleged row with her stepmother, her father barred her from going on a school trip to mark the class's graduation from elementary school, the newspaper reported.

...
Two days later, the judge ruled the punishment was too severe because the girl had already been sufficiently disciplined, Beaudoin said.

Beaudoin said the judge also said there was no reason for the punishment to stand, since the girl was now living with her mother, even though the father has custody.

Beaudoin said the father, who has four children, was "devastated," especially since the ruling came days before Father's Day.'

Some things never change: Men pay for the date

Matt · 20 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Looks like earning more than your date makes no difference. That's right guys, it's still YOUR ROLE to pay for dates, hold open doors, etc. Just read it here and it will all be explained to you.

Notice it isn't something for a woman to appreciate about a man. It's something she should just expect. As for you expecting anything from her, well... here's a snap:

'Oh, you want me to say more? Gladly! What’s changed in the world, you ask? Two things: (1) women have continued to make great strides (yay), and (2) our culture has become much more informal (both yay and boo). The problem arises with this whole crazy notion that strong feminist women do not want doors held open for them… or that somehow the feminist movement has absolved men from paying for any date, ever, again.'

So tell me, men, when was the last time a woman asked you out on a date and also paid for it? But when was the last time she stood there smiling sheepishly waiting for you to do the asking?

Wikipedia article on Sexism in India

Anonymous · 20 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Somebody has created this entry. Please post more, so that this article is not deleted. Excerpt:

'Women's reservation

Women get 33% reservation in panchayats and municipal elections. They also get reservation and preferential treatments in education and jobs.

Ladies seat

Seats are reserved for females in buses, trains, metros and many other places.'

Teen pregnancy pact in Massachusetts: The girls are victims

tac0965 · 20 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Seventeen girls get in a pact to get pregnant and have their babies at the same time. The Mayor's and media's immediate response: the girls are victims; we must go after the boys criminally or, at least, financially. The Mayor also mentions that the girls lack self esteem or love in their life. Does this make them victims when they get themselves pregnant? Excerpt:

'Some of the girls reacted to the news they were pregnant with high fives and plans for baby showers, Sullivan said. One of the fathers "is a 24-year-old homeless guy," Sullivan told the magazine. Others were boys in the school.
...
"At the very least these men should be held responsible for financial support, if not put in jail for statutory rape as the mayor has suggested," Greg Verga, chairman of the Gloucester School Committee, told Reuters in a telephone interview.
...
"But even if we had contraceptives, that pact shows that if they wanted to get pregnant, they will get pregnant. Whether we distribute contraceptives is irrelevant," said Verga.'

Court: Ex-husband doesn't have to get physical exam for wife's life insurance

tac0965 · 20 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

A woman who wanted to force her ex husband to get a physical so that she could get a life insurance policy on him loses her case to the Nebraska Supreme Court. She wanted this life insurance policy so that if he died, she would get a large payout in lieu of the lost alimony checks.

I sure hope the family court lawyers don't read this article and get any ideas about applying such a protection mechanism for continuing child support payments after the non custodial parent dies.

Kathleen Parker: 'Focus on fathers overlooks half of the problem'

Anonymous · 20 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'We pause briefly to ponder the kind of response Mr. Obama might have received had he decided to criticize negligent moms on Mother's Day. No one in his right mind would do such a thing, but we're so accustomed to dissing dads that even a Father's Day reprimand leaves America's eyelashes unruffled.
...
On Mother's Day, we didn't hear much about women initiating domestic violence, including child abuse, though some studies show that they do more often than men. That's not a popular statistic for the good reason that women more often than men suffer grave injury and are killed in physical disputes.'

"Avenging Angel" Gets Life in Prison

Roy · 21 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman who claimed she was an angel sent from God to punish pedophiles was convicted Friday of murdering two boyfriends by a jury that rejected her insanity defense. Sheila LaBarre, 49, was sentenced to life in prison without parole. In 2006, police found her burning trash that contained the bones of one of her victims… defense lawyers argued that LaBarre was a delusional woman who believed every man in her life was a pedophile and who saw herself as an avenging angel. Her attorney stated - "It continues to be our belief that she's deeply crazy and insane."

The verdict will be appealed.'

New Jersey: Living with someone is not required to sue for palimony

Matt · 21 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Just how long does a man in New Jersey have to be dating/seeing a woman before she qualifies to get palimony from him? Guess we'll find out. Story here. Excerpt:

'The ruling overturned an appeals court decision last year that said there is no basis for a palimony suit unless a couple lived together.

"It is the promise of support, expressed or implied, coupled with a marital-type relationship, that are the indispensable elements to support a valid claim of palimony," Justice John Wallace wrote for the court.

The high court was ruling in the case of a former North Bergen woman who was attempting to sue a prominent, wealthy and married Manhattan ophthalmologist for palimony after he ended a 20-year relationship.'

Baskerville interview on Sandy Rios show available on-line

Matt · 21 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via email:

My interview on the Sandy Rios Show is now available online.

Sandy Rios is former president of the huge and influential Concerned Women for America. You can hear in the interview that she is not only very sympathetic but highly knowledgeable, having had two friends that went through the family court wringer. This could be a significant breakthrough. The number of prominent public personalities who are aware of the reign of terror in family court continues to grow.

Stephen

UK education journal: "Women, step back and shut up"

Proud_to_be_a_man · 22 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. This woman seems to understand teenage boys. Of course, all the feminists come out from under their rocks to attack her. Excerpt:

'Celia Lashlie, an education adviser and author from New Zealand, said women are important to boys' learning, but they need to learn from their male colleagues.

"Women should make more use of silence – asking a question then giving boys time to think before answering – and non-verbal cues such as raised eyebrows. They also should talk at a lower pitch.

"Don't speak so much – just shut up," says Ms Lashlie, a self-described feminist.

"I've been in classes with young female teachers, and by the end of the session my ears hurt."'

...and the inevitable reaction from the sisterhood:

'Chris Keates, general secretary of the NASUWT teaching union, said Ms Lashlie's proposals for schools were "a load of claptrap".

"It is disappointing that a woman has felt the need to pander to the views of a tiny group of men who present themselves as the oppressed minority," she said.'

Yawn.

Women Burdened by Invisible Household Labor

Roy · 22 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

From a new study of who does what in managing the household:

"First, the good news: Men are doing more than they used to, according to findings released in April by the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research. For example, in 1976, men did about six hours of housework per week; in 2005, that had increased to about 13 hours. Women, meanwhile, decreased their weekly housework from 26 hours in 1976 to 17 hours in 2005.

Now, the bad news: The same research found that men create, on average, seven more hours of housework a week for women. That extra work may not be as obvious as doing the dishes or mowing the lawn. So-called "emotional labor" -- tasks like writing holiday cards, scheduling doctor appointments and planning family gatherings -- is too often left to wives, says University of Michigan sociologist Pamela Smock. "As long as the invisible labor is borne by women, things aren't going to be equal, even if surveys show they are," Smock says. Such work can be a major source of mental stress, she adds."

(Gosh, I wish I could get a salaried job doing invisible labor. It would not stress me out at all...)

RADAR: "FIX VAWA NOW" campaign contributions needed

Matt · 22 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Two weeks from now, RADAR will be launching our biggest campaign ever – “Fix VAWA Now!”

This five-month campaign will lay the groundwork for our legislative efforts to reform VAWA. The high-octane campaign will feature Op-eds Alerts, press releases, lobbying, new Special Reports, state-level efforts – you name it, we plan to blow the lid off the fraud and falsehoods of the domestic violence industry.

Can you help us get our “Fix VAWA Now!” message out – can you send us $50, $100, $500, or $1,000?

You can send the check payable to RADAR at:

P.O. Box 1404
Rockville, MD 20849

Or do it by PayPal: http://www.mediaradar.org/donate.php.

So c’mon folks, dig deep, this is our once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. We’ve got to turn the corner on false allegations, family break-up, and discrimination against men.

Sincerely,
The RADAR Team

P.S. If you send us at least $50 by June 30, you’ll qualify for a lottery drawing to win a free copy of Richard Davis’ recent no-holds-barred book, “Domestic Violence: Intervention, Prevention, Policies, and Solutions.” And if you send us $500 or more, we might send you the book for FREE!

Wrongly accused man barely escapes erroneous child porn charges - presumed guilty by friends and colleagues

Matt · 22 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A child porn possession charge lodged against a Department of Industrial Accidents investigator fired for having smut on his state-issued laptop has been dismissed because experts concluded he was unwittingly spammed.

“The overall forensics of the laptop suggest that it had been compromised by a virus,” said Jake Wark, spokesman for Suffolk District Attorney Daniel Conley.

Nationally recognized computer forensic analyst Tami Loehrs told the Herald Michael Fiola’s ordeal was “one of the most horrific cases I’ve seen.”

“As soon as you mention child pornography, everybody’s senses go out the window,” she said.

Loehrs, who spent a month dissecting the computer for the defense, explained in a 30-page report that the laptop was running corrupted virus-protection software, and Fiola was hit by spammers and crackers bombarding its memory with images of incest and pre-teen porn not visible to the naked eye.

Two forensic examinations conducted by the state Attorney General’s Office for the prosecution concurred with that conclusion, Wark said.

Still, Fiola, 53, whose wife, Robin, described as “computer-illiterate,” wants his day in court. He intends to sue the DIA for “destroying our lives.”

“Our lives have been hell,” said Fiola, a former state park ranger now living in Rhode Island. “I hope to recover my reputation, but our friends all ran.”

DIA spokeswoman Linnea Walsh confirmed Fiola “was terminated,” but declined to say if any internal discipline has been meted out as a result of his name being cleared in court.

“We stand by our decision,” she said.'

UK: College women warned against whistling at workers while they face sex offender status if they do same

Matt · 22 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Officials at West Kent College in Tonbridge, Kent, sent an email to all pupils warning that the behaviour was "totally unacceptable", and saying any students caught harassing contractors would face disciplinary action.
...
The email read: "It has come to the attention of the college that some female students have been making comments to, or whistling at, the builders both whilst on site and as they walk around the campus.
...
Meanwhile new laws could see wolf-whistling builders placed on the sex offenders register. The Sexual Offences (Scotland) Bill will create a new offence of "communicating indecently", punishable by up to 10 years in jail.

The legislation is intended to punish sexual harassment by text, emails and letters, but ministers also aim to include sexually explicit comments to strangers. It is expected that the law would only apply to persistent offenders.'

British mother arrested in Spain after 'leaving young son to burn on beach for 12 hours'

Anonymous · 23 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A British mother has been arrested in Spain after she allegedly left her five-year-old son to burn on a baking hot beach for 12 hours while she went to work.

The boy's mother, aged 19, reportedly left him playing in the sand at the popular resort of Benalmadena, in the Costa del Sol, where he suffered serious sunburn and had to be later admitted to hospital.'

Father's Day cards banned in Scottish schools

Matt · 23 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Thousands of primary pupils were prevented from making Father's Day cards at school for fear of embarrassing classmates who live with single mothers and lesbians.

The politically correct policy was quietly adopted at schools "in the interests of sensitivity" over the growing number of lone-parent and same-sex households.

It only emerged after a large number of fathers failed to receive their traditional cards and handmade gifts.

Family rights campaigners last night condemned the policy as "absurd" and argued that it is marginalising fathers, but local authorities said teachers need to react to "the changing pattern of family life".'

German court rules against woman who claimed phobia of official letters

Matt · 23 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'BERLIN - A German court has ruled against a woman who cited an unusual phobia in asking that her child support benefits be restored. The phobia: fear of the contents of official letters.

Evidence in the case before a court in western Rhineland-Palatinate state said the woman, who it did not identify, was sent a letter in May 2007 asking that she supply evidence to support continued payments for her daughter.

After she failed to respond, she was notified in July 2007 that the money was being cut off and that she was being given one month to appeal.'

MSN: "How to leave your husband"

Matt · 23 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Currently it's the first item in their rotating story box on the MSN home page. Excerpt:

'Keep it to yourself. In a pre-divorce situation, there is a fine line between deception and self-preservation. Though you may intend to leave, Woodhouse cautions against telling your spouse before you are prepared. "It would create a great deal of turmoil," she says.
...
Karen Kerbaugh, an administrative assistant in Haltom City, Texas, got married in 1996, "and from almost the first month I realized I had made a grave mistake in marrying him," she says.

Although she wasn't deliberately planning to leave at first, in hindsight, she says, "I was subconsciously plotting my escape."
...
Muster support on the side. "While I didn't talk openly about the troubles we were having, my close friends and family knew enough about what was going on to be there for me when I needed it," Kerbaugh says. She ended up staying with a friend for a month after she left her husband.
...
Don't count on alimony. Should you factor alimony or child support into your potential income stream? Going by the odds alone, that's a dicey proposition and may be more so given the economy.

"You have to assess your risk," Woodhouse says. "Look at who you're married to, how reliable they are, what their attitude is. Then decide whether you can count on them giving you any money."'

Just imagine "How to leave your wife" showing up instead? Can you? I can't.

Woman Draws 10 Years for Kidnapping and Torturing her ex-boss

Anonymous · 23 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A 'greedy and wicked' estate agent, who hoped to pocket a fortune kidnapping and torturing her former boss, was jailed for 10 years today.

Ambreen Gul, 23, was so furious when she was fired that she recruited another sacked colleague and two other thugs to make her ex-boss pay.

Having lured Waqas Malik to her flat, the unsuspecting businessman was kicked, punched and pistol whipped repeatedly.

During seven hours of suffering one of his captors stood on his head, while another warned he had he would never see his family again unless he raised £200,000 ransom.

He was told failure would result in the executions of both himself and his 13-year-old son."

Man guilty of... photographing buses

Anonymous · 23 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A bus spotter has decided to give up his lifelong hobby of photographing buses because people fear he is a terrorist and even a paedophile.

Rob McCaffrey - who calls himself an omniboligist - has been taking pictures of buses all over the world for forty years but has only ever faced problems in Britain.

But Rob says that in politically correct Britain he is finding it increasingly difficult to continue his beloved hobby because of the fear and suspicion he causes among onlookers.

In the last year he has been questioned twice by the police and had to give all his personal details after people who saw him innocently snapping buses on public roads reported him."

Oxytocin: potential date-rape drug?

Matt · 24 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. All right, makes sense to a point. However I can't imagine it being good for anyone to be dosed with artificial oxytocin regularly. It serves a purpose and to overload the body with it seems as bad as overloading it with any number of other artificial hormones.

That said, if you read the article all the way to the end, you will see this:

"However, despite the many potential benefits of the research projects, some scientists have sounded warnings over the negative potential uses the hormone offers.

They say oxytocin could have potential as a date-rape drug as it is involved in both trust and sexual arousal."

I do believe the next date rape drug scare will be aspirin.

Gloucester "pregnancy pact" principal suddenly gets amnesia

Matt · 24 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Gloucester Mayor Carolyn Kirk said the report of a "pregnancy pact" has not been confirmed.
...
However, Sullivan has now told officials he can't remember what his source of information was.

At a news conference Monday, Kirk said the principal was "foggy in his memory about how he heard about the information."'

UK: Working mothers to get payments from government if they earn less than their husbands

Matt · 24 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Mothers will be offered £40 a week to go back to work under plans unveiled by Gordon Brown.

The scheme would give a couple with children £40 if one parent works and the other, usually the mother, agrees to look for a job. If both work the couple would get £80.

...

But critics said the £40 payments did too little. Chris Grayling, Tory work and pensions spokesman said: ‘Gordon Brown just doesn’t understand that what Britain needs is not yet more pointless tinkering with the benefits system for working mothers but real action to tackle family breakdown in a nation where millions of people are trapped in benefit dependency.”' iPhone is sexist?

BinaryShadow · 24 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here.

Apparently, the patriarchy has launched an attack against the poor, long-fingernailed women who have difficulties using the iPhone.

Erica Watson-Currie of Newport Beach, Calif., wanted a stylus. She and other women who have long nails -- as well as some people of all genders with chunky fingers -- have trouble typing on the iPhone.

Obama's Web Site Repeats N.O.W. Statistics

Roy · 24 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Obama's recent Father's Day speech vilifying dads got me wondering what more is on his official web site. To be brief, his entries under "Issues" for women and families might have been copied directly from the National Organization for Women.

Obama's site repeats the "1-in-4 women will be abused" myth, along with the "77-cents on the dollar" pay gap fiction. If elected, he pledges to create a new $25 million DV fund to create "partnerships" between DV agencies and Fatherhood programs. He applauds the progress made from VAWA.

He supports a Responsible Fatherhood & Healthy Families Act that will "crack down" on men in arrears for child support.

Other pledges are to more aggressively promote women in science and math, support passage of an Equal Pay Act, and further strengthen Title IX.

Anti-paternity fraud bill gains traction

Matt · 24 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This is good news. Excerpt:

'Lautar is under court order to pay nearly $800 a month in child support and other expenses, despite the fact his ex-wife has admitted in Allegheny County court papers that Lautar is not the girl's father. The child was born during their marriage. After the couple divorced, the mother married the girl's biological father. The mother, the father and the daughter live together in Moon, according to papers filed in Allegheny County Common Pleas Court.

"I'm stuck in this rip-off, this fraud," said Lautar, 40, of North Strabane. "It's paternity fraud, is what it is. ... And the state is enforcing this fraud."

...
State law prohibits men from rescinding parental rights if they have acted as a child's father. Courts routinely have ruled it is not in "the best interest of the child" to suspend child support payments unless the man was fraudulently duped into believing he was the father.
...
Lautar said he has no plan to abandon the girl who spent Father's Day with him. He and his new wife fought for and won visitation rights.

But he resents being forced to financially support another man's daughter.

"We're having trouble starting our own family because they're stealing our money," Lautar said. "This woman and man are committing fraud, and the court is supporting it."'

RADAR ALERT: Congressman Scott, Combat the Fatherhood Crisis: Oppose H.R. 6088

Matt · 24 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Senator Barak Obama gave a speech on the importance of fatherhood the same week that the National Fatherhood Initiative released a report, "The One Hundred Billion Dollar Man," on the taxpayer costs of absent fathers. The good news is that more and more policy makers and organizations are starting to understand the impact of absent fathers. The bad news is policy makers do not really understand the causes of the fatherhood crisis.

As one of the few mainstream journalists who understand the government's role in creating the fatherhood crisis, Kathleen Parker, pointed out in "Obama's Incomplete Plea on Fatherhood," Obama failed to mention that "the problem of absent fathers, especially in the black community, is tied in part to well-intentioned social programs such as ... domestic violence prevention." Since "the state's punitive powers, permitted without due process, are mind-boggling to consider" and not every allegation of domestic violence is legitimate, "[o]nce the system is engaged and injunctions issued, even innocent fathers are unlikely to see much of their children. Perhaps never."

A prime example of policy maker's failure to grasp root causes is H.R.6088, which gives $55.5 million to prosecute alleged perpetrators of domestic violence. The key word here is alleged. The bill acts as if false accusations and overzealous prosecution do not exist.

It is hard to find another area where the federal government tips the scales of justice so much. Because so many of the victims of this federally funded railroading will be African American fathers, it is difficult to understand why the Congressional Black Caucus is not unanimously opposed to it. Amazingly, two members of the Black Caucus, Congressman Conyers and Congressman Sheila Jackson-Lee, are the sponsor and co-sponsor of H.R 6088.

Fortunately not all members of the Black Caucus have signed on to H.R 6088. One key member is Congressman Robert "Bobby" Scott (D Va.). Congressman Scott is chairman of the Crime Sub-Committee of the House Judicial Committee. To pass, H.R. 6088 must go through his sub-committee.

Please contact Congressman Scott and ask him to do his part to alleviate the fatherhood crisis by opposing H.R. 6088.

1201 Longworth HOB
Washington, DC 20515
(202) 225-8351 Phone
(202) 225-8354 Fax

He can be reached electronically through this web page: http://forms.house.gov/wyr/welcome.shtml.

Quote the National Fatherhood Initiative study1 and Kathleen Parker's article2 and let him know that H.R. 6088 will further exacerbate the fatherhood crisis by pushing more fathers, especially African American fathers, out of their children's lives. If you are African American, let him know. And, as always, be polite and courteous.

References cited above are linked to the RADAR site as indicated.

++
Date of RADAR Release: June 23, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence.

http://www.mediaradar.org/.

CBS News: Clinton To Join Obama As He Woos Women

anthony · 24 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'At a town hall meeting here on Monday, Obama praised the women responsible for his upbringing and outlined his record of pushing to address issues important to women. The only men in the room were reporters, campaign aides and Secret Service agents.

As the working-class women in the audience nodded, Obama continued: "Too many of America's daughters grow up facing barriers to their dreams, and that has consequences for all American families. It's harder for working parents to make a living while raising their kids. And we know that the system is especially stacked against women."'

On YouTube: Men's rights group file domestic violence lawsuit

anthony · 24 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I found this video interesting mostly because its an actual news report from a Sacramento television station. This is the first time I've ever seen this issue discussed during a news program.

Little 'Barbie Brat' Bullies Become Concern in Schools

anthony · 24 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Bullying among adolescents has captured the attention of researchers, educators and parents alarmed by a parade of mean girls and cyber-bullies caught in mid-punch on viral video. But such aggression may not just happen in a whirl of adolescent hormones, some in the growing anti-bully movement argue.

Meline Kevorkian, a Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., researcher and public speaker on bullying, surveyed 167 educators last year and 25 percent indicated bullying occurs most in elementary schools. Research also indicates that three-quarters of 8- to 11-year-olds report they've been bullied, with more than half identifying it as a "big" problem, Kevorkian said."

India: Minister changes agenda of the men's issues meeting

bharati · 25 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. As expected the original agenda for discussing the changes of Dowry laws and domestic violence laws suddenly changed.

It tells in the words of government official “We do not want to convey the impression that we believe the existing laws are flawed or need changes. That is why we have changed the agenda,” an official said.

In another related development, Delhi police have issued a circular banning the mandatory arrests over women-centric laws invoking the well-enunciated principle that provision of power to arrest is not the same as order to arrest.

Update on the DC Festival 2008 in Support of Equal Parenting Rights and Family Preservation

Matt · 25 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via email from Angela Pedersen: The DC Festival 2008 in Support of Equal Parenting Rights and Family Preservation is on!

Under the leadership of Lary Holland and numerous organizations the DC Festival 2008 will be held on August 15 and 16 in Washington, D.C.

If you belong to an organization please be sure to send your letter of support to Lary Holland. Information on how to do this and why we need your letters of support is listed here.

Organizations that already support this effort are:
1) Fathers4Justice
2) Dads and Moms of Michigan
3) A Child's Right
4) Equal Parenting Bike Trek Crew
5) Split-N-Two
6) CRISPE
7) United Civil Rights Council of America
8) Parental Alienation Awareness Organization (PAAO)
9) Shared Parenting Works
10) Father's Rights Coalition and many, many more. You can view a constantly updating list on the main page for the DC Festival 2008 here.

Send your letter of support and commitment for turnout to have your organization listed!

Send this letter to: laryholland-at-sbcglobal.net.

Arizona governor signs bills on child protective service oversight

Matt · 25 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'PHOENIX — Arizona's child protection system and the people who work in it will be subject to more public and legislative oversight because under new laws signed Tuesday.

Four bills signed by Gov. Janet Napolitano were promoted by supporters as increasing accountability and transparency of state functions to protect children from abuse and neglect.

The bills would increase public access to Child Protective Services information after the death or serious injury of a child.'

Farrell & Wilber: Does Feminism Discriminate Against Men?

anthony · 25 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This is a Free Audio Dialogue. You must provide your e-mail address and will receive a link to the full dialogue.

"It's definitely true that men, as a rule today in industrialized societies, are basically where women were in the 1950's, psychologically and socially. Part of what is keeping men there is being blamed for having power that is really a camouflage for the powerlessness. Real power is control over my own life."

NY Daily News: Pandering to women, Obama twists truth on equal pay

anthony · 25 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"At an event this week in New Mexico, Obama repeated the misleading claim that "women still earn only 77 cents for every dollar earned by men," and dismissed the notion that factors other than discrimination explain the wage gap as "just totally wrong."

Yet even the organizations that champion the most aggressive government action in the name of equal pay acknowledge that most of the wage gap is a result of men and women's different choices related to work, not employment discrimination. A 2007 report from The American Association of University Women, for instance, found that most of the wage gap could be explained by factors such as employment, education and personal choices. Pay differential wasn't just the result of sexism in the workplace."

India: Men refuse to be excluded from ministerial meeting

bharati · 25 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Save Indian Family unintentionally disrupts the meeting by Indian feminist minister. Hell we thought it was us who were supposed to be invited to air our views!

Some stupid male feminists talked to us of wearing high heels to feel womens pain and hence this blog post.

UK: Working-class white boys shun higher education, new report confirms

anthony · 25 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"White working-class males are severely under-represented in universities, according to a report by the government that shows the English university sector remains strongly divided along class lines.

The National Audit Office (NAO) report says that white working-class boys are now the least likely group of people to go to university. The Russell group of research-led institutions - including Oxford and Cambridge - are most consistently failing to attract state school students.

Universities and the government have failed to monitor properly the impact of a £392m drive to encourage them to apply, the report claims."

CNN: Is it harder to raise boys or girls?

anthony · 25 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Boys and modern education are not an idyllic match. An indoor-based day and an early emphasis on academics and visual-auditory (as opposed to hands-on) learning ask a lot of a group that arrives at school less mature. In their early years, most boys lag behind girls in developing attentiveness, self-control, and language and fine motor skills.

The relatively recent acceleration of the pre-K and kindergarten curricula has occurred without awareness that the brain develops at different sequences in girls and boys, Dr. Sax says. Music, clay work, finger painting, and physical exercise -- early-ed activities that once helped lively kids acclimate to school -- are vanishing. Few teachers are trained in handling the problems that result."

Denver Center for the Performing Arts excludes men from play

Anonymous · 26 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The Denver Center for the Performing Arts has a play for women in which men are excluded. I found this by looking at the Sunday Denver Post while at work, find here.

The letter writer has a point, though I feel like barfing a little at the other plays he's seen (Vagina Monologues?).

The Denver Center for the Performing Arts is an organization, but it uses city government facilities. Isn't that still illegal?

The website for the Denver Center for the Performing Arts is here.

The discriminatory play is here. Quote:

"Girls Only - The Secret Comedy of Women

September 18, 2008 -- December 21, 2008
Garner Galleria Theatre

Sorry, fellas, this one's just for the ladies."

Granted, I wouldn't want to see the play anyway, and if they show misandric crap like "The Vagina Monologues" and the others mentioned, I especially wouldn't want to go.

Pro-women laws being misused

arindamp · 26 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"NEW DELHI: Are we being fair on the not -so-fair sex? It would appear not. Laws for protecting women like the anti-dowry legislation and the domestic violence Act were vociferously opposed by men's groups on Wednesday at a consultation initiated by the ministry for women and child development and UNIFEM.

The burden of their argument was that these laws don't follow the fundamental legal premise that a person is innocent until he is proven guilty. "In 30% of the cases that come to us, there is a rift between the woman and her in-laws where the woman forces the man to choose between the two under the threat of slapping Section 498A of the Dowry Prohibition Act on the husband and his family," said Ashish from Save Indian Family (SIF)."

Harriet Harperson Strikes Again

Proud_to_be_a_man · 26 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This woman has got to have a real deep-seated hatred of men. Especially if they're white. Here is her latest attempt to turn Britain into an even bigger laughing stock than it is already. Excerpt:

"Women and ethnic minority job candidates will be given increased chances of employment under new Government plans.

The new Equalities Bill will also force employers to reveal salary structures to make the pay gap between men and women clearer.

Equality Minister Harriet Harman defended the positive discrimination telling Sky News there was still too much "old-fashioned" bias in the work place."

I despair...

UK: Donor sprem increasingly scarce due to loss of guaranteed anonymity

Matt · 26 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Looks like their evil plan backfired and the potential donors got some smarts. Well, did they really think we were that stupid? Alas, some guys still are. But this is hopeful news. Excerpt:

'The removal of anonymity from sperm and egg donors has provoked a crisis in fertility treatment that is denying couples the chance to try for a baby.

Infertility therapy with donated sperm has collapsed to the lowest levels since records began, according to the first official figures, seen by The Times, since the Government banned anonymous donation in 2005.

The number of women treated with donated sperm fell by about 20 per cent, from 2,727 in 2005 to 2,107 in 2006, the first full year after the change. The number of donor insemination treatment cycles fell by 30 per cent over the same period.'

Female Teacher Convicted of Planting Threatening Notes Throughout School

anthony · 26 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Susan Romanyszyn was convicted of 11 counts of leaving threatening messages in the hallways of Longstreth Elementary School in the fall, when she was a teacher there, according to The Philadelphia Inquirer.

In October, 15 notes including the messages "You die today," "Bomb today" and "I have a weapon and a nife," were found at the school, The Morning Call reported. In addition, a fake bomb was found in a student's desk and nails were scattered in a faculty parking lot.

Romanyszyn is under house arrest at least until her sentencing in a month. The crimes carry a maximum sentence of 73 years in jail.'

Unearthing bones can also unearth family secrets

patriotsofamerica · 27 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Women making false claime as to who the father of a child really is has been going on for a long time. Now, the military is deciding how to deal with that when finding lost, dead soldiers back from WWII when doing DNA to notify next of kin. Excerpt:

"Now, as the military develops new technologies that could identify fallen soldiers using similar kinds of DNA tests, it is facing the real possibility that bones unearthed from distant battlefields may also end up exposing family secrets from World War II. The tests could well uncover cases of false paternity that have been kept secret for decades."

Women have been doing this for YEARS! Yet they still are not held responsible! It goes to show to me at least that women cannot be trusted. Goes as far back as Adam and Eve.

www.move-off.org

UK: "Flooded kitchen" mother jailed for neglect

AngryMan · 27 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Remember this case? Excerpt:

"A mother who left her toddler son imprisoned and alone in a flooded kitchen for three days while she went out 'to party', was today jailed for 18 months.

Kelly Tollerton, a 23-year-old single mother of two, showed no emotion as the judge spoke of her 'deplorable and disgraceful' act in leaving her two-year-old child to scavenge for food in the bin and sleep on a pile of dirty laundry, while she spent the weekend with her boyfriend."

UK: Elderly girl-gang victim confronts her attacker in court

AngryMan · 27 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Great grandmother Maisie was beaten, spat at and threatened with garden shears as she tried to stand up to layabout Duffy and her gang of hoodie thugs who had been drinking cheap cider.

As Duffy was named and shamed by a judge under the terms of an anti social behaviour order, widow Maisie compared the pictures of herself and her tormentor and condemned the scourge of violent teenage girls blighting the country.

Recent Home Office figures shows that girls between 10 and 17 committed 59,236 crimes last year, up 25% from 47,358 in 2004."

14-YO girl faces stat rape charges and gets private attorney's help pro-bono

Matt · 27 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. The kicker is that she claims she was raped forcibly by the 13-year-old and now has a private attorney (as opposed to a public defender) representing her gratis. Excerpt:

'Then the girl says two friends left the room, leaving her alone with the boy who she says had been her friend up until then. She says he forced himself on her. The girl says she told her school counselor about it a month later.

"I wanted help because it was my first time and I was scared," she says.

The counselor went to police and before long this girl who was 14 at the time, was being charged with raping the boy who was a few months younger and still 13 years old. Kansas law says sex with anyone under 14, even if it's consensual, is rape. Deciding to actually prosecute a child in this situation is another matter.'

Mother jailed after baby she left unsupervised died of drugs overdose

AngryMan · 27 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A mother whose baby died of a heroin and methadone overdose after she left him unsupervised to go on a drug binge was today jailed for five years.

Sabrina Ross, a former prostitute, would regularly pass out at her home in Bristol, leaving 14-month old son Rio well within reach of Class A drugs and their substitutes, a court heard."

Principal recovers memory, now affirms the 'pregnancy pact' story

Matt · 27 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The story that is destined just not to die... the latest chapter is here. Excerpt:

'BOSTON - The principal of a Massachusetts high school who said a group of students intentionally got pregnant stood by his comments Thursday, saying his information “was and is accurate.”

In his first public statement since the controversy erupted earlier this month, Gloucester High School principal Joseph Sullivan said he does not specifically remember using the word “pact” but does not dispute it.
...
The principal said his only direct source of information about the intentional pregnancies was the former nurse practitioner at the health center. He said he also heard “verbal staff reports and student/staff chatter.”'

Single mom tries to auction herself and her house on e-bay

Matt · 27 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

File this under humor-- dark humor, but humor nonetheless. Excerpt:

'PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — A struggling single parent and real estate agent is trying to sell her house and find a husband. She's auctioning off both her home and herself in a package deal on eBay and Craigslist.
...
Her eBay auction ends July 2 and asks for a starting bid of 99 cents with a shipping cost of $500,000. The auction has not yet received any bids.

Traboscia says she has already been contacted by one man in Italy, who is arranging a trip to South Florida to visit her.'

Also covered here.

CNN Video: 3 teachers, 3 sex scandals

anthony · 27 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video report here.

"Prime News" reports on a flurry of teacher sex scandals, one allegedly involving eight members of a school baseball team."

Obama speech: Girls today know "women can do anything...better" than boys

Roy · 27 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Front and center on the home page of msnbc.msn.com you can watch a video clip of Obama's speech today at the big "unity" appearance with Hillary.

Obama says that because of Ms. Clinton, girls today know that "women can do anything that the boys can do... and do it better... and do it in heels!"

Who is writing Obama's speeches, which are getting stupider by the week?

Ed. note: Reported in MSM here. Also, you can hear the comments in question at the 6:30 mark of the video clip linked above.

UK: Think tank slams paedophile paranoia culture

anthony · 27 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'An independent think tank has today blamed the government's increasing reliance on "anti-paedophile" criminal record checks for making UK adults scared to have any contact with other people's children.

Civitas' report Licensed to Hug claims the checks have driven suspiscion of all adults, which has led in turn to a breakdown of communities. Afraid to tell off or even talk to misbehaving children, adults have become "deskilled" in dealing with younger generations, it argues.'

Millionaire businesswoman gets 11 years for enslavement

AngryMan · 28 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A millionaire businesswoman who inflicted years of abuse on her two housekeepers held as virtual slaves in her suburban New York mansion has been jailed for 11 years.

Varsha Sabhnani, 46, was convicted on 12 charges after her victims testified they were beaten with brooms and umbrellas, slashed with knives, and forced to climb stairs and take freezing showers as punishment.

One victim was forced to eat dozens of chili peppers against her will, and then was forced to eat her own vomit when she could not keep the peppers down, prosecutors said.'

Mother jailed for 12 years after leaving 3-YO to starve to death

AngryMan · 28 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The mother of a three-year-old girl who starved to death showed more concern for the family's pet dog.

Tiffany Wright was left neglected and unloved to die alone locked in a squalid bedroom above the pub run by her mother and stepfather.

Yesterday Sabrina Hirst, 22, was jailed for 12 years after admitting the manslaughter of her daughter.
...
'Most members of the public will find it impossible to understand how you can treat your child this way.'

While Tiffany was dying upstairs, her mother was caught on CCTV in the pub expressing concern about one of her dogs not getting enough vitamins and not putting on weight."

Clearfield police say teen lied about church rape

Matt · 28 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Clearfield police said a teenage girl's claims that she was raped in the middle of a church parking lot in broad daylight are false.

In a statement sent to the Deseret News on Friday, Clearfield Assistant Police Chief Greg Krusi said laboratory test results and other evidence analyzed did not match up with the girl's claims about being attacked.'

Popular Australian radio personaility gets apology on sex allegations

Anonymous · 28 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A WOMAN who accused colourful broadcaster Derryn Hinch of sexually assaulting her has made an unreserved public apology.

Maryann Martinek, a former business partner of Hinch's, made the allegations in 2006 directly to Hinch.

Hinch said she also asked for $50,000 or she would go to the police and make the allegations public.

But Hinch also reported the matter to police who later recommended that no prosecution should proceed.'

P.S. Derryn Hinch is one of Australia's top talk radio stars.

New state program will focus on kids, families, and... fathers?

ItsDan · 30 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

You read that correctly. According to this article, a new state program aimed at helping families will hire a coordinator specifically to look at how existing programs can be used to help fathers, or what new programs could be implemented for them. Excerpt:

"Traditional programs have been aimed at helping women, said Terence Ray, director of the Milwaukee Fatherhood Initiative. "It's good to see that the movement has evolved into understanding that when you talk parenting, there's another parent," Ray said."

India's first IIT exclusively for females in Maharashtra

arindamp · 30 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Another gender bias. This time it is propounded by none other than India's first female president. Shame on her. Article here. Excerpt:

'NAGPUR: Even as there is talk about starting new Indian Institutes of Technology (IITs) and increasing the number of seats in the existing ones, a move is afoot to open the country's first all-women engineering and technology-oriented institute in Amravati, President Pratibha Patil's hometown in Maharashtra.

The suggestion to start India's first all-women IIT at Amravati near Nagpur in Vidarbha had in fact been mooted by Saint Gadgebaba University vice-chancellor Kamal Singh. Patil followed it up when she became the country's first woman president last July.'

Woman gets probation in underage sex case

el cid · 30 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Even the prosecutor believes that if the genders had been reversed, we'd be talking jail time, not probation. Excerpt:

'A 39-year-old Louisville woman who had two children with an underage boy was sentenced this morning to 20 of years probation...

Irene Gomez, whose children were conceived with the boy when he was 13 and 16, had pleaded guilty to contributing to the delinquency of a minor and attempted child sex assault as part of a plea bargain with prosecutors.'

YouTube video of Fatherless Day Rally in Los Angeles

MR · 30 June 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Here, at YouTube, is some video from the Fatherless Day Rally in Los Angeles.

Fatherless Day Rally, Los Angeles
(The speech given at this rally has been dubbed in due to poor sound quality.)

"Prison - a cruel and unusual punishment for a woman"

Anonymous · 1 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The good news: The UK government's plan to close down all women's prisons has been rejected due to popular opinion.

Aging celebrity Joan Bakewell, ex-mistress of Harold Pinter, is not happy about this. In this article, she attempts to tug at our heart-strings to make us feel sympathy for female criminals, but not male ones. "Prison is hard for women". Isn't that the idea? If you can't do the time, don't do the crime...

As a 1970s feminist, she openly preaches double-standards. Get this:

"Prison is certainly not one of the places where women aspire to equal treatment."

UK: Woman 'murdered mother-to-be and cut her full-term baby alive from her womb'

Anonymous · 1 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A mother-to-be has been stabbed to death by another woman and her almost full-term baby cut from her womb, police have revealed.
...
A 23-year-old woman has been arrested.
...
Her body was found early on Saturday in a park in the city of Kennewick.'

Mom Charged With Denying Son Cancer Medication

anthony · 2 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman has been charged with withholding cancer medication from her 8-year-old autistic son, who prosecutors say likely will die because the cancer has returned.
...
In March... the child's oncologist ... filed a report of suspected neglect with the Department of Social Services after discovering Fraser's cancer had returned, something that should not have happened if he was on his medications.

The boy's father, Eric Fraser, now has full custody of his son in Saugus. He said Jeremy spends part of his day in a special education program.
...
"I'm pretty disgusted about the whole justice (system) and DSS," Fraser said. "Now my son's going to die."'

Attorney: Teacher agrees to plea deal in sex case

anthony · 2 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A former teacher accused of having sex with a 13-year-old student and fleeing with him to Mexico is expected to plead guilty to reduced charges, her attorney said Tuesday.

James Martin Davis, the attorney for 26-year-old Kelsey Peterson, said his client will plead guilty Wednesday to federal charges of having sex with a minor across state lines.

It's similar to the original charge of crossing the border to have sex with a minor but doesn't carry a minimum 10-year-sentence, Davis said."

Commentary: 'Where the Girls Aren't'

anthony · 2 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"The report concludes with a lament that women still earn only about 80 percent of what comparably trained men do. Remarkably, it makes no mention of the single biggest contributor to that persistent gender gap; namely, the fact that young women continue to choose professions that pay less well than those chosen by men with similar education. Women remain more likely than men to major in art history and journalism; men are more likely than women to major in computer science, physics, and engineering. A college graduate with a degree in physics or engineering will earn more than a graduate with a degree in art history or journalism, simply because the marketplace values those skills differently. Again, the one intervention proven to increase the numbers of women entering highly paid fields such as engineering—namely, single-sex classes—is scorned by the AAUW on political grounds."

Glenn Sacks: Obama Panders to Women by Insulting Men

anthony · 2 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Obama said, "They will take for granted women can do anything that the boys can do, and do it better." Of course--the ladies aren't equal to men, they're better. I've never understood why some women have this great and unending desire to be told that they're better than men and to put men down. Obama, a smart politician, is pandering to this desire."'

Harvard Political Review: Gender equality remains an illusive and undefinable goal

anthony · 2 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Commentary here. Excerpt:

"In response to the same question however, Christina Hoff-Sommers, resident scholar at the American Enterprise Institute and author of Who Stole Feminism, told the HPR that “almost all areas are overblown. We’ve entered a new phase where American women have achieved equality with men.” While there may be pockets of sexism, “overall if you look at the status of women in society and men in society and you ask who’s doing better, it’s a mix.” Women, say critics of the current feminist movement, are already more educated, have higher aspirations, live longer, and have more choices in how to arrange their lives. While women typically earn less, wage comparisons often do not take into account time women may have taken off in order to care for children, a decision, they say, that comes with a legitimate financial penalty."

National Review: Title IX Strikes Again

anthony · 2 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Athletes at Arizona State University are the latest victims of this disturbing trend. In May, the school announced that it was cutting three men's sports: wrestling, swimming, and tennis. Following public outcry (see SaveASUwrestling.com) and a massive fundraising campaign, wrestling has since been reinstated. ASU swimmers, tennis players, and several coaches were not so lucky."

Why Russia's wealthier women are still reluctant to go Dutch

Anonymous · 2 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Billboards across Moscow advertising a women's magazine are raising female consciousness by asking Russia's fairer sex: "Are you ready to pay half to be independent?"

It's a question with increasing relevance because growing numbers of young Russian women are moving into management positions, earning good salaries and boosting their spending power. But for most, the answer to the question for now is still a resounding "no".

"When you go out with a guy, even if you're just friends and there's no romantic subtext, you would always expect him to pay," says Svetlana Kolchik, deputy editor of Russia's Marie Claire.'

UK: Woman stabbed to death by female attacker(s)

Anonymous · 2 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman has been stabbed to death by a female attacker in London in the latest stabbing to hit the capital.

Dee Willis, 28, was stabbed in her upper body during the attack at around 11pm last night in Bellenden Road, close to Peckham High Street in south east London.

She was taken to hospital but died shortly after midnight.
...
A gang of up to 20 girls was seen in the area around the time of the attack, according to one eyewitness."

And I thought women didn't do things like that. It must have been a man's fault...

UK: Most men are harassed by women at work

Anonymous · 2 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Four out of five men are sexually harassed by women at work - but are too afraid to complain to their employers - according to researchers.

A study by the law firm Peninsula found 85 per cent of employers admit they take a complaints of sexual harassment from a male employees less seriously.

Two-thirds of the 2,300 men questioned also said sexual banter was inappropriate at work."

UK's most senior female police officer says gang life replacing family life

Anonymous · 2 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. The UK's most senior female police officer has stated that gang life is replacing family life in the UK. Excerpt:

'Barbara Wilding, the longest-serving female chief constable, said that social breakdown was giving rise to “enormous concerns about the future of young people”. Ms Wilding, the Chief Constable of South Wales, said:“In many of our larger cities, in areas of extreme deprivation, there are almost feral groups of very angry young people.

“Many have experienced family breakdown, and in place of parental and family role models, the gang culture is now established. Tribal loyalty has replaced family loyalty and gang culture based on violence and drugs is a way of life.” Disaffected young people were also a prime target for terrorist recruiters, she said.'

Of course she is right, and many people are starting to take this view. We have the feminist movement and the 1968 generation to thank for this massive social breakdown. We can add terrorism to the feminist movement's list of social evils.

F4J to Lead Numerous Organizations and Family Members in "Justice March" through Washington, D.C.

Matt · 2 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Forwarded by Angela Pedersen:

"WASHINGTON, D.C. - Fathers-4-Justice announced today that they are leading numerous organizations and family members in a "Justice March" through Washington, D.C. on August 16, 2008. The origination point of the "Justice March" is scheduled to launch from the DC FESTIVAL 2008 Civil Rights Event at Upper Senate Park and continue to the United States White House. (http://www.dcfestival2008.com/)

Children's and Parent's Rights organizations from across the nation are scheduled to converge on our nation's capitol this August 15 & 16 at the Upper Senate Park. Why? Because government policies do not reflect what is truly best for children and good parents. This historic event will expose to the media and our elected officials the damaging effects our family court systems have on children, parents and families.

The "Justice March", which is just one of many featured events of DC Festival 2008, will be led by Fathers-4-Justice with the support of numerous organizations which believe that fit and willing parents have a protected right to love, guide, educate and nurture their own children. "No government office or family court judge should have the power to interfere with fit and loving parents raising their children; however our constitutional right to parent our children is being blatantly ignored." states Brian Holladay of Fathers-4-Justice.

August 16, 2008 3:00PM EST - The march will start at Upper Senate Park and head through the National Mall between Independence and Constitution Avenue . Turning right at the monument built to honor one of our nations fore fathers, George Washington, the column will cross Constitution Avenue and head for the White House following Fifteenth Street.

For additional information about the "Justice March" or for information about Fathers-4-Justice you may contact Brian Holladay of Fathers-4-Justice at 440-388-4023 or visit the official F4J website at www.f4j.com.

Fathers-4-Justice® US (F4J®) is a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit, volunteer organization of fathers, mothers, grandparents, and others dedicated to fighting for truth, justice and equality in family law.

UK: "Meet the Cashtrati..."

Anonymous · 3 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. It details how the "credit crunch" is affecting bachelors' dating habits. Excerpt:

'Cash-strapped Romeos are resorting to all sorts of tricks to keep the costs down... "...he paid, and it was all very nice, but there was no real spark between us. So, when he called up the next day to ask me out again, I said no. The next day he sent me an invoice for my half of the meal."
...
"It's a pretty obvious economic calculation," explains Will Foster, 43, who works for a new media company in Edinburgh. "You're putting your needs in a pot, working out which costs what and how many of them are essential, and then seeing how much you can budget for each one. I mean, it obviously doesn't sound very romantic but let's be really honest about it. I'm a divorcé, I've done the rounds, and I want to be sure that my date is going to satisfy my needs if I'm going to risk some sort of financial investment on her."

Relationship experts are horrified at Foster's calculations, urging the Cashtrati to see the crunch as a boon...'

Tanking Economy = Bank for Divorce Lawyers

Roy · 3 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

According to this piece, the Divorce Industry is a recession-proof profession for the vampires who profit from it. One attorney is quoted as saying:

"One of the reasons that I ended up doing domestic relations ... is that when the economy is rough, you get the people who can no longer afford to stay married, and when the economy's good, you get the people who can finally afford to get divorced."

The Minefield of Texas A&M Student Discipline

Matt · 3 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Blog entry here. Good warning for anyone facing "the system" at today's knee-jerk university "administrative hearings". Excerpt:

'The Appeals process was a minefield in its own right. Winning any appeal is like a snowball surviving in . . . well, you know where. Anyway, the Appeals panel would give great deference to the original panel's finding of responsibility. So, we worked like dogs to develop a showing the boy's student rights were violated and the evidence was insufficient to support the original finding of responsibility. After 3 1/2 hours of testimony and two hours of deliberation, the Appeals panel remanded the case back for a new hearing on the merits. We were relieved, to say the least. Although we'd hoped for a dismissal, as least we had another rare bite at the apple.'

Sentencing for sex-related crimes: compare and contrast

Matt · 3 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

A man is tried and found guilty of sexually abusing three teenage girls by watching them perform sex acts with each other and actually doing so with him. So he is sentenced to 4,060 years in jail.

That's right: 4,060 years. Wow, he'll be pretty durned old when he gets out!

Now contrast this with this recent case, wherein the perp actually had sex with the victims: all five of them! And she got six years in jail for it.

Thoughts?

RADAR Release: Fix VAWA Now! set to launch with a BANG!

Matt · 3 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Tomorrow, Independence Day, we'll be launching our "Fix VAWA Now!" campaign.

Independence Day celebrates our freedom from intrusive and oppressive government policies. And that's what Fix VAWA Now! is all about -- telling the public how domestic violence policies allow a simple marital tiff to turn into a heavy-handed knock on the door and a guy being hustled out in hand-cuffs.

As they say, "All politics is local," so last night we had a teleconference with our state-level VAWA Reform Captains. Over the next 5 months months, they'll be putting together YouTube pieces, videos, meeting with lawmakers, writing letters to editors, and doing interviews. RADAR has also put together a Fix VAWA Now! poster, which will be available on the RADAR website tomorrow.

So this is where you come in. Tomorrow, July 4, we'd like to ask you to make some fireworks. We'd like you to make some copies of the "Fix VAWA Now!" flyer and pass them out -- political events, picnics, shopping malls, libraries, Starbucks, gas stations, wherever!

You can download the flyer here (.pdf file).

And as we move forward with the campaign, you'll want to stay connected to the action. So sign up now to receive the RADAR Elerts. Just enter your email address in the box in the upper right hand corner of the RADAR website.

Folks, THIS IS THE REAL THING. We must get word out to every voter and lawmaker in your area: Fix VAWA Now!

We owe it to our children.

Cheers,
The RADAR Team

P.S. Thanks to all of you who made contributions this past month to the Fix VAWA Now! campaign -- we had a record-breaking fund-raising month!!!

Gloucester: Witch hunt begins!

Matt · 4 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Disturbed by the international spotlight focused on pregnancies at Gloucester High School, Mayor Carolyn Kirk said yesterday she is investigating whether staffers at the school-based health clinic violated patient confidentiality laws when they discussed the issue with faculty and members of the press.

Kirk said she has sent a letter to ... the president of Northeast Health System — the company that ... administers the high school health center — and has asked him to describe ... what consequences employees face if they reveal protected information.
...
Kirk said on Tuesday that the city's review of the issue would include the actions of school district employees.

"We will get to the bottom of it," Kirk said. "We need to see that the safeguards are in place to make sure that it never happens again."'

Teen avoids prison time in sister's 'Mortal Kombat' death

Matt · 4 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Seventeen-year-old Heather Trujillo was given an 18-year suspended sentence in the death of [her sister] 7-year-old Zoe Garcia. However, she must spend six years in the youth offender program. If she does not violate the terms of her plea deal, she will not have to spend any time in prison.

Trujillo will be sent to a facility in Pueblo, where she will stay until her six-year sentence is complete.
...
Trujillo and her boyfriend, 17-year-old Lamar Roberts, told police they were acting out the video game "Mortal Kombat," when they kicked, karate chopped and body slammed the little girl in December 2007. Garcia later died of her injuries.
...
Heather Trujillo pleaded guilty in the death of Garcia in May and agreed to testify against Roberts.'

Two perps: one female (and white), one male (and black). One gets no jail time in exchange for turning on the other. What sort of punishment do you suppose he'll get? What sort of "deal" would he have gotten had he been the one willing to do the talking instead of her?

They both deserve time in jail. For being so reckless and with such a young victim, I think 20 (no parole) might be about right. But only one, it seems is likely to ever see the inside of a cell.

Christina Hoff Sommers: Why Can’t a Woman Be More Like a Man?

anthony · 5 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This article was written by Sommers and appears in the March/April 2008 issue of the online magazine, The American. Excerpt:

"These proposed solutions assume a problem that might not exist. During her presidential campaign, Hillary Clinton has noted that “women comprise 43 percent of the workforce but only 23 percent of scientists and engineers” and insists that government take “diversity into account when awarding education and research grants.” But what is the basis for this and other attempts to balance the statistics? If numerical inferiority were sufficient grounds for charges of discrimination or cultural insensitivity, Congress would be holding hearings on the crisis of underrepresentation of men in higher education. After all, women earn most of the degrees—practically across the board. What about male proportionality in the humanities, social sciences, and biology? The physical sciences are the exception, not the rule."

Woman makes sex tape with two underage girls, gets no jail time

Matt · 5 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A NSW woman who starred in home-made pornographic movies with two teenage girls - who she likened to American celebrities the Olsen twins - has had her jail term erased.

South Australia's Full Court of the Court of Criminal Appeal today replaced Rebecca Jane Clarke's "excessive" 12-month jail term with a two-year good behaviour bond.

The 23-year-old, of Goulburn in NSW, remains a convicted sex offender, but only for now.

Although the court upheld her convictions, she has flagged a High Court challenge so she can pursue her dream of working with disadvantaged children.

In December 2007, Clarke was found guilty of producing child pornography - a DVD in which she has sex with two 14-year-old girls while saying "I feel like a child molester".

...
Her lawyers told the court the sentence set a dangerous precedent for "innocent, luckless" people who unwittingly had sex with teenagers "made up" like adults.

Further, she wanted her convictions overturned and her name removed from the sex offenders register so she could seek employment as a social worker for troubled children.'

Maureen Dowd muses on "The Ideal Husband"

Matt · 6 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Read it here. Wonder when we'll see an op-ed on what the idea wife would be? Excerpt:

'Father Pat Connor, a 79-year-old Catholic priest born in Australia and based in Bordentown, N.J., has spent his celibate life — including nine years as a missionary in India — mulling connubial bliss. His decades of marriage counseling led him to distill some “mostly common sense” advice about how to dodge mates who would maul your happiness.
...
“Finally: Does he possess those character traits that add up to a good human being — the willingness to forgive, praise, be courteous? Or is he inclined to be a fibber, to fits of rage, to be a control freak, to be envious of you, to be secretive?

“After I regale a group with this talk, the despairing cry goes up: ‘But you’ve eliminated everyone!’ Life is unfair.”'

Eliminated everyone? Good. That's the clearest indication to women that they should not be seeking out a husband.

Ladies, do your boyfriend and yourself a favor and never bring up "The M Word", except to say that it's the last thing you would ever want to do. And, thank-you.

Shared Parenting Poll

Matt · 6 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Parade magazine's poll is published across the nation. Please vote now. The question is: 'Should divorced dads get equal time with their kids?'. Excerpt:

"Despite a shift toward shared custody over the last 20 years, up to half of fathers lose contact with their kids after a divorce. “In 85% of divorces, fathers get just two weekends a month and a couple of hours during the week,” says Mike McCormick of the American Coalition for Fathers and Children."

State lawmaker: Equal-opportunity initiative bad for Arizona

anthony · 7 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. The examples she provides have one common theme; they ignore men. She is a typical politician who adheres to the ideology that the rights of individual men are less important than the communal goals of women. Excerpt:

'The so-called Arizona Civil Rights Initiative is not about protecting civil rights; it's about taking away our rights and freedoms. It would change Arizona's Constitution to prohibit the state (and local governments, schools and universities) from offering any type of equal-opportunity programs to women and people of color in Arizona.

Some examples of programs that will be eliminated if the Connerly initiative becomes law in Arizona are:
...
• Arizona State University's Women in Science and Engineering program. This would be eliminated because it supports university women as they pursue careers in science and engineering.'

Male-teacher-positive article: "School 9 students fondly recall teacher as father figure"

anthony · 7 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Despite data showing a growing number of children in urban areas living without fathers or other adult men, male kindergarten teachers are a rarity in Rochester and nationally.

The National Center for Education Statistics estimates that men represent only 2 percent of 190,000 kindergarten teachers nationwide. That figure is slightly higher in the Rochester district, where seven of the 113 kindergarten teachers are men.

Researchers cite low pay, a cultural stereotype that teaching elementary school is women's work, and fear among men of being accused of physically abusing children.

"People think that men aren't nurturing, that men don't want to be with children, that men can't do it," said Bryan Nelson, the founder of MenTeach, a Minneapolis-based nonprofit that supports male teachers."'

New Zealand: Police warning to women over false rape claims

anthony · 7 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The warning comes as a woman appears in Hamilton District Court this morning charged with attempting to pervert the course of justice, arising from rape complaint made last November.

Detective Senior Sergeant Chris Page said the Hamilton woman claimed she was raped after an offender forced his way into her flat but this was proved to be untrue.

"A large amount of police and ESR resources and time was put into the investigation," he said.

"The media coverage of this incident was significant as police dealt with a number of rape allegations at that time. This case has proven to be the third false complaint from that week.'

--

Ed. note: Suggest using Internet Explorer to view the story. Using Firefox, I had a problem getting the fold-out ad to close so I could actually read it.

India: After 7 months in jail, man seeks case against ‘rape victim’

anthony · 7 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"In an interesting case, a man accused of rape and false promise of marriage, has demanded registration of FIR against the complainant after the police gave him the clean chit.

Rishi Sood (25), a resident of Haibowal, is running from pillar to post to get the FIR registered, which he said is, "Very essential as the woman has ruined my life and career. I have also come to know that she is doing the same to other men as well. I want to teach her a lesson.”

...

Sood said, "She has ruined my life. I was arrested, tortured and even sent to jail where I spent seven months. My career suffered and so did my family. All this time, this girl whose actual name is Suman Paul, kept demanding money from me and my family to take the case back. We even came to know the woman is in contact with people who indulge in illegal activities."

Kathleen Parker: Politically incorrect domestic violence

anthony · 7 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The words "domestic violence" typically invite images of bruised women and children - and male perpetrators. But the real picture of domestic violence isn't so clear-cut. And the solution to family violence is far more complex than our current criminal justice approach can handle.

One of the primary myths - and the one that meets with the most resistance - is that only men are violent. Women and children indeed suffer the worst injuries and more often die as a result of those injuries, but women initiate violence as often as men.

Ignoring or playing down that fact obscures the real problem of intimate violence and makes solutions less likely. Yet even people who know better are afraid of speaking up lest they be accused of undermining feminist efforts to help women and children in danger.

According to Ms. Mills, studies now confirm that women initiate violence in 24 percent of cases in which the husbands don't fight back, while men initiate violence in 27 percent of cases in which women don't fight back. In the other 49 percent of cases, both partners actively participate in the violence.'

WalesOnline: The last taboo

anthony · 7 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Men suffering domestic violence at the hands of women say they feel isolated and ignored by a society that appears not to take it seriously.

They feel emasculated and embarrassed about discussing the issue with friends and often suffer in silence.

Home Office figures show one in six men will experience domestic violence at some point in their lives.
...
“Violence by women against men is still a taboo. People can talk about paedophilia and that has a media profile, this does not.”'

Washington: Domestic violence shelter to include male victims

anthony · 7 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"We work with men who have been stabbed, cut with glass and had their teeth knocked out with objects by female partners. They and their children, who are damaged just by seeing it, deserve the same outreach, treatment and dignity as any other victims, but instead they're often stigmatized and told they're oddball class even though they are not."

Psychic's vision sets off sex-abuse probe

Anonymous · 7 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Barrie mother of an autistic girl is considering legal action against her local school board after a psychic's prediction to a special educational assistant sparked a sexual abuse report to the Children's Aid Society.

"I'm in shock," said Colleen Leduc, 38. "They reported me to Children's Aid because of a psychic. Can you imagine?"'

RADAR ALERT: Fix VAWA Now!

Matt · 7 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Fourteen years after the passage of the Violence Against Women Act in 1994, it is now apparent that VAWA is a badly broken law that harms innocent individuals even as it fails to achieve its stated goal of protecting domestic violence victims.

The Violence Against Women Act:

1. Fails to Help Victims of Domestic Violence
2. Mistreats Women
3. Promotes False Allegations
4. Breaks Up Families Unnecessarily
5. Costs Taxpayers Billions
6. Hurts Black Communities

While VAWA-funded programs have benefited some individuals, its overall effect has been negative.

On July 4, Independence Day, the VAWA Reform Coalition launched a 5-month, high-profile campaign called "Fix VAWA Now!" Bottom line, we want every American to understand how this law has weakened the American family, harmed children forced into a single-parent household, while failing to protect true victims of domestic violence.

AND WE ARE CALLING ON YOU TO HELP SPREAD THE WORD! Americans deserve a truly effective law that deals with the problem without causing massive collateral damage.

To make that happen, RADAR has put together materials that can be downloaded from our website:

- Flyer: http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/RADARflyer-Fix-VAWA-Now.pdf
- Color poster: http://www.mediaradar.org/fix_vawa_now_help.php#poster
- A series of Special Reports that documents all the damage: http://www.mediaradar.org/radar_special_reports.php

We ask you to make copies of the flyer and distribute it at meetings, rallies, libraries, malls, coffee shops, any place where persons congregate! Same goes for the poster.

VAWA is a badly broken law that, like a cancer, has metastasized into every facet of American society. We invite every person reading this Alert to join in this historic crusade to save our families and protect our children.

If not us, who? If not now, when?

++

Date of RADAR Release: July 7, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/

Times Of India poll report for "Is the law biased against men?"

Anonymous · 7 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'...we looked at how the court's decision to ask a man to compensate his live-in partner for not marrying her had opened a Pandora's box. ... the section of society that is the most worried, or rather, outraged by some of the recent changes in Indian law, is no doubt the men. ... men seem to have been shortchanged by the entire judicial process. Or so the responses of our readers, bloggers, and a cross section of men we spoke to leads us to believe.

...As one reader writes, "I am astonished that the Indian judiciary system is run by backward thinkers. What is the itch to 'protect' women and make them even 'weaker'? In the Western world all this is not heard of.....We can never be a developed nation without strong social objectives. The law is biased against men."'

Ireland: Medical crisis grows as female GPS avoid full-time posts

anthony · 7 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'THE MEDICAL manpower crisis is even worse than previously estimated, with patients almost certain to experience difficulty accessing GP services, new research has shown.

Researchers from the department of primary care and public health at Trinity College Dublin (TCD) have found that women GPs are only half as likely to work full-time at partnership level as male doctors.
...

Female doctors also worked fewer unsociable hours, with 51 per cent of female graduates involved in co-operatives and out-of-hours work, compared with 84 per cent of male doctors who worked nights and weekends.
...
But a senior medical source described the study as "a severe wake-up call. Clearly we have got the balance wrong gender-wise. We must now rectify this because political correctness will not look after patients."'

Recanting domestic violence allegations goes to NV supreme court

Anonymous · 7 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. A family court judge gets off after his girlfriend recants her testimony and admits she rubbed her own face on the rug. Meanwhile a retired naval commander is found guilty even after his wife recants her testimony and admits she pulled out her own hair. Man is intent on taking case to Nevada Supreme Court to set a "bright line" standard on recanted allegations. Excerpt:

'Nearly two years ago, Family Court Judge Steven Jones was acquitted of a domestic battery charge after his live-in girlfriend recanted the previous statements she had given in the case.

A month earlier, retired Navy commander Dennis Sarfaty was convicted of the same misdemeanor despite the fact that his wife had recanted her prior statements.

The seemingly conflicting verdicts came from two different judges in Henderson Municipal Court, and Sarfaty's lawyer now wants the Nevada Supreme Court to decide which one was right.'

MSN article about women who are turned on by money

Anonymous · 7 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I thought you might find this article interesting. It's about women who find money to be an aphrodisiac:

There are a three interesting things about this article that call into question certain things we've been taught about men and women.

1. Men are often portrayed as the shallower of the sexes, i.e., only interested in looks, while women are portrayed as more emotional and concerned about sensitivity and feelings. Yet, the author states "…if I'm gut-wrenchingly honest with myself, the only reason that I agreed to go out with TFB in the first place -- and the reason I stayed so long -- was that he was loaded."

2. We—as a culture—have been inundated with stories of successful women who (supposedly) can't get dates because they're success intimidates men (note how this female problem, i.e., not being able to get a date and/or steady boyfriend, is converted into a male problem—"he's intimidated by my success!"). Yet, the article states: "Even women who don't need a man with money still prefer one." This suggests that successful women sometimes can't find boyfriends because they have inadvertently shrunk their dating pool by becoming successful and, thus, disinterested in men who have a much lower income than theirs. It's not always the case that the man is intimidated, it sometimes happens to be that the woman is not interested in the man because he makes less than she does.

3. We see a very clear advantage a woman has over a man: Being able to get out of a financial jam by dating. The author states: "If agreeing to date someone just because he was flush made me a shallow, money-grubbing gold digger, so be it. At that point in my life, I was tired of living hand to mouth, worrying how the bills were going to get paid and making the dreaded weekly choice between martinis and food. I liked the lifestyle he had, and I wanted a piece of it, too. The idea of relaxing financially for a while conferred an unmistakable appeal on a person who didn't have much else to recommend him."

Of course, this article doesn't condemn all women…anymore than a male leaving his lifelong companion simply to get a younger girl condemns all men. However, it does help to debunk the myth that females are the more pure of the sexes. Hopefully, articles like this will continue to highlight that both men AND women have their exceedingly shallow moments.

--Brent

Latest AmEx Commercial to Offend Men

DLR1943 · 8 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

There is a commercial running now for the American Express business card showing a man at an airport counter buying a ticket for an important business trip. He plans to pay for it by credit card, but the woman behind the counter sees that the card has a picture of cats on it. this does not meet with her approval [apparently not manly enough for her judgmentally sexist mind] and she signals for two guards to come over and take him away.

One of the guards is a woman who puts on rubber gloves for the obvious reason. Does anyone think that this company would run an ad showing a male guard putting on rubber gloves to examine a female customer. Of course not! I called the company and spoke to a customer service rep who agreed with me and would pass on my comments to management. I also intend to call the advertising department to voice my concern about this issue. I hope others will join me. Contact info here.

Ed. note: Someone please provide a link to the commercial on-line, if available. I went looking for it but could not find it.

Essay: Feminism and the Glass Ceiling

Anonymous · 8 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Feminism and the Glass Ceiling

Since WWII, employers in both Canada and the United States have been hiring and training only women for white collar staff and supervisory positions because women cannot be drafted into the military in the event of a major war. During WWII those corporations lost a lot of their staff expertise to the military as their then male employees left for the war so after the war they imposed anti-male hiring policies to preclude similar future staff losses.

It is for this reason and no other that so many white collar corporations in North America have such a high percentage of female white collar workers and this status quo seems likely to remain for some time.

It is also for this reason that the so called "Glass Ceiling" exists. Senior executive males in executive boardrooms were not going to implement hiring policies which gave all the staff and supervisory positions to women as a corporate hiring hedge and then give women all the management and executive positions too. Unfortunately, this looks like a perk of most corporations being lead by men; men lead the corporations hence they do things the way they like.

Small and medium sized businesses notwithstanding, there is little evidence that women are entrepreneurs on the same scale as men. My point: women rarely "think big"; men do it all the time. Ergo, the Ford Motor Companies, Microsofts and Occidental Petroleums of the world will continue to be created by and, as a matter of course, be run by men.

Should any given woman rise to head such a corporation, this new corporate success will bathe in the trite accolades of "trailblazer" and blithely ignore the truth that, in many instances, a score or more of men preceeded her.

Blazer, indeed!

This is almost as thought the newly minted female CEO and her feminist acolytes perceive every corporate entity as having occurred by fate or happenstance, rather like hollyhocks somehow arising metaphysically in the flower garden of business.

Nobody planted them. They have always been there, growing on their own so to speak and this feminist bugaboo known as "equity" dictates that it is about time the women started getting control of some of the things.

This, it seems apparent, is how most women think on a grand, strategic scale. It's women "thinking big".

Feminists, in their sublime self-righteousness then, excoriate the managerial and executive ranks for being mostly male (haven't you heard) and applaud every crack in the glass ceiling. If a man notices the staff and supervisory ranks below the glass ceiling being mostly female he is expected to obligingly ignore it or shut up about it.

In the feminist universe, therefore, what is sauce for the goose is well, um, sauce for the goose. Militancy is a feminist perk just as controlling corporations is a male one. Any contradictory input about gender bias in employment from a recalcitrant gander is scorned as retrograde. The feminists are progressive; if men disagree, they are not.

A concomitant concern of mine is worrying; to wit, today's crop of liberated women might train or coerce the men to think the same way (ie like women, "thinking little"). In such an eventuality, the men of some other society will obliged to think strategically and globally. Having acquiesced to the demanding, tactically thinking and politically correct women of North America and particularly Canada, the men here will no longer know how to do it.

Glenn R. Burger

For More visit: http://equality.netfirms.com/womcanad.html

NY Post: Cheating Husband 'A'-OK with corporate sponsors

anthony · 8 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Would we ever see a woman chastised to this extent because of an affair? At this point it's not substantiated but the media doesn't care. It's interesting and disturbing how their associating rape and domestic violence with this situation. It seems the author of this article believes Alex Rodriguez should be shamed and cast aside by these corporate endorsements. Correct me if I'm wrong, but when a wife cheats on her husband she's the victim because he was an 'unloving' man who drove her to an affair. A man is simply considered pig. Excerpt:

'"He's not accused of rape and he didn't kill any dogs - so A-Rod's all good.
...
"Wife-beating would hurt him, underage girls would hurt him, a gay lover would hurt him, but run-of-the-mill affairs - that's a non-issue in American life," said branding expert Howard Bragman, head of the public-relations agency Fifteen Minutes.
...
But bedding strippers and late-night engagements with Madonna? That won't bother A-Rod sponsors like Nike, Pepsi or Topps, Bragman said.

"We just don't hold affairs against people anymore," he said.'

Ask Mr. Dad: Protecting yourself from paternity fraud

anthony · 8 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Your goal is to avoid becoming a victim of "Paternity Fraud." This is when a mother lies about who a child's father is for the purposes of monetary gain. In your case, you could be on the hook for 18 or more years of child support for a child or children who aren't yours.

The bad news is that paternity fraud is not uncommon. The American Association of Blood Banks found that 30 percent of the men in paternity tests are ruled out as the biological father (other studies put that number at 25 percent).
...
Unfortunately, even challenging paternity within the window doesn't guarantee that you'll avoid being defrauded. In many states, when a child is born during a marriage, the husband is presumed to be the father - biology is irrelevant. So even if DNA shows that he's not the father, he'll still owe child support."

CBS: "Horrors" Found In Tween, Teen Dating

anthony · 8 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Just look at the picture in the story and you'll see why I submitted this. While boys are never blamed in the article, its obvious they're being targeted as the problem. I wonder which feminist organizations conducted this report? Excerpt:

"Tweens and teens in dating relationships are experiencing significant levels of various forms of abuse, many don't know the warning signs of an abusive relationship, and many parents don't know what's going on in those relationships, a new survey says."

Australia: PM: Neal's treatment not sexist

anthony · 8 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"PRIME Minister Kevin Rudd says a Labor backbencher is wrong to suggest sexism is behind the way MP Belinda Neal has been treated.

Mr Rudd spoke to Ms Neal yesterday and she agreed to undergo anger management counselling after allegations about confrontations in a bar and on the sports field.

Julia Irwin, the Labor MP for the Sydney seat of Fowler, asked whether Ms Neal's gender was an issue in her treatment.

"Why is it that women are singled out by reporting of these instances. Why not the men?" Ms Irwin said on ABC radio today.

Mr Rudd said that was not the case."

.....
Original story about the incident here.

"Your child will turn into a demon, you have such evil thoughts," Ms Neal is alleged to have told the heavily pregnant backbencher.

Man-Hating Punching Bag, Misandric Book Now Available Online

anthony · 8 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. I couldn't find this punching bag on the site listed, but it certainly does exist. The picture is proof positive. Excerpt:

"From one bad date to the next, you can't help but despise the opposite sex. You paid for your own movie ticket (and his) at the children's rate (his idea, not yours!), and still, he had the nerve to go for a kiss at the date's termination. Then when you backed away, he suggested a second meeting. As if! Now you just man-hate. Use this Man Bashing Punching Bag ($24.95 at www.wishingfish.com).

...
How hard could it possibly be to put your dirty socks in the hamper, cook once in a while, remember your anniversary? Before you kick your detached, scatter-brained boyfriend to the curb, consider reading the "50 Boyfriends Worse Than Yours" ($9.28 at www.amazon.com). If he's worth saving, this book may just be the thing to help you come to that conclusion."

[Ed. note: One place it is listed says it's discontinued or out of stock. See here. So maybe it already got identified for what it is and pulled from shelves. Good!]

.....

If your curious about this misandrist book, just read Amazon's editorial review.

"Tired of watching your man play X-Box all day? Does he cruise match.com when you're not home? When he takes you back to his place, does his mother answer the door? 50 Boyfriends Worse Than Yours is a hilarious collection of these painfully familiar boyfriends, men we've all had the misfortune to meet."

Divorce still damaging to children despite being more acceptable

Anonymous · 9 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Divorce remains equally damaging to a child's prospects in life despite having become more common and more socially acceptable, researchers say.

A study run over several decades has shown that children whose parents split up are more likely to end up without qualifications, claiming benefits and suffering depression.
...
Summarising the effects of divorce, the report says it "has repercussions that reverberate through childhood and into adulthood."

The report says: "Children from disrupted families tend to do less well in school and subsequent careers than their peers. They are also more likely to experience the break-up of their own partnerships."'

UK: "More rapists will be convicted, promises Government"

Anonymous · 9 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The Government says it will increase the conviction rate for rape.

...

It comes days after a women's equality group claimed there was a "postcode lottery" experienced by rape victims, with women in some areas five times less likely to see their attacker convicted than in others.

The Government's plans include increasing the number of specialist centres for rape victims from 19 to 36 and running a trial scheme of supplying police forces with sexual violence advisers.'

The 'women's equality group' in question is The Fawcett Society, run by Catherine Rake, a radical lesbian feminist. You can guess who the 'sexual violence advisers' will be.

The article, the police, and the government make no mention of false accusations, which scientific evidence shows are widespread.

What they mean is, they are going to jail more innocent men on the basis of no evidence.

Burger King commerical includes blatant man-slapping by woman

Matt · 9 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via email:

I have seen this commercial on Spike TV network several times now. This TV ad is absolutely awful. One interesting note though, the Spike television network is actually supposed to target men as their demographic!?!

I guess men and women hitting each other is OK in the minds of Burger King and the marketing industry, but of course, only if it's a guy getting hit by a woman. Unbelievable. I cringe thinking about young, impressionable kids watching commercials like these. Thanks, Dan

Fathers 4 Justice campaigners climb onto Harriet Harman's roof

AngryMan · 9 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Two Fathers 4 Justice campaigners have climbed onto the roof of Labour Party deputy leader Harriet Harman, Scotland Yard said.

It is the second time in little over a month the group has staged a protest at Ms Harman's home in Herne Hill, south London.

...

Last month two protesters, Jolly Stanesby and Mark Harris, both from south Devon, scaled the roof of Ms Harman's home in similar costumes.'

Indian government plans to review the Dowry laws bharati · 10 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. It's a mix of good and bad. The Anti dowry laws could be reviewed where in no longer will the family of husbands be jailed on complaint.

But the dowry death law where in if wife dies within 7 years of marriage the husband and his family is jailed will be made more stupid; that is, on death of any wife at any time in marriage the husbands will be sent to jail if the wife's family so desires. Excerpt:

'New Delhi, July 9: In a significant broadening of the Dowry Prohibition Act, the Ministry of Women and Child Development is planning to change the legislation so that the unnatural death of a woman at any stage of her marriage is covered by it.

Right now, unnatural death of a woman within seven years of her marriage is construed as a dowry death, attracting punishment under Section 304(B).

“There should not be any limit; unnatural death of a woman at any stage should be considered an offence liable to be punished under 304(B),” says a senior official.'

Europe to begin investigation of secrecy in UK family courts

Anonymous · 10 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Britain faces an investigation by the European Union into secrecy in family courts, amid growing political pressure to overhaul the system.

The Council of Europe has stepped in after allegations that gagging laws designed to protect the rights of children are allowing miscarriages of justice and children to be removed unnecessarily from their parents.
...
Opponents of the system say that judges can be too ready to side with social workers and experts who want a child removed but whose evidence is rarely made public.'

"Female inmates doing time on Calif. fire lines" makes news, diminshes men

Matt · 10 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. I'm just so sick of this bull. It's just plain everywhere. Excerpt:

'Johnson is one of 28 female convicts working the front lines of the nine-day-old wildfire roaring through Los Padres National Forest in Southern California's Santa Barbara County.
...
Wildfire-plagued states such as California and Arizona have long tapped minimum-security prisoners as firefighting labor during the intense summer fire season. Arizona also has a female inmate crew.

It's work that more than a few men would shy from.
...
"Women are more supportive of each other, sort of a buddy system," Alexander said.

"They're more appreciative of small things. They like shampoo, lotion, soap. They were ecstatic the other day because their clothes came back from the laundry with the smell of Downy. Do you think men would notice that?"'

Well, a man who doesn't get clean clothes too often I am sure appreciates the smell of freshly-laundered duds. Maybe the author doesn't know because she never bothered asking him?

And how many men have fought fires, convicts or not, only to be given a quick "thanks" and sent on. Women do it and it's national news. Same thing for military service.

And of course, they do it better. Read the many stories and it's all spelled out for you: They make better cops, soldiers, firefighters, scientists, hell, they are just plain BETTER. All over the news, this crap is everywhere. So if they are so much better at these things, why don't more of them step up and do them? Oh yeah, it's too dangerous for the typical female's tastes and besides, it means working odd hours sometimes. Better to "let the men" do it, as the women get to stay cleaner and out of harm's way.

That's OK. It's not sexism when it favors women.

Barf.

Action alert: Fix VAWA form available on Capwiz.com

Matt · 10 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Two-click activism: fix VAWA now link here.

I got this heads-up from RADAR. It seems this link was sent out in an emailing from RightMarch.com and that it reaches upwards of 800,000 people. Go to town!

Report: The Impact Of The Obama Economic Plan For America's Working Women

anthony · 10 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here, actual report here (.pdf file).

Ed note: The report reiterates the oft-debunked 77-cents-on-the-dollar myth.

Ex-prosecutor gets 2 years for sex with boys

anthony · 10 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A former prosecutor was sentenced Wednesday to two years in prison for having sex with boys, after her 16-year-old daughter told the judge she and her mother had competed for the same 15-year-old boy.

Beth Modica, 44, wept as her daughter Danielle told the judge she banged on the bathroom door at the family home in Sloatsburg one day last year as her mother and her boyfriend engaged in oral sex.
...
Modica told her children to lie to their father — the Spring Valley police chief — about the marijuana and alcohol she gave to them and their friends, Danielle Modica said. She urged Rockland County Judge Catherine Bartlett to send her mother to state prison."

Spanish minister sparks debate about the limits of feminism

anthony · 11 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Not only did Aido announce a telephone hotline to help men adapt to a "new model of masculinity" and wife batterers to "channel their aggressivity" before resorting to violence.

She went as far as tackling the structures of the Spanish language, proposing that the masculine-gendered word "miembro" (member) be given a feminine equivalent, "miembra."
...
"All the fields are adequate for waging the battle in favour of equality," said Zapatero, who wants his Socialist government to play a ground-breaking role in promoting women's rights worldwide.
...
A "telephone for men" initially planned for wife batterers will also help other men "solve their doubts, because many of them feel lost" as the "patriarchal system" begins to crumble, Aido explained."'

Woman Who Raped Teen Fighting Him For Child Custody

Anonymous · 11 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. You don't need the victim's statement and cooperation to pursue legal action against the adult. Overzealous DAs have been pursuing cases against men EVEN when the female recants her story or says "she was in love". If the victim is under-age that's all that counts.

The sheriff's office, Dpt. of Social Services, media and DA's office have been caught with their pants down. The man claims any "any boy who had an older woman coming up to him would have done the exact same thing." Girls desire the attention of older men also. They charged her w/ rape 2 yrs after the fact. She EVEN gave the young boy ALCOHOL.

This is OUTLANDISH. I want to hear what the court case will reveal later this month.

NY Daily News: 'Beauty killed the beast in Christie Brinkley divorce'

anthony · 11 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"She gambled and she won. Taking this divorce into a public courtroom was a risk for Christie Brinkley, but at the end of the day she got everything she wanted - and then some.

Kids? Check. Property? Check. Revenge? Oh, check, check and check.

So Brinkley ended up shelling out $2.1 million to her dirtbag of an ex. It's a small price to pay for serenity.
...
Nope, next stop on the Peter Cook train is a sad and lonely middle age in the valley of fallen men. He can rub elbows with Eliot Spitzer there."

Woman guilty over bizarre internet murder plot

Anonymous · 11 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A divorcee has been found guilty of plotting to murder her multi-millionaire partner after she hired an "assassin" on a website called www.Hitman.us.com

Sharon Collins, 45, a divorced mother-of-two, is said to have hatched a conspiracy with a man from the site, an Egyptian poker player who called himself Tony Luciano, to murder PJ Howard, a property tycoon worth £10 million and his two sons.

...

Yesterday Collins was found guilty of conspiring to hire a hitman at Dublin central Criminal Court and Eid of demanding money.'

McCain also does the appeal-to-women thing

Matt · 11 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Gender-baiting and pandering know no political parties, it seems, when it comes to the all-important, all-powerful voting bloc known as "WOMEN". Wonder when we'll see a national political candidate or office-holder speak about the importance of addressing men's issues? Story here. Excerpt:

'"Yesterday in New York, Senator Obama went on at great length about how much he cares about women's issues," McCain said at a town-hall forum in Hudson, where women vastly outnumbered men. "I believe him. But when you cut through all the smooth rhetoric, Senator Obama's policies would make it harder for women to start new businesses, harder for women to create or find new jobs, harder for women to manage the family budget, and harder for women and their families to meet their tax burden."
...
McCain told the audience that he has a record of supporting equal pay for women. He later told reporters he opposed the Senate bill because he didn't want "open-ended litigation by trial lawyers." He said he has demonstrated his support for equal pay "in a whole broad variety of ways, from support of women in the military to all kinds of laws that provide employment" to women.

Republicans believe McCain has a chance to pick up Democratic and independent women who are angry or disappointed that Hillary Rodham Clinton lost her bid to become the first female president. But the Hudson event seemed geared to hard-core conservatives.'

Article: "What causes a woman to seek out sex with teens?"

anthony · 12 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Sexual abuse involving older women and teen boys is an underreported crime, one that experts say has been largely ignored by the public, legal system and academic researchers for reasons including sexual double standards and evidence suggesting teen boys often are willing participants.
...
Prosecutions of women for sex abuse have risen nationwide in the past several years, law enforcement experts say. Locally, last week two women from Bucks County were charged with sexual crimes involving teenage boys.
...
The report also found among children ages 7 to 11 and 15 to 17, boy victims outnumbered girls. On average, female molesters were nine years older than their male victims, compared with a six-year age gap between male offenders and teen girl victims.

Other research agencies like Child Trends in Washington, D.C., are starting to collect data that also suggest sexual relationships between teen boys and older women are more common than many believe."

Dove ads: Fine, but what about boys' self esteem?

mens_issues · 12 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Dove has a series of TV ads intended to improve the self esteem of girls and women.

While they may have a point about unrealistic body image expectations for girls and women, they seem to imply that boys and men have no such similar issues.

Does that seem right to you?

What about the unrealistic and often unattainable body image expectations for boys and men? The image of being muscular (as in men's bodybuilder magazines) or handsome (as in magazines like GQ). The pressure to turn to illegal and dangerous methods of attaining a muscular body (i.e. steroids). Or the complete opposite of this (i.e. what not to look like) as shown all too often in commercials and sitcoms portraying men as obese slobs, or otherwise unattractive.

Think about it.

Getting the boss' coffee: sexual discrimination?

Matt · 12 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

At least one judge has some cajones. Read it here. The contention was that the woman's supervisor who had her get him coffee regularly was engaging in sexually discriminatory behavior. The judge ruled that such requests may be annoying but are not inherently sexually discriminatory. Good for him.

Literally, a federal case was made out of this. How much do you suppose this case cost to bring?

But I have heard tell of female executives who hire male secretaries specifically because they get a kick out of sending the fellow off on coffee runs and so on. Wonder why no one ever seems to make much ado about that? Excerpt:

'Nine minutes after receptionist Tamara Klopfenstein complained - for the second time - about getting her bosses coffee, she was fired.

"I don't expect to serve and wait on you by making and serving you coffee every day," Klopfenstein e-mailed to her boss at National Sales & Supply L.L.C., of Bensalem.

Manager Jason Shrager told her the issue wasn't "open for debate."
...
Earlier this month, U.S. District Judge Berle M. Schiller couldn't resist punning his way through a decision on the deeper issue - whether Klopfenstein's managers had created a hostile and discriminatory work environment by requiring the receptionist to fetch them coffee.
...
"The act of getting coffee is not, by itself, a gender-specific act," Schiller wrote. The fact that a vice president wrote "looks nice, dresses well," on notes when she was hired also doesn't add up to discrimination, the judge wrote.'

The Genuine Men Project: Genuine Men Journey in Stories and Stills

Anonymous · 13 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

As a mother of two young boys, photographer and author Nancy Bruno is spearheading a movement to address the need for positive male role models in today's society. Bruno has launched The Genuine Men Project to celebrate everyday men who define what it means to be a person of character, strength and authenticity. The project includes a photography exhibition and book, Genuine Men: Journeys in Stories and Stills (Bridgeway Books, May 2008) which feature candid black-and-white photographs and lifedefining stories of 35 men from the community. "Men today continue to be judged by their jobs, bank accounts, cars, homes and outward appearance," says Bruno, who holds bachelor's degrees in historical sociology and literature/rhetoric. "Powerful role models should not be defined by material gain and physical perfection but by the way the face and live through their life experiences

The Genuine Men Project captures the essence of what it means to be a man worth emulating.

The Genuine Men Project is a traveling photography exhibition created in part by a grant from the Puffin Foundation. Genuine Men Journeys in Stories and Stills shares the life stories of thirty five men ages twelve through ninety-one brought to life through their black and white images. Our message is simple, yet powerful: It is how a man approaches his life's experiences and challenges that makes him a man of great strength and character. The Genuine Men Project has been endorsed by The American Men's Studies Association and The Lance Armstrong Foundation.

From the very beginning, The Genuine Men Project has brought art and discussion into very public forums. Redefining men's role models begins with the discussion that is fostered by our audiences experiences during and after their viewing of the images and stories of these amazing men. Working with communities, professional organizations, and college and universities our goal is to create programming incorporating our project, current topics of men's interests, courses of studies, and related popular culture topics and calendar weeks and months related to men. In May of 2008, The Genuine Men Project released a book based on the exhibit, Genuine Men, Journeys in Stories and Stills (Bridgeway Books). The book is available through local and online book retailers. Additionally, through the sale of our book, we are able to to give back to communities to support men's issues.

The Genuine Men Project extends an invitation to organizations to please contact us through our web site if they would be interested in bringing The Genuine Men Project to their community (www.thegenuinemen.com)

Vonage ads: "Men are stupid" theme

Wolfgang · 13 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

A Vonage TV advertisement, now blanketing the air waves, is annoying because it is gender biased. In the ad, "The Telephone Company" portrayed by a male is gradually pushed off the screen by Vonage, portrayed by a woman, each time a point is made in favor of Vonage. In this ad, the male is made to look stupid and weak compared to the woman and the company he represents as inferior. Imagine if the roles were reversed on this spot and the woman were pushed off the screen because she was inadequate, inferior, or second-rate. There would be all kinds of outcry from women's groups. I am appalled by this kind of male abuse in TV advertising. The TV is loaded with commercials in which men are portrayed as being stupid, weak, and inadequate. What can I do to stop this?

Ed. note: Various Vonage ads are found here. They exhibit a pattern of "men are stupid" types of scenes, usually with men getting injured in the process. This one is all about good old-fashioned testicle violence. More found on Youtube here.

To answer the submitter's question, this is what to do: Point out the phenomenon to the advertiser by email, phone call, or fax, and tell them such things do affect your purchasing decisions, and that if they win one woman with these ads, they will be losing three men. Do the math.

As for Vonage in particular, their contact page is here. The "Email" and "Phone" buttons are very large and easy to miss at first glance. They are light blue, right next to the orange "Start Here" on the left side. Click either of these other two buttons to get email and phone/fax information. Then go to town!

ABC: Obama 'Won't Back Off One Bit' on His Tough-Love Message

anthony · 13 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

ABC Blog entry here.

If Obama is so concerned with the state of father participation, why doesn't he help men gain some equality during child custody hearings? Why doesn't he mention paternity fraud? He also failed to mention that many women today choose to have children out of wedlock. Many of those same women might decide they don't want the father around. Why not ask Barak if he plans to reauthorize the anti-male VAWA in 2009.

"Obama told reporters aboard his plane to San Diego that Americans need to recognize that there is a problem when more than a half of African American children are growing up without a father in the house.

“That is a problem and I won’t back up one bit in asserting that that’s a problem that we have to be honest about," he said.

Obama's tough love message to African American fathers came most notably in a Fathers Day speech last month in which he told fathers that “any ol' fool” could conceive a child –- but it takes a man to be father."

India: Fight the ‘evil of perjury’, SC to courts

anthony · 13 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The bench rejected the plea of the Mahila Vinod Kumar that she was illiterate and hence should be acquitted of the charge and conviction for perjury (misleading court with false evidence).

In this case Mahila had lodged a case of rape against two persons with the Pischhore Police Station in Madhya Pradesh on January 28, 1993. She claimed that the accused waylaid and ravished her by turns.

On the basis of her complaint the accused were arrested and a chargesheet filed by the police under Section 376(2).

However, during the trial she retracted her allegations and denied having made the charge against the men. She also denied having registered the FIR against the accused."

AlterNet: "Rigidly Male-Dominated Societies Are Violent; The U.S. Is No Different"

anthony · 13 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Yet in the United States, many people who consider themselves progressives still view anything to do with women as secondary. They fail to recognize what regressives do: that the ranking of male over female is a basic model children learn early on for equating difference with superiority or inferiority, with dominating or being dominated -- a model that can then easily be generalized to different races, religions, ethnicities, and nations.

In recent years, American regressives have vigorously promoted a family where fathers make the rules and harshly punish disobedience -- the kind of family that prepares people to defer to "strong" leaders who brook no dissent and use force to impose their will. Not coincidentally, over these same years aggressive wars were launched, gains for women and minorities were lost, and a "strong" executive branch held itself above the law."

Opinion: Barack Obama and equal pay for women

anthony · 13 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'So it's entirely possible that Senator Obama is a sexist, misogynistic creep who gleefully rubs his hands together and laughs demonically while scheming to persecute his female employees. Maybe he has nothing better to do. But far more likely is that the aforementioned factors explain his office's inter-sex pay differential. Perhaps his male employees work more hours, have been more likely to accept promotions involving greater responsibility, have more experience, sacrificed "personal fulfillment" and instead chose more lucrative fields, and/or have greater seniority. Whatever the reasons, I'm quite sure of one thing: The phenomenon is attributable to natural, market-based factors and not a conscious desire to disenfranchise women.'

Muslim woman refused French citizenship for her 'submissive' views

Matt · 14 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The legal ruling, which has just been published, is the first time a Muslim applicant had been rejected by France due to their religious practices.

The unnamed 32-year-old woman is married to a French national. She arrived in the country in 2000, speaks good French and her three children were born in the country.'

Germany: Woman thief threatened pursuer with false allegation of rape if he caught her

Matt · 14 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The exhibitionist thief had mugged a disabled 66-elderly woman, stealing her identification and money from her waist pack. When the German granny called for help, a bystander tried to detain the thief, but she tore open her blouse and shouted "Help! Rape!" and escaped.

The 39-year-old man was so stunned and unnerved that he let the wily thief go, police said, adding that the woman managed to cover herself before slipping away.'

Re-print: 3 in 4 street boys in British Columbia, Canada are sexually exploited by women

Matt · 14 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

In case you missed it the first time, this was reported here. Note the side-linked related articles, too, regarding women as the "forgotten murderers" of children, etc. This is a good page to bookmark, so I wanted to point it out again. MANN also gets it submitted regularly so it is obviously makes a big impression on our readership. Excerpt:

'VANCOUVER - Canada's largest study into the sexual exploitation of street kids and runaways has shattered some myths about who the abusers might be - with the most surprising finding being that many are women seeking sex with young males.

"Some youth in each gender were exploited by women with more than three out of four (79 per cent) sexually exploited males reporting exchanging sex for money or goods with a female," said Elizabeth Saewyc, associate professor of nursing at the University of British Columbia and principal investigator for the study conducted by Vancouver's McCreary Centre Society.
...
The stereotypical model of the child being abused - a teenage female being sexually abused by a male - was wrong, said Saewyc.'

DV bias and justice delayed-- for 2 years

Matt · 14 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'the LaBarre case could illustrate gender disparities in cases of domestic abuse

Carolyn Lodge said she had concerns about her son's relationship with Sheila LaBarre from the very beginning. Reached by phone last week, days after LaBarre was sentenced to life in prison without parole for murdering Lodge's son, Kenneth Countie, Lodge said she had worried for her son's safety while he was with LaBarre.
...
Like women, men are often too embarrassed to report abuse. And, because the news media tends to focus on women as the victims of domestic violence, men are hesitant to step forward, Straus said.

The perception of men as the sole perpetrators of domestic violence stems largely from international statistics showing that men commit roughly 10 times more violent crimes than women, Straus said. In fact, the only crime that has a higher rate among women than men is prostitution, he added.'

"Stand Up Guys" asks men to foreswear violence against women, ignores everyone else

Matt · 14 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This makes me physically ill. When I see this kind of thing, I ask myself, "Just what are they thinking? Have they actually done any research at all?"

Can you imagine if a group of whites was going around asking black people to sign a pledge foreswearing some kind of behavior rooted in prejudice and stereotyping and to encourage other blacks to do the same? Can you just imagine the outrage, and rightfully so? So these women are going around and asking men to sign a pledge to say they won't be violent against women and to stand up against it or anything that seems like it encourages it. In fact most of the lines of the pledge basically say that the signer agrees to be a door-mat and never disagree with or have anything negative to say to a woman. Why not just ask men to sign a petition to introduce the full outright enslavement of men to women and be done with it?

Talk about not having done your homework. Talk about sexism. Talk about a level of offensiveness that is almost indescribable when the context is switched to any other class of persons at all. I am actually at a loss to describe how outraged I feel about this sort of thing.

They have a phone number (585-546-7826), they have an email address: info-at-standupguys.org. They can be contacted. However I would like to reiterate that abusive language and raving diatribes do not convince anyone of anything (and can possibly land the caller/writer in serious legal trouble, if the wrong phrase is used or things get a little too hot). In fact they only convince the listener of his or her correctness regardless of the facts. So when you contact them, please be firm but polite, and mention sources of fact, such as the work of Murray Straus and the government's statistics and studies on this topic (use our site's search facility to get links; they're all over), and ask them to start paying attention to the other 60-70% of DV victims: heterosexual men, gay men, and lesbians.

RADAR: Fix VAWA Now! campaign report

Matt · 14 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

All we can say is Wow! The first week of our Fix VAWA Now! campaign absolutely surpassed all expectations!

These are the highlights:

1. RightMarch.com announcement about our campaign went to 800,000 persons
2. Our press release announcing the campaign went to 17,000 media representatives
3. The TV interview resulting from the press release was viewed by tens of thousands persons
4. Gordon Finley's article, "Facing Reality on Domestic Violence" was posted on a number of web sites
5. The Fix VAWA Now! flyers and posters were distributed at a number of events
6. A number of organizations posted the Fix VAWA Now! logo on their websites

OVERALL, WE ESTIMATE THAT WE REACHED ONE MILLION PERSONS IN THE FIRST WEEK ALONE!

And we're just getting started.

Semper Fi,
Ed
http://www.mediaradar.org/

Maternity leave and equality laws are 'sabotaging' women's careers

Anonymous · 14 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Generous maternity leave and flexible working practices are in danger of sabotaging women's careers, the head of the new equality watchdog has warned.

With women now entitled to a year off for each child, Dr Nicola Brewer, the chief executive of the Equalities and Human Rights Commission, said employers were thinking twice about offering them jobs or promotion.
...
She said that her concerns were underlined when the entrepreneur Sir Alan Sugar said that many employers simply binned CVs of women of child-bearing age.
...
Sir Alan warned in February that equal opportunity laws had made it harder for a woman to get a job.

Employers are not allowed to ask women about having children - so they would just not employ them, he said.'

Selwyn Duke: The war on boys: where feminists and men's rights activists go wrong

anthony · 14 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'One problem with one-issue activists, it seems, is that they often view matters from only one dimension. This has always been one of the characteristics of feminists. Men get blame for being history's conquerors and killers, for instance, but no credit for being its innovators and healers. We will hear about how women "create life" while men only destroy it, but forgotten are the fruits of men's labors. Were it not for male medical advances that virtually eliminated female death during childbirth, many feminists wouldn't be around to crow about their fecundity.

Given this misandrist atmosphere, it's not surprising that an opposing group called "men's rights activists" would arise. They rebut feminist ideology, bring many important issues to light and usually make excellent points. And I tend to like them.
...
...a lack of discipline within academia will cause boys' performance to deteriorate more than girls' (this isn't to say girls aren't affected; however, the grade difference isn't as profound and the other effects will be more subtle). Girls will be more likely to apply themselves even once the reins are loosened because that is what they're "supposed" to do, whereas boys will be more likely to do their own thing.'

Family: Woman With 5 Dead Husbands Obsessed With Cash, Can't Be Trusted

anthony · 14 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The 76-year-old Georgia woman sits in a North Carolina jail, accused of hiring a hit man to kill fourth husband Harold Gentry. Authorities are re-examining the deaths of her first child and four of the five men she married, including Gentry.

No motive has been discussed, but records and interviews with relatives and police officials paint Neumar as a domineering matriarch consumed by money.

Said Al Gentry, who pressed North Carolina authorities for 22 years to reopen their investigation of his brother's death: "You can't trust her. You can't believe a word she says."'

"Y: The Last Man" reviewed on Salon.com

Matt · 14 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Just read this. Admittedly I may be out of the loop and I am not a comic book officianado, so this is the first I have heard of this series.

I feel the reviewer is trying to walk a line here, retaining some ambiguity deliberately in his writings, perhaps to thwart criticism. He is definitely pandering to the feminist crowd on page 1 of his review, then sort of gets less so on the second. All in all though, here's the feel: "Ooo we love to think about a man-less world-- a gendercide of men, hooray! Oh things would be kind of weird at first, but after the evil influences of maleness wear off, everything'll be just fine."

Further comments? The book is found here. The author is, of course, a man.

RADAR ALERT: Let's Pile On: Demand VAWA Reform!

Matt · 14 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

RightMarch.com, a conservative grassroots organization, recently threw its support behind RADAR's Fix VAWA Now! campaign, urging its members to ask their Senators and Representatives to begin fixing VAWA "before it's too late."

RightMarch writes:

The "Violence Against Women Act" requires a systematic overhaul. It needs to be changed so victims of violence are helped, so women in abuse shelters are healed, so men are not falsely accused and turned away from getting help, so children are raised by loving and fit parents, so families are safeguarded, so the rule of law is respected, and so the truth is upheld.

VAWA is a badly broken law that, like a cancer, has metastasized into every facet of American society. That's why we're joining RADAR ("Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting") in this historic crusade to save our families and protect our children."

The entire announcement can be seen here.

By now members of the House and Senate have received thousands of "Fix VAWA Now" demands since the RightMarch alert went out. So let's pile on!!!

RightMarch.com makes it easy to contact your Senators and House Representatives:

1. Go to http://www.capwiz.com/sicminc/issues/alert/?alertid=11584651
2. Scroll to the bottom on the page, enter your Zip code, and then hit the Go! button.
3. Enter the information in the boxes.

Do it now - it only take three minutes to urge your elected officials to Fix VAWA Now!

Reforming VAWA is an issue that cuts across party lines. RADAR is a non-partisan organization that works with both liberal and conservative organizations to get the word out, "Fix VAWA Now!"

++
Date of RADAR Release: July 14, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

UK: Baby-Killer & Stat Rapist Walks Free

Anonymous · 14 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. A woman that shook her child and then threw him to the ground was given the vagina pass rather than spending ANY time in jail. Apparently, she is also a pedophile. Excerpt:

'A mum who killed her six-month-old baby by shaking him and throwing him to the ground causing devastating brain injuries has walked free from court.

Martina McHattie, 26, described as a perfect mum, lost her temper with horrific consequences after baby Reece wouldn't stop crying because he was teething.

...

But McHattie, who pleaded guilty to manslaughter, was handed just a 12-month suspended prison sentence after a judge was told she had tried to commit suicide and had self-harmed in the years since the death.

...

Today she was handed a 26-week prison sentence suspended for a year after she admitted sexual activity with a child following an incident with a 14-year-old boy in July last year.'

Woman sues over ongoing sanctions for sex as a teen

Gunner Retired · 15 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'At age 17, while a high school sophomore, Whitaker had oral sex with a 15-year-old male classmate. In 1997, she pleaded guilty to sodomy and got five years' probation.

Whitaker, 28, has moved twice because of the sex offender law's restrictions that say an offender cannot live within 1,000 feet of places where children congregate. Whitaker was recently told by a sheriff she must move again because her home is within 1,000 feet of a church.
...
Last week, Columbia County Sheriff Clay Whittle, after finding Whitaker's name was placed on the deed in 2007, ordered her to move within 48 hours.
...
"Wendy Whitaker is not now and has never been a threat to anyone," she said. "The state of Georgia has better things to do than to evict a woman from her lawfully purchased home because she had sex as a teenager."

...
As for Whitaker's case, Hudson added, "My personal opinion is it seems to be costing the state of Georgia a lot of time and effort because of a law that reaches out to place these onerous burdens on offenders who are not predators.'

Awwwwwwwwwwwwwwwwwwww ...the sex offender... errrrrrr... the girl doesn't want to have to move again...

Maybe with it being a female plaintiff/registered offender, someone will look at the law and say "Hey, the registered offender is a woman and she's not a predator... we can cut her a break here?" and it will slide sideways into the 'Female Sex Offender Discount' category.

I liked the part about the Sheriff is willing to wait until it's heard in court (do you suppose they'd give a guy the same break?) to enforce the law.

Gunner Retired

UK: Cheating girlfriend hid dead newborn baby in car boot

Matt · 15 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman hid her dead newborn baby in the boot of her car to keep an affair and resulting pregnancy secret from her partner.

Marketing executive Claire Jones, 32, found she was expecting after a fling with a man she met through work.

To explain her expanding stomach, she told her family, friends and partner of five years David Stoneman that a wheat allergy was making her put on weight.'

New Jersey: Bracelets may better monitor child-support offenders

Matt · 15 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'NEWARK -- Licking County Child Support Enforcement Agency officials hope new electronic monitoring bracelets can be used as one more tool to keep parents from avoiding making child-support payments.

The agency already uses some electronic monitoring bracelets but because of outdated technology did not have the resources to expand the program.

Because of the new technology, Beth Winegar, director of the Licking County CSEA, anticipates the agency might be able to increase the capacity to track individuals from two or three people at one time to closer to 10, saving valuable jail space.'

Father-of-three branded a 'pervert' - for photographing his own children in public park

AngryMan · 15 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"When Gary Crutchley started taking pictures of his children playing on an inflatable slide he thought they would be happy reminders of a family day out.

But the innocent snaps of seven-year-old Cory, and Miles, five, led to him being called a ‘pervert’.

The woman running the slide at Wolverhampton Show asked him what he was doing and other families waiting in the queue demanded that he stop.

...

Mr Crutchley, 39, who had taken pictures only of his own children, was so enraged that he found two policemen who confirmed he had done nothing wrong.

Yesterday he said: ‘What is the world coming to when anybody seen with a camera is assumed to be doing things that they should not?'

‘This parental paranoia is getting completely out of hand. I was so shocked. One of the police officers told me that it was just the way society is these days. He agreed with me that it was madness.’"

'Mudering Grannies' get life

Matt · 16 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Some justice. Doubt they would have drawn "life" however if they had been young and pretty. Wonder if they'll actually stay in for the rest of their lives? Excerpt:

'LOS ANGELES - Two elderly women were sentenced to life in prison without parole Tuesday for murdering two indigent men to collect insurance policies taken out on their lives.

Los Angeles Superior Court Judge David Wesley on Tuesday sentenced 77-year-old Helen Golay and 75-year-old Olga Rutterschmidt to two consecutive life terms each.'

"Too cute to be so evil"

Matt · 16 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Female? Check. Attractive? Check. Young? She can't possibly have done anything wrong! Excerpt:

'As the defense lawyers prepare to make their clients' cases, Knox remains a contradictory and enigmatic figure. Mignini's dossier presents her as a cold-blooded killer. Her lawyers have leaked prison diaries that portray her as a romantic who writes poetry and love stories and who learned to play guitar ballads during her incarceration. Many who know Knox believe she's incapable of committing such a crime. Her parents have lately said that her much-publicized nickname of Foxy Knoxy was given to her for her soccer moves in high school, not her sexual prowess. Her sister Deanna recently said that Amanda only lost her virginity at the age of 19 and Knox's mother says she had no boyfriend in Italy before Sollecito. But her family may not have known the real Amanda.'

Woman gets 11 years for NY adoption fraud, abuse case pending

anthony · 16 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman who lied to adopt 11 disabled children whom authorities say she abused while she raked in more than $1 million in subsidies was sentenced Tuesday to nearly 11 years in prison.

U.S. District Judge Richard M. Berman said Judith Leekin engaged in "a heartless, dangerous money-driven scheme" when she used fake names and lies about the children to defraud social service agencies in New York City and New York state.

Leekin, 63, has been accused of treating the children like prisoners, subjecting them to beatings and handcuffs while they stayed in a locked room without food, depriving them of medical and dental care and not sending them to school. Authorities said the children were so physically and emotionally abused they can never recover.
...
Florida authorities have charged her with aggravated child abuse and aggravated abuse of disabled adults, and she could face as much as 120 years in prison if she is convicted of those and other charges.'

UK: Woman 'seduced ex-boyfriend and cried rape'

anthony · 16 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Erin Casson, 27, a communications officer, claimed submariner Brian Eaton, who she had been seeing for one year but had split up with three months earlier, threatened to kill her before forcing her to have sex, it was said.

But after six months police officers investigating the rape claim decided it was her who was lying and she was arrested for perverting the course of justice.

Mr Eaton, a petty officer, told Portsmouth Crown Court how the allegation and subsequent treatment had left him "mortified".'

Indian Supreme Court Sends Woman to Prison for ‘False’ Rape Charge

anthony · 16 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Mahila of Madhya Pradesh in northern India had charged two persons of her village with sexually assaulting her, back in January 1993.

The complainant, however, retracted during her cross-examination and denied making the charges against the two. She also denied having registered any complaint against them in the first place.

The trial court acquitted the men but initiated perjury proceedings and convicted her to three months imprisonment.

The Madhya Pradesh High Court agreed with the sentencing, against which the woman preferred an appeal in the apex court. But no relief came her way.'

Israel: New criminal code means women can be charged with rape

anthony · 16 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Women may soon be able to be charged with rape. Last Sunday the Ministerial Committee on Legislation approved a change to the criminal code, which would allow women to be charged with the rape of minors or adults.

The proposed law, introduced by MK Zevulun Orlev (National Union - National Religious Party), would broaden the definition of rape, statutory rape, and sex crimes involving family members. According to Orlev amendments, these crimes would also apply to cases where a woman forces a minor to have sex with her.
...
It seems as though the ministry changed course upon learning of the case in Netivot, where a mother forced two of her sons, aged 8 and 11, to have intercourse with her. Even though the woman confessed to the accusations, the prosecution's indictment was based on indecent acts and child abuse, since no more serious criminal charges were available.'

John Coy: Girls have reading down, but boys are losing interest

anthony · 16 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Fashionistas, mean girls, gossip girls, island girls, it girls, a whole sisterhood of traveling pants. Had I read the sign wrong? Was this the table of summer reading for girls? I checked the sign again: Summer Reading for Teens. I scanned the table. Where were the books for boys? Among the brightly colored covers, not a single book featured a male protagonist in a contemporary setting.

What would a male teen think about this table? Probably that summer reading didn't include him.
...
What message do we send boys when we load up a table of books for teens with titles that so many of them do not connect with? Is summer reading supposed to be fun? Do we assume that boys won't read for fun? Do we assume boys don't read -- period?'

New York Times: A New Frontier for Title IX: Science

anthony · 16 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Until recently, the impact of Title IX, the law forbidding sexual discrimination in education, has been limited mostly to sports. But now, under pressure from Congress, some federal agencies have quietly picked a new target: science.

The members of Congress and women's groups who have pushed for science to be "Title Nined" say there is evidence that women face discrimination in certain sciences, but the quality of that evidence is disputed. Critics say there is far better research showing that on average, women's interest in some fields isn't the same as men's.
...
"Colleges already practice affirmative action for women in science, but now they'll be so intimidated by the Title IX legal hammer that they may institute quota systems," Dr. Sommers said. "In sports, they had to eliminate a lot of male teams to achieve Title IX parity. It'll be devastating to American science if every male-dominated field has to be calibrated to women's level of interest."'

Q&A: Kathleen Parker Discusses Male Bashing, Fathers, Reproduction

anthony · 16 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Q: You talk about sitcoms and how they portray men as bumblers. But on both the big and small screen, women are marginalized.

A: The mass media messages of males are very negative. Men are depicted as bumbling fools, doofus dads, deadbeats, batterers, incompetent, irresponsible, unreliable and unattractive whereas women are very much the opposite. It's the wife who comes in and saves the day. Even the children are smarter than Dad.

I noticed that my sons have never experienced a culture where men were honoured and admired. And I wonder what kind of effect that has had on children growing up in this sort of marinade of disrespect.'

Extremely Biased 'Community' Announcement on Domestic Violence

anthony · 16 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Item here. Excerpt:

'This guide is designed to help employers assess for domestic violence and provide appropriate assistance and referral for victims. Because the vast majority of victims of adult domestic violence are women who are abused by their male partners, this guide will refer to victims as female and abusers as male...
...
Domestic violence doesn't stay home when its victims go to work. It can follow them, resulting in violence in the workplace. Or it can spill over into the workplace when a woman is harassed by threatening phone calls, absent because of injuries or less productive from extreme stress. With nearly one-third of American women (31 percent) reporting being physically or sexually abused by a husband or boyfriend at some point in their lives; it is crucial that domestic abuse be seen as a serious, recognizable, and preventable problem like thousands of other workplace health and safety issues that affect a business and its bottom line.'

VA To Test Suicide Public Service Ads

anthony · 16 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) is expected to launch a suicide prevention public service campaign in Washington, DC next week as part of a three-month pilot program.

CBS News has learned that the VA will roll out the campaign on July 21 which will include a series of bus advertisements as well as more than 300 ads inside DC commuter trains and at metro train stations.
...
“Ensuring that help is available for veterans at risk for suicide is only half the battle,” said Congressman Harry Mitchell, a Democrat from Arizona who also serves as Chairman of the Veterans’ Affairs Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations. Since enrolling into the VA system is voluntary, Congressman Mitchell adds, "Veterans need to know where they can turn to get help.”'

UK: Equality supremo Harman admits new law will lead to discrimination against men

anthony · 16 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'PLANS to give businesses the power to discriminate in favour of women and ethnic minorities have provoked a furore among both businesses and equality campaigners.

Harriet Harman, the Equalities Secretary, yesterday unveiled proposals to tackle the gender pay gap and outlaw discrimination against consumers on the grounds of age.

The forthcoming Equality Bill would allow organisations to hire a woman or work from an ethnic minority over a white male of equal ability.

...

Ms Harman agreed the Bill could discriminate against men, but added: "You don't get progress if there isn't a bit of a push forward."

Update: Elderly man arrested in prostitution sting released

Matt · 16 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Common bloody sense prevails, this time anyway. Thing is, he should never have been in this position in the first place. Excerpt:

'BRADENTON - A 94-year-old man whose arrest in a prostitution sting here caused an international buzz will not be prosecuted. A judge ruled Tuesday that Frank Milio was a victim of entrapment.

Milio, who has dementia, was unable to get into a care facility while his case was pending.

The undercover Manatee County Sheriff's Office detective on the street corner that afternoon in November took 30 steps to go chat with Milio, who authorities say had honked his car horn at the woman to get her attention.'

Teenage murderess gets probation

Matt · 16 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A 19-year-old woman who fatally stabbed her boyfriend during an argument was sentenced to probation and ordered to go through a treatment program to address her methamphetamine addiction.

Washoe District Judge Robert Perry warned Ana Padua on Friday that if she did not successfully complete her 2- to 10-year probation complete a drug treatment program, she would be facing a 20-year prison sentence.

Earlier this year, Padua pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter with a deadly weapon for killing Joseph Alan Robb, 35, who was a boyfriend for about a week. She was held in the Washoe County Jail until space opens at a local drug treatment center.'

Mom gets probation in hot-car death

Matt · 16 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'FARMINGTON - The day Kamilyn Kartchner Hadley caused the death of her infant son by leaving him outside in an oven-like car, the 31-year-old Clearfield woman had a lot on her mind.

Her family had been displaced from their home by a gas leak, her husband was starting a new job, and Hadley's focus was on her work as a multilevel marketer when she visited an associate and forgot about her child, said 2nd District Judge Michael Allphin.'

Any excuse will do.

Man returning to city for mother's funeral arrested on child support charges

anthony · 16 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A former Pardeeville man wanted for five years for failing to pay more than $12,000 in child support was picked up by authorities Thursday after he returned to Portage for his mother's funeral.

Todd W. Bubolz, 42, of Brownsville, Texas, remains in jail on $2,500 cash bail after he was arrested at a restaurant Thursday evening. He was in town for the funeral of his mother, Karen Bubolz of Portage, who died Tuesday.

Bubolz owes about $12,920 in payments. If found guilty of all charges, he faces up to 50 years in prison and $250,000 in fines. He is scheduled to appear in court Aug. 15 for a pretrial conference.'

Child abuse at Women's Shelters christianj · 17 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'For several years, True Equality Network (TEN) has conducted investigations into reports of child abuse, child molestation, abuse of women in the shelters, organized operation of prostitution, sales of illegal drugs, misuse of federal funds, and violations of employment laws.

We have discovered an astonishing amount of illegal activities. However, we have not been able to discuss these cases publicly because they have been turned over to the various government agencies for prosecution.'

Ed. note: Relatedly, Abuse Shelter Head Turns To Violence And Abuse

Woman arrested for poisoning 4-month-old

Matt · 17 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video report here.

"We believe that's the way she was injecting the substance [salt water solution] into his body, probably through a feeding tube."

More on brain differences between the sexes

AngryMan · 18 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Men and women show differences in behaviour because their brains are physically distinct organs, new research suggests. Male and female brains appear to be constructed from markedly different genetic blueprints.

The differences in the circuitry that wires them up and the chemicals that transmit messages inside them are so great as to point to the conclusion that there is not just one kind of human brain, but two, according to recent neurological studies.'

"...start choosing baby girls through IVF because they live longer and have more opportunities..."

Matt · 18 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'In a speech titled Should human beings have sex?, Dr Robert Sparrow yesterday told the Australian Medical Students Association convention that females could soon rule the world as hermaphrodites without any biological use for men.

...

To reach this post-sex world, Dr Sparrow said parents wanting the best for their children should start choosing baby girls through IVF because they live longer and have more opportunities in life.

"There are significant restrictions on the opportunities available to men around gestation, childbirth, and breastfeeding, which will be extremely difficult to overcome via social or technological mechanisms in the foreseeable future. Women also have longer life expectancies than men," he said.'

Is it me or does this particular brand of researcher (those in evolutionary biology) seem hell-bent on gleefully announcing predictions of the end of the male sex among humans? Or are just the ones who like to do that getting the press? In any case, can you imagine the uproar if anyone said "IVF users should try to pick boys since they are more <whatever> than girls?"

US News & World Report blog on battered men

Matt · 19 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

From Marc A. via email: We need comments and letters to the editor (letters-at-usnews.com) in response to this. It's an OK article but still weak on statistics, citing crime data instead of sociological data. It did, however, give the link to batteredmen.com. Please give a comment if you can. Excerpt:

'What I didn't anticipate, however, was that my online search for information about knife violence would keep turning up sites about domestic violence against men. This post from the website batteredmen.com, for example, kept appearing, making the case that domestic violence against men—which not infrequently involves knives—is too often overlooked. That site looks a little rough around the edges, so I checked further into the peer-reviewed research.'

New Zealand: Women-only scholarships under spotlight

anthony · 20 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'In what may become a global test case, Victoria University Institute of Policy Studies senior researcher Dr Paul Callister has asked the Human Rights Commission to clarify its position, saying women significantly outperform men in education and therefore there may be no inequality for such scholarships to rectify.

Human Rights Commission's chief commissioner, Rosslyn Noonan, said she would carefully examine the issues and questions raised by Callister before responding.

Under national and international human rights laws, temporary measures such as the scholarships are allowed to address inequality between the sexes and are deemed not discriminatory but must be stopped when equality is achieved.'

False Rape Allegation, Charges Filed

anthony · 20 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'For a year now, people in one Springfield neighborhood have been staying indoors as a precaution and on Friday they learned it was all for nothing.

One year ago, a neighbor in the north Springfield community reported she was attacked, raped and bound by a man that jumped out of the woods behind her house. The Greene County Sheriff's Department, Springfield Police Department, canine unit and the Missouri Highway Patrol helicopter spent two hours looking for the suspect, but never found anyone.

On Friday, 28-year-old Karla Forest was charged with making it all up. Investigators found not only did her story have a few holes in it, but forensic evidence showed scrapings on her body were created by her own finger nails.'

Washington Times book review: Calling for truce in war of the sexes

anthony · 20 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Anyone paying the slightest attention to the hothouse that American culture has become knows that men and masculinity have been under siege for the last few decades. Guys have been described in the most unsavory terms - lazy, violent, deceitful, maniacally over-sexed, pathologically unfair, none too bright (when was the last time you saw a man in a television commercial who wasn't either a lout or a helpless doofus?) - and are deemed to be the proximate cause of all bad things in the world, especially responsible for every unhappiness suffered by any woman. If you don't think this is so, read just about any description of any university course in women's studies, a fairly new "discipline" whose main purpose for being is to drill into college students that men are awful, masculinity is passe at best, dangerous at worst, and that women are victims, saints, martyrs, and all around superior human beings."

Police: Female Teacher Made Suicide Pact with Student

anthony · 20 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Not only is male teenage suicide an ignored problem, we now have a teacher promoting such an act. Excerpt:

'Police say a former Buffalo charter school teacher who disappeared with a male eighth-grade student last month made a suicide pact with the teen.

Cara L. Dickey, 30, surrendered to Buffalo police Thursday on four charges, including felony counts of promoting a suicide attempt and unlawful imprisonment.
...
Dickey's lawyer declined comment as she was released on $5,000 bail.'

India: 'Don't be a wife, live-in and extort'

anthony · 20 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'NATIONAL COMMISSION of Women (NCW), recently proposed an amendment of Section 125 of Code of Criminal procedure (CrPC) to include women involved in livein relationships to be eligible for alimony from their livein partners. This proposed amendment has far reaching consequences, which it is evident that the champion of womens causes, National Commission of Women seems to have conveniently ignored.
...
What the logical rationale fails to understand is how any person having the slightest of common sense can draft any provision on the basis of a generalised statement that all men are criminals and all women are truthfully innocent. When there is a provision to extract money legally, why will a woman not initiate a livein relationship, break it at will and then harass the man for whole life. As it is, the concept of livein relationship has not come of its age in the Indian society and will also not come, as Indian societal scenario is hundred times more complex than western society, which is being beautifully attempted to be aped here.'

Boy, 4, 'boiled to death' in 139F car after his mother went for manicure

Anonymous · 21 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A boy of four died on his mother's wedding day after she left him locked in her sweltering car while she went for a manicure.

Mirlande Jean-Baptiste's big day turned to tragedy when she came out of the beauty salon after three hours to find her son - who she thought was at a relative's house - slumped inside her parked vehicle.

Experts said that while the temperature outside was around 89 degrees Fahrenheit, the temperature inside the vehicle could have been as high as 139 degrees Fahrenheit.

Jean-Baptiste, who works as a nurse, made frantic attempts to resuscitate her son, but he was declared dead on arrival at hospital.'

RADAR ALERT: Tell the ABA President to Get His Facts Straight

Matt · 21 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

On June 2, 2008, RADAR released two special reports, Myths of ABA Commission on Domestic Violence[1,2] that analyzed the 19 statements made in the flyer put out by the American Bar Association (ABA) Commission on Domestic Violence, "10 Myths about Custody and Domestic Violence and How to Counter Them."

Among the flyer's 19 claims, 11 were found to be false, three misleading, and three unsupported by existing research. Only two claims were found to be correct. And some errors are egregious.

For example, the flyer states that "False allegations are no more common in divorce or custody disputes than at any time." But this claim, which flies in the face of common sense, is debunked by research showing that false allegations increase four-fold during custody and access disputes.

The flyer represents a crass attempt by the ABA Commission on Domestic Violence to further bias the administration of family law, to falsely stereotype fathers as abusers, and to force more children into single-parent households.

Just prior to their public release, RADAR sent the reports to the president of the ABA, William H. Neukom, Esq., with a letter asking that the ABA suspend distribution of the flyer until the errors and misrepresentations are corrected. We requested a response by July 15, 2008. To date, there has been no response.

With our letter to Mr. Neukom, the ABA was put on notice of the misinformation contained in the flyer. The ABA's decision to do nothing means it stands behind the misrepresentations, falsehoods, and lies.

This week, we ask that you contact William Neukom and ask him to have the ABA remove "10 Myths about Custody and Domestic Violence and How to Counter Them" from its website and stop selling copies of it. He can be contacted electronically: abapresident@abanet.org.

Please be courteous but firm. Tell him, as nicely as you can, to get his facts straight.

Cited notes herein are found on the RADAR site.

++
Date of RADAR Release: July 21, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Mother charged with murder after newborn found 'strangled' in hotel room

Anonymous · 21 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A British woman has been charged with murdering her baby boy moments after giving birth in a hotel room on the holiday island of Crete.

Leah Andrews, 20, was on holiday in Greece with her sister and friend when she suddenly went into labour after a heavy night of drinking.

The mother of two from London, who was eight-and-a-half months pregnant, returned to her hotel room in the early hours of the morning where she gave birth alone before allegedly strangling the baby.'

Australia: Sex Discrimination Commissioner wants flexible hours for dads

GaryB · 21 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This story reported in Australia for News.com.au gives me hope that the pendulum is finally beginning to swing back into our favour. Quote:

'MEN who want to spend more time with their children have found a new champion in an unlikely quarter - the Sex Discrimination Commissioner. Elizabeth Broderick said she wanted to strengthen the Sex Discrimination Act to penalise those employers who stick family-friendly fathers on the "daddy track" by refusing to promote them.

Ms Broderick said that, until the workplace culture changed to give men as well as women an equal right to time off work for family duties, men would be unable to do housework and childcare. She told The Daily Telegraph that men as well as women deserved to have the joy of being involved in their families.
...
"Men would say: 'My female colleague finds it easier to get flexible work arangements than I do because if I put my hand up it's like I'm not a serious player, you're not committed'," Ms Broderick said.'

Interesting opening line, interesting that the story admits it's 'unlikely' that men should expect assistance in sex matters from the Sex Discrimination Commissioner! But man, it's nice to be able to report good news for a change!

UK: Major breakthrough in prostate cancer treatment

Matt · 22 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This is FABULOUS news! Excerpt:

'British researchers have made a dramatic breakthrough against a lethal form of prostate cancer.

Trials of a new pill have shown that it can shrink tumours in up to 80 per cent of cases, and end the need for damaging chemotherapy and radiotherapy.
...
Its side-effects can include loss of libido, breathlessness, fatigue, fluid retention and weight gain. Some men may be left impotent, but the effects are far less than with chemotherapy and radiotherapy.

Abiraterone is now being used in a 1,200-patient international study, including at ten sites across the UK. If it is licensed as expected in 2011, it will have to await approval by the rationing watchdog NICE before it is made freely available across the NHS.

Dr de Bono describes prostate cancer as the 'Cinderella cancer' because it receives just a quarter of the funding of breast cancer - £10million against £40million last year - even though it kills just as many people.'

Husband wins divorce from angry wife in YouTube video

anthony · 22 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Manhattan judge gave Philip Smith a divorce from Tricia Walsh-Smith on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment.

...She makes embarrassing claims about their intimate life and then calls his office to repeat those claims to a stunned assistant.
...
Judge Harold Beeler blasted Walsh-Smith for her video stunt, which he called "a calculated and callous campaign to embarrass and humiliate her husband" and to pressure him into settling the divorce case on more favorable terms than were stated in their prenuptial agreement.'

AmEx commercial pulled off air due to MRA complaints

Anonymous · 22 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

In a previous posting, I reported on an American Express commercial showing a female guard at an airport putting on rubber gloves in order to search a man. I complained to Amex and their advertising arm Mindshare World. The commercial has been dropped and according to my source it may be do to other complaints besides mine. Thanks to all who did complain. It's good to know that there are people who will listen to reason.

Few police agencies address suicides within ranks

anthony · 22 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'He says his department had no idea how to handle his situation that March 2007 night, but after six suicides in three years the Milwaukee Police Department now provides suicide awareness training. Since starting the program early this year it has had two more suicides.

It's among the few departments confronting the subject. Experts estimate that only 2 percent to 10 percent of the 18,000 police departments nationwide actively work to prevent suicides within their ranks.

No one even keeps a complete, running tally of how many officers have killed themselves or attempted suicide. That includes the FBI, which issued a 726-page report seven years ago that called suicide a "significant issue confronting the law enforcement community."

Former New York Teacher Arrested on Rape Charges for Continuing to Have Sex With Teen

anthony · 22 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A former New York teacher who admitted having sex with a 16-year-old boy has been arrested on rape and other charges after prosecutors say she continued the liaisons in violation of a court order.
...
The 25-year-old was first arrested in March. She pleaded guilty to sexual misconduct and was awaiting an August sentencing.

Prosecutors got a tip Kennedy was still meeting with the boy and began watching her. The victim also admitted having sex with Kennedy five times since her guilty plea.'

Relief for John Leslie as police drop latest rape probe

Anonymous · 23 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. British TV star John Leslie has been falsely accused of rape three times in the last few years. The latest malicious allegations were dropped just today. His accusers remain anonymous. Excerpt:

"Television star John Leslie will not face charges over the latest allegations against him of sex assaults, police said today.

The former Blue Peter presenter was arrested last month over two allegations of rape and indecent assault dating back to 1995.

...

Today the Metropolitan Police said after taking advice from the Crown Prosecution Service they will not be taking any further action against him.

...

'The law confers a blanket of anonymity on complainants but the accused enjoys no such protection."

Fix VAWA Now! Let's rain on their parade, ONE MORE TIME

Matt · 23 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

All –

Last Thursday, the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence held a legislative briefing on Capitol Hill. The very next day, RADAR responded by distributing a flyer titled, “Domestic Violence Lies Cost Lives” to all the members of the House of Representatives.

And then today, the NCADV held their annual Lobbying Day, again spreading half-truths and lies about domestic violence.

Folks, what’s holding us back??

Today, please print out this flyer (.pdf file) and fax it to your Congressman. (If you don’t know the fax number, go to http://www.house.gov/, and then input your ZIP code in the upper-left corner of the page to locate your Congressman’s website link. Look for the "contact" section to get their fax number. Then make a note of this for future advocacy efforts.)

Attach a brief note like, “Dear Congressman ____: VAWA is broken! Please Fix VAWA Now!” Then sign your name and address and start faxing.

Isn’t raining on their parade FUN??!!!

Semper Fi,

Ed

"A Father's Right" available for viewing

Matt · 23 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Visit the site here.

"Starting right from the birth of Seth's daughter, the mother takes away his right as the father to even know anything about his daughter by not naming him on the birth certificate.

Heart wrenching in its intensity, Seth goes to court to battle his way to his daughter's side."

Report from court: California DV law challenged

Matt · 23 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Posting here. Excerpt:

'After the court adjourned, I and most of the other male advocates in attendance all went to lunch and discussed the case. Marc felt that he had much more to say, including elucidating the stories of specific individuals who had been hurt by the state's policy denying funding to male DV victims. He wasn't allowed the time. And yet, when the chief justice told Marc that his time was up (he only had 7 minutes for his final remarks), it seemed clear that the justices had made up their minds or at least understood the issue clearly enough so as to decide without the need for further persuasion. The chief justice even showed a little terseness to the State's attorney when it appeared that the State's attorney seemed to be splitting hairs over the political legitimacy of discriminating based on gender.'

Nyphotropism caught on tape: DUI hit-and-run outside nightclub proves revealing

Matt · 23 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Watch this. Now, the suspect ran into the man's girlfriend and was so drunk she just drove on and didn't even know it, or so she claims. The victim's boyfriend catches up with her at a stop sign and confronts her, if you could call it that.

My first thought was, if I had been the driver, I am quite sure I would have been beaten to death, or just unconscious if I were lucky. At one point the boyfriend actually hugs the upset driver of the car! You can see him struggling between expressing his anger and suppressing it because presumably the target thereof was a 'she' and not a 'he'. In fact, at 1:08 into the clip, he actually mentions how she was a girl and so couldn't be angry with her!

Nymphotropism in action. Comments?

Researchers: Middle-aged men are happier than women

Anonymous · 24 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Researchers looked at data spanning several decades, and concluded that after the age of 48, men are generally happier than women.

Men are most miserable in their 20s, but grow more satisfied as they get older, marry and earn more money, they found.

Women on the other hand are happier than men in early adulthood, but the glow wears off with time.'

Woman who killed husband "needs medical treatment"

Anonymous · 24 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Teresa Pohchoo Craig has a preoccupation with knives and could harm or kill herself or someone if she's not receiving proper medical treatment, a court heard yesterday.

Craig was convicted in June of manslaughter in the stabbing death of her husband, Jack Craig, while he slept in the couple's trailer near Kemptville in March 2006.

On Day 2 of a sentencing hearing, Crown prosecutor Jason Neubauer suggested Craig's risk to reoffend could put the community in danger.

"We're not talking about a property offence," said Neubauer, referring to Craig's crime. "If she relapses, somebody could die."'

My note: Correctional Services of Canada, in their paper called "Women convicted of Homicide Serving A Federal Sentence" (Oct. 1998), document that when women kill their victims usually are asleep or involved in some "other activity', whatever that may mean.

To quote: "Descriptive statistics demonstrate that a contract killer was more common in the context of a spousal homicide [committed by women] compared to the other typologies." [end quote]

Considering that a significant number of homicides remain unsolved we can only deduce that the number of men killed by their female partners will never be known.

And what were the men doing when they were killed? Corrections Canada tells us that

• 33.3% were asleep or passed out,
• 35.7% were engaged in some other activity,
• 4.8% were arguing or assaulting the co-accused,
• 19% were arguing with the offender,
• 7.1% were assaulting the offender.

On July 5-7, 1995, Correctional Service Canada (CSC) held a brainstorming session on women's anger. As a result, a detailed program manual, called "Pathways", was written and completed in March 1996 by five of the community experts who participated in the brainstorming session. The following recommendation, however, was not accepted:

• "As CSC continued to learn more about the behaviour and needs of women who use aggression instrumentally [i.e. without provocation] and persistently, it became clear that this program could not meet their needs, as it required women to be ready to assume responsibility for their actions".

In its "Week without Violence" propaganda leaflet called "Facing Violence Among Men" the YWCA (Canada) writes:

• "Increasing number of men are realizing that they have to take responsibility for what they do. There are currently over 2,000 programs for men who have assaulted their partners"
and:
• "Confronting Violence Against Women -- Anger Focus Workshop" -- allow women to direct the anger that often comes with being the victim/survivor of abuse" (YWCA Week Without Violence p. 19)

Regards,

Eva

Man held liable for breaking off engagement

Anonymous · 24 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This case involved a man that proposed to a woman and she accepted. He later backed out. She filed suit for "breech of contract. Excerpt:

'A Hall County man owes his ex-fiancee $150,000 for breaking off their engagement, a jury decided Wednesday.

The six-man, six-woman panel spent about three hours deliberating before ruling in favor of RoseMary Shell, who sued Wayne Gibbs for breach of contract after he called off their nuptials.

...

"You would be sending the message that if you have a dispute with somebody and you think they have been a scoundrel, go get a lawyer and hope the Brinks truck backs up to the jury room," Law said during his closing argument to the jury. "If you award one penny, you're saying, 'file frivolous lawsuits.' "

The jury award was "significantly higher" than an amount Shell said she would accept during pre-trial settlement discussions, Sartain said.'

So how is this different when a woman promises not to get pregnant and both agree that they do not want children, then later she gets pregnant and "changes her mind". How is this any different? The promise is broken by the woman but he is held responsible for her "breech of contract".

So girls are just as good at math?

Matt · 24 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. My first calc T.A. was female and she knew math like it was nobody's business. So whenever I have heard stuff like the usual bull about girls needing loads of encouragement to pursue math, again I can only shake my head. So what it is then? Girls are or aren't as good at/better than boys at math? For feminists the answer will always be no, since that is how they can get colleges to go with the Title IX-based attack on science and math they are planning, as this article reveals quickly after declaring the study's results. Excerpt:

'WASHINGTON - Sixteen years after Barbie dolls declared, "Math class is tough!" girls are proving that when it comes to math they are just as tough as boys. In the largest study of its kind, girls measured up to boys in every grade, from second through 11th. The research was released Thursday in the journal Science.

Parents and teachers persist in thinking boys are simply better at math, said Janet Hyde, the University of Wisconsin-Madison researcher who led the study. And girls who grow up believing it wind up avoiding harder math classes.

"It keeps girls and women out of a lot of careers, particularly high-prestige, lucrative careers in science and technology," Hyde said.

That's changing, though slowly.

Women are now earning 48 percent of undergraduate college degrees in math; they still lag far behind in physics and engineering.'

I do believe if women earned 99% of all math and science degrees except in Botany, the news would be all about how women are lagging in the all-important, lucrative field of Botanical Sciences and that massive efforts to redress this would be in the offing-- taxpayer-funded.

--

Also received a submission from user 'Duncan' as follows:

{quotes article} at http://www.msnbc.msn.com/id/25836419/ and notes:

"There is a discussion board for the article."

Australia: Government opening inquiry into effectiveness of 1984 Sex Discrimination Act

Matt · 24 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Request for comments here. Excerpt:

'On 26 June 2008, the Senate referred the following matter to the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee for inquiry and report by 12 November 2008:

The effectiveness of the Commonwealth Sex Discrimination Act 1984 in eliminating discrimination and promoting gender equality, with particular reference to:

1. the scope of the Act, and the manner in which key terms and concepts are defined;
2. the extent to which the Act implements the non-discrimination obligations of the Convention of the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the International Labour Organization or under other international instruments, including the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights;
...'

Book Review: Parker's 'Save The Males'

Anonymous · 25 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Every once in a while, a book not so much lands on your desk as lobs itself like a hand grenade, exploding preconceived wisdoms and shattering the bones of the status quo. Save The Males is such a book.

It is the fiercest and most fearless defence of men, fatherhood and ultimately the family I have read in many years.

American author Kathleen Parker's courageous thesis is that initially, through extreme feminism, then via its craven implementation into society, women have demonised men and trivialised their contribution, especially to family life.

...

She argues: 'As long as men feel marginalised by the women whose favour and approval they seek, as long as they are alienated from their children and treated as criminals by family courts, as long as they are disrespected by a culture that no longer values masculinity tied to honour, as long as boys are bereft of strong fathers and our young men and women wage sexual war, then we risk cultural suicide.'"

John Cleese on his divorce

Anonymous · 25 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The 68-year-old comedian asked the audience at Bristol Zoo: 'Guess how much I'm paying her at the moment?

'I'm paying her £900,000 a year. And we had no children. It really is astonishing.'

Cleese faces claims for half his earnings, half of his nine properties and £900,000 a year from 63-year-old American psychotherapist Alyce Faye Eichelberger.
...
Cleese blamed his wife's lawyer for turning their separation into an embittered dispute over money, saying his wife is now 'taking me for everything she can get'."

UK: Undergrad male enrollment at 35%

Vince · 25 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"A government report last week found that while women were in a minority in universities in 1992, by last year the proportion of male undergraduates had fallen to 35 per cent.
...
Research shows women outnumbering men by 13 to one in some areas. One in ten primary schools has no male teachers. In some areas, fewer than 10 per cent of primary teachers are men.

Figures from the most recent teacher-training intake show there are 26,217 women compared to just 9,375 men. At primary level, the difference is more marked, with 2,301 men compared to 14,183 women."

Record amount collected for Illinois children for fourth consecutive year

Matt · 25 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Press release here. Excerpt:

'CHICAGO – Governor Rod R. Blagojevich today announced that for the fourth consecutive year, the Illinois Department of Healthcare and Family Services (HFS) has collected a record amount of child support for Illinois children. The $1.33 billion collected for custodial parents during FY08 is a more than 8 percent increase over the $1.22 collected during FY07. Success is due primarily to innovative programs geared toward holding non-custodial parents accountable.
...
HFS is also working with Secretary of State Jesse White's office in a new effort to suspend driver's licenses for parents who are not meeting their child support obligations. Almost $5 million in child support has been collected for families since the program started in January.'

"Fighting for his country; fighting against Illinois"

Matt · 25 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'When the I-Team received an email from Army Sergeant Joshua Hinkle a few weeks ago, it first caught our attention because it was sent from Camp Bucca in Iraq.

The soldier wrote that he was suffering a great injustice: the state of Illinois, he claimed, had cleaned out his entire bank account for child support.

"They went into my bank account and they took it, they took it down to the penny," said Hinkle, who's with the Illinois National Guard.

...

Most puzzling is what happened to all that money the state seized from his account in June. The boy's mother said she hasn't seen any of it.'

Ottawa woman sentenced for manslaughter but judge gushes with sympathy

Matt · 26 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'In handing down the sentence, Ontario Superior Court Justice Robert Maranger said that the homicide of Jack Craig was "a very cruel, monstrous act committed by what appears to be a fundamentally decent person.

"I am very sympathetic to Mrs. Craig," he said. "I have compassion for Mrs. Craig."

But he said the conditional sentence of two years less a day, to be served in the community, which was sought by Mrs. Craig's defence lawyers, was "clearly inappropriate given the brutality of the act."'

My read is this: He ran out of money so she murdered him, figuring she could claim abusiveness and that would win her sympathy and community support, minus jail time. Also, no costly divorce to deal with, either. "Hey, what's to lose?" she thought, and went looking for a good, sharp knife.

Judge releases woman who left infant in trash

Matt · 26 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'ANNAPOLIS, Md. (Map, News) - An Anne Arundel County judge has released a 19-year-old woman who served eight months in a juvenile detention facility for the death of her newborn baby.

The judge ruled the woman had been rehabilitated and the woman was released to her father's custody.'

Women try to open airplane door during flight

Matt · 26 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. I wonder what degree of a sense of entitlement and presumption of immunity to account for activities is necessary for one to get to this point without being a clinical sociopath? Excerpt:

'A plane was forced to make an emergency landing in Germany after two British women tried to open a cabin door mid-flight, police have said.

The women, aged 26 and 27, were drinking heavily and had to be held in their seats by security staff until the plane landed in Frankfurt.

They were arrested and released after two hours, Frankfurt police said.
...
She said they had started to swear at and threaten staff who refused to sell them any more alcohol from the bar.
...
"Their language was totally unacceptable, as was their behaviour. They were very abusive and threatening," the spokeswoman said.'

...
The XL Airways spokeswoman said the airline was considering taking legal action against the woman.

Mr Scherer said police were deciding whether to press charges, adding that the pair could also be fined or forced to pay compensation.'

Released after 2 hours? Considering taking legal action?

I guess that explains it. They behave this way because they think they can get away with it. And they can. If I had done this, well, I'd still be waiting to see my court-appointed German lawyer who may or may not know English (assuming I'd get one-- please excuse my ignorance of German legal procedure). If not, well, too bad. I wasn't going to get off with a warning anyway.

'The Villains of Victimhood'

anthony · 27 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Besides revealing an inflated view of their own organization, the superhero analogy demonstrates the destructive attitude dominating feminism today. It is the attitude that everyone is against women, out to get them. To feminists, women must take on the entire world. They must save everyone, even sometimes from themselves. Like Superwoman, these feminists are constantly fearful that they will find an enemy, like sexism, around every corner. The media: Sexist. Fewer women in math and sciences: Sexism. Fewer female elected officials: Sexism.'

"Voted one of TBS's funniest commercials of 2006"

Matt · 27 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Watch it here. First time I had ever seen it. Now bear in mind, this is a commercial from a governmental authority. And it has no significant character interaction except just this: an old woman with a walker-stick kicks a man square in the groin for the crime of watering his lawn on an off-day.

Any excuse to show a man getting kicked in the groin seems acceptable, doesn't it? What's not important is the message, goes the ad-maker's approach. All that matters is the great laugh the viewer gets from watching a man sexually assaulted by a woman. Now let's see the opposite roles played out on the same commercial and what votes it gets. And I wonder, who did the voting?

Minnie Driver: Her baby's father is unimportant

Anonymous · 28 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Minnie Driver has revealed that she has no plans to include her baby's father at any time during the birth.

"I'm not married and I don't know if I'll stay with the guy," she told the New York Post.

"My mum and aunt Serena will be with me, as will my best friends, a midwife and a yoga teacher. And I'll be the wailing monster at the centre.

"It's great to be an independent creature. Today you don't need a man any more. In the old days, a baby without marriage and people would put you out. I'm very into feeling this female thing."

Do you see what women are really all about? Selfish, deluded and arrogant. I wonder how this guy feels about being treated and referred too in this manner? Don't suppose it matters since he's man. Never trust women ever.

‘Pre-Alzheimer’s’ rising, especially in men

Matt · 29 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'CHICAGO - A milder type of mental decline that often precedes Alzheimer’s disease is alarmingly more common than has been believed, and in men more than women, doctors reported Monday.

Nearly a million older Americans slide from normal memory into mild impairment each year, researchers estimate, based on a Mayo Clinic study of Minnesota residents.

...

Men were nearly twice as likely as women to develop it. That’s a surprise, because some studies have found more women with Alzheimer’s than men. But there may be a simple explanation: Even though more men may be impaired, women outlive them and therefore have more time to develop full-blown dementia.'

National Ass'n of Scholars: "Gone, Daddy, Gone"

Matt · 29 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Traditional family structure may not come under open assault but contemporary higher education tends to relish its role in fostering the student's distance from older norms. The family is not faring well against modernity, and the university has in many ways chosen sides—against fatherhood in particular. The ideal of a genderless free-for-all called parenthood can do only so much to deconstruct mothering, but fathering is another story.
...
College is full of clues that fathers are dispensable. ... A first brush with anthropology may also register ... that "gender" itself is a product of mere custom. The student who gets caught in the undertow of Women's Studies course or a feminist professor will get a much fuller expansion of the idea that gender is whatever you choose it to be.
...
Of course, it is not the university's purpose to promote or save the institution of marriage or the family. But neither is it the mission of higher education to deconstruct the family. That task grows out of an ideological agenda that aims to institute profound changes in the name of "social justice." The advocates of this agenda should have their hearing, but they shouldn't be the only voice on campus.'

UK: Plans to let victims of domestic abuse get away with murder under way

AngryMan · 29 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Outstanding article by Erin Pizzey:

"Yesterday, Ms Harman — who, worryingly, is acting Prime Minister during Gordon Brown's summer holiday — set out new proposals that may lead to a change in the law in cases of murder involving domestic violence.

Effectively, what Harman and the ultra-feminist lobby want is a licence for women to kill.

If this plan is enacted, we will no longer have absolute justice in this country. Instead, our courts will have to use a carefully calibrated measure of female grievance against which to judge the darkest of all crimes.

The absurdity of the Harman position is the pretence that women in a violent relationship have no alternative but to kill their partners."

Ed note: Also covered here. Excerpt:

'In the first major changes to homicide laws in 50 years, ministers have ruled that other categories of killer, as well as domestic violence victims, should be offered new partial defences of provocation.

They include those 'seriously wronged' by an insult.

Beneficiaries of this change may include those who strike out after long and bitter disputes with neighbours, or victims of a serious crime who are taunted at a later date by the attacker.'

'Wicked' woman who ruined a marriage by crying rape jailed for four months

AngryMan · 29 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman whose false rape allegation led to the collapse of her victim's marriage has been jailed for four months after a judge branded her 'wicked'.

Tracey Winfield, 21, claimed she had been held down in a park by her former boyfriend Richard Peacock while his friend Dean Frasier raped her.
...
The pair, both innocent, were forced to undergo medical examinations and give intimate samples before being released on bail.
...
Mr Rowe said Winfield and Mr Peacock had a troubled three-year relationship, and she had made 14 allegations to police about him.

Most of these were not taken further - although Mr Peacock was twice convicted of public order offences in 2006 as a result of them.'

RADAR ALERT: ABA Refuses to Get Their Facts Straight – Now Let's Cut Off Their Funding!

Matt · 29 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The American Bar Association can't kick the habit. Two years ago the ABA published "10 Myths about Custody and Domestic Violence," a report that purports to demolish falsehoods that surround child custody and DV.[1]

But it's a sham.

In the name of stopping lies, the ABA "fact-sheet" actually invents new lies and expands on the old ones. Here's just one example:

"Among false allegations, fathers are far more likely than mothers to make intentionally false allegations."

The truth, of course, is no good research has ever shown that, and mothers are usually the ones who make false accusations. All this is spelled out in RADAR's Special Report, "Myths of the ABA Commission on Domestic Violence: Summary Report."[2]

Last week we asked everyone to contact the ABA president, William Neukom, and tell him to remove the offending report. (If you haven't done so, here's his email: abapresident-at-abanet.org)

But the situation could get much worse.

That's because the ABA now wants the American taxpayer to pay for these lies.

That's right, the ABA is shamelessly backing the National Domestic Violence Volunteer Attorney Act, H.R. 6088, a proposed $55 million earmark to set up a network of attorneys to invent even more false allegations in family court.

If that sounds unbelievable, yes, it is unbelievable.

So it's critical that every person who reads this Alert take 3 minutes NOW to halt this perversion of justice. This is what we are asking you to do:

1. Go to http://www.mediaradar.org/docs/RADARflyer-HR6088-S1515-Earmark-for-Lawyers.pdf and print out a copy of RADAR's flyer, "Domestic Violence Lies Cost Lives."
2. At the top of the flyer, print "Say 'No!' to H.R. 6088" and add your name, city, and ZIP code.
3. Get the fax number of your member of the House of Representatives (you can find it by going to http://www.house.gov/, then going to the webpage of your Congressman)
4. Fax the flyer to your elected Representative.

THAT'S ALL THERE IS TO IT!

Thanks for protecting families from the misrepresentations of the American Bar Association!! With your help, we're going to win this battle!!!

++
Date of RADAR Release: July 29, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence.
http://www.mediaradar.org.

Men's health: It's time to help men help themselves

Matt · 29 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Editorial here. Excerpt:

'Nationally, just like clockwork, Congress approves a resolution declaring June as Men's Health Month. But the Men's Health Act, which would establish a national Office of Men's Health to conduct and support programs to make men live longer, has been bandied about without action since its introduction in 2001.
...
...The state Department of Health makes money available for cervical and breast cancer screenings, but not for prostate and testicular cancer screenings. Its reproductive-health program is focused exclusively on women. And its Web site features a women's health page, while devoting minimal space to issues specific to the fathers, sons and brothers who too often die before their time, victims of undetected diseases and poor lifestyle choices.'

MSN's Dunleavey pens "How to leave your wife" column

Matt · 29 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Activism has its effects; read it here. Looks like Ms. Dunleavey got the message. And while she isn't filled with contrition for her previous column, she at least responded to the input. It's a start. Excerpt:

'Most of the letters were from men. Many were morally outraged. And most said: Why don't you write about how to leave your wife without going broke?
...
State laws, your personal circumstances, the lawyers or mediators involved in the case and, perhaps especially, a judge may all determine how equitable the terms of a divorce are.

"If you choose to go before a judge, you are subject to the biases of that judge, and they cut both ways," Smith says.

Smith also took issue with the motive behind my initial article, which stemmed from my conviction that women need a bigger push to take the reins of their finances. "I see just as many men who don't want to deal with these issues," she says.'

Australian Mother Charged With Placing Baby in a Fish Tank

anthony · 29 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The 22-year-old, who was not identified, has pleaded not guilty in the District Court to endangering the life of the baby at her Blakeview home in May, 2007.

The father, who also cannot be named, told the court he and his then-partner had been arguing on the night the baby was allegedly put into the aquarium.

He said the child had been crying and his partner was not able to make her stop. He saw his partner walk past their bedroom and then saw her walk back without the child.'

Businesswoman drugged husband's meals with tranquilisers to get him to confess to adultery

Anonymous · 29 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Detectives say Mrs Lees suspected the 43-year-old Navy avionics lecturer of being unfaithful, and administered a toxin to try to coax him into admitting his infidelity.

She is said to have made the repeated attempts, despite having a long-term affair with a neighbour herself.

Police, who said Mr Lees had been having an affair, are still waiting to find out what drugs she used in the last attack.

But they believe they may have been those prescribed for her own depression. They are investigating if she may also have used the date rape drug GHB.'

Ed. note: Notice that "date rape drug GHB" reference. The GHB date rape drug myth has been exposed as an urban myth but still, it continues. But the BBC just had to slip that in there, didn't they?

Japanese Woman Wounds 7 In Stabbing Spree

anthony · 29 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Tokyo, Japan (AHN) - A Japanese woman went on a spree, stabbing seven men at a crowded train station in Hiratsuka, 43 miles southwest of Tokyo.

Hidetoshi Yukitake, a Japanese police spokesman said the woman tried to slash her wrist with an army knife inside a shopping mall Monday night near the train station. The woman was bumped by a passing pedestrian, which further enraged her.

Yukitake said, "She was screaming as she was slashing people at random. She said she was frustrated. She was also angry at her father."'

Alleged domestic abusers to be GPS-tagged without trial

Matt · 30 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Judges in Michigan now can order domestic violence suspects - even before they go to trial - to wear global positioning system (GPS) devices, which monitor their whereabouts to ensure that they stay away from their alleged victims. If a suspect comes near a victim, the system sends out an alert. Not only are authorities notified, but the victim gets a cell-phone call letting them know that the suspect is nearby.'

Wonder if female suspects will get the same treatment as male ones?

A mere three days before that article went to print, this one was published. Excerpt:

'The Attorney General's Office, by constitutional mandate, is supposed to protect all residents, not just half of them. Its representation against this ruling would constitute a conflict of interest and felony official misconduct. The attorney general is involved in domestic violence funding and disseminates where that funding goes. The attorney general's office willfully fails to fund battered men's programs and shelters, even after the U.S. Justice Department has put out statistics that battered men comprise 40 percent or more of battered partners. This willful refusal to fund battered men is discriminatory policy.'

However the ruling is going to be challenged, as one would expect.

"Paycheck Fairness Act" in process in House of Representatives

Matt · 30 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'WASHINGTON - July 24 - The American Civil Liberties Union today urged the House Education and Labor Committee to pass H.R. 1338, the Paycheck Fairness Act, with no weakening amendments. This important legislation would update the Equal Pay Act, one of the primary laws addressing pay discrimination.

Court decisions and loopholes have chipped away at the Equal Pay Act over the years, making it less effective in combating pay discrimination. The Paycheck Fairness Act, with 228 cosponsors to date, would strengthen and improve protections against workplace discrimination.'

If you want to read it, track it, learn about committee membership (including contact info), etc., go here.

Some commentary by Carrie Lukas challenging the underlying assumptions is here. Excerpt:

'The committee's press release, like essentially every public statement supporting expanded "equal pay" laws, cites the statistic that women earn just 77 percent of men's earnings. This "wage gap" is considered proof that the work world's deck is still stacked against women and government needs to do more to make sure that everyone plays fair.

Yet a statistic that simply compares the wages of the median full-time working man and the full-time working woman tells us nothing about the existence (or lack thereof) of systematic wage discrimination. Many factors contribute to how much one earns, from occupation and area of specialty to education and years of experience. Not surprisingly, once those factors are taken into account, the wage gap shrinks.'

Australia in hot pursuit of "deadbeat dads"

Matt · 30 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. To think, one can embezzle millions from an employer and walk with a slap on the wrist. Corporations can fail to pay billions in taxes without so much as a fine. But a man behind on "child support" payments either willfully or by force of circumstance moves to a different country and it's a no-holds-barred effort to track the rat-fink down! I mean, he had the temerity to do what women with custody of their kids do all the time-- move to a new country-- and that's all that needs saying for yet another search-and-destroy law. Excerpt:

'THOUSANDS of deadbeat dads are fleeing to New Zealand to escape paying child maintenance.

More than 20,000 Australian parents have escaped overseas to avoid paying child support, with figures revealing NZ is a favourite haven, the Herald Sun reports.

These parents owe around $90 million in unpaid child support, but the Australian Government is about to crack down on them.

...

Human Services Minister Senator Joe Ludwig said parents who avoided financial obligations to their children would be tracked down.

"Separated parents living overseas now owe around $90 million in payments to their kids back in Australia," Senator Ludwig said.'

More on "girls as good as boys at math"

Matt · 30 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Seems like Larry Summers and the recent math-and-girls dust-up just go together far too well to be ignored. So some mainstream and not-so-mainstream news sources have run with the ball. This from the National Post editors, with this from the City Journal. Excerpt from the Nat:

'Unfortunately, journalists of both sexes tend to not be math geniuses. Few of them anywhere on the continent noticed that Ms. Hyde's data actually come a lot closer to supporting Mr. Summers' hypothesis than they do to refuting it.

The study certainly does confirm that there is probably no difference between males and females in math ability, on average. This means that, if one were to plot out the observed mathematical proficiency of a large number of male and female individuals, the resulting graphical pattern would produce two sex-segregated bell curves centred on roughly the same average point.

But that doesn't mean the two profiles would be identical. Decades worth of data show that male populations exhibit greater variance in their observed mathematical ability (and their intelligence more generally, for that matter). This means that men exhibit "fatter tails" on their bell curve, with more statistical outliers in the far-flung domains of genius on one side, and total dullard on the other. In the case of women, on the other hand, typical psychometric findings show their abilities to be clustered more tightly around the mean.'

From the Journal:

'The New York Times is determined to show that women are discriminated against in the sciences; too bad the facts say otherwise. A new study has "found that girls perform as well as boys on standardized math tests," claims a July 25 article by Tamar Lewin—thus, the underrepresentation of women on science faculties must result from bias. Actually, the study, summarized in the July 25 issue of Science, shows something quite different: while boys' and girls' average scores are similar, boys outnumber girls among students in both the highest and the lowest score ranges. Either the Times is deliberately concealing the results of the study or its reporter cannot understand the most basic science reporting.'

Organization/Group Leaders: Please join the Parental and Civil Rights Alliance

Anonymous · 30 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This growing international coalition of local groups in less than 3 days of existence will soon be listed on Meetup Alliance's Top 10 Largest Alliances List.

Please place your group into the Parental and Civil Rights Alliance. It is a great way for new people in your area to find you.

32 Local groups/organizations and growing! By tomorrow night the Parental and Civil Rights Alliance will most likely be listed in the Top 10 Meetup Alliance Listing!

If you run a local group you can join.

Only those who want to start a group or already have one (via Meetup, Facebook, Google, Yahoo, active website, etc.) can join the Parental and Civil Rights Alliance right now. If you don't want to be a group organizer, you can find an existing group on the internet, Meetup, Facebook, MySpace, etc and ask them to join the alliance. Or start your own group right here in the Parental and Civil Rights Alliance.

If you have a leadership role in a local group or organization you should join the Parental and Civil Rights Alliance for the following benefits:

1. The Parental and Civil Rights Alliance is a fantastic tool to help parental and civil rights activists all over the country to meet and organize in person.
2. Network with similar organizations and groups to increase turnout at your local events.
3. Learn from the successes and failures of local groups.
4. Give your local organization an additional web presence with link. Thousands of people visit the main page for Meetup Alliance daily and look for a local group in their area...look at it like the yellow pages – but this is free!
5. Increase your membership totals in your local organization. The Parental and Civil Rights Alliance allows those who come across it on the internet to search for a local group in their area.
6. Want to carpool to a national event? Research local groups and consolidate resources for a successful turnout.
7. Network with Meetup groups, Yahoo groups, Facebook groups, MySpace groups and more!
8. Expose your next event or meeting to a national audience!
9. Create your own group's resource page.
10. Finally create an international coalition of parental and civil rights activists!

Meetup Alliance is the best way for leaders of local groups to share, learn and communicate.

Attend the Civil Rights Event of the Year - DC Festival 2008.

Thank you,
Robert Pedersen
http://www.achildsright.org/
http://www.meetupalliance.com/parentalrights/

Baby Sitter Admits to Burning Boys With Cigarette, Iron

anthony · 30 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A 28-year-old Philadelphia [woman] has admitted repeatedly burning two young boys she was babysitting — with a lit cigarette, a lighter and in one case, an iron.
...
Johnson pleaded guilty to aggravated assault and possession of an instrument of crime.'

Obama meets with Kim Gandy and Ellen Malcolm

anthony · 31 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Barack Obama met privately Tuesday with a group of women leaders, seeking their endorsement and also raising a sore point -- the issue of gender bias in his Democratic primary fight with Hillary Rodham Clinton.
...
"He talked about his concerns about some of the sexism in the course of the campaign," said Ellen Malcolm, president of the political group EMILY's List and a key Clinton supporter. "But essentially the meeting was forward-looking."
...
Obama mentioned that "he knew there had been frustration with stuff directed at Sen. Clinton by the media," said Kim Gandy, president of the National Organization for Women.'

UK: New Govt Report on Female Violence

AngryMan · 31 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Last year 87,200 women and girls were arrested for attacks – the equivalent of 240 every day. It is the first time in history that violence has been the most common crime among women and girls, taking over from theft.

The category includes every violent offence from street brawls and assault to grievous bodily harm and murder.
...
The Ministry of Justice report, released quietly on to the internet yesterday after MPs had left for the summer recess, also includes alarming figures on the scale of violence by children.
...
Robert Whelan of the Civitas think-tank blamed a breakdown in society's values.

He said: 'There are now so many children growing up in broken homes or with disruptive backgrounds that the self restraint taught to previous generations is no longer there. They think when they are angry they can just lash out.'

Woman murders son, commits suicide to spite estranged husband

AngryMan · 31 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A hateful mother killed her five year old son to spite his father before taking her own life, an inquest has heard.

Emma Hart, 27, force-fed Lewis Dangerfield a lethal cocktail of pain killers and antidepressants at their home then fled to her mother's flat nearby and slashed her wrists.

In a note to the little boy's father, Shaun Dangerfield, which she left by his body, she wrote: 'I told you I would make you pay, enjoy your life now, nothing is stopping you, ha ha ha. Just remember it's your fault.
...
Her mother told the inquest: 'She is not a horrible person, she was a loving mum.'"

Court orders sperm donor to pay child support

Matt · 31 July 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'SANTA FE—A court battle over whether a sperm donor should pay a higher rate of child support has ended with a ruling that the man is liable because he has taken an active role in raising the children.

Kevin Zoernig had argued he was not required to pay child support because he is a sperm donor and is protected under the state's Uniform Parentage Act.

But the state Court of Appeals noted in its July 25 opinion that this was not a case involving an anonymous donor or a known donor who provided sperm to a licensed physician under an agreement in which he agreed to have no parental rights.'

Dating agency cheating Australian men

AngryMan · 1 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The farmers and miners who joined the Rural Network dating agency got a lot less than they wished for. Some fell in love with women who did not exist. Others lost up to A$20,000 (£9,500) as the agency tempted them into parting with more and more cash with the lure of love.
...
The dating site, whose director Leanne McDonald was also known as Leanne Viney, Lana Viney and Lana McDonald, had various ploys to cajole men into paying ever higher membership fees.
...
Justice Jeffrey Spender said at the time that the agency's conduct was “not only serious but calculated and quite callous” — although he stopped short of closing it.
...
Yesterday the agency was back in court, with the commission accusing it of failing to honour any of the undertakings.'

Note: This is in the Women's section of the newspaper.

S.African boys often forced to have sex, study says

Matt · 1 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Two out of five male South African students say they have been raped, according to a study published yesterday suggesting sexual abuse of boys is endemic in the country's schools.

The survey published in BioMed Central's International Journal for Equity in Health showed that boys were most often assaulted by adult women, followed closely by other schoolchildren.

"This study uncovers endemic sexual abuse of male children that was suspected but hitherto only poorly documented," Neil Andersson and Ari Ho-Foster of the Centre for Tropical Disease Research in Johannesburg wrote.'

The Government, Divorce, and the War on Fatherhood

Matt · 1 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'With the advent of no-fault divorce (before which divorces required cause, and fault could be assigned proportionately), "the fault that was ostensibly thrown out the front door of divorce proceedings re-entered through the back." Working from the "therapeutic" (read: morally relativistic) premise that both parties must be equally to blame -- which is to say, not at all to blame -- for a marriage's failure, divorce courts begin with an "automatic outcome" and then set out to find or manufacture evidence to support it.

How is that evidence obtained? Via "extensive and intrusive governmental instruments whose sole purpose is intervention in families." Having quit the marriage-enforcement business, government has turned the full weight of its resources and coercive powers to the divorce-enforcement business.

The main area in which government brings to bear those resources, and the red thread of Baskerville's book, is in assigning custody of children. With two-thirds of divorces initiated by women -- thereby immediately casting the man as the "defendant" -- and with courts overwhelmingly biased toward mothers already (in a paradoxical inversion of feminist doctrine, women are held both to be and not to be more naturally suited to nurturing and child-rearing), in practice the custody process typically amounts to a "power grab" by which fathers are forcibly separated from their children. The children, for whose benefit the process ostensibly exists, are then used as leverage by the prying state and as trophies by the custodial mother.'

House Passes Paycheck Fairness Act

anthony · 1 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'House Democrats pushed through legislation Thursday that would give women new tools to combat pay discrimination.

The pay equity measure, which passed by a 247-178 vote, would treat gender discrimination involving pay in the same as race, disability and age discrimination. The bill would allow for compensatory and punitive damages, ban employers from retaliating against workers who share their salary with colleagues, and force employers to prove that paying a women less than a man is job-related and necessary.'

Mary Winkler Gets Daughters Back

anthony · 2 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'FOX13 has learned that Mary Winkler has gotten her three daughters back. Winkler picked up her children Friday afternoon. The girls had been living with their paternal grandparents since Winkler killed her husband Matthew in 2006. Now it appears the bitter custody battle is coming to a close.
...
Winkler was convicted of manslaughter in 2007 and has been fighting for custody of her children since her release from a mental facility.

Matthew's parents, Dan and Diane Winkler, have had custody of the girls since 2006 and have been trying to adopt them.

"These young ladies have not expressed any desire to be with their mother or her family," said Dan Winkler in 2007.'

Mom blames housemate, fear of satanic cult for son's death

Matt · 3 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Marsh, 41, testified earlier Thursday that every bad act that happened to her son - being tied to his bedposts, having his feet scalded in hot water and dying from a blow to the head - was the result of her housemate Flower Tompson's power over her.
...
Marsh testified she told friends she feared Brandon would be killed by the satanic group.
"I was told Brandon was worth $3.4 million dead," Marsh said. "The groups wanted to kill him."
"Groups?" Sonenberg asked.
"(For a) sacrifice," Marsh said.
"Did you believe that?"
"Yes," she said.'

DNA testing: One in five fathers wrongly identified by mothers in Child Support Agency claims

Matt · 3 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Nearly one in five paternity claims handled by the Child Support Agency end up showing the mother has deliberately or inadvertently misidentified the father, figures show.

Since DNA paternity testing figures began to be collected in 1998-99, 4,854 paternity claims have turned out to be false after DNA testing.

Under child support legislation it is a criminal offence to make a false statement or representation, and to provide false documents or information.

However, according to the CSA, there has not been a single prosecution of a woman for making a false claim. The figures showing the number of false paternity claims have been compiled using freedom of information legislation.'

National ire over Ala. prosecuting pregnant moms

Matt · 3 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Gambril has filed charges against five other women who either tested positive for drugs after giving birth or while they were pregnant and on probation, arguing that it's necessary to bring such cases to deter drug use and protect the children. In one case, the baby was born premature and died after an hour.

Jayasinghe's group and others including the Association of Reproductive Health Professionals and the National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence say the law wasn't designed to apply to pregnant women and their fetuses. They also warn that the law could drive women to seek abortions or avoid prenatal care to escape prosecution, and they note that appellate courts across the country have overturned convictions based on similar laws.'

Depressed, repressed, objectified: are men the new women?

anthony · 4 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Every week, it seems as if there are new surveys and studies tripping over themselves to paint the grimmest possible picture of modern masculinity. They tell us that men are more neurotic and less fulfilled than ever before; that they are objectified rather than revered; that they are expected to be more in touch with their emotions and yet are criticised for it. Men appear to be confused about what they are and unsure about who they are meant to be. So with more of them feeling disenfranchised, disillusioned and disempowered, is it feasible to think of men as the new oppressed minority? Might men, in fact, be the new women? And, if so, who is to blame for making them feel marginalised?

...

Do these statistics have any bearing on the everyday experiences of ordinary men? 'I don't know if I feel oppressed, but there's a sense in which women can talk about us with impunity,' says a 32-year-old male lawyer from London, who does not wish to give his name in case his female colleagues start pelting him with rotten tomatoes. 'I've been in the office on several occasions where sweeping generalisations have been made about the general crapness of men: "Oh, all men are useless, no wonder he couldn't get the job done in time" – that sort of thing. I don't take it all that seriously – at least, not yet – but I know that I wouldn't get away with saying the same things about women.'"

Boys and the Boy Crisis Conference Video

anthony · 4 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This from an e-mail I received from Boys and the Boy Crisis (MEC):

'I wanted to let people know that the 2 DVD set of last year's Boys and the Boy Crisis Conference is now available for sale. It's 2 high quality Dvds with over 6 hours of material including all of the presentations at the conference Friday night and Saturday. Warren Farrell, Glenn Sacks, Paul Nathanson, Katherine Young, Tom Golden, Matt O'Connor, Malia Blom, Gordon Finley, J. Steven Svoboda, Stephen Baskerville, and Christina Hoff Sommers are all included in this historic video. We have tried to keep the cost low and the entire set is $24.99 with 4.95 shipping.'

Page found here.

Lawyer: Children Returned to Convicted Preacher-Killer Mary Winkler

anthony · 4 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I recently submitted an article speculating about this custody case, now its official. Excerpt:

'MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Mary Winkler, the woman convicted of voluntary manslaughter in the 2006 shooting death of her minister husband, has taken custody of her three daughters, one of her lawyers said Monday.

Rachael Putnam, a custody attorney, said the former minister's wife picked the girls up Friday from the slain man's parents, Dan and Diane Winkler.
...
The grandparents had tried to stop the supervised visits with Winkler, but the state's Court of Appeals upheld the order by a county judge. The Tennessee Supreme Court also rejected the grandparents' appeal.

Winkler was tried for murder after her husband was found slain by shotgun blast to the back, but a jury found her guilty of voluntary manslaughter after she testified about suffering from years of physical and emotional abuse by her husband.'

Prostate Cancer March

Gunner Retired · 4 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

March discussed here. Excerpt:

'To raise awareness for the City of Hope cancer center's The Underwear Affair 10K Run/ 5K Walk, presenting sponsor Jockey recently activated with a promo event in Los Angeles.

The brand last month donated underwear to hang on a clothesline spanning three blocks along the Third Street Promenade in L.A. Passersby could take a pair of underwear ornamented with a branded tag informing them about the race.

"The whole idea behind The Underwear Affair is to raise funds and awareness of cancers below the waste," Mo Moorman, director-public relations at Jockey International told Buzz. "So it was a good fit for Jockey since we have a certain specialty in that regard. For us it's brand awareness and brand relevance."'

Also see: http://www.uncoverthecure.org/

The Atlanta March passed right by our roommate's place of work.

Gunner Retired

Trainee doctor's 'hell' over false rape allegation

Anonymous · 5 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A trainee GP has told of his "year of hell" after an allegation of rape made against him by a patient was thrown out.

Dr Steven Ashenford said he had "lost everything", including his marriage and home, after the false claim.

He has been suspended by the GMC and said the ordeal had put him off working as a doctor forever. He said he was desperate now to "just get my life back on track".

Dr Ashenford, 33, was working at the Sutton Hill medical practice in Telford, Shrops, when he was arrested last October after the female patient made the allegation.

He said: "The police were in the house searching it. My belongings were taken away, my computer and my diary. I felt really violated."'

Note: His accuser remains anonymous, and has faced no punishment.

RADAR ALERT: Tell the ABA Section of Family Law to Get Their Facts Straight

Matt · 5 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Two weeks ago, we asked you to e-mail the president of the ABA to tell him (as nicely as possible) to get his facts straight. This week, we are asking you to do the same thing with the ABA Section of Family Law.

We said, two weeks ago:

On June 2, 2008, RADAR released two special reports, Myths of ABA Commission on Domestic Violence[1,2] that analyzed the 19 statements made in the flyer put out by the American Bar Association (ABA) Commission on Domestic Violence, "10 Myths about Custody and Domestic Violence and How to Counter Them."

Among the flyer's 19 claims, 11 were found to be false, three misleading, and three unsupported by existing research. Only two claims were found to be correct. And some errors are egregious.

For example, the flyer states that "False allegations are no more common in divorce or custody disputes than at any time." But this claim, which flies in the face of common sense, is debunked by research showing that false allegations increase four-fold during custody and access disputes.

The flyer represents a crass attempt by the ABA Commission on Domestic Violence to further bias the administration of family law, to falsely stereotype fathers as abusers, and to force more children into single-parent households.

We pointed out that we sent the reports to the ABA president, thereby putting him on notice of the problems with the flyer, and he had ignored our request for a response.

The ABA Section of Family Law, composed of over 10,000 members "dedicated to serving the field of family law," publish the Family Law Quarterly3, a "scholarly journal provid[ing] ... an analytical view of existing and emerging family law issues." Holding themselves out as experts in such topics as the ones covered in the "10 Myths" flyer, they know, or should know, of the shoddy scholarship and/or intentional deception that went into its creation. By not publicly disapproving of the flyer, the ABA's resident experts in family law have implicitly endorsed it.

Please contact the ABA Section of Family Law (familylaw@abanet.org) and ask, as nicely as you can, whether they are aware of the inaccuracies contained in "10 Myths" and request that they publicly disapprove of it. Let them know they are giving themselves a black eye for standing behind the ABA Commission on Domestic Violence's flyer of lies.

++
Date of RADAR Release: August 5, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

MDs urged to end prostate screening in elderly men

Matt · 5 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'NEW YORK - Doctors should stop routine prostate cancer screening of men over age 75 because there is more evidence of harm than benefit, a federal task force advised on a hotly debated topic.

The U.S. Preventive Services Task Force, which made the recommendation Monday, reported finding evidence that the benefits of treatment based on routine screening of this age group "are small to none." However, treatment often causes "moderate-to-substantial harms," including erectile dysfunction and bladder control and bowel problems, the task force said.'

CNN: No kids, no jobs for growing number of wives

anthony · 5 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Dr. Scott Haltzman, author of "The Secrets of Happily Married Women," says stay-at-home wives constitute a growing niche. "In the past few years, many women who are well educated and trained for career tracks have decided instead to stay at home," he says. While his research is ongoing, he estimates that more than 10 percent of the 650 women he's interviewed who choose to stay home are childless.
...
Davis says her life isn't luxurious. "Tuesdays are my laundry day," she says. "I go grocery shopping on Wednesdays and clean house on Thursdays." Mondays and Fridays are reserved for appointments and other errands.

But her schedule also allows for charity work and leisure: reading, creative writing and exploring new hobbies, like sewing.'

'Disturbing' details surround case of slain Toronto girl

Scottie · 6 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Here's a real tragic story. Man, this is just stupidity compounded by negligence compounded with nothing short of evil. Excerpt:

"Katelynn Sampson, 7, looked as though she might have been abused for some time, police said Tuesday.
...
Ryan said when emergency workers found Katelynn's body in an apartment in the west-end neighbourhood of Parkdale, there was evidence the Grade 3 student had been sleeping on the floor and had been subject to poor living conditions that he did not want to discuss.
...
Katelynn's legal guardian, 29-year-old Donna Irving, has been charged with second-degree murder in connection with the girl's slaying. Ryan confirmed that Irving has been charged and convicted of violent crimes in the past.
...
According to Ryan, Irving was granted sole custody of Katelynn in January, although she has had contact with the girl since May 2007.
...
Child services agencies are investigating whether they played any role in placing Katelynn in Irving's care, Ryan said."

UK: Study challenges "super-mum" myth, poses public policy questions

Anonymous · 6 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The supermum who holds down a demanding career while running the family home is falling out of favour, a high-powered academic report said yesterday.
...
Currently, most of the 2.9million children who live below the Government's poverty line come from two-parent families in which only the father works.

At the same time, Labour's flagship tax credits favour single parents over two-parent families in which the mother stays at home.

Professor Jacqueline Scott compared studies of attitudes to working mothers over the past 25 years and found that disillusionment has been escalating since the mid-1990s.'

Pregnant Robbers Leave Toddler at Crime Scene During Getaway

Matt · 6 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video report here. Caption: "What the (bleep) are you doing in my apartment?"

Should there be an IQ test before people reproduce? I am beginning to wonder.

Male bailiff used as personal servant by female judge testifies to his mistreatment

Matt · 6 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video report here. Caption: "I was robbed up here of my right. My dignity was taken. My dignity. How would you feel if it happened to you?"

Her honor allegedly had her bailiff rub her feet, make her meals and spy on other court employees.

State-sponsored misandry leaves newborn in legal limbo

Matt · 6 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Manji Yamada was born last month after eggs from an Indian donor were fertilised using the Japanese man's sperm and implanted in the womb of the surrogate Indian mother.

Her biological father split from his wife after the fertilisation process, and his former spouse no longer wants the baby.

In the absence of a surrogacy law in India, the child -- who is an Indian citizen -- will have to be adopted by her Japanese father Ikufumi Yamada, 45.

But Indian law does not allow the adoption of a girl by a single father, lawyers and doctors said.

"There is a legal complication as the father is alone and Indian adoption law says a single male can't adopt a girl," Sanjay Arya, the doctor who is looking after the baby, told AFP by phone from western Jaipur city.'

Anyone from India, do you know if single women are allowed to adopt children, in particular boys?

Immediate national-show interview opportunity for sperm-donor who has contact with his children: Act fast!

Matt · 6 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

MANN admins have been contacted by the producer of a widely-syndicated talk show asking for a possible interview candidate for their show tomorrow. This is very short notice indeed, but if you live in the New York City area or can get there by tomorrow and would like the chance to be interviewed on this topic, send an email note to MANN admins at admin-at-mensactivism.org, but you have to act fast!

'Manhunt' on for Mother Who Allegedly Abducted Her Six Children

anthony · 6 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Authorities launched a manhunt and issued an amber alert Wednesday for a pregnant woman who allegedly kidnapped her six children from her estranged husband's San Leandro, Calif., home and stole his van during a supervised visit.

The search is on for Enja Moore, 33, who is homeless and living in the Hayward, Calif., area, according to Alameda County Sheriffs Sgt. J.D. Nelson.

Just before midnight during a supervised visit, the father found that his estranged wife, six kids and van were all missing, Nelson told FOX News. He'd been in another part of the house when the children and his wife disappeared.'

Woman abducts children from home

anthony · 6 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'HOUSTON — A woman accused of kidnapping five children says she did so because their biological mother had threatened her life but now says she plans to surrender to police.

The Houston Chronicle reports 44-year-old Rhonda Tavey says she'll surrender today but no additional details were provided about the possible surrender.

Tavey and the children's mother Erica Alphonse tell different versions of events that led to police issuing an Amber Alert for the Houston children.

Tavey, who is white, said all she ever wanted was to do God's will and that she also took the children, who are black, for their own safety.'

Woman Sought in Child Torture Case

anthony · 6 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'When California police discovered an abused girl covered with scars nearly six years ago, they had no idea that the woman allegedly responsible for inflicting the torture was her mother — the friendly cashier they'd encountered at their local fast-food restaurant.

Greisy Valencia, a smiling Colombian immigrant who greeted law enforcement for years at fast-food drive-thrus in Hayward, Calif., hid a horrible secret, police said.

...

The children have been permanently placed in a home and are doing well, investigators said, but the trail to their mother, who is wanted on charges of torture, has run cold. Officials believe she may have fled the country.'

Kilts anyone? Support postal workers seeking kilts as an option

Matt · 7 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This is a rare opportunity to help with expanding the "acceptable dress" opportunities for men. Kilts have long been part of the formal and martial dress tradition of many countries. British troops, especially those from Scotland and Ireland, only stopped wearing kilts when WWI started because it was impractical to get through barbed wire with clothing that was loose. Since that time, few men outside parts of Scotland and Ireland wear kilts regularly despite their being extraordinarily comfortable and also more practical than pants in many circumstances.

A kilt is not a dress, and never has been. Still, any man wearing a kilt outside a particular venue (such as a Celtic heritage festival of some kind) is thought of by those who have little or no concept of them as a dress. Try walking down most city or town streets here in the US wearing a kilt and see what it gets you! While women can wear pantsuits, dresses, shorts, jeans, and pretty much anything else they want to, men are stuck with just a few options in terms of style and form, many of which are not very comfortable.

If postal workers here in the US get the uniform code changed to allow them to wear kilts, it would be a huge breakthrough. So please, contact the American Postal Workers Union and voice your support (note that based on this document (.pdf file), it seems these four members of the union management: Rob Strunk, Idowu Balogun, Mike Foster, and Bill Manley are the people to contact regarding Art. 26, "Uniforms and Work Clothes". Their phone and fax numebrs can be found here). You may also want the USPS to hear from you. Their email form is here and other ways to contact them are listed here.

Court Upholds Gender Disparity for Derivative Citizenship

Matt · 7 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A.: Story here. Excerpt:

'The Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday held that disparate residence requirements for unwed male and female citizens over the age of 14 who seek to transmit citizenship to a child born abroad to a non-citizen do not violate equal protection.
...
...the father must have resided in the United States for at least five years after his 14th birthday to confer citizenship on his child. In contrast, an out-of-wedlock child born abroad to a United States citizen mother had only to reside in the country for a continuous period of one year prior to birth...
...
[The appellate judge Pamela Ann Rymer] reasoned that the disparate treatment between mothers and fathers was justified because the government has a substantial interest in avoiding “stateless” children born to citizen mothers, and also a substantial interest in assuring a link between an unwed citizen father and the United States.

Although “the fit is not perfect,” she wrote, “the means chosen substantially further [these] objectives.” Thus, she concluded, the sections withstood constitutional scrutiny.'

======

Comments from Marc:
I did a case just like this when I worked for Mental Health Advocacy Services, except the client was mentally disabled and it turned out he was actually a U.S. citizen born abroad out of wedlock in Korea to a U.S. citizen father and a non U.S. citizen mother. His father had done the acts that legitimated him under the laws of his domicile. But since his citizen parent was his father rather than his mother, he had to prove who his father was and that his father performed those acts, which took a huge amount of work gathering documents from Korea, etc. He suffered from severe schizophrenia and believed he was an FBI agent, and he could not possible do all of that. He spent YEARS in detention because of this, solely because his citizen parent was his dad and not his mom. We only learned of him when a group of Quakers from Hawaii called us about him. By that time he had been detained for years. It took more than another year for me to track him down, interview him, gain his trust, gather all the evidence from all over, translate documents, prepare the right motions, etc. etc. He was finally released because he was a U.S. citizen, but that was YEARS of his life locked up for NO reason other than the sex of his citizen parent. Unbelievable. Now the 9th Circuit just upheld this same sex discrimination in the case described below.

CNN: How to know when to dump a boyfriend

anthony · 7 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Remember back when the mere mention of his name would give you a white-hot jolt to the heart? The sound of his voice was like an exquisite punch to the gut? His hand brushed against yours, and you'd get a warm swelling in the heart region?

Yeah, well these days all you feel is sick to your stomach.

Though it seems most of us spend an inordinate time trying to get one, the truth is, once you land that boyfriend you've always wanted, you discover the truth --relationships can be a giant pain in the rear.
...
...Here are a few signs:
...
• Other times when he's talking, you imagine jamming your index finger into his eye socket."

Study: Men Adopt Children at Twice the Rate of Women

anthony · 8 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Researchers also reported that women who have never married adopt children much more often than single men do. But overall, men adopt children at more than twice the rate women do, due largely to men marrying women with children from a previous relationship.
...
That's not really surprising, said Jeff Katz, a consultant on adoption and foster care issues who formerly headed a Rhode Island adoption agency.

"More women get custody of children in divorce cases, so after a divorce the mom is living with her kids and she meets a man, and they get married, and he adopts her children," Katz said.'

Judge resists feminist agenda

anthony · 8 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Anibal and Vivian Crespo were divorced and rearing their children in the same household when they had a fight, and Vivian asked for a restraining order. Anibal was not charged with any crime, but the judge issued the restraining order, which banned Anibal from his own house and thereby separated him from his children.

Anibal made several good arguments that the New Jersey Prevention of Domestic Violence Act is unconstitutional. Judge Francis B. Schultz rejected most of those arguments, but he cited a long line of cases holding that "clear and convincing evidence" is required in order to take away fundamental rights, such as a parent's right over the care and custody of his children.

...

It's time to restore basic constitutional rights to husbands and fathers by repudiating the feminist agenda that considers men guilty unless proven innocent.'

Elderly woman gets new murder trial

anthony · 8 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'An elderly woman convicted of killing her 85-year-old ex-boyfriend because she thought he was seeing another woman was granted a new trial Friday, more than two years after she was sentenced to life in prison.

A jury convicted 81-year-old Lena Driskell of killing Herman Winslow in 2005 at the Atlanta assisted living home where they had both lived, but her new attorneys argued that her defense team was ineffective.

Fulton County Superior Court Judge Ural Glanville agreed, saying Driskell's previous lawyers didn't object to key testimony and didn't press for a charge of manslaughter, which carries a lesser sentence.'

'Ahwatukee Sue' tells radio show she killed man

anthony · 8 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Tortsen Rockwood had been dead five years when "Ahwatukee Sue" broke her silence.

The father of her son hadn't killed himself in the kitchen of their Phoenix apartment in February 2001, she claimed.

In fact, she was the one who took his 9mm pistol, aimed at his heart and pulled the trigger. She did so because he wouldn't pay child support

At least, that's the story Ahwatukee Sue gave to a nationally syndicated radio show in late 2006.

Authorities say they have identified and are seeking charges against the woman behind Ahwatukee Sue, a moniker familiar to Tom Leykis Show fans since the call aired.'

Woman arrested for lying to police about rape

anthony · 8 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Police arrested a Pocono Pines woman after they say she admitted lying to investigators when she accused her ex-boyfriend of assault and rape.

Elissa Easterling, 27, is accused of lying to Pocono Mountain Regional Police by falsely accusing a man of beating and raping her.
...
She also testified in order to get a protective order against the man, under oath at Monroe County Court, that she had been raped. The protective order was granted.

When police confronted her with the evidence that she was lying, police say she admitted to making up the assaults. Easterling said the man did not harm her in any way.'

Updates on the 2008 Equal Parenting Bike Trek

Anonymous · 9 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Please visit 2008 Equal Parenting Bike Trek for news and updates. And stay tuned for more on the 2008 Equal Parenting Bike Trek! Excerpt:

'Equal Parenting Bike Trek and DC Festival Make A Top 15 Internet Content Provider. About.com covers the Equal Parenting Bike Trek for a second time and their latest coverage includes the DC Festival 2008! We were pleased that they mentioned Robert Pedersen's FRONT page Color Photo Story in the Detroit News which received significant attention and at one point reached the Top 5 of all Detroit News Articles'

Teenage Suspect in Videotaped Beating Arrested For Assaulting Boyfriend

anthony · 10 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'One of five teenage suspects in the videotaped beating of a central Florida classmate is being held on bond and is facing several aggravated assault charges in an unrelated case.

A judge set an $81,500 bond on Friday for 17-year-old Mercades Nichols.

Authorities say she threatened, stalked and injured a former boyfriend and a fellow student.

She is charged with two counts of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, three counts of battery, aggravated stalking and stalking.'

UK: Girls should be taught feminism at school

anthony · 10 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Teenange girls should be taught feminism at school to stop the growing trend of giving themselves abusive 'male' nicknames such as 'slut' and 'whore', an expert said yesterday.
...
She called for teachers to discuss feminism and suggest positive role models, who could include figures such as Virginia Woolf, suffragettes' leader Emmeline Pankhurst and even the cartoon character Lisa Simpson.

She said they are needed to overcome the negative influences of celebrities such as Paris Hilton, Britney Spears and Christina Aguilera.'

Maureen Dowd: 'Mr. Darcy Comes Courting'

anthony · 10 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'It is a truth universally acknowledged that Barack Obama must continue to grovel to Hillary Clinton's dead-enders, some of whom mutter darkly that they will not only not vote for him, they will never vote for a man again.

Obama met for an hour Tuesday with three dozen top Hillaryites at a hotel here, seeking their endorsement and beguiling their begrudging. He opened the session by saying that he knew there had been frustration about what they saw as sexism during the primary.

The Los Angeles Times reported that Hillary die-hards want to enshrine a whine in the Democratic platform about how the primaries "exposed pervasive gender bias in the media" and call on party leaders to take "immediate and public steps" to denounce any perceived bias in the future. That is one nutty idea.'

UK: Violent women 'stretching police'

anthony · 10 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'About 240 women a day are arrested for violent crime in England and Wales, according to recent figures.

Police in Scotland and Northern Ireland say, anecdotally, they have also seen an increase in female violence.

The chair of the Police Federation of England and Wales, Paul McKeever, said there was a "new phenomenon" of women using violence and joining gangs.'

"Selective Service" looming

Matt · 10 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Despite Hillary's ridiculous assertion that woman are the primary victims of war, the truth is, it's men for the most part who do the fighting and dying. And we are on the verge of going back into that in a big way.

Selective Service, The Draft, Conscription, whatever you want to call it, is involuntary servitude that governments place men into. At the risk of being accused of at least being a pessimist and at most a seditionist, we are on the verge of WWIII, and thius on the verge of a new draft, which to this day is applied only to men of a certain age. I suppose I may also be accused of being overly dramatic as well, fine. Read this and then tell me I'm rushing to judgment.

The author of that blog knows his facts. As of this writing, his latest update reads in part:

'Georgia calls for US help; Russian Air Force bombs Georgian air bases. DEBKA, the Israeli strategy and military site, states that Israeli military officers are advising the Georgian armed forces in combat operations and that 1,000 Israelis are in-combat on the side of Georgia at this time.

Kuwait has activated its "Emergency War Plan" as it and other Gulf nations prepare for the likelihood of a major regional war in the Middle East involving weapons of mass destruction.'

Note the Universal National Service Act of 2007 is currently in the Subcommittee on Military Personnel.

The blog author urges people to contact their government officials and tell them to pull back from the brink. I think that's a good idea. The lives of many men are at stake.

Newsweek: Rethinking Fathers' Rights

anthony · 11 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Despite the fact that divorce is rarely triggered by violence or abuse, the incentives to allege that a man is abusive and out of control are undeniable. They tap into age-old stereotypes about men and ensure that Mom becomes the primary custodian. Even without abuse allegations, simple rules of physics (one child cannot be split into two and two cannot be split into four) make it likely that many good fathers will be downgraded from full-time dads to alternating-weekend carpool dads. They will be asked to pay at least a third of their salaries in child support for that privilege. Simple rules of modern life make it likely that an ex-wife will someday decide that a job or new husband demands a move to a faraway state. At which point the alternating-weekend-carpool dad is again demoted, to a Thanksgivings-if-you're-lucky dad.'

Redefining violence leads to inflated statistics on DV

Matt · 11 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Oceanside by far had the highest rate of domestic violence in San Diego County last year, and the Police Department suspects the main reason may be because verbal fights are included in the statistics. Other departments don't do that.

The city's No. 1 ranking surprised police Sgt. Aaron Doyle, who helps manage Oceanside's domestic violence investigations.

There were 40 domestic violence incidents reported per 1,000 households in Oceanside, compared with four in Del Mar, which ranked the lowest, according to 2007 statistics from the San Diego Association of Governments.'

"Support? System Down" released

Matt · 11 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'LOS ANGELES, Aug 08, 2008 /PRNewswire via COMTEX/ -- "I'm a dad, not a wallet." What may prompt millions of non-custodial dads to say this phrase -- or at least think it? How is it that millions of children of divorce or separation may wonder why they can't see their beloved Dad, or sometimes Mom, more than 4 to 6 days a month, if that? These are just two of the important questions raised by Angelo Lobo, Producer and Director of the full-length documentary "Support? System Down," which examines problems within the nation's child support system.
...
The film contends that many fathers, and some mothers, can't even get their "visitation" court orders enforced. The system's unfairness can also affect our military men and women. Parents want equal parenting -- not "visitor" status. Most parents don't have to be convinced to do the right thing in supporting their children; they already are willing and able to do that. Nevertheless, many believe that the family court and child support systems treat them and their families unjustly. The children suffer the most.'

Australia: Proposal would extend family court's power to unmarried couples

Matt · 11 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The Government introduced a bill on 25 June 2008 which, if passed, will amend the Family Law Act to allow disputes in relation to property and financial matters between couples to be resolved or determined by the Family Court.'

Ed. note: The link is to the announcement converted from PDF to HTML. The original PDF-format announcement is here.

Married vs. Single: Health Gap Narrows

Anonymous · 11 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Getting married doesn't improve one's health as much as it used to, according to a new study.

Married people have historically reported better health than their never-married peers. It has generally been accepted that marriage provides social, psychological, and financial resources that improve overall health. But a new study, published in the September issue of the Journal of Health and Social Behavior, suggests the gap is narrowing, particularly for men."

Bill Clinton Promotes Circumcision To Fight AIDS

anthony · 11 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Mr. Clinton says some current prevention approaches must continue, such as condom use, substitution therapy for injection drug users and increasing male circumcision, which studies show can reduce HIV infection.

Although the HIV/AIDS epidemic is over 25 years old, he says much ignorance remains. And that can cost lives.'

Groom Arrested for Getting Too Close to Bride at Wedding

anthony · 12 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Timothy Cole quarreled with a wedding guest at a party Friday after wedding his ex-wife in Batavia, police said.

Officers knew the 45-year-old Cole from previous arrests and realized his bride had an order of protection against him. Cole was charged with first-degree criminal contempt, a felony, and ordered jailed without bail.'

Retrial begins in death of microwaved baby

anthony · 12 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Jury selection began Monday for the retrial of a woman accused of killing her month-old daughter by burning her in a microwave oven.
...
Her retrial in Montgomery County Common Pleas Court comes six months after a judge declared a mistrial in her initial trial, saying new evidence had surfaced to bolster Arnold's innocence claim.'

Boy in suitcase was cult victim, police say

anthony · 12 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A toddler whose remains were found inside a suitcase in Philadelphia in the spring was starved to death by members of a religious cult, including his mother, in part because he refused to say "amen" after meals, police said.
...
Ramkissoon, 21, was being held Monday in the psychiatric ward of Baltimore's Central Booking and Intake Center, and a bail review was postponed until Tuesday. Her public defender declined comment.

...
Ramkissoon's family said she should not be held responsible for her son's death.
...
Ramkissoon's mother, Seeta Khadan-Newton, told The (Baltimore) Sun on Sunday that it wasn't her daughter's decision not to feed the boy.

"My daughter was a victim, just like my grandson," Khadan-Newton said. "Somebody made that decision to not feed that child, and my daughter had to follow instructions.".'

Woman Wins $1.5 Million in Lawsuit Against Man She Claims Infected Her with HPV

anthony · 12 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'MUSCATINE, Iowa — A Muscatine woman has won $1.5 million in a lawsuit she filed against a man she claims infected her with a sexually transmitted disease.

Karly Rossiter filed the lawsuit against Alan Evans, of Muscatine, claiming he told her he was free of any sexually transmitted diseases before they began dating in December 2004. A few days after they had sex, Evans asked Rossiter if she had been tested for the human papilloma virus, which causes genital warts.'

RADAR ALERT: This Week, Tell the ABA Judicial Division to Straighten Up!

Matt · 12 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The last three weeks we've turned up the heat on the American Bar Association, which continues to profit from sales of its flawed fact sheet, 10 Myths about Custody and Domestic Violence and How to Counter Them (.pdf file). This publication was produced by the ABA Commission on Domestic Violence.

1. We've asked you to (politely) express your extreme displeasure to the ABA President, William Neukom: abapresident-at-abanet.org
2. We requested you contact your Representative to say "Say 'No!' to H.R. 6088," a bill that would further enrich the ABA's pockets to batter the truth about child custody.
3. Then we invited you to communicate your concerns to the ABA Section of Family Law: familylaw-at-abanet.org

BUT THE ABA STILL DOESN'T GET IT.

So are we going to give up and let the ABA continue in its ways, and allow make-believe statistics and defamatory gender stereotypes to break up more families?

This week, we are asking you to contact the ABA's Judicial Division. The Division's webpage claims it is the "most influential organization of judges in the world." Made up of over 4,000 members, they "work to support an open, fair, and impartial judiciary through [their] programs, publications and initiatives."

The ABA's "10 Myths" flyer is trying to bias family court judges against fathers trying to prove their innocence against false claims of abuse. This flies in the face of the Judicial Division's laudable goal of an "open, fair, and impartial judiciary."

Please contact the Judicial Division of the ABA at abajd-atabanet.org.

Ask them to speak out against the inaccuracies contained in the ABA's Ms. Information sheet. The ABA Judicial Division needs to tell its colleagues at the Commission on Domestic Violence, "Get your facts straight, ABA!"

++
Date of RADAR Release: August 12, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/

Boston Globe Columnists Attacks Commission on Status of Men - We Need Responses

Matt · 12 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

From Marc A.: We need responses to this piece that criticizes the NH Commission on the Status of Men. Write to the editor at letter-at-boston.com and copy the author at beam@globe.com, or use the form letter here. Letters must be 200 words or less. Excerpt:

'Who knew? New Hampshire claims to be the only state that has a Commission on the Status of Men. Lots of states have commissions fretting about women, says Dr. Joseph Mastromarino, but only the Granite State has the CSM. You can read its mission statement on the Web at www.nh.gov/csm. The commission is an outgrowth of the "men's rights" movement, which has lobbied for more equitable treatment of fathers in family court, among many other issues.

I never thought of New Hampshire as a place where men needed any kind of special protection. I was here in June for Laconia Bike Week, when super-manly motorcycle enthusiasts swarmed the highways, their pudgy legs wrapped around their ferocious, smoke-belching "hogs," a female appendage inevitably attached to the rear of their Harley. Tough guys don't drive Priuses, Alex!'

"Democratic Platform Adopted, Victory for Women "

Matt · 12 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The Democratic Platform Committee adopted a very strong platform for women this weekend in Pittsburgh. They recommitted that the Democratic Party support the passage of the Equal Rights Amendment, enforcement of Title IX, ratification of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW), reinstatement of United Nations Population Fund funding, and repeal of the global gag rule.'

Men cry foul at gender meet

Matt · 12 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Male delegates at the Gender and Media Southern Africa (Gemsa) regional conference have described the newly elected committee for the grouping as a “women’s club” after elections for the organisation’s office bearers saw no male in the executive committee.
...
“Gemsa’s motto is ‘making every voice count and counting what it does’, but how could that be achieved when men’s voices are missing in the Executive Committee. These women would have problems to attract men to champion gender advocacy because the committee would be treated as a ‘women’s club’,” said Mita.'

"Hear the other side"

Matt · 13 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'During 21 years of practising matrimonial law, I've learned that no matter how convincing the story my client tells while sitting across the desk from me, the picture will change when I hear the other spouse's version of the same events. Sometimes the change will be slight, sometimes enormous. Occasionally I can hardly believe that both people are describing the same incidents.
...
Readers, get used to this. We can expect to see many more female criminals getting off with a slap on the hand in future. Recent legal developments both in Canada and abroad have increased the scope for pleading "battered wife syndrome." And criminally inclined women, like anyone else, respond to incentives. They take advantage of opportunities. The more excuses we give them to commit crimes when the proper and rational course of action would be to walk away, the more of them will commit crimes instead of walking away.'

Dying man alienated from daughter makes last effort to communicate post-mortem

Matt · 13 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A DYING man has been told by the Family Court that he may leave a "time capsule", consisting of a letter and DVD, for the 11-year-old daughter he has not seen for five years. The main purpose is to exonerate the girl for her father's death.

...

The girl was three when her parents separated in 2000. The trial judge, Justice Le Poer Trench, said the mother was "permeated with hatred for the father" and was unwilling to foster the relationship between father and daughter.

...

Mr Holmes said the child had expressed hatred of her father from a young age. Yet the court records showed there was no abuse or serious violence.'

New Zealand: United Future proposes rewrite of family law

Matt · 13 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'United Future would reform New Zealand family law, party MP Judy Turner says.
...
"Shared parenting would mean that when both parents want custody, there will be a presumption that day-to-day care will be shared unless there are good reasons why it should not be."

Mrs Turner said research showed children benefited when they continued to have significant relationships with both parents after a breakup.'

Woman Found Guilty of Manslaughter for Killing Husband Suffered From Post-Abortion Syndrome

Matt · 13 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'SYNDEY, Australia, August 11, 2008 (LifeSiteNews.com) - Danielle Stewart, who fatally stabbed her husband Chaim Kimel with an ornamental knife during a heated argument, was today found guilty of manslaughter.
...
Dr. Reardon said that "self-hatred, hatred of the male, and hatred of men in general, were all significantly correlated to each other," and that "this constellation of problems, an increased tendency toward violence, emotional detachment, and self-destructive behaviors, would appear to be exasperated by the study group's dramatically increased rate of drug and alcohol abuse subsequent to abortion."'

Electronic cuffs planned for dads patriotsofamerica · 13 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Whenever I think that maybe just maybe we make some ground on men's issues something happens to set us way back. If you think things are bad now, if Obama makes it we are all screwed. Excerpt:

'Illinois has joined a growing contingent of states to adopt a law that will put electronic GPS tracking bracelets on men who have not been convicted of any crime, but might be involved in a messy divorce.

The plan, named in memory of Cindy Bischoff, who was attacked and murdered by a former boyfriend, was signed into law just days ago and is scheduled to take effect Jan. 1.

And while its goal of protecting women and children from out-of-control husbands and fathers is good, it goes too far and violates the civil rights of innocent fathers, according to a lawyer for a group that will challenge it.'

Male Issues Video on Trueequality.com

anthony · 14 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video here.

'What are men's issues? Watch this short flash video to get a beginning idea. Societal forces like chivalry, misandry and the onerous male sex role of provide and protect have been having the unfortunate consequence of obscuring the needs of men.'

New MRA Website: HarrietHarmanSucks.Com

Anonymous · 14 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Check out this brand new fan site dedicated to Britain's deputy leader Harridan Harmmen.

Detroit News Blogger Robert Pedersen Covers the DC Festival 2008 and the Equal Parenting Bike Trek

Anonymous · 14 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Please comment in support of the cyclists who are undertaking this cycling trek and also in support of the DC Festival 2008. Thank you MensActvism Readers! Article here. Excerpt:

'On Aug. 15-16, thousands of people will come together in support of parental rights at the DC Festival 2008.

"Parental rights are one of those natural rights that are and should be protected against intrusion by the government," said Lary Holland, head organizer of this massive event. "It is our responsibility as citizens to remind the government of its limitations."

There is tremendous support for the DC Festival 2008 based on media and blog coverage and numerous elected officials such as U.S Congressman Pete Hoekstra (H.J. Res. 97) and state representatives John Stahl (MI H.J. Res. NN) and Lamar Lemmons Jr.'

Woman accused of using car to kill man pleads not guilty

Matt · 14 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Webster woman accused of plowing into a crowd of people and killing a Greece man and injuring four others early yesterday, pleaded not guilty in City Court this morning.
...
Rochester Police said Arena had been arguing with someone in the bar and then in the lot shortly before she allegedly drove into the crowd. The nature of the dispute was unclear. Sgt. Mark Beaudrault said alcohol was not a factor in the incident.

Coleman may have recognized Arena, but he was not involved in the dispute that prompted the violence, friends and police confirmed. Arena's intended target was not known.
...
Arena's attorney Ronald J. Passero also declined to comment on the charges, but noted that the crash "was an accident."'

Big Brothers Big Sisters Agency: Men in Need (YouTube)

WakeUp · 14 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Here is a Big Brothers Big Sisters Agency recruitment ad targeted to men which starts off portraying masculinity as stupid and foolish, but then says that boys need a positive adult male role model. The second point is good, but they portray men as idiots as their first point. I used to have a big brother from the agency when I was a kid! He said when I'm older I should volunteer. But after seeing that ad I doubt I will now that I know they are bashing the same men they expect to be role models to young boys.

Here is another reason why I won't volunteer.

"Why I Cheated" - Women Fess Up

WakeUp · 14 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Here is an article about women who cheat and "why". It starts off mentioning crud about men and women cheating for different reasons and how it is usually (but not always) physical reasons for men and emotional reasons for women. They can throw in the "not always" but sometimes it seems like any woman who wants to cheat for sexual or physical reasons could do so and then use ANY of the excuses plotted out in this article.

Server Downtime on Friday, August 15

Scott · 14 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The MANN server will be down for maintenance tomorrow, August 15. Expected downtime will be 5-6 hours. Thanks for your patience during this downtime. Update: The server maintenance is complete.

Class Teaches Respect for Women to Batterers... No Women in Attendence antimisandry.com · 14 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Frostyboy on antimisandry.com led me to a feministing.com article, which included a link to this article.

~~~~~~
I was pretty amazed at the article (also available as mp3 stream) and shared it with Glenn Sacks, and figured you folks might be quite interested in this too.

REPORTER: Bunch suggests it should read, "the leading cause of injury to women is men's violence."
~~~~~~

Naturally, no women are ever violent, commit d/v and so the program does not appear to need to help them deal with their sexism/violence/etc.

Mom Suffocates Five Sons-- No Jailtime

Anonymous · 15 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The 32-year-old woman, named only as Steffi K., had been found guilty of killing the boys, aged between 3 and 9 years old, in the village of Darry in the northern state of Schleswig-Holstein.

Police had found the bodies of the five boys in a house in Darry last December. The woman gave herself up and admitted doping the children before killing them.

"She told the court and the psychologist that she had heard voices threatening the children and she wanted to protect them. She killed them because she believed she was protecting them from these evil powers," said a spokesman for the court in Kiel.'

I don't know what to say, I mean no jail? No Death Sentence? She gets help? It sounds like a joke to me.

Fathers 4 Justice protester causes 15-mile traffic jam

Anonymous · 15 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Fathers 4 Justice protester dressed as Batman today brought Britain's busiest stretch of motorway to a standstill during rush hour.
...
Tailbacks stretched for 15 miles after computer engineer Geoffrey Hibbert scaled a gantry on the London orbital motorway at 7am and unfurled a banner with pictures of his eight-year-old daughter.
...
The 48-year-old says he has been barred from seeing her since his former partner left last August, despite lodging several court appeals.'

3-Year-Old Boy Dies in Overheated Truck- No Charges Filed

anthony · 15 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'HOUSTON — A 3-year-old who was left in his mother's truck in 90-degree heat as she worked her shift at a Houston hospital died after wriggling free from his car seat, climbing into the front seat and apparently trying to start the ignition or open the windows, officials said.
...
Another 3-year-old boy died in a hot vehicle in Houston late Wednesday afternoon.

No charges have been filed in either case.'

What about helping boys?

anthony · 16 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'When girls were thought to be in trouble academically, we said "There must be something wrong with the schools," and we changed them to be more girl-friendly. But there is no similar push to assist boys academically. Instead, when boys don't do well in school, we blame the boys.

I had a Petaluma City Schools trustee -- a man -- tell me that the reason boys are behind girls academically is "because they're stupid." I had another man from the Petaluma City Schools -- a teacher -- tell me the reason was "because they're lazy."'

Lynnwood woman made up rape story, police say

anthony · 16 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Lynnwood woman who told police Monday a stranger came into her apartment and sexually assaulted her has changed her story, police said.

The woman, 18, admitted to detectives the assault had not occurred, Lynnwood police Cmdr. Jim Nelson said. She provided a statement to police that said she hadn't intended for things to get this far and that the entire incident did not happen.

...

Detectives will refer the case to the Snohomish County Prosecutors office who will determine if there's enough evidence to charge the woman with false reporting.'

The Wages of War: Alcoholism, Suicide

anthony · 16 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Multiple combat deployments to Iraq are increasing serious mental health problems among soldiers, triggering drug and alcohol abuse and contributing to record suicide levels, suggest reports out Thursday at the American Psychological Association meeting in Boston.
...
More time in Iraq means heavier exposure to violence, which leads more soldiers to develop symptoms of post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) and depression, Castro told the psychology meeting. By their third tour to Iraq, more than a quarter of soldiers show signs of mental problems, such as PTSD, and it's about 1 out of 3 for those exposed to heavy combat, according to a U.S. Army Surgeon General report in March on more than 2,000 soldiers.'

MANN Readers - Please thank Instapundit and Protein Wisdom

Anonymous · 17 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

PLEASE take the time to thank the two news blogs below. Great way to get more coverage...thank them for covering our issues otherwise they will not know there is a demand for such stories.

1) Instapundit - when he links to your blog be prepared for roughly 250,000 visitors in less than 24 hrs.

Why is Instapundit coverage so huge?

A simple "plug" like this brings informs roughly 250,000 readers of OUR issues. Thank Instapundit by writing: pundit-at-instapundit.com

2) Protein Wisdom - another top ranked news blog. Please thank Protein Wisdom by commenting on this story which requires NO account and would take you less than a minute to complete.

Thank you for taking the time to help all of us achieve future media coverage.

30% of those named as fathers bilked of child support unjustly

Anonymous · 18 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"WASHINGTON – More than three years ago, a Maine district court judge ruled that Geoffrey Fisher no longer had to pay child support for a child that wasn't his.

But that didn't stop the state from revoking Fisher's driver's license and coming after him for thousands of dollars it says he owes in back payments.

...
As the nation experiences an unprecedented increase in unwed motherhood, more men are finding themselves named as "fathers," for purposes of child support, simply because of their ability to pay, say several recent studies.

It's called "paternity fraud," and one state that examined the problem found as many as 30 percent of those paying child support were, indeed, not the biological fathers of the children being supported."

"The Pill" and mate selection

Matt · 18 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I saw this and despite the source of the report (LiveScience, aka JunkScience) it reminded me of some comments in The Decline of Males. Among other things he speculated that rendering so many women "biologically pregnant" may have unpredictable effects on men, both physiologically as well as psychologically. While plenty of studies exist reviewing the effects of BCPs on women's bodies, I am unaware of any that discuss the effects of having the natural phermonal balance from women's bodies altered and how it might affect men. Excerpt:

'Based on the work by Claus Wedekind, a University of Lausanne researcher who preformed similar studies in the 1990s, Roberts suggests a likely reason for the pill's effect on a woman's odor preferences. The pill puts a woman's body into a hormonally pregnant state (the reason she doesn't ovulate), and during that time there would be no reason to seek out a mate.

"When women are pregnant there's no selection pressure, evolutionarily speaking, for having a preference for genetically dissimilar odors," Roberts said. "And if there is any pressure at all it would be towards relatives, who would be more genetically similar, because the relatives would help those individuals rear the baby."

So the pill puts a woman's body into a post-mating state, even though she might be still in the game.

"The pill is in effect mirroring a natural shift but at an inappropriate time," Roberts told LiveScience.'

By the way, I am not advocating the end of BCPs, far from it. Just saying that the range and scope of birth control studies has traditionally been limited only to its effects on women, and that it is likely not just BCPs but other factors have a significant impact on men, and that this avenue seems to have been completely ignored by medical science.

Countdown to a male BCP continues... but be aware, there are forces at work that don't want to see it come to market. Read some on this here. Is it any surprise though? I feel that lobbying for and defending the MBCP should be, along with fathers' rights, a primary focus of MRAs, as it will have as significant if not more significant an impact on men's daily lives and relations with women as the FBCP did. Excerpt:

"In fact, a strong case can be made that the delay in the male pill has been caused by an underdeveloped male social movement. The sense of urgency to develop a MBCP has been quelled by the dissenters and the disconnected. Men need to be aware of those forces that work to prevent the advent of not just the male pill, but a cohesive and powerful men's rights movement itself."

News re salaries and the sexes

Matt · 18 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Some surprising and not-so-surprising news on the salary front. Send this to your favorite screeching fem-bot next time she throws the salary line at you. Excerpt:

'Men who choose to go into Christian ministry will find that they dominate the field but make less than their female counterparts. A survey of church employees conducted by Christian Today International's Your Church ministry found that women made up only 6.3 percent of full-time solo pastor positions, but they reported 10.4 percent higher total compensation.

Women are generally acknowledged to be underdogs in the compensation world, but a report from American Association of University Women Education Foundation noted that women choose college majors that pay less—majors such as education, psychology, and healthcare. Men choose more lucrative majors, like engineering and mathematics.
...
A 2007 study from University of Northern Iowa looked at 2000 census data and found that cohabitating lesbians earn about 10 percent more annually than married women. They also earn more than cohabitating, unmarried, heterosexual women'

Chivalry, sexism, ignorance, or something else?

MR · 18 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I heard this statement today on Fox TV News. Here's the story and the statement.

Missing Florida Toddler's Mom May Be Released From Jail

"I feel that there is some humanity in that woman that would not allow her to kill that cute little girl," Leonard Padilla said. "I've just got to believe that."

In your opinion, does this kind of perception stem from chivalry, sexism, ignorance, or something else?

IYO, why would anyone who knows the facts believe a woman would not kill her cute little girl?

IYO, when's the last time you heard someone say that there is some humanity in a man accused of being invovled in a case involving a missing child?

IYO, is the media overlooking the hard facts, easily available from HHS, that more children are killed by neglect and abuse in a year, than all the female victims of Intimate Partner Homicide, and that those child victims are in the age range 1 to 8-years-old, and that most of those kids are killed by their mothers?

Perpetrator Relationships of Child Fatalities, 2005

Age Of Child Fatalities, 2005

UK: False Rape Accuser Gets One Year

Anonymous · 18 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman was jailed yesterday after her false claim of rape resulted in an innocent stranger being arrested.

In an attempt to make her family feel guilty following an argument, Kerry Saunders invented a story that she had been sexually assaulted after a night out.

She was overheard making the allegation by a passing police community support officer.

Instead of admitting it was just a story, she told the officer that her attacker was a black man driving a blue car.'

Boy Must Pay Child Support To Rapist

anthony · 18 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Pickerington couple and their son are fighting for custody of a baby born to a Lancaster woman charged with having unlawful sex with the boy, who was 15 at the time of conception.

A paternity test shows that the teen is the father of the baby born April 7 to Jane C. Crane, who was 19 when she became pregnant. Now, a judge has ordered him to pay $50 a month in child support and set visitation at seven hours a week.

Crane, meanwhile, faces criminal charges. A Fairfield County grand jury indicted her last month on two counts of unlawful sexual conduct with a minor, a fourth-degree felony. Conviction carries a maximum sentence of 18 months in prison and a requirement to register as a sex offender for 25 years.'

University offers Degree in Men's Studies

Michael · 18 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I just think that this a positive sign. I'm sure someone may nit-pick it but I think it's positive. Excerpt:

"The Women's Movement, the Peace Movement, and the Industrial Revolution, all have made sweeping cultural changes that have gravely affected the lives of men, generally redefining "male" identity. Some men have welcomed these changes and made the adjustment. Others have actively resisted the forces intent upon redefining them. In the wake of this cultural evolution, many men find themselves lost and confused, angry and alienated. Most of the changes have come about so rapidly that orderly social adjustment has been impossible."

Man Sues Columbia over Women's Studies

MR · 19 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This story is all over the news media sites, and all over the blogosphere.

'Feminist' Columbia University demonizes men, lawsuit claims

"Anti-feminist lawyer Roy Den Hollander sued Columbia University Monday, accusing it of turning feminism into the school's religion - and teaching that men are "the primary cause for most, if not all, the world's ills."

Hollander says Columbia discriminates against men by teaching a doctrine that scapegoats men for all of history's troubles.

In a suit filed in Manhattan Federal Court, he complains that the Ivy League school in Morningside Heights uses federal money to fund a "religionist belief system called feminism."

41-YO former teacher accused of 'having sex' with 12-YO boy

Anonymous · 19 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Similar story to what you've read before. She's old enough to be his mom. Excerpt:

'FLINT, Mich. (AP) - Authorities accuse a former Michigan elementary school teacher of having sex with a 12-year-old boy she was tutoring at her home.

Allanah Benton-Wells of Flint was arraigned Tuesday on two counts of first-degree criminal sexual conduct. The 42-year-old could face life in prison if convicted.'

Rhode Island Murderer to Be Paroled, Despite Sex With Guard

anthony · 19 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The woman who became the youngest person ever convicted of murder as an adult in Rhode Island will be paroled this month, despite having a sexual relationship with her work-release job supervisor.
...
Corrections Department Director A.T. Wall says Gonzalez won't be disciplined because department policy holds only supervisors responsible for sexual relationships with inmates.'

Off-duty female police charged in beating of man

Matt · 20 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Most female cops, like male ones, are good cops, and good people. However arguments in favor of churning out as many female cops as the academy can because of the more "communicative feminine style" of policing are based largely in stereotype. Also, suggestions of the moral superiority of women as compared to men being a better hedge against corruption or bad deeds are hard to defend when things like this are happening. Excerpt:

'Two off-duty female cops yelled, "We are the police!" - and then pistol-whipped a Bronx man in what authorities call a case of road rage.

NYPD Officers Michelle Anglin, 37, and Koleen Robinson, 24, were charged with assault, gang assault and criminal possession of a weapon for the Williamsbridge beatdown.
...
Anglin and Robinson were suspended and stripped of their guns as they were arraigned Sunday on the gang assault charges. Robinson's bail was $10,000 cash or bond. Anglin's bail was set at $25,000 cash or bond.'

Ex-wife breaks down door, takes items from house, and isn't arrested

tac0965 · 20 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. An ex-wife breaks in to house where she no longer lives to retrieve baby items. She busts the door open with a crowbar. She isn't arrested. Would a man be treated the same if the tables were turned? Will he have to pay for the damages to rental property? Excerpt:

'An Omaha man comes home and finds someone has broken in and stolen several items. But was a crime really committed?

At 2-and-a-half, she is the love of Justin Snelling's life. "Her name is Calee. I love following her around doing whatever she wants to do."

Last Tuesday, Snelling returned to his home at 60th and Birch and found his door pried open, though curiously only Calee's things were missing. "I go in and I notice diapers are gone, DVDs are gone, potty chair is gone, wipes are gone, everything that was new that I hadn't opened yet is gone."'

No-Fault a Split Decesion locksley2k · 20 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

New York State is one of the few remaining states that does not cater to the No-Fault doctrine of divorce. An article in today's Newsday, No-Fault a Split Decision, tackles the debate concerning the movement for NY to cross over to the no-fault side.

However as you read the article it becomes very evident that it should have been titled "How No-Fault Affects Women", and I mean women only. The reporter, Melanie Lefkowitz, does not have one iota of text in her story about how it will affect men. She has the audacity to mention how this form of divorce will help prevent female suicide. We are all aware that men make up 70% of suicide victims.

You can contact Ms. Lefkowitz here melanie.lefkowitz-at-newsday.com.

Carey Roberts: No Room for Men at the Abuse Shelter, but Fido can Tag Along

anthony · 20 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Some of these same shelters that turn away battered men are now telling their "abused" women, "And remember to bring Fido!"

That's right, the American Humane Society has recently launched its "PAWS" program - Pets and Women's Shelters, get it?

So gals, if you need a place to dry out and want to take along your pooch, go to the Center for Abuse and Rape Emergencies in the Tampa Bay area. The dedicated C.A.R.E. staff has established a "foster pet parenting program" just for you!

Or head over to Quigley House in Orange Park -- they have a kennel right on shelter grounds. Its canine center features a dog bathing area, benches to accommodate family visits, and of course a waste containment station.'

Music vid: "Stay at home dad"

Anonymous · 21 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

A send-up of gangster-esque rap maybe? I don't follow the trends. At first I was a little taken aback but in the end I decided to roll with it. Losing your sense of humor tends to mean your losing you perspective. So in the vein of "No publicity is bad publicity" I'll give this little ditty a thumbs up. If you want to deconstruct it and what not go ahead.

Father-bashing makes it to the Olympics

Daringest · 22 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Father-bashing makes it to the Olympics. Well, at least to a blog about the Olympics called Fourth-Place Medal. Apparently, someone didn't see Michael Phelps' father in the spectator stands so he decided to use the opportunity to portray him as a bad father. The article is at The mystery of Michael Phelps' missing father.

"During Michael Phelps' races, camera shots of his mother Debbie were a fixture on NBC. The network showed endless replays of her falling to her seat after that memorable 100 butterfly finish. She even watched one race on camera with Cris Collinsworth, squeezing his knee the entire time. And after her son won his eighth gold medal, Debbie was all over NBC getting interviewed by Bob Costas, Matt Lauer and Meredith Viera. Michael's sisters, Hilary and Whitney were also in Beijing cheering on their little brother. All this coverage of the Phelps family led to one obvious question from our readers: Where was Dad?"

Teen sex gets male ex-teacher 15 years in jail

Anonymous · 22 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Think of the disparity in sentencing. Women found guilty of similar offenses often get parole, or far fewer years in jail, if any. Excerpt:

'GOLDEN — A former Evergreen band and music teacher was sentenced Tuesday to 15 years to life in prison for sexually assaulting a 16-year-old student.

William Robert Eisenman, 33, was convicted in June of sexual assault on a child by a person in a position of trust as a pattern of conduct and providing alcohol to a minor.'

Duke rape false accuser to write book

Anonymous · 22 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Cyrstal Gail Mangum, the notorious false rape accuser, is writing a book. She is also graduating from school. Don't you think she should serve 3 years in prison and 10 years on probation for the crimes she committed? Excerpt:

'DURHAM (WTVD) -- Since three former Duke Lacrosse players were declared innocent of rape and assault charges, the alleged victim in the highly publicized Duke Lacrosse case has remained out of public view until now.

In a press release, Crystal Mangum's manager has announced plans to release a tell-all memoir entitled "The Last Dance for Grace: The Crystal Mangum Story."'

New web site seeks to reconnect fathers and children lost to divorce

Matt · 22 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

http://www.lostfathers.org/

'LostFathers.org is an online community.

Our mission is to establish contact for fathers (and mothers) who, after a divorce or separation, were denied to normal visitation rights and lost contact with their children.

On this website you can, after registration, post your own profile and we will approach your children, or you as a father, to establish new contact with each other.'

Platform Standing Committee itinerary For Democratic Convention

anthony · 22 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

With the Democratic National Convention upon us I thought you guys might want to read this report (.pdf file). I certainly applaud identifying fatherhood as a necessity but we see the same rhetoric: fatherless homes are the sole result of male irresponsibility. As for the 'opportunity for women' section, its the same B.S. MANN battles on a daily basis. It's frightening this language appears in a document sponsored by our government. Excerpts:

p. 18: 'When women still earn 76 cents for every dollar that a man earns, it doesn't just hurt women; it hurts families and children. We will pass the "Lilly Ledbetter" Act, which will make it easier to combat pay discrimination; we will pass the Fair Pay Act; and we will modernize the Equal Pay Act.

We will invest in women-owned small businesses and remove the capital gains tax on startup small businesses. We will support women in math and science, increasing American competitiveness by retaining the best workers in these fields, regardless of gender. We recognize that women still carry the majority of childrearing responsibilities, so we have created a comprehensive work and family agenda.'
...
p. 50: 'We need them to understand that what makes a man is not the ability to have a child–it's the courage to raise one. We will support fathers by providing transitional training to get jobs, removing tax penalties on married families, and expanding maternity and paternity leave. We will reward those who are responsibly supporting their children by giving them a tax credit and we will crack down on men who avoid child support payments and ensure those payments go directly to families instead of bureaucracies.'

Tulsa man is declared father of child because his name is similiar to real father's name

tac0965 · 22 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. A Tulsa man is told by DHS that he is required to drive 200 miles to take a DNA test to prove he isn't a child's father. When he is unable to, he is made the father by default and has money docked from his Wal-Mart paycheck. He only started to get a break when a lawyer is provided to him by the church. All this happens even though the mother doesn't know the last name of the father of her baby! Excerpt:

'Tulsa athlete Micheal Thomas swears he never met Lawton drug user Tiffany Dickson.

Dickson says she never met him.

That didn't stop the Oklahoma Department of Human Services from getting Thomas declared the father of Dickson's baby daughter and badgering him until he dropped out of college, forfeiting a football scholarship.

...
"Tiffany said that she knows his first name is Michael, but she is not sure of his last name," the report said. "Tiffany believes that Michael is running from the law."

Reached by telephone at her mother's house in Hollis, Dickson told The Oklahoman that she told her DHS worker she thought the last name of the father was Thomas and that he lived in Lawton.'

Female Olympian loses medals due to doping tests, blames husband

Matt · 22 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'BEIJING (AP)—Lyudmila Blonska was stripped of her Olympic heptathlon silver medal Friday, the highest-profile athlete kicked out of the Beijing Games so far for doping.

The International Olympic Committee said Blonska tested positive for the steroid methyltestosterone after finishing second in the heptathlon last Saturday behind teammate Nataliia Dobrynska.

...
The IOC said she expressed “shock” at the results and couldn’t understand how the banned substance wound up in her system. Though she apologized and said she felt ashamed, Blonska blamed her husband, who has served as her coach for five years, for the failed doping test.

“She expressed that she trusted him to take care of her training and diet,” the IOC said. “She indicated that they had expressly agreed that she would not take any prohibited substances. However, her relationship with her husband was currently conflictual.”'

EEOC: More men filing complaints of sexual harassment

anthony · 22 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'OKLAHOMA CITY – More men are filing sexual harassment complaints, according to data from the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

The percentage of harassment complaints filed by Oklahoma men with EEOC and related state agencies all but doubled over a 10-year period, from 8.8 percent in 1997 to 17.4 percent last year.

Nationally, the percentage of sexual harassment cases with male complainants has doubled since 1990, from about 8 percent to 16 percent in 2007.

...

Hammons mentioned one current case in which a man whose female superior slapped him on the butt later fired him after overhearing him tell co-workers he did not like such treatment and was going to make a complaint.'

India: DV Act Challanged

Anonymous · 23 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Men's groups have challenged the validity of India's DV Act. Story here. Excerpt:

'CHENNAI: As many as five petitions are pending before the Madras high court, challenging 23 provisions of the Domestic Violence Act which they say are misused by women to harass innocent husbands. Now planning to join the list of petitioners is the Chennai-based Association for Protection of Men's Rights, which believes that investigation into cases filed under Domestic Violence Act are usually not fair.
...
Elangovan blames overzealous women's organisations, saying they often blow up marital disputes and make it a dowry issue, thus ruining relationships and careers.'

Obama chooses Biden, VAWA champion, as running mate

Anonymous · 23 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Great, another chivalric blowhard sellout may get another promotion... to VP. FYI, Biden is the chief architect of VAWA.

Biden Wants Legal Brigade for Domestic Safety

http://endabuse.org/vawa/

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Violence_Against_Women_Act

Woman Attempts To Kidnap Ex-Virtual Boyfriend In Reality

Matt · 23 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video report here. Caption:

"A woman wanted in the bizarrely complicated attempted kidnapping of her former virtual boyfriend has been apprehended after a multi-state search."

Crazy is as crazy does.

Since when did women's studies pose a legitimate threat to men?

Broadsword · 23 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Op-ed here. Excerpt:

"This week, while you were distractedly waiting for one of the presidential candidates to just go ahead and pick Michael Phelps as his running mate, a Manhattan lawyer sued Columbia University for discriminating against men.
...
His beef is not really with women's studies but with the way it spreads the "religion" of feminism, again helped by federal money, which he contends violates the establishment clause.
...
Men's studies exists in the broader academic world, although Columbia doesn't have a men's studies department. It explores such subjects as "paradigms of fatherhood" and "gendered violence." And according to Harry Brod, editor of the scholarly book "The Making of Masculinities: The New Men's Studies," it's an outgrowth of the feminist movement. "If Roy Den Hollander really understood what men's studies was," Brod told me, "he wouldn't be in favor of it."

...
"It's a belief system and, like all religions, it's an irrational one," Den Hollander said. "A feminist is someone who was born as a female and because of that believes they're superior to men and that females are innocent until proven guilty and that guys are primarily always at fault."

According to some posters here men's studies aren't feminist? What say you?

RADAR ALERT: URGENT: Take Action Today on Biden Selection!

Matt · 24 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Whether you are a Democrat or a Republican, whether you plan to vote for Barack Obama, John McCain, or none of the above, this message is of vital importance.

Sen. Barack Obama recently released an announcement naming Sen. Joseph Biden as his vice presidential running mate. As we know, VAWA is Sen. Biden's signature legislation. Biden has bragged, "What I'm most proud of in my entire career is the Violence Against Women Act."

Oddly, most members of the voting public don't know that important fact. So it's up to us to turn that around.

The next 72 hours – between now and the beginning of the Democratic convention on Monday afternoon – offer an extraordinary opportunity for us to get that message out. So we are asking each and every person reading this Alert to take 10 minutes today, Sunday, and Monday.

Today, we are asking you do the following:

Practically every newspaper in the country has set up a blog on its website. Today, we'd like you to go to the blog and made sure everyone on the blog knows the Violence Against Women Act is Biden's brainchild. Then explain why VAWA has been so harmful to families and children.

Feel free to refer to RADAR's Special Report, A Culture of False Allegations: How VAWA Harms Families and Children (.pdf file). For more information, visit the RADAR website at http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Make sure your comments are respectful and polite.

IF WE ARE GOING TO REFORM VAWA, EVERY LAWMAKER AND VOTER MUST HEAR THE WORDS, "FIX VAWA NOW!"

++
Date of RADAR Release: August 23, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

UK: False Rape accuser gets 8 months

Anonymous · 25 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A binge-drinking mother has been jailed after falsely accusing an innocent taxi driver of raping her. Joanne Rye, who kept up the lie for 20 months, was told by a judge her behaviour was despicable and was handed an eight-month prison sentence.

...

The mother-of-one caused great shame and disgrace to devout Muslim Sherekhan Kali and his family after claiming that he dragged her down an alleyway and assaulted her.

...

The court also heard the week before she made the rape allegation, she had used racially insulting language to Mr Kali.

...

But jailing Rye for a 'modest' eight months, Judge Crawford Lindsay, QC, said he had no doubt the matter was so serious there had to be an immediate prison sentence.'

Scots men forced to suffer in silence from domestic abuse

Matt · 25 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Article here. Excerpt:

'SCOTTISH men who are attacked by their violent partners are being left with nowhere to turn, failed by an under-resourced system, victims and campaigners have told The Scotsman.

There is no tailored facility for male victims of domestic abuse north of the Border, and many are instead being shunted to unsuitable services.

And the Scottish Government insists that general counselling services, such as Victim Support, are enough – even though female sufferers have bespoke services.

Now a new organisation, Men's Aid Scotland, is seeking charitable status to secure funding to provide the counselling and advice services which currently do not exist.'

Ed. note: bespoke = "custom-made". Mr. Editor here had to look that one up himself. :)

RADAR ALERT: URGENT: Mr. VAWA Himself is the Vice Presidential Nominee?

Matt · 25 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Saturday, Barack Obama named Joseph Biden as his vice presidential running mate. It was thanks to Sen. Biden's tireless efforts that the Violence Against Women Act was first passed in 1994.

So the choice is clear: Either we speak out now about the colossal injustice that VAWA has become, or we learn to accept the consequences.

Yesterday we asked you to get on the blog of your local newspaper – or any blog for that matter – and make sure everyone knows that, in Biden's own words, "What I'm most proud of in my entire career is the Violence Against Women Act."

And word is already getting out! Yesterday Marc Rudov published an edgy column titled, Will YOU Elect GynObama & VAWA Joe?.

Between now and the beginning of the Democratic convention Monday afternoon, we have an incredible opportunity to get our message out.

So today, we are asking you to think of any mailing lists you have, or any of the listservs you are on, and pump out this critical message:

"Yesterday, Barack Obama selected Joseph Biden as his running mate. Most persons don't know that the Violence Against Women Act is Sen. Biden's signature legislation. But the Violence Against Women Act is causing far more harm than good. VAWA takes $1 billion in federal seed money, and turns it into $20 billion in social pathologies. The conclusion is clear – we need to Fix VAWA Now!"

Of course, if you want to expand on, shorten, or modify that message, that's perfectly fine. But the most important words to get out are, "Fix VAWA Now!"

Whether you are a Democrat or a Republican, whether you plan to vote for Barack Obama, John McCain, or none of the above, it is absolutely vital that we get the word out now: "Fix VAWA Now!"

++

Date of RADAR Release: August 24, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/

Nip and Tuck in Real Life

Anonymous · 25 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A CELEBRITY plastic surgeon who allowed a patient to perform oral sex on him before he gave her a nose job is fighting to keep his medical licence.
...
Dr Mendelsohn, 50, admitted he did not attempt to stop a 22-year-old patient performing oral sex on him during an after-hours consultation in May 2005.
...
After the woman left the surgery, she asked her boyfriend to take her to the police, where she pressed sexual assault charges against the doctor.

The NSW Director of Public Prosecution later dropped the charges, on the basis there was no reasonable prospect of a conviction.'

UK: Well-known TV presenter says British TV is biased against white males

GaryB · 25 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Jeremy Paxman, a pretty outspoken British TV presenter, has spoken out and said that he thinks the TV industry in the UK is biased against middle aged white men. The BBC reports it here. Excerpt:

'Paxman, 58, said: "Do I think it's a man's world in television? That is the most ridiculous question I have been asked all week.

"The worst thing you can be in this industry is a middle class white male.

"If any middle class white male I come across says he wants to enter television, I say 'give up all hope' - they've no chance."'

The journalist then named five women TV executives including BBC One controller Jay Hunt, Channel 4 head of news Dorothy Byrne and Dawn Airey, who will soon become Channel Five's chief executive.

"Is this evidence of some male conspiracy keeping women down?" he said.

Of course, the BBC being what it is, it then devotes more words than that to a misandrist female writer who completely disagrees (unsurprisingly). I guess it's great that his point of view and comments are appearing on the BBC, not quite so great that they are shot down so strongly in the article, but any news is good news when it comes to our cause.

Obama/Biden: Escalating the War on Fathers and Families

anthony · 25 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Tragically -- but true to the radical feminist agenda -- the Obama/Biden Democratic ticket portends an escalating war on boys, men, fathers, and families. On Father's Day 2008, Sen. Obama could have spoken on any number of topics. His choice was to castigate African-American fathers and blame fathers, and fathers alone, for the ills of the African-American family.
...
So, what then does Sen. Biden bring to the ticket? Sen. Biden brings the divisive Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) which he originated, expanded, and vigorously supported in subsequent years. Unfortunately, substantial evidence now indicates that VAWA not only fails to protect women from domestic violence but in many cases increases their risk of harm and contains much fraud. What VAWA does best, however, is squander billions of taxpayer dollars annually to finance the war on fathers and families.'

UK Readers: Please sign equal-anonymity rights petition

Matt · 26 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Petition is here. From the petition text:

"There is no plausible argument for releasing the name of the accused as this does nothing to further justice, but only serves to punish them outside of the judicial system. The only punishment for rape, should be passed down by a judge, not by newspapers, their peers, or their employers. Therefore revealing their identity is an unjust punishment without basis in english law."

Another female teacher gets light sentence for sexual assault of student

tac0965 · 26 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. A Milwaukee teacher sexually assaults a student. The prosecution "allows" her to plead guilty to fourth degree sexual assault. Her sentence will be probation, 25 days in jail on work release, and sex offender registration for 2 years. She will not be able to teach-- but only in Wisconsin. Excerpt:

"Originally charged with second degree sexual assault of a child, 27-year-old Sweet pleaded guilty to fourth degree sexual assault Tuesday. It was part of a plea deal after she admitted to sexually assaulting her 14-year-old student."

Files untangle tales from missing Fla. girl's mom

Matt · 26 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Even after photos emerged of this "mom" out having fun less than a day after she reported her daughter missing, the authorities still weren't quite sure it might be her. This is the same "mom" who had a bounty hunter post bail for her since he thought it just couldn't be her, no way, no how.

What do they need, a picture of her doing the kid in with a large sign reading "I am doing my kid in!" strapped across her chest? Excerpt:

'Casey Anthony tried to give her missing 3-year-old daughter up for adoption before she was born, but her mother wouldn't let her, according to legal documents that paint the 22-year-old Florida woman as a perplexed, scheming and unbalanced person who repeatedly defended obvious lies in police reports.

The 400 pages released by prosecutors this week leave little hope that Caylee Marie Anthony will be found safe. Anthony says her daughter has been missing since June 9, but she didn't report it until more than a month later. She faces charges of child neglect, obstruction and making false statements.

The documents include a poem Anthony wrote on July 7, eight days before she reported her daughter missing: "What is given, Can be taken away. Everyone lies. Everyone dies."'

Man Dies After Falling on Butcher Knife While Trying to Get Kids Out of Locked Car

anthony · 26 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. The first thing that came to mind when reading this story is the wife isn't closely scrutinized for her involvement. Don't get me wrong, she's innocent until proven guilty, but if it was mom who tragically 'fell' on a knife, the husband would be in severe trouble. Excerpt:

'CHARLOTTE, N.C. — A man who grabbed a knife to try to get his two young children out of a locked car died when he fell on the blade, Charlotte police said.

The Charlotte Observer reported that 22-year-old Miguel Angel Rivera Lemus died Sunday afternoon at Carolinas Medical Center after being stabbed in the chest.

Charlotte-Mecklenburg police were investigating but said Lemus' death appears to have been an accident.

Lemus and his wife had dropped by their apartment briefly before planning an errand when they realized they had locked their children and keys in the car, authorities said.'

Woman wanted on two counts of murdering her infants

anthony · 26 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Two days before she was to stand trial on charges she murdered her newborn daughter, Alicia Leonor Banuelos took a bad situation and made it much worse.

The then-31-year-old resident alien from Mexico had lost custody of her eldest daughter, Lyric Garcia, in 1997, when police charged her with the first-degree murder of her other daughter — an infant they said Banuelos left to drown in a toilet after giving birth.

...

Palantine officials charged her with first-degree murder. Lyric, her toddler with Garcia, was placed in her sister's custody while Banuelos awaited trial. She had monthly supervised visits with the child as she prepared for the trial. Police said on that autumn day in 1999, she told her sister that she was taking Lyric to the mall's restroom. She never returned.'

Her FBI Profile has more details.

"She's happily married, dreaming of divorce"

Matt · 26 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Seems like CNN is going more and more the NYT route these days. A content-pull from "the Big O"'s articles is a dead giveaway, in my book. Read this piece of loveliness here. Excerpt:

'Nor is Will the Very Bad Man that I've made him out to be. Rather, like every other male I know, he is merely a Moderately Bad Man, the kind of man who will leave his longboat-sized shoes directly in the flow of our home's traffic so that one day I'll trip over them, break my neck, and die, after which he'll walk home from the morgue, grief-stricken, take off his shoes with a heavy heart, and leave them in the center of the room until they kill the housekeeper. Everyman.
...
No. Your husband is not your best friend. Your best friend is your best friend. If your husband were your best friend, what would that make your best friend -- the dog? When a woman tells me that her husband is her best friend, what I hear is: I don't really have any friends.'

So, she dreams of divorce. I suggest to her husband that he actually go get one.

Attorney Suing Columbia over Women's Studies Course Speaks

lance · 27 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

For those of you in New York on Thursday, a chance to show your support.

From Facebook Announcement:

Lawyer and self-proclaimed "anti-feminist" Roy Den Hollander is suing Columbia University for offering Women's Studies courses, claiming it is sexist and discriminatory against men. This follows lawsuits against various NYC nightclubs for offering "Ladies' Nights". He'll give a short talk briefing us on the case against Columbia and then answer any questions from the audience. All welcome.

Feminism Past and Present

RandT · 27 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

A recent lecture on the history of feminism and the suffragist movement, delivered by Camille Paglia. A relatively more objective (and less fawning) account that should make an interesting and informative read for MRAs. Excerpt:

'My final recommendation for reform is a massive rollback of the paternalistic system of grievance committees and other meddlesome bureaucratic contrivances which have turned American college campuses into womblike customer-service resorts. The feminists of my baby-boom generation fought to tear down the intrusive in loco parentis rules that insultingly confined women in their dormitories at night. College administrators and academic committees have no competence whatever to investigate crimes, including sexual assault. If an offense has been committed, it should be reported to the police, so that the civil liberties of both the accuser and the accused can be protected.'

Ditto: Woman Accused Of Teen Sex Sentenced On Lesser Charge

tac0965 · 27 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Again, we see that prosecutors readily offer bargain deals to women who sexually assault boys, but throw the book at men who do the same to girls. Sexual Assault is bargained down to child abuse in this article...no comment on what the sentence will be. You would think that someone who had to be extradited from one state to another would receive a fair sentence.

Someone please post any article...any article...on a man who received the same type of deal!! Excerpt:

'BATTLE CREEK, Neb. -- A woman accused of having sex with a 15-year-old boy will be sentenced for a lesser charge in October.

Tammy Walnofer was originally charged with first-degree sexual assault for an incident from 2005.

Last week, she pleaded no contest to felony child abuse.'

DNC Convention Speech: Hillary Lies Twice in One Sentence

Anonymous · 27 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Hillary Clinton was able to include two lies in one sentence Tuesday night as she criticised John McCain in her speech to the Democratic National Convention. She said, "And in 2008, he still thinks it's okay when women don't earn equal pay for equal work."

Lie number one is that John McCain believes that it is OK that women don't earn the same as men do for the same work. McCain may not support affirmative action programs that give women an advantage in education and employment, but I really doubt that he supports pay discrimination against women.

Lie number two is her assumption that in 2008, men actually do earn more than women for equal work. Her lie is based on a study that shows that working women, on average, take home less money than working men. Factors, such as seniority, education, and the difficulty or the scarcity of workers, are not considered in the study. Careful analysis of the study has shown that there is really no wage discrimination against women when all these factors are considered.

As Warren Farrell has written so eloquently in his book "Why Men Earn More," "Why would anyone ever hire a man, if he/she could get a woman to do the work for the same money."

Man faces up to 50 years in prison for impregnanting girl

tac0965 · 27 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

A man accepts "plea bargain" from prosecutor, pleads no contest to first degree sexual assault. He faces up to 50 years in prison when sentenced in October. (No, he won't get to plead guilty to just child abuse like some female suspects are able to.) Excerpt:

'A Fremont man accused of impregnating a 15-year-old has pleaded no contest to one count of first-degree sexual assault.
...
Bowers' sentencing in Dodge County District Court is scheduled for October 6. He faces up to 50 years in prison.'

Casey Anthony Offered Conditional Immunity

anthony · 28 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Results taken from air samples reveal that a body was decomposing in the trunk of a car driven by the mother of missing Florida toddler Caylee Anthony, a local TV station reported.
...
Anthony has been offered a conditional immunity deal by authorities if she helps with the search, MYFOXOrlando.com reported, but she only has until Thursday to accept the deal, which is contingent upon concrete information that leads to the discovery of Caylee or her remains.'

2:55 PM Update: Looks like the bounty hunter who had posted her bail is relenting. The price of nymphotropism indeed... that, and a dead little girl coupled with an absence of justice makes for yet another textbook case of it.

UK: X Factor girl who made false rape claim against her ex-fiance walks free

Michael · 28 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A woman who auditioned for the X Factor has walked free from court after crying rape against her former fiance.
...
When police confronted Capon with discrepancies in her story a day later she confessed that she had made it all up and was charged with wasting police time.
...
Officers spent 156 hours investigating the false claims, the court was told.
...
After the hearing, Mr Tysoe said: 'I hate her. I don't think she realises what she's done.'"

British towns are designed for men, and exclude women?

GaryB · 28 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Except:

'A study by Cambridge University says planning projects and urban regeneration schemes tend to cater to men better than women, despite the two living their lives differently.

Travel is one example. Studies show women make more complex journeys than men, dropping children off at school, going to work, getting the shopping before going home.

In contrast, men tend to just travel straight to work and back again.'

If you read the article, it basically states that towns are failing women because:

-Not enough public transport
-Not enough schools and creches near workplaces, which restricts where they can work
-Not safe enough at night - they worry about their safety when on foot
-Not enough lighting at night
-Not enough public toilets
-Parks are for sports, when women (apparently) want ponds and ducks

So, guys don't feel unsafe at night, don't use buses or need to urinate when out? Guys don't do the school run - and it doesn't matter what our work choices are? It's a complete pile of crap, of course, and the article posts from readers thankfully show that other people see that too. Feel free to leave your own response.

UK: An article that actually states that boys should be treated as boys not girls

Michael · 29 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Boys stink. In the past 50 years their reputation has plummeted. In the 21st century they are seen as bad, mad or sad. T-shirts for little girls say “Perfect Princess”, their brothers' say, “Bad Boy”
...
Everyone does them down. The only advertisements about boys are for washing powder. When a primary school in Cornwall discovered that its reception year contained only boys, the teacher was treated as a heroine for taking them on.
...
...They don't necessarily need a male teacher, but they do need one who understands the importance of exercise as much as empathy.

The 1950s got it right. Boys like hanging around in groups analysing motors rather than emotions and then coming back for a hug with their mother. They need hobbies such as sailing, fishing, football, cycling and surfing to focus them, or they will end up feeling redundant. They prefer missions that don't just include tidying up their room.'

New South Wales: Young girls using more drugs than boys nbdspcl · 29 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. New research has revealed more young women and girls in New South Wales are using drugs than their male counterparts.

The Nationwide survey shows five percent of NSW females have tried illicit substances over the last year compared with just over three percent of boys.

UK: Another false rape accuser gets jail

Anonymous · 29 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Imagine being married to that... Excerpt:

'A naval officer who seduced her former lover and then accused him of rape was today jailed for 12 months.

Communications officer Erin Casson met submariner Brian Eaton for a sex session - three months after their relationship ended - at the home of her new boyfriend, who was away.

But she later told police Mr Eaton had forced his way into the house in Portsmouth threatened to kill her and then raped her.
...
The 27-year-old of Portchester, near Fareham, Hampshire, denied perverting the course of justice. But a jury at Portsmouth Crown Court took less than an hour to find her guilty.'

Woman found guilty of microwaving baby

anthony · 29 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A mother was convicted Friday of killing her month-old daughter by burning her in a microwave oven, with jurors rejecting a defense attorney's claims there was evidence that someone else was responsible.

China Arnold, 28, showed no reaction when the jury's verdict was announced and then lowered her head, looking down at the defense table.

Relatives in the courtroom cried and covered their faces with their hands.

She was found guilty of aggravated murder and faces the death penalty when sentenced.'

Bounty hunter to revoke Casey Anthony's bond

anthony · 29 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A bounty hunter said Thursday that he will revoke the bond of a Florida woman suspected in the disappearance of her toddler daughter as new evidence suggests the possibility of a sad outcome in the case.

A law enforcement source with knowledge of the case told CNN affiliate WKMG reporter Jessica D'Onofrio that DNA evidence had matched a strand of hair found in the trunk of a car linked to Casey Anthony with her daughter, Caylee.

On Wednesday, a law enforcement source close to the investigation told CNN investigators have also found chemical evidence of human decomposition in the trunk.'

Denise Harvey gets 30 years for having sex with teen

anthony · 29 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Denise Harvey, 40, of Vero Beach, was sentenced to 30 years in state prison for having sex with a 16-year-old who was a high school friend and baseball teammate her son's.
...
Before sentencing she asked the court for mercy. Meadows requested a non-jail sentence of community control.

Vaughn — at the urging of prosecutors — ruled her guilty of having sex with the 16-year-old five times during high school baseball season in 2006. The judge sentenced her to 15 years for each offense. But only two of the terms will be served consecutively, one after the other. The other three will be served at the same time as the others.'

Carey Roberts: Senator Biden's VAWA Cover-Up

anthony · 29 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Amidst the hoopla surrounding Sen. Joseph Biden's ascendancy to the right hand of Barack Obama, something was curiously missing. Over the last 15 years, Biden has repeatedly bragged to his friends and colleagues, "What I'm most proud of in my entire career is the Violence Against Women Act." So why no mention of his legislative pride-and-joy amidst the flurry of text messages, press releases, and staged public appearances?

The answer is, VAWA has become something of an embarrassment to the good senator.

...

Forget everything you learned in your high school civics class about due process, innocent until proven guilty, and equal treatment under law. VAWA-inspired laws have carved out an Alice-in-Wonderland world in our legal system in which any partner disagreement qualifies as domestic "violence," in which persons never qualify "offender" with the word "alleged," and in which a person so accused can seldom restore his good name.'

"An all-out battle for women's votes begins"

anthony · 30 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'In 1984, Walter Mondale's choice of Geraldine Ferraro as his running mate shattered a glass ceiling as old as the republic, thrilled feminists and helped create a gender gap among voters that has aided Democrats ever since. That was 24 years before another woman, Sarah Palin, was named to a national ticket, and this time, it is conservatives who think they have seized the political advantage.

...

Palin herself framed her selection in historic terms yesterday, noting it came "88 years almost to the day after the women of America first gained the right to vote," and she seemed to go out of her way to pay homage to Clinton, while declaring that she would carry on her quest to become the first woman elected to national office.

"It was rightly noted in Denver this week that Hillary left 18 million cracks in the highest, hardest glass ceiling in America," she told the crowd. "But it turns out the women of America aren't finished yet, and we can shatter that glass ceiling once and for all."'

Men-as-dogs, castration theme frames 'humor' piece

Proud_to_be_a_man · 30 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Utterly astonishing misandry! And from the usually pretty sensible Daily Mail too. I know it's supposed to be a 'humorous' piece, but it's impossible to imagine a similar article with the genders reversed getting published in the mainstream media. Read it here. Excerpt:

"Yes, she is thinking of getting him neutered in the near future, although pleaded with us not to mention this in front of him. 'I know we shouldn't anthropomorphise men, shouldn't assume they feel as we do, but even so,' she said.
...
She hopes the neutering will reduce any remaining dominance - 'so wearisome, all the male dominance stuff' - and will also stop him from 'roaming' for bitches. 'I wouldn't mind so much, but he roams late at night using those very expensive phone numbers. It's costing us a fortune.'"

Unbelievable.

Housing mess hurts single women the most-- of course

Matt · 30 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'While the real-estate market was expanding, single women benefited as never before. But when the boom went bust, guess which segment was among the biggest losers.
...
Over the past decade or so, single women have become a major force in the housing market. The proportion of single female homebuyers climbed from 14% in 1995 to 22% last year, according to the National Association of Realtors. And by 2010, single women will make up about 28% of homeowners, Fannie Mae estimates.

But those gains haven't come without a price. Several studies have shown that women -- and women of color, in particular -- are more likely than men to be targets of subprime and predatory lenders, and that many of the women who have lost their homes to foreclosure could have qualified for lower-cost loans. And although there are no data comparing foreclosure rates between men and women, subprime loans have a higher rate of default. So with foreclosures soaring, experts say women are at particular risk of losing their homes.'

I guess single men can just go diddle themselves if they are in the same boat. Yes, let's forgive all loans to women who bet badly (correction: were misled by others, probably men) on the housing market but let all the men suffer the consequences of their ill-advised decisions.

You see, there's always a solution!

"Girl Power at School, but Not at the Office"

Matt · 31 August 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Then I left the egalitarianism of the classroom for the cubicle, and everything changed. The realization that the knowledge and skills acquired in school don't always translate at the office is something that all college graduates, men and women, must face. But for women, I have found, the adjustment tends to be much harder. It was certainly hard for me — I lasted only nine months in my first job out of college.
...
RECENTLY I had a conversation with a male friend, a reporter in his mid-20s, about how hard it is to ask for money and negotiate for raises. He looked puzzled that I'd have an aversion to something that he does with ease, telling me: "When I want a raise, I just ask for it. And even if they say no, I'll keep asking for it."

The American Association of University Women found that men who are a year out of college make 20 percent more in weekly pay than their female co-workers do. Why? Because my friend and scores of other young men understand the central tenet of a bigger paycheck: ask and you shall receive.'

Still a lot of men-are-bad junk in this article, though. She claims there are men raised in a "different era" going around hamstringing young women with their sexist attitudes, etc. What this piece does do is state what has needed stating plainly in the MSM for a long time: At work, you don't get just because you have a better recall of the Periodic Table or because you happen to be nice and cooperative, and so are rewarded. Out in the real world, you don't get unless you put forth the effort necessary to get, and show in a measurable way that you are deserving as well.

In fact, I'd argue that young women have an easier time in the workplace because their youth draws more positive attention from both sexes vs. young men's youth, which is categorically deemed to show inexperience and a lack of skills. I have yet to work some place where a starting-out male college grad seemed to get a leg-up for no clear reason, but have definitely seen it when it comes to just-graduated starting-out women.

It's good the author has realized what she has discussed. It's bad though she still sees things through the feminists' eyes. Maybe she'll recover but it takes time after all that collegiate indoctrination. But I notice that the very fact she wrote such an article and had it published in the NYT (at the tender age of what, 22 or 23?) sort of discredits her basic premise, which is young women aren't getting paid enough attention or getting enough credit. When was the last time you saw an article in the NYT or some similarly-circulated paper written by a young man complaining that he can't seem to get anywhere at work because no one takes him seriously for whatever reasons? I doubt you'll ever see such in print, maybe because young men have been so acclimated to being thought less of such that they don't even notice it. But maybe you won't because instead of pointing out the issues and showing some sympathy, such younger men are told to shut up and get back to work, stop complaining, etc. Just maybe.

Woman is held over 'fake rape'

anthony · 1 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A BAHRAINI woman has been arrested for reporting a false rape case to police in Isa Town.
...
She later changed her story, saying she was out with one of the men, when the other two turned up and all three raped her. But the told prosecutors during questioning that the woman had actually been in a relationship with all three of them and that they never had sex with her against her will.
...
The woman has currently been detained on charges of reporting a false case to the police, while two of the men have been charged with theft. All defendants will remain in custody until their case goes to court next week.'

UK: Teenager Gets 'Counselling' After Making Up Rape Claim

anthony · 1 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A 16-year-old girl has been handed a 12 month referral order including counselling sessions after falsely accusing a man of raping her, Yourmaidstone reports.

Maidstone magistrates heard the teenager had claimed a 19-year-old youth had dragged her into his home and raped her.

But she concocted the story after having consensual sex with the man she accused, as she had a boyfriend.'

UK: 'Just trying to be one of the boys'

anthony · 1 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. British women make up 65% of college students yet the higher education system is too masculine? I suspect they'll be a major government based college initiative for women to gain 'equality'. Excerpt:

'The research, based on in-depth interviews with 10 male and 10 female students at a leading international school, demonstrates how the masculine environment still makes it harder for women to fit in. It also shows that both the male majority and the female minority of students appear to accept as an inevitability that business is done according to male rules.
...
More subtle strategies are needed to challenge students to understand how gender shapes organisational culture and practices, the study argues.

Introducing examples of less traditional business women and men into the curriculum would show that “working with gender diversity is part of what it means to do business”. So would inviting people from diverse backgrounds to teach case studies.

Another approach is to include diversity training in induction programmes, says Ms Kelan. This would give students an understanding of their own biases and stereotypes and a reference point for their subsequent teamwork.'

Canada: Few male teachers, but does it matter?

anthony · 1 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Theories about why so few men choose to become teachers, particularly at the elementary level, are well-discussed in education circles: the perception that teaching is a "female" profession continues; the pay, especially in the early years, is lower than other fields; the notion that men who choose to work with young children could be viewed as predators persists.

A question that sparks more debate is this: Does having male teachers matter?
...
"There's been this equation between how boys do in school and having male teachers, and somehow having a male teacher will make boys better learners," Wallace said. "What they need is really good teachers. And a really good male teacher? Great. A really good female teacher? Great. What we need are really good teachers who are able to engage students at all levels."'

Circumcision problems impair HIV prevention: study

anthony · 1 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'African health workers need more training and better tools to circumcise men and boys safely for HIV prevention, according to a World Health Organisation (WHO) study chronicling "shocking" rates of complications.

As many as 35 percent of males circumcised by traditional practitioners in Kenya's Bungoma district suffered complications such as bleeding, infection, excessive pain and erectile dysfunction from the procedure, the WHO researchers found.

"Other common adverse effects reported were pain upon urination, incomplete circumcision requiring recircumcision, and laceration," they wrote, estimating 6 percent of patients had life-long problems as a result.'

Kenyan doctor decries circumcision

anthony · 1 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"I WOULDN'T HAVE VENTURED into the sensitive debate on circumcision if it did not have direct consequences for my children, and the posterity of the Luo community and other non-circumcising communities around the world.

However, the debate has been fuelled by research carried out in Kenya and Uganda and published in January in BJU International.

...

But if you get circumcised, know that they are amputating your foreskin. The sensitivity you feel, not only in that skin, but the surrounding tissues, will be drastically diminished."

Excerpts from the forthcoming book "The War on Fatherhood"

anthony · 1 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"The problem—the systematic discrimination, persecution, and now criminalization of fathers by virtue of their classification as “non-custodial parents” by the courts—has been in existence for the better part of 30 years.

The problem shows no sign of abating. Largely speaking, it is an invisible problem. The first question that needs to be asked and answered is: Why has there been no progress in all this time?

Finger-pointing is a staple of the Fathers Rights community. It has always existed because it is quite natural for a failed movement to explain away its failure by assigning blame."

Q&A: Understanding ‘Guyland’ With Pro-Feminist, Michael Kimmel

anthony · 1 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Leaders of colleges for traditional-age students spend a lot of time worrying about the behavior of male undergraduates — and specifically the misbehavior of many through excessive drinking, hazing, and abusive behavior toward women. A leading sociologist and gender scholar, Michael Kimmel, has just published a new book that offers an inside look at this young male culture, Guyland: The Perilous World Where Boys Become Men (HarperCollins). The book covers male development from ages 16 through 26, and features extensive discussion of campus life. Kimmel responded via e-mail to questions about his work.'

.....

Kimmel from Wikipedia:

Michael Scott Kimmel (*1951) is an American sociologist. His focus is pro-feminism. He teaches at the State University of New York at Stony Brook in New York and is the editor of Men and Masculinities. Kimmel is a spokesperson of NOMAS (The National Organization For Men Against Sexism)[1].

Eligible men as "product"

Matt · 1 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article decrying the relative shortage of eligible men in Australia here. Read this quotation:

'“There is simply less product for 30-something women, in particular, to choose from,” he said.

"In the old days, we believed Mr. or Mrs. Right would show up someday, but as we remain single for much longer, and are far more mobile, the chances are more remote," Salt told Reuters.'

"Product". What's funny (ie, sad) is the speaker is a man.

So they are wondering why Australian men seem to prefer life in the field vs. life in the city. Well if even a man from the city views other men as 'product', we can just imagine why.

Large medical center and teaching hospital to host Men's Health Day on Sept. 12

anthony · 2 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The University of Rochester Medical Center is hosting "Men's Health Day — Take Time Out For Your Health" from 8 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 12 ... The free event will include discussions with top men's health specialists, hands-on demonstrations, and a healthy breakfast and lunch.'

Ireland: Spiritual event on issue of male suicide at festival

anthony · 2 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'THE organisers of the Electric Picnic festival, which kicks off this Friday, are to highlight the issue of Irish male suicide during the three-day event.
...
“We have arranged for five people, all of whom have been affected by Irish male suicide, to light the temple on Sunday,” said Mr Reynolds.

More than 35,000 people are expected to attend the festival this year, headlined by the Sex Pistols, My Bloody Valentine, Franz Ferdinand, Underworld and George Clinton the P Funk Allstars. The festival runs from Friday, August 29th to Sunday, August 31st.'

"Mental health and gender: Stress agender"

anthony · 2 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'...New research shows that women are more likely to be stressed by workplace relationships while men are more affected by change and workload.
...
The findings, based upon a study of just over 900 respondents, seem to support psychologists' theories based on studying behaviour and hormone release in the genders, which suggest that stressed men are likely to become aggressive, while women resort to gossip and bitching*.
...
Work relationships appear as the primary stress factor demonstrating the largest difference between the genders, with 42% of females citing relationship difficulties at work, compared to 8% of males...'

---

*Yes, that's what the article says. I didn't just add it for amusement. :)

Site Advertises Gov't Grants only for Women

anthony · 2 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Site here. Excerpt:

"It's true, Free Government Grant Money for Women is being given away and can be used to help you buy a new home, repair your home, pay rent, pay mortgage payments, pay utility bills, purchase a new car, pay for groceries, pay childcare expenses, pay for fuel, pay general living expenses, pay for academic tutoring, purchase clothing, purchase school supplies, pay legal services, pay summer camp expenses, pay off debts, pay for music lessons, pay for art lessons, pay for any extracurricular activities, pay real estate taxes, medical expenses, general welfare and so much more!"

Women Only NY Weekend Tours Supported By State Agency

anthony · 2 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original http://womenonlyweekends.com/. This women-only tour is supported by the New York State Department of Economic Development. My tax dollars as a NY State resident is contributing to this blatant discrimination. "No Guys, No Dishes, No diapers' appears on their home page. Oprah Winfrey's endorsement appears on the home page.

Note the disclaimer at the bottom of the home page:

"'I Love NY' is a registered trademark and service mark of the New York State Department of Economic Development; used with permission.

If this agency is using the big apple logo, their recognized by the state."

Fathermag.com: Why Is Daddy in Jail?

anthony · 2 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Then there's Bruce, who was a truck driver in Boston and who came home one day to find his things on the street, the locks on his doors changed, and his wife's new boyfriend already moved in. Angry and bewildered, Bruce kicked in the door and began shouting. (He did not strike anyone.) His wife called the police, who arrived and took Bruce away in handcuffs. She got a restraining order preventing any contact with his three children. When his son was hospitalized with an illness, he was not allowed to visit. Eventually Bruce was allowed to see his children at a supervised visitation center with his wife and her boyfriend present in the next room.'

US: House Resolution 182 seeks to villify men and fathers

anthony · 2 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Here is a section of proposed Joint Resolution 182 of the United States Congress, intended to compensate for what the resolution's proponents claim is "gender bias" in the judicial system....

'Whereas, as a result of this gender bias, many myths are that (sic) women make false allegations of domestic violence or child abuse, and most particularly of child sexual abuse, during divorce and custody proceedings;

Whereas false accusations by women are in fact rare, occurring no more often than do other false reports of crimes, such as bank robbery.'"

Ed. note: I looked on Thomas but could not find the full text. Can anyone post a link? Thanks!

Smoking claimed to be more dangerous for women

anthony · 2 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. It's now a problem because women are not getting heart attacks later than men? Last I checked smoking is not considered the healthiest habit for men either. There's no way society could ever tolerate women having the same life span as men. I also notice that the term 'natural differences' is used. Is it possible the lower amount of money Western Culture spends on men's health contributes to the disparity? Excerpt:

'MUNICH, Germany - Women who smoke may develop heart disease at almost the same age as male smokers, wiping out the natural difference between the sexes, doctors said Tuesday.

In research presented to the European Society of Cardiology, Norwegian researchers said that women who smoke have heart attacks nearly 14 years earlier than women who don't smoke. For men, the figure is about six years.

"This is not a minor difference," said Dr. Silvia Priori, a cardiologist at the Scientific Institute in Pavia, Italy. "Women need to realize they are losing much more than men when they smoke," she said. Prior was not connected to the research.'

R&B singer Usher plans `One Night Stand' Tour -- "Ladies Only"

anthony · 3 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. I wonder if we can add Usher to the Boycott List? Excerpt:

'NEW YORK — Usher is preparing a tour for ladies only.

The R&B singer revealed in a recent interview with The Associated Press that he will soon announce details of his "One Night Stand" tour. He said specific dates are still being worked out for about 15 "intimate" venues.

Asked why he wanted to perform a "ladies only" tour, Usher said he relishes the challenge.'

Ghana: DV against men on rise

Matt · 3 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'More men are being beaten by their wives over domestic chores.

Disagreements over shared domestic responsibilities in homes now top cases reported at the Domestic Violence and Victims Support Unit.

The Public Relations Officer of the Unit, Inspector Irene Oppong, said in an interview with the Times in Accra, that complaints by men increased from 49 to 113 due to quarrels over domestic chores.'

Republican Women Turn to the Gender Card

fibtastic · 3 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Female Republicans embraced identity politics with gusto today, touting the virtues of presumptive vice presidential nominee Sarah Palin and suggesting that any attempts to question her qualifications amounted to blatant sexism.

In a "hear me roar"-style press conference, a parade of elected officials and GOP operatives issued a lengthy defense of the Alaska governor's credentials, and former Massachusetts governor Jane Swift said Palin has been the target of "an outrageous smear campaign."'

Wow... I'd really hoped that a McCain administration would, while not outright championing men's rights, at least provide a bulkhead against the tide of irrational gynocentrism that's sweeping the western world. Turns out McCain has no problem pandering to emotional, irrational, and destructively entitled women as long as they label themselves "conservatives".

Relatedly, submitted by anthony:

Article here. Excerpt:

'ST. PAUL, Minn. - John McCain's campaign could be panicking or politicking with its claim that sexism lies beneath any questions about Sarah Palin's past.

They say they're not panicked — that the Alaska governor's spot on the GOP ticket is secure — so that leaves room for just one conclusion for now: McCain's political team is playing the gender card to appeal to women, and bashing the media to solidify support among conservatives.
...
"The scrutiny you are giving her is so darn unfair. It is really indecent," he told MSNBC's morning crew. "She is being asked questions like, can you, as a mother ... be vice president? Whoever asked a man?"

And so he went, from one TV camera to the next.

CBS: "Where are the feminists?"

ABC: "Give the woman a chance ..."

Fox News: "I'm at the point of (being) really angry."'

VP candidate Palin's daughter's pregnancy highlight US sex law silliness

anthony · 4 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Essay here. Excerpt:

'The daughter is 17 years old. Her boyfriend is 18 years old. She is five months pregnant. From that we can assume that they, at the very latest, had intercourse sometime in May. The girl will turn 18 in October. We do not know, nor is it anyone's business, how old she was the first time she had sex with her boyfriend.
...
What would have happened had the young couple in question engaged in youthful sexuality in Arizona? There the young man would become both a "father-to-be" and a felon at the same time. Any sexual act by an 18-year-old and a 17-year-old is a felony in Arizona, even if the girl's mother is running for vice president of the United States.'

India: Game show contestant gang-assaulted for defending himself against woman' attack digitalhermit · 5 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

A contestant on the game show 'DadaGiri' in India apparently doesn't realize that physical violence will be included in the program. In a surprise move, he receives a vicious slap from a woman posing as a dominatrix. But instead of just taking it, he immediately hits her back and asks "How can she slap (me)?"

Then, all hell breaks loose as crew members decide to come to the aid of the woman and deal out punishment to the man who is obviously just defending himself.

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania: Boys' school opens amid objection from feminists

Matt · 5 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Seems public-funded girls/women-only schools, etc. are fine. Publicly-funded programs for boys/men? They will be resisted at all turns! Excerpt:

'Boys' Latin of Philadelphia, one of the city's newer charter schools, began its second year on Wednesday, aiming to be an educational beacon in the financially and academically troubled district.

Because it's a single-sex public school — one of four in the city — Boys' Latin faced huge opposition and almost didn't exist.

...
The Women's Law Project and the American Civil Liberties Union of Pennsylvania had opposed Hardy's charter application based on its exclusion of girls.

...
New rules implemented by the U.S. Education Department in 2006 allow same-sex education whenever schools think it will expand the diversity of courses, improve students' achievement or meet their individual needs.

But ACLU attorney Mary Catherine Roper said those regulations conflict with the Constitution and Title IX, a federal law banning sex discrimination in education. There are nonexclusionary ways to improve education, such as decreasing class sizes, she noted.

"There is no justification for offering kids different opportunities based on their gender," said Roper.'

No justification based on gender? Meanwhile, loads of girls-only programs of all kinds exist all over the place. Is she objecting to those? The hypocrisy is amazing to behold!

EU wants to ban 'sexist' TV commercials

Matt · 5 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'MEPs want TV regulators in the EU to set guidelines which would see the end of anything deemed to portray women as sex objects or reinforce gender stereotypes.
...
The new rules come in a report by the EU's women's rights committee.

Swedish MEP Eva-Britt Svensson urged Britain and other members to use existing equality, sexism and discrimination laws to control advertising.
...
She added: "Gender stereotyping in advertising is one of several factors that have a big influence in efforts to make society more gender equal.'

Guess there'll be a review panel made up of feminists for each commercial an advertises wants to air? I wonder if anti-male stereotyping will also be on their hit list?

Soldier Suicide Rate May Set Record Again

anthony · 5 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'(CBS/AP) Soldier suicides this year could surpass the record rate of last year, Army officials said Thursday, urging military leaders at all levels to redouble prevention efforts for a force strained by two wars.

If all are confirmed, that means that the number for 2008 could eclipse the 115 of last year - and the rate per 100,000 could surpass that of the civilian population, Col. Eddie Stephens, deputy director of human resources policy, said at a Pentagon news conference.

"Army leaders are fully aware that repeated deployments have led to increased distress and anxiety for both soldiers and their families," Army Secretary Pete Geren said.'

Ellard conviction overturned in death of Victoria teen Reena Virk

Scottie · 5 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The B.C. Court of Appeal has overturned Kelly Ellard's second-degree murder conviction and ordered a fourth trial for her in the death of teenager Reena Virk, who was found beaten and drowned in a Victoria waterway in 1997.
...
[Virk] was 14 when she was swarmed and beaten under a bridge in Saanich on Vancouver Island on Nov. 14, 1997, by a group of teenagers who were mainly girls, police said. Battered and bloodied, Virk managed to get up and stagger across the bridge toward a bus stop to make her way home. But two of the original attackers dragged her back, hit her again and left her in a waterway."

Does it get any more brutal than this?

CBS: Why Men Die Sooner

anthony · 5 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'(WebMD) Listen up, guys. It may be time to drop the bravado and consider these sobering statistics:

Coronary artery disease (CAD) is three times higher among men who are clinically depressed.

Male suicides outnumber female suicides in every age group.

Homicide and suicide are among the top three causes for death among males between the ages of 15 and 34.

By the age of 85, women outnumber men in the U.S. 2.2 to 1; this rises to 3 to 1 if they reach their 90s.
...
Male mortality is shorter in part, Legato says, because males are more fragile and inherently vulnerable than females from birth. And unlike women, who have fought hard to have their specific health needs validated and addressed, men haven't demanded equal treatment.

"It is a need that has never been addressed," Legato says. "Men have been tremendously neglected and it doesn't have to be that way."'

"Caylee's mom" released yet again

Matt · 6 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Casey Anthony returned home from jail Friday to face renewed protests over the disappearance of her 3-year-old daughter and new questions about whether her family is making money off the case.
...
Denise Freideman and Anita Castillo spent several hours searching for Caylee on Thursday with Texas EquuSearch, a volunteer search-and-recovery team working on the case. The Clermont women planned to return to the task Friday, but first they stopped outside the Anthony home.

"We just couldn't believe she is being released," Castillo said.
...
Meanwhile, a Department of Children and Families spokeswoman confirmed Friday that the state agency has an open child-abuse investigation involving Anthony.'

Police: Mom, Teen Daughter Kill Man For $15

anthony · 7 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'PASADENA, Texas -- Two teenage girls are accused of stabbing a 75-year-old man to death in a robbery that netted them just $15, and police say the mother of one of the teens helped put them up to it.

Dannette R. Gillespie, 38, gave knives to her 15-year-old daughter and Vanessa Anne Ocampo, 19, then waited in the back seat of their car while the teens robbed and killed Eugene Palma, according to a probable cause warrant.

All three were charged with capital murder Friday. It was not immediately clear if they had attorneys.'
...
"He would've given them money -- that's the crazy thing," Kim Nawrot, a bartender at Palma's bar, told the Houston Chronicle. "He was the kind of guy that would've given anyone the shirt off of his back."

Gillespie and her daughter, who is not being identified because she is a juvenile, were arrested in Pasadena. Ocampo was arrested in San Antonio. They were being held without bond.'

Parental Rights Legend Minister Ronald Smith Has Passed

Anonymous · 7 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Minister Ronald Smith has passed. An incredible father, husband, man, friend, and much more. A huge advocate for fathers having equal time with their children after divorce. Excerpt:

'A tragedy. A shock. Extremely sad news for all who knew this special man. Minister Ron Smith was one of the best friends I have ever known. Minister Ronald Smith passed away on Friday September 5, 2008 from a heart attack. I am still very shook up from this news and will let our readers know more as soon as I get it. He was such an incredible man and just recently brought the 2008 Million Man March to Michigan. Minister Ronald Smith was also the founder of the National Fatherhood Summit and was one of the co-founders of the Family Preservation Festival. Minister Ronald Smith was co-author of the book Cheated. Minister Ronald Smith was the CEO of Children Need Both Parents, Inc. Most of all Minister Ronald Smith was an amazing father and husband!'

MySpace page provides resources for abused men

Matt · 8 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via email: I thought this might be of interest to you, especially for Men's Activism. There is a published article I wrote that they just posted at the site in the Blog Section [at the top] and the struggles for males in finding help for recovery concerns around abuse & trauma, Recovery For Men - What's Different. Excerpt:

'I remember attending a Speak Out against sexual abuse and a male survivor got up to share – he shared a letter sent to him from a well-known advocate against abuse towards women. This letter was full of hate towards men and she let him know in no uncertain terms that she did not care what had happened to him and she did indeed blame men. This man who had written for help was once a young boy, a child, just as I was and what are we as men supposed to feel and think when we get such responses?'

UK Mother 'drowned four-year-old daughter in bath because she was ashamed of her disability'

Anonymous · 8 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Opening the case for the prosecution Michael Chambers QC told Chester Crown Court that Mrs Hill was "ashamed and embarrassed" of her daughter's condition and murdered her in a "determined and planned act".
...
"The defendant put her in the bath and drowned her by holding her head under the water for a long time until she was dead."

After the killing, Mrs Hill dressed her daughter's body as if nothing was amiss and drove her around for eight hours, drinking several glasses of wine, before taking her to hospital claiming she was unconscious, the jury heard.
...
Mrs Hill, who denies murder but admits manslaughter, told police she had been suffering from suicidal thoughts before the killing and later suggested she was psychotic.
...
"The defendant couldn't cope with caring for Naomi and left a lot of the everyday care to her husband Simon," said the barrister.

"She even suggested to him that Naomi should be adopted but he would never agree to that because he doted on her."
...
Jurors heard how Mrs Hill had told doctors that she was hearing voices in her head but had later admitted making up the account.'

Ed. note: The origianl submission included a link to this story in The Daily Mail but curiously, it is no longer available at that location. A Google search revealed this blog entry that quotes the Mail's version of the story, which included a reference to an affair "the mother" was allegedly having with a coworker, as follows:

'CCTV images captured Hill, who cheated on her husband with a work colleague days before the killing, joking with staff at a petrol station while her child lay dead in the back seat. She eventually took the youngster's body into the casualty department of a local hospital in the early hours of the morning, telling doctors: 'Will somebody help me, I think she is dead."

Blogger: Feminists Flip Out Over Palin

anthony · 9 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Blog entry here. Excerpt:

'...In many ways Sarah Palin is a model of what feminists have long said they wanted - women who are able to build a successful career on their own without depending on their husband's position to get where they want to go. And to have a family with a husband who fully shares in the parenting duties. Yet now we know that that is not enough. A woman also has to be a liberal to be a true role model: When Gloria Steinem takes to the pages of The Los Angeles Times to tell us that Palin is not the right woman for other women because of her positions, I guess that is a step forward that Palin can be evaluated on the basis of her positions more than on her gender, but it also helps clarify that organizations like NOW were never really about women but only about liberal women. And what they're now horrified to discover is that there are a whole lot of women out there who don't ascribe to that agenda.

...
'Wow! Feminists certainly have flipped on whether women are able to do it all — have a career and a family. And when faced with the sort of husband feminists have been saying they long for - a guy who gave up one of his jobs on the North Slope because of his wife's career and now has stepped forth to take care of the day-to-day child care so that his wife can take care of her career, they totally discount that sort of contribution and come back to attacking the mother.

Well, feminists can spend their time wondering what has become of all that they have argued for in the past. The rest of us can move on and choose to take each female candidate as she comes and judge her on her own individual merits rather than simply her gender or her ideology.'

Phoenix man receives 848 1/2 years in prison for sex crimes

tac0965 · 9 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"On Friday, Judge Maria del Mar Verdin handed 18 life sentences, five 20-year sentences, seven 17-year sentences, four 5-year sentences, and nine 1 1/2-year sentences to James Wallace Galloway, 52, said Mike Scerbo, a spokesman for the county attorney's office.

Galloway was convicted on 43 counts relating to the sexual abuse and molestation of minor children, furnishing obscene material to children and public sexual indecency, Scerbo said."

Comments? Would a woman receive this type of dramatic and emotional sentence by a male judge? What are his chances of getting the sentence reduced?

Ed. note: The point here is not should he be punished with what is effectively a life sentence-- some may think that is too much, others not enough. The point is this: would a female convict of the same crimes get the same kind of sentence?

UK: Mothers should be paid to stay home with their children

anthony · 9 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Mothers should receive financial help of up to £6,000 a year to stay at home and care for their babies and toddlers, according to a report which says that nurseries fail to provide the one-to-one adult interaction children need.

Too many parents of babies and toddlers are being forced back to work by financial pressure and government policy when they would prefer to stay at home during their offspring's earliest years, according to the research by a think-tank chaired by the former Conservative leader Iain Duncan Smith.

...

"We need to level the financial playing field for parents," Mr Duncan Smith said. "The current system pressurises mothers – and it is mostly mothers – into going back to work soon after their children are born.'

Hillary backers come to defense of Palin

Daringest · 9 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Blog entry here. Excerpt:

"The leaders of a women's political organization that launched earlier this year to support Hillary Clinton are speaking out against what they say are examples of media sexism toward Sarah Palin and urging members to tell the press corps "to back off.

WomenCount, a group co-founded by top Hillary fundraiser Susie Tompkins Buell, posted a lengthy item on their blog decrying questions over whether Palin can, as a mother of five, juggle her family responsibilities and still be vice president.

...
"To paraphrase the words of one blogger who said it best over the weekend: We will defend Sarah Palin against misogynist smears not because we like her or support her, but because that's how feminism works."

I don't know who questioned whether Gov. Palin can "juggle her family responsibilities and still be vice president," but I would hardly consider such a consideration as hatred of women. But again, terming anything feminists don't like as "misogyny" is how feminism works."

Discussing whether a man's age or youth would affect his presidency isn't considered hatred. Asking how a former Vice-Presidential candidate's observance of Saturday as the Sabbath might affect his leadership, if assumed presidential duties, wasn't and shouldn't be considered hatred. Just a question about Palin's responsibilities shouldn't be considered hatred of women.

Illinois Mother Convicted in Drowning Deaths of 3 Children Free on Parole

anthony · 9 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A central Illinois woman convicted in the drowning deaths of her three children is free on parole.

Illinois Department of Corrections spokesman Derek Schnapp says Amanda Hamm left the Dwight Correctional Center just after 9 a.m. Tuesday.

Hamm was convicted of child endangerment in 2006 in the deaths of 6-year-old Christopher Hamm, 3-year-old Austin Brown and 23-month-old Kyleigh Hamm. She served almost five years of a 10-year-sentence.

Hamm's boyfriend, Maurice LaGrone Jr., is serving a life sentence after being convicted of first-degree murder.'

US News & W.R.: "How Hard Do Abortions Hit Men?"

johndias · 9 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here.

Columnist Adam Voiland of U.S. News & World Report reports on how two organizations -- the Knights of Columbus and the Archdiocese of Chicago's Office for Evangelization -- are shining a light on the psychological effect that a woman's abortion has on the father. Contrast this with the American Psychological Association's report that an abortion is not detrimental to a woman's mental health (with no investigation or even overture to how it effects that of a man).

Fugitive mom pleads guilty, expects probation

anthony · 9 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'PLYMOUTH, Michigan (AP) -- A California woman who escaped from a Michigan prison more than 30 years ago and remade her life as a suburban mother pleaded guilty to escape Tuesday after a judge said he would give her probation.

Susan LeFevre, 53, was in court for a routine hearing on the escape charge. But that changed unexpectedly after the offer from Wayne County Circuit Judge Leonard Townsend, defense attorney William Swor said.

"I was glad the judge was willing to inject some rationality into this environment," Swor said. "He said 'Enough is enough.'"

"She was crying," Swor said of LeFevre. "She was somewhat surprised and relieved that this could come to an end."
...
However, LeFevre must serve at least 5½ years on the drug charge that led to her original sentence of at least 10 years in prison sentence before getting a chance at parole.'

UK: Failing to treat women more favourably is not sex discrimination, Employment Appeal Tribunal rules

anthony · 10 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Failing to treat a woman more favourably than a man is not sex discrimination, the Employment Appeal Tribunal has ruled.

Commander Dawn Kenney, awarded an OBE for active service in Iraq, claimed the Ministry of Defence discriminated against her by rejecting her for the post of captain and medical director in the Royal Naval Reserve (RNR) and giving the job to a man.

...

“Second, and in any event, the fact that in certain very exceptional circumstances it is open to an employer to give preference to one gender rather than to another does not demonstrate that it is even prima facie unlawful discrimination if that opportunity is not taken and all candidates are treated equally,” he said. “It is not discriminating against a woman to fail to treat her more favourably than a man.”'

Heather Mills reneges on charity donation

anthony · 10 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Heather Mills has failed to hand over a multi-million pound charity donation.

The former model vowed to give "a large majority" of her £24.3 million divorce payment from Sir Paul McCartney to the Adopt-A-Minefield organisation, of which she is a patron, but charity sources claim they haven't received anything.

A source said: "They have waited in vain for their millions. She's had plenty of time, but sadly it's yet another untruth by the queen of lies."
...
Meanwhile, Mills's former publicist has branded her a "pathological liar".'

Struggling School-Age Boys

WakeUp · 10 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The subtitle of this article is appropriately called "A new study says parents are right to worry about their sons."

The author points out that instead over-diagnosing boys with ADHD, prescribing medication and placing them in special ed, there are other methods. She suggests it would be helpful for educators to realize that boys have a hands on, visual and active learning style. Sometimes restless boys who are treated as "bad" really just need more free activities and options.

Closing statements from the article: "Let's take a moment, before the school year gets any farther underway, and ask ourselves whether we are raising and educating our boys in a way that respects their natural development. And if we are not, let's figure out how we can bring our family life and our schools back into line."

One other point: Compare this article with the If boys will be boys, men will beat women article which calls for schools to single out boys and put them in special programs which treat them all like potential woman-beaters.

There are so many different attitudes about how boys develop in school.

Philippines: Mother kills daughters, police cite 'poverty' as cause

anthony · 10 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Notice how 'poverty' was the culprit. Apparently dad failed to provide for the family. Excerpt:

'MANILA, Philippines — Police say poverty apparently has driven a jobless woman in the Philippines to kill her three young children and herself by getting them to drink toilet cleaner before she also took some.
...
Police say her husband, a construction worker in Manila, had not sent money for a month.'

Canada: Woman kills sons, seeks 'infanticide' verdict instead of 'murder'

Scottie · 11 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. It will be interesting to see how this plays out. Look at the comments below it. It's encouraging to see some appalled by the double standard. Excerpt:

'A Guelph, Ont., woman who told a psychiatrist she had suffocated her two infant sons is expected hear a verdict Thursday in her trial on murder charges.

The 27-year-old woman, who cannot be identified because she was 17 at the time of her first son's death, has pleaded not guilty to two counts of first-degree murder.
...
The defence has argued that the woman should be convicted of infanticide, rather than murder. Infanticide is defined in the Criminal Code as a woman's killing of her newborn child while her mind is "disturbed" by the effects of childbirth.
...
If convicted of infanticide, the woman could receive a maximum sentence of five years in prison. A first-degree murder conviction carries a mandatory life sentence.'

"When dad is just bad"

Matt · 11 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via email submission. Article here. Excerpt:

'What's a conference on domestic violence without fireworks? An American speaker shot off a doozy here yesterday, charging that the leaders of some fathers' rights groups are abusers who use the organizations as tools to harass women.
...
"The agenda, often by the leadership, is to completely undermine women's rights," she said. "The ones that are the most dangerous are, in fact, creating safety problems for women and children."
...
Want more fireworks? Here goes. Smith also said domestic abusers who fight for custody in U.S. courts win full custody, joint custody or unsupervised access 70% of the time, regardless of the evidence of the mother.'

WST graduate auctioning her virginity

Matt · 11 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

No, not a joke. Read this. Excerpt:

'LOS ANGELES (Reuters) - A 22-year-old woman in the United States is publicly auctioning her virginity to pay for her college education...

The student ... said she had no moral dilemma with her decision and found it "empowering".
...
"We live in a capitalist society. Why shouldn't I be allowed to capitalize on my virginity?" she added.

The woman, who has earned a bachelor degree in women's studies and now wants to start a master's degree in marriage and family therapy, is hoping the bidding will hit $1 million.
...
The online auction site eBay turned her down so the auction will take place at a Nevada brothel, the Moonlite Bunny Ranch, where her sister is working to pay off her college debts.'

Just what would Susan B. say if she were alive to see it?

Study asserts women are ten times more prone to sexual harassment in conract jobs

WakeUp · 11 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This article is worded in a straight-forward way but is only backed by vague information. Not much detail is given about how the study was done. It simply says there was a study, then gives results. It also does not count for the possibility that some participants might lie or have been false sexual harassment accusers in the past. The one credible part is that the study was done at the University of Melbourne and not some by some random small group, yet colleges are a bastion of one-sided feminist ideology.

From the article: ""Our study shows that 79 per cent of those who experience unwanted sexual advances at work are women. People who are employed in casual jobs are about five times more likely to be subjected to unwanted sexual advances."

I'm posting this because I'm honestly not sure if this is legit or questionable. Does anyone have input?

Australia: The Fatherhood Revolution

Anonymous · 11 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"The Fatherhood Foundation believes that fatherlessness is a major contributor to the problems our children face. Dr Bruce Robinson says that fatherlessness costs Australia $13 billion a year. Fatherlessness increases the likelihood that children will grow up in poverty, increased crime, drug abuse, youth suicide, child sexual abuse, mental health problems, high levels of child obesity, poor health, poor nutrition and lower levels of educational performance for children. In spite of what radical feminists may say about the ills of patriarchy, involved and loving fathers are foundational for the development of healthy children and strong families."

Police Say School Nurse Had 'Sex' with Teenage Boys

anthony · 12 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A health assistant at a southwest suburban elementary school was charged Thursday with sexual abuse after officials investigated illicit text messages she allegedly sent to teenage boys.
...
During the investigation, police identified three boys who allegedly had physical sexual contact with Obzera in 2006, the release said. She was charged with three counts of aggravated criminal sexual abuse.'

Man arrested for defending home and child

Matt · 12 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Unbelievable. He finds a naked man in his daughter's room. He didn't know she even had a boyfriend much less that he was sneaking into his house to "see" her. So what does he do? Well he probably thought the kid was a rapist and so attacked him; most men would do this and it's entirely justified. But now the dad faces criminal charges! Unbelievable. So the message to fathers is this: You can't defend your home against someone you perceive reasonably is an intruder bent on assaulting your children or else face criminal charges. Excerpt:

'Authorities say the father, 45, didn't even know his daughter had a boyfriend or that the youngster had been sneaking into the home for more than a year.
...
The father was charged with aggravated battery on a child and bonded out on $10,000.'

Feminist Army Aims at Palin

anthony · 14 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Gloria Steinem, the grand mufti of feminism, issued a fatwa anathematizing Palin. A National Organization for Women spokeswoman proclaimed Palin more of a man than a woman. Wendy Doniger, a feminist academic at the University of Chicago, writes of Palin in Newsweek: "Her greatest hypocrisy is in her pretense that she is a woman."
...
The academic feminist left has scared the dickens out of mainstream men and women for so long, the liberal establishment is terrified to contradict feminists' nigh-upon-theological conviction that female authenticity is measured by one's blind loyalty to left-wing talking points. This is a version of the Marxist doctrine of "false consciousness," which holds that you aren't an authentic member of the proletariat unless you agree with Marxism.'

Man who posed as 12-year-old receives 70 1/2 mandatory years in prison

tac0965 · 14 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

An Arizona man will be sentenced to 70 1/2 years in prison for posing as 12 year old to enroll in school, possession of child pornography, and failure to register as sex offender. This will be a mandatory sentence, with no parole or credit for good time. He will be released when he is 100 1/2 years old.

Many of you may say that he deserves every last day of that. However, be aware that he didn't sexually assault or touch any child while attending the school. He also didn't kill anyone. How many people in the prison system are serving much less than 70 1/2 years for 1st or 2nd degree murder. Would a woman get this sentence or be committed to a hospital for 60 days?

'My dearest daughters, today I say goodbye'

Matt · 15 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A father who is giving up after a four-year fight to see his daughters has written the two girls an emotional goodbye email, prompting fathers facing similar situations to say: "Remember, brother, you are not alone."

The email has been distributed as far as the US, Canada and Saudi Arabia.
...
"My dearest daughters, today I say goodbye to you, as I no longer have the strength to continue the four-year battle with your mother. I am mentally, physically and financially drained. Please always know that I love you, and that this is no decision on my part," the email reads.

The father said his ex-wife had prejudiced his daughters against him, resulting in "hate faxes" in which the girls said they didn't want to see him. "I do not know you, I do not go to strangers," the eight-year-old wrote.'

DV Conference article prompts large response

Matt · 15 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Despite Mindelle Jacobs and the Edmonton Sun suggestions, these are the only two letters, currently online at the Edmonton Sun (Friday) [which address the Sept. 10 article]. We had heard that there might be a special section containing some of the best on letters received for Sunday. There is nothing there for Sunday. We had also heard that she might do a "follow-up column" but conventional wisdom suggests she probably has no intention of writing such a column and that she will simply 'ride out the storm' until some time has passed and the outrage has died down, and then begin her assault on us all over again, as she has done for years. We really should not let her and the Edmonton Sun get away with this.

The two letters are here.

Title IX watchdogs keeping tabs on university academic departments

anthony · 16 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Over the past couple years, government agencies such as the Department of Energy, the National Science Foundation and NASA have started undertaking Title IX compliance reviews in university science and engineering programs at a handful of schools across the nation. In fact, auditors from the Department of Energy visited UW-Madison April 1-2 to review its graduate physics program, and a final report is due out by the end of the year.

"American scientists should brace themselves for the destructive tsunami headed their way," said Christina Hoff Sommers, a resident scholar at the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative think tank.

"Here is what is extremely odd about this Title IX movement," said Sommers. "We are looking at a serious problem with males in education. Our universities are approaching 60 percent female. The University of Wisconsin is about 55 to 56 percent female. So why not have some investigations about the under-representation of men in college enrollment?"

Woman Attacks Man With Sword Over Dirty Dishes

anthony · 16 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'(AP) Police say a 20-year-old woman faces an aggravated assault charge after she bit her boyfriend, broke a picture frame across his face and swung at him with a sword during an argument about him not doing the dishes.
...
Henderson said the woman then tried to physically remove Boykins. During the ensuing struggle, Henderson said, Pouncy bit Boykin's' right shoulder and broke a picture frame across his face, causing visible cuts.

The woman then grabbed an approximately 2-foot sword and swung it at Boykin's, missing him, police said.

Pouncy was released from a Mansfield jail after posting a $10,000 bond, jail officials said.'

UK: How the PC brigade are killing off chivalry

anthony · 16 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'According to Debrett's, the bible of etiquette, political correctness is slowly strangling chivalry.
...
'Of course women don't need men to open doors. But at the same time, a little bit of chivalry is nice - and people need help knowing how to strike the balance, because the boundaries have become blurred.'

'Help a woman with her heavy bags, offer her a seat on the train if she is elderly or pregnant, stand when she enters the room. These are good manners and should come out instinctively rather than contrived gestures that feel outdated and oppressive.'

New York Post: 'GAL'S TOXIC VISINE TEA'

anthony · 16 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The Long Island woman who poisoned a housemate by putting eye drops in his iced tea - a dirty trick depicted in the hit movie "Wedding Crashers" - was sentenced yesterday to three years' probation for the sickening assault.
...
"It's not fair," said Gentissi, who had also accused Anzalone of killing his Chihuahua, Gucci.

"This is a woman who tried to poison me. She should have been charged with attempted murder. We were hoping she was going to get a strong sentence."

Anzalone's lawyer said her client was only protecting her unborn child, because Gentissi - who had lived with her and her then-husband, Christopher, in North Bellmore - refused to stop smoking around her while she was pregnant.'

India: Woman kills her 2 children after argument with husband

anthony · 16 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman slit the throats of her two children and then stabbed them to death after an argument with her husband in Uttar Pradesh's Sitapur district, police said Saturday.
...
"Savita slit the throats of her two children and then stabbed them to death," Javed Khan, a police officer, told IANS on the phone.

She had an argument Saturday morning with her husband over money matters, he added.

"Savita was mentally disturbed. After her husband, who is a taxi driver, left the home following the dispute, Savita killed her two children," Khan said.'

New Zealand: Man freed from jail after false rape evidence admission

anthony · 16 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Rotorua man's former partner has admitted gathering false evidence which led to his being jailed for rape before a court quashed his conviction.

Robert Sutton, who owns the Happy Angler store at Mourea, spent 10 months behind bars after being convicted in October 2005 of two violent rapes he says he never committed. He was released following a successful appeal and feels the wheels of justice are finally starting to turn in his favour.

The main complainant in the case against him, his former partner Marion Anne Carter, has this week admitted her role in Mr Sutton's wrongful conviction, pleading guilty to perverting the course of justice.'

Canada: Court finds gender bias in casino's washrooms

anthony · 16 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'For years, the Great Blue Heron Charity Casino in Port Perry, Ont., had a simple policy when it came to cleaning the casino's bathrooms - male employees cleaned the men's rooms and female staff the women's.

That might have remained the case were it not for Joanne Seguin, a part-time washroom attendant who complained that the policy was discriminatory. Her complaint has turned into a five-year battle and so far she's winning.

Last year, the Human Rights Tribunal of Ontario ordered the casino to give her back pay plus $10,000 for "loss of dignity." The company appealed, but an Ontario court has now upheld the tribunal's decision, although it ordered a review of the monetary award.'

20-to-life For Woman Who Let Lesbian Lover Beat Son To Death

anthony · 16 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Exceprt:

'A young Manhattan mother who allowed her lesbian lover to beat their 22-month-old son to death will serve more time in prison than the tot's killer.

Zahira Matos, 24, was sentenced Monday to 20 years to life behind bars - at least five years more than her lover - for staying silent about the savage beating.

Carmen Molina, 36, pummeled Yovani Matos so fiercely in September 2004 that she split his liver and fractured his leg. Both women were convicted of murder - Molina after pleading guilty last year and Matos after being found guilty earlier this year.'

Two boys abandoned under Nebraska's `safe haven' law

anthony · 16 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'OMAHA, Neb. (AP) -- The first children to be abandoned at hospitals by caregivers under a new Nebraska "safe haven" law are a teen and a tween.
...
Saturday, a 44-year-old woman said her 15-year-old nephew had behavioral issues that were too much for her. A mother dropped her 11-year-old boy at another hospital that same day. She claimed she could no longer care for the child.'

VP candidate Palin suspected of harassing former brother-in-law

Matt · 16 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Except:

'Juneau, Alaska—Nine days ago, we explored whether Governor Sarah Palin had knowingly made false accusations against Alaskan State Trooper Mike Wooten, who was in a bitter custody battle with Governor Palin's sister, Molly McCann. Based on the public records available by internet, our conclusion was that we couldn't reach a conclusion.
...
Court records show that Judge John Suddock was concerned about persistent attacks on Trooper Wooten by Palin and members of her family. The Judge told them in October, 2005 (when Palin was still a private citizen), "Disparaging will not be tolerated—it is a form of child abuse."
...
In summary, we still do not know whether Governor Palin knowingly made false accusations against Trooper Wooten. But it is clear that she and her family persistently attacked the Trooper's reputation over a period of at least three years, during which the Alaska State Troopers, the Alaska Public Safety Employee's Association, and the Court had all found that most of the accusations were unsupported.'

RADAR ALERT: 13.5% of Likely Voters Say "Fix VAWA Now!"

Matt · 16 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

It's election season and politicians are looking for votes.

One way to convince politicians that the politics is on our side is to show them the votes they will get by supporting a given policy. RADAR has calculated that 13.5% of likely voters, or 16.5 million voters, think the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) and the intrusive state-level domestic violence laws that flow from it are deeply flawed [cite]. The tables at the bottom of that page [cite] show how we calculated the numbers and the number and percentage of voters in each state.

People adversely affected by VAWA, and their family members, represent a cross section of the electorate and very often feel so strongly about what happened to them that any promise to fix VAWA would override all other issues, and could well be the factor that determines which candidate they vote for.

Please contact candidates from both parties.

1. Look up the numbers for your state here.
2. Show them your state's numbers. Explain that they will win votes if they make a commitment to fixing VAWA and intrusive state domestic violence laws to prevent their provisions from being misused against the innocent.
3. Explain to them that VAWA inspired domestic violence laws clog our courts with false claims of domestic violence, which prevents true victims from getting help.

++
Date of RADAR Release: September 16, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence.
http://www.mediaradar.org/

India: MRAs protest anti-men commercial

Anonymous · 17 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'NEW DELHI: The latest Kitply commercial, in which a wife slaps her husband on their wedding night because their bed made from ordinary plywood kept creaking, has not gone down well with men organisations, who feel that the ad and its likes promote domestic violence. They have complained to the Advertising Standards Council of India asking it to ban the commercial.

“It’s a derogatory commercial, which promotes physical, emotional and financial abuse of men. Kitply may consider it a joke, but violence is not funny; be it against a man or a woman. We are sure you would find the same commercial with reversed roles revolting and so, we urge you to revoke the commercial immediately and take strong legal actions against those who promote domestic violence,” said Save Family Foundation (SFF), an organisation for harassed men, in its complaint.'

RNC male delegate a victim of date rape drugging

johndias · 17 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

A male delegate at the Republican National Committee's convention was drugged by a date rape drug, yet is quoted pointing out the fact that he is single (to deflect the notion that he deserved it). The female attacker also robbed him of $50,000. Excerpt:

'MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Police are trying to find a woman who apparently drugged a Republican National Convention delegate and robbed him of about $50,000 worth of jewelry, cash and other items in his hotel room.
...
"As a single man, I was flattered by the attention of a beautiful woman who introduced herself to me. I used poor judgment. If there is any good that can come from this humiliation, it is to caution others that date rape drugs can be used on men, too," he said.'

India: Female government workers will get 3 years of maternity leave-- none for fathers arindamp · 17 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'NEW DELHI: This is one rule that could turn women in India Inc green with envy. The Centre has not only increased maternity leave for its employees to six months but has also cleared paid leave for two years to take care of children.

The order, effective from September 1, increases maternity leave of women employees from 135 days to a cool 180 days for each of their two children. From now on, women employees can take paid leave up to two years (730 days) during their career for "taking care" of their two children without affecting their seniority.'

Note that no such privilege has been extended to men employees. Talk about gender equality!

Tennessee to revoke licenses over late child support

anthony · 17 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The state is warning parents delinquent on child support payments that they risk losing drivers licenses, professional licenses and hunting and fishing licenses if they don't pay.
...
More than 7,000 licenses were revoked last year for failure to pay, and there are more than 20,000 licenses currently at risk. Professional licenses that could be revoked include those of registered nurses, real estate agents, security guards and teachers.'

MSNBC: Pass it on: Sons of infertile men may be next

anthony · 17 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'As puberty kicks in, scientists believe they may start to see sons who've inherited the problems of their fathers, an issue that many couples may not have considered in their quest to have children.

"This is the generation we've created," said Dr. Tommaso Falcone, who chairs the obstetrics and gynecology department at the Cleveland Clinic and directs the Reproductive Endocrinology Research Laboratory. "We may have tens of thousands of boys born with infertility."

Genetic fallout for ICSI sons is still a largely unexplored issue in the field of infertility, which affects an estimated one in eight couples in the United States, or about 7.3 million people, according to RESOLVE, a national infertility group. Up to 40 percent of cases are attributed to problems with the man, including damaged sperm, low sperm or no sperm at all.'

NCFM-sponsored film "Support? System Down" in Wall Street Journal & Marketwatch

Matt · 18 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

From Marc A.: Two months ago NCFM co-sponsored the San Diego premier of the film, "Support? System Down" by filmmaker Angelo Lobo. The theater was full, mostly with unfamiliar faces. Now it's playing in New York City's Millennium Film Workshop on 9/19 and 9/20. NCFM president Harry Crouch is interviewed in the film. Thank you, Mr. Lobo and all who helped on this! Article here. Excerpt:

'LOS ANGELES, Sept 16, 2008 /PRNewswire via COMTEX/ -- Why do so many people, including adult children of divorce and members of the military, find themselves involved in family court or child support proceedings? How does the family court/child support system affect today's society and U.S. taxpayers?

Is the current system broken?

Filmmaker, Angelo Lobo, examines these important questions in his new full length documentary, "Support? System Down," which comes to New York City's Millennium Film Workshop, Inc. on September 19th and 20th, 2008 and is open to the public for the admission price of $10.00 at the door. (See below for information regarding dates, location, and times.)'

A trend? Another 'virgin' seeks to sell herself to the highest bidder

Matt · 18 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Remember this story? I don't know if it inspired this latest public act of prostitution, but allow me to quote Michael Meyers from his Virgin Airlines posters when I say "There are no virgins on this flight, baby!" Excerpt:

'Showgirl and men's magazine model Raffella Fico, 20, told an Italian magazine: "I can't wait to see who's going to pull out the money to have me."
...
"She's never had a boyfriend. I swear on my mother's grave. She's a devout Catholic and prays to Padre Pio every night," her brother told the magazine.

She is the not the first woman to auction her virginity for a large sum. An 18-year-old US student in San Diego, Natalie Dylan, recently told the Howard Stern show she would have sex for the first time for $1 million to pay her college fees.'

OK, folks, that is the last of the "public whoring" stories I am going to post. I anticipate more but I do not want any trends in luridness to take hold. We get enough of that from the MSM. If nothing else, these instances of "take my (supposed) virginity for a price" stories point out how in fact a woman can advertise to sell her "sexual services" and instead of getting arrested for soliciting, she gets international headline news. If you're male and you try that... well, you know the rest.

Credit crisis affects wives: for richer, for poorer?

Matt · 18 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Financial ruin befalls millions and all this author can talk about is how it affects well-to-do upper-middle and upper-class women that decided to "sacrifice" and stay home while their husbands went to work long hours at stressful finance jobs. Now, of course, we should feel sorry for these poor victims and understand when they head to the local courthouse to file for divorce. You may reply that she seems to be writing with a sense of irony and a general contempt for the complaints in question, but frankly, I don't fall for it. Am I being humorless here? As always, comments welcome. Excerpt:

'"Lehman Brothers employees and their wives are waking up to the reality that their stock is a busted flush, and the trophy wives of other investment bankers will be looking to cash in their chips before their husbands' stock options and deferred compensation go the same way. Either way, the outlook for the unhappily married appears fairly bleak."

...

Of course, the big boys - and girls - at the top understood they were in a high-stakes business where risk was the name of the game, a game, they have belatedly discovered, where there really are losers as well as winners. You may have little sympathy for the City suits, but spare, if you will, a thought for their wives.

Not only have they lost status, but their army of support staff is in severe jeopardy: whither the nannies, cleaners, dog walkers and personal trainers? What will become of the independent schools where they send their children, even the charities who benefited from their conspicuous largesse?

...

But Monday is a long way off, and in the meantime headhunters are being besieged by Lehman casualties looking for new positions, many urged on, no doubt, by resilient wives who refuse to let their breadwinner sink into a self-indulgent depression, however tempting.'

"Good heavens my dear, you may actually need to get a... a... job! Perish the thought!"

CBC columist draws fire over Palin column

Matt · 18 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. I found about this article from this report. So much for sisterhood. ;) Excerpt:

'It's possible that Republican men, sexual inadequates that they are, really believe that women will vote for a woman just because she's a woman. They're unfamiliar with our true natures. Do they think vaginas call out to each other in the jungle night? I mean, I know men have their secret meetings at which they pledge to do manly things, like being irresponsible with their semen and postponing household repairs with glue and used matches. Guys will be guys, obviously.
...
Palin has a toned-down version of the porn actress look favoured by this decade's woman, the overtreated hair, puffy lips and permanently alarmed expression. Bristol has what is known in Britain as the look of the teen mum, the "pramface." Husband Todd looks like a roughneck; Track, heading off to Iraq, appears terrified. They claim to be family obsessed while being studiously terrible at parenting. What normal father would want Levi "I'm a fuckin' redneck" Johnson prodding his daughter?

I know that I have an attachment to children that verges on the irrational, but why don't the Palins? I'm not the one preaching homespun values but I'd destroy that ratboy before I'd let him get within scenting range of my daughter again, and so would you. Palin's e-mails about the brother-in-law she tried to get fired as a state trooper are fizzing with rage and revenge. Turn your guns on Levi, ma'am.'

UK: Under-fives have almost no male teachers

anthony · 19 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Just one in 50 teachers of the youngest primary schoolchildren in England are male, despite a government recruitment campaign, figures revealed today.

Only 2% of staff in nursery and reception classes, which teach under-fives, are men, according to figures from the Department for Children, Schools and Families.

In schools with receptions but no nurseries, this figure falls to 1%. Men account for 16% of all primary schoolteachers.

The figures led to warnings over the social impact of many boys reaching the age of 11 without a positive male role model.'

UK: Anti-Women Urban Design?

anthony · 19 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Have you ever queued for a toilet? Tried changing a baby's nappy on a park bench? Slid off the alleged "seat" at the bus stop (or failed to perch on it in the first place)? If so you are a victim of anti-women urban design. Research presented last month at the Royal Geography Society's annual conference found that our cities are still being designed for the benefit of men. The report, by Dr Gemma Burgess of Cambridge University, concluded that the vast majority of town planners are ignoring the gender equality planning regulations that were brought in last year. This is significant, because if public spaces were designed with women in mind, they would look entirely different, with much more lighting, better-situated car parks and more areas where residential and office spaces are mixed, making it far easier to juggle work and childcare.'

Cell phones can affect sperm quality, researcher says

anthony · 19 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'(CNN) -- Keeping a cell phone on talk mode in a pocket can decrease sperm quality, according to new research from the Cleveland Clinic.

"We believe that these devices are used because we consider them very safe, but it could cause harmful effects due to the proximity of the phones and the exposure that they are causing to the gonads," says lead researcher Ashok Agarwal, the Director of the Center for Reproductive Medicine.'

Woman gets life for making child porn badgerb · 19 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Kelly Lumadue, a 33-year-old woman who was videotaped by her husband having sex with a 5-year-old boy, has been sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole.

Lumadue, who was 21 when she had sex with the child, said she performed those acts under duress by her husband (now deceased), a professional photographer who recorded the sessions.'

Edmonton Sun: Divorced from reality

anthony · 19 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'I inadvertently stoked the ever-simmering gender war last week when comments I reported from a domestic violence conference unleashed a fusillade of male outrage.
...
Still, the men want their say so let's proceed. I received countless e-mails from wounded men (both physically and emotionally) who said they'd either been assaulted by unhinged wives or falsely accused of either harming their wives or molesting their kids.

"I'm a guppy in a sea of really big and angry fish," wrote one man who said he was falsely accused of sexually abusing his two-year-old daughter.

Men wrote about being assaulted by their wives - with no subsequent charges by the police. They complained about the nasty games women play to cut them out of their kids' lives.'

Fact Check: Did McCain oppose helping women get equal pay?

anthony · 19 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The Statement: At a campaign rally Friday, September 19, in Coral Gables, Florida, Democratic presidential nominee Sen. Barack Obama said, "It's not that Sen. McCain doesn't care about what's going on in the lives of women in this country. I like to think it's just that he doesn't know. Because, why else would he oppose legislation to help women get equal pay … ?"

The Facts: The legislation Obama apparently referenced is the Lilly Ledbetter Act of 2007 — which would have effectively expanded the length of time during which someone could sue an employer for pay discrimination. Ledbetter, a former Goodyear Tire employee, sued for years of unequal pay, but the U.S. Supreme Court ruled she should have filed suit within 180 days of the first unfair paycheck.'

Slain preacher's wife wins permanent custody of daughters

anthony · 19 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'HUNTINGDON, Tennessee (AP) -- A woman convicted of killing her minister husband two years ago was granted permanent custody of their three young daughters Friday and said she has resumed a cordial relationship with the grandparents who fought to take the children away from her.
...
Judge Ron Harmon of Carroll County Chancery Court returned full custody following a brief hearing, saying he was pleased that Winkler and her former in-laws have agreed to work together for the good of the children.
...
Winkler, then 33, said she accidentally shot her husband with a shotgun she had intended to use to scare him after a night of arguing. She told a trial jury in Selmer that she had suffered years of emotional and physical abuse from her husband.

She drew a three-year prison sentence but was granted probation for most of it and was sent to a mental institution after sentencing for treatment of post-traumatic stress disorder.'

Sperm Warfare, Another Male Contraceptive Update

Michael · 19 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Men are short-changed when it comes to birth control. Vasectomy is painful and not always reversible. Condoms blunt pleasure, break and slip off. Or there is that Russian-roulette standby, coitus interruptus.
...
“Men want new contraceptive methods,” says Elaine Lissner, director of the non-profit Male Contraception Information Project in San Francisco.A decade ago demand wasn't there and it was assumed women wouldn't trust men to take charge of birth control anyway. That has changed.”'

India: Kitply ad promotes domestic violence vs. men, groups take legal action bharati · 20 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

The story is here and here. The views of SIFF and its allied organisation are here.

We have filed a legal complaint with the Advertisement Council of India; the hearing is soon. If they do not act, we have the option of filing in the Indian courts. Promotion of violence is bad, against men or women. We were able to get Ponds (produced by Unilever, Inc.) to withdraw their ad by similar protests. SIFF statement excerpt:

"SAVE INDIAN Family Foundation, strongly and severely condemns the derogatory ad being telecast at the behest of Kitply Industries. The ad shows a young timid man getting married to a woman and on the first night, the bed crumbles. The wife asks the husband, "Kitply nahi laye kya?" (Have you not bought Kitply?) and slaps the husband.

Openly, brazenly and cold – bloodedly this ad not only depicts domestic violence on men, but also promulgates it, inspiring women to do it and telling men that this is a way of life. World over, international studies have proved it beyond doubt that domestic violence is not a gender specific issue and is a matter of equal concern for both men and women."

Rape Case Thrown Out When 'Victim' Sends Accused Love Letters in Prison

anthony · 20 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'WINNIPEG, Canada — A Winnipeg man awaiting trial for rape has had all charges dropped after the alleged victim admitted she sent the accused cards and explicit love letters behind bars.
...
The woman claimed in the letters that she missed the accused and was pregnant with his child.
...
Defense lawyer Sheldon Pinx said the woman should be charged with mischief, obstruction of justice or even perjury.'

Wrongly convicted rape defendant freed after 26 years

anthony · 21 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Johnnie Earl Lindsey is a free man.

The wrongfully convicted rapist walked out of a Dallas courtroom this morning, nearly 26 years after a jury convicted him based on erroneous, eye witness identification.

A jury convicted Mr. Lindsey, now 56, of sexually assaulting a woman near White Rock Lake in 1981. DNA tests proved that he was not the man responsible.
...
Now that Mr. Lindsey is free, he said he plans to help other wrongly convicted people.

"I'm going to try my best to help those who are left behind to see that they see justice, too," Mr. Lindsey said.'

Newspaper commentator blog: 'Teenage boys are stupid'

anthony · 21 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Teenage boys are idiots. And today's American teenage boys - whom our culture holds in a sort of manchild limbo long past the age they need to be doing some sort of hard work and earning their keep - are even bigger idiots.

By the time a male is about 16 years old, he has the body of an adult male, an adult male with a brain under assault by a dramatic rush of hormones the likes of which he'll never again see during any other period of his lifetime. Teenage boys are more impulsive and aggressive than any other group. Witness their penchant for crashing cars, diving headfirst into rock quarries, experimenting with drugs, and deciding to "play chicken" by draping themselves across dark country roads in an attempt to prove something to their similarly stupid peers.They are driven by sexual curiosity to the point of insanity, and they hold a misguided sense of immortality.;

Salon.com: 'Dude, where's my manhood?'

anthony · 21 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Kimmel pinpoints the cause of young white male frustration in another typically pithy coinage: "thwarted entitlement." You might call this phenomenon the blowback of the civil rights and women's and gay liberation movements, an ever-growing sense among young white males that women and minorities have snatched away the jobs and social positions that their fathers and grandfathers implied they could take for granted. Sure, it's hard for minorities to feel sympathy for white guys who seem to believe in personal responsibility when it comes to poverty yet claim that women and people of color are taking their jobs -- but they may do so at their peril. When large swaths of young men feel disenfranchised, violence is usually in the offing. If the guys Kimmel studies suddenly lost the ability to sponge off their parents, he implies, the effects of "thwarted entitlement" could easily spread out beyond the bad apples and erupt into various forms of chaos.'

New Zealand: Mens' rights group barricade home

anthony · 21 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A mens' rights group who claim they have been denied fair process by the justice system took their grievance to a High Court judge's home on Sunday morning.
...
Organiser Benjamin Easton, who describes himself as a disaffected father, says the public have little hope when they come up against the system.'

Obama Panders to Women by Pushing ‘Wage Gap’ Myth in New Ad

anthony · 21 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Obama has a new ad out pushing the “wage gap” myth. As we’ve discussed many times, men earn more than women on average for many legitimate reasons. These include:

1) Men work longer hours at more demanding and hazardous jobs.

2) Men are more likely to travel, relocate or have long commutes for their jobs.

3) Men are more likely to have more years and more consecutive years of experience, because women are more likely to work part time or take years off of work to care for their children.'

The new Obama ad is here.

Phyllis Schlafly: Feminists against Palin - shame on you

anthony · 21 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Oh, the unfairness of it all! Steinem bemoaned that women find it so "difficult to be competent and successful and be liked." Au contraire, Hillary and women like her are not disliked because they are competent and successful, but because they are chip-on-the-shoulder feminists, living in an unhappy world of their own making and spreading their discontent like a virus. Feminists convey a notion of entitlement, as though they deserve special privileges today because of wrongs in past years that no one any longer can remember, such as women not having the right to vote. The bad attitude of victimhood is indoctrinated in students by the bitter feminist faculty in university women's studies courses and even in some law schools. Victimhood is nurtured and exaggerated by feminist organizations using their tactic called "consciousness raising," i.e., retelling horror stories about how badly some women have been treated until small personal annoyances grow into societal grievances.'

Eagle Forum Rejects Feminists' Attempt to Institute Government Wage Control

anthony · 21 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"The feminists support these pieces of legislation because they want Washington bureaucrats, rather than the free market, to unfairly raise the wages of jobs held mostly by females and freeze the wages of jobs held mostly by men," said Eagle Forum president and founder Phyllis Schlafly. "Degrees in education or women's studies or sociology simply do not earn the same pay as degrees in engineering or science or finance, yet more women persist in choosing the former and more men the latter."

Girl, 19, tortured for 13 hours by women after being wrongly accused of stealing phone

Anonymous · 21 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A 19-year-old girl was tortured for 13 hours by two women after she was wrongly accused of stealing a mobile phone.
...
During the horrific attack, Raby and her friend Kelly Louise Garrity, 26, punched, burned, kicked and stabbed McNamara before locking her in a cupboard.

The two women hacked off McNamara's long black hair and forced her to lick her own blood off the floor.
...
Katie's injuries were so severe her mother Denise didn't even recognise her in the hospital bed.
...
Garrity was sentenced to four years in prison and Raby 40 months in a young offenders' institution after both pleading guilty.'

On YouTube: Joe Biden & Hillary Clinton Discuss VAWA

anthony · 22 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video here. This is a long video, running about 32 minutes. Quotes from Biden:

'VAWA has freed thousands of women imprisoned in their own home'

'70% of all women arriving at emergency rooms are there because of the consequence of a mans fist'

'70% of homeless children are the result of domestic violence'

'Women have been re-victimized in the courts'

'100,000 free lawyers standing with women'

Where's Matt? Even I Take Vacations Now and Then

Matt · 22 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

MANN regulars,

From Tuesday Sept. 23 until Friday Oct. 3, I will not be doing my usual MANN modding thing. In the interim, other MANN mods will be reviewing submissions and making posts to the site. Until then... fidem scit! :)

Matt

Sexist men 'earn the most money'

Broadsword · 22 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Scientists have found men who believe a woman's place is in the home earn thousands more per year than their less traditionally minded male colleagues.

They discovered the "macho" pay gap amounts to more than £4,500 a year.

The tables were turned among women, however, with feminists earning more than women with traditional outlooks.

The difference between their pay packets was much smaller, the research showed, adding up to just over £800 per year...

...After excluding other factors such as education, the complexity of a job, the number of hours that a person works, the scientists found that sexist men made an average of £4,600 ($8,500) a year more than men who viewed women as workplace equals.

Macy's National RESPECT! Campaign: no mention of female DV perps

anthony · 22 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'SAN FRANCISCO--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Sept. 18, 2008--On Friday, September 19, the Family Violence Prevention Fund (FVPF) and Macy's will ask the nation to join in marking the first annual National RESPECT! Day(SM). A newly designated observance, National RESPECT! Day will launch a multi-year movement, in partnership with Macy's, designed to raise awareness of domestic and dating violence and to encourage positive discourse about prevention by teaching respect.
...
For more than two decades, the Family Violence Prevention Fund has been one of the world's leading organizations working to prevent violence against women and children. Instrumental in developing the landmark Violence Against Women Act passed by Congress in 1994, the FVPF has continued to break new ground by reaching new audiences including men and youth, promoting leadership within communities to ensure that violence prevention efforts become self-sustaining, and transforming the way health care providers, police, judges, employers and others address violence. For more information, visit www.endabuse.org.'

Baldwin book rails against family court system

anthony · 23 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Alec Baldwin blamed a "corrupt" family court system Monday in part for dragging out the bitter custody battle between him and ex-wife Kim Basinger after the couple's divorce in 2002.

The actor, fresh off his first Emmy win the night before, said it contributed to the anger and frustration he was feeling when he berated his daughter in a phone message leaked to the media last year.

In the book, Baldwin rails against the family court system in Los Angeles, offers advice based on his own experience with divorce litigation and talks about how one parent can turn a child against another parent.

Baldwin said he's apologized to his daughter, Ireland, for the phone message, which he said was wrong and "horrified" him. But he added that it never should have been released without his permission.'

Economist.com: The Triumph Of Feminism

anthony · 23 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Women are also winning the most important of all gender wars—the war for educational qualifications. They earn 57% of bachelor's degrees, 59% of master's degrees and half of doctorates. And they are doing better all the time. In terms of higher education, women drew equal with men in 1980. By the early 1990s six women graduated from college for every five men. Projections show that by 2017 three women will graduate for every two men. The meritocracy is inexorably turning into a matriarchy, and visibly so on many campuses: the heads of Harvard, Princeton, MIT, Brown and the National Defence University are all women.

Boys, meanwhile, are more likely to drop out of high school than girls. They are also more likely to be consigned to special education classes or prescribed mood-managing drugs. Men are more likely to commit crimes, end up in prison, kill themselves or be murdered. Even their sperm count is headed south. The long-term result seems unavoidable: men are becoming ever more marginalised, while women are taking over the commanding heights of wealth and power.'

"Men to Boys: The Making of Modern Immaturity"

anthony · 23 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The old always seem to blame the young for the downfall of civilization. So readers under 40 might be skeptical when I, a member of the “senior class” of Baby Boomers (born in 1946), claim that markers of male maturity have declined sharply in the last 20 years. Who am I to complain? Many from my generation rejected the values of their parents, and vowed in the 60s to never trust anyone over 30. But I still think it’s fair to say today there is no rush into maturity if that can be measured by an early embrace of family responsibility.'

Washington Post: Enough to Make a Grown Man Cry

anthony · 23 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'At this point in the review, we pause to allow women to expel a thundering, collective scoff. This notion is bogus, for sure. Right? Has to be. There's no way 40 years of feminism have pulverized millennia of male domination. Nevertheless, four books rolling out this fall are standing up for men by saying maybe we've been too focused on women's advancement to realize that boys are withering in school, stumbling blindly through adolescence, living recklessly during and beyond college and slouching toward manhood.'

'Biden Babble and the Dancing Fool'

anthony · 23 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Like so many chivalrous male victims Biden defends his abusers even having suffered “nuclear sanction”. I say “abusers” because someone in his immediate family other than his sister must have rendered the mushrooming catastrophic punishments. Even so, Sister Valerie Biden Owens had “absolute impunity” giving her license to abuse at will without fear of penalty.

Valerie’s “absolute impunity” tragically lives through VAWA. For example, now infamous Mary Winkler recently escaped the death penalty and long term imprisonment murdering her husband Mathew by shooting him in the back. Wrenched with pain it took Mathew 20 minutes to die. Mary watched, made no effort to call 911, and later played “the abuse excuse” card, even though other than her testimony there was no evidence to support her claims of being abused. Matthew Winkler’s oldest daughter, Patricia, said her father was a good man and did not abuse her mother. Now free, the Courts even gave Winkler custody of her children, thereby denying their understandable wish to live with their grandparents rather than the woman who murdered their father in cold blood.'

Meghan Daum: He likes his equality; he'll have it no other way

anthony · 23 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This is an article about Roy Den Hollander, the man suing Columbia because of bigoted Women's Studies programs. This writer challenges his notion and suggests Men's Studies does exist, though not at Columbia. While certain colleges do offer such a program they are essentially by-products of the Women's Studies departments. Essentially, they teach chivalry and male self-loathing.

'I know what you're wondering, and the answer is yes. Men's studies exists in the broader academic world, although Columbia doesn't have a men's studies department. It explores such subjects as "paradigms of fatherhood" and "gendered violence." And according to Harry Brod, editor of the scholarly book "The Making of Masculinities: The New Men's Studies," it's an outgrowth of the feminist movement. "If Roy Den Hollander really understood what men's studies was," Brod told me, "he wouldn't be in favor of it.'

Mom Admits She Helped Son Build Arsenal, Psych. Evaluation Pending

anthony · 23 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman admitted she helped her troubled, bullied 14-year-old son build a cache of weapons by buying him a rifle and gunpowder, but investigators still don't know if she was aware her son was planning a deadly school attack.

Michele Cossey, 46, pleaded guilty Tuesday in Norristown to one count of child endangerment. She admitted that she bought him a rifle with a laser scope and gunpowder, which investigators said he was using to build grenades.
...
Michelle Cossey's sentencing hearing won't happen until after she undergoes a psychiatric evaluation. The maximum possible prison term is 3½ to 7 years, but her defense attorney she could get less than a year - or even just probation - under sentencing guidelines.'

Is Google biased against men?

Anonymous · 24 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

They are giving scholarships to female students, but not to men students. How would the feminists have reacted, if it was the other way round?

http://www.google.com/anitaborg/
http://www.google.co.in/jobs/womeninengineering/award/index.html

Woman Prison Escapee Gets Probation After Serving 14 Months of Ten Year Sentence

Roy · 24 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A California woman who escaped from a Michigan prison 32 years ago and lived on the lam as a suburban mother was sentenced to probation Wednesday, five months after her capture.

"I knew for years this was coming," Susan LeFevre, 53, said.

Wayne County Circuit Judge David Groner said LeFevre had already served 14 months in prison on a drug conviction when she escaped.

"The court finds no reason to give you extra time," said Groner, who ordered two years of probation."

Now, this woman was sentenced originally in 1974 to ten years for heroin distribution. She jumped the prison fence after 14 months and lived as a fugitive until last year.

I suppose the obligatory question is -- do you think a male fugitive would get a minimal probation, or would he be back in the slammer serving out his sentence?

And more importantly, when is she going to be on Oprah and get her book deal?

Dad battles for son taken to Brazil four years ago

anthony · 24 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'It is like a nightmare for David Goldman, except that when he wakes up, it is still there. His son Sean, abducted to Brazil by the boy's mother four years ago, remains almost in sight but always out of reach, in defiance of the laws of two nations and the world.
...
Goldman thought his marriage was solid and his wife happy. But when she got to Brazil, his wife called him and said she was not returning to the United States. And, she said, she was keeping Sean with her. What's more, Goldman says, Bruna told him that if he ever wanted to see Sean again, he would have to assign sole custody of the boy to her.

Goldman had been traveling to Brazil for every court hearing that ruled against him over the years. He went again, only to discover that his late wife's Brazilian husband had filed a petition with local family courts to remove Goldman's name from Sean's birth records and replace it with his own.
...
"[That] would exclude me from ever even being my son's father," Goldman told Vieira. "So far, the Brazilian judicial system is letting him do this."

Christina Hoff Sommers: Foolishly Seeking Gender Equity in Math and Science

anthony · 24 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt.

'Why do women avoid classes like Math 55? Why, in fact, are there so few women in the high echelons of academic math and in the physical sciences? Women now earn 57% of bachelors degrees and 59% of masters degrees. According to the Survey of Earned Doctorates, 2006 was the fifth year in a row in which the majority of research Ph.D.s awarded to U.S. citizens went to women, who earn more Ph.D.s than men in the humanities, social sciences, education, and life sciences. Elsewhere, though, the figures are different. Women comprise just 19% of tenure-track professors in math, 11 % in physics, and 10% in computer science and electrical engineering. Moreover, the pipeline does not promise statistical parity anytime soon; women are earning 24% of the Ph.D.s in the physical sciences- way up from the four percent of the 1960s, but still far behind the rate they are winning doctorates in other fields. "The change is glacial," notes Debra Rolison, a physical chemist at the Naval Research Laboratory. Rolison and others want to apply Title IX to science education.'

Beware the Queen Bee boss

Anonymous · 25 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'They call it the Queen Bee Syndrome and the sting in it is that it punctures a great feminist myth.

For years the sisterhood has moaned that if only more women could smash through that glass ceiling, if only more women got the top jobs and if only we all had women bosses, our working environment would be a far warmer, caring, sharing place to be.

Now a university study finally proves that the opposite is true.

In fact, women who work for other women suffer more from both psychological and physical ailments - depression, insomnia and headaches among them - and are more likely to end up embroiled in workplace conflict.'

Girlfriend Hires Assassins, Brazilian Soccer Player Brutally Murdered

anthony · 26 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Brazil is in mourning after former Vasco de Gama player Thiago da Silva was brutally tortured and murdered, allegedly by hired assassins on the orders of his ex-girlfriend.
...
According to reports from the local police, the instigator of the crime is da Silva's former girlfriend.
...
He was handcuffed, beaten and tortured. When he tried to flee he was hit by three bullets.

Both the former girlfriend and her aunt, Marcia Padula Viana, were arrested on Sunday as instigators of the crime, and accused of hiring the assassins to kill da Silva.'

Female thug attacks teacher, walks free

Anonymous · 26 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'An expelled schoolgirl who blamed a maths teacher for her exclusion stormed into a classroom and launched a ferocious attack on the woman, which left her in hospital.

The girl stabbed at the teacher's face with a marker pen, before punching her to the ground and kicking her until her legs bled, witnesses said.

Pupils and fellow teachers screamed at her to stop until two male members of staff managed to drag the girl away.

Police were called and the girl was arrested but she was later released with a caution.'

Video: HPV: The Male Factor

anthony · 26 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video here. Caption: 'HPV doesn't just affect women. Its also causing oral cancer in men, often showing up in late stages.'

Fidelity Slams Men in TV Ad

Anonymous · 27 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Anyone else notice the Fidelity ads on tv slamming the man for wanting to invest into his classic car? The woman in the ad treats his idea like he is some kind of fool. I know late 60's and early 70's cars that were bought for less than 4,000 that sell now for over 65,000. If Fidelity can offer a bigger savings pile up, I would LOVE to see it.

Men should pull there money out of Fidelity soon. They couldn't do that ad if the roles were reversed.

ABC Does Special on Parental Alienation

anthony · 27 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

From this article:

'In an interview with ABC News anchor Diane Sawyer, Baldwin, 50, spoke about his lengthy court struggles with Basinger, 54, and said that when the voice mail was released, it brought him to the brink of suicide.

"I used to pray to God every night. I would get in bed, and I would say, please, don't let me wake up in the morning," Baldwin said. "I began to think about what little town I would repair to in order to commit suicide. And then you, obviously you say, well, what would that do to my child if I killed myself? Me, I really didn't care about me."

Study finds women wield power at home

Michael · 27 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

From this article:

'Around the house, women rule. And men aren't putting up a fight about it...'

'Across all decision-making realms, it tilts to the woman," said Rich Morin, the study's lead author. "I was surprised by the percentage of men who made none of the decisions in any of the areas."

"Despite the fact that in our society, we have had this notion of males as heads of households, we have seen the pattern that women tend to really be the managers."

Jealous Moms Impact Dad's Parenting Role

anthony · 29 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

From the article:

'If we're not careful, jealousy and insecurity can turn moms into control freaks. So says Park, a recovering control freak herself. "With our first child, I was constantly asking my husband, 'Are you making sure he's getting his vegetables?' It feels good to make the decisions."

Trouble is, "the more we control how dads do things, the less involved they want to be," Park says. A recent Ohio State University study of almost 100 couples with newborns backs her up: Researchers found that even dads who believed they should be highly involved in childcare shied away from doing things for their infant if Mom was very judgmental.'

False rape reports can bring lasting harm

anthony · 29 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'While falsely reporting a rape only ranks as a misdemeanor, the effects of such reports can cause irreparable damage.

...

In February, a Marist College student said she was raped by a masked man on campus. The reports caused fear and concern among residents and elevated police responses.

Not long after the report was made, the student was arrested by town police on a charge of third-degree falsely reporting an incident.'

Day 3 For 2 Dads On A Crane

MR · 29 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Day 3 For 2 Dads On A Crane

"COLUMBUS, Ohio -- It's the third day for two fathers who are protesting for the rights of fathers.

Paul Fischer, who is an Ohio father dressed like Superman, and Donald Tenn, a California father who was wearing a Spiderman suit, were protesting for the rights of dads who are in custody disputes with ex-spouses."

"The men were (are) up on the large crane with a banner that reads, "Stop the War on Fatherhood" and "Fathers 4 Justice.""

Woman gets 48 years in boy's starvation death- husband gets life without parole

Michael · 29 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Denver woman who pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in the starvation death of 7-year-old Chandler Grafner has been sentenced to 48 years in prison.
...
Her husband, 27-year-old Jon Phillips, was convicted of first-degree murder in August and sentenced to life without parole.'

CNN: Oh, yes it's ladies' night, judge rules

anthony · 30 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'It's closing time for a lawsuit alleging ladies' nights at nightclubs discriminate against men.
...
The lawsuit was brought by attorney Roy Den Hollander, who has crusaded against feminism and recently sued a university over its women's studies program.

Hollander said ladies' nights at Manhattan nightclubs discriminate against men by offering women free or discounted admission and drinks. He tried to link the state to the discounts because it licenses the sale of alcohol at nightclubs.

He called the judge a feminist and said her dismissal of his lawsuit was consistent with the discrimination embedded in many of America's institutions.'

Scotland: We can't afford casualties in education battle of the sexes

anthony · 30 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'But new government figures can now officially put that argument to bed as they confirm that girls are better than boys.

Or, at least, they show that girls are top of the class for another year as far as exam results are concerned
...
'And, accepting the consensus that boys are just as bright as girls, it is impossible to disagree. We surely can't stand back and do nothing when half of our children are getting a raw deal. The most obvious first step seems to be experimenting with the curriculum to try to find a way of engaging boys more in their studies.
...
"But, at the end of the day, if girls are outperforming boys and there's no explanation for it, then it's a serious problem that needs to be addressed."'

Single Sex School's Fine for Girls, Not for Boys

anthony · 30 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Now my little guy ... not so much. Call me sexist, call me old-fashioned, call me crazy -- but for my little man, it'll be a co-ed education all the way. Every time I say this out loud, people give me the evil eye -- as if I just took feminism back 50 years or so. Let's get one thing straight -- this has nothing to do with feminism or favoritism or any other -ism you want to throw at me. This is about a mom who wants the best possible education for her children -- both inside and outside the classroom.

...

Now boys (on the other hand) are an all together different story. I grew up with a brother and dozens of friends who went to all boys school. While they're perfectly charming adults -- all mostly married and gainfully employed, I can't help but think they all would have benefited from having girls around a bit more. I want my son to excel in school, play sports and yes, even share jokes and locker room antics with his buds. But I also want my son to respect girls and see them as friends, not just objects to oogle and brag about. That element, sadly, is what I fear is missing in many all boys environments.'

Teacher Gets 6 Years In Student Sex Case

anthony · 30 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'(AP) Kelsey Peterson's maturity level wasn't much higher than the sixth-grade students she taught. The 26-year-old teacher who started having sex with a former student when he was 12 wasn't a sexual predator, but she will have to register as a sex offender when she gets out of prison.

That's the verdict of a federal judge, who on Monday sentenced Peterson to six years behind bars for fleeing to Mexico with the boy when he was 13.

U.S. District Judge Laurie Smith Camp said Peterson's maturity level "seems to be on the level of a junior high school student," and the boy's attorney agreed.'

Mount Saint Joseph Student Student Charged With False Rape Report

anthony · 30 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Police arrest a College of Mount Saint Joseph student they say made a false rape report.

...

Delhi Police say she later admitted she willingly had sex with the man she accused.

She said in a report she made the allegation because she was afraid her reputation was ruined.'

India: 2 women held for extorting money in false rape case

anthony · 30 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Exceerpt:

'NEW DELHI: Two women were arrested in the national capital for allegedly extorting Rs 100 from a man after threatening to implicate him in a rape case, police said on Friday.
...
The incident took place when Gaur stopped his motorcycle at Netaji Nagar on September 24, police said, adding that suddenly three women appeared on the scene and one of them sat on his vehicle.

While the second woman stood in front of the vehicle, the third took the keys and demanded money threatening that they would raise alarm and implicate him in a rape case, they said.

Gaur gave Rs 100 and drove away from the scene to police station where he registered a complaint.

A police team accompanied Gaur to the spot and after sometime they found the women standing near the Netaji Nagar round-about waiting for another prey.'

Sweden: Cab driver cleared of false rape allegations

anthony · 30 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A young Swedish couple has been charged with bearing false witness after the woman reported she had been raped by a cab driver when the driver tried to get the couple to pay for their ride.
...
“I felt like I’d lost all my rights when I was suddenly arrested. I just wanted to get paid for the trip,” the cab driver said during questioning, according to TT.

The woman later recanted her story about the alleged rape when she learned that a surveillance camera mounted in the taxi had recorded the couple leaving the vehicle without paying.

The cab driver is now demanding compensation for indignity, lost income, as well as pain and suffering.'

Massachusetts Politician: Correct “The Violence Against Women Act” Now

anthony · 30 September 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'“We have no evidence to date that VAWA has led to a decrease in the overall levels of violence against women,” according to Angela Moore Parmley, PhD at the U.S. Department of Justice.
...
One study by the Massachusetts Trial Court reviewed the domestic restraining orders issued in the Commonwealth. The study found that less than half of the orders involved even an allegation of violence. In other words, the order was issued solely on the basis of alleged fear or emotional distress, not because of actual or imminent violence.
...
Elaine Epstein, former president of the Massachusetts Bar Association, spoke candidly about the problem: “Everyone knows that restraining orders and orders to vacate are granted to virtually all who apply… In many cases, allegations of abuse are now used for tactical advantage.”
...
'Now most of you who’ve read my columns know how little sympathy I have for those who make false accusations. Many people have been unjustly incarcerated, while the person who may recant can do so without so much as saying “sorry” while lives are ruined and reputations are destroyed.'

Tell-all father's rights registry needs more exposure

anthony · 1 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

From this article:

'Fathers-to-be are not exactly queuing up to get on Virginia's Putative Father Registry. One year after its creation, only 64 men have signed up.

The registry was created so that unmarried men can preserve their legal rights in case they father a child out of wedlock. The response is just as underwhelming in the other 35 states with similar registries.

The only certain way to prevent that from happening is to register every sex act or to abstain. Most men will probably reject both options. But the growing number of registries around the country are a recognition that the old adoption laws were flawed, too.

For instance, mothers can now avoid the humiliation of having their names published in newspaper legal notices, previously required before the child of an unknown or absent father could be placed with adoptive parents. Children can more quickly be sent to stable homes, and adoptive parents have more protections against lawsuits years after the fact.

Putative father registries are here to stay, and Congress is considering a bill that would create a national version, ensuring notification even when one parent moves out of state.'

The Double Standards of Divorce

arindamp · 1 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

From this article:

'When a man asks for divorce, we blame him for not valuing a life long commitment. If a woman asks for divorce, in seven out of ten cases they do, we assume that the man must have been responsible for forcing her into the situation.'

'The social prejudice is definitely against the men. It is just not restricted to society but is also present in our judicial system. The divorce laws are totally biased towards the women. In a majority of cases she gets the automatic custody of the children, gets a lion's share of the assets and gets paid alimony most of her life.'

Stride Gum Jumps on Misandric Advertising Bandwagon

xtrnl · 1 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Well, fellow MRAs, it's time to start boycotting Cadbury Adams, the maker of Trident and Stride gum. As if those terrible Trident Splash commercials weren't enough, now Stride has a commercial featuring not one, but two groin shots. In the ad, a man is crossing the street, talking on his cellphone, when out of nowhere a ram comes along and hits him in the crotch. He then falls and tries to get up, when it hits him again, forcing him to spit out his gum. Two guys then come along, grab the piece of gum and jump into a van.

This ad is beyond immature, and is reminiscent of the trident ad "the fifth dentist". I'm convinced that the advertising department at cadbury adams must really hate men. I decided to write them the following letter:

Hi. I was just writing because I have a great idea for an ad for your product, Stride gum. A woman is just walking down the street, minding her own business, when out of nowhere a ram head butts her in the crotch, causing her to fall to the ground in agonizing pain. Then when she tries to get up, it hits her again, causing her to spit out her Stride gum.

Obviously, this ad would be in bad taste, so why is it okay to do the same type of thing with a man as the victim of the brutal sexual assault? As you can see, I'm referring to your latest ad "Office Park". Of course, Trident, another brand of Cadbury Adams has also had an ad like this in the past called "the fifth dentist". I don't find groin strikes to be funny, whether they're happening to a man or a woman. It's just offensive. Obviously, I don't intend to buy your products. I just thought I would give you the heads up as to why that is.

Sincerely,
Evan Springler

Please write Cadbury Adams, and let them know what you think. To watch the ad, go to Stridegum.com, click on advertising, then click on the link entitled "Office Park". Then please, click the "Contact Us" link and let them know your thoughts.

Thanks a lot, brothers!

Wife who made glass lunches avoids jail

WakeUp · 1 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This article from ninemsn in Australia is about a woman who crushed florescent glass with a meat tenderizer and mixed it into her husbands sandwiches to poison him slowly. After discovering an affair he was having, she decided to get her revenge this way. The husband eventually found a tupperware container full of this crushed glass and a note.

From the article: "The court heard Mr Nash called police after he found his wife's handwritten note saying: "Q - at death what happens to transfer of property?""

Comments from the judge, from the article: "However, Justice Tennent said Quessy, a charity worker, was unlikely to reoffend and was previously of exemplary character."

From the article: "Justice Tennent noted Mr Nash had lifted an apprehend violence order against his wife in March, allowing her to return home after he had testified that he no longer feared her. A silent Quessy was shepherded out of the Hobart Supreme Court past waiting media by 12 supporters just before lunchtime."

12 supporters? No jail time? Unlikely to reoffend?

Moxon: No Ceiling, 'concrete' or glass

Timothy · 2 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Author Steve Moxon places yet another nail in the coffin of the thrice-debunked "glass ceiling" myth.

An excerpt from the article: "There is no "concrete ceiling" for women. Or even a glass one, come to that. Yet this entirely bogus and unscientific notion is claimed by the Equality & Human Rights Commission -- as a continuation of the old mantra from the unlamented EOC. Women newspaper columnists have queued up this last week to rubbish it, though only on the unenlightened usual lines of women being held back by babies. The broadcast media struggled even to manage this, notably remaining as scientifically illiterate on this as on all matters.

Women certainly are 'going backwards', but it's not just over the past year as the EHRC fears: the position of women at the top has been consistently falling for well over a decade -- probably two. Women become less evident in commercial organisations the more commercial (and therefore hierarchical) they are. The numbers of women on the board has declined, and even more so have the numbers of women even in any 'head of function' role -- which is the launchpad for future board membership. This means that the decline will continue to accelerate.'

Women who conceive accidentally on purpose

Michael · 4 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'A growing number are intentionally becoming pregnant by men they don't expect to be involved. Is it feminism or folly?

...

Katya's attitude might seem blunt, reducing it to nothing more than a biological transaction between herself and a suitable stud, but as a fiercely independent and financially secure woman, she is not alone. The news that the French justice minister, Rachida Dati, 42, is pregnant was greeted with feverish speculation about the identity of the father. Dati, meanwhile, has refused to name him, saying simply that her private life is "complicated". "I've always said that having a child was fundamental to me," was as far as she would go.'

India: Court ruling says no alimony for women with adequate income

Matt · 4 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'In a significant pronouncement on family matters, the Delhi High Court has ruled that a woman earning sufficient income is not entitled to maintenance from her estranged husband.

The logic for alimony is given in a Supreme Court ruling, which says that a woman is entitled to maintenance if her personal income is insufficient to maintain the standard of living she was accustomed to while living with her husband.'

RADAR ALERT: Tell the Democratic National Committee to Fix VAWA Now!

Matt · 5 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

13.5% of likely voters, or 16.5 million voters, believe the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) and the intrusive state-level domestic violence laws that flow from it are deeply flawed. (The calculations, including number and percentage of voters in each state, are shown at http://www.mediaradar.org/political_argument_for_fixing_vawa.php)

People adversely affected by VAWA, and their family members, represent a cross section of the electorate and very often feel so strongly about the harm they suffered that any promise to fix VAWA would override all other issues. This could well be the factor that determines which candidate they vote for.

Furthermore, VAWA-inspired domestic violence laws clog our courts with false claims of domestic violence, which prevents true victims from getting help.

This week, we ask you to share RADAR's calculations with the Democratic National Committee: http://www.democrats.org/page/s/contactissues

According to the DNC's website, one of their guiding principles is to "restore our civil liberties and uphold the civil rights of all." (http://www.democrats.org/a/party/stand.html) Tell them one way they can achieve this laudable goal, and pick up lots of votes in the process, is to Fix VAWA Now!

As always, be courteous.

++
Date of RADAR Release: September 29, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Nebraska 'safe haven' law for kids has unintended results

Matt · 5 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Of course the opening text reports three fathers abandoning kids at "safe haven" spots, creating the impression that they are the typical dropper-offers. Excerpt:

'Between 5 p.m. and 9 p.m. on Wednesday, three fathers walked into two hospitals in Omaha and abandoned their children. One left nine siblings, ages 1 to 17.

The men, unless proven to have abused the kids, won't face prosecution under a new Nebraska law that is unique in the nation. The law allows parents to leave a child at a licensed hospital without explaining why.
...
Landry says the courts will decide whether to require the parents to pay child support or to try to reunite them with their children.
...
All 50 states have "safe haven" laws, but the others apply only to infants less than 1 year old.

The Nebraska law is the "worst-case scenario of unintended consequences," says Adam Pertman, executive director of the Evan B. Donaldson Adoption Institute, a research group. He says it allows parents to walk out on troublesome teens.'

UK: Boys do better when they are taught by men, study finds

anthony · 5 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Boys will perform better in education if they have a male teacher in their primary school, according to research published today.

A study of more than 1,000 men reveals almost half of them (48 per cent) cited male primary school teachers as having had the most impact on them during their school life.

In addition, 35 per cent said having a male teacher challenged them to work harder at school while 22 per cent said males had boosted their confidence in their own ability.'

BBC: False rape woman spared custody

anthony · 5 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman who set off a major police investigation after falsely claiming she was raped by a stranger in Orkney, has been spared a custodial sentence.
...
Sutherland was sentenced to 300 hours of community service at Kirkwall Sheriff Court.

Sheriff Graeme Napier said Sutherland came across as a selfish young lady whose actions had had an insidious effect on the community, but that she deserved some credit for admitting her guilt.'

India: 'Women’s fib'

anthony · 5 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Isn't it infuriating when women who probably abhor the very fundamentals of feminism suddenly embrace it in order to play victim? And isn’t it so offensive when Gender is used as the convenient and automatic justification for losing?

Watching the otherwise fascinating American elections unfold, I’m stunned by how ‘sexism’ has become a central character in the narrative. First, they argued that Hillary Clinton got booted out because she was female. Never mind her dithering, incoherent positions on Iraq; forget about the surly anger and petty control that her husband brought to the campaign and don't even mention the fact that when they thought the ‘tears’ were working, her managers pushed her into playing it even ‘more female’. If anything, surely that’s sexist?'

I guess the 'Voodoo Knife Block' wasn't offensive enough to men...

Proud_to_be_a_man · 5 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

... so they've created some new 'hilarious' crap to offend all penis-owners everywhere (at least those of us who aren't pussy-whipped into thinking this kind of thing is 'fun'...)

http://www.voodooknifeblock.co.uk/hanging-harry-light-pull.php http://www.voodooknifeblock.co.uk/dead-fred-pen-holder.php http://www.voodooknifeblock.co.uk/splat-stan-drinks-coaster.php http://www.voodooknifeblock.co.uk/voodoo-doll-toothpick-holder.php

Appalling.

UK: Teachers who have consensual sex with pupils should not face prosecution, says union

Michael · 5 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Child protection experts reacted with fury last night after the head of a teachers' union said staff who have sex with pupils over 16 should escape prosecution.
...
Teachers who have sex with sixth form pupils are only guilty of an 'error of professional judgement' and it is unfair to put them on the sex offenders register, she insists.
...
Dean Dainty, who was 16 when he had a sexual relationship with his 22-year-old drama teacher Nicola Prentice, says the teacher's abuse of her position wrecked his life.

In an interview for the programme he said: ‘Looking back now, I wish it had never all happened. It affected me in a big way, my personality and things, and I started to do stupid things after it and not be myself.

'It took me a long time to get myself back together – I suppose it took a piece of my life away really.’"

Hearing For Woman Who Stabbed Husband 193 Times Extended

Roy · 5 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"HOUSTON -- Attorneys for a woman convicted of stabbing her husband nearly 200 times got an extra day Friday to prove their claims that she suffered from battered woman syndrome....

Susan Wright and her attorney are asking for a new trial and a new sentencing because her first trial attorneys were allegedly deficient by not calling key witnesses during her murder trial more than four years ago. Wright is trying to shorten her 25-year prison sentence. She claims the killing was in self-defense after being abused by her husband, Jeffrey, for many years."

One might ask the obvious question. If Wright was battered for years, why did she not flee to refuge in any of the hundreds of women's shelters available to her, instead of killing her husband?

Rhode Island schools required to teach about dating violence

Matt · 5 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Not such a bad idea-- but will the curriculum include the whole truth about intimate partner violence? Excerpt:

'One other state, Texas, mandates unspecified awareness education on dating violence for students and parents, while several other states encourage it. But the Rhode Island measure goes further by requiring the topic be incorporated annually into the curriculum for students in seventh through 12th grade.
...
School districts are expected to start implementing the law this school year. By December, officials hope to have established a policy for responding to incidents of dating violence.

The law is gaining traction around the country, with members of the National Association of Attorneys General unanimously adopting a resolution encouraging the education in their states. Nebraska's top prosecutor said he intends to submit legislation modeled after Rhode Island's law, and apparel maker Liz Claiborne Inc. has helped promote it around the country.'

Baskerville on the 2008 U.S. Presidential Election and VAWA

Anonymous · 6 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Excellent YouTube video of Stephen Baskerville, PhD, author of "Taken Into Custody", on the 2008 Presidential election and VAWA. Note what is said about Biden! MANN readers, please send the YouTube link through your networks ASAP.

Video link:
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9JsB0f32NaM

Also, if you have a "Current" account be sure to vote his video up so that it will be shown on Current TV.

Thank you for your activism!

Woman Loses Appeal in 'Milkshake Murder' Trial

anthony · 6 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'HONG KONG — An American woman lost an appeal Monday of her conviction in a Hong Kong court for the beating death of her husband in a sensational case widely known as the "milkshake murder" trial.
...
The 44-year-old housewife from Minnesota was convicted in 2005 of giving her husband a milkshake laced with sedatives in 2003 and then fatally bashing the wealthy banker on the head with a metal ornament.

Kissel said she was defending herself from an abusive husband and appealed the conviction and her life sentence in prison. But prosecutors argued Kissel was a cold-blooded wife who planned the attack in the couple's luxury apartment.'

75-Year-Old Arkansan 'At Her Wits' End' Says She Killed Husband While He Slept

anthony · 6 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'BENTONVILLE, Ark. — A 75-year-old woman told police she was "at her wits' end" when she shot her husband to death as he was sleeping.

Myrtle Marie Walter was being held Monday without bond in the Benton County jail on a capital murder charge in the slaying of Paul Walter, 74, at their home in Rogers.

She told police she and her husband had been drinking Friday night and she had four or five beers. She said her husband wanted to have sex but she did not want to, and she could no longer tolerate the mental abuse, according to court records.

She retrieved a loaded gun, returned to the bedroom and shot her husband once, then fired two more times when she saw him move, court documents say. Rogers police arrested her Saturday and recovered a .357-caliber revolver that was on the bed.'

NY Times Reviews New Baldwin Book

anthony · 6 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Review here. Excerpt:

'Baldwin wants us to believe that P.A.S. is a legitimate syndrome, yet he goes to curious lengths to show us that it may not be a sound diagnosis. He then wraps up by interviewing a Harvard law professor, a “rising star” and a woman who argues that feminism is in part to blame for the broken family law system. The transcript format he uses here is ponderous, self-serious and rigid. You can almost hear him as Jack Donaghy interviewing the hot little number from Harvard.

For all its faults, its creakinesses and almost codger-like crankiness, its occasionally sludgy prose, this book has a point. Divorce is hell. Lawyers are vultures. Children get lost. Baldwin bravely set out to illuminate and change the way divorce is conducted in this country; he also, wittingly or not, offers a candid, unhappy portrait of a marriage gone desperately sour.'

Oprah sued for defamation by ex-girls school head

anthony · 6 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'PHILADELPHIA — The ex-headmistress of Oprah Winfrey's school for girls in South Africa sued the talk show host for defamation, claiming Winfrey falsely suggested she tried to cover up abuse at the school.

In widely reported remarks last year, Winfrey suggested that Nomvuyo Mzamane, 39, of Philadelphia, knew about alleged abuse by a dorm matron and tried to cover it up, Mzamane says in the lawsuit.
...
Former dorm matron Tiny Virginia Makopo, 28, is charged with abusing six students at the $40 million school for poor girls that Winfrey built. Makopo allegedly tried to kiss and fondle the victims and is also accused of kicking and hitting some of them.'

CNN: Female fighters: We won't stand for male dominance

anthony · 6 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'QANDIL MOUNTAINS, Iraq (CNN) -- The women line the mountainside, locked hand in hand in their green battle fatigues, and begin dancing. It's a victory dance, they say, that is routine after raids across the border on Turkish troops.

"We want a natural life, a society that revolves around women -- one where women and men are equal, a society without pressure, without inequality, where all differences between people are eliminated," says Rengin, the head of a female battalion of the Kurdistan Workers' Party, or PKK.'

NIMH-funded study on male victims of partner violence needs men to participate dahines · 6 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Researchers at Clark University and Bridgewater State College are conducting a study on men who experience aggression from their girlfriends, wives, or female partners. If you are a man between the ages of 18-59 and have experienced aggression from your partner within the past 12 months, you may be eligible to participate in this study. We invite you to follow this link to the study webpage where you can complete an Internet survey about your experiences. Link: http://www.clarku.edu/faculty/dhines

Odd couple? Maybe not! "Men and cats" not so oxymoronic

Matt · 7 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Sorry, Fido, It's Just a Guy Thing

'IF you ask Adam Fulrath who is the love of his life, he will barely blink an eye before responding: Parappa.

Mr. Fulrath, a 37-year-old design director at Time Out New York, keeps five photographs of Parappa, a shorthaired, bicolored, mixed-breed cat, on his desktop. He knows that it might be considered a little weird that a grown man would be so enamored with his kitty, but Mr. Fulrath, who is into video games and comic books and calls himself a "straight, geeky guy," doesn't care.

"She's my primary relationship," he said.'

Love it! I have always been a "cat man" and it's no mystery to me.

RADAR ALERT: Fix VAWA Now! – That's What Every Congressman Needs to Know!

Matt · 7 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

October is Domestic Violence Awareness Month. This is the ideal time to raise Congressional awareness about the flaws and failures of the Violence Against Women Act.

Among VAWA's many failures are the fact that it:

- Funds "solutions" to the problem that are grounded in ideology rather than objective research. Thus the problem grows worse every year because the "solutions" don't solve the problem.
- Undermines constitutional protections and makes a mockery of due process, resulting in innocent citizens being forced from their homes and separated from their children based on accusations without any evidence.
- Redefines everyday words in Humpty Dumpty-esque fashion ("When I use a word, it means just what I choose it to mean – neither more nor less"), so that in addition to physical violence, the term "violence" now includes emotional distress - which is highly subjective, easy to accuse someone of, and impossible to disprove.

This week we're asking you to:

1. Go to http://www.house.gov/
2. Enter your zip code in the upper left-hand corner
3. Contact your representative and tell him or her it's time to "Fix VAWA Now!"

++
Date of RADAR Release: October 7, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence.
http://www.mediaradar.org/

Barbara Kay: How about making November false allegations awareness month

anthony · 7 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'In 2000, it was reported that the FBI's DNA testing over a three year period had exonerated more than 30% of their 4,000-plus sexual assault suspects. Going further back, in the FBI's Behavioural Science Unit's 1983 study of False Allegations, a total of 220 out of 556 rape investigations - 40% - turned out to be false. Over a quarter turned out to be actual hoaxes (remember the infamous Tawana Brawley, who at 15 falsely accused a number of white men of a marathon three-day gang rape, some of them police officers? At least she got successfully sued for defamation, but that was small potatoes for the havoc she wreaked in those men's lives). About 4,000 allegations of rape a year are levelled in Manhattan. About half never happened. Police officials in New Zealand state that 64% of rape reports are false.'

Guyland: stuck in the world of male spinsters

Michael · 7 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'A whole raft of research shows that whereas some of society's longest life expectancies are found among groups of nuns, the shortest are found among single men. Single men die early: they drink more, smoke more and kill themselves more often, whereas single unmarried women live longer than their married sisters. The maths is simple: marriage is bad for women and good for guys.
...
So what are you gonna do? Not marry just to save some chick's life? I don't think so. Marry her and save yourself. It's every man for himself, and the selfish man has only one choice: if he wants to die happy and old, marry and marry quick. Staying too long in Guyland is for those with a death wish.'

"If anything, the girls feel that they are exploiting the punters"

Matt · 7 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. So much for the "she has no other option" line. Excerpt:

'...Dancers pay the club a fee to use their premises. After that, essentially, they are self-employed and can earn anything from £20 to £400 in a night. Girls say that the financial security counters any feminist argument against stripping. ... Some girls, though not many, are paying their way through university. Others are single mothers, supplementing a wage. Younger girls do it for the extra cash and party lifestyle.

Zoe, 22, has been dancing for five years....“I have never had a job where I've felt so empowered,” she says. “I've just got myself through university, I've got my own car, my own house."

...If anything, the girls feel that they are exploiting the punters. “I just think more fool the man because he's paying me to flippin' dance in front of him,” laughs Fiona. She and the girls clearly enjoy each other's company. “It's fun being a girl in this job,” says Zoe. “We get to go to events. We get to go to clubs for free, we have our nails done. It's very girlie, and it is all about the female bonding.”'

Modern-day "dandyism"

Matt · 8 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. It's no more attractive when men do it. Of note is that he seems to have no shortage of clients. So much for the women-wouldn't-do-that line. Excerpt:

'He sees himself not as a prostitute, but as a species of modern dandy. “It began as a gradual thing, trial and error. I wanted to avoid the nine-to-five life at all costs… and I love partying.” Golden came from what he describes as a working-class family in Woking and the Isle of Wight to London to do a degree in jazz at Middlesex University. There, he plunged deep into the capital’s nightlife, DJing, carousing and looking for new opportunities. “A lot of things go on behind the scenes in the music world.”
...
Golden seems comfortable with the idea that he is the perfect accessory. His lovely ladies have self-explanatory names and appear to be from central casting: Trustfundista in London, Celebrity X in New York, Miss Heiress in Paris and Miss Alpha, a hedge-fund investor. A kept man, kept by many women, he is on the receiving end of the medicine women have tasted for years. “I felt it was something that us postmodern men might have to get used to,” he says.'

The divination of girls can't start early enough

Matt · 8 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Wonder why no boys are ever given such a deal? Oh yeah, they need to actually earn their heroic status in society by killing people or losing arms and legs first. Excerpt:

'KATMANDU, Nepal - Hindu and Buddhist priests chanted sacred hymns and cascaded flowers and grains of rice over a 3-year-old girl who was appointed a living goddess in Nepal on Tuesday.
...
Devotees touch the girls' feet with their foreheads, the highest sign of respect among Hindus in Nepal. During religious festivals the goddesses are wheeled around on a chariot pulled by devotees.

Critics say the tradition violates both international and Nepalese laws on child rights. The girls often struggle to readjust to normal lives after they return home.

Nepalese folklore holds that men who marry a former kumari will die young, and so many girls remain unmarried and face a life of hardship.'

Critics say the tradiaiton is bad for the girls, while boys and men are busy wheeling her around in a chair for what, 5-10 years? It's bad for HER?

But of course no one will marry her after she's been a "goddess". Can you just imagine what it would be like for a man married to a "former goddess"?

Mother arrested over sons' death in Eastbourne fire

Michael · 8 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The mother of two young brothers who died at a house fire in Eastbourne was arrested today on suspicion of manslaughter and child neglect.
...
Neighbours said that they had become trapped in the house after their mother, Denise Goldsmith, 29, ran to get help and accidentally locked the door behind her.
...
The cause of the fire, which led to the deaths is part of an ongoing investigation of this tragic incident, but at this stage it is not being treated as arson.'

Australia: Damaged reputation linked to male suicide

anthony · 9 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"A SHATTERED reputation is most likely to lead to suicide among middle-aged men, according to a new analysis which warns naming and shaming must be carried out with caution.

Tasmanian researchers have reviewed 33 cases of suicide linked to a tarnished reputation but no previous mental illness.

...

This paper suggests that loss of reputation increases the risk of suicide, lead author Saxby Pridmore, a professor of psychiatry at the University of Tasmania, wrote in the journal Australasian Psychiatry.

...

`Thus, naming and shaming needs to be conducted with great caution.'"

“Does Feminism Discriminate Against Men?” at College of St. Benedict

anthony · 9 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'ST. JOSEPH, Minn. – Two men will discuss sexual discrimination during a presentation Oct. 22 at the College of Saint Benedict, St. Joseph.

Jim Sterba, professor of philosophy at the University of Notre Dame, and Warren Farrell, a researcher and international speaker on men’s issues, speak on “Does Feminism Discriminate Against Men?” at 7 p.m. at Alumnae Hall, Haehn Campus Center, CSB.

Their presentation will focus on issues of discrimination in the workplace and in schools. Sterba and Farrell will also demonstrate how to engage in controversial conversations in constructive ways.'

Ed. note: CSB is a women's college.

'Chivalry should receive gratitude'

anthony · 9 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Whether they admit it or not, a lot of women will hold certain expectations for the behavior of men, regardless of how roles have changed through the years.

Deep down some women still appreciate and judge men on their willingness to do things like open car doors, pay for a meal or pull their chair out before sitting at a restaurant; however, they may not always show this side of themselves.

Unfortunately, these standards are slowly drifting away, and many men are not participating in these so-called acts of chivalry.

In turn, women are excusing the fact that men are not making this effort, thus allowing for the change to occur.'

Contact info for the paper is here.

Woman accused of threatening teen daughter's ex

anthony · 9 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'ST. CHARLES, Ill. — A woman is accused of badgering her daughter's teenage ex-boyfriend with hundreds of e-mails and text messages and threatening to post nude images of him on the Internet unless he started seeing the girl again, a prosecutor said Wednesday.
...
Police are pursuing counts of intimidation, harassment and child pornography possession in the case, according to the newspaper. Investigators are analyzing cell phones and computers seized from the girl's home and school.'

Boy's Hidden Tape Recorder Captures Abuse At Day Care, Mom Says

anthony · 9 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'ORLANDO, Fla. -- A tape recording of what a mother is convinced is abuse inside a Central Florida day care has prompted a Department of Children and Families investigation, Local 6 has learned.

Miranda Asura said that her 2-year-old son came home from Orange County's Brighter Beginnings day care with bruises so she sent him back with a tape recorder stashed in his backpack.
...
Asura played another portion of the recording in which the teacher apparently tells a young girl to hit her son.'

South Park - No Longer Cool To Watch

xtrnl · 9 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Today I watched the most recent episode of South Park, and I was truly offended. It had the most gratuitous brutal violence against male genitalia that I've ever seen in a show. Not to mention, a plot that's based around Indiana Jones getting raped by Stephen Spielberg and George Lucas raping Indiana Jones. Yeah, you read it correctly. That's not the truly offensive part, though. It's obviously meant to be symbolic of how they've destroyed Indiana Jones movies by butchering the remakes.

Getting to the brutal violence. Cartman thinks that the Chinese are going to take over America, so he goes to P. Cheng's to try to find out what he can from the owners of the restaurant, with Butter's helping him. Butter's accidentally shoots three men in the dick in the episode. Granted, it is just a cartoon and Cartman does Butters a verbal reaming for doing it, and South Park has actually had an episode in the past where Oprah's vagina and ass pulled guns on themselves and shot themselves. But this is actually presented in a truly sadistic, expected to actually laugh at the pain of the poor men, kind of way.

I guess it was only a matter of time until this was to happen. I just would like to hear what you guys have to say about this. I know I shouldn't let a cartoon piss me off so much, but this was way over the line.

Links to clips on Youtube:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IEivDtsD8rs

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=WdCvmDS_xvA

Teenage girl sends boy nude photo and he is the one arrested

BinaryShadow · 9 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Must be nice to be able to throw any boy you hate in jail by sending naked pictures of yourself. Excerpt:

'SANGER - A controversy has arisen out of Denton County involving a 13-year-old boy, a cell phone and a text message. That message has landed the middle schooler in juvenile detention on child pornography charges.
...
...[He] spent the night in a juvenile detention center after an eighth grade female student texted him a naked picture of herself.
...
“I know some girl was taking pictures of herself and sending it to multiple guys. Obviously, they’ve still got their picture on their phone because they are now getting in trouble,” said Bethany Mitchell, a classmate.

So far only the 13-year-old boy has been arrested.

India: Move to legalize live-in relationships

arindamp · 9 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. More bias against men. Excerpt:

'MUMBAI: In a progressive step with far-reaching implications, the state cabinet on Wednesday gave its green signal to amend Section 125 of Criminal Procedure Code (CrPC) which seeks to protect the pecuniary interests of the 'other woman'. However, it would need the Centre's stamp of approval to become a law.

...This amendment would cover the interests of women involved in polygamous or live-in relationships, say officials. The only catch is that the state has not specified the term 'reasonably long period' that a woman needs to stay with a man to be called his wife.
...
Explaining the need for such an amendment, state law department officials said most bigamy cases lead to problems for the 'other woman' not recognised by law in presence of the official wife. “The other woman is on the streets in dire straits if the man decides to dump her for someone else. She is not entitled to any maintenance as her status is not that of a wife," said officials. '

'Dear Margo' endorsing paternity fraud

Anonymous · 9 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Read it here. She says there is nothing to be gained by informing the "could be" father of his little son. Excerpt:

'...However, two years later I have a beautiful baby boy who looks nothing like my husband and has the personality of the other man. In my heart I am convinced he is not my husband's son. The other man is currently serving a tour in Iraq. Do I tell him about his son?
...
[Reply:]
Your little boy has a dad, and it would turn your life upside down to tell this man he has a son. Nothing good would come of it ... but you might wind up with a custody suit or a divorce.'

Florida Woman Arrested for Burning Husband's Groin, Police Say

anthony · 9 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'BRADENTON, Fla. — Authorities say a woman has been arrested in west Florida after pouring scalding hot water on her husband's groin.

Manatee County Sheriff's Office deputies arrested 52-year-old Maverna Theresa Turay on Wednesday on a charge of aggravated battery with great bodily harm. She was being held at the Manatee County jail on $7,500 bond.'

Trident's "The Fifth Dentist" ad is back mens_issues · 10 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

There was a recent thread about a "Stride Gum" commercial featuring a ram battering a man, in which a comparison was made with an older Trident ad called "The Fifth Dentist". Tonight I was watching TV when that old "The Fifth Dentist" ad by Trident came on. In case you're not familiar with it, the announcer states that "Four out of five dentists prefer Trident gum, but what about the fifth dentist?" A squirrel runs up the fifth dentist's leg and an audible "crunch" sound can be heard (presumably from the dentist's testicles being bitten). The dentist then screams "Noooooooo!"

I sure hope that this commercial wasn't re-aired out of spite for the previous protest emails about Stride gum, but I wouldn't put it past them.

You can contact Cadbury Adams about this inane commercial here.

Woman arrested after false report of rape at Wal-Mart

Michael · 10 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A northwest suburban woman who reported being raped in a Wal-Mart washroom on Sunday ended up behind bars herself when the actual story proved a little different.
...
However, police reviewed videotapes and discovered that the woman had gone into the washroom with a man willingly, the report said. She then changed her story and said she did have consensual sex with the man, whom she did not know, but he refused to pay her for the sex act.'

Ireland: Girls Are Happier Than Boys At Primary School, Study Shows

anthony · 11 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Just over one quarter (26 per cent) of primary seven boys are completely happy coming to school, compared with 44 per cent of girls, according to a survey carried out by Queen's University Belfast and the University of Ulster.

The Kids' Life and Times Survey found that boys in Northern Ireland were less happy than girls with writing, reading, spelling, working by themselves and coming to school. The survey also found that just over half of primary seven children think pupils in their school have been bullied.'

Central Texas Woman Accused Of False Rape Report

anthony · 11 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Williamson County deputies have arrested a Lampasas woman and accused her of lying about being sexually assaulted.

The Sheriff's Office says several weeks ago, Deborah Ann Keen-Papp, 43, told them she was attacked on Highway 29 after she had pulled over with car trouble.

She gave police a description and deputies released a sketch of the alleged suspect.

But Friday deputies took Keen-Papp into custody on the charge of false report to law enforcement.'

New Zealand: Rape-lie woman `model citizen'

anthony · 11 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A deaf Hamilton woman who falsely claimed she was raped and beaten during a home invasion has been described as a devout Christian and model citizen.

Kohine Dallas Pania Turanga appeared in the Hamilton District Court for sentencing on Monday after earlier pleading guilty to a charge of willfully attempting to pervert the cause of justice.
...
Defence counsel Gina Jansen had told the court that Turanga suffered from depression and had sought professional help in an attempt to understand her actions. She said Turanga deeply regretted wasting police time and described the 41-year-old cleaner as a model citizen and committed Christian.'

Q&A With Author Kara Jesella, 'Five-Minute Time Out: The Boy Crisis'

anthony · 11 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'I was very surprised by the people pushing back on the story, because I didn't come to the story as an advocate one way or the other, just as a reporter who started to look at national data at how broadly boys were not thriving across race and class lines. There are people who feel we shouldn't focus on boys, that it's somehow part of the feminist backlash. I don't agree with that. I try to lay out in the book why I think this is an important issue for all people, whatever their political orientation. I consider myself a strong feminist and I am the mother of sons. I don't feel that my looking at this is taking oxygen away from very serious issues that still need to be addressed, like gender equity in the workplace, that there are not enough women in Congress, equal pay for equal work. These are real issues, but we need to separate them from what is happening to schoolboys.'

Kenya: Rising demand for male circumcision

anthony · 11 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'KISUMU, 9 October 2008 (PlusNews) - Health facilities in Nyanza Province in western Kenya are struggling to meet the demand for medical male circumcisions since politicians threw their weight behind efforts to promote the procedure as a way of reducing HIV infections.

The campaign initially faced opposition by community elders of the ethnic Luo community that makes up the bulk of the province's inhabitants and does not traditionally practice circumcision. But local leaders, swayed by calls from Kenya's Prime Minister, Raila Odinga, and research demonstrating the HIV prevention benefits of being circumcised, have since said they would set an example by undergoing the procedure themselves.'

Australia: Workshops focus on male mental health

anthony · 11 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'A men's health consultant says men are becoming more interested in their health needs but there is still more work to be done to improve outcomes in Queensland.
...
Mr Millan says men often do not seek help for depression or anxiety.

"In every age range in Australia more men die than women," he said.'

Men To Walk In High Heel Shoes To Support Violence-Free Homes

anthony · 11 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'HENDERSONVILLE – Starting at 6 tonight, men will wobble in women's high-heeled shoes through downtown Hendersonville to support violence-free homes. Proceeds from sponsored walkers in the event will go to Mainstay, Henderson County's domestic violence prevention agency and emergency shelter.

The walk is open to male community members and leaders will proclaim their solidarity in support of violence-free homes by marching in high heels. Elected officials, educators, students, law enforcement officers, and others are expected to participate. The Blue Ridge Roller Derby girls will lead the walk.

Registration starts at 5:30 p.m. Friday at Mainstay's Purple Ribbon Thrift Store. The walk will proceed up 5th Avenue to Main Street, and will end in the front of the old historic courthouse. Men are encouraged (but not required) to walk in women's shoes and participants are being asked to get sponsorships.'

Wife to Stand Trial For Trying to Set-up Teacher Husband

anthony · 11 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'FULLERTON -- The estranged wife of an Orange County teacher and her boyfriend will stand trial for allegedly trying to frame the woman's husband on drugs and weapons charges.

Devon Eileen Abbott, 33, of Mira Loma, and Soloman Brian Silver, 42, of Portland, Maine, are charged with conspiracy to falsely charge a crime, false imprisonment by fraud, conspiracy to falsely report a crime, and transportation of marijuana, said Deputy District Attorney Keith Bogardus.

Abbot and Silver are accused of planting a shotgun and drugs in a vehicle parked on a high school campus to get the woman's estranged husband arrested.'

Accused John Cusack Stalker Accepts Plea Deal

anthony · 11 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'LOS ANGELES -- A plea deal was accepted today by a woman accused of stalking actor John Cusack.

33 year-old Emily Leatherman pleaded no contest to a felony count of stalking Cusack which will keep her out of state prison. The Judge immediately sentenced her to five years' probation and mandatory psychiatric counseling. Leatherman was also ordered to stay away from the 42-year-old actor for the next 10 years.
...
In a rambling statement Friday morning, Leatherman claimed she was the victim of sex crimes and thought Cusack could help her.'

Rape victim studying science of memory after man dies serving wrongful sentence

Michael · 12 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Michele Mallin said she was "100 percent sure" when she identified Timothy Brian Cole as the man who raped her.

Her resolve never wavered, Ms. Mallin said, until she learned last May that DNA testing had invalidated her 1985 identification. The revelation came nearly nine years after Mr. Cole died at 39 in a Texas prison from an asthma attack.

...

The memory process works well when someone is shown a face repeatedly. But when the exposure is episodic, "we end up with the gist" of a person's looks, said Dr. Gary Wells, a nationally known expert on eyewitness testimony and a professor of psychology at Iowa State University.

...

She said she believes that Lubbock police and prosecutors manipulated her by repeatedly describing Mr. Cole as "a low-life hood." The Army veteran had a misdemeanor arrest record in Lubbock for gun and marijuana possession.

...

From everything she now knows, Ms. Mallin said, the law should not allow prosecutions based on eyewitness identifications without corroboration.

"Obviously, we're human," she said. "We make mistakes."'

Hitchens on women and humor: an instructive interview

Matt · 12 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This video seems to me to be a good instruction on what to say and what not to say when a point one makes about differences between the sexes gets challenged. At once Hitchens stays calm and centered and sticks to his points with no digression. That is the up side. The down side is his use of offensive slang to describe lesbians ("butch/bull dyke"). That isn't something to be condoned. He also mentions religious affiliation at one point ("...female comedians are either... or Jews..."). That also wasn't necessary nor is it even true, and even if it was, it wouldn't be a relevant distinction (as it also isn't relevant to mention sexuality). So this clip of Hitchens has its value in both regards. His primary point that a woman need not be funny to get attention though is true. Men do have to work harder to attract mates or even get consideration in some cases. How much of that is human biology in action vs. social construction is a fair topic for debate.

"Lesbian porn star" trying to clear name

GaryB · 12 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This story from Australia explains how a woman "had sex with" two underage girls (14), and filmed them to make a porn DVD.

First shock (not) is that she got a two year good behaviour bond, no jail time. Of course - she's a woman, after all, she shouldn't actually be PUNISHED.

Second shock (not) is that she feels she should have her conviction quashed - to allow her to work with children! Excerpt:

"A NEW South Wales woman, who made lesbian pornography with teenagers, will ask the High Court to clear her name so she can work with disadvantaged children. Rebecca Jane Clarke will seek to have her conviction erased, based on a controversial ruling that sex offenders can be acquitted if they "honestly believe" their victims are more than the age of consent.

...
Clarke, 23, who stars in a pornographic DVD she made with two girls, both 14, will argue her name should not appear on the national sex-offender register. If the High Court does not quash her conviction, she will be banned from working as a counsellor."

They never see what they do as wrong, do they?

Australia: Woman stabs her sister to death over hair straightener - excuses abound

GaryB · 12 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

This story is a classic example of the double standard. This woman brutally stabbed her sister in the neck, killing her, allegedly in an argument over a hair straightener. And yet, the article lists just about every excuse you can imagine - here is a collection of quotes, pulled out:

'Friends...said she was extremely close to Susan but had recently lost her job and was struggling at university. Friend Sarah Allender said Kathleen was the victim of bullies and had felt as though she lived in Susan's shadow.
...
"Her entire (life) Kathleen was bullied about being obese and later lost weight at the gym," Ms Allender said. "Her sister was considered to be the perfect one and that often upset (her) that she was always getting the attention."

...
Sarah's sister Rebecca said Kathleen was "close to her sister" but was having trouble at university and had lost a job.
...
The court was told Kathleen had been under watch in custody since Saturday after fears she may harm herself. Parramatta Local Court was also told she required medication, with speculation she suffered from a hormonal disorder.'

So before we even reach court, we're told she 'loved' the sister very much, was bullied, depressed by her weight issues, suffered by being in her sisters shadow, was struggling at uni and lost her job, and has a hormonal disorder. We should feel sorry for her, obviously. Man, this stuff makes me sick.

Wife Kills Husband and Feeds Him to Children

Anonymous · 13 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman jailed for life for stabbing her de facto husband 37 times, skinning him and cooking his body parts as a meal for his children has lost an appeal against the severity of her sentence.
...
She then decapitated him and put his head in a pot on the stove, baked flesh from his buttocks and cooked vegetables and gravy as side dishes to serve to Mr Price's children.'

Obama supports female draft registration

Matt · 13 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Even as the U.S. confronts two long wars, neither Sen. John McCain nor Sen. Barack Obama believes the country should take the politically perilous step of reviving the military draft.

But the two presidential candidates disagree on a key foundation of any future draft: Mr. Obama supports a requirement for both men and women to register with the Selective Service, while Mr. McCain doesn't think women should have to register.

Also, Mr. Obama would consider officially opening combat positions to women. Mr. McCain would not.'

UK: Judge says the boy 'seduced her' as 39-YO married woman walks free

Anonymous · 13 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"A judge caused outrage yesterday after he refused to jail a woman who had sex with a 14-year-old boy and instead told her: 'He seduced you.'

Sharon Edwards, 40, bombarded the boy with as many as 50 text messages and emails a day, offered to buy him cocaine and regularly lured him into her bed.

Yet she walked free from court yesterday after Judge Peter Fox QC said the married housewife was an unhappy woman who was unable to resist the advances of a child.'

Woman gets life in prison for killing 4 in Texas

Anonymous · 14 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'HOUSTON (AP) — A jury has convicted a woman of capital murder for the shooting and beating deaths of four people in suburban Houston in 2003.

Christina Paolilla received an automatic life prison term Monday. She was not eligible for the death penalty because she was 17 at the time of the crime.'

UK: Female methodist minister falsely alleges hate campaign

Anonymous · 14 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

Methodist minister Rev Janet Magee, 62, falsely claimed to police that she had been receiving threatening telephone calls and abusive letters, it was alleged.

On the strength of the minister's complaints police arrested church steward Roger Chessell who had wanted to force her out of her job.

But he was released without charge and detectives focused their inquiries on the clergywoman, believing she may have been lying about the hate campaign.'

Sweden: Jealous woman gets life for killing 2 toddlers

anthony · 14 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'STOCKHOLM, Sweden - A Swedish court on Tuesday sentenced a German woman to life in prison for bludgeoning two toddlers to death and trying to kill their mother in a fit of jealousy.

The court said it was beyond reasonable doubt that Christine Schurrer, 32, had attacked the family with a "hammer-like object" in March inside their home in Arboga, central Sweden.

The Vastmland district court said the rampage was triggered by jealousy after Schurrer's ex-boyfriend ended their relationship and started a new one with the children's mother. The children were aged 1 and 3.'

Australia: Boys' schools break barriers: single-sex success story

anthony · 14 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'BOYS will be boys and single-sex schools can help break down sexism.

This will be the message delivered by visiting US education expert Dr Leonard Sax in his keynote address when the National Boys' Education Conference starts at The King's School in Parramatta today.

Dr Sax, executive director of the National Association for Single Sex Public Education in the US, is in no doubt "we live in a sexist society".

He said some teachers at all-boys' schools were able to use the "all-boys format to break down the gender stereotypes".'

Girl behind rape hoax still has anonymity

anthony · 14 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Everybody knows who she is.

Nobody wants to say her name out loud.

That, more or less, is the situation the 17-year-old girl who cried rape in Palos Heights Sept. 16 finds herself in today, five days after she admitted she made the whole thing up.

The media has a longstanding policy of not naming rape victims in all but the most exceptional circumstances.
...
But when it turns out there wasn't a rape in the first place, the question gets more complicated, media ethics experts say.'

Obama delegate at DV awareness dinner recounts how he was falsely accused

anthony · 14 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A boilermaker by profession, Parker said his experience with VAWA came in April 2003 when his now ex-wife accused him of not only domestic violence, but also kidnapping their then-2-year-old son while they were living in St. Louis. Though Parker says he was the actual victim when his wife attacked him, he chose to de-escalate the situation by leaving the house and returning to a job assignment in Illinois.

The reason he took his son, Parker said, was for fear his wife would either abuse or neglect him.

According to Parker, he was arrested when he returned to St. Louis the following week. Along with contesting a protective order his wife filed against him, Parker said he had to fight assault and parental kidnapping charges.'

Huffington Post: 'McCain-Palin's Extreme Position On Violence Against Women'

anthony · 14 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Right-wing websites like Men's News Daily and Townhall greeted Joe Biden's selection as Obama's running mates with a chorus of misogynistic jeers. Referring to the democratic ticket as "GynObama" and "VAWA Joe," one Men's News Daily article asks men to "do a quick testicular self-exam. That space you feel between your legs means that Barack Obama and Joe Biden -- both on record as ballbusting misandrists -- will easily convince you to send them to the White House." The Democrat's emasculating flaw? According to one Townhall writer, "Tragically -- but true to the radical feminist agenda -- the Obama/Biden Democratic ticket portends an escalating war on boys, men, fathers, and families." The right-wing objection, in a nutshell, is that specific treatment for women under the law is a violation of equal protection, and therefore unfair to men.'

Missing girl's mom indicted on murder charge

Matt · 14 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'ORLANDO, Fla. - The mother of a missing 3-year-old girl was arrested Tuesday and charged with killing her daughter, even though the child's body has not been found during an exhaustive four-month search.

A grand jury indicted Casey Anthony on charges of first-degree murder, aggravated child abuse, aggravated manslaughter and four counts of lying to investigators about the disappearance of her daughter, Caylee, State Attorney Lawson Lamar said. The mother is being held without bond.'

Victory! CA Appellate Court Says Excluding Men from Domestic Violence Programs is Unconstitutional

Michael · 15 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'California attorney Marc Angelucci scored a tremendous victory today as the Third District Court of Appeal in Sacramento ruled that California's exclusion of men from domestic violence violates men's constitutional equal protection rights.

The taxpayer lawsuit -- Woods. v. Shewry -- was initially filed in 2005 by four male victims of domestic violence.'

George Lopez promotes sexual violence on Nickelodeon sjones · 15 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

On the October 14th episode of "George Lopez" which is shown on Nickelodeon, a network for children, George and his mother are in a bar sitting at a table. The mother starts insulting a man who is sitting at the bar. The man gets fed up and stands up and turns around. She then charges at the man, gets in his face, and then knees him in the testicles. Then she pours her beer over his head while he lies helplessly on the ground. George then takes her out of the bar and they go home where she laughs about it. The scene is obviously intended to be funny, although there was nothing funny about it to anyone who isn't a misandric bigot. The most offensive thing about it is the fact that this misandric sexual violence is being shown on a children's network during prime time.

When I went to the nickelodeon website I could not find any links allowing me to contact them and express any opinion of any kind about their programming. Nickelodeon, by the way, is controlled by Viacom, which is controlled by the infamous Sumner Redstone, a psychotic sociopath with a long history of anti-white-male bigotry in all of his programming.

If anyone can find a link for complaining about this show, please do so. There is no excusing this being shown during prime time, and there is never any excusing it being shown specifically to children.

"Windfall moms join deadbeat dads"

anthony · 15 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Recently...I stumbled upon a woman who not only managed to afford cosmetic surgery while feeding her family with food stamps, but who literally could write the book on "How To Beat The System and Screw My Ex-Husband All In One Fell Swoop."

...

It all started in 1989, when the Legislature enacted the Child Support Standards Act, which remains the driving force in determining parents' child support obligations.

...

The act was necessary for a lot of reasons, not the least of which was the need to protect mothers from baby-daddies who planted their seeds without ever tending to the saplings born there from. It should be regaled for that reason alone.

Unfortunately, the act is not without its bugs, and in certain scenarios - particularly those where Dad is not a deadbeat, but rather a hard-working slob who may have fallen on hard times - the flaws in the law can truly undermine the purpose.'

Stem cells from testicles an option to embryos

anthony · 15 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'WASHINGTON — Cells taken from men's testicles seem as versatile as the stem cells derived from embryos, researchers reported Wednesday in what may be yet another new approach in a burgeoning scientific field.

The new type of stem cells could be useful for growing personalized replacement tissues, according to a study in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature. But because of their source, their highest promise would apply to only half the world's population: men.'

Grandma with five dead husbands freed

anthony · 16 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

' RALEIGH, North Carolina (AP) -- A Georgia grandmother who came under suspicion because all five of her husbands had died was released Thursday from a North Carolina jail where she had been held on charges in one of their deaths.

Betty Neumar, 76, posted $300,000 bond late Thursday morning at the Stanly County jail, where she's been held since her arrest in May, Sheriff Rick Burris said.

He did not know the conditions of her release or where she got the money. It was not clear if she would be allowed to leave the state.

Neumar is charged with solicitation to commit first-degree murder in the 1986 death of husband No. 4, Harold Gentry.'

College dean: Student lied about rape

anthony · 16 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'ANDERSON — An alleged rape on the campus of Anderson University last week was falsely reported, a university official said Tuesday

Dean of Students Brent Baker announced to students during a morning chapel service that a female student lied when she told campus police she had been raped Oct. 6.

“At the conclusion of the investigation by the Anderson Police Department, they’ve determined— and we’re in agreement— that a false rape report was filed,” Baker told the large crowd of students gathered at Reardon Auditorium'

Obama Interview With Men's Health Magazine

anthony · 16 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"We need to have an awareness built in throughout various agencies charged with improving health. I'll give you a specific example. My grandfather died of prostate cancer. As men age, regular checkups are critical. But it's hard to get them to go in for that mildly unpleasant checkup. Increasing awareness of the difference it could make shouldn't just be the activity of the Department of Health and Human Services.
...
Somebody once said that every man is either trying to live up to his dad's expectations or make up for his dad's mistakes. And I'm sure I was doing a little bit of both. But I feel that somewhere in my late 20s or early 30s I sort of figured out what his absence had meant. It is part of what I think has made me a pretty good dad. I don't think it would have too much of an impact on my decision-making as president. There's no doubt that it has contributed to my drive. I might not be here had it not been for that absent father prodding me early in life."

New dads can get postpartum depression, too

Michael · 17 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'If his baby had needed to be soothed three months ago, Sandler, 36, of Houston, Texas, might have handed the baby off to his wife and then found an excuse to leave the house.

"Honestly, it felt like when I was at home, the walls became very, very close in. I wouldn't say claustrophobic, but very cabin feverish," Sandler said.

It turned out that Sandler, a medical device salesman, had more than cabin fever. He recently got an official diagnosis: He has a male version of postpartum depression.'

California DV ruling makes MSM

Matt · 17 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video here. Marc, et al., you guys hit the ball out of the park! And NCFM get a solid mention, too. Fantastic work!

MSN: If he's happy he must be cheating

Matt · 17 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

MSN cannot stop with the "suspect men of everything" stuff, can they? Latest is here. Excerpt:

'4. Nothing fazes him anymore.“If he was short-tempered before, a combination of added sex and attention could be making him way more relaxed, even downright giddy,” Vranich says. Adds Mira Kirshenbaum, author of When Good People Have Affairs: Inside the Hearts and Minds of People in Two Relationships: “If your guy is suddenly going around all happy and whistling, then you need to find out why.”'

I.e., a man in a relationship isn't allowed to be happy. The implication therefore is that in order to be sure your husband or boyfriend is not cheating on you is that he is perennially miserable. Gee, sign me up for that deal!

For giggles, let's reverse the sexes on this one:

'4. Nothing fazes her anymore.“If she was short-tempered before, a combination of added sex and attention could be making her way more relaxed, even downright giddy,” Vranich says. Adds Mira Kirshenbaum, author of When Good People Have Affairs: Inside the Hearts and Minds of People in Two Relationships: “If your gal is suddenly going around all happy and whistling, then you need to find out why.”'

So there!

Michigan Mom May Lose All Children After Abandoning 13-Year-Old Son in Nebraska

anthony · 17 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'PONTIAC, Mich. — Prosecutors in the home county of a Michigan woman who abandoned her 13-year-old son at a Nebraska hospital this week said Thursday they are seeking temporary custody of all the woman's children.

Prosecutor Deborah Carley said a hearing would be held Thursday afternoon in Oakland County juvenile court on her petition for temporary custody of the five children of Terri and Terrance Martin of Southfield.

Terri Martin made a roughly 12-hour drive to leave the 13-year-old at an Omaha hospital under Nebraska's unique safe haven law.'

UK: Boys lag girls at school by five

anthony · 17 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Girls already have a well-established educational lead over boys by the time they start school, a study claims.

The study of 15,000 UK children suggests girls are two months ahead of boys in tests of verbal, non-verbal and visual skills by the age of five.
...
It also found girls had fewer behaviour problems than boys, and those children with better behavioural development tended to have a greater ability to learn.'

Women's 'empowerment' laws in India used for extortion

Anonymous · 18 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Section 498a of the Indian Penal Code is a criminal law in which the wife and her parental family can charge any or all of the husband's family for physical or mental cruelty. This law is unique to India, it not only discriminates based on gender (man Vs. woman), but also discriminates against women based on their relationship with the husband. Typically, the charged family members in these cases include:

• Mostly women of all ages (unmarried, married and pregnant sisters of the husband, his mother and sisters-in-law, elderly grandmothers and aunts)
• Other maternal and paternal relatives and even young children in the family.

Most failed marriages are ending up in false 498A cases so as to blackmail the husband and extort maximum out of him.

Shocking Statistics

Official Statistics	Males	Females
SUICIDE Rate (Married)	64%	36%
One SUICIDE in Every	8 Mins	13 Mins
Suicide of Married persons per year (approx)	56000	28000
Number of MURDERS	26467	7952
One Murder in Every	19Mins	66Mins
No of 498a cases by	N/A	58,319

For more informaton please visit
Save Indian Family Foundation
Save Family Foundation
498a

Actor Admits to 'Sleeping With' Stepmother at Age 12

anthony · 18 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'George Hamilton reveals in his new book that he slept with his stepmother when he was only 12.

"When I was very young, 12, I had a relationship with my stepmother," he told the ladies of the View on Thursday.
...
"My father never knew about it, and it was a very strange thing. But it was very normal, in a strange — she didn't make me feel bad about it," Hamilton said on the program. "It wasn't dirty."

Hamilton said that his stepmother called it "cuddling" and he didn't feel abnormal about it.

"I was molested?" he said. "Damn, I'm down for it again."

Teacher gets 2 years' home detention for 'sex tryst' with boy, 15

anthony · 18 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The 15-year-old boy's foster parents noticed improved study skills, better behavior and a more positive attitude during the few months he worked with Sheila Vasquez.
...
Friday, she was sentenced to two years on home detention and four years on probation for sexual misconduct with a minor. The offense requires registration as a sex offender.

She could have faced up to eight years in prison under her plea agreement. But in meting out a six-year sentence, Marion Superior Court Commissioner Stan Kroh noted her blank criminal history, remorse and responsibility for three young children.

The last four years will be spent on sex offender probation. Kroh recommended she continue with counseling.'

Harvard adds plethora of new 'gender studies' courses

anthony · 18 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'It had offered a mere 76 courses. Now with addition of "Gender and Sexuality in Ancient Greece" and 29 others, the curriculum is at last worthy.

I was pleased to see that Harvard has updated its curriculum. Under former President Larry Summers, Harvard neglected feminist and women's studies. Fortunately, under Drew Gilpin Faust, Harvard has added 30 new courses this year in these disciplines'

An 'overwhelmed' mom's deadly mistake

anthony · 18 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'At about 4 p.m., Brenda was in her office, getting ready to head home when all hell broke loose. "A good teacher friend of mine -- sometimes I think it was a blessing it was her -- was on her way home, and she walked by my car," Brenda says. "She ran into my office and she said, 'Brenda, your baby's in the car.'"

...

When she got to her car she found Cecilia in the backseat, still strapped into her car seat. Brenda says she grabbed her daughter out of the car as fast as she could, but she knew it was too late.

...

Despite his grief, Gary says he has never blamed his wife for Cecilia's death. "I could have done the same thing very easily," he says. On nights when his wife had to work late, Gary says she'd ask him to pick up the girls from the babysitter's house, a break from their normal routine. A few times, he says he forgot. Oprah.com: How to heal your grief

...

Although coping has been difficult, Brenda says she has found a higher purpose that is helping her move forward. "Almost immediately, I said, 'How am I going to make something out of this?' I have been given this to bear for a reason, and I'm not going to let Cecilia's life be in vain. That I'm going to use what I've learned in this whole process to change lives for other people."

Brenda says the lesson she learned that she wants to pass on to other moms is to slow down -- ..."...dinner doesn't matter -- the kids matter."'

Who says men need to get married to be happy?

Michael · 18 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"It's also known as bachelorhood and, according to Deeson, the age at which he should make his way to the departure gate is 35. This is when a man should start thinking about finding a good woman and settling down. Shortly afterwards, he should also consider trading in the sports car for a Volvo, donate the Xbox to a children's charity and decommission the DVD collection. The reward for doing so is a life of simple bliss, where he lives longer and happier, snuggled up in the warm embrace of a loving relationship."

Well, not so fast, Deeson. Not everyone feels this way."

Why moms get jealous when dads bond with kids

anthony · 19 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'One reason we're possessive of the parental crown may be that, although society's changed, we still get traditional messages about women's roles. "A lot of our mothers, our workplaces, our TV shows still tell us that moms should do most of the childcare," says Liz Park, Ph.D., a marriage and family therapist with three kids in Crownsville, Maryland. We moms can be good at taking such messages to heart.

"For women, no matter how far along you are in your career or no matter how much of a feminist you consider yourself to be, at some level you're coming from an assumption that women are caretakers," says Heather Gerken of New Haven, Connecticut, a law professor and the mother of Anna, 6, and Ben, 2. "When Anna was a baby, I would feel guilty about the time away from her," she says.'

False rape reports outrank other unfounded crimes

Michael · 19 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Who would do that? Lie about being raped?

Well, people lie about everything. Only this kind of fabrication isn't talked about. It's awful to think someone would lie about rape when real victims suffer. Or ruin the life of an innocent man with accusations.
...
But according to the FBI, which compiles nationwide crime statistics, forcible rapes have a higher unfounded rate than other crimes. "Unfounded," in police speak, means baseless or false, or "no crime was committed," said Joe Pollini, a retired veteran New York detective who teaches police law at the John Jay College of Criminal Justice in New York City.'

Professor Alesina now asking Obama for "man tax" in U.S.

Matt · 19 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A.: Some MRAs think I have overstated the threat of a "man tax" in the U.S. Well, maybe so. But here it is again. Professor Alesina is now calling for Obama to implement it. My posted comment:

'Alesina's "man tax" theory was debunked by one of Europe's most prominant labor economists, Professor Gilles Saint Paul, in his article, "Against gender based taxation: Abolishing equality before the law is wrong and dangerous." http://www.voxeu.org/index.php?q=node/922

Alesina also ignores people's right to equal treatment. Article 2 of the United Nations universal declaration of human rights says "Everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set forth in this Declaration, without distinction of any kind, such as race . . . sex . . . ."

Apparently Alesina doesn't think that matters much.

In fact he treats humans as "goods of sale" and forgets that people have a fundamental human right to equal treatment regardless of their sex

Men already pay more taxes than women, work 90% of overtime, make about 90% of occupational deaths, drive longer commutes and die younger in the process. They collect Alesina's garbage, climb in his sewers and get exposed to chemicals so he can go to his ivory tower job and propose taxing men more. His man tax is nothing short of outright sexism, hypocrisy, double standards and bigotry.

The "pay gap," which Alesino uses to justify his man tax, is actually not about male privilege at all but a reflection of the female privilege of having more choices than men. In his book, "Why Men Earn More," Dr. Warren Farrell shows that in recent polls women prioritized flexibility, less hours and shorter commutes while men prioritized money, that never-married and childless women earn 17 percent more than never-married men with the same education, and that women outearn men in 39 occupations including aerospace engineering, financial analysis and speech pathology. Women are choosing to retain their option of being primary parent and are even choosing men who earn more to allow them to make that decision. Prof. June O'Neill, Ph.D., former director of Congressional Budget Office, refutes the significance of the "pay gap" in "The Gender Gap in Wages, circa 2000" (5/03), American Economic Review.'

Woman wanted baby to die because he was a he

Matt · 19 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Read this. Imagine a man writing such a thing saying he wanted a boy and when the ultrasound came back that it was a girl, he said all these things? Suppose he'd get sympathy or condemnation from the public? Excerpt:

'...We had the prettiest pink outfits. Then the ultrasound said it was a boy.
...
I immediately withdrew. I wanted to die and I wanted the baby to die."

Now she goes on to say she 'got used to' having another boy and now she really loves him. Well, good for her! That makes it all right then, doesn't it?

I am reminded of the fact that boys are aborted disproportionately higher that girls here in the U.S. Yet the press can't run enough with the feminine infanticide-in-China ball, can they? Clue to the MSM: How about covering both problems and championing the suggestion that the parents involved get their heads on straight and just be glad if they can actually produce a healthy child. Or does that make too much sense?

Washington Post: Boxed Into a Corner, Men Can't Punch Back

anthony · 20 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The point is not to suggest that either Obama or Biden should come out swinging ugly slurs, half-truths or outright lies. But the conventional wisdom seems to be that the men on the Democratic ticket can't tell Palin precisely what they think of her moose, her hockey pucks and her Joe Six-Pack-isms. If a fella should try, he will be perceived as a bully, as condescending, as ungentlemanly.
...
But the reality is that women can deliver a straight-up beatdown as well. In a post-feminist, Title IX culture, there is significant evidence that women are fighting more like men -- and men don't know how to respond.'

Teaching Society That Boys Really Are Different

anthony · 20 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Before he was a best-selling author, respected social philosopher and corporate consultant, Michael Gurian was a 7-year-old boy whom no one seemed to understand.

...He presents evidence that boys think and behave differently than girls based on their brain structures and brain chemistry and encourages public schools and families to embrace all that is enigmatic about boys.

...A lot of these boys end up hating school. ... They are now in a school system that does not understand them; now they hate school and they start separating from it. ...of course they have a higher dropout rate. And then when we move into the economy, we see males are not trained enough. We are losing males who can survive and thrive. This mismatch of males to the system is starting when they are very young.
...
'Girls are now succeeding so much in school and college, but when they get into the workplace, the stuff that made them successful in high school and college isn't translating - especially if they are in a field that has any kind of science side to it. Another big area is the emotional and relational...'

Canada: Woman plotted to kill her mother's husband

anthony · 20 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'New Westminster - A 21-year-old woman is facing a life sentence in prison for conspiring to murder her mother's common-law husband.

Ashleigh Hiebert, who was 19 at the time of the alleged crime, was originally charged with first-degree murder but has pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit murder.

The Crown alleges that Hiebert was a go-between in the alleged murder plot of 26-year-old Jeffrey Sabine, whose body was found by a passerby on Feb. 10, 2006 on the shore of the Fraser River in the 1500-block of Cliveden Avenue on Annacis Island in Delta.'

RADAR ALERT: RADAR Releases Recommendations to Stop False Allegations of DV

Matt · 20 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

False claims hurt true victims of violence. Under the Violence Against Women Act, false allegations have reached epidemic levels:

- According to the RADAR Report, "Without Restraint: The Use and Abuse of Domestic Restraining Orders,"[1] at least one million restraining orders are issued each year in which no violence is even alleged.
- A recent analysis found 81% of temporary restraining orders in West Virginia are false or unnecessary.
- In San Diego, prosecuting attorney Casey Gwinn admits, "I would say it's in the thousands of people who take the witness stand and somewhat modify the truth."

RADAR recently released a White Paper (.pdf file) that analyzes the problem of false allegations. The White Paper presents 10 needed changes to federal and state domestic violence laws to correct this insidious problem:

1. The definition of domestic violence should be consistent with statutory definitions of physical assault.
2. Harassment and stalking should be objectively defined in terms of specific acts by the alleged offender, not the perceptions or feelings of the alleged victim.
3. Partner abuse that does not fall within the above-described definition of domestic violence, harassment, or stalking should be addressed by counseling, treatment, and mediation, not by the law enforcement or criminal justice systems.
4. In order to obtain a restraining order, petitioners must provide hard evidence of physical assault, harassment, or stalking.
5. Restraining order petitioners may not make a petition for child custody while a temporary restraining order is in effect.
6. Because restraining orders can affect constitutionally protected parental rights, judges should use the evidentiary standard of "clear and convincing evidence."
7. Restraining orders should be issued during ex parte hearings only when objective evidence is presented that the violence, harassment, or stalking represents an immediate credible threat to the petitioner's physical safety.
8. States should enact laws that penalize the filing of false complaints or engaging in perjury. These laws should pertain to the actions of plaintiffs, attorneys, domestic violence shelters, and other organizations that engage in such activities.
9. Prosecutors and judges should be encouraged to vigorously pursue such violations.
10. Government-funded legal services must be made equally available to both the petitioner/plaintiff and respondent/defendant.

We encourage persons to review these recommendations and share them with your state and federal lawmakers to make needed reforms. We cannot allow the epidemic of false allegations of domestic violence to continue.

++

Date of RADAR Release: October 20, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Press release: Domestic violence programs in California must open doors to battered men

Anonymous · 20 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Press release here. Excerpt:

'The case (Woods. v. Shewry) was filed by four men and the daughter of one, against the State of California and its agencies. The lower court dismissed the case on the ground that men and women are "not similarly situated" as victims. The Court of Appeal reversed the decision on October 14, 2008, holding "male victims of domestic violence are similarly situated to female victims for purposes of the statutory programs" and the laws "violate equal protection."'

Study on suicide notes an increase among middle-aged women but ignores men

anthony · 21 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Should I be surprised there's no mention that men still make up the majority of suicides? Excerpt:

'The number of women committing suicide has increased dramatically over the past decade and is driving up the nation's suicide rate as a whole, a new study finds.

The rate of suicide in the United States has risen for the first time in a decade and, for once, middle-age women are being looked at as the culprit driving the increase, according to researchers from the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health's Center for Injury Research and Policy.

The overall suicide rate rose 0.7 percent over the study period, but increased 3.9 percent for middle-age white women and 2.7 percent for white men in the same age group.'

Glenn Sacks: Madonna Plays Victim in Divorce Battle

anthony · 21 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'It doesn't matter how wealthy, powerful and privileged a woman is, in divorce some women still love to play the victim. Latest case in point--Madonna.

Madonna is worth an estimated $850 million. Whatever one thought of her music and her racy image, she is in many ways the model of the empowered modern woman--a successful businesswoman who rose from nowhere to become rich and famous.'

...

According to the UK Telegraph:

...

"They include allegations that he told her she 'looked like a granny' on stage compared with her younger backing dancers. He is also alleged to have declared that she could not act, and was 'past it' after she turned 50.

Her lawyers say that 40-year-old Ritchie's comments made Madonna feel worthless, unattractive, unfeminine, insecure and isolated during their eight-year marriage."

Study on false rape allegations

anthony · 21 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Though this study looks like it was done or last edited in 2001, this is still a good resource. Dr. Kanin is also mentioned in the Wikipedia entry on rape statistics, which is also a good page to bookmark in your "MRA Issues" folder. Excerpt:

'Currently, the two main identifiable adversaries involved in the false rape allegations controversy are the feminists and the police. ... Some feminists virtually deny the existence of false rape accusations and believe the concept itself constitutes discriminatory harassment toward women (see Grano, 1990). On the other hand, police are prone to say the reason for not believing some rape complainants resides in the fact that the rapes never occurred (Payton, 1967; Wilson, 1978; Jay, 1991). Medical Examiners lend support to this police position by emphasizing the ever-present possibility that rape complainants may be lying (Shill, 1969, 1971).'

UK: Ministers pledge to reduce secrecy of the family courts

Mr VanHuizen · 22 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Ministers promised yesterday to reduce the secrecy of family courts, which can make decisions about parents' access to children.

The pledge followed a fierce attack from a senior family law judge who said it was time for the public to see 'cases in action'.

The move towards making the workings of the family courts more transparent follows years of controversy over alleged injustice to children and parents.

Cases in which courts have broken up families on the advice of social workers have led to widespread criticism.

Campaign groups such as Fathers 4 Justice have staged demonstrations in the Commons and elsewhere in protest over perceived bias in favour of women in divorce cases and custody orders dealt with by the family courts.'

Teen motherhood a "right"?

anthony · 22 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The big problem I have with The Tennessean's September 24th editorial topic of targeting teenage dads, and of course the guest editorials that embrace yet another social government program, is that we're left with a truly false dichotomy.

That is, teen motherhood is an absolute "right" while teen fatherhood is just a financial "responsibility." I am so sick and tired of hearing this same old song and dance. Teen mother - good. Teen father - bad. She had no choice but to deliver a baby she cannot afford without taxpayers footing the bill. He had all the choices at hand but now must pay financially through the nose. Not to mention, he must accept that everyone but him decide how little parenting time he actually gets. It's a disgrace par excellence.'

MND: A Real Femme Fatale: U.S. Sen. Joseph Biden

anthony · 22 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Hillary supporters do not despair: You do have a woman on the Obama ticket and her name is Joseph “Jo” Biden. When Obama talks about wealth distribution, he seldom, if ever, mentions any related programs by name. But you can bet your last dollar – and you won’t have much else left by then – that Jo Biden is percolating plans for a national “man tax.”

Legislating a “man tax” (reparations of sorts) will be done under the noble guise of compensating women to the benefit of all society and, of course, especially children. The Financial Times of London last year allowed two university economics professors to write anonymously in promoting a “man tax.” The commentary in part stated, “Men’s labour supply is more rigid, so an increase in taxes does not reduce their labour supply by much, if at all. … A higher take-home salary for women created by our proposal would allow them to buy more childcare at market prices and, since childcare facilities employ mostly women, they would also benefit on their costs.”

Because She’s a Woman: Glass Ceilings, Female Politicians, and Hate Speech

Broadsword · 22 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Blog post here. Excerpt:

"Thus, one clear meaning of the glass ceiling is that men are conspiring together against women. This has been one of the themes of feminist rhetoric: Evil men oppress women. In order for women to rise to the top, they not only need to achieve like men do, but they also need to overcome the unfair efforts by men to hold them back.

In that interpretation, to say there is a glass ceiling is to accuse men of doing wicked things: of conspiring against women to keep them down. If men are actually engaged in such a conspiracy, then talking about it is a valid way of protesting injustice and promoting liberty. But if men are not conspiring and oppressing, then talk of glass ceilings is irresponsible accusation. It can even be regarded hate-mongering, in that it inspires negative feelings toward men, and unfairly so. At least, such speech is an attack on men, unless one has clear proof. Candidates (and others) who use the term "glass ceiling" should be required to furnish persuasive proof that men are indeed engaged in such a conspiracy."

The politics behind the pink ribbon

Michael · 22 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Some advocates for research into other diseases, and some scientists, worry the breast cancer movement is hogging the spotlight — and the money — at the expense of other worthy causes. Some within the breast cancer movement itself accuse advocacy organizations and corporate donors of “pink washing,” using a veneer of altruism to cover up practices these critics find objectionable.

In the world of cancer charities and government funding, breast cancer is queen. The top four breast cancer charities take in a combined annual revenue of roughly $256 million according to their tax returns...
...
The National Cancer Institute (NCI) devoted $572.4 million researching breast cancer in 2007. Other National Institutes of Health (NIH) funding for breast cancer boosted the total spent on the disease to $705 million. Plus, the Department of Defense operates its own breast cancer research outfit at a cost of another $138 million in fiscal 2008.

By way of comparison, in 2007 the NCI spent $226.9 million studying lung cancer, the leading cancer killer in the U.S., and $73.3 million studying pancreatic cancer, which kills nearly as many patients as breast cancer, usually within a year of diagnosis. Cardiovascular disease, the biggest killer of both men and women, received $381 million.'

Woman assaults man and herself in effort to blame him, faces charges

Michael · 22 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'PORT ST. LUCIE — A 26-year-old woman is facing charges after allegedly beating a man Monday who told her to leave when she tried to kiss him, according to an arrest affidavit released Tuesday.

Katrina L. Clemente, of the 3100 block of Southwest Chilton Court, also is accused of hitting a 17-year-old girl, who is eight months pregnant, in the stomach.
...
A witness reported seeing Clemente get out of the van and start running down the street, striking herself, "so she could call the police and claim that (the male victim) hit her," the affidavit states.'

New VAWA Video On 'Women For Obama' Site

anthony · 22 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video found here. When the web page opens, click under 'watch more video's and a menu will guide you to the VAWA video.

Palin plays the gender card

anthony · 23 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Blog entry here. Excerpt:

'"You've got to ask yourself why was Senator Hillary Clinton not even vetted by the Obama campaign?" Plain continued. "Why did it take 24 years, an entire generation from the time Geraldine Ferraro made her pioneering bid until the next time that a woman was asked to join a national ticket?"

"In the long history of our country, 74 people have held the position of President or Vice-President, and why have the major parties given America only two chances to even consider a woman for either office?" Palin asked. "This glass ceiling, it is still there, but it's about time that we shattered that glass ceiling once and for all."'

AOL Canada: The Trouble With Boys

anthony · 23 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Mack's reading a book called The Trouble with Boys, and I'm only about halfway through (I'm busy writing a book of my own: I forgot how much freaking work these things are), so I'll give you a full report when I'm done.

The thesis of the book, though, is summarized on page 23: "Let's take a look at how boys are doing. What we find is that, on the whole, in crumbling public schools in poor neighbourhoods, in elite schools that serve the very rich, and in many middle-class suburban schools, boys are doing less well than girls." Some high-performing boys do better than girls, but the trend is across the board, and wherever you look many more boys are in "special education" classes than girls.

Now the author, Peg Tyre, a former Newsweek writer and the recipient of, among other awards and prizes, a Pulitzer, is speaking specifically about how boys are performing in school, why it is and what we can do about it.'

ABC: Number of Male Teachers Shrinking Fast

anthony · 23 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

"Right now, we know that there's about 4 to 5 percent men in early education, about 9 percent in elementary education. And in high schools, we have about 14 percent," said Bryan Nelson, the founder of MenTeach.org, a nonprofit organization working to increase number of men working in schools.

Nelson cites three main reasons for the absence of male teachers.

"The first reason is stereotypes. People believe men aren't nurturing. The second reason is fear of accusations of abuse. People are afraid men are going to harm children. And the third reason is low status, low pay," he said.'

ABC News Video: Working women on the decline, no mention of men

anthony · 23 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Video report here. The video suggests women between the ages of 25 and 54 are just as likely as a man to lose their job during a recession. The economy has also negatively impacted women's wages, but no data about men's earnings were provided.

RADAR: Next 2 Weeks: All-Out Effort to Fix VAWA Now

Matt · 23 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

VAWA Reformers --

In just two weeks from now, November 4, will be Election Day. Candidates are now scouring the countryside in search of votes. These candidates are especially willing to hear about the concerns and worries of their voters.

Folks, THIS IS OUR GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY.

RADAR has just completed 45 radio interviews around the country. We're still riding the momentum from our hugely successful Heritage conference on October 1. We just got news of the historic California victory. And for the first time, the DV industry is being placed on the defensive.

Our challenge is simple: Over the next 2 weeks, we want every candidate at the local, state, and national levels to hear the message, loud and clear, "FIX VAWA NOW!"

RADAR has flyers available on our website: http://www.mediaradar.org/ . We even have an eye-popping poster available to download. Use the telephone, the internet, conversations with neighbors and friends -- tell them we need to "FIX VAWA NOW!"

It's time to seize the moment. Our children are counting on us. Let's roll.

The RADAR Team

Australia: Females perpetrate 20 per cent of sex abuse of men

Matt · 23 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Marc A. Story here. Excerpt:

'ONE in five male sex abuse victims have been abused by women, but they don't want to talk about it, a Brisbane counsellor says.

Spiritus Kinections counselling services co-ordinator Dr Gary Foster said sexual abuse of males by females is often not believed or identified as sexual abuse.

"In actual fact it might have been abusive and quite manipulative," Dr Foster said.

Dr Foster said the idea that a man always wants sex with women and a young man should feel lucky to be having sex with an older woman often make it difficult to report sexual assault by a woman.'

Duke Lacrosse accuser writes book

Anonymous · 23 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. The Duke lacrosse accuser has written a book and asserts that she was assaulted on the night in question. Excerpt:

'She declined to answer specific questions about the details of the case on Thursday, and the publisher of the book said repeatedly "the case is closed" and she accepts the conclusions of state prosecutors.'

Does this mean this is a fictional account and she just needs some money?

Japan: 'Virtual murder' results in arrest

Matt · 23 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

I am posting this largely for the purpose of demonstrating (as if it were necessary) not only how nuts in general people these days have become but also how skewed law enforcement priorities are. This kind of thing is why I don't bother reading fiction. Reality (such as it is) is... fascinating... enough. Excerpt:

'TOKYO – A 43-year-old Japanese piano teacher's sudden divorce from her online husband in a virtual game world made her so angry that she logged on and killed his digital persona, police said Thursday.

The woman, who has been jailed on suspicion of illegally accessing a computer and manipulating electronic data, used his identification and password to log onto popular interactive game "Maple Story" to carry out the virtual murder...
...
The woman had not plotted any revenge in the real world, the official said.'

Domestic Violence Ads Claim Boys Grow Up to Be Abusers

SpikeRants · 23 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A domestic violence shelter's new awareness campaign features ads on city buses that show young children alongside disturbing captions such as, "One day my husband will kill me."

The ads, which appear on and inside several Dallas buses, are designed to shock people, said Paige Flink, The Family Place's executive director.

"Children are greatly affected by family violence, even though people think it's a man and a woman fighting," Flink said in Thursday's editions of The Dallas Morning News. "Victims get blamed a lot. If you put an adult battered woman (on an ad), some people would blame her. But children are still seen as innocent."

...
The nonprofit group's ads have prompted a few complaints and two billboard companies refused to accept it, Flink said.'

Okay, the place running these ads is called "The Family Place." How many MEN have been turned down by this shelter?

Disgusting.

Duke false accuser threatened with lawsuit over book

anthony · 24 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The woman who prosecutors determined falsely accused three Duke lacrosse players of rape maintains in a new memoir that she was attacked, a claim that provoked an angry lawsuit threat from one player's family.

Crystal Mangum, who appeared publicly Thursday for the first time since making the allegations more than two years ago, says in her book being made available online Friday that she is not "looking forward to opening old wounds" but that she had to defend herself.'

Author says schools have become tougher on boys

anthony · 24 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'But as a Pulitzer Prize-winning investigative reporter for Newsweek and CNN, Tyre noticed a trend: As schools across the country cut recess, music and other subjects not required by state tests, the number of students taking medication for attention deficit hyperactivity disorder went up.
...
"Boys probably do better in a more active learning environment," Schwartz said. "But we need to be paying attention to each individual child. Boys may need a more active, problem-solving curriculum; gifted and talented students need the opportunity to stretch themselves; our English language learners need intensive support to develop their English language skills. We need to focus on a variety of strategies to help kids succeed better in order to be doing our job.".

Mom Whose Baby Ate Crack Cocaine at Party Won't Go to Jail

anthony · 25 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Buffalo, N.Y., mother whose baby boy ate crack cocaine and opiates at a party was spared jail time because a judge was impressed by her efforts to turn her life around.
...
Dixon brought the baby to a party in June where people were smoking crack. He became ill and went to the hospital after he accidentally ingested the drugs.
...
In court Tuesday, the judge sentenced the mother to one year of probation and ordered her to submit to Buffalo Drug Court scrutiny to overcome her issues with marijuana.'

Woman admits to false rape report, pays fine and gets 'counseling'

anthony · 25 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Instead, there was "rough sex" gone wrong, infidelity and what Mebruer testified Monday was a big mistake.

The 35-year-old was found guilty of filing a false police report after a bench trial before Greene County Associate Circuit Judge Mark Powell.

As punishment for the misdemeanor, she'll have to pay the Springfield Police Department more than $1,350, undergo counseling and spend two years on unsupervised probation.'

UCF men slip on heels to understand domestic violence

anthony · 25 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Is this becoming a trend? On October 10th, men in North Carolina did the very same thing. Excerpt:

'Male students at the University of Central Florida got the chance to strut around the Student Union patio in high heels Wednesday afternoon to make point about domestic violence.

The men were participating in the second annual "Walk a Mile in Her Shoes" demonstration, part of "Strike Back! Help Break the Cycle of Violence" hosted by UCF Victim Services in conjunction with Harbor House of Central Florida. Harbor House is an Orange County agency that provides temporary shelter, advocacy and information for individuals in an abusive relationship.'

Ed. note: Looks like it. Another such story here.

'JANESVILLE — More than 80 men marched proudly for a good cause Friday evening in downtown Janesville. They wore high heels.

While their footwear was questionable, their cause could not have been more worthy.

They marched in heels as a way of saying no to domestic violence. And they raised money for the cause in the YWCA's second annual Walk a Mile in her Shoes.
...
Best makeup: Mark Terry. His mother, Jutta Terry, did his makeup and artfully painted his shoes. He wore a blonde wig and other accoutrement that he hoped added up to a casual French look.'

Society hides male domestic abuse

anthony · 25 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Men tend to suffer the same torments as women as long as they stay in abusive relationships, including shock, unexpressed anger, misplaced guilt, and agony over whether to stay or go.

Those who don't go generally stay for the same reasons women do — fear, dependence or a desire to keep the family together for the children. Men, too, can be beaten and tortured into a state of learned helplessness.

When abused men leave, their experiences tend to be much different than those of their female counterparts. They are less likely to tell anyone the truth about the breakup and must face sexist attitudes from many sources.'

Castration: The Next TV Frontier

anthony · 25 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The temperature has cooled, the leaves are turning colors, and the new fall television season has begun. Enter the mudslide. The Shock and Awe manipulators have been unleashed to air evermore graphic sex and grotesque violence -- and, predictably, a combination of the two. The first "winner" in this race to the bottom was the FX cable channel, another sure bet. On Sept.17, viewers of the appropriately named new series "Sons of Anarchy" were "treated" to a graphic castration scene, complete with hacked-off genitals shown lying in a pool of blood.

Completely tasteless programming is in, and FX bathes in it. The mastermind of all that Rupert Murdoch-backed villainy is an executive named John Landgraf, who pronounces his philosophical approach thusly: "One of our writers used to say, 'Bad men do what good men can only dream about.' There is a sense that what these characters are doing is allowing us to explore, in a safe context, our id and subconscious, what we might do if there were no restraints of society or conscience on us.'

Misandric 'The Ex List Show' Debuts On CBS

anthony · 25 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Abandon hope and every drop of testosterone, all ye who enter here. CBS' new comedy-drama The Ex List is a descent to the most profound levels of Chick Flick Hell, where the damned and those with Y chromosomes cry out in agony through all eternity.

Aimed at an underserved television demographic -- Women Aged 18 To 34, Home Without A Date On Friday Night And Cursing The Entire Male Gender As A Result -- The Ex List goes about its male-bashing business with a ruthless glee.

Men are too clingy. Men don't want to commit. Men whine. Men roar. Men want to drink your blood. (You think I'm kidding about that one, don't you? Oh, you poor bastard.) Men don't grow. Men change. Men say they'll write a song about you, and then it turns out to be called Bitch Left Me On My Birthday. This is a Lifetime movie times The View, raised to the power of Oprah, except there's no chance you'll get a free car for watching.'

Four Men Become First Males to Major in Women's Studies at K-State

anthony · 25 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Four men have become the first to pursue a degree in women's studies at Kansas State University.

Program director Angela Hubler says the men are breaking ground in a way similar to equal-rights activists Frederick Douglas and John Stuart Mill. She says students who major in women's studies are committed to social justice issues.

University officials say there are many job opportunities for students who major in women's studies, including law, counseling and politics.'

Teacher Accused Of Tying Students To Chairs

anthony · 25 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'NEW BRITAIN, Conn. -- A New Britain special education teacher has pleaded not guilty to charges she abused autistic children.

Michelle Campbell, 36, had no comment outside New Britain Superior Court Thursday on the charges that she abused children at the Chamberlain School. However, parents of Campbell's alleged victims had a lot to say about the charges brought against the teacher.

"This was putting children in a closet in the dark, holding them in the closet, holding the door, not letting them out," said spokeswoman for the alleged victims' families, Lisa Nkonoki. "Waterboarding if you will -- taking the child, putting water up their nostrils and face so they couldn't breath."
...
Parent Alertba Marin said that her autistic son, one of the alleged victims, doesn't want to sleep alone in bed any more.

"He doesn’t want to sleep with the light off," she said.'

Mutant gene found in 70 percent of prostate cancer

anthony · 25 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'WASHINGTON (Reuters) - A mutated gene previously linked to breast cancer has been found in 70 percent of prostate tumors as well, U.S. researchers reported on Friday.

They found the gene BP1 was overactive in samples of prostate tumors removed from patients and said their finding suggests the gene may underlie other cancers too.

"We have previously published that it is active in 80 percent of (ductal) breast cancer (samples tested) and 63 percent of acute myeloid leukemia, and now we are finding it in prostate cancer," Dr. Patricia Berg of the George Washington University Medical Center, who led the study, said in a telephone interview.'

Czech "cannibal women" get only 9- and 10-year sentences

Anonymous · 25 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A cannibal cult mother who tortured her son in a locked cellar while relatives skinned him and forced him to eat his own flesh has been jailed for nine years.

Klara Mauerova, 31 - a member of a sinister religious cult and her sister Katerina led the sickening torture of her eight-year-old son Ondrej and his ten year-old brother Jakub.
...
The judge also jailed Katerina, 35, for ten years for her role in the sickening abuse.

The two boys had told judges how their mother and relatives had stubbed cigarettes out on their bare skin, whipped them with belts, and tried to drown them. They were also sexually abused and forced to cut themselves with knives.'

Police: McCain volunteer made up robbery story

Matt · 25 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Speaking of false accusations, I am not surprised to read this. When I read the initial story, I thought, "This is bunk; there are so many holes in it you could float campaign balloons through it." The liar said a 6'-4" black male was her attacker. Talk about pandering to racial stereotypes and prejudices against both men and blacks! But as long as men in general are considered fit targets for false accusations, should it come as any surprise that in a given case the liar would make the extra effort to say it was a black man who attacked her even if blacks make up only 10% of the population? These kinds of things are doubly disgusting and I will be extra annoyed if she doesn't do time for it, and I bet she'll get "psychiatric counseling" instead. Excerpt:

'PITTSBURGH (AP) - A McCain campaign volunteer made up a story of being robbed, pinned to the ground and having the letter "B" scratched on her face in a politically inspired attack, police said Friday.

Ashley Todd, 20-year-old college student from College Station, Texas, admitted Friday that the story was false and was being charged with making a false report to police, said Maurita Bryant, the assistant chief of the police department's investigations division. Police doubted her story from the start, Bryant said.

Todd, who is white, told police she was attacked by a 6-foot-4 black man Wednesday night.

She now can't explain why she invented the story, Bryant said. Todd also told police she believes she cut the backward "B" onto her own cheek, but did not provide an explanation of how or why, Bryant said.

Todd initially told investigators she was attempting to use a bank branch ATM when the man approached her from behind, put a knife with a 4- to 5-inch blade to her throat and demanded money. She told police she handed the assailant $60 and walked away.'

Girl arrested for allegedly stabbing boyfriend while holding her baby

Michael · 26 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Salt Lake City teenager was arrested Tuesday for allegedly stabbing her live-in boyfriend in the back. Police say she held her small child while assaulting the man.
...
The man said he started to walk away from his girlfriend after breaking up with her and that he "lost all feeling in his legs," Bedard said. He then realized that the girlfriend had stabbed him in the back with a knife. The man was taken to an area hospital in serious condition.

The teenager fled the scene in a vehicle, but later turned herself into police. She was booked into juvenile detention on suspicion of aggravated assault and child endangerment.

The girl allegedly was holding her baby - who is about 6 months old - while she stabbed the boyfriend, Bedard said. The child was unharmed during the incident.'

The other minority: Male teachers make an impression

anthony · 26 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Caley is one of only four male teachers in his school. Of the district's 354 elementary teachers, only 37 are men.

That might come as no surprise. Men have been the minority among teachers in this country since the 19th century.

But this is the 21st century, when men and women aren't railroaded into traditional roles. Things should be changing, right?

On the contrary, the number of men teaching school is at a 40-year low, according to the National Education Association.'

Report card on boys troubling

anthony · 26 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The pervasive underachievement of boys is creating intense concern for parents. Last month, the federal government released a study that showed nearly 1 in 5 parents of boys had talked to their pediatrician about their son's emotional or behavioral issues (compared with 1 in 10 parents of girls). It's troubling for boys themselves too. Teenage girls report more anxiety and stress but boys between the ages of 15 and 19 are four times more likely to die at their own hands than their female classmates.
...
In West Englewood, veteran principal Tim King opened Urban Prep Charter Academy for Young Men, a single-gender school. He's working to get poor boys back on track academically—and headed to college.

More school administrators should follow their lead. Before the school year gets any further along, let's stop blaming the boy. Instead, let's ask ourselves if the schools are engaging them—and if not, let's figure out what we can do to create an educational system in which all our children can succeed.'

India: Men suffering domestic violence unite bharati · 27 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Sunday marked two years since the Domestic Violence (DV) Act came into effect. But some men observed it as black day. They say the act is inhuman since it ignores men completely.

Mohan (name changed, 30), a civil engineer with a construction company, had an arranged marriage two years ago and says he is being beaten up by his wife daily. "She wants to have control over me and wants me to do everything she says. My brother stays with me and she doesn't want me to support him or give money home.

Whenever she finds out that I have helped my family, or we have an altercation on the matter, she beats me with wooden sticks and iron rods," he said.'

RADAR ALERT: As We Approach Election Day, Tell Candidates to Fix VAWA Now!

Matt · 27 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

RADAR has just completed 45 radio interviews around the country. We're still riding the momentum from our hugely successful Heritage conference on October 1.

And we just got news of a historic legal victory in California: a state appeals court ruled that California domestic violence laws discriminate against men because they only provide state funding for women and their children who use shelters and other programs.

For the first time, the DV industry on the defensive. Let's keep the momentum going.

One week from now is Election Day. At no other time of the year are politicians more receptive to hearing about concerns or grievances that potential voters have.

This week is prime time to call, fax, e-mail, or meet every candidate at the local, state, and national levels and tell them "Fix VAWA Now." Use the method you think will work, but let us mention that we have flyers you can use at our website.

Of course, as always, be courteous and polite.

++
Date of RADAR Release: October 26, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Georgia woman drives hundreds of miles to give up 12-year-old son in Nebraska

anthony · 27 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'LINCOLN, Neb. - A woman drove her 12-year-old son from Georgia to Nebraska to abandon him under the state's unique safe-haven law, the 20th child left at a hospital since the law took effect in July.

The boy, from the Atlanta suburb of Smyrna, was dropped off at BryanLGH Medical Center East in Lincoln on Saturday night, said Todd Landry of the Nebraska Department of Health and Human Services.

The youngster is the third child from out of state driven to Nebraska to be abandoned under the law.'

False rape claim earns three months in prison

Anonymous · 27 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"THE 23-YEAR-OLD daughter of murder victim Lizzie Roussel has been jailed for three months for making a false allegation of rape.

Emma Roussel did so to get back at her then boyfriend, who had dumped her for another woman.
...
‘I just wanted him to be hurt because of what he’d done. He’d broken my heart,’ she told police."

Mom Admits Beating Daughter, 11, to Death With Mop

anthony · 27 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'NEW YORK — A mother has been accused of beating her 11-year-old daughter with a mop handle, then leaving the vomiting, bleeding child in bed for days until she died, a law enforcement official said Monday.

Police were called to the Brooklyn apartment early Sunday, and the child, Alejandra Vasquez, was already dead.
...
She said she hit Alejandra with the mop handle so hard it shattered, telling police she carried out the attack because she hated the girl's father and despised the child, the official said.'

College blogger touches the fire with 'Advice 4 Women: How to NOT Get a “Deserved” Raping'

Anonymous · 27 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Blog entry here. Excerpt:

'...had I been a less-than-understanding guy (i.e., a forceful-type of guy who always “gets what he wants by any means necessary”), I could have just as easily forced a kiss on her, or worse - waited until after the club let out to follow her to her car, then followed her to her house. And, when she got out her car, I could have been right there ready to pounce on her, saying: “I think you owe me something, lady!!”

Sound far-fetched? Seeing as girls get raped everyday around the world, it’s not an implausible story.

Now, had I gone through with the second example, I’d be called a “monster” who “preyed upon this girl for no reason,” and would be looked down upon for doing such a thing. And, like I said before, given the actions that were taken in the second example, that title would have been deserved.

But, what about the girl? What about HER part in the scenario?

What about the fact that this girl, who didn’t have any REAL interest in me, simply teased me to rile me up in the hopes of boosting her own ego? What about the fact that this girl grinded her ass on my penis not once, twice, or three times, but several, SEVERAL times??

What amazes me is, women do this kind of stuff all the time. They do certain actions or say certain things to make a guy think she’s going to give up her goods, then turn around and act shocked - SHOCKED, I tell you! - when she says “No” and he still tries to force himself upon her.'

Ed. note: I know this particular posting is likely to generate a great deal of heat. But the frustrations of young men encountering the glaring double-standard of judgment vis-a-vis their sexuality as compared with that of women are as fit a topic of MRA discussion as those frustrations experienced by their older fellows, whose current problem has shifted from this topic to, say, getting the shaft in "family court".

Glenn Sacks: Protest Father-Bashing Domestic Violence Ads!

anthony · 27 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Call to action here. Excerpt:

'Several hundred Dallas Area Rapid Transit (DART) buses feature misleading, father-bashing ads purporting to address the serious issue of domestic violence.

One ad depicts a happy little girl with the message "One day my husband will kill me." Another shows a smiling boy with the message "When I grow up, I will beat my wife."

The kids are talking about their fathers, and their pathology is due to their fathers' violence. The ads are, to put it bluntly, hate speech against fathers.'

Girl, 14, filmed her brother's hanging patriotsofamerica · 28 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. You think women are awful and hateful and uncaring now? Here is the next generation in process. Excerpt:

'A TEENAGE girl whose young brother accidentally hanged himself used her mobile phone to FILM the tragedy, cops have revealed.
...
It is believed a game went tragically wrong. Police are investigating after a post-mortem revealed the lad, eight, died from asphyxiation.
...
He said: “I cannot begin to think why she would have done that — surely she should have been trying to get him down from the bunk bed with her other brother.

“I asked the policeman if he knew why on earth she had done it but he wouldn’t say much more about it.

“He told me it was 14-year-old girl using her mobile phone and that it was part of the police investigation.”'

Mercy for sick mum who flung new tot

patriotsofamerica · 28 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. What else is new? Women try to kill and stupid she-men in the courts let them go and hand them back the kids they try to kill. Excerpt:

'A MUM wept yesterday as a judge showed her mercy after she hurled her baby son from a window while suffering severe post-natal depression.

The six-week-old fell 12ft on to concrete below the first floor hospital room where the woman was being treated.

Amazingly, he survived. After days of battling for life, he made a “very good recovery”, a court heard. Yesterday, his 30-year-old mother, who cannot be named, buried her head in her hands and sobbed as it was agreed she had been too mentally ill to know what she was doing. '

Joe Biden And Domestic Abuse

anthony · 28 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Senator Biden speaking from a cell phone in his campaign bus gave us the straight talk for over 30 minutes about how we are doing "God's work." He pledged that in an Obama-Biden Administration that they would create a full-time White House staff advisory position with the responsibility to report on violence against women and coordinate a focused Domestic Violence effort to fight the "abuse of power and our society's ugliest, dirtiest little secret!"

Vitamin E flops in prostate cancer trial

anthony · 28 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'(CBS) It's a huge disappointment in the field of cancer prevention.

The largest trial of its kind - known as "SELECT" - hoped Vitamin E and selenium would prevent prostate cancer. But CBS News has learned patients are being told to stop taking the pills - because they don't seem to work, CBS News medical correspondent Dr. Jon LaPook reports. Researchers will continue to monitor the patients in the trial.

"Taking selenium or Vitamin E at the doses that we used in the SELECT trial for an average of five years did not prevent prostate cancer," said Dr. Eric Klein.

...

Men who took selenium alone were more likely to develop diabetes. The researchers believe the increases may just be due to chance.

"The safety issues are of more minor concern and bear further follow-up," Klein said.'

CBS yanks low-rated `The Ex List' from schedule

anthony · 28 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'LOS ANGELES — CBS has crossed "The Ex List" off its schedule.

The hourlong comedy about a woman searching for true love among her ex-boyfriends has been pulled from the network lineup, CBS said Monday. Its Friday time slot will be filled this week by a rerun of "NCIS."
...
"The Ex List" had aired four times. Last week's show dropped about 1 million viewers from the previous week, bringing the total audience to less than 5.5 million.'

Woman falsely reports rape to get day off from work

Michael · 28 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Rape is a traumatic crime, and when police get a call reporting sexual assault, it's taken very seriously. Police want to make sure that the person responsible for the crime is locked up and prevented from attacking anyone else, but 2% of all rape cases reported are discovered to be false accusations.

Police in Marlow say that's exactly what happened when an 18-year-old woman fabricated a report of rape. Many women who falsely report rapes are seeking attention - good or bad. However, in this case, police say the young woman who admitted to falsifying two rape reports only wanted a day off from work.'

Obama: Feminist/Marxist?

anthony · 28 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Obama's affinity for Marxists began when he attended Occidental College in Los Angeles.

"To avoid being mistaken for a sellout, I chose my friends carefully," the Democratic presidential candidate wrote in his memoir, "Dreams From My Father." "The more politically active black students. The foreign students. The Chicanos. The Marxist professors and structural feminists."

Obama's interest in leftist politics continued after he transferred to Columbia University in New York. He lived on Manhattan's Upper East Side, venturing to the East Village for what he called "the socialist conferences I sometimes attended at Cooper Union."'

Related submission: Obama and the Socialist problem Excerpt:

'To paraphrase their ideologies, they are a democratic, multi-tendency party that believes in a non-racist, classless, feminist socialist society that organizes production and distribution through democratically-controlled public agencies. They strive for full employment for everyone who wants to work, free-forming unions, and production of society for the benefit of all humanity, not just for the rich few. They believe socialism and democracy go hand and hand and should not be separated, and of course, they believe in spreading the wealth.'

Report: Women Are Sex Addicts Too

anthony · 28 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Sex addiction. The term conjures up visions of men addicted to pornography or unable to commit to one woman.

But the so-called disease isn't just for men. Women are sex addicts too and some experts say almost a third of people treated for sex addiction are females.

“In America, 30 percent of people coming in for treatment for sex addiction are female,” Don Serratt, director of Life Works, which offers sex-addiction treatment in the UK, told the Times of London. “They’ll come for help with alcoholism, drug addiction or depression and, in the course of treatment, the sex addiction — the root cause of the other addictions — will be uncovered."

Massachusetts pol accused of literally stuffing bra with bribe money

Michael · 29 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Democratic state Sen. Dianne Wilkerson faces 40 years in prison after federal prosecutors outlined accusations that she accepted the bribes over an 18-month period in a money-for-legislative influence sting operation, prosecutors said. She had $6,000 in cash in her purse when she was arrested at her Roxbury home by nearly two dozen law enforcement officials, prosecutors said.

Democratic state Sen. Dianne Wilkerson faces 40 years in prison after federal prosecutors outlined accusations that she accepted the bribes over an 18-month period in a money-for-legislative influence sting operation, prosecutors said. She had $6,000 in cash in her purse when she was arrested at her Roxbury home by nearly two dozen law enforcement officials, prosecutors said.'

Ed. note: Not posted for the amusement factor, though I'll admit it's there. One of the basic assertions of feminists has been that female pols are much less likely to be corrupted/take bribes, etc. That is just not true as such stories illustrate.

Another boy abandoned in Nebraska

Matt · 29 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Anyone seeing a pattern here? Seems some people can't be rid off their sons fast enough. Story here. Excerpt:

'OMAHA, Neb. – A 17-year-old boy left at a hospital in Lincoln, Neb., may be counted as the 23rd child abandoned under the state's unique safe-haven law.

Lincoln police say the boy's parents took him to BryanLGH Medical Center West late Tuesday.

Police Capt. Jim Thoms says the parents told officers the boy wouldn't follow their rules and that they couldn't afford some programs he needed.'

Female Cornwall teacher jailed for six months for sexual assault

Matt · 30 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A former Cornwall junior high school teacher who sexually assaulted one of her 13-year-old male students was sentenced yesterday to six months in jail. At the sentencing hearing in August, Crown prosecutors argued that Jennifer Dorland, right, should spend at least 15 months behind bars.'

Police: Ex-lover killed woman in rage in Boynton Beach

Matt · 30 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'BOYNTON BEACH — Carol Anne Burger killed her former lover by stabbing her 222 times with a Phillips-head screwdriver and then took pains to hide her crime, police said Wednesday.

Jessica Kalish, who shared a house with Burger despite breaking up with her more than a year ago, was found last Thursday stuffed in the backseat of her gun-metal BMW sedan, abandoned behind a medical office at 2300 S. Congress Avenue. Her blood was splashed around the rear end and undercarriage of the car, as if her killer had tried to load her into the trunk. The driver-side window was shattered.'

Glenn Sacks: Thousands Protest, Great Media Coverage--Contact City Officials!

Matt · 30 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Over the past three days Dallas Area Rapid Transit has been bombarded with several thousand calls and letters protesting the anti-father domestic violence ads depicted above. Our campaign has received considerable media coverage on television, radio, and in newspapers--see below.

Over 60 Domestic Violence Authorities, Educators, and Mental Health, Medical, & Family Law Professionals have endorsed our campaign against these ads, including some of the world's leading experts on Domestic Violence.
...
1. Email Dallas Mayor Tom Leppert and the Dallas City Council by clicking here. They told me they are aware of the crisis, but they need to see the widespread support we have.
...
6. Fill out DART's customer feedback form. DART spokesman Morgan Lyons told the Dallas Observer that he hadn't received many of those, and the reason is that we hadn't asked you to do it. Please do it now by clicking here.'

Mom in China avoids jail after killing sick child

anthony · 31 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'BEIJING - A Chinese mother who admitted poisoning and smothering her mentally ill daughter to death has been spared a jail sentence, state media reported Friday.

Li Daohong fed her 20-year-old daughter, who suffered from brain paralysis, more than 200 sleeping pills in a Beijing hotel before smothering her with towels and a quilt while she was asleep, the official Xinhua News Agency said.

The case was a rare public look at the difficulties of caring for the mentally ill in China, a subject that remains taboo in much of the country.
...
"The court is convinced of the fact that the defendant has spent great energy and money on the victim, and the mounting psychological burden proved unbearable for her," the judge said, according to Xinhua.'

Texas Mom Throws 4-Year-Old Daughter Into Traffic

anthony · 31 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'AUSTIN — A woman has been charged with child endangerment, a state jail felony, for beating her 4-year-old daughter before throwing her into the path of an oncoming vehicle, police said.
...
A witness at the bus stop told police he saw Gallardo lift her daughter by the arm so forcefully that he thought the girl's arm "was going to dislocate out of the socket." The witness told police that Gallardo then violently threw the girl into the street and pulled her by her hair before throwing her into a parked vehicle, according to an arrest affidavit.'

Germany: Teacher strips in school gym in front of students

Matt · 31 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Suppose she was drunk or just... stupid? Anyway, guess it looks like nothing will happen to her for it. Story here. Excerpt:

'The teacher is seen peeling off her top to reveal her bra and then starts to undo the zip of her trousers before another lecturer covers her in a tablecloth.
...
But the school's headmaster in Zalaegerszeg, western Hungary, has refused to sack the unnamed mistress despite pressure from parents and other teachers.

"I was forced to give the German teacher a warning, but I will not dismiss her because she is a valuable teacher for our institution," said head Sandor Rozman.

He claimed she had shown no more flesh "than you would see on a beach."'

Black men tell tales of transformation in new book "Ain't I a Feminist?"

anthony · 31 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'"These men have defied the odds," said White, whose book breaks new ground in the empirical study of black feminist men. "Their lives help define what it means to be a feminist and an ethical human being."
...
"We need to begin teaching women's studies and discussing gender issues in preschool and elementary grades to promote feminist values of nonviolence, humility, empathy, and accountability," said White. "And we need to reform workplace policies that bar men from participating fully in family life. We need paid family leave, we need to enforce equal pay for equal work."'

El Camino Hospital Launches First Women's Hospital in Northern California

anthony · 31 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'"In the best tradition--and reflecting the best practices--of women's hospitals worldwide, we are creating both a hospital and a service line designed and staffed to meet the unique needs and preferences of women," said Ken Graham, El Camino Hospital CEO. "Women, who represent 65% of patients who receive care at El Camino Hospital, have specialized health needs that extend well beyond maternity and related services--the focus of most hospital programs for women. We believe that better tailoring their lifelong care and the environment in which it is delivered will lead to even better outcomes and improved patient experiences."

The hospital is already considered a leader in women's services. It is the only one in Northern California to receive HealthGrades' Women's Health Excellence Award three years in a row, and the only one in the region to be 5-star rated for Women's Health Services.'

Are More Women Committing Infidelity or Are They Just More Willing to Admit It?

anthony · 31 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'In a new study, researchers from the University of Washington explored the recent increase in infidelity, and the changing makeup of the participants. A greater number of older men and younger women have reported being unfaithful than in earlier studies. However, historically, gauging responses in scientific studies of sensitive issues such as sexual behavior has proven to be a flawed science.

According to The New York Times, which cites the University of Washington's research, the number of young women who report engaging in extramarital sex is not much lower than that of men. The study reports that 20 percent of men and 15 percent of women under the age of 35 have cheated on their spouses, up from 15 percent and 12 percent respectively.'

UK: Men narrow longevity gap on women

anthony · 31 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'The differences in life expectancy between the sexes have narrowed across Britain, according to the latest longevity data from the Office for National Statistics, which show men are closing the gap with traditionally longer-living women.

The average woman born in 2006 is likely to live 2.7 years longer than one born in 1992 while men can expect to live 3.8 years longer.'

Father kept in the dark about baby's adoption

anthony · 31 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Adoptions are private for a reason -- to protect a child. But, with such secrecy, a lawyer can set up a deal between a mother and adoptive parents and move a baby into a new home very quickly. By the time a birth father catches up, it is often just too late.

For 10 months, Michael Marek's life as a new father has involved endless court dates and a few supervised visits in public places. He is fighting for a baby that is biologically his, but living with an adoptive family that does not want to give her up. Out of respect for their privacy, we will not use their names.
...
Birth fathers like Marek are stuck in a gray area of adoption law. A single mother can put her baby up for adoption, and if the father objects, his only hope is to enter a long and expensive court battle. The state offers men like Marek no protection.'

Canada: No Jail For Wife Who Murdered Disabled Husband

anthony · 31 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Ingeborg Grubanoski was suffering from a number of mental disorders when she brutally killed her severely disabled husband, a forensic psychiatrist testified Wednesday.

As a result, Dr. David Tano concluded she should be found not criminally responsible for clubbing Mladen Grubanoski in the head with a hammer and strangling him with a belt on May 17, 2007.

Tano told Crown prosecutor Christine Rideout that Ingeborg, 56, heard voices before she retrieved the weapons from the basement of their southwest home after their daughter Karin went to the grocery store.

When she killed the retired electrical engineer, she was in a dissociative or trance-like state, he said.'

Wife accused of beating husband with dumbbell

anthony · 31 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A New Berlin woman accused of attempted homicide told detectives that she wrapped plastic wrap across her husband's face and hit him with a dumbbell because she wanted him to shut up, according to a criminal complaint filed today in Waukesha County Circuit Court.

Valentina Grenader, 45, was charged with attempted first degree intentional homicide, strangulation and suffocation, and substantial battery. She is being held in the Waukesha County Jail on $100,000 bail.

If convicted of all three felonies, the maximum penalty is 73 years and six months in prison.

The woman's husband needed eight stitches to close a head wound, according to the criminal complaint.'

BBC: Abuse law protects Brazilian man

anthony · 31 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A law introduced in Brazil two years ago to protect women from domestic violence has been used to protect a man who was being abused by his ex-wife.

It is thought this may be the first time the legislation has been used to protect a man.

The case was heard before a judge in Cuiaba in the state of Mato Grosso.

The judge ruled that the former wife had to stay at least 500m away from her ex-husband and must avoid all contact with him.

The man alleged that he was suffering physical aggression, psychological and financial abuse and provided several documents to prove his case.'

Court reverses conviction in baby death

anthony · 31 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'The Iowa Supreme Court on Friday ordered a new trial for a woman convicted of drowning her infant son, whose body was found in a central Iowa lake.

...

Anfinson has been serving a 50-year prison sentence in the 1998 death of her 15-day-old son, Jacob. His body, weighted down with rocks, was found in Saylorville Lake near Des Moines.

Anfinson's lawyer argued that the baby died accidentally in an infant bathtub and she panicked and hid his body in the lake.

...

In asking the Supreme Court to review her appeal for postconviction relief, Anfinson claims her lawyer dismissed an insanity or diminished capacity defense despite evidence she was suffering from severe postpartum depression at the time of the child's death.'

Women's Center and Verizon Wireless Launch Benefit For Victims of Domestic Violence

anthony · 31 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A recognized corporate leader for its commitment to preventing domestic violence and raising awareness of the issue, Verizon Wireless was the first wireless carrier in the nation to collect and recycle old cell phones and has done so since January 1999 -- first in New Jersey and then across the U.S. The wireless equipment is refurbished or recycled in an environmentally friendly manner and the proceeds used to provide wireless phones and service and cash grants to local organizations and shelters like the N.Y. Asian Women's Center that provide direct services to victims of domestic violence.'

'Myths & Facts of Domestic Violence' leaves out male victims entirely

anthony · 31 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'According to the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence (NCADV), one in every four women will experience domestic violence in her lifetime.

The NCADV also reports that a staggering 1.3 million women are victims of physical assault by a partner each year. Don't be fooled though, domestic violence also includes verbal, emotional, and psychological abuse as well. Whether someone endures constant put downs, verbal threats or mental domination, this is still considered domestic violence.'

MAWAD fighting stereotypes that only women are abused

anthony · 31 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'PRINCETON — Women with battered eyes and bruised souls have become the symbols of domestic violence in America, but one organization is working to change the perception that all domestic abuse manifests itself physically on the outside and that women are the only victims.

Men and Women Against Discrimination (MAWAD) formed in West Virginia to expose the untruths behind the theory that men are always the aggressors, pursue a family court system that recognizes and honors each parent's role in a child's upbringing and to seek "truth, justice and equality in family law."

Along the way, organizers say they discovered there are many men out there who are just as abused as any of their female counterparts, that the court system all too often ignores their wounds and that the very systems put in place to stop domestic violence can be manipulated and twisted into another form of abuse during divorce and custody negotiations.'

Female teacher, 45, accused of 'having sex with' 17-YO student

Anonymous · 31 October 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'According to cops, Horvath a married mother of four, reportedly approached the teen about her "feelings" last spring and the two carried on a torrid affair during the summer months before being discovered this fall. According to the arrest affidavit the two lovers allegedly have sex in various place, mostly in parked cars, as many as 25 times, including once in a Walmart parking lot where they were caught naked by the cops. What happened to them? The police asked the teen if he was PAYING FOR SEX and then let them go. That's some nice police work there Lou. The worst part of the story? One of Horvath's own sons is a classmate of the victim, and has since had to be transfered to another school. Yeah, probably wouldn't be cool to be walking around the halls of your school with people talking about your mom having an alleged affair with one of your friends.'

Ohio I.G. investigating child support inquiry re "Joe the Plumber"

Matt · 1 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Ohio's inspector general is investigating why a state agency director approved checking the state child-support computer system for information on "Joe the Plumber."

Helen Jones-Kelly, director of the Ohio Department of Job and Family Services, confirmed today that she OK'd the check on Samuel Joseph Wurzelbacher following the Oct. 15 presidential debate.
...
...Reports state that he lives alone with a 13-year-old son.

"Our practice is when someone is thrust quickly into the public spotlight, we often take a look" at them, Jones-Kelley said, citing a case where a lottery winner was found to owe past-due child support. "Our practice is to basically look at what is coming our way."'

Australia denies residency for dad of boy with Down syndrome

anthony · 1 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'SYDNEY, Australia (AP) -- Thirteen-year-old Lukas Moeller has Down syndrome. His father is a doctor who came to Australia from Germany to help fill a shortage of physicians in rural communities.

But now Australia has rejected Dr. Bernhard Moeller's application for residency, saying Lukas does not meet the "health requirement" and would pose a burden on taxpayers for his medical care, education and other services.

The case has provoked an outcry in the rural region of southeastern Victoria state, where Moeller is the only internal medicine specialist for a community of 54,000 people. Residents rallied outside Moeller's practice this week, demanding that the decision be overturned, and hundreds of Internet and radio complaints from across the country bombarded media outlets Friday.'

Ed. note: Would they have dared to do so if this were "a mum and her little girl"?

Sophie Morris: "Men have such suspicious minds"

anthony · 1 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'I haven't the first clue why the results of new research into infidelity are being held up as evidence than men are better at spotting a cheating partner than women. Not at all. It simply shows us that men are more suspicious of their lovers than women are of theirs. Why? Well I guess it takes one to know one.
...
But the men, a whopping 94 per cent of them, knew exactly at which point their missus was actually "working late" and when she was taking a liberty with their trust, and possibly their best friend. The reason, though, they scored better is because they erred heavily on the side of distrust. This meant the men detected 75 per cent of cheating women, while the women only caught out 41 per cent of their wandering men. It doesn't take a sleuth to work out that the men also suspected infidelity where there was none.
...
In fact, the only reason the guys identified more cheaters is because they suspected more in the first place. If you don't trust anyone, then when you catch your partner in flagrante you should not be surprised, but gleefully vindicated in your paranoid distrust.'

The Standard Online: Men cannot handle a successful woman

anthony · 1 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'It is not men's fault. I believe it is part of their genetic makeup. And until some genius scientist finds a way to alter their genes to prevent them from being threatened by successful women, this will remain a volatile topic.

Women will continue being viewed as the weaker sex, and any attempt to rescue themselves from that stereotype will send the Tony Ms of the world running scared, terrified that the IWTs are out to emasculate them and take away their balls.

Sorry, guys. Your world domination is getting diluted every day. Women are putting down their lesos, strapping on their stilettos, and marching into offices to give PowerPoint presentations. They are doing it all, and going home at the end of the day to breastfeed their kids while still donned in their dryclean only power suits.'

P1 Exclusive: Odd man out at the Women's Seminar

anthony · 1 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'About five years ago, Calibre Press began holding Street Survival Seminars that are conducted specifically for female law enforcement officers. The seminars are held twice a year, one in Las Vegas, NV and the other in Atlantic City, N.J. For the past four years I've been the third wheel – the odd-man-out if you will – as the sole male instructor. The Lead Instructor and architect of this seminar is Sgt. Betsy Brantner Smith who also happens to be one of the five instructors for the other 40-plus Seminars we conduct annually.
...
First, that there seems to be something inherently unfair about having a seminar that is titled: Street Survival for Female Officers while there is no seminar titled: Street Survival: Here's One for Da-Guys. I then point out that 80 – 85 percent of the attendees in the other 30+ Street Survival seminars are males, and in all my years as an instructor I've never had a guy walk up and say that we need to have some "me time" with other male cops. The second issue involves their curiosity about what – exactly – is talked about in the Women's Seminar.'

Teacher accused of having sex with three boys

anthony · 1 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Chicago high school teacher is charged with sexual assault and abuse for alleged sexual encounters with three students of the South Side charter school where she worked.
...
Prosecutors claim she had sex with two students and a former student. One of the boys was 15, and the other two were 16.
...
She was arrested and held Sunday in lieu of $100,000 bail.'

Australia: Falsely-accused MP recounts ordeal

Matt · 1 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'GREENS MP Ian Cohen has spoken for the first time of the humiliation of being accused of domestic violence.
...
In April, Cohen was summonsed on charges of assault and assault occasioning bodily harm after his former partner, Donna Davis, alleged he attacked her on June 22, 2006. She went to police in January of this year, sparking a long investigation.

Yesterday, Mr Cohen, 57, was relieved his seven-month ordeal was over, but he said the emotional scars of being shunned by some MPs and Greens, abused by strangers in the street and branded a wife-basher would take a long time to heal.

First elected in 1995, the environmental activist said he had been unable to work on "important projects" because he was paralysed with fear, waiting for the next headline.
...
Mr Cohen said he planned to discuss with the Attorney-General, John Hatzistergos, the issue of charged people being identified by the media before conviction. It was grossly unfair that their names were sullied without even being found guilty.'

Amanda Knox 'regrets' lies over Meredith Kercher murder

Matt · 1 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Amanda Knox, the American student accused of murdering Meredith Kercher, her British flatmate, claims she regrets having lied in police interviews to incriminate an innocent man.

Ms Knox, 21, said she was "afraid" but believes she will be acquitted in the end. On Tuesday Paoli Micheli, the pre-trial judge, ordered both her and Raffaele Sollecito, her former Italian boyfriend, to stand trial on December 4 on charges of murder, sexual assault and theft.
...
Ms Knox said she regretted she could not vote in the US election. "Oh, I'd really like that" she was quoted as saying. "I'm a good American girl and I feel it is my duty to vote."...

...
Mr Lumumba is suing for damages, and has described Ms Knox as a "compulsive liar". "I'm very sorry about the way Patrick reacted" she said. "The first thing I did was to ask his forgiveness. I felt I was being pressured by the police so I mentioned him, but I'm really sorry".
...
Ms Knox said she had "really believed there was a chance of getting out of here, and that's why I am suffering." She said she was very tired and hardly eating. The first thing she would do if let out would be to "go to a restaurant and eat tagliatelle with mushrooms. But not ossobuco, because I'm a vegetarian".'

There's crazy and then there's CRAZY. This woman is CRAZY. But in an evil kind of way, like The Joker from "Batman". Jail's too good for her.

13-YO girl sparks panic with false rape report

anthony · 1 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'STATEN ISLAND, N.Y. -- Police descended on the Petrides School yesterday after a student there claimed she'd been taken to the basement and raped by four men in costumes -- but the account was a fabrication, she later admitted to cops.

Parents were panicked and rumors flew through the Sunnyside complex after the 13-year-old reported she'd been raped at about 12:45 p.m. She was taken to Staten Island University Hospital, Ocean Breeze, and later confessed that she'd concocted the whole thing, police said.
...
Police said that as of last night, the girl had not been charged with any crime.'

"You can't see your son - but can he have one of your organs?"

Michael · 2 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A quietly spoken father of three, he finds that his life rarely gets more exciting than his weekly game of golf. But when he called the social workers as requested, he was confronted with a series of astonishing facts.

They said he was the father of another child - a five-year-old son from a previous, short-lived relationship. A former girlfriend, unable to cope with the demands of motherhood, had handed the boy over to foster parents.

A meeting with this new-found son was out of the question, he was told, let alone any sort of relationship. He was also informed that the boy was to be formally adopted and that the council was ringing merely to let him know.'

Cops: Mom, Daughter Hire Hitman to Kill Dad

anthony · 2 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'MANASSAS, Va. — An 18-year-old Manassas woman has pleaded guilty to arranging with her mother to have her father killed.

Jessenia Blasini pleaded guilty in Prince William County Circuit Court on Thursday to conspiracy to commit capital murder, solicitation to commit capital murder and malicious wounding.'

Mom of Iowa toddler found dead charged with murder

anthony · 2 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'IOWA CITY, Iowa — The mother of a toddler who was found dead after being reported missing by his father was charged with the boy's murder.

Michelle Kehoe, 35, was charged Thursday with first-degree murder in the death of 2-year-old Seth Kehoe. Buchanan County Attorney Allan VanderHart said she also faces charges of attempted murder and child endangerment resulting in serious injury for attacking her 7-year-old son, Sean.

Eugene Kehoe reported his wife and children missing Sunday night. They left their Coralville home to visit relatives earlier in the day and were found Monday when Michelle Kehoe walked into a home in Littleton and said the children were in danger, investigators had said.'

F4J Pittsburgh PA Rally at Heinz Field Huge Success Despite Disruption by Security and Police

Matt · 2 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Fathers-4-Justice members from Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia rallied in front of Heinz Stadium this past Sunday, October 26. Members felt a football stadium on a Sunday afternoon would be the perfect place to find dads and increase public awareness. The rally was a tremendous success. Members, armed with flyers, signs and flags, walked through the public parking lots and along the sidewalks talking to people about equal parenting. “People were running after us to get our information, one guy chased me, when he caught up to me, he said he has been fighting the family court system for almost 24 years. He thanked me for being there and spreading our message. He asked for some information to give to all of his friends in the same situation, I gave him a stack of flyers, and off he went to distribute them. That was a great moment.” Brian Holladay, a National Boardmember for Fathers-4-Justice, said.'

More doublethink: "Woman wins NYC marathon for third time in a row"... well, sort of...

Matt · 2 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. "Remember Winston, it isn't what your eyes tell you. It's what The Party tells you." Excerpt:

'NEW YORK – Paula Radcliffe defended her title at the New York City Marathon on Sunday to become the second woman to win the race three times.

Marilson Gomes dos Santos of Brazil won the men's race for the second time in three years, passing Abderrahim Goumri of Morocco with about a mile to go.
...
Unlike Radcliffe's tight victories in 2004 and '07, the world record holder from Great Britain pulled away from Ludmila Petrova in the 22nd mile to win comfortably in two hours, 23 minutes, 56 seconds.'

No mention of "the men's race" winner's time. Oh yeah, that doesn't matter. Well, for those who care, it's reported here-- the only place I could actually find his time reported. Quick, look at it before the Ministry of Truth comes along and edits it out! Heck, if they put in a little effort, maybe they could un-person him and forget they did it in the first place!

"Womanist" blog takes on Sacks' latest campaign

anthony · 2 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Entry here. You don't need to register for an account to submit a comment. Comments appear right away, there's no moderation. Excerpt:

'Well it should come as no surprise to anyone that Mr.Sacks (I won't link to him) is continuing on with his misogynistic attacks against women. In his teeny little world, it is all about the penis, and if you don't have one your story does not deserve to be told. We certainly cannot have a world where women speak out against the violence and the oppression that they face at the hands of men, that would be far to threatening to patriarchy.

The Family Place domestic shelter paid $25,000 for 45 bus-side ads and 300 bus interior ads to appear on DART, the Dallas transit system. Sacks and his minions have declared these ads offensive to men and fathers. They have started a campaign to get the ads taken down.'

Woman whose lies landed man in prison for 10 months gets community service as "punishment"

Matt · 3 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A woman who helped send her former partner to prison for 10 months after lying in court has escaped with 50 hours community service.

Marion Anne Carter, 61, was sentenced in Hamilton last week after earlier pleading guilty to perverting the course of justice.

Her lies under oath helped convict Robert "Bob" Sutton of two rapes, four assaults with a weapon and nine assaults on a number of people that saw him jailed in November 2005.'

UK: The future is female, job figures show

anthony · 3 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'But a new analysis shows that they are poised to become the dominant force in the workplace over the next decade, paving the way for a dramatic feminisation of society.
...
Dr Mark Batey, of Manchester Business School, said: "Women are going to be dominant in the professions over the next decade. They will begin to hold far more positions of power in the workplace.

"Employers realise that women are more suited to the modern workplace, where the emphasis is on the qualities of team-work, leadership skills, communication and emotional intelligence in which they excel – rather than the intellectual ability or physical strength on which men have relied. Already employers, such as law firms, are struggling to find good male candidates for vacancies because women are not only getting better academic qualifications, they have a better range of skills."'

RADAR ALERT: Tell Dallas Transit to Stop Putting Kids at Risk

Matt · 4 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

An analysis[1] of the data in the U.S. Dept. of Health and Human Services "Child Maltreatment" reports from 2001-2006, shows that:

- 70.8% of children killed by one parent are killed by their mothers
- 70.6% of children abused by one parent are abused by their mothers
- 60% of the victims are boys

This week Glenn Sacks [2] and Ned Holstein [3] notified the public that for the month of October, Dallas Area Rapid Transit (DART) has plastered billboards all over its buses, promoting the falsehood that only men ever commit domestic violence.

The misandry in DART's campaign is so blatant that it distracts attention from this even more offensive fact:

Under the guise of public service, DART is running a campaign that will inevitably increase the number of child deaths by promoting the false notion that children are always safer with their mothers because men are inherently dangerous!

Considering it was just last March that a mother threw her 6 and 8 year old sons off a Dallas overpass onto I-30,[4] you would think that DART officials would be well aware of women's potential for violence.

This week we're asking you to contact the top-level staff at DART and tell them:

- 71% of children killed by one parent are killed by their mothers. [5]
- DART's publicity campaign promoting the falsehood that women are always victims, never abusers, has the effect of promoting policies that will inevitably cause more child deaths.
- Since DART's publicity campaign is already in progress, simply stopping the campaign will not undo the damage they've already done.
- The only way DART can undo the damage and save the lives of the children they've put at risk is for them to:
  1. Immediately take down all signs and billboards and stop all advertisement related to their current campaign, and
  2. Allocate a budget equal to the budget for the current campaign, and run an equally prominent campaign to inform the public: "71% of children killed by one parent are killed by their mothers, and 60% of the dead children are boys."

Send your comments to the following people. As always, be polite but firm.

Gary Thomas
President/Executive Director
Phone: 214-749-3070
Email: gthomas-at-dart.org

Sue Bauman
Vice President of Marketing and Communications
Phone: 214-749-2504
Email: sbauman-at-dart.org

Randall D. Chrisman
DART Chairman of the Board
Email the Director of Board Support: NJohnson-at-dart.org

Robert W. Strauss
Vice Chairman, DART Board of Directors
Email the Director of Board Support: NJohnson-at-dart.org

++
Date of RADAR Release: November 2, 2008

Want to improve the chance that they'll pay attention to your letter? Click here.

R.A.D.A.R. – Respecting Accuracy in Domestic Abuse Reporting – is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of men and women working to improve the effectiveness of our nation's approach to solving domestic violence. http://www.mediaradar.org/.

Ah ha! So much for that whole "dirty-handed men" thing!

Matt · 4 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Betrays the "men tend to be less hygienic than women" stereotype, yes? Won't see this on JunkScience, er, I mean, LiveScience, any time soon. Excerpt:

'WASHINGTON – Wash your hands, folks, especially you ladies. A new study found that women have a greater variety of bacteria on their hands than men do. And everybody has more types of bacteria than the researchers expected to find.

"One thing that really is astonishing is the variability between individuals, and also between hands on the same individual," said University of Colorado biochemistry assistant professor Rob Knight, a co-author of the paper.

"The sheer number of bacteria species detected on the hands of the study participants was a big surprise, and so was the greater diversity of bacteria we found on the hands of women," added lead researcher Noah Fierer, an assistant professor in Colorado's department of ecology and evolutionary biology.'

Husband pleads for wife as she is jailed for trying to kill him

Anonymous · 4 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Love is blind — at least in the case of a wealthy Irish businessman who today pleaded with a judge not to jail his partner when she was sentenced to six years for hiring a hitman to kill him and his two sons.

Sharon Collins used the pseudonym “Lying Eyes” when she contracted a Las Vegas poker dealer to kill her partner PJ Howard, a property tycoon, and his sons Robert and Niall.

But in a bizarre twist during today’s sentencing in Dublin's Central Criminal Court, Mr Howard appealed for the judge to spare Collins, a 45-year-old divorcee with two children from a previous relationship, declaring: "I will not give up on Sharon".'

Ask JPMorgan Chase to stop sponsoring DART ads

Matt · 4 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via email: JPMorgan Chase is a major contributor to the Family Place the sponsor of the DART bus ads. Please send an email to elaine.agather-at-jpmorganchase.com and ask that she ask the Family Place and DART to remove these offensive ads immediately. Hitting the sponsors of an organization is a great way to get their attention. Elaine will be back to read her emails by Thursday I am told.

--Paul Clements, US Activist

From http://www.familyplace.org/Page.aspx?pid=246:

Our Partners

JPMorgan Chase

Chase, the presenting sponsor of The Family Place Partners Card 2007, is a leading corporate citizen in Dallas, building long-term partnerships with nonprofit organizations whose success is vital to the prosperity of our communities. Each year, Chase provides financial resources, technical assistance, investments and loans, and volunteer support to a broad range of organizations in three key areas: community asset development, youth education, and arts and culture.

Throughout the year, Chase employee volunteers organize team projects and offer their individual time on behalf of many organizations like The Family Place, including Junior Achievement, Big Brothers Big Sisters, UNCF, Rebuilding Together, Meals on Wheels and the Salvation Army.

"We know that investing in our communities is not only the right thing to do, it makes good business sense too, "said Elaine Agather, Chairman of Chase's Dallas Region. "We are committed to using our financial resources, and our professional expertise to enhance and strengthen the communities where we live and work."

JPMorgan Chase serves more than 90 million customers and the world's most prominent corporate, institutional and government clients. It is the largest bank in the Metroplex with a local workforce exceeding 8,900 bankers. Chase has deep roots in Dallas, tracing its local heritage back to 1916.

Since the completion of the merger with Bank One, Chase has more than 100 bank branches located across Dallas/Fort Worth to serve customers. As part of its commitment to the local economy, Chase has long been a leading SBA lender in Dallas and has a strong commitment to lending to women- and minority-owned businesses.

International Men's Day - 19th November 2008

Matt · 4 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Media Release

International Men's Day - 19th November 2008

International Men's Day will have its inaugural celebration in Australia on 19th November 2008.

Russian President, Mikhail Gorbachev, first called for an international day to celebrate men in 1999 at the United Nations in Vienna. International Men's Day is celebrated on many different dates around the world with varying degrees of success.

To help standardize International Men's Day and increase its success the Indian 'Save the Family Foundation' launched an international campaign and called for the celebration of International Men's Day on 19th November along with Pakistan, Trinidad and Tabago.

Australia is joining with India, which has the second largest male population in the world, to call other countries around the world to make 19th November 2008 a day to honour men for the contribution they make to their family, friends, work, community and nation.

Warwick Marsh, from the Dads4Kids Fatherhood Foundation said, "We contacted the leaders of the Save the Family Foundation in India, the leading advocates for International Men's Day, before sharing the vision with several leaders in the Australian men and father's movement at the National Shared Parenting Conference in Gosford, NSW on 14th June 2008. The response in Australia for an International Men's Day has been really positive. Already in Australia we have watched the phenomenal expansion of Movember, which promotes men's health, so it's great to see all these things happening for men in the month of November. Movember is exploding in influence around the world."

Mr Marsh continued, "The 19th November is historically a day of great significance for every Australian. In 1941 it was the day that the HMAS Sydney II was lost. The 19th November 2008 commemorates the loss of 645 men when the HMAS Sydney sank off the coast of Western Australia, the greatest loss of men's lives on any one day by Australian forces in World War II."

"The theme for the International Men's Day 2008 is 'Honour and Sacrifice'. This commemorates what our Aussie men, sons, fathers and grandfathers, both past and present, have sacrificed for their families, communities and nation," Mr Marsh said.

"We call on other countries to join in solidarity to celebrate the positive contribution that men make to the world on International Men's Day, Wednesday 19th November 2008."

For more information please contact Warwick Marsh at:

- Dads4Kids
  - http://www.dadsforkids.com/
- Fatherhood Foundation
  - http://www.fatherhood.org.au/
  - info-at-fatherhood.org.au

Top UK football referee's ex-girlfriend quizzed over 'trashing his £40,000 Porsche'

Anonymous · 6 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Premiership referee Mark Clattenburg's ex-girlfriend has been arrested on suspicion of trashing his luxury sports car.

His Porsche Boxster, worth £40,000, was vandalised outside a flat he owns in Gosforth, Newcastle, in August.

A corrosive substance was splattered on the side of the vehicle, which has a private registration, causing thousands of pounds of damage.

Now, it has emerged his former lover and business partner Susan Clegg has been arrested by Northumbria Police in connection with the incident.

The 35-year-old, of Gateshead, is helping police with their inquiries and must answer bail later this month, when she could face charges.'

New Hampshire now has female-majority Senate

Matt · 6 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. I found it ironic; New Hampshire also has the country's only state-funded Commission on the Status of Men, too. Excerpt:

'New Hampshire's State Senate is now unlike any in the country and unlike any before it. After Tuesday's election, women now make up the majority of the New Hampshire State Senate. In an election year that saw Hillary Clinton, Sarah Palin, and Nancy Pelosi grab headlines and airtime across the country, New Hampshire didn't just vote blue, it voted for women.
...
Previously ten women held senate seats out of twenty-four in Concord, but now they hold thirteen.'

Imagine that, "gender-representative parity" all without having to get the legal system to mandate it? Will wonders never cease? But what if by 2012, 75% of the NH Senate is made up of women? Will there be a push on by those women to get more men into the Senate like there has been for years the other way? I guess we'll see. But <<let's don't>> hold our breaths, hmm? :)

Sex therapist seeking vounteers for 'diary research'

Matt · 6 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Via Greg Andresen, from Bettina Ardent:

"Hi Greg,

I wonder if you can help me. I am trying to contact all the key people working in the men's health area. I am seeking their help with a project I am working on, as I need men to volunteer for the research. See notice attached explaining what it is all about. Please see also my website http://www.bettinaarndt.com.au/ for more information.

Thanks, Tina"

Father creates music video "A crime to be a man"

Matt · 7 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Presentation by Mr. Joakim Ramstedt from Gothenburg, Sweden, the musician:

"My hope is that you will spread this film to as many as possible. I want my country to feel ashamed of what they are doing to our children.

Sweden is violating the UN children's rights act article 9 that states that a child has the RIGHT to a close and intimate relationship with both its parents. In Sweden, fathers are losing custody in 95% of all cases. It doesn't matter if the mother is unfit. She wins anyway. That is abuse and torture for the men and children that are affected, and it's causing a lot of problems for the kids in their life. This needs to stop."

Permission granted to embed and spread the video.

UK: Woman teacher, 62, 'stalked younger colleague for two years'

Anonymous · 7 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here Excerpt:

'A teacher stalked a colleague at a top state school by bombarding him with unwanted love letters saying she wanted to be his 'flesh and blood', an employment tribunal heard.

Helen Vipond was said to have continued to pester German teacher Jamie Meharg - who was given police protection during the two-year period when the alleged stalking took place.

The tribunal in Ashford heard that Mrs Vipond, 62, sent up to ten letters and made repeated unwanted visits to 42-year-old Meharg's classroom at the respected Darrick Wood secondary in Orpington, Kent.'

"Inside the Mind of the Boy Dating Your Daughter" arindamp · 7 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. An amazing report. Excerpt:

'The stereotype of the 16-year-old boy is that he has sex on the brain. But a fascinating new report suggests that boys are motivated more by love and a desire to form real relationships with the girls they date.

The report, published in this month's Journal of Adolescence, paints a far different picture of teen boys than the stereotype of testosterone-fueled youth. Psychology researchers from the State University of New York at Oswego surveyed 105 10th-grade boys whose average age was about 16. The boys, most of whom said they were heterosexual, were given surveys asking them to select various reasons why they asked girls out, dated and pursued physical relationships. Most of the boys had dating experience, and about 40 percent were sexually active.'

Woman files false rape report in Pearl

anthony · 7 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'JACKSON, MS (WLBT) - A woman who falsely reported a rape in Pearl was arrested late Thursday and may face criminal charges. Pearl police tell WLBT News they have been besieged by calls and e-mails from concerned citizens about allegations of a rape in that city.
...
The woman could face felony charges. "She can indeed and we are contemplating those charges at this time,." according to Townsend.'

No Charges Pending For False Rape/Kidnapping Story

anthony · 7 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A former University at Buffalo student has recanted her story about being kidnapped and raped last December on the North Campus in Amherst, university police said Wednesday.

Detectives had been investigating the case but found no witnesses or evidence, UB Police Chief Gerald W. Shanley Jr. said.

“There was nothing to corroborate the victim’s story, and she would not do any follow-up interviews with us,” Schoenle said.

...

Criminal charges for making a false report will not be filed, according to Schoenle.'

Bowie woman pleads guilty to leaving baby in hot SUV

anthony · 7 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'A Bowie woman has pleaded guilty to leaving her 14-month-old daughter in the back of a hot SUV.
...
Fortlage faces up to 30 days in jail and a $500 fine at sentencing in January.

Her attorney said Fortlage didn't realize the girl was still in the car when she parked at the mall. He said after an investigation, Child Protective Services only recommended that Fortlage take a parenting class, which she has completed. She still has custody of all three of her children.'

Forbes: Women Don't Make Better Leaders

anthony · 7 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'They may not know it, but these men are what academics call "difference" or "cultural" feminists, believing that women deserve equal rights not because, as humans, they are basically the same as men, but because of their differences--and even that those differences in some ways make women superior.

This idea that inherent female qualities make women better leaders has been kicked around many times by everyone from radical feminists, who argued that women were flat-out better, to the Catholic Church and its cult of Mary. In the 19th century, adherents of the so-called Cult of True Womanhood deemed women more pure and pious than men.

...

Women do not make categorically better leaders, and it's no favor to them to suggest that they do. By all means, let's elect smart, judicious leaders who happen to be female--but don't expect them to do a better job than the men by reason of estrogen alone. As New York mayor Fiorello LaGuardia noted, "There is no Democrat or Republican way to pick up garbage." For the vast majority of functions of leadership, there's no male or female way to do it either.'

S. Africa: EC to open private wards for botched circumcisions

anthony · 7 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Eastern Cape - The Department of Health will soon provide private wards in hospitals throughout the Eastern Cape Province to accommodate patients who are admitted to hospital due to botched traditional circumcisions.
...
"The young people who undergo circumcision are the future of this province and if we want to grow the economy of this province, we need to make sure that they return from the circumcision schools healthy," she said.
...
This follows the death of four boys after being rescued from various initiation schools in the province.'

Treasury Secretary Short List: Lawrence Summers

anthony · 7 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Larry Summers, President Clinton's last treasury secretary, is reportedly at the top of the list of candidates being considered to fill the role of chief financial officer of the government.

And he probably should be.

Summers' economic credentials are sterling -- an undergraduate degree from MIT and a doctoral degree in economics from Harvard. He has written influential academic papers, became one of the youngest tenured professors in Harvard's history at the age of 28 and served as chief economist of the World Bank. He even worked as an economic adviser in the Reagan administration.
...
After leaving Treasury in 2001, Summers became the president of Harvard. His tenure there was marked by a series of controversies.

The most damning was when he said basic genetic differences between the sexes may be one reason why fewer women succeed in math and science careers.'

Woman indicted on charges of molesting teen

anthony · 7 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

'Sarah E. Ellison, a 31-year-old woman who ran a day care center at her Fort Meade home, was indicted by a federal grand jury yesterday on charges that she repeatedly molested a 14-year-old boy.

Ellison is the first Maryland woman indicted for sexual abuse of a minor under the two-year-old Project Safe Childhood Program, a partnership among state, local and federal officials designed to combat sexual exploitation of children.

According to the two-count indictment, the boy attended a middle school with Ellison's two stepchildren, whom he considered friends. He would sometimes hang out at her house after school because of the relationships. Between November 2005 and June 2006, the indictment alleges, Ellison and the boy had sexual contact by "touching each other between 10 and 20 times and, on occasion, mutually masturbating each other."

"National Men Make Dinner Day"

anthony · 7 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Maybe next year they'll have 'National Women Shovel Snow Day'. Excerpt:

'Non-cooking men, should you be game to celebrate National Men Make Dinner Day, here are the ground rules, as paraphrased from the official holiday Web site:

- Dinner must be made from a "published" recipe from either a cookbook or the Internet. The recipe should contain a minimum of four ingredients and use at least one cooking utensil other than a fork. Check the above mentioned Web site for some deliciously simple recipes.

- Man must do all the shopping for any ingredients that aren't already in the kitchen.
...
- Man is responsible for setting table nicely with candles, as well as cleaning up the kitchen as he goes, clearing the table, and loading the dishwasher.'

UK: Men will suffer from new laws on sex discrimination, academic warns

anthony · 7 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Dr Catherine Hakim argues that existing legislation has already eradicated sexism against women, and that the remaining gender pay gap is down to the different career choices made by men and women.

She accuses feminists of peddling "myths" about the extra hours put in by women and their thwarted career ambitions to justify "futile and perverse" attempts to help them balance work and family life.

And Dr Hakim, a senior research fellow at the London School of Economics, warns that any further strengthening of equality laws on employment – for instance by forcing both mothers and fathers to share parental leave – risks damaging the career prospects of men.'

Woman Who Cut Off Baby's Arms to Be Released

SpikeRants · 7 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Who doesn't remember the woman in Plano who violently ripped the arms off her 10 month old baby and got a slap on the hand in a "rehabilitation center" (i.e. spa)? Yeah, well, as expected, she's being released. Excerpt:

'DALLAS, Texas -- A woman who killed her 10-month-old daughter by cutting off her arms with a kitchen knife is being released from a state mental hospital.

Dena Schlosser killed her baby, Maggie, in 2004 and was found not guilty by reason of insanity two years later during a second capital murder trial.

She'll be released into outpatient treatment within the next month, Collin County prosecutor Curtis Howard told The Dallas Morning News in Friday's online edition.'

Oregon town elects nation's first transsexual mayor

Matt · 8 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Some readers will wonder, "What's the point here?". The point is that it was unthinkable that a "cross-dressing" man could run for public office and win. While it is true just from everyday observations that women still enjoy a far wider array of dress and deportment options than do men, it is a sign of progress to see that despite the widespread acceptance of "cross-dressing" styles allowed to women and the opposite level of acceptance for men, at least one man can have the cajones to do what this one is doing and also get elected to public office. Excerpt:

'Meet Stu Rasmussen, he's the mayor-elect of Silverton, Oregon. He's also a tranny.
...
Rasmussen actually says he is straight and has a girlfriend. He is just partially a woman. He has no plans to change his gender, but he does have breasts. Stu says he identifies most with heterosexual men, but adds "I just like to look like a female."

...it looks like Rasmussen is the first transgendered mayor in the United States. He'll be governoring in a dress and high heels.'

Innocent Defendants Pay Heavy Costs

Gunner Retired · 8 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Not only a news article... it is very pertinent to our cause. Article here. Excerpt:

'USA 2008 – Estimates on citizens falsely prosecuted for criminal offenses each year range from 12% to 35% according to qualified statisticians. This is an alarming, factual occurrence – one which should be dealt with sooner than later, but will probably be much later. To ignore or postpone an appropriate response to this travesty of justice allows the criminal justice system to nibble away at our rights as citizens living in a free society. Eventually, the apathy will lead to a pandemic of innocent victims suffering under the boot of despots, because no one will be left to give a damn.

Knowledgeable researchers from the Michigan University Law School, studying false convictions found 545 individuals were exonerated, for crimes they did not commit, between 1989 and 2003. Their claim is, “Judging from our data, any plausible guess at the total number of miscarriages of justice in America in the last fifteen years could run into the thousands, perhaps tens of thousands, in felony cases alone.”'

The disappearing male: Studies show rise in birth defects, infertility among men

Matt · 8 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Are males becoming an endangered species?

That's the question scientists and researchers have been pondering since alarming trends in male fertility rates, birth defects and disorders began emerging around the world.

More and more boys are being born with genital defects and are suffering from learning disabilities, autism and Tourette's syndrome, among other disorders.
...
High miscarriage rates and a unusually high number of children suffering from asthma were also noted by researchers.

Although the link between pollutants and human reproduction has not been firmly established, there is growing evidence that the birth sex ratio can be altered by exposure to certain chemicals, such as dioxin, PCBs and pesticides. Brophy said studies done in the United States, Japan and Europe seem to support the theory that the so-called endocrine disrupting chemicals have a particular effect on males.'

Commentary: Women in Combat Okay with Obama

anthony · 8 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Article here. Excerpt:

'Although the topic was drowned out by campaign rhetoric and statements on policies that college students find more congenial, his position on registration of women is clear. And Obama's national security spokeswoman stated before the election that Obama intended to change current policies on women in combat. Women are "already" serving in combat in Iraq and Afghanistan, said Wendy Morigi, Mr. Obama's national security spokeswoman. If elected president, she said, Obama will "consult with military commanders to review the constraints that remain."
...
Most importantly, the draft is involuntary servitude – regardless of gender. The very concept of conscription, or even registration with the Selective Service, is incompatible with the principle of liberty. Years ago, economist Milton Friedman famously campaigned against the draft in his Newsweek column. He argued that it was not only uneconomical but that it violates the Constitution. Requiring women to register for selective service would simply make more people susceptible to the injustice it inflicts on those who are drafted.'

UK: Harriet Harman's husband says F4J invaded their home with recent roof-top climb

Matt · 8 November 2008 · Archived copy · Original

Story here. Excerpt:

"Harriet Harman's husband has told how he thought his house was being burgled when two fathers' rights activists dressed as superheroes climbed onto the roof.

Speaking at the protesters' trial, Jack Dromey said he thought Fathers4Justice campaigners Jonathan Stanesby and Mark Harris were trying to break into his house.

Trade unionist Dromey, 60 - who has taken part in numerous political protests himself - said the invasion of his home 'was a matter of alarm and continuing distress'.

The Labour Party Treasurer and husband of the Labour deputy leader went on to criticise direct action on people's private homes as 'out of bounds'.

Jonathan 'Jolly' Stanesby, 43, and Mark Harris, 49, who are both from Devon, scaled Mrs Harman's three-storey home in south-east London on June 8 this year.

Harris was dressed as 'Cash Gordon' and Stanesby was wearing a Superman outfit, but called himself as 'Captain Conception'. Once on the roof the pair unveiled a banner reading: 'A father is for life; not just for conception'"

Germany: Immigrant men forced into marriage

