- Psychos - Easy to spot as most aren't very good at hiding their lack of fucks given for anything not immediately pertaining to their own well-being, they don't care about anyone or anything except themselves or the project they're invested in, they view people disposably (which overlaps with the narcs view that most people are inferior to them) and abjectly dehumanise people as functions/tools, think of the girl who has a guy for complaining to, a guy for cuddling with, a guy for fucking, a guy who takes her out and spends a lot of money, a female friend that makes her look better, a female friend that knows hot guys, a female friend who knows rich guys - that's a female psychopath, people are functions rather than personalities to them. The psycho you want to watch out for is the intelligent one that can convince you with machiavellianism that he/she does care about you, gets you to buy into their lie and then just fully exploits you. Like anything they come in different shades and flavours.

Psychos: obsessed with self-gratification (to try and fill the void), dominance and apathy, the highly functional ones usually have a lot of mach traits and thus care about perception/reputation too. Psychopathy is the facilitator of sadism (enjoying the pain of others, and I don't mean laughing at someone because they fell over, I mean enjoying interpersonal perversions)

Women are like hard drugs

6 upvotes · 6 July 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

I completely agree with this. People can live without weed and coke more than they can live without pussy. Incel is a disease like no other. Your biology craves pussy innately (via libido) it doesn't crave hard drugs innately, but can be conditioned (and thus unconditioned) to want drugs. Is there a way to destroy a guys sex drive without adversely affecting his health? No. The only thing that comes to mind is flooding him with estrogen which only serves to make him weaker and unhappier.

So you're either horny and healthy and fiending pussy, or you're so low T you don't care for pussy, but then neither are you very productive or mentally healthy either. FYI: Testosterone causes men to feel motivated and focused among other things. Hence all the "you need to lift!" talk.

The Rational Male – The Proposal

You want another show demonstrating the 48 laws of power/dark triad at work?

There's a new show called "Power" that 50 cent aka Curtis Jackson executive produced, now 50 is very relevant in dark triad related study due to his upbringing, where he started at and where's he at now, he's probably one of the most prolific and successful DTs in modern media and an RP role model for anyone wanting to follow the DT path to success, orphaned by a single mother who died when he about 8 or 9, having no college education and selling coke when he was in school he's worth over a hundred million now. He also worked with Robert Greene on 50th Law which for those who don't know is basically the 48 laws from the perspective of the streets.

In "Power" the protagonist's wife in particular is very interesting, she's trying to keep tabs on her dark triad alpha husband (Omari Hardwick - Cocaine wholesaler) who she has a kid with, by seducing his driver (young 18 year old kid) and using that leverage over the driver to get information about the movements of her husband. It shows female manipulation, their untrusting nature, how they will abuse their sexuality to get what they want (she winds the window down in the limo numerous times, strips, and start masturbating while the driver watches, then when she's finished she licks her lips, looks him dead in the eye in the mirror and does the window back up - that's how she goes about seducing him.)

She also has a very red pill conversation with her mother where her mother says because her husband is a "drug dealer" (crude terminology for someone way above street level) that she'll never see a dime if she chooses to divorce him because drug money isn't declared to the IRS. The protagonist's partner and best friend Tommy is another dark triad but a different shade of DT, where "Ghost" (that's Omari's character name) is what I'd call a high-functioning highly intelligent machiavellian, Tommy is more of your loose cannon dark tetrad, sadistic, sets one dude on fire and then puts him out with a fire extinguisher as a method of torture. He is more violent and less intelligent and is really more about the glory of violence in and of itself rather than using it as a methodology only as and when required.

I've already given away a lot of spoilers for anyone who hasn't seen the show, but I can't sing its praises without giving examples of why it's worth watching. In terms of observing DT and machiavellian dynamics you can tell this is the brainchild of someone who's seen some fucked up shit (50 cent - curtis jackson) because a lot of the shit on there is too gritty and real, it's incredibly believable shit. Check it.

If you follow 50 and his projects, watch his interviews and etc, he also gives very RP advice. For example, I saw one interview of him years ago talking about how important lifting is for motivation and remaining focussed. In another interview he talks about how you have to be the person with the least fear in the room when in negotiations and how he's always confident in people's inability to hurt him as nothing could hurt him as much as losing his mother and being alone afterwards as a kid did. The guy is a pure street-bred natural. He also has some ridiculous superficial charm. A cursory glance of his instagram reveals massive narcissism. If I met the guy today and he told me he was a high functioning sociopath I wouldn't be surprised. His show and he are both excellent case studies for people interested in this area of TRP.

This subreddit is way smarter and way less toxic than I was led to believe.

For the record, you should all read up on Borderline Personality Disorder - it is, IMO, female psychopathy and the hilarious victim mindset/apologetics surrounding the abusive behaviour of these women is the only reason why they're not exposed as explicit female psychopaths. They're also incredibly dangerous to men and educating yourself about that is the best way to avoid being predated upon by the female equivalent of that 'dread game' you guys talk about.

<http://illimitablemen.com/2014/02/17/lucifers-daughter/>

Stay a fucking mile away, unless you're dark triad yourself, in that case you can probably play with the fire, fuck them, enjoy the crazy cluster B sex and then come out the other side unscathed. Never wife one up though. They hate like a demon and love like a child, fucking neurotic, highly unstable extremists. The funny thing is even on medication they're fucking loons. In the old days they thought these people were possessed. Not all DT women are BPD or cluster B, but plenty are, there's definitely overlap.

"Worrying about your body just isn't manly"

Nah, one of the beige phillip rules is something along the lines of "a bitch loves the man you were when she first met you but tries to make you everything that you're not so other women can't get at you, when she succeeds in that she no longer has the spark for you because you're not the man she fell in love with to begin with" and "to keep a woman you need to keep being the person you were when you first got together"

Basically no, if you've been together 2 years she's attracted to the fact you're cheeky. The sulky/upsetness is a shit test even if she legit feels that way. It's not a reason to change your personality when it's already worked for 2 years. It's simple push and pull. You push her away with comments like that, laugh at her acting like a child (more push/agree amplify), kiss on the forehead or some other cute shit (everything's OK baby - pull back in) then go on like everything's fine.

Woman Had Enough Opportunities to Prove Themselves in he Past

6 upvotes · 17 June 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

Deep down we all say we would settle for this unicorn if only she had these qualities, but sometimes I ask myself, "am I really willing to commit to any woman?".

You don't miss what you haven't had. If you've had a high quality woman, and I mean, real high quality, smart, funny, sexy, feminine, supportive, can cook, all that shit, you'll miss it when it's gone. A lot of guys don't know what that's like, they just had a puppy love they mistook as a girl for all those things when in reality she wasn't anything special. Others guys are sort of "alpha widowed" by a girl who was better than the average and hold her up as the ideal or the "unicorn that got away." If you've only ever known/dated/fucked vapid sluts then you'll think "women are generally just vapid sluts or uglies not worth touching" and thus won't believe in love. Nobody believes in love until they fall in love.

Most women nowadays aren't worth touching with a bargepole, there's a few diamonds but its a grim landscape.

The Dangers of Isolation: Why Men Need Other Men

Great, thanks for the personal attack.

Your line of reasoning seemed almost inane and missed the point, which I must stress I do not have a lot of tolerance for, apologies where any offence was caused it was not my intention.

but only men can allow them into those spaces.

Unfortunately politics corrupts what men do to serve individual men, rather than benefit men as a whole. Whilst to their merit women will campaign and do shit to benefit their whole gender (despite when it comes to mates, being in competition) men will sell out their entire gender for pussy/wealth, they do not have the in-group gender bias that women do (psychosocially proven - I'll provide a link if you want) example: wealthy men on average will contribute to women's charities but not men's. Funny when feminism aims a lot of its hate at wealthy men that it is often wealthy men who are their biggest benefactors. Irony seems to be a concept many of them do not comprehend.

Is this sub about self improvement, or about blaming women and feminists for everything?

There's a lot of people, newer members may I add, critical to control the tone and say "don't be bitter" and "don't moan" and all this shit. But being bitter and moaning is a part of why TRP exists, because you can say this crap and cathartically express yourself here without bluepill society policing your speech and condemning you. I've been here a long time, understanding/realising feminism is the cause, accepting that truth and then saying fuck feminism and doing what you want to do on a micro level anyway has always been the initiative, in short, just because you are correctly and logically attributing blame to feminism for many of societies shortcomings, it doesn't mean you cannot rebel against it and do what you want to do anyway (within reason.)

As for many men, they are too weak to rebel against feminist/gynocentric society, too downtrodden, and that is why they're in a men's help group like TRP to begin with, so they can bring themselves up and get to a point where they are strong enough to say "fuck feminism/bluepill society" and function in despite of the truth. Food for thought.

Coddled beta boy or violent sociopath are the general routes. They go full-feminine or rebel against it and go too much the other way, they lack the balance between masculine and feminine. A single mother rarely produces a natural alpha, unless of course, there is a huge extended family with decent male role models to support the boys upbringing. I know a guy raised by a single mother who is pretty alpha and well-rounded but their family is huge, so his grandpa and uncles picked up the slack. Not all families are big or close, there are exceptions but generally you're just setting the kid up to fail by reducing his life chances.

I'm pretty paranoid about cleaning my shoes as it pisses me off to see dirt on my shoes, the annoying thing is suede shoes, I have a few pairs and once they stain you're fucked. Buying new shoes to replace your stained ones, no matter how minor the stain may be, costs serious money. Especially when they're $100-150 trainers which is typically the kind of stuff I wear, like limited edition adidas trainers. Shoes are typically a pretty good indicator of wealth/status. Shoes will give a lot off about a person, they seem to be either a huge DHV or a huge DLV, there's no mid-point. Even with your shoes off people will look at your feet and judge your nails, it's fucking weird.

Although aside from adressing the problem a more thourough solution would be appreciated

Already blogged the solution:

<http://illimitablemen.com/2014/04/13/monk-mode/>

Ironically in relation to the problem here, the piece advocates a period of isolation to focus on improving oneself, but the gains you will see from your self-improvement will put you in a good position to eventually take that to the next level so when you do try to enter social circles and get out there and be social you'll have the SMV to pull it off rather than meet failure. Obviously being able to cope with rejection is a valuable skill, but if you're finding it difficult to socialise that is indicative of your SMV and your sense of self, not your inability to cope with rejection. Nobody with low SMV can just go out there and make it happen, you have to improve yourself first. Monk mode is the answer.

People are reacting to this multicultural, feminist, post-family ubiquitous single mother society consisting of expensive radical liberalist education, the banks were bailed out on taxpayer money interest free now they loan it back at high interest, interest is debt that comes from nowhere, there is always more debt than there is money, you can never pay off every debt, debt is a system of control and most people are in it, slaving away to make minimum repayments.

Whilst all this goes on there is also a decline in REAL EARNINGS for the working and middle class, you earn more every year but your earnings are beneath national inflation and therefore this years salary will buy less than last years salary for everyone who falls beneath the upper middle of the earnings ladder, which is most of the population. The only people incubated from its effects are the rich and the comfortably middle class, compared to gen X and baby boomers the millennials are getting shafted and they're seeing the differences in living standards and effort required to attain them. Basically it got harder to make money and more shit is required to attain success than in the past.

As hilarious and crazy as all this sounds, there are statistics to proof all of this, the only one I think society at large is in denial about is IF single mothers are a good/bad thing and IF academia has been completely hijacked by radical liberalism, which by being radical, isn't liberal in the truest sense of the word.

If its some advanced theory it'll be lucky to hit 50-100 upvotes and go away from top of the page within 3-15 hours, depending if another tinder or okcupid post quickly dislodges yours by getting an insane number of upvotes and comments.

Basically the newbies cannot relate to advanced crap so they dont up or downvote. Whereas everyone finds it easy to laugh at some stupid single mother on okcupid or how being athletic gets you laid on tinder. Or how some university in wyoming is going to teach feminist biology. These things are relevant in pointing out the feminine imperative at work, but they do not help guys improve themselves. Too many of those posts is circlejerkish and its important to keep them to a minimal. The problem is, the newbies love that kind of shit, they're in the angry phase of "waking up" and seeing how crappy the world is, so rather than improve themselves they want to just vent/bitch at feminists/women for a while so that they can then get their head in the right space to start working on themselves. Everyone who's already had that awakening is sick and tired of seeing it and wants to see things they can apply to benefit themselves.

Veterans want red pill theory, noobs want blue pill examples.

6 upvotes · 25 April 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Machiavellianism is amoral, it's up to the wielder to decide whether they want to apply it for moral or immoral reasons. Regardless of your intent the general premises behind each idea work the same. You manipulate people the same way with the same tactics whether you want to use that for good, or to use that for bad. You can deceive someone for altruistic purposes, just the connotative assumption with words like "manipulate" and "deceive" is to conflate with the idea "to fuck people over" when it doesn't have to mean that at all. In the truest meaning of the word, deception is to bypass peoples awareness and influence them in ways they may not be fully aware of. Whether you do that to help someone or fuck someone up is ultimately your decision and you bear the consequences either internal or external for whatever it is you decide to do.

How do you respond to the "you just want sex" shit-test?

Yeah chicks dig theatrics. A lot. Theatrics are machiavellian and machiavellianism is a dark triad trait. Theatricalism is probably the most overt way to demonstrate machiavellianism, usually mach-narcs are good at being theatrical, eg: you are manipulative but also think a lot of yourself so you're good at bullshitting as you have the ego to support the manipulation and thus it manifests as extraverted behaviour.

Just some insight into why women seem to love theatrics. That and of course "tingles".

Slippery machs like you that pin down someone's opinions and then go "i didn't say that, you assumed this, but you said THIS which proves what I mean by this" is disingenuous hoop jumping bullshit that I won't tolerate, it's gaslighting, you are abusing vagueness and a lack of clarity of your own position whilst utilising persistent questioning to ascertain my certainty to form a psychological attack on myself (the individual) whilst bringing my position into question simultaneously. As your position and its reasoning cannot be judged, that leaves you with all the wriggle room to be a condescending critic, putting me on the defense with my position whilst neglecting to offer your own position. This in and of itself is a machiavellian exercise (attack upon reputation) guising itself as intellectual discourse (which it is not as you are not addressing points and using fallacy to make yours.)

Great post man thanks for sharing your experience with us.

Western/Northern vs. Eastern Europe is an interesting contrast of red pill v blue pill, western and northern europe being blue pill whilst everything which was behind the iron curtain remained red pill/traditionalist.

The rich countries with feminism also have growing immigrant anti-feminist muslim minority populations and all kinds of weird social bullshit going on, whilst the poor nations of Eastern Europe remain largely homogenous, no/little welfare state = the muslim bottom feeders coming to Europe for free welfare money to raise their huge families steer way clear. You can't be a welfare state parasite if the country doesn't have a large welfare state system after all.

Islam is very relevant to sexual marketplaces, in any area where it becomes the majority religion, the rules of the game change drastically and you find yourself needing to play by an entirely different playbook. This isn't so much an issue for anyone in N.America, but it's going to become increasingly relevant in W.Europe and N.Europe over the coming decades, particularly in Scandinavia, Germany, France, Belgium and Netherlands. I'd be interested to know what the SMP is like in Switzerland, seeing as they aren't part of the EU.

I assume being rich and in central Europe that Switzerland is blue pill.

For what is a pretty poorly thought out low level post, I'm going to contribute another high level post as it seems to be as good an opportunity as ever to do as such and I'm in something of a benevolent "let's teach people shit" kind of mood.

We are capable of learning from deduction based upon hypothetical reasoning, we learn nothing by deducing that an absence of proof makes discourse irrelevant or otherwise inane.

Hypothetical reasoning is not fallible as a construct in and of itself, it is neither credible nor incredible because it does not posit itself to be real, it is an environment for reasoning to be "simulated" and is the whole basis of theoretical thinking both formally within academia and informally.

If we needed evidence to deduct things, in some cases, we would not reach conclusions due to an absence of evidence.

Philosophy of Science, or simply Philosophy, the founding subject area for what is known as modern day science has its basis in hypothetical reasoning and is what the experimental method was derived from, hypotheses were put forward and evidence was looked for to proof the hypothesis - inductive logic, the evidence was found AFTER the assertion was made, not beforehand.

This origins of science are proof that the theoretical can directly and indirectly lead to ideas which can later on be substantiated by proof. Theoretical physics is a subject taught in universities, under your logic we should shut all these departments down because they have no conclusive proof for their theories, there are no credentials behind what they say, merely ideas and concepts based on deductions and assumptions employing mathematical gymnastics to "make something work."

Deductive logic can also lead to fallacies and inductive logic can lead to proof, although typically the prior is seen as more credible than the latter, but this is not always so.

Following the rules of your demonstrated reasoning one can assert that the internet is irrelevant to learning as the credentials of those posting on it cannot be verified, when in fact the reality is quite the opposite. One does not necessarily need proof of something for something to be real. If a tree falls in a forest and nobody hears it, does it make a sound? You're making the fallible argument "no, it makes no sound" simply because you didn't hear it, you lack the proof. Scientifically the answer is "yes, it made a sound, but nobody heard that sound."

Basically there is existence perceivable outside our own body of understanding as well as TRUTHFUL knowledge outside our own capability to prove.

You have actually made an absurd assertion which is essentially tantamount to "nothing can be learnt from hypotheticalism as there is an absence of evidence for this paradigms existence" therefore, you're positing refutations as equal in value to hypothetical arguments, which is an illogical deduction.

It is absurd to believe someone who refutes an assertion "I don't believe this" adds equal value to a discussion as someone who posits hypothetical possibilities "I believe this because if..." the person making the refutation is adding nothing of value and in the worst cases, is showing contempt and bigotry. The person positing a hypothetical is giving the group something to think about and is creating a platform for ideas to be developed, if those ideas are refuted, they should be done so with superior deduction, not mere unsubstantiated refutation.

Obviously for the sake of hypothetical engagement, we assume the premise is true or there is no discourse apparent, now factor in the contextual variable that this is an internet forum, a place designed for discourse and you begin to see the absurdity of your statement.

Whether I personally believe if this story is true or not is irrelevant, people can learn from hypothetical principles based on the assumption it is true as if they are ever to find themselves experiencing a similar thing they can recall the deductions scrutinised here and apply them in their own life. Under the assumption that all knowledge is false until proven, we learn nothing.

For the sake of learning on the internet, we assume everything is true - or there is no discussion and no learning can take place. That is the point of this place - to learn.

So yeah next time somebody snarkily says "this didn't happen" or tries to equate a lack of contribution and a contribution based on an absence of evidence as equal in value, lesson learnt kids, you know they're talking complete bullshit.

Tldr: check your logic if you're going to come at me, your deduction is fallacious.

Parliament for most part is the embodiment of the trappings of power, nearly everybody there is privately educated and thus quite articulate.

It is not representative of how the English are as a whole, in fact, we have a rather mediocre education system and a heavily americanised culture which rewards stupidity. Smart and witty people are often ostracised or otherwise underappreciated by the masses, you have to make it "funny" for it to be accepted.

England specifically is considered the least European place in Europe by many Europeans due to heavy americanisation, in their own words "The UK is very different from the mainland continent"

The french, germans, spanish etc despite their different cultures all have a "european" feel to them. The UK has become so americanised Europeans see it as more of a European America than they do an actual European state. Culturally, we've become increasingly bankrupt. I have to spend time with my grandparents just to get a glimpse of traditional Englishness, they're truly remnants of a long gone era.

If a bitch makes you so mad you want to fucking call her a cunt, the moment you call her a cunt you're the asshole, all the shit she said to make you feel that way automatically counts for nothing

With men and women there's a responsibility double standard, women refuse to be held accountable and thus men often pick up the slack.

the fact that it is in oart our fault for demanding sexually attractive women

Our desire/reaction to sexually attractive women is a biological chemical response we have to the stimulus of women displaying cues of fertility stemming from our hindbrain, we have no capacity to control the reaction which stirs in the subconscious and arises in the consciousness in the form of urges and desires, for this is a primitive and non-consensual process. We can suppress the urge but we cannot defeat the urge. Defeating the urge permanently is tantamount to asexualism.

Women play on this desire/urge by accentuating their fertility with what amounts to body paint, grooming, masking their odour and blah blah blah, they are not going to all this effort upon the request of the animal desires of men they do not even know, but they do it to benefit themselves, for if they can catch the attention of a powerful man she's laughing all the way to the bank.

The rationally enlightened among us tend to despise this animal instinct which we are powerless to eradicate, for it is this instinct which leads to many of the mistakes of man, and indeed serves as the platform to give women more power and status than they are truly fit for based on no merit other than physical appearance rather than an actual meritocratic demonstration of competence.

Man does not CHOOSE to be physically attracted, he simply is. I bet you there is many a bitter man who feels so much contempt for womankind he would pay good money not to feel sexual attraction towards them, to essentially liberate himself from his need from that which he has grown to despise, rather than line the pockets of prostitutes, strippers and escorts. Women exploit male sexuality, but they sell it to you like they're the exploitees. The fact of the matter is in the pornography and prostitution industries, women are making the big bucks, male sex workers make very little in comparison.

Having no consent in the matter is hardly "a man's choice he must take responsibility for" that is some inane irrational feminist sounding bullshit, desire is not rational. In antithesis its why women love assholes, logically they know it makes no sense but they cannot control that which makes them feel attraction. Just like when you see a nice juicy plump ass or a round pair of titties in front of you, you can't help but feel your gaze drawn immediately. Again I will repeat, desire is not rational. It's not man's fault he is attracted to women, and it's not woman's - it's simply nature herself, genetics.

BBC realises men kill themselves more than women because nobody gives a fuck about them, derides a vague definition of "macho culture" and then transitions into waffle about mental health illness without making an explicit connection to feminism. LOL.

Blaming feminism for the increase in male suicide is unhealthy.

It has transformed society, it is a massive significant contributor, although not the sole contributor. To deny the adverse effect it's had on men is ignorant. Feminism opened up divorce, women initiate most divorces, women tend to get everything in divorces (money and kids - thanks to feminism again) men get divorce raped, men kill themselves after losing everything they worked for.

Easy to draw the correlation, that won't account for all suicides but it will "increase the prevalence of male suicide" which is what this article is about. We can infer that feminism is responsible for increasing male suicide, not causing male suicide in its entirety.

Relevant quote from other post:

I agree, there are US medical published studies which show young boys raised by single mothers are more likely to suffer from behavioural disorders and mental illness.

What facilitates single motherhood? The welfare state. What is much expansion of the welfare state a product of? Feminism. What made women think raising boys without fathers was a good idea, and allowed it to be socially acceptable? The sexual revolution aka feminism.

Nobody said feminism is the sole cause of male suicide, neither I nor the article.

there is one 'prettier' girl amongst the three, and on the 5 minutes of forced meeting on the show-around with the landlord, she seemed to be the ringleader. The guy is, actually the boyfriend of this girl.

Right, so they are a social unit. Win the guy and ignore the fuck out of the girl. You can control the girls favour via the guy. Assuming she doesn't completely own him and he has some masculinity and strength then winning his favour will mean she'll fall into line and naturally if she's in line all the other dominos fall. That's your in.

My game-plan, following your pointers would be to form an alliance with the man, and establish myself as a friend, instead of a potential competitor. I have a girlfriend who does not live in this house, so hopefully this should ease some of the predetermined sexual shit-testing and act as a DHV by pre-selection.

Definitely, that's the in. The pre-selection of your female will have them fear you less and attracted to you more thus bringing up your relative SMV in the house and making your life much easier. It sounds like your situation is not as bad as I had anticipated, I wrote my post assuming doomsday scenarios just in case the situation was that bad and warranted such meticulous strategy, however it seems as the leader of the house lives with her boyfriend she'll be less of a challenge as she's distracted by him and only "in power" because she's hot, not because she's a good leader or a super-bitch-masculine-feminist.

Ignore the fuck out of her, become good friends with the boyfriend (he's your barrier to entry, if he hates you she will hate you and then all her follower hens will hate you) and become friends with the ugliest girl there and you'll have it easy. Bring your girl over a few times and I'm forecasting plain-sailing on an already calm sea. That shaving shit works by the way, backed by science.

Have fun man. Thanks for the gold by the way, if it was you.

Now he's a qualified doctor and works in a hospital making reasonable dollar (not as much as the lawyer in this story, I don't know exactly what it is but he's probably a 10%er not a 1%er) and a few months back he was "going to propose to her" but they had some massive argument or something and that never happened.

She said to me that by the time she's 22 (once university is finished) she wants him to have proposed to her by then so they can settle and have kids.

I find it hilarious the taxpayer is funding her bachelors degree when as soon as she gets it she intends to marry and have kids anyway. And they wonder why the welfare budget is as high as it is? LMFAO.

You want a red pill show you cannot go fucking wrong with: "The Wire" it's all about the game of life, plenty of machiavellianism and dark triad characters. It's gangster as fuck. Go watch that shit.

Other red pill shit:

- The Borgias
- Game of Thrones
- Rome

These last 3 shows all tend to be set in medieval kind of settings but you can see the harshness of life and the power games at play very easily.

New show called "Dracula" supernatural show is RP as fuck, the main character Dracula is a dark triad motherfucker and I even found myself rewinding one episode just to work out the mind game he played because the depth of the machiavellianism and how he played people as pieces in his game were so fucking deep, it's something you'd understand in retrospect but wouldn't have seen coming beforehand. The show kinda explains it but even with the explanation you needed to do some leg work yourself to fully grasp it.

The Originals is also pretty red pill, loads of machiavellianism and shit. Klaus is the antagonist dark triad in that.

Basically anything with intelligent people in it engaging in power games where they don't talk shit and it doesn't stink of feminism is probably red pill.

Anything that focuses on power/power dynamics and the acquisition of power is inherently red pill in nature.

Music wise listen to any poverty stricken rapper who hasn't made it big yet, once they get big they talk about hoes, rolexs, planes, cars, clothes, clubs, poppin' bottles and all this kind of useless shit you can't learn from, when they're underground they talk about psychology and social issues.

I know what you mean, the inverse is extremely talented people who are exploited by people in positions of power who are inferior in ability. You know like those really smart computer programmers who do all the leg work whilst the manager gets all the bonuses.

Definitely agree with you about law 38 as well, it's very open to interpretation. I'm actually focusing on that law at the moment in my own studies and I found myself wrestling with the ambiguity of it, it's basically about knowing when to time your honesty and use it in the right presence, be careful who you upset, those in positions of power can upset people more than those who aren't but even then there are limits.

The lost art of friendship.

6 upvotes · 27 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

The framing of the 48 laws assumes that you aren't the master. You are the master, if you never get that down, you will never be one.

Let's be real, most people aren't the master. You can be the master of your own destiny but that doesn't make you top of the hierarchy. You can change the word master for superior, but it's pedanticism. If you're honest with yourself you'll find you bump into people superior to you in some respect all the time, perhaps not as a machiavellian but in terms of specialised competence or experience of some kind.

Completely agree with you on Law 21 though, don't be pretentious.

The thing about both of them is it's being aware. Law 01 goes beyond modesty and humility although they are definitely relevant. You can outshine people by being simply being very good at something, law 1 in extremes can go as far as actually suppressing your own talent as not to upset the person in the position of power lest they feel threatened by your abilities. If you're in the top 5% of anything you'll encounter it first hand, jealousy.

Focused machiavellianism is mental abuse and if you are unaware of machiavellianism you ARE a victim of the machiavellian's mind games, simply put - you are a loser, you lack the knowledge needed to deal with manipulation, be the machiavellian male or female, gender is irrelevant machiavellianism does not discriminate, everyone's a potential target. Machiavellianism is colloquially known as "playing the game", it is the game of negotiation, the vocation of power, it is the embodiment of cunning, greed and deception applied as a vocational art to achieve, influence and control at all cost. It is inherently amoral and to those who consider themselves moral, it is perceived as immoral.

Women are inherently, mentally abusive by merit of being nature's natural machiavellians, they are machiavellian because they are designed to fitness test you to gauge your strength as a man. They are also inherently irrational, many are hyperemotional and this cocktail, combined with a propensity to fitness test can lead to some real psychopathic level deception, cuckoldry, mental abuse, etc etc etc. Women have a natural capability for this and, left untamed, to their own devices or "treated as equals" the likelihood that such behaviour and machiavellianism should surface is incredibly high, in fact, it's not a matter of IF SHE WILL mentally abuse you, but a question of WHEN SHE WILL mentally abuse you.

By being unable to utilise machiavellianism, you are inherently beta. This is where /u/Softharems point comes in, by falling for her machiavellianism, he is blaming you as a man for not having the knowledge to counteract/outplay and otherwise tame the woman who is targeting you with her fitness testing/deceptions. I would like to interject here and say that, men are naturally less manipulative than women, they have less need to fitness test, and as a matter of biological advantage, where men may have the physical strength, women have an inherent head start in machiavellianism, however, to continue on this trail of thought; unlike women who need to take testosterone/drugs to acquire male strength, a man need take no drugs to become a master manipulator, he must simply read, train in field and analyse/people watch a lot. If you can't cold read, start with cold reading.

To digress somewhat, I could meet any of you now for a period of 30 seconds, I have to see your face, you can't be aware I'm analysing you (so you must be in a natural setting) and I could tell you a plethora of things about your frame/personality/disposition based merely on your eye movements, facial expressions, posture, everything. Cold reading is a fundamental asset in the game of machiavellianism, you need to be able to correctly analyse your adversaries psyche and position in order to best tailor a strategy suited to their particular character strength and personality.

To continue on /u/SoftHarems trail of thought, your inherent disadvantage in machiavellianism is no excuse to become a victim to a woman's deceptions. Especially if you're reading red pill material on machiavellianism, Robert Greene's stuff (48 laws of power book - amazon it) or whatever. You should be applying your reading to the real world. Also, to exemplify even further, within the paradigm of a relationship nothing relationship destroying is ever the woman's fault, ever, as a leader, the burden of responsibility always falls on you. If you manage a division in a corporation and your subordinates don't get the work done, who do the CEOs blame? You, you're the leader. Now apply this concept to your relationships with women, the department is smaller but the dynamic is the same.

If she fucks up and makes a big scene, or fucks you over, it's because you let her, you either let her through choice or you let her because you're incapable/too weak to handle her. It's that simple, whatever the case, it is your fault. It is always your fault. Drum that into your head. It's your fault because you're the leader. We don't believe in equality here, we don't hold women accountable in personal relationships for the course of the relationship, if her behaviour is out of order, you either tame her or you next her. You don't stand for that shit. You are a fucking man. When some bitch kicks your nutsack you condition her not to kick it or you kick her the fuck out of your bed/house.

This is how it is.

So yes, you can be the victim of a woman's manipulations, but the reason you are a victim is your own fault. Just like feminists are the victims of their own bullshit, demanding equality and fucking up their family prospects in the process. It's not conscious self-victimisation, it is self-victimisation through ignorance and complacency, indirect self-victimisation.

Reconciliation complete.

...Did this chick say she prefers white men to indian men and then proceed to bitch about racial hierarchy and say if she wants a white man because shes indian she has to settle for one that's less attractive?

LMFAO. The irony. She sees that white guys prefer white women, but when as an indian woman she values white men over indian men she does not apply the same critique to this "racial hierarchy." She calls white guys out on their shit but is oblivious to the fact she's doing the same shit to indian guys.

LMFAO. God, I'm sorry, but this all too common female obliviousness to irony is fucking hilarious.

This is a very poignant example of the fact that "despite not needing no man" women are not built to live alone, they despise it.

Excerpt from a post of mine yesterday that is massively relevant:

Women have their feelings kept in check until they hit "the wall" under current social engineering, the thing is social engineering cannot override biology, when they're 30+ and lonely and they feel their biological clock ticking they become incredibly depressed, and then the real perverse victimhood of this "pro-women" ideology affects them in a way that is tangible to them, which is what makes them listen the fuck up and pay respect - because now finally, it's affected them negatively. Oh that solipsism. It's the same shit that clued-in men have been saying all along - it's a toxic, venomous, snake connotated ideology in all the grandiosity that this metaphor implies.

Do you believe there is a deeper level of truth about women that we still have not discovered?

We are humans, we are limited. We are limited to communicating through speech, we cannot share emotions and reasoning on a telepathic level, there will always be more to know, but whether we can grasp it or merely clutch at it is the distinction that is to be made. And that, I do not know.

Or do you think that the basics have mostly been covered already?

Have we reached the limits of our understanding? Probably not, there is always room for growth. In fact, at the moment, all these noobies coming in and needing lessons on "the basics" are probably holding the effort back. Common lowest denominator and all that shit. Quantity over quality etc.

That's basically vital. Don't let a bit of rejection fuck your day/night up. If she's really not into you, next her. Don't waste your time. Plenty of other bitches who'll appreciate your attention.

I don't get why so many guys get caught up on this. If you're friendzoned and got oneitis I can understand, but if its some random chick why do you care if she rejects you? It's pure ego, she should mean nothing - you barely know her.

Agreed to some extent, but not sure about women raising men to be bitches

It can go either way of the bell curve, they can end up self-destructing and becoming criminals (I've seen the statistics you speak of, and written about them) or more typically (as convicted criminals are a minority of the population) they turn into beta bitches who were taught to kiss the ground that women walk on.

Never Outshine the Master (Machiavellianism) (LONG READ)

Definitely. I often wonder if blogging this kind of information is a good thing, should I be doing it? If my site ever got huge, would it be a good thing that millions of people had access to this knowledge? My inclination is a stern "no"

However Robert has already released his book, it's sold millions of copies, the information is already out there and I doubt my site is going to get bigger than his book, it is just a hobby/side project, I love this community, I want to give back to it - I attribute all my current success and future success to the philosophy and teachings found here. I'm only intensifying what readers already know as well as introducing new readers to the book as I can't assume everyone who reads my site has read the book, perhaps some would read my site in place of buying the book, however I digress.

The real handicap with machiavellianism is that the academic learning is not enough. Machiavellianism is a vocation. I'm lucky in the sense that, I have an academic mind and have had the privilege of studying at institutions and developing my vocabulary, general knowledge and understanding of humanity within an academic context. I'm familiar with the rules of academia and so can communicate in a way that reaches those who are usually far detached from reality due to their socioeconomic class. Yet I led a hard life. I've endured hardships, pain, mind games, betrayal and introspectively analysed, retrospectively deduced and completely dissected and discerned from my own life experiences the lessons that can be learnt, not simply to move on, but to improve myself, to learn from my mistakes. I'm still young (early 20's) but this has lead to incredible wisdom for someone as young as myself, from a country as developed as mine (you find people from developed countries tend to be far more stupid than those who are subjected to abject poverty and hardship everyday, such as in the 2nd and 3rd world)

Anyhow, I've waffled - my point was that, the reading is not enough, you can know these concepts, understand them all, see them with an eidetic memory and understand their application, but without the right life experiences, the inquisitive mind, the emotional motivation and experience of unjust, unmitigated, heart-wrenching pain, you will never make a truly good machiavellian, your application of the wisdom, your ability to perform and the speed and versatility at which you execute the principles will be stifled or subpar, there has to be an emotional basis for high level machiavellianism, simply to feed it, academics are far too detached in their approach to utilise it to it's full potential, to execute it as an art.

The potential competition will be little threat with the knowledge if they live in privilege and the worst thing that ever happened to them is losing their first love because "they grew apart." That's about the apex of pain for the middle class in developed countries. They think this pain makes them special because its the only pain they know, they think the pain is special because it stand out in their journey, but this is not enough pain to fortify their character and understanding to make them a vessel which can master the art of machiavellianism. All the best machiavellians have felt pain beyond measure. Pain which endlessly fuels their pursuit for justice, self-actualisation and domination.

And yes, I am projecting, I've revealed much about myself here. Some machiavellians are just clinically psychopathic, but of course I refer to the type who'd learn from the 48 laws, not the biological dark triad types who run on auto-pilot and are nearly always dysfunctional, eg: end up running their prison wing.

Summary of feminisms negative effects on society:

- Single parenthood is bad for kids, especially boys, as women head most single parent households and can't teach boys masculinity
- Denying boys their fathers is inherently setting them up to fail because boys from single parent households without a father are worse behaved, perform more poorly academic, more likely to commit crime, more likely to commit suicide, more like to suffer from substance abuse problems
- Institutional and social sexism (men are required to self-censor and pander, women need not do either.)
- Men are safe to criticise and challenge for their shortcomings, women are not.
- Violence/Aggression and any such component associated with masculinity is portrayed as negative in all absolutism, the instrumental nature of aggression is ignored and portrayed as a black and white evil.
- Safety and comfortability are valued over liberty, risk and hard work.
- Wages have lowered in real terms since women entered the workforce.
- People are more unhappy than they used to be due to the destruction of the family unit and the loneliness it spawns.
- The casual normalisation of “Hyper Promiscuity.”

"You're just meeting women in the wrong place!"

"Yeah I was silly enough to look for them in the west" or some variation thereof is my goto response.

The not so bright will ask you what you mean, you reply simply, countries with institutionalised feminism have largely psychologically unattractive female populations because the vitriol of the ideology breeds unattractive personality traits; discouraging traditional feminine traits that are inherently attractive and instead telling women to take on unattractive masculine traits. This perversity is thus unattractive to my neanderthal-esque limbic system.

If they ask you what institutionalised means, just say "use google" and end it.

When I left, I gained some clarity to process the whirlwind of information. I started to put everything together. There really was no other possible causes for my penis discharge. The chlamydia and gonorrhea cleared it up in normal time. All the pus and burning urination went in a normal time for a bacterial STD. This was where one of her friends that I had been chatting with, confirmed the affair and came out because of safety reasons for all parties.

Proof that women are group fucking creatures who facilitate each others deep dark machiavellianist mindfucking secrets. The only reason she came forward was because some semblance of humanity in her friend was disgusted that her friend had passed a STD onto her husband because she's a fucking adulterous pig.

If there was no STD involved, the wives bitch of a friend would of kept stum because by nature of both owning vaginas, she owes her loyalty to the less logical and moral party no matter what. These are the same women who morally arbitrate against posts like this, and go all ad hominem on the superficial use of language used to convey my message but then go and do things far more heinous in actual action. These are just fucking words. I don't go around giving people STDs and cheating in marriage or facilitating mind destroying lies, but whatever, I'm aggressive in how I talk and I'm swearing so clearly my logic is not fucking credible whatsoever. (That little rant there is highlighting the hypocritical double standard nature that women hold men to, not meant just for OP, but everyone.)

I got a ticket home for the very next morning and confronted my spouse with her friend, in person. This put my spouse of guard. She tried to deny it as just making out, but I wasn't having the gaslighting anymore. I had proof and backup proof. This wasn't an inquiry, this was an intervention. She asked if we were getting a divorce, and I said I can't come back from this. She collapsed, and I left. The next few days I got my things in a storage unit and went back overseas. We also got tested for everything, and came up negative.

HAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA. OK I'm over the fact this is so textbook now. Again we have the females favourite lie management mechanism known as "trickle truth", observe:

- "oh no it was just a kiss",
- apply psychological pressure to the now open psychological wound
- "ok I blew him"
- apply psychological pressure
- "ok he fucked the shit out of my throat and I puked on his carpet"
- apply psychological pressure
- "and I gave him that anal I refused to do with you!!!!"
- bitch cries hysterically because she's overwhelmed she's been exposed as a dirty hypocritical promiscuous undisciplined impulsive detestable pig.

Now, she is desperately doing all the things I've been asking her to do: Share some cooking responsibilities, go to counseling, work on the dead bedroom, stop keeping secrets, work on finances, and discover why she cheated. I've postponed filing for divorce to let all of this process, so I'm not making decisions in shock. I'm not going to twist the knife on her, and let her keep her reputation that she values, but I don't think I can come back.

Dread game makes an appearance! Hello dread game anyone who actually understands the fucking red pill know who you are. Bitch gets a personality transplant because she wants to save her skin and her survival depends on it, she has $170k debt she wants this chump to contribute towards paying off and now alpha boy is out of the picture she doesn't want to be left alone to psychologically rot and introspectively acknowledge her personal worthlessness because it would alert her that she is an inherently insecure creature dependent on a man for psychological fulfillment despite her lack of appreciation for the man she actually had. OK, mentally abusive graphic verbosity aside, this behaviour is temporary. This is a ploy to get him to stay around. As soon as she feels safe again, that he's not going anywhere, she'll go back to her old lazy disrespecting ways.

This is what women do when they're in deep fucking shit, they become the person you want them to be who they refused to be before, this is how you know a woman doesn't love you... when she only behaves like the woman you want her to be because its in her self-perceived interest to be that person, not because you simply fucking asked/told/desired her to be so. People who love people do what the other person wants because that's what the other person likes, not to save their own necks. People who don't love people ignore what you want and give you bullshit reasons why you're not entitled to that and shame you to shut up and accept they're a crap fucking partner.

I just keep thinking of the romance that I had waited and worked for for so long, and she gave it to another man. When I was at risk from a dangerous project, the thought of coming home kept me going. Now I learn she was in a dopamine high of passion and sex with another man during this time. I'm just getting severely mindfucked by hearing all the things I wanted to hear. Normally, I'm 100% into the walkout, im just finding myself stammering here.

Oh please just fucking dignify yourself with what you deserve, not a bitch like this who doesn't give a flying fuck about you. You fucked up the relationship when you lost her attraction, the constant long distance paradigm would have been a massive contribution to that dynamic but you lost the game there. Don't try to fix it, she's violated you so much that if you ever took her back she could never respect you. Without respect there is no foundation for a strong relationship. You must leave her, forever, and replace her with a younger more malleable model with less baggage. Also have 50 motherfucking philosophical debates with close alpha men in your life (if you have none, you need to go fucking do something about that by raising your own value) before you even consider marrying the new girl.

This is all so fucking overwhelming, that I cant process it all. Yes, I'm going to counseling myself to deal with this, no matter what I choose.

No counselling is a waste of fucking money and a biased practice designed to keep the power of the relationship in the hands of the woman by brainwashing you to see everything from her point of view whilst ignoring what you want. Especially if the counsellor is a mangina or a woman... which it usually is 99% of the fucking time (deluded liberal types love and are drawn to "psychology")

What he needs is actual medicine that unlike the bullshit of counselling costs absolutely nothing other than your internet bill and electricity what is this medicine known as...? /r/theredpill

Yeah, people don't mind providing for women, yet providing for a guy is seen as disgusting, not a duty, and he is scorned/rejected for needing that. That's why there's so many homeless men vs. homeless women, this is why parents kick out their teenage sons more than their daughters, as if kicking a guy out in need "he'll be ok" but kicking a girl out "no we couldn't do that to her she wouldn't survive" this is where a females perceived weakness is manipulatively turned into both power and privilege via cultures social norms.

This is the biggest form of sexism going and it's always been this way, but OK, if you are a feminist you believe you inherently have things the hardest because you're an illogical idiot who ignores the facts and follows the rhetoric of an ideology like it's religious gospel. 1. I don't believe this post/story is legit but I will deconstruct it anyway for educational purposes.

Don't believe a lot of what you're saying, you felt the need to qualify your gender as if by merit of being female your opinion has some sort of extra weight/credence to it. Guess what: it doesn't, vagina privilege means nothing here, nobody cares what your gender is here, we care about the strength of your arguments and the reasoning behind it. I'll deconstruct your post in case anyone actually swallows any of this nonsense.

He was my first love, my first everything.

Puppy love, we all learn about relationships from fucking up with our first, gender regardless.

But I learned all of my manipulation tactics from him. I learned to: never be the first to call, never be the first to text, pretend like I was a slut to get his attention, and to generally stop giving a fuck about men unless they could prove it to me how bad they wanted me.

You learned to play the game because that works. We all learn to play the game because our base/default naivety simply doesn't get us the results we feel entitled to. You talk about game like it's a bad thing, when it can be a good thing. Don't mix up machiavellianism with "game", game has elements of manipulation to it, but it isn't pure manipulation, it's seduction as well. A person who is always available isn't attractive because it's too easy, because a person who has nothing better else to do is inferred as having low status/value/respect in society. You can either pretend you're busy when you're not to fool people or you can actually be busy by investing in yourself, it's up to you either way.

He treated me like complete shit and I went back to him every time. He cheated on me, and if he wasn't cheating on me he was 'spinning plates' or whatever y'all call it.

Spinning plates is when you run a harem and have lots of girls you're fucking on the go at the same time.

He did not take care of my emotional needs what so ever. If I did not allow him to have sex with me (how dare I) I was greeted with cold silence.

If you withhold the pussy for a period of time an alpha fucking you will withhold emotion/attention. Why do you expect to have something reciprocated to you when you have withheld your part of the social contract? If he's not entitled to your pussy why are you entitled to his love/attention/resources etc? A value exchange is exactly that. If he gave you what you wanted without you giving him what he wants, he'd be friendzoned.

After two years of this, and extreme depression and low self-worth, I started learning how to control the situation. I started learning to do all of the things that you claim women are naturals at. I out-gamed his own game.

Women have an aptness for manipulation which many of us believe is biological in nature. This doesn't mean men are incapable of manipulation, it means we simply aren't programmed in a way that allows us off the bat to be any good at it, many more guys than women are socially clueless/simple (hence how gold diggers get away with murder)

He didn't have time to call me once in four days? Ignore him for a week. Didn't have time for me or give me enough emotional support? With hold sex and after a while he came crawling back like a dog. Hanging out with girls constantly instead of me? Flirting through text? All of a sudden, I have a plethora of new guy friends who take up almost all of my time. Breaks up but still wants to be "friends with benefits" knowing full well my emotional attachment to him--oh look I have three other friends with benefits besides him, and he calls me a slut--yet all of a sudden he wants me back in a relationship with him.

See the problem here sounds like you were trying to control the relationship which is why it was ultimately doomed to fail. A woman is happiest when a man is in charge, she's attracted to that man and she believes his authority is credible, meaning, she trusts him. If you didn't trust the guy but you were too attracted to him to leave, it's your own damn fault for not having the balls to ditch the guy and look for someone better. Same rules apply for chicks as guys. Don't chase, replace.

All of a sudden, I have a plethora of new guy friends who take up almost all of my time. Breaks up but still wants to be "friends with benefits" knowing full well my emotional attachment to him--oh look I have three other friends with benefits besides him, and he calls me a slut--yet all of a sudden he wants me back in a relationship with him.

So what you did was manipulate lots of mid-low value men to join your orbit to feed your self-esteem to recover from your depression that this alpha had caused you, one guy hurt you so in your emotional estrogen driven state you thought it was morally OK to go and cocktease a bunch of other guys, controlling them with the implication of sex via the utilisation of your beauty privilege yet seldom giving any of the betas what they actually want, sex.

You were exploiting them and you sound happy about it. It's these actions you describe which send betas like the ones you fucked with to come and find a place like TRP, you're a part of the problem, you're blaming it on a guy, but ultimately it could of been any guy and once you were over your first love you would of turned into a cunt as your ability to pair-bond had been damaged and anchored by baggage.

Before I had left, he was a snivelling 'beta' and although my current boyfriend would be considered a beta (one that I love very, very much)--this guy was simply pathetic in my eyes because his game had become so extremely obvious and so easy to win at. All I had to do was understand the rules and I came out on top.

You sound over-confident. I'm pretty machiavellianist I could probably re-arrange your head by taking you on the emotional rollercoaster ride and make you cheat on your beta boyfriend and have you regret it and rationalise away all your mistakes and shit but then I don't give two craps about you, I just know how to make you do things

I want you to do, to me you're just another woman angry with men in general, seeking attention, craving to feel special and unique because you're neither of those things, you literally have a psychological need to have a man validate your existence because you have crippling low self-esteem, you're probably incapable of being single for long periods of time despite the amount of pain and hatred men have subjected you to.

The guy you charge with responsibility for fucking you up fell in love with you, from what you've said, it sounds like you turned him from alpha to beta, when he turned beta you lost respect for him and ditched him because you saw yourself as higher value than he was. If he had remained alpha you probably never would of been able to leave him. You challenged his game with your own game, raised your value above his and his game crumbled because he couldn't keep up, which means he wasn't really that alpha.

Plenty of alpha guys won't fall for that shit, you're a woman, you're emotional, you're easier to make jealous, you're easy to mis-lead, you're easier to fuck with in general - your conquest over this guy was only made possible because he allowed himself to develop feelings for you and actually respect you, which you shit on him for because you were scorned by his previous actions and behaviour. Your revenge/scorn was more important to you than your relationship, that is what happens when love turns into disappointment, complete scorn, crazy fucked up psycho shit, the stuff TRP says women are so good at - you're quite literally providing a textbook case of it here with your post, but I guess you don't see the irony in proving our point for us because you've perceived it through a different cognitive filter.

I spent years using these 'manipulations' and no matter how 'alpha' a guy was, by the end I had them in the palm of my hands. I thought that this manipulation was how relationships were supposed to be, as my first relationship that went on five years had taught me that this is what they were--just a giant power struggle.

So you became a machiavellianist and you found that a lot of good looking/rich seemingly high value guys are actually beta and easy to extort/exploit, which I have no doubt you utilised to your full advantage. Relationships are always a power struggle, in equality a woman wins with her beauty by default, because you're not enamoured with a man physically the way a man is enamoured by your physicality. Essentially to dumb it down, what I'm saying is a woman's physicality has more power over a man's than vice versa.

Listen, if a girl DOES know about your stupid game, they will win. Most of the girls you are manipulating DONT KNOW, otherwise they would not be manipulated by you, I guarantee it. You are simply teaching them a game that they weren't aware of and that they will continue playing until they meet someone who can snap them out of it.

Bullshit. I'm playing games with girls all the times at the moment and they can't get enough of the shit. they're manipulating as well, they know what I'm doing, maybe not step-by-step but they can see I'm playing games, and they are stimulated by that, they like the excitement and the emotional push and pull. It creates attraction. To deny that is to be in denial.

Yeah, rock and a hard place. Easy to fail. Here's how to win: "who told you that?" "lots of girls are into me, none of them seem to agree with you" "I'm special too, where's my sandwich?" etc.. etc....

Learn from my mistake: What happens when you prioritise a relationship over a career

Before I start I wanna open with the beige phillip principle "never let a woman define you, if you do it's only a matter of time before you ain't shit!"

1) Meet ex-girlfriend 2 years ago on dating site. Sex after 30 minutes. indifferent to her but start dating anyway. Soon find out she lost her virginity at 14 and has all kinds of daddy issues.

Daddy issues abound so she wants a boyfriend who will be the father she never had, she will compare you to her father and depending on her relationship with him your actions will be interpreted in a certain way. Promiscuity suggests low self-esteem and thus she felt she needed to bait you with sex in order to win your validation. Red flag's early on here (daddy issues, slutty.)

2) Fast forward several months, actually care about her but she starts insisting I tell her I love her. Unsure, but eventually give in.

She wants daddy to tell his precious little princess that he loves her and guess what, at this moment in time, you're daddy. "Please daddy, please give me your approval!" You being unsure was your gut saying "DON'T DO IT BRO!" but you bowed to the peer pressure, you should only give your approval and love on your own terms not because you're pressured or coerced to, doing so on her terms is essentially failing a major paradigm changing shit test.

3) Things get messy here: Find out she's interested in a threesome (the good kind) and puts it in my hands to find somebody. Start talking to other girls but most are only interested in me. Willpower of the Gods.

So a positive side to her slutty manifests itself to you, she wants a MFF. She put it in your hands? Fuck that. You put it in her hands or there's going to be trust issues if she doesn't like the girl you chose for the threesome or whatever, then you get all the blame if it's shit and things go nuclear. Women instinctively trust women more than men (generally speaking) so it's easier for a woman to get another woman into bed with her and her man than it is a man to bring a woman back to his bed with his woman.

5) One stressful night I stupidly agree to it and get a handjob. Become so disgusted about what I've done that I breakdown and immediately tell her everything. Crying, "You have to break up with me", etc.

OK I'm a bit confused here, you've also skipped point 4. You agree to the threesome and you don't even get to fuck the other chick, she just tosses you off? You feel guilty about it and cry? Holy shit. Wow. OK. You went full fucking beta there. If you feel guilty about something even if your girl was cool with it, she's going to see you as guilty too, they don't do logic, they mirror how you feel so perversely she ends up feeling cheated on even though she agreed to it all in the first place.

If your girl didn't give permission, just keep it to yourself. The lies will only create more problems. Monogamy isn't natural for men, women win it from us, if she isn't servicing your sexual needs how can she expect you to not go look for them elsewhere? The opposite is the same. If you ignore a woman's emotional needs (as an alpha) she will look to a beta for them. If you ignore her sexual needs (as an alpha), she'll dump you unless you're deep in the headfucking (the psyche kind.)

She's hurt but in no time we're back together.

Not sure how hurt she really was, she could've been legitimately hurt because of how guilty you came off, or she could be using this bullshit as a weapon to beat you over the head with in the future (or both!) if she really is hurt and she didn't sanction this paltry handjob you got, it only reinforces my point that you don't say shit.

The flipside to adequately handle that is you tell her straight away, you don't beg for forgiveness, in fact you tell her you're proud of what's happened and you attribute full blame to her for being a shit girlfriend and not adequately servicing your shaft and cradling your balls. If she leaves she leaves, whatever - you can never be afraid to lose. If you lose, you lose. You move on. The worst place is this limbo, being kept in a shit position and controlled because the prospect of losing is being held over your head. Fuck it, losing is better than that shit.

But I've lost my confidence and my position in the relationship has changed. Every minor argument ends with "you cheated on me".

Ahahahahaha. The "trust issues" manifest and she's being a manipulative bitch. You've lost your confidence which means you're going to lose the girl, it also means you're in a position of mental weakness, she can start taking control and sabotaging the relationship now.

How's she do that? By making you qualify yourself, prove yourself, beating you over the head "with that thing that happened" over and over.. those kind of relationships aren't worth being in if you can't out manipulate the girl to turn it on her (this is the limbo I described a few paragraphs back), this is where you start becoming her prison bitch, she'll act however she likes, rubbing her clitoris to how much control she has over you, drinking like a common savage from the taps of titillatingly intoxicating power and when you call her out on it she'll move the focus to how you cheated that one time.

Guilt trip, guilt trip, guilt trip. She's the victim, you're the perpetrator is the bullshit being fed and digested (whilst in reality there and then she is mentally raping you) and the irony is you'll feel like a terrible person whilst she rapes you of your humanity, feeding on every iota of dignity you have until you're nothing but a carcass. Women can be malevolently cold once you go beta. Never go beta unless you enjoy women raping your mind.

6) A few months later she dumps me for that reason and I wish her all the best. Decide to relocate towns for career options. Suddenly she decides we should get back together and I cautiously agree. We book a 1 month holiday for later in the year based around her university dates.

This would have been a lucky escape, except she misses her little toy. You moving to another town so quickly and having such a clean break-up did two things she didn't like. 1: It shows you moved on easily, that you don't really need her and aren't damaged by her, she couldn't handle that and it's this inadvertent show of strength that would have quickly got her re-interested. 2: There was no drama, she got no feels out of the break up, it was just "Good luck, goodbye!" no cataclysmic apocalypse of endorphins rushing through her body aka "FeEeLiInnnnGgggZ!!!" so she had to re-instigate just so she could end it on her own terms. Getting you back instantly boosted her ego. Getting back with you was never about you, it was all about her not being insecure about how easily you appeared to be getting over her (from her perspective.)

7) I have no work in this town and am reluctant to get a career job since I will have to burn the reference when I go overseas. Slump into a depression, have very little money, am only sticking around for her. Confidence is shot to shit.

Well you said your confidence was already shit in point 5 but now it's even shitter because you have no money and being poor reinforces a sense of helplessness which makes it hard to be "alpha" (unless you enter the world of crime, but I won't digress) things go from bad to worse here. What I don't get is you say you move for your career, but when you get there you don't want to work in your career because the reference wouldn't be worth anything. That makes no sense... at all. Being poor and having her at the centre of your life is a bad combo, a woman can NEVER EVER DEFINE YOU. Remember the beige phillip principle I opened with in this post?

8) Here is where I start to become her bitch: Sell my car, rely on her for transport. She forces me to see a psychologist to find out why I cheated. I randomly buy her gifts and try to organise activities we can do. She becomes distant and would rather watch tv or go on facebook than actually do things together, except for when she goes clubbing with her loose friends (I'm not invited) - "I trust you".

No, you don't start to become her bitch here, you just only started realising you were her bitch here. You were her bitch way back in point 5 after she wouldn't shut the fuck up using some paltry handjob you got as an excuse to be a TRIPLE AAA certified cunt. Fuck her man. Selling your car wasn't good, you're restricting your freedom and relying on her which lends her only more power and more bullshit to use against you in arguments "if it wasn't for me you wouldn't even get to work!" etc etc. Forcing you to see a psychologist... I actually howled with laughter when I read that shit.

I was like "NOOOOOOOOOO FUCKING WAY! THE BALLS ON THAT BITCH!" bro, that is fucking cold - as fuck. If some bitch tried that on me I'd immediately point the mirror at her "how about you see a psychologist as you've been trying to manipulate me over a handjob for the past 6 months and I think that's pretty damn fucking sadistic?" wait some seconds... "LOOK OK, if you show you can be a good girl by getting on your knees and choking yourself on my dick I may think about putting that off for a while."

You have little money and you're buying her shit and investing most of your time into her, she knows she owns your ass here, this is full beta, it's fucking painful to read/talk about and I'm sure going back in your memory you hate it so I'm not going to harp on about it, but all these things are demonstrations of low value because yet again you made her the centre of your world and had ZERO game. The antithesis (contrast) is just staring you right in the face. You wanted to do romantic little things but your validation clearly doesn't mean shit to her now, she valued you so little she rather get her dopamine validation hits digitally via mother-fucking-facebook than via you.

Oh now she's going out clubbing. Great. People don't do that to get cocks stuffed up their cunts do they? Jheez. I don't know who's saying "I trust you" if it's her saying it, she's mindfucking you. If it's you saying it.. you're so beta and desperate that you're just letting her stab that stiletto into your face as she walks out the door to go ride another mans cock.

Counterpoint:

We live in a world of resource scarcity (which is why economic markets are limited and suffer boom-bust cycles.) The developed world may have stupidly low birth rates but the undeveloped world doesn't. They are breeding like rabbits and their countries are becoming more and more powerful, thus their demands for resources on the world will increase (think China, Brazil, India etc).

Men globally tend to have a higher economic output than women, they don't have to give birth, feel inclined to provide for their partner (women don't) and thus opt to work more hours than women do on average. In a world where there's a scarcity of resources, but not people, women are just as disposable as men. I'd agree biologically eggs are more valuable than sperm, but in the current paradigm women are not more valuable than men due to an abundance of human beings and thus labour for a global economy which struggles to facilitate all these new humans with the needed resources. Only if or when people become less abundant, will female disposability disappear again.

In an overpopulated world I'm more inclined to think the value of a womb has been saturated to a point of negligibility.

I mean sure, fertile caucasian wombs are decreasing in availability because MOST of the caucasian inhabited countries are all developed and infested with government endorsed feminism resulting in low birth rates and a thinning out of their country's inhabitants (beneath replacement levels in many - feminism is great population control!), but if you head into the mid developing nations or third world you'll find there's no shortage of people or fertile wombs hence mass immigration from the undeveloped and developing into the developed world, slowly but surely within the developed world the indigineous populations are replaced by foreigners as they're not actually replacing themselves, facilitated by multiculturalism which thrives on mass immigration.

USA is projected to have a hispanic majority at some point, Germany and Sweden are projected to have a muslim majority, the caucasians are basically dying out, but because they're the big evil white people, nobody feels like they can even talk about it, I can tell from my time on TRP that even here it's a very touchy subject so I will digress no more, people generally can't handle discussions on race without going batshit and IDGAF enough to tend to peoples neuroticism on the subject via the internet.

"Men Got Us Into The Shutdown, Women Got Us Out" Article from Huffington Post. Discuss.

The shutdown was to do with obamacare and they couldn't get a house majority so the government was shut down as effectively the republicans delayed the enactment of legislation by being awkward.

Obamacare benefits everyone, but it has been criticised that women will benefit more from it as they earn less than men do on average by choice (avoid STEM/manual work, choose to work less hours than men do, take time out to give birth and start a family) as well as visit the doctor more often and of course, live longer.

Obamacare is an addition to the public spending budget, an effective enlargement of the welfare state if you will.

Part of the reason the government is so big is because of the amount of workforce it takes to run the welfare state, all these departments for different benefits and welfare initiatives etc.

Since women got the vote, the government ballooned in size and the welfare state started cutting into more and more of GDP, effectively transferring money from the hard working taxpayer (men having the higher economic output) to people who often choose to bring up a child on their own and thus have no economic output.

So woman's political inclinations to vote for huge public spending is a significant reason many western nations have huge debt and now a few token female politicians want to claim credit for resolving the shutdown, when if you take their usual group preference of "female" into consideration, they're the ones who let shit get this bad to begin with.

LOL the irony really is lost in all that solipsism isn't it.

Yeah man. TRP as a philosophy is a borrowing of ideas from many different areas, it has no actual grounding in and of itself, its a mashing of things, anti-feminism, pua/game (people fixate too much on this for my liking), lots of male experience and observation collaborated as anecdotal evidence, it draws from traditionalism in the sense that it rejects ideologically feminist ideas of what masculinity can be, which is essentially not masculine - but effeminate and malleable, things which are great for (feminist) capitalists but bad for men and women who actually want strong families and to have something meaningful, maintainable and beyond superficial.

There's a general adversity to inefficiency and a priority placed on success, keeping on top of your shit - stoicism, all these things are traditional things the majority of men had pre-civil rights and if they didn't, they aspired to it (of course not everyone can be successful, mainly things like stoicism were far more common though) apparently gender equality means men must behave like women emotionally, and not that women must just balls up and be stoic like men are/were.

- TRP = the red pill = the red pill philosophy
- red pill as a term = real/truthful

- blue pill as a term = propaganda/delusional/hamstering/full of shit etc

Is there not a partnership between leader and follower? Do they not support each other? One gives direction and guidance, the other carries out assigned tasks, gives suggestions etc. Opposites very much attract, if you get two followers together the relationship drifts. You get two leaders together and they bitch it out non-stop and nobody gives in till it blows up. You need ying and yang. Male and female. Leader and follower. The genders are meant to complement, not compete, and you don't complement when you're both equal and the same in personality, I would not want to date a woman like myself, who wants to control, lead and provide for me - it's not attractive.

Likewise many women don't find passive, eager to please men attractive either, whereas men love that in women. Control is not always bad. Your girl controls you with sex to keep you loyal. You control your girl with aloofness to keep your value high - people are always trying to control things, usually because they are the very things they care so dearly for. If you want to know someone intimately albeit, indirectly, see what they try to control in their lives and you'll learn a lot of non verbalised information about them.

It's crazy now how in the west we have hierarchy to everything, but relationships must live in this ideological idealism of equality where apparently dominating is a bad thing, except all this notion does is create weak men and create a society where women lead and are absolutely miserable about it as they bitch the men need to "man up" I mean c'mon they're practically begging for the leadership. Women like to control out of insecurity in the short term, but in the long term a man she can easily control won't make her happy, he has no frame, he's too susceptible to her emotional whims and how they manifest onto him. Rock in the storm and all that shit.

I agree with you, I can't respect her "game" though. "I'll exploit my sexuality and not give you sex?" That's her line of thinking, what else does she has to offer a guy, really? Maybe she should target women, and hope one of them just randomly feels generous and isn't lesbian or bi. I can't respect a bitch who needs orbiters to survive. I pity her situation, that sucks, but I wouldn't get involved because I know she'd bring all kinds of dramas to my life, and she'll need way more than 2 nights. What if she doesn't get the job at the verizon store? She's not realistic enough. She has huge tits and fake blonde hair, she's all barbed up in her picture, she's sexualised herself with her image, that's her choice - and it will elicit a certain type of reaction in peoples perception of her.

I don't like her tone at the end, she sounds entitled where she won't reply if you don't have a picture, wtf? Beggars can't be choosers is the saying, and yet she's literally assuming she'll have so many options (based on her "beauty" I presume) that she thinks she'll have the pick of the crop from a bunch of beta offers? Man, I can't respect that, she's doing what she has to do to survive but that doesn't mean I'm gonna respect entitlement and exploiting your own sexuality to manipulate people.

I guess she's up-front about sex being off the table despite her overt self-sexualisation, though if a hot rich guy took her in I'd bet she'd soon change her tone. She has an abusive father. Very risky to get involved with such a woman/young girl. There's danger signs everywhere here.

Muslim Saudi Arabia is probably the exception to what I've said as they're not poor, but then the ideology of islam supersedes the ideology of feminism there, which is why feminism isn't ruling their society.

- Affirmative action is expensive, often hiring people who are less beneficial to the company and less skilled simply because of their genetics. It means exceptional male students and workers can be denied a place based on their gender, and a subpar female will take his place. That's not economically smart.
- Paying a woman a year or mores worth of wages when she has a baby and has ZERO economic output is expensive
- Wasting police time with false rape allegations is expensive to the state.
- Divorce lawyers are expensive, poor people cannot afford divorce, in the developed world it's a very middle class phenomenon.
- You double the number of people studying for a degree, in Europe where the governments pay for university education it means much higher national debt as the welfare state is paying for everyone to get a degree, caretakers now pursue careers to become providers themselves (whilst psychologically wanting a provider/man better than them, but I wont digress into that.)
- Women in skilled professions on average work less than their male counterparts, this means society benefits less from their skill set whilst the government spends the same amount on their education as males. Women are less economically efficient in this case and a worser investment for the welfare state. Also, if a woman decides to give up her career to be a mother to her children, her skillset is going to waste. An example of this is in the uk, females dominate the medical profession. Many female doctors only want to work part time, and often have children around aged 30-31. The NHS is saying where they used to get by on 2 male doctors, they now need 3 female doctors to cover the same workload. This is a real life example of feminism being expensive, this is costing the NHS more in funding because the female doctors are less cost efficient than the male ones.
- Child support from the government for single mothers is very expensive
- Women's centres are very expensive, as are free contraceptives (birth control pills).

I could go on, but poor countries simply cannot afford all this shit. Feminism creates waste, excess, and is highly reliant upon the taxpayer to fund poor life decisions. A poor nation simply cannot waste it's tax receipts in this manner.

I understand your premise and I believe there's some validity to it, however I think you're overlooking the fact that the mainstream institutions are bastions of feminism. Everybody regardless of their past is susceptible to inculcation, a methodology of indoctrination which makes something seem normal via the repetitive ubiquity of it's tenets eg: "I'm real, because you're worth it" fuelling that self entitlement 1000 times per year. If you repeat the same bullshit long enough in enough places, people believe it. To elaborate on mainstream institutions which have been "feminised" aka emasculated by feminism, those institutions would be the education system, television/the media and the workplace, among others - but those are the key ones, education and media are massive in their indoctrination efforts. Those are 3 huge agents of socialisation and they are all controlled by blue pill feminist ideology. It doesn't take much for otherwise healthy people to be taken in by their toxic environment.

I for example, went to an all male school and hence it was not a feminised environment. Then I went to college and I was like whoa what the fuck, feminism everywhere and it certainly made me more beta. Then I recovered my red pill mindset after leaving college, now I'm going to uni which will be a feminist environment again, but now I'm actively aware of the inculcation I can switch off and defend against it, I know better. I think the problem with feminism in the mainstream media is that it hides in plain sight, it's subversive. If you don't know what it's doing and you aren't made aware of the darker sides of it, and it's effects, you accept it, a lot of people don't even know it's feminism they're being subjected to when they watch a daytime talk show, and they're told to let the girls win at school in sport for example. Men tend to accept feminism in lower rates because they have little to gain from it and it's not targeting to aid them, women gain, economically speaking, massively from it - but lose out cognitively and emotionally, which most are too stupid to realise. I could talk about this for ages with you. Feminism in its current form is radically leftist, I'd most certainly agree, it's become quite insipid, it spawns much vitriolic misandry.

See I don't really trust women because every fiber of logic and every LTR experience I've experienced and heard from other men (including married men) coupled up with a rather astute observation of feminism has taught me that the family unit has all but been wrecked.

Trusting a woman to have family with is simply illogical when you factor in all the variables and carries many negative harmful consequences. It doesn't mean I don't value the institution of family, I do, I just perceive it's been destroyed by indoctrination. Only the most incubated of peoples and cultures, with a few anomalies here and there will have any great success at maintaining a family, the majority of us won't get to enjoy an family. Funny because pre-war women want marriage less than men, which says a lot, however I digress.

If you're ever an old timer and there's nobody left, your parents are gone and you've not married a ho and had kids (or you have but she's fucked off and poisoned your kids against you) then you can always go to Switzerland and die legally, they give you a nice little room, and they give you the drugs to kill yourself with, you sign some contracts and shit and you help them give you the drugs that will kill you to show your consent, then all your organs fail and you die after a period of time (I don't know specifics on this, if there's a swiss TRP guy, share your knowledge of this)

Switzerland is the only country where committing suicide is actually legal, it's called euthanasia. They have a whole portion of their economy deriving income from people from in and outside switzerland going there and legally being allowed to end their own lives because no other country in the world is letting their tax slaves kill themselves or getting help to die without punishing whoever helped them with a murder charge. On a slightly more hearty note, this is hilariously fucking ironic because they also sell/produce a shit ton of pharmaceuticals in Switzerland.

Legislation on euthanasia in Switzerland permits assisted suicide. For example, lethal drugs may be prescribed as long as the recipient takes an active role in the drug administration. Active euthanasia (such as administering a lethal injection) is not legal.[1] For assisted suicide, the law does not require a physician to be involved, nor does it require the recipient to be a Swiss national. These aspects of the law are unique in the world.

We have an option, it's called tax avoidance. Avoidance is legal, evasion isn't. So yeah, legally refuse to pay the state to dole out money for dumb hos who raise a kid on alpha sperm (but weren't worth sticking around for) and keep your monies for what you want. I hear in the USA some states have no sales tax (just 5 states) and others have it quite low at 5% or even 8%. In the UK we have to pay 20% on everything which obviously, you can't avoid paying.

I fucking hate single mothers, I've known of a few brilliant ones but I'm not gonna NAWALT that shit, most of them are fucking terrible and always want a pat on the back for raising a kid alone "because it's tough", it's tough on the kid too and I can't respect a person who brings life into the world in an unstable, poverty rife environment. Liberals would say here "that's why you pay for them" - why the fuck is it my responsibility? Women have contraceptive options, no child is born by mistake, but by choice, there are pills, implants, abortion procedures - everything to stop the birth of a child which you cannot financially support, I don't see why the rest of the society needs to pay for a woman's bad judgement, or otherwise, selfishness "I don't want to work and my biological clock wants me to have a baby so I'll fuck anyone to get their sperm, get pregnant and sit at home whining about how difficult it is for me!" Fucking pathetic.

Single mums are like gold diggers, a fucking net negative social force, an epidemic, and an example of wealth transference from men to women. They also can't raise boys for shit (I guarantee a significant amount of the betas who have turned up here for help were raised by a single mother) and I for one am not going to support this kind of social practice with my tax money. Fuck them. Tax avoidance all the way. They'll have to make do with the sales tax.

What being force fed 'Affirmed Consent' made me realize

6 upvotes · 9 July 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I love the logic jump. You get called a rapist because you don't believe in this arbitrary unnatural process of "making sure" it's "okay" to have sex via affirmed consent but believe sex occurs spontaneously. Under the rad fems logic, every man before feminism/the introduction of this concept must of been a rapist, so all men are rapists being rehabilitated in her mind, essentially. Wow. What a dim, dark, corrupted mind. The really ugly thing is that girl was not punished for defaming you publicly as a rapist, nobody called her on her bullshit of making such a serious accusation so flippantly without any merit to the contrary. That's pretty fucked up. That's like accusing someone of being a murderer and nobody cares or turns a blind eye. Even worse, this is in a philosophy class, shitty philosophy class that is - a huge part of philosophy is the ability to think critically, calling people rapists because they don't agree with feminist concepts is hardly critical or philosophical, it's damn right small-minded and ignorant. I'd expect more from a class of philosophy students, philosophy is probably one of the few "artsy subjects" or otherwise, subjects that earn little money, that actually requires a ridiculous amounts of abstract logic, critical reasoning and grey matter.

Affirmed consent has no place in a philosophy course, it's a feminist/gender studies/sociological concept at best. To even suggest such a vile piece of propaganda belongs among the greats like Aristotle, Nietzsche, Plato or Bourdeau is to spit on the subject of philosophy and all it embodies itself. How incredibly degrading, I'd check out of that course if I were you, their curriculum sounds weak and their students dim.

You game a single mother like you game any woman, if you're just looking for sex they're no different but you have to set boundaries and say you aren't interested in anything serious and thus by extension you shouldn't meet the kid, only go over when the kid is out/at school/at a friends.

I have not dated or gamed any single mothers, I'm just a logical guy and I listen a lot to what other men tell me based upon their experiences, be this my guys in real life, manosphere blogs or whatever, I pay attention. The insight I will give is that I believe as a single mother gets less male attention and has less options due to her situation she'll be more lonely and thus more sexually available due to her deprivation. I've heard other guys say single mothers are easy targets for no strings sex, you can just go over while the kid is at school, fuck and then leave. You fucking her is like "a break" from looking after the kid and "doing something for herself"

What you've got to remember about single mothers is they are more concerned with their kid than they are with you, especially if the kid is young, so you can exploit this priority by buying into her self entitlement and try framing a sexual relationship between the two of you as her "doing something for herself rather than worrying about the kid all the time" "she deserves it" "she shouldn't have to miss out on sex just because she's had a child" etc etc.. you make her feel like she's missing out on something and that she shouldn't be and that you're willing to fill the void, double that up with her reduced options due to being a single mother in the first place and you've probably got yourself a fuck buddy. I've not done this, I can't say it's a foolproof gaming methodology, but it's what I'd do if I was interested in pursuing a single mother for a sex-only relationship.

If we don't make it at this point, it's my fault because I can't get over it, and she is completely fine again. She says she is confident finding someone physically attractive is not something she can't handle.

Yet as soon as you split up, she fucks him in 2 short days. But if he can't "get over that" it's okay, she'll be fine. (No doubt, she'll branch to the hot guy she lives with) here's the solipsism in full swing and she's being manipulative with it to try and keep this guy mentally attached. You know, short story: i was "friends with an ex-gf" we'd split up about 7 months and as soon as she found out I fucked another girl, she went ape shit. Moral of the story: it's okay for her to fuck another guy in the 1 week break, because she'll hamst it's acceptable but if this beta had fucked another girl in that same break, all hell would break loose.

God. This guy is a fucking real idiot. And this as well:

Part of me wants to also propose just to force more of a road block for the other guy who might be expecting something could happen

This is one of the worst reasons you could possibly have to marry a girl. This won't stop her fucking her housemate. She's already fucked him once, he's had her, he has her the image crystal clear in his memory banks of her naked body, he remembers how that girl feels when she's tightening her pussy around his dick, and she remembers it all too. Having sex with the housemate just solidified their bond even more as she released oxytocin/dopamine associated with him when he pumped her. Plus they live together, so she's always around his pheromones and has physical access to this roommate, while the beta in question posting this lives long distance. Wow. Recipe for disaster. Biochemically alone, her attachment will be stronger to the roommate than her boyfriend because she lives with the roommate and rarely physically sees the BF. Dump, gym, hit the town

Yeah. I honestly don't give a shit what women do, be it talk about men, go to bars to pick up men, watch romantic comedies, shop, talk about fashion/makeup, yoga or whatever I find none of that shit interesting in the remotest slightest and have no need to impede on women's ability to enjoy that crap.

I find most women incredibly boring, dim, superficial, shallow, annoying, obnoxious and self-entitled. The better looking they are, the more they have spades of these traits. The only women I've ever found mildly interesting or entertaining are the very few I have met who are A: intellectuals and thus we can connect via intellectualism and expand both our minds outside the realm of relationship discussions or talking about mindless crap. B: she has a sense of humour/sarcasm that isn't used to bitch and neg, but actually to be funny for the sake of being funny and create good feelings. Let me assure you that both exceptions A and B are very rare in women where I live, most give a fuck about nothing except their looks/reputation and are incredibly dumb and shallow. Even the ones with the academic undergraduate degree, still dumb and shallow, although you do find a few intellectuals who are worthy of an iota of respect out of the undergrad pool, but most are there for money - not because they are intellectual in the slightest.

Another reason why older women are often more tolerable is once they lose their looks they actually have to develop a personality and be human, not glide around like an ice princess thinking they're the shit because they still have their looks. Notice I said often, some old women can't except they're old, get botox, gym it and try to sell everyone they're still 20 and thus the self-entitlement shit carries on. It's beauty without substance and beyond sex it's not attractive, they have nothing to offer but their vaginas.

I read a few posts, some were worthy of a cringe because they were that banal, idiotic and flat out retarded (devoid of critical thinking whilst trying to be serious) others whilst still devoid of conventional intelligence contained basic level comedy (which unlike their low level of rational academic/logical intelligence, has value) such as the reductio ad absurdum (reducing a premises reasoning to idiocy in order to conclude absurdity) that TRP is nothing more than a bunch of jersey shore neanderthals who lift to get laid.

The sub is pretty pathetic, it's sole existence is to ridicule this one by caricaturing it. If that doesn't scream "I'm so bothered by this one thing, I'll protest bitch as a retort!" then nothing does.

The general theme is, they put their sub on a pedestal by saying they derive humour from this sub, the reality is - this sub posts things in far too of a serious context and is way too wordy to be even remotely funny to the average fuckcunt over there saying "I HAVE A WOMB SO I OPPRESS MENZ LOLOLOLOLOL!", their sub is legitimately more funny than this one, because their sub is a caricature, it lacks seriousness and is rife with idiocy which you'll laugh at if you're not annoyed.

Really what lays beneath a veil of jokes and dismissiveness is a conceit for what this sub represents, it's humor without substance, just quoting shit from this sub and tearing into it, because they care and are disgruntled by this sub not because this sub is legitimately funny, it's far from it, their sub is far funnier to read because it's dumb as fuck.

These bitches care, and they care a lot because we have a fanclub now.

Bitches will be bitches, let them bitch - they are no threat, just pathetic for caring enough to waste all that time and energy on bitching.

Does it matter if a guy uses it to shame a woman or not? Sluts are bad if you want a family and stable foundations as it jeopardises that, they're good if you want to live it up bachelor style and avoid marriage. Perspective.

Male with lots of sexual partners = high value perceived by men and women

Female with lots of sexual partners = low value perceived by men and women

The slut / stud paradigm will always stand because of the biological and social reality that by giving birth women have a responsibility to children, feminists really need to get the fuck over that because we're not equal and never have been and no matter how much they wish they could bypass this, they can't. Neither gender respects a slut, but a slut has her uses.

This topic can go much deeper, but it's modern technology which allows women to lead a slutty lifestyle, trading sex for favours/money and fuelling the hypergamy, because in the old days any sexual trade for economic gain would have resulted in pregnancy, which is why it was in their interest to have feminine traits men desire/find attractive and tie a guy down to support her through monogamy and not act like whores, now it's in their interest to be whores to get what they need because there is no threat of pregnancy, they can now exploit their sexuality to it's fullest to reap the economic benefits that can bring, so that's what the vast majority are doing with very few exceptions.

It's sad as fuck to see our women denigrate themselves in such a manner, sexual freedom it would appear has all but corrupted our women into hyper promiscuity as they fulfill the hypergamy agenda to the extreme. R.I.P western civilization.

Note to future civilizations: don't let women have full control over their reproductive capabilities, they will fuck everything up.

4: Most jurisdictions require the parties to be cohabiting at the time the common law marriage is formed. Some require cohabitation to last a certain length of time (e.g. three years) for the marriage to be valid. But cohabitation alone does not create a marriage. The parties must intend their relationship to be, and to be regarded as, a legally valid marriage.

Assuming the bolded part is correct can you simply say you have no intention to be married to the woman you live with? How many roommates would end up in Common Law marriage if no intention of romance and/or marriage meant cohabitation alone was grounds enough to be married?

Amen. Approval seeking is very feminine as is asking permission from your girl to comply with your needs. You don't ask her to comply, you MAKE HER want to comply consensually, otherwise it's a lost case. I honestly see him as having lost this, but clearly, he's in deep with her, and in love, because he's ignoring THE FOUNTAINS of knowledge being given here because he probably thinks this girl is the best that has ever and will ever happen to him, there are chubby 6's out there with more self-esteem than this guy which fucking sucks for him.

Dude needs a big inner game improvement (confidence/gym/muscles/good guy mates/lack of matriarchal feminine influence until he's strong enough to survive the shit tests), but until then, use this bitch for the threesome and then tap her for sex until she won't put out and it's done. If he can sociopath his feelings up to objectify her as the hypergamous slut she is and stop seeing as her the all-deserving brazilian cock loving disney princess, he can get some sex out of her until it all inevitably ends, otherwise he gets nothing out of her and it fucking ends anyway, judging how beta he is the latter seems to be the more likely scenario. She wants to cuckold badly with an alpha now, no doubt, and is seeking an upgrade whether consciously or subconsciously (judging how incredibly skillfully manipulative she is as showed in the OP, I suspect consciously as it seems her machiavellianism is sky hiiiiiiigh!)

Shame the guy can't see it now because he's in too deep and as a result he will allow her to rape him mentally and betray him with her hypergamy, the post-event result is him killing himself/getting very depressed and losing grip on his life or manning the fuck up and listening to the red pill fucking brotherhood. Hopefully the latter. Hope to see this beta on the other side, visiting the red pill to improve himself and not get relationship advice on a lost cause with a girl who clearly does not respect his masculinity.

Raising strong girls of character who have critical thinking skills, are educated in many disciplines , and have career goals and life dreams apart from "finding a guy and getting married" is paramount for the 21st century.

I like your idea, I think it would actually be pretty great if most women were like this, or could be made to be like this, however I do not think the notion plausible or probable, and I will expound why:

If a woman is capable of critical thinking, she should practice it. But I do think it foolish to believe the majority of women could become capable of it even if formally educated in it. Women have been in higher education now since the 70's, and very few have shown any original thought or done anything of note within what amounts to half a century of female "liberation."

Most women have a strong extroversion and emotional preference that is essentially hardwired. Critical thinkers TEND to be introverts and tend to prefer thinking. People who prefer to emote over think can understand logic with effort, but effectively do not default to critical thinking as a way of seeing the world. It is my experience that critical thinking is incredibly rare in women. It's outlier behaviour. Even in very high IQ women, you see an absence of critical thinking as common, and this is why women with good educations and who have been tested with a very high IQ often speak and reason like absolute morons.

I would think critical thinking as a mental faculty would be predominantly limited to INTJ/INTP girls, which are funnily enough, the rarest personality types for women and probably amount to around 3% of women at most. If we expand that criteria to ENTJ/ENTP girls (and I think this is being generous) - you'd cap out at around 6% of women being capable of proper and decent thinking as a habit rather than an opaque exercise they disdain but can perform given a high enough IQ.

Some women can certainly achieve things outside of marriage/children, and I think this is a great thing for the women truly capable of such a thing. The slippery slope is when the average woman is not neurologically equipped for such a thing, but believes she is out of ego or feminist-fuelled inter gender competition with men, and forgoes her optimum utility as a caregiver/mother/wife in a narcissistic quest to appear intellectual and substantive in a way that is effectively beyond her.

People like to think you can achieve anything given sufficient nurture, but this is bullshit. It is my belief many women (and men too, but we're not focusing on them here) have hard limits on their biology that prevent them from exercising or defaulting to critical thinking no matter what environments you put them in. You could probably improve their thinking, but not to the point where "critical thinker" would be a correct label.

I've seen too many highly educated women who seem to lack any developed sense of logic, and got there due to high conscientiousness, emulating methodologies and having a good memory. I think it's the lack of testosteronic influence on the brain and elevated estrogen throughout life that inhibits women's preference for logic and developing a sharp, critically evaluative mind. The birth control pill only elevates estrogen as well, which is only going to further compound reason inhibition and promote emotional dominance in cognition.

You guys are fooling yourselves.

No we don't mean it as hyperbole, but we don't mean it personally either. I think rather than typing out a lengthy comment for your consideration, this video will tell you all you need to know on the topic. It goes far deeper than simply relationships, it links in with suffrage, political policy, the family unit, immigration and welfare state expenditure ballooning up national debt. A large welfare state feeding into increasingly unserviceable national debt, big government and mass immigration are direct outcomes of suffrage, and it's these things that lead to the eventual demise of a civilization.

None of this stuff is really pretty. It won't make you happier or really improve your life. When you see how fucked we are it can be hard to remain detached and not get frustrated. But the red pill doesn't care, it's trying to construct a model of reality based on gender realism. There are other aspects of reality we don't touch, eg: race realism.

Ah, I mean Machiavellian as in Machiavellianism (of course named after Machiavelli) rather than "of Machiavelli"

<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Machiavellianism>

It's a derivative word from a name, but in this context is not meant in relation to the person the term is derived from, but more for the reputation they are credited with having.

Of course I know the juxtaposition between the discourses and the prince is vast, but Machiavelli is not the topic here, cunning is, and cunning just so happens to have earned itself the name "Machiavellianism".

Hope that clears things up!

Basically you are being pedantic, you agree with the conclusions but you didn't like the reasoning
/u/Clint_Redwood gave: "They had no direct environmental stimulus for developing rational thought."

If he'd said:

"They had LESS direct environmental stimulus for developing rational thought than men because men had to _____ hunt and build whilst women mainly socialised."

This would be closer to the truth, but rather than correcting him, like a snotty academic with a chip on their shoulder you attacked him and concern trolled "this is why some people assume TRP is ridiculous" which is an unnecessary shot fired at the place you're commenting in. I'd like to think if you took value from this place, you'd give it the respect it deserves instead of attempting to undermine it.

This is disingenuous behaviour, and if you appreciate TRP you should amend your conduct here to reflect that rather than make asinine attempts to sow discord through holier than thou intellect signalling pedantry.

I think that the biggest threat to TRP is not women or feminism, but men who actually believe that women are somehow lesser beings than men. It's obvious nonsense, and men who might otherwise be sympathetic to TRP can see that, and are put off by it.

More concern trolling nonsense. When did you find this place? We believe men are superior to women in many ways, and to state otherwise is to frankly indulge in a non-existent egalitarian ideal. This is the problem with a lot of you newer guys, you re-interpret RP to fit your own delusions, RP has a pretty strict view on things and is open to amendment via evidence and models that are widely reproducible, not idealistic assertion and claims "people may not like this". You are babbling blue pill bullshit here.

Realise gender inequality isn't tantamount to hating women, as you sensitive types who don't like the idea of "men being superior to women" seem to conflate superiority with hate. You say "women aren't lesser beings" as if male superiority somehow dehumanises women. It doesn't.

Women are people and it's pathetic I need to state this, but you emotional types can't disentangle superior male skill from dehumanisation of women. Men being better than women (they have to be to satiate hypergamy) doesn't mean you have to hate women and see them as subhuman. This is probably a fault in your personal thinking/understanding of TRP that needs fleshing out, because from a glance it seems there is a fallacious conflation in your thinking.

End of the day, the sex that has more social responsibility and built civilization is superior to the sex that exists to reproduce. Both are important, but one takes more skill to be a successful version of itself. Basically, being a woman is easy, and being a man is difficult, that's why if you're good at being a man, you're superior to a woman. One has to be born and not be ugly, whilst the other can be both these things and have this be insufficient, this sex has has to develop skills, build things and exercise dominance - this is the male.

There is no equality of sex where there is unequal burden, the male burden is greater, thus in the fulfilment of this burden there is a superiority present that is absent in the female. Women live a much easier life than men, they reproduce easier, work less, and are not charged with protecting anything.

You wouldn't say a sociology and a physics degree are equal would you? No, you'd say both are helpful, but the physics degree holder is superior to the sociology degree holder. Just because both people have degrees, doesn't mean both are equal, one degree is better than the other because it's harder to earn, and thus having that degree entails possessing a greater degree of skill than possessing the other degree.

Well the same is true of men and women, the huge chasm in skill necessary to be good at being one's sex requires and facilitates the superiority of the male. To simplify: you need more skill to be a man than to be a woman, if it's harder to be a man than a woman, then being good at being a man means you are superior to someone who is good at being a woman. A good man is a physics degree, a good woman is a sociology degree.

I'm not going to waste time arguing this with you. I'm telling you this. If you don't like TRP's viewpoint, don't come to TRP, if you want to argue TRP because you want to cherry pick and discard stuff that offends your sensibilities? Go to the purplepilldebate board, don't talk shit in here, especially in my threads.

5 upvotes · 25 January 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

My reference point on this is that I see these terms thrown about way too often and used in a context which is sometimes incorrect, but far more often just flat out unhelpful.

Agreed. Too many people who don't know what they're talking about are opening their mouths on the forum nowadays.

The post over the weekend about how to be a better sigma, by pairing with an alpha and augmenting him. uhh.. what? Or by the "that's so beta" comments. Or the "I am an alpha" comments.

Agreed, didn't see topics, sounds pathetic.

The overuse of those terms does not contribute to the dialog in my opinion. Being a better man does not mean you ask yourself, "what would an alpha do?". It is far better to ask yourself, "what are my options and what is my best choice".

Agreed.

Chasing the dichotomy of alpha for the sake of alpha does not benefit most individuals. That is the way I see this terminology used most frequently and I am offering an alternative view.

Ok things get fuzzy here, is your point "don't get caught up with being alpha, just be more masculine" ?? If so, agree - although it was unclear from your thread that this was the point. It looked like you were going to pen a dismissal only to veer off onto something else entirely, hence my rebuttal.

I would say I am not disputing it as much as saying it simply is not that helpful to the conversation. That by focusing on masculinity instead of the overused concept of super alpha, you can recognize things in a simpler construct. You also can remove the "men do this" and "women do this" mindset and polarizing view. There are no shortage of "men" who act just like the irrational women we discuss. Feminine and emotional and completely lacking in responsibility or accountability.

Going for spectrally nuanced rather than categorically binary explanation, that's great - higher level of thinking. People forget inside yin there's a little yang, and vice versa (you can even see it in the picture, a little black circle in the white, and a little white in the black) - it wasn't clear to me from reading your post that this was your goal, but now you have defended your ideas it is - OP would be a long stronger if augmented by our discussion here.

Thank you for your clarification.

Only drawback is the book is long as fuck, 1100+ pages. And it is fiction teaching a life lesson to enhance your overall awareness rather than a non-fiction which gives you knowledge you can immediately apply to your life. Basically, book is about the big picture (macro) rather than your immediate life (micro) - should be read at some point, but is hardly a matter of urgency.

This destruction of the family through feminism in order to extract cheap labor out of the population is orwellian and few think about it.

This is the only pragmatic reason I could see for the establishment wanting to back female emancipation. It's short-sighted though, I'd wager the additional crime and mental illness that occurs due to the break up of the family is far costlier to the state than the additional profits made off the back of cheaper labour. One step forward to go five back. Who gives a shit about a country's GDP when there's no sense of community, weak family ties and a lot of loneliness, isolation and misery because of it? Feminism is regression dressed as progression.

The thing is, I don't blame women for doing that at all, it is their defense mechanism. They are clearly the physically weaker sex so needed a way to level the playing field.

Yes, pre-civilization, before the creation of law and law enforcement (police) women needed it as it balanced things out v. male strength. I presuppose that all the behaviours which fall under the umbrella of AWALT such as the hamster, stockholm syndrome and innate cunning are all necessary evolutionary adaptations to ensure female survival. They couldn't fight their way out of trouble, so they had to cry and lie instead.

Now men are handicapped and can't use their innate proficiency (their strength) to punish misdeeds, but head fucking people (women's proficiency) isn't outlawed when it's just as dangerous. Thus men are outclassed and at a disadvantage, the balance has been disrupted, and this is why more and more men are looking to Machiavellianism to redress the balance. Men are having to learn to beat women at their own game simply to have healthy relationships with 'em. Shit's fucked up!

but a LARGE portion got dealt a shitty hand for choosing a shitty husband/boyfriend/fling.

They are blameworthy too. And I'll tell you why. If I get dealt a shitty hand when I gamble at the casino, I'm still a piece of shit gambler responsible for my bills, my mortgage and my kids. It's not my fault the ball landed on black rather than red. I was assured by the house that red is more common. But I bet my property on black and now I'm homeless, so I guess it's not really my fault, is it? The casino is abusive and took advantage of me. I didn't think they were going to take my home away, I thought they'd be paying for renovations, a new garden and an extension, but it turns out that ruined me. I have no responsibility for my own gullibility and risk taking, and likewise I have no responsibility to my children who must now live homeless because of my poor decisions do I? My children suffer. But it's not their fault. And it's not my fault. It's the casino's fault.

So what you are saying is, if I make a bad choice because I thought it was a good choice, and my kids suffer, as a man, I'm not a deadbeat dad? You know, just like, a woman can have a baby with a drug dealer and then claim he was abusive and it's not her fault?

No. Her kid is going to grow up having a shitty life because of her poor decisions. Whether she was an idiot chasing a bad boy, or, apparently, according to the victim-game-playing that women do, half of society's men are cunning psychopaths who are able to really well execute compartmentalised personalities, immediately turning into Josef Fritzl as soon as that ring is on her finger, but seeming like the perfect prince charming beta beforehand.

Like I said: zero empathy for these women, total empathy for their poor children. It is bullshit if you buy into the idea that even 10% of societies men are abusive people. That is simple blame shifting. It means you still have your head stuck up a feminist asshole where women do no wrong and men are responsible for all the worlds ills - including the poor decisions and their ensuing consequences that the world's women make.

Instead of questioning me you should question yourself, and whilst you're at it, question the integrity of these women who play the victim so much. Every woman is the victim in her own story, didn't you know? It's never her fault. It's up to you, as a man, to play detective and distinguish between a woman feeling sorry for herself for being a fucking idiot and a woman who "picked a good man" who was very good at hiding his abusive alter ego. I DO BELIEVE the prior is the norm, the latter, not so - specifically because it is all too convenient for the latter to be so, and not only that, but wholly implausible.

You cannot convince me that even a tenth of society's men have empathy disorders or are simply degenerate or abusive people. You could however convince me that women flock to men like this, and so women keep pining after this same subsection of society, getting burnt, and then smearing the reputation of men as an entirety due to their experiences with psychopaths. You could convince me that women fabricate abuse stories to make themselves look better. But no, you could not convince me that even 10% of men are abusive. The abuse rhetoric is completely unsubstantiated, pulled out of nothing other than the sadistic asshole of feminist hatred for everything with a cock.

So then why are so many single mothers the victim of abuse? Well they're either idiots who not only chase dark triads, but have their babies. That, or they're MAKING IT THE FUCK UP. Either way, THEY'RE STUPID WOMEN AND IT'S THEIR FAULT. Women rather say they got raped when they regret sex than admit a poor choice. Women rather claim abuse when divorcing/leaving the kid's fatherless than admit a poor choice (or shit, maybe it's not even a poor choice, maybe she's claiming abuse out of spite to stop him seeing the kid.) Nevertheless, it's the same old bullshit. There are WAY more single mothers than there are abusive men. The maths does not compute. Read between the lines. Women are fucking up and trying to appear blameless after the fact.

Imo, "mindful discipline" is the key to success. It is natural to go with your feelings when choosing between what you should do and what you want to do. Your feelings almost always hold you back. If you can be present and talk to yourself in the moment until you do what has to be done in spite of your emotional inclination, you will have success.

The only exception is sleep. One shouldn't confuse fatigue for a run of the mill sentiment. That's more a hormonal thing which is another ball game entirely. Fighting hormones is a losing proposition. They have to be fixed (exercise) but fighting laziness or a discrepancy between ambition and immediate desire (deferred gratification) is very much a matter of discipline.

Promiscuity & Civilization

Civilization is all about keeping the natural urges in check. "Optimum" for civilization is to use those natural urges to make people work for the society's goals. Capitalism is successful(or at least more successful than any of its competitors have been) because it exploits two strong human drives and tames them(more or less successfully) to push the collective society on: the drive to acquire(sometimes called greed) and consume, and the desire to create(for those who can). This is of course a very simplified version and reality is far more complex, but it captures the idea.

Building a civilization and a society is an endless tightrope dance between subjugating humanity's animal drives and leaving them to work freely.

I've found that if I read a book that tailor romantic fantasies for men, I don't have those romantic cravings in real life, and I can accept these fantasies for what they are and move on.

Robert Greene alludes to this in the Art of Seduction when he talks about the woman who preys on a man's fantasies and acts them out to ensnare him.

There's no way to contest the hypergamy as the feminist agenda presses forward, so I can't allow myself to pursue romance anymore.

True. Even pre-feminism when you could keep a wife and kids by being beta, it was only because pregnancy and divorce were dangerous for women, and there was no welfare state or affirmative action to bail them out. Women were always about the money, in times past when the male imperative was in place every man got a woman due to the power differential. Now the feminine imperative has taken over, it's back to harems and the 80/20 rule. Top guys get it all, everyone else gets scraps or zilch.

Both. I still have the compulsive curiosity I had as a child. Naturally, I'm compulsively analytical with a high degree of precision. I take it for granted, but it doesn't seem all that common a personality trait when I compare myself to others.

I have read the book Mastery. It talked about that all people has an certain subject which they really connect with. For me it is programming and all the stuff around it. I can get in a kind of trance while programming. Is this the same for you when you write about your stuff?

Yes. This sounds about right. I am very sensitive to the position and choice of word. There are a thousand ways to say something, but only one way to say it best. Finding this best way is my artistic obsession.

Macchiavelli was never actually a follower of "Macchiavellian" philosophy?

5 upvotes · 19 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

Machiavellianism is being developed as an art and understanding based upon real world feedback. You could consider it a branch of psychology and social darwinism.

One can be Machiavellian without having read the 48 laws of power. Machiavellianism was named after Machiavelli because he essentially codified a set of manipulative ideas and put them into a book called Il Principe.

You are caught up on the words and definitions. Machiavelli was Machiavellian, except back then it wouldn't have been called Machiavellianism, it would have been called "cunning, manipulation and strategy." Machiavellianism as a word is an anthropomorphism of a set of ideas.

I am somebody who expands on these ideas, but they have existed for thousands of years to varying degrees of awareness.

As for whether Machiavelli himself followed Machiavellianism? Who really cares. It has no bearing on anything today. This is not verifiable information. Logic suggests he was, as writing the book to gain favour with the rulers is manipulative in and of itself. Knowledge likewise carries a certain taint, the more you understand about manipulation, the more likely you are to use such things because the temptation of power is always there. Whether he used that power for altruistic or sadistic purposes is impossible to confirm.

You may as well ask if any random historical figure was a good or bad guy. You will get a different answer depending on who you ask.

What did she ever do to deserve being called a woman?

5 upvotes · 16 June 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

The only way you can have a family in a society as poisonous as this one is to be ruthlessly manipulative with your woman so that she is captivated by you. Without such strong mental captivation over a woman's essence, a captivation that creates significant psychological dependence, you need huge cultural pressures to keep women in check. That is the fucked up truth. The actual pillars of society that automate a mechanism of family in absence of such captivation have been destroyed:

- Religion (thanks to atheism and feminism)
- A sense of local community/identity/tribe/togetherness and it's peer pressure (thanks to globalisation and multiculturalism)
- The family/father's honour/patriarchy (thanks to feminism)

So "women can be free."

Women's freedom damns us all. Women can't handle freedom, and neither can society. When women neglect their traditional gender role and follow the very worst of their instincts, all hell lets loose. The hell we're in now. We all suffer for women's freedom, so do women, they're just too short-sighted to see it when they're young. They'll be miserable when they're middle-aged.

If a woman isn't a genius, she should be a mother and a caregiver. That's what she's here for, nature doesn't give a fuck if you want to ride strange cock for 20+ years, do mad drugs and work a shitty average IQ office job that's going to eventually get outsourced to a robot designed by a STEM nerd you wouldn't date. Men, even TRP men, love women very much.

Now, you may find the idea that you're hardwired to take care of women unpalatable. That doesn't make it any less true. And of course we have to suppress that programming. That's what this shit is all about. If you'd read instead of skimming, you'd have seen that.

Bang on the money.

See this: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/%E2%80%9CWomen_are_wonderful%E2%80%9D_effect

Saw a brilliant video by Stefan Molyneux, eggs are rare, and have always been the reproductive bottleneck, so basically, evolution has selected us to give women free passes and not hold them accountable, because if we didn't please them, they would not breed and then we'd all die out. (That's the crude explanation)

Of course if a society were desperate to reproduce, whilst women would not collectively put out without getting their own way (you know the term "emotional terrorist" right?.) the only alternative available to ensure that society survived would be to rape all the women to ensure the next generation was born. Now before you lose your shit, bear with me.

I'm sure cavemen would rape women who were not cooperative, they didn't give a shit. In fact, rape is common in the animal kingdom. But as civilization has progressed and developed, we have mutated more intelligence and begun to develop more complex sets of ethics, rape has become immoral, and thus untenable as a valid reproduction strategy. We're at a point where most men rather go extinct than endorse rape for the society to survive. Men would rather pander to women to get them to open their legs and reproduce rather than rape them to ensure society survived.

It would thus stand to reason that since the dawn of civilization (the earliest being the sumerians recorded around 7,000 years ago) that we've had around 7,000 years of natural selection saying "must appease women, otherwise women won't mate." Where there has been a conflict between the desire to reproduce, and the morality surrounding reproduction, particularly rape. Women's power in society has always been in the fact that women are responsible for giving life. Many would argue it's their sole purpose, their whole reason for existing. It's a powerful position to occupy. If women as a collective went on strike, civilization would be fucked.

So if rape is off the table, and the woman are hormonally bat shit crazy and despite their need to reproduce, are determined not to "until they get the respect they deserve" and the men keep caving because they're horny, eventually you naturally select for guys who will simply give women a free pass to get laid. White knighting is part of everyone's genetics. You can't escape that shit. You have to suppress it, which of course, can be done via an awareness of the instinct and rationally deconstructing it. Of course, the current feminist brainwashing tries to play on this male instinct and use it to create absolute pussies out of men by exacerbating the instinct to a point where a man has no identity outside of said instinct.

Of course, it is this instinct inherent of man that makes the idea of patriarchy holding women down incredibly difficult to believe. Conflating gender roles thought to be conducive to society with "hating women and locking them in kitchens" is disingenuous feminist bullshit. Men love women, men see women as being something better than they really are, they're fucking hardwired to provide for and protect women. How the fuck could they all come together to hold women down when such instincts are so ubiquitous? A likely fucking story if I ever heard one.

If you want to know more about the theory of rape vs white knighting as a sexual strategy check out Stefan Molyneux's "The Biology of White Knighting" here: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5eZ1gZ3MbaY>

Rather ironically, women fantasise about being raped and I bet a lot of men fantasise about raping women too. That's not even a pandora's box I'm going to try and reconcile with the rest of what I've said here for now.

The Red Pill, let's talk about temporary/permanent health problems.

5 upvotes · 24 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

- OP do you have trouble concentrating/constant fatigue despite adequate rest/relatively good diet??
- Do you have skin conditions, eg: eczema, persistent dandruff, seb derm, acne, rosacea etc?

- Do you have issues gaining or losing weight despite a high or low calorie diet and rigorous exercise regime?

If so, you probably have a gut flora imbalance and suffer from candidiasis. Candidiasis is not recognised as a condition by conventional doctors, but then they aren't perfect. They can't cure IBS or any of the skin conditions I have just mentioned, they simply throw steroid creams and antibiotics at it, which fuck you up even more, and then they just tell you to eat well, be hydrated, moisturise, avoid sugar and exercise. Things you'd do if you weren't ill and gave a shit about your health anyway. Conventional advice. They're fucking useless. That won't fix your crashing energy levels all the time either. Reducing carbs/gluten will help marginally, but you will still feel randomly drained for no logical reason.

If this sounds like you, let me know, I think I figured out what the fuck causes all this nonsense and how you can fix yourself up. It's a systemic issue, so I suspect IBS is the tip of the iceberg. You probably have something else wrong with you that you don't realise is connected to the IBS, or simply neglected to mention.

There are lots of diets out there that help marginally, they are strict as fuck and lighten symptoms, eg: help regulate bowel movements (high fibre) or reduce bloating (peppermint tea) but they don't fix the problem. It's just temporary relief.

Health is the foundation to self-improvement and good living. Try doing a bent over row or squatting when bloated. Try writing an essay or report when you can't concentrate, or getting a work out in when you feel completely drained regardless of will and ambition to get it done. Shit's a bitch.

If society has nothing to offer you, then why offer society anything in return.

This is why you find that poor people who aren't disenfranchised with the state, who appreciate the welfare etc have strong moral principles. Whilst multimillionaires who believe they pay more in taxes than they get out of society in roads/infrastructure tend to have more flexible principles because they see society as providing them less value than they provide to society, although, ironically, they rely on that society's existence to make their money. Hence offshore tax avoidance and the like. Of course, positions of power naturally attract psychopaths so causation is hard to determine. Likewise, to maintain success, one has to adopt a certain degree of ruthlessness to hold onto it.

And before some rich guy gets his knickers in a twist, yes, I am aware there are plenty of DTs at the bottom of the socioeconomic model. Don't get it twisted.

5 upvotes · 30 April 2015 · /r/askTRP

Push = push her away, break rapport

Pull = pull her in, build rapport

The fucked up thing is the more you push them away, the more you seduce them, so even though you're not friends and they "don't like you" they find you attractive. Most western girls need way more push than pull, and most guys are trying to get laid by just pulling non-stop, making themselves too easy and boring to the woman (women like a man who is a challenge.) When you pull, you're showing kindness/comfort or you're closing the deal after a lot of pushing and saying "I think you're fuckable" - basically pulling is showing any kind of approval, whether that be the asshole telling the chick what she wants to hear after making her think he doesn't like her, or the beta telling her how beautiful she is.

What you have to do is set precedent by doing a lot of pushing, and then escalate sexually by pulling "you know what, maybe you're not like the other girls, maybe I'll give you a chance." When they do what you want you keep pulling, when they shit test, you push back, once the bitchiness is defused, you pull back in. Eventually you'll find you're pulling them onto your cock.

Converse is the more grammatically used/understood form rather than conversate (which only sprang up in 1973). Converse is more facile as it has one less syllable. "Brevity is the soul of wit" as the Bard once said, so why use a lengthy word, when there is a more succinct one? This isn't just you, this is a lot of writers nowadays. Is there a particular reason for this?

I use logic to plan the posts, but emotion to create the literary aesthetic. Conversate simply felt better to me than converse. So no, not in particular, but keen eye nevertheless. It seems I have a tendency to use less common word forms, and as I allude to in the grammar segment of the article, although I have improved, brevity isn't exactly my strong point. I am English/British, yes.

What you say is true in the US as well undoubtedly, but the English take this concept to an entirely higher plane in my experience.

Oh undoubtedly. England is a snobby state. It's not so bad in Scotland or Wales. I spoke with a "common" accent when I was young which offended the shit out of my grandmother who was from genteel stock (WASP who speaks in Queen's English) (received pronunciation - Oh I say!) and she taught me to speak in Estuary English, which is the accent pertaining to the regions of the home counties, mainly the Kent/Surrey area. Nevertheless, although that is my "default" accent I also developed a street accent because lots of working class people I was educated with thought I was posh because I spoke well (meaning soft/correct pronunciations and a lack of slang, not an over the top posh voice.)

My grandmother married down, so I don't share her roots. Effectively I have two accents which I use for different situations to minimise the prejudiced bullshit I have to deal with. I never went as far as seeking elocution to sound like a true snob, and I'm happy for that, because it's so pompous it's absurd. Unless you live in a super-elite bubble, that accent will only make your life harder. Whenever I ring up anywhere official, I put on my best accent, it's funny, it makes the person on the phone respect you more.

You set the frame/do it on your own terms, rather than attempt to train her from a place of reaction. Dread game is an effective form of negative social conditioning/response to her shitty behaviour. When she opens up to being reasonable because of how dread has made her feel, then you can tell her to do things that "make your woman more RP." As their parents/society/religion don't teach them how to be good women anymore, it's a slow process, and you will get resistance/blow back/childish behaviour. You're teaching her the qualities a father didn't, effectively attempting to sophisticate a god damn grown woman. Every time feminists/women get a concession, they find the grass isn't greener and that they were just whining entitled infants who didn't realise they wouldn't be able to handle their new found freedom, so they start back-peddalling and you get more and more self-declared "traditional women," women who want to cherry pick chivalry/feminism to get the combo that results in the most resources and privileges for them with the lowest amount of effort necessary.

Most women would not survive a month in the shoes of a man, Norah Vincent proved that. Norah Vincent was a woman who lived as a man for a year and needed psychiatric treatment afterwards. Without further elaboration, this seems incoherent/inchoate. Particularly the point that marriage is sometimes safer for men. I'm pretty sure the family courts made sure that it isn't within a western context. Any woman scorned out for revenge can weaponise the child with the full force of the law behind her with ease. Takes a cunning man to set her up as crazy/frame her and make the court question her enough to award primary custody to the father/give him some rights. Even then, there are many cases where mentally unfit mothers have still been deemed better primary caregivers than the father.

Last night I walk into the apartment for movie night and see that she cut it short. WHY?!?!? I'll never understand that. Gross.

When women do this, I honestly believe it's a sign they're mentally disturbed. It's like getting a tattoo or piercing, but instead of adding something they're taking something away. It makes them unattractive and they know it. They know guys prefer longer hair. To me it's a woman's way of saying "leave me alone." There is no good reason for a woman to cut her hair short. I'd pick that up as a red flag if I saw it.

Since you entered the EU, your girls have got sluttier. Polish girls in the UK turn into English girls it's really sad. Put on weight and become feminist whores. Not all of them, but most of them. The EU project probably improved Poland out of all countries the most economically, but culturally you've given up a lot. Be interesting to see Poland in 1-2 generations from now - westernised. Be interesting to see how well that polish work ethic holds up as your cost of living continues to rise and working in richer EU states doesn't provide the purchasing power that it once did.

Classic mistake. You can do whatever you like if you can control the narrative afterwards, women know this instinctually. It's all a matter of confidence. "Yeah, I'm an asshole, but that's why you love me." "He's just jealous he hasn't got the balls to do the shit I do." You can shit test them, make 'em act out of emotion "prove they do have balls" blah blah blah. It becomes about their masculinity instead of your actions. Classic diversion, slip n' slide.

A backhanded compliment but I'll take it nevertheless! Heh, my blog, partially, is my creative expression, hence I do not always aim for simplicity and understanding. People seem to value "easiness" above all else, but I don't. I value sophistication and nuance. Understanding and "ease" aren't the same to me, sometimes to fully understand something you have to be incredibly complex, and dumbing it down actually only gives you an ignorant partial understanding that allows you to feel like you understand something more fully than you actually do. Regardless, I like to make the reader work for it (unless it really is meant as a practical "how to" eg: monk mode.)

In some posts one could say there is an air of pretension. I want the worthy to prove themselves they're worthy by working hard enough to understand the content. Likewise by working so hard to understand it, they'll be able to use it more fully because they've exerted more energy in grasping what is being said and not just been lazy and expected the writer to make everything so dense that no real need for thought is needed on their part. I like to stimulate abstract thought, and I am kind of underhanded in how I accomplish that. If the reader is incapable of, or simply doesn't do this out of conscious choice then they fail the test and hence don't get to acquire the knowledge (and all it's relevant intricate nuance) on offer. The text is meant to be a challenge.

My posts on here (this board) are more how I talk in passing, hence, less intense. Art is subjective, if you don't like it - that's ok not everybody does and it would be foolish to expect that they would. Thanks for commenting.

As a side note if I ever do a podcast, you'll probably enjoy that, you'll hear an eclectic ever-changing mix from "down-to-earth" to "artistic, classical speech." You don't want to rely on canned material, you want to be able to formulate your own responses. The presets are just there as a source of inspiration for you to build off/emulate when devising your own responses. Eventually it'll be instinctual rather than a chore (with practice.) Discussion about some factors of social masculinity which collide with some redpill concepts.

I feel that the Machiavellian purism is at odds with the idea of the social alpha male whos status comes with responsibilities to protect and to help the weakest of his.

I score 100% on the Machiavellian metric on dark triad tests - but I am not psychopathic. I use my underhandedness to help people when it does not harm me to do so. I can also use this ability to fuck people over who are psychopathic if they cross me. I have enough moral indignance to challenge the fearlessness of psychopathy and out manoeuvre my opponent. Psychopaths think non-psychopaths are prey, but if you are Machiavellian and smart you can fuck them real good. Non-psychopaths can use desensitisation and stoicism to emulate fearlessness without being psychopathic.

Machiavellianism is amoral. People use that to do immoral things, but it can be used to be moral too. When parents limit your options and lie to you for your own good, they are being Machiavellian - but for moral reasons - they believe it will help you. People see Machiavellianism as bad, but it isn't. There's nothing wrong with being Machiavellian. The valid arguments come into play when you start trying to justify psychopathy and sadism. Psychopathy has applicative uses. Sadism is just totally destructive and other than helping masochists get off (the polar opposite to sadists) it serves no functional purpose.

Would I help an old dude in the street getting fucked up by some young bucks? Definitely, if I sized them up and thought I could win. Otherwise, no, I'd get backup. If I thought I could win from a quick analysis I'd tell them to back the fuck up - demonstrate fearlessness and intimidate them into retreat. You don't need to be a psychopath to be brave and call the bluff of fucked up people. I've succeeded in this capacity on many occasions. For this reason some think I am a psychopath. I do not think I am. If I were, I'd be a "moral psychopath." Does that even exist? Not to my knowledge. Maybe that warrants further research from the likes of Professor Kevin Dutton.

Naturally, most people who identify as DT reading this would say "IM is not a psychopath, if he was he wouldn't be saying he could be in his comment." And I agree with them. Psychopaths are paranoid, they don't reveal their nature too publicly. I know a psychopath, he is nothing like me. I am more personable and give more fucks about taking an interest in people. Saying that, one could then distrustingly say I say this just to throw people off and put this here to pre-empt and confuse and that I'm being calculating. I guess you'll never know the truth for certain. Food for thought. What's important is that Machiavellianism is a tool - it is not evil unless you make it so with your intent. This is a case of "hate the player, not the game." Not the original saying, I know - but sadists/psychopaths are needlessly damaging to those around them, thus not as effective as they could be. There's a balance to be met between psychopathy and machiavellianism. As for sadism, that's a curse that needs suppressing. No constructive use at all. It's just an addiction to fucking people up.

You're not wrong per se, and the "start a garden" shit was funny, but I don't think this truly addresses OP. Morality within the wider context of civilization is necessary. Without it, we'd all be like Africa - primitive tribes constantly vying for territory and hoes because we're more concerned with dominance than cooperation. If you want civilization, people need to take part in the social contract. It's not as black and white as you present it. I believe that's what OP is trying to address.

Reading the responses here and looking at the votes, it seems to have gone over most people's heads. The idiots are writing it off because they don't understand it. They want simple options like you have presented.

Unfortunately TRP can't do shit about people with low IQs, and that does affect how the knowledge found here is interpreted and utilised.

men and women, forms the means to achieve ends: sex, and commitment, respectively. If a man used game he learned on TRP to convince a new girl he met at a bar to fuck, we could say the results are not immoral, they might be considered on the grounds that the hook up benefited both parties. Now, if that same man used the same game to fuck a married woman, we could consider the action to be immoral. Because the result of the sexual strategy changed, the morality of the action changed. However, the sexual strategy remains unchanged. The strategies in and of themselves, are amoral. The question of morality should be focused not on the strategy but the application of the strategy.

Completely agree with this. Methodology is not capable of being moral or immoral.

Not just sexual strategy is amoral, everything is. Why? Because life has no feelings, no conscience or consciousness and gives no fucks about shit. That doesn't mean disregarding morality as a whole is a wise or even balanced thing to do.

I honestly can't see this post being attacked significantly. This subject has been discussed a bit in purple pill and your post sums up the conclusion. Amoral is generally only used to analyze a situation free of bias. Everything can be viewed amorally and you don't have to justify that view. Amoral only applies to theories while morality applies to actions.

Perfect summation and really clear. Particularly on amoral = theory, morality = action. I would show up in PPD in my sparsely spare time, but the few times I went I saw too far too much nitpicking so noped the fuck out of there.

I don't owe anyone my opinion or a reply. If you value my opinion, then you are privileged to receive it when you ask for it. If I ignore you? Tough. The world don't owe you shit. I don't owe you shit. This is an open forum. You have the right to say whatever you like to me, be as disrespectful as you like, by all means, feel free to get whatever it is off your chest - but likewise I am free to be completely unreactive and pretend you don't exist. You only look butthurt if that bothers you, so you lose. That's the beauty of freedom of expression, you can choose not to express, or express on your own terms. A very valuable aspect of being masculine that many have not mastered in their journey as of yet.

Something of a tangent: I know when people reacted to this post out of emotion: they got so overwhelmed they couldn't make the distinction between "gym rat culture" and "lifting." In fact, they concentrated on the tone and that specific attack on people who have what I consider a narrow view of masculinity. They also overlooked the much more major logical point, the reasoning, rather than the tone: men take blame for shit that ain't their fault. People blame men for shit 200% that is only half their fault. That's just how it is. Uncomfortable truth you wanna silence by calling it whining? Cool, I don't care.

I lift but I'm not a gym rat. Lifting culture is obnoxious as fuck. You can lift but you don't need to be a huge fucking narc letting the world know about how superior you are. Nobody gives a fuck, and that's something of an ironic statement coming from a guy who writes about DT things such as narcissism.

Every man should lift, there's no excuse not to. The commenters who got so butthurt (there were a few, and I anticipated them) that I'm "jealous of guys who lift" totally missed the point. And that's because they're so upset they can't see the difference between lifting for your physical/mental health, and the obnoxious jersey shore type bullshit culture that turns off so many guys from lifting who could benefit from lifting in the first place.

Note how not once do I say lifting is a bad thing. You know why? Because I don't believe in that shit, butthurt people be distorting the message through their interpretation. Such is life.

In fact in writing that I start to suspect it's purely marketing for your blog and to resonate with the greatest number possible. I can't really fault you for that, it's just a shame everyone laps up this bullshit.

Nah I got next to fuck all views from this post and actually I risk alienating people who read my shit purely

You can only trust a woman to be a woman, that means to lie as much as is necessary to get what she wants rather than actually become what men want. Most women will only legit change themselves if there's already a guy they really like but can't win the affections of. So they have to be "head over heels" to make actual substantive changes. They're not like men who will just fucking do it for themselves. They don't seem to be able to fucking do it for themselves, but they should.

Do you really desire to be sadistic? To have a pathological innate desire to hurt others for pleasure?

Sadism feeds the narcissistic supply (of dark tetrads) so people who get off heavily on schadenfreude fucking love it. Get a sadist and a masochist together and watch that fucked up shit of a perverse co-dependent relationship flourish, it's the most fucked up "love" you will ever see. And yet these people are such perfect extremes of two opposites that their relationships normally last quite happily FOR A LONG TIME. All that energy and enjoyment leads to a highly intense and satisfying relationship that lasts longer than your typical relationship. Is it healthy by "normal standards?" No of course it isn't - but people with those characteristics do not care, they're happy. As a generalisation, women as a whole tend to exhibit varying severity of masochistic tendency (a penchant for emotional upset/drama/violent sex) all the way up to actual abuse "it shows he cares otherwise he wouldn't hit me." and blah blah blah. We all know the stereotype of the woman who gets beat up by her man but refuses to leave him. There's something masochistic in the underpinning of Stockholm Syndrome. Perhaps War Bride theory can explain the prevalence of masochism in women.

I'll say something a little controversial: psychosexually men lean towards sadism, whilst women lean towards masochism. Sadism is extremely dark masculinity, whilst masochism is extremely dark femininity.

What are you really after, and why do you romanticize it?

I actually wrote "The Psychopathic Paradigm" in an attempt to educate people on natural dark triads whilst deglamorising what they perceive to be a "glitzy gangster lifestyle." My entire intent for that article was "this is how a born psychopath has to live, here are the disadvantages, here is why it is not what you think it is - be lucid and stop pedestalsing DTs."

Instead, the "main" (non-DT) TRP population was split between "good points about not being able to "switch it off" and bitching over "the pretentious wordy writing style." hilariously at the same time, a bunch of "self-described psychopaths" messaged me saying "that was bang on - how do you know so much about this topic, are you a psychopath yourself? This article really helped me understand myself and what I need to do to fix how the outside world sees me. Those guys who say this article describes them in the main thread are idiots for outing themselves." etc etc. So self-described psychopaths seem to have "taken more" from the article than "average people" which was not the point of the article at all. Quite surprising, and rather charming. The "flaws of psychopathy" framework instead ended up being used as a "psychopathic self-diagnosis" framework. The DTs actually appreciated the piece more.

However, ask yourself if you prefer "monk mode" because it's easier to be temporarily reclusive than to get real world experience.

Are you using it to wait until you're 100% ready to approach women because you're scared of failing? Is it your approach anxiety masquerading again?

Monk mode should not be a productive version of escapism. I can do an article in future about "Doing Monk Mode Correctly" in fact I have "A day in the life of monk mode" lined up, so I'll just add another 1000 words on and make it a bumper piece. Men must be careful not to gerbil (that's the male hamster.) There's a fine line between "My SMV is not high enough to get girls, I need to concentrate on my mission" and "I'm scared to talk to girls, so I'm going to stay in monk mode." There is never anything wrong with upping your SMV but if you deliberately hold yourself back from things out of fear then you're not escaping your comfort zone and that in and of itself is a violation of the entire spirit of monk mode. Monk mode is about growth, to grow you have to leave your comfort zone no matter how much discomfort that may initially elicit.

Also, /u/deepthrrill, I've seen your post in /r/alreadyred - I will get around to addressing it.

Your interpretation of what the word filter entails is clearly not the same as mine. For me filtering is a passive process, I filter things people say and put them into different levels of likelihood anyway, by default. I can do that while going about my life, it's not something I have to concentrate on in solace. If it's a conscious effort exerting process for you which would monopolise precious time that could otherwise be spent reading, lifting or earning money, then yes, you're better off just assuming everything women say is horse shit (even though it isn't) and being on your way.

For the rest of us, those who can filter shit passively on the fly, it's not a big deal. If you are smart, sharp and on top of your shit, you will pick up on the nuggets of wisdom they inadvertently drop as and when they occur.

Of course I realise not everyone is smart, sharp, and on top of their shit - and they would need to literally sit there thinking over every last little thing she said, manually filtering the trite from the wisdom. Fuck that shit.

I never feel the need to censure my opinions.

You may not feel the need but if there's one thing The 48 Laws of Power will teach you, it is that there is a need. Think how you like, but behave like others - Law 38.

This guy's blog will keep you going until your book comes through.

<http://48laws-of-power.blogspot.co.uk/>

He has basically copy and pasted verbatim excerpts of each law from the book and made a blog out of it. Its inferior to the book as its missing so much but it'll do just fine until it turns up. Also, don't accidentally order "the concise 48 laws of power" get the full book. You can't half ass this Machiavellian shit. It's like the gym. You go all in or you don't even bother. I really recommend Robert Greene's book entitled "Mastery" too. If you lack motivation or self-control I would actually prioritise that above reading The 48 or Rollo's shit. Afterwards read The 48. Then Rollo's shit, in that order. That's prioritising from most pragmatic to most theoretical. Rational Male is a fucking great blog, but a lot of shit is not directly applicable to your life, it just helps you to understand women within the greater framework. That's necessary, but not as necessary as having self-control and knowing how to manoeuvre socially and in business. If you were in prison or getting bullied or some shit really bad like that, I'd of course recommend reading The 48 first. Tailor it to your situation.

Best of luck OP, welcome to the red pill.

Swedish student finance pays £4,000 every 3 months to swedes who study at an English uni. I imagine it's the same no matter what country they go to. So that's £12,000 a year for a 15 hour week at university for 9 months of the year. That money goes far in the UK, especially outside of London (rents), so it would go even further in the US if you lived outside high rent areas like NYC/SF. The student can of course get a job on top of that, and £12,000 is what someone doing 40 hour weeks at slightly above minimum wage gets here in 12 MONTHS, not 9. Of course wages are taxable so a service worker doesn't see the full 12k, the money the swedish gov give doesn't get taxed before they pay it to you. The student would also have 3 months a year where they could work full time and get even more money. Swedish gov also pays your tuition. On top of that, they also pay for your masters, seeing as bachelors (especially outside STEM) are worth less and less nowadays it makes sense for all swedes to go for the masters to be more competitive in the jobs market. You also only have to pay back your maintenance loans, not tuition fees (its free), and I don't know the in's and out's of it, but I assume some of that gets written off as a grant. Educationally, swedes have it made. That's where all the tax money goes. And that's why every refugee in the world (read: muslim countries) all flee to Scandinavia, because coming from the shit holes they do, it's like reaching the promised land and becoming rich just for turning up.

Sweden is about as opposite as it gets with education in comparison to America where you're $100k in the hole.

Understanding The Dark Triad - Q&A (Part 1)

5 upvotes · 11 September 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

You don't learn to be a psycho.

A psycho is not synonymous with the DT, it is merely 1/3 of the DT. People who don't understand the DT think "DT = psychopath." That's wrong. Say for instance I'm an egotistical emotionally empathetic manipulator, I'm not a psycho because I'm an emo little bitch who gets butthurt easy, but I'm 2/3 DT (sounds like the average western woman, to be honest.) Psychopathy is the trait people are least likely to acquire, but a lot of hurt people want to kill their emotions so seek substitutes. Stoicism is that substitute. Dark triad game is not about becoming a psycho.

PS: on the inside, psychos are emotional people in matters of the self (they feel anger, disappointment etc.) On the outside, they can be superficially sympathetic/feign emotion. Most people can't even tell the difference.

Machiavellianism in Business: The difference between the self-made rich (Nouveau Riche) and poor is machiavellian aptitude (skill/competency), whilst the difference between the self-made rich and middle/working class is not just aptitude but likewise ethical constraints.

The false dichotomy is this: People who feel they must follow the rules and norms of their culture are good; people who don't feel they must follow the rules and norms of their culture are bad.

I don't believe in that dichotomy.

Machiavellianism is really just thinking for oneself, it is no indicator of one's goodness or evilness.

Agreed.

The false assumption is that people, unbound by social conditioning, will just be evil because they can.

Not true, but some people will lack discipline (deferred gratification) without the relevant social conditioning, just look at today's anglosphere culture.

Machiavellianism is the ability to and habit of thinking outside of one's social conditioning.

What if you were conditioned to be machiavellian? Regardless of that, it is an adaptive trait, this is a limited view. It is far more than thinking outside of your social conditioning. Machiavellianism is primarily about mental influence.

I am high Machiavellian, but I think I am one of the most good people there is, because I live by philosophically derived ethical principles and my own judgment, not the dictates of authoritative strangers and the norms of my culture, which lead and have led people to do many things which I consider, and many people outside of those cultures consider to be evil.

Then we are more similar than different, it would seem.

Well here is the problem, she starts asking me questions and shit and I realize I become too much an open book. Not shit-test questions which are easy to diffuse like how many chicks I've bagged but questions about family, what they do, how I get along with them, friends, family.

"Haha, someone's eager aren't they? Slow down there, I don't know you well enough to talk about that kind of stuff."

Rather than tell her all the attraction killing shit. That whole line of questioning was a shit test to see if you have your shit together and to see how much value you place on privacy/your social network. The less you talk about social network the more they hamster it is so high value you won't let them in on it or that you're dark triad. When I was at university I wouldn't reveal anything about my family/life outside the uni social circle, people started thinking I was a drug dealer and all kinds of crazy shit and I wouldn't confirm or deny anything, which made it worse. If she starts shooting off guesses to try and rattle your cage "you're rich aren't you?!" "hah, you're probably from a chavvy council estate" and etc, just smirk, give a wink etc and even if she's close just say "you're not even close." Bitches are relentless like that. I don't even think they do it consciously, it's just something they do. Then they don't realise why they don't find you attractive anymore when you fail their shit test they're not always entirely sure they were playing.

"enjoyed last night, realize you got shit going on with your ex but def be down to hang out at sum point in the future if you're up for it. Don't get me wrong, I'm still gonna try to get in your pants ;)

You're destroying more mystery by telling here where you're at with her. Sounds like you were developing a quick onset of oneitis simply because a chick used "nice girl game" when you're used to dealing with bitches. I would have said "I had fun, but you're too fucked up, see ya." Punchy, dismissive, and to the point. A girl that is an 8 especially in "the scottish wasteland" isn't going to be used to being spoken to like that, what you texted her however is far more typical. Guys wanting to hangout just to fuck. Texting bitches is hit and miss but she's more likely to reply and qualify to that and try to change your mind than she is to reply to a message where you tell an 8 you want to fuck her. 8's assume everyone wants to fuck them, nice girl game or not.

The other takeaway which is more for myself: Different situations require different strategies and if you get cocky thinking you are invincible, you can blind yourself to certain holes in your boundary and faults in your own strategy. It requires a certain open-mindedness (to your faults) but also self-efficacy. Just because I am skilled at pulling easy girls at night doesn't mean I am skilled at dating hot girls during the day. It's important to be well rounded.

Yeah you learnt an important lesson that most guys that need to learn. Diversifying your strategy dependent on the type of girl she is (mega bitch/average bitch/submissive) and the environment (day game - coffee shop vs. night game - nightclub.) IMO nightclubs are harder if you're not big and cut/rich (buying bottles) or have massive preselection (DJ/club owner/promoter/bar staff or know everyone there.) Calibration is the key here. There isn't one type of game that will work on every bitch out there.

Should you allow male friends of your wife/partner to visit her for the weekend at your house while you are away?

5 upvotes · 26 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Do you think men and women can be friends, really good friends?

No, not unless the man finds the woman unattractive and she is above average intelligence/logic in comparison to the average woman (if you don't want to fuck a woman, you have to find her interesting - the overwhelming majority of women are extremely boring.)

I tend to believe that if a man and a woman are good friends, usually the man ends up wanting something more sexually. So there is that tension.

Yeah a lot of guys try to friend their way into pussy because they don't know any better. Betas have it all the wrong way around. They try to build comfort before they build attraction.

My brother is dating a woman who (besides still being married and going through a divorce) has a bunch of "really good friends" who are male.

Backup dick. That's her own private social network that functions as a personal platoon of white knight beta orbiters incase shit ever hits the fan. Those are the cocks waiting in line to protrude and penetrate the nether regions of his loving wife™.

In her current marriage she even had some of them come out for the weekend to visit at the house she shared with her and her husband.

She wears the pants in that relationship. Sad.

If my wife ever wanted to go out to visit a male friend, or have a male friend come to my house to visit for a weekend. I would absolutely put my foot down. It is cuckolding behavior to allow otherwise.

I concur.

My brother is entering into a relationship where it is expected she be allowed to do this sort of thing.

Then what do you call it? "Progressivism?" The right tend to be pro-nationalism, the left gravitate towards pro-multiculturalism (to generalise.) So when politicians punish whites for shit, but give non-whites who do the same crap a free pass, it's pure liberal hypocrisy. Politically correct insanity. It's the blue pill of race relations/politics. Saying whites can't do one thing but saying other races can is in my opinion, racist towards whites. Benevolent discrimination towards all non-white races effectively discriminates against whites, although more subtly and indirectly. So much for the fabled equality these people speak of. It's kind of like how feminists never come down on muslims, they're always too busy getting upset over white men making dongle jokes in IT conferences. Dark Triad Game - A Guide for the non DT Man

If you're not in some way damaged (and ironically people on self-help forums like TRP tend to be significantly damaged, or they wouldn't even be here to begin with) you cannot harness the dark triad without taking drugs (cocaine - experienced firsthand, and I'm told the T increase from roids can make borderlines go full DT). If you've already been damaged by a shitty life however you may as well make the best out of your pain and have it work for you rather than be the thing that holds you back. Pain is like all energy, anger, sorrow, whatever, you have to harness it to make it productive. Dark Triad game is just asshole game on roids with a lot of manipulation involved, you don't need to be the terminator to make use of the dark triad.

As for real DTs, I've spent time with some, you will shit your pants if you don't bring your A game.

5 upvotes · 1 July 2014 · /r/askTRP

I've had this line before in so many words after being in the exact same situation as you (ditched a chick in a bar)

"IllimitableMan you're a manipulative asshole, I really liked you then you go and ditch me with no way of getting home blah blah blah" which was text to me early in the morning the day after. Ignored it for the best part of 8 hours where she then proceeds to text me again apologising for what she had said and saying she just said what she did because she was mad and was wanting to know the real reason why I'd left and if we could see each other again, literally, her ego could not handle just being rejected like that without any explanation (similar reasons to you: she brought an ex-bf along to the bar, I thought fuck that and was out of there)

I wouldn't text hungarian girl from another number, it shows you're chasing her because you've gone to the hassle of using another phone to get in contact with her, which means she's in the drivers seat. I'd wait about a day and then text her you're willing to give her another chance if she behaves herself, otherwise goodbye+good luck. 1. You flip the dynamic, you make it so she's qualifying herself to you 2. she'll want to fuck your audacity/boldness/nerve 3. by taking more than a day to reply you imply you don't give a fuck, whilst she's sent you some bitchy text, so the power's in your hands. 4. Goodbye+Goodluck = no hard feelings, she'll feel guilty for having sent you a shitty text when you're being so cool about everything.

Most likely she will reply with some shit like "r u serious what do u mean behave myself?" and you calmly tell her she acted like a brat the other night and you're only into dating mature women who can handle a real man, not immature little school girls who demand to be taxied around and stamp their feet they want to leave after next to no time at all.

This shit will fuck with her head and she'll either have so much pride she won't want to see you or she'll feel so negged she'll come and meet you with a point to prove, and hopefully, a more pleasant disposition. Got to keep these bitches in check, they take liberties. I'm also hoping you didn't pay for her drinks, if you bought her drinks and drove 20 minutes to pick her up from her place she'll have you pegged as a beta and hence that's why she got bored fast and demanded you take her highness home.

Reading between the lines here your frame could do with some work, looks like you may have paid and that you're willing to chase what seems like an entitled little bitch. Fuck with her head for fucking you around and then you can get in her pants, but don't give up your dignity. Don't be lead by the poon, lead the poon. If you're chasing too hard it screams low value/desperation and she'll dry up quicker than a desert oasis.

I'll be watching this topic. Open question to everyone: how do you think alcohol/drugs affects the level of dark triad traits you possess whilst under the influence?

Edit: my experiences:

- Cigarettes/coffee/energy drinks - too weak/do nothing in terms of affecting DT qualities, most people don't consider them drugs although they are. At most they mess with your insulin, not your state of mind.

Do not affect dark triad qualities, simply provide short-lived rushes of energy.

- Alcohol - Depends on the alcohol. Beer/lager is a no-go. That shit makes you sleepy/lethargic. Cider is better if you don't want to go on spirits, it will make you more narcissistic/psychopathic to the point that reduced anxiety will allow, but it's not going to turn you into a badass. It simply brings you to the state of being who'd you be if you had little stress or worries in your life. If it does make you personally a badass then they are latent qualities you possess which are normally repressed that the alcohol is bringing out. You're better being tipsy than being drunk. Spirits like Vodka/whiskey will make you less emotional and increase your psychopathy/narcissism traits, the downfall is no matter what you drink your machiavellianism is going to come right down unless you're only medium-tipsy at most, it really inhibits your ability to concentrate/focus, so great for partying and things that don't require your intellect, bad if you're around someone who is going to test the fuck out of you, you won't give a fuck they're testing you, but you won't be able to think on-the-fly to pass their tests. These are just my experiences with alcohol, not fact or definitive in anyway, if you drink vodka and it makes you cry like a 5 year old girl, it's probably bringing issues to the surface that you normally suppress. Obviously for me, that's not the case. If you're an intellectual type who has problems fitting in, alcohol will stupefy you enough to "make you fit in with the normal people"

Good for increasing narcissism, ruins your machiavellianism, psychopathy can go either way.

- Weed - Makes you less dark triad, makes you a lot more open to other people, more relaxed and of course, hungry as fuck later on. I suspect weed is good for someone who is clinically dark triad wanting to experience "what it's like to not be dark triad" (I don't know if that'll work for them specifically, but for non-DT people it brings their DT traits down from my experience) machiavellianism/psychopathy goes to zero as you just want to sit there watch dumb shit and laugh your ass off, as it makes you more receptive to others I'd say it reduces narcissism too. If the dark triad is something you're interested in, weed will make you a huge pussy. You will want to "befriend" everyone, so it can bring about popularity, but you won't be acquiring any DT traits at all, in fact, you will seem "like a hippie" as in, into all that "free love" kind of bullshit.

Reduces all dark triad traits significantly.

- Cocaine - The most dark triad drug I've tried. Like any drug, the cheap shit does basically nothing. Not worth your time. Better stuff massively reduces fearlessness causing increased confidence/ego (narcissism) it also increases psychopathy too (you give a lot less fucks about other people and are more challenging/intimidating) without inhibiting your ability to be machiavellian (because its a stimulant not a depressant.) In fact, from the few things I have tried, cocaine would seem to be "the dark triad drug" as in, it is a massive amplifier of dark triad traits, you want to get stuff done, you're not afraid to go and do things, you're not very empathetic to others, but you also remain internally solid. Cocaine will give you some rock solid frame. Drawbacks: its expensive and the effects don't last all that long so you always need more. If you've not done coke, watch wolf of wall street and see how fearless leonardo's character is and all the crazy shit he's doing. That's a pretty accurate depiction of being coked up.

Increases all dark triad traits significantly.

Funny trivia: Sigmund Freud was a major cocaine fiend, I wonder if his septum was intact when he died. Shit, back then cocaine was in coca-cola so maybe he was just drinking it instead.

That is your choice. We must all make choices. Some of us can afford morality, others cannot, it depends on what you want, what you have and where you come from.

We are Christians, maybe that's why we are different.

Devout religious belief helps keep people moral. I don't even like to identify as atheist as in the USA they tend to be so anti-christian, and I am not anti-christian, so simply I will say, I have spiritual beliefs, but do not follow a system of religion. I have a respect for how religion can act as a form of natural law to ensure people remain moral, but I can also see how religion is co-opted to start wars and exploit people. Unfortunately nothing is perfect. I like morality, but do not believe it is an effective strategy in the current paradigm.

If you hold yourself to a high standard then you can weed out those people who do not and though it takes awhile you will find that rose blooming in a field of weeds and garbage.

You can weed people out whilst you use them too. You can hold yourself to a high standard based upon how you treat yourself, self-discipline, your accomplishments etc, not necessarily how you treat people. Spinning plates can be used to separate the wheat from the chaff and find a woman who is worth your time when there are so few of quality, ultimately I think many men would like to have a woman they could love and trust, but in the absence of such women proving themselves loveable and trustworthy we have the alternative - plate spinning or even straight out MGTOW.

An ultimatum in and of itself is just trying to force someone to play by your rules but without any of the subtly needed to make it effective. When you give someone an ultimatum you communicate in subtext "I want you to do this or this or its over" and it has you come off as controlling, not in a "I'm a leader" sort of way but in a "I'm desperate to control you" kind of way. At the end of the day, some things you just cannot share, not in true RP style truth, you either keep them to yourself, tell a close male friend who won't immediately panic and disown you on hearing of your woes or you play it down like fuck to your girl and make a major thing seem minor as not to make her internal insecurity alarms ring like nuclear war is imminent. There is a disproportionate burden on men, giving full-disclosure is BAD strategy, you may as well be signing the death warrant on the relationship.

What is so difficult to realise about that? Why is anyone who is even in this sub that claims to be RP even trying to fight against the current? Look around you, look at men in your life, ask them if they've been getting fucked less or abandoned once they dropped a bomb on a bitch, I bet you good money you won't hear any "Yeah when I told her how anxious I was feeling she gave me insane and passionate pity sex for 3 months until I was feeling better."

Some people are so toxic you just have to cut complete contact with them as anything short of violence will not change them, people like that are far too unreasonable for words and only primitive emotions such as fear can cause them to change for the better.

Yes, violence often works to change peoples behaviour, but in modern society it will get you in deep shit. In a more primitive time, that's exactly how it was dealt with, both women and children were disciplined physically for acting irrationally and insufferably. In schools they used to hit kids with canes on the back of the leg. I don't like violence and question it's morality, however one is simply deluded to deny that these methodologies were successful in commanding respect and conditioning desired behaviour via negative reinforcement.

All violence is generalised as abuse now and is a very socially and politically charged topic. Very hard to have a rational discussion about negative reinforcement using violence vs. what constitutes abuse with most people, especially women, who are quick to condemn all and any violence unless they are controlling it by proxy to meet their own needs.

Women hate to escalate. When she makes it that obvious she's attracted to you, and puts herself out there, and you don't escalate she feels rejected. She thinks "either this guy is so dumb he can't see I'm attracted to him" or "this guy's just not interested in me." She already feels put out enough by approaching you and opening the conversation, most bitches don't have it in them beyond that to CLOSE as well as OPEN and go for the number close. If a bitch is drunk though, kiss closing will happen all the time.

Women have a passive sexual strategy. The onus is on you to escalate. Most women are not that overt (approaching you and using an opener) That wasn't the point of my post. The point of my post was that women have fucking ridiculous expectations and have nothing to offer in return which warrants such ludicrous expectations.

The expectation for you to escalate is a part of female sexual strategy, it's not the same as expectation of what makes a suitable partner or not. Women cannot handle rejection at all, they rather not escalate/ask you out than risk it and get rejected, especially in front of their friends. Women have very fragile egos and they're not going to put those egos at risk for the sake of a bit of dick, not when so many guys do the approaching and escalation anyway.

The onus is pretty much always on the guy to put himself in a position where he could be rejected, the key to mastering this paradigm is to not give a fuck when you are rejected. Expect rejection and see it as a bonus if you're not rejected, giving minimal fucks is key. "You never know until you try" better to try than to regret. Essentially if you wanted her and she's giving such obvious indicators of interest, you should of got her number. It's not fair that the onus is always on us to escalate, but then that's life, very little is fair. A red pill swallowed for you there, I hope.

Mainstream is starting to come around to our way of thinking "So, men's money still matters when it comes to forming and sustaining today's marriages and, unfortunately, the eroding economic standing of lower-income men means that they are less likely to be deemed worthy of marriage."

5 upvotes · 3 April 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I think what's going on is high-status women are going into serious careers and displacing men from lower socio-economic classes that might've filled those positions. This is creating greater economic disparities between the classes and eroding the wealth and stability of the lower classes.

You're touching on the idea that when men had all the high paying jobs, as they married down, they distributed some of their wealth to the lower class by marrying a woman from that class. Whilst as women tend to marry up, all these career women earning big bucks will only marry men of equal or higher status, resulting in higher income disparity between the classes as high earning women do not allow poor men access to the middle class via mating.

There was a study done on this and it was posted here awhile ago. Since women entered the professions, the income gap began increasing between the working and the middle, as well as the middle and the upper. Among other factors, it contributed to the shrinking of the middle class as well.

You cannot facilitate the growth of the middle class if half of the population's rich (the females) refuse to marry down, effectively, their dating preferences combined with their freedom to compete in the professions means wealth is being concentrated at the higher levels as they prefer to pair with people who are already as wealthy as they are, if not more so, rather than redistribute their wealth to a lower class individual via marriage. This means you get pairings who are either both high earners, or both low earners and as a result the difference in household incomes is A LOT HIGHER than it used to be.

The traditional one high earner and one low earner pairing is becoming rarer as although high earning men will pair with low earning women, the women who obtain well paid salaries tend not to marry low earning men.

As such each woman with a high paying job refusing to marry down is directly contributing to the hoarding of wealth within her own social class, women in positions of power are reducing the flow of wealth through the population due to their collective dating preferences.

Even if a woman would marry down, there's then the social stigma the man faces for not being the breadwinner. Really, women in positions of power via professions is a LOSE-LOSE for society. I think there was a study somewhere else showing that marriages where the woman is the breadwinner are more likely to result in divorce and typically do not last as long. I read so much I wish I could remember where I read this stuff so you could see the papers for yourselves.

EDIT: it's not the study I read before but I found something related to it:

"Assortative mating" further entrenches inequality. Highly educated men are much more likely to marry highly educated women than they were a generation ago. In 1970 only 9% of those with bachelors' degrees in America were women, so the vast majority of men with such degrees married women who lacked them. Now the numbers are roughly even (in fact women are earning more degrees) and people tend to pair up with mates of a similar educational background.

Women have made immense strides in the workplace, too. For example, in 1970, fewer than 5% of American lawyers were female. Now the figure is 34%, and nearly half of law students are female. So highly educated, double-income power couples have become far more common. The children of such couples have every advantage, but there are not many of them. The lifetime fertility rate for American high-school dropouts is 2.4; for women with advanced degrees, it is only 1.6. The opportunity costs of child-rearing are far higher for a woman who earns $200,000 a year than for one who greets customers at Wal-Mart. And raising elite children is expensive. A lawyer couple can easily afford to put one child through Yale, but perhaps not four.

How much is too much?

My main point is that people should not follow RP blindly

RP is not an armchair philosophy, it is a vocational philosophy that can be applied directly to your life. It is actually against the spirit of TRP itself to not incorporate RP elements into your life and see if they work for you or not. RP is a philosophy of action. By applying the ideas to your life, you can see whether they work or not. No blind acceptance or devotion is required, the result of your actions that stem from RP ideas speak for themselves.

The lesser minds will always try to "fit in" it cannot be avoided, however being a vocational philosophy it's quite easy for TRP to "check itself", many people are banned from TRP for talking unsubstantiated shit about women, you'd be surprised. Some people take TRP too far by misinterpreting it, others reject it based on an emotional dislike of RP discourse. The vast majority apply it to their lives, see an improvement and come to believe it as a result. The fact you can go test dread game right now is very telling of the self-sustaining vocational validity the philosophy has. It is based in reality, if it wasn't, you couldn't go replicate its ideas in the field. hilariously that sounds like the experimentation process in academia.

The matrix was released 15 years ago today. Ironically, its theories still ring true.

I don't disagree with what you're saying, but when people go out and buy a poppy it's because they know the money is going to a veterans charity and it's a socially accepted way to be patriotic in a continent where nationalism has been frowned upon since WW2.

What you say isn't wrong, but it's not the function of the poppy in the hearts and minds of the people. People wear their poppies with pride because they feel like they're honouring and respecting those who sacrificed their lives so that Britishness continued to be a thing and weren't instead just a satellite state of the German empire. WW1 and 2 weren't resource wars like modern day american skirmishes, they were fully developed empires engaged in conventional warfare and the loss of life was huge.

The people who gave their lives whether it was voluntary or not, will be respected in whatever small way the people today can muster. Unlike these feathers which were used to shame people, poppies are worn by anyone and everyone out of respect and honour for sacrifice. Now you can question the nature of the sacrifice, but the fact of the matter is - we will respect the sacrifice, our ancestors died so that we may even have this conversation right now. When people wear the poppy they think of WW1 and WW2, not this bullshit happening in Afghanistan.

Sweden is a high tax socialist state. Muslim immigrants flock to it for free education, healthcare, the works, they have shit tons of kids so it's like a paradise for them. The state even funds your masters degree there.

At the same time, radical feminism is fully entrenched there, they have that whole gender is a social construct thing fully ingrained, the guys walk around like docile little drones believing in propagandous notions of egalitarianism leaving a nation full of beta men.

Women don't need men in Sweden because the government will give them the equivalent of a middle class lifestyle in the US just for sitting on their asses.

The perverse gender relationship between men and women in Sweden would not be possible without government intervention, notably, the redirection of man's money into the taxpayer coffers which is then directly redistributed to women. Sure it is redirected to unemployed men too, but for the sake of gender relations that is irrelevant.

Sweden is essentially the opposite of Saudi Arabia, it's a feminist bastion. If you want to know more about

Alpha dominance dynamics among male co-workers

5 upvotes · 22 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Had no fucking clue guys shit tested each other wtf?

Oh yeah, they do. I get shit tested regularly at uni. Sometimes when I'm tired or some shit it really isn't appreciated either. Other times it's a source of humour.

I wouldn't have even thought about some of the things they were doing--I would have let it happen and laugh to myself that they were being an asshole and the social implications would have never occurred to me.

Most laid back guys are like that, they don't understand the negative social implications it has and don't understand why they get such a tough time later on. Guys for the most part aren't very socially intelligent.

Guys test for dominance all the time, even if you don't give a fuck about being dominant, if you're strong, the weaker bucks will shit test you to see where they stand, some will be jealous or even hostile if they cannot control you or at least have your allegiance. Alphas hate sigmas with a passion, whilst they like betas as it means "no competition for them" and they can easily manipulate them to back them up in arguments and stuff. Alphas like to have beta men in their orbit as pawns.

Sigmas are the guys alphas cannot win over, they're basically rebels, alphas who are not interested in being the centre of attention and leading the group, for the most part sigmas don't like being pulled into a typical alphas assholery and parading bullshit and as the sigma is not drawn in, the alpha gets pissed off "what's that guy's problem." I'm not saying all alphas are like that, but great a many naturals are simply just fucking assholes, even to men. Hedonistic narcissists who need to feel like they control everyones approval. A sigmas approval is extremely hard to obtain, which is what pisses the alpha off.

Likewise if you do give a fuck and you're one of the weaker ones, your insecurity can make you insufferable with your shit testing.

At the end of the day we're a hierarchy based species. Men act different around women, they actually put each other down and engage in mating displays. That's why the saying "bros before hoes" is a thing. Most guys actually put pussy before their friends, especially betas, but it's not limited to them - alphas do it all the time too. A lot of men have no integrity whatsoever when it comes to sex, getting their dick wet is #1 priority above all else, in a way, it's kind of fucking sad and it does elicit a hateful response from myself towards men as a whole. You may not expect to see that written by an EC on TRP, but it's true, a lot of guys are just cunts ruled by a libido, pure and simple. I've more respect for alphas of a certain intellectual enlightenment, than an immature alpha, those frat kids speaking in bros and brahs beating his chest, lifting his barbell, being an obnoxious cunt fist bumping all over the joint.

When women aren't around, guys test within the in-group to see who is the most badass. Everyone wants to know who the leader is, and the courageous/unhappy will fight for leadership. That's how it is. We may no longer be apes hitting each other to test for dominance, but instead we engage in verbal sparring. If you're a witty motherfucker who doesn't give a shit, you'll always have dominance as people find it hard to bring you into their frame or otherwise effectively lower your value in the eyes of the group.

You will always have social enemies for one reason or another, learn who they are, do not trust them, do not take them seriously in public displays (subtly lowers their value) and avoid them as much as possible. It is pretty much impossible to win everyones approval, you cannot be liked by everyone and neither should you give a fuck if you're not liked.

I don't feel pressure. I apply it.

The thing is, people read my posts and think I'm sort of dark triad soulless motherfucker, which I'm not, by any means. I only have one clinically dark triad trait, machiavellianism, and my narcissism is borderline clinical and seems to be on the up, psychopathy however is also borderline clinical, I'm considered to be within a normal threshold for psychopathy by industry standard tests. There are people on this subreddit who have way higher test scores on the DT test than I and thus if they answered those tests truthfully would be deemed way more dark triad than I am, such as /u/Nitzi, and /u/YouDislikeMyOpinion.

At the end of the day I see the beneficial elements of the Dark Triad, I also see the weaknesses, the loneliness, the perversion and all the other things which make an emotionally intact person contort at the very base level from trying to enforce a psychopathic way of life and mindset upon themselves. For people who can feel compassion for others, stoicism is enough, which will increase your psychopathic score, but it will not make you soullessly psychopathic in the clinical manner. The Dark Triad has outward powerful effects for the non psychopathic using it instrumentally to improve their lives, but at the same time if you try to master psychopathy when you're genetically, not a psychopath, as you have no absence of attachment-binding emotion for others (like a psychopath does) you end up just damaging yourself.

Psychopathy is relevant to the discussion of the dark triad, but I do not think it's something anyone can become. You can become less caring, you can be more resilient and more cynical and use that to protect yourself, but you will never enter a "psychopathic state" without the use of mind altering drugs (yes I've only experienced what I think psychopathy is when high on coke.) You won't walk down the road and feel an eerie type of calm confidence devoid of passion or anxiety or stress, uncaringly unable to connect or really care for anybody. That is what psychopathy is. Practicing stoicism to control your emotions won't make you become that, it won't make you a psychopath, but it will make you outwardly seem more psychopathic in nature. It raises your P score, it does not make you P.

When people think of sociopaths they think of this psychopathic element of the triad being more pronounced, they think of someone who gives no fucks about you, is soulless, emotionless, like a demon inside a humans body looking to just fuck everyone up for the sadistic lols. That's not how I see the dark triad at all, for the average person, the person trying to incorporate "bad boy traits" to be more attractive to women, more self-confident and to see the games people play for what they are, narcissism and machiavellianism are the main areas of focus, the love for ones self, the love of extraversion and theatrics, as well as the love for mind games and to be able to understand subtext and utilise it to persuade as well as defend.

Being dark triad doesn't mean you have to be an evil or bad person, despite my abilities and my knowledge I'm still perfectly capable of compassion when I deem a person of being worthwhile of it.

The weakness of a true psychopath is they're so emancipated from the rest of humanity, so so extremely dark triad, that they often feel loneliness and contempt for others. Psychopaths DO HAVE FEELINGS, just not for other people. Psychopaths are fucked up people, generally speaking, stable psychopaths (sounds hilariously ironic, I know) are interesting people to be around, the unstable ones basically belong in a mental institution. White collar vs blue collar psychopathy.

5 upvotes · 9 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Why call this sub "The Red Pill", a name that is a reference to a movie where a man becomes enlightened and converted from ignorance, if you don't care about the unconverted?

I like many of us don't care about those who have been exposed to the red pill and still hold onto their old ideals. Simply put we think those kinds of people are idiots because not even the truth is enough to bitch slap them into reality. Especially the more privileged amongst you, you need someone to really fuck you over before you actually wake the fuck up.

We are here to get ours, to discuss sexual strategy and self improve with like-minded souls. Those who just question and second guess the sub contribute nothing of value, its an engagement of nothing but meta politics which reduces the signal. This is not a democracy, we are not accountable to you - we don't have to prove anything to you - you have no power over us, asking us to proves ourselves to you assumes we care about your opinion in the first place, here's a fucking tip: no fucks are getting given.

Like this discussion now, it actually contributes nothing to those who are already red pill, ironically it would appeal more to those who are on the fence who I/most of us frankly give no fucks about. Moaning about peoples perceived misogyny won't help you get a job, it won't help you with women, it won't help you feel better about yourself, it's just explaining to a guy what the red pill is about because he's asked. Like I said, it's time consuming, it's a service to "your concern" but a liability to the rest of the sub as ultimately it's not productive or helping to move the philosophy forward, it's a defence of the philosophy that can referenced by others in the future at best. I and other redpillers gain nothing whether you or the next guy decides to believe in the red pill, no money is made, there is no incentive at all to help you, we're here to help ourselves you're either with us or without us, but we don't care which one you choose, what we do care about is people who AREN'T with us, claim they ARE and then bitch about what we do. Snakes.

Don't get it twisted, this is not a social movement. We have nothing to prove to you, neither do we wish to qualify our beliefs to you. We know this shit works and we enjoy the fruits of it, you can choose to do that or you cannot - the choice is ultimately yours, but why I should give a fuck whether you believe in it or not? That's not my problem, that's yours - if you decide to go on living the life you led, fine do that it's no skin off my nose.

On the topic of misogyny, and rarely will I even address such a socially charged, misrepresenting politically feminist buzzword dripping in lesbian estrogen and bullshit used to shut up legitimate concerns that even more moderate members have:

Yeah some guys are bitter because they have been severely fucked over, that will make them seem misogynous or even be misogynous for a time. So the fuck what? That's their right. This is a sub for men, not women. Men want to talk shit about women, that's up to them, don't try to police it. Reminds me of the typical woman entering an all men's workplace such as a mine and expecting all the men to change around her because she's the special little snowflake that's just turned up and everyone needs to tone down their language and change especially for her. No, fuck that. That environment wasn't meant for her, it's a man's space and so is the red pill. If women stumble up in here and get offended, we don't give a shit, this place wasn't meant for them, /r/redpillwomen is. Women love to invade male spaces and feminise them into abiding gynocratic institutions, but that's another topic altogether, I digress.

Don't deny men the right to reconcile their pain with their desire to improve, ultimately they will overcome their pain but its a long process. Concerns about this are substantiated but devoid of merit, it's a natural process of the "unplugging" depending on where you came from. Obviously a 15 year old unplugging is going to unplug differently than a 38 year old divorcee who was raped for child support. The 38 year old in his recovery may post shit that is more misogynist in nature because it comes from a place of pain and he is not at the acceptance stage of accepting women, in all their limited capacity for who they really are, with all the evils included. It can be a slow, arduous process for some and those people need this place more than anyone. Cutting off their support network because it offends the delicate sensibilities of the already privileged is perversely preposterous, and I scoff at such notions in an upper class quintessentially English manner. Concentrate on yourself instead of bitching about other peoples mind states, that's not your concern and if you make it your concern you will find yourself banned from the sub for reducing the signal with mindless politics.

Moaning about the sub and contributing nothing but "concern" instead of actual valid strategies, stories and theories is a quick way to make sure you're out of here.

By the way the use of the word "you" is not YOU per se, but anyone who falls under what I'm saying. I use the word YOU so it hits home harder, I'm tapping into your selfishness so you feel the tenacity of the message.

Unless you raise a particularly valid point I will not waste anymore time engaging in this line of discourse, I've given you enough to grapple with already.

The amount of frame you need is fucking incredible its a literal tsunami of shit tests that never fucking ends. She's hyper stimulating, non-stop banter and sexual innuendo. She seems to be fixated on "entertaining me" what the fuck does anyone think that means? She's brought up a few times "I find her entertaining" it's as if she draws validation from me for herself by being very flirty/sexual like she gets off on that shit mentally for her own ego. I'm not entirely sure.

Fucked a diff cluster B before, tyrant most of the time but so adorable post-sex (animal during) and when she gets submissive because you held frame (passed a fuck ton of shit tests.) She would be so human and kind and gentle and selfless sometimes... and then at other points be this completely machiavellian cold bitch who would step on you to get ahead. She would go from very moral to completely amoral within minutes-hours it was fucking nuts, I saw all that within her after 2 days and called it off needless to say because that wasn't something I wanted to take on.

Both cluster B chicks I've mentioned have been different in personality however there's one thing that remains - they are both incredibly sexual which fucks with your ability to hold frame. The flirting, the innuendo.. oh my days. The hotter the cluster B chick the more ostentatious she will be with her sexuality too.

lying to somebody that one has made a legal and ethical commitment to may be indicative of their ethics

Judging the number of women violating marriage by initiating divorces under legal and religious (ethical) oath one could argue that most women aren't cut out for politics using the same measure and the same logic to judge potential female candidates for the senate, presidency etc.

However I think the ladies who are in power are smart enough and manipulative enough to know that even if they do not love their husbands and cheat on him countless times, she must stay with him for the sake of appearances - there is more at stake than simple marital happiness, but power itself.

Marriage was always an instrument of power, the transference of wealth. Monogamy although naturally possible, enforced in its societal state is a leftover relic of christianity/religion. By and large, most of the species do not commit for life unless there is an institution such as religion to enforce overwhelming societal pressure.

Hollandes mistake here is getting caught and allowing his reputation to be tarnished, not the act itself. Everyone has dark secrets, those who criticise and speak mightly of ethics are often corrupted and concealing secrets themselves. The paparazzi and the twitter social activists are no better than a president or you or I. We're all human. Saying that, "proving your human" by falling circumspect to lust and cheating is not a valid reason for voting in a politician/improving his approval ratings, its preposterous "logic" and a sign of lowly developed minds making brash choices.

I'm a great advocate of direct game... I honestly believe sexualising women and demonstrating your intent with the audaciousness of truth is a complete and utter turn on for them, not only do they feel desired but it demonstrates high confidence which is also sexy within itself. Win-win. Direct game all day everyday.

TRP is more than its subscription number, there's subscribed lurkers, unsubscribed lurkers and then theres the friends of people who are here that are getting the pill distilled via phone calls, meet-ups and drinks. Respect yourself more than you respect her

5 upvotes · 21 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Respect is not zero sum. You don't have to respect someone less to respect yourself more. The true morale is that respect is earned, and it isn't a given; it isn't something you throw around as a means to game the system and as a dating tool.

True.

Having the ego, self-respect and confidence to value yourself over others is a tool that will get you anything and everything in life including pussy. It's attractive, it's motivating. It's psychological vigour.

What I demonstrated is that men show respect to women they should not, and disrespect themselves in the process. You cannot assume these men simply lose respect for her by merit of her actions because much of the time even though they should, they do not. She's on such a pedestal things which should cause them to lose respect for her don't, they rationalise away her shortcomings out of desperation and a lack of self-respect. Even though shit aint zero sum, in sexual relations there is definitely a relationship between your respect and her respect. People who respect themselves less generally hold those around them to lower standards because of what they feel they're entitled to.

People have this weird 'if woman then, AT LEAST this much respect' threshold and that arbitrary pedestaling is the problem

I totally agree I give them no respect bonus for having vaginas. You could say quite perversely, I treat them more like equals by holding them to expectations like I do men. Sorry ladies, no privilege for you.

Man, woman, you're pursuing them or not, don't pedestal people, hold them accountable and make sure they know that you have basic decency requirements, and that there are consequences for not returning mutual respect back to you.

Agree, however as we're talking about sexual strategy here, instead of trying to tow the egalitarian PC-friendly line here, I'm gonna reassert the crude "don't put the pussy on a pedestal" maxim.

Even though what you're saying isn't wrong, framing it like both men and women get put on pedestals by men all the time is bullshit, women are pedestalized far more often, almost religiously, by betas (HENCE THE FUCKING PLATOONS OF WHITE KNIGHT INHABITED FRIENDZONES THAT EXIST OUT THERE) and this social convention is notorious in western culture.

Saddest post I've ever seen on Reddit. Just more proof that feminism destroys women too.

A valid point. I found it rich she was moaning about white guys wanting white women when she prefers white guys herself, what about the indian guys? There is bound to be an indian diaspora where she lives if its a big city and a community she could get involved in. She says due to her lack of virginity the indian community wouldn't have her, somehow I doubt that. If she's well kept and educated an indian man lower on the caste system would probably marry her. But ah, hypergamy.

She thinks due to working her ass off academically she's entitled to a hot, upper middle class white guy and she's learning they don't give two fucks about feminist career women who rode the carousel and valued career over family. Now she pays the ultimate price for her naive decisions.

I feel no sympathy for this woman, if anything, I'm getting off on the schadenfreude. Call me sick should you so wish, I do not pity the stupid.

Feminism Helps Ethnically Displace Caucasians

5 upvotes · 9 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Think of it in the now then.

Aging population, pensions need paying for a generation where birth rate was much higher among other government ambitions. Feminism has made government big and costly. More retirees and lower birth rate equals less people in the work force paying the needed taxes so rather than look ahead they open the doors of immigration and get the extra labour immediately.

The lack of foresight comes when the immigrants stay and never go home, they'll need a pension too and with a low birth rate the future government will do the same shit and thus the cycle continues. Other than a war countries have no reason for absolute labour shortages, automation creates excess labour units, feminism however significantly contributed towards a declining birth rate which we can attribute to many of today's problems. Civil rights aren't bad but the prevalence of career over family certainly is.

Feminism & Women's Logic

Its not hate, it is mere acknowledgement based upon countless observation of women over the span of my experiences corroborated with countless men and a few somewhat self aware women. One does not simply wake up one day and deduce such things lightly. Personally I'd like to be wrong and live in another reality where women are held more accountable and demonstrate a higher semblance of credibility but in the reality i postulate that this is not the case.

Maybe you're an outlier, maybe you're deluded to your own nature, I couldn't possibly say but again notice how you speak of yourself whilst I speak of a trend within a gender. This again is a reason I don't find women too rational, they personalise the topic to relate to it and form a viewpoint using themselves as the pivotal example for why whatever is asserted is wrong, I've seen it time and time again on this sub and outside and as someone trying to be impartial with my observations it makes very difficult when the woman emotionally charges the argument by personalising it. I have no desire whatsoever to make this about you, I understand a big part of your reasoning when you choose to utilise it occurs by relating to the topic at hand however one cannot debate fairly or reasonably when they project their own identity into the argument.

Despite decades of idealism there is a rift, a fundamental difference between men and women and there always shall be, unless miraculously women attain stronger reasoning abilities, in that paradigm we could hold them accountable and achieve a far closer ideal of equality although I suspect many would cling onto the privileges they currently enjoy.

No worries man it's all good. I'm not really bothered how people interpret an experience I had that I'm sharing to help them get to my level/above my level that they weren't there to see, this kinda shit is vicarious learning, everyone needs to go into the field and then they'll be less confused about this kinda shit rather than say, taking a moral high ground and judging my experience which they're not really qualified to talk about, by merit of not being there, when it's such a subtle nuance.

It was handled very smoothly, no drama. How I like it. I like to be challenged because it means I have to re-evaluate myself and fix any shit wrong with myself, I thrive on constructive criticism, however when people on the internet judge you... lol I couldn't give a fuck, it's so insignificant and counter productive, not what TRP is about but the noobs don't get that. There are a lot of new people here, you might want to explain why that was a push and not a pull. In other words, it wasn't a desperate

It's a push because I was rude when I said it, not needy.

I told her what to do with a firm confident emotionless voice, it wasn't shaky or anxious. I had frame. Tonality is important. If she had challenged it with more shit testing/push and pulling I would have gone along with it and challenged it but if she decided not to give me the number for whatever reason I wouldn't give a shit, I had outcome independence backing up my frame and thus my frame was strong.

The night before the one in question some chick gave me a fake number, I don't care - it happens sometimes, they're nothing special it's just a numbers game, don't take rejections personally but if they challenge you you have to challenge them back to essentially take control of and win the dynamic, passing shit tests and holding frame.

"Don't put a fake number in" is a command, "Please give me your number" or "Can I have your number?" are requests which subtly imply you're giving her the choice, thus you are deferring to her in the dynamic, not dominating it - when you tell her to do it you're implying you don't require her to think about it, but just do it - as for:

"please don't give me a fake number like all those other girls"

That's going full beta. Fucking respect yourself lmao. That's also a DLV (demonstrates low value) as you're basically telling the girl that other girls never want you, women are followers so if other women don't want you they'll assume there's something inherently bad about you and lose interest quickly, it's the equivalent of screaming to a woman "I'm a low value guy don't fuck me!!!!"

DLVing too much or committing is such a faux pas as you're basically telling her you're unattractive. Very bad move she'll next you quicker than you can say British summertime.

He was probably the only kid who went from the bottom to the top of the social hierarchy, with the blessing of these two twin alphas.

They on average have it far easier in the dating game, and if they aren't successful intellectually they can find an academic beta to provide for them.

Women have it easy, they don't care about our responsibilities, they just want us to fulfill them to their benefit and then have the license to tell us that "we don't know what it's like" and that we're the ones with all the privilege. I don't compare women to my mother, at least consciously.

She's the benchmark for what you expect in a woman in a serious relationship. Commitment, loyalty, femininity. Those aren't bad things to expect but the reality is most chicks won't be offering that up, especially if you're some nice, coy beta. They want a man that takes the lead and "makes them feel safe." Whenever I've had intimate moments with a woman in bed just laying there they always mention some shit about feeling safe.

I guess that is why I always want to do nice things for them that make them happy but ultimately run them away?

Yeah you have a positive perception of women because you had a great mum, the reality is most of them won't treat you as well as your mum did. Even if she's a great girl she doesn't want to feel like she's your mother. Psychologically you're either the father role or the son role in a relationship with a woman, they're not attracted to being your mother, they want to feel looked after like a strong father would take care of them. Girls don't respect nice guys, they friendzone them or they exploit them for money/emotional validation and then undersex you due to said lack of respect/attraction (the two are synonymous) - this shit ruins guys.

I felt the impact of not having a father early on but later in life when I witnessed him beating my step mother many times, I became very glad I was not raised by him. And it's crazy to me that he always had a woman or a wife who he treated horribly but yet me, Mr. Nice guy constantly gets walked all over

Fucked up as it is and I don't advocate it, women respect a crazy motherfucker like that, they don't respect or feel attraction for a nice well groomed pleasant effeminate man. Women aren't logical, for some reason they find psychopaths sexy (read up on the dark triad)

But what I'm struggling with is exactly where do I fit into this picture and how can I use this info to help me?

Improve yourself and build value, change your outlook on women to remove from the high altar you have them up on and realise they are in fact more needy than you are. Your neediness for validation from women comes from insecurity, feminist social programming and lack of masculine influence in your life (you would of grown up as a child having only your mother to validate you) and it's this false sense of need which effectively betrays you of your own gender identity, your masculinity. The female need for a strong man is biological, studies have shown women rather all share the most powerful men than have a weak man all to themselves. No I won't reference that, take my word for it or use google.

You don't want regrets you let this one go or fuck up too much you turn her into a ho. You'll never live that shit down. Women are the product of their current man/previous men (alpha widowed.)

If women all get frothy in the loins for the alpha guy, then isn't there a direct benefit to letting your guy have his pick of a few other women, as long as you remain "alpha-wife"?

how does it matter if you go knock up some girls from different tribes or whatever?

No she's worried if you develop strong emotions for another woman that your attention and resources will no longer be monopolised by her, but split between her and another woman or women. Women want to monopolise your sexual options and your financial resources so that they remain solely with her. A woman giving you lots of sex is one way she controls you to stay around, obviously its a positive and pleasurable way of controlling someone, so there's no real objections - that's why guys gets pissed off when sex drops off post-marriage because they feel betrayed about what the relationship entails hence like many for that reason alone I'm anti-marriage (but won't digress into that)

You can manipulate a woman to accept less, but it's not a part of her feminine imperative and this is where we start to go dark triad and play with the fire to basically have our cake and eat it (making her compromise her imperative to meet yours, which is essentially how TRP and TRPW coheses.)

On the flipside: I once read about a game tactic for women to tie an alpha down, something along the lines of this:

You put up with him having sex with other women and act cool with it even though you're not, act like the perfect wife and do all the things he loves, make his food and all that shit, you let this go on for a few months, then you tell him something like "I really love you but I need loyalty and something more long term and I know that's not how you do things so I'm gonna have to break things off between us" - the woman should not be aggressive when she says or does any of this shit, it should be done from a place of guilt to truly encompass the jist of what feminine power is, rather than lock horns which will just make the guy think "this bitch can fuckoff then, turns out she isnt what I thought she was"

He'll then go home and compare her to all his other girls and realise he's lost the best girl in his harem, and reluctantly get back in contact agreeing to her terms of monogamy in order to keep the best value mate. Boom. Woman wins.

This girl could be gaming you like that.... if she's that devious and intelligent. Have fun. Hope you enjoyed seeing it from both sides, sexual strategy is WAR.

RP men and women may respect each other, but our imperatives are still at war. This is a biological certainty. It's all about compromise, but it's about how much each party is willing to compromise without damaging the integrity of a lasting and meaningful relationship, that balance is delicate and hard to achieve, most will fail (or live a lie.)

Feminism is Socially Accepted Bigotry | Men and the Red Pill

With the comparison of race politics to gender politics, it would be logically consistent for you to deny that Black Americans deal with subtle forms of prejudice in their daily lives, an experience which may grant them insight on the oppressive behaviors that focus on their "otherness." By studying the ethology of power, men and women of color learn quickly what it takes to persist and succeed in a dominant culture and most feel that there is a persistent feeling that the deck is stacked ...not in their favor. I don't think you were denying that though

I wasn't making comparisons to Black Americans, I'm not american, it just so happens you guys speak our language (English!) so there's often an assumption that the politics and dominant culture being discussed are American, but I was not drawing parallels to the plight of the black american, simply, living in the UK, I have no knowledge of it and would be ignorant to comment on it. English blacks are not the successors of slavery, they are the children of immigrants who came here for work, so the race relation dynamic is different, compared to the USA, the UK is very racially tolerant. Blacks do not get a bad wrap here, the pakistani muslims are the most hated ethnic/religious group here.

Racism exists outside the confines of non-black american to black american racism, I was pointing out rather simply, that as people are discriminated for their melanin pigmentation, feminism encourages men and women to discriminate against men, it can be informal via social attitudes and treatment or formal such as through affirmative action (women getting jobs based on biology not merit), boys/men being punished more often and severely in the education system (as the teachers are overwhelmingly female and perceive them negatively) or as teachers for their conduct (male teacher has sex with a student, goes to jail, female teacher has sex with a student, gets probation.)

When you make the comparison between racism and gender, are you comparing your group to black people or the women's group? The distinction is important, does the rhetoric of feminism cause you to be in a similar plight to the average Black American?

The only case that I can think of where you can justifiably feel that American men are similar to Black americans in general is in the case of the false rape accusation. The red pill solution is very similar to Levar Burton's solution, run a simple algorithm, 1.) see if they are too drunk to consent, if so, get them home safe, and contact them later explaining that you "did not want to take advantage of a drunk girl, but maybe a sober girl tomorrow night?" 2.) always be sure if they are you sure that they want to fuck, if they are, they'll get down, IF THEY'RE UNSURE, HERE IS WHERE THEY COULD BACK DOWN. 3.) Don't associate with addicts or teenagers for your sex, both are likely to seek extreme manipulative ends to get what they want out of you.

I think feminism is no longer about the betterment of women as by large, by law, they have more privileges. The law is biased towards serving them. (Think family court, divorce laws, Violence Against Women Act etc) It goes beyond false rape accusations, it goes into marriage, it goes into child custody, it goes into false domestic abuse accusations and restraining orders. If a woman calls the police citing violence, the police will automatically arrest the man without evidence, even if she was hitting him, because the law states to arrest the heavier person (at least in the USA) which is usually always the man.

This is institutionalised discrimination AGAINST men as a group for nothing other than their biology, and the mens rights movement is ridiculed and ignored by the mainstream media and the people as a majority. Feminists even have the audacity to disrupt MRA protests and demonstrations, now if they cared about equality why would they disrupt men's rights demonstrations? Because equality is not the aim, maintaining their privilege and supremacism is.

Women have the same issue they have to deal with to protect themselves, even in situations where they aren't working on knocking boots, like walking alone at night, wearing something other people may consider slutty, or admitting to sleeping with multiple people, etc. Each of these are effective tools for a defense attorney to let a real rapist go. It sucks for women to have to protect themselves too. The difference is that men can usually choose to turn it off: Stop trying to fuck a girl, your risk usually goes away. The women are much more similar to Levar, the status of their identity is always running in the background in interactions with other people.

That's just the world. And women complain that it's not fair. I don't believe that feminists that work on these issues are calling all men rapists or scum or assuming a moral high road, I think they just want fair justice that vindicates the non-guilty and punishes the guilty. Men who are falsely accused of rape want the same too.

I think feminists shine light on a whole array of stupid shit society is doing, mostly because they have a vested interest in staying safe and feeling secure because there are significant issues that tend not to go...in their favor.

That is an extremely benevolent light being shined on feminism. Since feminism crime has increased due to dysfunctional families, bastard children and the destruction of the family unit as a whole as daddy government has stepped in as the economic provider to facilitate single motherhood... this has had the ironic effect of making society LESS safe.

In the UK where I live (a small city), back in the 60's (my grandparents told me about this) people didn't even lock their doors because crime was so low. Compared to now, you always hear people shouting in the streets late at night, if you twitch the curtain you'll see some fucking girls dressed up scantily screaming whilst some guys sing songs, fight or shout out some crap.

Feminism isn't all to blame, but it's a significant contributory factor to the lack of safety that permeates society nowadays. The fall of religion certainly plays a role too, but that too is connected to a lack of family, as it's a religious value to have children in wedlock, these things are all morally connected via the social fabric which constitutes society. Feminism does push for safety through legislation by taking the freedoms of man, anti-guns, anti-freedom of speech, more CCTV, spying on you with gov agency crap etc etc.. but these things wouldn't be necessary if the family itself was still an intact self-sustaining unit independent of the government teat.

I fucking watch men, alpha, beta, whatever, and the typical behavior and conversation will tend to revolve about how to have access to a woman's holes. I was a guy who schemed on how to get to fuck women all the time. I grew out of it, but not every young man does. I get nervous if my lady goes out with friends, but I simply have to trust that in America, good folks and the justice system work. I just have too much proof that there are fewer folks that would step in to intercede in a rape in progress, and that the justice system will treat my woman fairly.

Men biologically are aroused by women which is how women get to enjoy beauty privilege (woman being hired because she is an object of desire) she consciously/subconsciously knows of her privilege and so goes to the interview wearing a top that shows her cleavage off thinking it'll help her score a job - and it often does, unfortunately no ideology is going to change the rules of attraction.

I think meditation and exercise can help calm sexual instincts, but nothing short of geneticism can remove these instincts. They are natural and here to stay, one would hope that if anything, the rise of pornography would help lower the prevalence of rape, but I'd be out of my depth if I were to go into that any further because I don't know what the reality is there.

Feminism didn't teach me not to trust these systems and I am not bigoted to not trust these systems.

Feminism is the reason your lady has to be safer when she goes out, it encourages women to be promiscuous, to use men disposably rather than have a family, it's damaged the family unit so young men and women are lost, young men in particular are without direction or discipline and thus more likely to do things such as assault a young woman.

Think about it for a minute. Pre-feminism women dressed more conservatively, post-feminism they dress more slutty/revealing (which in and of itself is a display of intent one must take responsibility for) pre-feminism young men were hit for acting out of line, usually had fathers doing that hitting and were thus better disciplined, post-feminism many are increasingly raised by liberals who don't believe in physical punishment or firm boundary setting or more commonly the young boy is raised by a single mother without a father, this results in less self-discipline and increasingly more volatile behaviour, especially when inebriated - you can see the responsibility on both sides here, how the propensity for bad shit to happen has been essentially facilitated and fostered both in the upbringing of young men and young women.

This is a duality of bullshit and feminism both directly and indirectly can be attributed for it's contribution to this through the influence it has had on changing the social norm for what construes the de facto family unit, from 50's nuclear families to 00's single parent families.

I love how fucking honest this group is. Not too many places on the internet constrain so much passion and boldly declares itself like this. With that in mind, the shitting on feminism is a weakpoint of this whole ideology.

We don't bow to political correctness, which is essentially the societal censorship of taboos - but we get a lot of shit for it. Hope to see you stick around and share more of your opinions. "The shitting on feminism" if you've read my previous points is essential, it's the identification/calling out of the inherently negative aspects of feminism and attributing responsibility to the ideology for creating the problems that it has.

Feminism always tries to present itself as this perfect untouchable ideology that does nothing but help, but that couldn't be further from the truth and part of the red pill metaphor is EXPOSING this lie. Feminism has done good and bad, most of the good was in the first wave.

We're in the third wave now and it's long overdue a departure, the only feminists I agree with are post-feminists, they think the ideology has long run its course and isn't needed anymore - I'm inclined to agree.

Hitting your head against biological differences and calling them social constructs is a waste of taxpayer money. That's another thing, feminism is expensive and costs the economy fucks tons in bureaucracy and inefficiency, like automatically hiring women for jobs because they are women and then those women do an inferior job due to biological constraints eg: in the construction industry. It's impossible to expect equality in such an area and yet feminism would still push for affirmative action there despite the damage it does to the free market, removing a job from a man capable of doing a better job and reducing the output of the company in question.

So yes, feminism is a discriminatory ideology and men/children suffer for it at the hands of female betterment. Ironically, once a woman's beauty runs out, it no longer benefits women either. Being an old career woman with no family to call your own must be extremely lonely.

Thanks for your post. I enjoyed the read despite not agreeing with many of the things you said. Well argued. Regards from England.

Shit test: "I'm fine"

Unfortunately you must always be manipulative, relationships are not partnerships they are war - a war of wills. If you let a woman walk over you, even one that loves you, she will - it's her nature to fitness test you, if you can't protect her from her own illogical bullshit, how can you protect her from the rest of the world?

The word manipulation carries heavily negative connotations but it's essentially wielding the mental aptness to influence someone to behave in a specific way. When you discipline your children you're manipulating them, you wouldn't say not to bother "raising them" and to though would you? It's the same with partners not as an analogy, but in terms of purpose, you're doing it "because you care", if you let them be feral, they will be feral, one person has to be in control and the other has to follow - if the woman has that responsibility it never ends good, they hate responsibility, they will dump your ass and move on "for a real man."

Obviously if you love someone you will be manipulating for their own good and the good of relationship, to create sustainability, monogamy isn't easy, if it's a plate then you're just feeding them bullshit for sex - manipulation in and of itself is not absolute in purpose, it is merely a non-tangible tool, it can be used for good, and it can be used for bad - the power and it's application is up to the wielder, every powerful person needs to be able to manipulate, or otherwise they're not contenders for anything.

Women are natural manipulators, men aren't, that's why they give men so many difficulties, feminism just made that shit about 50x worse as well, in the old days this stuff was solved with physical violence, now men are forced to take on the feminine arsenal of combat as physical punishment has been outlawed post-feminism (not condoning physical violence or abuse here which are both separate things but merely stating the facts surrounding the paradigm shift.)

I just want to say thanks.

I get put under immense peer pressure to go out clubbing and to bars so I can be "in with the crowd" but I see what you're describing and it's for those very reasons I don't like clubs and bars. I do like the smoking areas, I've had a few OK/good chats with people in smoking areas but otherwise its pretty lame. Women have all the power in clubs, the bitch shields are set to MAX, if you're not with the DJ, locally known or knowing staff (able to project status) just don't waste your time. I usually tell people look if you're having a house party or a gathering then I'm down, if you want to hit up bars and clubs though I may come to the bar for a few shots but when you're out to go crazy at the clubs I'll pass on that shit. Clubs are a terrible place to get women, I know because I've been in them enough times, it's pathetic, I'd have more fun in Costa coffee.

If you believe whites are privileged you make them superior. I'm native English and I see plenty of poverty stricken white people each and every day. A middle class indian or chinese or african wins hands down over a poor white guy. Funny if these richer guys believe the poor white guy eating junk and living worse than them is more privileged.

Its very American to think whites are automatically privileged, I think American blacks are taught to believe that and see the world like that to reinforce the "us and them" between American black culture and any other culture, I struggle to see it myself because where I live white poverty is abundant (as in, the entire nation of England, cities upon cities of white people living in resource poverty be it fuel or food - no food stamps in England) America has trailer parks for white trash and rich black rappers and basketball players etc.

The whole colour = auto privilege seems so perverse and feeds the cycle. Enough people feel it and believe it and it then it metaphysically becomes true. It's so irrational.

Due to her political decisions she's been portrayed as an enemy of the working class. Generally the less educated you are, the more likely you are to not understand Thatcher, hear how she closed a bunch of mines and thus hate her. Those mines would of closed anyway, natural resources don't last forever. Thatcher may not have been popular, but she was one of the greats, for certain. To make an analogy, women's rights are ransacking the farms of love, where love is created and used to sustain the emotional sustenance of the people (both men and women, but women are the more sexually and romantically orientated in their own identities), they're getting the farms legislated to their favour, and they're controlling government to legislate against the farms in a way that from a legal standpoint empowers them as the consumer of the farm, and the dependent on the farm, however a lot of farmers just decided they weren't going to share their crop. Some are even just destroying whatever their crop was and leaving the business (MGTOW). I wonder how long it is until destroying your crop is somehow penalised as it's "against the interests of society."

Haha, by my English standards Polish girls are hotter than English girls, usually thin, nice skin etc. English girls get overweight and have fucked up skin. Polish food is much healthier than English stuff though, which explains a lot. I mean like kielbasa for instance, is like 80%+ meat. Some English sausage is just 50% meat and the rest is leftover fat/chemicals.

I had an LTR with a Polish girl so I met a fair number of poles, from my experience Polish people on average are much more red pill than English people about relationships, money, life, work etc. A more mentally stable people compared to my fellow angielskie, but I'm noticing the poles aren't keeping their culture up, they are becoming "westernised."

I'm noticing how the polish immigrants are degenerating and becoming more and more English in their mannerisms, I mean many don't say please/thank you like English people but women are getting fat, entitled, having lots of little marcins and macieks and just living off government money... which goes totally against polish cultural work ethic, and something you can't really do in Poland because the mafia government won't pay for it.... but the English feminist welfare is turning these Polish more and more into English girls... slowly. Give it 1-2 generations you won't know the difference.

I split up with my Polish ex and stopped learning Polish and cut off from their community when that happened. The women are slowly losing their femininity and their matura/uni (like the guys) goes to waste doing shit jobs in England. Unless you are a dentist/nurse or went to a trade school in Poland. I knew a polish dude in his 40's with a degree in history and quantum mechanics (but had terrible English, I mean really bad English, we always needed a translator... and had interesting conversation VIA a translator lmao) so he was washing pots in a kitchen. If I was him I would have killed myself, it's such a waste.

Polish people in England are interesting to analyse and converse with, they are more educated on average than English people, and more red pill, so I tend to get on better with them, although of course I am an English patriot, you have to be proud of your people's history (and if you are Polski, you will most likely agree with that LOL, Poland is obsessed with history it seems from my experience, and the people got a strong national identity.)

I'm visiting london a couple of times to see friends who live there (both English red pill guys in LTRs) but when I'm visiting if logistics allow maybe we can arrange something, would be good.

Yeah. Pretty much. If you're a girl invest everything in your looks and you don't need to be successful to have a good standard of living, you'll trade your sex for someone elses success. It's easy to be female, you just have to be pretty. I call them "success hijackers" hijacking other peoples success to get themselves shit they can't get on their own. Funny thing is if they go all super independent, then that shit ain't attractive either. It's fucking lose-lose!

The Male Experience

5 upvotes · 11 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

"Understand" is quite a vague word in english. It means "to comprehend" but it doesn't say "how" such and such is comprehended.

Logic communicates knowledge, it doesn't communicate a paradigm though, the sensations, the smells, the method of thinking, how and why you think that way etc. This is what experience is, seeing the world in a certain way due to a certain paradigm, having a certain status, living in a certain place, being perceived a certain way.

The male experience is unique to men, women don't understand it, they dictate the female experience as the social norm, safety before risk and all that kinda shit.

The reason you can't have equality is because essentially the male experience and female experience are incompatible, and in a single social setting one has to be dominant, they can't both be simultaneously dominant as it creates a paradox.

I Cheated On My Husband To Secure Better Genes For My Children

5 upvotes · 20 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

She believes in female sexual pluralism, alpha fucks, beta bucks. I respect the honesty.

Do you think that your husband has been faithful to you? If you found out that he had in fact had sex outside of the marriage, would you be angry or disappointed, or would you be able to accept it because men are hard wired to spread their seed far and wide? I seriously doubt my husband has ever been unfaithful. It is not the way he is. He was a virgin until we started dating. He was 36 when I took his virginity. He has never been the player type and I can tell he embraces being married and "off-limits."

She dodges the question, but basically we can infer NO, the double standard is only justified for her cheating. Him cheating would threaten her monopoly on his resources.

Ever thought about broaching the subject of an open relationship with your husband? An open relationship with my husband? No way. One of the main reasons I married him is his ability to provide me and my children with the resources we need. I don't want to share my husband's time and money with other women. That is out of the question.

And then what I said in the last point comes from the horse's mouth!! HYPERGAMY IS STARING YOU IN THE FACE. That is some terrifying selfishness. She doesn't even love the guy enough to let him have some fun. Sex once a month for this chump, damn.

Do you ever feel guilty? If so, how do you manage those feelings? For me, I've never felt any guilt about any of the affairs I've had. I've often said that I'm like a man-I can fuck men the way men fuck women, without any guilt-and get right back into bed with my husband at night without the slightest tinge of remorse.

She's an honest sociopath, I thought so. She doesn't care about her husband, just about being found out.

What precautions do you take to ensure you maintain secrecy? ..."I've always looked for married or taken men, excluding one-night stands"

Funny, because she won't let her own husband have an open relationship, but she'll fuck another woman's man. I can't say I like this ho. This my friends is what we call a married ho, playing the game. She hit the beta provider jackpot. She married a 36 year old virgin making serious bank who takes care of all her emotional needs. Ho-lee-shit. This almost sounds made up, if it wasn't so red pill I wouldn't believe it.

Whites will be the smallest ethnicity in their own host countries by 2050, currently they are the ethnic MAJORITY within their own nation states, but globally they are an ethnic MINORITY.

The worlds population reached 7 billion on October 31, 2011 with White Europeans representing only a minority of 699 million people which is only 9% of the entire global population meaning in short, white Europeans are dwarfed by global 91% of all other ethnic groups. Making us the minority.

According to the 2011 census, the total population of the United Kingdom is around 63,182,000 with an almost massive 10 million of other mixed ethnicities watering us down.

This means the white British population only represents 7.5% of the entire race of white Europeans and less than 1% of the entire global population.

On the subject of having children

I do want children because I value family and legacy. I value family in the truest sense of the word, that everyone protects each other, looks out for each other and pulls up the weakest link/kicks them in the ass/hooks them up so that they don't become excess waste. Almost like meritocracy and socialism within a small social circle where our unit competes in this world of crony capitalism.

I value legacy because when I die I want to leave an imprint on the world and I think the best kind of imprint you can leave is a younger/improved version of yourself and a couple of well written and well received books on something meaningful/academic/non-fiction. I see having a kid as a project, something you invest a fuck ton into to be the best human they can be. They will make their own fuck-ups, but you can give them better tools than you had to assess their own situations and thus reduce their chances of fucking up quite so frequently or severely as you may have done.

Raising a son will be somewhat easy and because I grew up without a father and realise everything I missed and desired as a kid/teenager, I know to essentially do the opposite for my own kid. Eg: mothers teach their boys not to fight/be violent, I'll have my kid doing martial arts and gym from a young age. Mothers/betas say not to argue or talk back, I'll tell him to argue and teach him to have a critical mind and if he can beat my reasoning with logic/morality I'll let him have his way if it seems reasonable enough. Raising a daughter takes more skill, because even though boys on average are more deprived of masculinity and lack a sense of belonging, girls are surrounded by so much toxic femininity and are constantly told they should behave like men. They see other women controlling men and taking on masculine behaviours and they think that these are healthy behaviours, when as we know, courtesy the divorce rate and the mainstream cited "women are the least happy they've ever been" headlines that said behaviours are not healthy.

I also think that by being a man, the key responsibility of raising our daughter would be with the mother, they share a certain way of seeing the world and the mother can communicate to her about things I couldn't, like her periods, girl game, pregnancy and etc

Most women aren't worthy of commitment (in my experience, thus far) I honestly don't think the majority are simply cut out for motherhood because feminism has told them it's all about them, having kids is a sacrifice for both parents, and the reward is the development of the kids, but womens current social programming tells them they make this big sacrifice just by conceiving the children, so they shit all over the father and they don't do enough for their kids because they're putting themselves before their man and their kids - they see themselves as the most important thing going, yet don't understand they have the biological clock which condemns them to want to have a family - it's pandoras box gone mad, a false dichotomy. If she had no kids she'd bitch and be desperate to trap a man and if she failed, age as a sad bitter spinster, if she has kids in a relationship with a man, she feels like shes owed the world by her man and she'll forgo certain obligations to her kids, neglect them too much and have a generally shitty attitude because she doesn't have the freedoms she once had. She can't suck it up and become a mother, she's still a little brat who expects to be treated in a certain way and have life on her own terms.

I have really high expectations of what I expect in the mother of my children. I don't want bratty behaviour, I don't want a self-entitled woman, I don't want a stupid woman, I want a woman whose actually mature, not dependent on a hamster to reason things and values education and academia. I also want that woman to be pleasant and kind, to be sweet. An embodiment of femininity whom would guide our hypothetical children with her viewpoint, complementing my authority. I don't want a woman who bitches or fights, I'm not talking about shit tests which are inevitable, I'm talking about women who will act out/fuck with the social dynamics because they want their own way. I think these women are pretty bad for kids because it shows they care more about themselves and their own desires than doing what's right for the kids. I think a woman needs to know even though her opinion is important that I have the final say on things, she needs to respect my authority and not constantly challenge it, it's bad for the relationship, bad for the well-being of the kids and it makes bad role models for the kids too. The reason I think it's harder to have a daughter as a red pill man than it is a son is that your son will emulate you, and being red pill he will turn out alright, but your daughter is going to copy the mother and if she's your typical woman, your daughter will end up being the very same type of woman that you hate, psychologically manly, ball-busting, moaning, negative logicless caricature of masculinity.

TLDR: RP man can have a son with almost any woman and be a good role model to him. Having a daughter needs a RP/high value woman to be a good role model for her, otherwise she'll be absorbed by the culture and turn into a hypergamous slut by the time she hits puberty.

Breivik was definitely an extremist but his point about muslims and islamists is not unfounded, they are the only culture to be multiculturally incompatible with the rest of western society and are the most politically active of any religion, probably because Islam in and of itself is not just a religion but a political ideology with a goal to create an Islamic state via institutionalisation of Sharia Law (it's the only religion affiliated with it's own law, rather than using a nation's law.) In many ways, their way of life is an antithesis, eg: western girls slut it up, muslim girls are locked down, western countries (not usa included) don't have capital punishment, sharia law has stoning/beheading.

You make valid points, but the post is till biased. There are many advantages to a relationship with a single mother as well.

How do you think it's biased?

Firstly, a kid is already present, so there is no "hurry" to marry or to have more kids.

I'd think she has more to gain from marriage than a woman without kids does at this point as she needs a provider more. There may be no pressure to have more kids, but the responsibility is there from day 1 that the man takes up a fatherly role, despite him having no say in the child's existence, this is an extra obligation to the man dating the single mother through no fault of his own. Summing up what I said in my first post: She requires more and is a less attractive proposition. She doesn't become more attractive because she doesn't want anymore kids. Most young guys don't want kids anyways. Older guys want kids of their own. Thus I'd conclude that this is a moot point.

Second, being a single mother, she is aware of the challenges faced in trying to find a relationship as a single mother, which, in addition to being more mature about her problems as she has already been in a relationship, she has also had time to think about her mistakes that led to the failed marriage, in the time that she spends alone in the house with her child, unable to find mates as the dating pool is halved easily after you become a single mother, no matter how good you look.

You're assuming the single mother has suddenly become introspective due to her mistakes. She is not a man. This is a feminist culture. Her friends have no doubt told her men are shallow for passing her up for being a single mother, shamed the paternal dad, shamed men who weren't interested in her because she has a child and given her full victim support for her conundrum. I can counter your argument by assuming now she feels even more entitled to have a man look after her because it was another man who got her pregnant in the first place and left her to raise a child alone. You see, the introspective assumption assumes she's intelligent enough to be introspective to begin with and that she takes responsibility for her mistake of conceiving this child and simply hasn't distributed all the shame and responsibility she felt of her gargantuan fuck up on to the absent "deadbeat dad". I do agree with you on the point that she will value male attention more as she gets less of it, but that doesn't mean she's intellectually evolved due to her mistakes. In fact I think this culture permeates a heightened victimhood status to single mothers and rather letting them learn from their mistakes, encourages them to feel more indignation and be more entitled to support rather than penalising them for their mistakes and helping them realise why what they did was wrong and how to evolve so that such a thing doesn't reoccur again.

Thirdly, yes, you have to respect the kid, but you have an advantage that way. If a regular spouse gets angry at you, she will stay angry and will make you regret making her angry. With a single mother, you have an indirect method of making her happy if you have had a fight: spend time with her kid and make him/her happy and that will mend your relationship with the mother.

I can spin that and say the kid also has to respect you, and if the kid had a relationship with its paternal father it will immediately see you as a threat to that as "you try to replace its father", the kid can be as much of a hindrance to your relationship with the mother as it can be a help. It's something I'm willing to say is a moot point as it's quite circumstantial whether the kid can be used to win the mother over or whether the kid is actually a source of conflict between the two of you. It's very dependent on the kid's previous relationship with its father, if any, and the kid's relationship with its mother. We can only speculate here.

Lastly, she has more experience sexually and because it is harder for her to find a suitable partner, your value to her is higher in her eyes as you are not as expendable to her as to a regular spouse who can always find another mate, which means that she is also more available sexually than a regular non-child spouse.

Sounds like point #2 you made about her having less options, so I shan't repeat my response to that. As for the addendum here about sexual availability however, that would be a source of dread due to her reduced options. I don't disagree with this, my point is that lots of sex doesn't make her smart/a high value mate/desirable or LTR material, perhaps she'd be a good fuck buddy, but we cannot assume introspection and emotional stability due to learning from the mistakes which led up to her becoming a single mother, it's much more logical to assume that due to her mistakes she's a bad investment (cause and effect) the introspective element here is assumed and in scenarios where it proves true, it does not change the increased commitment and financial burden sought in a LTR due to her situation. Again leading me to repeat she's a higher cost and lower reward investment from an LTR perspective. She'd be great for regular hookups and easy sex, but nothing more.

Let's not presume that all single mothers are terrible relationship partners, especially when we hear so many stories of regular couples facing so much difficulty adapting to each others personalities.

Sounds like "not all women are like that" so I'm going to say "but nearly all women are like that" but to be less flippant, I'm not saying they're terrible relationship material I'm saying they're a less attractive proposition for a man and I'm giving valid reasons from the male point of view why that is. To deny this is to be deluded.

Equality is making women miserable

Not sure if you're legitimately unintelligent, or just trolling. The trend is most women are like X, you find a woman that isn't like X and say not all women are like X because a specific woman is not like X. Therefore, you attack a common trend by pointing to the exception without accepting the exception to be a minority in and of itself.

Lets break it down. 9 out of 10 trees are brown. 1 tree is green. The gardeners don't like brown trees. The gardeners complain they don't like trees because trees are brown, brown trees aren't as strong, they die quicker and heat up the ground too much. You know of a tree which is green which has these defects in lower concentrations and say not all trees are brown when you hear the gardeners say things about brown trees you don't like, you don't consider they speak about the trees in this manner because 9 out of 10 trees are brown (nearly every tree they come across), you don't like what the gardeners say because you know of a specific minority tree which is green, remember the gardeners like green trees too and don't think of green trees when they discredit trees, but they often generalise trees by the traits of a brown tree because green trees are so rare and brown trees are so common.

They generalise because that generalisation is almost always correct and by ignoring this commonality you actually present a reverse generalisation, by being so specific and selective in your choice of thought or example you can show a generalisation is wrong in ALL CASES because of one specific case, but the key is within the word - it's general, not specific. Educated sweeping generalisations can be correct across a majority group when you have gathered enough data about a group in order to formulate that generalisation, but obviously it won't encompass every single last member of that group.

NAWALT is used fallaciously to disprove common trends in female behaviour, but the truth is "most women are like that" and by concentrating on those who aren't bad (who fit male preference) you ignore the majority who are bad (that don't fit male preference.)

Honestly, this is easier said than done. Experienced women know how to push the right buttons, it is in their blood.

Very true, it's in their very fiber. Goes back to pre-agriculture when women were dependants, and being unable to extract resources and protection from men essentially spelled death. They're wired to resource extract period, and if you fall for her your wiring will tell you to provide for her.

The government now takes care of the protection part, as well as provision to an extent. But if you can provide better than the government, then it's on.

That's the crux of the deal, resources for sex and sex for resources. Always has been, always will be. There are exceptions (you're so psychopathic you give her immense tingles), but the exception is less common than people think, and people always think they're the exception when they're not.

At the start of a relationship women in rich countries generally care less about resources than women in poor countries, but the longer you know her, the greater the chance she'll feel entitled to, and get access to your wallet.

Your parents giving you a million dollars at 18 won't automatically ensure you lead a successful life, but it will significantly increase the likelihood. Juice is the million dollars of the fitness world. If it wasn't, nobody would take it. Juice increases metabolism, assuming identical workout routine and diet, a guy on 3k calories a day juiced is leaner with higher muscle mass than a guy on 3k calories without juice. This is ignoring the fact the juiced guy will be able to keep exercising when the unjuiced guy won't. Those strongmen must eat ridiculous calories (10k+ per day?) to juice and not be lean. Your strongman example is like saying NAWALT to roids, it's not genuine. You know I'm right.

Where does their hatred come from? That's what I'm not grasping.

Because women only respect dominance and falling prey to manipulation is effectively a sign of weakness/submission. They are incredibly flawed, the methodologies they use out of insecurity destroy their attraction, it's lose-lose for her in a way, if she can manipulate you she gets one thing she wants but no longer wants you. If she can't manipulate you she wants you, but then the insecurity gets too much for her. Women are truly fucked up as there is no balance to be found in this dichotomy.

Your posts on DTs explore this idea and definitely do a great job of disillusioning newbies who idolize the fantasy of being "DT". And I'm hoping your book - or a future book you write - cracks this conundrum. How do you learn and internalize M, N, and P, and execute common DT strategies in an effective, real-time way?

It is my belief that narcissism and Machiavellian are socially (mal)adaptive traits (they can be learned, I learned them) whilst psychopathy cannot be (perhaps what Venkatesh Rao is referring to when he says sociopathy).

I believe psychopathic behaviour can be temporarily drug induced (eg: altered state reduces empathy to psychopathic levels) but as a way of being and method of becoming via pure erudition? No, not at all. You don't need to be a psychopath to be successful in life anyway, although psychopaths are often very successful people. Narcissism and Machiavellianism is enough to make sure any man makes a good living and enjoys beautiful women.

One must remember the dark triad is not purely psychopathy, although people tend to become most fixated by this aspect of the triad (funny, because it's the only one I'd say with a high degree of certainty can't be learnt, people always want what they can't have!)

I'd wager a charming narcissist does better than a psychopath low in narcissistic charm as a matter of example. Not that I'm trying to undervalue psychopathy, it's definitely powerful and useful, just not really learnable. As I say in an old post of mine, the closest neurotypical men have is stoicism/meditation. The psychopaths who follow my work and reach out from time to time tend to concur with me in that regard (that their condition is not learnable), although perhaps theoretically inducible via significant brain trauma resulting in a neuralplastic cognitive rewrite of their brain's empathy circuit. Of course, most people aren't willing to get hit by a train at the right angle to find out.

It's absolutely decimating the NHS in the UK, female doctors retiring early and working part-time is why we have a constant doctor shortage, and the taxpayer is forced to cough up ridiculous amounts of money to attract private doctors to fill in the gaps.

<http://www.dailymail.co.uk/debate/article-2532461/Why-having-women-doctors-hurting-NHS-A-provocative-powerful-argument-leading-surgeon.html>

I fear this gender imbalance is already having a negative effect on the NHS.

The reason is that most female doctors end up working part-time — usually in general practice — and then retire early.

As a result, it is necessary to train two female doctors so they can cover the same amount of work as one full-time colleague.

Given that the cost of training a doctor is at least £500,000, are taxpayers getting the best return on their investment?

There is another important issue. Women in hospital medicine tend to avoid the more demanding specialities which require greater commitment, have more antisocial working hours and include responsibility for management.

He quite literally says with veiled language that one male doctor does as much work as two female doctors, thus employing a female doctor is more costly than employing a male one.

Politicians are concerned, too. In a Commons debate in June, Anne McIntosh, a Tory MP, said that women doctors who had received expensive medical training but went part-time after starting a family were a huge burden on the NHS.

In reply, Anna Soubry, then a health minister, agreed that they were a drain on resources. Within hours, after angry responses, some from the British Medical Association and the Royal College of GPs (two professional bodies opposed to any meaningful reform of general practice), Ms Soubry was forced to retract her comment and apologise.

Political correctness silences reality once again. We must accept inferior levels of participation/research so that women can have their so-called equality. Total nonsense.

Honest question for this community

4 upvotes · 21 November 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

That's a very interesting question, it would be great to see some kind of research into that.

Women have a love/hate relationship with violence, they hate feeling fear, but they absolutely love the demonstration of power. A woman can't feel like a girl if she feels equal or superior to the guy she is with. She literally has to feel inferior with a dude in order to look up to him and find him attractive.

So social equality in the truest sense of the word would only be possible when female instinct no longer desires to submit sexually, no longer seeks superior mates romantically, and no longer finds violence/dominance inherently attractive.

At such a time, men compatible with feminist ideals would become attractive. Until that time, only the men they hate are fuckable because they make women feel inferior, and with that sense of inferiority, desire.

Woman doesn't understand why her white boyfriend has a problem with the fact all her exes are black.

4 upvotes · 26 October 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Only black dudes I respect are the ones who immediately don't go for the race card. Always fucks with me when a dude I respected for being masculine starts spouting off how he's part of a victim class. Wtf? Men don't do that shit it's such a bitch move. Those who do this I lump in with women. I find it hard to respect people who internalise a sense of victimhood.

Yeah maybe society does have a negative opinion of blacks. Why? The race is known to particularly excel in a capacity for violence? There it is. (I laugh at how even in my white majority neighbourhood nearly all the security guards are black) almost as if companies find black men are the best deterrents.

Yeah maybe that does mean you gotta prove yourself more and work against the shitty reputation your people built for you. But if you're worth a fuck you'll do that. If you're not worth a fuck you'll sit there with your dick in hand and blame the world for your problems. That's such a weak thing to do I can't even respect it.

Outside all this political bullshit I got a lot of respect for black dudes. Sure negative forms of masculinity may be prevalent in their culture but at least they remain masculine. I've gotta respect negative masculinity more than I do bitch boys.

Black men have the highest testosterone of every race/gender combo on the planet so people always gonna fear them. Ambitious black dude has to downplay his masculinity to be less threatening the same way a muscular 6'5 dude does.

Where I think every other race suffers from feminisation, blacks suffer negative masculinity. Poverty and high testosterone means blacks tend to be the most RP as a group. Pros and cons to every race and bitches get caught up on the negatives. Pedestalising other races is the worst as it tacitly implies you're ashamed of your own race. Racial low self-esteem is not attractive at all. No matter who you are you gotta be proud.

Family is the building block of civilization. Without family, there is nothing else. It's part of our innate tribalism. Any ideology that tries to do away with family is condemning itself. There are a lot of economic interests in play when it comes to feminism, but IMO the crime and societal dysfunction that result from a broken family unit is not only less desirable, but provides more economic burden than simply not fucking with the natural order of things.

You are one of few guys who get this. Most men do not get this. They live their life entirely for women, they define their life by the women they get or don't get. Women are the reason they do nothing or the reason they do everything. To these men: women control their lives even when there aren't any in their lives. How? Because ultimately how they think about women affects how they see themselves and in turn, how they behave.

I don't think you understand autism spectrum type people.

I'm definitely no expert in that realm of empathy deficiency. I do however know that autism is the opposite of psychopathy in terms of empathy capacity, that is, while an autist has no understanding of what you feel, they do have an ability to empathise. However scarcely is this present in any way that is socially recognisable. Thus for all intent and purpose, it appears completely absent to the neurotypical, although it exists.

The psychopath/narcissist inverts this phenomenon, they know what you're feeling and can recognise your emotions, they just don't care about you and typically but not always harbour ill-intent (which is largely untrue of the autist - autists don't harbour ill-intent) Both have empathy issues but they're significantly distinct.

We have male autists in the community who have confused their lack of empathy for being synonymous with psychopathy - to a point of near excessive inquisition into nitpicking the nuances of psychopathic and autistic empathy deficiency, however I digress.

However, I am NOT "different" from other "basic bitches" when it comes to my sexual response/behavior.

Never thought that for a second. I know very well the relationship between sex and violence, for it is a most primal and powerful urge of our collective operating systems. All women want to fuck violent men - this is an immutable of AWALT. As for AMALT, to a degree, but a less extreme degree than AWALT. When you consider the increased biodiversity of men as opposed to women, man being the experimental gender, you find a wider range of behaviour.

Harem building is something I believe to be an affect of power more than it is an affect of masculinity. Whilst a low SMV woman is always on the look out for an upgrade, a low SMV man is just happy to have access to pussy. You see polygamous behaviour distorts towards men of high status, which suggests men have a propensity for it, but only when they have sufficient power. This makes sense, because women only chase high status men; there's more temptation.

Likewise male promiscuity is oft an affect of sexual dissatisfaction (woman stops putting out) than it is a need for variation. This of course owing to women's far lower testosterone levels, and therefore, a diminished need for sexual release. Of course this varies from man to man, some men need constant variation. But I do believe that in a turn of irony, although women are wired to desire commitment, men on the whole are more capable of monogamy.

I don't really believe in lesbians

I believe all women are bisexual, very orientation fluid. "Straight" women will make out and even "do things" with their female friends after they've loosened up from a few drinks, straight guys wouldn't do that after all the drugs and drink in the world. Going back to psychopaths, they all tend to be bisexual too.

I don't really have the time to tailor you a strategy and go too deeply with this (time is precious) but you'll find this useful:

From the start, I have always been the outcast. This is normal when I am dealing with black folks outside of my family and friends. A common question I get asked by black people is "where are you from, b/c you have an accent!?" I always want to respond with "I am speaking standard FUCKING English b/c I read??", but I always say "I am from up north" shrugs.

https://www.reddit.com/r/The48LawsOfPower/comments/3djtbw/visually_animated_law_summaries_exact_working/ct656a2

The troll however employed a new strategy. She would talk shit/I would ignore her/ then when I was right about to walk away she would yell "get out of here" (at work towards the end of the daymind you)...then everyone would start laughing and I kept walking * mentally scratching my head, b/c I don't know where the anger is coming from.

<https://twitter.com/IllimitableMan/status/621753288040517632>

She is toxic and IMO, it's very poor leadership if they don't sack her/can't see her as the problem. That's a weakness within the organisation. Warfare aside, the organisation is infected and she is the disease. What do we do with infections? We cure them. If we can't cure them? We amputate the damaged limb (get rid of her.) If she can't go? You go.

You may not feel like you should be the one who has to leave, but strategically it's the best move. We're talking strategy here, not principle. Realise this is not a simple you vs her thing. The company plays a big part in the picture, they're not on your side, and they won't drop the dead weight, so you cannot win. Your environment betrays you. Know when to tactically retreat. Cutting your losses is the only winning move here.

Be a stand-up gentleman to everybody and make sure you finish cleanly though. You will want a good reference and to minimise drama. For you, minimising drama is how you keep power. For her, maximising drama is how she gets power. Realise this: every time you feed into her emotionally, you enter her realm of battle and she will utterly dominate you with craziness. The only winning move is not to play, not to enter that realm of emotion. Don't let her engage you emotionally or egotistically. Be stone cold. Be a zen ass motherfucker. She is staring at you to make you paranoid and try to rattle you, she's forcing you to be reactive so then she can blow up your responses. So no contact.

She sounds like a histrionic type that feeds off the tiniest emotion and blows up drama. Toxic as hell. You must leave. Best of luck buddy.

Even then... refer to maxim #23:

IM MAXIM #23: "Women want the final product, but successful men value a woman who was there for the journey. The problem is, women detest risk. And so they have the propensity to hold back ambitious men with their petulant insecurities. Should he become too powerful, she fears she will lose her monopoly of him. She sabotages him to secure him, for the crab bucket mentality is intrinsic to women."

BBC reports David Cameron is ready to "tackle gender pay gap" by "pressuring firms into boosting women's wages". Public comment section absolutely rejects gender gap as myth.

Ignore the "other guys" shit test

4 upvotes · 8 July 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Playing devil's advocate here, what if you reach this level of Red Pill Zen Master where you legitimately do not give a fuck but continue to subconsciously employ red pill philosophy into your daily life?

Yes, you still have a game if this describes you. Everyone has a game (Machiavellian ability, charm etc,) whether they have to work their ass off to deploy it, or not.

IMO, red pill simply streamlines guy game via internalisation. Just because it's natural to you and you're not pouring over blueprints like these new guys, doesn't mean you don't have a game plan.

You're distinguishing between a guy with game that's so great he's reached unconscious competence, and a guy whose game is so bad that he's somewhere between unconscious incompetence, and conscious incompetence.

But every guy strives for good guy game, just as RPWs strive for good girl game. And hence, everyone is playing a game - and refining it. We're all players (of the game.) If you're not, you're a loser, the game doesn't stop playing because you don't know how to play or won't play it. Robert says in the 48 that people who think they can transcend the game by not playing are fools. We are all in this.

Relevant: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Four_stages_of_competence

Also realise when I speak about "game" it is not one thing, eg: seduction, Machiavellianism or survival. Think of Russian dolls. Life is a game. That's the most outer doll. We're all smaller dolls inside that doll, playing the game of life, running our own game alongside the game of life to maximise our own ends. Then we run games inside of games, eg: we show one person the side of ourselves we think will benefit us most, and another person an image that may run entirely counter to that.

So you end up having all these micro games (one on one manipulations - not necessarily negative, but just practical in nature) running inside a game with a bigger goal (to fit an agenda) - which is an agenda that can be constrained by the agenda of others (that's politics) which are constrained by the rules of the greatest game - survival and navigating human psychology.

I know this may sound obtuse and a little difficult to follow, but I hope you follow. It's not easy to explain "the different levels that game operates at." So you have the different scale of game, that's one way of measuring game. Then you have the level of competence that one operates at in executing their game, another metric of game. Both measure "the level of game" but in different ways - one is competence, the other is scale.

When you realise this is how things are, you will realise people who say they don't play games are either very manipulative, are simply UNAWARE of the nature of reality, or both (as is typical in the case of women who are dissociative in nature.) They play games but think they don't and have no greater understanding of the abstract reality around us. Solipsism kind of has that effect on a person. People who flat out reject reality are beyond help IMO. They usually end up being losers.

Pure RP is very rare now, less than 1% of speakers. My family who speak that are very very old, old enough to remember British India (the British Raj) colonialism and all those such things. A lot of British accents started dying off after WW2, I mean go and listen to Winston Churchill, nobody speaks like that now. Even the accents on shows like Made in Chelsea are pretty tame, and are far more estuary than RP, bar that one chick who does sound kind of RP. Forgive me for knowing about such shows, I was previously subjected to an episode. I'm not really one to watch television, it's full of nonsense.

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=MkTw3_PmKtc

Listen to the inflection on the end of "year" at the start. It's like yeh-eh! Instead of "yihhhh" and when he says "air" it's "aa-yeeeh" instead of "eeehhh". Also listen to how they say their S's, they emphasise them a little more.

Those accents are all but nearly dead, most of the Lords and Ladies I've heard speak Estuary, not RP. I suspect the Queen still speaks RP. But even wealthy people seem to have switched more to Estuary in recent decades.

The MASTER KEY to Understanding Women

4 upvotes · 19 June 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Women use you up emotionally and financially.

We use them up sexually.

The problem with "being friends before partners" is that she gets what she wants first, and, actually has a disincentive "not to spoil the good thing you have." She already has what she wants from you, why would she spoil that by giving you what you want? Sex is transactional. If an average girl is going to give you sex without commitment, why would you commit to her? Same principle, but in reverse.

If you only give her what she wants after sex, it sets the precedent she must trade sex for resources/validation. You become her "friend" first, and she has every incentive not to put out because you already have a role in her life and there's a lot of risk for her in shifting you into a sexual role when you've already proven yourself in a provider role.

Of course if you're genetically at the apex of aesthetics, women will want to bang you no matter what because they want some of that DNA. Easy mode.

Lifting is not enough. Don't BETA PROVIDE for your BOSS.

The Red Pill Handbook

4 upvotes · 11 June 2015 · /r/AlreadyRed

Those are valid ideas and I can see them working out, but I'd be lying if I said I liked the idea of turning the blog into a picture book just to better hold people's attention. Where I see it backfiring is that those who see the blog as a serious authority and have come to know it as such will just see another site trying to be overly interactive and user-friendly. At the end of the day, my blog isn't about creating a user experience, being overly instructional or giving people good feels, it's just pure unfiltered truth shared via somewhat refined and complex thought structures. I think that's what I excel at. Outlining something rather complex but interesting, and fleshing the shit out of it. My longest article is the equivalent of reading a 24-page book, but most articles are around the 8-to-9-page mark (when you consider the average book is a mere 250 words per page.)

I figured my posts were too long for the average attention span a while ago, hence why I began shortening paragraphs, dividing my posts up into sections and sticking a pretty picture at the top. I still have a lot of old content to gloss up. IMO, looking back, I'm surprised that content did as well as it did, factoring in the long paragraphs and my fucked up grammar on top. Pretty sad I got an A in English with such atrocious grammar, but eh, I'm not really bad with language, it's just copious grammar rules that fuck with me. All things considered, the denizens of TRP have been good to me and have been patient with me as I improve as a writer. I'm not aiming for mass appeal as much as I am quality, if that limits my traffic to "a loyal but mid-sized following" fuck it, I'd prefer that to a "huge but casual following." I have to stay true to myself with this. This is more an artistic pursuit than it is a business.

Is The Concept Of Psychopathy Making You Weak?

IMO, the post misses the point, and gives blue pills a chance to step in and say "see, the dark triad is nonsense!" - when it is very real. How one feels about such things doesn't change the fact such things exist.

You have one guy here saying "we needed a post like this" - but why did we? I don't see a gang of 15 year olds pretending to be scarface anywhere. Yes these idiots do exist, but is that the fault of the theory, or the idiot trying to absorb knowledge they don't properly grasp? They don't deserve attention. They are kids/imbeciles. They romanticise everything, love, violence, everything. That's what the naive and the idiotic do. Don't conflate the idiocy of idiots with the validity of a theory.

This is where a crude understanding of such things becomes a fetish, a caricature of itself, it's not reality. I don't want my writings conflated with such silly rudimentary understandings. But I can't stop people being stupid and taking things I talk about out of context.

I think I have stressed (but alas, it has gone ignored or otherwise uncomprehended) that psychopathy is not an adaptive trait like narcissism and Machiavellianism are. It is primarily a genetic/childhood abuse/narcissistic mother thing. So nobody is going to read anything and morph into a psychopath. That is impossible. I can think of drugs that make you temporarily psychopathic, as well as brain damage from a serious crash, but practicably it isn't something that's going to happen to anyone. Too much neuroplasticity is required. It is something to be aware of, but not paranoid or sycophantic of.

As for the utility of psychopathy to the non-psychopath, the parallel is stoicism. Psychopathy is genetic stoicism in the sense you don't care about other's feelings, just your own.

A lot of the things you actually describe aren't psychopathy at all, although hare and such like to lump such traits in with psychopathy. The predatory elements are excessive schadenfreude aka sadism, which is part of the dark TETRAD not triad, hence why I do not write about sadism.

Most people have a crude understanding of psychopathy, academics included, and talk a whole lot of nonsense.

Also, as a concept, nobody other than myself really discusses psychopathy in any depth within TRP.

Remember the reasons why psychopathy is even mentioned in TRP:

- Emulating it in aesthetic (coming off as an unfeeling asshole) is a viable hook-up strategy:

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dark_triad#As_mating_strategy

- It has parallels with stoicism.
- When you know what to look for, you can defend yourself from it. Because like it or not, these people are out there, some of these people could be your boss. Not trying to peddle fear, but would be disingenuous not to assert that many high-functioning psychopaths are in equally high status positions within society.

This. My theory is, in tribal times, approaching another tribe's women could result in war, so the anxiety exists to convince you not to do it to increase your chances of survival. When you feel familiar with a girl, "she is in your tribe" so to speak, and therefore, no anxiety when approaching her with sexual intent.

The chick doesn't think that though. She thinks she's cockblocking and that if another chick sees it, especially if the guy said he wasn't seeing anyone, that he's full of shit, she'll get emotional, and storm out. Whether it acts as a demonstration of either higher or lower value I suppose is down to a roll of the dice and the situation at hand. If both girls know you're seeing someone else, it's completely different from when they don't. There is a betrayal factor. If you're open from the start, I can see how it wouldn't work out. If you're found to be a liar, then you're guilty, and the territorial markings may serve their intended purpose.

I don't think the guy in question is trying to AMOG, unless he's fucking a close friend's girl and his ego has been getting butthurt that his friend is superior to him. The "I fucked John's girl, obviously I'm better than John, otherwise I couldn't nail his girl so easily" line of thinking.

So in that sense, yes. Although that's a dark place to be and I don't believe most men go there. Outside an AMOG situation it's a guy knowing he's high value enough to attract women regardless of her marital status, pure ego boost, "corrupting innocence" and "enjoying the forbidden" fantasy enactment. Obviously the girl who already has a guy is far from innocent, but if she at least feigns it (and they usually almost always do) that is enough to facilitate the ego's hard-on. In fact if they don't feign the whole "I don't usually do this" bullshit they seem easy/crude and to an extent, less attractive. It's all part of the game.

No One Cares About the Plight of Men

It's the collective society who elected this government.

More like the big business (corporate) interests which lobby the government through bribes (donations) into legislating in a way that allows them to control the labour supply, of course this is at the expense of majority native population (if you can't go to the second world, bring the second world to you!)

You're sorely mistaken if you think your vote means much above the local level, getting potholes in roads fixed and such. At the federal level, the citizen has no influence.

In the UK for example, we NEVER WANTED mass immigration, WE WERE NEVER ASKED OR GIVEN THE CHOICE if we wanted to be in the EU. They did it all anyway. No matter which way we voted, they would have done it, because all the choices voters had were pro-EU and weren't going to let the people decide on the matter with a referendum. Government is not under control of it's citizens, in light of that, voting is irrelevant, government does what government wants to do - when you have a choice between two governments who are going to be pro-immigration because either way, business interests who want that cheap labour are going to lobby politicians for it - you can't blame voters for "not voting correctly." Your vote is a lie.

It just depends on the drive of the person.

Agreed. Angry and high testosterone people (so men/women with high T) tend to do well in the world because they have a lot of drive. T is very closely linked to productivity. There's a lot of crap in the food/modern materials that disrupts your hormonal profile (xenoestrogens) which attach to your hormone receptors and act like estrogen. That, combined with the comforts of modern technology promote laziness. The science says men 30 years ago had higher T across the board than they do now. Pad that with effeminate social programming and you have the society of wusses we have today.

In terms of survival of the fittest, we're just sabotaging men before their mind is fully formed (young boys) and then blaming them when they don't become proper men. Seems beyond unfair. Unfair means "the world isn't going to bend to your will, you have to make it what you want it" - I agree with this principle, what we have now is more the opposite of that "the world is trying to make you a pussy but it won't even let you know it's doing that, but if you can't work it out and work against the stacked deck, it's your fault." In scientific terms, men/boys/males are working under increasingly draconian selection pressures, whilst the selection criteria for women has lessened via social engineering.

Once i stopped arguing and trying to change people's mind and spent that time on improving MY situation, i realized this is what you're supposed to do.

Most arguments are pretty pointless because most people aren't open-minded, they are post-modern rather than modern. Once they think they have it all figured out and a specific strategy/coping mechanism "works for them" they don't really give a shit about nuance, details and new information. All that stuff could fuck up "what works for them" aka how they see the world through the coping mechanism that allows them to improve themselves/be successful. Ignorance is the ego's way of protecting a person from making themselves susceptible to anything that could harm their progress. Even though we're TRP, a lot of people need to construct false realities that align with TRP principles to be successful. Too much reality is counter-productive for them, essentially. Mental health is fragile.

Very few people are Patrice O'Neal, in the sense that they are mentally strong enough to succeed with total self-awareness and a decent awareness of the society around them. I've known men who are considered pretty alpha, but if you kept pushing and pushing and actually questioning them (they're so angry/confrontrational that they're used to people just agreeing for a peaceful life) that you would cause them immense cognitive dissonance. In effect, these men draw their strength from a kind of productive self-willed combination of ignorance/arrogance with a high T work ethic, which means they limit their logic via "give a fuck factor" for the sake of their own mental health. Anyhow I digress, all the best.

Manipulative women will award you for being weak.

4 upvotes · 16 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

It's not a simple read by any means and I'll probably break up the paragraphs a bit more when I have some time, but this is an essential read. Although aimed at describing completely psychopathic women, you can extrapolate to average women quite easily by simply turning the notch down a few on some of the identifiers given.

<http://illimitablemen.com/2014/02/17/lucifers-daughter/>

All women are manipulative, some are rationally Machiavellian, eg: "strategic/consciously cunning" whilst others are instinctually Machiavellian eg: "running off their hard-wired programming in order to manipulate." Every stupid woman has instinctual Machiavellianism, but she's not entirely self-aware of how she manipulates men. The rationally Machiavellian women are. AWALT applies to "all women are manipulative" too, it just varies on a scale in both the level of severity and the level of awareness. Non-psychopathic women can do seemingly psychopathic things by disassociating from their actions via the rationalisation hamster.

Even your average unintellectual vapid woman has more pervasive manipulative skill running off her instinctual Machiavellianism than your average man does. Why? Men don't possess the instinctual Machiavellianism that women do. They learn rational Machiavellianism, eg: The 48 Laws of Power or they remain blind/incompetent.

What is rational Machiavellianism? I would define it as the male observation of female nature, mixed with war/military strategy refined to a higher degree by self-aware rational thought which is then applied to interpersonal situations consciously. Although, with conscious competence, such things can become reflexive with deep internalisation. A rational Machiavellian may understand strategy but lack the necessary mechanism to execute it (a hamster, or enough psychopathy/fearlessness,) whilst an instinctual Machiavellian (women) may not understand the strategy enough to verbalise it, but can execute it behaviourally like breathing or eating.

You have What Women Don't

4 upvotes · 9 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

The whole sub is basically LTR game from the female perspective. TRP is more varied, but there's a serious lack of LTR game discussed here (from the male perspective) because most men here are completely turned-off to the idea of LTRs with women. Women want to be in relationships with us more than we want to be in relationships with them. They benefit more from a relationship than we do, so this is rational self-interest on their part. For man, likewise, avoiding long-term relationships with women is in his rational self-interest (at least until he decides to put up with women and their bullshit so he can raise sons.)

Most women give too little and ask for too much, and thus, the inequitable exchange of services biased towards feminine preference puts RP-aware men off. That's why a lot of women don't want men to find RP and wake up, it'll leave them with less beta bux to trap and cheat on with Chad Thundercock whilst beta boys at work making the bacon.

It may have been Dante Nero or Patrice O'Neal who said "When you're in a relationship, a girl is fucking you. She is fucking your passion, she is fucking your food, she is fucking your money, and she's fucking your time - being in a relationship is like getting fucked"

In light of that when a girl stops putting out, the relationship is over then and there unless the dread gives her the zap to the brain she needs to realise jumping on your cock pronto is in her best interest. That's the thing about women and sex. Men fuck for the sake of fucking. Women occasionally fuck for the sake of it, but they predominantly fuck to fulfil ulterior motives. Women have to get something out of their vagina by making it work for their desires: money, protection, emotional validation, etc. Men fuck as a biological need. Men want to fuck for the sake of fucking. Women exploit that. Women want extra shit "if they're going to sleep with you."

Silent contracts come attached to vagina, by fucking you she feels like you owe her and that she exercises influence over you. Women want to keep the price of pussy high, they then want to attach a bunch of implicit contracts to the act of fucking "now you have to do...." it's their way of exercising power over men. Through the pussy. Gotta be shrewd with these hoes because they're calculating and they will always put themselves before you. You have to do the same if you don't want to get used up and tossed aside.

Continue improving yourself but let go of the idea that the hot girls who passed you up are going to suffer.

If I ever get so rich people want to prey on me, I'm going to dress in basic non-branded clothing and have a very modest car. You can do without that kind of bullshit. Showing interest in people's money is so fucking transparent. If you notice you rarely ever hear a woman giving you "her word" or use the phrase "I am a woman of my word". The idea of giving you her word or that she could stand behind something she did is repugnant to most women.

Women detest responsibility but try to lock down men with it. Among my friends we have a saying "blame the nearest man!" - it's our way of making fun of what women do when they fuck up. They just blame the nearest man and get indignant/stubborn. That's pretty much their go-to strategy. They hate admitting to fault.

The reason why it is important to notice this is that this form of thinking and behaviour is usually very precarious

If how she feels tomorrow doesn't align with what she thought/felt when she said what she said, she's not sticking to her word, she's obeying the new feelings and will bullshit/rationalise her fickleness. Commitment and responsibility get in the way of women's emotional thinking/sense of self, so they avoid it at all costs and try to fix it squarely on men. It's pretty mentally abusive to be honest, but I believe it's an intrinsic part of female nature, like breathing for you or I. Some women are far more neurotic with this than others, but they all do it. It's a spectrum of how far they'll go rather than a question of whether they'll go there or not. They all go there.

she's not thinking about what is reasonable, she's thinking, "He covered me once, he'll do it again."

In a way, it is reasonable. This reminds me of judicial precedent in law. Once precedent is set, it is used to make decisions in other cases of a similar nature where the material facts are identical or almost identical to the case preceding the one being ruled on. Lawyers try to interpret a significant difference in the facts to make wiggle room as a defence, eg: "that precedent doesn't apply here it was different because of X and Y" and the judge can be swayed by that, or choose to ignore it.

In terms of friendship or dating, when you set a precedent of being a pushover, people will expect a pushover. If you nut up all of a sudden, they're not going to take it well. If they associate with you on the basis you're easy to control, and all of a sudden you don't fit to their expectations - shit is going to fall apart. Set the correct precedent from the beginning.

How many of you tried numerous relationships and found they're just not for you?

They view you like a failure.

I suppose because reproductively speaking, you are. I believe this peer pressure is even higher for women. Notice how women are constantly obsessed with being in a relationship? More so than the typical man tends to be? Among various evolutionary-biological factors, I believe reputation/social proof to be one of their most conscious reasons for this aggressive commitment and communion seeking. She wants a relationship to benefit her and improve her image, not to help you. I think love, as in, a woman truly, deeply caring for you to the extent she is willing to sacrifice for you is all too rare nowadays. As we all know most emphatically, it is of course incredibly conditional when realised too. Men tend to fall in love more easily as a matter of instinct, their love is sacrificial, and somewhat sociopathic as it is, hypergamy demands constant sacrifice "to demonstrate your love." (sidebar: Briffault's Law)

The modern women often enough lacks even the basic desire or skills necessary to buy into man's delusions of romance and so fails to hold up her end of the fantasy by appearing to be what he craves. You see modern women have been taught that to please or appease men is an act of oppression, and so, to manipulate men with any feminine wile beyond her body (which she of course mutually derives pleasure from) is folly, even blasphemy to feminist ideals. You see, even the modern women who do not identify as feminist, are, for cultural and psychological purposes: feminist. Perhaps not radical feminists, perhaps not even man-hating, but if they believe they are equal to men, they are feminist. And so because women out of ego and indoctrination believe themselves to be equal, when in truth, there is nothing to suggest that they come even remotely close, women reveal themselves to us for who they really are. Egocentric with an inferiority complex is a good start.

By not even bothering to play to male sensibilities anymore, by not bothering to play on our fantasies, by not bothering to try to be the girl of our dreams, out of the foolishness of believing that her body alone is enough to command our love and undying loyalty, we have come to understand the nature of women better than any of our forefathers could ever hope. Feminism did not change women, rather, it revealed them for who they truly are: what it is to be female without man-made ideologies actively and socially suppressing the worst parts of their nature. These modern women, they are uncivilized. Women fear shame, and in a society without shame, they are most rabid, almost animal-like for the most part. Women are closer to nature than we as men could ever hope to be, their emotions are more volatile, and their self-control, less pronounced.

You see traditional women, RPWs and the such: they are not so much "different from the average woman" in nature, but more, it is a case of differing strategy. Their programming is the same. Just rather than fight you to get what they want, they will complement you to do it. It is a matter of conquering you via flattery and fantasy rather than through conflict and overt oppression. Men want to be woo'd by a woman, to give into fantasy, to find respite in women - but women no longer bother to fabricate this pretence. As they become more manlike, so does their method of co-option. Does she draw her power from emulating the masculine as militant feminists do, or from playing on your fantasies of women, becoming everything you desire in order to exercise undue influence over you?

When women behave so transparently vile, even the plugged in man begins to wonder, and that's what drives so many to seek out communities such as TRP to begin with. Where once women were merely Machiavellian, now they are also incredibly narcissistic. It is that narcissism which undoes the illusion of love that men are predisposed to believe in. You can't play on man's fantasies when you're a narcissistic woman. You lack the airs and graces. Your ugliness is too obvious. You are not loveable.

They show good genetics, people want to breed with people who have good genetics. Attractive people make your brain's reward centre activate. There's something called "The Halo Effect" google it. Of course make-up makes women look like they have better genetics than they really do and immeasurably pumps up female SMV. Women know this and that's why some of them won't even leave the house without it. A girl who is a 5 but turns into an 8 with make-up WILL NOT leave the house without painting herself first. She knows the world would be a lot harsher on her if she went out looking like a 5 rather than an 8.

We judge people a lot on the quality of their skin, make-up makes women seem healthy/supple who actually aren't. This is also why obesity is ugly - it indicates to others you have bad genetics. Attractive people have an easier life, good genes are king. It's an evolutionary survival of the fittest type deal. Only way to override it is to horde resources/demonstrate extreme accomplishment. That doesn't make it immediately obvious your genes are good, but it is thought if you can accomplish something magnificent, despite bad looks you must have genes that make you good at earning money, or maths, or whatever it is that brought you your success. That assumes you're a man. Women are more forgiving of less than spectacular looks. Women can't really make up for being ugly. Men are obsessed with beauty/fertility/youth in women.

People are suckers for flattery, but especially flattery that recognizes something they've actually done.

Appreciation and recognition are rare - so they stand out, they are something of an unintended spectacle in and of themselves. Everybody feels like anything good they do should be recognised, but because people are selfish and self-absorbed rarely do things get praised. Likewise if you are in an environment of exceptional people doing exceptional things, exceptionalism becomes the new norm and is thus considered a standard rather than something worthy of praise. This leads to the great masses feeling under-appreciated, if not even exploited.

Secondly: when you validate someone you enter their narcissistic supply, in that moment there is a mental connection between the two of you. If you become the sole/dominant force in someone's narcissistic supply they actually develop dependency on your opinion. You know that cliché of the person who always agrees with another, the sycophant? Why do you think the person they always agree with keeps them around? For purposes of validation and ego maintenance. If they wanted truth and honesty, they would not keep such a person around, as effectively the sycophant is a professional boot licker concerned only with making the person they constantly agree with feel good.

Great comment. I do not have the patience for PUAs who are close-mindedly ego invested in perpetuating the cock carousel/hook-up culture. They are stubborn. If they are open-minded, that's fine. But so many are close-minded and balls deep in the "pussy over everything" mentality that I just cannot be fucked with them. My time is precious. I do not owe anybody my knowledge or mental faculty. When people step to me and start telling me how the playboy lifestyle is superior to the actualisation of one's masculinity, I simply don't give a fuck. If someone isn't ego-invested in the PUA lifestyle, I have time for them. If they are and want to argue with me about it? I don't care.

At the end of the day I am completely happy/fulfilled/at peace with my views. I believe in them with utter conviction, of both heart and of mind. I don't feel the insecure need to shove it down anybody's throat. You can take it or leave it. I simply state my view then leave. If people disagree, that's fine. It's the PUAs that get their knickers in a twist and want to force their "you do it for the pussy, not for yourself" mentality onto others (including me.) I'm not forcing them to quit what I perceive to be an inferior lifestyle choice. I may mock it passingly, I may call PUAs "the basic bitches of men" but I don't go around confronting them and causing drama, I have better shit to do.

Like I said, PUAs have the problem, not me. I'm not inclined to help them fix their problems if they're close-minded and there's no financial incentive for me. If they can drop $000's on retarded boot camps, they can pay me a fraction of that for my time. Otherwise I'm under no incentive to school these people, engage with them, debate them or give them any sort of response or guidance they seek. If they are open-minded? My time is free (if I can spare it, and it's getting sparser.) Talking with the open-minded requires about 1/10th the patience that talking with the close-mindedly stubborn does. I don't owe stubborn strangers who think differently to me, have a problem with my views and offer me no financial incentive for my patience. Assuming I do is a gross misestimation of the value of my time which will be met by resounding silence.

On a more positive note: I'm glad you value my material (as is implied by your post) thanks for the support, it means a lot.

European Red Pillers - how do you adapt the RP mentality to fit EU women?

4 upvotes · 3 December 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

OK when you say Europe exclude the UK because UK game is basically the same as the US, same cultures, both English speaking, England got americanised to fuck through media etc. Both predominantly Christian/Atheist mix etc.

You want to practice game huh? But you don't want to be a PUA? So you want instructions, but you don't want instructions, but you want instructions that work for specifically German women... and you're asking in an american dominated internet forum? Right, okay. I'm confused as fuck. Anyways, maybe these resources will help you:

<http://beigephillip.com/> (good relationships podcast, very RP)

A compilation of "general principles" from the show above: <http://illimitablemen.com/beigephillipprinciples/>

You should also listen to Patrice O'Neal on youtube, that guy was the messiah of developing fucking inner-game. Which seems like really, among the mixed messages you're sending, is what you really want. The inner-game/ability to get women "whilst adhering to the German rules."

Sometimes you have to break rules and push a woman's boundaries, they find a man who knows what he wants and implies a bit of danger very attractive. Men who are overly conscious of how they are perceived by others are somewhat feminine, and don't inspire lust with such a disposition.

One of the insidious dangers of going into Monk Mode is that you can end up using it as an excuse to delay confronting your insecurities and approach anxiety around socializing, particularly with women

I'm gonna have to do a blog post on that, it's been said a few times now. I guess the socially reclusive/fearful/betas will find any excuse not to broaden their horizon. As you correctly point out, the entire point of monk mode IS TO BROADEN YOUR HORIZONS, TO BECOME MORE POWERFUL, THAT'S WHAT THE INTROSPECTION PHASE IS ALL ABOUT.

You should be reclusive only when necessary, ie: to recharge/collect your thoughts/concentrate on a project.

It's too easy for men to hamster being a loner into this shit, social skills are vital for business success. You cannot avoid being social if you are nothing and want to become something.

On point 4:

Get in a fistfight, even if you are going to lose.

To be honest this whole shit show of disagreement about whether you should fight or not in the comments, at a glance just appears to be guys getting indignant over a piece of advice they considers to be "toxic."

This is how I took it: obviously don't go around getting into fights your whole life, but do not spend your whole life avoiding them either. You need to fight, you need to learn to fight, you have to know how to defend yourself and watching videos online won't do that for you. You actually have to get on a mat with people who can break your neck and practice that shit - the technique - the speed - the execution - instead of being some conflict averse pussy. You ever work in a shop with a bunch of bitches and no security guard?

Guess who everyone will look to if someone comes in AND GETS VIOLENT or TRIES TO STEAL SOME SHIT? They won't step in. THEY'LL CALL YOUR NAME, AS A MAN. If you're like "OH LET'S WAIT FOR THE POLICE" what fat lot of good are you? I honestly hate pacifists, they indirectly enable even more violence. Better to be righteously violent, to impose justice and defend civil liberty than be some "all violence is evil!" kinda faggot. To be honest I think this veneer of "I have higher morals than you, that's why I won't fight" is just bullshit used to hide the fact that people with this mentality are conflict averse pussies. They lack courage. There is no courage or gumption behind failing to control a situation, making a phone call and hoping some other man will come and fix your problems for you.

Knowing how to fight helps you to know yourself, when you have confidence in your ability to defend yourself and your entourage, you don't have to live life fearing that some goon may attack you and you will be powerless to do fuck all about it except bend over and take it.

Then when someone attacks you or your friends, rather than running like a bitch or hoping the police dont take 20 minutes to get there, you can take the fucker out.

This whole point is pertaining to "street smarts" and IMO you and the other commenters getting butthurt are totally missing the point of what old timer OP was trying to convey. Too much "VIOLENCE IS EVIL NOOOOOOOOOOOO THINK OF THE CHILDREN!!!" heard in school by you guys, I think.

Shades of grey motherfucker, shades of grey.

Society's views on violence is basically "masculinity is violent and evil, but when we need violence to protect us - it's great!" I call it "the masculinity in a box principle." "Violence is evil!!!!!" when it doesn't benefit society, but as soon as you can protect a little girl, or a woman, or a little old lady? All of sudden the self-righteously pompous hamstering ass of a society we have decides that such violence is acceptable. I mean shit if you wanna go all the way with the non-violence principle why bother even having police or a military who use weapons? They should just go around trying to "reason" with everybody right? No. That's not how human nature works. You all have to realise that. Realise when violence is necessary and use it instrumentally. If you are forced to fight you always go down swinging, don't make it easy on him.

Sometimes just a willingness to fight can prevent a fight. The west is so full of men afraid to give into their instincts and defend their property/friends that often a guy looking to just steal some shit will think you're not worth the hassle if you show a willingness to defend yourself and will instead move on to a more vulnerable group to threaten. At which point you can just call the police and file a report, protect you and yours, using violence in defence doesn't mean you need to become superman and prevent crime before it happens.

Ease is for pussies. Ease is for people who don't deserve greatness because they cannot be bothered to work for it. Notice how when companies try to sell you shit it's "ease this" and "ease that." People are used to being pandered to and having everything as simple and effortless as possible. If you can't handle coming up on the final rep of your final squat on your final set, you can't lift and you won't lift because "it's too hard." That mentality spreads to everything. Modern men are a bunch of pussies, it makes me sick. We cut women a bit of slack for moaning because they are weaker, they are more hormonal. But a guy? Ugh. Moaning isn't masculine. Feminism has long been a cultural ideology trying to present itself as a counter-cultural fringe movement, when in reality it is anti-feminism which is counter-cultural now by merit of feminism being societally accepted, institutionalised, endorsed, codified as a way of life and etc. When an ideology becomes the culture, it is no longer counter-culture. Summoned here by username mention. Working on a few things now, actually. Got A LOT of stuff in the works, the metric fuck ton of drafts consisting of methodology, example, archetypes and etc I have on the topic borders on passionate obsession.

To me, Machiavellianism is an art form and vocation that is to be infinitely refined, understood, and re-understood in it's ever growing sophistry and complexity. Likewise it is an art form of incredible power that is completely subject to one's own personal morality system and goes through a serious of stages in terms of competency and internalisation. If anything could help one attain power, it would be machiavellianism, the vocation, study and practice of manipulation for means of self-empowerment.

To be manipulative in nature is not necessarily to be competently manipulative. One's manipulative nature is bottlenecked by social intelligence and creativity. When it comes to fresh content, I am something of a perfectionist, so updates aren't as frequent as perhaps one would desire. Advise OP follows my blog (<http://illimitablemen.com> but specifically for him <http://illimitablemen.com/power/>) if machiavellianism is his main passion and interest. It's not the sole topic I write about, but it's a definite speciality and penchant. I also touch upon the personality and limitation of psychopathy in this semi-buried reddit post (which I will make into a future blog post,) among other things. If you truly understood how you framed your argument

Well it's not actually an argument it's a supposition based on hearsay. If you'd stopped for a second to check whether you should be offended or not, you would find there is no opinion, argument, or a point. Just a supposition. For reference, note my liberal use of the word 'apparently.'

you would also then understand how ridiculous you sound to people that actually know many of the intricacies of Islam.

That isn't as many people as you think it is so the pretentious grandiosity of that statement doesn't carry the weight you think it does. "Knowing about Islam" is not common knowledge. It is specialist knowledge taught to kids of a certain non-western heritage who rote learn the shit from a young age.

As for your medicine textbook example, that makes sense.

When to kill someone and when to live peacefully with a person you should kill are two entirely different things however. Unless it's in self-defence you don't have much room to justify the supposed hypocrisy. I don't know sweet fuck about the Quran, so assuming you're a butthurt muslim jumping to defend your faith, you can run rings around me, even make shit up if you like, and I won't have anyway of knowing any better. I must say though (as a complete aside) for a professor she was very sexy and had a very friendly flirty way of talking to people (even other women). Did you think so too,

I didn't even know she was a professor until I googled her. I didn't watch it from the very start so I didn't see the introduction for her. I came in about 10 minutes after it started and assumed she was just a TV presenter. I certainly wouldn't have thought she was a professor based on her conduct. She seemed incredibly unprofessional, abrupt/childlike (esp. for a 41 year old) and as you say "friendly/flirty." She carried herself more like a student than a professor.

She on the fly (seemingly) asked if he could tell the brain sex from the xray, and he did, then she rubbished it by claiming it was obviously a 50:50 chance, which completely undermines the purpose of her asking in the first place.

I.e had he got it wrong im sure she would not have claimed the same.

Yeah you make a great point there. It's just a woman being a woman, a shit test. She was using spin there. She had already decided there was no difference so she gave him a hoop to jump through expecting him to get it wrong. When he got it right, it was an affront to her ego, so she just said "well it's 50:50 anyway" naturally if he had got it wrong, she wouldn't have held her little test to the same standard of irrelevance and inconclusiveness instead probably stating "well that just proves you can't tell the difference between male and female brains at a glance!"

Fucking women and their shit. Even the supposed smart professor types. Lol. They're all the same. Even smart women have an overactive hamster that can't stop shit testing men as well as an amazingly solipsistic capacity to deny certain realities whilst believing certain absurdities. It's truly remarkable. I hope science one day fully uncovers the basis of what we refer to rather colloquially as "the hamster"

Men are more isolated, have less social support, grow up without their dads, have less role models and are less capable as a group of securing sexual intimacy. They also have less government programs to aid them. It's easier for men to go downhill because in the absence of a pussy you have nothing that an entire gender wants. With working class girls vs working class boys for example, women can use their pussy for social mobility. Working class boys have to graft hard. Rarely can a guy marry up. Sure a few genetic jackpot winners (physically speaking) with some charm can do it, but assortative mating largely benefits women. Rich women want equal or richer men, but the opposite isn't true. Men are disposable success objects to girl-world. Many men suffer, unnoticed and uncared for. It's disgusting.

4 upvotes · 11 September 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

Once a nation/civilization reaches a superpower status. They curtail rights with what ever rhetoric works. The western excuse is protecting its citizens from themselves, equality, feminism etc.

Which leads to the average man not getting any pussy, a return to harems, decrease of productivity and the eventual loss of superpower status. The only thing keeping America on top is its military and it knows it. England was where America is now in 1900, biggest navy in the world, best equipped armed forces and etc. Two world wars destroyed all of that. USA has a big military because it spends like mad, avoids armed conflict with developed powers and fights proxy wars, or attacks inferior military powers which allow it to retain the bulk of its hardware.

When you talk about the increase of production you're actually agreeing with my premise that betas male built civilization, when they are allowed to thrive society thrives, when they are not, and rights/freedoms are curtailed, the society diminishes. We are in a diminishment phase, this is bad for Andy average and Billy beta, only a minority benefit, which means civilization suffers as a collective. What's good for the elite is not necessarily what's good for the civilization, the elites can be viewed like colonialism, do they contribute more they take from the societies they occupy? Assuming your assertions are all correct, there is a boom-bust cycle not just for the economy, but civilization as a whole in terms of development. And unlike the economy, they occur over much longer periods of time than a few years, but rather, a number of decades.

Hamstering is cognitive dissonance, and it is human, not female.

The hamster is rationalisation used to avoid cognitive dissonance, not cognitive dissonance in and of itself. Yes bother sexes are capable of it, I've seen men do it, but it's far more common in women than it is men. It's a modus operandi for the typical woman, for men, it happens on occasion, it's not a way of life that actively and commonly affects important decision making in men like it is in women. Not acknowledging (or being aware of) these significant and vast nuances is disingenuous/misguided.

You do not need to believe in god or be devout/obsessive to be religious. You can be religious because the religion benefits your life and helps you live your life better. A lifestyle choice more than blind faith. I don't think any rational man absent of indoctrination can ever completely believe, but that doesn't have to stop him being religious or at least aligning with religion for his own personal benefit.

I have no problem with analysing it and using certain parts of it in game, but to advocate for people to take up dark triad as a whole is silly.

Really studying the DT is a template for acquiring its positive qualities you want to possess more than it is a stereotype to look up to or look to achieve in its entirety (which is close to impossible without life changing events/drugs anyway.)

So for example from psychopathy you would derive fearlessness. You can achieve that through meditation, you can switch on and off emotionless. You can also achieve a reduced fear response through desensitisation, doesn't make you "a psychopath" but gives you some psychopathic ability that's very useful in business, chatting women up, closing deals, etc. You're not really a psychopath but you're tapping into a power or state of being that can be characterised as psychopathic in its nature.

From narcissism, irrational self-confidence. This is conditioned and is much harder to turn on and off in my opinion. You're either confident, or you're not, it's not as fluid as machiavellianism or fearlessness learnt through meditation. I also believe it's harder to separate that one element from all the negative aspects associated with narcissism, however I do believe IT IS possible via the cultivation of positive feedback cycles in a purely goal-driven/meritocratic environment.

From machiavellianism, psychological strategy. It's actually easier to understand machiavellianism than to practice it. Everyone is machiavellian to some degree but to use it to its fullest extent you must possess psychopathy or a facsimile of it.

IMO, woman's ability to disassociate far better than man's as is their ability to rationalise immoral behaviour (their very nature, the "hamster") works as a great substitute for psychopathy. About the disassociation, I actually read this in a study (I think on stockholm syndrome?) I wish I remembered where I read it so I could link you to it - it basically said woman's ability to disassociate (hamster) has an evolutionary basis as a rape coping mechanism which in turn forms the foundations for stockholm syndrome. It operates in the same way as psychopathy without actually being devoid of emotion, but by simply rejecting reality and accepting falsehood to a level of delusion (more commonly associated with narcissism) which can rationalise anti social behaviour, such as getting pregnant on purpose without your consent, making false rape accusations, pretending to have been abused for sympathy and etc. With women their psychopathic-seeming bullshit is normally sexual in its theme or a story of "victimisation", in reality they are nothing but ploys for sympathy (just like "crocodile tears".) because for women weakness translates to sympathy which translates to power. Unlike with men, where it translates to ostracisation. If you consider the "hamster" as an alternative form of psychopathy, you could categorise the entirety of the female population as having quasi-psychopathic tendencies. Effectively, the "hamsterisation" process or "rationalising away reality to commit immoral acts mechanism" that women have is actively rewarded by society, thus reinforcing quasi-psychopathic tendencies in a compliant nature-nurture cycle. There's a reason that in times before political correctness the medical profession had connotated the word "hysterical" with women, they have a predilection for such irrational delusion based theatrics and pre-feminism it wasn't a taboo to acknowledge that.

It wasn't a personal attack

No worries it wasn't taken as one.

Dark triad theory isn't about mentally unhinging yourself, it's about cherry picking the useful qualities that these personalities possess and learning to emulate them to enrich your life.

I don't know how many times I've said "it's not about becoming a psychopath" but that message seems to be lost on a lot of people who view it through a dumbed down filter of "it's about being a try hard psycho wannabe."

Just because these qualities come from archetypes with negative stereotypes, it doesn't make them useless, they're invaluable qualities. You wouldn't call someone in a state of zen "evil", but you would call a psychopath "evil" despite them both being capable of the same unemotional state of mind, one because he has faulty neurology/low brain activity where emotions regulate behaviour, the other because he practices a certain meditation to achieve exactly the same thing. Only when a zen practitioner does it, it's marketed as "peace", when a psychopath possesses it, it's marketed as "coldness." But really, what's the difference? Both are devoid of anxiety or attachment.

The main difference between them is the zen meditator has the capacity to feel by choice, the psychopath doesn't.

It's all about connotation and perspective. Ignorance leads to the belief that DT theory is something it's not. Naturals don't come on the red pill to learn about it, if they stumble upon it it'll be to see if "what the normal people are saying" can be used as a kind of self-assessment and how they can patch up flaws or tells in their personality. Whilst all the "scared normal people" are saying "don't become like this!" It's quite funny.

There are always gonna be people on here, and people who watch me but never contribute (lurkers, stalkers etc) who will have an irrational fear about the DT and my insights into it. I say fuck their fear-based religiosity. DT theory really separates the open-minded critical thinkers from the fear-mongering devoutly religious types in my experience. You guessed it, lots of women fall in the latter category, whilst ironically finding the whole thing sexually attractive. The plurality, duality and counter-intuitivity of the conscious/sub-conscious emotional/rational female nature knows no end. The totality of female nature is hypocritical and inconsistent.

Is TRP biased against money and status?

4 upvotes · 24 August 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

The whole point of self improvement is to see gains.

You read a book, you learn things, you apply them - you see gains.

You read a book, you learn something, you have a profound insight or theory - you perceive gains in your introspective understanding. "I used to be ignorant, now I'm slightly less ignorant."

You pick up some weights, clean up your diet to the extent personally possible for you (food you can afford) - you see gains.

You do 10 pressups in your break at work and get elevated mood/energy and feel more productive - you see gains.

You work your ass off at your job (merit) and build enough social capital (charming people) to deserve a promotion but there's no spot open or some old cunt is holding onto their position they've had for decades - no gains until they're gone. You're well placed to succeed them, but it's like waiting for inheritance, the waiting game is not proactive and it takes a ridiculously long time to pay out. The old hate the young because they fear being deposed, the young hate the old because they monopolize the resources and ridicule the young.

See like you said getting money and status is slow and if people aren't seeing gains they're inclined to give up. Do all the short term stuff to keep your spirit motivated and have money/business/projects on a scale which will elevate your wealth and status as long term endeavours. A website can take years to get going. The same with a radio station. The same with an ebay business or any kind of venture you're going into without the bank of a one percent daddy to finance. Wealth acquisition is ridiculously slow if you're not a drug dealer and that's not a viable option for most people because they lack the DT traits/connections to pull it off. (IMO: drug dealing class As/schedule 1s is worth the jail time, you'll get out rich with enough to employ yourself)

Money and status acquisition without nepotism is a form of deferred gratification that defies the normal amount of time it takes to be rewarded even in comparison to other forms of deferred gratification. I mean shit you can lose 200lbs quicker than you can see significant rises in your level of income/quality of life, this is especially true for people who are self-made/outside the degree>corporate job social system in place that's becoming more and more decrepit in the face of globalisation and automation.

Basically getting rich is a long term goal, you need things to keep you going between point A and B, to make the journey endurable and shit, even enjoyable. People lose steam without reward.

Insight: the few self-made celebs I can think of either did a lot of drugs (Russell Brand) or sold them (Curtis Jackson/50 Cent as well as other rappers) AFAIK, Will Smith defies that trend of using drugs to get ahead but has inhuman motivation/power of will (no pun intended.) If you wanna keep it legal look into nootropics. I haven't tried them but some in the manosphere swear by them. Middle of the line legality - some red pillers swear by cycling different types of steroid to get shit done and minimize adverse effects. You can ask /u/GayLubeOil about muscle juice (and its psychoactive effects,) its within his realm of expertise.

NHS to fund sperm bank for lesbians: New generation of fatherless families

4 upvotes · 3 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

People call Islam violent, well who said the transition between matriarchy to patriarchy has ever been a peaceful one?

- Western Europe is predominantly post-theocratic, most of the religion kept alive in these nations is from second world (eastern europe) and third world immigrants and the ww2 generation, Muslims as a community are comparably devoutly theocratic. Muslims are suspicious of "non-believers" (athiests) and less trusting but slightly more tolerant of "people of the book who aren't muslim, eg: jews and christians".
- Muslims believe in a lot of the same things in regards to family and social hierarchy that we do but with a lot of religious crap attached to it, we disagree with all the "Muslims are the chosen people, everyone else is worth jack shit" egotistical mantra which many of the quranic verses mention.
- Western European citizens never welcomed third world immigrants and their accompanying ideological religious system into their borders, their governments betrayed them via social engineering efforts that run contrary to the "democratic ideals" held by such citizens, I guarantee you now if you give every western European nation the choice to democratically vote on whether they want Muslim mass immigration to continue or end, to build more mosques or to impose a hard limit, and whether they want to essentially encourage the spread of Islam within their countries or halt in its tracks, whilst the indigeneous are still the majority, they will almost unilaterally vote NO MORE ISLAM. Yet despite what the people want, more mosques are being built, people are bringing their families over and more refugees are coming in from places like Syria and Iraq. Then you have illegals from places like Turkey, Morocco, Pakistan.
- Red pillers believe in critical thinking as the ultimate way to solve problems, muslims believe in theocratic appeals to the quran to sanction beliefs.

Islamic ideals are not compatible with western civilization, they are opposed politically. What you have to remember about Islam is it's not just a religion but it's also a political and legal system, Muslims raised in the west take on western ideals if they're allowed exposure outside the faith school/mosque incubated community, but those who aren't are very anti-western in their political beliefs which are justified by appeals to divinity.

Wanting better for yourself and hypergamy are not the same thing, you are conflating the two ideas. Hypergamy really boiled down to its simplest definition is women wanting a partner who is superior to them in almost every way and feeling entitled to that. Wanting more pay for your work is not hypergamy, it is ambition with some entitlement, there's a distinction to be made. Hypergamy in the sense of the dictionary definition is "marrying up."

Keeping to reality and ignoring hypotheticals, average men infinitely require less to be satisfied than average women out of a partner and that is all that is relevant to understanding the sexual landscape. You can say "well if you reversed the positions you would find the same in men" but what's the point in stating that? The positions are not reversed are they? If we deal in hypotheticals and not things we know to be true we end up discussing all kinds of crazy unsubstantiable shit and we move the focus away from reality into areas that are completely irrelevant because they will not be experienced on a day-to-day basis. Unless you were for instance (and I'm not saying you are) trying to point score in some sort of men vs. women type deal, mentioning the hypotheticals seems asinine and moot, we use hypotheticals to explain reality, not to explain hypothetical sexual marketplaces which simply don't exist. Shit if there is a marketplace where men are hypergamous gatekeepers to both sex and commitment and women have to prove themselves I'd love to observe that it'd be mind-blowing, as it would run contrary to everything we know here in the west and on TRP.

Women & The Death of Femininity

4 upvotes · 20 July 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

I guess what you mean is that as a clean slate, a woman is naturally feminine, but through various aspects of being exposed to society (female and male role models, messages in books, media, online etc) she is taught that she needs to be masculine and so becomes less feminine.

Correct, they have a feminine disposition, they are not necessarily great women but they are feminine with all the shortcomings that come with being feminine but uncultivated.

I don't think femininity is just the absence of masculinity - you're implying that there's nothing there.

Not my intention and I do state some of the qualities of femininity within the main piece, femininity has its own identity that is independent of masculinity, which means there must be at least an absence of masculinity in order to allow femininity to flourish. A woman cannot become more feminine if she is becoming more masculine, you can only have one or the other, housing both leads to cognitive dissonance and identity confusion as their traits by nature are in conflict with one another. For example, a woman cannot be meaningfully soft and warm (as in with depth, and not just for the sake of appearance) as well as competitive and ball-busting without compartmentalising different personalities into her being.

I think naturally the process of self-actualisation leads to a proper respect and valuing of your own sexual energy (femininity for men, masculinity for women). This is as opposed to 'self-development' which may lead people down different paths depending on which direction they take.

Not sure what this means, you seem to be advocating men and women get in touch with their sexual opposites here.

Solipism: The neverending gift of Women

4 upvotes · 7 July 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

It's an inversion of hypergamy, retail workers are low status and therefore she has contempt for them because she thinks she's better than them. I see this in dark triads but it seems to be a natural trait in women, they are submissive and supplicant to people who are higher status than they (women are natural schmoozers), but those perceivably lower status than they are an open season for verbal abuse, gaslighting and all kinds of psychological buttfuckery. I know a highly narcissistic guy who goes around shops saying "I'm glad I don't have to do menial labour for minimum wage, that shit's for losers" and then he eyeballs the staff smirking gleefully, it's humorous and yet, equally quite sad. You can see the crushed look in their faces as they begin to consciously realise within that moment that they are corporate wage slaves powerless to enact any justice on this smug fuck taunting them.

Dealing with men is easier than dealing with women, less drama. Bitches are crazy because they have a constant need to be validated, have massive moodswings and are emotional extremists (eg: happy = super happy, sad = super sad) they're all over the fucking place. Is what it is, never going to change. This whole "if you can't deal with me at my worst you don't deserve me at my best" crap is basically an admission of "I realise I'm an irrational, emotionally over the top nuisance that will psychologically drain the fuck out of you, but you're not worthy of me if you won't put up with that." People like redpillers are catching on that vagina just isn't that valuable, fucking a woman X number of times per week is not worth the emotional drain that an LTR consists of.

One of the reasons guys wanna fuck more than they wanna date/get held down is because the women ARE NOT LIKEABLE, they are FUCKABLE but they just ARE NOT LIKEABLE. Typically it's because she's hot enough to fuck, but she's not cool enough to spend considerable amounts of time with, shit, a lot of the time they are just PLAIN ANNOYING. If a woman has an enjoyable personality AND IS HOT, shit that's a diamond right there, even RP men will fight over LTRing that kind of chick up, that's how rare they are. Most women are just vapid/boring/shallow/irritating, why the fuck would you want to commit to someone that just annoys you? Women need to start investing more in their personalities like the RPWs, you know, make yourself likeable so a guy doesn't want to flee your presence every time you enter the vicinity.

This is the problem with the entitlement complex, so many women embody a "holier than thou" frame when dealing with men that they think that their body/vagina is the prize and that in and of itself is ENOUGH for them to have any guy they want, and for a fuck, yeah sure, that is enough, when he's fucking you you'll moan in probably the only way a guy can pleasurably appreciate, but for an LTR? Not by a longshot. This is it ladies, you need to make yourself likeable. All this bullshit you're fine just how you are is exactly that, bullshit. Feel good shit for your delicate little egos that rather feed off validation than introspect. If you can never get a guy to stick around but guys are willing to fuck you, you probably have a shit/boring/annoying personality.

Women think they can scoot by on looks, and sure they can for job promotions/sex/LTRs with betas, but if you want yourself a top tier guy in a committed relationship, which is basically the crux of what nearly every bitch out there is looking for, you're going to have to cultivate some personality and ease up on the irritable whiny behaviour that seems so fucking typical and endemic of womankind. A woman who brings positive energy and complains even only half as much as the average woman gets noticed, and IN A GOOD WAY. Nobody wants to be around a fucking energy drain, shit, someone give these bitches a copy of "how to make friends and influence people." you'd think for the "socially intelligent gender" they'd have a clue that whining your ass off won't get you an LTR with a high quality man.

On volunteering and it's benefits.

4 upvotes · 21 June 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Sounds like a great idea, read about it for the UK and there are some requirements that make this less than suitable volunteering, not because it isn't a great thing to do but because of the requirements they demand:

- Must live or work within 4 minutes of the fire station, if paged whilst at work you must leave IMMEDIATELY (even if you can live/work/close enough to them, like your employer is going to be happy you're going to randomly fuckoff to put out fires!)
- Must have a certain standard of eyesight uncorrected (without spectacles/contact lenses) so basically anyone who's ever read way too much shit in their life and needs to see an optician is out of the question. I'd assume most redditors or anyone who uses the internet a lot, great genetics aside, need some form of vision correction after all that screen time.

Like I said, great idea, but the requirements, combined with fitness, are going to be unrealistic for many.

That said if the fire fighters where you live don't have all these requirements for volunteering, then great, give it a go.

Is there anything more privileged and entitled than a beautiful woman?

4 upvotes · 13 June 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Yeah there's a lot of nuances I'm not expressing, that was very generalised and summed up. Basically, IF a man is going to get value, it's as I described, IF a woman has value, it's as I described. Male value, where apparent, is appreciative in value, but not all men will gain value, for the one's who do, this is how the process works. Likewise, female value, where apparent, is depreciative in value, but not all women start with value (say she is particularly unattractive) and some women will depreciate slower than others (if you've done accounting or have a basic understanding of the concept of financial depreciation and the different models, then this will make even more sense when applied to a quality such as aesthetic beauty)

My other contention that due to the ascribed/achieved nature of male and female value, women inherently possessing it for being born where their value exists, and men having to inherently work for it where their value exists means that female value is more ubiquitous than male value as it is more common and easily come upon (bestowed rather than worked for - sort of like inheritance vs. a self-made millionaire in the metaphorical sense) Furthermore, female value, which is her sexuality, is self-commodified and amplified as to be used as a tool for social mobility so that she may attach herself to a high value male as mandated by hypergamous instinct. Hence makeup and a fixation on physical appearance and female sexuality within the feminine psyche, the majority of women are reliant on their monopoly of sexual currency to get ahead and benefit from or otherwise control men with said sexual power.

I would say more, but this is much the topic of my upcoming blog post so it would be asinine to do so.

they imagine we think the same way and will instantly abandon a mate for a higher status one.

We replace them sexually for younger women, we don't stop loving the mother of our children or the woman we have history with however. Typically the mother is the public partner, and the young chick (mistress) is a secret wishing and hoping she can become the main bitch. When a woman upgrades, she tries to upgrade in terms of resources AND dominance (get a guy more alpha), but at a minimal, she'll upgrade the wallet and engage in AF/BB, so the BB is who she is with in public, and the alpha gets to bang her on the sly. Women want/demand a lot more out of the deal as they put many more desires/needs on the table.

Male "hypergamy" is essentially a "who's the prettiest most fuckable chick" mindset.

call those women "strong" using the feminist's re-branding of the word

Nah being a career woman or "independent" isn't my definition of strong. To me a strong woman is one who tries to overcome her innate solipsism/emotional nature to try and place value on logic, as well as take responsibility for her own actions rather than scapegoat the nearest person/man. A strong woman battles her nature and wins more than she loses to it. Most women are weak, lose and are slaves to their nature. In making this statement I am thinking of one or two women I've met in my life out of thousands. It's quite sad they're that rare, and they're not unicorns by any measure either, most the women who have been respectable I've had no sexual interest in whatsoever. A likeable woman doesn't necessarily make a fuckable woman, in fact they tend to be older/post-wall.

Agreed, but women can't handle guy talk that's why you don't subject them to that shit and you have space separate of them to engage in it. If a woman can't respect the fact you need the freedom to be liberal, discuss things from a purely male point of view and swear your asses off as well as deliver graphically witty and crude metaphors, then she isn't girlfriend material let alone wife material.

"Love," aka linguistic Bullshit

4 upvotes · 5 May 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

What has informed your belief on this?

Life experience. The funny thing, is no matter what you believe or who you are, love and who you think of when you discuss love in whatever capacity that may be is a very personal thing to everyone, so separating that from your understanding is all but impossible as it is this which serves as the reference point for each and every persons ideas about love. If you look at love in and of itself, without reference, it loses any form of application and just becomes an abstract academic concept related to biochemistry. Love is utterly illogical, non-tangible and subjective. We have no way of knowing if one person's love is the same as anothers in the same circumstance, we cannot literally possess other people and confirm our findings like science would demand. When it comes to love and science, apply occams razor, but remember because something is not testable or falsifiable and hence would fail the scientific method, does not mean it is not true or even possible. The scientific method is inherently flawed as it is not capable of proving and measuring everything. This is why we have spiritual ideas of love, it allows us to reason love in a manner that seems more relevant and is not constrained by the level of science our species has reached to make sense.

If scientists could master love through experimentation, they would have done it. Biologists have noticed neurochemical releases in certain situations but they are no closer to explaining love than spiritualists or philosophers, in fact, although having evidence for their findings, their findings are far less useful than the ramblings of an esteemed philosopher. To understand love one needs wisdom, science lacks the wisdom to explain love as it is in a way that benefits anyone, in a sense, this is where science fails to apply itself and become utilisable.

If I want to understand something emotional in nature, I do not turn to science to understand it because science is anything but truthful to the nature of all things emotional, science and people of science, for the most part, hold emotion in contempt. As much as I dislike the overly emotional, I equally disdain those who think logic can solve all their problems. The profoundness to be understood here is that both are foolish. One is a slave to their emotions, reactionary in nature, the other rejects human nature itself in order to lead what they believe to be an enlightened existence. It is often the proclivity of a man who has been hurt to turn to logic to hide from his pain, but logic, far less fallible than emotion, is still fallible. The wise man realises logic and emotion are both required, in a distribution ratio leaning in favour of logic, rather than emotion, to describe everything (especially things like love) for as long as we live as humans, if you utilise only one way of seeing the world, you lose a vast body of information which detracts greatly from your overall understanding. To view love entirely scientifically, as a being who loves and can't not love is a great irony that will not serve such a being any use whatsoever.

Yes, it's interesting to know how science views such things but I believe it's important to have multiple understandings of things, especially something as complex, relevant and utterly bewildering as love, because if you are to only adopt a scientific viewpoint of love you will restrict yourself of much wisdom which is pertinent to the realm of love. This is an area where scientific understanding will do little to enrich your experience of love, get a grip on love or even master love. Dopamine is a reward, serotonin makes me happy and oxytocin makes a pairbond. OK, but that knowledge doesn't actually help me understand love, science explains love in this reductionist way but does not give any thorough explanation of love because it can't. I theorise as beings who are inherently emotional that viewing love through a filter of non-emotion is nothing but an academic exercise, for if we are designed to love to procreate, and are impossible of not loving, then the idea that love can be described accurately in a way which is devoid of love (as an emotional sensation), as is to say, love described as a process to achieve a means, and that's all it is, that it is devoid of personality, spiritual state or any other nuance which personifies love to "the soul" runs contradictory to the human experience of love, for as much science tries to rationalise love, it cannot give a full and thorough explanation of it.

What I am trying to say is that if you have felt love, even if you are not in love now and don't want to be in love, it is incredibly difficult to view love unemotionally, biochemically and objectively and hold that idea as a belief you adhere to when as a human yourself you are dependant on "seeing love from the inside" (subjectively) rather than from the outside (objectively.) In a way its like a paradox, it is as to say, love is not what you feel it to be, its just X and Y, but you need the delusional/spiritual component of it to feel love and engage in love and are actually as a product of intelligent design, programmed to have this functionality. However this functionality you are programmed to have is not real, it is merely the product of X and Y, therefore what you believe to be real, is not actually, scientifically speaking, real.

The cold reductionist viewpoints of science and the hyperbolous mystical explanations of the spiritual equally disgust me in their absolutism, to me it seems logical and congruent with my life experience that a wise man shall realise that love is far more complex than the properties of chemicals describing love tersely as merely an outcome of cause and effect. We can reduce everything to cause and effect, this does not help us understand its nature or maximise our understanding of such things. To reduce how love feels, loyalty to a good friend, love for your parents, lost love, young love, all these types of love into nothing other than chemical processes, is something that as a human who experiences and feels love is incredibly difficult to reconcile, the idea that our own bodies fool us into things that aren't real, or perhaps the idea that love is not just chemical, but also spiritual too. Note: when I say spiritual I mean the concept of a soul/ghosts things like that, not religion per se.

This sounds simple and some may glance and think "seriously dude?" but he is completely right. There's only so much reading and thinking a guy can do. Sometimes you have to take your fear and do what you're scared of, confront it, and when you make it out the other side you'll find that your experience afterward versus your expectation beforehand was your mind playing tricks on you. It wasn't that bad after all. Your mind convinced you it would be so much more worse than it was, but comparatively, it was a pinch! Believe in yourself, push yourself. If this is a weakness you want to conquer, you need to just approach until approaching is no longer a deal for you. Apply this concept to everything you're scared of.

The subtext of reading 48 Laws of Power in public: "I intend to become powerful with machiavellianism" I keep the book a secret to myself and only talk about it sparingly to people I have a certain level of trust with in my offline life. Obviously online, I am sort of known for talking about this kind of shit. Anonymity allows that though, the concealment of one's identity (law 48 and law 3 conceals your identity)

I get my moments of clarity but still even with my faculties of reason I suffer from all the fallacies that any human does on occasion, I'm not perfect. I'm a guy, not a god.

Shit, sometimes when I lose my way I catch myself reading my own crap to remind myself to keep focused. It's like reaching back into a solid frame that you've lost from before to restabilise your current frame. Life gets to us, sometimes while we're in the process of trying to make it, we lose frame because adversity knocks us down whilst we're processing it, analysing it and trying to learn from it. People who've already "made it" are less likely to lose frame unless they get too comfortable, that's their only danger - not staying sharp. If you "make it" and keep momentum, you're golden. You always need momentum, inertia isn't enough.

None of us are perfect, most of us preaching this shit talk from experience, it's the voice of mistake and regret manifesting as a reason to form an actionable plan for change. The difference between a guy who can help you from his experiences and a guy who can't is a simple problem - articulacy. Many guys are just plain BAD at explaining their problems, how they deal with them, how they overcome them. They "feel their problems" but they can't say it in words. So many times I've been told "you've said what I've been thinking but didn't know how to put into words" it's a common thread I've begun to notice among men, and it's this inability to communicate and pass knowledge on, especially with fathers, that sons suffer from. Many men here no doubt suffer from having poor quality dads or no dad at all and you know what? We have to suck that up, we can't change that. No doubt some of the men here are those shitty beta fathers that regret being such huge ass pussies, it is what it is - we're all here to be better.

That's what we're all about here, change. Changing ourselves to be better men. Making men out of boys, and stronger men out of weak men.

Men don't become great without adversity, embrace it or suffer the comfortable mediocrity of complacency.

very pro-mgtow and pro-self development for men in particular.

Right because ultimately when it comes to the bottom-line, the responsibility always falls on men, that is our burden. This is the very reason women can never be equal or superior to men, the lack of responsibility leads to a lack of accountability which leads to a lack of credibility resulting in a lack of respectability. How Women Argue

4 upvotes · 11 March 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

This is a really good post I don't disagree with any of it, however as successful as these manipulations are, an inability to argue reasonably makes one unaccountable, they win because they are always on the attack, get them on the defence and watch how they crumble to scrutiny, these irrational manipulation styles always try to re-shift the focus back onto you, they are reliant upon it, that is the weakness of this methodology, ignoring their probes and fixating on them exposes them. You don't even need to know anything about them to do this. Simply pointing out they refuse to be open and take criticism is suspicious in and of itself, you can then build on that by saying they have a dark agenda and taking jabs at the reputation.

This shit is more tantamount to machiavellian mental terrorism than it is debate, as debate in and of itself is meant to be rational and about the exchange of ideas so others may learn, not a platform for controlling people.

Women do very well at controlling people, they suck at debate.

In this hypothetical situation they'd claim oppression stomp their feet and refuse to leave. You know why? Because feminism is a parasitic ideology. They need functioning, rational, productive people to feed their cause. They need an enemy to paint to operate in the shades of grey (pun intended.) Their ideology could not maintain itself without anything to feed off. In a feminist society they couldn't take the victim position because everyone's pro feminist and therefore nobody is a victim, no girls would get tingles, nothing would get done and shit would fall apart. A primitive society could not support feminism, it encourages too much inefficiency and psychological trauma. Feminism is the result of a civilization where machines replace the roles that men used to perform, thus allowing women to relegate their dependency to technology rather than men themselves. The funny thing is that its men who maintain all the tech that we have and it was men who invented the vast 99.9% majority of it to begin with.

How sexual equality increases the gap between rich and poor households

4 upvotes · 7 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Ok this looks like a blue pill example, not a red pill theory.

They say men are marrying women in professions similar to their own and it creates household economic inequality.

What does household economic inequality mean? Apparently that women who are not educated now have a harder time than they used to "marrying up."

This article is essentially about female hypergamy and how men choose women.

I reject the notion that men prefer women with good jobs, most men don't care. Men want to earn more than a woman does so that they feel masculine by providing, women want men to earn more than them albeit, they won't always verbally admit that - to feel like he is providing for them. Some men have the preference she is formally educated in something, perhaps to degree level - but he doesn't want her having more spending power than him, that's quite emasculating for a man, it upsets the natural balance and creates relationship tensions that aren't necessary. You can shame a man all you like into "getting over the fact she earns more" but its deeply innate, no amount of shaming will stop a man from wanting to be the breadwinner, it's ingrained from a time of hunting and gathering.

Fact of the matter is men are not hypergamous for anything than upgrading the beauty of the women they want to fuck, women are hypergamous for everything, wealth, looks, status etc. Women always want the man earning more and doing better than they are, women generally speaking won't date down.

The other half to this article because let's face it, this article is painting women in a pro-feminist positive light is that with all these high flying women going into high paid careers where does that leave all the men who would have traditionally done those jobs, displaced by affirmative action and a feminised education system?

These women have no time for men like that, men who earn less, men who are less esteemed and accomplished than them. What about the men? They don't give a fuck. There's a growing legion of men who aren't going to university for the precise reason there are lots of women who are going to university. That reason is the politically charged feminist gynocentrism which has taken over academia.

It tries to paint women as the victims but they're not, in all actuality it's men who suffer from the economic betterment of women, it forces them to compete with women rather than provide for them, it forces these men under the radar of most women who only have eyes for men at the top.

Men have no problems dating a nurse or a shelf stacker or whatever, if she is pretty enough and feminine enough (young enough) she can bag herself a top guy with a bit of girl game (even without it, to be honest, that's just icing.) However as I've said a few times, you won't see the opposite, a successful highly paid career woman philandering with a male shelf stacker her age or otherwise because she feels like she's entitled to better.

The jist of this article is that american women feel entitled to marry high status guys and claim victimhood that there's not enough to go around. They hamster the reasoning is that high status guys prefer high status women (projection, because as women they prefer a high status partner) however the true reasoning is that there is simply fewer high status guys than there used to be in relation to women of lower status as women entering the workforce with government backed 50/50 affirmative action policies means more women are of higher status and a lot of male talent is kicked to the curb and thrown to the bottom of the opportunity pile to make way for said females to enter the professions.

More high status women and less high status men = bad for long-term mating strategies and sexual attraction in general.

As long as it defames a powerful man (rich/famous) then they're happy.

These inculcated simple-minded automatons view such shit as a "blow to the patriarchy"

Guilty until proven innocent, feminism isn't known for it's logic. Then again, neither are women so it's hardly surprising there's been a successful movement based on nothing but drama, feels and misrepresentation of a fictional common enemy aka the big bad evil boys aka men.

Feminism now is nothing but institutional sexism which borders often on misandry under the pretense of "protecting women" they use man's/society's compassion for women's safety as a guise to commit atrocities and persecute/victimise men, emancipating them from their families and passing all sorts of radical laws which are not conducive or remotely fair to a healthy and functioning society.

Only a perverse irrational feminist could enjoy the system as it is, the fact feminism is even a serious ideology with any clout is telling of it's upper class roots, if it had been a working class ideology it would have been thrown out but simply put there's a lot more to feminism than meets the eye. A LOT OF POWERFUL PEOPLE have a lot to gain from perpetuating feminism so they back it, there's a bigger power game at play here with the big players in the world (the elite) and a lot of you don't see this far down the rabbit hole, instead bickering over the little things like this security fee but not understanding the basis behind all of it to begin with, looking at that macro approach.

What do they have to gain? well making sure women are working rather than breeding doubles the labour pool and halves the wages in many industries for one, especially at the lower end of the economy in the unskilled to semi-skilled professions, it divides and conquers the population making them easier to control. Feminism is about the destruction of the family unit in order to make the population more malleable, by extension of many broken homes mixing this with globalisation and multiculturalism divide and conquer is further amplified by encouraging further segregation and thus communities based on neighbourhood are far less likely to form as people are always moving away and foreigners are always turning up to the west. None of this shit is a mistake it's a move towards a more dystopic totalitarian police state esque kind of society where everything is monitorable, one where your ability to freely think is massively curtailed, one where making a buck got a shit ton harder to earn because instead of working together as families we work against each other as individuals.

The family unit is a very good defense against oppression, against the state. It is your tribe (bloodline) within your people (your nationality which traditionally was the same as your ethnicity). Being born to a weak family massively rapes you of your potential as the government steps in and has much more in say your life as a child, your development (or lack thereof) etc. I could go on but this post is already extremely long.

Read 1984 by George Orwell, Feminism is one of the most oppressive ideologies currently perpetuated in the west and it's an engine for many other things, business interests mostly, those who wish to see the white ethnicity die out, those who wish to destabilise western civilization so that another culture can take over, it's very good for homosexuals as it leaves more damaged people for them to prey on (not saying all homosexuals are predatory, but there is definitely a subset of homosexuals who do prey and BENEFIT from the broken society that is the west.)

Remember, boys are stupid so throw rocks at them and all that shit. Let's put that on shirts and pencil cases for little girls to buy and encourage them to slut up.

I'll do a piece on marriage/prostitutes soon.

Prostitutes are stigmatised but I actually think for guys who want a certain modicum of control in their lives they are definitely an option.

People always imagine it's some creepy low smv guy seeing prostitutes, and yes, those guys can't get it without paying for it so they are part of the customer base, however a high smv guy who cannot be fucked to deal with the bullshit women throw at him and has enough money can use them too. They are like fast food, convenient. Why fucking marinade, warm up and prepare some pussy when you can have the same quality shit served on a platter with no hassle?

High smv guys will get free pussy thrown their way, we recommend spinning plates and working out to ensure that. But prostitutes are definitely an option conducive to supporting an abundance mentality.

EG:

Plate: Gives you an ultimatum to commit more or she's withdrawing sex/herself

You: Why would I commit when I can go drop 100 and get my dick serviced by a girl hotter than you? You're lucky I even fuck you.

As a guy you're the prize as you bring a lot more to the table than she does. Her only value can be bought cheaply from a woman hotter than her. Go fucking figure.

In the long-run girlfriends/plates are more expensive than hookers so if her prime value is sex and nothing else you can't really go wrong with hookers.

Womens words mean nothing to me no matter what the topic is (lecturers teaching classes being the exception.)

A bitch could say your cock is merely "enjoyable" or "satisfactory" from an "objective" (given measurement verbally in cm or inches) perspective or she could even say you're too small then you fuck her with your dick that's "too small" and shes screaming her head off like a (to borrow /u/SS4james metaphor) "gushing little sexpot." Women are full of contradictions and inaccuracies you really can't listen to the shit they say which is why a study like this which is based purely on the subjective opinions of women is something I'd ignore and wipe my ass with when I run out of toilet paper.

This shit ain't worth the paper its written on and of course dick size is relevant but you can't do shit about it so its pointless to pander to things like this. If she doesn't dig you next her, no need to be thirsty keep the abundance mindset flowing. Worrying about your dick size is an inane exercise.

A Tale of Two Women

4 upvotes · 11 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

TRP is also a subreddit full of guys who only seem interested in sluts. So that's where the disconnect is.

Time to set this common misconception straight (again):

“Why does “an ideal woman” have to have as few sexual partners as possible?”

Women don't need to work to get sex, sure certain men may present a challenge because they're out of her league but if she works within her level and goes out tonight and tells a guy that she wants him then 9/10 guys will go off with her there and then and fuck her. It takes no skill for a woman to get sex and therefore it does not merit any respect or admiration. Women are the gatekeepers to sex, men are quite crudely, generally up for it most of the time, specific men aside.

This means her “conquests” are not “conquests” but merely offerings, if she is offering herself up to half the town, to a guy that doesn't warrant respect, but disgust. It essentially says “I'm low value because I offer the best part of myself for very little.”

High value women should only be giving it up to a boyfriend, the signifiers of high value women are that they have had few relationships lasting long periods of time and minimal hook-ups, if she's constantly in and out of relationships, or constantly hitting the clubs and bars and going home with different men, she's probably emotionally unstable and not worth touching with a bargepole.

There's irony here because if the girl is low value, guys want her to give it up on the first night because to them she has no value other than a fuck, however if they're considering her for a relationship they want her to be one of the girls who doesn't do that. The difference in preference is based on the approach. If you just want to fuck a girl you don't really care if she's a slut, in fact being a slut makes it easier to have sex with her.

If you want to build a family with a woman, you don't want her to be a slut because it means you're investing all this love, time, energy and investment into her and she may squander that by betraying you to fuck another guy.

Whores don't make good wives, they make good lays. The problem is every whore hates the fact she is a whore, deludes herself that she isn't a whore to maintain her self-esteem, tries to hide her past because in her heart of hearts she actually knows she is a whore and then attempts to “play the wife”, what happens is because she's not been monogamous much of her life and had all these great sexual experiences and adventures when she was in her 20's, she misses the excitement of that and throws the marriage away in selfishness, this can be because she's bored or because she can't resist the temptation of another man that's on her radar.

Men are the de facto gatekeepers to commitment, they choose whether they want to stick around after fucking you. Your power is in your pussy (to begin with) your ability to keep a man lays in your personality traits. His power lays in whether he's going to invest in you after he's fucked you.

Haha girls can go full circle and pull the creep card at any moments notice, even if you're high SMV.

This one chick has liked me for months. Was talking to her today, she's getting progressively more flirtatious/audacious littering everything with plausibly deniable innuendo. She tried to nawalt with me, she said unlike other chicks she doesn't use her looks to get ahead... "just her mouth" hahaha. Instead of playing around the game of subtlety going why your mouth and not your words? and all that bullshit I simply said "did cosmo teach you how to suck dick?" she was visibly taken back, funny as this girl is always very audacious and extremely ball busting. I said furthermore that see through top you had on when we last went out did a very good job at showing the world your titties.

LOL she went nuts, started trying to gaslight saying she never wore that and she doesn't do that shit. I said to her "i've got photos" she goes "what u never took photos" i'm like "yeah I took photos I even told you at the time I made it very obvious" I then say "wanna see one of the photos?" and she goes "no thanks" (HAHA opting to avoid concrete proof lmfao) then she starts with the shaming language saying "it's fucking weird for wanting pictures of her" so I have to start negging her back into place "I know right, why would anyone want pictures of you?" then she's like "so why do you keep them then" and then goes "its obvious that YOU want pictures OF ME which is seriously fucked up, I feel like a perverts victim"

LMAO. Stop and take a breath. The gaslighting bitch is going nuts over some standard everyday pictures from when we went out, nothing explicit, completely normal. So yeah despite flirting with me for ages and everyone we know thinking we're fucking/she wants to fuck me she tried to pull the "you're a creep" shit on me. Anyway I replied with more negs "don't feel special I have pictures of most people I know" "I wasn't paying u much attention"

Even more hilarious the night in question we went out she kept trying to get me to look at her titties and her ass.

Bitches are fucking crazy man, gaslighting like a motherfucker I tell you. "No that never happened" "this happened" "all that shit you thought that happened didn't really happen, I'm innocent you're a creep"

Pussy is a depreciating asset, always remember that when you transact with women. When she tries to convince you that you're in a sellers market (that you're making the sale), remind her you're in a buyers market (I'm so high value you need to impress me silly hoe.) If she refuses to budge, next her. Don't get taken in by bullshit manipulation, if she didn't care about you she wouldn't be trying to manipulate you, that's her weakness. She cares about making you commit or getting off on the ego from pulling one over on you, you just care about fucking her pussy. Exploit how invested she becomes in you or move on to the next chick, ultimately it's your call.

If she offers you sex on a plate don't accept it, it's a power game, it'll be tied to something later down the line, an invisible condition or action you're currently unaware of. It'll be used to justify something or as simple blackmail. Always fuck a chick on your own terms.

If China finds a way to stop feminism fucking it up, I'm all ears! Feminism will literally descend on the place if it reaches the same sort of level as say South Korea/Japan (and look at their birth rates)

You're not wrong though. The west is coming to an end and feminism played a huge part in the destruction of things, you break down the social fabric and you fuck up the country economically, you cripple a nation.

Here's hoping that China can actually invent a way to stop feminism fucking with a developed nation or China will just follow the same road as everybody else.

Also, it's very hard for me to look up "chinese views on things" they're not known for their English speaking abilities and I don't know mandarin.

Apart from the fact china used outbreeding as a war strategy because at the time, chinas level of development paled in comparison to the wests (why Hong Kong was given to the brits in a treaty but china was given NOTHING for Hong Kong) then yes feminism is a civilization destroyer. Ironically being a poor nation shields you from feminism, the richer a country gets and starts forming a welfare state, without something like Islam in place (strict religious adherence on how to treat men and women) you'll find feminism pops its head up and starts trying to brainwash your females with its bullshit. Feminism is like a fucking cult and a religion all in one, AND IT DOES HAVE MASSIVE ECONOMIC IMPLICATIONS when a nation takes on feminism. Public spending goes way the fuck up and the nuclear family begins to collapse. Men start to become emasculated. It's a terrible ideology.

China has its own problems anyway. The inability to innovate its own tech, but merely copying everybody elses inventions is a huge one. 200 million more men than women creating very fucked up demographics/social discord. Very dependent on exports even though its trying to become self-sustaining by boosting the size of its own middle class... while the only reason it gets rich is by ensuring it has a huge working class to keep costs down and get the deals with international companies to make all the worlds crap, like you've got a city that just makes bathroom shit, a city that just makes textiles etc etc.

What happens to china when its middle class is too big? All the outside investment from the conglomerates for cheap labour will stop and their rival India will get all the contacts, China will hit a saturation point like the west has, it's easy to develop quickly when your country is so lowly developed but the higher up the ladder you get the slower the growth. Chinas huge labour size is being cashed in as an asset now, but what happens when they all need pensions and live that long because the country is developed enough that its people live that long? China would be fucked. Chinas development specifically is DRIVEN by other countries exploiting its poor and its theft of other nations technology and selling on cheaply made bootlegs to its middle class. Giving 1.3 billion people the privileges people in western nations enjoy is not feasible no matter how you want to cut it.

China will not surpass the most developed nations due to its dependencies and inability to invent tech. China have invented relatively fuck all in terms of modern technology which means its not going to change the world through technological development and patents. Although it will continue to grow in power in relation to other nations. There's more likelihood Russia will surpass say the USA, than China, as Russia are at least capable of making their own shit despite a dwindling population, they also have lots of natural resources and aren't so reliant on outside investment. They have less people to feed, smaller welfare state. I'd hate to see the size of the chinese welfare state if it became a country as developed as the west, holy shit!

As for Japan and South Korea, their populations are dwindling.

Hong Kong, Singapore, Malaysia and Taiwan all seem very promising at the moment to be honest, not that they will "take over" but they will be sustainable once developed to "western levels." China seems far too volatile with the population number that it has. Hong Kong could eventually get re-absorbed into Mainland China rather than be a S.A.R, would be cool if it became a city state like Singapore though.

Indonesia is way too poor as is Vietnam, Cambodia, Thailand and Philippines.

Anyway, this is all opinion, not fact. There's so many factors to consider when you're looking at the rise/downfall of nations, it's incredibly vast. My predictions can turn out incorrect. I just see many flaws in China, China gets talked up a lot, but its weaknesses are so obvious. If everyone stopped trading with China for political reasons, how would it cope? While China is so reliant on other powers for its wealth and lacks the military spending of the United States, it's no threat, a great power yes, but not a superpower.

Great post!

Edit: When I wrote this my consideration was instilling segregation, I did not simultaneously consider morale and profit from the business perspective, simply put I wanted to demonstrate how you could turn people against each other rather easily when they appear to be of solid union and represent a threat to you. In low level positions people are easily replaceable so you could easily sack those involved and get new people in. Of course, I very much like your method, it's more benevolent machiavellianism, operant conditioning and positive reinforcement than it is negative reinforcement or "darkness" ala, the dark triad.

If you have to walk a fine line and are in an institution of some kind then your method is by far superior.

What are the main differences between TRP and r/seduction and r/mensrights?

4 upvotes · 30 November 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

/r/seduction is for "game" /r/mensrights is a political movement and trp incorporates and acknowledges both of these things but is wider encompassing.

Trp predominantly is a value system among other things. People keep asking this question expecting an easily digestible single sentence definition but reclaiming a sense of masculinity among an increasingly effeminate stock of men cannot be so easily defined.

Trp is really about social games and intelligence, that's the applicative vocational side of it, people always say it in the context of women but demonstrating high value, vagueness and using push and pull works on anyone, trp looks at social dynamics and equips men with mental tools which are scarce in the wild but paramount to individual business and personal success.

The ugly side of trp is that it reminds you that you have it harder in life by nature of being male people won't just provide for you, however you gotta suck it up cuz its never changing.

Trp shatters feminist lies and propaganda which are counterproductive or otherwise simply bullshit.

Back on value, a huge core fundamental element to trp is that you must always value yourself more than the girl because if you don't she won't either. Idiomatically prescribed as "don't put the pussy on a pedestal. "

I suspect you may just be sensitive to how language is used and prefer an academic glazing to what you read. I also agree, that some shit posted is complete conjecture/very out there, but that's like anything - radical feminism is fucking way out there as is the whole gender studies syllabus but they have academic studies backing them... flawed to fuck with falsified datasets and all kind of crap.. but hey we can reference it so it must be legit right? We can do cute little footnotes and [1] [2] everything and go on about our harvard referencing to try and lend credence to something which is basically complete fucking hogwash.

You want to see some referencing and some footnotes doing a circlejerk across books and articles and journals which eventually lead back to an original theorist to begin with anyway if you just keep following the paper trail. Nothing wrong with theory at all it has to originate from somewhere - and that's in someones head - a good theory is proven and then amended/developed/refined through well done experimentation, but that is costly and of course, subject to flaw. Just because something isn't proven in a controlled lab environment/institutionally sanctioned survey doesn't mean an observation from the actual environment can't hold true.

I find it sad when academics are so unintelligent they prioritise referencing and sourcing more than theory. I mean if a theory is complex in nature why would you fixate on its source? If its a new theory it won't be able to be referenced, or if its the development of other theories it may appear to be new and thus difficult to associate with other things. Imagine when Einstein came up with the theory of relativity if someone had said, "hey you can't reference that shit it's pretty out there bro, you're just a nutter!" so we won't be giving your ideas the time of day....

Oh wait.. that's exactly what they did, Einstein was ridiculed to fuck. Then he died. Then people looked at his work and he got recognised for his contributions to physics. Eccentrics drive progress forward and drone academics who police the internet would do well to remember that, your ability to memorise and understand things within an explained framework has fuck all power in comparison to the eccentrics ability to innovate.

Always pisses me off a bit intellectually when people scoff at something for sounding weird. Shows your close-minded and not a true intellectual, just someone who prospers in the confines of what contemporarily constitutes the academic system.

"The you's" don't mean you specifically, but people who seem to have a dislike for anything that can't be referenced and demonstrate the whole "show me a study or it isn't true" mentality.

Because she realises that if it were on the reverse foot and she started earning more money than him in a more serious situation.. (say if she actually loved the guy/marriage) she'd lose serious attraction for the guy. She's fucking projecting. Girls do this shit all the time. Every time a chick accuses me of some shit on an unwarranted basis she's telling me something about herself - what she'd do/what she thinks etc. It's a projection of solipsism, often used to shame said target, but to understand the nature of what she's thinking and apply it to another person, it has to come from her own experiences/tendencies. Something quite fascinating that I've noticed about women.

See what you say isn't wrong but you're overlooking the nuances, which is why you came to the incorrect conclusion that female love is unconditional. Perhaps you know an abusive man who has controlled women rather easily and thus have this delusional idea that women give love unconditionally, but that is complete bullshit.

If you're interested, allow me to explain the nuances of although why you're not wrong in this post, your highly downvoted conclusion most definitely is wrong.

Men are more likely to fuck an ugly/fat girl than women are to fuck a beta. Truth.

This is true. The ugly girls almost never secure commitment though from a high value mate, they too are hypergamous and they too hate betas. They are forced to settle for betas if they can't increase their SMV.

So they are fucked up, low self-esteem and depressed. They are pumped and dumped like fuck toys by guys out of their league or left to copulate with a beta. They are loathsome because they cannot fulfill their hypergamy.

These women are lower value than beta providers, a beta provider with enough cash although not respected can secure a 7/8/9. An ugly woman, even with cash, cannot secure a high SMV male mate because a high SMV male by nature of his SMV would not need her money nor would he be attracted by it.

She's basically fucked. These are the women who comprise the core of the feminist movement, ugly, socially unaccepted women with money to throw around.

If a woman hit you with a pan and broke your nose would you stay with her and continue loving her? Fuck no my nigga you'd bounce. If a woman told you she wanted a harem with you and 2 other guys would you stay? Fuck no my nigga you'd bounce.

Women won't. Women stay with their violent husbands. Women stay with harems. Once a woman falls in love with your alpha she loves it til the day she dies or until she finds someone more alpha.

That's not unconditional love, that's an addiction to the dark triad. Men who are neurologically dark triad due to brain development issues are psychopathic/machiavellianist/narcissitic - these three core personality traits allow them to take women on the emotional whirlwind which they crave and feed off, this is what women are addicted to. Dark triad men are like crack dealers, they feed that addiction. Women thus associate these emotions with these dark triad men and form addictions to these men, that is not to be confused with "unconditionally loving them." They are literally slaves to these men, that is not "love" that is addiction.

If a womans love was unconditional, once you acquired her you wouldn't need to keep gaming her because you have her love now and thus under your logic, she unconditionally loves you now. Women fall out of love, if YOU ARE NOT A DARK TRIAD MAN, aka you are like the 99.9% of men who aren't pathologically neurotic/machiavellianist/narcissitic and thus you will not find women becoming addicted to you because of how you fuck with their feelings.

If you want to call an addiction to dark triad personality traits unconditional love, then fine, you can say socially degenerate men acquire unconditional love from women. But everyone else who is physiologically healthy will never receive unconditional love from a woman, in fact the entire nature of their relationship is completely conditional on what he can provide, how good his game is (subject to change because he doesn't have the innate physiological advantages which form the power base of the dark triad guy), what competition the guy has and so on and so forth.

When you said a woman's love is unconditional I immediately construed that as an incredibly blue pill statement, and I'm not saying its blue pill to try and frame you as weak, it's not personal - that is simply just very deluded thinking. On a personal level I don't think you're blue pill, I think you fail to distinguish the difference between what a dark triad man is and what the rest of human men are and perhaps you have seen a dark triad man mercilessly rule a woman close to you and thus believe women give love unconditionally. They really don't at all.

Also another thing, for the many people in this sub there seems to be this desire to want to "become dark triad." this is a delusion in and of itself and if any of you have ever known a man who is dark triad, you'd realise why. Researching the dark triad won't make you dark triad.

Psychopathy is not learnt, it's physiological/genetic, you're gonna need to go get brain damage to become a psychopath. You can study machiavellianism and strategy to become a borderline dark triad which will help you succeed in life, but you will never be full dark triad.

If you've ever known an individual who was dark triad you will see the level they operate at, they are cold people who command respect, their brain is operating in a way yours can't because the neurological structures are different, as I described earlier, when they do bad shit they actually don't care or feel like they care. A person proficient in practicing stoicism/desensitization to a stimulus tries (often successfully) to block out what they are feeling. An actual dark triad person has nothing to block out at all, they have no emotional hurdle to overcome or block out, that challenge isn't even present to them - hence their power.

Haha I'm loving this rabbit hole we're in.

Destroying evidence charge? Don't they need to prove your hard drive had evidence of criminal activity before it can be classified as evidence? It's a bit of a jump to infer something is evidence when the very thing needed to prove something was evidence has been destroyed/damaged. It's a circular argument really, they need evidence to prove crime, evidence is destroyed, they need evidence to prove the evidence actually is evidence of a "crime" but as that one thing was destroyed, there's nothing. Destroying something is one thing, destroying evidence is another, they can't prove the thing you destroyed actually was evidence, they just suspect it.

I didn't know magnetting your own hard-drive because you're under suspicion is proof you destroyed evidence, sure it's suspicious but there's nothing tangible to prove it was actually evidence that got destroyed.

Anyway I'm just enjoying the rabbit hole, encryption is prob a lot easier as you said, although encryption can be broken.

But all of that's still moot if they're just querying the logs remotely, like, say, from Reddit itself...

Your IP doesn't tell the world your internal networks mac address it could be any old asshole on your unsecured wireless accessing reddit.

Anyway, I don't know about the US legal system but in the UK we use judicial precedent to decide cases/make statute, as for wireless defence:

He admits there is no legal precedent to give guidance on how a court should proceed if a consumer claimed someone else had accessed their network. "There has been case law in downloading cases, but I don't think there has been anything looking into the specific issue of secured or unsecured Wi-Fi networks," said Gallant. "If someone mounted a defence, then we would have to go through the courts to see where it stands."

She didn't. If she took it offensively and tried to project that on to me I would of just said "2000 photos is a good thing it means you go out and you're social, why do you think it's bad?" I'd reframe it to make her look silly.

I'm really good at reading body language and facial cues, it's annoying sometimes because it means I notice things that aren't necessarily meant to be noticed, but in this case it came useful in the sense that I could see her frame was weaker than mine.

I was also higher SMV than her, she had a bad face and a nice body, I'm a solid 8 (according to chicks who've been into me.), she was a 7 if you kept looking at that fine hourglass and ignored the fact she had a face.

If you're going to be an asshole and it backfires, don't make excuses for what you've said or done, just reframe it to make the girl look and feel dumb. Women try to guilt trip you all the fucking time for shit you say or do whether you're in the wrong or they're in the wrong and they're trying to shift the frame - as a rule of thumb I do not allow myself to be guilt tripped.

Yeah I'm a slimy asshole, but I make no excuses for what I do. Nice guys finish last. May come as a shock, but naturally I'm a very sweet guy, this was nurture not nature.

I see too many posts disparaging any and all liberal ideals.

That's just bigoted.

There was a recent post condemning going to college because they're "too liberal".

What the person probably meant was that college is a bastion of radical liberal indoctrination which attempts to breed conformity and impose a specific school of thought on one rather than being an academic hub where intellect, logic, academic research and the pursuit of knowledge is a priority of the establishment, essentially academia has been corrupted by radical liberalism. True liberalism would encourage all the former, when in actual fact it inhibits it if you're not on the mainstream bandwagon, females outnumbering males in education is a direct result of radical feminist social engineering. It's all fucked up. This is a reason to not go to college, also there's the tiny little fact that the value of a bachelors degree has been incredibly devalued.

At least this is what I think, I am projecting my opinion here, they may just be a bigot, it's hard to say I don't know this person.

If you're an intellectual however, you have to go. It's your biologically metaphysical yearning to acquire knowledge, economics be damned. Just try to be useful in your pursuit of knowledge, classical educations of latin and european history are pleasure learning for those who can afford it, not the efforts of someone trying to meritocratically escape the impoverished confines of the working class.

The Shit Test in Corporate America

OK. I understand how the inner alpha could be pissed off in a relatively low social position, being paid very little and having little power within a company. Especially if someone above you is a dumb cunt, overprivileged and born to wealth, a feminazi cunt or some other detestable unworthy idiot. The fact of the matter is no matter how genetically/psychologically alpha you are, if you weren't born to a wealthy family you have to carve your own wealth because your ancestors were shitty and didn't provide a strong start for you, if you want better for yourself and for your successors, you're going to have ascertain it for yourself.

What this means is that you have to start at the economic bottom and work your way up the ladder. If your alphaness manifests too much in the workplace, feminists and betas will not like you, they will block your progress and force you to leave as their presence and influence is so ubiquitous, if you get sucked in too much by the bluepill corporate culture at the bottom, you will lose the ability within yourself to progress to the higher rungs of a company or onto other greener pastures.

At middle level you may be used as a "useful idiot" a knight or a bishop in someone elses game rather a pawn, you'll be drenched in the bullshit of bureaucracy and mundaneness of uninteresting small management, but you'll lose the edge which a true leader needs, power, grace, control, adaptability, astuteness and perhaps most vitally ambition, as you grow habitually comfortable on your liveable wage you'll engage in counterproductive values such as gullibility and idealism, you'll become a fixture not a competitor and within your relative field of power you become the tool of another, usually unknowing. Always be most loyal to yourself.

If you've seen Game of Thrones, think of the low born Lord Petyr Baelish aka Littlefinger, he goes from very little to one of the most influential men in the land through very advanced machiavellianism.

Again, taking from the 48 laws, this is why you need to adopt this:

<http://48laws-of-power.blogspot.co.uk/2011/05/law-38-think-as-you-like-but-behave.html>

When you finally attain power you may switch to:

<http://48laws-of-power.blogspot.co.uk/2011/05/law-34-be-royal-in-your-own-fashion-act.html>

To go from the bottom to the top you must be outwardly socially fluid, whilst not losing your sense of self. Socially fluid means to manipulate others according to your current goals in a way that won't find you being ostracized, not to just "go along with everything." Remember success is not linear, you will encounter setbacks, they are natural, and you can learn from them. Do not expect success to be a linear climb, it is not, it's more of an upward trend than a continuing incline.

How is gathering dating and looking at trends "bullshit". Many bullshitters abuse this but it's no reason to bring damnation to the entire fucking field.

Small sample sizes, falsified data, and as you rightfully point out, misinterpreting and misrepresenting data to follow an agenda. Like the whole gender is a social construct crap, nature or nurture was never concluded, and yet 99% of the faculty in the west will tell you it's nurture, wow, that's so scientific. There's some valid research done in sociology if you go back far enough and escape anything gender related, but in recent years it's been hijacked by feminism and the far left. I did say that before. Better to realise the reality of shit then defend an academic area which is heavily infected by bluepill ideology. I wouldn't give sociology the time of day and that's coming from someone who studied the shit for 4 years and got an A.

Also, when you say "liberal bullshit" are you saying all liberal ideas are bullshit or that liberal bullshit abuses sociology?

Liberal bullshit abuses sociology, not all liberal ideas are bullshit. In fact funnily enough a lot of far left ideas aren't very liberal at all, it's a bastardisation of the term. Real liberals would be pro free speech and let the right have their opinion and debate them fairly, today's self identified liberals tend to shame and silence the right, falsify their data and talk a whole lot of shit. That my friend is liberal bullshit.

First, if your gf asks you to describe the ideal type of woman that she is attracted to, do the smart thing and describe her exact body type.

Fuck that. "I like girls who are young, attractive and hide their bitchiness around me"

Also, if your gf ever asks you if you are attracted to other women, just say "no."

Wtf? Pressure switch. "My dick is, so you better fight these hos off for me"

I'm going to go out on a limb here and assume that you have never in a serious, long-term relationship.

Speechless. It's irrelevant. Don't be feeding women compliments like you're a charity. Don't try to appease women. Being a try hard doesn't make you attractive.

You're high on oxytocin like a motherfucker.

This is the part that pertains to you:

Increasing trust and reducing fear: In a risky investment game, experimental subjects given nasally administered oxytocin displayed "the highest level of trust" twice as often as the control group. Subjects who were told they were interacting with a computer showed no such reaction, leading to the conclusion that oxytocin was not merely affecting risk-aversion.[34] Nasally administered oxytocin has also been reported to reduce fear, possibly by inhibiting the amygdala (which is thought to be responsible for fear responses).[35] Indeed, studies in rodents have shown oxytocin can efficiently inhibit fear responses by activating an inhibitory circuit within the amygdala. Some researchers have argued oxytocin has a general enhancing effect on all social emotions, since intranasal administration of oxytocin also increases envy and Schadenfreude.[36]

"Schadenfreude" is a german loan word in English which means "to take pleasure in other peoples pain"

This is why I don't think women should be in politics. This is why most women pre-feminist indoctrination agreed with me, they saw the reality of it. If you don't fight with logic and just spit emotional filled rhetoric all the time, you are not fit for politics. This describes nearly all women. Should of seen the prime minister of australia, feminist called julia barely hold back the tears as she lost office to her male opponent. It was hilarious.

Not everyone is as proficient as you are, many young men kill themselves and end up in prison from single mother families (the statistics are out there) it's far more of an issue than simply work ethic, it's about mental stability more than anything. As a societal issue, it's massively detrimental, economically, socially, psychologically, you name it. Getting a degree in liberal arts wouldn't be my idea of a balance between passion and profit.

Mixing passion with profit is vis a vis balancing your own happiness versus your economic needs.

I disagree with people doing shit that bores them to death, or they even hate, just to make bank. Ignoring your mental health is dumb, you get money to increase your happiness, if your pursuit of money makes you miserable then you're doing it wrong.

STEM is valued because there's a shortage of people in that field, if it became saturated it would be as economically useless as everything else.

400 years ago when hardly anybody could write you'd think a person who could write was smart, and a writer would get a lot of job offers because their skill was limited in availability, now we take writing for granted being able to write means jack shit. It's subjective. I wouldn't say stem students "are smart" and non-stem "are dumb" that's nothing but intellectual snobbery/elitism based on the economic value of a degree which reeks of ignorance to what other degrees really entail.

Eg a philosophy degree, hard as fuck, yet economically useless - requires some insane critical thinking ability and the guy who knows how to build a bridge thinks he has the intellectual edge? Hilarious. That's what I'd call blue pill. What we can derive from this is that the powers in society value bridges more than deep wisdom, not that the structural engineer is inherently smarter than the philosopher.

Mechanisation will kill a lot of jobs, even in stem. Computing/geneticism are the most future proof jobs and they need a constant update of your current skill set.

It's developed through having to put up with the universal craziness of women and having more expectations and pressures to succeed and make our own success, as well as pursue the opposite gender, burdens women are completely free of. Their SMV is not dependent on career success (in fact it fucks them up via hypergamy) and they don't need to escalate as the culture tells everyone that's the man's job despite "equality."

In fact for many hoes out there the female version of success is getting a successful man successfully manipulated and locked in to marriage. When a high flyer has a harem and they all know about each other those bitches are willing to throw acid in each other's face in a royal fucking rumble so that the victor can have the alpha to herself, of which time he'd just go get more hoes for the harem anywhere. Any job/career she does is pocket money. This ain't all women, obviously (NAWALT), but it's far too many women, it's a part of the culture, especially with the pretty ass hoes with that inflated sense of worth.

Women are naturally red pill I believe, they just talk a lot of shit because it benefits them, manipulators at heart, they know this shit is true too, just when a man says it they cry sexism. It's like needing a black guy to say "that ain't racism" cuz if a white guy said credibility = automatically zero despite the fact it's TRUTH.

This is for you young guys on TRP. Your college major should be based on what is going to give you job security, not on what feels good or seems interesting. If your major isn't based on a sober appraisal of supply and demand in the job market, get a new major. Now.

Accumulating knowledge is a fancy way of procrastinating.

I can put my hand up to this. I've held myself back. Lots of guys I know have done it, truly brilliant, witty, intelligent young men whom on the surface superficially may not seem like much, but spend time with them and you find there's all this untapped potential, too many doubts, laziness and sometimes depression, not enough optimism. They're being wasted. I've wasted myself and my time too, direction is important, marry that with discipline.

The amazing thing about having a drink is you really don't care most of time, you get a bit tipsy and then do w/e the fuck you want without a thought. Sober, a lot of people think the fuck out of things and then end up confused. "overthinking it" I don't think you can think too deeply per say, the deeper you think the wiser you'll become, however its like using a defibrillator on a guy who's sleeping, not dying, it's ruthlessly miscalculated and can even end up doing harm rather than good, a nudge/shout would have brought our proverbial man back to consciousness, the defibs on an already beating heart could have seriously hurt him.

If you're a natural overthinker like I am, do what the italians do, have some cheeky wine/beer or meditate/go zen and clear your mind - declutter and get shit done or be forever a prisoner of inaction. Go forth fellow procrastinators!

Ok bro im gonna help you out here because you sound really confused and like you don't really get TRP.

- You never buy a bitch a drink on the first date/first time you seen her in a while.

This is a pretty basic thing, I mean you can do it after you've fucked her if u want and sparingly, but not on the first date, don't make a habit of it, don't be the guy who gets her drinks, be the guy she wants to fuck.

"so we're just friends" is either A: a shittest B: her trying to reaffirm your status as beta orbiter and seeing your reaction to see if she's still got you on the hook (maybe you've been more distant lately so she's trying to gauge where you're at)

Be candid, if you want to fuck a girl then don't pretend you don't. That's beta. That's "beta game" game that doesn't work. Pretending to be a girls girlfriend so you can hopefully one day be her boyfriend, giving her all your commitment, emotion and time for free while she refuses to fuck you because to her you're not a sexual being, just someone who fulfills her emotional needs.

My belief is that the most beneficial world is the one we live in now, because if you analyze the aggregate decisions that people made, overall, everyone has made the best decisions for themselves (their primitive brain) at the time that they made the decision. e.g. Girls going on fuck-streaks, it provided a net benefit in some way for them at that time.

Well I'd have to disagree with your assumption that people always make the best decisions for themselves. Delayed gratification can yield better results overall (NET) then short-term desires. Lets use a TRP example: a girl in her prime, says early 20's, has the world at her feet, fucks lots of hot guys, has the time of her life, gets lots of free shit, sees different countries with different men, gets her fair share of goodies and sex but can never commit to a man due to her self-entitlement and infatuation with "freedom" aka little responsibility and lots of options. Now up to this point her selfishness did her well, it got her what she needed and people were happy to give it to her.

Aged 30, she had a biological change, a serious one, she hasn't had any children yet because from her point of view having a child would ruin her quality of life, mother nature, worried that this woman is in a fucked up culture which promotes fun and self-interest over life it very self put a mechanism inside her which would make her irrationally want to reproduce by this age if she hadn't already, to keep our species alive. Now aged 30 she decides she wants to get married and have a family, she doesn't know why but it "feels right" read: her biological failsafe has kicked in essentially compelling her to reproduce so our species continues - survival instinct

Now she looks to lock a man down into serious monogamy because due to her biological shift, that's what she wants. So she goes about trying to deceive men she's a good catch, lies about her past and all the cock she has had, tries to convey the illusion she's some sort of good girl who just "never had the right man come along" when really at the time, in the past, she didn't want to commit to any man because it was too option limiting in the short game, her looks are depreciating, her biological clock is beginning to ring LOUDER and LOUDER "reproduce!" "reproduce!" and eventually if she can't lock a man down, she will do some dumb shit like hop back on the cock carousel with the best looking man she can get, tell him she's on the pill so he doesn't use a condom, rob his sperm, never see the guy again and raise a child alone.

Now she's reliant on money from the taxpayers to fund her and her child and her child only has 1 parent, not 2. They always say more is better right? Well it is. Except this kid has nothing but a feminine influence on it from a young age. If it's a boy, it's fucked, it learns the hard way how to be male by getting involved in gangs and shit or it ends up as a beta. If it's lucky, it has the internet and stumbles on TRP and starts to try and puts its life together, if its unlucky it kills itself or leads a life of misery which is detrimental to the net benefit of society, one less contributor, one less person reaching their full potential, a modicum of efficiency removed from reality because although we couldn't limit the child's genetic potential to be born and to thrive as biology took over, we royally fucked it with a crap environment that doesn't facilitate its growth. As all capitalists know, morale is paramount to efficiency. Miserable kids turn into miserable men and women who don't make a successful civilization.

For the rest of what you wrote, I read it twice, cool stuff! I've got no real reply for it!

Any of the shit you didn't understand don't hesitate to ask about either, I'm always happy to share knowledge with open-minded and capable people (assuming that's you.)

She realises her SMV is lower than his because she's obese and she hates the fact he rather fap with his hand over girls on a screen then physically be inside her. This is destroying her ego and self worth. She accepts that she's fat but is trying to hamster he has a porn addiction and needs to fuck her more rather than fap. The truth is, he doesn't find her attractive and is using porn as a replacement for his loss of attraction to her. At least he isn't cheating on her with another woman, he's self-pleasuring instead, but she doesn't see it that way, her solipsism is detecting a loss of control over the relationship because she's not his sole supplier of orgasms.

TLDR: Her ego is crashing because she's obese (BMI of 35) and he chooses porn + his hand over her. She's trying to hamster he's addicted to porn by posting it on /r/nofap but the reality is he's not addicted, he's just acting like a single man because he's not attracted to her.

You are assuming that all men have the same preferences when it comes to single women. Contrary to what you believe, many men, find relationships with single mothers a viable option. The idea that your opinion on the matter is someone the last word on the topic is what is truly a delusion here. I have my viewpoint and you have yours. Please don't tell me that I have to put up with you as my spokesman on the issue, or for any other men for that matter.

Your emotions are getting in the way of your logic, not once did I deduce that all men have an equal preference for avoiding single mothers, I merely advocated avoiding them due to the high propensity that they are an increased risk yielding lower reward.

If you find a unicorn whose a introspective, rich, intelligent single mother whose baby daddy died in Iraq and that's why she's single then more power to you, just don't be dumb enough to think that this is most single mothers, because it isn't, that kind of single mother would be an exception, not a trend, here on TRP we deal with trends and the trend is that most single mothers are in their situation because they're stupid and bad at choosing a mate to settle with, hence why they have no man still there with them - surely that concept isn't "too biased" for you to grasp?

Women are the gatekeepers to sex, they choose who they fuck, if sex happens and if a baby is born it's because they made a series of choices which lead to that event, it shouldn't be too much to ask that she's extremely selective with who she chooses to have a baby with and thus only procreates with a man who is willing to support, is capable of supporting and sticking around for the sake of raising a child, should it? She needs a good reason for being a single mother, the often popular "I just wanted a baby because I'm about to hit the wall" is not an acceptable choice neither is "the baby daddy is violent/deadbeat/drunk/lazy etc" because she chose to have sex with him. Do you understand? She makes all the choices, she's responsible for her situation, there is no "preference" in that. This is highly indicative of a woman's intelligence, you should use that insight to sum her up as LTR material pretty quickly. A woman having a kid with a low value male is stupid and making a bad choice, if your preference is to date that kind of woman, you're not too smart either.

If they choose to fuck a deadbeat and then furthermore go and have his kid that's just poor judgement on their part, they are the reason their child is growing up fatherless, they are the reason they're impoverished, because they didn't think things through and take precautions. You may be used to blame and responsibility always being designated to men, but here on TRP, where it's due, we allocate responsibility to women for their own actions, as alien as a concept as that may seem. A single mother is often a single mother of her own making because she chose a low value mate. It's that simple. Perhaps you'd be better off not thinking about the single mother you have a preference for, for whatever subjective reasons those are, and seeing this from the objective cost-benefit paradigm which I advocate, if you'd do that you'd see I make a lot of sense rather than thinking "I talk for all mens preferences", there is no declaration anywhere that "this is how all men think" this is advice to all men out there why dating a single mother is usually a bad bet, you should be able to distinguish that difference.

You know, if you have a unicorn or you want to go "all in" with a woman who by nature of her situation is high risk, then by all means, go ahead, just don't have your head in the clouds and think "due to your preferences" you're immune to all the points that have been made here. If she's not a unicorn and you're deluding yourself because you like the woman, then by all means, go and spend your time and energy on her - advice like mine is given to save men from having to learn the hard way, but men who refuse to listen, like yourself, will have to learn the hard way. It's a pity you couldn't argue my counterpoints and come up with your own, instead choosing to present numerous strawman arguments because you simply don't like what I say. When you resort to fallacies rather than counter arguments, you may as well admit you're wrong.

Nobody said the red pill isn't bitter, if you don't like what I say it's because it's probably true and hits a raw nerve. Your arguments were pretty blue pill, you didn't back them up with strong reasoning. You still have the choice to back up your arguments and try to make them cogent, I'm always open to rational debate, I like learning things and seeing the opposite perspective, but you haven't actually managed to make a strong argument as to why there's nothing wrong with single mothers, in fact it just sounds like you're dating one and that's why you're taking offence to my posts.

"I have to say this!" - he has had enough of piggish male behaviour and objectification of women. he bravely announces that he is becoming a feminist. comments from female feminists welcome him to the good side.

Thoughts Regarding Porn

Speaking from experience, you're on to something with the shit about porn. When an old LTR needed a reason or otherwise challenged why the fuck I wanted to record her sucking my dick/me fucking her I'd tell her "because I'd rather beat off to you than beat off to porn later on" and that validation right there, an appreciation for her sexuality, to make her feel desired and to disqualify porn all in one line, when women fear porn as competitive was extremely powerful. She could never reject that line. I learned if you ask for permission to record her, she'll say no or she'll agree but it kind of kills the vibe and she hates the fact you asked, she won't say it, you'll pick up on the awkwardness though, she feels objectified in a conscious negative way. If you just start recording her as you and her get steamy and then back it up verbally with she's better than porn (should she challenge it), she won't resist and you'll get what you want - fap bank material!

I know I've digressed somewhat but thought people would find this interesting, to expand on your porn of being "competition" to her sexuality theory. It's almost a way of reassuring her she has value, but if she won't let make the recording/take pics or whatever then the "competition" (porn hos) are going to make you cum, not her. They hate that.

New York Times gets it right: forced paternity in immoral

4 upvotes · 14 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I don't promote the idea on a personal level, but it's one of the few protections men have against "enforced fatherhood" which is the topic here.

isn't TRP simply about avoiding reproducing in a situation in which we've yet to maximize our control and hold over a high-value mate?

No. TRP is about becoming a high value male and exposing/expelling mainstream feminist theory. Some people here run harems, some are MGTOW, some are husbands who want to increase their value to have a higher quality relationship with their wife (most similar to your insinuation about a high value mate), some are young guys trying to find their way in life, but we are all united by wanting to be better males in and of ourselves, for ourselves - and knowing how to deal with women whether it be for your own respect or to get laid is a big part of what TRP is.

If I had to define TRP I would define it as "teaching males to become masculine and high value whilst exposing fem-centric bullshit" but how you choose to live your life is completely down to you, whatever fits your experiences and desires is what's most right for you. Some older men have had enough shit and MGTOW is their best option, some young guys lack experience and role models and just need methods to increase their value. There's no enforcement of lifestyle choice, just advice to increase your value and options no matter what that choice might be.

EDIT: Despite no enforcement of lifestyle choice by the sub itself, most people here are anti-marriage.

Its as though he can't stop from talking, and his facebook friends are filled with women, and he just appears good with getting sex and relationships, which aligns with the TRP idea that social skills and charisma are primary in doing that.

Birth control draws women to feminine men. This is also a major reason they degenerately have sex with faggots. Sounds like im talking shit but I'm not, birth control tricks the female body into thinking it's pregnant which then draws them to beta/feminine rather than masculine traits. He is very outgoing so he has a lot of exposure. Millennial girls also consciously prefer SJW like values in general because that's what their college/parents taught them. How many of these girls has he actually fucked though? Despite all that cultural pressure, the female hindbrain desire for masculinity usually comes out on top IN SPITE of all these gargantuan cultural pressures. The real game changer is birth control, because that is fundamentally adjusting female mating preferences. Women who aren't on birth control pills don't like beta/feminine men.

Feminism isn't about femininity but the exact opposite. Feminists value only masculinity - but only when displayed by women.

I know what you're saying and I refer to this as toxic femininity because essentially even though they have "masculine values" none of those values include "logical preference", "taking responsibility for shit" or "honour" - so it's not true masculinity in so much as it is pseudo-masculinity. So call it toxic femininity or call it pseudo-masculinity - it's the same shit. Sounds like we agree and this is more a dispute over the definition of terms.

Loved the podcast /u/IllimitableMan [+2]. Agreed with most points, as I should since I read your blog.

Thank you.

East Asians have some of the highest test levels in the world. Doesn't change the fact that most of them are passive and BP as fuck, but I think it may be due to cultural factors/higher estrogen levels.

Hi, yes, their actual testosterone isn't the problem, it's their androgen receptor sensitivity. Asians have the lowest androgen sensitivity of all the races, meaning when testosterone attaches to the receptor site it exerts less of an effect on their body and behaviour (this is why Asian men look more childish than white/black men and Asian women look more feminine than white/black women). Black women and Asian men get the worst deals hormonally speaking, whereas black men and Asian women get the best deals.

Japanese men were found to have less of an enzyme called 5-alpha-reductase that converts testosterone into dihydrotestosterone (DHT) which is 8-10x the strength of base testosterone and is responsible for things like beard growth. DHT is far more androgenic than mere testosterone, so if we're going to be specific it's more a case of "asians have lower DHT than blacks and whites, and therefore are less masculine in composition." As an average, that is. There will be badass asians out there with very high T/DHT, they're just not the norm. It's not impossible, just improbable. If you are interested in this topic you can read more about it here:

https://www.academia.edu/4064241/Black_Males_and_Testosterone_Evolution_and_Perspectives

As for the cultural aspect, there's a lot of soy in the Asian diet. Definitely doesn't do the men any favours. I'd stay away from that shit!

we do not care about the value of low value men

If I didn't care about the state of masculinity and improving it, I wouldn't run my blog. I make money on it, but that's a bonus. I worked tirelessly posting on the forum and then writing for 2 years on the blog before I even made any decent money. If I didn't care, if WE as a community didn't care about this, then I wouldn't have lasted with my blog, and this community would not continue to go from strength to strength.

My blog exists BECAUSE of this community, TRP is my home, where IM was born and forged, I owe it a lot, and as such continue to give back to it as much as I can be it directly here on the forum or on my blog.

Without strong men, we have nothing. We need to build more of them. Nothing is more important to me. Sure, there's gonna be guys here who don't have a larger vision and just give a shit for themselves, but I'm extremely confident a damn sight more feel the way I do and want to make men great again.

Women don't need careers if they find a young high achieving beta, but often go for one anyway. Understanding The 48 Laws of Power

3 upvotes · 11 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Patrice's strict adherence to a no-bullshit policy is why he got kicked out of Hollywood. If my understanding is correct, he was making big money there, but he was always telling people what he thought of them. If he didn't like someone, he couldn't play sweet - he'd give them a funny look, make fun of them or outright disrespect them. His temperament meant he lacked the finesse necessary to gain power.

As someone who values both truth and cunning I keep it simple:

If I need to use cunning to get ahead I will, but if I don't then I keep it real. I keep it real as much as possible, but if that's going to fuck me over, then I will weave a web as intricate as the next guy if that's what it takes. This is what the game requires if you want to wield any measure of power. Anybody who says otherwise is lying.

It's getting harder and harder to lead a happy but average life as technology, demography and politics collectively fuck the common man. There's never been a more necessary time to learn Machiavellianism. It may be dirty, but it's necessary. You don't have to enjoy it, but you'll probably be better at it if you do.

Introducing Married Red Pill Flair

3 upvotes · 9 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

I agree with your post's reasoning, but probably wouldn't make the same choices, that you have/would.

This part here:

The vast majority of woman high enough in quality to even consider having kids with are not going into a child-rearing relationship without being married. Since it is said here (correctly) that marriage favors the woman, it stands to reason that a high quality woman would not enter a relationship that disfavors her.

If a high quality woman's going to force a false dichotomy on me "marry me or lose the pre-existing relationship" then I'd let her go. I won't be gamed like that. When you're educated in the game of power, you can see that for what it is. I won't be manipulated into acting outside of my interests and a woman pulling this sort of move is only making me like her less. This is not about me impressing her, it's about her impressing me. If she believes the case to be the reverse, I do not believe there is a future for either of us.

Marriage is so disadvantageous that regardless of the quality of the product it's a deal breaker (for me). If the lack of marriage is a deal breaker for her, then we part ways. A man should not compromise on his principles in this regard, she's not compromising on hers (because it benefits her) and so you definitely shouldn't on yours (because it benefits you).

If she won't compromise on her principles, that tells me I'm not worth compromising for (in her view) and in that case, we are not meant to continue being together. After all, women enforce rules on providers and violate them for alphas. If she's enforcing shit on me, that's definitely not a good sign - it's another sign we shouldn't be together.

I do not apply the reverse logic to myself (that if she was good enough, I'd compromise my principles for her) because the legal system is not designed to fuck her, it's designed to fuck me. She wants an abandonment safety net that supposedly exists to stop me from just walking out on her, which in reality does nothing but empower her to walk out on me. If she desired/wanted/respected me enough, she would respect the existential threat this represents to me and wouldn't want the legal leverage to fuck me should it suit her.

My powertalk argument: "if you really loved me, you wouldn't want the power to destroy me, and the fact you insist on this compels me to believe you're not the one."

I will always be far more willing to lose a woman than lose my freedom. If this means no LTR with what one considers a high quality woman, so be it.

3 upvotes · 22 January 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

I'm at that stage of life but you don't have to marry to have children! That point is completely omitted from the article.

You're right, and yes, it is, HOWEVER women will push and push for marriage and few quality women will be unwilling to tolerate the lack of legal security they have from remaining unmarried. It's like I say in the section on the female's perspective, marriage is their end goal and men are trying to avoid it, so we're at something of an impasse.

The piece does not explore all the potential options a man has, eg: cohabit but not marry with kids, have a rat pack and pick up hoes, be a solo world traveller, help a friend's family instead of having your own.. or whatever.

So if you want a family and kids, do it with the right women. Just don't get married.

I agree.

Not that I endorse it, but there's a reason women who get beat never leave their men (it's known as battered wife syndrome) - in fact a lot of the time they really love the man (they respect the power of violence) and blame themselves for "forcing him to punish her"

I think that's really fucked up shit, but true nonetheless. Women have evolved an element of masochism not present in men. It's not so common nowadays, but once upon a time, eg: 10,000 years ago - I suspect it was as normal as washing your animal hide clothing in the local river. Women in touch with their masochistic side get into BDSM and 50 shades of grey type shit precisely because this male rough-handling/violence is mostly absent in the modern day. This is also why violent bad boy types always get pussy and nice guys get nada, it's not just about attitude, it's about the allure of power inherent to violence (something you characterise as weakness).

I read a sociology study trying to reconcile how women who are feminists can be submissive in BDSM. The whole thing was fucking laughable, full of platitudes and hamstering about how holding your asshole open whilst being whipped and called a slut is empowering. One can hamster away our animal nature and how we came to be, but the signs are still there today. A so-called triumph of feminism is undone by women's carnal desires.

Being nice is biologically a "submissive" behavior

3 upvotes · 8 November 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

The funny thing about "manhood" is some people see it as "violating other peoples boundaries because they've wronged you" and others see it as "not reacting to and unemotionally handling people who violate your boundaries" - it seems even among men considered manly that's its undecided which constitutes manliness. A capacity for violence, or a strong emotional resilience. Some may say both when they see it outlined like this.

But I guess in truth, both are different styles of accepted masculinity and one doesn't respect the other. An idealist would say to incorporate both, but most of those who are emotionally resilient are not sporadically violent, and most of those with a tendency for violence are inclined to respond with it immediately rather than in a selective "violence in a box" type fashion.

Gotta pick your style, to the violent guy, the guy who asserts calmly, unrattled and controlled is a pussy because he doesn't seem aggressive. To the calm guy, the guy losing his cool very quickly is "trying too hard" "immature" and "out of control" so therefore "not a developed man."

Both think the other is less manly/alpha/dominant/whatever.

On another note, can he sue her for fraud? A contract is a meeting of minds, perhaps even a marriage contract.

As family law supersedes contract law, nope. When you see the rationale used in contract law (quite logical) and compare it to how family law is practiced (batshit insane) you begin to form an understanding of just how disparate and truly hypocritical the legal system is. Basically, contract law is equitable, if you get a shit contract, that's due to extenuating circumstances (eg: shit leverage/bartering power) but with family law (and thus the marriage contract) it isn't worth the paper it's written on. There's no penalty for violating the terms of the contract "no fault divorce." The whole thing is bullshit.

I often forget how limited the majority of people's attention span to the written word is. Don't get me wrong, I knew writing this long of a post was sure to get some flak. But in my mind, I omitted a lot of information I felt I should have dove deeper into to better cover the topic.

Haha I get this all the time when writing essays for my blog. I've had 2,200 word articles I thought could easily have been 4,000 word articles. And people think the 2,500 is long. It really isn't. But I suppose when your concentration sucks reading anything for 5 minutes seems like a long time.

Hypergamy in medical school

I think you've missed my point, so I'll state it more concisely: an education scarcely makes a woman any less vapid than her uneducated counterparts. Women are women, vapidness is almost a quality innate to the female disposition. You don't hammer vapidity out of a woman by educating her.

More than anything else I believe if there were anything that could destroy female vapidity it would be education. Education gives women the most potential to develop an intellectual curiosity into the mechanisms behind life's curtain, and yet such qualities are so incredibly rare among women that it leaves me questioning what exactly education does to women. It would appear education imbues women with knowledge, creating an appearance of intellect, but this knowledge seems all but divorced of any innate curiosity. Such women, as is typical, deem themselves the intellectual superiors of men who lack a formal higher education. But in actual fact it is many such men who possess the innate intellectual curiosity that women themselves lack, an incredible perversity if there ever was one.

Vapidity is likewise a product of sloppy or poorly thought out notions (normally rattling off however one feels, making superfluous observations etc) rather than original thought or skepticism stemming from curiosity and enquiry, the hallmarks of innate intellectualism.

There are more women than men obtaining degrees nowadays, and yet I would argue with an emphatic conviction that your average uneducated man is more cognisant and intellectually curious than his better educated female counterparts. It is simple: woman's innate fixation with the social, a herd mentality and a need to be liked/accepted is what drives vapidity, and no amount of education seems to eradicate it. Ergo, if a woman is not vapid, it is probably more an affectation of her natural makeup (eg: she's an autistic) rather than a product of her formal education. There are simply too many degree holding women who are incredibly vapid to dispel this notion.

And yet, despite the educational achievements of today's women, said success seems to have had zero to minimal effect on their hobbies and external interests. Education hasn't made women interesting. Education hasn't given women hobbies distinct from the uneducated. Education doesn't seem to expand the female mind, but rather, it just fills it. And that is sad, because in a era where "everything is a social construct," if anything could manage that, it'd be education. I'm at a loss to explain why things are this way, why the average woman with a law degree or biology degree would even give two remote fucks about Kim Kardashian, or whittle on with an infantile fascination of shoes (to give an example alluding to my sentiment, not definitive qualifiers of my sentiment) whilst typically having close to zero interest in more stimulating topics such as philosophy or politics, but there you go. That is the underwhelming reality of women.

And one woman will always pipe up and say she hates Kim Kardashian and loves Nietzsche, as I'm sure such a woman does exist, but she is the outlier. And to not realise she is an outlier and to make such a solipsistic assertion as a counter-argument in an attempt to disprove my sentiment is disingenuous at worst and plain dim and short-sighted at best. We are after all talking about the predilections of women as a group, not the impassioned snowflake who's read all of Nietzsche and prefers the company of men (perhaps because like her, we tend not to be quite so vapid? hmmm.)

And so it seems the innate nature of women persists in spite of their educational programming. And as many have rightfully alluded to in this thread, the suspicion is that many women aren't intellectual people at their cores, but that they rather possess the necessary IQ to go through the motions, to rote learn and pass tests - and that many do exactly this in order to access men with higher earning potential. Thus a woman can look great on paper with her BA, MA, LLB, BSC or whatever, but in terms of intellectual curiosity, she can remain rather dull and hence, vapid.

And it is with a certain earnestness that I believe men would be ecstatic if education made women more interesting - it's not that I want these assertions to be true - but rather that, my experience and observation suggests that it rather simply "just is." Ergo, it is unwise to assume education reduces vapidity in women. That intellectual topics can ever take a greater precedence in the female mind, as it does with the male, than social concerns.

You would be surprised just how many women are "educated" and yet lack an intellectual bone or original thought in their entire bodies. They are expert learners, clearly focused, disciplined and even "smart" in so much as they can grasp an idea or process - but they manage to achieve all of this without any semblance of intellectual curiosity or original thought - and I find this phenomenon absolutely fascinating. It is almost like dumping knowledge into a non-aware robot, it is intelligent, it can connect dots, but it is by its very nature not self-aware, curious - it just follows instructions. If you stop giving it knowledge, it stops looking for knowledge and never becomes anything more than it is. I see women as being much similar to the robot.

It is my view that most highly educated women are being programmed, following a programme, learning what is wanted and learning to produce that with competence rather than really blossoming into distinct intellectual free thinkers.

At the end of the day, most women are vapid, and we have to accept that. Wishing they weren't is futile. And women are unwise to try and convince us otherwise, for we have eyes and we have ears. We are oft bored by the trite that passes for "stimulating conversation" among women, and I think I am accurate in speaking for the majority of men in saying: we're not impressed. Better women don't try to insult our intelligence by pretending they're something that they're not. That more than even a fraction of them possess a quintessentially masculine curiosity for life's mechanisms, and will as such converse and show deep interest in anything beyond the realm of social dynamics.

Also from another comment I made in this thread on mothers who left a shitty guy:

Like I said, they're not all bad. Widows and genuine abuse gets a pass. That's not most single mothers in my view, however. When it comes to abuse I'm very suspicious of the mother's judge of character. Sure being naive/a poor judge of character isn't the same as being a shitty person, but the kids still end up paying for it. And so it's still bad for society. I would stress the woman's poor judge of character constitutes partial fault. Mainstream society will not allocate this partial fault.

In regards to women's strength in her cunning nature. Is it possible that cucolding is good for biological herd health, but it only works (i.e., is stable in society) if it is discreet?

Pretty much. Not a whole lot of men want to sweat and toil for offspring that isn't theirs. But that's why you have women upping the manipulation saying "it doesn't matter if you're the biological father, you were always there, you're his/her dad!" Why do women seem not as smart/funny/interesting as men?

3 upvotes · 2 August 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Interesting. Historically, I hear this was not the case. Are these compiled based on self-reports or simply whoever is named on the birth certificate? What was the methodology for data collection? Likewise, I wonder how many of the fathers included in the "81% of men reproduce" are simply cucks, and so do not actually reproduce.

If AF/BB is anything to go by, it would be rational to assume the "assigned father" rate would be higher than the genetic father rate. If those are rates for genetic maternity and paternity respectively, that's impressive. However, knowing how politicised (read: feminist influenced) gender in academia is, I always remain sceptical of such datasets.

going through the whole motion of her wanting me every day to ignoring me in a matter of days was more than I could have prepared for.

Been there buddy. It hurts. A lot. I call it "the switch" - it's the night and day between when a woman sees you as "the man" in her life, and then her seeing you as perhaps a beta orbiter at best. And all this can happen because of one event or conversation - literally within minutes (which you will become aware of over a few days as her plausible deniability for ignoring you wears thin.) Shit is brutal. Other men have likewise noted this tendency in women. Women are as quick to love as they are to hate. It is amazing how quickly revulsion for male weakness causes a woman to 180 her perception of you. I've known some crazy men, but they've always been pretty consistent in their love or hatred of someone. For women, love and hatred seem almost arbitrary. It's always about respect, and so it doesn't matter whether she says she loves you or says she hates you - if she respects you, she's yours for the taking.

They seem to be the last culture/religion withstanding the feminist onslaught. Although I suspect in places like UAE/Qatar/Bahrain aka the richer Arab nations that this influence is ever-growing.

You don't have to like Islam as a religion to respect their family values. IMO, their family values are solid. It's the one redeeming thing about the religion in my view. It's useful brainwashing bullshit that keeps the women in line and pushes men towards alphaness (which in turn helps keep the women in line.)

For me your post was good up until suggesting women shouldn't have the vote. That's a huge leap for me.

I suspected this would be the case (not just for you, but many.) Mainly because it sounds oppressive and hurts feelings, essentially it's a contemporarily radical idea on the overtone window. Doesn't really change my opinion as it has been stipulated, however, due to the logic of my argument withstanding.

I am being brutally honest with my logic here, not dressing things up in bullshit. Using logic to deduce "women should have the vote" is a futile process. Believe me, I've tried. I can't see the pluses. But I am really interested in hearing the pluses of female voting if anybody else can think of them. It's always good to hear the other side of an opinion (assuming that it's logically argued and not just political mud-slinging.)

I do think there is potentially a female victim mentality that perseveres that politicians exploit for their own ends though.

True to an extent. But it's actually a co-dependent relationship. Women get to raise Chad's babies on your tax dollar (or sterling) and government gets to expand itself creating more services to deal with all the women dependent on it. We call this phenomenon "big daddy government" because government basically replaced men in fulfilling women's basic needs. In the old days women HAD to be attached to a man to survive.

Now if a woman can't get a top-tier wealthy alpha male to take care of her she'll just use the strong arm of the law to forcibly take taxes from betas. Who unlike their predecessors, don't get any sex in return for their toil. They're just work drones taxed to death to pay for women they don't even know. Instead of being husbands who directly provide for a family. This is why MGTOW/men dropping out of society is becoming a thing, but that's another digression entirely.

Government can use its influence with women to more effectively legislate for things like increased CCTV, in the US, anti-gun laws, and whatever. Because women always vote for more safety and less freedom. This helps government become tyrannical. This is why governments love women. Governments give women free shit, and women give government diplomatic legitimacy to collectively fuck us up the butt with Orwellian policies. Government has a relationship with women it doesn't have with men. It gives women free shit and enables poor decision making, and in turn, women will vote for whatever government wants them to vote for.

The handouts are why women tend to vote left. It's also why women tend to vote more than men, as women can see their vote gaining them freebies, whereas many men don't see their vote serving them. And if everyone actually voted, with women voting left and men voting right, because men die younger and there is a higher infant morality rate for men, the electorate would be majority (51%) female anyway.

Wanna know who's gonna vote for a microchip to be put in your babies brain to protect it from terrorists or whatever other supposed boogeymen are out there? The baby's mother. Once she's convinced it's the safest option for her darling child, so she (as well as big daddy government) can track her kid from her iPhone 25 or whatever it'll be then.

I'm really not convinced on the benefits of women having the vote, and as you can see, I have outlined why I think it's bad.

If anyone can present to me the benefits of women having the vote, I'd be open to hearing them. I am sceptical to say the least.

If I know anything about the middle-class English people that make up the majority of the academic population (student and teacher alike) it's that as a collective they consist mainly of politically correct feminised lefty idiots. I bet voting UKIP at your local university is seen as doing a catholic Mexican blood ritual with Satan.

Things like TRP fly in the face of the kind of attitude and culture that universities and the people who attend them promote.

The funniest blatant inconsistency I find with such people is how they go on some huge egalitarian crusade over gay rights, gender, race or whatever other token social activism is hot at the moment.

Yet, when it comes to the real thing that segregates us - MONEY - WEALTH - PRESTIGE/CLASS - guess what? They don't give a shit. They're classist as fuck.

English people are obsessed with class which is why chavs are effectively the fucking antichrist in Britain, for they have no class AT ALL - a sin in British society. If you want the most blatant manifestation of this just look at the north-south divide and how accent links in with class. Northerners come down south and are seen as poorer/lower status despite their actual wealth, and southerners go up north and are seen as posher/higher status despite their actual wealth.

In fact, I wonder if my southern accent can get me some northern pussy because they perceive higher status? Could be an interesting little experiment.

My major gripe with my people is how fucking hypocritical they are. Social justice warriors on one hand, pompous self-righteous fucks on the other. Get the fuck outta here England, get the fuck outta here. As an addendum, academia is not inclusive and welcoming of the working class (who tend to be more naturally RP due to their struggles anyway.) It's not a perfect explanation. It is simply a way to understand how people perceive morality. Her husband wouldn't trust you and would think you are immoral even though you wouldn't do that to your friends. You wouldn't care, any sense of morality you possess you would not extend to that husband because you don't know him. You are proving my point.

If you are a psychopath any sense of altruistic morality would not even extend to your allies/friends because a psychopath's morality is completely utilitarianist. The majority apply their code of ethics to their ingroup and exploit the outgroup. The fool applies his set of ethics to everyone, the psychopath, no one.

So don't try to break things down into empathy-lords vs. psychopaths, because human emotion has many more gradations than that.

Everything is on a spectrum. This should be assumed, will you now insist on an exact decimal measurement of where you fall on the spectrum in order to concur with a valid idea or will you continue to miss the forest for the trees, not realising that what I have stated is a maxim rather than an axiom? It's not reasonable to expect someone to know things like that before the fact.

I agree, it's not reasonable, unfortunately, the fact it isn't reasonable didn't save OP from his fate. Whether you know an alliance exists or not has no grounding on what happens if you upset someone in the alliance. That's why it pays to do due diligence, make your own alliances and work out who everybody else is in bed with. Ideally, your boss/master/leader gives a shit about you, otherwise they'll sell you out for an ally.

If OP was better connected with his boss, he would know where the boss' alliances are and could either manoeuvre around them accordingly or gain more favour with the boss than the other guy did. If you are not Machiavellian, you won't do these things, and so "unfair" things will happen because you won't even realise you've broken an unspoken rule. You're effectively clueless within the organisation.

Knowledge is power, so you have to scout. Needless to say, that didn't happen, there was a hazard there without a hazard sign and OP didn't do his diligence. In some cases, even if you did diligence, you wouldn't have uncovered the relationship, perhaps it is taboo or otherwise unethical, and so you inadvertently outshine and get fucked up. Maybe that's what happened here, I don't know, I don't like to speculate too much about situations I don't have a full awareness of, otherwise things just become hypothetical fantasy.

It stands to reason that just because you didn't know you were outshining, or outshined accidentally, doesn't mean you didn't outshine. And the laws of power do not give a fuck whether you did it on purpose or not, if you do it, it will cost you. Power isn't fair.

Ah, I see. Yes. That actually makes sense. I'd agree with that, difficult for most to pull off though. A glib punchy line devoid of emotion that is well-timed. Gets its humour from the timing and not so much the joker's personal emotion. Of course, that's the exception to the rule rather than the rule. Most people who are funny are so because of the way in which they express how they feel rather than due to pure timing.

It annoys me because every time someone says mature people do this or that it's because they have a desired outcome and they're powertalking you into the "If I do this I'm mature" thinking. The feminists want beta bucks and they use "be more mature" to achieve it

Yeah, I hate that shit too. If you're at the level where you can see this for what it is (and it sounds like you are) then it's nothing other than another's arrogance annoying you. It won't actually influence your behaviour.

Is The Concept Of Psychopathy Making You Weak?

3 upvotes · 4 June 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Whatever your goals, you probably won't get far in life if you're not surrounded by high-quality people who trust you.

They have chronic trust issues, they know how they are and what they are capable of, and so this taints how they see others. If someone is capable of great betrayal, and is actively ready to betray should it be profitable - they will always be on the lookout for the seeds of betrayal in others. The psychopath tends to be a paranoid individual, no matter how cool and detached they may seem on the outside. Of course there are all kinds of "psychopathic styles," some have superficial charm, some don't. Some prefer physical violence to mental violence, some prefer mental, some actively do both (and thus are in prison, only those who favour mental violence go undetected enough to be successful.)

Women don't care though, they send letters to psychopaths in prison, "the failures." They don't care. They'll fuck any psychopath. An uncomfortable truth for society, but it is what it is.

I believe in "the psychopathic paradigm" I discussed how lonely the psychopath can be. But this is how they are, it cannot be cured. It just is. They cannot trust people they don't have control/leverage over or dirt on. They are pathologically distrustful, they don't trust because they like someone like most do, but only if it's logical to do so from a Machiavellian point of view. Their loyalty is reasonable instead of emotional, which is why it is, in and of itself, more fickle. There are downsides as well as upsides.

Fetishing psychopathy is as stupid as pretending it's irrelevant, it is effectively two opposing sides of the same idiocy.

The Hierarchy of Love

3 upvotes · 2 June 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

I don't believe even the Leonardo DiCaprios of the world could achieve this. I agree with the original analysis from Rollo that women are simply incapable of offering men this kind of unconditional love.

Astute to pick up on that semanticism there. Technically speaking all love is conditional. A woman's love for her child is based on the condition it has her genes. Semantics aside, the answer is a dark triad man. Women are incredibly loyal, to a point of absurdity even, when it comes to such men. There is a certain possession of mind that takes place. I'll throw you a bone, trauma bonding. In light of that, it is something the vast majority of men need not concern themselves with, because they will never experience it and I certainly cannot endorse such a thing. It simply is what it is. For all intent and purpose, Rollo is of course correct.

Civilization & Feminist Dogma

3 upvotes · 29 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

This article is an updated version of my previous work "The Feminist Thought Police."

Changes:

- Article had a name, URL and image update.
- It's about 1,100 words longer than the old article.
- It's more coherent than the older version.
- It's been reformatted into my new "book format", meaning the article is split into sections. It makes the article look less intimidating, and if you only want to read up to a certain point due to attention issues or what have you then it's easier for you to pick up from where you last read.

For all intent and purposes, it's a new article.

Excerpt:

1.) Introduction:

Asking “why do people hate the red pill?” is like asking “why do feminists hate anti-feminists?” it is simple, we are viewed as “the opposing team.” By reading red pill content you become aware of the masculine’s unfiltered societal viewpoint. By agreeing with it, you accept a system of thought which undermines the status quo of feminine primacy. Thus it is so that through mere act of association with the manosphere, devoutly feminist society deems you sinfully tainted.

The church of feminism will tolerate no blasphemous dissent, for anything that disagrees with feminism is by its own interpretation, misogynistic. By asserting the masculine viewpoint as primary, or even, a valid counterpoint to the feminist viewpoint, you are immediately identified as a misogynist. This means the rabid social justice horde that currently passes for “society” is out to hang your head on a pike merely for having a different set of beliefs. Expressions of thought incongruent with the feminist narrative are so socially unacceptable at present, that they are deemed invalid merely by merit of being non-feminist, let alone anti-feminist.

2.) Controlling The Social Narrative:

It is the job of both feminists and their enablers to prevent unfiltered masculine ideas about gender from “polluting” the mainstream consciousness. The societal hive mind therefore rationalises away anti-feminist argument as “backwardly patriarchal,” meaning: irrelevant, bigoted and outdated. You will then hear at some point among the verbal cacophony that will invariably occur “that people like you are the reason feminism exists.” In reality, the reason young boys and men seek out the manosphere and its wealth of knowledge to begin with is because of the gross negative impact that feminism has had on them, as well as those around them.

Despite the damage feminism has wrought across the developed civilizations of Earth; many an individual has become personally invested in the ideology due to psychiatric problems. Feminism is like any ideological dogma; it creates codependency in the individual as they live by the tenets of the ideology. When a sense of identity is built upon a belief system, removing the ideology the self is built upon causes inordinate psychological problems for the individual. The most radicalised segments of feminism are perverse relationships between an ideology that commands blind obedience, and a mentally unwell individual who needs a platform to grant their hysterical ramblings legitimacy. However, not all believers of the feminist religion are so staunch, dedicated or ideologically self-aware. There are many who do not self-identify as feminist, but buy into many of the ideology’s beliefs due to their cultural ubiquity.

Read the rest by clicking on OP.

Got an article on the dark triad in the works, too. People get upset when I write about things they're not interested in. Remember that Illimitable Men caters to multiple interests under one umbrella, much like TRP. Enjoy.

Is it a natural proclivity to manipulate or is it that men are easy to manipulate when it comes to women?

In my opinion, both.

Think about how many men get convinced strippers or hookers actually like them while handing over money?

It's easy to sell a belief to someone who wants to believe regardless of truth. These girls know these guys would love it if the girls actually like them "for them" (delusion/ego based) so the women "service that need" as part of the overall service. That, and it keeps the guy returning and spending more. The funny thing is, these girls start complaining when the guy gets too obsessed, even though they're leading him on for his money.

From what I know, strippers and women with high notch counts are in the market of manipulating men consciously and without mercy. They combine their innate Machiavellianism with rational Machiavellianism in tandem.

On Anger

3 upvotes · 12 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

If whining is "complaining until somebody else does something about my issues" I agree. And I disagree with whining in personal and social life. Politically is where the line blurs. You don't get your own way in politics by being angry and IDGAF. You have to be a professional whiner. That's why feminism has morphed into what it has today, and why men haven't spoken up and done anything about it. They think to engage in the political process by "whining back" is unmanly. So they keep quiet. To their own detriment.

On Anger

3 upvotes · 12 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Yes. It's quite insidious how "feminine primacy" which is essentially the point of view that benefits the interests of women insidiously dominates the social fabric as a cultural norm. Single mothers definitely don't help because they deprive boys of an at-home male role model whilst simultaneously compounding the damage done by instilling him with values that are mainly of benefit to women. In fact the prevalence of single motherhood fuels the "modern crisis in masculinity" in large part.

The media buys into it because women control disproportionate amount of money and simply wants to sell them. It's not completely without blame though, the media also spreads feminism as a kind of ideology for lining it's pockets. It hijacks the belief system to push products. All you have to do is go buy a woman's magazine and you'll see exactly what I mean. It's insane. Women whether they are feminist or not are also better advocates, read: "whiners." They are better at communicating specific viewpoints and wearing people/organisations down until they get their own way. Whether that is beneficial, rational, or not to larger society. Convince women something and they'll all protest/whine/economically threaten people/companies until they get what they want.

Politically as a group, men are inferior advocates for their needs compared to women. Many men are just weak, others think it's unmanly to say what you deserve/how things should be (men don't moan, they endure.) This is all well and good in small-scale relational dynamics, but politically this gets exploited by the radicals that are third wave feminists. Because you're trying to have a stiff upper lip, you don't stand up for your rights - even if you realise feminists are infringing upon them.

Most men are surrounded by the opinions and propaganda of women, feminism and neoliberalism/cultural marxism (aka: the SJW disease,) but are never taught how to be effective men. The reason for this is these people and the ideologies they follow view men as a threat to their idea of utopia. It's really sad. This phenomenon of disempowered men and predatory women has obviously become so commonplace that it has led to the emergence of the red pill. Where men say "enough's enough" I want to get my balls back, and I want to understand what the fuck is going on!

Before reading the red pill, all the female-dominated talking points society adheres to was something that I knew and felt to be wrong but couldn't properly express. I just knew when something wasn't logical, or when I was being subjected to bullshit. That society was so avoidant of truth, and insisted on regurgitating obviously untrue dogma, such as all groups of people being equal and blah blah. Socialist/commie nonsense.

TRP takes you down the rabbit hole and tells you how deep shit goes, allowing for a fuller understanding. The whys, the hows and what you can do to be a confident self-actualised man in control of his life rather than the sycophantic pussy licker that feminists, single moms, big government and the media would have you become should you not find a space like this.

I'm of the opinion that every advantage comes with a susceptibility to a polarising disadvantage. There's no such thing as "perfect."

I do believe in justice and honor, and I even slow down for squirrels on the road, but I still have something dark inside me that could potentially cause harm for what I would perceive as justice.

That is incredibly normal. The revenge instinct is strong in all people, not just DTs. Whether you act on it or not is the decider. And if you do act on it and then enjoy the fucked up shit you did, then there you go - sadism confirmed. Satisfying one's curiosity can be a dangerous pursuit.

Depends. Are you going into monk mode to avoid socialising, or are you going into monk mode because you genuinely believe you're a sack of shit and need to find some self-esteem based on personal achievement for people to like you? The prior means you have a fear that needs confronting, the latter means you're broken and need to fix yourself.

Also ask yourself this: if you monk mode all of college and "get ripped, smarter, and save money" are you going to be one of these guys who starts whining he doesn't have access to half the women he did when he was in college once college is over?

Be honest with yourself. That can be hard. Ask yourself: "Will I ever feel like I missed out if I don't fuck a few college chicks?" if the answer is yes, don't monk mode for 2 years. Perhaps intermittently. Do 3 months on, 3 months off. See how it goes and how different people are to you each time you come out and you're a little more ripped/confident/happier etc. You don't have to do 3 months off, 3 months on. Perhaps 3 months on and 1 month out to test the waters is best for you. You know you and your situation better than me, so this is your choice.

Don't be a slob when you come out, keep your good habits you've learnt up, you'll just be doing a lot less reading in your evenings to go out/socialise/apply what you've learned.

fiancé (fairly hot chick) of her oldest friend (a guy)

Dollars to doughnuts her and her "oldest guy friend" have history and have hooked up before.

They don't particularly like each other but she wanted advice from her desperately about her fiancé.

This girl has feelings for her oldest guy friend that translate into wanting sole possession of him as an orbiter. This fiance chick acts as pre-selection/dread on the girl you were fucking, making her oldest guy friend seem more attractive. Now the girl your fucking is jealous and the other woman was dumb enough to trust her (buying into the same passive act routine that you did.) When they had this chat, the fiance wanted "cheat codes" for controlling the guy, but instead the girl you were fucking poisoned the well and fed her misinformation to fuck up their relationship that she was jealous of. All of a sudden, marriage is off and your girl is hooking up with her "oldest guy friend." Did you miss a beat there, eh? All women are Machiavellian my friend, all of them.

Again, no sign of lies as she tells this.

Hahahahahahahahahahahahahahaha

She's feeling a lot better by the end.

Tampons have a tendency to dry up spillages. She used you as an emotional tampon here and you let her because you wanted to fuck (beta move.)

Where on earth did this come from?

You would have been sex on the side for her and beta but you disqualified yourself by dropping the pretence briefly and giving fucks when she needed someone to give a fuck. Oldest friend boy is there for that, not you. He was always a friend because he was a fucking faggot, but now that he "got over her" and has a new girl, the girl you were fucking is attracted by jealousy and her ego "can't believe he stopped pining for her and found someone else" so she's putting him back on the hook in typical female fashion, except this time she's willing to give up pussy for it. It won't last long because he's a ponce, and she will look for side cock eventually.

She's seriously stressed out of her mind so I get her to relax and talk about it.

You left your alpha fucks role. That is a mistake, if you're going to do that you may as well girlfriend her up.

I haven't replied to the text because I don't see any worthwhile reason to reply.

A correct choice, although I suspect your ego is nagging at you, the revenge instinct, the want to punish her for dropping you "how dare she!" - don't give into it. Going ghost is the correct move here. Now I've just read your name in OP, I know it's your ego. You have to be careful with your ego, it's your greatest asset and your biggest weakness, a double-edged sword if you will.

At the same time obviously I think I could have been too beta in sorting out her need to vent. (I approached that in a stoic fashion, no big reactions to anything, no emotional outbursts at any time. Just calm.)

A shoulder to cry on is still an emotional tampon.

Any alternatives on how I should react apart from just ignoring the text and moving on.

If you really want to fuck with her and can't get over the revenge thing, tell her the last time you had sex she didn't satisfy you and you were going to ask that the two of you just remain friends (so you FRIENDZONE her) ...then you make her jealous and fuck her later/make her cheat on her man. Yeah, it's dark, yeah you love it.

What is worse is the third/fourth explanations which are that this was outside of my control from the start. She was an orbiter to this guy who's finally felt crap enough to accept her. Or this guy is extremely good looking or very rich and successful and all that overrides everything else since she's looking to settle down long-term and have a family.

Read between the lines. He is getting married, he has a fiance, it's serious. All of a sudden your girl talks to his fiance and now they're splitting up and your girl is getting with him? Maybe he's rich, more likely her ego couldn't stand to see him happy with another woman so she poisoned the well and reasserted herself as the #1 woman in his life. Women are childish and manipulative like this, and this my friend is the most prominent red flag here. Of course I do not know this 100% happened, but look at the facts available and connect the dots, she looks very guilty of wrongdoing whilst trying to keep face.

I'm not sure I can actually gain anything useful from this. (That genuinely pisses me off.)

This is what my comment is for. You essentially fell for a woman's charms, part of you thought she was different because she did the "conservative reserved good girl routine" but then she's sabotaging her "male best friend's" wedding and fucking you on the first night. Come on bro, she's a hoe, but she's got good game so you fell for her bullshit. You're more gullible than you'd like to admit, and that's fine, some of these chicks are fucking shrewd, they really play the part well.

My head doesn't feel like it's on straight at the moment thanks to this colossal mindfuck of a text.

Thank me later.

He was a late blooming natural who figured it all out for himself, growing up poor in the hood and getting sent to prison on an untrue accusation of rape, Patrice was given enough shit by life to seriously consider what the hell is going on. His humour and ferocity are admirable, although those very same things are what make him inaccessible to his detractors (he's an ape! he's crazy! blah blah.) People place a lot of value on delivery, his delivery makes him accessible to most men and anyone downtrodden, but not so much those who are privileged enough to have sensibilities and reject him on the basis he is morally inferior to them.

Good shit dude. My opinion: degrees aren't profitable if they're not STEM, so if you're not going to do a STEM degree, realise you're studying for leisure/out of your own interest. Don't expect your degree to give a great ROI, even if it is relevant to your current day job. Of course, do the maths: price of degree vs. wage increase from gaining a degree. Extrapolate the number of years taken to make back what you spent on your degree by looking at the difference between your old wage (without a degree) and the new wage you'll get once you have a degree. EG: if your degree cost $40,000 , your old wage was $55,000 and your new wage is $70,000 then you're looking at a 2.5 year~ window for your degree to pay for itself. If a degree takes 20 years or something to pay for itself, it's not economically viable, you're pissing money away. Better off investing that 20% in stocks or capital instead.

It's pretty crazy what women who will do for a man in the top 5%

Not every man can be the top 5%, so this is an invalid strategy for the other 95% of men. Seems deludedly egotistical to teach every man they can be the top 5%, it's a mathematical impossibility. Some men won't be old men until they get there, assuming they'll get there. If you're young/not rich, DT game is the way to go, get some experience playing the head game with women as well as some notches under your belt whilst you're at it. Good training for handling your angel bitch if you make the top 5, 10 or whatever arbitrary % one thinks they must become to satisfy the pareto principle.

Do women want chaste men?

3 upvotes · 24 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Would being physically attractive/socially dominant/having other women want him make him "proven" though?

Yes, it's been proven by eye gaze data among other things that women spend more time looking at men who are with other women, the inference being they are more attractive to said women, if not at least more "interesting." Anecdotaly, men have first hand experience of being more desired when they have partners than when they do not, having other women indicates to a woman on a subconscious level "that he's good enough." Preselection really is a fascinating phenomenon, and it makes your value appear higher. A man with a beautiful woman on his arm is more attractive to women around him than if he would be by himself (even when all else is equal.)

The only thing being sexually promiscuous would give him experience at is...well, sex, and I've never had it but it doesn't seem that difficult.

Heh, you have a lot of life changing experiences to explore. Many women get addicted to cock. Sex is something you can't really talk about until you've done it. And even then, there's lots of ways to do it. The Indians wrote a book about it and made it an art. There many types of sex, as well as positions etc. The Sex God Method by Daniel Rose and Kama Sutra are essential reads. Sex is a lot more than duty missionary sex.

I suppose if he's so absolutely sheltered he doesn't know to put the dick in the vagina that's bad. Otherwise I'm sure he can figure it out.

A man who hasn't put dick in a vagina before is not confident about it despite his horniness (I remember my first time, I shudder.) It's less about the fact he's sexually experienced to women and more about the fact that other women find him desirable. Women find men attractive who are seen to be desired by other women - in essence, that is how preselection works. He has been pre-selected by a woman, female instinctual logic is "other women think he's worth giving sex to, therefore, he probably is, because they can't all be wrong!" funny thing is - they can be, but that doesn't change the instinct or how a woman feels when she sees a man with beautiful women or who is believed to have had many beautiful women. Note: the power of preselection is more pronounced when a woman can physically see a man with another woman (especially if that woman is prettier than her) than when she is merely lead to psychologically believe he has had many women.

Edit: a typo (can't type as quick as I think it would seem!)

Sports are immune to feminist ideology because results are so transparent.

Also because all that exercise tends to raise mental health/testosterone and reduce mental fog/a proclivity towards bullshit. Exercise seems to make us more in sync with our natures and "it feels right." A lot of today's problems are in part, a symptom of sedentarism (physical inactivity changing our biological makeup.) The feminist bullshit is likewise synthetic and benefits very few people, least of all, young boys doing football (soccer.)

When you're in a place of power, a great way to give back is to help young boys. Single mothers and beta provider daddies don't give them the tools they need to harness their nature, and these poor kids are frustrated.

Does the AWALT scale measure solipsism, or other factors?

Yes. AWALT applies to many things: solipsism, hypergamy, branch-swinging, AF/BB. All of that stuff. Culture and upbringing don't undo the hardwired programming, just what it takes for these behaviours to show. Eastern cultures tend to suppress it, whereas western culture actually encourages it (eg: incentivising divorce instead of disincentivising it.)

And the moment passed. Women's words aren't worth much, solipsism and a lack of honour equates to weak, fickle words that lack consistency, congruency or accountability. She'll say whatever she has to say to save her ass when she's in trouble, and any promise she makes lasts only for as long as how she felt when she made said promise. If the emotion dies? So does the promise. If she feels the opposite of how she used to feel, she will now believe the exact opposite of what she promised before. No emotion lasts forever. Women are great liars, they are honourless, their word means nothing, and even when they really mean what they say, at best, it was only true in the moment. At the worst, she hamstered herself into temporarily believing something that aligns with your views so she could give a stellar performance in persuading you of her loyalty. Rethinking Emotions

I guess I should have added to my post how you use specific emotions to your advantage

Oh definitely.

'If you want something really important to be done you must not merely satisfy the reason, you must move the heart also.' — Mahatma Gandhi

Unfortunately, logic and emotion are intertwined, any perceived separation of either is merely an illusion. You either have a strong emotional preference to have logic dictate your perception, so ironically have a strong emotion as a basis for rational preference, or logic is legitimately dwarfing emotion in your mind to the point that you believe emotion has no influence (even though it does ever so slightly.)

Channelling/redirecting emotion towards desired goals is more productive for the individual than the total annihilation of emotion itself. Ironically without emotion, you probably less desire, and without desire, you lose motivation. So emotion is incredibly important, it just needs keeping in check. I'll probably develop that comment, my thoughts here, and a few other thoughts pertaining to this topic into a blog post, so look out for that.

You can squeeze lemon into hot water and mix it with honey for a sweet, healthy drink, but I find I see more benefit in my skin when I drink the lemon juice raw (and without honey,) meaning, unheated/not mixed with hot water (which I have no doubt kills off some of the nutritious value of the lemon juice.) I use my skin as a barometer of health, whatever makes it look best, I assume is probably healthiest for me.

A leader has power and high status. Their justification is seen as necessary in particularly grave situations. But often that's a kind of duplicitous justification, I'm talking specifically about "honest justification" here.

A pawn has no power, their justification is easily construed as a pathetic excuse, and often is.

Likewise the leader should not bumble, that is to say: constantly justify. "Justify only when necessary" may be a maxim to consider. Good post.

It is my belief that very few of these guys actually embrace and feel comfortable with what they are. These kinda guys are normally insecure and not comfortable with themselves that whole "something is off, but I'm not quite sure what it is thing" going on. Usually they're the sons of single mothers who never had an ounce of masculine influence/culture in their lives. They're faggots because being a faggot is all they know, not necessarily because they just lurrrrrrrrrrve being a faggot. I've seen guys who were faggy straighten out after spending time with a long lost uncle or got a new job and the guys were alpha there. These guys naturally defer to more masculine men as well because their socialisation was feminised. Think plenty of guys like this would appreciate a space to "be a man" and "learn what masculinity is."

I don't hate atheists per se, I do find their more vocal elements to be annoying and obnoxious. I do find the whole notion of going out of your way to discredit "God" to be a waste of time. There are far more productive things atheists could do, eg: offer an alternative to religion, perhaps a philosophical framework people could live by devoid of the scaremongering manipulation of hell and heaven.

Perhaps make your own stories like Nietzsche did with "Thus Spoke Zarathustra" or Rand did with "The Fountainhead" to illustrate points and principles, but be explicit in stating they are fictional stories lest some idiot in 2,000 years decides all that shit actually happened and is an accurate depiction of history and that you all have to fucking pilgrimage to the metaphorical places described in the stories. You don't need that idiocy creeping in to what you try to create, but this is the danger with creating stories and having them misinterpreted.

This would be far better than taking the collective piss out of religion. The atheist movement seems asinine to me. Although you do make a valid point in saying that if one was brainwashed to follow religion then breaking free of such programming is an achievement. That is a most agreeable statement. That is perhaps the only productive element I can see atheism serving. As a replacement for religion however? No. Good for undoing brainwashing, not good for giving one moral guidance. In fact I would argue some could use atheism to justify immorality. "What's the point, God doesn't exist." Cue the existential nihilism any moment now...

You have to calibrate the topic of discussion to mutual interests. If the other dude lifts or is married, he will probably find those topics interesting because he can relate to them. If you are glib with intellectuals, they will not enjoy your company. If you are intellectual with non-intellectuals, they will not enjoy your company. It's all about calibration. Discover any common threads and use them to find more. If the person doesn't want you to try and bridge a connection in this manner, ignore/next them.

That article link if not satire is written by a massive narcissist. It's obvious. All about "winning" "attention" and essentially getting validated at all and any expense. Also note the obscene "I'm the prize mentality."

Winning is our mechanism to get the ultimate prize: power and control. There's nothing more important to a betch than being on top.

TRP is equalising the playing field, and women hate that. They can't win against men who "get it."

The more you justify, the more exposure you have to BP faggots who pick out unimportant details and relentlessly focus on them to intentionally miss the point

It's a very disingenuous debating method. It's what people who want to seem logical (pseudo-rational) but are actually butthurt and want to undermine you employ. If I'm getting pedantic myself and want to know an additional detail, I will ring fence my concern as not to intentionally detract from the central line of discourse, eg: "I know this isn't relevant to the main point, however there was one thing I was curious about: bla bla bla."

When people are being disingenuous, they don't ring fence minor concerns or queries, they try to negate your main point by basically drowning it in a sea of mediocre pedantic bullshit. I call it logical antagonism. When someone is almost autistic in fallacy identification, misses the main point and tries to refute everything by constantly asking for evidence and not providing their own meaningful input - I call that "citation needed fallacy." As in, the assumption that a lack of scientific evidence is enough to conclude that a point being made is null and void (it isn't, writing a point off due to a lack of academic study is fallacious in and of itself.) We get this from blue pillers. They just scream "confirmation bias" at highly corroborated directly observed phenomenon along a cultural and economic demographic cross-section.

Realise when someone is trying to drown you with pedantic bullshit and disengage. Such people will normally use provocation to attempt to keep you in the game, because they want to use your uncontrolled reactions against you as proof of "what they thought to begin with anyway." and to prove "you don't know what you're talking about." To them it's about discrediting you and tarnishing your reputation, not learning anything new, reaching a reasoned conclusion or anything else honest to the realm of logic and philosophy. To them it's Machiavellian. It's all a head game/mind fuck trying to pass itself off as seasoned debate. In fact, even as far as British politics go, most controversial discussions are exactly this theatrical "tear my opponent down" nonsense rather than valuable, clear-headed, reasoned debate.

The only thing worse than an irrational person is an irrational person posing as rational. It's a sheep in wolf's clothing - fuck what they think. Usually an idiot who can't think critically that did a 4 year bachelors degree in the humanities and learnt a few terminological words who throws that around to create a veneer of intelligence. Easy to see through if you are "truly" intelligent (I hate using truly in that way - makes me think of the no true scotsman fallacy.)

Note: I'm speaking more here about blue pill men who try to argue with you, not so much women, although you get a few women with a shitty bachelors who try these kind of antics too. Those ugly, unloved SJW types. It's impossible to make cogent arguments when you view the world through a lens of patriarchy and "MUH OH-PREH-SHUN!" When your logic stems from an untruthful origin point, you effectively rationalise everything into obscurity due to your narrow minded perception. It's a monumentally large slippery slope lost on the arguer. It's like making arguments through the lens of Kim Jong whatever as supreme leader (Juche ideology,) or that Allah's word is infinitely more valuable than the human word. The basis and origin for your thoughts is so polluted, irrational and corrupt, that nothing you say in debate has much chance of making any sense. Your origin point is effectively false, but you operate on that due to indoctrination. You lack a deductive origin point, people need "re-educating" read "brainwashing" to agree with your point, because a logical mind would never reach the same conclusions that your origin point preaches. Of course, even broken clocks are right twice a day, so there's that.

I distinguish between power talk and deliberate ambiguity which is more akin to laws of power: "create unpredictability by holding them in suspended terror" and "say less than necessary" and "act royal."

Those things are to be employed when she doesn't need to know your plans/or understand what goes on behind the scenes. When giving instructions, one should be clear about what those instructions are. Ambiguity does not serve your ends there.

How you feel as a man, how you communicate and boundary setting. Useful for interacting with women in general, but especially LTR game.

3 upvotes · 7 January 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

When you talked about getting a feel for that, are you thinking of her own personal boundaries?

That's part of the equation. So is the "situation" - effectively your comfort/attraction levels relative to each other. You need to constantly calibrate and update your relational awareness. Relationship dynamics can change abruptly. When someone is in a bad mood, they need to be punished to become receptive at a later time. When someone is in a good mood or at least reasonable, you can communicate less aggressively. Aggression (even mental) must be outmatched to be beaten. Stalemates and avoidance do not fix the issue at hand.

Also, when voicing expectations, are you talking about doing straight talk contrary to power talk

Yes. Power talk is a sales pitch. If you are always trying to convince people something is amazing, you come across as a hustler/a fake. One of those annoying marketing guys. "So for JUST 3 BLOWJOBS and a bit of anal you can get a fabulous meal at the town's finest Italian restaurant! This deal will not last forever! Usually we offer this service for a menage-a-trois and 15 BLOWJOBS but to celebrate the start of 2015 we're offering you the chance to get it for anal and 3 blowjobs!" - I get even a sniff of anything like that and my mind says "fuckoff!" Most hardened business guys are the same, as are women with any ounce of intelligence or experience. This shit works best on naive people or "clueless" I think the gervais principle calls them.

You see power talk has a time and a place but neither that time nor place is when telling someone what you expect of them. You cannot and should not set boundaries with power talk. You use straight talk. You use power talk to sell people ideas/concepts/hide concrete information/inspire (like Di Caprio's call to arms speech in Wolf of Wall Street.) Power talk is effective on clueless people, but it pisses off everyone else because it communicates subtextually "you are trying to manipulate me in a very obnoxious way that offends my self-awareness." Women are full of shit, so often they know when other people are feeding them shit. They have good bullshit detectors. Contrary to popular belief, women fall for guy's bullshit not because they're unaware of it - but because regardless of his bullshit he is attractive. Women are like "I know this guy is full of crap, but omg he's so hot!" and that's why they make shitty decisions and despite their better judgement, get on board with his bullshit. It's tingles over awareness almost every time when it comes to women.

Conclusion: straight talk is superior to power talk in outlining your expectations. The only "power" you need is in your actions. Abandonment/calculated deprivation are better than sales pitches for showing you're serious about what you say - they effectively back up your straight talk. Straight talk can manifest as instructional imperatives (commands) they don't have to be uncalibrated autistic blabberings as Gervais so crudely frames them.

Random: feels weird using straight talk and power talk concepts here, I never got fully on board with the gervais principle.

On a serious note, great points. Women always be blame shifting. Especially women who have made TERRIBLE AND IMPORTANT life decisions with dramatic consequences. That's why when a woman tells me "I'm applying for a management position" I laugh my fucking ass off and feel sorry for the poor cunts that have to work beneath her if she gets it. You have to be able to take the blame for things if you want to be good in management. Even most the chicks I know say they prefer to work under men, not women.

What would be the Machiavellian approach to trade it for sex without directly asking for sex?

Strongly imply your desires and dangle the carrot. If she knows what you want from her and can see in plain sight what she wants from you, she will with all likelihood be more than willing to "trade." That is the female extinct, you see: to prostitute one's self to get ahead when there are no alternatives. Women follow the path of least resistance, and laying on your back with your legs spread is hardly hard. Extreme sounding? Perhaps, but from what my collective experiences have taught me: truthful.

You will get this from purple/blue pillers. They will say "it's shitty when women do it too!, we don't condone that" but here's the thing: they are part of the collective mass who do fuck all to punish women for that behaviour, passively enabling it, but swarm around like vultures when a man is seen doing it. Seeing as they're all tip-toeing around your question here, by being evasive/non-committal, enjoy a direct answer:

Why the double standard? Because feminism has made western societies "feminine-primary" that means: women come first and are seen as more important than men. They dress it all up in talk of "equality" and egalitarianism, talk about how men "owe" women reparations due to patriarchy and fabricated historic oppression, but essentially everything this ideology does is to empower middle class white women at the collective expense of men of all backgrounds. This is the funniest thing about male feminists, they are invested in an ideology that gives no shits about them and will drop them whenever it's convenient. Feminism has taught modern men and women that women can do whatever the fuck they like and if men try to discipline them or call them out on their bullshit that they're being "oppressive" or "creepy" or "controlling" or any other number of socially-charged buzzwords which communicate in a nutshell: "shut the fuck up, put up with her shit, and stop trying to make her stop she's EMPOWERED!!!! IF YOU KEEP TRYING TO CONTROL HER JERK YOU'RE GOING TO BE IN DEEP SHIT."

Disciplining women can be dangerous, they can accuse you of violence to the authorities, say you raped them or any amount of shit and you are guilty until proven innocent. If a woman calls the police on you and says you were violent, that's enough to get you put in a cell, even with an absence of evidence. You are guilty until proven innocent, a woman's word is enough to have you locked away. Just because women don't go around doing this all the time, it doesn't mean that this power doesn't get abused, isn't grossly unfair or incredibly dangerous. If it is a woman's final option to save her own skin, expect her to sacrifice you to the system. We live in crazy times where men are subject to morality by larger society, but women get a free pass time and time again. There is a subreddit which explores this phenomenon called /r/pussypass. Women are more Machiavellian than men because:

- 1.) They have a natural flair for manipulation. It comes pretty naturally to them (lying, gossiping, making up rumours to damage reputations/misinformation campaigns, blame-shifting, crying to manipulate/get own way, withholding important information etc.)
- 2.) Society will rationalise away their manipulations as the fault of the nearest man, saying he made her act in the way she did by threatening or scaring her, thus shifting the blame away from her. Society (blue pillers) have a huge problem with the sheer concept that women are capable of bad/immoral acts and in fact do them all the time. So whenever a woman does something bad, they find a way to justify it as "acceptable" or otherwise not her fault. Women tend to play the victim when they are found with their knickers down and their hands dirty. They will almost always scapegoat a man to save their own skin, and everyone will eat it up like a bunch of idiots. When you are a woman it is incredibly easy to blame shift your flaws onto a man and have society validate that by vitiating your responsibility, thus only further perpetuating her shitty behaviour.

Whereas a man can only shout at a woman, maybe she has been rude/crazy and deserves to be intimidated, and people will think perhaps he's abusive and that "you never raise your voice to a woman!" as if her highness is so important that even when she is being neurotic, you cannot even be slightly intimidating in response. Does she need any help, is she ok? Does she want somewhere else to stay? Some blue pill asshole that's on this board will walk up to you and say "HEY BRO LEAVE THE LADY ALONE" and start going all white knight save-a-hoe. Society cares about women and looks out for them, but society/strangers give no fucks about men. Men are just meant to "suck it up" and always take the fall for woman's bullshit. Of course an increasing number of men have had enough of this completely and utterly one-sided unjust horse shit and want no part in it any more. That's one of the reasons we have the red pill.

Is fucking married women an objectively efficient sexual strategy? Much more efficient to fuck bar/club sluts. I have argued it is not an efficient strategy (needless destruction, high chance of revenge from her allies/kids etc.)

Therefore, the strategy itself is amoral even if committing the use of the strategy is immoral

Without meaning to psychoanalyse too much, if your post is true you sound like someone who resented his peers in childhood so thus grew into a misanthrope. Now armed with more knowledge and experience, you aim to "make the world pay" and "get yours." You are a man driven by revenge. Fair enough, but it isn't a need for revenge that makes you a man. Being honest with yourself about who you are and doing whatever the fuck you want anyway in spite of your own corruption makes you a man. Maybe not a noble or respectable one, maybe not even a likeable one, but you are certainly a man because you are self-aware.

Women and Intellect

3 upvotes · 26 December 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Women are women. Women with superior upbringing will have learned behaviours which give them strong impulse control and allow them to foresee situations which could cause them to be adulterous and thus avoid said situations. This is more a matter of breeding than it is intellect, although for the sake of pedanticism I suppose one could argue increased self-awareness = higher intelligence and therefore it is the intelligence responsible for the gains made here. Realise a 90 IQ women with this knowledge and strong impulse control would harbour similar traits, she doesn't need to be a rocket scientist, it's something easily taught/bred into a woman from her teenage years.

Unfortunately increased self-awareness only makes a woman more desirable as a long-term partner, it does not make her immune to all the weaknesses that "less intelligent" or women with inferior upbringing possess. As I said, women are women. I would go so far to say these women don't even fall under NAWALT. Better upbringing so a better chance at a relationship, but realize as soon as her emotions overwhelm her she will shut off the logic by choice. These women do not keep on top of their emotions at all times, they're not quite the Zen masters you frame them to be. You still have to be the rock in her emotional storm, even if her emotional storms are lower tier tropical storms rather than full-blown hurricanes.

Hahaha I love it when women do that it's so textbook. They do this when discussing their "boyfriend" as well. You ask them FUCK ALL about their man, you mention nothing about your partner (if you have one, or not) and between flirting they will not stop blabbing on and on about their boyfriends..

I usually ignore or misdirect (change topic) because I really don't give a damn about her boyfriend or how he makes her feel or what they do together or where they're going or blah blah blah. If we could get a ruler and measure how many fucks I give, you would find not a millimetre of interest.

Personally I think women mention their boyfriends all the time when it's obvious they fancy you so that if anything happens it's easier for them to blame you "I did tell him I had a boyfriend but he just kept pursuing me and wore me down!" "it just happened!" woe is her, it's not her fault. LOL. So predictable.

Just got used like a sextoy...

3 upvotes · 14 December 2014 · /r/askTRP

You cannot be used as a sex toy if you have value other than your sex.

Here's how you get over her if you can't, the patient revenge strategy:

- Do not contact her for at least 3 months (hope you got your clothes back already.)
- Give her 3 months to get in contact (if she doesn't, contact her and say "let's meet up for a drink" or some shit) any excuse to get her out.
- Meet her, fuck the shit out of her. Be as violent as possible in the sack, give her a night she won't forget, bitches love violent sex and a man who "gives them the best sex" leaves an impression on them they'll never forget. When you're done, say "that was weird, I don't think you're my type" tainting her whole perception of what she thought was planet turning sex. Then go home.
- She will blow up your phone with messages and missed calls because she will be butthurt, she is putty in your hands now. Ignore the fuck out of her. You may be tempted to replat because she will be so easy now, but then you risk her ego trying to one-up yours and her orchestrating some shit in the future meaning "she wins" instead of you. Her butthurt obsessive texts will be the proof she consented to sex just in case she uses the "rape accusation strategy" to try and fuck with you in her butthurt. If we're doing all this out of ego, you have to win and then give her no more opportunity to win. Always be the dumper, not the dumpee. You want to alpha widow her, not the reverse.

Guess who gets the last laugh then? You. Is this evil? Probably, yes. Dark triad game. Gotta fight fire with fire. Do that, or, if your ego can get over how she has wronged you, just never speak to the bitch again and go on with your own shit, it's up to you. Later.

Hey buddy thanks for the praise. Yes, I have big plans for the blog and have quite a few things going on with it at the moment. I'm actually polishing over a lot of my older content to make it flow better and be more readable. Naturally I'm trying to balance that alongside participating in the community here and writing and publishing new RP content. Luckily I've got about 5 weeks off for Christmas now so I've got some serious time I can invest into getting this all done. I also have the 48 laws of power article series to do as well, as well as more dark triad theories to flesh out (so many drafts and notes scattered all around the place) so it's firing on all cylinders when it comes to the blog.

You should publish a book, like The Rational Male. I and many more will buy it. A physical/kindle, curated, "Best Of" is just so more enticing to really sink your teeth in vs trying to cherry pick through your vast body of work.

In fact, the reason I made the archives page (<http://illimitablemen.com/archives>) was to make it easier to pick out what you like, to have it act as a sort of "interactive contents page" and make everything available from a single click in one place. Anyhow, I will look at further monetisation efforts/releasing a book further on down the track. Right now I am somewhat preoccupied with content creation and planning areas of growth for the site. I've had a good few requests to do a book now, so seeing as the demand is there (and will probably only grow alongside my blog) it's something I will look to do in the future.

Blogging is pretty exciting, and messages of praise like this really make it worth it because you know you're making a difference. All the best.

It's a crab bucket mentality, and IMO, under my idealised version of masculinity, that destructive henpecking bullshit wouldn't exist.

It's not constructive at all. It's like they're treating TRP as a real life bar scene and the feel they need to bring down others at every opportunity to make themselves seem or feel superior.

I've seen people doing this to endorsed contributors. Not just me, but others too. Sometimes I think someone is just talking shit to me because I have that little userbar. They always pick an endorsed member or a mod or someone recognisable. It's kind of pathetic.

In some abstract sense, yes every other TRP member is "competition", but honestly the likelihood that anyone on TRP is actually competing for the same girls as you in real life is next to nothing. So all the chest puffing/thumping and "stop being a pussy brah" nonsense serves no purpose other than to make the commenter feel superior to the guy who wrote the post. It's pathetic and transparent.

Great post as usual, my friend. This is a topic I thoroughly enjoy discussing with you, as you well know.

Likewise the feeling is mutual.

I'd say your description of archetypes is apt but perhaps incomplete.

It is, I wanted to avoid another 4-5k piece. It's condensed, somewhat. Each archetype could easily get its own article. I easily gave "the advisor" a disproportionate amount of space/coverage vs. the other two archetypes in that "generalised" piece, there is not an even coverage of each stereotype. It can be expanded upon further.

It's just that things are supposed to "just be natural" or "organic" and it scares them that others may understand the nuances of such interactions.

Really, I think "make your accomplishments seem effortless" is something that is paramount in dealing with women. They are very sensitive to how much effort goes into things and assume that the more effort that goes in, the less "amazing" you are. It applies to men who don't understand/respect what you do, or like what you do (as men who share passions often have great admiration for the amount of work that goes into it due to sympathy) but more so, it applies to women. Women are very results orientated. They don't give a shit if you work 10 millions hours or 10 hours to get your lamborghini. If you have a lambo you have a lambo, she has a pussy and she wants to sit in it. Unless you make the story of how you got your lambo some emotional bullshit she can relate to and make about her/get tingles off, she just doesn't give a fuck. On this tangent, I believe that's why women likewise hate the idea that "men can become alpha." They want a man "who was born alpha."

So essentially, this is something the king lacks, but the adviser and general have.

Kings are narcissistic to a fault, to an extreme where it goes beyond being useful but actually serves as a detriment. Narcissism, like water, is generally a positive thing. But if you drink too much water you can kill yourself and drown. Well the same thing is true of narcissism. If you're drowning in narcissism you will blind yourself and alienate others rather than be bold enough to believe in yourself and be charming. Fine lines.

So you essentially claim that the adviser will usually not have sadism

Everyone engages in schadenfreude to a degree but a man of Machiavellian learning who is not naturally DT does not learn sadism through the DT. If he is a sadist, that is a part of who he is innately.

Imagine a general-style machiavellian without sadism.

I actually cover that in the piece. I mention that generals are sadistic by nature but suppress it for the sake of the mission. In that sense, they can switch it on and off unlike the king who is something of a slave. It's the difference between strong and poor impulse control essentially.

Self-aware = Yes, Sadism = No, Offense = Yes: (This is what I'd like your input on. "Self-actualized man"??? "Ambitious man"???)

I'd love to hear your thoughts on this, especially the archetype of a self-aware, non-sadistic man, yet one who uses Machiavellian for offense rather than defense (the way the adviser does). For me personally, this to me would be most desirable for myself, since I don't have sadistic tendencies but tend to manipulate as a sword for my own ambitions.

That is a general who doesn't have to suppress his sadism because it is absent. I suppose it is the logical next stop for an advisor who seeks direct leadership rather than leadership by proxy. Using machiavellianism offensively is more difficult, it takes more fearlessness, more self-assuredness, an ability to take risk and deal with adverse consequence etc. What you are asking about describing is what I omitted from the article (hence its incompleteness.)

I mention how the king can evolve into a general, but not how the advisor can. I believe the advisor can make that same progression, but instead of suppressing his sadism (he has none to quell) he must take a different approach to becoming a General.

Basically:

A King has to quell his sadism/narcissism to become a general

An advisor has to increase his psychopathy/pseudo-psychopathy/fearlessness to become a general

The general is essentially a master strategist who does not fear conflict and is not held back by indulgences from low self-discipline, neither the ego.

So for an advisor looking to become a general he must:

Become incredibly consistently confident to facilitate boldness - raise his narcissism

Increase his fearlessness to increase directness, generally this is achieved in a few ways:

- Stoicism to suppress emotional tension
- Physical activities such as lifting and martial arts to give combat experience. Much underlying fear (think command presence) is violence related, a man who can control his emotions and defend himself will augment his sense of fearlessness.

With both these facets achieved and a solid basis for a almost fearless frame of mind/aggressive emotional calm - you can inverse your usual machiavellian tactics to craft them into weapons. Instead of saying less than necessary for example, you will tell people secrets that aren't true, see who fucks up (set people up - see who can be trusted) and yadda yadda.

3 upvotes · 17 November 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I'm saying that the fetishization and relentless pursuit of the "dark triad" archetype by the average redpill dude is going to have some adverse outcomes

Agreed. Balance is key in everything. Some people have compulsive personalities and take things too far, such is life. Greene indicated as much indirectly in his interview with the Telegraph.

What you sacrifice is meaningful interpersonal relationships as you commodify literally everyone around you.

Yeah, you're preaching to the choir. I agree.

I discuss that here: <http://illimitablemen.com/2014/11/01/the-psychopathic-paradigm/>

For the average RPer to really live as and succeed as a "dark triad," you have to devote immense amounts of energy to social climbing, plotting against your rivals, and insulating yourself from meaningful friendships.

Not necessarily. As a TLDR: you replace narcissism with excessive self-confidence, you hone your strategy/machiavellianism and you replace psychopathy with stoicism so that you can cope well under pressure. You can do all of that and be a perfectly healthy and functional individual. The problem people have is in their interpretation of what I'm saying, not in what I'm saying. People assign their own naive incorrect ideas to my writings, and then believe that because I elicited those ideas in them that they are my beliefs. That is not so.

It isn't amused mastery, it's obsession and (for most) an unobtainable power fantasy.

I don't know what you mean by this it seems disjointed. Allow me to manipulate the language so that it does not trigger any incorrect belief systems: vibing off the premise I layout for the dark triad, you can be excessively confident/self-assured, cunning/strategic and emotionally well-disciplined AND utilise amused mastery as a mechanism if and when required. Perhaps when you are exercising stoicism to aid as a coping mechanism when under pressure.

I have expressly stated time and time again that we are cherry picking the useful qualities of dysfunctional individuals and applying them to our own mental schema to benefit us. WE ARE NOT trying to become DT. The DT is a model, an inspiration, an example, something we draw from to reference, exemplify and derive an actionable way to achieve "badass qualities" without becoming mentally bankrupt in the process.

If you take the time to read <http://illimitablemen.com/2014/11/01/the-psychopathic-paradigm/> in full (and yes, that will require 5-15 minutes of your time depending on reading speed/concentration) then you will be fully aware of my intention and interpretation of the DT.

In light of all this it seems like what you think about the dark triad and what I think about it are two different things.

I find it funny how none of you see the irony in how I take society's "predators" and "parasites" and dissect their mode of operation so that you have a defence against them and likewise an ability to spot them and compete against them. No, instead, the fear response kicks in and we get this strange meta hysteria (not referring to you specifically, you're not the first person to think of the DT in this manner, ignorantly.) Oh boy, haha.

Religions may or not be true but the moral code they contain is the foundation on which civil society rests.

The point of all this is that people love to rally around religion being stupid when religion is the only reason any society has grown past mud huts and pointy sticks.

Totally agree. I know this thread is as downvoted as it is because religious people tend to get butthurt easily and miss the point. The threads not meant to be an attack on religion, it's meant to show the parallels between religion and feminism in how they are both faith based. Whether one finds it distasteful or not to have their faith compared to another a system of faith, it remains that both are indeed: faiths.

But if the short guy and the tall guy had the same body fat, muscle mass and fighting ability the short guy would weigh less and be at a disadvantage. The tall guy would weigh more due to his bones. That was my point all along. Not that its impossible for a short guy to beat up a tall guy. I know it's possible, and in fact, many a small guy has a fetish for such a thing, feeling bitter/hateful towards tall guys. We've got woman's sexual preferences to thank for that, for short men being insecure and getting off on the idea of beating up someone a foot taller than them. I know plenty of tall guys who have little guys picking fights with them all the time. I call that shit scrappy doo syndrome. They feel the need to prove themselves because they're small. A lot of guys with problems want to be successful, but instead of working on inner game and building upwards they look for "how to be alpha" and think they can just "acquire an alpha lifestyle." This is naive to say the least.

Older posts admittedly need a grammar clean up, the sentences are too long which is why it seems like "fat needs trimming." I'm aware of that. That's an objective problem, that's good criticism. I accept that and I will go back and make them more readable when I have the time. But the newer stuff does not have that problem, the grammar is much better, the sentences shorter, that wasn't the problem. They took issue with the style, which is a moot point as its preference based. You can never please everyone. If I write for a 10th grade level, people with university degrees will think "this reads very simply - maybe it needs expanding." This is why I'm not a people pleaser, I please myself, because some cunt will always find a way to undermine you, it's par for the course and that's not just with writing an article but that goes for anything. Some of my favourite texts (Schopenhauer, for example) contain some of the wordiest longest sentences you will ever read. and i'll be honest, this felt disingenuous even as i wrote it:

So you're a typical woman but at least you're self-aware and not high on your own bullshit. That's refreshing, I suppose.

i'm not a misogynist, one of those women who touts herself as "one of the boys" who "just can't stand the drama of women,"

Mini story incoming, I met a woman like this recently. Obviously we connect over absolutely nothing because she has no real interests or hobbies other than social drama and what is immediately happening in her life, whereas I like things like politics, philosophy, working out, stand-up, studying the dark triad, and etc.

So naturally, we engaged in phatic conversation, we were talking utter shit, and of course she gets onto the topic of her and her boyfriend. Women love to fucking relate something in the conversation back to them and their boyfriend. It's hilarious. The boyfriend is the centre of their world and if they can find an excuse to relate something back to them and their relationship, they will. Unless they have decided they want to fuck you, then all of a sudden he doesn't exist.

I don't remember how it came up, but she said she has more male friends than female friends (immediate red flag.) Gave me that speech about how she prefers men to women because they're less bitchy. This is basically womanspeak for "women see through my shit, but men are clueless idiots I can control men with my sexuality, and I like being the centre of attention in a group of men." I don't trust most women by default because I understand their nature is to manipulate, but I especially distrust women who don't have many women friends, no guy worth his salt who understands social dynamics and manipulation does. If other women think you're toxic, you probably are. Women have an eye for this kind of shit naturally. Hiding among groups of men is suspicious to say the least.

She said her boyfriend gets jealous because of the fact she has so many male friends, yet she allows him to remain in this perpetual state of jealousy (again, red flag, she has the power in the relationship and is happy to have it.) She says this, and I realise she's unwittingly or not, using dread game on him. She has the audacity to defend this as being completely innocent. So I challenge her. I said to her, surely you can see his point of view though? Of course, she feigns ignorance and expects me to qualify my point. I oblige. I say "you're making him insecure by having all these guys around, he knows if he doesn't stay on top of his shit that you have all these guys lined up to replace him" of course she refuses to cede the point, typical woman.

So I tried a different tact, I appealed to her solipsism. I said "imagine if he had loads of female friends, hot, average, whatever, but almost all his friends were women, you'd feel pretty jealous and that's how he feels about all the guy friends you have." Naturally, out of pride she refuses to be honest. She says "actually I wouldn't, because I know he would never do anything like that to me, I completely trust him."

At this point I'm getting more red flags, and then I notice the small tattoo on her wrist, that isn't of a child's name, then another on the back of her neck, upperback (her hair is tied up) which is another red flag. I realise I'm talking to a manipulative power hungry slut who likes having a lot of cock near her to validate herself, and have a backup dick just in case she gets bored or needs to assert control over her main man. So I say to the manipulative slut, I say: "do you so completely trust him because he doesn't have the capacity to actually get other women, and is therefore, no threat, or simply because even though he could get other women, he wouldn't go and get other women?" I'm trying to establish firm context and pull her out of her vague ambiguity.

I already know the answer to the question but I'm giving her the option to be honest, to come clean and treat me with a bit of dignity. Of course, she's your typical woman, so naturally she opts to lie to me. She says "because I just know he wouldn't do that." There it was, cemented in my mind. There was no chance at fair discourse with this women. It didn't surprise me in the slightest, but naturally, it caused my ego to view her with disgust for doing what most women naturally do - lie to your face out of pride.

I'd inadvertently cold read about 5 red flags from her based on our interaction and it was game over. The bitch was going to cut my hair (this was in the barbers and the dude who normally does my trim wasn't there - don't think women should be allowed to work in barbers tbh, male space and all that, but eh) and I left it at that because I didn't want her losing her shit and fucking my hair up for pushing any further. I could already see from her body language and facial cues she was containing her indignation. If the situation had been different, if she didn't have liberty to put holes in my cranium with sharp blades, I would have pushed her to her limits more. Fun, fun.

Haha, love that.

Your articles tend to become disembodied because you start talking from your head to nobody in particular.

The stream of consciousness in its raw form.

Retain the conversational voice. Create an avatar who represents your target audience - a dude you're explaining things to. Everything will flow from that and make your message far more readable.

If I want to relate to someone or teach someone something intimately, that's really good advice. And it's duly noted. However I don't really use the first person when talking about things like the dark triad. I am not trying to relate to the reader or make them relate to the writing. I'm not trying to build a relationship or write an instructional "how to." It's more a creative piece. Thanks for the feedback, quite helpful.

Yeah, actually find it quite admirable that such a high level criminal organisation continues to operate in such a highly developed country. Usually in stable democracies, things like the mafia are dissolved with leading members being consolidated into government, not existing independently of, or co-dependently with the elected government. They have a monarch to boot, too. So that's Emperor, President and Top Gangster running that country. Damn.

The american/asian chick is a different breed altogether.

Culturally, americanisation is poison, it induces social/moral decline into a society in the pursuit of wealth, and that's why so many are resistant to the idea of globalisation and by extent of that, the americanisation of their countries. Personally I have nothing against America, think there are many great things about it and it is in many ways culturally similar to my own country (The UK - heavily americanised,) however contemporary American culture should be anything but spread to the four corners of the Earth, it's toxic. Can't let patriotism get in the way of logic.

Drama: How It's a Woman's Drug and Why NOT To Avoid It

3 upvotes · 30 October 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

The Women are Not Liars chapter of David Deida's book

Sounds, from a cursory glance, like a male hamster trying to justify "why women aren't as bad as you think they are despite the fact they do shitty things." It's the whole "women have no agency and it isn't their fault" bullshit that men desperate to be in love with women peddle once they find out their true nature and find them revolting, but don't want to be alone.

Taking the red pill is so difficult many men rather be purple. Men are so fucking romantic they have to hamster to themselves why women aren't as shitty as they are even when they experience it first hand, and come to realise that women are fundamentally pretty shit; at a station that is measures of depth far beneath that of the esteemed pedestal society puts them on.

Accepting women are fundamentally full of shit won't help your trust issues but it will set you free in accepting women for what they are. Whether someone lies and believes in their own lie, or is consciously lying, they are still lying. You don't get a free pass for being self-deluded when your actions/words are still capable of doing the same damage and leading to the same negative outcomes as someone who is conscious of their bullshit. Women must be made culpable for their bullshit and I tire of men in their desperation to make women something they're not rationalise her negative behaviour away as "she didn't mean it, it's not her fault" like a dumb mindless child acting out of instinct rather than intent.

Women may not be on the same level as men, but they are fully capable of expressing intent, and I don't think "the way she feels" is a good excuse for being a cunt. Personally I hold women to a higher standard than that. If women are so primordial that they cannot exercise self-control, we can accept that, but we shouldn't excuse it. We should shame it and despise it and call them out on it until they make an effort to try and overcome their base nature, just like you and I as men do by not going about raping women every time we're horny. I believe women can do a lot better than they are and it would help if men stopped making up excuses for their bullshit out of a sad, weak, desperation to be in love with a fundamentally dysfunctional and imperfect creature. If we rationalise shitty behaviour away and become accepting of it because "it's in her nature" then we facilitate it and are complicit with its manifestation.

I may be going over board and I haven't read this book you speak of, but I get the feeling David Deida is about as close to the colour red as the colour purple is and hence, his words of limited application to this community.

Red Pill Relationships & The Value of Male Commitment

3 upvotes · 26 October 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

You're probably a sigma male. Some men place major focus on women and managing women (socialite alphas, playboy types.) Other men place major focus on manly pursuits and the self (sigmas, mgtows.) Both are red pill and really the difference is a matter of life experience, intelligence, and intraversion/extraversion IMO. The sigma is someone who prefers very specific company or his own company. The alpha needs to be socialising a lot and will tire of the cock carousel to settle down. Alphas can't stand being alone generally speaking (always have lots of friends, going out, things lined up and have women very centrally planted in their view of the world) whilst the sigma is more likely to sit at home with a book, see people more sporadically and place the pursuit of manhood at the centre of his world. That's not saying alphas aren't manly, of course they are, it's simply a matter of differing priority and a different M.O. Naturally this post has ruffled a few mgtow and sigma feathers.

ATTN: RP Haters

3 upvotes · 26 October 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The pill colours exist as metaphors for describing certain associated collections of social behaviour and belief system. The pill metaphor is simply the generalised sum of all those behaviours and beliefs packaged into one disjointed and loose concept. So really, in light of that, the red and the blue pill are frameworks, not singular concepts, they contain many derivative as well as loose extraneous concepts which form the sum of that particular pill. Hence they are more frameworks for seeing the world built-upon a specific style of interpretation.

People tend to align with whatever system of ideas aligns best with their self-interest. Women tend to be blue pill because that's the system feminism/the cultural revolution set-up and they believe this maximises their sexual strategy and social interests. Men tend to be red pill (once they are introduced to an alternative set of ideas, and not living blindly within feminist cultural dominance) because it maximises their own sexual strategy and self-interest. Needless to say male and female sexual strategy are at odds, and so are their perceptions of the world. This is the underlying reason for either a red pill or blue pill. As usual it comes back to sex and power. Of course some women reject feminism, and some men choose to remain on team feminism. Neither pill is THEE IDEA in and of itself and neither pill is particularly defined by the ideology of feminism as of such, however that ideology is one of the significant concepts that makes up the overall metaphor of each pill. Red pillers carry anti-feminist sentiment, for example, but are not anti-feminist as an absolute, there's more to the framework than pure anti-feminism.

The red pill lifestyle existed before it was known as such. It was simply more covert and less in the open before the popularity of the red pill sub took off. Pill colours and all this jazz is merely a matter of branding. You won't learn much reading blue pill forums, whilst you'll learn a lot on TRP if you're the average man. The blue pill board just exists to mock the red pill board, they have no theories, research or actual input of their own. Just parasites leeching off another community and throwing everything they say under a bus. I don't come here to debate these people 1 on 1, but to contribute generally to the wider debate. I have no time for internet rivalry and trolling, it's a waste of a precious commodity - time.

The blue pill actually has nothing to do with their sub, which completely misrepresents neoliberalism by just being a circlejerk dedicated to mocking the red pill, and not actually arguing why feminism/neoliberalism are good things and providing an alternate sexual strategy to the one espoused by the red pill. The blue pill in the real world is the collection of institutionalised ideology you are made unwittingly subject to from a young age, eg: the concept of egalitarianism and total equality, feminism, political correctness and blah blah.

The purple pill is a mixture of both red and blue. Someone who sees the merit in some way of what the red says, but finds it distasteful, too much to handle or simply too negative to be something they want to associate with fully, combine that with romantic intellectual idealism and they clamour onto blue pill ideas. Not fooled by blue pill ideas (if they read and accept red ideas) but simply not wanting to give up on those ideas as hypothetical possibilities. Indulging in pretty lies can be comfortable, the ability to self-deceive in humans, markedly, in women, but men are by no means exempt, is something quite extraordinary.

Blue, red, purple, they are metaphors for different collections of thought, ideology and lifestyle. Purple isn't its own distinct lifestyle per se, it's a hybrid where people cherry pick what they want to adhere to.

Part of the blue argument is that the red pill is a cult, well touché, I and a lot of other red pillers see all this neoliberalist unsubstantiated hypocrisy as cultish too.

The politics of metaphor and individual difference aside, you're doing the right thing. You're being a pragmatist. You're taking what works and discarding what doesn't. That's more important than ideology IMO. The ultimate lifestyle, even though I personally would characterise pragmatism as a red pill trait (doing whatever works to get results) than a blue pill trait (not doing anything that the social ideologies you identify with would call morally dubious.)

Race to the Top: A Guide for Low-SMV Minorities

3 upvotes · 20 October 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I think it does matter to people more of other races. They move to white dominated countries. They look up to whites and then get mad they're not on top, sometimes going as far as to hate on them. It's fucking perverse and leads to nowhere.

I knew a black dude in my university days who would not shut the fuck up about being black. I don't go around going on about my ethnicity all the time. I have pretty much fuck all interest in my ethnicity. I don't consider it a strong component of my personality. You see my point? What you call "denial" I call not giving a fuck about "race" whilst to a minority, it's a big deal and a lot of minorities will define themselves/self-perception based on their race. I never go around saying "as a white dude" unless I'm having a discussion specifically about race and it's going to inevitably come up as par for the course because that shit is normally just fucking irrelevant to me. When you're the dominant ethnicity in your country you tend not to give a shit about ethnicity as a concept/idea/reality and are incredibly blind/ignorant to stuff minorities are vocal about. Of course, there are race differences and anyone who denies that is an idiot.

Now to digress: Being jealous someone else had it easier than you in some area of life is weak and IMO, a feminine trait. I've had friends who grew up far less rough than I did and then I have friends who grew up much rougher than I did. I've had wealthy friends when I was working class, and working class friends when I was middle class. But I don't let those differences come between us, because I value people for what they bring to the table psychologically/intellectually above pretty much anything else. I'm not very superficial when what I intuit to be intelligence is present (because if there is no intelligence, what is really left?) I'm not jealous their life was less fucked up than mine was and likewise I don't self-hate for "having it easy" when I'm with guys who had it worse than I did. It's all fucking relative. Some people had such fucked up lives you just can't top them in delinquency, likewise some people had it so good you can't top them in unearned privileges.

You have to own your struggles if you want to call yourself a man instead of wallowing and attaching your self-pity to your social class or your race or whatever the hell you want to blame for your less than adequate life. Generally speaking, it's your parents fault. But weak people like to blame their race or other shit for their own failures because it's easier than saying "I just suck with girls" or "I couldn't be assed to read books" or say if you grew up to a single mother like many guys did, blaming the only person who ever loved you unconditionally for making your life so difficult by depriving you of the chance to know the other parent.

It's easier to say "If I had Scandinavian genetics, came from an upper middle class nuclear family and had a 180 IQ I wouldn't need to put the effort in because I'd autopilot life" and then hate people who were blessed enough to get all that. There's a victim trap that comes with being poor and there's a victim trap that comes with being a minority and TRP dudes need to fucking nope the hell out of that one way trip to fucking nowhere. Be aware of where you came from, but don't let it define you because you run the risk of shackling yourself and misjudging people who came up different from you. Jealousy is feminine but it runs rampant in insecure men and they try to cover it up as manly by displaying it aggressively on the surface level, but no matter how you cut it those feelings come from a weak place.

Race to the Top: A Guide for Low-SMV Minorities

3 upvotes · 20 October 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I don't get the race traitor shit. If you're a minority man and you're intent on fucking white girls for example, why are you upset girls from your race are getting white dick? You want white pussy, so why can't she get white cock? What's the big deal exactly? Why get jealous of the white man when you want to fuck the girls in his race?

When you as a minority go for a girl of a different race, people WILL give you shit. Mainly guys who feel they are above you on the 'hierarchy' of race

So what you're saying in a round about way here is white guys give minority guys shit for trying to fuck white girls. I can believe that. But then at the end of your post, you talk poorly of girls from your own race for having fucked loads of guys (I presume white or just not your race as you're calling her a race traitor) on the carousel and then wanting to settle down with you as a beta bux or alpha provider to fit with your cultural stereotype (eg: indians and arranged marriage or Chinese people with a superiority complex who want their daughter to marry a Chinaman)

Calling someone a race traitor sets up a slippery slope that leads to a cluster fuck of racism. How I see it is like this. I'm a white guy. If I want to fuck Japanese girls or Indian girls or some 1/4 Puerto Rican, 1/4 Chinese, 1/4 Italian, 1/4 Indian Girl I have to accept that in a multicultural society that guys from all those places want to fuck the girls of 100% European ancestry - the whites. I'm not gonna turn around and go "oh did you fuck the indian OP on the carousel?! race traitor! You should have only had white dick! You're unlovable now!" IMO the race of the dick she fucks is fucking irrelevant all that matters is her notch count, if her notch count is high her notch count is high, the colour of the cock is irrelevant, spoiled goods is spoiled goods. I'd rather LTR a chick who had a notch count of 2 black dicks than LTR a girl who's had 20 white dicks.

Sometimes I think minorities (mostly immigrant minorities, not so much those born in the west) are some of the most racist fucking people around because their cultures have never had to open up their societies to multiculturalism and they have this inferiority/outsider complex going on because they glorify whiteness in a way that not even white people do with the exception of the klu klux klan.

How would you guys reply to this?

Me: So when are you going to introduce your cute girlfriends to this attractive guy.

Her: No sooner than you introduce to your friends the smart, adorable me.

She is shit testing hard. I hate bitches like this. Especially over text. Women normally aren't quick witted so texting gives them all this time to come up with "something clever" to say, which means the shit tests come in more increased complexity and you don't even know if the bitch is worth the hassle because you haven't met her and just have some pics to go off (which could easily be of another bitch.)

Also I don't know why you're giving this girl so much text time, especially when you haven't banged. You should be using texts to escalate for a meet up, that's it. Not being her time hoe and entertaining her endlessly.

Personally I would just go silence and next the girl. That is honestly what I would do. You've gotta be thirsty if you're gonna take more than the most perfunctory shit tests from a girl who is contributing ZERO to your life.

As an aside, how to beat the shit test?

"Meet me"

"Why?"

"You're too young for regrets."

"Why would I regret not meeting you?"

"Because I'm the fucking shit."

Assume the sale and tell her what to do. Always frame yourself as superior.

If she keeps trying to keep you on the hook in texting fucking limbo (and trust me dude, that is where the fuck you are right now and it's a shitty fucking place to be) you either nope the fuck out or you pressure flip everything. Don't A+A over text with someone who doesn't know your personality because your tone of voice isn't there to deliver the sarcasm. My favourite way to go nuclear and nope the fuck out is "You're boring. You spoke too much and I realised you're not my kind of girl bye" if she loses her shit its funny. If she tries to qualify you can say "prove it" and proving it means meeting the fuck up and no more of this stupid texting bullshit.

Personally I'd just fucking next the living shit out of this bitch but then I don't have patience for women who give me more hassle than they're worth to me.

Remember you are better than this bitch don't pedestal and don't feel like YOU HAVE TO GET THIS BITCH OUT. Always be willing to take the fucking L. Always have other bitches on your radar, she's not the only bitch in the world. Not getting your way with a girl doesn't mean you're inadequate or something, some bitches are just too fucking difficult and annoying to even warrant talking to. I call them cunts.

3 upvotes · 9 October 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Befriend her without failing any/many of her shit tests or demonstrating low status. You can do nice shit for her to disarm her. Like say you know she likes a certain kind of coffee (you could simply ask one time,) and bring it along another accompanied by a "drink up, I'm in a good mood" or some shit like that. Your terms. You do it because you want to. You won't do it whenever she asks and you won't make a habit of it. You'll do it spontaneously so it adequately throws her off her guard and gets her feeling positively towards you. Of course there is a danger you peg yourself as a provider doing this shit, so that's why it's important to control your own generosity (like an alpha shares) and not let her control and dictate it via shaming tactics and manipulation (how a beta shares.)

When she asks you to get her something, eg: that coffee you got her before, refuse and say "get your own shit princess" with a shit-eating grin. You have to set the kind of boundaries that say "I can be a decent guy, but on my own terms." You balance "go fuck yourself" with "here, have a bagel" just enough that you can effectively friend zone her. If you're uncontrollably attracted to her though, it won't work. If you want this kind of arrangement, it helps that you already have a hot woman or two in your life so that the addition of another doesn't overwhelm you and cause you to want to "make her yours" thus compromising the whole idea that you turn her into a wing woman. You must become desensitized to female beauty to the extent you don't let it takeover your frame. Working in environments where there are a lot of beautiful women (or being gay) helps with this shit.

To be really simple, if I want to fuck a girl, I will shit test her ferociously, I will not try to connect with her, I will tease her and be a total asshole. It's pure attraction building.

If I were to try and make a hot woman a useful ally, I'd defend against her shit tests whilst deflecting some back (pressure flip,) but I would also do things I don't do with women I intend to fuck, like ask her shit about her family and her life. I will try to build comfort with her, by having a civil and "fun" conversation with her, but reject all her attempts to get me on the hook for something. In a way I will force her to respect me as an actual fucking person, and not someone who will just do shit for her. Because women, especially hot women, correlate a man being cordial and civil with them as "scheming to get in her pants" and so try to manipulate you accordingly into fulfilling a role for them that placates Briffaults Law. You have to ring-fence yourself from this shit by setting firm boundaries.

I will give no sign I want to fuck her and I won't sexualise shit, which with hot girls, really throws them off and may inadvertently make them interested in you. She will invariably talk your ear off so you have to curtail it "I was showing an interest in you, I didn't need a dissertation" followed by a wink or smirk. Gotta be expressive with women because they're easily offended and like to spin things with false indignation so the tone/context is basically everything. When they get all hysterical shame them for being unable to handle a joke in a dismissively comedic tone. Basically, amused mastery + don't qualify yourself to her + don't jump through hoops + pass shit tests. Do things for her to influence her, but choose what those things are, don't do what she wants you to do. Do what you want to do to influence her and build comfort on your terms, otherwise you're doing what she wants you to do and it's she who is influencing you rather than the other way around.

Yeah. Or you can pressure flip people beneath you, but don't pressure flip people above you unless you don't mind mildly pissing them off.

A pressure flip is a deflection which reverses the social pressure onto the person who instigated, eg: "I take it your sense of humour is malfunctioning"

There is usually more than one way to do things.

No. Self-improvement is more important than appeasing/relating to the masses. Even if they are RP. If someone is curious enough they will ask you what you meant.

She's deliberately obfuscating people who do business online with people who put their nudes on the cloud. She does this to make it seem that idiots who put nudes online of themselves are the same as people who do business online. They're generally speaking, not, and she's actually subtly insulting business people by assuming that they partake in these kind of activities. She does this to attack someone who will be responsible for "drumming up interest" in Europeans doing business online. The implication (subtext) is he shouldn't have that job because he is a victim blamer (feminist shaming tactic) - the reality is she's hamstering up some indignation to attack someone's character on a faulty moral basis (that she's defending victims and he's attacking them.) He isn't attacking people who do business and she isn't defending them, nobody here is a victim and she made a false correlation via spin artistry. It's what I call a "false victim narrative." Women and politicians like to employ them to get their own way.

This is what happens when feminist-type thinking spills into politics. I can see right through this bullshit.

The person applying to be in charge of shoring up trust in the internet so that Europeans do more business online, just blamed people whose personal data was accessed and spread without authorisation.

But honestly, who can blame an alpha widow for just following her human nature? Wouldn't you be secretly pissed if you ate at 5 star restaurants for 27 years and suddenly had to eat at a run down Burger King? You would crave that 5-star food again. Better to find a woman who hasn't been ruined by alphas for an LTR. If you've never tasted 5-star food consistently and you're happy with the 3-star meals, you don't really know what you're missing out on.

Reminds me of that story written by a really old (now, gone) manospherean called Solomon.

Ouch. Very philanthropic though.

That being said, I too call it like it is and know that you can't play a dirty game and keep clean hands.

Gotta become a monster to fight 'em, very true.

Holy hell with the assumptions. I sit on a committee in my province which is aimed at family law reform (especially vis a vis common law relationships). I'm not happy with the law the way it is and am trying to change it. What incentive does that offer me? I'm going to eat regardless of the state of family law from corporate work alone. The very reason I do family law (and trust me, it doesn't pay as well as you think) is because I can occasionally diminish the pain of a divorce-rape.

I'm glad you've set me straight.

Regardless of all this and regardless of the fact that it's ultimately up to legislators (and by extension, voters) to change these laws,

Sounds like you believe in democracy. I like the idea of it, I like Swiss Direct Democracy, it works because they're a very well-educated country and they get to vote by borough (canton) but IMO anglospherian democracy is a sham. It won't change a thing. I could go on and on about this but I won't as it'll be a digression of huge proportions.

You need thick skin to practice any law, especially family law. Let 'em hate.

Very true. Keep up the good work.

Great blog by the way.

Thanks man. More soon.

Edit: Got a question - what are your opinions on the hypocrisy of family law statute superceding/vitiating common law's equitable maxims. Under common law, the marriage act in its current form is inequitable (so if not for statute spitting in the face of it, unlawful.) Hopefully you understand what I mean by this.

Hey man. Sorry to hear about that. Austria too. How could I forget, when I saw this epic video from the Austrian parliament a few years ago. Doesn't surprise me to hear islamification is in Austria too as it's a small country and so will quickly be taken over if nothing is done, much like Belgium, Netherlands and Sweden. As it stands the only country with their borders relatively shut would appear to be Switzerland. The direct democracy in Switzerland also makes it very hard for Islam to gain any kind of foothold there. They can't even build their minarets there.

It can help make a point yes, one should endeavour to be clear without dumbing things down. For me personally I just love words and using the best ones possible. I like specificity in language and the nuance of connotation. It's a creative obsession. I like wordsmithing. For example "quandary" would make a better fit phonetically than "dilemma" or "problem" if preceded by the word queasy or if you wanted to adopt a more refined idiolect. See if you were describing an upper classmans decision making process you would say quandary. "Caviar or truffles presented quite the quandary" whilst describing a bitch with boy issues (lol) "tim or jeff would be a decisive dilemma." That's why I write. It's a passion. It's more for my own sense of perfectionism than what anyone else thinks.

Edit: appreciate you enjoy the writing.

I'm a machiavellian with sub-clinical narcissism devoid of psychopathy. Although I'm more defensively machiavellian than aggressively machiavellian when sober. Like I don't try to fuck with peoples lives or anything, I'm just constantly tuned into subtextual information and plot/plan as necessary to ensure my own success. I'm not saying I can't be aggressively machiavellian, I can be, but I don't go out of my way to constantly be that way. Only when its necessary. My psychopathy scores are always 40-50 so not even sub-clinical. Unless I'm angry, which is when they shoot up to like 90-100 and a casual bit of sadism may set in. But that's normal for most tempers. I'm probably more fearless than the average person but I don't posses fearlessness/lack of empathy in the psychopathic sense. I've seen that first-hand, I know how it's characterised and how it manifests and it's not something I have without substance consumption.

Based on self-analysis, I'm only clinically DT on all 3 spectrums when mixing alcohol with cocaine. It seems to turn up the dial on everything to 100. And yeah I love to go deep into one thing. I love understanding shit and making sure people understand my subjective understanding of something. People close to me have commented I seem to like to cover all the bases and be very specific to create a holistic picture with the sum of its parts transparently viewable (that's assuming you had the concentration/memory to keep up.) I've been told I'd make a good teacher because of that.

Hilariously for efforts of manipulation/attraction/interacting with average people, I'm terse as fuck, because I know they hate specificity and depth and that terseness commands more respect/is more effective. With the TRP subreddit, I don't pretend to be a dumbass, or even, your average intellect, there's no façade. It's largely unfiltered. Being terse in a place of learning does you neither that environment any favours. The more you share and the deeper your understanding communicated, the better.

Personal opinion is that she should do the chores. If you're the emotional rock in the relationship (that she takes for granted) then the least she can do is keep house. Women need us emotionally more than we need them and once in a relationship, they take that for granted. Even though they won't hesitate to weaponise sex and turn the sex tap off to coerce you/get you to do what they want "oh I'm not in the mood." Likewise, you must turn off your commitment when such things occur. Your emotional availability. Emotionally stabilising her with your stoicism/logic in exchange for the completion of domestic chores is, in my opinion, a trade that greatly benefits her. Of course she won't see it that way because women are greedy and unappreciative. Especially when they have learned to view a favour as an obligation because you have performed it religiously. The mental benefits you contribute are non-tangible whilst cleaning house is tangible, which will aid her resolve. In spite of that, stick to your guns. She's still getting a great deal. The research also shows prior to what they say, men who don't do chores have better marriages. Google it if you care.

As much as I don't believe women earned their right to the vote, and most lack the critical thinking to actually be worthy of the vote, it's not feasible to take the vote away from them. So I say, get rid of mandatory military service for men. It makes no sense, especially when you're not in wartime.

One thing people usually forget is it was only landowners who could vote. Plenty of men couldn't vote in the past either. They assume all men could vote and no women could, oppression and blah blah. But it's not that black and white, that's a feminist lie.

Totally agree. This is the thing about TRP is it's not a one size fits all. Where you're at financially, in the world (geography/culture,) with your family, your religion (if any), your age and a bunch of other shit depends what kind of advice you need. We don't all have the same priorities and environment. Rules are universal but situations aren't, the more nuanced shit becomes the more a guy needs tailoring. TRP is like a fucking expensive suit. Everybody wants it but you all need it fitted differently.

Some guys find it hard to take their mind outside of their own perspective and imagine how a guy with different problems and experiences approaches the game. Look at Patrice O'Neal, fucker had excellent game, had his finances on lock down, neglected his health and didn't see 50. Health comes before everything else, it's the hull of your ship. Finances maintain the ship. You don't even think about bringing passengers on board and throwing parties until you know your motherfucking ship is seaworthy.

Pussy is an outcome of success, if you're distracted by pussy while you're trying to build a big ass ship of a life your ship is going to build VERY SLOWLY. You may even neglect to use the best materials for it because hey, that night you got a text and went to a bitch's house. Priorities, priorities, priorities. Learn yours and do right by yourself. Don't preach to others until you know what there's are. Now we're a 72,000 person messageboard a lot of more advanced specific shit past the very core basics such as "maintain frame" isn't going to be applicable to even 90% of the members. Social dynamics is one thing. How a person lives their life is another.

Edit: no idea why you're downvoted and I'm not when I'm agreeing with you. LOL. Fucking reddit.

Only those who have to (most of the population.) People who have it made do 20 hours a week or less and profit off other people's labour, throwing them scraps.

Trading hours for money is a mugs game, if you can get passive income (rent, advertising income, dividends, interest, automated sales etc) you can basically be paid to sit on your ass and make money off prior investments, spending a minimal amount of time to maintain those assets rather than working like a hooligan trying to keep your head above water.

That's living well, waking up in the morning and seeing you've made money in your sleep. Most people live paycheck to paycheck whilst never having free time to do the shit they really want to do and that kind of financial insecurity only serves to contribute towards a scarcity mentality.

Why Gender Equality Does Not Work in the Bedroom

3 upvotes · 11 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

My girlfriend is absolutely my equal.

Oh boy. Let us know how that works out. She doesn't have to be equal to you to be valued.

A CEO respects and values his regional manager, but that doesn't mean they're on the same level. Captain and first mate are not about equality, they're about establishing a fair, rather than abusive leader and follower dynamic. Being fair doesn't mean equal. If the CEO pays the regional manager a fair wage, are they equal? No, but there are equitable outcomes. By merit of one person having the responsibility and power of leadership, and the other not, there is no precedent or basis for equality. By merit of one desiring to dominate, and one desiring to be dominated, there is no equality. Equality is a dead-end however you want to frame it. When it is your responsibility as the man, to make sure the relationship works, to give it direction and shelter her from her emotional storms and all that bullshit, you cannot possibly think a relationship is ever a fair or egalitarian ordeal because it is far from that. A man brings far more to the table than a woman does whether he realises that or not. Pussy and a bit of compassion on her part do not trump or even match everything you bring to the table, and likewise, women are far more dependent on men than vice versa.

You are either leading or you're not, you're winning (with or without her help) or you're losing. If you're losing your first mate is looking to mutiny and jump ship because women are heartless bitches like that who will drop you when the going gets tough. When the going gets tough and they lose faith in your ability to get shit done as a man, you're done, regardless of whether you think she's special or different, or not. Your opinion is irrelevant to the grounding of her nature. You are never equal. Never ever. This shouldn't need to be said in TRP, of all places. Embrace the inequality, be comfortable with it, understand what the fuck is up, but don't bullshit yourself that you and your girl are equal. That bitch wouldn't take a bullet for you, but she'd expect you to do that for her. I don't wanna be mean to you here I really don't, but you're in denial and in need of a bit of tough love. If TRP teaches anything, it's that there's no such thing as "equal but different", differences are what cause inequality to begin with.

Yeah, plenty of religious men out there. The main point of religion seems to be control sexuality (male promiscuity, female hypergamy) and morality to a point that the nuclear family can sustain itself. Most religious guys want "a good woman/virgin" to be the wife and mother of their kids, not a girl with an N-COUNT.

The religion metaphor is more meant as a comparative metaphor rather than a literal one between religious adoption in men and women anyway.

on the implication he has some sort of weird obligation to create more RPW

No implication meant. It is the simple reality today most women are fuckable and not likeable and if you want a girl that's likeable you luck out on a unicorn or you make her an RPW. A lot of RPWs are girls/women who were misguided by feminism and try to reform to save themselves from spinsterhood just before the wall or post-wall. This is the same as a girl having to make you alpha just so she can love you, she has to change you to love you in that scenario, and notice how women never do this shit. Yet, supposedly, we should school hoes to be loveable and change into RPWs. Nah. Most guys are incapable of exercising the patience/possess the skills to make it happen and many others just can't be assed, they don't want to invest all that time and effort into a woman when there's no guaranteed return.

but I also remember reading that girls with daddy issues are always working from a deficit of masculinity.

Yeah I read that. I wish I could find it again it's very interesting female psychology.

I agree that he needs to learn how to be that strong masculine figure though. Does he owe these women a fix for daddy issues? No, but whether he does or not he will be expected to later so he might as well learn now while he's young (he's 17.)

Agreed.

that he -owes- it to women to turn them to RPW before they become CC riders.

We don't owe these bitches shit.

Don't get into the mindset of feeling obligated of preventing them from becoming cock-carousel riders, or that it's your responsibility to create more RPW.

Nah that's the white knight spirit, fuck that.

So while I agree that he should learn it

What how to school hoes? Personally I'm not even open to the idea.

I'd cringe over my weakness but it's in the past and I know where I've fucked up and everything that went wrong that was my fault I've corrected or working on correcting in myself. No pity party here, just work.

You're over-analysing and misinterpreting things. If I said to you "don't reveal all your plans to people" and "be vague about your intentions", "pretend you're busy when you're not to drum up interest" and let's say "feed people different falsehoods see which ones circulates and then you know who you can and can't trust" you probably do some if not all of those things anyway. Well guess what, they're all machiavellian. Anything that conceals and influences is manipulative. You're not a psychopath just for being manipulative are you? Exactly. I don't know what you're scared of, it's all useful to men who want to do better for themselves. It's great for men who are clueless and literally have no idea this whole subtext and mind games/strategy exist but go around being wholly honest and open, much to their own demise. Women know this shit innately and unlike punching someone in the face, it's legal - so sexually, in business or whatever, men need to equalise the soft power playing field.

As for morality, TRP doesn't say you have to be moral, it has an amoral approach (be moral or immoral, we don't care) if you want to be an evil cunt that's your choice, there's no morality police here. If someone wants to be immoral, who are you to tell them not to be? In TRP if a methodology works (and presumably, it's legal) then it's valid, it's that simple.

As an aside many machiavellians are charismatic, so you'd like them despite the fact they use that as a veil to get you to do what they want. You probably don't even know you're being gamed. Kind of like a beta with a hot chick and her pulling the strings. Discussing it openly turns people off, but it's like a pill you can't swallow or refuse to swallow, i see it with blue pillers in regards to TRP in general, people who bitch about the DT say it doesn't work, but then when it's used in real life on them, as long as they don't identify the same behaviour as "DT" or "manipulative" it works perfectly. The rabbit hole goes deep better keep digging.

Really nice girls are AWALTs and need TRP even more so than conspicuous AWALTs.

Can you explain what you mean by letting her know where she is at with me?

Hi, sure. You told her everything you thought of her in a way that validates her. I'm generally a forthright person myself and say what I think. Basically DO NOT tell her how you feel or seem too empathetic, that's not something assholes do and bitches only respect/fuck assholes. (Ok they fuck betas with some lower frequency for money/validation, but you don't want to play a beta angle if you respect yourself.)

enjoyed last night, realize you got shit going on with your ex but def be down to hang out at sum point in the future if you're up for it. Don't get me wrong, I'm still gonna try to get in your pants ;) just sayn

"Enjoyed last night" --> validating her you enjoyed her company despite no fuck and her rejecting you. Better than being a needy bitch who gets upset over it and makes a big deal but personally I wouldn't reward her with "I enjoy you" and neither would I make a scene, I just wouldn't comment on the previous night at all.

realize you got shit going on with your ex

Not your problem and if she's got shit with him don't associate yourself with that energy. If you do, you set yourself up as the guy she can moan to about her asshole ex who's she is still with some probability, fucking. Who gives a fuck about that. I wouldn't acknowledge her ex either. Yes it's good to have the information she has shit going on with him so that you know what/who you're dealing with, but don't validate it or you risk becoming some friend zoned chump she can bleed her emotions out to, an emotional tampon. Obviously this shit isn't gonna happen off one little sentence in a text like that, but that's how the frame moves with little things like this. Say it enough and it becomes the frame the two of you share. With her setting the frame and you accepting it.

def be down to hang out at sum point in the future if you're up for it.

Making yourself too easily available. Showing eagerness by saying she's definitely worthy of your attention (she's hardly had to work much for it already) and giving her power/control over if it happens. If you see her again its because you arrange it. You don't ask to see her, you say "We're meeting up soon" - "why?" - "Because I said so" (not WANT to - said so, imply authority, not desire, at least until you've fucked her or she signals she is attracted enough to you to be reciprocal of your desire.)

Don't get me wrong, I'm still gonna try to get in your pants ;)

So you get a bit bold, even though it's a bit corny, it shows some balls.

Then clearly as you were typing it, you thought "shit, that could blow it" then you mitigate your boldness. You're better off being crude, or not being crude, rather than being crude and then mitigating your crudeness. When someone calls me a cunt because they don't like me and then they say "just joking" when they see I'm about to fuck them up, I think they're a pussy, and I know they're not joking. This is kind of the same thing. She knows you want to fuck her. You know you want to fuck her. Why say "just saying?" it makes it sound less forceful and more "creepy" as in you're trying to rationalise your attraction and play it off as normal just incase it's creeping her out. It says in subtext to a bitch "I'm afraid you will reject me." which in turns suggests "I'm low value, because if I was high value I'd have so many options I wouldn't give a shit if you rejected me."

Who gives a fuck what she thinks? If you're going to be attracted to a bitch, be shameless about it. No "I just think you're hot" or "If you wanna see me, that's great" it's all passive language. You gotta take control. Bitches are sensitive to crap like this. Don't sub-communicate beta qualities if you want to bang a chick. Gotta be dominant, but calibrated. Go between outright assholeness and mysteriousness. Then mix and match them up in banter/shit tests. That's what I do.

Really though? I mean I figured most dudes orbit and kiss up and afraid to tell an 8 how things are gonna be

That's true but if she has any self respect you've gotta feed her some plausible deniability. You can't be like "I'm gonna come over because I want to bang you" unless you've already banged or you've built up a shit ton of attraction. I mean if the girl won't even kiss you, there isn't enough attraction there and thus this is a poorly calibrated move. Don't say shit like this until you know the girl is into you.

without having to put up with much conversation cause I don't tend to enjoy it.

Yeah most women are boring to talk to and have a poor concept of humour, not only that but they moan too much which is especially annoying when you're trying to seduce her. Whatever, don't sweat it, shit happens, plenty of other bitches out there, this is all just one big learning exercise.

Random: I live in London, not Scotland, loads of ginger people there though, LOL. On a plus note, I think the Scottish are way more friendly than us English. Way more. Proposition Joe was full on machiavellian. It's definitely a show filled with true to life examples of DT characters, and the best thing about it is the whole show was based on the real life experience of a homicide detective and a police reporter for the Baltimore Sun (a newspaper in Baltimore) so it's not entirely fiction, but based on real things they both experienced. All these character types exist in the real world.

Australia tightened its visa restrictions a year or two ago. If you don't have family there or a bachelors degree+v.good english speaking ability+a few other things, or you're not rich, they basically don't want you. Unlike us you're not open door, you're cherry picking your immigrants unless they already have family there. And yeah, loads of English in Aus lots of English have relatives there. I blame Home & Away and Neighbours. Better economy and better weather, plus none of the open door EU immigration - looks like a decent escape to English who have to share their economy with all the working class from eastern europe and rain/grey sky 3/4 of the year. You've got a higher minimum wage too so if they do decide to move back they can build up a nest egg, Buy property in both while its cheap. Move between the both of them. War breaks out in one country? Fly over to the other. They don't border so unlikely to both be affected by wars/natural disasters at the same time. While you're absent in one country you can have location independent passive income in the form of rent on your property. It won't be much money compared to US/western europe rents but its not meant to be your main source of income, just a way for you to make side income on your capital whilst you're not using it.

I like the idea of having property in multiple countries. If you buy enough property you could probably live off the rent and retire early depending on how expensive where you're currently located is. Whatever country starts to pick up I'd invest in its real estate as professionals move to compete for jobs in the emerging market. BRICs (brazil, russia, india, china, south africa) are all the biggest economic competitors in the decades to come. There's going to be a huge redistribution of wealth globally, by 2100 the gap between west and east will be much shorter as the west stagnates and the east continues its growth, this has been projected by at least one reputable organisation (google it.)

Strongest European player atm is Poland, who have seen year on year growth since 2008 of around 3%~ (I might be wrong on the exact figure) although I'm not sure how sustainable that is. A lot of that growth comes from poles who moved abroad sending money back home via western union from their jobs in sweden, holland, ireland etc.

Anyone who lifts realises all the mood and energy benefits it brings. You don't need to become some obsessive gym rat constantly discussing his macronutrient balance and supplements/protein shakes to enjoy the benefits of lifting. You don't need to become part of a gym subculture to enjoy the benefits of lifting. You don't even need to join a gym to lift, you can buy equipment at home and do body exercises. The whole gym culture deal works for some guys and you know what? I'm happy for them - but most guys aren't about that lifestyle/are turned off by the sheer idea of it. People who don't lift and have never lifted have a distorted view of what lifting is about. They think it's an obsession with size and being in the gym and the sort of Jersey Shore culture around being big/aesthetic. They associate lifting with that obnoxious UMMA LOOK LYK ZYZZ BRAH DNT START WOT U CNT FINISH BRAH bullshit. That's not what I'm getting at when I emphasis lifting, and it's not what TRP is getting at either.

You do not need to be a body builder or big+ripped to see benefits from lifting. Even overweight guys and skinny guys who lift will feel the mental benefits of lifting once their body's are strong enough to regularly perform the exercises in their program. I have a friend that's an ectomorph to look at him you'd think he doesn't eat enough but this guy works out hard, eats a crap ton of food and feels all the better for it. His sex life is better, his energy/moods are better and he gets more done in his day.

Plenty of people lift who you wouldn't think lifted because they are not huge or part of that gym rat subculture that takes it to its extremes. These people dominate the gym, they are the most vocal, the most narcissistic, the most obsessive and they give the gym and what it stands for an obnoxious presentation to outsiders, but it's not all about their lift and get laid culture. You can use the gym to improve yourself independently of that bullshit subculture.

The main reason for lifting IMO is not for the physical benefits. This is more true for guys who are just genetically ugly to the point where no amount of lifting will improve their face, we've all seen those guys, low body fat, defined jawline but a face that is ugly as sin. Unless you're hideously obese, you should not be exercising predominantly for physical benefits, but for the physiological benefits. Lifting raises your T and causes you to release endorphins which elevate your mood, energy levels and cognitive ability. It will increase your concentration and it will make your wit sharper. You will feel a certain confidence and invincibility post-workout which dies off slowly (like a drug that is wearing off) for the hours after. If you workout early in the morning you can get to work feeling like the boss that you want to be.

IMO not lifting is being an inferior version of yourself. Lifting is like earning money its not optional if you want to be the best that you can be. You won't learn or understand as much reading from a book or reading a blog as a non-lifter as someone who has the energy and concentration of a lifter. The biggest benefits of lifting are the concentration, productivity and energy levels it brings. It gives you a clearer mind, more sharp witted, it gets rid of brain fog, it fights lethargy, it improves your sleep, it makes you more motivated, it reduces anxiety - need I say anymore? This stereotypical view of lifting as something restricted to a gym rat jersey shore subculture is misguided and ultimately if you allow that to dissuade you from lifting or view lifting as a negative thing you are depriving yourself of one of the cheapest and most effective ways of improving yourself and being the very best that you can be.

Personally I deadlift, press-up, squat etc because I like the cognitive benefits it provides. If making money is important to you, as is the lust of knowledge and all other manly pursuits, lifting is a solid foundation for self-actualisation. Lifting is about building a better you mentally and cognitively, about enhancing yourself. People get all caught up on the physical side of things but what you (As I assume, someone who doesn't lift) fail to see (as you have not experienced it) is the mental benefits it provides. Honestly, try it. If you already lift and know exactly what I'm saying yet still undermine the importance of lifting, I don't even know what to say to you. Agree to disagree I guess.

Lifting is to physical as reading is to mental and you wouldn't tell someone not to read books would you? Neglecting either is IMO, a huge disservice to your potential. Reading and lifting aren't optional, they're mandatory if you're obsessed with self-improvement.

Likewise, your "spirit" or "ether" or "soul" or whatever you what to define "you" as is the combination of your physicality and your mentality. The entirety of "you" is both physical and mental, neither should be neglected to create an optimum "you."

TLDR: Lifting makes you a better version of yourself mentally, it allows you to concentrate better, feel happier, be more confident and less anxious (most people are anxious nowadays) - any man looking to improve himself that neglects this fundamental building block of self-improvement is cutting his nose off to spite his face.

Serious question: Do you think the philosophers of the different periods: ancient (Plato), medieval (Machiavelli) the gothic to late gothic (Schopenhauer) or the post gothic (Nietzsche) actively edited their philosophical stream of consciousness to be more accessible? There really is a line between fixing typos and changing the very essence of a text. When I read these works I really feel like I'm in their heads despite the fact they've all been translated. Faithful translations are seen as translations which use the best words/syntax rather than going full-on grammar nazi. I want people to feel like they're in my head when I talk, not that they're getting a dilution of some sort to conform to the contemporary literary standards. I want to be understood, but in a nuanced, intimate and specific way.

which is probably why professionally published written and musical works have second- and third-party editors and producers.

Interesting assumption.

How do you respond when a girl calls you hot?

3 upvotes · 13 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Well it reframes the interaction to force her to play her hand and make another move (probably causing her to just flirt more/escalate verbally-sexually) without you explicitly revealing your own attraction. Her making a physical move is unlikely, women aren't bold and they expect you to make the first physical move as the man, although get drink/drugs in them and it's a whole different set of rules.

This reframe is useful in mitigating her plausible deniability for when you go in to make the first physical move as well as confirm her attraction is legit and not some random bullshit/wind-up. If she said you were hot just the once and you went for the kiss she could shrug it off or play hard to get with a "hey, I said hot, but not that hot", or "I meant hot as in sweaty, not as in sexy", effectively there's a modicum of plausible deniability in as much as what she said was a throwaway statement, but when you get her to reiterate it or say it in a different way again, you begin to build a narrative between you effectively forcing her to concede her deniability by pinpointing her sentiment. This gives yourself more freedom to make a move whilst giving her less freedom to flake/reject/deny.

The in-depth explanation aside, it's pretty smooth and simple, it's a basic pressure flip and I do think a pressure flip is better suited than agree and amplify in this instance. A+A get's raped to fuck as the go-to shit test handler and miscalibrated an A+A will just fail and get you awkward looks. Good shit, this was the best answer here IMO.

Robin Williams' divorce rape

Your satire is in poor taste. It's nothing about group/mob mentality it's everything to do with reality and delusion.

You can absolutely segregate everything into reality and delusion when it comes to human ways of thought. Theoretics are the border between reality and delusion as they have the possibility to be either until proven or disproven.

I find in media that some things are gritty (close to totally RP) some are fantasy/delusional (close to totally BP) whilst others mix it up in different proportions, if something is full of shit, I don't want to watch it, if something however has a few delusional idealisms in it but otherwise is useful/constructive/positive then I'll watch it, there's nothing wrong with having a healthy dose of optimism/hope, that's not the same as watching propaganda promoting a hidden agenda, a good film is a good film, but there's a fine line between entertainment value and then adopting the ideas of a film as your own, media is an agent of socialisation so like it or not if you're going to watch fantastical bollocks full of trite, it's going to affect how you perceive - hence my aversion and desire to minimize my exposure to things which pollute my mind with falsehoods. Yes I'm probably mentally cognizant enough to identify and reject these ideas anyway, but why waste my time with it? It's distasteful and unproductive.

Like everything it's about balance, and each and every human has a tendency to be more predisposed to fantasy or realism. In our current culture, most opt for optimistic fantasy whilst feeling absolutely cynical as a result of the failure that such a mindset brings, the hypocrisy of this should be impossible but it isn't due to cognitive dissonance and doublethink. The irony is so incredible I think it's lost on the great unwashed moronic masses with most lacking the self-awareness to acknowledge said irony.

One of the arrogant beliefs of the everyman is the rich and/or famous are impervious to mental problems. They're not, and they have the wealth to medicate it with narcotics. Their problems are caused by people rather than poverty and most of the people causing their problems are equally powerful and thus almost above the law. None of the guys in that video strike me as being RP and that's what my statement is based on within the context of this topic, not that it's impossible to be a RP MRA, it certainly isn't, it's just far more likely you will be one or the other rather than both, not that you can't be both, at no point do I state that, what I do state is there is a tendency for activists to become absorbed by an ideology based upon a victim narrative rather than focus on their personal development (which is not exclusive to MRM but ANY ideology, eg: racism, feminism etc). TRP is not a movement, MRM is. TRP tolerates respectful women, but does not encourage more women to enter our space, MRM does to win political points (as feminism gives anything with female approval more credibility, case in point: #womenagainstfeminism) whereas TRP doesn't give a fuck about playing political games to win public approval. If you don't like TRP then feel free to get fucked is pretty much the mantra here.

To reiterate: most people on TRP are so involved in their own shit, improving their deadlift, learning skills, making money, getting laid, that they're not going to waste time battling for men with MRA, a fundamental belief of TRP is that the system cannot be changed, so focus on yourself and play the system to your advantage whilst most MRAs are so involved with their activism and outraged by the unfairness of feminism that they hold the belief that the system can in fact be changed, should be changed, and we should strive to change it thus sinking time and energy into activism than an RPer wouldn't. That doesn't mean an MRA can't engage in self-improvement, but it does mean have a world view that does not accept the TRP stance that we're in a decline that cannot be stopped and should be fully embraced and optimised to one's personal gain. Embracing the decline whilst simultaneously battling it does at least on appearance, appear to be counterintuitive. This is where if you want to mix TRP and MRM you have to find a way to reconcile how TRP gives no fucks about the system and how MRM is all about changing the system because they're directly opposing views. "Enjoy the decline!" is not compatible with "Let's get rid of feminism and take back our civilization!", that's not a false dichotomy, that's a generalisation of how two different frameworks operate, some RPer's even say they love feminism because it makes it easy for them to get laid with all these chicks whoring themselves out, doubt you'll hear an MRA say that they love feminism.

The major difference between MRA and TRP is that TRP doesn't believe the system can be changed and MRA does and actively campaigns for it. If you're an RPer that wants to be a part-time MRA activist then that's fine but you're not an average RPer or an average MRA, you're a hybrid, you're not going to be there at every rally and you're not going to be out-reading, out-earning and out-benching other RPer because you spend some of your down time in conference centres or engaging in armchair activism whilst through-and-through RPer are purely focused on themselves. MRAs (a movement) and RPer (a self-improvement philosophy) have different priorities and diverge massively in how they deal with "the system" (internal micro vs external macro improvement for men) however if you want to mix it up and improve yourself whilst campaigning to change the system then that's on you, but it's atypical and "fixing the system" is not a red pill position, it's a uniquely MRM one, TRP gives no fucks about abolishing feminism, none at all, we're not a movement, but rather a community with a common philosophy. With all that being said I'm not opposed to MRM, but realise it is a fundamentally different thing separate of TRP and that there is at least one significant conflict between MRM and TRP thought that needs to be reconciled should you wish to be both.

BPD women are low functioning borderline DTs, they're either introvert shut-ins, ugly, not very intelligent, or some mixture of the 3. They have virtually no psychopathy and so are very easily hurt/upset (although the hamster allows them to hurt you callously and not give a fuck because like all women they are good at self-deceiving and morally justifying destructive behaviour which is akin to, but not psychopathy per se, more of a very well-oiled coping mechanism), their narcissism fluctuates within erratic parameters between "egocentric" and "I hate myself." They are total energy vampires, they never leave you alone and pester the shit out of you, constantly talking, needing an absolute constant stream of validation and attention so intense they will make you feel constantly tired, they demand more than any one person can give, they are intense, but not in the enjoyable way that a high-functioning flirty DT woman is. I wouldn't even spin one as a plate, they are psychologically repulsive on every level. IMO, they should be humanely euthanised and not allowed to reproduce, women like that raising children is tantamount to child abuse.

Losing attraction to him doesn't suggest sadism but more like simple hypergamy wanting to branch swing to the stronger perceivably higher value man. Violence is not inherently sadistic just masculine/dominant (although sadism and violence are not mutually exclusive.) A man kicking the crap out of another guy is asserting dominance. Fucking emotional esotericism is bullshit. Who gives a fuck if you're uncomfortable, if someone asks you to do something and you do it, you consented, it's not like he was fucking waterboarding you or had a gun pointed at your head while you sucked him off, shit bitch. Comfort and consent are not the same thing, ideally you do not consent unless you are comfortable, but you can consent TO ANYTHING (like work a shit job) and not be comfortable with it. That doesn't mean being a wage slave is rape (or forced labour as they call it), it means you were exploited because the economy is a fucking pile of crap, regardless of how shitty the job is, you're still choosing to do it. Was she exploited? Yes, this looks like exploitation. Raped/assaulted? Fuck no. She decided to suck his cock when she felt uncomfortable, that was her call. She has to live with it. Give these bitches their fucking agency, she's 18, she's free to make bad decisions, like, you know, suck off her married boss who's wife is a good friend of hers. I love it when bitches tell stories, they fucking spin it and word it to make it look like they were innocently walking along ignorant without a clue in the world, when all of a sudden, some nasty man came along and just "took her innocence" in the figurative and literal sense.

I love how sexual exploitation gets equated to things like rape, yet economic exploitation is "just a matter of business" you know society and people really need to start making sure their morals align, exploitation is morally dubious regardless of it's shade of grey. Why is sexually exploiting someone worse than economically exploiting them to the point they can't live comfortably (minimum wage?) One causes the person poverty/hardship, the other causes them to feel uncomfortable for the duration of the sexual act. Which one is really fucking worse? Personally I think both are shit for the "victim" but lucrative for the "oppressor" but at least I'm consistent in my views. Willing to bet a lot of people who think this is fucked up have no problem economically enslaving people because that allows them to detach themselves from the person they're exploiting and hamster "I'm giving them an opportunity in a bad economy!" yeah, the opportunity to work minimum wage at 40 hours a week and they live paycheck to paycheck! Total fucking BS. Shit like this gets me in a misanthropic mood. Unless you believe in total egalitarianism including economic, you're going to be a fucking hypocrite with your morals, mark my words.

Exploitation is not rape, it is immorality driven by greed whether the nature of that is sexual, economic or whatever.

And they're largely unnecessary. It's almost like TRP is on a mission to be as politically incorrect as possible, even at the cost of self-vilification.

Being someone competent in speaking emphatically and with abandon like Patrice O'Neal whilst also being competent in speaking in a "upper class manner" using less common adjectives that form part of a more sophisticated style of register (oh dear we're in quite the quandary!) I know exactly what you mean, sometimes a message sounds better when you're swearing your ass off and making colourful metaphors because to dress it up in "the language of intellectualisation" would make it less comprehensible to a large subset of the population whilst detracting from the temerity of the message, other times, say you are trying to communicate a theory rather than communicate an opinion or a message, the language of intellectualisation is more appropriate as theorisation is inherently intellectual in nature, whilst opinion often enough is not.

Both informal and formal register can be unpalatable when used in the wrong context. A lot of people shy away from anything that sounds too complex, others will shy away from anything that sounds "rather trashy in nature", personally I warm up to both (smart sounding shit and "street wisdom") I pity those who can only gain knowledge when it is delivered in a specific way, it is the hallmark of an intolerant mind that allows its prejudice to limit its receptivity to knowledge.

In other news, part of the red pill is a disdain for political correctness, political correctness is a way of controlling thought processes, you change the language and you change the way people think. Everyone's stood there saying one thing when everyone really knows that it's bullshit, until eventually people actually begin believing in the bullshit doublespeak that political correctness is. If you've read 1984 you'll know exactly what I'm talking about.

Is there anything more privileged and entitled than a beautiful woman?

I would rather increase in value throughout my life instead of only getting it for a little while while I am young.

The increase is not guaranteed, not all men will appreciate in value through their lives, however if they have the discipline and intellectual capacity to engage in self-improvement, then unburdened by the limitations of youth and physical attraction alone (like women) they do have the means to appreciate in value over time. That's just how it is, we don't make the rules up, nature does. If men had the same sort of hypergamy as women (hypergamy of resources/status in a mate, rather than hypergamy of sexuality and fertility) then rich and accomplished career woman would be as equally desirable as rich and accomplished career men, the fact is, they're not, attraction is different between the genders.

The fact a lot of people cannot reconcile this biological difference as a part of reality and instead call it an unfair double standard are intellectually challenged, reality is reality, the indignation of something being unfair will not change the reality of that unfairness, nature is not a feminist neither a liberalist or egalitarian - you cannot change attraction cues to make biology egalitarian when the biology of attraction itself has no concept of egalitarianism, merely cohesion, no matter how predatory, codependent or exploitative that cohesion may be in it's nature. Attraction is primal, it is not ultimately governed by morals or social ideology much to the dismay of ideology which tries to make itself the authority on intergender dynamics and thus attraction, such as feminism.

the competition between aldi and lidl is the reason why food is so extremely cheap in germany.

I know LIDL and ALDI are far cheaper than any of the other UK supermarkets by a considerable amount be it for eggs, cooking oils, seafood, wheat-based products, vegetables, you name it. Didn't know it was the same way in Germany. English people of all classes have a bit of pretension about them, even people who seem common. I know uneducated people on low salaries who think they're too good for Lidl and scoff at paying for a carrier bag, "ewww Lidl? why do you shop there?" the same people who'd mock someone for shopping at Marks & Spencer (gotta love British classism and its hypocrisy) but who cares about paying for your carrier bag when the food is so cheap?

Just throwing some thoughts around here, it's not a refined idea, so you may find this difficult to follow:

It's poetically ironic if the feminisation of men is making more women seek to form romantic relationships with other women rather than men because there is a certain stigma attached to the feminist movement in that it was started by upper class white lesbian women. It would be incredibly fitting if feminism has, over time, directly encouraged and even lead to more lesbianism, no matter how indirect its influence. You could never prove it for certain and it'd always be arguable by those who'd refuse to believe that assertion out of stubbornness or a vested interest, you'd have someone say "correlation does not imply causation" which logically, is quite right and others would rather just call it a "conspiracy theory" thus allowing them to casually dismiss the assertion rather than investigate the possibility, however I'd bet my right nut that if you could get a trend line for "self-reports of lesbian orientation" and have it go back 100 years, right around 1970 it'd rise a little and then in more recent decades you'd see it jump significantly.

All the while, LGBT is making strides in being normalised and masculinity is vilified by feminism, boys are growing up surrounded by women and being raised to act feminine and it starts to paint a picture of a world that is becoming more and more ruled by the feminine. In fact, an absence of masculinity would make it more acceptable to accept lesbianism as femininity would be the ruling social imperative and prevailing form of sexuality, gender regardless.

You'd get the blanket argument of "well now its more acceptable back then they were too scared to come out" and that is certainly true, but that is only part of the equation, it accounts for "women born lesbian" not "women who were interested in men all their lives and later on gave up on them and decided to date women" aka, a heterosexual woman converted into a lesbian/bisexual woman by the environment she's in. It doesn't look at how men behaving feminine cannot compete with women behaving feminine as a sexual choice, the two sexiest things to all humans is an incredibly masculine man (which most men are lacking - these kinds of men are even preferred by the gay community, not just straight women) and an incredibly feminine woman (which is debatable on TRP as so many are unrefined and behave in poor taste) but do maintain feminine appearance/emotionalism which are traditional hallmarks of feminine sexuality/presentation, that is to say it's fine for a woman to be dim-witted, emotionally erratic and all over the place, "it's cute/lovable and kind of annoying" but when a man does it "he's weak and unattractive" despite the fact he's showing the same behaviours as a feminine woman would, as he has a male appearance the same behavioural traits are unattractive. If those are the only choices a woman has, a feminine, passive man or a feminine, passive woman, fluid as their sexuality is, they're going to pick a feminine woman over a feminine man. A soft man cannot beat a woman at being soft, it is biology defying.

TLDR: feminism making men more effeminate with its social policies/single mothers, men growing up directionless and effeminate do not acquire masculinity, men can't attract women because they are too feminine/passive, women frustrated they cannot find "traditional men" (where did all the good men go?!) and thus end up hooking up with a chick.

Alternate theory: some of these chicks are more masculine than the men in her life, so she's being drawn to that. You know how there's always one "butch" woman and one "normal" woman. Would be funny if actually, in fact, in some areas it's more common for women to behave more masculine than the men because the men have just been that emasculated. Food for thought, don't take any of it as definitive.

Anecdotal: knew a guy who was dim as fuck, I'm talking really dim, would not understand a lot of sarcasm/puns/concepts, he was just slow in terms of wit and academics. You'd pick it up if you spoke to him. Was undoubtedly left of the bell curve. Guy used to slay the pussy and had an abundance of confidence. He was not especially good looking either. If a chick rejected him he'd just make a joke at her expense, laugh, and walk off. Often times that was enough to get the chick to change her mind and they'd end up banging. If he got rejected once he'd try again later, often chicks just want to fuck your audacity, I think he got a lot of lays by continuing to flirt at a later date post-rejection. Unlike smarter guys, he had no sense of pride when it came to women, he would fuck hot chicks, ugly chicks and not get too bothered when chicks rejected him. He banged A LOT OF chicks. Think he even got himself a few curable STIs, lucky guy.

By the time he had hit 18 he was in the early double digits for lays which is way above what most guys are managing. While we all sit on internet forums theorising and coming up with philosophy to explain female behaviour and learning in the process, there are plenty of dumb guys who "just get it" and are naturals as a result. He didn't have a particularly hairy face either (couldn't grow a beard or moustache) so that seems to rule out being High T. If you asked him how he got girls he wouldn't have the awareness and intelligence to articulate it to you, "he just did it."

Since reading TRP I retrospectively deduced he had built-in abundance mentality + amused mastery. When bitches did reject him (and it happened a lot) he'd just look for new ones online/offline. The guy was pretty dedicated to getting laid, and no he's never read PUA/manosphere shit. Was always one of those guys who had "too many friends" on his social media. He was neither rich nor good looking either, just extremely social and audacious. We don't keep in touch anymore, now tinders out he's probably slaying it tenfold.

What is confidence?

3 upvotes · 28 May 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

The absence of fear is stupidity.

If you interpret "the absence of fear" as definitive, than yes, but along a spectrum, typically the less of it you have the better, although I do not doubt there is a point somewhere where if you were to chemically reduce the fear in your body any further then you would enter the realm of folly and possibly even self-endangerment. One needs enough fear to keep their senses sharp, but not so much that they cannot perform what is required, like everything, there must be a balance of sorts, whether that balance is 50:50 or 70:30 or 80:20 is something that is always up for debate among intellectuals despite the likelihood that determining such a thing is probably not easily proved, deduced or ultimately agreed upon.

Confidence is knowing you can do it via precedent.

This is quite profound and succinct. Appreciate the summation.

Nah I believe you that's fucked up man. America really took feminism to the next level. They've never done that shit in England.

To me the radicality of feminism goes something like this as a hierarchy, the first country being the most radical and the final being the least radical:

Sweden > Iceland/Norway/Denmark/Finland > USA > Canada > Germany/France/Netherlands > England/UK > Australia/New Zealand > The Rest of Western Europe > Argentina/South Africa > Rest of the world is RP.

As for Japan I can't even comment. Men are feminised? Yeah. Is it due to feminism? I don't know.

For your social anxiety try going to coffee shops by yourself and out for jogs. Even alone, the more you're outside and around other other people the less of a big deal it will become for your brain, you will reprogram yourself with what you're used to effectively. Being around strangers and talking random shit to strangers is important for someone who spends 99% of their time alone. Also if you start lifting at home, the T boost will help bring your anxiety down when you try these new things. Jogging likewise gives a runners high and helps alleviate anxiety, at the end of a good jog you will feel very "i don't give a fuck" due to the endorphin releases. Best of luck. So you disagree women entering the workplace enmasse, facilitated by feminism, is the cause of the destruction of the family? Heh, okay. Economic growth (which you assert as the reason instead) is symptomatic of exactly this.

I don't believe in conspiracy theories

I don't see how a very obvious shift in society post-feminism is considered a conspiracy theory. Dare I say post ww2 and then feminism are what caused women to enter the workplace en masse. It was this which broke down traditional gender roles and the nuclear family. If you can make a cogent argument on why/how this is incorrect, I'm open to reason.

You could say non-romantic love is:

The continuation of actions and reactions that cause serotonin release between individuals.

But then you can still love someone you haven't seen in years who no longer provides anything to you. An old friend, a dead friend, whoever it is. I'm as hardened as they come when it comes to being cynical but I don't think biochemical explanations for love/attraction fully encompass everything that's at work. Sure, these certain neurotransmitters are going off but I believe that's only a small part of a much bigger picture. You can replace a source of serotonin or oxytocin and that won't stop you loving a specific person. We value people far more deeply than I believe biology is capable of explaining, for biology is far too detached and observant of that which is measurable whilst love is inherently emotional and difficult if not impossible to measure. It's like trying to get a colour blind man to comment on colour and he tells you one shade is darker than the other, it's true, yes, but it's so far off from the entire picture. It's quite literally scratching at a surface of which so much more detail is being omitted.

Unless they want to write a book to try to make money, sharing their knowledge with others close to them will in fact diminish or negate their own power and not benefit them. Machiavellians are always looking for how a given action will help themselves.

This is the great thing about the internet, the pseudo anonymity, none of us are close to each other and therefore I can share my knowledge without any adverse effects to myself. I doubt the pieces on Machiavellianism I do, and the eventual book, would be possible without the internet. It would be too detrimental to one's reputation and others would not be so genuine in sharing their own opinions either thus disallowing for such a free flow of ideas. Combine this with the fact that the internet is the best distribution platform out there right now and it's not monopolised by those who are already rich and powerful and you find that the internet is truly a marvel of the modern era, the internet is a classless society whilst the real world is completely class-based. It is because of this that the internet allows many people to achieve to a level of achievement way beyond what would be possible without its existence. The internet in its current form is symbolic of freedom and is the best medium for meritocracy. It is in all societies and yet, it is independant of society as a solitary entity also.

Brilliant post, although I wasn't expecting such an in-depth tangent based on my relatively brief example on physical stature.

Small guys should not give up on themselves because they are small and tall guys above the average in their country should make an effort to back up their stature with actual martial arts training so that when someone does test them they can follow through. I wouldn't say 5'8 is small, it's 2 inches beneath average for a white guy in the US (Average is 5'10.5) or in England just an inch beneath average (5'9), it is the average in China, above average in Japan and 3 inches above average in India.

Tall guys without martial arts training or some sort of fighting experience heavily rely on the bluff, most short guys have to prove themselves as they lack the bluff, the optimum power balance anyone can possess is both the bluff of stature and the fighting skill to back that stature up, basically as a tall guy you get some good genetics with your height but you need to be able to fight well too, much of the time you won't need to prove yourself based on appearance alone, but when you do need to prove yourself you'll want to be able to back up your stature with fighting prowess otherwise the superior fighter height regardless will hand you your ass on a platter.

Tall people have no excuse, they can learn to fight. Short people can't magically make themselves taller, it is what it is, you make the best with the cards you're dealt in the genetic lottery in order to become the best version of yourself. Everyone unavoidably has different limits but reaching those limits should be everyone's personal goal. With a lot of training most people will be surprised how high their limits actually are.

Your story is a good example of someone becoming stronger due to suffering and adversity, adversity is a good teacher and also an incredibly potent catalyst for power acquisition.

Reason I can't change the colour is that wordpress wants to charge me $30 just to edit minor things like CSS and font colour (a rip-off) and it is by far too much hassle to change the font colour by hand for each blog post, their text editor loves to add random junk code into the articles if you try to edit the posts own HTML.

When I move to my own server (probably within a month or two) I'll change the font colour in the code to black and then text colour should default to black for all articles.

because it's people like me who will be "available" to these women once they are through with alphas (or visa verse).

If you have any sense of self respect you'll go your own way (MGTOW) and fuck hookers or be a bachelor and fuck younger girls (as a big FUCK YOU to chicks your own age who denied you when you were younger) rather than act as a financial and emotional doormat for an undeserving washed up broad who can offer nothing but a dried up womb and a boat load of responsibility in the form of family.

Assuming paternity is yours (don't assume get tests done) she can give you kids and some semblance of family, but if she's not who you really want and you're not who she really wants and you both just settle out of fear of being lonely in old age then you won't build yourself a family you can be proud of, you'll be leading a second-rate life with a second-rate woman raising second-rate kids. You'll be fucking miserable. Your unborn kids deserve better, you deserve better and that woman deserves fuck else than to be a fuck socket for men twenty years her senior, not a mother and a housewife. Motherhood/wifedom is a privilege, these whores flout it and think they can come and clean up later once they've been all over the place humping dick trains and enjoying free drugs/alcohol parties.

That isn't the kind of woman you want being the mother of your kids. An irresponsible party-going cunt who would go on forever if looks permitted, but is forced to jump out of the game because her tits are sagging and her skins losing suppleness and WHAM OH SHIT THE BERLIN BITCH WALL has just smacked her in the face. Know these whores give the game up begrudgingly, not because they want to. If women could look like they were 20 forever, fuck alpha tinder dick, get free clothes/holidays/drinks and cocaine forever, they would. They'd never settle, they'd masturbate in their own selfishness forever, it's the depreciation of female beauty which ultimately forces bitches to grow up and develop a personality, nothing else.

These aren't the type of women you want to be "someones back up for" read "Michael's Story" in the sidebar, if she won't give you her best years then fuck her, don't give her yours, which is typically the entirety of your 30's. If a bitch won't marry/settle with you in her 20's and wants to "find herself" aka see if she can do better than you/ generally slut it up by getting as much strange dick as possible. Those women are never "mother of your children" material. Ever.

Once a whore, always a whore. Some people have successfully reformed whores, they're typically people like Patrice O'Neal, if you're not Patrice O'Neal don't even bother with the endeavour, just because some people have managed it doesn't mean everyone should go out and fucking try it.... as said in the words of solomon, the bit in bold specifically refers to the topic of trying to make housewives out of whores:

There are no good women, and there are no bad women. There are just women. Women do what they want when they want and justify their actions later. That's why it's important to find a woman of character who is naturally inclined to do the things which are wholesome, respectful, productive, and conducive to rearing the offspring produced by your potential union.

A woman's character is of utmost importance. A woman's past actions matter. In fact, her past matters more than anything else because it reveals the character she developed during her impressionable years. A woman may change what she does, but she can't change who she is or repair her reputation. Like hot or cold water eventually comes back to room temperature when no external forces are present, so a woman returns to her base character level when no external forces are present. If you choose to be a woman's external force in order to exact a temperature change within her, don't be surprised when she reverts to her room temperature character the moment you're not around.

What defines a woman of good character varies from man to man. Know which character traits are important to you. Study to learn the signs of these traits, and study harder to learn how manipulative women mimic these traits when they are not in possession of them. Judge harshly and without apology. Recognize flaws within yourself and actively work to right them, but never let a woman convince you to consider your own personal flaws as a valid reason to overlook hers.

Recognize, protect, and celebrate a woman of good character, for she is exceedingly rare. Recognize, expose, and shame a woman of low character for she is a parasite driven by consumption and will kill her host. Above all, know that a woman of character and a woman of risible morals are often indistinguishable at first glance. Only the erudite man committed to attaining the knowledge and skills to determine one from the other stands a chance of reaching his full potential."

Upgrading a plate if she loses weight?

TRP is not a moral philosophy, it is a philosophy of actualisation.

It is amoral, it takes no moral position. Being amoral, we typically weigh up both the moral and the immoral options and present them to the person in question, being judgemental neither way (well some posters will be judgemental, but TRP doesn't back their moral opinions.) Many posters will say "what they would do" to represent their own moral position but ultimately it's up to the person with all the options both moral and immoral in front of them to decide what they're going to do. We're just consultants concerned with making sure the person in question comes out on top or at the very least, unharmed.

I'd estimate after 2-3 generations it would be significantly weakened. Probably all but absent after 4-5 generations. Remember, as women now have children a lot later than they used to and people are living longer, the time it takes for one generations influence to simmer out is much more than it would have been previously.

Plugging your own blog? For shame.

Anecdotally, I've found TRP/manosphere has about as much bullshit as any other internet community I've been in, 4chan, weightlifting, jiu jitsu.

This is correct, but largely irrelevant.

If your goal is/was to logically convince neutral or antagonistic parties, you're begging the question too frequently.

I would agree, however it is not a piece intended to persuade, it's function is to explain an element of the redpill to the uninitiated/the curious, those who are "trying to understand TRP" not to persuade people to accept it or embrace it. It is far too boring a piece to be persuasive and I have no inclination to persuade "neutral or antagonistic parties", the piece in and of itself should make that idea abundantly clear in so much as saying that minimal consideration is given to parties who choose to reject it, that is their choice, this piece is not intended for their readership.

How to attract a male friend?

3 upvotes · 31 March 2014 · /r/RedPillWomen

So either your male friend isn't alpha because he hasn't made a direct move, or he's just not interested, according to TRP.

False dichotomy. I can be interested in a woman and consider it a strategically poor move to act upon my attraction and therefore I friendzone the girl if she's pleasant enough (rare, most women I meet are not pleasant to be around or simply too boring, but I'm not beyond the possibility - it can happen.)

Ugly women (low smv) don't elicit sexual attraction anyway, if you're friends with one there is no sexual tension. This is the only type of woman a man can be friends with on a simple level without any tension on his part. The irony is the frustration is then shifted from the man (as is so typical) to the woman. If she's not very attractive and he's even average, she's going to want to punch above her weight, the onus/awkwardness will be on her.

Attractive women (high smv) if it's poor strategy to fuck them (she works where you work, she's in too many of your social circles and collateral would be too much when it ends etc) then friendzoning them is strategic. Yes you'd love to fuck her but you can't act on it because it wouldn't be worth the fallout. Maybe you fantasise about her but it's a forbidden vice, giving into it leaves you too socially vulnerable. She'd have too much power to fuck up your life if you were to act on your feelings. Instead, you use her good looks to boost other people's perceptions of you. A man surrounded by one or multiple hot women gets a boost to his social status and an increase in respect, that alone is reason enough to be friends with hot chicks. Bonus: men friend zone hot chicks because hot chicks tend to have hot friends. He may be using you as a social connector.

An alpha will be friends with a hot chick if it's too cumbersome to fuck her, rather than cut her off he uses her as social proof and a way to meet other attractive women instead (if he's smart/machiavellian like that.) You can have friendships where there is sexual attraction, but the extent of this friendships is limited. Alphas don't find ugly women attractive and won't settle for them, if they're friends with one they genuinely like her for her personality, which is ironic, because that's what women always claim they want "he likes me for me", when in reality, that's not enough, he has to perceive you as a sexual object to even desire you. Liking your personality is worth jack shit if you're not a sexual being on his radar.

TRP doesn't say being friends with women isn't alpha, it's just that it's normally pointless to be friends with a woman because other than sex she has nothing to offer that a man can't offer in friendship to a far more refined degree. Male friends are also less needy and less prone to abusing you with their emotions. The only thing a hot woman can offer a man other than sex, assuming she doesn't have a cunt personality, is social proof and introducing you/hooking you up with other women.

If your SMV is low, EG: you're fat, poor, unpopular or whatever then forget women/socialising/doing pointless shit for a good year 6 months to a year - just be utterly selfish forget everyone else and go do your own thing.

You can't have her? Fine. She doesn't exist to you then. No point in wasting your time on thinking about "what" and "if", calling out to her only makes you seem needy.

Comes with the added effect that if she still wants you, your lack of contact will get to her ego eventually and she'll probably reach out. If she doesn't reach out she doesn't give a fuck.

Remember the beige phillip rule: agreements don't mean shit

10 – Agreements with women don't mean shit.

Don't think that if you're honest and they agree to it, that they'll agree it to later, there's no binding legal agreement. Women have integrity amnesia, whatever you decide the relationship will be in the beginning doesn't mean a damn thing. What she wants in a relationship changes based upon her emotions because her reality stems from her emotional state (See #16.) Whatever they agree to in the beginning doesn't mean shit later on, they haven't signed a legal contract, you have to police that, you have to hold firm with the rules, you show you're a real man by sticking to your guns. Likewise, if you establish something as a pattern, that pattern can't change just because she chooses to complain about it.

Does TRP encourage cheating?

3 upvotes · 19 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

would you be honest to her and let her know that you are not interested in being monogamous?

Depends on the woman. Most women I would lie to because I don't give a shit about them and I don't trust them to do anything but cause me trouble. It's in my interest to use her for what I want, I don't care about her emotions I just care about getting what I want from her that she can offer me, when she comes with the ultimatums to fully embrace her and her baggage I'm out of there.

If she manages to make me care about her however it'd be quite different, I'd be gutted if I lost her and wouldn't risk cheating in such a high value relationship, essentially if she's worth it the stakes are not worth it, but I am of the strong opinion most women are not worth monogamy, monogamy worthy women are more an exception than they are a trend. It's not that I don't like the idea of having a family, in fact I love it, I just exercise extremely high quality standards in a mate.

When you get with an RP man know what you're getting into, its hard to get them to love you because they don't want to give in and create the vulnerability WHICH IS LOVING YOU in the dent of their armour, and when they do that FOR YOU if you fuck up too badly, or otherwise betray that, expect a world of pain.

A few things:

- I don't expect to find myself caring about many women I meet, most of them lack the qualities, character or integrity for me to even remotely consider the possibility, as such I would treat any hypothetical relationship in a detached manner, covering up my detachedness with the warmth of superficial charm.
- If I care about a woman and she fucks me over, I will probably do things that aren't safe to type into a publicly held record on an internet forum.

With enough charisma and plausible deniability aka powertalk you can do whatever you like.

I'd be concerned my boss would consider it too snarky and it would put me on his/her radar as possibly insubordinate and a pain-in-the-ass to work with.

Delivery is important, say you wish to humour your boss when they were indignant as you wanted to alleviate their anxiety.

If you were the employer, knowing what you know about the world, would you use these tactics on your employees if they were effective, or would you consider that immoral?

I'm like most machiavellians, a hypocrite. If you're doing this shit to me and I don't respect you, it's a declaration of war as far as I'm concerned. I'd do it regardless of my position it's part of who I am.

Do you have any experiences in this which made you draw this conclusion?

Would take more effort than I'm willing to expend to explain my opinion, but nevertheless it's just that - an opinion, nothing more and nothing less. In my experience beta men are very much like women in having loyalty to a company. Everyone whose high dark triad, women included will jump ship at a moments notice.

derides a vague definition of "macho culture" and then transitions into waffle about mental health illness without making an explicit connection to feminism. LOL.

3 upvotes · 13 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Feminism didn't expand the welfare state, the opportunity provided by women joining the workforce and practically doubling it during the World War production period wasn't Feminism, it was Nationalism.

Agreed.

Nationalism supported this increase in the workforce and the increase of working class had the natural consequence of desire for increased benefits for the working class.

Agreed somewhat, also, to win votes... some people will always vote leftist.. immigrants, single mothers etc. It's a mixed issue, but there is such a thing as "the feminist vote."

The shitty excuse for a welfare state America has is much more attributed to the population structure of the classes than the social movements it experienced in the 60's and 70's.

Perhaps in its inception, I could agree, but nationalism isn't a suitable reason for maintaining that status quo. You neglect to mention what happened after the war when all the men returned home, furthermore, America entered the war very late and was not a major player, it was America's reticence to get involved too heavily in WW2 that allows it to remain a superpower today whilst the superpower empires of Europe destroyed each other.

Anyway, good post. To sum up, feminism wasn't the cause, I agree, but it can be used to secure most of the female vote in the contemporary who are pro free-shit in the post nuclear family single mother epidemic. Just look at your health insurance recently under Obama's administration, now the women who use health care more pay the same as men as it was "discrimination", yes.. using a service more means you are discriminated... for being a woman? No, for using the service more. Let's disregard that logic though. Thanks feminism. It's not exactly a welfare state issue as you pay for insurance out of your own pocket, but the policy serves the same effect, it's socialist interventionist protectionism that essentially removes the free market element of health insurance by enforcing a federally sanctioned egalitarian element into the mix. Now insurance companies have to be less competitive to half the population base just so that women can get a slight price reduction for services they used more anyway. Fucking ridiculous, anyhow, I've digressed.

3 upvotes · 13 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

If things are going as they should, she should be speaking more than you.

I see the underlying assumption here, that if she's talking more she's probably qualifying and listening to you, thing is if you're running tight word game you can be verbose as fuck, as long as you don't constantly qualify yourself and hold frame you can be as talkative as you like as long as you don't err and your words all flow together (are eloquent.)

I think way too much is being looked into this from the comments here on what is tantamount to a newspaper article which offers no conducive proof. Silent types don't get chicks for speaking in simple syntax, but because they are basically demonstrating aloof game, it's the mystery/allure of not letting them know what you think of them which drives them nuts and raises their interest.

Science confirms the 2/3 rule

3 upvotes · 13 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I'm beyond changing tiny behaviours about myself in the hope it makes pussy a little moister in my vicinity. Things like holding frame and maintaining good posture are general principles which are enough for me, not being wordy and articulate but rather laconic and straight talking goes against everything the powertalk thread talked about and everything I naturally do. Part of my word game is the verbosity of it, in fact people have posted studies on here before saying that women prefer men who use big words because it shows intelligence or whatever.

I'd choose powertalk over terseness any day. If you're high status I'm sure unless there's no confidence in your voice the number of words you use won't make much fucking difference. Terseness is what you use to communicate via subtext that you're not happy with someone or otherwise give minimal fucks about them and want them to stop talking to you without explicitly expressing it.

Interesting article but I'm not going to change myself based upon it.

2/3 ratio for digital communications is simple text game.

In real life you can soft next people who piss you off, or if she/he (not limited to romantic interactions) starts withdrawing investment then you can simply withdraw your own, I wouldn't change from powertalk which is naturally more longer and elaborate in nature to straight talk merely on the basis of this article and the (uncited?) study it mentions.

3 upvotes · 14 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

To further elaborate on this topic, I wrote about perceived and actual SMV here:

<http://illimitablemen.com/2013/12/13/understanding-social-market-value/>

Enjoy.

For all the people saying there is only "perceived SMV"

Actual SMV = what a company is worth in assets/skills (net profit)

Perceived SMV = what the CEO reports on the quarterly financial reports as being the company's assets/skills to the shareholders/markets. (gross profit, growth forecast - potential, manipulated numbers, omission of issues etc)

Not necessarily one and the same, machiavellianism/strong frame can allow you to project higher SMV than you actually have.

A simple one is dressing well. If you have minimal outgoings you can dress above your social class.

If Anything, Caring About What's Beta IS Beta: A Response to "Why Being Polite is not Beta"

3 upvotes · 2 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Seems like there's a lot of confusion so hopefully this post will clear shit the fuck up.

The word "care" is vague in this context, if you don't want to be a pussy and you want to be aware of what behaviours to avoid in order not to be a pussy that does not make you a beta, having an interest in what constitutes beta behaviour does not make one beta, what makes you beta is essentially not being in charge of yourself, second-guessing yourself, a lack of frame essentially. If you're not a natural or didn't have a strong male role model you need fucking guidelines on what to avoid, being concerned with that doesn't make you beta, being unable to avoid those behaviours does. I mean, isn't that the fucking point of this subreddit? To guide young males "lacking a positive identity for men" (read the sidebar) to increase their sexual value by heightening their intrinsic masculinity and identifying all the bullshit thrown at them along the way to solidify said masculinity. We call this shit inner-game and in moments of brevity, frame control.

As the for the manners shit, manners are and were intended to be demonstrations of high value. Signifiers of social class and refinement, like the fucking chandeliers and caviar of verbal communication. Manners are a sign of social class in England, in fact a lot of foreigners are scorned by the indigineous here for their atrocious lack of manners, even if you're being rude, you're pushing past or otherwise being a selfish human asshole, you can soften the blow of arrogance with a token apology, it's simple courtesy - a declaration that you know what you're doing may upset another person, you don't give a fuck but because you're such a high value guy you're offering them some token apology so they can keep their emotions in check. You didn't have to do that but you chose to, it cost you nothing to bullshit them and it made you look better. Figure it the fuck out, come on.

Whereas you guys, especially you newbies, you get all this shit confused with "anything kind or positive is a sign of weakness" and think you all need to act like Robocop or Terminator, which by the way, you fucking don't, grow the fuck up - unless you're in prison surrounded by dark triads you don't need a rock solid impenetrable frame with no leeway, in the real world that shit will make you very unapproachable to people. Be all things to all people, if you're forced to spend time with the weak, you'll scare them away acting like a fucking prison convict. Check yourself in social institutions like the education system or at work. Oh look, there again, we even have a concept "beta game" which is an alpha pretending to be beta so he can fit in and not be ostracised, a wolf in sheeps clothing. A lot of you bickering dumb fucks would say "alphas are always overtly alpha" bullshit because your view of "what is alpha" is small-minded egotistical bullshit, think what you like but act like others - the nail that sticks out gets hammered.

When a weak person says sorry or apologises they are making excuses for being weak.

When a strong person says sorry or apologises it's because they are following their individual code of ethics, their own morality - they don't have to apologise to you but they want to - it's from a place of desire, not of need. If someone abuses your apology then soft/hard next them.

I think this inability or lack of desire to apologise a lot of you have is just a fucking projection of your own insecurity, you're so fucking scared to be rejected or have someone make you look like a fool or "look weak" when you apologise that you don't want to do it at all and use the excuse "its a beta behaviour" to not leave your ego open to an attack. If you can learn not to give a fuck when a chick rejects you on an approach, also learn not to give a fuck if people think your apology is beta or not - fuck what they think. You know why you apologised, do that shit to please yourself, to fit your own needs.

Again, for the 80 millionth time, apologising is not beta in and of itself - the reason you're doing it can be though, it's situation dependent. If you're doing it to avoid confrontation, to make excuses or otherwise devalue your own credibility then you're beta. If you're using it manipulatively, as a gesture of goodwill or because you genuinely feel remorse then you're being true to yourself - credible - alpha.

Why is this so fucking hard for many of you to grasp? Are we filling up with a subreddit of 15 years old or something? No? Then why argue over such rudimentary basics? If you're still in puberty wait until your hormones calm down before you even try to make solid deductions about shit and work out "what alpha behaviour is", this sounds condescending as fuck but you cannot trust anyone hormonal, not a bitch on her period, neither a kid filling up on T.

I also find myself disagreeing with tons of machiavellian shit. Even though I'm sure these tactics work (I've read 48 laws), many of them come at a cost (usually dignity).

Can you elaborate? I find if anything 48 laws helps you maintain frame. The only thing I can think of is schmoozing, but then if you look at schmoozing from a viewpoint as you controlling another person it all of a sudden doesn't become such an impediment on your dignity.

Yes I always piss people off with this shit but actually try to win the debate rather than get emotional that we won't all live in a multicoloured multicultural paradise. Western nations are in chaos due to lack of social cohesion, I wouldn't expect idealists and people who profit from this to care about a little thing called reality getting in the way though.

The problems immigrants may cause

Mass immigration, not immigration, is bad for an indigeneous population regardless of the composition, it leads to opportunity scarcity and overpopulation unless the country was already high developed and scarcely populated to begin with.

The problems immigrants may cause is an argument against government welfare and overall intervention, not immigration.

Agreed with the caveat it's mass immigration.

Competition is a good thing

You wouldn't say that if it was your industry/job under threat. Competition is good for those with nothing to lose (third worlders) and bad for those with everything to lose (those from the developed world.) The people who always win are big business regardless of where they're from.

I'd go more in-depth but I just don't fucking feel like it.

And quite right, any weakness is frowned upon, crudely a woman will toss you aside if need be and as you said rationalise it all to seem more reasonable to herself and her peers.

Their cities (shanghai) are growing exponentially and are becoming players on the global financial market. China has infiltrated Africa investing billions in African infrastructute (so they will get influence in the hotbed of raw materials).

Definitely saving graces for a nation which faces so many problems.

Their culture is spreading around the world (chinatowns,chinese food).

Due to diaspora. The spread of food, we all love food, until people try to emulate a chinese way of life I wouldn't cede any semblance of cultural significance/hegemony to them simply because people will eat their food. I like Mexican and Indian food, doesn't mean much culturally, it's more economic than it is cultural. Often the exported cuisine is far from authentic to the cultures actual recipes anyway, it gets "anglicized." America is very culturally homogenous around the world with Hollywood and its huge TV industry exported worldwide. When people start wanting to watch Chinese media, and Mandarin is actually more widely spoken outside China, there would be an argument here. As it grows in economic power people will begin to learn Mandarin, however on the media front they have a long way to go.

India doesnt possess the necessities to take over china in exporting (capitalist,democratic government) if india's laws become as draconian as china civil unrest would happen and a new government would take over.

Good point but if China became more expensive than India due to development, India would get contracts. Conditions are terrible in India, they believe in a caste system so basically many people get treated like subhumans and its deemed as OK, how they treat many of their people is equivocal to having a slave. No exaggeration, the pay and the conditions are terrible. India may have a fairer image internationally than China, but they are no kinder to their people than China.

China IS going to overtake the world in terms of capital.

Definitely possible, economic heavyweight yes. Military? Big, but not as big as USAs. Culturally I don't see China making much headway. Many Chinese born university students in the west do little to socialise outside their chinese student social groups so they don't even spread the culture to others like that, when they have the opportunity to mix with foreigners and "sell the culture." Anecdotaly, they seem very introverted/reserved, I rarely see them mingle with non-asians.

But they are still very far of from achieving the social equality possessed by western nations

Agreed, they cannot afford that welfare state. The liability with that population size is simply enormous, it would undo a lot of their growth.

You Really Can't Make This Shit Up (Part 2)

3 upvotes · 21 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

They never want to be single, so it's not just her personal preference. It's a general rule. Whenever they get dropped by the bf, they immediately seek out any available branch. It can be a low beta branch, from which it is possible to swing up again per hypergamy. I wonder how this behavior can be explained better. I guess a boyfriendless female is somehow in a worse position socially. It's not only about the money.

I agree with everything you've said. I know this chick specifically (in the story) is using her boyfriend for money. He doesn't earn much, he's not university educated, but he works ridiculous hours per week so brings home a sizeable chunk of dollar.

Your story tells me that women will NEVER be satisfied in a relationship, even with an alpha type (if that were to happen). Probably because in every relationship there is this ordinary everyday bullshit, drama, nagging, arguments, who does the dishes, who vacuums the carpets, boyfriend starts exhibiting beta attachment, etc. There will always be something that she is not satisfied with.

I see where you're coming from but this is where I start to disagree. I think if you're the alpha giving her feels who just meets up to fuck her, yeah, apart from bitching for additional commitment and the such you won't really have any negativity or problems to sort between the two of you so it's an easy, simple, enjoyable dynamic. Relationship game is a lot harder than "bachelor game" or "being a player", keeping one woman's hypergamy satiated in a relationship takes a lot of work.

The thing about everyday bullshit is you can't entertain it too much, just laugh at her/her pettiness (women are pretty petty creatures in general) and if she fucks up the relationship, dump her in a heartbeat. Women can't stand being the dumpee, they always want to be the dumper. Being dumped hurts their egos so much because they're the ones who do the sexual selection and we're the ones driven by sex (which they provide) it's the proverbial equivalent of you telling your cocaine dealer you don't need his coke anymore, when you're addicted to the shit.

So the natural setup for a woman is to have both a weak boyfriend for the ordinary relationship stuff and an alpha fucker on the side. The alpha fucker never has conflict with her, because they only meet for sex and there are no situations or reasons for her dissatisfaction.

If you were an alpha and had good relationship game, she would be loyal to you. It's hard to reach that level though and the loyalty is conditional on your strength, if you ever slip too much, eventually, her loyalty will wane and she will move on.

However, the reality is most alphas don't have good relationship game or even want to commit to the average woman if they do, so they don't have lasting relationships. These guys are the cream of the crop the women can't lock down. If he can put her in the fuck zone, being female, she still needs commitment/emotions to placate her ego so you get this perverse hierarchy where the alpha is at the top, then it's the woman enjoying the alpha for sex/fun and then the beta beneath her fulfilling her secondary needs the alpha refuses to such as her emotional drama, making her feel special, listening to her problems... everything bad/shit about being a chick's boyfriend they're lumbered with those roles, with the occasional "duty sex" thrown in to keep him under control.

You can never be a bf and be loved desired like an alpha fucker.

You can, but it's incredibly rare as it's a difficult thing to master. Those abusive guys you hear about where the woman can't leave him? He's in a relationship with her and she desires him like an "alpha fucker."

I can imagine a situation, where she has an alpha behavior boyfriend and still needs a second alpha for fucks. This whole dynamic is just unstable. Bitches can never be satisfied.

It's possible. If you don't have strong traits from the dark triad your ability to command loyalty in a woman is practically zilch.

Respect yourself more than you respect her

If approaching a situation in a beta fashion turns out to be productive for you so be it, but don't try and label it as an alpha move.

I care about winning, not about whether my actions are beta or alpha. I do "beta" things to win when it's the optimum strategy, but I always come out on top. I play to win.

I guess you could call a military tactical retreat beta, if you're overly concerned whether a specific action is beta or alpha. You're actually derailing the topic by concentrating on that, rather than being concerned with what the best course of action is. "I'll contest this guys wisdom because it's a beta move and doesn't exert dominance" - come on, seriously? Why do you even feel the need?

If you don't disagree with my strategy for any reason other than "you think its a beta action" then you're not being logical. Logic is about winning, not about being an alpha or a beta in a particular situation.

I hate it when people come in and start applying the term beta and alpha to specific actions, we actually had a thread on this shit ages ago because its fucking dumb. It means your inner-game is fucked when you're analysing whether a specific action was beta or not and not looking at the end-game. If you win at life, why give a fuck? Winning is "alpha"

Sometimes acting beta on purpose will save your ass too, beta game has it uses.

Ok, well your "opinion" doesn't gain credibility when it interjects unwarranted assumptions.

Then don't respect my opinion.

agree with most of what TRP is about, but what you write isn't TRP,

OK. You qualify yourself as being red pill and say I'm not because you disagree with me. You don't say why you disagree with me. Strong logic. Go back to SRS, this trolling style is getting old.

I guess I just expected more rational arguments from someone that is "trp endorsed"

Maybe you shouldn't feel entitled to anything and should enter the sub with an open mind. Maybe you should read my post history before hastily assuming whether I specifically am rational or not. Maybe you shouldn't judge someone based on one internet post. I guess I expected you to be more rational when posting here, instead of attempting to concern troll.

but I haven't spent much time in this sub to know if that tag means anything.

I can tell, yet like a hypergamous 28 year old about to hit the wall, or a moth to a light you go straight for the endorsed guy to "test the mettle of the sub" how about instead of getting personal, you read the sidebar and do your own research. Stop being lazy and entitled, start working for yourself. That's part of the message here, self-reliance, self-improvement. It's not all anti-feminism and how many bitches can we fuck in a week, contrary to popular outside sub opinion.

Seeing as how there are a lot of posts about the bad rep that trp has on Reddit, posts like yours explains why people might think that.

People don't like TRP because it's anti-feminist, most other subs believe in gender equality and a bunch of delusional unsubstantiated jazz due to their socialisation. TRP is demonised and misrepresented, tbh I and many others here who benefit from the philosophy give no fucks about what these self-proclaimed critics think or claim, we're doing our own thing, we're happy, we're seeing results. That's all that matters.

If trp is about helping men, it should do so I'm a logical and rational manner, not with mindless bashing.

You really are fixated on diminishing your targets credibility. It fascinates me how this is your preference in manipulation. Reduce your target so you can overcome it. Will give me something to think about, actually.

Anyhow back on topic, I agree with you because this statement is incredibly vague and at face value, is correct. However you're intellectually dishonest and fallacious in your application of this blanket statement. Your hypothetical reasoning is a slippery slope. Taking one opinion from one topic where all the material facts are not immediately available where you haven't even disproven the opinion and then deducing that opinion to be null and void and misrepresenting it as indicative of an entire sub is to quote yourself "mindless bashing."

Saddest post I've ever seen on Reddit. Just more proof that feminism destroys women too.

It's not about you, it's merely a deduction based upon the scenario. You're here. You need help. Act like you need help. You pick me out. You reply to what I say. You assume too much. You assume I should qualify myself to you, you feel you are entitled to know my opinion because emotionally you disagree with it. You disagree about woman's logic.

What do you base this groundless narcissism on - your entitlement to debate where the person who has knowledge you want has to justify themselves to you? Would you feel entitled to an audience with a King, Celebrity or village Elder? No. You arrange that shit. You get a formal, polite introduction Why? Because these people have power. Knowledge. Something you don't. Who indoctrinated you with such self-entitlement? Honestly. It's preposterous. You claim to be curious, yet, you insecurely wear your pride as you feign curiosity, curiosity knows no discrimination so listen carefully to the next sentence, because it's the nicest thing I'll say to you.

If you want to learn, may I politely suggest you humble yourself the fuck up. It's generally, what I do, in the presence of people whom have something to teach me. But then we could assume that perhaps unlike yourself, I'm a little more socially intelligent. Not trying to insult you, not at all, look past the inflammatory nature of the remark, look at the meat of it. You took an underhand tone and then tried to shame me. Like you think that shit will fly and I'll just tell you everything you need to know and defend my opinions from your onslaught of bullshit. This is what women do, this is what brainwashed little faggots who stumble upon TRP do. Your problem is, you are not as open-minded as you'd like to think you are.

You've approached things poorly and I don't appreciate it.

You didn't get more than a single word out of me until you tried to shame me into doing what you want.

A basic manipulation, nevertheless - completely obnoxious, luckily this is the internet, I'm far less intimidating over text than I am in person.

Maybe you should read my blog, read this:

<http://illimitablemen.com/2013/12/02/utilising-the-dark-triad-machiavellianism/>

Now this:

<http://illimitablemen.com/2013/12/10/law-01-never-outshine-the-master-explained-and-exemplified/>

Now ask yourself - is that the kind of person I want to fuck with or upset? Probably not. Probably not the best idea. You weren't to know though, you just got a little silly.

No threats intended, so don't misconstrue the nature of my language. Let's just say that this simply an exercise in philosophical rationale, as after all my friend, you claim to be an individual that is "open-minded" person.

I'm done being a cunt now. I won't reply to anything else. If you genuinely want to try to understand TRP, ask someone else, read the sidebar or give-up. I couldn't care whether you "swallow the pill" or not. So seek your assistance from someone who will put up with your shit, or, take my advice on humbling yourself. Regardless, you've blown your chances with me. Pick someone else with an endorsed badge to piss off instead.

There's no such thing as bad publicity, right? Ha.

What elements of TRP do you intend to write on? Feminism? Game? Self-improvement? Masculinity? scientific component of RP philosophy? If you have an area you're focusing on I could better recommend something. For example if you're into game/science I'd recommend Rollo's Rational Male book or just reading his entire blog, reading the book would be quicker though. If you want straight game, then Roosh's "bang" you should read, Roosh's shit isn't too academic it's PUA/game/how to get laid kind of stuff more than anything else. Whereas Rollos stuff is very academically written and more theoretical.

You keep repeating your opinion/philosophy, you don't actually tackle any points head on and say why they're wrong.

It's kinda like talking with a religious nut. It's truly fascinating.

I know you believe what you say, but belief isn't enough. If you believe in bullshit it's going to show when you can't back it up with reasoning and defend your beliefs.

You just keep repeating yourself. I'm not particularly bothered that you are as small-minded, illogical and stubborn as you are (not said to cause offence - I observe and deduce this to form a belief based on all your posts I've read), if your bubble/shell of a mentality works for you, seeing as you're all about happiness then why should you care. That is the limitation of your being, you won't mentally or spiritually go past that because you limit yourself into existing in a cycle of self-fulfillment, your justification being a nihilistic viewpoint that humanity is insignificant. You do that because you value happiness and pride over objective improvement. You've given up on humanity, so you give up on yourself past the concept of gratification.

I knew a smart, philosophical drug abuser who thought very similarly to you and he could never out-debate me, he thought the drugs made him smarter and above everyone else because they changed his perception of reality, in everyone else's shared reality he was destroying himself and his mind. He ended up in a mental hospital. Nihilism although objectively true (to our current level of shared species knowledge) is mentally unhealthy, and countering the realisation of nihilism with hedonistic abuse is even further unhealthy. The whole "I give no shits because everything's pointless" mentality is not empowering, giving no shits is limit removing, but you have no motivation because you see no point in anything.

Your value system is different from this philosophies, but you cannot argue properly why your value system is inherently better, efficient or more valid. As I've done for irony's sake and I shall say again, you keep repeating yourself.

3 upvotes · 9 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Maybe I'm way off base, but wouldn't respecting hierarchy when one's worth is inconceivable to the world around you amount to being a permanent gag order?

There is a leader/submissive relationship to the master/student relationship and as a student you need to borrow knowledge from the feminine playbook, perceived submission as a form of power, machiavellianism, the utilisation of slow systematic deception to win over your master and have them facilitate a total role reversal, or at least equal standing. Why? Because they like you.

I'll put it in another way for you. Puppet leaders, the president appears to have the power but a hierarchical inferior of his, say the vice president or perhaps a minister is pulling the strings behind the scenes. To get to be the person pulling the strings on the leader without giving him his power in the first place (eg: americans install puppet leaderships into third world countries after invading them), you'd do well to foster a teacher-student relationship with him and then as he respects your advice so much, direct him with soft power to fulfill your own agendas, making him believe they are in his own interest.

Do you get it now? It's from the feminine playbook as women instinctively do this to men, manipulate them to do what they want, the smarter women make you think you want it for yourself, but really you're fulfilling her agenda without even realising what's going on. Bitches, it's constant war with the bitches. They need to shit test to ascertain your strength if you're weaker than her, she'll exploit you - if you're stronger than her, she'll fall in love. Oh irony, I love you.

What you say is IRRELEVANT. Who you are is EVERYTHING.

Claiming that these behaviors are confined to women or even mostly confined to women reeks of the very thing you are talking about, rationalization.

Not claimed they are behaviours confined to women or rationalising, they are generalisations based upon observations which if I or anyone else put into practice will generally hold true. You can get anal over research methods or say "hasty generalisation" and call a fallacy, but when you go live life and see what's written manifest before your very eyes, that's the ultimate proof - in the field proof that anyone can observe, not laboratory/academic proof limited to one experience done by an institution.

for the protection of the reputation or rights of others

A good lawyer could easily argue that since civil rights feminism is a cause of discrimination itself and is in actual fact in violation of article 14. If you could argue it as relevant to your cause you could back it up with educational attainment statistics, suicide rates, life expectancy and other bigender comparisons which will demonstrate across the board the lower quality of life men experience versus women as a direct consequence of third wave feminism.

The enjoyment of the rights and freedoms set forth in this Convention shall be secured without discrimination on any ground such as sex, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status.

I believe the provision herein article 14 is inclusive of caucasian males. I also believe "political or other opinion" to be inclusive of anti-feminism or essentially, the rejection of feminist ideology.

Such a hearing would be heard in the Supreme Court or the European Court of Human Rights, you'd have 9 justices preside for such a high calibre case and essentially the majority vote would set precedent and decide if anti-feminism has a legitimate basis (or if contemporary feminism is of an illegitimate basis.)

Assuming it got to a court and the judges were all impartial, I'd expect them to vote in favour. If they didn't you'd appeal and get different judges to preside so new judges could overturn the precedent set by the old judges. Of course if all the judges are on the payroll you're basically fucked.

A lot of people have dark triad traits but aren't dark triad, they think the traits they have which are pronounced make them dark triad when they're not, because say they're very manipulative and egotistical, but usually they're borderlines.

Are you psychopathic, do you experience a massive lack of empathy for anyone and everything regardless of who they are? Say, you had kids you wouldn't care about them, or care about your own parents? In a fucked up way you would care about them, but that wouldn't stop you selling them out if you had to for yourself. Psychopaths are not sacrificial people, they are inherently selfish to a point of extremism.

I've known many borderlines but I've only ever known 2 people who were fully dark triad, as to say that they were both psychopathic also. One was a woman, the other a man. Women nearly ALWAYS supplement their triad with their sexuality from my and others I know experiences, it ties in with the narcissism, men can do it, but don't always (again, anecdotal evidence, dark triads are incredibly rare to find in the field.)

They believe in this way of thinking and there's real positive feedback. Its like religion. There is no God and prophet Muhammad is just a man. Watch as how I have triggered the same narcissistic reaction from those who believe in religion. You can do an MRI scan on this, and you'd see the same parts of the brain light up for sure. There's no emotional pain when I say something like that. But the religious people will feel superior to me.

Very interesting comparison. Yeah I've noticed muslims and far right christians have a pronounced tendency to feel and behave morally superior to others. You can also see it outside religion in class structures, bankers and other amoral people of great status and wealth demonstrate the same tendencies as the zealots/devoutly religious do.

Women act on their whims and can be ridiculously cruel bitches, and it doesn't occur to them that they're being psychopathic. The way many of the subscribers here look at this is "don't hate on the scorpion for biting you, that's what he does."

I wouldn't say their behaviour is psychopathic because they are capable of feeling guilt, it is just so incredibly irrational that in the moment they perform whatever terrible deed it is, they're not guilty in the moment because they have so many other emotions taking up the space in their psyche, after-the-fact they try to maintain their own well-being via hamstering, however YOU CAN make them feel guilty which is essentially the differentiation between psychopathy and irrationalism, a psychopath actually can't feel guilty, an irrational person will simply avoid the thought processes of allowing themselves to feel guilty, and if they do feel guilty, they will rationalise to themselves by getting the support of others that their guilt is unwarranted.

My hunch is that most narcissistic people, the stupid/petty ones anyway, fall more within the second category.

Clinically narcissistic people like to demonstrate their superiority, that's the simplest way I can put it.

Or does "narcissism" imply the part of "being too invested in what they think and manipulating that"?

If it's a high value target then sure they want to make sure that person perceives them in a certain way so they can derive benefit, otherwise they give no fucks of said persons opinion, links in with the machiavellianist component.

GirlWritesWhat had a piece where she said that women, solipsistic as they tend to be, think that if they were better than men, they would oppress them. And she goes on to say that the "patriarchy" is just a projection of what they would do, if they were men.

That's extremely interesting and I think you're right, women aren't benevolent or romantic for shit, men are.

Conversely there's a caucasian guy in our group, is conventionally good looking, tanned, blue eyes, good facial symmetry... average body (not a gym body) and chicks are constantly on him because of his face.

Alphas at the top you describe sound like club owners/celebrities/people with wealth and power who are known. You can be conventionally alpha/masculine/healthy and shit but in a club it means fucking little. Whereas any old girl, even a below average chick gets treated like fucking gold.

How to convince a girl hamstering about her boyfriend to continue screwing around?

3 upvotes · 5 November 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I'll play devil's advocate here and give you the knowledge you seek rather than morally arbitrate your decision to fuck a chick who's taken.

You have to be able to alleviate her guilt in the moment, obviously she is attracted to you but she doesn't want to feel like a ho, quite simply she is governed by her emotions so if you remove the sense of responsibility she has by feeding her hamster she'll fuck you.

Examples of that "you deserve better so why are you holding yourself back, is it because you don't believe in yourself?" (taps into hypergamy and insecurity) "we both know the other night was not a mistake, the mistake will be the regret you feel if you don't pursue it further" "it's not your fault your boyfriend doesn't make you feel sexy and I do" etc. A horny guy can be a very convincing guy. LMAO.

Also, be bold - your sexual intent will turn her on EG: "you've had my dick in your mouth but we both know where you really want it is between your legs" - she says "blah blah blah" you say: "you just like teasing yourself don't you?" etc etc.

What the collateral to that is with her relationship with her bf is anyones guess, she's already straying and already made the choice to blow you before and that shit is on her. She may think she can do better than her bf or she may not have a fling again and stay with him, but those things are not really of concern to you - that's not your life.

Don't let people in this sub make you feel bad for her cheating, whether you seduce her or not she has the choice to decide whether to go ahead with it or not. I'm a great believer of attributing agency to women for their own actions, if you put yourself in a place where a man could seduce you and you don't want to be seduced, why the fuck are you spending time with that guy? Women always use the nearest man as a scapegoat for their infidelity, fact is she's just as bad as you are in her base desires so don't be made to feel guilty for having a mutually consensual and enjoyable sexual experience with her just because she's taken.

You'll be blamed and be seen as the bad guy because you attracted someone on purpose who you knew was taken, the argument is that she needs to resist your attraction and maintain her commitments as a person who has agency to do so, otherwise we get into hyperagency and hypoagency, where men take the blame for things that aren't their choices and women shift their choices and responsibilities onto others often citing their influence as the reasoning for their diffusion of responsibility.

At the end of the day, if I make you angry and you go out of the house and beat someone up in the street, it's not my fault you beat someone up that was your choice - although I did influence your emotional state. The same goes for attraction. If you make a girl feel attracted to you and she fucks you, it's not your fault she chose to cheat on her boyfriend, she made that decision. What your doing is a shitty move morally speaking, but it's not you making the decision when she spreads her legs, that's on her and if she's smart she will remove herself from your company so that you don't have the opportunity to seduce her if cheating on her man really is something she doesn't want to do.

What you do know now is when you interact with her you go in with the confidence that whenever she speaks that same mouth was on your dick the other night and it can be again if you keep pushing.

You give her the excuses she needs and mix in enough attraction and boom before you know it she's squatting on your dick moaning her head off, if it's token resistance (she wants to fuck but not feel like a ho for doing it) they'll be poor excuses which you can easily overcome verbally "what if my boyfriend finds out" is a common one which basically means "i want to fuck you but not get found out" so you reassure her: "discretion is my middle name" "Nobody needs to know but us" Whenever you look at her, look at her you like want to fuck the shit out of her and don't break eye contact - she knows subconsciously what this body language is and if she's sexually attracted to you already (I mean she blew you, so duh) your intent will turn her on.

If she's not interested in you and gets crazy to make you leave, then just cut your losses, no point trying to seduce someone who isn't into you.

^ That's just an outline of one method btw, pretty aggressive game, jealousy game consists of flirting with the other chicks there and just ignoring the shit out of her (freezing her out, barely noticing her or talking to her etc which will drive her nuts), it will make her want you more (chicks always wanna fuck the guy all the other chicks wanna fuck) and there's a chance she'll just end up fucking you because you've been DHVING, she's jealous and she wants to feel validated.

Another random thought: TRP is the natural result of betaizing the male population. As massive numbers of males find themselves sexually unfulfilled they naturally seek answers. Scotland would vote independence if they could afford it, they could afford it if they were allowed access to the north sea oil and claim it as their own but seeing as they'd have no military if they were independent and GB has a huge military, they don't have too much leverage to make this become a reality. Scotland has its share of immigration, pakistanis, eastern europeans etc, but unlike England they are incredibly nationalistic.

The Republic of Ireland has had independence from the former British Empire since 1937, recognised in '49, Northern Ireland prefers to remain part of GB for religious and financial reasons. Northern Ireland is very small and protestant christian, if England told them to get fucked they'd be on their own on that island with the catholics and have no English police to back them up. They'd probably get slaughtered/taken over and then the whole island would be unified under the republic as a catholic state. Ireland is one big can of worms.

Wales want independence in their working classes and middle classes but they are too weak, small and poor to have it, so it's in their interest to siphon money off the English taxpayer and remain part of GB so taxpayers in England can fund programmes such as the revival of the Welsh language. Wales sticking point is the city of Cardiff, Swansea and then Newport.

England, the biggest and most populous part of Great Britain would vote against it now, even middle class liberals are starting to think "hey, this 6 mile stretch full of mosques, arabic shop signs and no white people isn't good" the thing is with England is that if the indigineous ever became a minority like they are in say a country like Qatar, the immigrant vote would supercede the indigineous vote and thus the immigration would not be kept in check. The funny thing is it's the newest wave of immigrants who would vote to keep the doors open. The first waves usually vote to close the doors as they themselves have seen the quality of life degrade as more and more immigrants have turned up, ironic as that is.

I have a very dry ironic sense of humor and most of what I find funny others just don't get. I'm also brutally honest to people I want to get close with. It's a hold over from my upbringing, in my family if we're nice and polite it means we hate you.

Sounds like people from northern England. This girl from up north at uni executes soviet nuclear ball busting shit tests when she likes you. That bitch has terrorised the crap out of me (but not to fret, I've called her out on her WMDs) and there's nothing but an undercurrent of simmering sexual tension as we fight it out. I'm actually cockblocking myself because I don't want to shit where I eat even though she's completely bangable. Don't know if I'll be able to keep her off me though to be honest, she's got fire in her belly.

I like dark humour too and you're right most people don't get it, that's because it requires abstract logic and an appreciation for satire/irony, the status quo is political correctness and faux social nicety, I personally regard honesty as more respectful than faux kindness and elaborate panderings to delicate sensibilities, it's all sugar and not enough meat.

As for friends, quality over quantity. Having lots of "friends" means you have no time to develop meaningful quality relationships with most of them, if you have say 5-20 really good friends that you click with that's great. If its logistically possible to form a social circle out of said people, even better. You always want a very high quality inner circle, everything outside that is just favours for favours, acquaintances who randomly converseate and other such stuff.

And yes, my friend is bad off. He's a genuinely nice guy, but just so goddamn feminized

To be crude, the only people who want a pussy are lesbians and men. Straight women don't want a pussy, he needs to become more masculine in order to have more romantic success.

I have the same problem in reverse with a mutual female friend of my wife's and mine, who is in her late 40's, single, a very professional woman, who complains that she can't meet any good men while openly insisting that she's only interested in men of at least 6'1 who have graduate degrees or better and are high earners.

I see what you mean by "having the same problem" but the nuance here is this is more of an issue of having a level of entitlement which does not coincide with reality. Your male friends problem isn't centered around entitlement, but simply his lack of masculinity has him instantly friendzoned as a "useful beta" rather than an "attractive alpha."

Your female friend is a victim of her own hypergamy, this is one of the reasons so many people argue here women being in high powered jobs is a bad thing, they refuse to date down and provide for men, their love is always conditional that the man be better than them, they find it incredibly difficult to respect a man who isn't doing equally as well if not better than them in life and therefore by being so well accomplished she has essentially limited her own dating options. With declining SMV as well, being way post wall in her 40's she's set for a life of spinsterhood and misery.

Perhaps we could collaborate on an article analysing the dark triad nature of corporatism. Would make great material, not only to analyse the nature of business but as an example for men to apply elements of the triad which are easily observed in big business into their personal lives in order to contribute to their personal quest of self improvement.

Just had another thing fly into my head, its like when big business move in and kick out lots of smaller local businesses with their presence, all the consumers flock to the new corporate store for the "better deal" (better aesthetics, cheaper prices etc) ... it's sort of a like an alpha vs beta analogy, where the alpha is the dark triad big business and the beta is the lovely little family who can't pay the rents on their corner store anymore because they've lost all their market share to the corporate bad boy.

It's mostly fertility.

Personally I find an intelligent woman (as in she's not fucking deluded, but comes with the real talk) to be majorly attractive, it's a rare commodity and incredibly refreshing. Saying that if she's butt ugly, it won't override the fact I don't find her sexually attractive. However if she has some base beauty to work with, say a 6 or 7, that shit easily pushes her up to an 8 or 9 in my book. I place value on that as a significant supplement to a womans beauty, although it's definitely not the foundation. A woman who's say a 2 or 3 with that shit won't get me hard, I'd probably friendzone her for being a cool chick.

Real life example of a girl cheating on her beta bucks, "coming clean" after feeling guilty, deciding not to cheat again... and then ironically decides to come back and fuck again. Hamster gymnastics!

My personal stance on these things is that if a girl isn't at my place of study/work, a sister/sibling of a friend or the object of affection of a friend, then she's fair game. A man and woman in a strong loving relationship cannot be separated as their bond is too strong, those women do not put themselves in situations where they can plausibly deny accidentally going and fucking another guy. Unfortunately when a woman falls out of love and maintains a relationship, she will cheat with just about any alpha guy that comes along.

I'd bang her whether she had a boyfriend or not because her dark triad bitchiness makes me hard. Fucking a dark triad girl is incredibly hot, it manifests in the bedroom too. I don't care about men I don't know and girls boyfriends whom are of no relation to me and I won't take responsibility for what she chooses to do, no matter how many of you ARE STILL buying into the blue-pill societal bullshit that women have hypoagency (no/diminished responsibility) and men have hyperagency (must take responsibility for the actions of others, usually women.) I take responsibility for my actions and nobody else's. You don't have to like what I've done, that's a personal choice, it is what it is I'm not looking for popularity or favour, what you're getting here is honesty and it will be bitter for many who identify with the boyfriend, and not the guy having the fun.

What you should take from this is that it's an example of both sides of the dynamic, you're either one or the other, realise it and pick the side you want to be on because there's no middle ground, thinking you can somehow withdraw from the game or not take part in the bullshit that is modern sexual politics is a foolish assumption. I guess the only real way you could do that is MGTOW or possibly expat, those are other things you'll need to consider on your journey.

MILF posts pic of herself in bikini with her 3 kids on FB...White Knights arrive to validate her after jealous Hamsters try to shame her

3 upvotes · 16 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

The only thing that can destroy a woman's bubble of self importance is another woman's (perceivably) superior beauty. Her looking that great after 3 kids is just making a bunch of bitches feel shit. Insecure and insignificant.

And they don't take a RP approach to it. Be better. Build value. Get down the gym. No, not at all. Instead they try to shame the successes of another in hopes that by collectively shaming her they can somehow diminish what she's achieved. You know it's the same kind of thing that drives kids to suicide in school, bullying. People are jealous of what that kid has, be they smart, good looking or whatever, so they try to diminish it.

There's a lot of jealousy in humanity and jealousy is the precedent to both hate and evil.

something I have learned is that you cant be RP all the time and expect to have women stick around.

True you can't be too alpha all the time, but that's not the same as being "too rp." This is a woman he was going to leave because he knew she was a bad bet in his gut, he wasn't trying to get her to stay around, she changed his mindset right around by appealing to his heart. You're incredibly off point for someone who claims to be RP. If you're gonna disagree, at least argue why this was a good choice instead of just using some blanket shaming shit like "you look too hard to discredit people." Support your argument or don't expect to be taken seriously.

It's a good book, I own it myself. :)

Bestseller too with good reason! He has a few books (Robert Greene) Art of Seduction, Mastery, The 50th Law with 50 Cent etc. However 48 Laws is the best one he's written. I own Art of Seduction as well and didn't think much of it, good read but I didn't find it could help me too much with my own life. Mastery is about being at the top of your field. 50th Law is basically looking at fearlessness as a source of power, and is 50 cents personal source of power. Women for example, normally utilise sexuality as their source of power which is why aging literally destroys them. Some very interesting shit, but it goes way deeper than that.

Dave Chappelle on Male & Female Psychological Differences

3 upvotes · 3 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I think the point Chappelle is making is that women get dating tips from other women whom don't really understand men and participate in feminist activities. He calls out feminism by talking about how it uses magazines to make women delusional, both about themselves and how they should interact with men. He's saying the ideology has an unhealthy view of men and it's ruined cross-gender relations.

Men don't have a prevailing mainstream ideology where talking to other men means you're exposed to the agenda of an ideology and it's not distributed in a medium such as a magazine where the advertisements are all designed to crush your ego and extrapolate money from your wallet. The few men's magazines I did buy in my life (and have never touched again, because they suck eg: Men's Health) are all very feminist friendly and have pretty crappy dating advice in, to simplify: their girl magazines say he should treat u like X and then the guy magazine repeats to the guy, treat her like X because she'll be expecting it.....with the omission the reason she expects it is because of their female magazine department telling them to LOL.

I don't have any women outside my family on my radar giving me advice about anything anymore. I had a good female friend for years who used to give me sound advice, but she was from a non-western culture and smarter than most women you meet logic wise, to me she represents the exception, not the rule - at least I'm lucky enough to have met a woman who actually is the exception and not merely masquerading through pure ego that she is "different from all the other women" aka "special snowflake syndrome but really I'm a dumb ho like all the other hos"

My mother gives me the best advice she can, but it's usually pretty sucky. My grandmother gives me excellent advice, she's wise and she's very red-pill outside gender dynamics (her ideas of romance are blue pill, but then she had a lifelong successful marriage 1.0 so eh)

In a setting I don't even see a group of women even agreeing amongst themselves about how to advice you without some debate. Generally I'll skimp along what they say and try to dig out the gems, and when it comes to actually dating women and trying to be successful with them, a girl can tell you specifically what does it for her (solipsism comes into play), but she lacks real objectivity or abstract thought, as well as the all crucial male experience in being able to tell you WHY/HOW to do something, shit even what they tell you they want is bullshit sometimes eg: "I want a nice guy" but she ignores nice guys and fucks assholes, that's some either tragic lack of awareness or she's just bare face lying. Female advice is generally shit, they're not logical and their fixation and preference for personal emotion means they're always coming from a point of self rather than a point of objectivity mixed with personal wisdom and experience.

Generally if you want advice, you want it to be impartial and if not totally impartial, at least argued from a position of logic - which means seeking men out, as women fail hard at being impartial and utilising abstract logic almost always. As long as your goal doesn't cross with that man's goal, he should give sound advice. The internet is a great place to get advice because people here have no agenda that conflates with your own, so they give you the best advice they can. In real life, if someone (another man) wants something you want and you ask their advice, they may dilute/poison it.

Woman in love with a Dark Triad asshole can't change him, goes on national TV to try make it happen.

3 upvotes · 16 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Both really. You can emulate dark triad. I know a guy who's naturally dark triad though, I emulate some of his mannerisms and get success, but I actually have love for animals and people I care about. This guy is so cold. So instrumental. So cunning. Sociopathic. He can do good and bad things but he leans towards bad. He generally doesn't really give a fuck about anyone and even when he does, he doesn't show it. He'll say he cares about things, but you never know if it's truth or bullshit manipulation. They like to pretend they have a vulnerable side, when really it's bait for you to share your vulnerabilities after they've exposed their made up bullshit. Bait and switch. Pretend to open up to you so that you open up to them. They're constantly running game, not just to get laid but with everyone, all the time. Their actual persona is not authentic, but they are being real, if that makes sense.

I don't rely on the guy for anything, people like him generally make very shitty friends because he has no loyalty to anyone except himself, I mean he'll have your back, but only if it doesn't harm him to do so, or cost him too much money. And when I say he has your back, I mean he might side with you in an argument. If you're upset and you need a bro, he won't be a mental crutch for you, and even if he offered to be - you'd be fucking signing your own death warrant to trust him not to exploit it.

You can't trust these types too much because they dehumanise you, you're always beneath them in their own mind, even if they respect you, sociopaths are good at self-deceit like the female hamster and can easily convince themselves you deserve to be fucked over and feel no remorse for it. Reason I keep him around is because he's not toxic to me, but I'm aware he has the potential to be, in his own words I have nothing material (I'm poor and I don't have high social status) that he wants so he has no reason to try and fuck with me, the reason we're friends is because we have compatible sense of humour (we're both very witty and metaphorical, crude, we're both far above average intelligence which leads to rich conversation, we both enjoy similar hobbies etc) on the surface we look like very similar people, but in the depths of the psyche we're fundamentally very different. I emulate a dark triad friend for defense/life improvement, my friends actually a sociopath (I believe and he even suspects himself.)

You had nothing tying you down, you could have moved WITH her. Moving 3,000 miles by yourself to a new place is scary. Not surprised she ran into the arms of a new guy.

I agree with her on this. However if a woman is deciding to move away from you and you are dumb enough to let her do that, it suggests there were deeper problems leading up to this. We don't know if she took ZERO RISK and had branch swinged, already had the other guy and job set up over there (hey maybe the guy got her this job?) or if she truly had to start from ZERO there and in her struggle, naturally being a female, used the nearest male to help her set up cosy.

so you wanted her to do all the work, set up a new life, and you'd just drop in and live off the fruits of the big risk she took, without you having any risk at all? There's a word for men like that...

Well most western nations are at a beneath replacement population rate of 2.0, including the demography of the immigrants. Which is why we have mass immigration in developed states, to keep the number of taxpayers up to foot the bill for those who retired at 60-65 and are dying at 85-90.

(http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Sub-replacement_fertility)

The British invented the pension (in the 1910's I believe) at a time when most people died way before 60 so barely anyone claimed it. Then technology improved and people started living way past 60 and it went out of control, becoming a massively burdened welfare benefit versus something which was only a thing that a very small percentile claimed.

They only started upping the age recently, and the reason they didn't abolish the pension when it started getting out of hand is because they figured that as the population began to age and a larger percentage of the population was of pension age, they could use pension promises to win over votes.

To be blunt, yeah, from my observations. There are outliers, but generally speaking, trendwise, they're inferior. They need to feminise the education system and introduce BS harassment laws to have successful careers ffs. It's hilarious. Much of modern woman's success is the result of a sanitised environment. Get rid of all the positive discrimination for women which negatively discriminates men (affirmative action for the workplace and education), get rid of all the BS that elevates women and oppresses men (give men custody of boys or two parent households, basically, access to a father), and you will see rather quickly how women get left behind in the dust. We live in a perverse environment socially engineered specifically to elevate women educationally and economically, it's not the natural state of things.

Dating wise, they're attracted to men better than them, not worse off, they're hypergamous. Hypergamous creatures seek inequality which benefits them, men don't seek women for material benefits - another reason I don't think we're equal whatsoever. I'd read some more red pill material my friend if you truly believe both genders are equal. That's delusion of a grand scale. Another thing while I'm preaching, women don't deserve your respect because they have a vagina - but you should give them the right to earn it through merit. Just don't be surprised when they attempt to violate you, shit tests abound, women love to fitness test men.

That said I think you are only partly correct about women invading male space. Men will self-censor (as seen by the old "Watch your mouth there are women present!") but this is probably just a defence mechanism to get the woman to leave without causing an argument. Also presumably a woman invading such a testosterone filled environment would probably self-censor herself to an extent and not linger around.

Agreed on all counts.

3 upvotes · 12 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Cesar is mentioned in the preface of Art of Seduction also. It took a certain female archetype that Cleopatra utilised to get him to swoon, she'd show enough interest/attention to get him hooked with her beauty and extravagance, then she'd go cold on him and make him believe it was his fault she changed. She did this to all the alpha males she pursued, a real head fuck.

Abundance mentality, it will help you a lot in life. Not just when it comes to getting laid, but jobs, friends, everything.

Someone/something rejects you? OK. You keep going until you have success with someone/something that doesn't.

It's like going for jobs, if you don't get the first one you apply for more. Same with women. Clara doesn't wanna fuck you? Jasmine will. Jasmine doesn't either? Sarah will. Then you send a pic of you making out with Sarah to Clara and Jasmine and boom, now they wanna fuck you too cuz preselection. If she's prettier than them, than jealousy too.

Shits funny. Fun and games in the land of bullshit in order to attract people.

I'd fade out on this girl, get shit faced, go to town, talk shit to women and see where that takes you. Get her out of your mind as much as possible, focus on yourself and gaming random chicks.

Make her insignificant to you. Hard because you've allowed her in your life for 10 years, but you won't flip the script unless you make her very jealous. You have to do something extreme to script flip or you just have to call it quits and invest in something that actually returns dividends. If you choose to attempt a script flip, make sure you're on your top game, clothes, hair, ego etc Get her down again, go out together and start hooking up with girls in front of her, k-closing at least. Then ask her shit like "that girls pretty cute don't you think?" remember you're "just friends" she has no right to be jealous just like the feminazis would say you have no right to have sex with her. She declines you sex so you can decline her validation and ask her for opinions on shit that threaten her monopoly on your validation, like what she thinks of other girls. You don't really care what she thinks because she'll try neg them most likely, you're just showing you have options and this makes you more attractive to her.

Embrace the friend zone, except lead the frame. No longer are you the friend wishing there was more and not getting it, make her "want more" constantly disregard her as sexually viable and get her trying to supplicate to you via dread/jealousy game. Tell her you can't see her a few times/pick up the phone/do what you said you would because you have a girl over. Don't prioritise her, this communicates to her she isn't a priority of yours and if she wants that special status back that she's learned to take for granted then she might need to "win it" from you. EG: nude pics, fuck you etc.

Personally I'd fade, but that's easier said than done, I can understand your reluctance, you let her become a huge part of your fucking life you probably are "in love" with this chick. If you're not strong enough to run game YOU HAVE TO FADE for your own sanity. Good luck.

You've essentially just NAWALTED me with Islam (NATPITRALT - Not all the people in the religion are like that!)

The bible does not dictate common law, the qur'an does dictate sharia law, it's the basis for it, that's an important distinction to make here. This means any muslim who wants Sharia Law (and that's quite a few muslims!) does support such behaviour/legislation and I'd worry about the trend/religion as a whole, not the exceptions, because there is always exceptions and in the big picture, they mean relatively jack shit as they're not representative of said group. Stoning as punishment is enshrined in islamic sharia law and most muslims prefer sharia law over common law because "it's the law of God" whereas common law is "the law of man". As I said, Islam is also political as it does not separate church from state, that's why it's incompatible with every non-islamic society it comes into contact with. The fact a muslim taking offence is dealt with much more political and social tenacity than a christian taking offence or a jew taking offence or an atheist taking offence is clear proof of their "separation" from the rest of any multicultural society by sheer merit of this "special status" where it becomes almost illegal to offend or criticise (even rationally) said group. You can tell a pope joke but not an allah or mohammed joke? Fuck that.

TLDR: Islam is incompatible with non-islamic societies because it doesn't separate church from state.

Tbh, this is what I was thinking. Female red pill + feminism = overpowered women. It may not necessarily actually make desirable feminine women who balance the gender dynamic versus alpha masculinity, but instead, just over-power the girls there with inner game tips, ways to manipulate men etc.

Teaching women to become more high value and feminine within the confines of a feminist society which she will economically gain from. I'm having my trouble getting my head the fuck around this. How the fuck is a female red pill gonna KILL the feminist ideas and thoughts in women that are pumped in to them most of their lives by their mothers and friends (just like it is, with men) except the one caveat, men don't gain AT ALL from feminism, women do, economically. They are hypergamous. You're hypergamous and you gain from something, you can't leave it behind or abandon it, even if you want to, it's institutionalised (affirmative action) the whole thing seems like a paradox. So are they meant to ignore the equality bullshit in relationships but use all the government policies to get ahead economically? If so what when she has a kid, she's going to be happy ditching her career?

TRP opposes a lot of the anti-male bullshit in the mainstream and tries to help elevates men who are in a lower social position. There is no anti-female bullshit in the mainstream and women are already the most privileged group (specifically, white women) so what is the nature of their pill going to be? How to extort betas for resources and alphas for gd feelings/sex? How to make an alpha fall in love with you? What's the angle? How to be feminine and respect a masculine man? When/how to use shit tests? God, my head hurts.

Making beta women alpha women.. what does that entail?

"Monogamy is necessary to keep males happy in a large society."

I think as a generalised statement, that this is true, but to give it context, it's application as truth was only successful in archaic pre-feminist societies. When most women are feminist, monogamy with them does not lead to happiness, it leads to enslavement, drama and bullshit due to her unrestricted hypergamy, sense of entitlement and lack of dependence on you, most women have become intolerable due to feminist fed bullshit being pumped into their minds their entire lives. Although I can agree with your general principles, feminism has flipped the paradigm and segregated the genders into hostility and competition, rather than a complementing symbiosis of sorts. Beyond sex, most women provide little to make a man happy and men can get sex now without monogamy, even those from low income backgrounds.

TLDR: In feminist society, men can get laid without monogamy, monogamy benefits feminist women more because it allows them control over a man and restricts his options whilst not providing said man with anything non-monogamy provides. Feminists suck at playing a support role and are largely incompatible with monogamy due to their conditioning.

Just gonna say a few things, not trying to shit on your contribution but it should be noted by anyone reading this. 102 people is a shit small sample, they were also all students thus it's not a cross-section of the entire population but probably looks at an age demographic of 18-25. Secondly, self-reports are not a reliable way of gathering qualitative data.

For example, when I apply for jobs and they make you do a self-report psychometric likert test to see if you're suitable for the job I always lie and tell them what they want to hear, only a "dumb psychopath" is going to say "Yeah, I strongly agree stealing from the company is fine!" or "I strongly disagree other people needs are more important than my own".. they're looking for a subservient sap, so you put all the shit in that makes you seem like the perfect servant, you're not YOU, you paint an illusion of what they want when you go for the job, once you get the job, you drop the bullshit... but all those likert scales were fooled.

Now these students don't have an incentive (monetary) to lie, but simply, even immoral people know being perceived as immoral is not favourable (hence all the blue pill hamster girls rationalising their sins away and playing numerous victim cards to get society to agree with their hamster) thus, you have to take studies like this with a grain of salt as they are low in ecological validity. A better way to measure behaviour is through observation without the targets consent, not through self-report questioning, plus you need a much larger sample size that accounts for age, ethnicity, religion, gender and any other social or genetic traits which will affect socialisation.

The role of men in this conversation is definitely not to be a bunch of pouty shouty poo-poo faces (did you really just say that shit, are you over 18 bro?) who start yelling about how they're oppressed too and something-something our-poor-penises (yes, only women matter, let's delegitimize male concerns because only the concerns of special snowflakes should hold any weight in public discourse, fuck 49% of the population!). But you can swing too far the other way, too — the role of men in this conversation is also not to be the swooping swinging heroes who need to jump into the fray and save the Poor Widdle Women. Women are not our damsels in distress. (Well that's one thing we agree on.) We are not rescuing them from the onrushing train of sexism and misogyny (I'LL SAVE YOU FROM THE ANGRY OLD SCI-FI WRITER, LITTLE NELL). Our job is to facilitate the conversation and to foster a healthy, safe, kind environment. (So you want us to cut our balls off and throw away our logically founded sexism - LOL OK!) Our job is to signal boost and to cheerlead awesome women and, ultimately, to not be dicks about any of it. Can we just say that last part again? DON'T BE A DICK KAY? Kay. (The guys acting like dicks are getting laid, you, my mangina, are not.)

I don't get what you mean about brown betas? Your skin colour doesn't really mean shit about being beta or not. Betas are in every culture and ethnicity bro. From the insight I get from this topic it seems indian betas are raised the same as western betas, how all middle class families raise their boys, they give them a good education so they can earn and tell them women are princesses all their lives, most guys believe it - some have enough extenuating factors in their life to realise that this is all BS.

Heck, class is more important than skin colour here. If you're below the middle class you don't even have the money to attract women if you're beta (beta bucks = beta with money, not beta without money), you become an alpha fucks kind of guy and captivate women in life by going to the gym and having a lively personality or you remain a beta who may get picked up off the shelf by a post-wall girl. 18-35 as a beta with no money = very little, if any, female interest at all. Only when they're old and their SMV is dropping and they're scared to be lonely do they start looking at the working class betas.

Christianity contained hypergamy to a lesser extent before the social revolution post WW2. Now Christianity/Catholicism is basically dying in Europe/Aus/Canada and has lost A LOT of ground in the USA (still the strongest source of modern day Christianity, however) Islam is the only effective religion left in the world which restrains hypergamy. Funny how a lot of westerners (specifically, women) convert to Islam too.. it's like they need that guidance/ domination they won't get from being "independent" in the west among a sea of mostly blue pill betas.

The Keynesian Sexual Marketplace - "First off, I would like to point out that the common definitions of 'Alpha' and 'Beta' are wrong. This is put forth by the game community to mask the fact that most who consider themselves 'Alpha' are actually Omegas."

3 upvotes · 28 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

According to the definitions on that page

- Blue pill = Alpha, beta, zeta
- Red pill = Omega

A very pro-monogamy perspective, with massive appeals to history. What it doesn't differentiate between is that feminism was non-existent "before the days of urbanisation" and now post urbanisation we have feminism. If you're going to call current day alphas omegas because of how things were pre-urbanisation, you must at least factor in feminism, the result it's had on women's psychology, how marriage is no longer about "long term survival" but is a "stepping stone for hypergamy" and not just look at the economic factors which are there due to big government and the welfare state, but also the diminished economic opportunities available to modern day men versus that of the traditional man now women have entered the labor force and compete in the economy.

The red pill is all about adapting to current day society, what was an omega blacksmith getting killed by the husbands of the village women 200 or even 100 years ago is now an alpha enjoying his life a fuck ton more than all those chumps in indentured servitude. Under these definitions a modern day alpha/beta/zeta would be sexually manipulated by a feminazi who could pull the plug with divorce at any second her hypergamy catches a glimpse of a male with more assets/value. Said feminazi then puts the branches in place to get the new male and if successful profits twice as her divorce payout comes through from the previous male cast aside and she's now free to settle in with the new higher value male.

For the female today it's WIN-WIN whatever she does with men as she doesn't lose out by dating "deviant omegas", and the fact this article doesn't take any of that into consideration means you must treat the proposed definitions with a grain of salt, as they are ultimately false and inconcise in the contemporary.

The style of writing is definitely more PUA bs than it is RP as the TRP actually looks at modern day society, not criticising the lifestyle choices of modern day men based on the existence of their ancestors who lived in a completely different paradigm with completely different rules and ultimately NO FEMINISM, thus different rules and roles.

FEMINISM. Every man and woman who swallows TRP and opposes feminism is a fellow comrade, someone who needs help along the way shouldn't be kicked back down so "there's more pussy for the alphas" if you're really fucking alpha, you won't be threatened by a bluepill who has the potential to realise that mindset/become better and essentially become competition. In a misandrist culture like that which we have in the west ALL MEN ARE YOUR BROTHERS and you should fucking look to help them, especially as a fuck ton of our boys have NO FATHERS or MALE ROLE MODELS hence why they really are DUMB AS SHIT... their mothers taught them sweet diddly fuck about life and thus guys on the internet with their experiences and advice... sadly enough, they're the fucking surrogates for these blue pill beta kids. Objectively speaking everyone suffers in the end because we die out as a civilization by having no descendants, the birth rates are beneath 2.0 which is the replacement rate, each woman on average needs to give birth to 1 male and 1 female in order to replace both the mother and the father when they both get old and die, some people have say 4 kids and others have 0 so it would balance out, however we're at a stage where the entire population collectively has less than 2 kids per average household across all of western/northern Europe, USA, New Zealand and Canada, or basically developed countries where the ethnic majority are caucasian.

Each generation is smaller by approximately 25% than the previous depending on which western country you look at, some have birth rates as low as 1.3 children per woman, others as high as 1.8 (but still beneath the replenishment rate) the number of people living in the west as well as the birth rates are kept up by importing people from the third world, but we don't sustain our own numbers internally as a civilization.

Ironically I say this as a man with no intent to marry (which need not be stated why as we're in TRP) HOWEVER I recognise untethered hypergamy as not only destructive to women but to the whole civilization, there's not enough kids being born and even the kids being born are often being dragged up, not brought up properly - by spoilt little welfare reliant princesses who have no fucking clue how to properly raise a child and do so without a sufficient male role model for their child, especially important if it's a little boy who is to make up the next generation of men, this brings down the entirety of society, educational standards fall, crime increases, civil hostilities increase, societal attitudes worsen etc

A huge number of murderers and rapists are brought up by single mothers (you can find the statistics to back that up if it interests you, btw) and the reason the majority of those single mothers are going it alone is because they believe in bullshit gender equality ideology which fuels their irrational and uncontrolled hypergamy leading them to either alpha fucks beta bucks or single motherhood (often the latter, she doesn't want the beta and the alpha won't commit.) It's essentially agreed that all developed societies need monogamy to raise children to a high standard, so this paradigm is hurting the collective even if you personally enjoy a high quality of life being indefinitely single.

Hypergamy is hurting us all, however I can see if you're enjoying a bachelor lifestyle (something I subscribe to, also) how one would not see themselves immediately affected, you get pussy, you get money and thus you don't give a crap, but the civilization as a whole if you scope out... it's burning and the fire's getting bigger, life will only get worse for the collective and how that manifests politically will be interesting to put it lightly.

When you're an old man and you look at the youth you'll reminisce how it wasn't so bad in your day, kinda like how the old folk now do that, yet like them - we shall sit back and watch idly as it unfolds, promoting our own self-interest to the death rather than work as a collective to benefit the collective. As I said, R.I.P western civilization, killed by "equality" and hypergamy no less.

One girl pushed further and said "but I don't even know you!" so he said "Ok, Hi what's your name?" she gave her name, then he gave his name and said "Ok, now give me your number" and she did. Shit works. He did not ask her for permission once, he told her what to do in a very domineering way, but without being obnoxious. That's what you're aiming for here. Practice, practice, practice.

It is possible for someone to ask for scientific evidence for something - not as a means to undermine or dismiss, or to discredit that which is distasteful to them - but because they place an emphasis on empirical evidence when assessing the truth or value of a position.

It is possible, and it is likewise the base assumption for why people do this, but it's not the only reason they do this. In debate with someone who is fundamentally opposed to your position, the "where are your studies?" question is often used as a thought terminating cliché to dismiss the argument entirely without evaluating the argument's chain of reasoning, and it's this insincere use of the question that's fallacious. It's this I wish to highlight.

Why is this topic so controversial and people so passionate about this? There is a flood of stupid in this thread right now blathering about unproven health issues.

Yes I know, lots of morons. This is why I don't talk about it much on the forum. I'm going to do this FAQ, possibly another article in the future, and that's it. There's very little incentive for me to help people who are going to be bitchy, ignorant, fearmongering etc - which seems to be the case in reference to TRT.

Funnily enough, all the people bitching would probably be less bitchy if they jumped on TRT.

Needless to say, when it comes to this, most in the community are completely blue pillled and not open-minded whatsoever when it comes to the topic.

It's not dangerous whatsoever if you know what you're doing, but of course like ANYTHING in life, there is risk. You don't not do something because there's a risk element, especially if you're a man. Ignorant people think the risks are super high and know little of the innumerable benefits, so they talk a lot of rubbish.

Question for women: Why do so many women have a hard time wrapping their minds around the simple concept that many men simply find high n count women unattractive?

2 upvotes · 16 March 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes that sounds like an accurate statement. Ability to trust is too deeply broken. Only if she was his "ideal woman" though. If she wasn't, he's not broken. Same goes for women. Her first man could be a lame beta guy and she'd be over him just fine. But if guy #2 was really alpha and it all went to shit, that's her "break point". Well for guys the "break point" is having their "ideal woman" aka "unicorn" and then it all goes to shit. That's what creates someone who is either emotionally unavailable, unable to commit, or some hybrid of each.

Question for women: Why do so many women have a hard time wrapping their minds around the simple concept that many men simply find high n count women unattractive?

2 upvotes · 15 March 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes I agree with you. If you have a woman who is prime material and you fuck her up by not taking care of her whilst simultaneously being authoritarian as necessary to keep it together, then you're going to ruin her.

You have the guys who are just inexperienced who don't know how to be authoritarian without being oppressive (or just act like pussies), and then you have the guys who are already fucked up and can't trust so mess up a girl like this even though they really like her (they'll never commit).

It's just a fucking tragedy all around. Hurt people (male or female, it doesn't matter) create more hurt people, who create even more. It's a vicious cycle. Most people will not have something deep and substantive because of this. I'd say most relationships are out of convenience and most people past their early 20's who are not with their first partner (alpha male or super feminine woman) are broken.

Question for women: Why do so many women have a hard time wrapping their minds around the simple concept that many men simply find high n count women unattractive?

2 upvotes · 15 March 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Evolutionarily men want women to be preferably zero N count (is why when civilization was less degenerate, most women married young and were virgins who'd only had sex with their husband) because it meant the man could assuredly ascertain paternity. This need for female sexual purity in order to ascertain paternity is an inbuilt part of the male operating system and is impossible to change in most men. It's adapted to the extent that when a woman gives birth, a man instinctually scans the baby's face to see if it looks like him.

Now pragmatically and psychologically, once a woman has a man in her past she can't get over because he so thoroughly owned her in heart and mind, you're never a real person to her, she is fundamentally incapable of connecting with you on the level of depth she did with that guy. Even if you have a lot in common with her and get on really well, she will never sacrifice for you how she did for him. You never get all of her, because "all of her" just isn't there anymore, or she's incapable of trusting enough to give herself over so totally like she did for him. Maybe it's a mixture of both, I have no way of confirming my suspicions here, so I can't say.

Her "first alpha" was the one who "turned her" so to speak, so he will always be the most profound man in her life, you're never her #1. It's sad and fucking tragic, and it's a horrible situation to be in as "the next guy". You avoid all this by just being the first guy. Once a woman is damaged, it is generally speaking, quite permanent. She's not relationship material anymore. I take no joy in saying that, it just is what it is.

Men who want deep, meaningful relationships will see this as a dealbreaker because they'll never be "the love of her life", or her "main alpha" or whatever the fuck you want to call it. That dude in her past will be. And she will always compare you to him, you'll always be living in his shadow, no matter how badass you are yourself. You're always fighting a memory, and nostalgia gives him bonus influence. It sucks for all involved because it means she can't get the sense of completion and happiness she needs, and you as a man can't get the level of respect, deference and worship you need. It's broken because she's broken.

So bearing all that in mind, it makes perfect sense it'd be a disqualifier. Sluts and damaged girls get mad because they don't want to pay for the mistakes/tragedies in their past. They want a fresh start. The problem is, to have a fresh start you need to purify yourself of the shit that has contaminated you. You can't change the past, so they can't do that.

They want their past to be in the past like the past means nothing and affects nothing in the present. But the truth is, the past is responsible for who you are now. It's very important. Minimising it and deflecting by shaming the person evaluating you based on your relational history is an ego preservation strategy and is ultimately dishonest.

And any woman who is honest with herself knows I'm right. Of course, the truth hurts and rationalisation is easy, so most women will not be honest even with themselves about this. They just can't handle it.

No. Women love dominance, and dominant men have options and having options doesn't make you insecure. That shouldn't even be a point of contention in this community. You can be dominant without being insecure, but I will also assume I can't argue past pedanticism and certain pre-installed perceptions you have of dominant men. And I don't really care to do so either because ultimately there's absolutely nothing in it for me in trying to get past that block you have in your mind. So it's a stalemate. Your blue pill mental schema here = all dominant men are assholes and all assholes are abusive because they are insecure needy men, and you're better than that by not being dominant and therefore men who advocate dominance are beneath you. Total hamster gymnastic blue pill slippery slope shit you've got going on there. I wrote that to help you/the community by the way, not because I'm trying to be mean or argue with you.

In fact I only reply because I care about the community and don't want impressionable minds believing in your well-intentioned albeit inaccurate way of thinking, which with wave upon wave of new subscriber base ultimately dilutes the tenets of the community into something so unrecognisable from its source that it cannot genuinely fall under the same label. If you read manosphere essays like Rollo's She Wants You To Just Get It and Private Man's The Chronology of Masculine Fail you would know this, and you would know it to be mandatory rather than optional. If I didn't give a fuck about this community I wouldn't make this thread, and neither would I bother replying to you. Some props and a little less bullshit would be appreciated, because lord knows you need people like me not to leave. I prefer ltr's to tail chasing and don't know how a proper ltr should look.

You're telling her what to do, looking out for her and disciplining her when she plays up. The discipline part is very important, as it's the prerequisite for you being able to look out for her interests without her seeing it as weakness. The relationship is founded on respect, and she only respects a man who disciplines her. That's the basis of everything, the "more beta things" flow out from that.

800ng/dL is the generally accepted lower end of "high testosterone" - it's the floor for what is considered high testosterone. Many men on TRT are in the 900s and I believe Mike Cernovich aims for about 1200ng/dL. There are no health risks to having a 700 level, that's a perfectly acceptable level of testosterone to have and many doctors would not recommend you for TRT based on a blood sample reading of 700ng/dL, however men report greater energy and higher confidence with higher levels of testosterone and so a man with a 700 may see benefits from increasing it further.

In addition, if you're at 700ng/dL but you don't have much free testosterone, you will effectively have low circulating testosterone despite having a high total testosterone level, and therefore you will experience symptoms of low testosterone even though your total T looks fine. This is why it's important to get SHBG/free T checked in addition to T. You will also want to see estrogen as high estrogen directly undermines the effects of testosterone in the body. A man going on TRT with a natural level of 700ng/dL level is doing so to optimise his lifestyle, not fix hypogonadism. This means a lot of physicians won't want to work with you as there is no medically necessary reason for going on TRT. As such, you would have to shop around for a progressive physician who doesn't mind treating men for purposes of health optimisation rather than the treatment of hypogonadism (low T).

I'm considering sending this to my brother deeply entrenched in a BP mindset struggling with depression who lacked a father figure as I did.

There's no right or wrong answer here, but generally we don't recommend unplugging men who aren't ready for it, as you will bet met by much resistance, and in the energetic stubbornness of that resistance your brother may not only reject the information, but you as well.

How do you think he will react towards you, will it put a severe spanner in your relationship? Is the fallout/hassle going to negatively impact your life? Will it make him an enemy? These are all things worth considering. You might want to find a subtler way of introducing it to him, perhaps post the link in a forum somewhere (not here) on a random account, read the forum with him, click the link, read the article together, and act like you're both discovering it for the first time. Just some food for thought, but I believe subtlety's what it'll take to get the job done here.

My third question that didn't make the list

We had limited time to discuss a number of topics.

Do you think women feel love as deeply as some men do?

No, but they are more volatile and excessive in their outward emotion, so appear as if they do. Women worship strength, be strong, they love you. Men worship beauty, be beautiful, they love you. My contention is female love is MORE conditional and therefore less substantive. A man can love an old woman he met in her peak years. A woman on the other hand cannot love a strong man that became weak, he is practically dead to her. A woman will wither but still be loved if she locked down young, but a man has to constantly be the shit.

Cunning is not static. If you'd read the 48 laws you'd know some laws have reversals. These aren't so much rules as they are stratagems, it is up to the person to be sharp enough to realise when to use one stratagem and when to use another. Sometimes you want to crush, sometimes you want to ignore, you have to make the call if it's better to ignore or crush.

So i decided to call her after a month of NC. She answered, we spoke, we met up, we fucked, we layed in bed, she cried, etc. She told me she missed me.

Must've nailed her like a boss.

I thought, "damn i have her back." So I told her it wasn't too late for us, i told her we could still fix this. That's when i lost everything i had gained. She immediately said no, and she withdrew all her feelings she had just showed me as if a fucking light switch had just been turned off in her brain i shit you not. She left, we spoke that night, typical take care shit and haven't spoken since. That was like 3 months ago.

The moment you let your desire manifest as neediness she dried right up again. Women are ruthless and what they say now won't mean shit tomorrow, because what they say only matters while they feel it. When they feel a way counter to what they felt when they said X, X no longer stands. Being emotional thinkers who are driven by emotion and say things out of emotion, women are as fickle as the passing of their emotion. And it is because of this that women's words are next to worthless if not completely; it is this absolutely horrible trait that makes them inconsistent and hypocritical.

We have to be mean to women because that's the only way to keep them interested. Treat them like cunts and they adore you, let yourself fall in love and they think you're a bitch and leave you with jack shit.

so far, the female model for success appears to be "jump on the correct penis".

It will probably always be this way. And every woman who makes it to the top feels she has to prove the point she's better than men, because in her heart of hearts she knows she's unworthy of the position and that she only got it from fucking the right guys. She knows she isn't the best person for the job, but rather that she has the job because she's cunning enough to use her sexuality to get shit she doesn't deserve.

Sadly it is men who enable this bullshit. If men perused hookers a little better, they wouldn't feel the need to fuck up companies by making incompetent bitches CEO.

Hookers are way cheaper than paying a CEO salary and destroying a company's net worth anyway. Some of these tech-betas should start seeing hookers, it'll be good for the health of the company they work at.

The real problem with "high iq" tasks isn't that they're universally hard, it is that our brains are optimized to hunt boars, pick berries and deceive other people, not doing science or making financial decisions. That we can do that at all is just luck, an evolutionary quirk that gave our brains a degree of plasticity.

Apparently the only reason we can do these things is because we interbred with neanderthals who died out because they were highly autistic in capability but had very little in the way of social skills/communication/leadership.

Lower IQ races have less neanderthal DNA, supposedly.

Machiavellian Thinking vs. Conventional Logic and the tendency towards black-and-white thinking.

If I learned anything in the past few years it's that categorical thinking is almost always fallacious, very useful for making snap judgements (eg: avoid black neighbourhood more likely to be violent, even though plenty of black people are wonderful human-beings) but if you are concerned with absolute veracity (eg: conformity to fact and truth) then it's shit because basically everything, be that people or amalgamations of natural phenomenon are on a spectrum.

The thing is, discovering truth is an expensive process, it requires a lot of experimentation which seems never-ending in many scenarios (science) and it takes a lot of time. If someone needs to make a decision quickly they are thus going to rely on categorical thinking in order to make a snap judgement, unless sufficiently propagandised, stereotypes (which are maxims of truth based on probability rather than certainty) will be used to make decisions.

Only if you have sufficient time and/or give enough fucks about the thing you're exploring do you truly explore the nuanced spectrum of something (like we do here in TRP). Even still, we stereotype women because although not 100% correct - that's impossible - our stereotypes conform to a balance of probability which is highly accurate. If you utilise TRP's categorical stereotypes for dealing with women, you will get by in life just fine despite your lack of 100% accuracy in all things female.

For example, most people instantly subscribing to socialist philosophy because they believe that it decreases injustice, without truly considering the implications and ramifications of the movement. Much the same for feminism, representative democracy, and many other institutions.

Motherfuckers need to read Atlas Shrugged, or at least watch all of the multi-part movies.

I've seen many of the same ridiculous conspiracy theories and it's given me an allergy to phrases like "the system", such that I feel the need to check what specifically is being meant.

It's a colloquialism in England alluding to the governmental framework, eg: tax and bureaucracy, but I expand that to include mainstream ideologies with sufficient pull such as feminism.

If you read "the fate of empires" by sir john glubb, he talks about how it is part of the civilizational cycle for institutions to become increasingly corrupt as the civilization grows slovenly from its wealth and erodes into decline. It's an outstanding, highly profound read and if you haven't read that text I recommend reading it. Finding a book of it is nigh impossible, but there are pdfs floating around for your reading pleasure.

As such, a woman may in her hubris think she understands men, but what she can never know is how to be a man among men. Because she knows not this, nor what it is like to be a man and deal with a woman, her guidance in raising a boy is merely necessary, not sufficient. Boys intuit this and men know this, but because single mothers have been catapulted atop a cultural hero pedestal, nobody dares address the elephant in the room.

Applying The Red Pill: An Analysis

2 upvotes · 30 November 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

When I wrote "how to be happy" criticism I got from a few people was "this isn't your usual style of writing" (I went with a simple style so you'd like that article) but whenever I don't write simply, which is the most of the time, someone at some point will say "you should use a simpler style."

I've been told this for years, I haven't changed, blog's still growing in readership and monthly views without "selling out" to the "make it easy for me" crowd. My brand would be bigger if I took your advice, but I'm not willing to kill art to maximise business.

There's enough simple/basic shit on the internet, including platitude filled motivational blogs that oft serve as advertisements for a call to action that ties in conveniently with a product. Think of them as undercover product reviews posing as informative literature, people actually like reading that shit. I don't think adding to the volume of that is necessary. Anybody who reads my blog realises it doesn't exist for the sake of marketing, I make money without dumbing down the content and optimising the shit out of it to be idiot friendly. I'm actually doing a piece about Machiavellianism and marketing in the future, which I think a lot of you will enjoy. Anyhow, I digress.

If something isn't to someone's taste they will always say the opposite (eg: simple shit needs expanding, expansive shit needs simplifying) - this is why I write however the hell I want and take "criticism" with a pinch of salt. You can always say something in fewer words, but when you're too laconic you're easy to misinterpret and then you have to answer a thousand questions about "exactly what you meant." You can always say something in more words, but use too many and you confuse the reader. This piece isn't simple, but I believe the economy of words is great, it's knowledge dense in the least number of words necessary to retain that level of quality. If you want "less knowledge because it's hard to read" my response to you is: get better at reading, it'll improve your focus and make you passively less lazy.

I know how to write clickbait, make people emotional and write lots of comments/drive a lot of pageviews etc, check out some of my previous rant threads, but good content is more important to me than mass appeal. They're kinda mutually exclusive when you want to go in depth with something. Most people don't care for complexities, they want to be told how to do stuff and have things explained like they're 5 years old. I realise that, but I don't care, if I had to write like that I'd quit because my passion would become a chore.

If the girl's interested in you, she's not going to act like a bitch.

All women are bitchy to a degree because women are more immature than men are. Women who behave well and fairly docile were raised in the presence of strong men, it's more a reflection of the men that raised them than it is the nature of women. Basically, well-raised/trained women are docile, typically boring, but respectful. The crazy ones that can be a lot of fun had fucked up upbringings, they resent authority (and hence men) because there was none present in their formative years.

Sometimes women act like a bitch precisely because they're into you. You can't distinguish over Reddit whether a girl is being bitchy because she's annoyed, or if she's giving you shit because having a mental game of chess with a guy is how she finds out who she's attracted to. IMO, this is context/girl dependent. The more aggressive/head fucking girls are more likely to do this. Generally speaking, more fucked up girls do this. If you shut her down, you will almost always increase her attraction to you because you increase her respect by showing dominance. Ironic how the authority they come to resent is really something they secretly crave and lash out at because they never had it.

What one is missing here is that hate is still interest, even if it poses as disinterest. True disinterest is indifference. Some chicks love to hate you, they love the conflict that comes from the both of you mentally going at it with one another, this is the mental foreplay that precedes having sex with them. A man that can't reign in the bitchiness and fight back isn't even worthy of getting into her panties as far as she's concerned because "he's not a real man" if he can't fight her, how can he protect her from the world?

Of course it's like Patrice said, there are 3 kinds of women: bears, dears and bunnies. Bears as I previously described, think of ghetto black women who are combative by nature as well as girls higher on the crazy scale from other races. Dears will be a little bitchy, but will apologise when you put them in place. Bunnies are women raised in the presence of strong men, your typical submissive Asian girl or conservative upper class WASP girl stereotype - they never had to be independent or really suffer, men in the family always took care of things, so they still preserve a childlike naivety.

It's begun. [Rant]

Suggestion For Mods - 'Specialist Contributors'

2 upvotes · 12 October 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

I believe everything is sexual strategy.

Hear, hear. Even if it doesn't seem like sexual strategy, it'll be indirectly related to it whether you want it to be or not. Sex and violence are the immutable underpinnings behind all human fears and motivations. Our only real biological purpose is to reproduce, that's it.

We say "work out for you, not for bitches" because otherwise you'll stop working out when you start getting chicks. Because you'll intuit you've achieved your objective, your passion for it will decrease, thus weakening your strategy. "Workout for chicks - starts getting chicks - ok no need to workout now." But that doesn't change the fact that working out increases your reproductive fitness, thus enhancing your sexual strategy. Whether you do it for the chicks or not is irrelevant, it still has that effect. The same as getting money. Whether you do it with the intent to bed women, or because you want freedom and security, it still has the effect of opening up more women to you.

It's about making sure you have the right motivations to ensure your strategy is always optimal rather than only as optimal as your motivation. Optimisation does not align with motivation when you only work out/get money etc for women rather than yourself. When women are your motivation, your resolve crumbles as quickly as their reliability. Women are fickle, so you're setting yourself up for failure. Optimisation only aligns with motivation when you strive for yourself rather than for women because no matter what women do, you keep working out/earning etc. And that in turn has the passive effect of maximising your strategy. You don't even have to pursue women or date, but the option is there should you choose to. And it's good to know you have options, options are power.

I guess a real core of TRP is shifting the focus from women to the self - and keeping it there - because although seemingly counterintuitive, like ignoring something to obtain it, it proves the most effective strategy over the long haul.

Men have traditionally been motivated by the promise of women, or the desire to protect women they care for to go and be successful/great. But we're in a new age where such thinking will leave you vulnerable, where all it takes is a violation of the trust implicit in your self-sacrifice to find yourself crushed. When you base your reason for being and striving on any particular woman, say your wife, all it takes an enemy to destroy you is to charm your girl, not only breaking your heart but crushing your motivation to strive in the process.

When you do it for a girl you tell anyone who might have a problem with you "here is how to destroy me."

And if she gets bored with you anyway, you're destroyed.

A large part of TRP IMO is overcoming these potential vulnerabilities. When you are self-reliant, nobody can take your reason for being away from you. A lot of guys just need to learn how to love themselves. Bitches too narcissistic, men not narcissistic enough.

Headlines are a summation of events in a sentence, but read alone are short stories in and of themselves. And you are right, depending on the spin applied, one story can morph into something else completely and still refer to the same set of events. That is the power the media wields, the power of spin, the ability to subtly (and if you are perceptive, not so subtly) coerce viewpoints. The media is all about framing things to fit into a wider narrative, normally values or ideologies the owners make money from and thus can't be seen to be offending.

If they put a RP slant on it: "slutty dermatologist cheats on husband with playboy, overdoses on coke" would they suffer a backlash from feminazis? Yes they would. Few institutions have the guile of Trump to endure such a furore.

i still struggle with grasping this the "fact women want to constantly fight you for control whilst secretly subconsciously hoping they don't win" just makes you wonder, is it even worth it?

Now I guess that really depends on the man and woman involved. Generally speaking, if she isn't hot/submissive enough, she isn't worth it. Personality is rarely part of the equation, as most women aren't interesting enough to be "friend material" so we're looking purely at the sexual/mother qualities here. In most cases the answer is NO. Rarer instances, yes. What you do with that knowledge is up to you. For the family orientated man I know this knowledge presents more conundrum and burden than it does enlightenment. But better to go in with your eyes open than end up sleeping out of your car.

They haven't changed. But the environment has. They had less economic power then, which made things more equitable. Ironically, in the "bid for equality" things have become more inequitable, as more and more men are considered less eligible by merit of women having relatively higher economic power. Take today's women, sack them all, get rid of the welfare state and watch how quickly every man with a job gets laid. It's about power differential. Modern women may like psychopaths just as much as say women a century ago, but because average men had more power, they were attractive too. Now, they're not.

YES. This is the conception of morality that TRP needs to hear. Morality is not just a social contract. It is biological. Read the book The Moral Animal for more on the evo-psych background of this.

This is correct. Morality has a biological basis, which is why it differs between people. Particularly, between psychopaths and non-psychopaths. It's a complex map of varying social forces and gene expressions. It would be good to see how social and biological aspects shape one's complete morality and how that morality differs between the in and out-group.

Glad to help. To be honest, other than maths or very specific chemical reactions in very specific conditions, most things aren't axiomatic. Maths is axiomatic and hard sciences lean toward building ideas off axioms. The softer the science, the more what they're reporting is a maxim rather than an axiom. Sure they can include the biology of behaviour to try and keep things axiomatic on a very refined and singular level, but when you combine multiple hormones, gene expressions and stimuli and try to predict behaviour you invariably end up with a maxim rather than an axiom.

2 upvotes · 11 June 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Logically women hate the idea of male dominance, they have been taught it's evil. Some women are so far gone in the head that they hate men entirely and want to consciously exploit men out of their hatred. This is a minority of women, perhaps as much as 10 or 20%. Although those percentages are arbitrary representations, not hard stats. As feminism grows and men weaken, I believe the imbalance between our natures fosters further hatred of men and even further radicalisation within women.

Radical feminism has become a mental illness among women, one that tears women between living in harmony with their natures vs. living in harmony with the belief system they've been indoctrinated into. Third wave feminism hides behind the "we just want equality for men and women!" tagline, but if you take a strong critical look at it, you can see that in comparison to first wave feminism, third wave feminism, today's mainstream feminism, is radical feminism. As the ideology has gotten more powerful, it has become more radicalised.

The majority of women (rather wrongly in TRPs view) simply believe in gender equality, which means getting their own way, but not being prohibited from doing anything that men want to do "if they want to do it," if they don't want to do it "that's the man's job." But that's not equality, because if a man has to do it, and a woman doesn't if she doesn't want to, then with a sleight of hand you have made women SUPERIOR to men because they have a greater deal of options than men do. Should it be contraceptive choices, lack of limits on social freedom, less necessity for accountability or what have you.

Keeping limits on male nature without doing the same for female nature leads to feminine superiority in the cultural sense. Something I don't think most women can handle. It's like cake. Sure, women love cake, but too much makes you fat and ill and lethargic. Women think they like the idea of controlling men, but when they actually get to do it and can't find a guy to be in love with who would keep them in check, as per the desires of their immutable animal instinct, they become miserable. And even more so, a woman who is used to being in control all her life finds it difficult to submit, so much so that, the man she really wants wouldn't be attracted to her personality anyway. She condemns herself to a dominant position, one that doesn't truly fulfil her deepest desires, but only her ideological ones.

And there comes the double standard, the exemplification of the theoretical egalitarian ideal which is in practice, impossible. But in a romantic man's or a woman's head "is necessary as anything but is simply the oppression of women." Which of course, is a moral violation that the majority of people today will not stand for, even if limiting the freedoms of women is in fact, necessary to ensuring the happiness of women, and likewise, the survival and flourishing of our very civilization.

When you elevate women to the freedom of men, but then don't make them do things that are expected of men, you expose women, as a class of people, as being freer than men. This is where the power imbalance manifests outside of any ideological discussion of such things. Traditional conservatism had it "righter," where the sexes complemented rather than competed. But for that to work, we have to live in balance with our respective natures, the logic of our attraction rather than of popular ideology which disregards such nature, meaning a necessity for male dominance, not just for male happiness, but female happiness too. When you look at the stats, female happiness has been declining year-on-year since feminism went mainstream, in fact.

Here's the seemingly counter-intuitive part explained: even though women have been brainwashed to hate male dominance rather than follow their natures, female animal instinct is to lust for powerful males and submit to them. So even though, logically, they hate the idea of TRP; when they see a man who's become powerful due to following TRP idea's, they desire him as an individual.

Fundamentally it all owes to a lack of reconciliation between female nature, and third wave radical feminist cultural programming.

So let your actions speak louder than your words. Become the man women want, or at least, the man you want to be, and do not waste your words on women. Logically, they are limited anyway. Add on the bullshit social programming and you're in for a real headache. So let your actions speak, forget having a conversation with women. It's futile. Once you realise why this seeming counterintuitivity exists, it will no longer bother you.

It's the same reason why women who go on about rape culture and hate men jerked off to 50 Shades of Grey the movie and bought all the books. Cultural programming only overrides instinct whilst her consciousness is in control. When her subconscious animal is in control, the feminist shit gets tossed to the side. She'll rationalise the lack of coherence between the two fundamentally different sets of belief later on.

Haha shit, those articles you sent ARE FAR longer than anything I write, at least on average. I swear I spent 20-30 minutes reading part 1 (it's 7,300 words long,) a few of my articles top out at around 15 minutes, my article on law 1 is 6,000 words long, but a 2,000 word post averages 5-10 minutes so at that length, yeah, I could see why you'd want pictures and videos. Personally I'd just segment into parts when it got that long (caveat: 48 laws stuff, where it makes much more sense to keep all of a law's dissection together.) I mean, I know there are two parts here, but damn, those are pretty long segments. IMO, the graphs and such help hold your attention, by giving your eyes a brief break, but they don't hide the fact those articles are extremely long.

2 upvotes · 4 June 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

It is natural for a feeling of mere indifference to exist between men, but between women it is actual enmity. This is due perhaps to the fact that odium figulinum in the case of men, is limited to their everyday affairs, but with women embraces the whole sex; since they have only one kind of business. Even when they meet in the street, they look at each other like Guelphs and Ghibellines. And it is quite evident when two women first make each other's acquaintance that they exhibit more constraint and dissimulation than two men placed in similar circumstances. This is why an exchange of compliments between two women is much more ridiculous than between two men. Further, while a man will, as a rule, address others, even those inferior to himself, with a certain feeling of consideration and humanity, it is unbearable to see how proudly and disdainfully a lady of rank will, for the most part, behave towards one who is in a lower rank (not employed in her service) when she speaks to her. This may be because differences of rank are much more precarious with women than with us, and consequently more quickly change their line of conduct and elevate them, or because while a hundred things must be weighed in our case, there is only one to be weighed in theirs, namely, with which man they have found favour; and again, because of the one-sided nature of their vocation they stand in closer relationship to each other than men do; and so it is they try to render prominent the differences of rank.

--Arthur Schopenhauer

odium figulinum = jealous of someone you're in competition with who is in the same business as you. Literal = "trade jealousy."

This was written in the 19th century. It's incredibly powerful. Still accurate in the 21st century.

I cannot see why they will not do what's best for them (at least in the long term).

They're not mutually exclusive. You can take care of yourself first, and then take care of society afterwards. The idiocy is when you look out for society to your own detriment. If you have power, you can afford to be generous. If you are weak you have to think "fuck society, I'm gonna get mine" because if you thought about society, you wouldn't survive, society would eat you. Not because society hates you, but because the weak who don't operate smartly get eaten. Altruism is not something you can really afford. The poor people who give to beggars are fools. The rich who don't have no heart.

To always be thinking "hey fuck everyone else, Imma get mine!" is a poverty mindset. Powerful people can afford to be generous, in fact I often think if not altruism or tax avoidance, that philanthropy is an act of narcissism. "Check out how rich I am, I can afford to dump millions on some random shit now everyone will like me. Let's have a big party and get a statue of myself made!"

Some people have so much money they could never spend it all on themselves. If you are doing well in life, you will care about the society you live in, you will want to better it because you live in it and have all your own needs met. Even if you are a psychopath, you will want the society you live in to be safe and stable so you don't have to move/conduct business elsewhere/risk your assets etc. Neglecting the state of society is short-sighted, we are all dependent on it.

I write in the way I do to try and make people think. Most people just want the answers though, they don't want to think.

Those who do want to think are rewarded with a mind expanding experience. They will introspect and will make whatever amendments they deem necessary. If those amendments enhance them, they will internalise them.

2 upvotes · 4 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

I don't think highly paid women are a problem.

They take a job that would otherwise go to a man supporting a family. How is that not a problem for society as a whole? The only exception is where a high-earning women actually creates jobs for men who earn enough to support a family. Any high-earning women who does not employ anybody, or simply employs other women - is contributing to rising inequality in household wealth as outlined in OP.

The main problem these days is social welfare programs that support women having kids outside of a stable marriage.

Agreed. This acts as competition against low-earning males (the state vs. low-earning men.)

The objective truth based on known fact is only important whilst it facilitates her imperative, as soon as it fails in this capacity, a subjective "truth" will be formulated.

2) It shows that a girl as naive as she was is in-born with the capability and tactics of pure manipulative dishonesty; this is something I believe men usually have to learn. For proof, consider the number of TRP subscribers who had no idea there was even a game being played until their divorce rape.

Men are born to use physical strength and their rational minds to navigate life, and women are born with the tools of manipulation and dishonesty to make weak-minded men do their bidding for them. Society puts men at a disadvantage by banning the use of half our natural arsenal, and our rational minds clearly are not advantageous in gender dynamics.

Immoral men generally pose as friends but are just using you, in an alliance both men need the other to hold up their end of the deal/condition to continue receiving the benefits they enjoy, so betrayal is a non-option. Just realise it is in the nature of the immoral man to betray you whenever the situation necessitates it. Particularly destructive men will just do it for drama because "they're bored," read: high neuroticism psychopaths. Immoral men are like women, no loyalty instinct, to them "loyalty is an inefficient burden." Of course, they want your loyalty (it aids their control/dominance.) The closest thing you get to loyalty is an alliance, co-dependence, but they don't possess loyalty as an emotional instinct in and of itself.

I think that your Virtrollic nature is kinda funny and that you are deliberately baiting, but I agree with a LOT of what you are saying.

It's very different from my blog. Some people react well to very emotional speech, whilst others only give value to arguments communicated in a very logical and intellectual manner. In a sense, I utilise both communication styles at select points. If you want to communicate something with passion, you need to display some anger. If you want to seem scientific and detached from what you're talking about, you want to display no emotion. I am capable of both.

Either way, I think that you are capable of writing all of the things you say in a way that wouldn't piss anyone off, and would probably change some minds that are on the edge.

I suppose one could say my blog serves that function.

2 upvotes · 14 April 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

I don't think race has a bearing on promiscuity (outside any racial differences in testosterone,) but culture does in what is permissible. If feminism infiltrated Islam all those Muslims girls would go full slut-mode pretty quickly. If hypergamy and promiscuity are not suppressed by culture, they define the culture. Blacks, Indians and what have you in England take on values of this country and are subject to this nation's host culture/laws. They're in a feminist environment which allows open hypergamy and promotes promiscuity. Put them back in India, Africa or wherever and these women will quickly conform to their home cultures. Feminism reveals women's nature, it doesn't change it. Give them too much power and they run wild. Equality and/or female supremacy hurt society more than patriarchy. Bring a third world girl to the west and she will become a whore, the culture's corrupt and the women are sheep.

I do on my blog. Eg, AF/BB becomes "dual female mating strategy" or "female sexual plurality." I can't speak for everyone else, I guess it's a mixture of habit and laziness. Society calls alphas "real men" and betas "weak men." I think "real man" is an emotionally charged misnomer though.

I can, without looking at the specifics, guess the strategic gambit he played. He basically played the victim, said his addiction was making him something he didn't want to be, he always wanted to serve the Canadian people and he feels utterly ashamed that he's let them down in his capacity to do so. However, the subtly is this: he's a victim of a cruel substance, he's not responsible for being a poor mayor, as such, he can leverage the sympathy of the people to remain in power. He may have even made some grandiose speech about how alcohol takes precious people from your life like your grandfather etc. Typical Machiavellian politician. Then when he has sympathy he can backtrack and say "he realises it's his fault for letting the alcohol control him" or some other nonsense, so then he seems responsible despite being irresponsible. This is the political game.

Some people say DE is a more deep shade of red pill. I think it's better understood that DE is the general case, and TRP is a specific instance of DE, as applied to the sexual marketplace.

Agreed. DE is reaction in general, technically you could say TRP is a sub-niche of DE although it's not born out of DE but, seddit/PUA. The red pill is a masculine reaction to the collapse of family, state mandated radical feminism and neoliberalism posing as egalitarianism (or social communism, if you like.) Basically, men are being denied their masculinity by the institutions that raise them as boys, so when they find this out, they're pissed.

Basically explains why most people beneath the middle class have absolutely terrible teeth, they can't afford treatment after bills. The NHS subsidised dental practices (so practices who will work on your teeth at lower rates dictated by the NHS) have long waiting lists, and not many are available. Most prefer to be private for the increased revenue. Some of the NHS ones will get you in and then try to sell you private treatment by saying you need more extensive work, quite the nightmare. Flossing isn't common here either. Go figure, ha.

How objective can this sub really be? All the mods appear to be neutral/blue pill. Can't see a single mod with a red pill flair.

I've had some of my comments yonked almost immediately before for being minimally insulting (actually called out a troll for comparing red pillers to the cosmos and autists - mods let that ridiculous thread stay up, too.) On another occasion however some blue pill chick comes in on a full frontal assault (comment is just a dismissive ad hominem devoid of substance) and it gets upvoted to heaven, with her comment left intact indefinitely. That's pretty unacceptable in a space that prides itself on rational debate.

It puts me off bothering/dissuades me from interacting with this community as as it appears there is a bias in moderation, as to suggest, red pillers are moderated more harshly than blue pillers are. From my experience, on just the few times I have posted here it seems the rules are not evenly applied across the board. I suspect due to a lack of red pillers on the mod team, your own biases are leaking through and moderation actions are affected as a result. That happens with moderators in most communities, it's human nature - but in a debating forum it cannot be allowed to happen, and you need better representation of all sides involved within your staff to represent that.

Of course if I'm wrong, let me know how.

Do women want chaste men?

2 upvotes · 25 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I guess that would depend on a woman-to-woman basis.

But sexual histories being equal, there is a double standard, and there's nothing necessarily wrong with that, it's just how things are. Men and women judge each other differently and draw different conclusions based on both experience and inexperience.

When I and an old girlfriend were both virgins (so sexual history was completely equal) she said to me something along the lines of: "I wouldn't feel comfortable having sex with a guy who doesn't know what he's doing, I'd like a guy who knows what he's doing and has some experience because it's scary enough for me already, it'd be even scarier if he didn't know what he was doing."

Obviously I wanted to fuck my girl, so I had to lie and wing it. As a virgin I had to lie about not being a virgin, but it was fine for my girl to tell me she was one. I had to say I wasn't a virgin just to have sex with my girlfriend at the time - who was also a virgin. Fucked up, right? I encountered the double standard right there. Her virginity was worth something, mine wasn't. I mean she worded it all from a fem-centric "my feelings" point of view, but that's the bottom line.

Of course you can claim you're nothing like her, or it's because she was a virgin, or any number of things, or it's unrepresentative because it's anecdotal - it's really easy to pick at any number of things and just debate to no end all the way to limbo, however, in terms of probability and all the data available - to me it sounds absolutely ridiculous to think male and female virginity carry equal value. I honestly don't know why there is so much obsession with believing in equality.

Rather than pick apart my anecdotal evidence (how easy is it to really measure the subjective value of virginity scientifically anyway?) do you have any supporting evidence for your counter-assertion?

2 upvotes · 25 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

This is what post-modernism has done to people:

“persons and positions are ordinarily closely related,” with little insistence on keeping personal identity separate from the questions or issues under discussion;

“sensitivity, inclusivity, and inoffensiveness are key values”; priority on “cooperation, collaboration, quietness, sedentariness, empathy, equality, non-competitiveness, conformity, a communal focus”;

This is what we value in TRP:

“personal detachment from the issues under discussion,” the separation of participants’ personal identities from subjects of inquiry and topics of debate; values on “confidence, originality, agonism, independence of thought, creativity, assertiveness, the mastery of one’s feelings, a thick skin and high tolerance for your own and others’ discomfort”;

The prior is more feminine, the latter, more masculine. Societies various institutions have been pushing the prior for decades (post-modernism.) Read more about modernism and post-modernism here:

Okay, those are some interesting examples, but I am failing to see how they support the claim that having kids outside of marriage hurts fathers. Perhaps you could demonstrate your reasoning? I'd appreciate that because I'm struggling to understand your line of thought. To me it seems with your uncle that divorce has affected him negatively/his rights, although he wasn't totally burned, so that's nice. Are you saying he'd be better off if married still? One could likewise argue he'd be better off he hadn't gotten married at all - divorce is costly and harmful to children. As for your brother, it shows how prejudiced the system is against men. Are you perhaps trying to imply that if he was married to the mentally ill girl that they wouldn't watch him and sanction such ridiculous childminder requirements onto him? Look forward to your response.

Do women judge men's sexual past?

2 upvotes · 24 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Fair enough. You have thrown the argument. I understand debates are time intensive, and as such, other than proving "you are correct" yield little reward. However, your response is not a sufficient counterargument, eg:

saying you are too busy to debate (why come here then?) is simply "a get out" or more succinctly put: forfeiture, not a solid counter-response (although you indicate you are capable of producing one, but simply choose not to do so.)

I respect your opinion/preference, I don't disagree with it, you are perfectly entitled to it, but you have no cogent counterargument (you have said you are too busy to give counter assertions/arguments/examples etc.) Rather, your response is merely superficial disagreement. The conceit in "too busy to talk to you" is likewise poor form, although we could chalk that down to flawed interpretation on my part if you assert that you pose no ill-will. I actually come here to debate when I come here, not to one-up people (I can do that in the real word quite easily) civilized debate is a far rarer commodity, hence the necessitation of a board such as this. Goodbye and take care.

Do women want chaste men?

I'm a virgin and have also been led to believe that sex for women will be painful so I'm not getting my expectations up all that high.

Ah, you are scared of cock. Eh, luckily I've got some experience I can share with you about that. When I lost my virginity the girl I lost my virginity to was also a virgin. Before we had sex, she feared cock. I remember the conversations the two of us had about her being scared to lose her virginity. She had asked other girls what their first time was like, they said it was painful/it hurt and they bled (cherry popped.) Naturally, this knowledge made her fearful of sex on a psychological level, and her fear of sex was killing her sexuality.

Men, psychologically, like the idea of having sex with a virgin, but in practice, it is actually pretty bad sex. The girl can't really enjoy it or get into it. The vagina is TOO tight and you get blood all over your dick. The first time is the worst time for a woman, and it gets better after that, with use, the vagina becomes less tight. Those girls telling you horror stories about their first time are being cruel, because they're not telling you what comes after that.

My girl was so scared at the time she put it off by about a month, (which as a horny teenager just kept annoying the hell out of me) she would keep initiating, saying "she was ready" and then get cold feet, instead blowing me as an apology for leading me to the bedroom and then bailing. In reality, she was horny, but her fear of sex was stopping her from having sex.

Eventually we had sex, I couldn't fully pop her cherry from one session because she was so tight and I had to go so slow to make sure not to hurt her. If I went any harder/quicker it probably would have damaged her. After the first 3/4 fucks she started to be able to enjoy it, and her pussy wasn't so tight, it didn't go loose, but it wasn't resisting my dick so much anymore like it was before she'd been penetrated.

If I were cock-addicted, I'm sure my view would be different.

Virgin sex is not representative of typical sex, once you get past it, it only gets better. After that, my girl who used to fear cock was shagging me 2-3 times a day, sometimes even more. Turns out once her fear had gone, she was a nympho who could grind with the best of 'em. Sometimes I'd make her beg to put it inside her.

Doesn't advice just come from the most unexpected places, eh? Learn from my ex-girlfriend's experience.

Older chicks SMV matches up with a younger guys, and older guys with a younger chicks, so if you're versed in TRP theory this makes a lot of sense, although I can see how it would seem counterintuitive to most.

"Let's just be fuck buddies, I have plenty of friends and you're not my type, sorry." (see what I did there?)

Shit along these lines. Just make your position clear. That's not the only way though. You can just dread game her, ignore lots of her texts, be more distant when you see her, text other girls (and make it obvious) and inspire her to fuck you via jealousy. You can make your wallpaper a picture of you and another girl and be like hey what do you think of GIRL'S NAME she's pretty awesome isn't she? (Watch that shit fuck with her - LOL.) Really how you play it is up to you. Dread game takes effort, unless it's soft dread like pics with you and other chicks on your whatsapp/social media etc. If you're not that invested in a girl and creating the dread is going to take a lot of effort, you're better off holding firm, and if she won't give you what you want, departing.

"you really don't know me at all, blah blah blah. Listen to your heart I waitfor_ittt I really loved you blah blah..."

All total bullshit. She's playing on what she perceives to be your desires.

and I needed to kind of bask in it.

Yes.

Would I be better off not acting this way so that I would have better relationships with them?

Depends where your values lie.

Or do I just need to learn how to act logical/analytical in a certain manner so that it works really well for us (my family and I) both?

You need balance, certainly.

Is that the green can with a bull on it? I've had it, it's good for a beer, has a good texture, but I'm not a fan of beer personally. If I was forced to drink a beer and pick a brand I'd probably choose that stuff, Budweiser in a close second place (which is either heavenly or tastes like piss, eh, breweries.)

I've had polish cherry vodka, homemade shit, it was out of this fucking world and so smooth it didn't taste like vodka even though it had the alcoholic kick! I've also tried Polish grass vodka, that shit that comes out of the field where the Bison graze. I know some basic polish, kurwa, jak sie masz, spierdalaj, zamknij sie, wesolych swiat, narazie etc.

I like the language, it's just not economically a good choice so I didn't bother taking it further. I used to have polish friends (and a gf) so I picked some shit up. The pronunciation is a bitch when your native accent is soft (like mine.) Rolling R's is a real bitch. I say "ruh" not "rleh" with a roll of the tongue (if that makes sense to you) and that shit is fucking unforgivable when speaking Polish. On the upside Polish is pretty much spelt how it sounds, unlike English where the spelling often gives you no clue how to pronounce it (or the pronunciation no clue how to spell the word.) Polish really, not being a widespread language isn't worth it for most people to learn who aren't Polish. Polish hip-hop is pretty fucking awesome though. Funny to see all white guys on hip-hop videos and not a single black guy in sight because it's the total opposite of what we're used to here in the west.

Scared of other males

You have confidence issues and perhaps mild social anxiety. You need to raise your T levels, get exercising, get into a martial art. Force yourself to do it and leave your comfort zone. Try to eat as healthy as you can, veg/protein. I don't know if it's sunny where you live, but if not, get outside for a walk everyday you need the vitamin D from the sun. Being at home or stuck in the office and leaving when it gets dark means you're not getting enough sun, which lowers mood and can even cause mild depression (this is why people get more depressed in winter than in summer.)

You will get more results from lifting weights/doing martial arts/being in a team with men to fix your confidence/anxiety than you will talking to yourself in your head and trying to convince yourself to do things. Your logical mind isn't the problem, you obviously want to change and are prepared to do, what is holding you back is how you feel about yourself. To make yourself feel different, you need to gain confidence. You can do that by belonging to a group of men (martial arts/sports.) Lifting likewise improves confidence by increasing testosterone levels, as does fighting/martial arts. When you know you can kick someone's ass, it removes a lot of fear factor in your mind. Walking around knowing you can kick anyone's butt who tries to mess with you is psychologically liberating and stops you holding yourself back from putting yourself out there. When you are healthy, eat well and sleep well, you feel great.

The physical and the mental are pretty closely connected. Most people do nothing about the physical and home in on the mental with little to zero success. They just go in circles for hours on end talking about themselves and their problems but aside minor catharsis, it does little to change anything. You may feel momentarily better having talked about it and feeling like someone gave a fuck about you, but it won't really permanently change you. I recommend going all-in with the physical, and then the mental (confidence/anxiety) will fix itself. Confident men do physical things, they don't sit around all the time. Men are DOers, they are people of action. Men who do nothing are rarely confident, you have to be DOING something and somehow CRUSHING IT or at least IMPROVING SOMETHING ABOUT YOURSELF to feel good about yourself and value yourself. Guys who are losers don't believe in themselves on a subconscious level so they have fuck all confidence. This probably translates to higher estrogen levels which only compounds the problem even further, making you more timid/fearful.

PS: meditation is a quick fix for anxiety, it won't make you more masculine/alpha, but it clears your mind and gives you a sense of peace. It won't make you more manly, but it will make you more functional and productive.

Hiding from reality. Coping mechanism for pain.

or they're too goddamn concerned about being socially accepted to engage in serious conversations.

Oh yeah gen Y's give huge fucks about being popular. Personally I rather cultivate a small high quality social circle, or even random disjointed friendships with high quality individuals (but no circle because they don't know each other) than try to appeal to the masses and basically unify/lead a bunch of dense idiots. I suppose I identify more with the sigma label than the alpha one though. I don't want to be everyone's friend or be liked by everyone. I want to gain the respect of people I respect, and I only respect people who share some kind of exceptionalism/capacity for critical thinking etc.

Easy to joke with at a bar, but impossible to connect with on a level of any meaning whatsoever, especially during the week. Just a bunch of awkward pieces of egotistical bullshit.

Yep, gen Y is superficial to the point of lacking any real depth. Obviously there are exceptions, but most are pretty dense. Sad, really. Who do we blame though? Gen X. Absent fathers, single mothers, beta fathers. Gen X raised these kids. I blame Gen X for fucking up gen Y. Then there's the fact gen X had economic opportunities gen Y can only dream of. Those old people raping the pensions? I doubt gen Y's will even see a pension.

Gen Y is one of the least privileged generations to come along IN A LONG TIME. As in, you're not better off economically than the generation before you. Gen X were. The war generation were etc. Older generations will say "you have the internet, you have iphones." But they had functioning families and jobs available. I think most people would trade away modern tech for a solid family and abundant career opportunities in a heartbeat. One of the biggest things to fuck over gen Y is the devaluation of a college degree, and the drastic increase in tuition fees for something worth far less than it's ever been before. That is just complete bullshit.

TRP assists it nicely

Yeah, guys checking out of the game completes the disunification process. It's that, or get divorced/fucked over by a poisoned woman anyway. How are guys supposed to overpower feminism/the government and reinstate patriarchy/heading the family? The law is against them, the women are against them. Nothing short of violent revolution/a coup could achieve an ideological shift. Most men are asleep, and many of those awake do not exactly feel a strong sense of brotherhood, so it's not like they'd all join together to "take back their nation!" What we are experiencing contemporarily is a logical reaction to a toxic ideology. Sure lots of people want families, but the disincentive to have one is huge. You either avoid that basket case, or you sacrifice all your hopes and dreams just to continue your genetic legacy AND HOPE that your kids can get through the same bullshit you did. Then there's the moral issue: do you really want your kid to live in that kind of world? If you have a superior alternative, we're all ears.

Everyone is an actor playing his role.

I don't think so. Most people are indoctrinated, living out a script, sure. But not everybody is. Many people on this board are "awake." They may not know everything, who does? But they know better than to let other people define their lives for them. How do you suggest people overcome our socially engineered environment? People respond to incentives. People who are awake tend to hyper-individualise and maximise incentive-rewarding behaviour. I suspect men who can afford it will leave the west and go to more traditional countries attempting to escape feminist poison, although unfortunately feminism is an ideology like any other, it seeks global hegemony and there are signs it is already intruding upon once healthy societies, corrupting their women through the westernisation which transmits feminism. This is already happening in countries previously insulated from feminism by the iron curtain, eg: Poland, Czech Republic etc.

Many native English speakers are versed in flowery language, political correctness, and generally talking a whole lot of bullshit. I used to hang around with a lot of Eastern European dudes years ago, if there's anything I learnt from them it was that "being straight to the point" no political correctness/diplomacy and no flowery language was pretty much part of how they spoke in their cultures. Not just the men, but the women too. It's a western thing to turn every discussion into a sales pitch or add hypothetical qualifiers to every reason given and generalisation stated. Eastern Europeans at least are a whole lot more concise in their communication as part of their culture (from Poland to Ukraine, they all seem to share this,) naturally when they speak English that same attitude translates over. They speak English with a different psychological programming and approach to communication. That shit is good when you want things broken down to their finest parts. Although their manners leave a lot to be desired, most of them lack etiquette. They wouldn't say "please can you get me a drink" they'd say "give me a drink." Clearer because it's terser, but also in some situations: rude.

Yep. Pertaining to the psychological demography of the the prison population there are figures as low as 20% all the way up to 60% stating such percentages represent the prevalence of psychopathy within prisons. They then usually compare this to the prevalence of psychopathy in the total population, pegged at around 1% of the population in the US. Additionally, one may find it interesting that "The 48 Laws of Power" is the most requested book in US prison libraries.

One of the best ways to block estrogen is by eating cruciferous vegetables. This type of food has a high level of phytochemicals and works to block estrogen production. Cruciferous vegetables can be cooked in a number of ways, and some of them, including broccoli and cauliflower, can taste good raw.

Cruciferous vegetables include:

broccoli cauliflower cabbage Brussels sprouts bok choy kale collard greens turnips rutabagas

Varieties of mushrooms such as shiitake, portabello, crimini, and baby button work to block estrogen in the body. They have been known to prevent the production of an enzyme called aromatase. Aromatase is responsible for converting the hormone androgen over to estrogen. Incorporating this food into your diet will help prevent new production of estrogen

People often disagree over nutrition so it's not really surprising to me. Then there are pedants who would rather say "you don't block, but you limit estrogen" ok, so same effect and sentiment in my advice/what I'm saying but in said scenario you'd be taking issue with a definition - not really conducive to the discussion and actually more detrimental than helpful if this is the case.

Any counter argument/information you have to present or are you merely stipulating disagreement without additional input? I'd appreciate input/reasoning for disagreement (maybe I'll learn something.)

Science works alongside philosophy, it can't disprove it "entirely" because it's effectively a language vs. numbers type deal, but it can disprove whatever is quantifiable/measurable. In fact science evolved out of philosophy, and the curiosity of mind. Where science can disprove philosophy, we drop those ideas from the philosophy. Science has no mind of its own. Philosophy is the mind of science, science is the right hand that tests the theories of the mind. Without philosophy you have no science because you have nothing to test for. You have no imagination, no need to prove anything.

Science cannot prove women are as logical as men just like my philosophication cannot prove they are not. There is a stalemate, and in the absence of evidence we believe in RP philosophy and its rationalisation based upon our collective observations. Philosophy can be wrong, and like the early ancient greek philosophers the logic of the philosophy can be solid within the limited scope of your field of knowledge, but still be objectively wrong. Only when it can be disproved by science/technology is it right to declare the philosophy invalid. Likewise we test our philosophy in field and find it validated by our experiences, so even if it is not completely correct, it holds some value.

Likewise, if we can accept the baseless claims of feminist ideology, then how is that fundamentally different from accepting the baseless claims of red pill philosophy? At least you can go out and test RP ideas and see them work. Testing feminist ideals out in the wild (defer to her, make her pay her half blah blah) often result in failure. It doesn't improve your chances of mating. Common sense would tell us that women disprove feminist ideas with their behaviour and how they react to men who buy into the feminist ideal. "Nice guys finish last" and blah blah. That's why a lot of dating advice nowadays for women seems to be completely paradoxical, cherry picking parts of traditionalism and feminism to give women "all the power." Which only further brings into question claims/desires of gender egalitarianism.

At least, unlike feminism, red pill philosophy is the articulation of experience. The feminist ideological construct is preconceived on theoretical ideals, theories with little basis in practice and little corroboration. RP was born out of PUA which comes from thousands of contemporary male experiences dealing with women in the early 2000's and beyond. Feminism was a gendered re-interpretation of Marxism. Feminism tells people what to think and how to feel about certain elements of society and then makes an argument for those things, it is more akin to a dogma. Feminism shows NO PROOF "why feminism is better than no feminism" it just declares that it is. Feminism is based on the inherent assumption and desire that "women can be equal to men" and where this is not so, that this is "WRONG" and must be rectified.

This is in actual fact, something I quite like the idea of. The idea that I can be lazy and not need to put so much work into life and have a woman come and do half the work for me. I think a lot of guys would love a lesser pressure load. However, this ideological framework failed. This ideology cannot change the differences in our minds, nor what we find attractive in the opposite sex. In spite of feminism, equality has not happened. Women are more masculine, but they do not think like men. Men have become more feminine, but they do not think like women. We have women who, by scientific statistical metrics of achievement are "equal to and superior to" men in many ways (eg: quantifiable things such as number of graduates.)

Yet in spite of women's achievement, everybody's net happiness continues to decline. Women even more so than man's, which seems completely counter-intuitive when such a "high level of equality has been achieved." This can only lead one to deduce that men and women aren't meant to be equal and that women do not handle traditionally masculine roles very well. That women thrived in their previous roles due to something more innate and that feminism is damaging rather than conducive. We then analyse women: listen to what they say, what they do, how they behave and attempt to philosophically rationalise why they are incapable of the equality that was forcibly mandated on to our societies by niche groups and government.

Trust me, I'd love women to be capable of equality, but they aren't. Masculinity and femininity aren't as flexible as social engineers would like them to be. Families and childrearing do not prosper under feminism. It does more harm than good. So why the idea sounds great on paper, in practice, it leads to social destruction, a decline in living standards and an increase in dysfunctional families. With feminism, we fight the natural order as we do with technology, hoping we can break free of the rules imposed upon us by evolution over thousands and thousands of years. Turns out we can't. Turns out an ideology from the late 19th century popularised in the 1960's can't change thousands of years of genetic evolution and make men and women effectively interchangeably quid pro quo. We are fundamentally different, if we could be the same, the red pill would not exist because it would not need to.

When you have to tell people "men and women are different" because they have been brainwashed to think "no they're not, it's just anatomical" it's quite telling just how far gone we are as a society.

To answer the crux of what you're getting at here: not all of TRP is backed up by science, but it doesn't need to be. It is backed up by theory, observation and to some extent, corroboration. That's how philosophy is born and that is what gives science ideas to test/things to look for. If you want to invalidate a philosophy, you do so scientifically, when the science shows the philosophy to be wrong, the philosophy has to drop that belief in order to continue to be perceived as legitimate. If there is any science out there that can disprove parts of TRP, then disprove it. If you cannot disprove it but don't like what you hear out of an emotional sense of "well that's just wrong!," then you have to accept the "We should agree to disagree position" and leave it at that.

Good to know not all women are ruined, and a few functional ones manage to thrive in spite of the decadent culture. Such examples help to give the men here hope, who at heart are romantics pissed off with the state of affairs, many having written off women entirely as solely sexual objects. Whilst others are on the verge as such. For the guys in the anger phase, flipping their shit as they read this: AWALT, yes, AWALT, I know. A low partner count is to be commended though. This is the type of women capable of pair bonding who is not as socially irresponsible as the average woman, nor prone to carry out the compulsion of impulse. Self-discipline is an important quality to look for in an LTR. Likewise they are better mother material. Your chances of successful monogamy/child-rearing increase a fuck ton with this type of woman. They are rare, and many women claim to be this when they are not, they are damaged frauds. So the weary man must balance vigilance with fairness and do his best to determine when meeting such a woman if "this is for real" or "if she's just fucking with me."

And with dependence comes weakness. Then this inferiority/weakness is spun as a virtue because de facto enduring any old shit the world throws at you and not killing yourself is considered "brave." Modern women are always described as brave for any old shit that happens to them that perhaps wasn't too pleasant (like a divorce) even if they were the cause of said thing. I have learnt to see the word "brave" as described by the mainstream media as code for "fucking idiot we'll validate as a victim."

No you're brave if you overcome your problems (rather than co-exist with them/become a professional victim) and then actually solve your problems. Moaning about them and farming sympathy is not brave in the slightest. Brave people shut the fuck up about their issues and don't gloat for validation and pity.

Met a girl. She is pretty, smart, educated, upper class. I am not rich by any means so I know this girl loves me for me.

You are insecure and feel like this girl is out of your league and that somehow, you managed to get her. You don't quite know why or how, but you feel elated, lucky almost, perhaps undeserving of her. Did it seem too easy? Maybe that's a red flag. Maybe she has other reasons for being with you, personal demons that she thinks you can fix.

She moved half way around the world to be with me and she put up with all sorts of crap in order for us to be together.

Maybe she has other reasons and marketed it as being all about you but perhaps she wanted to escape from her parents/old life and you were a perfect opportunity/pretence to escape. Maybe it's that and the fact she thought you were hot/sexy. Whatever it is, remember love doesn't last forever, it's in a state of flux. I have chicks that would have killed for me in the past who would now pretend I was a ghost if they saw me. It is what it is dude.

Latest bit - we plan to have a couple drinks with friends and spend the night alone. She ends up drinking to excess again, changes the plans and is unable to walk by the time we leave. Pukes when we get home and passes out.

She is drinking to block out some kind of pain. You do not have control over her or the relationship because she behaves like this in front of you and you let it fly. She is in control of the relationship and does not respect your authority.

I am totally in love with her and my stomach is in my throat. She has given up a lot to be with me, confesses her love, wants to buy a home for us.... and yet I keep thinking at some point she will stray as it seems I am the old beta who she loves and says to "Sex is not important to me".

You have pedestalled her because you feel she is beyond what you deserve. As a result you fail to set hard boundaries. I suspect she wants to buy a house and start a new life with you as some sort of experiment in retail therapy to escape whatever demons it is she has. One thing you have to realise about damaged rich people is they think if they keep throwing money at something they can fix it. It's all they know.

Reading your post OP I get the feeling you have centred your life around this woman. Although it sounds like she has actually centred her life around you because she has moved half way around the world, something about how you have described things and act makes me think there are ulterior motives for that. Rich people can move anywhere in the world at the drop of a hat, it's not the sacrifice you think it is. She could move back as easily as she moved over. Now if she was stranded with no money to get back and moved over? Then yeah, that'd be the sacrifice you think it is rather than the experiment (of hers) I believe this is.

Just food for thought. It's how I see things based on what you've said. It doesn't mean I'm right or what I've said is fact. Hope something in my perspective resonates and helps you. Good luck.

She talked about how she always had feelings for me, how she never wanted us to break up etc. all night - pretty sure this is just sweet talking and means nothing but feel it is worth mentioning.

It means she is willing to give things a go again if you are. She is saying "honey, the gates to the kingdom are still open if you want them."

I also mentioned that I am in two other relationships right now but she seemed to get turned on more by that, competitive drive I suppose.

It's called preselection/dread game. Women realise you are a hot commodity and they want a piece of the action. Unlike men who view women with multiple partners as sluts, women view sexually successful men as commodities. Remember, it's easy to be a slut, banging multiple women must mean you are high value because women are choosy. This is the basis behind the idea of preselection.

Anyway, given that information is it smart to plate an old ex girlfriend?

Not if you still love her or there is another way it could bite you in the ass, eg: financially or she's clinically crazy (eg: bi-polar.)

FYI: women are egotistical, the reason she's so receptive to you is not just your SMV and preselection (which really just sealed the deal) but because to her ego you are "the one that got away." Women are so used to dumping men, rather than the reverse that when it happens to them - they are utterly bewildered. It's a way of a man communicating "I think I'm better than you, you're not worth my time." That is probably the biggest neg a man can pay a woman, and as a result given some time apart, they are normally receptive to fucking again should an opportunity arise.

Yeah don't undersell your self. Always let others make the opening offer, they may value you more than you value yourself. If you have to open, open insanely high (way higher than you believe you're worth, so you can find out what they're willing to pay.) Ego makes it very hard for one to accurately value themselves. That's why it's best to let the market (other people) determine your value (in business.) No matter how invincible you feel, in economics it is market demand that drives and determines value, not the ego of the supplier. With women on the other hand, be irrationally self-confident and they'll buy into it.

"Do I want to be a patriarch, or do I want to be a bachelor?"

If bachelor: go gym and follow the playboy/pua lifestyle. Explore the world to indulge in the full banquet of women that humanity has to offer. Woman-centric strategy.

If patriarch: keep focussing on self-improvement, talk to women in your spare time. Vet women stringently and stay in LTRs. Have mistresses on the side if deemed necessary. Build up a strong business and tight-knit social circles. Be more strategy/financially focussed than pussy focussed. Family/me-centric strategy.

Regarding morality though, it should be formed around two things, rewards and punishment. At that point it is barely recognizable as what is generally referred to when using the word morality though. Always acting in your best self-interest will get you much farther than concerning yourself with whether something to you is immoral or moral. However, it is a special kind of idiot that takes this to mean that you don't need to factor in other people's morality, judgement, and (re)actions in the choices you make. Looking at your world through rewards/punishment will brace a man to properly calculate the idea of fucking another mans wife vs that man losing his shit and killing you. I would also trust a man who acts out of self-interest over someone who has proclaimed "morals". You can morally justify anything, and those people can act with randomness that might not be predicted. Someone who regards that as irrelevant and will act out of self-interest should be more reliable, especially over the long term.

Completely agree with your logic and think this is especially well-written.

Everything is amoral, and that's what lets people act out of educated and contemplative self-interest. Due to the fact that most people have morals, it is most often in your best interest to act as if you do have morals, because those with "morals" will reward you for doing so. Alternatively, you should at least let your actions be guided by the typically predictable behavior and actions of those that do have morality. Law 38, again, is a great tool when applied to daily life that will allow those of us that are amoral to exist in a world plagued by moralists.

I believe one should be Machiavellian when necessary (unplagued by morals) but morally upstanding when Machiavellianism is not necessary. Some people are in bad situations and need to be Machiavellian all the time. Others do not need to be, but are sadistic so constantly indulge it. Others only need to defend themselves sparsely. Morality is actually more beneficial than Machiavellianism because you blend in and guilt where apparent for anything bad you do is easily assuaged/outweighed by the good you do. Obviously that last part does not apply to natural psychopaths. Of course when your interests are violated, you can switch at the drop of a hat and protect them. This is how one is both feared and loved. A good leader learns virtue and knows when to be compassionate, they are not unnecessarily tyrannical. You Machiavellians who fake your morality are limited, because you do not actually possess morality. You feign it, you fool some, but ultimately you cannot inspire love with the morally upstanding. You need a capacity to be moral to attain love and you need a capacity to be immoral to preserve love. Why is love relevant outside how it feels? Love is power.

Not just sexual strategy is amoral, everything is. Why? Because life has no feelings, no conscience or consciousness and gives no fucks about shit. That doesn't mean disregarding morality as a whole is a wise or even balanced thing to do.

Mr. IllimitableMan I'll let you in on a great secret in life as i think you will do some good with it.. when people are not in tune with the emotion of another, or when they lack empathy they always tend to take things personally. This is why TRPsubmitter went all defensive, its a mild loss of frame.

Indeed. I owe no such person my patience though. Patience is a privilege bestowed on those who demonstrate the respect due. It is this that makes them worthy of your patience, the caveat: children. I don't waste my time being reasonable with people who attack me viscerally, you cannot reason with emotion and it is futile to try.

The ones who do it, who do have codes, who do have emotions... well no one here is going to help them deal emotionally with what they did when they realize they regret it.

There is little worse than one who has the capacity to do "evil" but no healthy and functional coping mechanism to forgive themselves after the fact. It's a waste of life and a brutally inefficient way to exist. All the best in your personal journey.

Not just sexual strategy is amoral, everything is. Why? Because life has no feelings, no conscience or consciousness and gives no fucks about shit. That doesn't mean disregarding morality as a whole is a wise or even balanced thing to do.

Poor southerners are the dumbest of all though. Getting snobby because you live somewhere with disproportionately higher living costs (and thus less savings and less chance to y'know, stop being poor) is moronic.

I always found it funny how a house in Leeds (£600 per month) cost the same as a room in London or a one bed flat in most of the south. I always thought having a shitty job in the north would hence make you immensely better off than in the south. The counterargument I received when pointing that out in a political discourse before was that there are less jobs in the north (higher unemployment) than in the south, which may explain why the cost of living is higher in the south (more people spending = pushes up inflation.) Sounds like a valid point. It annoys me to see poor people acting like snobs, it's bad enough when you have the wealth to back your snobbery, and snobbery full-stop is simply obnoxious and detestable but being snobbish and poor is just beyond ironic. Arrogance can be sexy and even charming, but snobbery? No. England is one huge snob-fest. I see the immigrants pick up this nasty personality trait too. It permeates almost everywhere.

You're hamstering if you say "it's perceived that black women are less valuable than asian women, but really, they're equal." Seriously, what? Haha. In economics, demand sets the value. If everyone wants a book I own, it could be worth a million, if nobody wants it, the book could be worth a cent. Regardless of what the book is or how good or long or short or shitty it is, demand sets value. People pay millions for paintings that you and I look at and think are shitty. Why? Demand. It is what it is. Demand dictates value, but not quality. White women are in more demand than black women. Asian women are in more demand than any other women. As much as asian men complain, according to these stats they're in higher demand than black men. None of that shit means you are inferior, but it means you are in less demand, and therefore you have lower market value. Simple as that. If you disagree, please, point me to where my logic is wrong. Not "what you feel" and I'll seriously consider your assertion.

Downvotes look like everyone is shooting the messenger, but if you're gonna be red pill go the whole fucking way. No point "undeluding yourself" about women, but still being a delusional cunt about other things. Honestly. I have little patience for that. This isn't me ranting specifically at you FYI, just a general "I can't believe people sometimes" thing right here. I hope that provides some food for thought.

Bait and switch. Lose weight to get a job (like women do to get a man) then once you get a job (get married) let your weight balloon up. BMI over 30 (she gets fat and wont lose it for her man) now they can't fire you without paying out the ass (if he wants rid of her she'll divorce rape him.)

The parallels are quite striking really.

An interesting response with some powerful points, I do however wish to know what the rest of this excerpt was going to say (as it quite abruptly cut off)

TRP taught me not to judge. Male weakness is frowned upon for a good reason - it is dangerous to the tribe the male lives in. There is no such demand for women - if anything, more fearful woman will be better for security of children. The empathy men feel for

This point:

We are all wired to disregard male suffering and to look after women. That is how we are, me, you and every single person on this planet.

Is true, however in spite of that I am not totally indifferent/uncaring to male weakness or the plight of male kind. Yes I have DT traits, yes I can "stop myself caring" but the fact of the matter is, I do care, and I actually have something to "turn off." Women simply "do not care" they do not have to make themselves "not care" about men because they don't give a fuck as a default setting.

My compassion for mankind is why I run a blog aimed at assisting men to make themselves more powerful. It's not just to help myself and increase my own profile/make money or whatever (although I'd be lying if I said I didn't value those things,) but likewise it is because I actually give a fuck about the state of modern men and the huge lack of masculinity in their lives. How damaging that is to men and male well-being. For many we'll have to angle the betterment of men with "we need to help men so men can be good to women again" and that's the only way they'll give a fuck about male problems, but for me, helping men in and of itself is enough. I believe seeing a beta turn alpha or a boy become a man is an incredibly rewarding process. It increases my competition, but I don't have a scarcity mentality so I don't care. I'm confident I'm remarkable enough in and of myself not to suffer from increased competition. No crab bucket mentality here. I think the world needs better, stronger men independent of what women want or need or how "the average man being better" affects them.

I do believe that aside our sexual habits, men are far less rigidly constrained by their biological natures than women in matters of thought and behaviour. In that way, the clarity of our logic sets us free from the emotional impulses that govern the female method of thought and communication. We can suppress anger (probably our most dominant emotion,) "hold frame" in the face of mental violence, help others with no benefit to ourselves and etc. Women don't buck the trend like that. They react to almost all their own emotions and struggle not to, they WANT TO go on that ride, they relish in it. They are predictable and unremarkable. Hence I think we concur, you cannot judge women by male standards because they are inferior to men. You have to judge women by their own set of lesser standards. Unfortunately even by female standards, the majority of women are occupying the lower end of the female desirability bell curve. Even by female standards, in the current time we find ourselves a massive lack of respectable women. Resources aside, psychologically speaking women can't even raise girls right, they need a man to do that too. Ironic, yet hilarious.

Agree 100%.

The case of women is particularly challenging because they defer to either strong leadership or herd consensus, and right now herd consensus says to be a self-destructive cunt.

Indeed it does, I particularly appreciate your use of the word cunt here. Gave me a chuckle.

The only way to override this is through leadership, which ain't going to happen outside of the actions of individual men, and even then it's better to work with the least tainted or fucked up women to begin with. Let the others rot.

Behave how is needed, but think as you like. You tell a bitch it's not her fault so you can proceed, as you say. However there's a growing number of guys who actually believe in this bullshit. They're not "I know it's BS, but we need this BS to get shit done" they're more like "It is my fault, I AM THE MAN and if I WAS MORE OF A MAN, she wouldn't be a cunt." It's the hamstering that's retarded, not doing what women can't - taking responsibility for shit that ain't directly your fault that people beneath you have fucked up (a leadership trait.)

There would be no controversiality and there would be nobody to call me a "whiny SJW" in the comments. Funny thing is, I know the people who hate me will still read my shit because the information is inherently valuable in and of itself. I'm fucking with them because I can and there's fuck all they can do about it. On the flip side, by causing conflict, I can inspire people/motivate them subliminally without letting them know explicitly that's what I'm trying to do. If someone knows what your intention is, they are more likely to resist it, so you must be underhand. Men can be stubborn, I can tell a guy to go monk mode all I like and he may not do it because he doesn't feel like it. If I make him feel something, he's more likely to go do monk mode. That's the kind of level I operate at. Everything is a game, as is how I choose to post on TRP, who I talk to, who I don't talk to etc. Its meta as fuck. I expect a lot of people sometimes think I'm two different people, they just don't understand what's going on. It serves me well. I'm Machiavellian, it's what we do.

that this is the inevitable state of humanity after every period of abundance. Would you agree?

I do agree with his analysis on the birth and death of civilization. It's a terrific little (60 page) book.

Those men that are strong will survive and rebuild.

That's true, but just because the cycle is natural, does that mean it is optimal? There are lot of wasted resources in destroying and reconstructing what was essentially already there. IMO, it's unnecessary heartache. We need to learn from our predecessors and stop fucking up in the exact same way. Hindsight is an incredible thing.

I agree with your points, all except the final one.

On the point of matriarchy, I'm of the opinion that we're a patriarchy with a very few powerful men at the top who wish to keep the majority of men down and see feminism or "putting most women above most men," as an effective way of doing that. They realise that most women in power would be complicit enough not to be a threat to their power base, whilst men with any significant measure of power could pose a significant threat. So how do they combat this? Artificially raise competent and incompetent women alike above the majority of men, alienating otherwise capable men from assuming the rightful positions that their leadership qualities would excel in. So you have your elite men and their families at the apex, followed by a huge class of women beneath them making up the middle chunk of the pyramid. Then it follows that the majority of men (especially younger men) make up the bottom of that pyramid, socially and economically speaking.

I can see why you think it's a matriarchy, but it is manginas and feminist-enabling grubby vote-buying politicians who allow all this shit to go on, they are the real people in control and it is they who use feminism for their own goals. Most feminist women are annoying, but for the most part, harmless beyond their own insanity (eg: if you don't have a relationship with her, there's not a lot she can do to fuck with you.)

Really exceptional piece Illim. Top notch work, top notch!

Thanks bud.

Now I think my wife is using it.

Since my eyes were opened by Machiavellianism I've found almost everything women do in relation to how they interact with men is subconscious manipulation on varying levels, they are massive boundary pushers/violators (if you won't put your foot down.) Tactical submission however, that shit is conscious. In England the idiom is "they're trying to get round you" which is kind of saying "they want to make you feel more comfortable so you do something for them." Men who are sexed up and seduced by submission are the most easily manipulated. They get all mushy and then she can pounce with her request or "assume you would be fine with that because you've both been getting on so well lately!"

Feminists, hilariously, don't see the power in submission. But those chicks over at RPW, they do, I've seen them talk about it before. AWALT.

Oh god.. like most British Law the fucking shit is all over the place since they repealed The Treason Act 1945.. which means punishments for Treason now come from a bunch of old laws that are either mitigated from their old punishments (beheadings etc) or fully intact.

Acts containing substantive or procedural law

Treason Act 1351 (most forms of treason)

Treason Act 1495 (special defence to treason)

Treason Act (Ireland) 1537 (Northern Ireland only)

Crown of Ireland Act 1542 (Northern Ireland only)

Treason Act 1695 (limitation on prosecution)

Treason Act 1702 (a further form of treason)

Treason Act (Ireland) 1703 (equivalent to Treason Act 1702)

Treason Act 1708 (further forms of treason)

Treason Act 1814 and Forfeiture Act 1870 (the penalty for treason)

Treason (Ireland) Act 1821 (extended provisions of the 1695 Act to Ireland and still applies today in Northern Ireland)

Treason Felony Act 1848 (still-existing offences which used to be treason)

Acts which are spent

Treason Act 1945 (section 3 seems to remain in force in England and Wales, but appears to be spent)

Acts creating similar offences

But honestly the advisor sounds like some women in history. Sitting behind the Napoleons and what not influencing the decisions without gaining glory or hatred.

Advisers are something more akin to being King Arthur's Merlin. Quite literally, a royal advisor or person trusted to give advice on serious matters to a powerful person. In today's business world we call them consultants, although, there are a lot of bullshit consultants out there who something more akin to con artists reading off google than they are actual advisers.

Relevant:

In fact in my interactions with "King" types (less self-disciplined psychopaths) I have noticed massive similarities between them and women. Both are hypergamous. Both use Briffault's Law to determine their relationships. Both are incredibly solipsistic and "ME ME ME" orientated. Both are incredibly narcissistic to an insecure and butthurt degree (meaning they get indignant easily.) Both need to anchor themselves to more solid, stable personalities, people unlike themselves, and your observation in making a connection between the neuroticism of the king and the stoicism of the advisor is a cogent one. You can game kings like you would game women, and that shit will work. Dread game, DHVs, all of it. They're like men who emote/strategise in a feminine way. Due to their sadism and narcissism they tend to love drama, again, like women do. To use an example about figureheads from popular culture (SPOILER ALERT,) it's like in Game of Thrones after Joffrey dies, his mother becomes the Queen Regent (the acting Monarch) and is acting leader until his younger brother "The King" comes of age. The King is the head monarch only in name, because of his age. Even when he comes of age though, because his mother would have been Queen Regent for such a long time and be far more competently Machiavellian than he is (he is as a character, very naive to the ways of manipulation,) it is his mother Cersei who will be the real power in King's Landing long after he is declared acting king. She will rule through her son, he will be a puppet ruler. Things like this naturally happened in our own history, Machiavellian queens ruling through the authoritarian legitimacy of their kings be it a son or a husband. Alas, it is women who have always typically been far more naturally apt in the art of Machiavellianism than men, and they will use "the love connection" to rule, in fact they are dependent on it. Female leaders rarely rule independent of men, but instead, through men. There are exceptions, and of course they prove the trend.

That can be the case.

It is most commonly the case, an aversion to drama/political risk can likewise be driving factors in avoiding

"doing the dirty work."

That can be the case. As an advisor, I don't thirst for direct leadership and power. I thirst for knowledge and insight.

Same here.

The trusted advisor is the game for me. In my profession, I leverage my powers of observation in a diagnostic capacity to help others. Playing a win-win game is quite profitable in the long run.

I agree.

Your description of the Advisor was very accurate. Clearly you are one.

2 upvotes · 16 November 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Do you feel people can switch between the two/three types based on particular situations?

Not really, it wouldn't make any sense.

An advisor lacks the fearlessness to execute.

A king lacks the self-control of ego as well as the insight of an advisor.

Now a general, he has fearlessness, self-control and insight - I suppose should he purposefully choose not to take action (or feign fearfulness) he would appear as an advisor, or if he were to purposefully react out of ego he would appear as a king. For all intent and purpose however, he is not a king.

The archetypes aren't really fluid, each archetype can be mistaken for another in the face of certain behaviour, but regardless they are still part of the archetype they fall under.

We have a lot of new members, we are growing, and hate me all you want, but this is not the message TRP stands for.

I don't care enough for your opinion to hate you but you have not actually stated any logical counterpoints for why I'm wrong. Just that my opinion must be wrong because I'm in the anger phase (I'm not - I play around with my writing style to convey messages to different types of people - I'm manipulative like that.) Other people who don't like me think I'm a pseudo-intellectual, here I'm a raging man in the anger phase - go figure. You don't actually really know where I'm at because I'm deliberately mysterious and don't reveal any facets of my personal life. Anyway, I digress. You then go onto give the counter-opinion of "marriage can be wonderful" but failed to give sufficient reasons why. So basically your post amounts to "I don't like the way in which you said what you said, I disagree with it, the opposite is true."

I'll bet dollars to doughnuts that if you start going through the logic and listing reasons for why marriage is good any reason you give for a marriage being great can be achieved by an LTR. Exception being you save a little on your taxes. If guys want LTRs then fine, that's cool, but marriage? Sure go do that too if you like, just don't hamster to yourself you're making a rational or smart choice. Families can be raised within LTRs just fine. Unless you want to marry into a royal family or some CEOs daughter or any other political arrangement it's pointless. And from an endorsed member no less I would expect a more substantive post, not superficial disagreement. The rant flair exists for a reason and it's not to tone police/disregard people as "men in the anger phase" when the message doesn't align with your personal beliefs on the matter.

while neglecting a host of environmental factors that come into play in an individuals life.

Opinions are like that, they tend not to be dissertations which account for every extraneous variable in existence. Of course, laymen realise this as par for the course, book nerds struggle with this idea and by merit of their educational training look for exceptions and then try to invalidate a point on a minor point of criticism (intellectual henpecking?) Criticism oft reveals the nature of the critic.

How A Man and A Woman Became Billionaires in 2 Different Ways

...I'm going to be blunt in saying that any man who gets married whether he thinks the woman is of quality or not is a fucking fool. Eg: George Clooney. Just because she was your unicorn princess when you married doesn't mean she won't be a scathing bitch 5,10 or even 15 years down the line. Marriage is a life long investment and you don't have a crystal ball. Women are great at the whole permanent personality switch thing. The branch swinging hypergamy upgrade thing. And the whole "switch sides because it suits me to do so thing." They also need constant maintenance. If they're not haaaaaaaaaaaaaapppy then you're a shit man and they're off. Fuck the fact you have to work hard, concentrate on yourself, look after your kids and do other shit. No. A woman's responsibilities are domestic/kids and usually any part time job she has. You have kids, full time job AND THEN HER. She is probably the most mentally draining thing out of all of those things.

Women lean towards neuroticism (all bitches are crazy, some just less so than others) and thus they are incredibly temperamental. The older they get the more pronounced any latent psycho-neurotic tendency will become. Depression (post natal or otherwise), schizophrenia and all that dysfunctional bad shit which basically makes a woman a no-go as a hard option. Think I sound crazy? Google mental illness, it's more prevalent in women, they have a natural predisposition to general batshittery. Definitely worth digging deep into a prospective woman's family dirt to see what her mother, grandmother, sisters and all the rest are like. If there's any, even A SNIFF of mental illness, nope the fuck out of there. You don't want those genes in your kids, either. It's your responsibility as a man to check for all this shit. If you bring a little sadistic boy or girl into the world because your wife's X chromosome's contain dysfunctional DNA, that's on you. Some women actually stabilise around/after menopause which is a blessing in disguise, I guess. But most women are long past fuckable once they reach that stage and any kids you had would be grown up so you would have survived the bulk part of your marriage. That's the beginning of the home stretch of your marriage, entering the early twilight years, not the hard part of having a hot young woman bear your kids and managing her swinging emotions, wants, needs, whining, hypergamy, negative influence (slutty friends, media, etc.)

I rather risk money on the stock market than risk my family/heart/money on a legal contract with a woman who has the power to rape everything. We live in a culture where a woman's feels have more legal reach than justice, common sense and logic. I see guys hamster a lot "why marriage is necessary" it isn't. You just want it because you were inculcated to desire it. In light of that you have a very weak logical basis for "why marriage is good." Kids need two parents, not a marriage contract. Fuck marriage. Tell the bitch if she wants a man as high SMV as yourself that she accepts your terms or you will nope the fuck out. Call her bluff, if she calls yours, follow through. If she begs for you back, excellent. If not? You've just avoided playing a game of Russian roulette where your net worth, emotions and family are ripped away from you by a woman who has fallen out of love, gone crazy or just lost her shit and wants to make you pay. Because all her problems are your fault. Even if they're not.

I've had this conversation with guys before. Some guys are dumb enough to think getting rich and just paying her off is worth it for a 5-10 year marriage and then fucking up your kids when they become teenagers/pre-teens with a divorce. I think they're fucking chumps. That's just pure hopeless romanticism. It's a poor as shit strategy whichever way you cut it. Most women are not worth what they get in a divorce. They get way in excess of what can be deemed reasonable, especially if you are successful. If you don't have more power/control than her, your marriage will inevitably fail. It's not a matter of IF, but a matter of when. Exceptions are dark triad men who have learnt to manage their woman's emotions and play her like a fiddle. Doesn't sound healthy I know but at least the whole fucking thing actually lasts. Women believe that shit to be "true love" but when you word it consciously like this it's "creepy as fuck." Good luck with marriage, it's Russian roulette except 5 out of the 6 chambers have a bullet inside. Here's hoping you hit that 1/6.

Marriage takes your one card away that gives you any measure of power over a woman. Your ability to walk away. You need to be able to withdraw your commitment at any time and be able to imply that you can actionably do that via dread game without a massive nuke going off. Even your ability to affect dread is weakened once you're married. A woman is inclined to think "he won't leave, he can't afford to leave" and so she carries on acting like a cunt ruining everything you've built "BECAUSE OF HOW I FEEL!" You don't need to be chaining up your nutsack like that, don't chain your fate to a woman's emotional whims. If I was emotional, I'd probably cringe every time I hear a guy say "you need marriage to raise kids." That's dumb as fuck. The divorce will fuck them up, I've seen it happen again and again. In fact I knew a dude whose parents divorcing red pillled the shit out of him and changed his whole view of women when he saw how his own mother was. A really rough way to become red pillled, let me tell you.

Hey dude well done on Law school. Law is a bitch, specifically interpreting law in 283928392 different ways, relating to cases/principles, understanding some of the concepts/analysing the legal nature of contract breaches and bla bla bla. Needless to say its annoying as fuck you're smart enough to get through the BA, get onto a post-grad. And somehow, these... these fucking monsters... these dumb fuck bitches are there. It's like a cruel, cruel, joke.

What are they doing there? They clearly do not have the brains. And if THEY DO have the brains, they clearly do not have the work ethic/team work ability to succeed. This kind of behaviour should have been stamped out at the GCSE/A level tiers of the UK education system, maybe killing off the last few D grade "I just about got in" stragglers at BA level. It's pathetic. And law can be very logically taxing. The last thing you need is sitting there trying to work out the legal aspects of a problem you've been given and some bitch is harping on about getting drunk and her fuck dumb latte. Feel for ya dude. And that gender ratio is SHIT. Personally I find the ugly chicks work the hardest and are the most personable, they're used to working hard if they're smart enough to be in academia because they've never had their looks to get by on in life. Usually they're compensating for their ugliness with their smarts. Well done on the prestigious law school and ignore the butthurt dumbfuck calling you out for no good reason.

I keep meaning to finish getting around to writing the laws in more detail & depth than given in the book as well as citing examples of the laws in action within a contemporary setting as material for my site. I then want to write a "couple" of "connector articles" which will show the relationships between different laws, which situations to apply them in, which situations to avoid applying them in and etc. Likewise you can categorise the laws in different ways, high power and low power laws being one form of categorisation I have envisioned. There is also a law 49 if you will, "do not be confined to the way of the laws" as people who read the laws tend to think they cannot operate outside the framework set by the laws. There are then the people who are hopeless at manipulation who say "your articles are great in theory but I need exercises/instructional manuals which will allow me to train these ideas directly IN THE FIELD as well as acquire some of the traits which aid in deploying these power moves because your writing is too theoretical for me to apply these ideas." So that's more work for me, dumbing things down and brainstorming ways up non-manipulative people can train themselves a capacity to manipulate/deploy power moves etc.

As you can imagine, this is a huge undertaking and I have other projects on the go, so it keeps being put back. But in time, in due time. It's not like I or my blog are going anywhere.

Edit: I am not agreeing to the definition that I have laid out.

Do be aware the number of beta faggots who have found this sub recently and aren't making an effort to take the red pill who want to pedantically argue the definition of specific words has increased exponentially. It's some weird type of OCD that people with poor social skills and low SMV exercise. Ignore those faggots, if they can't give you an example of why you're wrong, assume they're being needlessly aggravating/report their posts. Your definition looks pretty solid to me, the times I've seen it used here it's always been an asian man complaining an asian girl exclusively fucked white cock for a decade. Never any other race moaning about their girls fucking guys from other races. Apparently some of these asian chicks actually hate asian men and only settle with 'em for money post carousel. Seems to be an "asian issue" or some shit, or at least, something that happens to everyone in a multicultural society, but asians in particular take the most issue with it or "have it worst" because their women not only fuck other races BUT actively hate their own race of men and glorify white men.

No. Not if you fell in love with a girl, like OP did and got rejected/tossed aside when you were weak/blue pill/beta. If you pulled yourself together, alpha'd up, honed your body, your career, your social skills and became much higher SMV. Then 5 years down the line you bump into the girl who didn't have the time of day for you before, but now she fucks you the first night she bumps into you. Guess what is going to happen if you girlfriend her up? You revert to your "pre-alpha" self around her. You start feeling and behaving how you used to feel and behave, when you were a low value sap. Without even realising, this girl from your past will turn you into a bitch, and you won't even realise what is happening or why. Nobody should do that to themselves for a woman, no woman is worth fucking yourself up for like that.

This chick wasn't an ex-gf, she was a crush OP had when he was a nobody, and now he's somebody LTR'ing her will put him at risk of becoming his old self again. Yes he'll still have muscles money and superficial things, but we're talking mentally here.

Experience/exposure. I'm always observing things and retaining them, often not even consciously, but my powers of observation are pretty astute, sometimes to an incredibly annoying extent because I'm noticing shit I don't even want to see. Often it's negative or a deduction that reveals more about a person than I really need to or want to know in that moment. Call it autopilot hypersensitive cold reading or some shit. Guess I'm hyper analytical.

In fact, you've probably been more exposed than I have, having spent a much more concentrated amount of time with one. I think. A lot. Deeply. Often I remember things and connect all the dots retroactively, I don't do it on the fly because if I did I'd never live in the movement. That was actually a problem when I was growing up, I'd get a stimulus overload and get stuck in my own head linking everything up. Now I've learnt to just file it all away and link all the synoptics up later and deduce conclusions in solace so that I may be active in the moment. I guess you guys get the bulk of my mind channelled through my favoured art form, writing.

I haven't read enough of Ribbon Farm to comment.

As for the rest, sociopaths and psychopaths are to-may-toe, to-mah-toe. They're basically the same thing but people like to argue nuance and definition. Like the gentleman says in that thread, dissociative identity disorder is akin to being controlled by a mask/personality. It possesses you and manifests, rather than you consciously tapping into another part of yourself. That disorder can co-exist with psychopathy but it is not characteristic of psychopathy in my opinion. That is to say, you can get psychopaths who have control over their different personalities/masks and pick them as and when they like, and then you get lower functioning ones who don't have any control and are thus subject to a manifestation at random. Basically, some psychopaths will be controlled by their various personalities, others have control and will tap into whatever they need to access as a matter of pragmatism. It's very case-by-case, and it's hard enough finding one and studying them for long enough, letting alone finding others and successfully studying them too, to draw comparisons.

I'd like to read your point of view about the developing of the current situation and how it links with the cultural revolutions.

It's a deep topic that goes beyond the expansion of merely masculine decline, but also expands into neoreactionary territory such as the negatives of multiculturalism, immigration, economics etc. I have already done something similar to this, but not in terms of generational timelines. I talk about it contemporarily in terms of economics/multiculturalism and the failure of diversity, as well as how diversity is a buzzword with a deceptive surface level meaning. I suppose it is possible to speak about it purely in gender terms, like a snapshot out of history and shown chronologically in progression, but that would be weird to type and feel inorganic without mentioning all the non-trp more neoreactionary involved mechanisms at work which likewise aid said demasculination abstractly rather than directly (eg: automation, taking men out of physical jobs which would raise T into sedantry office jobs.)

I did a piece on the decline of femininity awhile back. I have a draft piece of the masculine decline unreleased. Whilst not taking a chronological multi-generational approach I expect what you're looking to hear will be there.

When it's released you'll see it on the board. If you miss it on TRP you can just subscribe to my blog and check your reader, or if you subscribe by email you'll get an email notification when its published (the best way not to miss it's release, assuming you check your emails.)

However, this day and age, circumstances are entirely different. Marriage rates are falling sharply, whether men are opting out or not is another topic, but men my age are more likely to remain single into late age, if not forever thanks to Feminism, divorce laws and the corruption of women in the west.

Largely true although I'm not sure the absence of marriage means remaining single (aka cohabitating or in LTRs, but not married.) The post is after all about LTRs (unpopular as they are with the younger crowd) and NOT marriage.

This makes getting locked into a mortgage and that responsible, grown adult stuff almost impossible for my generation to attain

I 100% agree the millennial plight is some real shit. A lot of older guys talk shit about millennials but seeing as the baby boomers raised them, saturated the value of a degree and still hold most of the established and paying jobs, helicopter parenting around an entire generation, who's to blame?

Combine these, amongst other socioeconomic issues, with the media and the popularization of man-childism, feminism, emasculation and sex culture, and you have an entire generation who cannot and will grow up.

Agree 100%

I agree with you that this is not a good thing, I myself wish I grew up in the Fifties, but circumstances will play out differently in this generation because that's how far off the deep end we've gone recently. This will lead to the collapse of the country and society sooner rather than later in my opinion, but people will no longer be isolated and shunned for it as we continue to slide deeper and deeper down the shitter. My generation and perhaps thereafter will continue to celebrate immaturity, feminism and man-child behavior until the day the collapse hits us like a sack of bricks.

Agree again, seems it's just the first point we have a difference of opinion on.

Race to the Top: A Guide for Low-SMV Minorities

2 upvotes · 20 October 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Would you for example consider going into a LTR with a white woman whose had a string of black guys?

If someone has a fetish/preference for a specific race to a point where they exclusively date them and I'm not in that race, and then they want to date me, I'd be suspicious of their intent. Maybe they're after my money or they're trying to use me for some shit. That's me judging them on past behaviour and why their preferences have changed, not a judgement on the colour of the dick she's into because I don't see how that shit factors into anything.

If she's got kids from a previous guy, white black or fucking rainbow coloured she's a no-go because I don't wanna be raising some other man's kids. That's his and her responsibility and imma nope the fuck out of that noise. However if she'd dated guys of multiple races and then dated me, I wouldn't really care. She's not a no-go because she dated outside my race and "betrayed us." That's some weird possessive shit over some woman you shouldn't really even give a fuck about and I fail to understand the logic behind it AND WOULD LOVE for someone who feels like that to explain EXACTLY where they are coming from. Or maybe that shit is just instinctual territorial racism over the bodies of your race's women and therefore there ain't a chance in hell that sentiment can be articulated because its just primitive as fuck protectionism over specific ethnic pussy.

As an Asian-american guy, IMO, its not a problem for me when another AA girl dates/haves sex outside her race. It is definitely suspect when she only has white cock and then tries to settle down with an Asian guy when the wall comes crashing down.

Exclusively dating one race and one race only to a point of giving no other race a chance in the run and then dating another out of the blue is suspicious as fuck. To me that's a bitch "settling" for what she can get over a racial boundary. If you're an alpha asian dude and she used to fuck white alphas, you're not even going to entertain some post-wall hag as anything more than a plate. You can bang whoever the hell you want, you're alpha. The only asian dude who is going to fall for that shit is a beta, but then again, race regardless betas are gonna fall for the beta bucks shit and alphas won't because they know the game.

If it is incredibly common that women are "racist" (or have a strong preference for men outside their own race) or however you wanna word that shit because honestly right now I'm not sure I can tell the damn difference, to the point that they only date their own race post-wall, then that shit is suspicious as hell and I would just next the bitch purely on trust issues. She sees her own kind as having lower SMV and tries to settle for you. Nobody wants to be settled for. I definitely see the reason for suspicion in cultures with arranged marriage where she carousel rides and then tries to get something set up with another minority around wall time so she can eat her cake too. Then again if she's fucking whites in a white majority society I have to cut her some slack, most of the cock is white where she lives, so that's most likely what she's going to be getting. There are less of "your kind" around, so less chance to fuck within her own race unless she incubates within a immigrant community. If she doesn't hate on her own race, basically, she's cool. People who hate on their own race are pathetic people.

Its pretty hard to judge two people in an interracial relationship and whether or not they are together because they like each other or because they have a fetish for each other's race.

True say that.

How do you differentiate a shit test and normal communication?

2 upvotes · 19 October 2014 · /r/askTRP

Normal communication is an exchange of information. It is straight and to the point. There is no subtext, power struggle or implication in what is being said. Everything is surface level communication, what is being said is what is being meant, that and nothing else. Eg: What time do you finish work? How much does X cost?

Shit tests are designed to test your confidence. They're not always questions. Sometimes they are just blanket assertions which are designed to push you into a state of reactivity which reveals information subtextually about you.

I'll give you an example of a common one girls use. "Hahahaha X is one of those player guys you can tell!"

They will usually look at you after saying this kind of thing to gauge your body language as well to get a better read on your frame.

Alpha response: "Sounds like you've got an eye for talent." Strong eye contact or aloofness.

Beta response: "I would never dream of stringing a girl along!" and starts qualifying how "he's not like that" Shaking slightly, eyes widening etc.

Nuclear shit tests:

Nuclear shit tests are designed to take your reaction not by probing your psyche with words, but with actions that would typically be expected to offend/hurt/disrespect you. You're with a girl and you've hooked up a few times. She's a plate pushing for commitment but you haven't given in. You're both out at the club and she starts grinding on another guy. She's doing this to make you jealous and get you to force your hand. She's basically using dread game, trying to get you to commit to her by being a whore. Dread game when used by women is a nuclear shit test. How do you pass this shit test? Go talk to other girls, when it inevitably comes up later she was grinding be like "oh yeah, cool" (signifies you don't care) or "you can do what you're like we're not exclusive" etc etc

Shit tests come in many shapes and sizes. Generally most of the time people say something in a negative light about you it's a shit test. Shit tests are confidence tests/value tests.

There are loads of way to beat shit tests, some methods are more suited for particular situations than others.

Ways to deal with shit tests:

When a woman is being hysterical, reductio ad absurdum aka agree+amplify helps highlight her absurdity while maintaining an amused air, hence beating the shit test. An example is when a woman loses her shit and goes "You men are all the same! You're just pigs who think with your cock!" and you respond "Yeah, I'm a cloned pig with a cock for a brain, you're so right!"

Amused/Spin is like a pressure flip without the pressure, so you reinterpret what is being said to make you look good even though it was intended to make you look bad. This is better for when women/people are not being hysterical but are trying to fight you for dominance/denigrate you/amog.

"Hahaha this guy here thinks he's a wise guy"

"Don't get jealous it's unattractive"

Pressure flips are good for when someone is trying get you to say something/answer a question or do something. You remove the focus from yourself in the interaction and you put it on them. A pressure flip is basically a deflection.

Tim: "If you're so good at getting girls go over there and make out with that chick"

"Hey look there's a moldy piece of orange on the floor, maybe Tim can practice his kissing skills on it."

See now the pressure is on tim to defend himself, rather than you. That's all a pressure flip is, it is the application of the adage "attack is the best form of defence."

Going really off topic here:

The funny thing about the Koran is, being Arabic, you have to read it backwards. Apparently, the older verses talk about peace between differing religions and its only in the newer verses where they talk about intolerance for non-muslims. When people want to say "Islam is a religion of peace" they quote the peaceful verses while omitting the tyrannical ones. The thing is, the tyrannical verses are newer, and apparently with the Koran, where two verses contradict each other the newer one is the correct one because "it is the last word of Allah." Under this logic, every non-muslims an infidel that should be converted or slain. Interesting stuff.

The other thing I find very interesting about Islam is it mixes a legal system with the religion, I can't think of any other religion that has it's own religious legal system. You see by making a system of law part of the theology, you have a political ideology on your hands. So really it's both a religion and a political ideology. They get their own Shariah courts and everything.

Idolizing DT: A true example of Psychopathy

2 upvotes · 15 October 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

You're mistaking psychopath for "someone who values intelligence" in others.

No, no I'm not.

So, let's talk about "loyalty" then. Women can actually hit all of your characteristics for a DT psychopath, and yet they're not one either. Women lack loyalty in relationships, cmon man hypergamy, branch swinging, lying, cheating etc.

A while back I posted in a comment how women can seem psychopathic/engage in psychopathic seeming behaviour without actually being clinically psychopathic (because they do have emotions in their thought process, they just rely on justification/rationalisation to mitigate guilt.) I should probably dig that post out and put it on the site because you're not the first person to confuse the coldness of the hamster with psychopathy and then make the conclusion of "Well under your criteria, all women must be psychopaths!" which is simply wrong.

Here's a hint: if you're really a psychopath you won't care that illimitableman on reddit is "misrepresenting your kind" there's a lot of people online who hang out in communities like this who are a bit OCD or linear thinkers (autists) that try to self-diagnose their weirdness or "abnormality" as being "psychopathic," but they are not DT in the fucking slightest. Being pre-occupied/unemotional due to an intense male brain and being psychopathic (lack of guilt/empathy/fearlessness) aren't the same thing. In fact a lot of these OCD types suffer from anxiety, something that psychopaths do not. As you say, tech geeks are capable of love/loyalty etc, and I wouldn't call this "archetype of personality" psychopathic in the slightest. I would hardly describe tech/business as a bastion of psychopathy unless you're sitting in a silicon valley board room.

See they are so influential in modern society that many people don't know the words actual/original definition, but only the feminist definition. The idea that there is some kind of male illuminati holding down the women of planet Earth. Also you're right that they apply it liberally as a blanket one size fits all cause for any problem that they perceive. Women not as good at maths as men? Patriarchy! Women not as physically strong as men? Patriarchy! etc.

Well actually, it simply means "lead by father" or "lead by male" a system of society or government in which the father or eldest male is head of the family and descent is reckoned through the male line.

patriarchy (n.) 1560s, in ecclesiastical sense, from Greek patriarkhia, from patriarkhes (see patriarch). Meaning "system of society or government by fathers or elder males of the community" first recorded 1630s.

The word is not the same thing as feminist "patriarchy theory." Their utilisation of the word is an attempt to amend its meaning to fit their perverse theories.

Dark Triad - Emulating psychopathy, how so?

2 upvotes · 12 October 2014 · /r/askTRP

So OP, basically, these are your options:

- Become a stoic, commit to meditation and get good at suppressing emotions/desensitising yourself to how you feel. This will cause you not to act on how you feel and eventually the feelings will become weaker, although, not absent.
- Try cocaine. It makes you fearless and removes a lot of empathy whilst you're high. It's THE DT drug IMO.

You can't BECOME psychopathic and you shouldn't really want to be. You want to be able to have a lot of emotional self-control and have a choice over what emotions you will feel and which you will throw into the ether. This allows you to be non-reactive/nonchalant to obvious shit tests whilst still being able to connect with good friends, family etc on an emotional level. Not ever being able to care about another person would suck. It's about self-mastery and self-control not dysfunction.

Excuse me. Why does everyone assume you guys are abusive assholes?

Hi there, thanks. I rephrased it, but I didn't use your suggestion because I didn't like that either.

Not all of us lived through its inception. You're dating yourself there, giving away clues to your age.

Eh, I meant that we all got to live in a time/period/era where the internet exists. Not that you were alive on the day when it was released (which would make you the minimum age of around 23 or 24 I believe.) Basically you're alive now and didn't die before 1991 (when the internet became publicly available) which is anybody and everybody capable of reading this. Having died in the 80's or 90's when feminism was rife but there was no public internet, or it had minimal penetration would have sucked.

Thanks for the great read.

So you want a science program (despite its drop in quality horizon is still a science program) to not actually report on the accuracy and level of a certainty and instead pander to layman and give false certainty about findings and principles and over exaggerate the certainty so people can adopt it.

Not at all. Your assumption here is incorrect. It's my opinion that the show is interesting as an abstract interest, as is the scientific method and its pursuit of knowledge, but that process is so slow that unproven ideas and scientific argument don't help people realise immediate reality in their day to day. That's what I'm saying. It is also incredibly unscientific to allow the assumptions of women on a "scientific programme" to mandate how the viewer interprets the findings. You say it's not media like Fox News (or some other kind of media outlet, eg: newspapers) so instead of putting a slant on how the viewer interprets the findings, they should leave it open-ended and let you deduce your own conclusions without bias.

Those women had no evidence for their opinions of socialisation, yet those opinions are allowed to litter the show, vitiating it's supposed scientific credibility. Rather than shoot me down for voicing my opinions on a forum (a place where people voice opinions,) you should be mad with the women who diminish the quality of a show that purports to be scientific with nothing but unfounded claims regarding the meaning of scientific evidence.

Unlike the premise of that show, I am not claiming to be scientific. I am well aware everything I say is an opinion. Holding me to the same standard as a BBC science documentary is silly. I am criticising it. If you can criticise my criticism with some sort of insight you feel/think I have neglected, feel free.

i think you are being too harsh

Yeah.

Nature versus nurture is so absolutely insanely complex there will never be a conclusive all encompassing conclusion accepted by all unless there is some fundamental quantum leap discovery.

Agreed.

The female university professor (indian looking sounding women) highlighted tis by claiming you would have to take 600 or so people from birth and completely control all variables (or something to that effect, i cant remember).

She seemed reasonable and somewhat "underwhelmed" as if to suggest that exploring this is pointless as currently its something impossible to conclusively proof. Which I would be inclined to agree with.

No respectable scientist would ever claim conclusively either way

True, scientists are normally stuck in a limbo once you leave established hard science and delve into social philosophy, behavioural science or theoretical science, thus they never take a position. They like to say "X suggests Y but it's not proven that X conclusively leads to Y and there may even be a connection with Z" this kind of chatter is useless to laymen despite how logically correct it is. People like to live by heuristics based on solid probabilities (as indicated by experience) not hypothetical probabilities of abstract academia.

Personally there seems to be overwhelming evidence to support a more genetic influence over social, but that conclusion is by no means scientific, it simply cannot be scientific because the data does not exist and cannot exist (ethically)

Agree.

Science is great for inventing shit. But wisdom trumps it in day to day life (in social interactions) and is far more effective. If you waited for science to tell you how to behave you'd die socially inept with so much inquisitive uncertainty commanding your behaviour you'd find it tough to make decisions. You'd be indecisive. Social science will always be politicized, as it stands, its a feminist institution. Any finding that makes men look better in a specific way = socialised. Check out the documentaries on the sidebar from Norway about it, they're great.

This "split personality" is something you control ? Is it like a mask or an illusion you create depending on the situation ?

Yeah it's wilful. It's not some Eve White/Eve Black type shit. So I believe academics would call it verbally, "code switching" (from informal/dumb to formal/smart) which is the superficial level of it, but sociology as a field is trying to expand the idea of code switching into a deeper psychological realm which based on a glimpse seems to pertain to altered perceptions of reality: <http://www.sciencedirect.com/science/article/pii/S0388000180800131>

If you perceive someone is average you dumb down, if you perceive someone is smart, you're yourself but due to their continuing feedback find yourself more intellectually stimulated, so you actually feel more smart than you normally would talking to them because that shit is active rather than latent. I suppose you could say it is mirroring, and it is conscious, somewhat deliberate, but not really calculated. Just necessary to make sure our interactions are smooth rather than awkward or unsuccessful.

So to be brief, more of a fluid-easily adopted set of behaviour that forms a compartmentalised segment of personality rather than something such as dissociative identity disorder. I wouldn't call it a mask because it's not fake or fabricated, it's a part of me that manifests in the right company. I hate when a smart friend meets an average friend of mine from another social circle by chance. Because they never click. I like average people and can enjoy their company it's fine. I like fucking with 'em. Humour is a great way of bridging the gap, and that's how we bond, as long as they are smart enough to get your humour - you're fine.

That is they to marketing. It is inefficient, people I directly control I tell them shut the fuck up, do it my way or the highway.

Don't understand this entirely due to your typo.

Mathematically the deck is stacked against you. Lets say you live in a city of 200K, and 1% of the bitches are smart. So that means you have 2000 potential bitches. Then filter out you want a bitch from 20-30 so 15% of the population, so 300 potential bitches. Probably 50 of them are dark triad, so you are left with 150. Then you have to somehow locate them. The 1% figure might be too high. OKCupid usually is your best bet, since it forces you to some degree fill out your profile. Indeed, men are measured by many more metrics than women in terms of their overall societal worth. More areas need to be mastered for men to achieve recognition, and likewise, this allows men to spread their SMV over many different areas and keep it high, for longer. Men have more room to compensate for any fatal flaws. Whilst women, for better or worse, are stuck with aesthetics maintenance for all their societal worth. Yet some men do not want to acknowledge or admit that other men may have issues obstacles that they do not.

That is the delusion of said men. Not the stance of TRP. If someone says something dumb in TRP it doesn't mean TRP believes that. Unless it comes from an Endorsed Contributor or mod I wouldn't take that persons opinion of being very representative of TRP. Even then, there are minor differences in opinion between these people too.

Its another thing to flat out deny that blacks on average, face more obstacles in life socially and economically than whites.

I'm not American so I'm too ignorant to comment on race relations in the United States with any accuracy but I'll give my opinion nevertheless. The average black man is far more red pill'd than the average white man. Less education and a higher rate of poverty means your head isn't full of so much feminist propaganda and you're not incubated from the struggle that allows you to perceive social deprivation/poverty as some abstract academic concept. You're actually experiencing the struggle on a day-to-day basis by merit of being poor (not black, even though many blacks are poor.) Just as many people of many races who are poor do. It's not an aspect of blackness, and if you make it an aspect of blackness that poverty is a black quality, you vitiate what it means to be black and kind of inadvertently put blacks down. If you have a class of people who believe in their victimhood, it makes it difficult for that class of people to transcend the label they've been given and continuously apply to themselves. To escape oppression of any kind (poverty, being the biggest one) you have to reject the labels that keep you in your situation. If you don't, you end up living out a self-fulfilling prophecy and then blaming it to chance/life rather than yourself. That's weak.

Poverty leads to a realistic outlook in life race regardless as you don't have the luxury of entertaining fantasy on your day-to-day basis. Your survival is contingent upon being realistic and being street smart. Black men as a group tend to be represented in media as the most masculine race of men, with a few exceptions of course. Plenty of asian men would have something to say about that. For every chick who won't fuck a black, there are chicks who only fuck blacks because they view white men as too effeminate. It goes in roundabouts, you got perks and you got minuses, but it's easier to take your perks for granted and bitch about your minuses.

We're not all the same Age/IQ/Race/Height/Dick Size/Social Class/Religion etc. TRP isn't a one size fits all because of individual differences, anybody who thinks it is, is foolish. Regardless of that, it's a framework that any man can benefit from in the western world regardless of his starting point or who he is. There's one simple question. Is he a man? Yes? Then he can benefit from TRP, it's that simple. Some may have to put in more work than others but that is what it is, we can't change that and there's no point blaming anyone for shit as it won't solve anything. Judge people on character and ability, not race.

Don't fall victim to the grass is greener fallacy "that all whites have it good," it's like the women who stare up at the top 20% of men and say "men have it good." It's an inferiority complex and a projection of insecurity. Plenty of trailer park trash and working class/underclass whites who live in shitty neighbourhoods, work in fast food born to neurotic single mothers binging on anti-depressants. They have it just as hard if not harder than black men because they're in the same kind of struggle. Their whiteness isn't enough to save them from a crappy life. Whiteness isn't like a pussypass it won't get you free shit in life. Some would even argue they have it harder due to an absence of affirmative action for them, so no lower marks accepted to get into a top uni, no getting a job to fill a quota. There really is no point in racing for the position of "who's the biggest victim," because that's not a race you can win and still respect yourself for. Even if you are a victim of a crappy start in life, accepting that label is an admission of defeat. AND no man should EVER give in. I mean shit Curtis Jackson (50 Cent) was an orphan at 8 and look how far he's come. Anything is possible if you believe it is and make enough mistakes in life to find out what you need to do to make it. 20's is for making mistakes through trial and error. 30's is when things should start coming together. Don't be chained to a collective class or race consciousness, that isn't the road to success. You've got to be a maverick.

But to say that women rationalize things with their hamsters out of one side of your mouth then to claim there is no conclusive evidence that paternal age has any bearing on offspring health is ridiculous

Not seeing a study on something doesn't mean you're hamstering. Ignorance isn't hamstering.

Hamstering:

Hamstering is literally making weak logical fabrications for emotional decision making (doing something because your emotions told you to, and then coming up with bullshit logical reasons for it after the fact), as well as self-delusionary justification to absolve guilt. Usually the hamster spins when they do things that are irrational, immoral or otherwise, would cause cognitive dissonance (cause them to feel awkward about their inherent shittyness.) Alas, the hamster in the average woman spins multiple times a day in order to keep her misinformed world view intact and deceiving her, as well as attempting to do the same to those in her field of influence.

So yeah, you're misapplying the term. A lot of guys here, when disagreeing with each other accuse the other of hamstering in an attempt to lash out/discredit. I believe it's a visceral emotional reaction to believing someone is full of shit. It's actually quite hilarious. Male ego, the downfall of otherwise quite rational beings. Men have a hamster too, manginas, brainwashed religious men and etc. But the prevalence of it in women, combined with their hormones and propensity to emote rather than reason = warp speed hamster.

I don't know enough about meditation and its relationship with neural plasticity as to ascertain, or even theorise if such practices in "normal individuals" could achieve similar levels of empathic cognition akin to that of behaviour present in clinical psychopaths. I don't have a viable way to test the hypothesis either. What you must realise is that my entire approach to the topic area is not academic in nature, it is a set of deductions derived from street smarts (experience and analysis) rather than book smarts (reading and analysis.) Having known a psychopathic personality and making theories based on the multitude of interactions you have experienced in their presence doesn't make you privy to the neurology of psychopaths or give you any real scientific grounding into acquisition, brain chemistry and etc.

That aside, neural plasticity is very vague in definition, everything we experience changes the brain structure, even minimally, in some way or another. The brain is designed to be adaptive and mold to changes as they occur, but the crux of your enquiry here is "how much can it change?" and "can meditation allow plasticity to induce an absence of empathy beyond the levels normal plasticity would allow for?" (characterised as accessing a lack of empathy without even having the choice for empathy.)

Can the brain be changed profoundly to the extent where "one can enter a neuronal pathway in which empathy is impossible" is something I'm uncertain of. There is a common thread of believe on this subject matter that past childhood, socialised psychopathy (learnt psychopathy) usually acquired nonconsensually and permanently through a life changing event is close to impossible. If I could get a sample of ex child soldiers from say the Congo and an example of ex adult soldiers from the same military, I would theorise based upon the idea plasticity is higher in the children than the adults that the prevalence of psychopatic qualities in the children would be theoretically higher than in the adult soldiers. As a result, PTSD would be lower in the children and higher in the adults. It would either shatter you or harden you. If you want to look at achieving a similar outcome via a different methodology (meditation) it seems unlikely within the confines of the knowledge currently present to me due to the loss of plasticity through ageing. Of course it's an interesting concept, and I'm sure the military would be all over it if there was a way to consistently reproduce psychopathy induced via meditative practice. I'm not closed to the possibility either. Are your citations behind a pay wall or can I access them and see what they propose in my spare time?

I have a really good example of a dark triad woman in my head from a movie, but unfortunately I can't remember the name of the movie. It was based on a true story as well. Proper gaslighting, double lives, pushing the sister down the stairs so she wouldn't tell her brother that the protagonist was cheating on him, the lot. Dammit.

That aside, Tasha St. Patrick and Holly in 50 Cent's "Power" are dark triad women. Don't be fooled by the crying, dark triad women weaponise their tears as much as the average girl. You've got Cersei Lannister in game of thrones. You could say Daenerys is DT too, but she's not a very good example as they cover up all her behaviour with moral justifications to make you side with her. If you can separate the portrayal the show's writers have given her from her actions, you'll find she is pretty ruthless.

Women can feel empathy and sympathy, but they are also very good at rationalising it away when it suits them to, which makes it more malleable and less valuable than male empathy/sympathy. My article covers your question, here's the excerpt:

Due to their genetic (hormonal) propensity for emotionalism, female psychopathy is rare. In its place the average woman commits immoral acts by dissociating from reality in order to justify her actions, placating her emotions that she is “doing the right thing.” So although a woman’s behaviour can achieve a similar result to that of a psychopaths, there is an emotional component to their decision-making process. This emotion manifests through “feeling” and they have to deal with it, women tend not to have “an absence of emotion” like a stoic does through suppression but rather they are good at “coping with emotion” as in, addressing it when it comes along and rationalising it away to avoid cognitive dissonance. They do this by deluding themselves to believe in falsehoods that can be typically characterised as idealistic and biased in their perception of events. It is this mechanism which allows them to reconcile their sense of guilt with their committed atrocity. EG: blame shifting, justifying, tweaking facts. It is by merit of this mechanism that the average woman is not technically psychopathic, but seemingly capable of performing callous acts.

The average woman is very good at making herself believe delusion due to the foundation of her reasoning stemming from her current emotional state. Their current emotional composition can completely rewrite their internal narrative, allowing them to self-deceive and disassociate in a way that most men find remarkably difficult.

but what are you if you admire psychos for being better at being cruel and cold?

Fucked up, probably due to a sense of powerlessness which has permeated and recurred in their lives, a wannabe, power hungry.

Reading 40 laws, understanding "game" in every aspect of life, and understanding how things actually tend to work whether you like it or not is the essence of what this community is about if I'm understanding correctly.

Yeah the crux of the community is understanding the depths of social interaction available contrary to their taboo or awareness in the societal consciousness.

So I suppose my point is that I don't like this left hand "DT" path at all, I'd prefer to see the awakened man take a different approach.

Yes, so would I. I think it's important not to try to become DT, but to develop useful traits they have to a lesser extent in order to make you more effective. I would never recommend anyone sacrifices their humanity for the sake of DT power. Again, for most people, it's not even possible to fully actualise anyway. Becoming a psycho is not the answer to all your problems.

I can make this a lot quicker by asking you if you've read The Fountainhead: I'd rather see more Howard Rorkes than a bunch of potentially awesome people getting wrapped up in playing political grab-ass.

Dark Triad Psychopathy Q&A

So you want to know how this guy can keep his emotions in check? Is he low T? High pitch voice? Lack of hair? Neonatal features? IMO, this isn't really a dark triad question, it's the complete opposite to psychopathy. He is too governed by emotion, not less governed by it. Higher estrogen levels in the body cause increased emotionalism, which is why the stereotype of the blubbery fat dude is a thing (fat tissue stores and holds onto xenoestrogens which don't leave the body via digestion.)

He sounds like a low confidence personality, lifting would help him a lot, which is something I assume he doesn't do, as I've never known a guy who lifts to fit these characteristics due to elevated T levels. If he can pass shit tests, but still has poor inner game, he needs to work on his confidence. Lifting is the most accessible way to do that yielding the quickest and most effective results.

If someone can't help but circulate what you feed them, and they don't misrepresent it negatively or talk trash, you've found yourself a reliable repeater.

I love these people, they're good for boosting your reputation. I think it was either in a 48 laws piece I did, or a piece on SMV quite awhile back (months and months ago) where I remember discussing how you could use other people to spread positive rumours about you. Find someone who can't keep their mouth shut but has to spread gossip (women tend to fit the bill, just find one who doesn't talk shit and stick the knife in after she spreads the rumour) then pretend to confide in her positive things/things that make you look good that you don't want others knowing and watch it fly around doing the rounds. It's perfect. If you do it, you're bragging, if she does it, it gains legitimacy despite the fact it's still bullshit, it's magic. If she's hot and she's saying positive shit about you, pre-selection. Tell her you have a girlfriend but the two of you aren't ready to go public and watch her just try to resist spread around the fact you're taken, as well as trying to dig deeper who the girl is, does she know her? and etc. Oh fun and games.

I honestly thought it was a guy for the entire time. Did some reading and found out she spent a lot of her life in prison (in real life) + she's a lesbian. Makes sense. The guy who plays Omar is the one who in real life gave her an acting break on "the wire" to try and get her out of crime and doing something constructive with herself. She owes him a lot.

Buy him this as a gift: <http://www.amazon.com/The-Rational-Male-Rollo-Tomassi/dp/1492777862/> it's a book called "The Rational Male" by /u/rollo-tomassi who has a blog over at <http://therationalmale.com/>

Also get him listening to this podcast called "The Beige Phillip Show" over at <http://beigephillip.com/>, there's a lot of comedy and joking around on the show which will help him ease into the ideas, it lacks that "alpha bro" approach but still distills the same kind of wisdom that we discuss.

How to introduce him to these things? Say you "found it on the internet", started reading things and listening to that podcast and you thought he'd find it interesting. These are probably the "softest" ways to introduce someone to TRP, if he's still not receptive I'd be seriously questioning his gender identity. Being a man and being completely unreceptive to men/maleness whilst supposedly being straight is neither normal nor healthy, hopefully it doesn't come to that. A lot of men here are the products of single mothers too, and so they have to work extra hard to cultivate their masculinity, but that doesn't cause them to outright reject it, maybe it affected him more profoundly or perhaps he has other issues, I don't know him so really at this point I'm just speculating.

Best of luck to you and your boyfriend and kudos you haven't just dumped him for another guy but are actually trying to help the guy improve. I'm not sure that's entirely for unselfish reasons (maybe he's rich or you're not particularly flush with better options than him - that's not my business) but whether you guys last or not, giving him access to this information will help him endlessly for the rest of his life, so kudos for that, your intentions will serve him well.

48 laws of power isnt how to be a sociopath

Exactly, it's a guide to recognise machiavellianism and be machiavellian for people who aren't. People who think this haven't read the book, but robert got a lot of flak for writing it according to an interview he did. He reckons a minority of people who were borderline may have been pushed over the edge but he wrote it to help people recognise the power games of the successful. Saying that, that's something a machiavellian would say and public kneejerk hysteria only helped the thing sell copies. Some people were violently opposed, mostly the religious, as this book kind of shits on the 10 commandments or any religious form of morality. Definitely recommend a paperback copy or if you can afford to spend it on something of a luxury book, a hardback edition.

I would definitely prioritise low SMV guys read things like how to win friends and influence people & 48 laws of power which can help you see immediate improvements over material like the alchemist and 1984.

Edit: how to win friends and influence people and 48 laws of power are books which are at odds. Basically one encourages you to be tactical and deceptive, the other to be warm, open and rapport building. Mix and match for best results.

1984 was a fictional political prophecy for the worldwide surveillance conducted by the NSA and UK equivalent GCHQ. If you read that book now you'll think "this guy was psychic." I read the book before the scandal came to public attention thanks to Ed Snowden so when it blew up I just sat there saying "Yep, Orwell called it."

That book won't help you improve yourself but it will make you more aware of the police state that creeps up around us all. May affect your voting decisions eg: gun control. Anyone who's read 1984 and has sanity will want the right to bear arms incase their government becomes too oppressive. Shame we don't get to keep guns in England.

Really it was a tangent to something else and not a major point in and of itself. I wasn't aware it was a discredited theory and the main reason for that is the ecto/endo theory is still perpetuated on many many bodybuilding and fitness websites. In fact I've never seen anyone call bullshit on it, but I've seen plenty of fitness websites talking about how different body types need different programmes and diets to see gains/cut fat etc. When referring to body types this theory is used a lot to explain it all. I'll read up on it and see what I can find, if it was discredited I'll omit the tangent from my final article. Thanks for the heads up, glad you were open-minded enough to look past the faux pas.

Physically he didn't make her tingle, she wasn't attracted sexually or psychologically. Then she realises he's a big deal on the internet and she thinks "this guys popular", "this guys probably rich if hes got all these followers", "this guy can help me" and now despite rejecting him she does a U-TURN offering out her number and tries to build rapport by voicing her ambition/changing her inflection when before she gave no fucks and only awkwardly accepted his instagram add to make him fuckoff. A study by UTEP showed that narcissists tend to coax women into bed but psychopaths coerce women into bed.

You got the paper or know the name of the paper's authors so I can search it out? Thanks.

I think for new members that are hurting emotionally and looking to become "alpha", telling them to be narcissistic, Machiavellian, and especially psychopathic is very dangerous. First of all dark triad is such an umbrella term.

What people do is up to them, I don't take responsibility for other people's behaviour. There are vulnerable people everywhere, we cannot censor certain types of information or abstain from talking about particular areas of the human psyche just because it may affect a minority of people adversely. If a vulnerable or deranged person is interested enough in seeking out such material, with the advent of the internet they will be capable of finding it with nothing more than a simple google search. I understand the controversy around the dark triad, and I also understand the kind of fear it elicits in the ignorance of the masses, but that simply put, is not my problem. It's something I'm interested in and have experience with, so I will write about it. If [a person] finds such material distasteful, they have the option of refraining from the consumption of such material. In my opinion the onus is on the individual to account for their actions, not the writer. As an aside, the go to advice for new members is "lift, listen to patrice o neal, sort out your diet, sleep better, read books etc." not "go dark triad".

Sure dark triads in a couple studies have higher partner count. But what about relationships endurance.

Dark triad behaviour is an effective short term mating strategy, not a long term one. All long-term relationships need a trickle of beta. I'd apply the pareto principle to LTRs but flip it to be: 80% Alpha, 20% Beta.

People talk about psychopathy as if they have it nailed down as a concept.

I have insights, I don't claim to "have it nailed." Take it or leave it.

Newsflash: in the psychological literature, there is no real consensus as to what psychopathy is.

Yeah they can't even decide on whether to call it psychopathy or sociopathy. It's actually quite pathetic.

disinhibition - problems with impulse control

Sounds like narcissism more than psychopathy. A lot of the overlap between narcissism and psychopathy is likewise confused among researchers. I agree on boldness. Meanness is a sadistic, not psychopathic tendency, although again they tend to overlap. And again, if you use the word "psychopathic" as a catch-all word for the dark tetrad movie "psychopath" stereotype, you're actually referring to 4 different types of anti social behaviour when you refer to "psychopathy" and not actually psychopathy in and of itself.

It is also seen as having a large genetic influence (like most personality traits) and it is much more likely that psychopathy was present before these individuals ended up in jail.

I agree in as much as I think this describes the majority of their ilk. It's a chicken and the egg (nature vs nurture) thing in some cases though, is the person psychopathic due to an abusive upbringing or is it because of genetics? Obviously in the absence of abuse it is genetics, in the case of abuse that's where the greys begin to blur.

It can be thought of as the pathway from a child who has conduct problems with callous and unemotional traits (there is some research behind this) how do you increase dependence on you in a woman?

I'd be interested to read it.

Earn a lot when she doesn't earn very much. Run constant dread game with trickles of beta validation.

Women weaponise sex so we have to weaponise our attention/commitment/emotional openness. It's sad it's come to that but it is what it is. If she's going to withhold what you want, you have to withhold what she wants, eventually nexting her if it doesn't go anywhere constructive.

If you give her everything she wants without getting what you want from her (sex) then it's a one-sided relationship that does not incentivise her to give you what you want. Women who don't sex their partners aren't worth a relationship, it's the main reason guys even get with women and put up with their neediness, their bitchiness, their moaning and their constant insecurity, IMO anyone who puts up with this shit deserves all the blowjobs in the world. It's like the hot crazy scale, it's not if she moans or if she's needy, it's just how needy/moany she is on a 1-10, some chicks are worse than others but they're all like that.

This isn't emotional and financial charities ladies, there's no point looking sexy if you're not fucking your men.

I also seem to find that narcissism<machiavellianism<psychopathy in terms of cultivation difficulty, as you had said in an earlier post

Depends on your character. Introvert intellectuals will find machiavellianism easier to grasp than narcissism but will struggle to put it into practice due to anxiety (the opposite of fearlessness, but restriction caused by paralysing fear) and a lack of social skills/charisma. Non-intellectual extrovert types will be more narcissistic/social and thus grasp the utilisation of using ego to attract easier than they will comprehend machiavellianism beyond what comes naturally to them. It's simply a matter of individual differences.

Psychopathy's perks are generally the most difficult to cultivate out of the 3 areas. Unless you're born with a neurological defect or were abused growing up or some SSRIs/drugs messed you up or some shit psychopathy is the least natural to everybody. Not feeling anything is not normal, natural psychopaths know this so they hide in the shadows and pretend to feel stuff when they don't really give a fuck but are simply following the protocol of social contract. The closest you can get to psychopathy in the healthiest way possible is by emulating detachedness, something which can be achieved through mindful meditation, basically, stoicism. The fearlessness of psychopathy is what a combination of stoicism and meditation has always aimed to emulate. Having control over the self allows you to improve your productivity and better deal with others.

In my opinion you're far better off not being a natural when it comes to the dark triad. Naturals have no on/off switch for their behaviours. A natural psychopath cannot choose to feel even when they want to feel, they know no better, they are what they are. As someone who's mastered stoicism, meditation and emotional mastery you can choose when it is appropriate to ignore emotions and when it isn't. As a student of the dark triad you have far more freedom than a natural who is literally chained to the limits of their nature. Unlike students, they can't switch. I do not envy naturals at all, they're powerful but they exist in their own personal hell.

Another way to "engage the hamster" is when you want a girl to send you nude selfies you've dated awhile. If she's the type who won't send you those pics you say "well who would you rather I jerk off to, you or some porn girl" activates her vanity/insecurity and jealousy boom in come the pics. Works best on shy suzie "good girl" types.

If she's too embarrassed to take selfies you have a free pass to take the pics yourself next time you fuck as long as you don't chicken out/forget. Very easy to guilt trip resistance with "duty as gf" and praise cooperation with

"you're better than porn girls" "see you're a good girl" and bla bla. You're just giving hamster feed to get what you want you're not actually battling the thing, but encouraging it to work for you. All hamster feed is a play on emotions because women are dominated by their emotions.

Robin Williams' divorce rape

2 upvotes · 12 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Well correlation does not imply causation, we can but only speculate whether divorce caused his problems or whether his problems caused divorce - its a cliché chicken and the egg type deal. If sources close to him say his divorce was causing him distress, who are we to refute that? Do we possess sufficient evidence that can counter the assertions of those who knew him? Of course not, none of us knew him. The body of evidence (the testimony of those who knew him best) would suggest he killed himself due to depression caused by yet another divorce (timing is everything - considering his current wife apparently filed a few days prior)

Alcohol and cocaine can cause dependence but not depression, they do not cause depression, they are used to medicate depression/anxiety and some people are so depressed without them they need these substances to be functional, alcohol is a sedative and cocaine a stimulant, they nullify pain they do not cause it (at least not directly, but how you behave when using them may cause pain to others.) They are not hallucinogenics, hallucinogenics are what cause mental illness/schizophrenia via hallucinations with things like DMT and shrooms and in some people, weed (depends on your physiology and the strain of your weed you're smoking, there are hundreds.)

It seems there is more testimony to suggest that he was traumatised because he was getting divorced and not getting divorced because he was traumatised (and in that case if we are to avoid casting any blame on his wife, then why is his wife not supporting him in his time of need - oh that's right it proves an RP concept: Briffault's Law) but seeing as none of us actually knew him and plenty of groups will try to co-opt his death to somehow serve their own agenda as his death is basically viral at the moment, we'll never know the truth. Personally I don't think it's far-fetched to say a third divorce did him in, the article I linked you to says divorce is responsible for male suicide and it's not the only source/publication making such claims. Wilfully claiming the contrary without any evidence is worse than claiming what is being claimed here by OP with merely circumstantial evidence.

Main takeaway: The struggles of life are essentially fortuna and can only be overcome by virtue, however virtue may only be obtained when one is subjected to high enough levels of chaotic energy from fortuna. It complements the informal adage around here that is "alphas are born in the fiery pits of hell, do not become complacent."

Seductive/Sexual power - Aesthetic attraction (sexual), charm (psychological equivalent)

Women and honesty....

2 upvotes · 3 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

So I have been talking to a couple of chicks and they have both said they admire honesty.

They mean they admire boldness. When a chick says "honesty" in a sexual capacity she is attracted to something that will offend her or otherwise upset the status quo in a way she would never have the courage to do if she wasn't having an emotional meltdown (to basically buck the trend or go against the herd). A man who says "fuck you" to the herd is either crazy or powerful, to a woman there's no difference, the ability to say "fuck you" is power in and of itself because she is so hopelessly dependent on social approval and could never say "fuck you" to a social circle without having another one to branch swing to, men take risks women play it safe, "risky behaviour" is therefore considered sexy and masculine.

This is also why a man who isn't losing his shit emotionally but nevertheless retains that same courage to say whatever the fuck is on his mind shows boldness and audacity and a certain "bad boy" element of being unfazed. It's also a great way of showing outcome independence, knowing that what you say won't be popular but saying it anyway demonstrates confidence, courage and a lack of need for the validation of others, because although what you say will get you acknowledged, it will bring down a world of protest and bullshit. This is what women LOVE, not only are you not boring because you create drama for her to emotionally feed off, but the source of said drama is an attractive attitude and demeanour: honest arrogance and the ability to maintain that arrogance under pressure. (hold a high-power frame) so basically, be an asshole and maintain frame when people give you shit for being an asshole. Women want to fuck your audacity because they admire the inherent masculinity that such rebelliousness embodies. They are pained to admit it, rationalise they love nice guys and yet for some reason, always fall for "this type of guy."

I have observed these girls fail to be as honest with how they feel or what they want as I am.

What women feel and want quite literally changes from moment to moment, they are transient, whilst men tend to always be looking ahead or behind, but are rarely in the moment because they are always trying to logic shit, women tend to exist in the moment, dictated by their stimulus and the immediate emotional response that creates rather than "logic puzzles of the mind which take one out of the moment" this means what her opinion on something is now won't mean shit in 20 minutes when she feels a way that undermines the rationalisation of her previous opinion. Basically: ignore what women say, watch what they do, even the most educated and convincing women will betray her rational mind for her feelings in a way that will shock you as being so counter-intuitive to everything you thought she embodied. Women are slaves to their feelings far more than we are, and their opinions are based on feelings and therefore, ultimately easily discredited, verging on almost worthless. For the sake of an LTR her opinion is important as much as her level of self-awareness solipsism allows for, but if you're not tied down to her, her opinions should mean practically zilch to you.

Sounds like you have plenty of clout to put a stop to this rather than simply being the stereotypical powerless beta whose girlfriend has lost respect for him, doesn't give a fuck any more and wants to go and whore it up on some strange dick. Go with option 1 and frame it as you not trusting her cousins, stick to your guns, don't buy into the fairness bullshit.

Alternative: play your own dread game, make her think you're going to be partying it up back home, seeing other girls and having a good time but make it seem totally innocent and spin her own bullshit about "fairness" back at her if she decries it. It's passive aggressive as fuck but there's no right or wrong here, simply whatever you think will work best for your situation is what the situation calls for. If she values the LTR she will yield, if she doesn't or is being fed on some girl power bullshit by her cousins she will call your bluff, be prepared for either likelihood, you need to remain OUTCOME INDEPENDENT here and mentally prepare yourself for the worst.

Freedom.

Without order is chaos, the lack of nuclear families is a good example. One could argue traditional western societies were too morally structured whilst modern day societies lack any moral structure. In terms of economics, deregulation is running AMOK.

Equality.

The idea that some people aren't better than others, even though economic inequalities rise, the idea we are all equal in worth is repeatedly inculcated into mainstream thought. How is the guy on a cheap internet connection on the red pill who barely affords his rent and is skinny as fuck equal to the guy on the redpill who lives in a condo and is jacked? Equality my ass.

Democracy.

The idea that everyone is intelligent and researched enough to form their own parties and/or cast votes to elect others parties. The assumption that they have meaningful rather than populist opinions in their voting choices. Look at Obama, he got voted in by black folks everywhere just because "he's black" (when he's mixed) so the truth is they voted in him because "he wasn't white" (which is very easily construed as racist) Obamas election was just a popularity contest with good marketing/PR appealing to people's desire via racial lines, there was nothing educated or informed about so many of the votes that got cast. Essentially, democracy applies to the lowest common denominator. When an idiot has the same voting power as an erudite man you have yourself an inherently flawed system.

America.

Imperialist superpower, always invading someone or sticking their nose in civil wars that are nowhere near their borders (eg: USA should give no fucks about Ukraine, Ukraine is no where near USA, Ukraine borders Russia, makes sense Russia give fucks about Ukraine) USA essentially took over from the British Empire, it only has a few islands formally colonized per se (like Puerto Rico and Guam) with Hawaii actually incorporated as a state (and if you read the history on how Hawaii went from an independent country to a US state it's not pretty, they used to have their own monarchy) but despite a lack of 19th/20th century style obvious colonisation it puppets other states through CIA bullshit and UN sanctions (UN = playground for US diplomatic might). FYI: I like america despite its flaws and its less than appealing foreign policy, government foreign policy does not represent the population, govt does whatever the fuck it wants. Population says "get the fuck out of afghanistan" and what they do? Stay there 10 years. This point overlaps with democracy, who really knows better, the majority of society or elected officials? Who has the most to gain from the war, the population or the government? That last question isn't as clear cut as you think it is. Think oil prices.

Native Americans (who were brutally oppressed by the white man).

No opinion/knowledge of.

Bigotry, segregation, discrimination.

Bigotry comes from a combination of ignorance and moral self-righteous arrogance, it is pretty abhorrent. Segregation (people are thinking blacks and whites on buses when they see this word) can be beneficial, such as how you have a gents and ladies toilets/locker rooms etc, or how smart kids are bundled into one class and dumb kids into another. Discrimination is unavoidable, you base it on the facts you have available to you. One guy is fat and 5'2 and one guy is muscular and 6'2? You're going to assume the muscular tall guy will make a better warehouse worker than the short fat guy, again, this overlaps with the idea of equality, we're not all equal because to be equal we'd need the same skills at the same level in all areas. "Equal but different" is an oxymoron, you cannot be equal in worth/value BUT different, it's hard to measure value in some areas as its subjective but THERE IS ALWAYS hierarchy, you are either leading or following, giving orders or taking orders, compromise can blur the lines, but there is never ever total equality, that is an idealist, perfectionist myth at best and a society destabilising one at worst.

Almost all of white history (except in wars in which white people were fighting white people).

When UK/USA discovered and invented most of the major technology within the past couple of hundred years this is an unfair statement. White history is GOOD and BAD like ALL HISTORY. Without this tech we wouldn't even have the computer invented by a white dude, the internet invented by a white dude and the electricity and wiring to power it discovered and made workable by white dudes.

Racism, sexism, homophobia, transphobia.

Racism isn't always bad, but it usually thought of as bad. If you say black people are great basketball players or asians are great at math, you're being racist.

Sexism is saying women are weaker than men physically (which is almost always true but in the case of rare exceptions) sexism is discrimination based on gender, a lot of these truths are based on biological differences, but the left will always tell you they are merely cultural differences which is why SRSers try to mock the other perspective by referring to it as "biotroofs", by using retarded spelling to explain another viewpoint, it makes that viewpoint seem stupid without even considering it.

homophobia

People have to be "educated" to tolerate/accept or even like gays, try explaining to a kid someone has two daddies or two mummies and they will be confused and "have to get used to it." Only those who consider themselves homosexual like/want/support this lifestyle, nobody else want's anything to do with it, I think the majority of heterosexual society rather not hear anything about gays or have anything to do with them, tolerance of the culture to be upheld at best, but allowing the worship of the culture or allowing this small demographic to influence society as a whole? No - most people seem pretty dead set against that. If you have alternative life choices, settle for tolerance, nobody outside of your group is ever going to LOVE your minority difference or worship/embrace it in the way that you do and nobody is going to feel like society needs to change to accommodate the needs of the few.

The same as with homophobia but with the fear that the chick you find hot is really a dude and thus you're

"cheated" into attraction, the idea that you are deceived by their sex-change and they aren't really who you think they are. Extra criticism: disproportionate amounts of men turning into women rather than women turning in to men. Blames: feminism socially, but more importantly on a biological level: xenoestrogens in modern materials and the food supply. Yeah that's right, eating organic food will actually make you more manly than eating GM crops or battery/hormone induced animals because organic is void of the xenoestrogens contained within hormones/antibiotics given to animals and the pesticides put on fruit and veg. This also explains why testosterone levels have dropped globally over the past 30 years in all age ranges, man-made estrogen acting chemicals have contaminated the food supply. The environment itself has become more hostile to men, shit I've even heard of stories where rivers have contained fish with two sets of genitalia.

Nationalism.

The idea that deriving identity from one tribe/nation state is a bad thing and that we should all live in multicultural ethnically diverse secular melting pots where there is no real cultural identity but simply imported cultures from all over the world living side by side, which is then spun to say "that's what makes an american/australian/canadian/englishman" (basically that any country with a white majority and/or indigenous population accepts everyone of every non-white ethnic and non-christian religious identity and that's what an american/australian etc is) That an american/australian etc is nothing independent of that, this is something that will only grow in sentiment as more mexicans/south americans flood the US, africans flood the EU, eastern europeans flood western europe, asians flood australia and etc. What you notice here is everyone is fleeing to prosperous white majority countries and rather than adapt to the local culture, demands the local culture adapts to them - this is specifically the case in Europe with non-European immigration.

In relation to the last point, my favourite clusterfuck is Islam. Try and talk about Islam without starting up a shitstorm. It's the perfect topic area for trolls, pretty shit for anyone who wants a serious discussion on the religion/political ideology that Islam is. My favourite rebuttals: "you haven't even read the quran!", "you've misinterpreted the quran!", "Islam is a religion of peace!"

Women are intrinsically emotionally abusive within power struggles. Relationships are power struggles, a 2 person tug-of-war if you will. Dominate or be dominated, this equality shit does not work, if you have an "equal relationship" what is happening is that the person in control has created the illusion to the less dominant party that everything is fair, may have even given them some form of autonomy in something fairly non-consequential as to convince them of their fairness, but ultimately, the illusion painter is the one in control.

Think of these women who say "we're both equal in our relationship", what that really means is, she's in control and she tells the man what to think and how to think and is very proficient in convincing him that what she wants is "what's best for the relationship" and therefore his compliance is deemed as "fair" because she will rationalise if it wasn't fair then he never would have agreed (when the truth is he agrees because he's mentally weaker and less manipulative than she is) likewise the inverse is whenever he wants something she doesn't approve of, she convinces him that it would be bad for the relationship, they "talk about it" and he yields. Again she rationalises if it wasn't equal or fair then he wouldn't have yielded, again he is simply incapable of out manoeuvring her in argument/decision making, she is ruling the relationship through a veneer of rationalism and fairness, but will turn to emotional jedi mind tricks to have the monopoly on what is ultimately defined as and perceived as fair within the parameters of said relationship.

"We need to talk" translated into logic means: I have shit I want changing and if I can't brainwash you into accepting my terms then I'm going to gaslight you, destroy your confidence, and make you feel like a piece of shit. I'll do this by playing a mind game where I convincingly sell you my version of events to make you feel guilty and once you feel guilt you will then willingly accept all responsibility for my shitty actions absolving me of any guilt I otherwise would have felt, and once that is achieved I will find you so incredibly pathetic in your inability to fight against my emotional abuse I will self-righteously dump you, having convinced the both of us that I was the victim and you were an evil undeserving cunt that got everything he deserved but didn't even deserve me to begin with (a woman scorned rewrites history which is tantamount to gaslighting.)

Arguing with women is simple, whoever can make the other person feel guilty first wins, logic has absolutely nothing to do with it, women are neither fair nor rational in debate, emotions will dictate behaviour, so opt to employ guilt, it's what women do, by doing this you're poetically using their own weapons against them.

How a woman behaves when you break up is the truest reflection of her character in terms of what she is capable of. That's when you'll discover the limits of her power. Expect emotional terrorism.

How do I incorporate TRP truths for a job interview?

2 upvotes · 23 July 2014 · /r/askTRP

Just by being socially savvy you can gain a leg up on the competition when going for a job by showing off (or painting an illusion of) high social value. How do you do that? By passing their shit tests. A job interview like any interview is merely a formalised collection of shit tests to deem how "suitable" you are for the employers needs.

You'd be surprised how much the person likes you factors into whether they hire or not, FYI: I wouldn't recommend the 48 laws of power for something as rudimentary as an interview, sure it helps in a few ways, but it's overkill, "learn how to make friends and influence people" is far more relevant. CHARM and shit test passing is what gets you jobs with a bit of manipulation, 48 laws strategy absent of charm is not guaranteed to score you the job. Charm is the excess of feel good pouring outwards, it is the ultimate manifestation of confidence, if you have charm you'll be difficult to resist.

I'll have an article on this later on but I don't know if it'll come in time for when you have your job interview. Best of luck anyhow.

Women & The Death of Femininity

2 upvotes · 21 July 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I feel like the article is missing any basis in modern psychology.

It's creative prose based on my own opinions, observations and experiences. It is written in a "thinking out loud" kind of philosophical style. I do not hold it as evidence of anything or even a reputable source, I hold it as the creative product of my own philosophising. What you take from it is up to you, I'm simply sharing my thoughts in the way that thousands of philosophers before me have done.

Women who grow up in wretched hardship learn very quickly to find a strong men for protection/adopt feminine traits to survive in the world; not just boyfriends, but friends, fathers, brothers, older women, or even really tough woman of their peers.

I agree on the point about searching out men to provide for them, I disagree that this makes them more feminine. In the example of women raised by single mothers (which is incredibly common) the mothers corrupt their daughters femininity by giving them negative opinions about men as a whole, causing these young girls to be bitter at a young age and thus "masculinise" in their disposition. Searching for men to provide for them is a biological instinct that is heightened when there is an absent father, effectively searching for the father that they never had, but this doesn't necessarily make them feminine.

In America, the women who grew up poor are only the women I bother with; I actively ignore wealthy women, as they are usually too spoiled to be people.

I completely agree with this, people generally not just women from lower socioeconomic backgrounds tend to be less narcissistic and thus easier to connect with, but just because they are more approachable it does not necessarily make them less bitter or more feminine, these at least to me, are separate issues. For example, I'd generalise a girl from the suburbs is going to be more feminine than a girl from the projects, although a girl from the projects will be wiser/easier to get on with, the girl from the suburbs is less rugged from her life experience.

Incidentally, the "Masculinization" the article seems to be talking about perfectly describes the Dark Triad in Women;

Not really, read my Lucifer's daughter article (if you haven't already) to read a thorough description of dark triad women.

So like, the fact that Roparker is married and we are giving him shit for a successful marriage makes me question that Red Pill isn't just about talking sh-t about women, but rather figuring out how they can be positive instead.

I don't know what this has to do with anything. If he has a successful marriage then hats off to him, just because something is unlikely doesn't make it impossible. Ironically if he's in a happy marriage he doesn't really need TRP which begs the question why he's here to begin with.

Thanks. I do significant reading, no significant psych background. Studied psych for 2 years pre-university level but would not attribute it to my understanding of "how humans think and behave", for the most part I found it to be an interesting albeit entirely unpragmatic subject. An ex had a psych degree and was incredibly machiavellian, I learnt a lot from her directly and indirectly.

You can learn more about people from the 48 laws of power within a week than a psychology class will teach you in 1 or even 2 years. Psych as a subject has a lot of academic fluff in it. Someone said it gets better at the postgraduate level (so masters and up) but if you're really into understanding the human mind that's a long time to wait to get to the good stuff. You're looking at 3-4 years bachelors level of drivel to begin with, add years on if you study pre-university. From my experience it was all too focused on ethics and research methodology, ethics and research methodology make up a huge part of psychology and they are both boring as fuck and teach you very little about the human mind but are more so "the framework and rules of conduct of which within psychological research can take place in."

Some of the studies were interesting, but I don't see how knowing that a taxi driver pre-GPS days' hippocampus would grow larger to accommodate his job really helps me or the average guy better understand others. The same goes for knowing cortisol causes stress or that oxytocin is a bonding hormone, these are useful little facts to know but not immediately applicable and thus, helpful.

LTR Game - Why We Need a New RedPill Sub

2 upvotes · 3 July 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Female dread game (not necessarily RPW) is withdrawing sex/affection without any verbal explanation, the male equivalent is withdrawing commitment/attention.

Most of the "tales of marriage" i've seen here that have "repaired the marriage" have involved a guy who was getting none and he was miserable and his wife would open disrespect him, he started working out and being more emotionally distant, taking extra care of himself whilst feeding in less to her concerns, he would flirt with other women when he went out and realised his own options, eventually she'd notice this and then she would begin to initiate. Dread game. Dread game is a component of LTR game, the rest is all "decision making", "hold frame", "beta game" and don't go poor/get sick, basically maintain your SMV.

A lot of general TRP (push/pull for instance) can be applied to an LTR as "keeping the spark alive" you're just changing the context, instead of flirting and then withdrawing attention with the chick at the bar you're doing it with your SO.

If they are welcoming to the new guy, it's not bad. If they ignore him, then it's quite a bit more intimidating.

May be the case in high-trust homogenous cultures, but multicultural societies tend to be low-trust because people do not share a common culture, this means more ambivalence towards strangers and a less hospitable demeanour.

I can't imagine anyone in England "welcoming a new guy" into the gym unless the new guy already knew people in the gym before going there.

If you ever want to be taken seriously you have to play at the difficulty level in life that men play at, a lot of guys will never take the average woman seriously knowing she plays life on easy mode, exploiting her sexuality to get ahead and society itself being more predisposed to empathise with and support her. Women have a lot of privileges they take for granted in society they don't even realise they have (makes that "check your privilege" crap the feminists bleat seem VERY VERY ironic), to a man it's distastefully ironic that those who get the most support are the most vocal about their struggles, some would even say it is revolting. It's like a rich guy moaning to a poor guy his stock portfolio isn't returning the dividends he expected, the poor guy working as a wage slave is just not going to give a fuck, he will feel no sympathy for you whatsoever because while you moan "the system isn't giving me what I expect" he's busting his ass on a day to day basis just to get by. It's fucked up how much power women have and how the system is abused to literally strip men of their assets/net worth without any evidence and without any proof of the supposed allegations which facilitate said financial theft. Feminist legal statute has got to be unconstitutional. I don't see how any guy burned like that could ever trust a bitch ever again, if that had happened to me, I wouldn't, call me bitter all you like, that shit fucks with your soul in a way that makes a bit of passive aggressive shaming seem utterly negligible in effect. What guy is going to give a fuck about some cunt saying "NAWALT" and "you're just bitter" when you've been done like that? You're not going to give a fuck are you? Shame Mark once shame on you, shame Mark twice and it's shame on him. Moral of the story: we're entitled to learn from our mistakes, trusting women in a society where they have all the legal power is signing your own death warrant. History shows societies that gave women equal or superior rights devolved into cesspits and ruin, eg: rome.

Fuck equality, it's bullshit, it doesn't work. The "liberals" are in denial about this, but the signs of this failure are absolutely everywhere. Rampant divorce and the break-up of the family leads to the destruction of a society. How do these changes come about? When women get too much power. Truth is a bitch, fuck, I'd love to give women equal rights and not have it fuck up society, the fact of the matter is it's never been managed EVER, it doesn't work. How many civilizations will have to destroy themselves from the inside out for humanity to finally accept that treating women as equals to men simply DOES NOT work? There needs to be a fair degree of control over female sexuality by society, as well as a legal system they cannot stand to benefit from in order to keep them even remotely moral. How it is right now just makes it open season for women to parasitise different men, clean them out and move onto the next one, all the while shaming men "who are too afraid to commit." Men have no such recourse to clean out women financially, all they can do is try to keep them at arms length and refuse to commit as a defensive measure. Damn this is a fucked up state of affairs we live in. Anyone who thinks this works and/or is good for society in the long run is a fucking idiot.

free thinkers who also happen to be extremely DT can basically "psycho their way in" to a position of power.

Free thinking independent men need to forge their own path, society does not accept them and does not want to give their ideas a platform unless those ideas develop upon whatever the prevailing social narrative of the time is.

The Dangers of Isolation: Why Men Need Other Men

I just find it humorous how your attempt to invalidate my point has you pulling the free masons out of your ass, a secret (ironically well known) order that probably embodies less than a tenth of the male population, if not even that, and then furthermore say the reason men don't congregate together is because they're scared (because why blame a systemic ideology? Men are just pussies!) Men become scared after isolation, we're discussing how they become isolated, they are isolated for numerous reasons, feminism plays a significant part in that. Your analysis is short-sighted and dim (or disingenuous if you are not dim) at best.

Hope you used her for what shes worth, a series of pump and dumps culminating in you denying her the relationship she'll eventually push for. Someone who jumps ship when the going is tough but wants to board again once you're fine sailing is not worth getting attached to or forming any real loving feeling or attachment for whatsoever. A person like that has proven themselves disloyal and self-interested. Their only worth is to be used, they will just break your heart again if you fall into the trap of loving them again (assuming that you loved her the first time, of course.)

we all know logic is not really feminism's forte.

They're all jumping on the hype and using it as a pretence to attack masculinity and bolster their "this is why we need feminism" rhetoric. What you're seeing right now is the ideological hivemind at full momentum, a kid with aspergers/narcissistic personality disorder kills a couple of people and that's a good opportunity to spin the tragedy into something that can bolster feminist activism. We'll blame all men for what a psycho did. You've got to love how the misandry hides in plain sight, the association he is a man that hated women and therefore MRA/PUA/TRP and men in general are to blame. You've got to love how they instantly jump to paint the masculine as the evil boogeyman rather than actually do their research and discover the man suffered from diagnosed mental illnesses. Fuck that, the truth doesn't serve them, we'll blame misogyny instead and use it as a platform to put men down and preach with all our indignant cries! Its sick and pathetic, feminism and its followers know no low, and ironically they think they're justified in their idiocy. Feminists are nothing more than useful idiots who justify misandry through a lense of victimhood.

I sense a strong undercurrent of cynicism regarding Feminism

It's the same here. Feminism lowers the quality of women and serves as gender apartheid. The difference is the more advanced members accept this and are aware of it and don't bleat off about it all the time whilst the newbies and MRAs do not shut the fuck up expressing their distaste for feminism. Really its a process of catharsis, by mocking/exposing feminism they help to get back some of the power feminism took from them in their lives, which is what lead them to TRP to begin with. This is an essential part of the process and many TRPers are avid anti-feminists too as we disagree with their beliefs, feminism = a blue pill ideology. However when you've "been red" for awhile seeing the constant feminist bashing does get old, no question about it.

"Love," aka linguistic Bullshit

2 upvotes · 5 May 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I think this is a form of the argument from ignorance fallacy.

Definitely possible, however a lack of understanding of biochemistry does not answer how a full understanding would benefit one's subjective experiences of love.

I fail to see how fully comprehending love from a viewpoint of biochemistry aids the human condition, as in, measuring it and quantifying it does nothing to benefit us. At the very best it can dispel a few misconceptions, but it is not enriching or insightful. It enlightens us academically but not psychologically, as beings bound to emotion it does not enrich our experience or help us on our way in our lives.

All our personal journeys are emotional, understanding our physical composition and how it creates our mental composition does not fully communicate the nature of our mentalities. Lets use the metaphor of a box. Science explains what the box looks like, why the box looks the way it does and describes the box down to the atom. None of that communicates what it is like to live as a box. Science cannot actually rationalise how you would feel or what you would experience as a box. It can attempt to make observations about what it SUSPECTS being a box is like, based on the laws of physics, but all this rationalisation fails to communicate the knowledge that simply becoming a box and being a box would impart you with. Basically you can science the shit out of anything and it still won't be able to tell you what it's like to experience something, in fact, by trying to be objective, it actively fails to explain subjectivism and thus is incredibly poor at explaining "a state of being" with relatable accuracy. As non omnipresent creatures, we are inherently subjective and rely on subjective viewpoints to form understanding, the scientific viewpoint thus helps very little when forming opinions on things like love which are inherently entirely subjective experiences.

Do you understand where I'm coming from? I don't reject science I merely advocate that it is one part of the puzzle, whilst scientists like to believe that science IS the puzzle, that there is nothing beyond science and that science is wholly encompassing. There is an arrogance in science I have only observed in one other area, religion. Both try to explain everything, of course science is far more critical. I believe science is limited by the concept of infinity, that is, there is always a level of depth one can explore, there is always a question brought about by a new answer, and the quest for knowledge never ends, science is detached and always in a state of transition and thus lacks the ability to be definitive because its concern is with "being correct", it is always self-doubting, we need definitives, even if they're wrong, to process how to live, leaving everything open-ended creates indecision and confusion which is not conducive for life as a human. Science raises more questions than it gives answers. Science is truly a marvel, I do not however comprehend how it can help us understand love as it seems to run counter to the very notion of love within its personality.

Science throughout history has been in a constant state of being incorrect, but people believe that there was merit to a theory until disproven, it's one big game of trial-and-error with lots of politics thrown in along the way. Essentially scientific understanding is an abstract understanding, not an understanding truthful to the experience induced when in such a state brought upon by said chemicals. Basically, science tries to explain things as if you were non-human, it does not explain them from a human viewpoint, but that of a third party observational entity. TRP is a pragmatist philosophy, I fail to see how biochemical explanations of love will be of any utility to our everyday lives, it's this lack of utility that makes it almost irrelevant to what we talk about and what our aims are. You can go prove all the chemical reactions and physical processes, but what understanding will that bring us? It won't help us understand love, it will help us understand what our bodies do when we feel love, that's not the same thing. We're human, beliefs define our perceptions, understanding the laws of physics and the secrets of the human body will do little to change beliefs based upon personal experiences, it just gives you an alternative way to rationalise them.

Even the scientific explanation of what a belief constitutes would be utterly underwhelming at communicating the true personality of a belief, it would explain it in such a perverse way that as a human you can but shrug at it and say "OK, how does this help me then?"

There is a large disconnect between science and the human experience and the paradox is that it is humans which are trying to see things as if they are not human in order to better understand the world, my assertion is that in the case of love, you actually make it even harder to understand the idea and don't bring any illumination to its complexity whatsoever when you rationalise with the objectivity of biochemical findings rather than the subjectivity of psychological ones.

It is what it is. He can't help but feel that way. It's actually incredibly interesting to observe. People expect you to be something when you're very tall, they assume you're a cunt and you will kick their ass, they feel genuine animal fear. Height is like skin colour or attractiveness... you get stereotyped. People who don't know me are always almost awkward in my presence and I'm not in the business of making people feel comfortable because my couple of inches closer to the sky activates their limbic system and has them feeling awkward. Other tall guys will vouch for me, people are irrationally awkward around you when they don't know you. Small guys fucking hate your guts. Everyone else fears you unless you do shit to comfort them. Its fucked up but what the fuck isnt.

I feel compelled to use my unique combination of genetics to see how much of an impact I make on society, one way or the other. Maybe that's a compulsion that not everybody feels is power a means to an end, or the end goal itself?

I can only answer for myself: both, but weighing more towards a means for a goal rather than being a goal in and of itself. The hierarchy of needs never stops, if you have the power to effect change you will infinitely be fine-tuning in the quest for perfection, assuming perfection is an unattainable ideal this means an infinite need for power, either to strive for perfection or to maintain what you have achieved.

If the power goes, the experience ends and the hegemony over whatever you have accomplished fades (eg: business/relationships) the exception to this if it is something particularly groundbreaking is perhaps a literary piece or something non-tangible such as a set of ideas or a book which can stand the test of time and not be surpassed by someone else's ideas (eg: plato/socrates have still not been surpassed, neither has machiavelli)

This question is very much so a chicken and the egg kind of question, you could easily replace the word power with money and get the same answer. Ultimately it's about freedom and living life on your own terms, accomplishing your own desires. We're in a world of competing desires, only the strongest get to enact their will.

Upgrading a plate if she loses weight?

2 upvotes · 20 April 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Well really there are different types of threats, there are explicit threats which is as you say mean dark triad things like violence (physical) and gaslighting (mental). Then there are implicit threats, implying to her you have other options/soft dread, flirting with other women, spending time on your phone, seeming a little distant, not being as available etc etc. The implied way is to communicate with her in her own natural language, the feminine 'speech' pattern, the subtext.

Dread can be used as a form of negative incentive, so there's some overlap between dread being a threat and dread being an incentive, in essence it's both and being the mixture of both it has all the negative pangs of fear with all the feel good of reward "I get to keep my man!" "I feel better about my body!" etc. If she can't be fucked to lose weight for him she's either incredibly lazy or just not that committed to him anyway.

I'd use dread game on her, but if he can't be outcome independent eg: not give a shit if he loses her/she doesn't lose weight then mentally he's already losing the game, he's grown too attached to his plate.

It's like they realise they're lazy slobs so they try to hustle everyone that it's hard work and everyone supports the circlejerk not wanting to offend or have some pointless confrontation over what its like to be a mother. Having a hard time emotionally (eg: raising a kid alone because you kept some alpha seed) doesn't mean you're doing a hard job, it means you're weak, stupid and a burden on the taxpayer. We all have responsibilities, its funny how the biggest responsibility the average woman will ever have is made into a big fucking deal.

Some of these bitches need to woman up and take this shit in their stride, you have a kid, you become a mother be a good fucking mother and do your job well rather than bitch about it, otherwise shit, you shouldn't be a mother. You choose to have a kid, that's on you. No sympathy for your mistakes or regrets. Now raise your fucking kid to be less of a disappointment than you are. Once you have a kid there is no escaping your decision, you have to embrace it to make the best of it. Whining how you have such a hard time of it only makes the kid feel like a burden and makes you seem like a detestable bitch.

It's all but clear why kids raised by single mothers have much higher risk factors for failure eg: crime/mental health/education they have to put up with bullshit like this on a day to day basis. Ah you're broaching on the concept of "brain drain" where the richest countries get all the worlds brightest people.

A strong immigration policy which is good for a country is one that discriminates between levels of education, wealth and marketable skills among prospective immigrants. Unskilled mass immigration is what damages a country with high crime, high welfare expenditure, lack of cultural assimilation and etc. The biggest indicator of whether an immigrant can be productive or not is their skillset and how much wealth they already have. Will they be a net contributor or net claimant to and from that country's national system?

Immigrants are typically not only some of the wealthiest, but some of the poorest people in society too, naturally if you have a policy of hiring skilled immigrants they're going to be wealthier as you're handpicking the upper/middle/skilled classes to join your ranks, if you do not discriminate between skilled and unskilled you get a lot of people who have little to offer moving over simply to claim welfare and "bleed the country dry" for a lack of better turn of phrase.

UK mass immigration comes in the form of Jamaican immigration in the 60's (mostly unskilled) then pakistani immigration (mostly unskilled, some skilled) and then since the 2004 EU accession mostly Eastern European (predominantly Polish and Lithuanian immigration). We could talk about immigration for ages, but that would be a huge digression from the original topic.

Once she had the dick for the first time and found "how nice it was" as soon as she left the guy who gave her the first dicking within about a week she was getting strange.

No I value logic over emotions, I hate people who need drama just to function, they're the opposite type of person to what I am. Stoicism is a cornerstone of RP philosophy. Men need their anger to process injustice and fuel self-improvement, but it shouldn't get to a point where this anger defines who you are and causes you to be irrational/hateful purely because that's all you've come to know.

Do you come here and post links/comments denigrating women sleeping around because you want to as well but can't?

No I believe women sleeping around is bad for society. The 80-20 thing is bad for society, very bad. I'm a philosophical character. I do see a deviation in RPer's in that, the successful men here who are in the 20% of men getting diversified regular poon tend to ignore how bad for society that is and say "become the 20%" to the betas, as if everyone can be in the top 20% (fallacy), sexed up men tend to give less of a shit about men who aren't and get addicted to their ego, in the sense that, they have all this power over women that other men don't. This ego becomes a huge part of their character and changes their personality, it causes bigotry towards men who don't get laid a lot because they can't relate to the problem (anymore.)

If every man in society improved himself 2 SMV points, you'd still have men outside the 20%, you'd still have the 20% being SMUG and looking down on the 80% saying "I love sluts I get to try out so much different pussy" and the 80% would be bitching how women are whores. The fact of the matter is, it's like capitalism, if you are going to hoard all the sexual wealth and not have some means of redistribution, the majority will always be pissed whilst the "elite" will enjoy the status quo, blaming the average man for his own failures in order to justify his own insanely disproportionate amount of sexual access.

Do you come here and shit on happily married guys because they've found that happiness that you desire?

Nah I don't believe in leaving yourself that financially vulnerable via the only contract which can be violated at any time without penalty but if you wanna do it and you're happy for at least the time being, fuck it, good luck to you, enjoy it while it lasts. I think it's a really poor/dumb move rationally speaking, but jealousy is a weak trait. I do not allow myself to be jealous. Often I am not jealous, and when I am (of anything) I detect it and suppress it, I do not act on it or give any indication of it to anyone.

Do you come here and tut-tut up and coming playboys because they're succeeding where you aren't?

No they're inspiration to up your own sexual game, on a macro scale I don't think it's good a very few men are hoarding up all the pussy, but from the micro "be selfish and enjoy the decline point of view" you can learn a lot from these people. I have conflicts in dissonance here that I cannot reconcile, I recognise my own power I can exert over women and like the control, and at the same time do not like what a few percentage of men doing this to the women in society causes for the rest of men. This is the carnal/primal/testosterone limbic mind vs. the rationalism of my neo cortex.

Are you using your time on this sub to better yourself or are you just stroking your outrage boner?

I'm not outraged I'm in that acceptance stage where I just find women perpetually disappointing, I accept they are disappointing, I'm not angry about it. I'm of the "well that's how they are" kinda state.

TRP is more than about sex/game to me, to me game is the icing on the cake of a successful life. I don't practice it religiously because I have better ways to spend my time, as in, I get more done doing chasing my own goals rather than chasing poon.

TRP is about so much more than game/pua, it's easy to see which users used to lurk /r/seduction because their focus is almost entirely game orientated and fair enough, but to me they are like the opposite of MGTOWs, they don't shut up about closing/getting laid it seems to permeate their mindsets. To me people like that are boring whether they succeed at it or not, you need more about yourself than the hobby of pulling tail. Sure it's fun, I get that, I've had immense fun doing it myself, but I don't let it become my personality. I think successful rpers/puas get addicted to their own charm/getting women and it becomes a huge part of who they are. To me that's a skillset to be used, but not immersed in. I don't want to become casanova, I just want to be able to hold my own out there and flip attraction switches when the moment is opportune. I'm of the belief/idea quality people (including women) enter your life through mass self-improvement, I'm an attractor, not a hunter. PUA to me is very huntsman like. Like all men I go "hunting" on occasion, but you won't see me out every weekend with the intention of getting laid, it's not my style or how I operate.

Some TRP theory on game is great, but routines and making it a lifestyle? Really not my thing, not that obsessed with women despite my libido. I've taken a lot from TRP and very little of it is game related. If you're confident you have charisma. From there on it's just realising if you're alpha fucks/beta bucks, utilising dread game selectively and using 48 laws not to give too much away. To me, it's that simple. IoIs and shit like that are a given, I can cold read well.

As you can tell I'm really not enthralled by the whole "science of pickup" type shit and neither do I advocate it as even being a cornerstone of TRP philosophy. Some of the ideas and concepts are useful but the whole culture/idea to me is the wrong approach. It's not male-centric enough, it's still all about the women and the obsession with women. I'm more obsessed with myself and my own self-improvement than I give fucks about women.

http://upload.wikimedia.org/wikipedia/commons/thumb/1/18/Origins_of_English_PieChart_2D.svg/600px-Origins_of_English_PieChart_2D.svg.png Unknown/other are words that came as a result british imperialism, like "pyjamas" american dialect: "pajamas" which came from Urdu/Hindi under the rule of the British Raj. Before then, there was no word for "nightclothes" or "nightwear."

Pronunciation is fucked as well, in many languages the word is pronounced how it's spelt, eg: in old english "Know" was pronounced "ker-now" rather than as "no." English is a hybrid language, it must really mind fuck many of the non-native speakers.

You're talking out of your ass. Humans have evolved to a point where they can teach others things which allow them to overcome their limitations.

We've learnt lifting heavy weights increases our T. We've learnt that certain psychological techniques result in social success. Combine this knowledge and you end up turning a beta into an alpha, with some trial and error with internalisation along the way. We are very malleable, do not underestimate knowledge combined with sheer will and increased testosterone levels. Mike Tyson is a prime example of a guy who went from full beta to alpha.

TLDR: read 48 laws of power and go lift.

Stress undermines empathic abilities in men but increases them in women -- ScienceDaily

2 upvotes · 18 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I posit there is some kind of dissonance with women, they know they just be sympathetic to men and sometimes they will even show it, but they feel in their gut that being sympathetic to the weakness of man is just wrong, it is an innate disgust, a repulsion, a dissonance caused by conflict in her morality versus her biology.

They are capable of empathy but generally in modern day society, only to those they view as weaker than them. The biological response to male weakness seems to play an underlying role in this.

I have no proof this is a biological response, but merely deduce it is a biological response. I do not have undeniable proof, but I have a strong predilection to posit that this is indeed a suitable explanation for this often observed phenomenon, women displaying a lack of empathy for men.

Their expectation is for men to be stronger and superior to them, when they are not they feel no empathy, which creates the illusion to many men that women are entirely unsympathetic, when the truth of the matter is they are simply unsympathetic to "people like them" (men, especially weak men)

This is also why when a man is stronger and superior to a woman she uses the victim position to win the approval of the group to try and beat him.

It's also why when women tend to hang around with other women in groups they automatically take each others sides in a dispute over the claims of a male despite those same girls saying negative things about each other to that same guy when the other girls weren't around.

It also brings to mind why the term "henpeck" exists, this word must have originally entered the lexicon from the observation that women do indeed, with their words, take little jabs collectively as a group to overcome an opponent who would otherwise be undefeatable in psychological combat 1v1. A woman can henpeck on her own too, but with nuance in the purpose of such behaviour. It seems to be a form of undermining utilising nagging in order to try and control a man to do what the woman desires. It is a form of coercion and women practice it most flagrantly.

TLDR: they only empathise with women weaker than them and children. Weak men activate disgust due to their innate expectations of men.

Shame Tactics

This is my favourite section as it comes up all the time and you can really fuck with people when they use these, every shame tactic is essentially a shit test.

"I expected better from you"

You need to reconcile your expectations with reality.

I expected better from me too, I'm just terrible.

Perhaps its time to replace me, I don't appear to be up to scratch.

This is definitely not constructive criticism, but rather a form of manipulation playing on your deep-seated emotions. It is also quite an effective motivation technique.

Agreed but when people do it I feel contempt as I can see it, I don't like people trying to fuck with my frame like that.

"I thought you forgot about me"

Maybe I did, I don't remember remembering but I don't remember forgetting either.

"Is this the best you can do?"

It's the best you're gonna get.

Skys the limit.

Yeah I'm pretty untalented, maybe you should get a superior person to do it in my place (say it but don't believe it, hold frame internally)

"Where have you been lately?"

Taking over the world.

Narnia.

I'm sworn by the secrecy act not to say.

"Do you ever do actual work" (said during a lunch break or vacation)

Yeah, listening to you is something I consider "actual work"

Nah, I'm so talented I don't need to work, things just happen around me (make things seem effortless law of power)

Nah I'm a terribly lazy person I wouldn't recommend associating with me.

As for hypergamy, basically EVERYONE is looking for the best deal in life and everyone is willing to upgrade/trade up given the chance. How we do this is different, whereas men trade up in beauty and will keep uglier girls in the rotation, women trade up in resources and status and thus have no use for a man beneath her station once another man has pulled her way up above the last guy.

As for employers and workers, that's just business - money is power and everyone wants more power so people do what they have to do, I wouldn't call it hypergamy outside a social or sexual situation, many people become loyal to companies and stick with them even when better opportunities present themselves. Women are especially like this, which is hilarious, as sexually/socially they are hypergamous whilst in careers they tend to be quick to gain loyalty to a company, easy to herd and risk averse to changing industry or jumping company. Sort of how they are pretty loyal to dark triad alphas, if you had to personalise a company as a personality type, most operate very dark triad.

Spinning Plates

This applies mostly to entrepreneurs or consultants, and not necessarily traditional mega-corp employees. If you have several clients or several customers, you are diversifying your income stream. If one falls through, then it isn't such a big deal since it's only a small piece of your portfolio. You are able to make more rational decisions, and are less desperate in your attitude with your targets. The fact that you have other options makes you high-valued.

I like this idea, have multiple income-streams, try to build passive income streams so that if you're in hospital tomorrow your legacy is bringing in the money and keeping you in the game until you can fully regain your footing. It doesn't just have to apply to consultants, the street term is "hustling", you can sell drugs, have a job and earn passively off stocks or a website. Everyone could and should have multiple income streams, talent and knowhow permitting.

Agree with social proof and conclusion section, have nothing to add to them.

2 upvotes · 14 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Yeah, throwing it out there as a possibility, not actually trying to put any weight behind my own unsubstantiated ponderings.

I guess the bottom line is how much role does nature play when it comes to mental disorders/suicide and how relevant is mental disorder to the act of suicide? If nature played a significant role then sending off convicts off to an island where they all bred and passed on the genes for possessing disposition to psychiatric disorders would lead to a higher natural rate of suicide; subsequently reducing the pressures that culture would have on suicide as genetically they were already preselected to engage in such behaviour.

For those who can't tell, this is conjecture and in no way substantiated by anything.

The percentage of men amongst total suicides has always hovered between 60% and 85% in Australia since 1921

Think it could be related to the fact that Australia was founded out of a penal colony? The UK used to send all its criminals and crazies there after all, perhaps such people have a higher chance of killing themselves? It's quite fascinating, thanks for the post.

I have hard time trying to figure out which part of my post you answered

My post was in response to:

I honestly have hard time finding cost effective applications of "sociopaths, clueless and losers" to everyday social circles and interaction outside your work and work opportunities.

Basically it's very useful for everything, socialising, promotions and all such things. I then say why by pointing out how useful machiavellianism and narcissism are. If you want to be SERIOUSLY rich, you DO NEED TO BE in the top 10% of both of these traits "settling with the tenets of game" will not get you there. TRP is about being successful as a man as well as being successful as women. If you like the idea of having a family and that's you done, that's fine - but some of us have grander ambitions and for those people, that's where a lot of what I write is directed.

Never do or did. But back to my point.

Didn't think you did, I have however had numerous pointed questions directed at me and people accusing me of manipulating them over the fucking internet because of the shit I've written, their paranoia combined with my display of intelligence gets the better of them. I've even said before discussing machiavellianism openly is not very machiavellian as it's essentially a magician revealing its secrets. Being openly machiavellian actually works against me within the red pill communities, people love you when they need help with a strategy but they wouldn't leave their kittens with you, let's put it that way.

As for psychopathy. Imo the only way for a non-psychopath to acquire psychopathic traits is through experience i.e. kill cute kittens enough times and it doesn't elicit a emotional response anymore.

Right yes, to inculcate psychopathy desensitisation is a valid methodology, I concur.

Unluckily at one point of time hypergamy met globalization and such dreams are only dreams now.

Very good point it would be great if you could elaborate on this idea with your thoughts.

Spoken like a true machiavellian! Heh. However it does not make that which is stated in the article any less true, the examples given are not amoral they are immoral. Knowing you are causing someone pain by dangling sex in front of them and exploiting that without reciprocation to gain favours is immoral behaviour. I'm a machiavellian myself, but touting things as amoral when they're immoral seems to be a pet fallacy of machiavellians when they want to justify their illicit agendas.

You cannot justify immorality as amorality because it is your imperative, amorality is the state of not being held to a moral argumental position to back up and justify your decisions, amorality is essentially not being bound by morals within a decision making process, that means not being bound by "honour" or other abstractions which encourage positive morality, however negative morality always known as immorality completely voids the notion of being amoral as merely conducting immoral behaviours means the very nature of being neutral has now been violated.

Naturally, what constitutes moral and immoral is largely a social construct so there is wiggle room here, but needless to say if your actions hurt another person that is in and of itself enough to make that action immoral and yes, immoral things can be done for a "greater good" (governments do it) basically with amorality you do not need to be bound to the tenets of morality and the ten commandments and yadda yadda but as soon as you ignore the pain you cause others and proceed in behaviours which to you knowingly violate them and are not spared by ignorance, that's the immediate second it becomes an immoral act - because you are demonstrating intent and disregard for the mental stability of another.

A woman can be perfectly happy as a plate reciprocally enjoying the sex you both partake in, that is perfectly moral or amoral (depending how you want to look at it) however when she wants commitment and you don't want to give it to her the moral thing to do is cut the cord and say your goodbyes to minimise emotional pain, the immoral thing is to make her think she's your girlfriend when in fact in your mind she's still a plate.

Being stuck in the friend zone, the chick knows the guy likes her more than she likes him but keeps him firmly in a position of subordination in order to extract resources from him, unlike with plates where there is a two way exchange of sex, with a friend zone dynamic the desires are not mutually fulfilled and there is merely a mono directional flow of desires being fulfilled much to the detriment and eventual frustration of the chump stuck there - extracting someone for resources and showing disregard for their desires is immoral because actively and knowingly neglecting peoples desires which specifically pertain to your existence results in [you] proactively causing [them] mental pain via neglect. You are an active agent in facilitating the betas self-defeating behaviour and nothing but legitimate ignorance to the dynamic at hand can diffuse the responsibility for engaging in such behaviour, which is bullshit I called in the piece itself (all but the most naive of women know exactly what's going on.)

People like to hide in the shades of grey and call immoral things amoral but there is a distinction between immorality and amorality. Avoiding tax is amoral, fucking with peoples feelings is immoral. Avoiding tax breaks the law but causes no direct emotional pain, fucking with peoples feelings does, this is the kind of thing that can damage a person and leave a mental scar.

Anyhow moral arguments aside armed with this knowledge men can do exactly what you suggest, "be the better exploiter" but to do that they first need to understand the paradigm of the game and that women will engage in both amoral and immoral behaviour (not just the moral behaviour they were mislead to think women solely engage in with that being the fairer sex bullshit) to get what they want.

I do not agree with your conclusion that plate spinning and friend zoning are both amoral behaviours however I do agree they are both low investment sexual strategy's pertaining to each genders imperative, friend zoning being the female imperative and plate spinning the male imperative, respectively. Friend zoning is almost always certainly immoral with a few exceptions, plate spinning can be mutually beneficial as neither party gains more from the transaction than the other and the party who becomes unhappy with the arrangement has much more consenting leverage to terminate the contract. Plate spinning only becomes immoral when the woman clearly wants commitment and is using sex to get it and the man knowing her desires decides to ignore the fact nevertheless and continue to extract sex from her rather than immediately cutting ties. In that instance of plate spinning then yes, there is mutual immorality - however and I posit this question with the most rhetorical of intentions - what percentage of women in the population are successfully friend zoning and what percentage of men do you think are successfully plate spinning? Exactly. Plate spinning takes infinitely more skill than friend zoning does which leads us back to how it's easy for women to get sex but difficult for the majority of men.

I'd much rather eat legumes to get my fibre instead, kidney beans, runner beans, baked beans.. anything with the word beans on the end.

You're addicted to the dopamine she provides you in the way that she provides it, it may be the certain way she fucks like how animalistic she is when fucking, or the way she teases you, if you become addicted to those things you need to find another girl who is similar, if you can't find one get a "blank canvas girl" and train her up in those traits (takes time and effort and will make her more effective for the next guy but eh, you're just enjoying your turn and effectively alpha widowing her)

If its the banter and word games you need to find another bitch capable of the same level of verbal riposte and etc etc

It's all dopamine addiction. We fall in love with "freaks in the sheets" and witty bitches who are sexually attractive. Lucifers daughters possess all these traits.

As long as it's legal

The law and morality have a relationship, but they are not one and the same.

In England it is illegal to kill or even injure someone who trespasses on your property or even if there is a robbery in progress. You're supposed to just let them steal your shit, because trying to stop them gets you into trouble as well.

Tax avoidance is legal in England (Tax loopholes) but tax evasion is illegal although both achieve the same ends.

Do not trust the legal system, there's far too much cronyism corrupting it and comprising its accountability.

We see this with men's rights, it's not fair in divorce law that chicks almost always do a hell of a lot better than men, the law has been corrupted to an extent. I've firsthand see an ILLOGICAL JUDGEMENT CONDEMN A MAN TO HARSHER SENTENCING IN A HIGHER COURT.

The Final Stage of RP Acceptance: How to Get Past the Bitterness

2 upvotes · 10 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

So you're saying free will is a sliding scale? I agree. Diffusing accountability and responsibility ENTIRELY due to ones predispositions however is a weak argument.

This whole post, for me, just makes me think of hypoagency, where its never a womans fault she does anything because of X, you know, I see what OP is trying to do and it is mentally healthy for surpassing the bitterness, but it is bullshit. I don't give a fuck if she's predisposed to being a slut in her genetics or not, if she chooses to slut based on her instincts rather than practice self-discipline she has to take responsibility for that. She has some free-will, not entire free-will, but some. Her instincts are acting upon her and she is likely to give in to them, but she has some form of control. The only woman I'd be interested in are the few who are capable of some level of self-restraint and discipline, I'm not saying they're so mentally enlightened they can overcome all their urges, but some form of restraint and even an attempt at restraint is admirable, it says a lot for a womans character.

Otherwise what? We'll just blame everything on our genes? Hey, let's not get into shape, i'm genetically predisposed to store adipose tissue and therefore being fat isn't really my fault I'm just following my nature. Come on... you can overcome that shit.

I accept women as being infinitely limited and selfish, as compassionate as a man is you can still love them past that, but don't allow yourself to be exploited anymore than you're comfortable with, the fact of the matter is a woman is always exploiting a man, so make sure you're reciprocally exploiting her to your own benefit. Get a good deal and be completely aware of what she's up to.

I think the thing most guys are bitter about is their past, the fact that "they were had" and the injustice that resulted from that deception (she took the kids/money/ruined their reputation/destroyed their confidence etc)

Perhaps you're confusing anger with rage, anger is controllable and can lead to benefit via productivity, rage is not, that is self-consuming and leads to detriment.

An orphan kid growing up without any parents selling coke in school and surviving 9 shots to the face does not become a megastar based on the spiritual energy of being typical or well-rounded or content or happy aka "calm", anger is a cornerstone of his fiber. Happiness and contentment lead to sluggishness and mediocrity.

Simply if you want to become as big as he has, you need to be fucking crazy. Focussing anger or "recycling inherently negative spiritual energy" to energise yourself and supercharge yourself to take the world on is the mental discipline at hand here. Anger is also a fundamental tool of masculinity, I completely reject the notion that people need to "calm their anger" or temper it, only when it reaches rage does one need help. The answer is to channel it and use the energy to ascend, anger is intense spiritual energy and intense energy is power.

Average people of average temperaments have low energy and achieve average things, I would never recommend anybody who wants to be a hero, megastar, 1%er or something truly spectacular to be your average well-rounded docile individual, a jack of all trades is a master of none and it all starts with the mindset.

That's everything I've got to say on this topic.

My family is actually on the upper end of upper middle class.

Despite my previous guess, that's not surprising. You'd have to be someone who benefits from mass immigration to be pro mass immigration. The upper middle class definitely benefit because you get to keep your labour costs down on the accounts book. The only people who benefit from the immigration are the immigrants themselves and the upper classes, everyone else collectively suffers. As an upper middle class individual you most likely have "liability mitigation" also known as tax avoidance plans with your accountants and thus pay little into the state yourselves, so it's not like you're paying as much as say the 60k a year teacher does into the system who actually pays their legal due of income tax, anyhow assumption aside I have digressed.

Competition is a mutually beneficial process, whether it's between corporations or people. It's literally self-evident, just look at the world.

The only reason half the world has a parliamentary or presidential system of law, running water, electricity or any of the other inventions to come out of Europe is due to colonialism, so yes you could say it was competition - but it wasn't competition which encouraged your competitors into your own backyard. For example without the west China or South Korea would not have industrialised so fast, they were totally reliant on American and European technologies/inventions to rise up, the whole foundation of their modern success is owed to the west, you can say the same for most BRICs, with Russia being the exception perhaps.

Excluding billions from the economy is not good: how many Teslas and Einsteins are wasting away in India and North Korea right now because they're too poor to do anything?

Their governments should support their prosperity, I hardly think encouraging a brain drain so all the intellectuals of the world congregate in Europe and America is a good thing. How can those countries ever improve if all their talent keeps leaving?

I'm not proposing inviting masses of unskilled immigrants

That's the state of Europe right now, hordes of South Asians and Northern Africans with little to offer flood the nation states of the European continent with crime and hordes of unskilled Eastern Europeans fight for low paid jobs with the indigineous school leavers, they are simply not welcome here and do not benefit the economies in any way, in fact with all the welfare they are entitled to they are a net deficit on the indigineous taxpayers. Mass immigration from islamic countries is a huge example of this as they have so many children they're entitled to a lot of government funds.

I don't know about where you live, but in the UK we have a lot of people who contribute absolutely nothing to this nation, do not respect it, do not pay into it and would be better off rotting where they came from rather than collectively adding to the delinquency of what is considered a developed nation. Mass immigration is irresponsible. Skilled immigration should be capped as to allow a nation (the nation where the third world immigrants come from) to work itself out of poverty with its intellectuals and furthermore, to allow the nation state they emigrate to retain its own cultural identity and continue the cycle of creating it's own intellectuals.

Case in point, India has 1.1bn people.. if you allow all their intellectuals into say France you could quite literally transform the country, how could the french keep up? Even their best and brightest? You'd start talking about protectionism and being the best but the french population is simply too small in comparison to the indian to actually maintain their own numbers. What would happen is you would dilute the world's intellectual centres with masses of indians and chinese as they have the largest populations and displace everyone else in the process.

Do you really think people are going to welcome their own displacement, even if the immigrants in question are extremely talented? Hell no. We are a territorial species, it's why we have lines on the map. People will fight tooth and nail for their livelihood and to maintain their living standards. It's rather liberalist to expect people to just accept hordes of immigrants into their nation and give up opportunity to foreigners and not get upset about it.

The other thing you don't consider is civil war, if you allow too much economic inequality the working classes will rise up, smash through your gated communities and electric fences and force you to flee. It happened in revolutions in the past where the bourgeoisie such as yourself were forced to flee to another state as they were actively pursued by merit of their class.

Also, by being upper middle class one could make the classist argument that you and your family indeed horde wealth yourselves, but that's not something I have a personal problem with - it's just funny because although you despise it on a macro level (nationally) on a micro level you and your family are doing that very thing yourselves, hence why you actually like mass immigration, so you can entrench your social position and become even richer.

That's idealism that you can win the game by refusing to play it - a logical fallacy. Try telling a high T man if he dives into his studies he won't want to fuck anymore, you may as well tell a woman not to be hypergamous, it's not realistic and thus it is not RP.

OK well to try and simplify things dominance is essentially knowing when to not give in to girls irrational demands and knowing when not to even bother taking them seriously. It's about not being fazed by her emotions be it anger or sadness, female emotions are volatile and can get pretty crazy. It's directly related to your inner confidence. If you cultivate a lifestyle which improves your quality of life and sense of self you'll find dominance become a part of who you are rather than something you struggle to embody. The community must regulate itself.

Excellent point although not enforceable and definitely idealistic, it's a top-down approach, from the critical thinkers as well as and those who understand the philosophy right down to the idiotic, naive and value destroying obnoxious pedants.

The country metaphor still holds here, you could say its up to the people to regulate a country and the politicians are small in number versus the total population and thus hold little sway but its an ineffectual argument, numbers are irrelevant, the concentration of power is.

The ancient greeks feared how democracy could become corrupted and exploited to pursue interests which go directly against the needs of society/a community at large and rightly so, people will sacrifice the collective in order to ensure the prosperity/safety of themselves. People are selfish. That's why democracy is flawed, it assumes everyone has the best interests of a society at heart, the same can be said here. One assumes each subscriber doesn't want to actively sabotage what's been built.

It's always conducive to retain a healthy paranoia as to plan a contingency. Success hinges on careful planning, not the capricious whim of the democratic process.

Not to my knowledge. I learnt this stuff in an accredited institution, these are very red subjects and spit in the face of bullshit like feminism which is based on nothingness. Probably the most difficult thing I've ever studied as you have to have the ability to see one argument from about 20+ different perspectives and then say how different philosophers would reconcile a situation which means you need in-depth knowledge of multiple philosophies.

The cheapest way you will get the knowledge is to just buy the books and self-teach without going into higher education.

Maybe there's pdfs or something floating around on a torrent site, I wouldn't know - I used the actual books.

WORLD RELIGIONS.

That is a valid example but the exception proves the rule, so is there anything else?

That single example versus the hundreds of subjects which have scientific basis or teach skills does not mean that the basis of academia is about teaching trivia and bullshit. Gender Studies and Religion being taught means that the assertion academia is about scientific or otherwise credible knowledge and useful skills is incorrect? OK.

You have no idea how pathetic that assertion sounds, and how ridiculous and pedantic you are. It's fucking hilarious actually and you're trying to neg me with bullshit, pathetic. I don't need to try hard, I'm fucking smart - you're clutching at nothing but technicalities, exceptions and straws - I have solid reasoning to my argument.

See I used logic with you all the way and kept it impersonal, then when you couldn't address my points you pulled the underhand tactic of personifying your argument by trying to attack my credibility/character by pulling the "you're a try hard so what you say means nothing card" aka SHAMING so I just deflected all your ad hominem back at you.

You attack the argument not the arguer, by resorting to attacking my character rather than demonstrating I'm wrong you've proven you're a fucking idiot. Bye.

You are correct on a technicality of the definition of the word "teach" but if you backtrack I opened with this being pseudo academia so maintaining that line of discourse and taking that context into account you can deduce that my contention is that trivia is pseudo academia, academia is about teaching credible knowledge or skills, not trivia.

In and of itself you are correct, you can teach anything, in context to what I'm asserting teaching trivia is not a skill or scientifically backed piece of knowledge and thus as I have said, they're teaching bullshit.

You're demonstrating ignorance or pedanticism I'm not sure which one it is, I'm only wrong if you ignore the context I'm speaking in, you're only right if you deal with an absolutism and selectively quote one of my lines. I think you ignored the context.

You made the fallacious assumption she's capable of feeling guilt for trying to use a person she gives no inherent fucks about anyway. It's hard enough getting women to feel guilt for men they do care about because most are entitled and ALL are solipsistic.

I really can't believe that a girl who I barely know had the balls to ask if I was paying. Truth be told, I do have the money to pay for whatever it would have cost. Is this what modern dating has turned into? Girls expecting that their entitled to being paid for?

You're going about it wrong. Set your boundaries clearly from the start. If you get a woman who won't agree to your boundaries tell her to fuckoff or said more kindly, "next her"

Perhaps it's just that she wasn't that attracted to me. I get that, but instead of just being like "no, not interested" she's trying to get me to pay for something for her.

Walking wallets is what men are to women whom they don't find attractive, instead of trading sex for resources it's like one of those ebay scams... they show you the picture of it, you buy the picture (her image) but don't get the actual product. Other than conceding to a list of unreasonable demands, the groom just stands there. No stately, hey-everybody-look-at-me procession. No being given away. No identity-changing pronouncement. And can you imagine a television show dedicated to watching guys try on tuxedos? Their fathers sitting there misty-eyed with joy and disbelief, their brothers lurking in the corner muttering with envy. Left to men, weddings would be, after limits-testing procrastination, spontaneous, almost inadvertent... during halftime... on the way to the refrigerator. And then there's the frequency of failure: statistics tell us half of you will get divorced. A winning percentage like that'll get you last place in the American League East. The Baltimore Orioles do better than weddings.)

That is a sad realisation. Value truth above all else and the rest will become clear, delivery system (aggressive writing style) aside.

Dominant males defend their status when challenged, its the rule of the wild. Look at pack behavior in all animals. Alphas that back down or can't actually prove their dominance lose their status.

I'd get into a fight to defend my friends, but not over a whore, because the whore isn't worth fighting for.

Fighting a guy over a girl you don't care about out of pure ego so you can "maintain alpha frame", by my standards, is beta. Most likely I could manipulate him into not even wanting to fight me to begin with. Calling out my viewpoint as "beta by definition" is hilarious. Your mindsets wrong, we live in a society where doing dumb shit has repercussions which outweigh the benefit of fucking a guy up. Going to prison for a whore is beta.

Dominant males defend their status when challenged, its the rule of the wild.

2 upvotes · 19 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I understand what you're saying, but I question the rationality of the decision when you take all the factors of this situation into consideration, it can hardly be rationalised to be fair or reasonable, that when one takes a beating for such an extended period of time, no doubt suffering notable or perhaps even grievous injury, that to eventually fight back the attacker is considered a criminal act and not merely an act of self-defense. The criminalisation of the response to an attacker, with those material facts considered (not pre-meditated, not the instigator) is what I call in to question as inherently unreasonable in nature and thus a fundamental weakness in this law.

One could reasonably argue that, logistically speaking, this person had good reason not to leave, what if they were incapable of leaving in a fast enough manner due to injuries sustained from the attacker, or were from another area and did not know the area that the altercation took place in well enough to find their way back if they had left?

The blanket application of this law and the assumptions it makes is fallacious and to apply them to any and all instances which fall under the criteria set out by this law leads to miscarriages of justice, as one could reasonably discern here. The law is not infallible, and where the law fails to deliver adequate justice, the law should be amended.

I would argue, this is a poor law that needs to be amended or repealed should the states which have it implemented, within the United States, have the delivery of justice in the judiciary as a priority on their agenda.

This gets into being just as ridiculous as feminist theory.

No it doesn't, you've clearly misunderstood what I've said.

This just gets ridiculous - what are we, women, who can't understand the logic behind words? We have to hammer words into what we want them to mean?

Nothing here has been hamstered, although I suspected someone with limited concentration who lacked the ability to grasp what I meant would throw out that accusation. Hamstering is rationalising after an event has occurred and redefining the past. That is not being done here, so you are misapplying the term. This is reconciling two seemingly incompatible viewpoints so that they may cohere.

I've reconciled cognitive dissonance between the responsibility of man as a leader in a relationship, and the ability to fall victim to someone who is more machiavellian than you. That is not hamstering, whether you fail to grasp the concept or not.

"men can't be abused"

I didn't say men can't be abused, I said men take responsibility in facilitating the abuse and therefore bear the burden for the abuse, for allowing the abuse to happen by being weak. Men are the predators not the prey, if you're a woman's prey, you're weak. If you're weak, whose fault is that? Societies? Your parents? It's not hers, she didn't raise you. Sure, there's plenty of agents affecting your mind but at the end of the day you have to overcome that or forever be an abused beta male. That's what TRP is about, overcoming your counter-productive socialisation.

What do you expect from TRP? Support? Sympathy? No, those are things that facilitate weakness. Men can be the victims of manipulation because they're playing against someone better than them at it, but nobody is going to bestow them the sympathies and powers of victimhood that women get, if anything you will be detested for your inability, not coddled and elevated for the exploitation you have experienced, such is the bi-gender double standard.

Men have a responsibility to themselves and to society to be strong. That is the expectation. If you are strong, you will not be abused as by merit of strength, a woman will respect you and you will make the right decisions in analysing her character. If you make a mistake or she turns out to be psychopathic, you next her. You can stop the interaction with a woman at any time, if you're not, why aren't you? Because you're too dumb to see the games she is playing with you. You're weak.

Maybe Beige Phillip can better explain this concept to you:

07 – If anything goes wrong it's always your fault (because she's a reflection of you.)

Anything that happens in a relationship that goes bad with your woman, if your woman's a bitch, if she's disrespectful, if she cheats on you, if she leaves you, if she takes your money – it's your fault. The way she treats you is down to the presentation you give her. There's no such thing as victims, just volunteers.

A few years ago, I was talking to this guy I knew who told me thought his girlfriend was trying to get pregnant on purpose. He told me that some women will actually take an used condom with the sperm inside and pour the contents inside themselves in order to try to get pregnant. They guy would never know that was how she really got pregnant. I thought that was crazy but I felt that some women would actually do that. He told me of a trick that he used just in case some girl tried that. He brought with him a small bottle of tabasco sauce. He didn't want to clog up the toilet by flushing the condom down, so before he threw the used condom in the trash, he poured some tabasco sauce in the condom to kill the sperm and give the chick a surprise if she ever tried to pour it inside her.

A few weeks ago, I was talking to a friend of mine, and he told me that he thought his girlfriend was talking and moving too fast. They were only together three months and she was talking about kids names for the future and if he ever thought about them in the future being married. I asked him if he was using a condom, he said no because she was on the pill. I told him it doesn't matter and that he should use it just in case she isn't taking her pills. He asked her about her pills and she forgot a day here and there so she had to double up the next day she said. When he used a condom she got mad at him and told him he didn't need one that she was on the pill so it didn't matter.....Big Red Flag.

I then remembered about the tabasco sauce trick and told him that he might want to do that because of her suspicious behavior. So, after they had sex at her place he went into the bathroom and poured the tabasco sauce inside the used condom and threw it in the trash. A few minutes later she went inside for a while, as she did that he went to her dresser to see about her pills. He looked at the boxes and not one pill was used for this month. The package she showed him was an used one from months ago. He said he got a chill down his spine after he saw that. A few minutes later he heard a blood curdling scream from the bathroom. The scream was from the tabasco sauce burning her because she tried to pour the sperm inside her and she got burned. Guess she came out screaming at him for what he did and then he left her place angry for what she did and now are broken up, and she is still calling and texting to get him back after 3 days. He dodged a huge bullet and he still is thanking me for this ever since saturday.

There are theories that there is a certain new world order being put into place via the power which is the banking institutions (JP Morgan has financial assets including land and infrastructure in the trillions for example)

Globalisation, supposedly being the beginning of this process. Tearing down borders, easier movement of labour, destroying national identities with things like the European Union and etc.

Liberalism has been corrupted and perverted by merit of its own idealistic weakness, what once was a noble cause is now an engine of oppression.

I simply disagree with your assertion about equality of difficulty.

You believe a parent can override society's imperative. I've read studies which state the contrary.

Children spend more time in secondary socialisation than they do primary socialisation and thus are more susceptible to its effects.

My contention is it's easier to erase indoctrination in males than it is to control female emotional impulses in a society which facilitates her irrationality and condemns any form of controls.

So you're saying it can be beneficial but you'll actually help very little people and thus won't increase the competition by much? Interesting. A lot of people on trp have benefited greatly from the book but I guess the demographic is skewed here. Good thing I'm sharing it here then as it's well targeted. Even for those who don't benefit, there's a certain novelty/fascination element to be enjoyed. If people wanna apply the lessons or just pleasure read I don't care either way. Helping people is what I do, whether that's momentary enjoyment or long term improvement makes little difference to me.

I go back to the book often and see how I can apply the laws in practice. It starts as a conscious process and through mastery becomes subconscious and natural, like anything, the more you use it the less effort you need to apply, it becomes second nature. You definitely need to apply it socially to truly internalise

Why is red pill thinking so 'controversial' outside of this sub?

2 upvotes · 8 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

OK I'll be pedantically specific so nobody else niggles at the nuance.

Idealism without pragmatism equals delusion. There's nothing wrong with vision but when you enforce your ideology onto a society that is simply not ready for it you create a lot of pain and actually end up going backwards which is the effect radical leftist ideology has had on western civilization and ironically is leading to its downfall rather than it's evolution/enlightenment. Instead of reaching "utopia" it's created chaos, the social structure was strongest in the 50's/60's, a full half decade ago.

All great discoveries had pragmatic steps, there's no such thing as a miracle.

On the topic of western idealism specifically, the ideologies have become too "cultish" there's not enough critical thinking prevalent within the population of ideologues to actually self-sustain, self-criticise and self-correct their philosophies and the pragmatic implementation of their viewpoints when said ideology has the power to enact its ideals.

EG: the prevalence of social sciences to attribute everything to socialisation/nurture rather than nature/biology so they can propagate their propagandous notion of faux equality, the very basis of the rejection of biological and scientific significance is reminiscent to a time past where catholicism in the dark ages would reject findings from science and order discoveries/papers burnt. Simply now, the feminists suppress anything anti their agenda by calling it misogyny or saying the source is somehow invalid. They are the "heretics" calling the logical, intellectual critically minded souls "hate mongers" whilst ironically, they stir up shit.

Effectively, ideologies have replaced religion in the west with their delusion and outlandish beliefs with just a sprinkle of consumerism on top to help self-perpetuate the system of reliance. Men and women equal? Come on what idiot thought that was actually reality, talk about denying existence and biology for delusion. People now reject christianity/religion and instead adopt egalitarianism and feminism as their belief systems instead. All these activists and social justice warriors, in times past, would of been the crazies down at the church holding session/prayer and arranging get togethers cursing the devil/whatever antagonist there was. Now the evil boogeyman has been replaced with patriarchy and nerds making dogle jokes at tech conferences.

The same elitist stubborn close-mindedness remains within the same archetypal personality types, except the system of thought has simply shifted from a god-devil hell-heaven paradigm to a man-woman privileged-unprivileged paradigm. I should probably write a blog post about this at some point. I thank you for your post, for stimulating some thought process in me.

When I first started work it was easy, you just picked a career and turned up. These days you need 2 degrees, 4 unpaid internships and a healthy dose of nepotism. Many young women have, for this reason, given up. They'll be happy to be your dutiful girl.

Not much use for us GEN Y guys is it though? Yet again women can trade in the pussy to get with older men whilst younger guys bust ass trying to make it and despite any exceptional ability, as you rightfully point out, nepotism is almost always essential nowadays.

Gen Y has been systematically robbed of the opportunities a previous generation had. Say you're a GEN X, the baby boomers provided well for you, but they neither you provided well for GEN Y. Under gen x's emergence, feminism enlarged the welfare state and then you everyone went crazy on the tax avoidance, greedy on the property bubbles, allowed mass immigration to further deflate wages and increase inflation. This is a topic in and of itself. There's a lot of variables, globalisation, devaluation of education etc, but it all spells negatively for gen Y.

I concur with you that meritocracy has decreased massively and GEN Y is feeling the pain of that. Everythings harder than it used to be, you need to do more to succeed now.

An increase in social inequality will only lead to increased rates of crimes and violence if this trend does not correct itself with the generations to come.

It involved describing my new girlfriend to her in rather average terms, discussing her minor character flaws etc. when she was of course objectively attractive (and very intelligent), and her flaws were minor and common to pretty much anyone. We were then going to a group gathering and I made her doll up really nicely until she then looked stunning. When my ex saw her, her jaw hit the floor so hard it nearly fell off - she was so hurt and indignant that I thought this other girl was "average".

Ahahahahahahaha. Incredibly amusing. Having them meet each other would only flare up the sense of competition and encourage mate guarding (defensiveness in the new bitch, regret in the old bitch)

I have used aggressive or so called "dark" methods before, as they are the only ones that work with women who possess a cluster B personality disorder (such as BPD). Those women seem to lack any kind of humanity to the point where you have to hurt them in a drastic way to maintain control so it's nice to have those skills in your toolset.

Yep, I've met my fair share of Cluster Bs. Cluster Bs are enamoured with asshole game/dark machiavellianism. I and a friend of mine refer to them as "Lucifer's Daughters" they are so fucking off the walls, it's like the crazy got intelligence, grew a pair of legs and became its own entity.

Your attempt at a compliment is very touching Ryan

Found this sub recently and I think it's amazing...

2 upvotes · 27 November 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Yeah the severe lack of "male only spaces" that are available plays a big role in this.

Male only organisations are inherently sexist/misogynist under current propaganda.

Female only institutions? That's fine. They're equal but victims to everything so they need "refuge" which grants them additional privilege/freedom unavailable to men.

See that double standard? Men are feared because their potential for brilliance and rebellion is massive. That's why they have the majority of men all emasculated and pussified, so they tow the line and serve the few masters who can enjoy the fruits of all this shit.

A part of the red pill is awakening the notion that you are valuable, you have massive potential and to realise both of these things. The real creme da la creme of this is that you should do this all to yourself, for yourself by controlling how you use your own abilities and on what terms, basically, do not be exploited (unless ironically, allowing someone to temporarily exploit you could be of deferred benefit to you) - such a belief system is dangerous to a system which is totally and utterly reliant on exploiting people, capitalism exploits the unskilled (so don't better yourself, works in the service sector as a wage slave) and feminism has women exploiting men (so don't stop paying the taxes which fund their single mother lifestyles and "independence") etc.

Feminists are as "independent" as the taxes that men pay in droves allow them to be and the governments they vote in which keep widening the size of the welfare state.

This sounds like a ridiculous fucking conspiracy, but just stare hard enough and you'll see that although we see the redpill as an antibiotic, the system sees it as a fucking pathogen - being a red pill man is not compatible with societies goals, that is why society is adverse to it.

I must thank you for raising these points and discussing this with me, as I think i shall make this the topic of my next article.

2 upvotes · 24 November 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

That's a great article.

Thanks.

Dread game works but its no fun if you are feeling guilty about it.

Yeah you have to not give a fuck. Its easy to justify your actions when you understand how unstable/flaky/disloyal women are, you probably need to swallow the pill more to successfully employ elements of the dark triad in less saturated amounts (Versus the natural psycho/sociopaths) to improve yourself/game.

If you have other thoughts on how to emulate or incorporate dark triad philosophies into an otherwise "wholesome" psyche I would enjoy hearing them. Your article mentions a follow up article, let us know when that comes out!

Yeah I'll link to it in the sub when it comes out. It was due out today/yesterday but my RL has been hectic so there's something of a delay. I aim to do one article per week, I also got busy writing another article and I want to do the follow up article a proper service rather than a rush job. There are perfectly healthy ways to encourage your own narcissism/self-love and machiavellianism without being crazy aka implementing dark triad traits.

If you do not view manipulation as inherently neutral/objective and buy into the whole negative connotation that its inherently evil even though the entire world is based on manipulation (economics, politics, sexual interactions etc) then you will find it impossible to imply the triad because your moral code deludes you into restricting yourself in this manner, both cognitively and emotively.

The #1 thing about utilising the dark triad when you're not dark triad is training yourself to become incredibly machiavellianist, the power that comes with that manipulation and sense of self control can be incredibly corrupting and self-indulging (which then feeds the narcissism more, as well as the positive external feedback you get) so it's nothing I really recommend to someone without a strong moral basis (so they can use their manipulation with some modicum of moral code) rather than ruthlessly, as I state in the article linked here, being ruthless when you're trained and not a genetic psychopath will lead to severe introspective pain later on down the track, regrets and all kinds of baggage.

To train that machiavellianism I always recommend a thorough reading (more than once, if need be) of The 48 Laws of Power - <http://www.amazon.co.uk/Laws-Power-Joost-Elffers-Production/dp/1861972784>

Nuance: knowledge doesn't become power until it's applied and/or one is capable of applying it. One can withhold knowledge as a different dynamic of power, eg: the omission of truth.

Another way knowledge is power without applying it is say as a deterrent, it can be a real deterrent, perceived as a bluff or be an actual buff, while someone perceives credibility to that knowledge they will take it into consideration as a reason not to do something that violates you, or to hold a certain belief about you.

EG: Actual deterrent = you say you're a black belt and you are. Perception of a bluff = you say you're a black belt and you are but because you don't act like an asshole it is tested. A bluff = saying you're a black belt when you're not in an attempt to intimidate someone into leaving you alone.

My opinion on psychopathy comes from a case study done on a banker where they did MRIs to see the neural connections in his brain. I could have cited the source, but I've forgotten it (it was a while ago I saw the documentary)

I still stand by the notion psychopaths have nothing to feel, whilst those who attempt to train themselves are simply going through desensitisation.

EG: A psycho doesn't need to desensitise themselves to violence whereas someone in training would, they'd have to do it repeatedly to get a similar but weaker outcome.

You also have to be incredibly fucking ignorant not to realise the psychopathy element of dark triad is genetic/developmental in nature, no amount of reading this subreddit will make you dark triad. LOL.

If it wasn't on the internet and there was a group dedicated purely to hate/harassment/ridiculing others it would be laughed out and shut down. The irony is the same people who dislike TRP are engaging in a bigger form of bigotry, there is at least structure, philosophy, at times academia, and observation to what's said here. That group is just minimalist, weak, indignant bile with no foundation of its own.

Game is somewhat about status but it's also about being psychologically attractive. I mean if all you have is status you will only attract chicks who don't give a fuck about you, but want to latch onto your status. If you're psychologically attractive they can get addicted to you, if you make them laugh/give them tingles, challenge them... etc the frame is different. When a girl is addicted to how you make her feel, that is basically love.

I don't think game without wit, subtly and smoothness is game at all.

Sure broadcasting status (DHV) is a significant component of game, but it's not synonymous. In some situations (say you're on holiday) you can DHV total bullshit and get tons of pussy and if your delivery is good you'll have success. That's another thing, delivery often beats word content. Girls are like kids who listen to shit rappers who have a really good flow and spit fast but have terrible lyrics, they care about the aesthetic/delivery more than the content delivered.

Getting good at talking inane shit whilst showing off ego when talking with women = game.

What I have now with my completely beta boyfriend is mutual love and respect for one another. He is the only person who could snap me out of the game playing, because he refused to play any game himself. His conditions are that I love and accept his love, and that is the ONLY rule of what our relationship is. He is above any kind of manipulation, and because of that I was able to see past my own notions of what relationships were, and give myself to him completely in a way that I had never been able to before.

See here you basically rationalise your decision to settle for a guy who is beta. I mean it's quite laughable you even describe your boyfriend as beta. Either he's not beta at all and you just think he is, or he is and you've settled because you're too damaged to date guys of higher dominance.

Manipulation is not limited to relationships, it's everywhere, it's all around you. Economics is the biggest form of manipulation going - resource allocation - and you're unintelligent enough to actually believe that people can be above manipulation - nobody is above manipulation - you get good at playing the game or you lose at the game, not participating in the game means you lose because you get outmaneuvered. You're a machiavellianist denying machiavellianism, I'm not sure whether that's brilliantly intelligent or ridiculously unintelligent, but either way it's a dichotomy - which means you're wrong.

and give myself to him completely in a way that I had never been able to before.

So you can only trust a person you perceive as weaker than yourself because by nature of being manipulative, you view anyone with a sentence of machiavellianism (such as someone like myself) as inherently evil, because as we both understand the game, you'd project the bad shit you'd do onto the other person (eg: me) and thus be unable to form trust.

If your boyfriend really is beta you'll get bored and cheat on his ass for someone who can actually handle you, trust me, you will get bored of being with a guy that doesn't challenge you whatsoever, the attraction will die, and all you'll be left with is you feeding off a betas validation to fix the broken shards of your soul which are in the bibliographic section entitled "men/daddy problems"

By the way, despite how harshly worded this is, I mean no personal offence to you, I don't know who you are and I don't care about you. What I'm attacking here is the bullshit you're spewing.

Most of that stuff is covered in /r/redpillwomen.

The "skills" are about cultivating femininity. High value is placed on a low sexual partner count by men (in order to facilitate loyalty and trust) there are domestic skills such as cooking and keeping house. Academic knowledge and an open mind are valued things, as are things like high mental stability, and a sense of humour/an ability to banter. Sexual skills are also valued but they run to contrary to chastity, one would hope a woman had cultivated her sexual talents through very few relationships.

If you want a more in-depth answer go to /r/redpillwomen and ask them there, they'll give you a much better answer than I can.

Lol at you trying to head fuck its cute. Lets battle with our egos and bullshit then and fuck the intellectualism because you're "above it." (read: beneath it) they go for shame tactics, ego saving, and ultimately retreat.

You retreated when you refused to engage and address. Your mind is shut. You rebutted nothing, like a feminist you just screamed "I'm above this" by refusing to address shit. If you'd read it you'd know I was extremely humble, but as your ego is sensitive you probably didn't get past the bit telling you you were wrong, so you just shutdown and tried to frame yourself as superior with this dumb "betacomments" bullshit - that comment is pure red pill son, you're bigoted - that means close-minded. That is an observation of your lack of willingness to engage, not a shaming tactic.

All we need round here is the oh so simple: ##BetaComments

Why did black people so skillfully hoist the burden of escaping slavery on their backs when women contentedly luxuriated at the feet of their husbands?

Because black people lived in genuine poverty and squalor. Women (white) did not if they had husbands, and most women had husbands. Women weren't victims at all, it's bullshit, they weren't working plantations and being treated like non-humans, they were provided for and cared for and fulfilled their biological imperative to reproduce and be a mother, many even had slaves to help them with their house chores. Calling your gender role oppression of keeping house and looking after your own kids is hilarious.

Single mothers still have to do that today and don't even have a man to help them out with it, so what changed there? Nothing. You're even more "suppressed" now than you were before because the collective gender was dumb enough to fall for segregationist tactics and thus be emancipated collectively from the care of men. Independence is a nice euphemism for "fucking orphaned from." Black men were labour for agriculture and did the hard physical work (genetically they are the biggest males on Earth and were even bred for it) black women were sex slaves/maids to rich men, often both simultaneously.

Their position was so shit they had a reason to want to escape from it, women were just sold some perverse form of marxism and were dumb enough to actually fall for it.

Are my abilities to be intelligent, bold, risk-taking and strong diminished due to my gender?

They are anomalous and unexpected in modern western society. They are not diminished per say if you are talented, but people on average will trust you less, men and women alike. People will always be circumspect of your achievements or position and you may feel a greater pressure to have to prove yourself, great women are very very rare. Most women use sex or the implication of sex to achieve and obtain everything, not intelligence, reason or merit. As you pointed out yourself:

I think women are the unfair winners of this society, hedonistically grabbing all they can take from it.

Which I concur with.

Is it possible for a woman to be anything but a liberal-arts-degree-holder in this age?

Of course it is, if you stop identifying with those you despise you can be whatever you want to be. If you identify as being an intellectual over the biological state of being a woman, your higher reasoning will take you to an elevated sense of self. I'm of the strong belief that intellectualism supercedes all other categories of difference and segregation. You can say to me, we're different due to race, nationality, religion, gender, sexual orientation, age etc etc... but if we're both intellectuals with a logical curiosity for the inner workings of the cosmos, all of a sudden all those gaps are bridged by a common dominant trait so powerful it surpasses all other means of self-identification and the subsequent segregation it generates.

To be honest, intellectualism is beautiful, there's no other force that can bring people together so non-discriminately, the thing about intellectualism is that it not only brings people together, but the ability to be intelligent and thoughtful (not necessarily have a successful career) commands great respect from any who cross you.

We live in a society which heralds the superficial and the dumbfounded while suppressing the intellectual as boring, the reality is - it's the opposite. The intellectuals are the greats, the interesting people who will elevate the human condition and bring about a new paradigm in their stride - the idiots are the monotonous slaves to drudgerous mediocrity whom indiscriminately and rather ignorantly judge and reject everything they don't understand - which is basically anything at all which is outside their area of personal expertise.

I think their ideology and attitude towards women can be damaging to our progress in gender equality and to its progress in the future.

I agree with you, however, and I do not condone this, but feminism has fostered misandry towards men, TRP is reactionary to that paradigm and the unfairness that men collectively experience in pro-feminist societies, born in the midst of ideological war the philosophy won't leave the proverbial womb gleaming without some sort of blood on it. Civil rights were great, the newest wave of feminism is completely destructive to society, it is bigoted of male viewpoints and is morphing a once just civil rights movement into a bigoted supremacist movement.

I know that there is a good chance that my effort will mean nothing and that anything I say will not change your mind, but I can not know of this subreddit and not try.

If you have the gaul and the will then by all means.

If you are so convinced of how right you are (as a "redpiller") and how wrong I am (as a "bluepiller"), then surely a simple discussion over the internet can't hurt.

She's testing you. Not because it's a shit test or anything, but because that's what really revs her up. In a sexual, relationship-y kind of way. She can't help herself.

Fitness testing you to see your suitability as a mate, I believe they do it subconsciously due to hypergamy which is why you have to be careful who you leave your girl around, if he's a player SHE WILL get attracted and develop feelings. The fitness testing is a series of shit tests, if you outwit her or simply she cannot make you yield, you win. If you're unreactive in a fitness test you shutdown the attraction by being rude. If it's in a relationship it's different, you can ice her out until she apologizes, a girl who've you just met or isn't massively invested into you won't care too much about being ignored by you mid-conversation, she'll get over it and walk off.

This isn't the same as the indirect game of avoiding the hot girl that all the other guys constantly shower in attention to make yourself stand out though, the nuance here is that you're ignoring her in the middle of a conversation not as a long term strategy to stand out to a 9/10.

She's doing this to feel your power. As a man, you're expected to be the stoic rock, while she's expected to be this river of emotion. She needs to test that rock occasionally, to make sure it's still solid. If you waffle at every test, you're going to be seen as weak as unreliable.

If you refuse to engage, and you stand your ground, and you don't move, but let her swirl around you, she is able to feel your power and stability. It makes her love you more, and once her stream of emotions settles, she'll be glad you didn't just fall over.

One girl said she found that really attractive about me, my stoicness. Other girls haven't verbalised it like that.. but have "shown" their appreciation for it when utilised. This is true shit.

Get zen brothers.

The truth can be very brutal, but it's also a beautiful thing. I think the graphic use of language helps illustrate the level of malevolence and intent there can be behind a scorned woman's action, scorned or otherwise "just being a woman" because she perceives you as "a beta she's stuck with." Many women, not all, but many are completely evil to betas. Others simply just don't date them/avoid them rather than go full BITCH MODE like that, but you get the idea.

When you truly understand something, it can help you to put it to rest, learn from it and not hold yourself back because of it. I don't want to use the term "move on" because it's so empty, but essentially you don't want to crash and burn like so many guys do and have after a chick does something like this to them, it's basically the closest thing to divorce without being married and having kids involved, thank fuck for that.

Recent pill taker, quick question on hamster excuse

2 upvotes · 21 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Had this LTR recently (probably the last one for a while, knowing what I learned here) where the girl ended things. Her BS excuse: "I want marriage and kids and he doesn't".

It sounds like a credible reason on the surface, but if a woman loves you more than she loves her fucking dream of a fairy-fuelled princess disney marriage then she'll be more than willing to settle for cohabitation. This suggests you didn't have her under the psychological thumb aka weren't alpha enough and this is just BS to leave. I wouldn't really get to caught up on that, as this experience will push you in the direction you need to go to be alpha enough for a chick whose actually worth it in the future. Generally when you're in beta mode you take shit off women that you shouldn't, you demean yourself and live in a state of scarcity because you don't think you can replace her, you project this to her, she sees it and thus she treats you accordingly, like shit.

Now, even though I didn't want kids/marriage (and I certainly dodged a bullet in that regard)

Yes you did dodge a bullet there because the two of you are not compatible for shit, read previous paragraph for reminders on why that is, lack of alphaness, her being more manipulative than you are etc.

she also told a friend-in-common a couple of things, such as: "I feel we're more like friends now, not bf/gf" and "I just want to feel butterflies again".

Haha, now the real truths come out. I'm assuming your friend in common was a male because unless this chick really really really liked you (as in wants your dick likes you) she would not divulge that kind of information to you unless it was mis-information, women are very much part of a sisterhood and only backstab each other opportunistically when they think they can gain more by betraying the sisterhood. Let's dissect the quotes directly anyway:

"I feel we're more like friends now, not bf/gf"

What this basically means is she's lost sexual attraction to you, but is still very comfortable/confident/safe around you. This is the natural life cycle of a relationship where the man becomes complacent and stops flirting/teasing/gaming/keeping the bitch on her toes, complacency is a slow killer my man, things deteriorate into an ongoing state of mediocrity and bit by bit as the boredom grows and the drama/feelInGz!!! decline she loses attraction and grows bored. What you have to remember is her attraction to you is mostly physical and your attraction to her is mostly mental, if you're boring as shit and not adonis himself the relationship won't fucking last, you definitely slipped into friendzone beta mode here if the bitch is bored.

"I just want to feel butterflies again".

This is directly linked to the other quote. You have bored the fucking shit out of her. She wants excitement again and you weren't giving it to her, so she'll start looking to other guys to get it. She wants an upgrade. She thinks she can do better and deserves to, she wants to feel the way she felt when she first got with you. You can never stop gaming a chick, once you have her, you can't get relaxed and kick back, there's never time to relax, this shit is war!!!

What I take from that is I may have reversed to beta behavior at some point, and her rationalization was to say the things about marriage/kids. If relevant, I'm 27, she's almost 27 as well. We were ~1 year in the LTR.

Ding-ding-ding! Yes, our egos have a habit of deluding us and protecting us from ourselves so we think things we definitely did "may have" happened. You haven't given details about how much shit you put up with, what you paid for/bought her, how many times you ended up cuddling but didn't fuck or anything like that so I don't know just how beta you went, but what I do know is you stopped gaming the chick once the initial honeymoon period wore off, so yeah, you went beta because you stopped locking that bitch down and thus it went to shit, the more bored and unhappy she became, the bolder she would have become in her bullshit no doubt.

She never mentioned anything to me (actually didn't even explain her reasons for breaking up, I found out about everything through the friend, then went into strict no-contact); but up until 1 week before she ended it, she was always saying how great I was, how much she wanted to see me, etc.

Sounds like she's moving on to the next guy if she just fucking out of there. A 27 year old woman wanting babies and marriage commitment, leaves her LTR to be single? Fuck no, that's a downgrade. She was staying with you until she could branch swing to a beta who would facilitate her dream of family or an alpha who was exciting enough to "make her feel butterflies again", no doubt she'll be trying to get the alpha to cum inside her so she can sperm-jack him and force a baby into the world. Fucking crazy bitches. Don't get caught up on the compliments, they're a facade and they don't mean shit - she's throwing you those bones to see if she can maintain a friendzone, draw boyfriend benefits from you without giving up the pussy, don't be fooled by that bullshit.

Apparently the whole thing was "triggered" by a friend's question about her future with me (aka marriage). I actually kept a conscious effort not to show any beta behavior, even though that doesn't mean I didn't slip at some point.

Women will ALWAYS push for commitment, women in the late 20's and early 30's are desperate for children if they haven't already had them, it's a biological calling. Do not be forced into shit. If you look at the woman you're with and think "I don't want her to be the mother of my children" then you have to go with your gut, don't let her craziness push you into shit you don't want, kids deserve two parents who are compatible with each other and each want the kid, no less, there's no half measures with kids you go all in or you don't fucking bother.

To be honest this wasn't the only nail in the coffin (for her) it was the final nail in the coffin. You went beta in the relationship, by saying you don't want kids you basically told the bitch "if you go fuck some alpha, keep his baby and try and pass it off as mine, I'll leave your ass" as the beta your major sticking point (reason for her to stay with you) was the security you could provide her and your safeness, when you weren't being alpha and you weren't giving security as a beta she had essentially fuck all reason to be with you - you had no inherent use or purpose to her, she certainly wasn't perceiving you as alpha because bitches don't get bored around alphas they fall in love with them for laying down the law and giving direction/stability/fEeEeLLLz!

Go on the self improvement track (you saw my other post, so you don't need me to re-paste that here again), if you really loved this girl, use your failure as a source of motivation to better yourself. If you get the opportunity to hit it again, strap the fuck up because no doubt if she gets desperate enough she'll come sniffing for sperm.

consider civility vitally important

Civility is soft manipulation/diplomacy and a result of a society where enough people have their basic needs met and thus are not in a state of savagery. It's important for human progress, without basic needs we don't go forwards, we stagnate or go backwards, back to a time where fighting and pillaging is commonplace because everybody needs to eat, watch how quickly humans revert to violence and cunning once their basic needs are not met, they become animalistic, our social fabric hangs by a thin thread as the "haves" push the inequality gap between themselves and the "have nots." Those gated communities will get mobbed and looted quicker than you can say "quantitative easing."

Is this not a preference for feelings over facts?

No it isn't.

Or is putting feelings on par with facts okay?

No, feelings are too easily manipulated, hormones, your diet, the weather, your fitness level etc. Logic is in a state of constance because of it's third person objectivity. Feelings can fuel logic, they're not completely separate, there is and can be a cohesive relationship between emotions and logic, however with the gender differences we often see the conflictual element of it, a man trying to apply logic to a woman's actions which are inherently emotionally driven. Facts themselves aren't so valuable as the decision making process behind a rational mind. Facts are the building blocks of logic, you can't have logic without being factual, to reduce logic to mere facts is to discredit it's actual utility and how it manifests.

The people who hate logic the most, generally, are the ones who suck at wielding it, they hate what they don't understand because it scares them. Plus with women, they really are addicted to emotions and drama, logic basically starves them of that so they'll say shit like "fuck logic" "can you stop trying to be smart for once and just listen to what I have to say!" and blah blah "being smart for once" means "being rational and reasonable." It's this predisposition and preference for emotive thinking and reasoning that makes women (and some men) absolutely fucking crazy, these people don't even understand themselves, they have no grounding.

I really don't understand why people refuse to accept and understand this concept.

Women (not limited to staunch feminists), don't like to take responsibility for anything, they live in a mental world where men should take charge of all the things they don't like but they should have the power to do what they like - yeah, fuck logic. They want all the power without any of the responsibility, women who are forced to take responsibility in high powered jobs often quit or have breakdowns, they're too feeble to handle all that responsibility, they're addicted to power but they prefer to defer - MINDFUCK.

I see on a day to day basis, women illogically blaming any incorrect fact they stated, thing they did or opinion they had as being the fault of the nearest guy, they'll defend their incorrect viewpoint out of pride for a bit, then when they realise the majority won't back them and start to FEEL stupid, in their shame they will blame somebody else and try to BS their way back to dignity.

It's quite pathetic when the woman doing it is the "head of something" actually makes you think twice about "civil rights" when a female leader acts like a small child and tries to shift her inadequacy onto another. That's what they do, they blame shift to someone else, if there's no guy to blame they'll blame the weakest female (lowest sexual and social value) of the group instead.

The EU is a bad economic deal for any government with wealth as it basically all ends up getting wasted on the bureaucracy which is creating EU law and getting thrown at corrupt governments in ex soviet central and eastern europe. Countries as rich as Germany and UK should not be in political union with nations like Belarus and Romania, who do nothing but siphon wealth from the west of the continent into the east, be it through the EU itself allocating funds, crime or mass emigration of labour.

As for the EU, the less muslims the better, their lack of integration and self ostracization only creates discord and racial/religious tension. No other race or religion creates the bullshit that the islamic ideology does, but then other religions tend not to possess a contemporary political component, but just cultural and spiritual ones. Whether Turkey is better off in or out for it's own sake is regardless of the point being made, the fact remains that Turkey's accession would rapidly increase the speed of islamification and this "war of the wombs" shit the guy I replied to was talking of.

Obviously it can get more complex, like turning peoples words around on them, using puns/innuendo (often interchangeably), double entendre etc (like a stand up comic would) but start with the simplicity - agree and amplify.

She didn't blame him overtly but covertly and indirectly (sneakily), she blamed herself, she said he shouldn't blame himself because it was her fault she did what she did, she was very honest about it (to me) about how she can be, but essentially she's going along with him blaming himself because she's allowing him to use that as a reason to overlook her transgression. She gave him an ultimatum to leave and he blamed himself for her actions.

Even if a girl blames herself in words, if her actions allow you to shoulder the blame, she's essentially not facing consequences for her actions, it's almost facetious, or if not facetious, truthfulness mixed with selfishness.

If she was a swordsman, he'd be her sword, he has no say in what he does or how if she's not happy with it and whenever he tries to balls up and challenge her she'll bombard him psychologically, withhold sex, make him feel guilty, make him feel jealous, attack his ego/value.. etc until he falls back into line, essentially conditioning him to be supplicative and tolerant of her bullshit. She doesn't respect him and she's only using him for resources and because she doesn't want to be single. leads you to the conclusion that women in general are degrading the society values

They are, at least in western countries where they comprise the majority of voters and their views are dominant in most mainstream media, magazines (even guys magazines) radio, tv, etc. Not all of them are consciously doing it, but because the feminist movement is so powerful and gives their impulsive emotional rationale so much credibility, it ends up dominating public life, regardless of it's actual insanity. Some of the staunch feminists even have the audacity to preach emotionalism over rationalism, which is absurd when you're trying to stably run a civilization and/or even improve it.

Females do not detach emotionally very well from things people say, things that are done or from the impact of their surroundings (yes there are exceptions, but the 99% can't do it very well or won't do it) to pretend to be nice, to have conceit for people yet look at them in the face as they're a friend is a very passive aggressive feminine trait, it's derived from two places 1 - females lack strength, so all their damage is done mentally, 2 - feminine sensibilities (the core of what I was getting at) women take offence, get offended and demand safety and tolerance for shit far more than men do, men are taught to toughen up (adapt to their environment) women seem to do the opposite, soften their surroundings (make their environment adapt to them)

Now feminine sensibilities contributing to things like political correctness is just one manifestation of it. Most women have this "sensitivity" where things need to be dressed up and worded in a certain way, non-feminist women tend to have this as a personality trait, feminists weaponize it to stifle debate with their opponents and reframe the argument (again changing the environment so that the debate is biased towards favouring them) rather than actually address the points their opponents make using conciseness and logic. The more intelligent women (read: intelligence in women is basically manipulative intelligence aka machiavellianism) will purposely misinterpret what you say and misrepresent your position (strawman fallacy), then basically go to town on "your viewpoint" in some sadistic show of elitist "look see, despite my vagina I can show you a thing or two!" type of hubris. The old female inferiority complex manifesting "LOOK, YOU GOT BEAT BY A GIRL!" (hilarious thing about this is, if the BS equality you preach was real, getting beat by a girl would be no worse than being beat by a boy, but hey this irony is probably lost in all that estrogen HAHA)

Women are not fair debaters, feminist or not and they care only about "winning" not about really learning from debates, they are intellectually dishonest. When you treat them like a man or "equal" you're making a mistake, the woman who are talented enough to be dubbed equals are so, but in a different way - the few women who do possess logic often choose to selectively utilise it, so sometimes you give them the benefit of the doubt and in that instance, they opt to favour the hormone filled highs and lows of emotive reasoning and dramatism, which leads to disappointment. Don't trust women to be logical, even ones who have demonstrated they can use logic, to be logical, because their consistency in utilising said logic is not reliable and you'll often be left feeling extremely disappointed, especially when you know she can be better, fairer and clearer minded - but in this moment she isn't, she's being your textbook woman.

Women are solopsistic so they don't really give two shits about the male experience and even if there's a few who do, they are incapable of comprehending it, it's a world and state of living beyond their genetic, neurological and spiritual grasp and the same can be said in reverse, we'll never know what it's like to be women, but if you value logic and it's utility, then you shouldn't be too particularly jealous of that.

I'm not trying to defend men's rights, I don't bother with that shit, I think it's a waste of time, collectivism is for the weak, so people can bunch together and be heard in an attempt to increase their power this is also why so many women rely on and need feminism, they are weak, they can't get anywhere without a leg up or without changing the environment to be biased towards them (eg: schools favouring coursework over examinations) in the past they relied on men and there was a cohesive relationship where each provided in a yin-yang relationship for each other, then they decided hey we don't like being reliant on men, let's try to become men - and scream we're equal, if we say it enough times it might become true, for the best part 50 years has passed and they're still acting like spoilt little children, they've not been able to step up to the plate and become "like men", instead they've slaughtered their femininity and become very poor imitation copies of men, whilst the bulk of men have had an opposite effect and become more effeminate, it's incredibly perverse to be consciously aware of this socially engineered "gender swap" shit has gone far beyond "just civil rights" which I'm sure the bulk of TRP has real no fucking problem with whatsoever, as it does little perceivable harm to anything (other than the obvious: who looks after the kids? etc) I'm merely communicating my observations of women/feminism based on experience, knowledge of studies and anecdotes from public life on how women behave in my country which is the UK, just because I can articulate my points well, and believe in them, doesn't mean I believe in men's rights activism. I don't and I'd never be willing to get involved with that shit, they are weak and their angle is all wrong, they're approaching women with logic, it's pathetic.

If this sub has taught me anything other than how to be a better man and how to carry myself, it's that the anglosphere women (US, UK, CANADA, AUS, NZ) are basically all the same except their accents due to a shared americanised culture. Mainland Europe has feminist issues too, as does Scandinavia but the manifestation is different as these places have their own cultures independent of the american superpower's mainstream media.

You can't blame an ideology that is widely variable in definition for what some bad people on the fringes twist it to mean.

People make the same arguments for muslims with islamists, who have a completely contradictory Qu'ran which can be selectively quoted to make any argument, it is full of hypocrisy as is feminism. At the end of the day if you share an ideology with crazies and you don't keep your crazies under control, don't expect to keep your credibility and be seen as "good" because the crazies have hijacked your ideology, they've actually changed it and made it something else, they've made it a bad force in the world, something which creates a net negative detriment.

You've swallowed that bad ideology and been sold it's good, you're the fool - but you don't realise it, and you don't appreciate being made aware of it, living as a feminist you will never be happy as you are sold a lie. You believe you are equal to a man, but you do not think like a man and your capabilities are vastly different from a mans, yet you have an inferiority complex that was brainwashed into you, that your femininity wasn't enough - that you must be like men - at the bare minimal equal to them, if not superior, you must act like them (but sexualised) and then use your sexual edge for "empowerment."

One thing we believe on TRP is that feminism or not, a woman who has a bad relationship with her father, especially if he's abusive, is undateable. She's damaged beyond repair. She will never trust men. No amount of /redpillwomen will fix such a woman, because she is scarred by her experience. Such women have little choice but to find peace through religion, or other means, otherwise they will always be twisted, illogical and spiteful.

I almost feel like I'm telling a junkie to give up the heroin because it's bad for him in the long run, but it's the only thing that makes him feel slightly empowered in the short run, so he shuns me. OK. I've done my civic duty for the day. I'm done here. Good day.

2 upvotes · 16 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

If you take pleasure in other peoples pain, it's a strong psychopathic trait, which is part of the dark triad. You don't empathise with their pain, and imagine that you're a victim too - you imagine you are inflicting that pain and enjoying the sense of power it brings. You essentially empathise with the perpetrator, not the victim.

Men like this will rule over their the mother of their child with an ironfist, she will obey his almost every word, respect him, love him, and be seemingly selfless to him even though he's a cunt, a man like this gets love from a woman that most men only dream of, or think is impossible. These are the kind of men women think about when they start their bullshit "all men are jerks" rhetoric. No love, just the ones who aren't cunts "don't have that spark" they don't make your vag vibrate and lubricate because they don't challenge you enough and keep a sense of excitement and drama going, which is really what you're addicted to - so you don't notice them or consider them eligible, a cunt for all their shortcomings however is accepted because they can provide this.

Women seem to really give their hearts and souls to these cunts, all the other guys are fodder for their own bullshit, where's he the prey and she's the hunter. In some extreme cases the mother will even help said man molest his own daughter, defend him, cover up for him and facilitate his raping of his own kid. These men are fucking monsters, but as women seem to fucking LOVE these men (they say they don't, but they constantly fuck them and go for them/get attracted by them) these guys have no problems reproducing. Meaning if it's a genetic thing, more dark triads are being bred into the population. If your dad was always dark triad and you're not, you probably got your mums genes for behaviour.

It's almost like an elaborate hamster, tell them they're being manipulative with a victim mentality and then they'll call off the observation. I hardly doubt the intellectually diminished gen Y are manipulatively trying to blame gen X for their issues like feminists do "to gain power", if anything gen Y would be calling out the mistakes around them they had no say in enacting yet are profusely impacted by. Oh my dear lord. Well you've put plenty of words into my mouth and concocted a hefty strawman which very much misrepresents my ideas and position. My instincts tell me there's a lot of passion in your words and that you mean well, but it's like your meaning for words are different to mine, we speak the same language but see words differently. You use the word and idea of "controlling" negatively for instance, whilst I talk about control as a positive thing done out of compassion as a leader. Would you call a president who leads his country and uses force to maintain his position of leader as a compassionate patriot looking after the country or a ruling oppressive dictator? You see the mind fuck is that it's your view of the world and interpretation of his intentions which defines that. It really is too late in my timezone (I'm GMT) to form a rebuttal that addresses all your points and continue with you, perhaps some other time, if not, good luck to you and don't honestly believe that "you're inferior", for being the less dominant party in a relationship. Not being dominant doesn't mean you're inferior, only feminism could have you drawing such a parallel, bloody vile ideology. You see it so black and white, it's kind of actually sad for me to read. Good luck to you, sincerely. I hope you find peace with your worldview.

Feminism is like religion to many people. Something to believe in. Law of power #32 - play to people's fantasies. EG: women aren't inferior to men in specific ways (physical strength, logical capacity etc.) You got all these people buying into this shit, yet who does a woman look to when she's in danger? The nearest man. Who do the majority female voters vote into politics where logic is incredibly important? Men. Tells you enough really. The dissonance is strong.

Germany - https://www.google.co.uk/?gws_rd=cr#fp=1ee7c76c5f63097&q=germany+birth+rate (a developed economy with a population as low as 1.36, I've heard american anti-nazi propaganda post WW2 emasculated the fuck out of german men, I can't really say whether that's true or not, but this birth rate is insanely low for a rich nation)

Switzerland - https://www.google.co.uk/?gws_rd=cr#fp=1ee7c76c5f63097&q=switzerland+birth+rate - 1.52, luckily they have pretty closed borders compared to rest of europe, hard to get in and get citizenship, they may survive.

All these countries except Poland, Portugal (the poorest countries here) and Switzerland (an EEA member but not an EU member), are experiencing forms of mass immigration from the third world (with the french, often Algeria, and ex french african colonies) with beneath replacement population rates. The immigrants on average tend to have above replacement population numbers at 3-5 kids.

Yeah I'm not a feminist, so you know, you can disagree with me and I won't automatically hate you. Your disagreement with me doesn't threaten my beliefs or otherwise invoke irrational ad hominem, shaming tactics and a proverbial shit-fest. I think we're equal in importance, but I don't think we're equal in burden, equal in our expectations of each other (women often demand more than vice versa) or equal in any other measure. I find it easier to respect men than women due to a ubiquitous self-entitlement mindset women have which by comparison is largely absent in the collective male psyche. Most of the equality perceived between the sexes, as far as I'm concerned is complete and utter BS. Feminism has degraded the quality of women around too, thus amplifying the inequality it sought to adjust. Economically and socially the women may have been elevated, but sexually and romantically it has degraded them. It's ruined the family unit and it's told women that being feminine makes them automatically inferior, rather than telling them to embrace it. Feminism is ironically oppressive of those it supposedly "liberates" by indoctrinating women with ideology which will make them romantically undesirable. Enjoy work!

The Legal Definition of Rape

2 upvotes · 20 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Rape in feminist language is making a woman do anything she doesn't want to do.

- "Hey Sarah, can you lift a bunch of heavy boxes from the cellar and bring them up here?"
- "Can I not get my sexual equal, Peter, with his big muscular biceps to do it?"
- "No Sarah, gender equality, Peter's big muscular arms are obviously equal in strength to your skinny arms, go get the boxes"
- "That's rape, you're trying to make me do something I'm not comfortable with!"

Condolences to all the women who actually have been raped and now suffer trauma, every time you hear a bitch use the word "rape" in vain, give her a slap, she's delegitimizing the seriousness of your experience.

that's not red pill per say. Go up to women and try make out with them the worse they can do is slap you the best they can do is give you their number and hook up. Shit works. Incorporating a not give a fuck mentality helps a lot. Outcome independence + abundance mentality = the key to being a confident man and is probably something the majority of men need to work on, knowing it isn't enough in and of itself to feel the change you have to practice it. I think most of us are born with it but are nagged and inculcated with insecurities our whole lives that the majority of men start giving a fuck about "what ifs" rather than giving in to their natural risk taking behaviour... which is what gets anything remotely successful done. Don't take risks, don't get successful. Simple.

She answers with her preferences/way of life rather than talking more generalised, which is where the question was aimed.

Other people said she was a ho to avoid and he ignored them so he didn't get swayed, if anything he did exactly what he wanted and failed to analyse her correctly. This is a men's rights issue (she can get away with this, no one will believe him especially if she's hot and if it was the reverse footing, a mere accusation would have him in a cell WITHOUT PROOF and most of society would believe it as gospel)

Getting raped doesn't make you beta man, it means you got raped, you're off mark here. A drunk alpha can be raped too you know? Maybe we should focus on the men's rights component of this and not so much the sociosexual status of the man posting who got raped.

Feminism is the butt of an ironic joke it has played on itself. Thanks to liberation, smart women don't have kids and because of this future generations of women will get progressively dumber and less capable as natural selection pushes for greater sexual dimorphism in intelligence.

Career strategies for the red pill man

2 upvotes · 8 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Yeah in the UK if you study at a uni after 2012:

- You don't begin repayments until you earn £21,000 a year (at current rates that's $32,000 US)
- Once you earn over that threshold anything earned over that amount has an additional "graduation tax" of about 8-9% applied to your monthly salary, you repay as you earn. If you never hit the threshold, you never pay it back.
- If you become unemployed, they can't tax you so you stop paying it. No demands for repayments or any other bullshit.
- If you move to another country, they don't tend to chase you for the money, a lot of the debt has been written off and Student Finance England has never actually brought a case to court to sue someone for the monies they owe the treasury in another jurisdiction.
- If you still haven't paid it back after 30 years, the debt is wiped.

If I was studying for a degree in the US I'd be fucking shit scared.

And yeah for some reason US Ba Law is equivalent to Masters in all other jurisdictions its meant to be academically tougher.

Yeah man bitches here verbally hate on Simon Cowell but they'd all fuck him in a heartbeat. He's a made man. If you've not seen English versions (NOT US VERSIONS) of his talent contests he gets booed and given shit just for being candid and politically incorrect. When he tells someone with no talent something along the lines of "you're shit the birds in the trees outside my house sing better than you! Show business isn't for you, get a job in retail" the audience boos and the other judges tell him in euphemistic terms that he's a cunt.

They hate him because he's politically incorrect/quite red pill, not because of his shenanigans with women (he seems to get away with it in the press, so I guess the women are happy with it!)

Indigenous English guy speaking - womanizing is criticized like a motherfucker here especially if you're an old guy. A guy my age (early 20's) would get called a player and told "you've got plenty of time to settle down yet" and "I'm sure you'll find the right woman" verbatim from plenty of women, if not outright shaming - (I heard this kind of diatribe from my neighbour, a fat, ugly 28 year old woman who collided with the wall head first very early and married a really pleasant/kind omega guy a few months back, he's not even a beta provider and she wears the trousers there), even when it came up some time ago I explicitly stated "I don't do relationships" and that's where these kind of responses came from.

(off topic: She's a toxic BPD type but he's weak-willed, I may innocuously invite him to be my gym partner to help him get on top of shit with her/escape, he's quite overweight whilst she's obese/morbidly obese and both have failed at losing weight for ages)

If I was 50 that same woman would be calling me a perv and women would shame saying I'm too immature to settle down, can't handle them, all that shit. Most women over 35 here did not just hit the wall, they hit the fucking great wall of china and have half a face remaining, subsequently that hamster is powered on nuclear fission.

A man can have lots of sex partners and one love, and he'll be awesome in a woman's eyes because his heart has a really high price. To men this sounds crazy, but that's how it works because in a woman's mind he's not a slut but a high value male.

Which is true subconsciously for them, but not consciously. Consciously they go into feminist mode and ask about sexual double standards when someone calls them on their own slutting... even though, you know, women always choose if sex happens and guys need talent/to be high on the social ladder to get it. But nevermind the ease of getting sex with a pussy pass, lets hope we can whine enough about double standards so men find our gaping slutty cunts and associated personalities desirable!

No. I mean not being afraid to commit when you find a chick who does meet your standards because you've been surrounded by hoes all your life and suffer from subsequent trust issues.

Alpha doesn't mean sex with sluts. That's a rather strange caricature.

I'm 23 and my industry of profession is Law/Finance, so basically I do accountancy/banking/corporate law type shit. I'll be making serious dollars when I'm older because I'm willing to work like a slave to build my empire and the industry I'm in is lucrative (my passion is writing/philosophy/astrophysics, but I'm not dumb, those won't make money!) I'm heavily ambitious and I'm happy to improve myself beyond my current self and fuck the occasional slut now and again, but I've looked far far ahead and the sad thing would be to build this giant empire of wealth and knowledge and experience and having nobody to pass it on to. I think passing on your greatness is almost as important as ascertaining it in the first place, otherwise it dies when you die. Being successful means nothing if the government consolidates all your wealth when you die or you have to leave it to some charity or ungrateful relative simply because you didn't find a woman worth having kids with. Legacy is important to me.

It's not about civil rights. It's about a culture that does not punish women the way it punishes men. A culture where people demand and expect more of men than they do of women, women included. A culture where equality is defined as men having obligations and responsibilities whilst women get a free pass for doing bad things due to their "weaknesses and feelings" and everyone support them in their mistakes and sins as they verbally bullshit their reasoning for doing it in a melodramatic tone of voice, the same things they frown on and shame men for expressing after they ask them to express said things (like one big shit test)

You can never have equality but you can have harmony, leader and follower (like in the military) you can have cohesion, complementation etc. Feminism actually destroyed co-operation not through civil rights, but through giving women more rights and representation than men have (family courts, affirmative action etc) and controlling/influencing the media through the majority female vote to portray women as positive and men as negative, resulting in a society where women are more valued than men in the mainstream, whilst men have more expected of them (as they always did) except without any of the recognition, reward or power unless they're at the very top of their field and aren't completely inculcated into feminist stupidity. That's the development of the last 50 years and if you don't want to undo any of that, you're mad. Birth rates are down, the economies are stagnating.. crime is up.. it's all related to the destruction of the family caused by the feminist cause, it's made us less efficient, more indifferent (like you admit) and more toxic.

Or they empathise and want to make a real difference. EG: I was bullied as a kid at school. I'm a fully grown man now, muscular and tall. I see a charity to do with kids being bullied or I see a weak kid getting bullied and I wanna help/kick ass and sit the kid down and talk with him. Usually I hate kids and avoid them because they're annoying, but I empathise in these situations and involve myself.

I'm quite the cynic and if you're cynical you're probably red-pill in many ways, however that doesn't mean altruism doesn't exist, albeit, it may be rare.

I don't disagree with you, it's definitely one significant reason, however I think another significant reason is people empathise with the cause they donate to. Another example, your mother died of cancer, now you donate to a cancer charity because you hate cancer and don't want others to lose people to it. You could argue altruism is selfish because it's cathartic, but then not all selfishness is equal, you have to measure it, there's sociopath selfish and then there's selfish because you see a side effect of well-being for being altruistic.

I value your idealistic romanticism truly, it's a nice comfort, however the comfort of a good woman doesn't need to be one's purpose in life, as rare it is, such a thing is kind of foolish to strive for. I understand your viewpoint, simply, for my own journey thus far, I must disagree with it as something universal that applies to all or even most men. Everyone seems to have their own spin on the red pill via how they interpret it. I'm a cynic. I see no evidence that if I build my SMV sky high that all these high quality wife material women, loyal, intelligent and ever feminine will drop into my lap, no, sky high SMV gets me lots of pussy, good women are scarce and this civilization corrupts them, that's the truth no matter how demonic or bitter it sounds.

Grab coffee I wrote you an essay :)

The reason we take pride in male field reports is because they are doing what a lot of men find difficult (especially in my generation, generation Y.. the 18-30 group) being sociable, self-controlled, comfortable with themselves, not too aggressive and neither too laid back.. but still dominant enough to get results, respect and be viewed as sexy by the opposite gender. Most guys suffer with that, I'd say the vast majority of men in GEN Y and heck the gen before it have inferior social skills to women due to their upbringings, the amount of burden they feel from societal expectation, absent fathers and lack of strong male role models as well as biological reasons (females are genetically disposed to interact with "the herd" more, female babies choose to look at faces more whilst male babies prefer looking at machines/objects in one study done on children who are under a year old and thus rather unsocialised).

So you have that aspect, that men are less social on average but as a group are actually expected to instigate, pursue and "obtain" the affection of a female, although females on average have better social skills in order to negotiate such a thing yet refuse to "Despite so called equality" take the reins there, no, they feel like THEY ARE THE PRIZE and THEY SHOULD BE ASKED OUT and in essence sit on a position of power where they get to accept and reject, a notion that wider society reinforces. Women are notoriously emotional, nobody likes rejection, nobody at all, yet men face the burden and anxiety of rejection whenever they want to date/get laid, whilst women get to sit cosy and do all the selection. So is a woman getting laid to 100 guys equal in feat to a man laying 100 girls? Fuck no. The assumption is the guy had to put a lot of work in, overcome a lot of his shortcomings and evolve as a person, all a woman had to do was stand/sit there and say yes or no and in the case of a yes, be guided by the males interaction and dominance until she feels comfortable to have sex, she doesn't actually have to convince him to fuck her, he's the one in the sales job in selling himself as a good candidate to fuck, not her.

On the topic of choosing and selecting, there is no skill in choice. Choice does not take a tried and tested methodology, evolution/enlightenment, manipulation, intelligence or really anything admirable, to be able to choose is to command power. Women have this power when it comes to "if sex happens." That's why we say they are the gatekeepers of sex. Whether you like this or disagree with this is irrelevant, go in to the world and experience life and talk to people and you will see this is the prevailing attitude, this is the paradigm we live in.

As for standards, yes, women do have higher standards than men. Men don't have these stupid fucking lists of everything she must be or some almost biblical notion of what constitutes "Mrs. Perfect", no, men don't have such deluded, objectifying stringent ideals of what constitutes the ideal woman, women are often discriminant, shallow and superficial, cognitively, by choice. They make lists of what "Mr. Right" is and then go about drawing up this list based on the premise that they themselves are worthy of all such things and deserve no less (as L'oreal says, because you're worth it!) EG: he must be at least 6'0, earning at least $50,000 a year, has a university education, an athletic/gym body, has a car, doesn't smoke, no tattoos, not a minority, must prioritise me above everything else etc (and the LIST GOES ON AND ON AND ON with some women)

When it comes to "lists" men have preferences, but don't actively discriminate as a general population that said woman must earn a certain amount of money or must be a specific height or university educated. Men's superficial preferences end with physical looks for women and that isn't even a cognitive choice, it's how men are wired. To like big and/or juicy firm breasts, a big ass, a tight waist, plump cheeks and clear soft skin is something a man simply cannot help which is why women are so successful in manipulating men with their sexuality. Whether a guy hates a woman's personality or not, if she has all those physical traits then he will find her sexually desirable, he has no consent or say in that, there's no debate like we're having here or reasoning or logical thought process, she arouses him with her embodiment of everything his body desires on the metaphysical level, overwhelms him and bypasses his higher brain functions – he's attracted without even having a word or thought in the matter.

None of this equality jazz really makes a man's limbic system go "hey! this girl is long term relationship material!" no.. girls who don't complement, but want to fight and compete and take control or be viewed as "just as good as he is or even better than he is" aka "if he can fuck loads, I can too!" tells a man's primitive brain he's essentially entering a relationship with another a man, a person of raw masculine energy, and that isn't attractive AT ALL, it feels to a man, quite frankly, completely disgusting and revolting to be emotionally involved with such a person. No woman in a power suit with lots of money is getting all the male attention because that's not what men look for, she's embodying masculinity when a woman needs femininity, tenderness and loyalty to be even remotely respectable. A lack of sexual loyalty in women means a man is not guaranteed paternity, any hint of adultery and a man will never truly trust said woman again, the pair bond has been destroyed.

Men, with all the gender expectation placed on them by women and wider society (including government/the legal system) have a lot more to lose from monogamy than women do and this is backed up by the state via family courts who are biased against men and actively discriminate against them and violate their constitutional rights by essentially demanding payment from them and threatening them with jail without due process or a crime actually even being committed by the man EG: she's the adulterer. So men are more commitment phobic as they take a bigger chance whilst a woman only has everything to gain. This is why men don't want to commit to women who surrender their bodies to all and sundry, if she leaves him he's getting fucked in the ass by the legal system and wider society will support her ill decisions via faulty rationalisation and lots of "feelings" talk.

This double standard also stems from biological reasons (such as unguaranteed paternity) which by the way for the idiot above who asked "what's wrong with not being the father to the child of a woman you've invested heavily in emotionally?" No shit, it feels like a massive betrayal. More of a betrayal than being cheated on. It destroys your world and tears at your soul, the kid you pair bonded with and invested in isn't even yours. You've been completely scammed, and it's those intense emotions in a man which will drive him to murder, be it her and her lover or himself (many men commit suicide when a woman cheats and divorces him, yet women rarely do - check the suicide rates - yet feminists don't ever talk about that do they? Biased, misandrist bitches.). Violating a man's loyalty is to violate a man's identity and sense of self-worth, and even the most logical, rational and well put together man does not take kindly to a psychological raping and will go full on batshit crazy in said situations. The fact that question was even asked by the other poster demonstrates a huge level of ignorance towards intergender dynamics.

10% of children in the United States are raised by fathers who aren't biologically their fathers, but both the child(ren) and the father believe they are biologically related.. Because mommy fucked another dick and wanted to feel the nice sensation of warm sperm rushing up her womb, didn't abort, didn't take the pill, didn't take a morning after pill, kept quiet, lied and told her husband/boyfriend that kid was his, letting that poor man raise this other man's children with her whilst also betraying her children of the right to know the truth and have contact with their real father. This is among one of the most heinous things a human-being can do, the ultimate form of betrayal felt instinctually by men as a distinct group in the species and should be up there with other serious crimes for the amount of pain and suffering it creates.

So after all that... you think to yourself in your rather admirable "through the eyes of a female" idealism that this double standard isn't warranted? This double standard is a result of other double standards, men having more expected of them by women in society (help her with her bags!) (ladies first!) (take care of the bill!) and this expands into more intimate affairs, both in dating (he has to approach me!) (he has to impress me!) (my friends have to like him! - guys often drop friends for girls) and in long term relationships (he needs to provide for us!) (he HAS TO MAKE ME feel special - she isn't expected to do that for him though), men carry more burden to actually bring benefits to the table and they carry the burden of "performing" the seduction to begin with and in "maintaining" long term relationships thus when there is sexual success for a man it is not just mere choice via his own personal discretion as it is most of the time with women, this is the methodological reason why women getting laid isn't impressive, because they simply don't have to work all that hard if at all to make it happen.

EDIT REASON: fixing typos/grammar.

2 upvotes · 4 July 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I don't believe being 6'1 really gives me any advantages. Obviously if there's two good looking guys the taller one will be preferred under chick logic. But smaller guys with nicer faces, gym ethic, better jobs etc can easily dwarf (couldn't help but throw in a pun) taller guys. Height is an asset but it's doesn't grant the huge advantage that these articles try to sell. Height is icing on the cake as it gives presence but it's not a crutch for a guy like say huge tits are for a chick. Height matters but being 6ft or taller doesn't make u a casanova or get u the easy life.

Most people think preferences and discriminating are synonymous, they're not. Preferences are what you like and dislike. Discriminating is when you take what you like and dislike and try to influence others basic freedoms based upon your preferences.

Emphasis on basic freedoms. Nobody has the freedom to be entitled to date whoever they want, dating is mutually consensual and either party can terminate the sexual agreement at any time due to their own preferences.

"brainwash" -- norwegian documentary examines how fields like sociology and feminist studies reject actual science because it doesn't fit with their ideology

2 upvotes · 26 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

English is latin based, although it's classed as germanic officially because it has many borrowings from latin and French due to christianity and then the normandy french invasion. In fact, despite it's germanic classification (and thus meant to be similar to a language such as norwegian, which I can attest as a native speaker of English, it definitely isn't) it's far more similar to romance languages like French and Spanish. I've done light study of both french and spanish and for me as a native speaker, they seem far less overwhelming than norwegian which is ironically classed as being in the same language family as English when French/Spanish are not and should be thus far more difficult for me. I'm not alone as a native English speaker in finding this (ask around)

One can only assume anglo saxon old English was a germanic language and the french (william the conqueror) romanticised it with their invasion. This study seems to back up my thinking:

Where exactly does modern English vocabulary come from? The website AskOxford cites a computerized analysis of the roughly 80,000 words in the old third edition of the Shorter Oxford Dictionary. The study, published in 1973, offered this breakdown of sources: Latin, 28.34 percent; French, 28.3 percent; Old and Middle English, Old Norse, and Dutch, 25 percent; Greek 5.32 percent; no etymology given, 4.03 percent; derived from proper names, 3.28 percent; all other languages, less than 1 percent.

And your opinion on this subject has now been proven to be worthless considering how much of your posts you have edited out.

My position did not change prior to editing.

I would have screen capped them if I knew you'd be so petty.

Disagreement in a specific facet is not being petty, it's honest. Screencapping would of proved little and is somewhat pathetic.

I have also provided reasoning but here is more for you: * Monogamy ensures that more males have access to more females. * Monogamy decreases the odds of males ending up as parents of children who are not biologically theirs by reinforcing women to be more monogamous.

Yes, monogamy is beneficial to low value men, I agree with that from a biological perspective but you ignore the cultural perspective entirely. In western feminist culture (let me clarify: all western nations are pro-feminist, pro-female and anti-male both socially and legally in how they enact divorce legislation and laws which benefit women) point 1 is incorrect, males have access to more females by remaining single. Point 2 is correct only when and if a man wants a child, for the sake of children, monogamy is desirable. Men want children less than women in all age groups, children are thus the desire of women more so than they are men, now I know this "anecdotally" from my culture, but I'll post up a Finnish study for you to look at here:

http://econlog.econlib.org/archives/2010/10/baby_fever.html

This is /r/TheRedPill, not /r/antifeminism. You may want to learn the difference. Hypergamy, cuckoldry, AFBB, and other principles of TRP have existed before feminism. I am sorry you don't want to read about a subject you seem to be taking such a big part of in discussions. I recommend this book to get you started: The Moral Animal

I said that I hadn't read, not that I wouldn't read, so thank you for the book suggestion. This sub is about game concepts and fem-centrism in western society, many things posted here are about feminist arguments and attitudes within the west and the prevailing attitude here is that feminism is full of shit, so yes, there's lots of anti-feminist sentiment here and my anti-feminist sentiment is not "unwelcome here" so you're wrong to point me elsewhere. Game is a nice thing for non-westerners to learn from westerners, seeing as outside the west your chances to have varied experiences leading to "good game" are limited by culturally enforced monogamy via conservatism. Game has been developed largely on the back of interaction with western sluts due to the destruction of the family unit over here, again, caused by feminism. Game is an inadvertent fruit feminism has provided men by forcing them to adapt to western female attitudes. If you can learn these techniques without seeing your society crumble in front of you, you're a lucky man.

I am not going to respond to you any more, seeing as how you will probably just edit your posts again so that my replies don't make sense.

Not my intention to make you "look like you don't make sense", I edited my responses merely to be more compact. Bye.

2 upvotes · 11 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

This was pre-red pill for me, but luckily I was smart enough at the time to work out she didn't like the mere notion or concept of me being a virgin. She told me she was a virgin and only gave her previous BFs BJ's and handjobs and that even though both her previous BFs pressured her for sex, she didn't want to have sex with them because her friends had told her stories about how much losing your virginity hurt, so she was scared of cock, funnily enough. I was BF#3 for her, and normally by BF#3 that female virginity is long gone, but when the time came and she was "ready" we had sex and she bled all over the place, plus it was so tight I had trouble getting my dick up in it, so she wasn't lying.

She didn't give it up easy and I got the same handjob/BJ treatment her exs did for about 3-4 months until she was "ready" to try it, she was genuinely scared. The reason I keep using "ready" in quotes is essentially she had to be horny enough but at the same time reassured with empty statements like "it'll be okay" and "there's no need to be scared, I've got you" in order to actually go ahead and do the deed. In fact one time before she actually lost her virginity to me we were about to fuck, she freaked out about it and stopped the escalation. Obviously I was pissed off because for me it was a cock tease, but she could see that and so blew me until I ejaculated in her mouth (she was a swallower, a good girl in that respect - haha!) In fact, she was blowing me almost everyday so I didn't care at all, probably because she was afraid to actually fuck so felt she could satisfy me/make up for it by blowing me all the time (which she was comfortable with) and hey, it worked - getting daily BJs from her are fond memories for me.

Anyway enough of the background story, I'll cut to the chase: before we had sex she kept asking about my sexual history, how many girlfriends I'd had, had I had sex with them and blah blah related questions, she was fucking probing for essentially "does this guy know his shit or not?" I remember thinking "why does she care if I had sex with my exs" then I thought "this girl is a virgin" and I managed to add 2 and 2 and get fucking 4 deducing "she wants to be assured I know what I'm doing in the sack because she's scared" ultimately I worked out she wouldn't feel comfortable with a guy who also didn't know wtf he was doing and that she liked the idea she wouldn't have to worry about her first time because the guy would be taking care of that for her and that would take all the pressure/responsibility and anxiety off her. Now even though I had no experience at the time, I took care of that and continued to pummel the hell out of her pussy for months. She never knew I was a virgin and by deceiving her I wasn't one it turned out that it didn't matter, it was just all in her sweet little head of female psychology, that essentially she couldn't trust/be attracted/feel comfortable doing it with a guy who hadn't it done before. Essentially, women don't value male virginity and this is how I learnt they don't.

I agree with what you're saying, in the context of the workplace telling a chick to fuckoff or giving her a slap back down to reality can result in being fired, the same in the classroom, too - you have to be politically correct with your attempts and words lose a lot of their power when the language is neutered to sound non-offensive/femi-friendly.

You're essentially neutered in the workplace and in education, she can be a bitch and it's tolerated but if you fight back the feminazi police come to arrest you, the double standard is in full force. Outside of work/education there's no excuse though, if some bitch is going to give me shit in a cafe/bar/in a queue/in the street or whatever I'm gonna shut her down like an obsolete copy of Windows 95, I notice though women in the street generally aren't ballsy though, in fact they're avoidant when they don't have the power of an institution behind them to protect them. Spineless, they are.

I agree with what you're saying man.

To clarify the he violated her thing = she fucked a virgin without knowing he was a virgin which as u say shows he's "bad at attracting mates." That's the opposite of an attraction switch, a warning sign. Then she finds out afterwards hes a virgin and only then DOES SHE FEELS DIRTY because she compares both their sexual history, but part of her feels hoodwinked for not knowing before they fucked he'd not done it before. I'm thinking she doesn't just feel dirty by fucking a pure man, but lied to and repulsed by his lack of notches as well.

But yeah, as you said - need to know her personally to get a better read. I'm speculating on general knowledge and from what she's given us to work with.

In prostitution men exploit a woman's need for money by extracting sexual favours from her and women exploit a man's need for sex by extracting money from him. She gets wealthier, he satiates his libido - it's a fucking symbiotic relationship.

Yet in the media men are always the exploiters, the oppressors and all that bullshit, poor, poor prostitutes, making more money than the average person can simply for opening their legs and sucking some dicks, with no real intelligence, dedication or toil required, their lives must be so terrible with all those nice things their uneducated asses have been able to acquire. If a woman wants to escape this job for a living, she can easily use her massive earnings to pursue and pay off a higher education, something her male counterparts do not have as an option, having only minimum wage jobs staring at them in the face. This is truly one of the easiest ways in the world to make money, and it's almost exclusively the domain of women due to the demography of demand.

When two parties can sustainably exploit each other to each's benefit, I believe that's called business and thus no exploitation (in the truest, vilest sense of the word) is taking place, it's called BUSINESS when everyone is happy.

^ Being manly is essentially being all the things women hate.

- Taking responsibility for yourself and other peoples actions.
- Leading people fairly and honourably with a collective goal in mind (feminists like to take control, that's something different to genuine leadership though, it's insecure manipulation)
- Putting yourself in danger.
- Sacrificing your safety/money/happiness to ensure "balance" in a situation.
- Being stoic, because women love to fucking ride the rollercoaster of emotion.
- Looking after women, women hate looking after anyone if it's not a kid and hate any adult that tries leaning on them, they hate you even more for it if you're male though.

Basically, being manly is being a fucking strong psychological rock in a ocean of chaos where your strength is not appreciated, but expected - even in a society where your traits are rare, you will not be thanked like a woman is for doing one of the smallest little things and ultimately to add to this list:

- Doing all the above and not needing validation to make it worthwhile or desirable, because rarely will any sign of appreciation be acknowledged.

Good post. I'm in the UK. Agree with the muslim shit. The muslim shit wouldn't be so bad if we weren't already depopulating (as a result of feminism and the economic effects that has had, no doubt), but as the muslim average in England is 4 kids per woman and the English non-muslim average is 1.6 (in the UK) we're going to lose the battle of democratic attrition fast, England/the UK will islamify if the trends are allowed to continue and as you say, Sweden and France too. I also hear they have issues in the Netherlands and Belgium with Moroccan muslims. The french have a lot of Algerian muslims, we in the UK have Pakistani muslims mostly and Turkey is desperate to get into the EU to spread it's muslims also. Jews were kicked out of Europe except they had no legitimate country to call their own until Israel was formed out of Palestine, deja vu?

Well I'm going to call bullshit on your shaming tactic with the opening line there as you have no logical basis to make that assertion.

He is dismissive that a woman would choose the harder route because most women in the west would not. I don't know if you're female, a man with a special snowflake or whatever your situation is, but talking about 3 billion women on planet Earth and professing NAWALT is pathetic, this is a western centric philosophy being discussed on an American radio talk show between an American man and woman so lets keep to the fucking context shall we?

Within its context it's spot on and that makes it relevant and concise. The few exceptions to the trend do not excuse the trend. You may not like his delivery, you don't have to, but that doesn't mean he's wrong. Some women would have been raised in cultures outside the west where they had strong family ties and were raised to work hard, I've met Eastern European women like that and despite their work ethic, they are becoming indoctrinated by feminism due to their opening up to the west so I expect that to die out within a generation or two as more of the world is westernised.

"But Tom basically says it is impossible that some of them actually have morals and choose the harder route. This is by no means no good logic but utter pessimism and hostility to accuse an unknown caller of being ugly just because he excludes the possibility that someone who does not need to work hard would still choose so."

This is the only part of your text I agree with, and yet it only applies to the exceptions in the west, so you're upset/discontented he's generalising because it's relevant to, basically.

The Nawalt here is looking incredibly blue-pill delusional and again we're in the west, not foraging in tribal africa thus MWALT. The red pill is bitter.

You're missing the point, the point is if u want to live with a woman but not have it classed as a marriage by the state due to cohabiting (as can happen in some jurisdictions) then being married to another hetero man is an option as you can't be married twice. You're simply saying "don't live with the woman" you're not addressing the paradigm here. It's perfectly plausible to tell the state you have a female roommate to keep your bills down but don't live with your gay partner as you both need your space. Whilst in reality, you're both hetero and fucking different "female roommates". The state is dumb enough to believe in platonic relationships, they're blue pill as fuck.

This is correct. You make girls comply with your wishes by having them perceive you as the highest value male available to them.

If she wants to cuckold, you are not the highest value male in her life. By nature of her hypergamy, she will now move on, you cannot barter with that hypergamy to get what you want to, you have to "appease" it, so to have her do what you want aka comply with your wishes and essentially make her want what you want and agree with you she has to respect your masculinity as authentic and attractive.

Anyone who reads this and disagrees with it is still too blue pill, they think they can reason with a woman under the influence of hypergamy as if she's an equal, a logical, sound of mind rational creature - she's a woman and thus these things she is NOT, don't be judging her by your own moral value system, because she won't abide to it and you'll lose for not handling her correctly. Women are not exactly known as paragons of logic at the best of times, let alone when hypergamy kicks in.. everything is manipulation with them whether it's "moral" or "amoral" which I will outline in the next paragraph.

The machiavellianist way to have her comply non consensually would be through blackmail, mindgames, exposing her reputation publically with a sex vid or something and shaming her essentially "an attack upon her reputation" (something females value dearly), playing the victim to everyone you know, being an emotional terrorist... those are all tricks out of the female book of manipulation and get deployed like US navy seals, these are the bitch trump cards. The Victim Card (positively enhances her reputation as seeming feminine and vulnerable, exemplifying gender stereotypes), The Blackmail Card (negatively decreases your reputation by leaking immoral information about you in to the public sphere unless you become her bitch), The Guilt Trip Card (Making you feel bad for something you did whether you enjoyed it or not because she didn't like it). Making her comply consensually = infatuating her with your masculinity and having her want to submit to you, if she perceives your masculinity as authentic and does what you want as a result, it's consensual although of course manipulative - like everything is, like the society we live in is.

It's only nonconsensual when you use woman tricks and head-fuck to get her to do what you want. Remember women are allowed to do that because they have a full stack of victim cards and the support of society and the Law behind them, if you do that and too many people notice it you have the full wrath of society on you and become the bad guy almost immediately. Society is blind to female manipulation tricks and in fact facilitates it - it's sad.

I see women abusing sexuality in whatever way they can, it's their main trump card next to the victim card.

I've read a lot of red pill shit (<http://therationalmale.com/>) and the reason so many older women can afford it is because of that insane divorce rate in the US, they're living off divorce money and if kids are involved have a regular income in the form of alimony as well as having the option to double their income by working a job should they choose, this makes expensive places like NY affordable. Younger women try to date rich guys and get free shit or do porn for a quick buck pre-divorce rape. You can find all this shit out for yourself by reading red pill articles and listening to what older guys have to tell you based upon their experiences with divorce/women.

Do you define your self-worth by the attention that women give you? Perhaps going MGTOW first will help you "elevate your social status" by making more guy friends and improving you/your life. Nobody will tell you "how to be beta" because being a beta is what the majority of guys already are and thus they won't understand your starting point and where you come from in being "even worse than a beta."

To be likeable to yourself, you have to value yourself. This could be anything. Your appearance, your aptitude in something you consider meaningful like speaking multiple languages, playing an instrument, a martial art - anything. You need to build yourself up before you even contemplate the idea of entering the game and dating women. Your self-perceived value is so low that not just girls, but other guys will smell it on you and won't want shit to do with you.

- Get a sense of humour, watch a lot of stand up comedy
- Lift, lifting gives you huge dopamine releases and massive confidence increases, especially for the few hours after you just lifted. That and it makes you look bigger/more impressive and all in all, elevates you physically and mentally (especially when it comes to your "sense of well being")
- Leave the house more and observe people, get good at reading body language

- Every time you're scared to do something/say something/look somewhere push yourself and do it anyway. This will up your confidence.

It sounds pathetic in writing, but if you do something you're scared of, no matter how silly that may seem to lots of people EG: go and apply for a job in person with a company or approach someone and ask for the time before transitioning into normal conversation, you'll feel proud of yourself. Right now it seems your priorities are wrong. Chicks come as part of success and you don't have that, you need to go MGTOW and be purely focused on yourself to improve your own value before you decide to direct your attention to gaming women, spinning plates and all that shit.

As for the guy shunning you, that's some fucking bullshit right there. Decent alphas elevate their brothers in this misandrist culture, they don't tell you to kill yourself because frankly right now, your status is pathetic. Part of being alpha is giving a shit about your fellow brothers and uplifting the little guys and helping them grow an ego/sense of value and get pussy because as we all understand the nature of females here, we know a woman will never be able to appreciate what you do for her the way a bro can appreciate the sacrifices you make for him. (no homo) This means ultimately whilst relationships with women will be fleeting, a real bro will be there for you life, to drink, discuss deep shit with and be "family."

Go MGTOW, improve yourself, attach yourself to high status guys and try to learn from them. Fiending for women while you're so low status will only be counterproductive to you actually getting yourself out of that cesspit and becoming higher status. Good luck bro.

Haha, you're right - she butted in first and then her beta chimed in to back her up.

She was raising her voice aggressively and telling me to move because she didn't like hearing me swear, for reference we weren't shouting, being rowdy or seeking attention, we were having a private conversation at a table discussing some random shit (it escapes me exactly what) and they were at the table next to us.

They went all quiet midway through our convo and proceeded to eavesdrop and I think it was the moment when I said "fuck that shit" to something my boy said she interrupted in a raised tone "EXCUSE ME!" and started saying how inappropriate my language is. She was some crazy deluded liberal bitch, listening in on our private convo and trying to call ME OUT for "how I speak".

I said to her "I can say what I want, this country has a commitment to free speech, it's directed at nobody you and your man SHOULD NOT be listening in" and she replied No you can't, swearings illegal and "Just go you're not wanted here" this was preluding the whole man up speech because apparently if women or children are anywhere near me, in her and her betas worldview, you shouldn't be swearing bearing in mind like I said, we were having a private quiet conversation - but hey, fuck logic.

The swearing's illegal shit made me laugh so hard, this is a 40+ woman who is hypersensitive to swearing in this day and age, has the audacity to call people on it and believes that it's fucking illegal. The stupidity was strong in this one. It was ridiculous, but I got a good buzz out of humiliating them for poking in to my business, it would of continued because I was getting amped up but my boy pulled me away.

There are a subset of old people in the UK who find swearing extremely offensive, usually they're the 60-70+ generation, but it seems like these 40-50+ thought they had some sort of right to butt in to our conversation and tell us how the fuck to speak. It would've been much more messier aka "nuclear" if my boy wasn't there to pull me away. I hate everything she and her beta faggot husband symbolise.

"Do the women around here get to talk?" A short lesson in how women completely control men and the dialogue

1 upvotes · 16 September 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

More accurate statements:

More men than women with +1-3 standard deviations in IQ, ergo of people with 115+ IQ, men are a majority

Women possess a lower grey matter volume and most struggle to use logic due to this, with the exacerbation effect compounded by the presence of high estrogen (postmenopausal women tend to be a little saner)

Saying women can only rote memorise was a silly assertion, but I think I see where he's coming from. High IQ logical people are rare, but high IQ women are rarer than high IQ men, and high IQ logical women are even rarer than high IQ logical men. IQ correlates with logic but is only a necessary not sufficient condition. A 130 IQ girl drowning in estrogen is still going to come off like an irrational dolt.

Women also tend to have lower stress tolerance so are more likely to lead ineffectively. The Pelosis of the world are exceptions. Most women in university do a weak non quant subject with a lower mean IQ.

Even a non quant high IQ subject like philosophy has few women due to the intense logical demands the subject places on students. Women also have 10% smaller brains relative to their total mass than men do. All in all, generally speaking, it is true women are less intelligent, just not to the extreme degree that man claimed.

The rare woman with a great analytical and intellectually curious mind is always a pleasure, she's simply rarer than her male counterpart due to the above mentioned factors.

Is it always a discipline/motivation issue? Or is it sometimes a testosterone issue?

1 upvotes · 8 June 2017 · /r/askTRP

Your dosing frequency is too infrequent, you will feel great for the first 3-4 days after injection, then "OK" for perhaps another week, and crappy the few days just before your next injection. The 7 day half-life for testosterone ethanate makes it inappropriate to be injected at such large intervals, and higher doses injected less frequently increase the chances of aromatisation, meaning your T converts into estrogen and you feel crappy because your T's down and your E's up. You can get an aromatase inhibitor for that, but it's better not to need one because you have a proper dosing schedule.

Get 125mg injected weekly, or if they let you self-inject, try 62.5mg every 3.5 days. Run a male hormone panel after 6 weeks to see your values, I'd aim for a testosterone level of about 1000ng/dL, but of course, how you feel in relation to your numbers is more important than the numbers themselves. If you feel like a boss at 900 but get a bit paranoid and overly confrontational at say 1000, you'd want to keep your level around 900. It's completely subjective, but you're going for well-being optimisation.

The dialling in process is an art, and unique to the individual physiology of the user. You will have some ups and downs trying to find what works for you initially, but in the long run, you'll feel great, and you're embarking on an incredible journey that will change your life (not only in that it will improve your gains in the gym, and increase your tolerance to exercise because exercise won't tire you out so damn much, but in that it will also improve your mood, energy and confidence too.)

There aren't enough forum comments and self-improvement books in the world to overcome the debilitating nature of low testosterone and the adverse effects it has on a man's quality of life, and his subsequent ability to reach his potential. All the best.

This means spending less money on your TRT protocol, and having less injections each week. On the flipside, HCG allows greater flexibility over one's fertility than a vasectomy does.

Question for women: Why do so many women have a hard time wrapping their minds around the simple concept that many men simply find high n count women unattractive?

1 upvotes · 15 March 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Evolutionary men want women to be low or preferably zero N count because it means they can ascertain paternity. This is an inbuilt part of the male operating system and is impossible to change in most men.

Now pragmatically and psychologically, once a woman has a man in her past she can't get over because he so thoroughly owned her in heart and mind, you're never a real person to her, she is fundamentally incapable of connecting with you on the level of depth she did with that guy. You never get all of her, because it's either just not there anymore, or she's incapable of giving herself over to you to the degree she did him. Maybe it's a mixture of both, I have no way of confirming my suspicions here, so I can't say.

Men who want deep, meaningful relationships will see this as a dealbreaker because they'll never be "the love of her life", or her "main alpha" or whatever the fuck you want to call it. That dude in her past will be. And she will always compare you to him, you'll always be living in his shadow. It sucks for all involved because it means she can't get the sense of completion and happiness she needs, and you as a man can't get the level of respect, deference and worship you need - but yeah.

Makes perfect sense it'd be a disqualifier. Sluts and damaged girls get mad because they don't want to pay for the mistakes/tragedies in their past. They want a fresh start. The problem is, to have a fresh start you need to purify yourself of the shit that has contaminated you. You can't change the past, so they can't do that.

They want their past to be in the past like the past means nothing and affects nothing in the present. But the truth is, the past is responsible for who you are now. It's very important. Minimising it is an ego preservation strategy and is ultimately dishonest.

Testosterone = total testosterone

Free testosterone is measured mainly by SHBG, but also albumin.

"Free testosterone" isn't a metric, it's calculated by your SHBG and albumin relative to your total testosterone. Free testosterone is an equation, not a measure.

You want to see the actual numbers for yourself. A lot of these docs are full of shit and tell you you're fine when you're not.

I'm the only masculine-looking one of all of my 3 brothers (half-white, half-asian) which makes sense now. Must have just lucked out of the Asian genetics.

I've seen this before. There are two rapper brothers in the UK here who are black. The older of the two brothers has very high T features, tall, strong jawline, etc. Whereas his younger brother doesn't look low T per se, but his jawline is not as strong and he's shorter. He is less aesthetic and his body looks less vigorous. Neither of them lift as far as I know, although the older brother looks like he could lift. The older brother also has a bigger nose than his younger brother (sign of high T, little button noses you see on babies are a low T facial feature)

Older high T brother:

<https://d235mwrq2dn9n5.cloudfront.net/wp-content/uploads/2016/09/Screen-Shot-2016-09-16-at-10.20.08-616x431.png>

Younger mid T brother: <https://nationofbillions.com/wp-content/uploads/2015/09/JME-featured.jpg>

(half-white, half-asian)

If you/they are half-white then I'm not sure whether androgen receptor sensitivity increases slightly due to your white DNA, or if the white and the asian side fight it out on a per gene basis as to determine if you'd get white androgen sensitivity or asian androgen sensitivity. The mixed race aspect confuses things. I haven't seen data where they've looked at people of mixed origin. Perhaps if you appear more masculinised you have higher androgen sensitivity than your brothers.

Thanks for the response, going to read the full text now.

Enjoy!

I have symptoms of low testosterone (I'm 27) but only got a total number so far from a test 12+ months ago. Had a urologist blood test 8 months ago but NHS simply hasn't had time (or considered me priority) to bring me back yet.

The NHS are fucking terrible and they definitely won't give you taxpayer funded TRT if your natural level is at 700. Your options are to google for a men's health clinic in your local area (or travel to London for it), or use the black market. If you can afford it, self-fund the blood tests and you can have them done within the week.

At the minimum you'll want this one:

https://www.medichecks.com/find-a-test/test/TRT-Check-\(Testosterone-Replacement-Therapy\)_X42X_X42X)

But if money's no object get this one:

https://www.medichecks.com/find-a-test/test/TRT-Check-Plus-\(Testosterone-Replacement-Therapy\)_X41X_X41X)

Couldn't quite pinpoint your accent but it's obviously southern.

I'm from one of the gentrified places that speaks Estuary English. Basically people in Kent, Surrey, West Sussex, East Sussex and Hampshire all have the same accent. The regional accents that change every couple of miles up in the north aren't really a factor in people who come from the southeast.

Right, higher fat levels are due to estrogen, higher fat leads to aromatisation, which leads to higher estrogen, which leads to higher fat, which leads to greater aromatisation, which leads to even higher estrogen - in an unending negative feedback of high estrogen and obesity. I would think the predominant factor for the ubiquity of early female menarche could be attributed to the prevalence of xenoestrogenic pollutants in our food and water supply. Now in spite of that, fatherless girls still their first period earlier than girls who have their father present and so your war theory may be as valid as it is interesting. The overall trend of earlier menarche is most likely caused by both of these factors, however as you rightfully point out, there is a distinction between them also.

Q4 Women: Ever pretended to be a guy in online dating?

1 upvotes · 28 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think you really got to the heart of the matter with this comment, it should be upvoted more.

Women are more easily desired because they're more universally attractive, whereas men are more easily respected because they're more universally reasonable.

Your average guy will be curious about being a girl on a dating site in the same way some girls want to debate topics and be taken seriously in doing so. A lot of people won't bother debating as soon as they know they're arguing with a girl - such is the futility of the exercise, and I hold my hand up to that prejudice.

As such: women are incentivised to portray themselves as men when it pays to be taken seriously (one of the reason's women have used nom de plume's throughout history) whilst average men are incentivised to portray themselves as women in order to experience what sexual attention and desire feels like.

/thread

Look at men's bodies, notice how disgusting most of them are.

1 upvotes · 19 June 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

To each their own, I don't frown upon it.

If you consider that men's testosterone levels are declining 1.2% per year extraneous of age-based decline, that low testosterone is common as fuck and that doctors do fuck all to raise awareness of this and promote male health - it's hard not to be sympathetic of men looking to reclaim their masculinity via exogenous testosterone.

There should be a huge public health drive to get men's T levels checked and fixed, would do wonders for productivity, fixing male depression and promoting man's fertility, but instead the establishment keeps lowering the normal range for sperm count/motility and doing nothing to promote testosterone therapy. In fact, GPs are reluctant to give men T in spite of the fact the majority of men have artificially low testosterone levels due to the abundance of xenoestrogens polluting the shit out of everything.

I think if everybody did a testosterone, free testosterone and estrogen test tomorrow, a huge swath of men would start running TRT and an aromatase inhibitor just to feel normal.

The low end of the "normal range" for T is 300-500, but that is still ridiculously low when you consider elderly men (who lost 1% of their T naturally every year since the age of 30) in the 1980's were all in the 500 range. Today's average 30 year old man has equal or lesser testosterone than the average 60 year old man in 1985, despite the 60 year old having had 30 years of a natural 1% drop. This is the dire state of male hormonal health, and the establishment does nothing to counteract this. You will have to go out of your way to get your level checked, and find a doc who will play ball should you be sub-optimal. T check-ups are not part of regular check-ups, they won't give a 25 year old with a 350 ng/dL T level any treatment, even though he has the T level of a fucking 85 year old because "he's in range" - It's a fucking joke. /rant

TLDR: the environment is artificially reducing men's testosterone via omnipresent endocrine disruptors that have a deleterious effect on male health, so I'm sympathetic to men synthetically increasing their testosterone. Where unavoidable xenoestrogens are robbing men of their masculinity on a daily basis, synthetic testosterone gives it back.

Does TRP make any other woman feel depressed?

1 upvotes · 8 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Race is more of a taboo than gender. It makes more sense at a meta-political level for TRP to focus on a battle it has a chance of winning, rather than a war it cannot. It would be unwise to fragment our ranks. Awhile back a number of south-east Asians went tribal and broke off from the community to form /r/asianmasculinity because they were tired of "white men stealing their women" - the exact thing white men say about black men and the exact clusterfuck I believe the red pill mods have no intention of entertaining. Asianmasculinity sub when it first started was basically TRP from an Asian perspective with some white male hatred mixed in for good measure.

My point is that the most important factor is absence of healthy male role model. And it doesn't matter if this is physical or emotional absence.

I see what you're saying here. If they're physically absent, then automatically they're going to be emotionally absent. Yet physical presence doesn't mean emotional presence. You can have alpha males around you, but they can be emotionally absent/unavailable and hence other than observations/mimicking their behaviour, you won't get anything from them. You definitely won't bond or have a proper father son/relationship necessary for the child's mental health. A cogent point.

Thing is, you're 40. Older dudes in your situation.. say 55..65..70 they tend to get so lonely and sentimental that even though they know the bitch doesn't love them, they don't care, they just want to enjoy the piece of bliss that comes with buying into the lie. They give into their romantic needs, their desire to be loved - even though they know better. Hopefully that's never you. But a man has to ask himself what he's going to do for companionship in his twilight years. I suppose romantic needs differ from men to men, some are just completely hopeless in their need to be loved.

Your vision is a bit more complicated with the way hiring practices are. I don't disagree men with better jobs can get lower-class chicks to commit easily (as it always has been), but it's not paying attention to the whole picture.

These are good points and make perfect sense. HR harpies are jealous but hate them less than men. Older men want access to girls in their early 20s.

Because you have a mind of your own and don't need to follow my example.

Nevertheless, it's not so much a matter of gender as it is a matter of specialisation. I rather concentrate on men than dilute my thinking to constantly 180 and simultaneously cater to female strategy. Likewise, I lack the masochistic paternalism necessary to try my patience.

The exception that proves the rule does not negate the rule. Likewise, intent does not always yield results. For as many women attempt a most noble adherence to RPW teachings, I question how many effectively manage to overcome their instincts. I suspect the number is few, and like all female spaces, it's more of a space for emotional support: sycophancy, whining and indecision, the responsibility necessary for fundamental change coming in a distant fourth.

Unlike TRP, it's more an effort between "her and her S.O" rather than a singular, solitary attempt at self-improvement. Makes sense when women tend to define themselves in relation to men rather than independently of men. I wonder how many RPWs are single and manage to change themselves outside the context of a relationship? Is contouring yourself to one man based on traditionalist ideas fundamental change or just a non-feminist AWALT getting advice from the girls? I don't doubt the intent of RPW, I do however despite its efficacy, it's probably even lower than TRPs as women are even crappier at taking action than men are.

I tried polyamory, but i(26m) don't like it 2 weeks into my girlfriend(22f) dating someone else(24m), how do i tell her in a dominant way to stop dating?

1 upvotes · 4 October 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

I think it's safe to say that unless a man is very alpha/comfortable in himself, that polyamory is a slippery slope to cuckoldry/polyandry. As such, for most men, there is no difference because "the respect for all parties" is not maintained or even present beyond the "please allow me to do this" point of negotiation/manipulation.

It takes a special kind of man to pull off polyamory. Polyamory is not something any man who can't get plenty of women should do. Because almost all women can get fresh dick whenever they want, but barely any men can get fresh pussy on a whim. So often a polyamorous arrangement is nothing but a front for polyandry. Effectively, open on her side and shut on his.

Therefore whilst polyamory will benefit most women (satiates AF/BB) and gives alpha bulls ego boners because they are fucking taken women, it will not benefit the majority of men. What you find is women find men to fuck them very easily but most men don't find new women to fuck. This is hardly surprising, after all it is a RP mantra that "20% of the men fuck 80% of the women" (pareto principle) Women often only agree to polyamory with men they think won't be able to get any other women anyway, whilst fully knowing they can find all the dick under the sun.

As such, polyamory is often nothing but a gateway to cuckoldry. It is only that and nothing but that when the term is banded around in an LTR where the man is beta or anything less than the epitome of dominance. Saying "well it works for guys who are alpha/dominant as fuck" elicits none other than a "well, no shit. They could make prison work for them too. I wouldn't recommend that either."

Your picking at "what is and isn't polyamory" really betrays the heart of the argument. The term/practice is often used as a blanket for committing open cuckoldry. It is thereby incredibly disingenuous to defend polyamory to men as something that men can benefit from - because most won't. Sure Chad will, but then Chad doesn't even need to be an in LTR anyway. Most guys have LTRs to secure one source of pussy as they are unable to get lots of new pussy all the time.

Without getting too technical, if you're not a top-tier man who can get plenty of women yourself, as the man you're attacking rightfully points out, you're an idiot to allow it; it essentially amounts to becoming a woman's cuck under the pretence "you're allowed to fuck other women too." But the only reason being she agrees to that is because she "knows you won't be able to fuck any other women (is very confident of your inability to manage that.) The whole thing is a mind fuck and the "respect" you spoke of which is present in "true polyamorous arrangements" nothing but a sham.

I don't know what's so difficult to understand about that, and why you miss this point and feel the need to defend polyamory so vehemently. One can only assume you somehow benefit from such an arrangement, and in that benefit have lost the capacity to see how such things are more akin to apples and oranges than they are apples and electricity.

Educated Women & Vapidity

1 upvotes · 28 September 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

You think men are only marginally less vapid than women, because education doesn't imbue reason into men.

Let's be honest, education rarely imbues men with reason, either.

To quote the essay:

education cultivates latent talent, it does not imbue absent talent.

So it looks like we're in agreement there. You took an adversarial tone over a point we both agree on because you came to a different conclusion.

Except education doesn't need to imbue reason into men, because where it is present, it is cultivated. I allude to this in the essay (as quoted above)

And much the focus of the essay is that reason is natural to men, but because it isn't to women, no matter how much you educate them, they will be more vapid than men.

I make that point here:

There are more women than men in higher education nowadays, and yet I would argue with an emphatic conviction that your average uneducated man is more cognisant and intellectually curious than his better educated female counterparts.

So what is your point, exactly? If you disagree, that's fine. If you want to present a counter-argument and attempt refutation, you're going to need a counter-argument that isn't fundamentally flawed in its premise.

It's always kind of funny when people take an adversarial tone on a point you both actually agree on because their opinion/conclusion is different. I think we both agree that education doesn't imbue reason into men. It doesn't have to. It's cultivating it where present, and it's present far more than men than in women. That's pretty much the theme of the essay. I give reasons such as female solipsism and their herd mentality.

Your premise "men are only marginally less vapid" and your reasoning "only because of environmental factors" is vague at best.

The Rational Male "Women in Love"

1 upvotes · 16 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

It's a basic RP tenet that men have a greater capacity for love than women do; a woman can't love a man in the way that he desires (unconditional motherly love) - she can only love him from a position of inferiority. Her love is respect-based. A female partner will never love you as intently or unconditionally as your mother.

Men seek to replicate that kind of relationship with a long-term partner, but what they find is that within healthy LTRs the man ends up in a fatherly role, having a father-daughter type LTR with a woman. If you look for motherly love, the woman will despise you and leave you. If your mum never loved you (say she was a narcissist for example) then you would be naturally RP and would know innately women can't love men the way men want to be loved (but that's another topic in and of itself.)

Perhaps this article will better elucidate the topic for you:

You up for looking at my prose before I send it to be printed? (I'm not there yet, just looking ahead.) Thing is, I only really want help with grammar, eg: syntax and incorrect word usage. Hate editors who substitute words and fuck with the nuance and subtlety of my writing by replacing word choices. If I choose a word I chose it, that's what makes it my writing. But if something is somehow "wrong" linguistically, then obviously that is something I want to be made aware of.

I don't debate people's specific situations because their emotional involvement destroys their ability to see the point of principle being made.

This is why, for instance, when women normally give evidence of something that happened in their own life (solipsism) as irrefutable proof that something I said is wrong eg: NAWALT claim - I completely ignore them. I do not fall into the trap of debating their point or refuting their instance.

Once you fall into the trap of addressing someone's personal experience, you defer the point. How do you know their own life better than them? Now it's about them and how they lived, not your general principle. And naturally they're more qualified to speak on that than you are. And so your original point is lost, and quite skilfully, you have been duped, your original point has been dismissed by nothing but petty emotion and conversational gymnastics.

Your point is now contingent on convincing someone that their life experience backs up your point, rather than refutes it. A shitty way to prove a point, because then somebody else can just come along and cite a different life experience and now you have to go through the same shitty, exhausting process all over again. It really is not conducive to a sound intellectual debate. And even if in an alternate reality it was conducive, it is unlikely you could ever convince a person that their life experiences back up your point rather than refute it. Even if it does. Because people do not want to be told they can't analyse/interpret their lives as well as you can. That their very involvement in their life story clouds their ability to understand it. Everybody considers themselves the expert on their own life. So when the conversation shifts to someone's life story as some sort of proof or counter-argument for a central premise, I don't even bother.

No more toxic western ideologies for the east please.

If it wasn't for western globalisation, China wouldn't be the #2 economy. I get your point, I just find it immensely ironic. China owes its success to the west. China undercut the entire world with slave labour and then developed off the GDP of developed world wealth as most of the manufacturing for big western corporations was exported there. As factories closed in England and America, they opened in China.

So where does China get its success from? It takes most of the world's manufacturing, steals other country's technology and then proclaims itself elite. Japan and South Korea actually made it by themselves, yes, with western support, but they didn't need to rob jobs from every other country by providing superior manufacturing output with slave labour. And they didn't steal technology to seem cutting edge and innovative, you know, Japan makes its own robotics, South Korea is big on that too. What is China doing? Just hacking everyone else. Not very respectable.

I mean shit, it'd be funny one day to see Chinese companies getting sued left right and centre for copyright infringement. From consumer goods, cars to military tech - everything COPIED. Why? For money. R&D is expensive. If China wanted to retain its ways, it'd be a fuck ton smarter to stop copying/stealing from the west in its lust for wealth.

China owes every bit of power it has to western capitalism and cyber hackers.

And where you sell your soul for wealth, all the other bullshit ideologies will follow. China opened Pandora's box for itself. Will be interesting to see how vastly that country changes in the next 50 years.

How would someone get an invite to your new sub? What is the criteria?

$5+ Patrons or people I think will add value and are suited to the discussion of power. If you don't know much about power or strategy, and can't help build it, or don't already have some sort of reputation, that won't include you. Effectively, there's a $5 subscription for the clueless (or people who just want to support get a free invite anyway, should they want it) and it's a free invite to people who can teach the subject matter (people I trust/recognise.) I will post exclusive content there and be available for rudimentary strategy advice, as will the rest of the community.

It's going to be very selective. If it's not selective, the community will tank. I'll even go so far to kick people out for causing trouble, even if they're a patron. The money won't make anyone immune to the rules, $5 isn't worth the disruption a person can cause should they be that way inclined. Naturally, I operate on the assumption that if someone I haven't vetted is willing to invest a little money to get in, then they're going to make the effort to be decent members of the community.

However, this eliminates anecdotal evidence that validates the techniques. "This worked for me!" posts are good validation for individuals that are new to the subject.

Good point, I agree, I still retain my previous argument, however. In light of that, it seems whatever course of action is taken, something will be sacrificed.

Ignore – Provide no acknowledgement of the shit test by ignoring it. This is a bad choice when you have just met someone, but once your reputation and/or superiority has been established it is a great way of nonchalantly invalidating the importance of an enquiry. It implies “what you said isn’t even worth addressing.” This is best used on people who are lower in the pecking order than you are or as a response to the manifestation of stupidity. If someone asked you if you liked to eat your own excrement, you could have a joke and agree and amplify into something about a sewer using your keen knowledge of word association and semantic fields, or rather simply you could ignore the inanity of the question. The choice of style is yours to make and will be contingent on your mood, your relative social positions in relation to one another and what you suspect the shit tester’s intent is.

So the OP and everyone who opened this thread hasn't been indirectly manipulated into giving some power to Roosh's writings?

Fleeting attention, yes. "Power" as in followers and money? No. If you read the comments here, people who either liked him, or were indifferent to him, now want nothing to do with him for playing this gambit. The guys here can see it for the power play that it is and have dissected it to some extent, but they have hardly lined his pockets or pledged loyalty to him.

He's hurt his rep and attacked a powerful ally. He's also alienated Rollo. Not a particularly well executed move.

Yes he got some attention. But even a child can get attention if it screams, knowing how to wind people up doesn't make you a Machiavellian mastermind. You're looking at the short term and thinking "hey look he has a whole thread dedicated to him, this guy's getting power!" but that's naive. In the long run, he's hurt himself. You haven't ever played chess, have you? It's like a rook taking a bishop only to leave it's queen vulnerable. When you just look at the rook killing the bishop, you think "this player is good" because you're zoomed in too much on a localised situation. Then you see him lose his queen later on and you think "ah okay, killing that bishop was stupid, if he'd left his rook there he'd still have his queen."

R just killed the bishop.

Keep up the amazing work IllimitableMan

The wisest Machiavellian knows when it's in his interest to be moral, and when he needs to ignore his morals. When it is wise to be immoral, and when indulging such immorality will result in a net negative.

Hypergamy 101 - Women See Men the Way Men See Jobs

1 upvotes · 10 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

I think Schopenhauer is well-liked not just for his quality of thinking, but likewise for his quality of prose. He was a good writer. A lot of philosophers are apt logicians, but don't write good prose. The logic is so raw and devoid of any artistic flair, which means it doesn't make for an enjoyable read. I get the feeling Kant's Critique of Pure Reason is going to be like that, although I may just be talking out of my ass because I haven't read it yet. (I was told to read Kant first to understand Schopenhauer's the world as will and representation.)

Effectively, even for the intelligent, it is a slog to get through - like an academic paper, it is knowledge dense. The best way to communicate a way of thinking, IMO, necessitates an engaging if not aesthetically pleasing form of prose. Of course if you use rhetorical devices such as hyperbole and sarcasm for entertainment purposes, someone somewhere down the line is going to misinterpret what you're saying, and the knowledge of what you were trying to communicate is lost/vitiated by the passage of time and the re-interpretations that come with that.

Your post is not clear just how many people were involved.

To me it seemed it was you, this girl, her old male best friend and his fiancée.

Now there's another friend who's been pulled outta some arse from seemingly nowhere (I'm already thinking this bitch has way too many male friends) who has not been properly alluded to, which I'm guessing is someone you don't know, someone she just mentioned when she text-dumped you, hence my oversight. If that's the case, how do you know this is another person and not the old best friend of hers?

If the beta friend is not the same as the friend with the fiancée (it was assumed they are as no emphatic distinction was made) then there is not enough information available about this other person to do anything but make wild, grandiose speculations, eg: he's a billionaire beta with a 6-pack. Indeed, we lack enough information on this other man or what his relation to this girl is to make any solid or even partial conclusions.

All European countries are white countries (pale in the north, tanned in Spain/the med,) that's where white people come from. We're indigineous here. Non-whites here are immigrants/children of immigrants who came for financial reasons. They're not indigineous to these lands. We are. Whites have lived here for millennia. Europe's been white as far back as recorded history goes with frequent jihad-invasions from Arabs since the 6-7th century.

There are PLENTY Indian and Black sluts in the UK. In university, the Indian girls were actually worse than the white girls. Anything with a white dick was near surrounded by Indian good-girls.

As for contradictory science, the problem stems from a lack of reasonable science to begin with. Nutrition is something both science and medicine have left in the stone age, choosing to parrot misinformation for profit most of the time. There's been a positive shift over time but I think that's because people have taken matters into their own hands, and it's hard to contradict practical results with a straight face forever.

Reasonable amounts of isoflavones have great health and life-prolonging benefits with only marginal T impact.

Aside from dark chocolate, I can't think of anywhere else I'd get them. I have a mostly egg/spinach/broccoli/chicken/red meat/salmon kind of diet. Some yoghurt for the probiotic effect. I snack on pumpkin seeds and sunflower seeds. I have my fair share of lemons and limes, too (squeezed and diluted into juice.) Junk food only occasionally, can get through about 20-80g of Dark Chocolate a day though, when I feel an energy dip I'll have a bit. Sometimes I have numerous dips. In a week I'm having about 500g on average. As an aside, I know it's high in saturated fat but I'm not really bothered as I aim for a high fat/high protein, low carb diet. No bread, pasta, potato etc. If it's too much, I'll tone it down, but I'm not educated enough in this area to make a calculated guess. Do women want chaste men?

1 upvotes · 24 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I can handle pain well when it comes to me by surprise

Perhaps you need to get someone to "surprise" you. I suspect if a really incredibly high status attractive guy came along, you'd be extremely tempted to try him out, assuming you believe you're worthy (if you think you're too unattractive to be worth said guy, so to speak, your confidence may cause you to reject him out of anxiety and act as an additional barrier to having sex.)

I also consciously avoid addictive things lest I become too absorbed in pleasures of the moment and lose sight of my goals, as women seem awful prone to doing in general, so my hesitation may be a blessing in disguise.

That's a really good point. If you're worried about how sex may change your character/sense of self, eg: corrupt you morally/mentally, you have valid concerns. I believe, as great as sex is, it's the cause of much conflict and corruption. Generally, most women are very sexual creatures, uninterested in self-actualisation and the pursuit of hobby and more in how they can get the best male available, whilst leveraging their sex appeal to their advantage to unduly influence the men around them.

There is much corruption in female sexual power, in the sense that she can get what she wants out of men (something outside sex which brings her benefit, eg: money) by doing something with him that also brings her pleasure in and of itself. Knowing she can receive this pleasure quite easily from most men, she thus discriminates harshly which men she will have sex with. If she's not having sex because she is "caught up by the emotion in the moment" (aka: it just happened) then she is having sex because she has an ulterior motive, eg: she hopes to receive money/attention etc. The targetting of specific men, the refinement of this strategy, the manipulation - it is all based on sex and women utilising their sex to have men fulfil their varying needs. Women can fill their own economic needs nowadays, but loving yourself is not quite the same as being loved. In that sense a woman can be economically independent, but still be left longing mentally/sexually (they're oft similar/the same for women - the mental and the sexual.) Likewise, a man with money and a woman with money equates to even more money, so that's never a bad thing.

As Freud said, sex underlies everything (not only that, so does the threat of force, but that is only somewhat relevant here.) If you are avoiding sex and have no experience of it, you avoid exhibiting these behaviours I describe. Still, it all scratches at your soul enough for you to bring it up, which suggests you have not completely rejected the notion. Really you are in a battle between your curiosity/libido and your fear. You won't totally lose yourself, but it will change how you live, see yourself, look at men and talk/relate to men. Ultimately, it's your decision to make. Perhaps your fear acts as unintended self-discipline, saving you from your carnal nature, or perhaps you possess noble qualities in spite of your fear, and although sex would change you, it wouldn't entirely corrupt you/transform you into the women you despise. Only you can find that out for yourself, through experimentation, should you dare.

All the best.

my husband is smarter than me and in a higher career position.

Which only proves red pill ideas (the concept of hypergamy) you have a man who is superior to you, which is how you are capable of loving him.

When you come into forums like this you have to step outside of your own little world, your intimate experiences, your frame of references, and how you feel about your husband, and see THE BIGGER PICTURE. Women don't give a shit about men inferior to them, and feminism is socially engineering a society where women often get ahead at the expense of men (quotas, earning more degrees, they have a same sex parent, lots of boys don't etc.) How this plays out is you have all these high-earning women who want nothing to do with men who make less, which is a lot of men. They all chase the cream of the crop, women don't date down like men do, in societies where the men have a lot of power, they all get women. In societies where they socially engineer "female equality" lots of women just aren't attracted to lots of men because they're at similar power levels (or he has less.)

You managed to lock a guy down, and you've known him since you were young so you haven't been cock hopping (like most women have) and he's been high quality enough to stop you pressing the big red button. That isn't common in the contemporary west. Just because you could be considered an exception to the norm, it doesn't mean we're wrong about the things we say, and really, as a sub, we don't like taking time out to explain things to women who cannot reconcile their own lives with our beliefs and views. We don't really owe you an explanation.

You're a girl in the men's locker room while you're in TRP. If you cause shit, you will be removed post-haste. Better you don't even mention the fact you're a chick, because we don't care and don't really like the idea of women being here anyway. Women tend to subvert discussion and, like you have done, make it all about them and their significant other/people they know rather than understand the concepts abstractly as we do here.

All the best to you and hubby, but you're better off in /r/redpillwomen.

Break his heart and free him at the same time. His lust/love is being weaponised against him by this hoe. Better you take some punches from him, for him, than letting this crazy bitch lead him to hell with the promise of pussy disguising itself as love. Of course, when she's gone and you have a black eye, you have to get your bro a new hoe. Save him from himself, or forget about him. It's your call.

He doesn't trust me and thinks he's another person I manipulate and use.

That's why I stay anonymous/seperate from my writing identity. I don't need every person I meet distrusting me because they read my website, and get scared/paranoid everything I say to them is some elaborate headfuck they can't discern BUT ARE JUST SURE is happening. Fuck that bullshit.

These are most relevant:

Can't do that when everybody knows WHAT YOU TRULY think, can you? It'll be constant guard up 24/7, whether that person's an enemy or not, they'll see you as one because their fear (or if the objection is moral, disgust) causes them to distrust you.

Have you written a post on meditation? I searched your blog and didn't see anything.

I haven't written one, no. There's plenty on Google. It's quite simple really, although I'm sure you get "sages" and "schools of meditation" who have developed different breathing techniques.

What is your take on how to do it, the benefits, etc.?

Sit somewhere, close your eyes, focus your mind on counting your breathes, whenever anything else comes into your head kill the thought. Do this for as long as desired I tend to get a fair amount of benefit out of a 20 min duration.

Benefits:

- More focussed/concentrated/clear-headed
- Calm, not stressed, fearful or anxious

I'm sure there are more sophisticated ways of meditating out there, but this does the job for me.

Instead, I'd more likely end up being dumped because I don't have enough sex with him.

A valid concern. Men need sex like babies need milk.

If by "remaining loyal" you mean...just staying with him or doing what he wants or something...I really feel like almost EVERYONE needs emotional manipulation for that.

I mean if he upholds his end of the agreed upon social contract, so do you. If monogamy is agreed, you are both monogamous. If you agree he can have an open sex life but you can't, then you don't renege on that or amend said stipulation without verbally agreed upon consent. If you have a low sex drive you should make an effort to appease him, but consent to him fucking other women. Otherwise he'd just dump you anyway. What does he gain from being with you? Nothing. If you are so logical, think logically from his perspective. What makes you worth a fuck to him?

I am definitely boring for most things.

Get hobbies. If you are an aspie girl you can get masculine orientated hobbies like chess or computer programming, there's no need to be a bore. You can bond/appreciate one another over shared interests.

I get the feeling I REALLY wouldn't make a good girlfriend.

Aspie girl has feelings eh? I mock. Most women don't. /r/redpillwomen is that way if you want female-centric advice, although I'm not sure what good that'll be for you.

He would definitely be able to control me in many cases... because of my apathy and "meh" attitude towards so many things

That and your asexualism lead me to believe you have incredibly low testosterone levels, might be worth getting checked to confirm. Would explain a lot. Low testosterone is associated with a lack of sexual desire, low productivity and low ambition. Much indifference, very boring.

And I'll refuse, without providing an explanation. Then I'll ignore him. It may get physical. And he'll be shocked, at least the first few times. And then he'll probably call me crazy or a bitch, if he's like everyone else.

Women are meant to submit to men they respect. I've seen the most psychopathic and violent women submit, you are no different. You probably don't know any men who can instil respect/admiration/fear in you. I'll assume you're young and sheltered based on what you've said. Probably a virgin.

You'd be good to raise kids with if you are a high-functioning autistic. You'd be easier to deal with for the man, although your kids may suffer because you wouldn't give them enough love. Your chance of cheating is lower, but like any woman, although you don't realise it, you require emotional manipulation to be loyal. So we'd have to find out what your emotional triggers are (what gets to you the most) and then use that to condition loyalty into you. You're different to most women, but you're not special. You don't fit in with women or men. You are alone, really, because you are an outlier. The best you can do is find someone who accepts you who is capable of managing you. You'd make a good partner for something stable, but I imagine you're boring for anything casual, especially if you think you're asexual (has a man ever properly dominated you in the bedroom? have you ever fully and intensely orgasmed?) Any man you want who is worth his shit would have to ensure he can rein you in. That may offend your ego or sensibilities but it's the reality of things. Not even an autistic woman respects a pushover, women are women, even without the emotional volatility.

BPDs are, IMO, low-functioning DT women, but obviously there's some blur/overlap/ambiguity going on. The only thing I don't mention that I think pertains specifically to bi-polar's is bi-polar's change their opinion of you when they're absent from you without any input/anything you've done, so you never know where you are with them. Needless to say, without rhyme or reason, they blow massively hot and cold, but they're convinced (and will convince you) it's your fault they feel that way about you (even though it isn't.) They are superb gaslighters.

The Dowry as Compensation for Lost Options

1 upvotes · 8 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

The sex industry may start to appear in American and European backyards, as economies falter, wages stagnate and unemployment rises.

If the economy stagnates it doesn't necessarily mean deflation, so the hookers are still going to charge more here (because they want to meet their own basic needs AND THEN SOME) than they will in poorer countries where the cost of living is flat out cheaper. Even if she has a main job and turns tricks to top up her wages, I don't see western girls being able to rival the prices these hot third world hookers command.

When you have $1,000 per month coming in in the west, you're working class. You have to live within your means and probably don't have much for anything (at least, in the UK it doesn't go far assuming you're single/live alone.) When you have that same amount of money coming in per month but you're living in certain parts of (most of, but not all of) South America or Southeast Asia, you can live a comfortable middle to upper middle class lifestyle. The hookers in these countries cost the equivalent of buying a bottle of vodka in the west.

I've heard in Ecuador you can have a huge house and a swimming pool and a good life for less than $2,000 a month. Houses in good locations sell for less than $50k. If you can fly to meetings in the states whilst living there, or you get paid online, you're basically golden (obviously local income is going to suck and match their cost of living.) Their currency is the US dollar too so no currency conversions and worrying about getting shitty rates from a rip-off money exchange merchant. Knowing how cheap the general cost of living is I'd estimate an Ecuadorian hooker goes for $20-$30 a pop. That's just an example of Ecuador, there are tons of other countries with similar costs of living. Doubt you'll ever get sex that cheaply from a hot young girl in the states/any other developed western country.

It can be motivational in the right context. Fearing difficulty is pointless. If you are strong, difficulty is irrelevant. The weak need a lower difficulty (eg: women get it easier in life.) A man does not focus on how hard things are, he focuses on making himself strong. That way, difficulty is meaningless, a strong individual can win on easy or hard mode. If you are a man, part of your identity should be enduring and overcoming hardship to internalise and solidify your masculinity. I don't think I've ever met a male I considered a man who hadn't been through some fucked up shit. We define ourselves by how we deal with our struggles, and what those things teach us. Women/weak men define themselves by how pretty they are, social status and what other people think about them. A man's frame of reference is internal. Weak males and women's frame of reference is external.

Kids of high enough material wealth who were thus sheltered from the harshness of reality as well as men who haven't been burned by a woman are pretty fucking clueless about reality because their understanding of mental pain is abstract. Getting burned by a woman you're fully invested in is one of the most painful things that a man can ever experience. These naive, inexperienced guys haven't been hurt enough, so they are weak. These are the people who think everything else should be made easier for them instead of rising to the challenge.

It's a general statement, it's not directed at you, and I stand by it. Short men need to see past their height and stop letting it dictate their world view. Some short guys are bad ass because they managed to not let their height dictate who they are. I respect them. The majority seem to be obsessed with their height and do not stop moaning about it. It is unbecoming, it's annoying, and when a manlet with the mentality of scrappy-doo tries to tear down a taller guy out of insecurity, it's pathetic. It is the crab bucket fully manifest, to me, it is feminine.

Tldr: It's not about you - I'm commenting on a general phenomenon I have observed time and time again. Short guys gotta keep their height-related insecurity under control.

You have misinterpreted my position and intent. I'm not defending a theory. I'm not trying to argue with you (but you think I am, so you have been rude and argumentative with me.) I'm not trying to get you to justify anything. I am interested in the concept of a civilizational cycle. Just like a disproved philosophy doesn't mean all philosophical ideas are wrong, Glubb's flawed theory doesn't mean all of the ideas that make up his theory are wrong or can't somehow be adapted/borrowed to make a more accurate theory in it's place.

You have refuted a man's theory in a book because the dates are wrong. That means his theory that "civilizations last 250 years" is wrong. Period. We can accept that. It doesn't mean civilizations don't have cycles that fluctuate. It doesn't mean they necessarily follow the order given in Glubb's book (that could be another wrong idea.) But wrong dates don't prove that civilizations do not have cycles, simply that each part of the cycle may not have a fixed period of time of which they last for.

In fact, that idea could be wrong too, there may not be an ordered cycle, just civilizational phases that occur (as Glubb lists) but instead of the order he lists them in, they may just occur at random shifting from one phase into another. I suspect civilizations are still capable of phases, and certain phases may have higher correlations/stronger relationships with other phases (this idea needs more thorough investigation.) This could be based on civilizational factors in the-then time, war, technology, religion, ideology etc.

Regardless, I have no interest in talking to someone who feels the need to attack me rather than just have an open intellectual discussion about ideas.

I don't put an awful lot of stock into what academics say about the DT as the lab and a fucking likert scale self-assessment are about a million miles away from authentic manifestations of "psychopathic behaviour," however I am of the opinion that Kevin Dutton definitely presents the most interesting case for psychopathy from within mainstream academia. He seems a little eccentric and out-of-the-box with his thinking, which I not only relate to but think is necessary for properly understanding these behavioural traits.

I'd be interested to know where he's getting his crime indicator from.

Likewise.

I'm also surprised by the idea that Machiavellianism is considered "high callousness" since it would only suggest callousness in the right circumstances, no? It's not really on the same level as a narcissist or a psychopath.

Right, however I read it as Machiavellianism being a part of "high callousness," not "high callousness" being a part of Machiavellianism. That is to say, the callous are Machiavellian, but the Machiavellian are not necessarily callous.

I'd rather adopt a 2 wives 1 husband household.

I like the idea myself mainly for reasons of running maintainable dread, lots of sex and out of ego - but I don't believe the demographics could support it. Look at guys in the middle east. Drowning in pussy or thirsty as fuck. Kind of like here in the west, just for different reasons.

Do you mean you don't believe in the male Christian "God" that we've been raised with in Western religion?
If that, then rightfully so.

Pretty much, yes.

The 'Architect' or Creator you suggest would be above and beyond all religious bullshit debate

Yes, either living outside this universe/reality or some kind of alien species who seeded us from within this reality. Those are just some ideas for alternatives, I don't believe either of them to be "the absolute affirmative truth." They just seem more likely to me than "God." It makes no sense we'd be the centre of the universe/special when the universe is so vast. Not saying humanity isn't incredible, but that I don't think the creator of everything that ever was and ever will be (assuming that is something that exists or existed) would especially spend time on the third planet in the Milky Way galaxy. If "God" described by religion is one of these things but with this information omitted - that'd make sense.

Active reader of your site, good work on this thread.

Almost without a fail she tries to call my bluff by lightly accusing me of never taking her advice (which is absolutely not true).

"That's because your advice ain't worth shit!" - I take an asshole approach to these things. I make her feel all shitty about her opinion/sense of worth. Then I tell her I'm kidding, give her a kiss on the head and say "don't worry I'll handle it." You have to talk to women emotionally until they're willing to listen logically.

The "qualification loop" you mentioned is hauntingly familiar.

You already know what to do - based on my previous post.

When I shut it down ("I'm not going to discuss this with you anymore"), she assumes I'm getting defensive because I know I'm wrong.

Yeah it's too "matter-of-fact" she's looking for drama so you have to give it to her. In one way or another, positive or negative she doesn't care - she's seeking an emotional response primarily over a rational one. I opt for the asshole approach because I hate feeling like an emasculated bitch. Be an asshole towards her to feed her drama/emotions and then be like "awww I was just messing around hunny" and she'll let you handle shit. You have to put them in their place.

She then laughs at me, seeing me as a stubborn kid who has gotten caught stealing but won't admit it, even though the candy is in his hand.

Better put an end to that shit. Can't let a woman see herself as superior to you or you're in dangerous territory (she'll cheat/ leave /divorce etc) When a woman laughs at me I'll say something like "what are you laughing at fat cheeks" you know, throw her off. You have to be a little rude, knock their confidence (western women are very narcissistic) and then by doing that you can get them to act "normal" eg: not so fucking gassed up on their own self-importance. People who think they are more important than you/more right about something than you (particularly women) need to be brought down a peg or two before they can act right.

I would assume the typical advice is "amused mastery" and "outcome independence," but in this case I believe it is actually harming her trust in me because she actually believes I don't know what I'm doing and I'm just being stubborn. But like I said, I'm very comfortable with my decisions (financial and otherwise).

You need to be more of an asshole but comfortable in your superiority (she needs you more than you need her - and she needs reminding that your commitment is a privilege not a right.) If someone undermines me, I undermine them until they no longer feel the need to undermine me. This is the basic principle in play here. Fight fire with fire. Don't think "being the bigger man" by being rational or "fair" is going to keep everything functioning here, because it isn't. That's the advice hand-holding feminist counsellors will give you "to work with her to get through it" but it's all fucking horse shit. My advice is better. It isn't working for you as it stands so a change of tack is due. Play dirty and you will get the respect you deserve.

When I put an end to her qualification loop, she tells herself that I'm opposing her just to oppose her.

Projection. Women do this to make sure we're tough and on top of our shit because they're perpetually insecure, whereas we don't cause unnecessary conflict to determine underhandely if our S.O is "on top of their game", hence we do not seek drama in the way that they do. Women will always shit test because they're always getting ready to jump ship when things go to shit. Read <http://illimitablemen.com/2014/12/14/the-shit-test-encyclopedia/> if you haven't.

She would always ask me if I had other women and I told her it wasn't her business.

"I haven't found a girl worth being exclusive with yet." That's a cryptic "yes."

Me answering this way probably showed her I didn't care about her feelings and made her feel like just another girl I was seeing.

You're just passing up an opportunity to build attraction. This is the perfect opportunity to demonstrate high value, you're killing the escalation with a stone wall. If you had said "yes" and she knew you were seeing other girls, she'd get jealous but it wouldn't kill your chances. Jealousy actually builds attraction.

Edit 2: Isn't narcissism part of the dark triad theory? Where did I go wrong?

You have to make it work for you. You have to use your self-importance to be charismatic, confident, imposing. If you use it just look down at people and say "you're not worth of my time" you don't actually use your ego to build any attraction or create any rapport, instead you just put people down with it - breaking rapport. Do the former not the latter.

How can I start valuing them as an object of desire instead of how they can stroke my ego?

This is usually instinct. Men value women as objects of desire because they want to fuck them. Men forego dignity, habit and wealth to monopolise on chances to have sex with women. If you value yourself excessively more than you value women, I do not think it is possible for you to "inherently desire them." You must have some desire for them or you wouldn't be here, but your desire for women is no match for your desire for yourself (the preservation of the ego.)

I don't think you need to shed your ego, as that will actually make getting women more difficult. Instead you need to better capitalise on it. Rather than show these women overtly that you do not care about them, pretend you do. Good game will have you hinting at your desire/interest for her, giving her little shots of hope that she has a chance with you, only for you to retreat and make her chase a little harder to win your affections. When you tire of the games, you may escalate and take her, she will be ready, and she will be thankful you have finally ended the flirtatious torture of which you have subjected her to.

how exactly do women detect this?

They have feelings. You communicate their feelings don't matter. This hurts them. They associate pain with you, and then in turn they stop associating with you.

Not just sexual strategy is amoral, everything is. Why? Because life has no feelings, no conscience or consciousness and gives no fucks about shit. That doesn't mean disregarding morality as a whole is a wise or even balanced thing to do.

1 upvotes · 29 December 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Is it immoral to burn your garbage? I don't know, but if everyone did it we would be living in a shitty world.

Yes, this is the thing: society can and does support a minor population of dark triads/psychopaths. But when we're in a decline, what happens is the psychopath population exceeds its naturally sustainable quota and what we get is a normalisation of immorality and psychopathy, the two begin to blur. Psychopaths become more overt with their psychopathy, they hide it less. This "overflow of psychopathy," speeds up the decline and creates more borderlines in turn.

Psychopaths tend to view non-psychopaths as social prey, they are inter-species predators, whilst they see themselves as the superior hunters. However some of the "prey" will become borderline and internalise the traits of their predators to an extent where they are able to effectively fend off against predators. When most prey is defenceless, but some can really make the hunter struggle for victory, the hunter's cost-benefit will usually cause them to quit and seek an easier victory. This is not always the case (depends on the sadistic component and how much kick they get out of "the chase") but by and large, this is an accurate generalisation. Imagine a ridiculously large stag with huge antelopes fighting against a lion for a metaphorical comparison of a socialised borderline defending against a natural psychopath.

At some point somewhere somebody needs to realise the pattern in the civilizational decline and take the necessary actions to halt, slow down or otherwise avert it so that their civilization may stand the test of time. If you can avert the decline, your society can hold onto power indefinitely, assuming it keeps up technologically with the other powers. I do believe such a thing can be achieved, although I do not believe our civilization will be the first one to achieve it. If we are lucky, our successors may. As of yet, the Romans came the closest.

Also: you may have to just put it down to shitty genetics (and hope you haven't inherited them from her) some people are crazy purely for the fuck of it and have no rational reasoning for their lunacy. They either suffered a traumatic event, or they are simply loopy due to shitty genetics.

What's the fastest and most effective way to unwind twisted logic?

I wouldn't bother. Just agree with her in words, but do the opposite in action. When she points it out, gaslight back. "Remember you said X mum, not Y!" when she disagrees, give her a little kiss or something, tell her you love her (she is probably insecure as fuck) and then do what you need to do in spite of her protests. Placate her, but don't fall into her bullshit reality for a second. When you can get out, do.

In particular, how would one who is naturally unemotional or un-empathetic be able to pull this off? Or, is it the case that for those people, skilled Machiavellianism is just not possible?

Without the capacity to feel what others feel you have to rationalise the whole thing. Build up an understanding of emotional logic as an abstract concept and then act upon that constructed framework. Obviously, being sympathetic is a huge boon here, being unable to feel what others feel just means more work as you have to logic the whole process, but I do not believe it's impossible. I can't speak from experience because I can feel what others feel.

It's possible for such people, just harder for them in this particular aspect. Also, a lack of emotionalism makes one unpersonable. Cold personalities arouse suspicion, refer to point F - superficial charm.

Attempting to be rational first, or adopting a certain worldview on a purely intellectual basis, is a mistake - and once you have the perspective you don't need any explanations, you will automatically and competently understand any and all relevant situations as they happen because you have the faculties necessary to process them.

Not when you are analysing another. If I told you to be rational when running into a fire as a fireman and saving the most useful member of society using quick analysis would you then proceed into a tirade about how denying your emotions is unhealthy? Course, I may have been plating a couple other girls at the same time during this story..... So I'm going to keep doing that Good.

Her and I had been good friends for a year, then became FWB,

As soon as you did that she started seeing you as boyfriend material. You are providing her both beta and alpha qualities (sex = alpha, friend like relationship = beta) you will never be "just a cock to her" because you've got in her head sexually and platonically. You are husband/BF material to her.

We're still friends.

Who are you fooling though, really? Once you fuck a girl, things will never be what they were. If you truly valued her friendship so much, it was probably a bad idea to fuck her. Fucking a girl you really like personality wise and not getting together with her is probably the best way to lose a really great friend. Trust me, I'm speaking from experience on that one. I lost a great girl because I fucked her. Would have been better not fucking her. That's what happens when a girl is attractive though, her great personality doesn't make you NOT WANT to fuck her. You will still want to fuck her, hot chicks with great personality are a double edged sword like that. You can't plate 'em because one of you will catch feelings, probably you because chicks with a good personality are rare. Supply and demand and all that shit.

I'd even theorise this chick is using the other guy to try and make you jealous. Bitch using dread game, haha.

1 year plate not coming over to fuck anymore, still txts me everyday, how can I tell her to fuck off without coming off as emotional?

1 upvotes · 14 December 2014 · /r/askTRP

Agreed. You may be able to extract a few more fucks out of her, but at the end of the day this shit is done. She is already at the stage of wanting more, having lesser options elsewhere means you get to fuck her a few more times if you can be bothered to put up with her shit, but it's only delaying the plate-crash slightly. Having a woman who wants more from you but has to settle for less is how you end up getting spermjacked so she can "turn the tables on you" and force you into commitment with a baby. When a woman is getting desperate, dump her, that's when the crazy is most likely to manifest and fuck up your life.

As for your question, it sounds like she is more narcissistic than you are. How do you beat a narcissist? Out ego their ego. It's a one-upping thing, she's henpecking. You have to neg narcissists to hurt them, mock her fascination with your alcohol tolerance and openly question if she has any interesting hobbies because you find her fixation with your drinking habits to be immensely boring. When she gets butthurt "awww I'm just joking, like you're only joking when you drone on about my alcohol tolerance right?!" she'll get the message.

You need to assert yourself more and not let bitches and their fickle opinions mean so much to you. You deal with narcs/women by negging the shit out of them and then retaining the plausible deniability of "having a joke" as damage control. If she is giving you shit she can take it right back. Stand your ground, don't be the emotional punch bag for a vapid slut.

Also bro, if you're not, lift. I've noticed guys who lift take way less shit from people than guys who don't. Probably the increased T. Sometimes you can let things slide, but if it's a recurring theme you have to nip that shit in the bud before it grows into something more detrimental.

Hey man, one field at a time. The philosophy of TRP is infecting the smarter men with the mentalities to change how things work. Personally I am going into a field that is already very male dominant, but I am going to be making sure it isn't dominated by some pussy shit men.

The scientific community is beta right now, it isn't going to stay that way. There's a new wave of men and they are going to be instilling TRP theory into every field there is. Once that happens, people are going to have to decide which societal model they deem most effective, ours or the corrupt, two faced, feminist lies.

I hope this comes to fruition but I don't hold my breath. Everywhere I walk where I live I just see effeminate pussies, it's annoying that so many men are total manboobs.

1 upvotes · 4 December 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I would also argue that outside of government, in the silos of power that exist in society at large, matriarchial elements have assumed huge power. Just as an example, in corporations, many women dominate HR/marketing departments - which means they determine who gets hired, and what message the company emits.

I concur, boys being raised without fathers is responsible for that and is, in large part, what has led to the creation of a community such as TRP. Even outside of the workplace, women tend to be more dominant - which is why masculinity has become such a commodity now; most men are simply not masculine anymore. They failed the feminist shit test by betraying their own instincts to the feminine imperative. Masculinity is our best commodity, we must embrace it, accentuate it and be true to ourselves.

It was nice talking to you, I enjoyed the exchange.

Law 01 - Do Not Outshine The Master - Massively In-Depth

1 upvotes · 30 November 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

To keep things really simple, you have to eye up which master is more powerful, which master is more of a threat to the other (if at all) and which master will give you the best terms for business. Once you've eyed up all that and come to a conclusion, you pick a side. Unfortunately you cannot be in "I don't want to choose limbo" forever, stay there too long and you will lose both as they will feel disrespected by your lack of enthusiasm (which fucks with their ego.)

Edit: This sub-topic "competing masters" may warrant an additional section to my essay. I'll put it on the backburner and make a decision/see what I can come up with later.

Western/Northern Europe are ridiculously feminised cultures.

Belgium, Netherlands, Austria, Germany... they are projected to be muslim majority countries in the future with the declining native birth rate and the high muslim birth rate. The loathing and the fear of that, that's a huge cause for the revival of nationalism.

*2014 UPDATE - A General Overview of The Dark Triad

1 upvotes · 20 November 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Since you don't know me I will explain where my opinion comes from. I had a close personal relationship with a Narcissist, and tried to start a business with him. Things got extremely messy right off the bat, The second he had any leverage or power in a situation, he would leverage it in any way possible to drive me insane- and had no qualms about lying, gas-lighting, undermining, etc. I never have and don't think I will ever experience such a dark period again.

For me, I was incredibly naive to get involved in that situation and made a very poor decision. In an odd sense, it was a great thing for me, as it woke up me up and put me on a path that led me to really take control of my life, that naturally culminated in me finding the Red Pill (although I would say I've been instinctually red pill my whole life).

Iron sharpens iron. Part of you has to become a monster in order to fight the monsters. That is the sacrifice we all must make in dealing with these people in society. I've read statistics saying they are as high as 6% of the population. You have to have a plan in dealing with these people, especially when they disproportionately populate positions of power. You may not ever deal with one so intimately again, but you may find yourself working under, or in some proximity to one. That experience is invaluable, you know the tell-tale signs, you are forewarned, you will have various strategies for combating and coping with such people.

Listen, I did not mean to belittle your writing, I think you have the characteristics of a Dark Triad down well- and it is a well written piece.

I do/did not feel belittled and did not think that was your intention. I mean what I said. I've seen A LOT of comments on this board over the time that seem to gloss over Machiavellianism and Psychopathy but many have a bee in their bonnet over narcissism and I find it particularly fascinating how it is this particular facet which seems to fuck people off.

However, the origin and core of most (if not all) Dark Triad's is that of an incredibly insecure and unbalanced person

Totally agree.

In some ways, it is the exact polar opposite of what a Red Pill man is striving to be, but like anything full circle, can be very close in outwards appearance.

You're not the first guy to say this to me. To save repeating myself, read these if you want to understand where I come from in writing these articles:

I personally see a difference between a dark triad woman(cold, calculated, distant, controled and almost sociopathic) and crazy women(emotional roller coasters that attract daddys and drama like a neodymium magnet). I love them both don't get me wrong, but they require very different aproaches.

They are different but for the purpose of the average reader I've grouped them together. You have already concisely stated what the major differences are, and I concur with that minor point of analysis.

You know me so well. They are literally emotional heroid could you elaborate?

All DT guys feel the same way about these kinds of women.

DT men are always bored, unlike typical men who are drama avoidant, DT men tend to cause drama/thrive on drama. These women are unending sources of drama because like the DT, they are impulsive and often neurotic. The DT guy feeds off the drama as it gives him an excuse to be crazy "she does this to me." The DT guy will play the victim that this specific woman is driving him crazy and blah blah blah but he fucking loves all the hype. He thrives on it. If he didn't he would drop her like he drops most women who provide him no value. Instead he pseudo-moans about the bitch whilst loving every minute of it. She loves it too. They both love it. He loves drama, she loves drama, they both cause it "just to feel something." When written like that, it's kind of hilarious. These people are so used to feeling nothing/weak feelings that the hype of drama is addictive to them.

Care to explain what lèse-majesté means?

It's the idea of considering yourself so regal that anybody who insults you insults royalty, and anyone who insults royalty insults you. It's basically a huge indignant response coming from someone with a massive superiority complex due to an insane amount of unearned privilege. At least, most monarchs didn't TAKE the throne, they inherited it.

Infamia is the trait or curse, where the person has a sick need of being popular. The ancient Romans banned, shunned and excommunicated everyone with infamia, because a starving whore sells only herself, but those with infamia are so lacking, that they will sell and prostitute anyone and everything in their sick pursuit of popularity and likes.

Sounds like something I should read up on.

If we are to be pedantic, its based on the assumption that a man is indeed capable of self-improvement and that he can utilise those gains to get women. Whether that is being in the top 20% of men or having enough disposable income to fuck hookers on the regular is his call. Think outside the box.

The King's most important task is to limit his sadism and find as many good Advisors to trust. In some ways a Red Pill Woman and the King have something in common... they need to "ground" themselves to something stoic (Advisor) so they don't become a sadistic "monster".

Yes, this is bang on.

In fact in my interactions with "King" types (less self-disciplined psychopaths) I have noticed massive similarities between them and women. Both are hypergamous. Both use Briffault's Law to determine their relationships. Both are incredibly solipsistic and "ME ME ME" orientated. Both are incredibly narcissistic to an insecure and butthurt degree (meaning they get indignant easily.) Both need to anchor themselves to more solid, stable personalities, people unlike themselves, and your observation in making a connection between the neuroticism of the king and the stoicism of the advisor is a cogent one. You can game kings like you would game women, and that shit will work. Dread game, DHVs, all of it. They're like men who emote/strategise in a feminine way. Due to their sadism and narcissism they tend to love drama, again, like women do.

Best way to "make a king fall in line" once the king has established you have value is to utilise law 16:

They wonder why you're not eye fucking them, makes them both curious and self aware.

I'm intimidating, so I have scary as fuck with the allure of dangerous. If I was four inches taller it would be so easy I'd get bored. I can pull damn near any female now if I don't care and I make her laugh, it prompts them to qualify to me, so not being short would be easy mode. I wouldn't have the game I do how if I were taller though, I needed to learn or I'd be an incel chump. They are afraid to talk to me, people move out of my way in stores, and old ladies look concerned that I might mug them.

Hear, hear! I fucking relate to this shit. I don't have the issue with my height though. Most men and women I meet find me intimidating, I can read it in their body language. I have to "play beta" a lot just to get a "normal level" of interaction (instead of instant fear/wariness.) In my beta days instead of realising this and playing it to my advantage when I wanted to intimidate people or playing it down when I wanted people to feel at ease, I would think "people seem to be scared of me for no fucking reason wtf?" I'm sure I'm not the only guy who is tall without being lanky that has experienced this.

As for eye fucking, its pointless unless you know you're going to escalate with a chick there and then. So basically, if you're out on a date or some shit, that's the time to be eye fucking. Eye fucking is pointless if you're walking around randomly or in a "can't shit where I eat" situation. You enjoy staring each other down, the tension builds, the attraction is there and then it goes into nothing. Pointless. Gotta utilise that kind of tension to escalate in dates and shit /preaching to the choir.

Monk Mode Confusion

1 upvotes · 6 November 2014 · /r/askTRP

Okay so basically not all socialising is equal. Some socialising is productive, most is not. If you are a low SMV man, you probably don't have any alpha friends you can shoot the shit with and really reap rewards from an engaging, enlightening interaction. Your interactions are going to be low value, you're going to sit around playing games saying "yeah dude!" eating junk food and just being adult teenagers with the company you keep. That's the exact kind of shit you want to avoid. I mean you can indulge it once a month if you like, but the better you get as a person the more you're going to frown on that kind of shit and not feel like you need a "cheat day" to go and be lazy and fuck around.

Having social anxiety is a catch-22 situation, you need to socialise to break out of your anxiety, but at the same time you find it harder to socialise because you have anxiety. I recommend implementing approaches/socialising into your self improvement routine as an area of self-improvement that lacks and needs development, but you should be socialising only to hone your skills, not carelessly socialising for the sake of it. On that point you will want to socialise with people who you think can teach you something and have something to contribute to conversation. If you practice socialising with people who are boring themselves, you may accidentally misinterpret their dullness with your inability to socialise, and that will just set you back. You can't lose your vision, you must remain steadfast. Don't get absorbed by or caught up on socialising, it's a very easy trap to fall into.

Now, personally, for me, I find socialising with the average person to actually be detrimental, most people do not elicit positive feelings in me, they are boring, unremarkable, a bit stupid and etc. The only way to bridge that gap, if you are an intellectual type or are likewise underwhelmed by people is through comedy. Watch lots of stand-up comedy, it's not going out and socialising but it's the best way to learn humour, a skill which can bridge vast chasms in social difference, alleviate anxiety and bring you closer to other people. This is a skill you can learn in your house sitting down watching smart men perform routines, Bill Burr, Patrice O'Neal etc.

Introspection is very important, and at the beginning of monk mode you should be focussing on that to better understand yourself, what you need and what you want/expect out of life. Once you have that, and have some kind of plan together of what you need to do and how you're going to do it, then start on building up your sense of humour and fixing your most basic problems. Once you have fixed the things that are easiest to fix, are lifting weights and have some general direction then you can start tackling your social inadequacies. Likewise, because you have direction and increased T from lifting, learning to socialise won't be as difficult as you expect it to be. Reading your post, I can assume you haven't started monk mode yet, or are at the very beginning of it because if you had been in monk mode awhile, you would realise these things. You would feel the increased confidence from lifting, your anxiety would be absent or less pronounced and socialising wouldn't feel so arduous, but more natural.

Also, as an addendum, I want to thank you for reading my blog. A lot of the wordy dark triad stuff I write is to please myself/my intellectual curiosity pertaining to DT theory as well as teach men what to look out for and how to understand dark personalities. The self-improvement stuff like monk mode however is specifically written for the men of the red pill, and it's only as useful as the men who read it can learn from it, apply it to their lives actionably, and add to their SMV with it. You will make it bro if you put the effort into yourself. Try to overcome your vices and get rid of bad habits. I didn't put that in monk mode but it's a huge thing that will hold you back. Addictions, bad habits, poor discipline. Maybe I should write a monk mode part 2, addressing that or simply extend monk mode to include it, I'm not sure.

Good luck dude.

Do you know where you are? This isn't a community for pussies. Vitriol? Please. You're such a victim, aren't you. Again, you're boohoo-ing over style rather than actual substance. Seems to be a recurring theme with you. Female tactics bro, female tactics - arguing style over substance. My entire post has more merit and depth to it than your "I don't like this" post. I demonstrate reasoning, you didn't. If you're too weak or sensitive to be here, feel free to go. In fact, I will ask for you to be banned so we don't have to hear you whine again. Seriously, you're pathetic dude.

I would never go up to a guy and criticise him without having a solution at hand, that's what respect is buddy. If you have the guile to bring it to someone's attention that they need help with something and you do that in a disrespectful manner, you better be able to back your disrespect with analysis/solutions. You failed on both fronts. Instead I see you squirming in your comment, trying to hide in undisclosed hypothetical and nuance. Bitch, I write about machiavellianism. I know when a guy is not being honest with me and is trying to save face because he's on the ropes. Don't even try to insult me again. In fact, you know what, I'm not even reading your next post in light of that. That whole "now you've spoken to me like this I won't help you" bullshit won't wash. You're full of shit. That just allows you to continue talking shit without proving yourself. You failed to engage me correctly, that's your bad. You deserve to be spoken to like this.

Maybe you meant well but your entire approach is fucking shit and maybe those are your shabby social skills showing through the internet, I don't know. Whatever, I'm done. Bye.

EDIT:

Right, because it it was just "better" criticism, you'd react completely differently, right?

Yes that's my entire damn point. You think your opinion is criticism, it isn't. Maybe you could do with a dictionary to look up what it means. I'd say you were fastidious - needlessly nitpicky and excessively critical (without actually doing any critique - surely that's a skill!) But then what do I know? I'm thesaurus man! Hahaha, oh boy, the hilarity.

You're right about the capacity for this to turn into a wall of text. I have much thought on the topic and, too, have previously had the discussion that neuroplasticity makes psychopathy theoretically possible; but do we have any case examples? If it's possible, has a methodology been discovered? Systematic desensitization? If you should be so inclined, perhaps we should discuss this at some length in the future. Maybe in the TRP chat room. Thanks for the clarification, great post.

Machiavellianism discussion?

1 upvotes · 29 October 2014 · /r/askTRP

It's a combination of both nature and nurture, however it is my believe there is a heavy nature element. I'll tell you why I think this. I have never met a woman who's nature wasn't to manipulate men on some level. To behave in some way, or use some method of speech in order to exercise influence over men. I have met women who are expert manipulators, and women who were atrocious manipulators, but all were needless to say - manipulative. Now it stands to reason that if this were purely an issue of nurture, then some women by merit of their upbringing and surroundings would not be manipulative. Likewise, some women do not appear to be very manipulative at all, and it is my contention that they are repressing their natures, and have been taught/trained to repress their manipulative natures, rather than actually being absent of such predilection. These are the women who had strong male characters influencing them throughout their lives so their propensity to manipulate is lowered, however you can only suppress natural urges, you cannot expel them, and they will manifest albeit with lesser frequency.

Of course modern western society exacerbates the worst qualities of the feminine skewing the emphasis of the female character towards widely manipulative. However I do believe that outside of the context of the west the same modus operandi remains as par for the course of the female imperative, it simply manifests itself differently due to different environmental variables (eg: less female rights, lack of a welfare state creates more dependence on and respect for men, etc.)

How to work with traditional (ethiopian) chick?

1 upvotes · 3 October 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I'm still the sort that prefers honest failure over machiavellian success.

What does this even mean?

You rather fail because you were honest than succeed due to Machiavellianism? Sounds naive to me.

Ethiopian chick - if she's witty, that's rare in a chick, shows she is smart and non-sexually entertaining. Great stuff. If you really wanna hit it you'll tell her whatever you need to tell her to hit it. You have attraction with the back and forth so escalate physically, put your arm behind her back to guide her as you guys start to walk somewhere. A great time to use this is when she complains she doesn't know where you're both going and she gets lost easily - most women seem to do this. That way it seems organic and not some needy ass need to touch her. If she's cheeky (and she will be if there's back and forth) you can playfully smack her ass and hold frame when she acts indignant, bla bla bla. Tell her daddy clearly didn't teach her discipline as a little girl or some cheesy ass bullshit like that.

Some guys pretend they can fucking read palms as an organic seeming excuse to get some kino in and have a bit of fun at the same time. Bitches love mystical shit and the idea of a destiny which makes them a special snowflake. Depends on your style. That isn't mine personally. Although if she's flirty enough to fire back and forth on all cylinders you could incorporate your own style into the typically cheesy palm reading kino bullshit.

Instead of pretending one line on her hand means she's really spiritual or some other cheesy shit that delicate girls need, you'd find a really short line on her hand and say "this line represents how long you're willing to wait to sleep with a man... oooh damn girl you're impatient!" hold eye contact, slow spreading smirk (not smile,) blah blah. Again prepare for her to eye lash flutter in embarrassment or get indignant and start firing off shit tests at you.. depends on the girl. The boldness will overcome her or emotionally feed her. Depends on the chick. I'm assuming this girl can take a bit of a verbal slaughtering, and some shit tests from you herself, but you have to calibrate. This kind of advice is terrible for delicate chicks (Patrice O'Neal called 'em rabbits) who need you to treat them like an ancient book (with gloves) but excellent for bears and deer (thick skinned and normal women)

Before I forget. Eye fuck the shit out of her. If you're sat a table eating with her, sit opposite her and hold eye contact until she looks away first, then wait for her to re-engage, keep holding it and then when she looks away a second time eat some food or whatever. Do not underestimate the attractiveness of eye-fucking to a woman.

Obviously after all this interaction you need to isolate her back at her place (or your place, hotel, relatively quiet woodland etc), keep flirting, prepare for hamstering (LMR) of why she's not a slut or "doesn't usually do this" or whatever shit it is she comes up with and then fuck her.

Also if I read this right you're fucking a girl from your work that "intimidates all the guys there." I hope you don't mind giving up that job, or are at least capable of making her lose her job, when the time comes. Shitting where you eat is never pretty unless the job is disposable to you or you control the hiring and firing.

Remember to remain playful and don't take her protests too seriously. Also as always, be fully willing to walk if need be.

Have fun.

I think narcissistic, neurotic, consumeristic, death-desiring Western culture itself has rotted and there's little reason to stick around and support it.

Correct and replacing ideology such as religion with feminism has had a large contribution to that (mainly the destruction of the nuclear family, which seeps into everything else) but it's not the only factor, merely a significant one. I do believe I mention religion in that post and how it is a lesser evil in my opinion than feminism for controlling the negatives of female sexuality (and likewise, male promiscuity, Islam/Mormonism aside.)

This guy has a more narrow viewpoint - women are the problem. Meh.

Incorrect, context is everything, OP is talking about the shittyness of women, which is why my response focuses on discussing them. If I discussed corporatism, the dilution of education or nutrition it'd be off topic in thread so it doesn't get addressed.

1 upvotes · 12 September 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

It is somehow admirable that you say you are not a spath but at the same time you always say true things about a spath's way of thinking.

I knew a psychopath for many years and gained a lot of insight about the mentality/condition based on our interactions. The guy could be heartless and not show a shred of remorse, sympathy, guilt or anything. I always knew he was "a bit off" but it took me quite some time to come to the conclusion he was genuinely incapable of sympathy for others and therefore, psychopathic. I learnt a lot from him.

Understanding The Dark Triad - Q&A (Part 1)

1 upvotes · 11 September 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

Understanding The Dark Triad - Q&A (Part 1)

1 upvotes · 11 September 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

Do you think one can learn things about the DT just by watching the show?

You will learn more reading the 48 laws of power and practising the strategy at work/school etc.

Game of Thrones artfully depicts masters of manipulation and savagery at work, but it doesn't give you the methodology or experience you need to execute such manoeuvres yourself. It's good entertainment, and if you understand machiavellianism to a certain extent, you may be able to take a few notes and get a few insights, but its not really an education. Only those who already have some depth of knowledge will be able to glean some, if any, additional insights from it. IMO you learn a lot more from a show like "The Wire" which is based on real life crimes and stories rather than a fantasy based show.

Understanding The Dark Triad - Q&A (Part 1)

1 upvotes · 11 September 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

Great Q&A!

Thanks.

On the Topic of shows I would highly recommend Lord Petyr Baelish from Game of Thrones as an example for Machiavellianism.

Baelish is definitely a Machiavellian, and he has his emotions in check, but not full DT. Full DT in Game of Thrones would be Tywin Lannister.

Cersei is a dark triad woman, atypical like snoop, although for different reasons because she already has a lot of power and this dilutes her ability to represent the average DT woman. You see less of the "help me I'm a poor victim" and more of the "use other men as pawns for proxy violence on my behalf." So with Cersei what you're seeing is a DT woman drunk on power who was born into power and married into more power trying to protect her power via having her son on the throne, and not a typical DT woman, a nobody trying to get power. Likewise with Cersei, you don't see too much in terms of romance and seducing men, because she's too busy fucking her brother.

I should probably add a few dark triad women, other than snoop to the Q&A. Thinking of editing them in before I post this to TRP. I've seen Game of Thrones so can vouch for the character portrayals although I prefer to draw comparisons from dramas based on true stories rather than fantasy as it makes it harder to rationalise that these type of people don't exist and are merely the imaginative by-products of the pen.

What if you wanted to give advices to DT people?

They can't change or "become normal", they are what they are, most of them just want to understand themselves and can't put into words how different they are from most people. Really it would depend on a case-by-case basis. The psychopath I knew didn't want to be confronted about it or talk about it he just wanted his ego fed. Which is fine, I respect that. I wouldn't even bother discussing this shit with him. Maybe if he was drunk or something we'd have a weird conversation about it, but that'd be it. Then he'd pretend the conversation was never had.

I assume you saw my other 5 or so posts dotted around over the past months mentioning the relationship between cocaine and the dark triad. Like all the other shit I write about, guess how I know? Experience.

I will be doing an article on cocaine in the future, but not the near future. It (cocaine) is incredibly relevant to temporarily inducing the dark triad in neurotypical individuals. If you had an ample supply, you could, theoretically, stay in a prolonged dark triad state. It is expensive as shit though and the cheap stuff just isn't worth your money. You can pay £40 here for I would take a guess: 20% purity, really not worth the money for weaker effects that don't last as long. There are both positive and negative side effects to taking cocaine long term. The negative are well documented, such as a hole in the nose (destruction of the septum.) Positives include, but are not limited to, a stronger sense of self/confidence, better social skills, reduction in anxiety, and more egoism. Of course when you're twisted those qualities are quite potent because you're not sober, mix with alcohol and you can be drunk but kept up by the coke so you act sober.

As cocaine is a stimulant and doesn't impair memory, when you're sober you remember all the badass shit you did and it has a positive effect on your ego to remember yourself doing things you never thought you were capable of because you normally lack the social competency or fearlessness required to successfully partake in and enjoy said interactions. I mean you will fight people (if you have to), just take risks you wouldn't normally take, slay shit tests and get pussy like a champ when you're coked up. Anyone who says otherwise is full of shit. When you're coked up it's weird, women seem to just fucking want to jump on it. I can't really even explain it, you don't even have to do anything, women just love you like you're giving off some pheromone they can't resist or some shit. Every incel out there should try doing some coke before they go out and see how their interactions go.

To be honest, when I write the cocaine article, I'll go out the night before so the experience/interactions are fresh in my mind and then I'll do 2-3 lines when I write the article, so quite ironically, I'll be twisted as fuck, but you can be assured it'll be a good article. Sigmund Freud was twisted as fuck on cocaine and always talked about how it was a wonder drug and could help people achieve professional success. He spoke very highly of it, this was of course before it was criminalised. Back then the shit was legal and in pharmacies, so naturally he wasn't getting cut crap, but high purity stuff. If you're doing cocaine your biggest problem is finding shit that isn't cut to crap with harmful chemicals and not paying the earth for just a gram of the stuff. A good coke dealer/supplier who gets high purity and doesn't cut your crap up, along with fair market prices, or discount for repeat custom is worth his weight in gold.

Just to clarify, your questions are:

Is it possible for a dark triad transformation to get triggered in adolescence or adulthood via either traumatic events, drug use (i.e. cocaine and amphetamines), or world-shattering insights (e.g. discovering the Gervais principle)?

Is it possible that some individuals have dormant dark triad traits that only develop once triggered sufficiently?

Could cocaine use cause dormant narcissism to surface in a similar fashion?

Psychopaths have empathy, they understand why someone feels the way they feel, but don't care about it, maybe because they don't know those feelings. But this is meant when someone mentions the lack of empathy.

This is correct with the nuance, that they can care, and they will help you because they care, but they don't care because they share your emotions or are genuinely "moved" by your plight, they don't feel what you feel like typical people and act upon those emotions, their entire decision making process in whether to help you or not is logical and self-interested. So, say the psychopath does care about you, it's because you losing your shit means you lose your utility to them, and they value that utility. In a way, you are cared for because of your utility, as a vessel of something you can do, but not for you in and of yourself. Psychopaths much like women, are incapable of unconditional love.

When thinking of psychopaths, think of briffault's law. If they expect future benefit you have utility. If you're useless to them but they like you/your personality, they will invest just enough time/money/attention into you to have your favour in case you make it big/get successful etc. I guess you could say psychopaths see financially useless friends (or friends who cant provide social mobility) as "cheap stock" in the stock market, they don't want to waste too much time on you, but they want to be in a favourable position should you grow. They are very good at spotting uncultivated/unactualised potential, and they won't help you fulfil it because they're too selfish, but they will, despite your lack of utility to them, maintain a relationship, in part because they have an expectation that you will actualise that potential and by investing minimally into you, don't lose much if that expectation isn't met. Not only that, but psychopaths tend to be very bored people, if you're interesting but have no financial utility, you get a foot in the door with them, so to speak.

From my experience with them, psychopaths tend to greatly appreciate the intellectual. And that appreciation brings them as close to "caring about someone" as is possible without expecting something financial or physical in return. If you are stupid, psychopaths automatically write you off. Likewise, psychopaths tend to hate most people, so when they like someone more than superficially, they place a certain value on it due to its rarity. Psychopaths are very nuanced people.

What I want to say, it is weird, your saying that harder life = less narcissism. When life gives you shit, I see it as a test. Are you up to it? That is your chance to become insanely strong person, or to fail spiritually and in every other way.

Most people in an impoverished situation don't see it like that. They don't see their life situation as a test but as a damnation. People with a lot of material possessions tend to have a lot of friends and a good quality of life so they associate their status and belongings with their self-worth. They derive self-worth from their worldly goods and the status that level of wealth brings. This is what causes them to be narcissistic, they have more than most people so they must be better than most people and their entire identity is built upon superiority, if they were born to a wealthy family they are taught to think like this from a very young age. They are socialised to think like that due to an excess of social privilege.

Poor kids growing up are taught directly that life is tough, when there's no food in the cupboard or the lights go out. These people blame themselves for their situation and that's why they're not narcissistic, because they don't even like themselves, they can't respect themselves because they can't support themselves. Combine that with crappy diet, questionable education, bad neighbourhood, bad jobs and the pressure is enough to weigh on someone until they just accept their position in life. When you have a lot of negative things oppressing you (the totality of poverty) it is difficult to be narcissistic because narcissism tends to begin as rational, it has to attach itself to an outstanding quality. It only becomes irrational when it is self entrenched.

Of course women find it easier to be narcissistic because they are not as rational and they can attach a growing superiority complex to their beauty (which men externally validate), most guys need rational reasons (to begin with) to start becoming narcissistic and aren't rewarded physically in the same way women are unless they work like crazy in the gym/get big/get six-pack etc. They need to objectively believe they are superior to X number of people or at least be convinced they are even if they're not. This is harder to accomplish with people that have a strong sense of logic, than it is with those who aren't. Logical people tend more to be realists.

Some of strongest personalities ever emerged from hard times.

This is what happens when people get angry about their situation and want to use that anger to propel them into a better life. Without that anger/indignation and the motivation which that brings, in my opinion, a lot of people in a crappy position are condemned to working their lives away as wage slaves. They accept their fate because it's all they know, and without anger, the weight of their situation brings them down mentally to accept mediocrity and mere survival rather than rebel against it. Think about it for a second. A guy who has been homeless and unemployed appreciates a crappy little room and a crappy job a lot more than a guy who was born in a mansion and had fast cars and an overpaying job in his dad's company but now has to live in an apartment with a mid range salary and had to sell his car. The first guy is more thankful for what he has, the second guy thinks the world owes him more than what he has because of what he was accustomed to. IMO, there are clear correlations between wealth and narcissism as narcissism for the most part is socialised.

TRP take on drugs?

1 upvotes · 25 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I hate to see coke getting portrayed as this "it will help you tap into your alpha, drug dealers do cope to help them stay in the sociopathic mode they need to be in to operate in the high stress environment, it's just science". It's just not backed by any real behavior of the 99% of cokeheads you see

You and I haven't done the same type of coke then, that, or it simply doesn't work for you in the way it works for me and others I know (perhaps you have weak stuff, have built up a lot of tolerance, or physiological individual differences that result in different behaviour from consumption, etc.)

I'll agree cheap stuff and mid-tier stuff like "flake" or whatever it's called where you are is overpriced and not worth the hassle, the high is minimal and doesn't last very long and if you're drinking alcohol you'll be confusing how cheap drugs make you feel with what the alcohols doing. "Pure" is godlike though. If you tell a bunch of people who've done pure (or close to it - top shelf) cocaine that it doesn't help them "tap into their inner sociopath" or whatever terminology you want to use, they'll laugh at you because they know better than to believe that. People who feel like god's dont sit around up in their bedrooms, they go out and make the most of the high. In my experience, coke+alcohol is a good combo for having a good time without having any of the lethargy that alcohol brings.

There's a reason a lot of powerful people are on coke and getting shit done. When you feel an oil drip from your nasal cavity into your throat, that's when you're doing the good shit that's not cut to crap. If you've never felt that, you've never had proper coke. Coke is THE drug for amplifying latent DT traits. It gives alcohols confidence without the lack of awareness, absence of concentration and just general sedation that alcohol brings about. You can be a very productive person on coke. Of course like anything coke must be used sparingly as a tool, you shouldn't NEED to do it just to function. But this applies to all drugs. Junkies are not people who use drugs effectively, they are people with dependency issues. If you use coke effectively, you will not be sat up in your room dysfunctionally. Good coke has little to minimal comedown and is not very chemically addictive, but it is psychologically addictive because of the sense of power it gives (sounds like OPs post, tbh.)

You have to take individual differences into account as well as what you're mixing the coke with. Most people don't take coke and then do nothing else drug wise unless they're at work in the toilet and need a "jolt" to help give them the edge in the upcoming board meeting or are otherwise in an environment where an outward image of sobriety needs to be maintained whilst you are in fact faded. Usually if you're doing coke you'll have some spirits around as well. So you'll obtain IDGAF with spirits and then do some coke to "make you sober/alert" whilst still actually IDGAF off alcohol.

I also disagree about coke making you want to just sit in your house, the guys you know who do that sound like addicts who have developed a dependency on the drug. Coke is a stimulant, it doesn't make you want to sit around, in fact quite the opposite, I find it makes me want to go out, meet people, get shit done. I don't know how the fuck anyone sits up in their room high off their face on coke not wanting to impose their will on the world, it literally makes no sense. If you had the self-perceived confidence (narcissism) of a deity, a god complex, you'd want to go "play with your powers" out in the world, not sit around all self-satisfied that you're some sort of boss.

I've had plenty of times where I've been happy sitting in the garden having a few ciders all mellow and shit, we've done some blow and all of a sudden I'm insistent on going out and meeting people.

We'll have to agree to disagree on this. IMO, if you want to be honest about the dark triad with people, and how to induce that kind of behaviour even if temporarily, neglecting to mention coke and its DT-inducing tendencies is disingenuous.

So your problem is slow wit. Watch more stand-up comedy to develop wit/an eye for wit and metaphor. There are lot of reformed betas/omegas who found themselves through humour and stand-up don't underestimate the power of comedy THERE'S A LOT of power in being able to make people laugh and defend yourself from psychological attacks whilst you're at it. The power of the joker (aptly referred to as "the court jester") is even mentioned in the 48. Shit in comedy culture rebutting hecklers is part of the program if you're no good at that then you will never be a respected comedian. It's the same with rappers and rap battles. Wit is like education it cannot be stolen from you, develop it and weaponise it. Alongside that if you feel lethargic no matter how witty you are you will be slow and sluggish. Workout to ensure your energy levels and confidence stay up. Nothing short of that is going to fix your predicamentary ineptitude.

As for the guy in your face don't be afraid to escalate to violence if wit fails, if you try to diffuse situations without being funny you communicate you're ripe for robbery/bullying. Women don't understand this because most men don't believe in hurting women (but rather these women are histrionic over the mere idea of it) but these same men are not beyond trying to fuck with you because being a man they see you as fair game. White knights won't help you either.

Sometimes being funny isn't enough either, the guy has already pre-determined he's in the mood for some good old fashioned violence. A guy won't fuck with a guy who's willing to defend himself don't listen to all that effeminate crap about violence always being wrong, violence and the selective use of force always had a time and a place and women encourage it via proxy violence (not going onto that tangent here as it doesn't apply to your post.) If violence had no place then we wouldn't have a police force or military. Nobody is above a good uppercut and if they think they are and want to create problems with you it's time you introduce shock and awe to their psyche. Most people with sharp words lack a mean punch. Especially in today's pussified society. Don't be afraid to stand up for yourself when all else fails, your dignity is worth more than the tolerance of mockery.

Backing down doesn't make you the better man it makes you avoidant and tolerant of insults to your honour in the desperation to escape conflict. On the flip side if someone is trying to bait you into embarrassing yourself/get you to be violent so they can get you in a trap/use it as leverage, don't fall for the bait. There's a fine line to walk here in all these shades of orgasm inducing grey but use your instinct. If you're in a dark alleyway fight or run, if you're in a hotel or social event you're going to have to be more passive aggressive/witty/alooof etc.

Tying the Knot in the Age of Marriage 2.0: "The laws were changed to such an extent that that we can no longer call it 'marriage' as it was known through the millennia. We have to distinguish this mutated institution with a new name. We will call it Marriage 2.0."

1 upvotes · 21 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Family law as it stands is based entirely off statute rather than common law. Wanna know why? Because common law is bound by equitable maxims - meaning fair treatment under the law. No-fault divorce would be illegal under common law (breaching a contract without reasonable grounds) so they pass statute to get rid of the equity and make an inequitable contract breachable at any time legally valid.

From a legal standpoint marriage contracts are abhorrently unique. A contract that can be breached without penalty to the breacher or recompense to the breachee at any time? That's absurd. Even more absurd: with marriage the breachee (a man being divorced by a woman) has to pay the person breaching the contract! It's fucking nuts. In every other contract in existence the person in breach is the person at fault, marriage contracts are the only contracts I know of where there is "no fault." What fucking contract is worth the paper its written on when it can be breached without legal penalty at any time? IT'S LEGALLY ABSURD.

Common law fills in where there is no statute, but family law statute lacks all of the equity of common law.

False indignation translates into passive shaming and ignoring the content of a concern. False indignation outside of satire is a big bright red flag that someone is actively manipulating you. In PUA lingo it's a reframe/pressure flip, but when used in serious matters such as this it can easily escalate into emotional abuse and her dominating the frame where she bullies him for being uncomfortable with her slutty ways. You cannot let a woman own the frame like that and pass it off as rational and OK. She is bullshitting him hard and he's too blue to take control.

If I like the chick a lot (as in, think she's pretty cool) I'll pay like I'd pay for a friend. You know what this means don't you? I hardly ever pay. If I think she's a whore, a vapid collection of holes with no real personality, overly entitled or there's no real connection between us I'm not paying for that beverage/ticket/whatever. I never buy drinks for chicks in a bar. Buying a coffee is far different from buying a spirit/mixer in the bar. The bar is sexualised, the coffee shop isn't. Chicks go to bars to get free shit, jumping from guy to guy they don't fancy until they find one they do. In bars buying a bitch a drink is failing a shit test, not buying one is passing it, getting her to buy you one is hitting it in the back of the net. In coffee shops? Not so much. This bullshit doesn't exist there.

If she's disappointed you didn't pay who gives a fuck really? Oh what, you've got a strike against your name and lost brownie points because the silly bitch is upset you didn't pay? Give me a break. There are loads of chicks out there. Being afraid she'll not like you any more because you didn't pay on the first date is coming from a scarcity mindset and will ensure you always have minimal success with women because your mind is in the entirely wrong place to be a bachelor/spin plates and especially maintain an LTR. If you have a scarcity mindset, innately, within yourself, you may as well be running dread game on her behalf. Insecure guys without options aren't HOT. Chicks fuck bad boy types who would demand THAT SHE PAY all the time. The frame is all about being better than her. If you've got asshole game you can easily blag not paying for shit, upset her a little, and use that energy in a patrice o'neal way to neg her for her entitlement, call her on her shit, use amused mastery, escalate and close. Obviously you calibrate this kind of game in its intensity based upon what type of chick she is (a bear, a hare or a rabbit in patrice terminology.) By the fucking by paying isn't important, just don't be the dumb cunt who is constantly getting his wallet out because he lacks personality or you know, a clue in general about how social dynamics work.

Don't use money as a crutch, she's there to spend time with you. Your time is valuable. If your time isn't valuable and your character is so weak that you need to go all provider on her ass to try and convince her you're worth a

No. Women are better at manipulation than men are on average, they have evolved to manipulate men whilst men evolved to hunt/kill. Now the latter is illegal and the former isn't. Likewise, men have evolved a provider instinct to care for women they pairbond to, that's not the same as being of inferior intellect, you're way off the mark. Men possess rational logic that is all but inhibited in the majority of women.

Men are at the extremes of the intellectual bell curve, women tend to stick around 100-110. The smartest and dumbest people are mostly men, the average medicore people are mostly women.

I recommend eating sunflower seeds (say 2 or 3 handfuls) as they contain a lot of healthy fats (won't make you obese) vitamins, and a lot of fibre (to fill you up - so if you have a hunger craving instead of reaching for pizza or soda reach for a handful of sunflower seeds and watch your hunger pang go to fuck itself) yeah sunflower seeds don't sound glamorous but they are CHEAP and they will destroy your hunger like most nuts and seeds do, the vitamins will aid your skin as well. When you get sunflower seeds check the nutritional information and make sure its a variety that's low in sodium/salt if it is, it should say "Trace".

For skin:

Blueberries for their antioxidant properties, blueberries vary in type and country of origin which likewise affects price, if you have money go organic, if you don't find the best type you like for the best price and obviously wash them before eating them. If dairy doesn't negatively effect your skin, you can have them in low fat natural yoghurt and mix the berries in as a healthy dessert/snack and it tastes great, be warned though, even low fat natural yoghurt has a moderate amount of sugar in it. A lot of skin disorders are caused by inflammation which (especially in whites) is responsible for your skin going red/dry/flaky. Inflammation is caused by too much omega 6 in your diet and not enough omega 3, I recommend using kerry gold butter as your #1 spread for sandwiches or cooking (such as in mashed potato) as the cows are grass fed rather than corn fed and thus their butter is high in omega 3. Take omega 3 supplement capsules if you like to help you get your daily quota. You need both omega 3 and omega 6 to have a healthy body but omega 6 is far more abundant in the food supply than omega 3 due to industrial farming practices so focus more on getting your omega 3.

Another thing I recommend: lemons, I absolutely swear by lemons for improving the appearance of skin on the face. Every night squeeze a whole lemon into a mug and pour hot water in it and drink - when you wake up the next morning if you have any skin problems you'll notice they will have improved. Hot water is better than cold water for flushing out crap in your body, but you can use cold water. Lemon's are big in vitamin C and when your immune system goes to shit it will show in your skin as your body uses all its resources to fight whatever infection you have rather than sustain the elasticity and glow of your skin, so be sure to make daily vitamin c from lemon juice a regular thing. Yes it tastes quite bitter, if you really can't hack it (WEAKLING!) try oranges instead (I swear by lemons) obviously fruit will vary in size depending on where its sourced from, some are small, some are huge, so for lemons in particular which are quite sour, if it's a really big lemon half a lemon should suffice, if it's a small lemon though use a whole lemon, half a small lemon only once a day isn't providing you the full benefit.

What else? No energy drinks, they ruin your skin, coca cola isn't as bad but the sugar is terrible for your waistline as are all carbonated drinks. You should drink nothing other than WATER (especially when you work out) have a coffee (no milk, 1 sugar max) before your workout to improve the workout, too much coffee can fuck up some peoples skin and dehydrates (counteracting the effects of everything else) so be moderate with coffee, its not a skin destroyer like energy drink but it doesn't really help either, you just want the caffeine boost. Drink fruit juice, and I mean actual fruit juice where you buy the fruits yourself and squeeze the juice out and dilute with hot or cold water, not that excuse for fruit juice they sell in supermarkets which is just full of added sugar and crap like aspartame/asceufame K/saccharin (sweetners) and etc. Green tea is fine for women and helps eliminate free radicals which will bring passive benefits to the skin, but it lowers testosterone in men so I don't suggest men drink any green tea. Eat eggs for abundant omega 6/zinc/protein/B vitamins. That info is all for one egg, scramble like 4 eggs and you're getting a shit ton of your daily protein and vitamin needs for next to nothing in cost, not to mention it will fill you up.

TLDR: lemons, blueberries and eggs are all superfoods that should be in your diet if you want good skin. Avoid energy drinks/carbonated drinks. Get omega 3 to combat inflammation. Drink water.

And for some reason my suitemates saw that as being bipolar

Well they would appear to be bigoted idiots. In my estimation, that sounds nothing like bipolar. It sounds like someone whose personality/sociability has changed due to events that have occurred in their life (life wears on us all), combined with introversion which made you awkward around people you didn't know. Add the fact you were new to the area and uncomfortable/lost without guidance and it seems perfectly reasonable. That isn't bipolar. These people have obviously never known anyone with bipolar. They also betrayed you by telling on you like that. They saw your lack of sociability as a demonstration of low value so they tried to get rid of you, that, or they were genuinely concerned for your well-being, I can't really say for sure.

FYI: the guy who said his family wanted him tested for bipolar, he's not bipolar at all he shows no symptoms or mannerisms of a bipolar person, his family were just trying to rationalise his dark triad behaviour by ascribing a medical diagnosis to it. I'm not sure if he ever got tested. He went quiet about that topic and never brought it up again, but then he's DT, so that's to be expected. I know better than to bring it up for my own morbid intellectual curiosity.

Introversion and general day-to-day mood swings are not indicative of DT behaviour. I used to fuck a bipolar chick, she would go from loving the shit out of you and extreme happiness to quietness/shyness to depressed/moany to aggressive within a 5 hour timespan. Spending time with her was a massive energy drain, I had to cut her loose she was too much hassle. I once had a female boss who had bipolar, she showed similar symptoms, extreme niceness to extreme nastiness, bit of gaslighting thrown in for good measure, it's literally hell. If they have formally sanctioned power over you (such as in the case with a DT boss) it is far worse though as they are openly abusive with abandon. Those kind of DTs are the worst because they have no fucking control over themselves and they're toxic as fuck, basically, they're barely functional or dysfunctional, rather than high-functioning. Some people call these low-functioning types "emotional vampires." I can't quite articulate it yet, but there are marked differences between DT women and men, the men never seem to be quite so random and erratic, at least not in my experience. Maybe they exist but I've not had the (dis)pleasure of meeting one.

EDIT: An old friends cousin was a "erratic DT" (at least seemingly by ear), I only knew of him by reputation and face and not on a personal basis, he had been in prison a lot and seemed to have a habit of betraying everyone around him, his reputation was terrible but he'd play to it to intimidate people, again, he was low-functioning and toxic. Not my idea of a friend. Amazing how much the DT spectrum varies really.

Unless they want to intimidate you, they're probably not going to reveal it to you, even then they're not going to say it explicitly, just tell you you were wrong to fuck with them, or engage in behaviour that is DT-esque.

None of the DT people I've known have ever said to me "I am a sociopath" or "I'm DT", the closest admission I've ever got was "my family want to get me tested for bi-polar." DTs come in lots of different flavours, levels of self-awareness and how much they like you and how long you've known them will greatly affect what they say to you in terms of "what they are." DTs are incredibly secretive and private people, all of them.

The most DT guy I've ever met would never admit to it. He'd mock the shit out of you, laugh and change the subject. Or agree and amplify. Or completely ignore you. Basically he'd treat it like a shit test and pass with flying colours as a matter of instinct.

Asking your girl what she thinks on a regular basis causes problems where she starts expecting it, feels her man has no direction, and consequently starts losing respect.

When I said that I was thinking in my mind that I would do whatever the fuck I liked with no regard to her and that I would have to consciously make effort to actually include her in my decision making processes, especially in more significant things, after all if you're captain/first mate you have to consult with the first mate. It's not so much asking for permission as it would be "to get her opinion" then you judge whether her opinion bears any relevance or not and go ahead with what you were going to do anyway, she might have some valid input and if she doesn't it made her feel important. Then, as you say, if you're always asking you run the risk of seeming like you never know what the fuck you're doing and you make her insecure. In a way this proves the point I was making, the whole thing is a balancing act and natural alphas fuck up a lot in LTRs, I've known naturals who slayed pussy that have no idea in LTRs because they're either too alpha or go full beta, they tend to get henpecked into betadom and then don't realise why everything is going to shit.

To explain and justify your actions as if you're in the wrong and need to answer for your actions. Qualification is convincing someone you're good enough to be something or that you aren't the negative thing they think you are, it implies in subtext that you are low value and people will look down on you for it. This is why people who "seem like they don't give a fuck" get more respect, they don't qualify much if at all to anyone, they're very take it or leave it, if someone interrogates them they "set them straight" they don't "answer to them", it's a very different attitude in communicating that commands a lot of respect when done right. When someone wants information from you in a position of authority you must always diffuse them first, especially if they're approaching you with suspicion like you're already guilty, by saying "ah you want to know X do you?" and then having them agree, THEN you tell them in a very controlled manner within your frame rather than theirs, it shifts the frame from answering to them to telling them something they came to you to find out, so you're doing them a favour, rather than being a low value person who buckles under pressure/jumps to people's demands and starts clamouring to explain themselves when challenged. A subtle yet significant distinction that changes how people treat you significantly. Remember respect is more important than comfort.

Why are British girls so fat?

1 upvotes · 11 June 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

The health problems in the future are going to be so fucked up.

It's already raping the NHS budgets and leading to obesity. The interest of the public health is undermined for private profit, it is corruption at the highest levels of business. If the government wanted to it could easily place new rules to demand less sugar in junk products by imposing a sugar tax or simply imposing sugar limits (whilst banning cancer causing sweeteners like aspartame and acesulfame K) whilst subsidising fruit and veg and maybe even quality meat and eggs so that healthy food was more easily accessible. Instead rich and powerful lobbies bribe government officials to turn a blind eye so they can keep selling their crappy products that fuck up public health for huge huge profits.

Then later on the people who are always tired and lethargic on their terrible diets have to pay through the NHS to get treated for whatever conditions the crappy food they've eaten has caused rather than lead a fit and healthy life focused on preventing health disorders rather than treating them once they occur. I doubt the NHS is going to remain nationalised forever either, they've already sold off parts of it to Richard Branson. The UK's on a decline and it's causing a lot of disenfranchisement. Only the lucky few shop in farmers markets, health food shops, butchers and all the rest of it, and getting your food that way costs an absolute arm and leg.

The sausage (kielbasa) was amazing, used to have it with garlic. Cherry vodka was the fucking bomb and so smooth you could drink the stuff like it was soda pop and feel no burn on your throat. I envy how amazing their food is, but getting that stuff in the UK is extremely difficult and EXTREMELY expensive. By contrast, English cuisine/ingredients just cannot even compete. Getting hench/ripped/lean on that kind of food is worlds easier than the crap we have here, not to mention cheaper (if you live there.)

What do married women even do all day?

1 upvotes · 11 June 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

why do they complain

Because women are emotional beings who periodically need to get shit off their chest. This is why women love moaning, whining and complaining, it makes them feel good to have someone else validate their random emotional cocktail, nod, console and affirm. By affirming the spontaneity of a woman's emotional state, she feels important and cathartic, by ignoring it, she feels neglected/low value/insecure.

She could have everything she could ever dream for and she wouldn't be happy if she wasn't moaning about some minor imperfection. If there were no imperfections she'd moan about how false the perfection is. Women don't always moan because there's actually a problem, but because it makes them feel good to moan to someone and be validated for it. In a way, its attention whoring, but it runs deeper than that as previously described.

Making people fat is one way to rob them of their power, for sure, if you want a dependant, weak, population, having them all fat doesn't hurt. Having people well nourished and in-shape is not in the interest of the ruling elite. Fitter people are not just healthier physically, but have more mental clarity too. Lugging all that weight around is tiring. It's humorous to see the extents they'll go to here to try and make this kind of bullshit socially acceptable.

The entitlement is strong with this one! Chick makes "pact" with friend to continue dating after she rides the carousel in college. Is devastated to find the guy isn't sitting on his ass waiting around for her. She flips out, calls him an asshole for having a GF he's now going to marry.

General note: when you suck at something the best thing you can do is own it, you agree and amplify, you attack your weakness first and make it known, you wear it like an armor, so that if others attack your funny accent or your small stature it has relatively little impact on your social value because you already addressed it, you don't hide in your comfort zone like a pussy and think that's a good excuse for not bothering with something.

The reason I use a pay rise as an example is because it would be seen as a regular favour, and surely nothing is worth a regular favour to a dark triad. However if it was a one off favour, due to their manipulative personalities They would justify it by thinking about what they could guilt trip someone into in return.

Well leverage can come as a one off favour or making themselves the source of an ongoing favour. There is a lot of power in being able to cut somebody off, if he's your boss, he always has the power to sack you, unless you're so valuable to the company that doing so hurts him. With dark triads your best way is to influence, no manipulate, make them like you, win their favour. That doesn't mean being necessarily supplicative, but you must be someone they like to influence them to do things you like. Anyone can be influenced, even dark triads, the key to battling them is not in direct conflict as things will quickly become very messy and they will beat you with experience and disposition, but rather, to win their emotional favour.

The relevant law to be applied here is law 24, play the perfect courtier:

Leadership involves the DISCIPLINE of focusing on worthwhile things instead of enjoyable things. This means taking a grown-up approach. You're trying to build a business that WORKS. A business serves the needs of many. It's not an indulgence designed to satisfy your own needs and desires.

Most get it backwards: They chase after passion and ignore mission. Passion isn't something you seek or pursue; it's the spark of love. It's an energy intentionally cultivated. And the easiest way to sustain passion is to embrace a mission that involves serving others.

I hate that women intimidate me. How do I stop putting myself down and putting them on a pedestal?

1 upvotes · 30 April 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

When I'm out and see a pretty girl it's like the last few years of my life never happened and I'm the fat unattractive person I once was. I just think shitty thoughts and put myself down. I tell myself they must be better than me because they just look attractive.

The problem here, and you are not alone with this, I see it in the faces and demeanor of many men, is that you don't believe in your own worth despite all your accomplishments. You were seriously damaged in your childhood by negative social feedback loops in the form of negative and positive punishment (operant conditioning) what you need to do is cultivate narcissism, there are, in my opinion, two main types of narcissism, delusional esoteric narcissism which is narcissism in the truest sense of the word "I am the best because I believe in myself" and then there is rational narcissism, which is saying "I can do X, most people can't do X, therefore, I am superior to most people"

Your story made me think of the stereotypical fat chick who was bullied all throughout high school and nobody would date her, people would make bets and dare each other to kiss her or ask her out on a date for money, now she's 25, she's lost the weight, developed some nice titties and has gone from a 4-5 to a solid 8. The people who once made her life hell now all want to fuck her. Despite how far she's come, she's still got the mindset of a fat and ugly 4-5 high school girl. She's come a long way in life physically and in terms of resources, but mentally she's still trapped in her former self. She hasn't let go of who she used to be and embraced who she has become, so effectively she is two people, outwardly she is this cute 25 year old that's achieving in life, inwardly she's this self-deprecating high-school girl. Her problem is she hasn't learnt to love herself in spite of her achievements, she's still insecure and doesn't believe she's worthy of happiness.

Confidence is the epitome of masculinity, boldness, confidence, some aggression and solid rationale are some of the fundamental cornerstones of masculinity. If you want to be a masculine man and succeed in life you need to value yourself and get your mind out of that ignored socially dysfunctional kids head and get it into the head of the young, successful career man that works out, makes money and contributes value to the world.

If you don't love yourself, nobody else will. You have to remember that. People avoid unlucky/low value people, if you don't value yourself you project to the world that you're not valuable, even if you are. You could be a billionaire with the body of Adonis himself and if you acted all mopey, had incredibly limiting beliefs and were too inert, too timid to take part in things, then you would find that unless people knew about your money somehow that your social value would be quite low, because despite high smv from money and aesthetics, you'd have virtually zero personality or game. Such a hypothetical billionaire is a beta bucks waiting to happen, waiting to be parasitised by someone more manipulative, with more ego, who knows the games better and sees you for what you are: vulnerable and easy to control. People like that prey on people like you.

As for cultivating narcissism? It's a truly complex process that is far more difficult to articulate than it is to do, and trust me, doing it is hard enough for most people (or otherwise everyone would enjoy high confidence.) I do have an earnest intention to write an article on the cultivation of narcissism but I hold myself to very high quality standards when I write and thus to get something out on the topic that will meet the tolerance threshold of my perfectionism whilst being equally useful to the reader will take quite some time. Sorry that I can't help you with anything more in-depth and profound until the time I manage to craft such a piece but hopefully I've put you in the right direction. You need to cultivate a rational narcissism, compare yourself to others and see what you do better than them, then praise yourself internally for being better than others at said things. Hopefully reading the red pill will assist in augmenting your self-awareness to allow your self-confidence to grow and be more in sync with who you are and what you've accomplished (which is rational), rather than what you feel you are because of the time you had growing up (which is a latent byproduct of emotional trauma/neglect/poor developmental socialisation and etc.)

No worries. The main thing I was getting at it is that you need to be able to use machiavellianism in real-time, in situations as they occur, it's all well and good being able to do it at home from the comfort of your armchair but if you cannot utilise it as a situation happens then you have all the theory without any of the ability to apply said theory. Right, equality of opportunity to prove one's self via meritocracy, but not equality of outcome. An absence of "equality of outcome" to many, many people equals "inequality".

I think the generation born at the end of the 90s or in the 00s don't have enough consideration philosophically.

I concur, they are raised to be consumers and workers in a paradigm lacking opportunism for them, as the old have a monopoly on the system and people began living longer.

It must be asked what is going to happen in twenty years with a workforce born within, and bred by a BP ideology?

I think this paradigm is already here. Those with enough resources who are not burned romantically will conform with the system, for comfortability keeps their senses numb. Those with a lack of resources and/or are romantically burned, gain awareness from their adversity. Like /u/GayLubeOil 's post says "luxury is weakness" or more correctly stated, it promotes weakness as there is no motivation or emotional inclination for change. Luxury as an external feedback response gives no constructive input.

Well in the case of America, America was built by immigrants.

As for the UK, it's core base of power and largest state, England, was built entirely by the innovation of the victorian English, responsible for the first industrial revolution and etc, England had very little immigration until around the 50's and early 60's.

When England started mass immigration programmes, it was already a rich wealthy nation as it was the most innovative nation on the planet (nation state accredited with the most scientific invention and discovery in modern history) and it used this technology to conquer 25% of the planet via imperialism. London was the richest city in the world for quite some time as wealth flowed in from many countries into the heart of London via spices, jewels, natural resources, patents for technology and etc.

I wonder what economic mobility is like for unskilled labour in general.

Social mobility in England/UK is among the worst out of the western/northern european nations, bested only by Portugal. A huge pool of unskilled labour means that the youth find it very hard to get jobs and the island is overpopulated with foreigners who simply aren't needed by the nation, yet burden themselves onto the state because in their home country the economy is even less well equipped to support them.

The UK had it's golden years around the 60's to the 90's, if you got a degree then you were guaranteed a good job and a good standard of living, it wasn't so far back that getting an education was particularly hard, but neither was it so recent that everyone and their dog had a bachelors degree making them relatively meaningless in all but the most treasured of disciplines.

Opening up to the EU only reduced living standards for the working class and to an extent, the middle class. The UK is seen as the "America of Europe" by many, speaking English, being very americanised and of course being politically allied with the U.S. There is a predilection for unskilled foreigners to flock to it, being a wealthy and famous country can attract the wrong sort of people when controls aren't in place to prevent rampant parasitism. Many parts of London resemble third world hovels, and it is one of the most powerful cities in the world.

The metaphor is a basic of TRP, it's saying that men don't get used up from sex but women do. We've had entire threads elaborate on why women can only successfully be monogamous with one partner at a time, whilst men can have multiple women sexually and still love their wives.

You're saying you disagree with this, but you identify with core basis of TRP. This whole idea is part of the core basis of TRP, that woman's sexuality is judged differently from man's due to declining fertility and inability for her to monogamously bond with a man if she's having sex with more than one man at a time. It's a question of the whole gatekeeper to sex/gatekeeper to commitment idea that is fundamental to everything TRP is based on, and here you are saying "I disagree with this guys, but I agree with trp as a whole" - it's bullshit because it's inconsistently hypocritical.

This is where you start to look like a concern troll, you buy credibility by proclaiming to be one of the group, then undermine one of the groups core ideas. You can take what you like from the RP and find some of it useful, but to say you are RP when you disagree with a core rp idea is to misrepresent what the philosophy believes. That metaphor embodies the dynamic between man and woman's sexuality and how sexuality is exchanged. You're not RP if you buy into the BP ideas of women's sexuality eg: she can do whatever she likes, don't slut shame and blah blah.

I'd say patriotism encourages one to love their nation without question, but nationalism is about favouring the interests of a nation, essentially allegiance, but not blind allegiance. I'd posit there is room for critical reasoning within nationalism, but not so with patriotism which is far more blind in it's love of national identity.

To love one's national identity should not be a crime, corrupting that love to commit atrocities - that is the crime. To me patriotism and nationalism are not synonymous, nationalism is loving "your people" if you're french, chinese or what have you, then you love your national identity because that's your culture. Of course since nationalism has been demonised and multiculturalism has set in within the anglosphere nations, there is no solid cultural identity within the English speaking lands, they all seem to be an economic free-for-all for the world's talent, their culture is business, the traditional indigeneous ways are brushed aside to make room for the multiculturalism that big business and globalisation demand to increase their profits. Everything has to be PC and bullshit, there is no favour shown towards the people born on that soil like there was traditionally and still is in most of the non-english speaking world.

And this is why this is so problematic for me. It was created exactly to create these kinds of emotions in people, to elevate war above reproach, to make the deaths noble instead of regrettable. To "encourage sacrifice" instead of questioning those who demand it. That's the perversity of the poppy to me.

That's not the way I or many other people look at it. What's done is done, the poppy itself is not and was not encouraging sacrifice, it is honouring it after the fact. A noble death is always a regrettable death, a sacrificial act leading to the loss of life is always regrettable but deemed necessary for "the greater good."

I don't know where you are, but here in Canada it has been clearly used to bolster the support for the war,

It's not used like that in England. We have remembrance sunday every year, we wear the poppies in remembrance of those who died in "the great wars" it is nothing to do with current conflicts and it is not used as a tool to recruit for current conflicts.

There is no noble death.

I disagree, if I sacrifice myself for someone and it kills me, I'd consider that noble.

There is individual heroism in the heat of the moment

Seems semantical over the last point, but I agree.

but this institutionalization of heroism and sacrifice is a giant, fat lie.

I'd agree that institutionalising heroism to require sacrifice in pointless wars is one distasteful flagrant act of deceit. The great wars are considered the most destructive wars in history, it is not something we forget, there is a huge sense that we owe a lot to those who stopped the country from being completely blown into oblivion.

I grew up in a country that had the draft. I spend a shitload of money on a lawyer to get out of it. Not because I am opposed to the military, but because I did not like the idea that one day someone higher up may tell me to go somewhere and kill someone because they deemed it necessary.

The draft is fucked up I don't agree with that shit.

War is the continuation of politics by different means"

When diplomacy fails, use force to attain your means, rightly so that's how it goes.

the way the military advertises itself: Did you ever notice (be it the US or Canadian military) that they always represent themselves as a "force of good"

Yeah it's the same with the Royal Army. The advertising is all propaganda, it's just marketed to make the military seem edgy and cool but really you're taking the biggest risk of your life to further the goals of an oligarchic elite.

Family court in England is as feminist as they come. I've been meaning to write an article on that.

Hilarious thing is, this isn't a family court civil issue, it's a criminal issue. This was probably heard in the crown court (just checked, it was) that's a court which only deals with criminal matters such as MURDER and RAPE - pretty sure pedophilia is up there too.

2 years is a joke, the sentencing is not harsh enough, the premise the judge gave for such a lenient sentence is too weak to have so completely mitigated her sentence from the normal 15,20 and even 30 year sentences which have been given to convicted male pedophiles in the past. The prosecution should take this decision to the court of appeal to have the judgement overruled. If we fail to get some moral legal justice in the CofA then they can appeal their decision in the Supreme Court aka the former House of Lords.

Take this shit all the way to the Old Bailey if need be. Poor sentencing decisions like this make a mockery of the legal system, stories like this are prime examples of /r/pussypass, we all know a man would not get off so lightly for fucking an 8 year old girl from the age of 8 until the age of 14. This is quite sick, I don't know how that judge got to be a judge with such weak reasoning ability, the reasoning for his leniency is quite pathetic considering the nature of the crime.

Yes, the boy is clearly not traumatised, he was bragging at school, as is the same with that case with the 14 year old girl who ran away with her 30 year old boyfriend to France, some children are not molested per say (because they enjoy the acts/the relationship with the older person), but in the eyes of the law they are having illegal sexual relations, so somebody who inappropriately touches a minor who doesn't like it but is powerless to stop what is happening and somebody who inappropriately has a loving sexual relationship with a minor are both equally considered pedophiles, whilst in the former the amount of trauma to the child is much higher than in the latter. They would perhaps reduce a 20 year sentence to say 15 years on the grounds the boy appeared to not have been damaged from the relationship and in fact considered this older woman his girlfriend, but 1 or 2 years? What's to stop her getting out waiting until he's 16 and start fucking the same boy again?

I haven't read the whole article, hopefully she's at least on the sex offenders register and thus prevented from working with children.

Does TRP encourage cheating?

1 upvotes · 19 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I have a subjective flexible morality.

My morals only apply to "good people", if someone is a threat or "bad" then anything goes.

In a way, see it like the criminal justice system, I only punish people who I think are worthy of punishing, I don't prey on the weak, I prey on those who have power. If you're a decent person or don't cross me you've nothing to fear, if you're bad or a game player that isn't on my team, I'm going to fuck you up and not give a shit about doing it. Just like a judge doesn't want to send an innocent to prison, I don't want to fuck up decent people, just the ones who are cunts already.

You could say I'm something of a moral vigilante.

but lying to liars doesn't count?

I have no problem doing it, why would you owe a bad person any iota of your potential decency? They'd only exploit it to screw you over and weasel out of whatever it is you have on them.

Does TRP encourage cheating?

1 upvotes · 19 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

So to summarize, you would basically cheat on a woman that you are in a LTR with and lie to her about it until she proves until she is of worth and is high-value enough to stick around with?

Well, no. You see it doesn't take very much time spent with a woman to know if there's more to her, if she's something special, or if she's just another face in the crowd. Most chicks are quite generic, I can spend probably about an hour on my own with a chick and know nearly everything worth knowing about her. If there's nothing more to know about her, I'll know it. If she's hiding something, I'll pick up on it. I'm very good at reading people and working out who they really are based on their disposition, what they say, how they talk, how they carry themselves etc. I can spot a strong woman playing weak, a weak woman playing strong, an ex-abuse victim, an idiot playing smart, an intellectual being dumb etc etc. I'm good at analysing and putting people through their paces and coming up with an accurate result. I can understand subtext and read between the lines, blah blah.

Women don't really intrigue me, they all tend to be copies of each other, very similar, different body, different name but same ideas and personalities. Most women are not really individuals, they are living breathing archetypes. The thing that sticks out to me most in a woman is individualism, I like strong women but I like that strength to be feminine fire, not a masculine one. Masculinity in women is repulsive, especially in the irony of an age where so many men themselves lack it. When I say strong woman I don't mean an obnoxious feminist, I mean someone with passion and intelligence. Those are two things are absent in 95%+ of women who are remotely attractive. The ones who are both attractive and smart tend to be extremely mentally unstable, you can never really win. Another thing, women who can practice being open minded and abstract rather than just solipsistic, ME, ME, ME - that shit is a breath of fresh air, that's attractive. Women who can engage in critical thinking, sexy as fuck too. Again, even saying this to me feels like I'm communicating more of an idealisation than an actual type of woman that exists, for these women are INCREDIBLY rare.

If I was going to play her I'd know from the beginning. Its premeditated. You don't have LTRs with girls you want to fuck, you just meet up and fuck them. Would I let a girl think its an LTR when it isn't to carry on fucking her longer? Sure, if she's a good fuck and not too mentally weak to collapse from the aftermath, why not. How far would I let it go? I'm not sure. Depends on the girl. Shit, she may even grow on me over time, I'm way more comfortable with the idea that a woman loves me more than I love her as the risk of her turning me beta is substantially mitigated that way, effectively to be a man, you cannot be overcome by the feeling of love. Only women get to indulge in that feeling and still be attractive partners.

There was one girl in fact, who was willing to leave her boyfriend for me. He had a beta personality and was quite dim from what she told me, both intellectually and socially. Whereas I'm quite dominant and considered both intellectually and socially proficient. I remember her saying to me she felt like "i was her true equal" whilst he wasn't and "tell me you'll be with me and I'll ring him up now and tell him it's over" (classic example of branch swinging) and right there I had the opportunity to use her for sex and lead her on, if I had a vendetta against women or some fucked up shit like that I could have punished her for having being so easily willing to give up her loyalty to her boyfriend. What did I do? I deduced she was better off with the beta because I was not willing to take on her baggage and furthermore I had no desire to fuck her over when she was already as inherently mentally unstable as she was.

We fucked once, it wasn't even good sex, and she was all over me afterwards. She acted like we'd been together for years and came on so heavy, she was trying to activate all kinds of personal connections and pair bonding that you feel with someone you truly love and trust after a long time because we had one fuck. It was pretty shitty because I didn't really give a damn about her, and it was rushed and unnatural. I think there is a significantly large subset of women who are very quick to try and skip past all the sex and getting to know each other shit and simply get a ring on your finger, and that shit in and of itself is a massive turn off, even in a high quality woman - a romantically impatient woman.

You want a general answer to a generalised question, and I'm saying it's certainly possible, it doesn't go against my moral code to do it, I know I'm capable of it, but it is certainly very situation dependant, specifically, what are our relations like, what is she like, what's my current situation, what's our history, what are her traits? Blah blah blah. And even though I follow no strict moral code per se, I don't like to hurt people unless I have reason to, having the capability to inflict pain and the desire to do so are separate. I'd say I demonstrate machiavellian and to some extent, psychopathic tendencies - but I'm not sadistic on an emotional level at least if that person hasn't hurt me or doesn't strike me as a bad person. If she's a bad person who hurts others, I may just hurt her to teach her a lesson. If she's a decent girl, I wouldn't dream of it. I treat whores, bitches and compulsive liars like the scum that they are, and unfortunately they make up the majority of women in the society I live in nowadays. If I meet a lady and she passes all my rigorous testing, I'm more inclined to be a gentleman without giving up my masculinity to be so.

About the other part of my comments, do you think that women realise that their main selling point to men is sex/sexual relations?

Most realise it to some extent, however different women have varying levels of self-awareness, most are aware of their value but have too much pride to admit its the apex of their value. Others know damn well what they're good for and exploit it fully.

What happens when a woman doubts her man's affection? She either gives him the best sex she has to offer when it's an alpha male, and even with a beta male I see women resorting to hugs and kisses.

They've got the market cornered on sexuality, a barman would give you his best bottle of wine, a baker would give you his best cake, a butcher his best cut of meat, and a woman will give you her pussy (or the ass if her pussy is loose as hell.) They know damn well, knowing something and accepting something are two different things. You can understand something and reject it as truth, espouse your disbelief, but still behave in a way which is conducive to the assumption of external observation that you do indeed realise that your value is sexual in nature.

You'll even have the women who believe strongly they're good for more than just a fuck whilst owing most of their financial freedom to their bodies, they suffer from dissonance.

Fuck I've heard some women refer to their vaginas as magical, if that isn't an inherent acknowledgement of the power of pussy I don't know what is, of course that shit is anecdotal so if you're reading this and hate my opinion feel free to disregard it completely as utter nonsense.

Hilariously, in the sex industry, pimps are very aware of the power of pussy. Pre-selection is pussy power, being seen out with hot girls raising the status of the man with them whether he's fucking them or not is pussy power working passively. Everyone values pussy power, men and women alike.

It certainly fucking does!

Caring less does give you the power. This is personally one of my great struggles with red pill. You have to not give a shit to get the girl, you have to not give a shit to control the relationship.

Women are counterintuitive as shit, but it doesn't just apply to them - applies to jobs and shit too. Passion or "caring about shit a shit ton with enthusiasm" has to be applied selectively. I'm not saying care about nothing, I'm saying only care about shit where giving a damn helps you improve your life. Be passionate about the things which return a yield, caring about most things, especially the small things, just drain you, there is no return on the fucks given whatsoever.

Did they mention that as a possibility as to why this was happening?

No. This looks at guys aged 20 - 49 having a higher rate of suicide than females among the same age whilst looking at the specific case of a 15 yr old also. It doesn't go into specific scenarios, it purposely avoids making any feminist connections and softly blames men for "incorrect behaviour" in wanting to kill themselves more. Shameful shit from the BBC, but then thats the UK gov, can't expect much more than BS.

Paranoia is the achilles heel of the psychopath, yes.

I've also come to the conclusion that this is a point where somebody can put a lever on them. If they assume that they can trust you because you are not as smart as them, and they "like" you because you are useful in any way to them (either to achieve some goal, or because you satisfy their ego), they are fairly easy to manipulate into getting people out of the way for you, if one proceeds with caution and takes slow steps to not make them suspicious.

All correct but you play with fire, they may also become self-aware of the level of influence you have over them and either retreat or simply punish you for your infiltration of their trust. Psychos do not like trusting people, they fear trust as they perceive it as weakness and not so much an alleviation of responsibility. What you're advocating is a form of gradual desensitisation as to bypass the defense of the psychopath and use them as a tool. The same paranoia that undoes them will also save them from such devices, these people don't even trust themselves a lot of the time (at least in the capacity of being good or moral), what makes you think they have a capacity to trust you? They trust bad things, if you want to try to convince them of anything you best frame it in a negative context and they'll be more likely to buy into it.

"If it sounds too good to be true it probably is" is an idiom that the psychopath takes to extreme lengths. They have very low expectations of people they're not invested in.

1 upvotes · 21 February 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

"Okay, that makes sense. I have a coworker dripping to fuck as a result of sadistic seduction texts. Sadism is actually quite fun."

There's another recent AR post about sadism being the outer game of a dark triad's inner game. Given the coworker situation, I tend to agree with it.

What like: "I'm going to pin you up against a wall, put my hand around your throat, pull your panties down and start playing with your clit, then when I think you enjoying yourself a little bit too much I'm going to stop, push your head down and force my dick into your throat" or something along those lines?

Sadism really in terms of seduction is just teasing which is cruel (making it sadistic to an extent) and we all know teasing works very well as a form of attraction, however the line is crossed when it goes from beyond teasing cruelty which can be pleasurable to both parties to what I can only describe as torturous teasing, you know, like sticking needles in someone and enjoying their pain as they howl. That's more psychotic sadism whilst enjoying control over someone and someone reciprocally enjoying your control over them? That's pleasurable sadism which links in very intimately with hedonism. Sure one could say you're both being sadistic but nowhere near to the extent the executioner chopping off heads from the days of old would be or the psycho mass murderer or the taxidermist are, for in seduction there is mutually beneficial value derived, in terms of psychotic sadism or extreme sadism or whatever you want to label it as one party (the victim) is at a severe disadvantage and in pain, whilst the other party (the instigator) is in control of that pain and is perversely gratified in executing the actions which cause said pain and then embellishing in the sense of accomplishment which comes from looking upon their works of despair.

Mutual sadism = not a problem. One directional sadism = psychotic sadism.

Now the female sexual desire is something that is entirely sadistic, the desire to be dominated and thrown around like a little fuck puppet is very sadistic, although strangely, its a healthy form of sadism as she actually enjoys the experience, it does not harm her psychologically in anyway, in fact her psychology yearns for it and for any people who may have the audacity to disagree I'll throw in a complimentary reference to 50 shades of grey as defense. Boom, boom and done.

EDIT: which post is the sadism as outer game post? I can already begin to see the connection quite easily.

1 upvotes · 21 February 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

It's been called the triad for a long time, more recently psychologists have become interested in the prevalence of sadism and how that relates to machiavellian/narcissism/psychopathy thus broadening the area of connected traits to include sadism and thus the term "dark tetrad" is born.

It's not about the number of psychological disorders that exist, but how specific traits are interconnected. I could easily see a link between narcissism and sadism for example, but narcissism and OCD? Not really.

The dark triad can be useful to "healthy people" too, sadism? Not so much, you might get some sick kicks out of something if thats your thing but it wont help you get a better job or be better with women like dark triad traits will.

being appreciative of music is a beta trait right? I know a guy real well who is incredibly Alpha and has been the frontman of a band for years

I laughed at the inconsistency here. Why would listening to music be beta? I don't know where you drew that idea from. Being alpha doesn't mean you have to be emotionless or be unsusceptible to mediums which contain emotion.

I listen to political/intellectual hip-hop, as well as the dumbed down gangster shit (purely because I like the aggression.) My musical tastes are quite diverse, stick on a bit of Chopin or Bach or Mozart and I won't complain, I have a large appreciation for classical music. People stereotype you based on your musical taste, I use music for many different purposes. Dubstep/Electro grant energy, political/intellectual hip hop is thought provoking, classical helps one with concentration and is generally peaceful in nature (though not always.) I take a pragmatic approach to music. Of course, I have no place for pop music as it offers nothing of value to me, that doesn't stop the annoyingly catchy rhythms occasionally getting stuck in my head when I hear the songs out and about though.

I love punk as well although I hardly ever listen to it. Offspring - Staring at the Sun is one of my favourite songs of all time.

An open mind means open musical tastes.

1 upvotes · 12 February 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

I see what you mean but you have to be careful not go down a slippery slope.

How do we know all the conspiracy theorists and the like talking about "being tapped" didn't catch someone in powers attention and give them the idea to begin with? It's like the chicken and the egg, the proof coming after the fact does not prove it was happening BEFORE or WHILST it was merely publically perceived to be a product of paranoia/estimation.

Unhealthy paranoia is a negative feedback cycle, it is anxiety that causes paranoia and then that paranoia causes more anxiety which then causes more paranoia until you reach a point where you lose self-control.

Ultimately even in the face of danger you need to hold your frame. Be aware of the worst possible outcome and have a contingency plan for it, but don't let the possibility of that outcome dictate your daily life.

Schizos are so paranoid they actually make shit up and then actually TRY TO FIND connections where there are none.

Critical thinking is paramount to a healthy objective mind. Healthy paranoia is knowing there is a lot of poverty and keeping an eye of your possessions in order to protect those possessions, that produces a net positive outcome and the likelihood your possessions will be stolen/reappropriated should you abandon them is probably reasonably high if you live in the anglosphere.

Thinking everyone is looking at you because you have bad skin is unhealthy paranoia as it will not benefit you to be aware of it, even if it is true. Some paranoia is counter-productive whilst others are useful. Even with useful paranoia, one must retain control of their faculties/frame and not cave to the pressure.

Those who repeatedly cave to the pressure of their paranoia risk losing their minds to breakdown or worse a DSM listed psychological disorder. Genetics hugely increase the risk factor which is why I said it's good to know your family's mental health history. Even those without a genetic predisposition are not immune to mental health problems, there are various ways to program someone to lose their sanity, the most sadistic and effective methods involve abuse victims and taking people at childhood such as with butterfly programming/monarch mind control:

The tools you had at your disposal to turn down sex were those which you inherited - from your genome, from your past experiences, etc.

Yes but it wasn't easy, my body at the time was telling me to fuck her, I really wanted to fuck her, I had to use all the will I could muster not to give into how I felt, those sensations were my biology too. There was an internal conflict, and under the arguments given here "it was all biology"

Saying "its all biology" although not strictly incorrect is so vague, is a formless type of argument, it's ambiguous by being general.

The inference here is that women can never resist those sensations, I'm saying when I finally do settle down I want a woman who least makes the effort to try or/and can sometimes succeed, like myself.

Women in their 20s are tuned into social status not economic/provider qualities.

I agree with you, thats what i meant by higher status, social status. Not job status.

Being "economically privileged" is of no benefit

Well that's a lie if I ever saw it. You can go out and afford to socialise, you can put yourself in the environments where these women will be getting their free drinks from betas and shit, you can travel and stay in hotels and whatever, you can afford to invest in yourself by learning piano or taking up some skill that charges expensively hour rates. You can afford to dress well. All these things add to SMV, economic privilege in my opinion is very significant, even with younger women. You don't need to play provider to benefit from having money, you can use it to lead an active social life, acquire skills and look good. Wage slaves can't even afford a date/decent wardrobe so no matter how great they are as people by merit of their economic position they aren't even contenders in the market because they don't have the money to compete.

I think neither do we want to engage in a kind of gas-lighting denial-ism of very real biases in the dating marketplace.

I don't deny it, I say people have preferences and give my own as an example, but you can't let that defeat you. If someone doesn't find you attractive because of your race then next them, fucking simple. You can only be so high in SMV, you can only lift so much and dress so well and cultivate such a quality personality. If your fucking race is enough to defeat all that in a potential mate then fucking next her, you're so high value why would you give a shit? You've got options.

If I ever met a chick who wasn't into guys of my race I wouldn't waste time on her. People are allowed to have preferences, your value can overcome stereotypes though, if you're high enough value you will and can be many women's exception, it's the whole "I don't normally do this but..." This whole notion of pleasing women to accept the fact your indian is absurd, as a man you are superior to her full-stop. Period. Superior. All she has is a pussy, if she won't give it up then another broad will, don't waste your time on a bitch who for reasons beyond your control isn't interested, this applies to everyone whether race is a factor or not.

Abundance mentality. Confidence. Aggression. We need to see more of it. OP needs to lift if he isn't. OP gets female attention already so all this talk is seeming redundant now.

She would try to manipulate situations so that him and I ended up in the same room together, or she would bring one of us to a party where she knew the other was, and whispered shit the other would say.

She gets off on maneuvering people into situations and making them do things they think result from their own choices but really are the result of her manipulations.

She then went back to her ex-boyfriend (the jealous one) and tried to get him to fight me again because I was apparently "talking shit" to her. She then flip-flopped, got a restraining order on the ex-boyfriend (allegedly), and tried to convince me that he abused her.

Holy shit that's some fucked up branch swinging manoeuvre right there.

She purposefully had sex with him while I was in the next room, loud enough for me to hear.

So she can gain control over him, win him over by puppeteering him with sex. Incentivising his loyal to her with her pussy. Typical bitch move.

She started asking me if it bothered me

She wants it to so she can gain power over you

I said no. She then tried to turn my roommate and I against each other through some pretty manipulative passive-aggressive moves.

She's getting frustrated so trying a new angle, this is like her and her ex-boyfriend she tried to get to fight you, she's using him as a pawn to get at you.

She tried to guilt-trip us into wanting to date her (we both had very promising career aspirations) since she claimed she went out of her way to buy plane tickets just to visit us.

Diffusion of personal responsibility.

Him and I both saw through her B.S. and while I fucked her throughout sophomore year, I let him fuck her throughout senior year. We both knew what was up and it didn't bother us one bit. Which enraged her.

That is simply gorgeous. Why was she giving you both the pussy, because in each year she saw financial potential in you both? How did you guys pass her between you so easily?

Fast forward years later to this morning. Out of the blue she sent me a message on facebook "congratulating" me on my recent professional and academic achievements. She is coming back to my state and wants to meet up again.

Bitch needs a wallet to pay her debts and bills and she'll suck a rich enough dick to ensure they're paid. And then some. Don't cum inside.

Lol I'm not going to jump through your hoops for the sake of logic, no fucks are getting given about logic here at all, baiting me to interact you with by attempting to incite me to justify my logic via the use of provocative language may work on an automaton academic to get what you want (discourse), but I simply don't trust neither have the inclination to share my thoughts with you, no matter how much you try to question my credibility by inciting me to defend myself.

You approached me poorly initially, with contempt and disrespect - and that was enough for me to write you off. So no, I shan't satiate your desire to have a dialogue, respond with another post making appeals to logic, name some fallacies or whatever, I don't really care - I gain nothing from entertaining you - I'll let you have the last word for the sake of your ego but know this - I don't care to engage with you intellectually, that ship has sailed. Move on.

All this pedanticism and character assassination has contributed nothing of worth to the thread either, you and your friend there are just spamming the place up with mindless bullshit.

Ad hominem doesn't need to fallacious, it can even be factual - it just needs to attack the arguer instead of the argument. That rhetoric attacks the arguer. Your pedanticism is misplaced. I seem to attract your type - those who look to nitpick in an effort to reduce credibility rather than actually meaningfully contribute anything of their own. Critics. Disseminating what others produce without producing your own original thoughts. Debating whether something is ad hominem or not, what will that teach any of the readers? Absolutely nothing of worth. Well done.

Location is important, assuming they're both American citizens, the attitudes of the court can vary vastly state by state. If one is in another jurisdiction altogether, then it's rather obvious things may be different.

In any case, this would be a good research project.

We should go and get all the ancient philosophers to source their ideas as well, I mean Plato, Aristotle, Voltaire, Schopenhauer, Nietzsche... these guys were just all making shit up.

Imagine if these guys were all still alive and in a room, today's closed minded masses would demand to see a flawed study in a lab environment or some other source from an academic journal to even contemplate the notion that the posited assertions are even remotely possible. An illogical infatuation with whatever passes for "science." Our predecessors would get laughed out as lunatics despite the potency of their wisdom which is of course based on their life experiences and introspection, not science.

You most certainly can.

Yes desensitisation will elicit neural plasticity, you don't actually believe you're going to destroy a neural connection do you? Desensitisation is essentially weakening the neural connection, to what extent is based upon the plasticity of said persons brain and their methods for utilising it. We're almost in agreement here, except you contend "you can annihilate morality" and hence that you can completely sever neural connections, which I disagree with, I contend you can only reduce their effectiveness/strength.

Human's aren't born with morals or ethics,

That's not been proven, it's still a topic of hot debate, studies have been conducted with babies which suggest that babies younger than 8 months have a concept of good and bad.

Psychologist Kiley Hamlin expected the 8-month old to pick the "good" puppet. Hundreds of studies had already confirmed that infants, 166 of the 188 tested by Hamlin, prefer the helper puppets in experimental "morality plays" (where, for example, the "good" puppet returns a ball to another puppet, while the "bad" puppet steals the ball). What did surprise Hamlin, the director of University of British Columbia's Centre for Infant Cognition, was what came next. In the next scene, the "good" and "bad" puppets played with a new puppet, who either rewarded each puppet with a toy or punished by taking away a toy. Hamlin assumed that babies would prefer the puppet who awarded the good one; but she was shocked to find that babies also favored the puppet that punished the bad one. She repeated the study with younger children — and even 4-month-olds approved of harming those who harmed others.

ENTJs are among the rarest of types, accounting for ~2–5% of males formally tested, and ~1-3% of females.[2][3] They tend to be self-driven, motivating, energetic, assertive, confident, and competitive. They generally take a big-picture view and build a long-term strategy.

Makes sense its rarer in women as there's a preference for thinking over feeling in this type. Also makes sense women find such qualities vastly attractive, resource acquisition and all that good shit.

About 3 or 4 years ago I used to actively score INTJ. I've done the test a few times in the past 2 years and keep Hilariously ironic anecdotal evidence of marriage double standard in English law courtesy of my law lecturer.

1 upvotes · 4 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Actually, until very recently (1991) in England marriage meant a man could not rape his wife as the court viewed the contract of marriage as her legally binding her sexual consent to that one man.

There's a progressive number of changes to the law and how the court views marriage which has resulted in the predicament you present.

Under the pre-feminist system:

even in marriage you can not enforce having sex with her

Men could not rape their wives, marriage was about the woman giving herself entirely to her husband in return for provision. So technically he could have sexually assault her and the courts would not have seen that as marital rape. Marital rape in the UK is based on case law, not statute see R v R (1991 All ER 481). Take from that what you will.

moreover you can not even prevent her from fucking other men on the side.

On the old system you could have divorced her and given her very little/nothing for adultery assuming the man was wealthy. Working class men were fucked, they were stuck with her.

I'm saying that most people here aren't going to properly use them. Take it with a grain of salt, and don't go gossiping like a teenage girl because you read about it once. If you're going to use it, use it right.

True, machiavellianism is like game, it is a vocation, you learn with practice, you can have all the knowledge in the world but the application is something learnt in the field, definitely. It's the same with any skill, nothing within the realm of learning methods actually beats the experience of "living it" and learning in-field. Experience engages all your senses (touch/visual/auditory/kinetic etc) whereas the internet just engages the visual and "talking about it" merely engages visual/auditory.

I hope you appreciate what I have to say.

I do, it's relevant.

However I don't agree with this quib:

The UK has gotten progressively fatter and I notice people try to reassure themselves by saying "well at least we're not as fat as the americans are!"

America is the fat capital of planet earth. It's your portion sizes and the ubiquitous fast food joints. We have an american sweet store where I live and I went inside, holy crap the sugar content of lucky charms was fucking insane! It was beyond your daily allowance just for breakfast, I think! I was mind blown by what a McDonalds serves in the states compared to in the UK. The burger size, the drink size, the amount of fries.. its nuts. People in California don't have much excuse, that's where a lot of your fruit and produce comes from, lack of importation means cheap healthy shit, locally sourced stuff is always great if you can get it where you live.

As for us in the UK, we can at least come up with the excuse we import around half to two thirds of our food from other nations! Then again, that's all it is - excuses. Get addicted to jogging and lifting, not high sugar and high fat foods and your mind state and body will thank you for it for years to come.

Anecdotal, never seen science even broach the idea that women can be psychopathic, they seem to think its purely limited to men which we know to be BS here from our own experiences without the validation of the scientific institutions.

Known 3 dark triad girls, 2 were/are tetras (bonkers) the triad seems like your average pretty chick once you understand what's going on underneath. There's a world of difference between a dark tetra and a dark triad chick. Tetras are A LOT darker.

Technically girls don't usually meet the psychopathic criteria to be considered dark triad, but instead they rationalise their emotions to shift responsibility and justify a bad action as to allow them to conduct psychopathic behaviour rather than simply do it because they are "unfeeling" as we know nearly all chicks have got "teh feeeeeeeeeeeels" psychopathy in the genuine sense of being unfeeling is actually very rare with them.

Dominance is things like saying NO even when she's being unreasonable or raising her voice with disrespect, or having her follow you somewhere, say to a shop or whatever. Dominance is also defending yourself without getting insulted and insulting her back, if you insult her back you have to do it with humour or it just looks like you're bitching. If she says you're a prick who thinks the world of himself you can reply "I know, now let's go" or "Is that your way of saying confidence is sexy?" you either address it by changing the frame or you don't even address it at all. Sometimes they will force you to address their BS by repeating themselves over and over, then you can just poke fun at their limited vocabulary.

Being passive aggressive is being reactive to a woman. So if she says in front of the group (taking this example from real life of how a guy I knew responded) that when you all went out you were really boring and you said "Ah no, no, I'm not talking to you now" or "wow, thats bullshit" even if you try to lace it with humour or gaslight and say you're just messing around and not really upset (what he did) it's a butthurt response - it communicates that you're affected by her opinion and that in turn suggests insecurity which is a demonstration of low value (DLV).

Ultimately your opinion has to carry more sway than hers, that's part of having a dominant frame. If a woman can play with your feelings rather than you play with hers then she dominates the frame and has you on the defence demonstrating low value with reactive passive aggressiveness. Passive aggressiveness is also cockblocking a girl, if its your girlfriend mate guarding is part of the relationship but if you're just a beta orbiter stopping her getting some strange then you're being a passive aggressive bitch.

There's a lot of nuances to social interactions, things are very context dependent for the most part and its often how it's said and how quick you can respond that matter, more so than what you actually say.

what would you suggest as followup reading?

There aren't many books that lay it out like the 48 Laws does, that's why it became a bestseller, it's unique in that respect.

You could read the texts of Niccolo Machiavelli himself (The Prince, The Art of War)

Or go with 33 Strategies of War also by Robert Greene, essentially a more contemporary Art of War by Sun Tzu, if you want Sun Tzu's Art of War then I recommend this version:

<http://www.amazon.co.uk/The-Art-War-Ancient-Classical/dp/0857080091/>

Which has the ancient context explained by an academic, the text is so old that reading the basic translation is not pleasurable in the slightest, not only is there a poorly translated version floating around but it doesn't explain any of the context of ancient China.

To be honest 48 Laws is one of the best out there to my knowledge, if anyone else knows of a book that can match or even trump it, I too would be intrigued to hear of it.

Vernacular is typically the field of the uneducated however the educated may dip in and out at will, switching from dialect/vernacular to standard English by whim. I use vernacular myself and the academics who are "not street" or don't have non-academic friends are always quick to jump on it and use it as some sort of point to attack credibility when it's simply a social skill that they don't have.

The uneducated can't switch to standard english and the few that can tend not to due to the social circles they roll in (peer pressure: EY YO MAYNE Y U BE SPEAKING ALL WHITE?), thus they speak vernacular and that's that. Race is irrelevant as well, it's a class issue, just so happens most blacks in the usa are poor.

TLDR: educated have choice of idiolect/register, uneducated don't.

What I don't believe is that he portrayed himself as a stereotypical beta in high school, then all of a sudden he is a sociopath, unaffected by suicide threats, meticulously tracking women, systematically breaking them down then breaking up with them, etc

Anything short of a government psyop program and it ain't happening.

most people who are truly narcissistic / unemotional exhibit those traits towards all people, not simply towards women

This 100%, the charm is nothing but a superficial layer if even that is there.

I'm guessing this guy has read about psychology and is simply trying to emulate this Dark triad traits.

Like a lot of us here.

"I never blink during emotional moments" is kinda wacky IMO.

Agree, it's bullshit, your eyes get dry emotions or no emotions.

since sociopaths and narcissists typically are unable to take other people's opinions into consideration.

Typically maybe, but not in all cases. If you demonstrate high enough value some of them will take your opinion into consideration. It's a spectrum, those furthest along the spectrum are unreachable by any other human. They're so isolated they bond with people by victimising them.

I can't find any major flaws with it. It is well-written and at the very least understandable.

I know, if I have flaws in my logic I appreciate them being pointed out because I can learn from them, all this idiot tried to do was have a battle of egos and come out feeling like he won, nothing was learnt and there was no amicable parting - typical of a lesser mind - they resort to ego primarily over the pursuit of knowledge, shaming tactics are their coping strategy not just for derailing arguments but also to make them feel like "they won" as long as they "feel like they won" they get that sense of pyrrhic victory and then shut the fuck up high off their own delusion that "they won" because "they had the last word."

These type of people don't care about logic, wisdom, critical thinking, truth etc, it's all emotional thinking and masturbating the ego. They're very simple minded people and very common, they make up the bulk of humanity - intellectuals, people who value truth and logic over ego are in the minority, sure I have a ego like anybody but its priority is beneath that of truth/wisdom/logic, those things supercede ego, if your ego supercedes everything it is the sign of a lesser mind as the ego inherently limits ones understanding out of a need to protect itself and fight feelings of insecurity.

Most of the population are more inclined to feel more than they think and thus they only need to feel like they won to be happy, you can logically annihilate them and as long as they get some snarky comment in designed to amog you they'll be satiated. You come from different places in such a discourse, one person cares about knowledge/truth, the other is trying to preserve their sense of self-confidence/ego.

Being 70+ years old at the moment means you were born in 1943 or earlier. Feminism did not really get it's hooks into society until the 1960's and even then did not really fuck society too hard until the 1990's so he's the product of pre-feminism screw-ups.

1 upvotes · 3 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Agreed. But if there are spectators "on the fence" about it... its the noble thing to get them on your side. You dont have to ofc, but its something to think about.

The only reason I qualify myself half the time on this sub is because of exactly that, the spectators who are too confused and torn to make a choice. In the real world I'd give no fucks about the target or onlookers, only qualifying myself to people who have earn't my respect, not random strangers. I don't feel like I owe anything to anyone in real life, but I do owe this subreddit a lot, so I do my bit when I perceive it not to be in vain.

Imo its better not to care what people think,

Not giving a fuck is not giving your power to people because what they say doesn't affect you. Sometimes its not dignifying it with a response (situation dependent)

However there's a small nuance here I will address, sometimes it's not a matter of caring about the persons opinion, but your own reputation. You should always care about that for if you don't you will fail at life:

<http://48laws-of-power.blogspot.com/2011/05/law-5-so-much-depends-on-reputation.html>

"I don't give a fuck" and maintaining a reputation of your choosing are vital. If you have a reputation that does not work in your favour then your opinions are de facto incredible (not credible)

1 upvotes · 3 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I think you also have to be careful about dismissing something that you believe is crazy/outrageous without actually rationally thinking about it and why its wrong.

I concur. Analyse for logic, if the person demonstrates little logical ability, disengage.

If you're feeling a little twisted, you can try and have some fun at their expense by fucking with them, but taking them seriously is a fatal mistake which will lead to nothing but frustration.

I've had many people IM me/comment me total nonsense, attempts at intimidation, delusional people who are just immune to reason, those who no matter how much you explain or qualify yourself they almost seemingly purposely never interpret your meaning the way it was intended, people who I can only deduce are mentally unhinged or come with ill agenda, and if I actually validated anything they said it would give it credibility by lending my power to it. "Oh well if IllimitableMan is discussing it then it must be important as it surely bothers him!" - this kind of thinking.

One must essentially be able to tell the difference between someone who is incapable of rational discourse and their mind rationalising that the other person is irrational because they are too fearful or closed-minded to accept new information. Look for logic and fallacy, recognise any potential manipulations in their communication and then deduce. Introspection is critical at all junctures, assuming one cares enough about the matter at hand of course. This is a call that each and every person must make when situations arise. It's a good skill to develop, critical thinking.

Cheating or game?

1 upvotes · 2 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Cheating makes you a piece of shit, regardless of gender.

Cheating is what happens when all of a person's needs aren't fulfilled, some people have the need for variety in partners and thus one person cannot fulfill all their needs. Ideally you're upfront about this and spin multiple plates with them all having a vague knowledge of each other - you may not define that as cheating, seeing 4 girls at once whether they know or not others would class as cheating. TRP encourages plate spinning, society at large would consider spinning plates to be immoral and cheating.

I'll put it in another way, you don't want a girl who's too good at shitting in your heart, a very manipulative conniving chick is not wife material. Reason being? If she's better at it than you she'll win the power struggle, disrespect you for it and then it's all over, you lose. You're not allowed to lose.

An alternative example would be in spec ops soldiers, who are trained and desensitised to the point that they adopt psychopathic traits almost completely during missions. This doesn't make them actual psychopaths.

Right, one must be able to distinguish between those who can utilise psychopathic traits/abilities and those who are actually born with the neurological condition and are afflicted with the disconnect between morality and decision making.

If soldiers were psychopathic they wouldn't suffer from PTSD because they would give no fucks, truly, on a biological level.

The same reason I don't study there anymore. The high cost of living, the shit quality of life, bad air and travel congestion just isn't worth it. London is very over-rated. It's a city of extremes, it has vast opulence and third world poverty literally seconds walk from each other. You can be stood in a tenement looking out towards "The Shard" quite literally.

Birmingham has a huge pakistani muslim population, unless that's your thing, I'd advise staying away from those areas. They don't integrate with the greater English community, very incubated and wary of outsiders.

If you move to the poverty struck north you'll make more friends and form deeper bonds, although you're likely to feel more intimidated as it's a less accommodating place.

In the south, people are a little more prude. In London everyone is too busy rushing around (I mean literally, RUSHING) and nobody has the time of day for you. It's easy to get lost. If you ask someone for help, it can be hit and miss, very hit and miss. You'll get ignored. You may instead get spoken to like a fucking retard. Londoners are constantly pissed off with the tourists/newbies asking for directions in what is called a city, but for out-of-towners is more of a maze. If you get lucky, you'll find a helpful person. There are nice/helpful people in London, they're just rare or so busy they have no time for you.

As for the counties south and west of London, they're all a bit up themselves. Surrey, Kent, Hampshire, Berkshire, Buckinghamshire, Hertfordshire, West Sussex, East Sussex and Oxfordshire are "more posh" or at least, even if they're poverty stricken the people tend to be up their own asses and believe they're better than they really are. Or as we say colloquially "they're gassed the fuck up"

TLDR: north england is more RP, south england is more BP

He is frankly a means to an end, a tool, she needs a baby and she'll use any man to get one, how the kid will be raised doesn't even enter the equation, for a woman with a ticking biological clock conceiving a child is like a scratch that needs to be itched, a craving to be fulfilled. Their entire approach is irrational to fuck. Be careful with the 27-35 age range in particular if they've not had kids, or any post-wall woman in general who has not had at least one kid. If it's a female colleague/coworker/relation there's often no reason whatsoever for the bullshit other than the fact she's being egotistical/a woman.

Women get off on rejecting guys/putting them down and seeing the power they have over them. They don't find it attractive but they get off on the schadenfreude. It's one of the utilities of a beta orbiter, put the guy down and feel powerful as he acts like your little bitch.

Take a look at this completely random example below with my mate's girlfriend:

Btw, Southampton is fucking crap for clubbing. Oceana. Ugh. A friend of mine has travelled there and DJ'ed at some of the clubs and he said it's fucking bad compared to what we're used to.

OP also differentiated himself from the other guys in both actions and words.

Liked what you did with the beard thing to get her to verbalise her attraction creating the perfect opening to escalate. It's not the only way but it works so hey!

Hope you got her number, spin her as a plate.

That's the toned down response. I wrote a dark triad response which would mini-gun even the strongest ego, but I've held it back because I think you need your own philosophy to cope in life and I probably shouldn't be sending a guy off to see his shrink because my perception of his bigotedness is obnoxious. Your psyche is not mine to destroy, yet if I followed your philosophy and did whatever made me happy, I'd do it to get off on the schadenfreude. That's the great thing about being a machiavellian, you can control when you're a cunt.

I have no desire to change your opinion as there is nothing for me to gain from doing so, the only reason I bothered addressing you at all is because I care about the sub and any naive people who may actually think what you're saying has some semblance of validity to it.

I am of the belief that your mind will only change from traumatic life changing experience, substance abuse or some genetic alteration, not through logic communicated through words because you have not demonstrated particularly strong reasoning ability or a curiosity for beliefs other than your own and thus ironically, I see no point in this regard in debating you.

I know you may like to debate me, but it simply isn't worth it for me. I'm not saying that to try and frame myself as superior to you in any way, it's simply how I feel. So I guess in this situation I will momentarily agree with your philosophy and follow my own happiness.

Take care.

Honest question: How do you TRP fellas truly feel about sluts?

1 upvotes · 13 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Love to fuck them.

Would feel completely duped committing to one though as by nature of her promiscuity she demonstrates she is not worthy of commitment.

Their net benefit is their libido and adventurousness, no strings? Sure. Marriage? Lmfao! Sluts need to learn they are mistress material, not marriage material.

Committing to a slut? Are u serious? Yes because that's surely a sound strategy. Committing your wealth and trust to someone with an inherent propensity to be sexually disloyal is shooting yourself in the foot.

Sluts have purpose but the male sexualitys dual nature rears its head here. When sluts get past 27-30 and want to pretend their good girls I can't respect that deception. Hiding her history etc.

Once a slut, always a slut. You cannot undo the corruption of ones sensibilities, corruption is permanent. Purity is the absence of corruption, short of inducing amnesia sluthood is going to be a permanent personality characteristic with the desire in variance remaining the same, only the prevalence of sex being affected by hormone levels.

Never Outshine the Master (Machiavellianism) (LONG READ)

1 upvotes · 11 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

The other part of me wants to keep it hidden away, and downvote all references to it so that only a few people know.

I know what you mean. I want to take the book with me to university and read it in free periods where otherwise, time is squandered on relatively frivolous things waiting for the next lecture to come up, however, I know with such an interesting name, if I were to read the book - it would raise eyebrows, elicit undesired interest and arouse suspicion about my own character with my classmates, inspiring particular fear in the greater betas who constantly seek to out-do and top trump out of profound insecurity.

Greater betas can be annoying enough without them on high alert trying to harness their own power by hijacking your strategy to use it against you. It's poor machiavellianism to arm your enemies, unless you think by arming them you can make them blow themselves up with the new weaponry.

Some people are so morally stubborn or you could say, brainwashed with the blue pill, that they would read this book, refuse to understand it/internalise it/apply it and disregard it as being dangerous hate speech. A lot of people will reject the book out of fear/ignorance. It's those with an open mind, intellectual curiosity and flexible morality who can take the most from the book and see a real improvement to their lives.

Machiavellianism can be applied to subjective morality, but morality is not absolute eg: you'd apply morality in some situations, but not in others and whether you apply morality to your decision making processes is dependent upon need, opportunity cost, the parties involved and overall context. Immediate need (eg: food/air/water) trumps all morality immediately.

Shes pushing for commitment after one fuck, only way he's gonna maintain the arrangement is by girlfriending her up but not giving in to her demands. Basically treat her like a fuck buddy but tell her she's a girlfriend. Some girls are dead-set against the idea of being a guys fuck buddy, but will effectively be his fuck buddy if you use the word girlfriend instead.

Emotionally unavailable is such a bullshit term and its a shit test, she's saying she can't get inside your head and that bothers her, basically. Simply reply to that bullshit with stuff like "are you saying the sex we had wasn't emotional? I thought I was being pretty available with you that night" ... emotionally unavailable is womanese for "he doesn't let me control the frame/reveal his weaknesses to me" she wants to become irreplaceable to you, she wants you to crumble without her, that's what she means by "emotionally unavailable" she wants you to form dependency on her, many bitches want this because they are insecure and feel disposable if they don't see your weak side and feel privy to it. You could use "beta game" to calm these thoughts and show "availability" but that's the shit that dries pussy up quick, so you can't go too mad with it.

She doesn't sound like she's a plate that would spin very long, she'd need to think she's a gf to have anything lasting and if you girlfriend her up you're gonna need to keep a solid leadership frame as it sounds like due to the crazy fucking mother she has she'll randomly go weird and launch an arsenal of shit tests at you from time to time. Not the kind of mother I'd want to meet either, how fucking awkward is that gonna be when her mother puts her false face on and is being all nice to you when you go over when you know how much the bitch really detests you? Then you're gaming the mother too. Is this girls pussy really worth all that to you? It shouldn't be, but if it for you, go ahead and learn from the mistakes you're going to make.

It sounds like you have oneitis already tbh, so if you're gonna have oneitis at least try not to go full beta. I say this with a tone of cynicism, because things you've said already suggest you've fallen for her, giving way too many fucks about little things like removing from facebook and are thus losing frame. Fucking facebook, god damn.

Food is such a simple thing, it requires no cognitive adjustment, your taste buds either like the flavour or they don't.

Food is one of the best ways to bridge cultures together, to facilitate diplomacy and create friendship.

However fundamentally it won't change the differences in how you think, it will create a good atmosphere between inherently different people, but you will always be different.

Multiculturalism is the silly notion that we can all be different and "the same" at once. It's perverse.

Why is red pill thinking so 'controversial' outside of this sub?

1 upvotes · 8 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

It's all about integration.

You need to speak the local language and basically go out on a limb.

In Spain English people congregate together on the Costa Del Sol, open up pubs and never learn spanish. It's pretty fucking bigoted/anti-social and it pisses off the locals.

"Do as they do in Rome" is a wise proverb, and its why multiculturalism doesn't work in the truest sense, the host culture does not want to put up with another culture or have you try to affect/change their culture radically (like the English in Spain trying to get rid of the 2pm siesta), however you can influence their culture in small positive ways, teaching them bits of your language, sharing recipes/food from back home etc. You have to be positive, generous and kind with what you do, and it must be small things like language/food, not religion/deeper ideology (don't proselytise.)

If you're sociable with your culture and not imposive, you can be multicultural to a degree... but if your idea of multiculturalism is what modern day liberalism preaches, building mosques on every street corner and creating islamic faith schools then the ideology segregates society and greats ethnic animosity by nature of the lack of integration.

Do you see what I'm getting at?

I've seen black people/arabs in England give me evil looks in London for being white. Racism knows no bounds and is multidirectional. There's a lot of hate for the caucasian ethnicity as liberalism has weakened "white pride" and made it morally and culturally acceptable in the west to denigrate the caucasian ethnicity. It's open season on whites, some people think you can't even be racist to a white person because they are white. How fucking racist is that shit? The irony.

Yeah I don't know if I was clear - although Machiavelli is definitely a historical figure and I do mention him and link to the Prince, the article was not about Machiavelli or his beliefs/teachings/life etc, it was about Machiavellianism/Social manipulation. I was describing where the term gets its etymology from and thus mention him briefly, I link to his book as further reading on the topic on his personal philosophy and how readers can derive elements and apply them to their "own machiavellianism", but the piece is not about his personal philosophy/perception of what constitutes manipulation and all the romantic translated italian nuances he expressed, but merely the art of the game itself - which gets it's name from his surname.

I believe I read somewhere "you were smashed" which were I'm from, means you're drunk. Lol.

Yes machiavellianist is a neologism I use, rather than simply saying machiavellian. I think the word form makes sense.

Anyhow, apologies if my intimate knowledge of Machiavelli is not to a standard you deem acceptable, I do intend to study him more in-depth, but time is precious, my life is busy and unfortunately leisure reading doesn't get top priority, as much as I wish it could do.

Not if you take care to not be manipulated.

You must employ machiavellianism to not be manipulated otherwise if you don't, you will be manipulated by nature of your own inaction. Assuming you are clued in, acknowledging and ignoring will only take you so far before you are required to perform an action. Whether it's a defensive measure or an offensive one, you still need to participate in the war of minds.

Machiavellian thought thrives in decadent atmospheres like the corporate office, but is almost unheard of in successful start ups and small but effective firms.

Most definitely, startups and small firms are more personal and thus require cooperation and good morale to get shit done. Corporations are far less personal and sometimes just down right dehumanising, its that climate which fosters machiavellianist thought to manifest in a dark way, when people intimately need each other they are adverse to harming their own self-interests, making people need you or be reliant on you is actually a machiavellianist tactic (create dependency) small firms and shit are no less machiavellian than say a huge firm, there's just less variables and more interconnectivity and its this sense of closeness and dependency which keeps the people there from negatively violating those around them.

When the small firm gets big and can replace you, it won't care about you anymore because your individual value is far lower now than it was when the firm was just a startup. Manipulation is everywhere, it's just not always manifesting negatively, although typically, it does. The charm offence can work wonders and I'm inclined to believe that's the sort of atmosphere these smaller places try to foster - but that's not out of benevolence, merely self-preservation.

Just because something is enjoyable, doesn't mean it isn't manipulative. In fact one of the most enjoyable acts a human can have, sex, is probably weaponised to fuck.

It's always a game, automatic losers are the non-participants by nature of the game being unavoidable, but the people in question being being deluded into thinking they can opt out by "being above that." The fact is, not being manipulative is not "above" being manipulative, manipulation always trumps non-manipulation.

However you're quite right, there's usually always a battle for dominance/respect in all paradigms, if anyone is savvy enough to acknowledge your devices, they will grow distaste and may subsequently conspire against you, which ultimately means heightened threat and a challenge to your own machiavellianism.

The Destruction of Family and Other “Liberating Legacies” we can Thank Feminist Social Engineering for

1 upvotes · 26 November 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

We can't pin single parenthood solely on women or feminism.

We can however attribute it (feminism) for increasing the phenomena tenfold. I think to deny that would be incredibly intellectually dishonest.

What about men who abandon their children/families or are dangerous/abusive?

What about them? In today's beta society these men are incredibly rare versus the entitled woman who leaves the man and has a kid on her own. If you want to refute the point then show me violent men are the cause of all this single parenthood and I will concede the point, however I most highly doubt this is in actual fact, reality.

That's a pretty tenuous connection between feminism and liberty, risk, and hard work.

I said it was correlated, not solely responsible.

You didn't even identify any sort of statistical association let alone correlation or causation between women working and wages. Again, there are tons of other factors at play here. This argument is incredibly weak.

OK I'll put it into a bitesize sentence for you, the labour force doubling lowered real term wages significantly, among other elements this was a significant one. Feminism has had a direct impact on economics, driving up demand whilst lowering wages due to labour saturation, of course third world immigration fuels this too, but to say feminism has had no impact would be foolish, the year of 1968 could be coincidental and there will be other factors involved, I believe feminism to be significant one of those factors, it's not too much of a jump to correlate the civil rights movement with a sudden dip in the purchasing power of the minimum wage, more people are looking for work now so employers can get away with paying less.

Who is unhappy? Find that study indicating men are as happy as in past generations whereas women are unhappier. Also, tenuous connection between the destruction of the family and unhappiness. What about unhappy families?

Probably the best criticism you've made asking who is unhappy, however I refute the assertion the connection is tenuous between unhappiness/loneliness and a lack of or otherwise dysfunctional family model. This point is about unhappiness caused by severance in social structure of which the destruction of the family unit carries much burden, not unhappiness caused by any old shit eg: being poor. People will always be unhappy, if you want to get very wide in breadth with why and how you go beyond the scope of the article.

A gay man's take on the friend zone

1 upvotes · 20 November 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

If you're going to refer to touchy feely shit women will always champion it by nature of biology. If you stick to the topic, op was saying its too much effort to be friends with women, "a lot of effort for minimal reward or reciprocation" and I concur with that statement. That's what I refer to when I talk about high quality individuals, making it a blanket statement and trying to redefine what it is as an absolutism is either indicative of a lack of understanding or an underhand technique to reframe something to a condition which is more favourable to you.

I suppose when you're told (women) your whole life the opposite gender has to bend over ass backwards to accommodate you, then you will act like an obnoxious detestable little princess and fail to acknowledge or appreciate things that are done for you but instead expect and demand - then when your demands are met, you take it for granted as if you're inherently worthy of such a thing.

Essentially OP highlights that women love to exploit men for ONE-SIDED transactions, where she benefits from a mans actions but the man doesn't benefit at all, with straight men this is by dangling sex, the implication of sex or the demonstration of sexuality "playing with her hair whilst touching her breast" (to paraphrase OPs now deleted post) or by unbuttoning a shirt and showing cleavage in a job interview etc. As OP has demonstrated, they'll even exploit gay men to achieve their desires both sexually and egotistically. They don't give a fuck, men are there for their benefit.

TL;DR: I think being a "high-quality individual" is a function of choice, not of gender.

Yeah I don't disagree however such a broad statement ignores a slew of factors such as Idk, the effects of feminism on woman's entitlement and how that collectively makes women seem pretty unattractive to men. There's always exceptions, NAWALT and the like, I know some great women, but I accept reality - most of them are pretty shitty, when I meet a woman I don't expect much because I'm realistic, anything good she does have going for her is nothing but a bonus to me, you see, the quality of women is so low now that it doesn't actually take much to impress a guy, if she can cook, isn't fat and can speak 2 languages - boom she seems like a winner.

Compare the opposite in direct contrast, she wants me to have high social status, material wealth, good looks, strong mental control, to take responsibility for her, to lead, to listen to all her problems... barring reasonable looks, ALL of these things are things I don't demand or expect from women at all (no I don't believe in telling women my problems, I don't need the disrespect for seeming less masculine, or to destabilise her emotional base, I'd rather tell a male friend), all I want is sex, loyalty and someone who doesn't annoy me, anything on top of that which is beneficial is not expected but desired, like a good cook, doesn't constantly moan etc.

How is this a fair deal in terms of expectations? It isn't. This dynamic trickles from sexual relationships to non-sexual ones. The majority of women offer a poor deal in whatever social dynamic it is, many don't know what it is to be a good girlfriend, they complain about cooking and call it oppression and all kinds of silly shit, it's just pathetic. Bare in mind I'm talking about generation Y girls, the current 20 somethings although I have seen similar behaviours in generation X.

Let's hypothetically assume you're a woman, I don't see why you would feel the need to stand up "for your group" if you're not like them and assuming you're intelligent enough to make societal observations you would find yourself concurring with my statements, so why would you essentially deny reality? It puts your own credibility in question when you do this and it validates the TRP theory that women are inherently solipistic, that is, you think because you're not like this other women aren't, and hey, even if they are - you refuse to believe it because you're not/your mother isn't etc. Completely illogical.

The thing with TRP is it forces you to decide what's more important to you, the reality of sociosexual dynamics or your sensibilities.

It's not a belief of red pill philosophy, therefore it is indicative of more people such as yourself turning up, talking crap, claiming you understand shit when you don't because you've been here for the duration of all of 5 minutes and buy into feminist dogma. This is an anti-feminist subreddit, unless you can make a very good argument for feminism above ad hominem and disagreement no fucks are given about your ideological leanings.

People and posts like you and yours are contributing to the very problem we're discussing here, but you're too ironically idiotic to understand that, instead you were triggered by a referenced quote and want to move the topic onto that tangent because that's what you give fucks about.

You are stupid, unless you get entertaining I'm going to waste no more time on you.

It's a generalisation with a high degree of certainty and therefore a trend.

This kind of stuff is observed so much repeatedly in different women across different cultures and time periods that whether one learns it from bitter experience, watching someone else's experience or reading a book - the wisdom and intellectual outcome remain the same.

By focusing on the fallacy of say a "hasty generalisation" you imply that the generalisation is not valid because there are exceptions, however this is a generalisation that can be backed up by countless eyewitness testimony and observance.

Most aren't worth it..... but there's plenty of reasons for trying anyway, like not being alone in your old age or carrying on your lineage and building a family/sustaining your family name.

Our weakness with women is we fall in love with them... and they don't love us the same way that we love them. We give up more than they do and they don't show appreciation for it. Women seem to only give most of their love to a real abusive fucking asshole in some vain attempt to "fix him" or "prove him wrong" or some shit. They are inherently fucking crazy and beyond fucked up creatures, such little logic and such little loyalty are a bad combination. MGTOW is a legit option for guys who just cannot be fucked, and I don't blame anyone for feeling/thinking that way.

The 11 differences between women and "red pill" women

Been there and done it, and luckily, quite young. Had a 2 year~ relationship with a girl when I was 18-21 and orbited her from age 17-18. She was way ahead of her years mentally, educated, intelligent, beautiful, funny/good with the banter and kind-hearted. She could also cook. She also gave no fucks I had no money. Call me alpha widowed but I've never met another woman like that and despite her young age I would of considered her a woman, she was from Eastern Europe.

That woman broke my heart, but she was better than me (higher value) I didn't really deserve her in terms of SMV at the time, and when it came to relationships we were both naive having not had serious ones before and not really knowing how to communicate properly. I was insensitive, I didn't bother getting her anything for valentines once and she got upset and made a big deal.

I said I don't believe in valentines day its just a consumer holiday, she started going on about how back in her country it's actually about love and cherishing and nothing to do with buying gifts and that even if I'd written her name on a piece of paper and drawn some flowers or some crap that would've been enough. She really knew how to make a guy feel guilty, fuck cultural differences I'm just an asshole apparently.

Although the point about women not playing games.. that's the only one I'm calling BS on. I know even a semi-autistic girl that plays games. It's part of their fiber. Shit tests are fitness tests, whether shes a girl or a woman she will fitness test you.

Also just because a woman is a woman doesn't mean she can't or won't betray you if you fuck up, she will, she's still a woman - being high value doesn't mean she's loyal and none of the rules of "being alpha" apply to her.

The woman I spoke of in glowing terms at the beginning of this post? Fucked the guy at the work leaving party then told me on Christmas day at the dinner table in my own house whilst eating my food. She actually fucked that guy just to try and hurt me, Louis CK is right when he says men will beat you up but a woman will shit in your heart, that's nothing but the truth.

Me and this girl had already been split up a while but she found out I'd slept with another girl and still feeling some sort of sense of possession over me went and did that out of revenge. CUNT. I managed to contain myself and show no reaction at the time, I don't know how I did that because my inside were literally contorting, it's not so much because she opened her legs for another guy, more so because she did it just to hurt me and then fucking had the audacity to tell me this in a nonchalant manner on a special occasion, I mean the timing and the delivery were just fucking evil, it was then that I saw a very dark side to her nature. I've never felt so much pain in my life before or since.

The majority of theories on TRP are derived from nightclub culture as presented by PUAs. Not only are they deeply skewed to a certain personality type, but they're not even representative of a significant minority of people.

I agree with you. You can however adapt a theory and break it down into other scenarios and still apply it with success. Things are fluid within a certain framework.

TRP will tell insecure men how to be successful at having sex with insecure women. That's it. It not only doesn't carry over into the rest of the world, it looks alien to most everyone else.

Most people without real power trapped in the drudgery of a monotonous job are insecure, there are exceptions but insecurity is not exactly a rare trait in society gender regardless, your statement here is so open-ended it can't be disagreed with. The only nuance is I'd say that not every person on TRP is insecure and to insist so is ignorant at best, bigoted at worst.

"Women shut me down" - oh, it can't possibly be due to a personality flaw on your part, being too aggressive, being abusive, being dismissive of the agency of others, being self-absorbed, it has to be because of some personality flaw in everyone else. TRP, like every cult, coddles your ego by placing the blame on something else, even though objective data completely disagrees.

Replace the word TRP with "feminism" and all the same things apply, it's about making women feel good and that's basically it, so if we hypothetically agree with your premise that TRP is a cult, that makes feminism a cult too. What's wrong with having an opposing view, one that does what feminism does for women but for men? I'm not saying that's what TRP does (it doesn't, it's not government funded or on TV all day and it focuses on self-improvement rather than self-deludement) Leaving the hypothetical, TRP doesn't even fit the definition of what a cult is (We had a post on it ages ago, it fulfilled 1 out of 13 or so criteria for being officially considered a cult) TRP is a philosophy/perception, so your label is incorrect.

There's also a pretty steep class element to it, too. Piles of men with shitty jobs and worse prospects on account of a terrible economy insisting that "food and shelter are all that matter, if I provide that I should be rewarded with all the sex I want because I've provided the most important thing in the universe." There's a delicious irony in that TRPers evoke a sort of "Live Free or Die" facade of machismo and independence, but expect everyone else to tolerate their abuse as long as they have the absolute bare essentials for life. They advocate emotional, mental, financial, and political abuse of women while resisting everything that would place any limits on their freedom to be a douche.

Making a woman your slave through forced financial dependance and promotion of the idea that women should be denied access to higher education and political power? That's A-OK by TRP standards.

That strawman is so wrong that your diatribe escapes the limits of my patience and thus I have no spare mental capacity to correct or otherwise counter your assertions. Starting to seem like a troll.

A woman holding a man financially responsible for the care and upkeep of his children through child support? Human rights violation of his freedom to bro.

This is a men's rights issue and it's about fairness. Often in many circumstances men are expected to pay more than their income, or to pay so much that they become impoverished (90% of your income?! Get real.) I suppose because this is a legitimate issue you'll either flat out refute it with no basis for your refutation, or you'll simply overlook this point as it doesn't fit your agenda of framing TRP philosophy as something evil.

Meanwhile decent human beings, secure with their own identity, who don't train their women like dogs are living fulfilling lives in secure long term relationships with healthy sex lives devoid of the hyperemotional drama that TRP simultaneously abhors and promulgates.

You believe what you say, I believe that, but it's like two religious sects, you interpret what you read differently than I do. I certainly don't see TRP in the manner you have presented.

There's a lot of arguing here from new accounts all of a sudden, banned bluepillers with nothing better else to do? If that's the case you're really upping your efforts to be noticed. Also you all seem to be talking to me, I had no idea I had become so popular recently! :)

He said trp is a bitter pill to swallow, not that you're bitter. In your other post you say you're less bitter than u were. Its ok to be bitter its a part of the process. When you come out on top and have internalised the philosophy more, it will subside. You're seeing for the first time how shitty and entitled women generally are, before you learn to cope with it using amused mastery your natural instincts will be to be repulsed by their neurotic psychological states, the only reason we look past that is because society is sick, it's not changing in a hurry and in the mean time you still have sexual needs.

You know you're making progress when u can read a situation and understand why it goes the way it does, the more it happens the quicker and more accurate you'll get. Good job on your progress thus far, there's still a way to go though bud!

The sentence you quoted actually flows well though, commas and semicolons do exist for a reason, it's so people like me can make long synoptic points or lists without being forced to take a long pause or resort to bullet points.

Short sentences are good for nothing but creating effect/shock. Such as this. That's not really my writing style, I'm more preachy, although you may see the odd one in there. It's common for people to prefer short sentences due to poor attention span/boredom. I generally won't shorten a sentence unless its reads poorly when proof-read, I find breaking up a point actually sometimes damages the importance of what I'm trying to say.

I do however pay attention to limit my paragraph size and that most certainly can get out of control. Haha.

How to keep female orbiters interested?

1 upvotes · 23 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Breakdown for newbies:

The answer is dread game.

If you want to keep a woman orbiting you, the threat of you leaving her must always be a possibility.

Dread game = she thinks you could disappear, already stated but repeated for posterity.

You must reward her good behaviour with small doses of validation, and then withdraw that attention when you become either bored with her or more interested in a different girl. Women become emotionally drunk on that high of constantly fighting to get you back - it's like an addiction for them.

If she thinks you're high value she'll get addicted to your validation. They also love the emotional highs and lows of drama, they live for that shit otherwise they get bored.

The other key is that she must KNOW that you have other plates spinning.

Demonstrates high value because of preselection (other girls want to fuck him, therefore, he's worth fucking.) Even if you're not fucking other girls, if you can confidently communicate that you are she'll buy it and voila!

Now, after having had sex, she's constantly inviting me over to her place so she can cook for me. She wants to distinguish herself somehow from the other girls I'm seeing so that I won't drop her off my list. So I go over, eat her food, spend a little time with her as a reward, fuck her good, and then leave while she's asleep.

She valued this guy more than her virginity, now because he was her first she'll be pushing for commitment. A lot of chicks do believe the way to a mans heart is via cooking, especially a filipina, from a culture where family values teach this kind of shit. She's being sneaky with the girl game here.

Women are fine with sexism as long as it benefits them, scientists reveal

1 upvotes · 23 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I see.

Academics care a lot about referencing and sourcing things (I know, they won't stfu about it at uni), but at the end of the day the source doesn't have a source because it is the source (chicken and the egg) some studies really aren't worth shit, to really believe anything you have to check the crap out of it, so check the person who did the study, their inclinations, examine the study itself, see what peers think etc etc.

I agree they should of posted the study, but even then people would probably just say "oh the studies flawed!" because they don't like what they're seeing/hearing, they'll find a flaw in methodology or say a dataset was misapplied or the sample was too small, or any reason to basically say it's FALSE because it isn't "perfect." The shit flinging never ends, which is why I personally don't put a whole lot of faith in studies in the fields of social science, hard science the findings are provable by outcome and repetition of a process to produce an outcome, in soft science it's politicised and the waters are muddled.

Hard science aka physical science works, soft science aka mental science is just a shitfest unless you can prove it physically eg: biological outcomes.

Yes everyone disregards the daily mail as being shit, but i've never seen any proof or argument for just exactly why it's shit. It seems to be a populist opinion to go "FUCK THE DAILY MAIL ITS JUST SHIT!" in this liberally led society and I for one am tired with this unsubstantiated assertion. It's in the "femail" section which is normally all pro feminist articles, they definitely have feminists working for them as they went and devoted a whole section to feminist and women's interest articles, so what's wrong with them airing this piece exactly? If anything it shows a little more objectivity by showing a negative to feminism for once.

Oh you mean civility in online discourse. I was talking about civility in the macro, as in, you walk down the road and people don't attack you or try to rob you for your possessions.

I consider the requirement for civility in online discourse closely tied to a preference for feelings being given at least equal importance

I'm an advocate of tough love, I'll say mean shit if it logically gets your attention and invigorates you to act (check my post history), hence a disregard for one's sensibilities. The invigoration element here is an example of what I mean about emotions and logic working in tandem. I don't really care about offending people who don't have power over me.

Read this: <http://48laws-of-power.blogspot.com/2011/05/law-19-know-who-youre-dealing-with-do.html>

Addendum: Ego is also emotional and it plays a big part in any discussion online or otherwise, sometimes people are too egotistically restricted to drop a compliment, that's the inverse of civility for the sake of making someone feel good, it's being incapable of acknowledging someone's talent because it would make you feel uncomfortable to do so.

I use TRP, 48 Laws of Power and occasionally read some <http://therationalmale.com/>, dalrock has a good blog too (google it). Problem with rational male is it's very wordy and I don't always want to sit there for 20 minutes to really take something in and give it the justice it deserves.

As for conversation topics, you talk about what you do with yourself. That's why it's important to invest in yourself. If you have nothing going with yourself, nothing's going to make you passionate, nothings going to invigorate you and give you life, you'll be boring - you'll lack value. The more things you do with yourself, the more you value yourself - the more you value yourself - the easier it is to talk to people because you're no longer coming from a place of weakness.

Don't be pre-planning what to say to people, generally you tell stories, talk about what you've been doing or talk inane shit. I'm quite witty and very private/mysterious so I like to just play with words and make jokes out of shit, link topics together, mock things, ask people questions related to their observations.. if you have to ask how to converse, you need to build value. Start building value for yourself and appreciating yourself. Get working out and/or doing things that you love. As your confidence rises you won't take such a mechanical or awkward approach to simple conversation, it'll flow more naturally. Someone who worries about how to converse is probably quite anxious, read my post about combating anxiety and increasing your own sense of value here: http://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/1o08xu/pdf_dark_triad_as_an_agentic_social_style/ccnpkdd

Rachel Marsden Tackling Feminism

1 upvotes · 29 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Thatcher was extremely logical, probably dark triad. Both things which when combined are very rare in a woman, and definitely not your textbook stereotypical modern day feminist. She did Chemistry at Oxford, not Woman's Studies or Business Management at Yale. I find it funny when feminists mention her, they only do so because she was powerful and they are trying to associate with that power as typically something that can be attributed to feminism, when it's not - civil rights alongside a very logical personality and a very good private education are what allowed thatcher power, not modern day BS feminism, I quite suspect she would have found feminist backward rationalising and intellectual dishonesty utterly irritating and of poor taste because Thatcher was both a scholar and an intellectual.

A list of desirable traits in a woman.

Personally I just talk to chicks about boring shit for a little bit, but giving it a flirty twist, making the occasional observation eg: today this girl must of moaned about 3 different things in 2 minutes. I said "I can tell you're the kind of girl that likes to moan" she just smiled. If they complain too much I tend to fuckoff. If I can't fuckoff I'll say "I don't wanna hear your problems." Generally I act aloof and talk to everyone except the chicks who like to shit test. I trickle give them attention to maintain attraction. I give myself the upper hand, they want to be the centre of attention and I give em little so it fascinates 'em, frustratedly or not.

This is pretty long game though to be used on people you're gonna see for a long time eg: work colleagues, classmates etc. If you're going clubbing bring your A game, be a cocky asshole and bulldoze every shit test you get, you have to be way more aggressive with it. When you're asked a question don't think about the default logic, but try abstract logic. EG: "Do you think you're special?" "No but the girl I fucked last night does" etc etc. Just be vague and creative, the truth means little in attraction. Truth is for LTRs, not shit test busting.

I'd prefer to be the provider but if I wasn't, I think it's only fair I do my bit. I'd certainly use her income to help supplement the lifestyle, make life easier, get in a bit of help now and then - but still be around enough to shape the kids correctly, I would want them valuing me more than the home help as the biological father and I think it's somewhat tragic when kids have better relationships with their nannies and shit than their own parents.

Thing is, the situation is pretty beta. I mean I don't think a woman is actually going to respect you when she has all the power (money) and you have to jump to her orders. To me, if a woman doesn't respect you the game is lost, you're better off getting out. So ask yourself really, do you have respect? I mean if you dominate in her bed and have a good friendship connection, it definitely could work but otherwise what are you but a glorified babysitter?

What value will she see in you? "He's great with the kids" OK and what else? What about FOR HER? I mean there must of been something in the past before you signed up for all this. Find what that was if you lost it, practice those behaviours and you will have success, you need attraction between you, whether you're playing the beta husband role or she's the housewife, if you dominate her sexually you won't be seen or feel beta for essentially being a kept man, you need to also keep yourself maintained and invested in, have hobbies, workout etc. You need value and you need to bring it to the relationship, directly to your partner, not thinking taking care of the kids by proxy is enough, she can divorce you and hire someone to do that, if she wants to.

Personally I don't know if I could do it, but some guys with low earning potential and highly seductive personalities/sexually charged appearances could possibly manage it.

When you talk with snark, it communicates a certain kind of elitism. Elitism is a form of division, correct? I see your point, generational lines are merely differences in institutional brainwashing, however Gen X were brainwashed into dysfunction and now talk shit about Gen Y, that isn't right. Rarely will you see someone like myself talk shit about elders, normally it's the other way around. So despite a snarky comment on reddit, the generational divides will remain, although from top-down, not from down-up, I just spun that with logic.

Gotta love how you're deceived into talking with them via the internet, only for them to expose themselves when they can't handle "what it's like on the other side" too much truth and too much logic for 'em to handle. They wanna know "how we think" and they'll "go undercover" but then they can't handle the truth, end up getting upset and crawl back to their own worldview/fantasies. No wonder so many women are mentally deranged, the ones who are smart enough know somethings up and they're living in a lie but they need to rely on that lie for a modicum of sanity, because it "feels nicer."

I've never had an LTR with an English girl. For the many reasons you describe.

My boys... I had an english chick, his first love. Went 6 years with her and dropped her because he realised she was a dead weight. She's a nice girl, but definitely entitled, fake, wanted a nosejob etc. She had no education, but got lucky doing a job as an accountant, then got offered a very good job with a reputable company (fortune 100 company) and turned it down because it was "too stressful" now she does hair and beauty.

Other ones with an english chick, has been since he was 15 and he's 23 now. His first proper girlfriend. I know her, spoken to her many times, she hardly ever wears make-up, isn't overly sexualised, but she's pleasant/feminine enough and can engage in sarcasm/banter to a relatively high degree for a woman. She hates feminism too.

Other guys with an english chick raised by a filipino family, she's very feminine and identifies more with filipino culture than English culture, a homegrown southeast asian basically.

My first love was English but I learnt from that despite it not lasting long. All my other interactions with (English chicks) have been brief, temporary, fleeting. Americans seem to think English girls are like Keira Knightley or Hermione out of Harry Potter, but they're not... they're more like this:

He was unhaaaaappy: Debating Rollo's "Women in Love"

1 upvotes · 10 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

The bait and switch is here:

No doubt you are confused now. You are ungrateful for not acknowledging your husband's sacrifices while at the same time being a shallow, utilitarian opportunist if you do express your gratitude for all that your man does. I can't really help you out here because I am just as confused as you are, but one thing we can know is this: we only love men for their semen and their dollars, and we are simultaneously ungrateful for not saying thank you and opportunistic gold-diggers for saying thank you.

Rollo never says women are ungrateful for not expressing their sacrifices, he says they don't understand what kind of sacrifices a man has to make in man world to please a woman, or how that burden feels, so she never truly appreciates it because she can't empathise with it, she takes the sacrifice for granted as an entitlement to his commitment once she secures it. Classically, we have a woman here talking about male to female commitment, men are the gatekeepers of commitment, not women, so she has no idea wtf shes banging on about, she's misrepresenting what is being said and using her strawman to attack Rollo/Deti's point, that is the basis of the entire blog post. She doesn't give any actual reasoning why they are wrong, whatsoever. She carries on by reinforcing NAWALT by pointing to a post on TheRationalMale where a man divorces a woman for a dumb reason and using this texas sharpshooter to deduce that women aren't that bad because oh look another fallacy, because men do it too.

Okay now I've pwned this chick whos blog is popular enough to have 700+ comments by finding the holes in her logic off the bat. Credit where it's due though, people who can't critically think (and there's plenty) would fall for her BS (she probably believes what she's typed, I don't think she's a bad person) however her logic is incorrect and thus her argument is weak, anyone here who upvoted this topic because they agree with her is also in the "has shit logic" category. The chick/guy/whoever in the comments calling it a home run is equally lacking logic, they like what they hear but cannot identify that it's a weak argument with faulty premises.

And with that, I lol. /thread

So if one race is smarter than another, it's due to their culture? Makes sense. They say southeast asians have the highest IQ but then if you look at their cultures they value the hell out of education and have 12 hour days at school 6 days a week (at least they do in S.Korea) seeing as IQ is flexible I can see that amount of learning driving a persons IQ up. My IQ is just above average and I read shit on reddit/books/deep articles from time to time, but it'd probably be higher if I was in a strict regime of education.

An obvious geographical adaptation would be the eyes of the southeast asians or skin colour and climate.

You could say some cultures are superior to others because they make smarter people and more powerful countries, and people would associate race with that in homogeneous societies like Japan (and traditionally, pre-multiculturalism, you could say the same for Europe), but technically speaking, scientifically it's not the race element per say that makes them "better" than say desolate Somalia. The thing is, isn't culture a mixture of nature and nurture? You'd think with Africa's vast resources they'd have developed more than anyone else in the beginning? The scope of this is too large for me to fully comprehend, I think, but what I'm trying to grab at here is that isn't culture eg: "valuing education and giving your people a higher IQ by making that your culture" stemming from genetics? Why do they value education more than other peoples in other places?

So, my flat mate informed last night I need to get "educated" and shared this with me today...

Power is a manifestation of social order and inequality, hence there is a limited supply to go around, if your enemies are powerful there is no way to rival them without stealing some of their power either through choice or inadvertently, that's how it is.

You do not simply summon power out of nowhere. For example say a kid in the playground is the strongest kid and has a lot of supporters for his strength, when you improve yourself and other people see your strength and begin to support you instead of him, you've just stolen some of his power. Even if your goal was purely self-focused, he will notice the balance in social order and look to address it, he will want to fight you to establish who's at the top and thus potentially win back the power he lost. Not everybody can be powerful, you can be a better person, improved, but relative to society that wouldn't make you more powerful if everyone else did the same it would be a social norm. Power is about being better than other people in relative terms. Absolute power is about having the ability to control life itself, what exists and what doesn't.

Life is warfare on many different levels, essentially we're all competing for power at all levels. Alliances are formed when two or more people/groups seeking power or the preservation of their current position can attain/protect their interests by combining their power and using this larger concentration of power to take a non-allied person/groups power. Effectively making the nature of alliances temporary, they're a means to an end. As soon as you become a threat to each other, the alliance ends and old friends become enemies.

Saying that I can't hate on a foreigner for wanting a better life, if there was a better country for me to go to I'd probably do the same thing, it's not the fault of the immigrants per say, it's the fault of the companies who will actively choose and favour foreigners over people from inside the country.

So you think endorsed people should be capable of apt articulation? Makes sense on an internet forum.

Saying that, nobody asks for it - you login one day and it appears next to your name. It's up to the mods, if they make a bad call and someone gets endorsed who is "low quality" then that's on them it's not the endorsed persons fault "they got endorsed".

I made a juvenile joke here the other day and got negvoted to fuck and people were saying "why is this guy endorsed?" clearly the sense of humour was lost on these people and yet puerarchy is all about "staying in your teenage years whilst in your twenties or even thirties" so hold tight that fucking hypocritical ideological paradox, we have a site called puerarchy.com but we'll all shit on an endorsed guy making an immature joke and use feminist shaming tactics that he's immature rather than just enjoy the humour, very insecure and not cool, I didn't expect that kind of response on TRP at the time tbh.

People take this endorsed shit way too seriously. If there's going to be politics around endorsement it's easier just to not have the shit. Users post what they want, it's not a job, contributors don't have to "serve you as customers" as to speak. People fuck up. People may post drunk who are endorsed, whatever. Endorsement doesn't mean every post is a high quality essay, it means that motherfucker generally knows his shit, send a PM or get specific if need be, look to those people for advice, but don't expect perfection/100% quality from a person - that's fucking blue pill/delusional in expectation to say the least.

Here you do BA or LLB Law for 3 years and then go up to MA Law or LLM Law for postgraduate (masters) which is usually another 1 or 2 years.

I want my degree to be worth something economically, but if it ends up not being I'll still be able to enjoy my education. I love knowledge/learning. Also, in the UK, if you earn less than around $35,000 you don't have to pay back your debt, they take it off as taxation when you go over that amount per year, we don't have the horrid loan system the US has, I've spoken about the US system with my boy in Detroit and it sounds very unreasonable. The degree also allows me to go and live in other countries that would otherwise have their borders closed to me because without a degree you're not considered "a professional". Personally don't think they're more emotional, but I do think they're more dramatic and more adept at playing mind games based on eliciting and manipulating emotion. Experience would show me they have less self-control and seem to rather communicate via shared emotions/experiences/empathy than through reason/logic/honour. Apparently according to all the "liberal fags" the science doesn't back that up, so either the scientists are fucking lying/wrong (scientists thought the earth was flat for a long time, got to take many things with a pinch of salt) OR they aren't that much different where the wiring is concerned but a significant proportion of the gender are socialised to be utterly vapid rationally unfair emotionally dramatic fucknuggets. To be honest, I'd take more comfort knowing it was a biological influence rather than fucked up human culture having that effect.

2X discuss "The Friend zone". Predictable hamster orgy ensues

1 upvotes · 30 July 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I love the friend zone, most girls I don't fall for to start with because unfortunately a pulse isn't enough for me, I require a modicum of intelligence to find a girl attractive and most chicks I meet are just fucking dumb as shit/extremely ignorant. If I do like a girl I make her prove herself to me by friendzoning her first and telling her she's not my type and playing sarcastic asshole game on her.

You can read that and judge me and think I'm a cunt or bitter or whatever shit that immediately comes to mind... but the irony is my experience has taught me if you seek a relationship you never get it, she'll just friend zone you because you seem needy or too available or w/e, if you're a dick and keep the right distance the same girl who'd not want you now wants you to commit to a relationship because she perceives you through a different lense. It's so fucked up.

What are your one liners to shut down shit tests/openers ?

1 upvotes · 30 July 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Whenever a woman talks shit about anything and is baiting you into argument you have a few options.

Agree + amplify

Or in the most sarcastic voice you can muster "I really value your opinion, thanks" you can follow this up with "You're really smart" and "I wish I was as smart as you" see on the surface it looks like you're throwing compliments but the tone of voice adjusts the meaning and if she's a dumb bitch she won't grasp the sarcasm and she'll feel like a bitch for insulting you. If you don't mean it and it's insincere you can really throw spanners in the works with a bitch and get some kicks too. And hey, if she doesn't blow it with you and you end up wanting to bang her you can follow up with a friend zone "i really like smart chicks give me your number you can help me improve my life" then just send the bitch funny pics and ask if she has hot friends. Let the games begin!

TLDR: incorporate sarcasm into your personality, don't take 99% of people seriously unless they've earned your respect. By not taking things seriously you give yourself a position of power, people try to make themselves seem important to you by proving themselves because they care.

People get lonely when they get old. When you're young you have other relatively unattached people to hang around with, talk to and do shit with. When you're all in your 30's a lot get married, move to other places for work/education and you end up losing your peer group somewhat. People look to replace the sense of belonging they lost with their peer group by starting a family. As we all know, that isn't an option for most, you can't really ever trust a woman with the power to fuck you under this legal system by starting a family. Some guys here have tight game and took the risk because deep down they're romantics and NEED IT, but it's like playing a high stakes casino game and betting your house, kids and future income, I wouldn't play that game even for a shot at happiness, the odds are way too low to see me take that risk.

The thought of long term monogamy but no kids has crossed my mind, but most chicks post-wall will pressure you and pressure you to have a child, until they're almost mentally raping and coercing you to put your seed in her (which society does not shame post wall women for, their sense of entitlement to a child.) If you put up a fight and say no and she's obsessed with you (because you're really hot/rich/good mentally) then the crazy bitch will get pregnant on purpose by hijacking the birth control and then call it an accident and go all super hamster "oops!" "I forgot my pill!" pin holes in your condoms etc, and then go all psycho if u dare have the abortion talk with her "it's my body and my baby now I have ascertained your sperm!!" if she's not so obsessed she'll just dump you and find a guy who will impregnate her because her priority post-wall is having a child "for herself" not the monogamous love of another person.

School into adult love with red pill mindsets at a young age is your best chance at fucking a girl that isn't a ho and having some sexual/psychologically lasting form of loyalty to build some serial monogamy off of. I know a couple with this set-up and it seems so fucking unlikely she'd cheat on the guy, it's tempting to use the word NEVER. They are solid as fuck. She isn't slutty. Being with him 5 years (17-22yrs) and knowing him since she was 15 she never even stepped on the carousel. That's the kind of girl you want, even if you're an older guy you want to date a girl that hasn't been on the carousel, thing is, girls under 18 ain't legal for you (so it's better if you're both teenagers) but most girls not on the carousel won't be hooking up with a 30-40 yr old as their first or even second long term boyfriend, they'll be looking at guys in the early 20's. Most of you will have to settle for a chick who takes on board red pill concepts and anti feminism and hope she hasn't changed down cock like it's a natural resource.

the internet and exposing things you weren't willing to share with your family - to them. If they think it's no big deal because they're blue pill fuckwads, you equate it to being betrayed, like someone went in your diary and read all your most intimate thoughts and then just published them to your family, people who if you felt comfortable in telling, you would have done. You're not the bad person here, she is. But you said your family are feminists, so I guess even though she's the one who's betrayed you, you're the bad guy that gets punished. Typical. 1 upvotes · 26 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Not at all, my point is that Shariah is used as an engine to islamify or otherwise undermine a non-islamic state where muslims are a minority which is what I draw on to make my point that Islam is incompatible with non-islamic cultures.

You keep talking about Turkey, Turkey is not multicultural it is only an example of secularism, not multiculturalism or otherwise a success story of Islam getting along just fine with everyone else.

I'll concede to you that you are correct about Turkey and it's secularism but this doesn't discredit the role Shariah plays in secular AND multicultural societies.

I still welcome you to make arguments for why you think Islam is compatible with other cultures.

"brainwash" -- norwegian documentary examines how fields like sociology and feminist studies reject actual science because it doesn't fit with their ideology

1 upvotes · 26 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

That's not what secularism means. It means separation of church and state. No more, no less.

Right, so Turkey is an example of a secularist islamic society and you're using that to counter my argument that islam is incompatible with secular multicultural societies because in islam dominant Turkey, they govern without Sharia, even though, as you admit, some people will still practice Sharia anyway. So really, despite the secularism, a lot of people will still ignore the Law/way of the land and instead believe the way of their religion is supreme.

Turkey may be an example of secular Islam, but it's not an example of a multicultural society where Islam is cohesive and respecting of other cultures. Most muslims will point to the caliphate when talking about a successful multicultural society to demonstrate the peacefulness and ability of Islam to mix with other cultures, but if you put that into context, the caliphate was an islamic empire where only muslims could hold serious positions in power and government, thus it was a society where Islam tolerated other religions because it held all the power anyway, so people of other religions wouldn't of been much of a threat to the regime and would of been required for vast menial labour so killing them wouldn't be in the economic interest.

Islam does not assimilate with other cultures, it's separatist and always seeks state control through Sharia. In a secular country like Turkey because the population is 99% muslim it becomes less of an issue whether Sharia is nationalised or not as everyone is a muslim anyway so it becomes more of a matter of how you interpret the hadith and not about using Sharia as an engine to islamify a country from non-muslim to muslim. In non-muslim nations the majority of the muslim minority make a big deal about Sharia, again, separating themselves from everybody else rather than trying to fit in. That was the point I was trying to make.

I welcome you to make your own arguments on why you think Islam can be compatible with non-islamic cultures with your own examples and logic, rather than nitpick at any factual or definition errors big or small in my own reasoning/arguments. Arguing semantics is a little mundane, understanding why you'd disagree would be much more interesting. Of course if you don't disagree and simply wanted to state Islam can work under secularism, I'd say you've been intellectually dishonest as I'm clearly talking about Islam being incompatible with other cultures (so not working in multicultural states) and not about it working (to a degree) in a majority muslim secular state.

They don't have sharia law but they're a homogeneously islamic culture, it's not secular in the sense that's it's multicultural. It's an islamic culture, and rest assured, there will be private courts where sharia is practised as part of that culture, state mandated or not.

Yeah, ethics hamper the validity of the findings. There are strict guidelines too, you're right, and it's these ethics which require participant consent, if you go back before ethics were in a place a lot of high quality research was done without participant consent and the validity of the findings resultantly was high, such as the famous Milgram study. What I'm saying is that by giving the participant awareness, if they have a machiavellianist disposition, such as myself, their paranoia will be high enough to give false data, thus reducing the overall validity of the sample.

You misunderstand, my argument/belief is that monogamy/polygamy being beneficial is culture dependent, you assert that biological imperatives transcend and override cultural controls and that monogamy is definitively positive for men, whilst polygamy is definitively positive for women, whilst I disagree and think the culture overrides the biological imperative. What you're presenting is a nature vs nurture debate. You look only at the biology, I can see logic to your principles from a biological standpoint, but in my culture your principles are wrong, women desire monogamy more and men are at a disadvantage to accept it because sex is ubiquitous outside monogamy.

No I cannot speak about non-feminist women I've never met, no I have not read biology/psychology papers on monogamy. Everything I say is an opinion, not a fact. You can challenge me, but to do so you should provide reasoning and if you feel you have to, evidence. I have not provided evidence for my opinions, but I have provided reasoning based on experience and manosphere knowledge. You have given little reasoning or evidence. Complaining about western-centrism on a sub that deals with western women is idiotic, the whole premise of this sub is in a western context, that's like going to Saudi Arabia and complaining their arguments are "too islamic."

It definitely is western-centric, this is an anti-feminist sub.

Any speculation about polygamy or monogamy from an evolutionary perspective is merely just that - speculation. Culture largely dictates which one is more beneficial, if she can get more resources from monogamy she'll opt for that, if she can get more from polygamy instead then she'll opt for that. In the west men can get often get more sex from polygamy, so they opt for that. Biologically, we're all promiscuous, so monogamous and polygamous practices are largely a cultural construct defined by a females access to resources from such relationships, I've heard the theory of women fucking lots of different men so all the men would protect her children unsure of their paternity, but in the west in 2013 - none of those men would stay with her and paternity tests can be done.

A lot of what Orwell predicted has transpired in one way or another. Surveillance of the population being one of those things as camera technology has come along. PRISM sounds like one massive wiretap with some deep packet inspection thrown in for good measure.

Men are Better than Women

1 upvotes · 9 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Thanks for clarifying your points, I'll give my take.

- Horrible employees, a lot of them are - there's substance to that with their tendency to bring menstruation, mood swings and real life issues into the workplace as they are poor suppressors of emotion. Lots of ranting, whining and bitching occur in workplaces dominated by women, that's bad for business.
- Some of them can lead a company but only the ones talented enough (same applies to men) but most women don't like or enjoy the pressure of responsibility and in fact, begrudge having it. It's not uncommon for female management to moan they have all these responsibilities to anybody in ear shot and take it out on employees, male managers tend to suck it up as responsibility instead of cathartically venting. Basically, they're bad under pressure is the underlying point here, I think.
- Sure, they can take risks. I'd disagree with that assertion, but the level of risk and amount of risk they're willing to take is different versus men. Women are more protectionist than men are.
- Sure women can drive, they manage to do it just fine everyday, how well they do it is a different topic. This is the dumbest thing he said.
- Women who identify as heterosexual are more sexually fluid than men, a lot of girls have had bisexual experiences with close friends in their teenage years (make out sessions etc), men who identify as heterosexual do not have these experiences. There's actually been scientific experiments done on men and women which confirms women are subconsciously aroused by female anatomy as well as male, even if they don't realise it. If I remember correctly, they attached electrodes to heterosexual women and measured arousal in their vaginas when shown straight, gay and lesbian porn. In all 3 scenarios, their vaginas showed arousal. When heterosexual men were shown the same porn they only showed arousal in straight and lesbian porn, but not in gay. The researchers concluded women find other women sexually attractive as all women in their sample were aroused by other women, even though many of them didn't realise it consciously as they reported verbally "no arousal" to the lesbian scenes.

No, feral femininity uncontained is not the answer though, women abandon their responsibilities as caregivers and embellish in selfishness, constantly trying to trade up men, fixating superficially on their beauty and operating in mixed gender environments with a lack of logic which impedes efficiency and workplace morale. A lot of women hating working with other women, tells you enough about female nature, really.

Let women have their civil rights, sure, but make them work hard for their shit, so only the women who prove themselves get anywhere, not getting it handed to them via affirmative action aka "for having a vagina" (which is actually a privilege, almost like inheritance) but let them progress through a meritocratic model eg: "they shined in the interview", "they had good qualifications", "they had relevant experience" you know.. all the things guys need to get anywhere in life. The west needs to quell the feminist bullshit and the male shaming, because it's destructive, it's actually counter to Saudi culture to a certain level of extremity.

The stuff that you guys talk about here only makes sense in free countries that give equal rights to men and women.

Let me stop you there, a country is either pro-male or pro-female, there are no "equal" countries out there. The west is pro-female, Saudi is pro-male, feminists want every country to be pro-female because EQUALITY! If you think the west is "equal" you are either on the "better side of equality" or still very blue pill. Make no mistakes, the anglosphere is pro-female as are large parts of Europe.

Hard to say as TRP is basically a reactionary awareness to a matriarchal feminist civilization which devalues men and elevates women due to "historic oppression of women" which is not proven, just asserted.

I'd hazard a guess Latin America is the most balanced (in terms of quantity of blue pill vs red pill) but that's just a guess.

I'm working under this logic: relatively intact catholicism + absence of islam + absence of institutionalised feminism = healthy gender relations, although, Argentina may be the exception as their feminazi president has expressed her feminist views multiple times and has all the airs and graces of a western bitch, entitled, aggressive etc.

How I lost my virginity by being raped

1 upvotes · 27 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Right you are, this is English common law, rape being a Common law offence, in the U.S it's classified as a felony, however what we must remember is that the entire commonwealth as well as the USA inherited our Common Law system through colonisation and the definition only changes if specific jurisdictions have gone out of their way to amend the definition over the time.

So because I love our younger American brothers so much (no homo) I did a little wiki search:

"There is no nationally accepted definition of rape in the United States, instead each state has their own laws. These definitions can vary considerably, but most of them do not use the term rape any more, instead using, "sexual assault", "criminal sexual conduct", "sexual abuse", "sexual battery", etc."

Looks like the yanks have made rape even more legally diverse and complicated based on region state within the continental U.S, not even calling it rape in most places but classifying it as "sexual assault", even if a woman is legally capable of rape in your jurisdiction, I wouldn't expect the feminist hijacked law system to treat a male victim versus a female perpetrator as seriously as the reverse so the moral of the message still stands.

Tom Leykis - The Benefits of Marriage (A Red Pill Nuke)

1 upvotes · 27 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

She says NAWALT, he says even if you are the exception it doesn't excuse the trend.

The stretch mark thing was an idiotic argument about her saying her husband has a choice to fuck her, and by fucking her with her stretch marks he must find her attractive, eliciting some cognitive dissonance that he gave her those stretch marks in the first place, but not seeing the irony that despite this she'd be hotter without them.

Summing up, his problem with her is she said NAWALT (blue pill) to his interpretation of marriage being a raw deal for guys (red pill), as she earns 50% of the household income with her husband, he asserts that this situation is not common and thus MWALT (most women are like that, earning less and will take you to the cleaners) secondly she falsely believes her husband now has a choice to choose who he fucks and by choosing to fuck her she must be attractive even though she has stretch marks from having 3 kids (hamster here that she is sexually appealing)

Tom says only ugly girls have to work hard to get by in life and thus by earning 50% of the household income she must be ugly because hot chicks get it all given to them and they don't need to work hard, so her hamster beams on to the enterprise and goes in to warp trying to prove him wrong by saying her husband still has sex with her despite her war torn post 3 children stretch mark body.

Tom says by being locked into marriage with her, sex with her is a choice/outcome of the marriage but definitely is not a preference over fucking girls who don't have stretch marks so that she must be dumb to think that he would prefer her body to the body of a woman without said "pregnancy scars"

His problem was with her (lack of) logic, not her set-up with her man. Her logic practically didn't exist, there was a hamster there spinning a fucking wheel around that Tom is wrong about marriage because she's part of the NAWALT paradigm which then extended to protect her ego when he called her on her proposed NAWALT situation as being a result of her ugliness (that she only earns 50% in their situation because shes ugly and most guys wants to marry someone who's hot, thus MWALT.)

I hope you understand now. Tom may well hate women, I can't say as I don't know the guy personally, but his red pill logic is spot on here.

Do you have any examples of this? I provided examples to demonstrate my reasoning. In a balanced argument, the other side would too. Otherwise, this is merely an assertion. If you give examples of how women voting helps society it will give your argument some weight and give me a new respect for your point even if I continue to disagree with it. As it stands, this merely looks like an opinion without basis. Examples form the basis. Please provide examples so I can better consider your point.

I would say 'Democracy is the worst form of government except all the rest.' Tyranny of the masses yes. But if you are looking for Aristotle's philosopher king who will always make the correct decision benefiting everyone without self-interest good luck.

Agreed. It's a sad reality, but agreed.

Also saying that if I advocate universal suffrage it is like socialism is a false dichotomy.

I was making the comparison that I believe democracy to be in the same class as socialism, great on paper, but bad in practice. Great ideas, but utterly undesirable by nature of the damage their anti-pragmatism causes. I did not say your advocacy of universal suffrage was akin to socialism. You have misinterpreted, as such, you have characterised your strawman as my false dichotomy. If you re-evaluate my statement, you will notice your error.

Yes I agree. But though a different approach within the political framework rather than removing voting rights. I think our points on these issues as a community are correct and if people consider them without reacting to the messenger it will hit a chord and change people's minds. It already is.

What alternative do you have? Remember it was my contention that the voting rights should not exist to begin with, rather than that they need be removed. Of course, none of us have a time machine. I wasn't talking about changing policy, I was talking about why the policy we have doesn't work.

No I do not, but I'd say advocating for more balanced gender laws is entirely different from advocating for removal of universal suffrage.

Egalitarianism is based on the flawed premise that men and women are equal. We are not. Feminism's interpretation of equity under the law has made men second class citizens in the family court. What philosophy do you consider to be equity under the law? It seems whenever equality is legislated, all we get is more inequality. Or to re-phrase, what does your idea of "balanced gender laws" consist of?

Very well said. It certainly has bothered me when someone says, 'RedPill is completely amoral, so if you have moral objections to actions like knowingly sleeping with another guy's wife, you are bluepill' which is pretty much what I read recently; calling a guy 'bluepill' if they don't agree with you is exactly like feminists calling people 'misogynist' if they don't agree.

Yes, as a community we have to check ourselves before we wreck ourselves. Luckily the old users and the mods are pretty good at distinguishing between different moral principles and someone who is hopelessly blue pill. We may not always get it right, but we will most of the time. As much as we want to keep out blue pill idiots and shills, we must also endeavour to retain balance within our own philosophy. When some people interpret it in one way, and others in another way, it creates separatism. That's how religions get sects like catholicism, protestants, etc. We have MGTOWs, PUAs, Husbands and all kinds here under the RP banner.

We have people of different moralities here. No morality is supreme. It simply is what it is. Judging other people's morality or trying to label them as "other" for having different moral principles is unwise and not conducive. This is a big difference between the guy who doesn't understand and rejects TRP philosophy as a whole, and the guy who understands TRP but doesn't think that necessitates he has to become a psychopath to make full use of it.

We must be able to discern that difference. To distinguish a blue pill troll/idiot from a man who gets the game but has certain principles he adheres to. If this community completely agreed with itself, it would be boring and innovation would suffer. In light of that, the moral diversity is a good thing in my opinion.

A viable degree, if you're smart enough to study that and do well - good on you.

I'm hoping to crunch the numbers soon to see what I can afford to drop in investments while only setting aside what I'll need for a degree in 4-5 years.

Solid plan. You want to see the degree as an investment as well though. Not a traditional investment, but still something that makes you more money than you sink into it and thus yields a return. People need very little money for day-to-day stuff, anything else should be put to work ASAP. Doesn't sound like it applies to you, but money spent on a shitty degree is money better put to work on acquiring and letting for-profit property or invested in stocks that pay dividends. This is how empires are built, acquiring capital, minimising liabilities/debt and living on passive income, working only when you want to, doing what you want to do. Most people are wage slaves because they haven't the first idea about investing and business. Most men with enough drive and confidence can become multi-millionaires (in my humble opinion.) The richer you get, the easier it becomes, too.

Poor people (under $1m): be frugal to acquire revenue producing assets (so cars that you rent out, property, whatever, study your market,) have all savings in low risk stocks with a yearly 4% return rather than earning sweet fuck for you in your bank account. You're better off starting your own business and selling a lot of shit if you want to break the 1 million barrier. Unless you're in a high paid job, eg: doctor, it will take too long to earn enough money to invest in income producing assets if you don't start your own business.

Rich/kinda rich people (over $1m): spend like mad on assets that produce revenue as well as spending on advertising to grow your business(es), get more money, become obscenely wealthy.

These are just my opinions, I'm not a financial expert or anything, so take it all with a pinch of salt if you so desire.

Would you say to just get up and move to the east? To a more conservative country? It sounds nice on paper but will definitely create some challenges.

Pretty much. Fly abroad for business meetings on a regular if need be. You may be able to set up a local office after some time, which would give you more time with the family. Depends what you're involved in and how important you are. Or you could set up your business online or "work remotely." You can't rely on poor countries to give you income. I think both your kids are better off with you being a little more absent and living in the east than they are if you're there in the house more, but living in the west. That's how toxic the west is IMO.

Become Machiavellian: How To Apply The 48 Laws of Power

0 upvotes · 19 December 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Many repeated trials under different conditions have shown that people who aren't machiavellian don't detect machiavellians or relate to/predict the actions of people who are DT machiavellian and act in a strategic, egotistic way.

But they've also shown that machiavellians are made, unlike clinical narcissists and psychopaths. Furthermore, strangely enough, they can if given a description of a machiavellian person write up a fictional person who acts just like a machiavellian would - even if they can't predict their actions in real time.

This means that anyone that isn't pathologically machiavellian can adopt the worldview. And if they can adopt the worldview then the only rational conclusion is for them to do so, therefore automatically gaining perfect understanding of the subject.

Yes, I realise these things. Caveat: narcissism can be socialised too. That's not what I disagreed with in the previous post. I don't think you've read the whole piece, I say in the piece "Machiavellianism is a learnable vocation" and now you're here, telling me it's learnable (in different words.)

Being Machiavellian doesn't mean never indulging in your own emotions. It's somewhat pretentious to tell someone who dedicates much of their time to writing about Machiavellianism "what Machiavellianism is" as a point of disagreement. And then not elucidate anything new.

You haven't made any real resounding point. It seems like you're trying to disagree about something, but haven't found anything substantive to clutch at. I dismissed your first point. Your second set of points are presented as disagreement, but I agree with them. So what's your real motive here?

One less reason to be angry with women - "nice guy" betas are pathetic, and you wouldn't date one either, so drop the grudge and move on

0 upvotes · 3 December 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

We tolerate patheticness in women because we don't expect much of them anyway. Our only expectation is that they be pleasing to look at, aside from that, there is very little that pertains specifically to women, but applies more wholly to humans in general, eg: "doesn't act like a thunder cunt." As a species, we all expect more from men. And when men don't meet the grade, we punish them far more deeply than we do women. With women, your expectations aren't crushed so much. With men, however, you feel a deep disgust for their incapacity to be masculine. Alphas feel it towards betas, and women feel it towards betas.

If a beta is trying his best, he deserves your patience and empathy. But if he's a lost cause, fuck it, laugh at him and ignore everything he has to say, he will only drag you down with his jealousy. You have better things to do than to inanely battle his close-minded mental sickness with your precious logic, time and patience. A lot of these betas need a guy to just mentor the fuck out of them, sit with them, and give them a lot of your time. Basically a surrogate alpha dad who gives a fuck.

These kind of guys aren't gonna get that kind of service without coughing up a fuck ton of cash. People who can help these guys to that fucking extent, with that level of effort and scope of attention are not going to invest and sacrifice all that time into a stranger without a considerable monetary exchange. Alpha's cant be fucking charity cases for men who don't get it. Sure, we all empathise a bit with a guy going through shit, but you can't exploit that empathy for a personal mentor and therapist, that shit is too time expensive. And it's selfish. You can't monopolise alpha expertise without equally providing value. Like all things, shit should be quid pro quo, do not entertain parasites.

Similarities between Feminism and Religion: Feminism replaces religion as a system of faith where religious belief is absent.

0 upvotes · 15 November 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Your comments about religion will probably make a few of us over at /r/badphilosophy laugh

I'll take a poke in the dark and guess that the sub consists of a bunch of guys who fancy themselves political science/philosophy intellectuals yet for some perverse reason nitpick over the reasoning/logic in TRP rather than analyse established political ideologies and philosophical systems. Oh how the "intellectually mighty" denigrate themselves with such distasteful endeavours. Not got anything better to do? That's telling.

I would go so far to say that by characterising that particular community as "bad" as "searching for philosophy which is bad" that you are already approaching the exchange of ideas from a negative perspective by governing yourselves with an intent to seek out that which you deem disagreeable. When you look for bad, you will find bad, even if there was no bad objectively, because by merit of being human you would think/feel something is bad and thus label it bad and deduce it to be bad. The concept of good and bad at their most basic are to do with pleasure and pain. In that regard, TRP has helped more than it has hindered. No philosophy or ideology is inherently bad, a system of belief is just a system/established framework/culture. Can it be irrational? Yes. Can it be unworkable or destructive? Yes. But ideas in and of themselves are not bad, so already, I find myself raising an eyebrow at the sheer idea people felt it necessary to set-up a community which characterises specific philosophical systems as bad.

Philosophy is, when discussed objectively, an intellectual discussion formed upon reasoned opinion. You should not be "looking for bad philosophy" if you actually consider yourself serious philosophers, because "bad" is a misnomer for "philosophy we as a group disagree with." Philosophy demands critical thinking, no type of thinking is inherently bad, merely advantageous in some ways and disadvantageous in others.

I agree with the comparisons between feminism and religious fanaticism.

If you are to frame the discussion in that regard, then contemporary feminism is by very definition, fanatical in its current state, akin to Islamism in its fervency and politicisation. I would characterise it in such a manner once it went beyond Egalitarianism from the feminine perspective. However, one could reasonably argue that in comparison to Social Darwinism, egalitarianism is fanatical in its extremist implementation of liberal idealism, likewise you could argue the opposite, too. I suspect the average western man unknowingly indoctrinated by feminist dogma to see egalitarianism as "normal" or "something to strive for" rather than what it is by merit of its very nature - an unworkable socially engineered experiment which memetically inculcates itself as an "ideal to strive for" would find TRP "bad philosophy." But then I could hardly attribute much merit to a man who calls himself a philosopher, yet is blind to the ills caused by feminist ideology given its dictatorial hegemony in the current time. I suspect a lack of analytical ability, or perhaps some self-denial is at fault for this monumental oversight.

If it cared about gender equality it would be right on tacking this kind of hateful shit instead of FINDING THINGS to be offended by. Why do they have to go over the top finding things to be offended about? Because the ideology is fucking irrelevant now. There is no institutionalism misogyny and there is no rape culture. It's 2014, not 1914, the ideology just makes shit up to remain relevant now and the low IQ imbeciles and poor fuckers indoctrinated in colleges eat it all up.

I like the way I write, so I write like that. Its what comes naturally to me. Of course I can write simpler and I have, but it doesn't bring me as much personal satisfaction as writing for myself. In fact, I wouldn't even say this new piece is my wordiest piece, funny how it got the most attention in this one particular aspect, though. I am quite wordy and verbose in real life around people I have deep discussion with. When I finally get around to starting up a podcast, you will hear that (among cussing) so really, minus conversational fillers and swearing, that writing is true to my character; rather than what you claim, an attempt to convince people on the internet I'm smart. I couldn't give a shit whether you think I'm dumb or smart, people told me I was smart all my life, kind of beyond being attacked over my smarts. In fact if I wanted to impress I'd go all Hemingway and put witty jabs/punchlines in all over the place, people like that shit. That's what I did here:

<http://illimitablemen.com/2014/09/16/the-art-of-fishing/>

Anyhow, yes, I am long-winded and yes I like big words. But they are not obscure words like sesquipedalian, they are just uncommon because most have a low vocabulary. For example, the word surreptitious describes something very particular (keeping a secret specifically as people would not approve) that other words cannot with the same level of accuracy. Whereas a word like sesquipedalian is just a fancy word for long-winded, it adds no nuance to definition, it is not specific, it is a redundant word. That's the difference between conciseness in definition and linguistic pretension, imo. Not the prevalence of large words.

I wouldn't say your criticism was too constructive, you didn't help me change anything or point out any huge flaws, but at least you were respectful. So likewise, I reply in respect.

i credit any self-awareness i may possess to my husband

I've always said decent women are forged by the hands of men, be it a father or father replacement (strong, alpha boyfriend if you're lucky enough to get one to stick around.) Women seem to, naturally, in the company of other women and the absence of men, struggle to see past the flaws and bullshit that comes naturally to them. Too much estrogen, too much drama, not enough patience.

now, i'm not going to blow smoke and claim to be subservient

Subservient can be nice, and weaker men certainly gravitate towards women who are even weaker than them so that they feel comparatively manly. Not only that, but really feminine women are just attractive to men collectively, period. Personally I don't mind a woman who isn't subservient, just because I'm used to disrespecting women (because they don't behave in ways which are worthy of my respect) doesn't mean I don't respect or don't want to respect women who behave in ways which are admirable or conducive. I like a woman who puts up a fight and has her own mind, but not if the only way she can present that is being a bitchy, snide, cunt. If she can do that reasonably and personably, she's a winner. Like most men, I have little tolerance for the unreasonable and wouldn't want to live with or commit to someone so neurotic.

I suppose in a way I kind of go pavlovs dog on women without even consciously thinking about it. So if a woman acts feminine around me, makes me a coffee, is personable, uses logic etc I'll validate her, respond, be in the moment etc. If a woman crosses a line, is bitchy, attempts to humiliate or undermine or shit tests me too much, I become aloof, I laugh (at, not with her) or whatever and basically I withdraw the attention/praise/feel good emotions I provide because she isn't deserving of them. In that way women I interact with learn to treat me with respect rather than some schmuck they can run rings around and add to their collection of fawning blue balls, which seems to be the M.O most women run with by default nowadays. If, for whatever reason, the chick is too fucked up despite my "training her how to treat me" eg: to be cordial, personable, feminine and pleasant - I write her off entirely, avoid her, am terse, give her the "I'm in a police interrogation room and will say the minimal possible to answer questions" treatment.

I don't give the silent treatment because it's too obvious, but if we share a place of work or something and thus I can't just next her out of my life, that's what I do. Minimal interaction. I'm happy with that, I don't want to put up with some random bitches baggage and bitchiness who the fuck does she think she is trying to put that shit on me? I'm not her daddy, I'm not fucking her and I'm not her therapist. I don't give a fuck, I don't know her, she shouldn't put on me like that. And yet soooo many women are so quick to do that. To just abuse you emotionally with their problems. To try and just coerce you for sympathy and validation. It's so unattractive. I don't go around doing it to people, I don't expect it done to me. Obviously that's what intimate relationships are for (not emotional abuse, but sharing your problems) however when you barely know a bitch and she starts targeting all her latent issues at you, no, nope and fuck no - I'm noping the fuck outta that shit.

Now, I have exactly one male friend – my husband

He's your friend because he made you a better woman and you realise that and appreciate it rather than taking it for granted like most women do (if they're lucky enough to get it.) Most women have no love for men, see anything altruistic as weakness and abuse their kindness with no gratitude or appreciation. A capacity to show respect and appreciation is important in a woman, especially in this selfie generation of self-important egotistical and entitled whores.

I'd love to see an article on how to identify people that have this disposition

I'll see what I can do, if I can come up with something good enough, I'll pen a piece on it at some point. Depending on the persons character it's either immediately observable, or if they have adopted a sophisticated facade it may take repeated exposure, slip ups and oddities to occur for you to notice that something is up. Some are charismatic, some aren't. Some are great actors/performers, others aren't. We lump them all together as one group because they share a bunch of characteristics with each other, but they are still individuals and how their personality is can really affect how obvious the manifestation of their psychopathy is. Women tend to conceal their psychopathy better as they are less suspect to society anyway, but I have met a female psychopath who did not even conceal the fact she was incredibly psychopathic.

My assertion to be clear is despite how much of a superior candidate Thatcher is to H.Clinton, Thatcher is still considered to have fucked up a nation. Now if you derive any implication from that it should be this: if Thatcher is considered a fuck up, Clinton will be far worse. Ideology wasn't mentioned at all. You don't need to be a socialist to fuck up a country, there are many ways to fuck up a country. Too much of any one ideology, generally speaking, is not in the interest of the people. I 100% agree with you. Jumping off this:

empathy is a feeling, and we cannot stop this feeling. We can only manage it to one degree or another.

Stoicism is not psychopathy, merely the alternative for people who feel that want to feel less and have more control over their feelings. Stoicism IMO, is something every man needs, it makes him less manipulatable and more in control of himself.

Psychopathy by and large is not an attainable DT trait for the majority of the population. Narcissism and machiavellianism are completely attainable. Depending on your life situation and natural disposition, you may find one or the other easier to acquire, but both are socially obtainable.

Keep your guard up. "Revenge porn" will become the new false-rape.

Your answer doesn't include actual steps for spotting them, but it only includes conceptual definitions. Not what I had in mind although it is certainly within such a person's grasp, the "DT unicorn" is someone who seems well adjusted and blends in very well with the status quo despite the way they are wired under the bonnet.

To put it more simply, they're REALLY GOOD actors who have incredible mental endurance for maintaining a facade, they're good at playing the part of someone who isn't them without revealing their DT traits to a point that it becomes obvious that they're DT. They're usually really likeable people, not like most DTs who draw people to them who like the obnoxiousness of vanity and "the DGAF attitude" but repel those who disapprove of such superficial/cold attitudes.

Almost everyone is vain occasionally as well as unapologetic now and again, in great moderation no suspicion is aroused from an off the cuff comment or action as it can be blamed on tiredness or something else asinine, and so these "unicorn DTs" or whatever you want to call them are careful to moderate how much of the "real them" is seen, they tend to keep people at a "friendly but chatty neighbour" kind of distance, they have ridiculously great endurance at maintaining a false image to the world, they realise nobody would accept "the real them" but they are not ashamed of "the real them" so instead they show the world a "ideal version of them", the mask of domestication.

A good example is Gus Fring from Breaking Bad, he seems like an upstanding, moral, well-educated and polite businessman, people like him, but behind that is hidden a second personality, one that is violent and completely and utterly dark triad. Depends how knowledgeable you are on metapsychology. It also depends on that person's personality independent of their DT traits and whether or not they possess charm. If you want to go all apex fallacy about it, yes there is probably a dark triad unicorn out there who seems totally normal and has strong control over their outward appearance who schemes very passively and with much self-discipline, calibration, patience and self-control but that is essentially a minority within a minority, there are almost always tell-tale signs regardless of if they are "functional" which means they're making boatloads of money in a society that is already encouraging sociopathy or "dysfunctional" meaning they're criminals sitting in jail.

I personally view BPD's as low-functioning DT women

That is a very interesting perspective, sort of like a beta DT woman, whilst a non-BPD is an "alpha" dt woman. Thing I noticed about BPDs is they tend to give up the pussy easier than non-BPD DT women.

the only reason to go near them is if you're an extremely successful and very powerful man with massive DT traits who wants a LTR with someone who really can be a first-mate

I made her want to fuck and then rejected her, probably the worst thing I could have done.... and yet here I am. Ha. Lucky escape? Perhaps. It was a fuck ton of fun though, in a way I'll miss her. Not in a sentimental way but I loved how intense it was, most women are fucking boring, she was incredibly entertaining.

This subreddit is way smarter and way less toxic than I was led to believe.

Just read that article and you're fucking spot-on, that's really accurate. You shouldn't assume that they all have the victim complex, though - there are a small number who are high-functioning and rise above that and then you're dealing with Lilith herself.

Article's based on a real life case example of a high-functioning highly successful DT girl I know that married into high society and used to date a drug dealer that beat her until she miscarried his kid (yes I know some fucked up people.) Best of all looks wise I'd say she's an 8 with makeup, 7 without, so not exactly supermodel looks. Cracking sense of humour. And no she doesn't believe she's a victim she thinks she runs shit and she is highly intelligent machiavellian-wise as well as academically, but it is never beyond her to pull out the victim card from her purse to summon white knights and other such idiots to give her in-group preference. Hilarious, really. Addendum: also very openly aggressive, tried gaslighting me once when she got drunk (before coming out), came out, wore some slutty dress and there was picture evidence of our night out, did the whole history rewriting bullshit because she didn't want her beta seeing her in her slut suit with me.

Funnily enough the other two dark triad chicks I've known that stuck out in my mind were also both extremely academically clever. One had BPD, the other didn't. There is a distinction between BPD and DT, a DT isn't necessarily BPD, but a BPD is always DT.

I have great interest in innovating the field rather than "grinding it for pay cheques" and I think your observation of this inclination within the populace is quite profound. You sell yourself short by saying "I'm just a kid" as most kids (or even adults for that matter) are certainly not capable of producing the insight needed to make such a profound observation. I greatly admire your observation as despite the commonality of its assertion, it is something which often goes unnoticed and non-verbalised.

You're in luck sweetie, I've got some left over prozac from my miscarriage last year.

Btw, I use brutal shit like the miscarriage joke as a screener, if she doesn't get it, she's dumb. Good for a fuck, not relationship material. If she does get it but gets offended, she needs pandering to and you need to mock her indignation, if you can be assed to do that, fine, but if you cant be assed with it then you say NEEEEEXXXXT.

Semi-nuclear shit tests are shit tests which she does with actions, rather than words. Say you're out with your girlfriend and shes flirting with another guy, that's a shit test and it's disrespectful, she wants to see what you're going to do, how reactive you are, if you go over there all angry talking shit to the guy, she's won, if she was feeling insecure she now knows that you're into her and she's successfully made you jealous, by making you jealous she has control over you.

In a situation like that you need to keep your cool, personally I'd ignore the shit out of her and go flirt with other chicks. The person who demonstrates they give the least fucks has all the power.

Nuclear shit tests are things like "i'm pregnant" when she isn't. That's when shit tests start moving into "gaslighting" territory.

Yes an ethnic division is not a race. Ethnic divisions are based on culture/colour/religion/geographical location/tribes.

Race is based upon genetic lineage.

Caucasian races (Aryans, Hamites, Semites)

Mongolian races (northern Mongolian, Chinese and Indo-Chinese, Japanese and Korean, Tibetan, Malayan, Polynesian, Maori, Micronesian, Eskimo, American Indian)

Negroid races (African, Hottentots, Melanesians/Papua, "Negrito", Australian Aborigine, Dravidians, Sinhalese)

I concur about Margaret Thatcher.

The women listed here were very intelligent although I don't recognise that Japanese name, definitely not representative of typical women but on the fringe edges, further right on the bell curve for intelligence, which is exceedingly rare in women.

Maggie thatcher for example was an ENTJ which is why she was such a good leader. Most women DO NOT score T on the Myer Briggs, they tend to get F. A woman who scores T rather than F on the myer briggs is not only much rarer but tends to excel far more in demonstrating exceptionality.

Basically, most women are ruled by emotions, those who are more dominated by rational thought rather than their feelings tend to be far more likeable and achieve success based upon merit rather than politics (if you pardon the pun with maggie, heh)

Just because you have a capability to do something doesn't mean you are not averse to do it.

I have the capability to kill myself for example, I am averse to doing that so don't do it.

Capability and behavioural attributes are often not one and the same. You could have the capability to be a top student and get a great job, but instead you laze around, wasted potential.

Women, capable or not, are generally averse to taking the blame for anything. Blame the nearest man is their mantra.

Cheating or game?

One is putting you back in the friendzone, the other, the slutzone.

Nobody who has truly swallowed the pill allows themselves to be put back in the friendzone, and I expect a red pill woman would not allow herself to be put back in the slut zone (anecdotal evidence backs that one up) however that aside, sure, you're right.

But if the girl feels like she has the reins on the relationship, you're right, she won't want to downgrade.

Or if she has options eg: she's hot.

Cheating or game?

0 upvotes · 2 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Does TRP consider cheating with long term gf game or just being a piece of shit?

Looks like you let someone only worthy of plate status attain gf status. Don't try to downgrade her back to a plate because women do not go backwards in desired commitment like men will not go backwards in level of sexual access, if you want to keep fucking her you'll have to let her think she's your GF when she's not. It's pretty immoral but if you want to fuck a girl and she'll only fuck you on the pretense you commit then you can feign commitment and simply label a FWB a GF and then be aloof/busy throwing her bones to keep her in orbit, not endorsing that option but sharing the knowledge with you, what you do with it is your call.

In my personal opinion if you upgrade a plate to GF status she better be worth it, spinning plates is easier for a young guy than having a GF. Girlfriends are demanding and generally take more from you than they give. They're time parasites, they suck up all your time on pointless shit and add stress, demand and expectation to your life. When you're young and trying to make it in life you don't need all that crap. 20's for a man is building his SMV/Power so when he's in his 30's he has options to transition into a "settling down" lifestyle with a nice young early 20s girl.

If not, is it ever acceptable?

I recommend spinning plates over being in an LTR and cheating on a girl as you get a lot more poon and it's a lot less messy (for you and for them) ..telling all these different girls they're your girlfriend when they're not leads to false expectations and the fallout could be messy and fuck with your reputation in all kinds of unsuspecting ways (positive: he's a player, negative: you get a shit ton of haters, can you handle all that heat?)

Cheating isn't game, cheating is cheating. Game is building attraction. Spinning plates is maintaining multiple attraction with multiple women and fucking them all on your own terms. Read the sidebar. Have fun.

Just as any ethnicity could have been the colonialists,

All the major ethnicities have had empire, even the Indians who were under the control of the British via the British Raj for hundreds of years and would be seen in modern times as "victims of colonialism" enslaved their own people and built empire - http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Vijayanagara_Empire

The difference between the white ethnic empires and the others is the whites had the technology (81% of modern inventions and discoveries) to project power globally... most if not all of the tech the third world uses was sold to it, not created by it, without globalisation it would still be British steam powered battleships versus spears or whatever level of tech that specific civilization was at as those lands had invented none of the stuff that they can contemporarily take for granted today in 2014. The computers, the cars, infrastructure like rail systems, all of it's been sold to them by the west (and now allows them to compete on a level playing field) hence why the world owes these empires a hell of a lot. Including the language you use right now.

any ethnicity could have inventes all the things you claim white people did

Now you get into hypotheticals, we deal with reality here not "could or possibly" the reality is every major ethnicity has had an empire of some kind and enslaved their own race and/or other races, but whites were the most successful at it due to their technological supremacy. The other reality is that the other races did not have this technological supremacy and didn't invent any of this stuff, all these discoveries and contributions were discovered by people in western civilization of mostly white ethnicity, to reject this simple fact under the hypothetical premise "anyone could have done it" is ignorant.

If anybody could have done it, why didn't they? You make it sound like non-white empires deliberately chose not to make themselves more powerful and it wasn't a question of inability. The modern world owes a hell of a lot to the Victorians, the height of British Empire. The British were the first to industrialise, next time you find yourself wondering why such a tiny Island projects so much power versus a huge country like India or China who are only just catching up it helps to know your history.

This is most likely the only interaction I'll have with you.

Aaaaaaaaand now you're into the realm of just doing the same stupid things as modern feminism does. Painting the outliers that really should tick people off as the common factor, like here -

No, I'm telling you that the outliers are the exception not the rule. I understand what you mean when you say "doing the same stupid things as modern feminism does" but posit that what modern feminism does in its generalisation is pure fantasy, the assertion:

They are totally flawed by nature of their inability (or reluctance) to conceptualise the fairness of reason as an abstraction.

Is not limited to outliers, that's my contention. We have different beliefs. You have not disproved mine, merely, tried to associate it with a feminist manipulative tactic. OK.

The Red Pill truth is - do you know why guys have realize all this is bullshit? Because women wouldn't have sex with guys who were believed in it. Like it or not, while women are responsible for feeding us the crap, they're also responsible for causing men to realize that it's the crap that it is because they wouldn't sleep with men who bought into it.

Disagree strongly, although you have a small element of truth in what you're saying. This might be why guys are rediscovering "wisdom on women" (because it has been suppressed by feminism and social engineering, the people you're thanking for it's rediscovery by the way - stockholm syndrome anybody?) however, this knowledge and variants of it were known and held by men pre-feminism as a matter of simple truth and still is today in many countries where feminism is weak in influence.

Pre-feminism when people didn't listen to logic or reason (including women and children) they were disciplined with light force. Feminism changed the social landscape in ways the majority of you do not even fathom right down to your very concept of masculinity and what it is (as feminism has directly challenged and vilified the concept in and of itself by drawing negative connotations to it - an overt show of contempt) as well as coming up with BS campaigns like "the war on women."

Women are women, covertly thanking women (by saying they're responsible) for forcing men to understand their nature because they don't even realise it themselves (as I say in the article, they lack the self-awareness and logic) is nothing but idiotic pandering to feminine sensibilities.

Your thinking is not in line with red pill philosophy at all, not for your disagreements on my article contention but because of your last paragraph on "what the red pill truth is" it's wrong. I understand your reasoning but it is faulty (circular) - women cause problem - men find solution - thank women for causing problem so we can devise solutions. Oh boy.

Article describes the differences between men and women's brains

0 upvotes · 29 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

If women's brains are so superior like the article subtly implies by saying women reason better despite having 6.5x less grey matter due to a "more complex" frontal cortex then where is the evidence of their greatness? Oh wait...

That's right. In fact if a woman's brain truly is superior, it's even more reason to be disappointed in their lack of achievement and ingrained dependency on men. Women are good organisers and remember superfluous detail due to a good LTM and lots of white matter, otherwise there's nothing too noteworthy to really say.

You can tell despite trying to appear scientific this whole thing is politically charged. They're quick to draw conclusions between brain function and a positive conclusion on the woman's side whilst simultaneously quick to draw conclusions between brain function a negative conclusion on the man's side. Like men protecting people is apparently "having a short fuse" c'mon, get fucking real. Such is life. Men are evil and inferior blah blah, OK.

The health field? As what? A mental health nurse? Psychiatrist? If you're in the latter they should be training you to deal with dark triad types so you can evaluate them and diagnose certain mental disorders in patients.

Nurses need to seem like they care, they need to be sympathetic people. If they're not, it hampers the patients care. Their role is to nurture and comfort. I believe bedside manner is the term. They should be warm people.

Psychiatrists need not be warm they have to remain detached as not to hamper the objectivity of their analysis by not investing emotionally. So I'd have to say it depends on your specific job role.

You're under the assumption that everyone can handle the responsibilities that freedom brings. Not everybody is cut out for leadership and neither should they be, we cannot be a race of leaders. Where there is yin, there is yang. Where there is a leader, there must be a follower. There is no mid-point or pseudo equality, you cannot both be leaders or both be followers. Hierarchy is inherent to our species psyche, egalitarianism but an ideological idealism based in fantasy.

I directly observe women blameshift their inadequacies to the nearest subordinate or colleague on a regular basis. In fact, I expect it. It's never their fault, it's always anothers. Women are not nearly held accountable enough as men are in modern western society, yet they are protected by more laws, are given more opportunity and have the backing of the legal system when it comes to marriage, family affairs and divorce.

They have a position of superiority, they are the most privileged class, especially white women, they have hegemonic superiority in family life and outnumber men in higher education and yet despite all their privilege, they're unhappier than they were without all of that.

You've got to question why the most privileged group of people are reporting such high unhappiness, it is not rational.

I'd posit that traditional gender roles were like that for a reason, it was simply what made each party happiest. Women don't always want the burden of responsibility, they want a man that can take charge, they want a respectable man, they want one with gumption, not some modern american mangina who replies "whatever you want sweetie" whenever she asks him to make a decision.

There is such a thing as too much freedom and it's called ANARCHY, this unhealthy unsustainable non-cohesive social paradigm we exist in is psychological anarchy and the depression statistics mere highlight this reality.

Understanding Social Market Value

Dude, if you want literate people to listen, it has to be on that level.

You picked out two minor transgressions, one a typo, and another a bad usage of grammar and declared the whole article was thus inane. That's pretty shallow. If you'd read the entirety of the article or read any of my posts, you'd deduce I am incredibly literate. I am however, fucking terrible at proofreading. I think faster than I can touch type and the prevalence of errors is particularly heightened when I'm writing 2,000 word articles. Wordpress/Microsoft word fail to pick up on a lot of grammatical/syntactical errors and typos. It's even worse with Wordpress as I type with British English spelling and it feels the need to correct everything to American English.

Definitely a grammar/spelling Nazi.

I concur. You are committing the logical fallacy of false association - associating grammar/syntax with intelligence as synonymous entities. Language ability is indicative of proficiency to communicate, not of wisdom/logical reasoning.

Really you were bothered by the superficiality of minor transgressions and it was that which closed your mind off to the wisdom that laid within. Some very prolific people have had terrible spelling and grammar, that does not make one illiterate. I don't think this is really even pedanticism per se, just a characteristic nuance of your perception on intelligence. That literacy = intelligence. Speaking as someone who is considered intelligent by many (I won't be vain enough to declare myself as such, just qualifying the next statement here) that is an incredibly unenlightened and bigoted view. However it is also quite common among those who are well-educated, but not particularly wise in the ways of life, as to say, you're book smart, but not street smart so your perception of what constitutes intelligence is not a full picture.

Strangely, one girl I date, who is from Mexico but has really good English, is always thankful for these corrections.

Yes, foreigners are. You're helping them learn a second language. If English wasn't my mother tongue I'd appreciate it too, in fact if I was being corrected in a language that I wasn't proficient in, I'd probably appreciate the pointer, although I'd appreciate being corrected in a way that isn't "holier than thou" or condescending in manner, however to be a grammar hitler to the point of picking out two small things in a rather large article and then declare the author of the article and the article itself to be lacking in value, that's very small-minded and that's not a good thing, you could have benefitted vastly from the contents of the article, but due to minor superficialities would have restricted yourself from ascertaining potentially beneficial knowledge.

I'd work on that, that kind of elitism will only hold you back.

No hard feelings or insult intended, kind regards.

Feminism Helps Ethnically Displace Caucasians

0 upvotes · 9 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

So basically it should read "white caucasian" rather than "caucasian" for pedants sake, because, obviously, turks for instance who are also technically caucasian contemporarily label themselves as such? Of course they don't. They'd more likely identify as "European - Other" or "Arab" This is all just technicality and perception now by the way, pure pedanticism. Read any census. It will say Caucasian - White, Caucasian - Irish, Caucasian - French etc etc etc. It would not say "Caucasian - Indian" it would say "Asian - Indian" or just "Indian" depending on the specific country/census. To ignore the contemporary usage of ethnic classification is somewhat ignorant.

You are technically correct but really I think the pedantism is a little obnoxious more than anything, how many visible minorities identify as caucasians? Not many I'd be willing to bet, it's used to identify those with white skin in the contemporary.

Why is red pill thinking so 'controversial' outside of this sub?

0 upvotes · 8 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

What you're exploring is the sociological concept of "dual identity" which is an effect of multiculturalism within the individual, not multiculturalism itself. As one is required to assimilate into two different cultures, their parents native culture and the culture of their host country, there's nothing spectacularly wrong with this. Being bilingual is great, and sharing two cultures personally is generally a positive thing, except for when it confuses the individual as each culture runs counter to each other on their viewpoint on a specific issue eg: sex. That can create distress/cognitive dissonance.

Multiculturalism is the macro approach, when swathes and swathes of immigrants build their own communities within a homogeneous society, don't integrate and incubate into their own formations, rather bigotedly disregarding the land they actually live in. This is what creates segregation within a population, dual identity runs counter to that as by nature of dual identity you are actually integrating with the host population to a degree, understanding their ways and speaking their language.

I don't know why multiculturalism = bluepill idealism has activated such a trigger response in you, obviously part of the pill you've been unable to follow thus far.

I'm a white English person, my country is full of people from other lands who speak other languages who give very little shits about the indigineous English, sometimes even openly insulting our culture/land/people/ancestors whilst they breathe our air and attempt to hold an air of superiority to themselves, even though, you know, their country/culture wasn't superior enough to facilitate them so they had to come to our land for opportunity and rather arrogantly, have the audacity to show little appreciation for their privilege.

You can see it in London the worst, in the ghettos and the slums, the segregation, the poverty, the animosity... its an ugly ideology with ugly pragmatic results. One word can quantify all this shit: Islam. TOTALLY incompatible with other cultures, any secular nation with a reasonable muslim population (turkey/uzbekistan) has the islamists trying to take shit over and islamify the culture. Muslims, by and large, are a bunch of bigots as they have the propensity to view their culture/belief system as hegemonic and superior to all others. Now saying that, I've known some great muslim people, however the exceptions prove the rule and as individuals there are some great people in that group, however collectively, the political ideological component of the religion is ugly and totalitarian.

Lol yeah there's a black kid at uni who constantly uses anything negative said about him as being "because he's black" but then tries to blag the positive perceptions associated with being black eg "being gangster" and "having swagger" to impress girls. The fucking machiavellian spin is obnoxious to be observant of.

He's so insecure of being a black in a majority white country (from what I can observe, he wasn't born here) he feels like that he has to try so hard and so thus just ends up seeming like a cunt.

Entitlement? You made a damn thread and cant even provide any examples of what you're whining about. Just angry somebody downvoted you.

Reductio ad absurdum - reduction to absurdity - I have no valid point I'm just butthurt about internet karma, this is deduced from 2 examples I gave and isn't the crux of the post, you then exemplify the fact there is a lack of examples and demand more when you yourself are actively right now in the place where those examples can be found thus one can deduce you're too lazy/blind to see what I'm talking about for yourself. You attack my point but instead of providing a counter argument to prove me wrong or provide your own examples, demand more examples which you can easily find yourself.

Your logic sir, it is terrible. I hope you're not a male with such poor logic, at least as a woman there would be a bit more sympathy for you.

I've read some of your posts and they're good. I read some of your blog posts that you posted too. Solid stuff. That still doesn't make you some authority figure. You're just another dude with an opinion. A dude who fancies himself a borderline dark triad or whatever the fuck. You aren't special and you don't get to speak on behalf of the whole sub.

I'm glad you enjoy my content, and find it amusing you retain knowledge in your memory about previous statements I've made about myself but I give no fucks about your opinion of me, to deny my understanding of the red pill however is just ignorant, so whatever, be ignorant.

A gay man's take on the friend zone

I don't have the time or energy to justify my viewpoint and meaning to be specific enough to a point where you'll accept or at least acknowledge what I'm getting at - the connection between female entitlement and third wave feminism, neither is my desire to assert this point too great. I never said men couldn't be non-reciprocal, that'd be a stupid assertion, but equally stupid is to ignore the relationship between feminism and female entitlement.

That ideology has practically socially engineered women to reject their role in society as nurturer/caregiver which they've had for thousands of years, along with this a change in attitudes, abilities and expectations has occurred. Most women are followers, fashion, trends, whatever, isn't too hard to socialise them into a certain form of behaviour. Men emasculated of masculinity are the same, as we see with the hordes of betas walking around taking on feminine attitudes. Instead we have this weird mesh, some women are extremely masculine and possess leadership skills, some men are extremely feminine and lack any gumption, it's pretty fucked up. (Thanks social engineering!)

You seemed to have missed what I'm getting at and although trying to explain something to someone and seemingly not have them understand is typically frustrating, I can detach myself from caring all too much, after all this is just an internet discussion that has no bearing on anything if nothing new is learned and internalised.

You make some valid points, but you don't like to point fingers/blame attribute (read: blame feminism) and I think you missed what I'm getting at. Nevermind. I don't have the patience at this moment in time to go through it all so if ever there was some semblance of a debate, I throw the victory to you. Good day to you and take care.

Othertimes you be like "damn the world fucked up" "bitches are fucked up" "shit fucked up" and shit gets a little fucking maudlin. Knowing the true nature of women doesn't solve everything, you still gotta build yourself, lifes still tough - just you're under no delusions about women so you won't lose anything you do build to those resource hungry manipulative motherfuckers!

Man, when you take the pill stand up comedy and the whole method of communication and culture around it should be included with it, you know, like some of that kiddy cough medicine gets some tasty fucking sugary shit added to it so that the kid will drink the medicine. The RP additive of comedy should not be to weaken the medicine or get people to take it, but so that on those shitty tough days and in those moments of weakness or negativity, you've got a reason to be happy despite knowing the truth - the shitty nature of women and how easily they will fuck you.

You can laugh at any tragedy, laughter, satire, sarcasm... the components of comedy - they're incredible gifts.

Feminism is about Population Control

First of all, tons of Jews moved to Israel because of the Holocaust. It wasn't an evil plot.

Yes they wanted a land to call their own before the holocaust but the holocaust propelled that effort forward. I never said I agreed with the conspiracy, I said I had read about it and then described it.

If you spend so much time reading conspiracy theories on the internet, why not read some actual historical fact?

I read one page one time and it stuck in my head.

Here's a far more likely conspiracy theory: corporations love feminism because it doubles the work supply. It also increases the nation's consumption, as women buy more worthless crap than men. Also, women are more-easily trained to obey authority and conform to social norms.

I have no doubt this is true.

There was no need for the kneejerk reaction to jump to the aid of the Jewish reputation however. This is something I find quite hilarious, if you say something bad about any group, even if you highlight you heard something bad but necessarily don't believe it, people condemn you as even saying the words is crime enough whether you harbour the belief or not. However I've literally written that the caucasian ethnicity is being wiped out slowly via ethnic displacement and low birth rate (under UN definitions that's genocide) and you have no reaction or even mere acknowledgement of that meat from my post.

Social programming, hilarious.

I enjoy a good headfuck. OK. Better engage in my civic duty and give you some responses to share with your girlfriends in TBP.

Two things: So you admit that there's like no logical consistency in your article? Okay then.

Like yeah I like totally do even though I like, never like, said that.

You also say it's based on 'observation'. I don't want to think about the kind of extensive field notes you do on your mom, but you constantly refer to 'feminism' while simultaneously pretty much prove that you have no idea what feminism is and get all your information from....

It's OK girl you don't need a pretence to come over to mine. OK wait, I guess you do or you'll feel slutty. Yes, come and read my fieldnotes, I'm sure that's really what's going to be on your mind when you're in my presence.

You took one undergrad Sociology course and that's where you got all this bizarre counterhistorical information about the big bad anti-you conspiracy called feminism? No. You are just another part of this echo chamber where everything is the wimmins' fault and no one actually understands wtf they are talking about.

I admire your passion, despite being wrong. Perhaps you could better direct this passion into the bedroom? I mean I know you like to think we're on the same level, or that you're better, but let's not fool ourselves, you won't settle for second best will you? Awww... so, so cute.

This makes no sense. This has nothing to do with the stated goals of any prominent feminist writer or group. Where do you get this shit? Why do you feel the need to vilify feminists? As I said to one of your even-dumber defenders.

Well if it wasn't overtly stated and written down then it must not exist! You're right. If it's not in a study or identified, then there's nothing to identify. I love your logic, that circular reasoning, it's making me hard.. the way your intellectualism taps into the grey matter there just makes me tingle. PM me your phone number, I know a guy who loves crazy bitches.

Yeah, I read it again. You have mommy issues and you think the feminists are out to steal your penis or something. I dunno man.

Hahahaha, chicks always say this shit. I trust my mother far more than any other woman in the world. Don't be jealous you can't get the commitment and love from a man that a mother can get from her son, I believe that's an electra complex you're suffering from.

No, I mean that when you attack feminism for not letting you have what you want you are doing exactly that. There's no strawman. I just summarized your creepy sexist lonely ideas.

What do I want? That's not a subject the article covers, but now we've had this lovely conversation I'm beginning to enjoy fucking with you. Maybe I want you? I don't know. Prove yourself to me.

I'm not into dudes. Especially dudes who spend all day posting about how hard it is to be a dude and have serious childhood issues that are affecting their opinion of half the human race.

How Liberal/Feminist University Admissions Policies increase White Male Privilege

0 upvotes · 3 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

You realise you just said whites are more common in uni through affirmative action because they're the majority of the population right?

If you had say 10,000 black people in USA and 100,000 white people fighting for 20,000 universities places in USA... and all the black people got in because there's less of them, that's not social equality, it may look nice in full numbers (10k each getting in), but as a percentage that would mean 100% of blacks go to uni when only 10% of the eligible white population got in, which would mean blacks would have an automatic privilege to university entry whereas whites wouldn't.

You measure equality via demographic percentages, obviously, if one race is the largest demographic they will dominate everything because there's more of them living and breathing, that's just fucking common sense!

If you're trying to say they help out low income people, and whites are the most common, so more of them get in on low income, then what is wrong with that? Race isn't the only measure of inequality, poverty and social class are too. Social mobility isn't about race, it's about smart people in poverty becoming something better when given the opportunity. Better that than claim welfare forever or work for minimum wage.

This is why I disapprove of the rampant single motherhood, women getting knocked up on one night stands and then dragging a kid up with welfare money. Even worser for boys, it contributes to the current epidemic which is a crisis in masculinity. Your chances at attending university, your chance of being in prison, your chances of suffering from mental health disorders.. they all take a nosedive towards the negative if you were brought up single handedly by a woman with no fatherly contact, whether you're either male or female. Poor single sluts should not be "mothering" life courtesy of daddy government. It's a terrible lifestyle choice which not only fucks up many, many kids, but harms society when it becomes common practice. Broken homes.

Feminism is fucking embarrassing itself. It calls itself gender equality and then openly attacks anything pro-male under the guise that being pro-male is synonymous with being anti-female. They can't just leave men the fuck alone, they're actually fucked up illogical bullies. Imagine at school as a kid, some kid would come up to you and say "oh you're mean why are you hurting me" when you haven't done anything and then starts hitting himself (think of Fight Club, if you've seen it) and then starts lying that you threatened him when you didn't, everyone takes his side because they see his "wounds" and you get in trouble. That's using the power of the victim to bully an innocent, this is feminism, victimising men by saying men victimize women and then fucking men over with the backlash, be it in the form of social attitudes, media portrayal or government legislation - men are the ones who do sweet shit all and get fucking told over and over again that they're evil misogynistic neanderthal rapists. What are they (feminazis) trying to do, project a fucking self-fulfilling prophecy on to the male gender so they can enslave everyone with a dick?

You know what, if men were really so fucking evil they wouldn't stand there and take your shit, or pay child support, or marry any woman or feminist that bitched about this non-existent bullshit - they'd kill you on the spot for speaking out of turn, luckily, men are human, they're the real victims, some men are really hurting out there, but a lot are taking it on the fucking chin, realising nobody has their back and becoming all the stronger for it. Respect to all men everywhere out there, because being a man is fucking hard in 2013. Mainstream society perceives you as negative because you're not part of the female "minority", you may not have a dad because family unit is destroyed by feminism, you have no pussy pass to get free shit, you have to do everything your damn fucking self and that makes anything you do achieve that much more worthwhile, you're not divorce raping for money, battering your eyelids for favours or abusing your sexuality constantly to get anywhere, you're an actual human that has to prove themselves time and time again, not someone people will just automatically side with - being a man is LIFE on HARD MODE. Men deserve all the respect in the world, we put up with a fucking lot of shit, we built fucking everything, we invented almost fucking everything, every institution shits on us and tries to hold us down, but we are the fucking shit.

30 Second Hypothetical: Is it better to be dependent on your girlfriend financially or to be poor and single?

I have an alpha friend who lives with his girlfriend, her mother and her sister and he used to pay a very small amount of amount towards the upkeep there, but since he quit his job he just does the washing up (bare in mind they've had this setup for about a month and a half now.) Now admittedly he's a very charming guy and she's very feminine/naive/innocent/young, I think she's aged around 18-20, she hates clubbing/partying and all that noise, she's a very "traditional" girl (believes in family/kids/taking care of her man), major caveat here is despite being born in the UK, her family are from an asian country and her mum instills a lot of traditions around the house, her mother not being born in the UK means shes also not a feminist. Essentially, the girl my buddies with is a unicorn.

Really, it depends on the girl. If it's a western self entitled chick like 9.9 out of 10 girls you can forget it, if you think you've got yourself a unicorn and you've got some swag/charm, she's not rode the carousel and you can mould the girl in to the woman you want her to be like my buddy is doing, then it's possible.

Heck, just because it's possible it's never ideal, he's not entirely comfortable with the situation, but he can pull it off because he's strongly masculine and she's strongly feminine, he's probably the most alpha guy she's ever had at her young age and he got there before she had a chance to get pulled into the carousel, so deduce from your own knowledge and by probing your gf (no innuendo intended), are you the most alpha guy she's ever had? If not, you fail versus an ex she had and thus you're not valuable enough to keep because you're not even the "best she ever had."

If I had to generalise I would say that this shit isn't gonna work, most women want nothing to do with a guy who isn't making money, especially western girls, major turnoff for them because they're materialistic and see it as a manly responsibility to bring home the bacon, regardless of the fact we're in a huge economic depression, real life shit like economic factors have never been known to get in the way of female demands and expectations, even more so in a feminist english/european country.

Trivia: Haram (not harem) is "disallowed" (the opposite of Halal, meaning "allowed") in Arabic. Since I learnt that I can't help but draw the parallel everytime I see the word "harem" in English. I don't believe in coincidences when it comes to anything, especially not languages from two different language families. Irony being, muslim societies are largely polygamous so a harem would not be haram. Haha.

No, that would be an error in reading comprehension on your part. HOWEVER - I would stress the woman's poor judge of character constitutes partial fault. Mainstream society will not allocate this partial fault, the man will be rightfully demonised, and her idiocy, overlooked.

Mexicans supply cheap labour, Canadians do not.

Makes sense. Saying that doesn't all the welfare they claim kind of vitiate the cheap labour aspect though? I suppose big business has just lobbied government to indirectly subsidise them. Cheap labour for business whilst you, the taxpayer, forks up the cash for all their welfare benefits. Guess big business doesn't want that skilled Canuck labour - which ironically would be better for the country if job places aren't scarce seeing as they won't be whoring up the welfare system.

Except it's not of an incredibly high standard.

Show me the barometer which labels this as low quality, please, by all means, humour me.

I'm not sure how you can state:

I understand all of his writing and then state

I'm suggesting he write clearly.

In the same sentence. This sounds like a bitch when she hammers. "I'm not a slut I just think I should fuck less men per hour." That's exactly how you sound right now. If it was clear enough for you to understand then the grammar/word usage is fine. So there's no actual problem. You haven't actually, other than vague ambiguous assertions which you label "criticism," addressed EXACTLY what is wrong and HOW YOU WOULD fix it.

That would be constructive criticism. Your "criticism" is more akin to thinly veiled contempt "for the style" simply because you don't actually say, with any depth, what's wrong with it and how to fix it. At least the first poster just said "he didn't like all the big words" and fair enough, he is giving an opinion. But there is nothing wrong with big words or wordiness. That is fine. You on the other hand, trashed my piece by saying it wasn't to a high standard, which is just arrogance of the highest kind.

I think on that point it's best you not read any of my articles. And yet, despite everything you've said, I bet you continue to do so. Because they are good. And people do like them. Empty criticism and pedantic posts like these really do not serve me or the subreddit, and you're on sticky ground with the mods here when you make these fluff posts.

If you help me become a better writer and show me something I did wrong, I would fucking love you, this isn't a dick measuring contest for me. But all I see is you and a Hemingway groupie saying "its too verbose, I dislike the style." OK so you told me you disliked something, but then tried to sell it to me as a problem because it's not to your preference. Well guess what? Your problem is not my problem. If someone likes their coffee with no milk and I like milk in mine, doesn't mean they can't make coffee. Rules aren't set to your preference.

I don't give a shit what you like. If you don't actually identify an actual problem: say bad grammar, typo spelling, incorrect word usage etc then your criticism doesn't amount to shit because you are creating problems based on preference instead of identifying objective problems. And you know what else? You can do that over PM if you really want to help, you don't need to derail my thread with your theatrical bullshit. Instead it's easier to hijack my thread for attention and seem edgy instead. You could have said say "hey dude, this was too wordy, look, if you take out a few adverbial's there it has the same flow/effect and is clearer." "hey dude this plural needs an apostrophe" I'd appreciate that, but you didn't do that, neither did the other fuck nuggets in this comment chain with their bullshit criticisms lacking any real substance other than "I don't like how this is written."

Guess what bro, I don't give a fuck what your favoured style is. I'll write in whatever style I want that's my artistic right. As for all the retarded pandering to Hemingway here, you're glorifying the king of conciseness. Well done. Go to his wiki it says "His economical and understated style" so yes, this guy is bare fucking bones. He is not the benchmark of "what is normal/the rule" he is UNDERSTATING. You glorify simplicity and then call it articulacy. That is the hallmark of lazy. Fuckoff. I don't want to be concise if that means I must be brief. Without sacrificing detail, that piece was concise. Respect my choice. If you think that piece wasn't ruthlessly edited and was churned out on a whim, you're a fucking idiot. I'd even accuse you of being a troll because you can't honestly be that arrogant, ignorant or stupid.

You read something that you find incredibly interesting and all you can do is take issue with the style. That's fucking ridiculous, honestly. Your criticism is shit. Learn to criticise. You see, attacking people is easy. I'm attacking you right now. Actually creating a piece like that takes skill, and you lack the appreciation for that because you feel entitled that it be written in a certain linguistic style. The ego on that is incredible, it's not just you, it's the few other guys too. You're too lazy to read my work. Don't read my work. If you read the whole thing and understood it then guess what? There's not a fucking problem. Sorry you had to strain yourself so much to read it. I'd like to see you do better but I doubt you can. You call yourself a critic but as you didn't help me with your so called criticism and added no value it'd be more apt to characterise you as a pedantic whiner. Until you can criticise better, shut up. /rant TRP is not an institution it's an internet forum. However if it was an institution then the most extreme faction would be the most dangerous.

One could argue TRP is inherently extreme as-is, but then you could say the same about all religion, capitalism etc.

An extremist is someone who takes the message and perverts it via subjective interpretation to such a level they use it commit terrible sins. Thing about TRP is it's applied to people differently based on their own needs and level of development.

You're also looking at a tiny snapshot of history. "Whites" have been dominant from about 1400-present. 600 meager years. If we had been having this discussion in 1400, it would be about how brown-skinned Arabs and Africans dominate math, science, philosophy, and history, while whites were wallowing in the Dark Ages. Around 600 CE and it would be the same thing, but asked of the Chinese. Around 2000 BCE? All brown-skinned Egyptians creating monuments that have lasted for millenia while whites were scribbling on caves in Europe.

I agree. It's all about relevance though, those civilizations did not bring us to the level of technology we enjoy today, they simply dominated in their day. So yes, the most recent civilizations discoveries and inventions, the pinnacle of human progress at this point in existence carry far more weight and are far more relevant than how out of date science was monopolised by an ancient empire thousands of years ago.

Even now, in 2014, with declining birth rates in the Western world and the rise of countries like China, India, and Brazil, European hegemony may be seeing the sun set on it.

Oh it will, Feminism is killing the birth rate, although to be fair, the birth rate is falling worldwide. I did an article on this on my site about how feminism ethnically displaces whites. I 100% agree with you on this. Whites are set to be an ethnic minority in their own ancestral homelands in the future as those from the third world emigrate en masse to Europe for a better life, bring their families, racial mixing and etc.

To try to assert that this or that skin color of humans is intrinsically dominant is to blind yourself to the realities of the whole of human history.

It's not about skin colour, it's about people from UK and USA creating 81% of all modern tech and discoveries and the rest of the world being dependent on that to not get left behind technologically. The rift was enormous in technology, when there's a tank going up against a tribesman it's a bigger difference than one ancient empire having better swords made out of sturdier metal than another. The only reason the word white is even used is because the person I'm acknowledging said "4 years of my life to hear about how being born a white male makes me responsible for all the world's problems." and why do they want us to hate white people or blame them for everything bad? Because of the newest empires being comprised of almost entirely whites, but what did those same people do? Provide almost all our modern comforts based on the lesser discoveries of what you point out were prior civilizations. You cannot even equate ancient egyptian pyramid building methods with the precision of a modern laser, they're totally different leagues.

In other words, I, a Nigerian male, am more similar to a Ukrainian male than he is to an unrelated Ukrainian female.

Totally agree.

Thus, implying that this or that ethnicity or skin color is somehow intrinsically better technologically, mathematically, linguistically, etc. is a fallacy of the utmost degree.

Skin colour doesn't create superiority it's merely aesthetic, the fact the most recent empires responsible for most the worlds modern tech which led them to create dominant nations economically/militarily has been associated with skin colour is a fallacy, I agree. It was to do with culture/politics in those lands. Their way of life led to success, as we can see today similar ways of life are being replicated around the world to achieve the same success as you rightfully point out, China and India are emulating the west and becoming richer/more prosperous. We know certain things DO WORK but who found them first? Europeans. Is that luck or genetics? I can't say.

The story of human history is one shaped by many factors, but inherent genetic superiority of one ethnicity over another (in any manner of arenas) was not one of them.

I don't really have an opinion on this, the nature/nurture argument can go on forever I don't really have enough knowledge to deduce if this is a fact or not. For all I know a 0.1% difference could be the difference between the western ability to innovate and chinese inability to innovate. I don't know, so I can't make a fair conclusion.

If you agree with all of this and were arguing something entirely different, then I apologize in advance for my oversight.

It's OK, like I said, we're talking about why people find it acceptable to be anti-white and not even think they're being racist, (due to recent empires being white empires) I'm pointing out that everyone has enslaved their own people ethnicity regardless and it's only OK to hate on whites because they've had the most technologically advanced empire and been the most recent in power. People seem to forget that any ethnicity is capable of the same shit the whites did, just the whites took it to the biggest extreme due to the level of tech they had at that disposal versus all the previous empire.

Chicks are naturally promiscuous and opportunistic by merit of their sexual strategy.

The fundamental difference under these assumptions is with boys the environment is perverting their nature, with girls the environment is facilitating their nature (sexually at least)

I'm a strong believer due to womans herd mentality they need to be subject to controls and expectations from society to curb their instincts, where these are absent I deduce having a girl fails the cost benefit analysis.

There are theories that the jewish elite banking families (Rothschild et al) put feminism into high gear in the 60's by backing/lobbying for government to enact pro-feminist legislation (what before then was a mostly insignificant non-mainstream movement) in order to avenge against the caucasian race for the holocaust of jews in Auschwitz. Feminism being a type of population control to wipe out the white race. Combine that with cited statistics of at least 33% of humanity being white in 1950 to a projected 9% of humanity in 2060 and from the outside at least, there seems to be a modicum of validity to the idea that feminism has had a perverse effect on our ethnicity, and we are the ethnicity in the sharpest decline as we do not meet the replacement rate of A MINIMUM 2 children per woman, whereas all the other ethnicities do BAR the sub-ethnicities of southeast asian, the Japanese and the Koreans who too both have very low replacement rates.

Whether the ideology is being used by a greater agenda such as elite banking jews to avenge the holocaust, or something else - is something only very few people on this planet know for a certainty. What we do know for certain is not the agenda behind it (if any) but that feminism is basically killing our race of humanity as we don't replenish our numbers adequately whilst women perceive themselves as superior beings that place their own sense of worth above both men and the family unit. Add multiculturalism in to all white countries and the interracial mixing that occurs as a result and this further dilutes the white gene pool, other cultures take their geniality very seriously, as we whites in the west used to, but now that would be called racist and such a thing immediately elicits such irrational disgust and contempt in the majority that such a policy remains contemporarily unthinkable, even to preserve our own genetic lineage; despite the irony that all the non-white races still consider geniality and discourage interracial mixing outside of the west (Indians hate Indians marrying non-indians, more so any race they consider beneath theirs in proven historical intellectual track record eg: blacks.)

Conspiracy theory or conspiracy fact? I don't know, what I do know is we're in decline and we're comfortable with our technology and our social conditioning which promotes complacency and incompetency (mass media, advertising, automation etc) so we let the decline happen. Our dying out is a form of non-violent passive genocide and feminism is by and large incredibly accountable for that.

Your post fails to address my points, but simply stipulates a platitude that not all men are good and not all women are evil. Funny, because I never even mentioned the words good or evil. I gave concise reasons for how female voting negatively affects society, none of which you have managed to address.

You have interpreted and dismissed something I have not even stated. You have not actually attacked my points, you have conflated my ideas with your own and then dismissed them.

I would stipulate again exactly what I said to bring things back on track, but it's already written above, and you have missed the point so grandly I believe it would be a waste of time.

Likewise, I do not believe inclusiveness and democracy is good for society (like you do.) It's nice in theory, I like the idea, but it's kind of like socialism, it fails in practice. People aren't intelligent, well-informed and reasonable enough to handle democracy. There are too many stupid people. In democracy, stupid wins by merit of numbers.

As for your point about the balancing of sexual strategies being necessary, I believe that is the one thing we do both agree on. But I do not agree that big government and feminism have achieved that balance. I believe it has favoured the feminine strategy at the expense of the civilisation/family unit, and that at present there is no balance. I would hardly call the high divorce rate and dissolution of family a desirable balance of strategies. That is exactly "shit hitting the fan."

If you believe big government/feminism has balanced the sexual strategies I'd love to hear whatever reasoning it is you have for believing that. If you lack any reason, but simply believe it because you do, well, that says all it needs to say.

It would be better for the UK taxpayer too. We pay more into Europe than we get out of it. We're a net contributor. We're the ones that pay for road rejuvenation in Eastern Europe and shit like that (along with other big EU powers like Germany.) And we don't exactly need the dregs of Eastern Europe to come over to escape authorities over there and do all the shit jobs our own young people need.

It's in the UK's best interest to align with the USA monetarily and culturally. We share a language, we share no language with anybody else in Europe. Not like the French (with influence in NL/Belgium) or the Germans (with Austria and Switzerland.) We have a lot of history with America too, we settled the founding colonies and for a hefty price the yanks bailed us out in WW2 from Hitler. You can't change that kind of history. What does Europe do for us, really? Sweet fuck except give us cheap labour we don't need and no tariffs on trade from the eurozone (about the only real net benefit to the common man here.)

I'm not a fan of the EU superstate project, I think the UK should retain it's own sovereignty. I'd like France to stay France and Germany to stay Germany and such too. You can't unify a continent of varying cultures each with rich history and massive language barriers, it doesn't work.

Field report: Destroyed my Eastern European girlfriend's shit test with flying colours. Thank you TRP.

Why all forms of feminism are inherently damaging to the male-female social contract [X-post from TRP]

-2 upvotes · 9 March 2014 · /r/RedPillWomen

I thought women were supposed to be the irrational ones but you're getting all bent out of shape over a completely rational argument [presumably because you have no response.]

I'll make it real simple for you. I have neither the patience, nor the tolerance, nor the incentive to engage in a rational discourse with that person. It's actually quite humorous to me you need to be told that and simply didn't already work it out for yourself. Attack my character all you like, I won't attempt to justify my actions so that you can obtain the information in that manner from me. I must say I'm not a fan of underhanded tactics, shaming language is a big no-no and you should really know better if you're serious about co-operating with me and not simply "sticking the knife in."

What you call a perfectly rational argument and what I call the exception that proves the generalisation is hilarious. I mean the irony here is fucking hilarious, yet it seems lost on you both. That post would be deleted on TRP for basically amounting to "NAWALT" clearly how shit is run here is far more tolerant of romantic idealistic BS where one person's exceptional anecdote which goes against the general beliefs of the sub is considered "a rational argument." Trust me, if you're going to make appeals to TRP rules, I can say with more confidence than you can muster on a sleepy make-up devoid monday morning that this shit wouldn't stand on TRP. If both of your posts are anything to go by, it is that this sub IS FAR, FAR different than from the type of ship we run, despite the similar branding.

"Me and my man get on well, and I'm basically a ball-busting career bitch so feminism isn't bad and women shouldn't show weakness in relationships!" - I mean, are you serious? That's a rational argument? Hahaha, that's given me a cheap laugh this morning. She makes some valid points, she even proved a lot of what I said whilst thinking she was disagreeing with my position (that she's so powerful she had to get a ridiculously dominant male to even fulfill her hypergamy or otherwise she would be ALONE thus proving the whole premise of this post) and she was solipsistic because she thinks her example means this entire idea is wrong and she is audacious enough to even posit this exceptional circumstance as "proof" this is wrong, then provoke me in that post and then be indignant enough to actually expect a response that helps her? Holy shit, that irrational entitlement is off the fucking charts.

I mean to read that shit on /r/pwomen of all places? The one place I expect to go and expect a higher level of interaction with a woman? I didn't expect to be disappointed so quickly in my early attempts to post here. Come on now. If everything I post (an if, that's hypothetical, I'm not stating it has been that way) will need to account for one woman's special circumstances and her solipsistic worldview which spawns out of that I simply shan't bother, how bloody exasperating and non-conducive to a productive discussion is that.

Do sarah, tammy and melissa all have exceptional circumstances I need to justify to, to have an acceptable opinion as well? No, they should be justifying their exceptions, not expecting their exceptions to just be held as irrefutable evidence. Exceptions are LESS helpful than trends, there's a crumb of rationalism for you. NAWALT should be justified to the sub as it is an exception to the rule, NAWALT should not be reason for someone stating the norm to have to justify themselves to the person stating the exception.

You talk about rational arguments, but the fact I needed to say any of this tells me your capacity to reason doesn't go far beneath writing sentences that only seem sophisticated superficially, the thought that goes behind those aesthetically rational sentences clearly lacks the deeper thought behind it to make it truly rational.

Be concerned with actually being rational and practicing logic, not merely appearing rational for the sake of appearances.

You don't genuinely attack a woman's sexuality

I know. We always have very crude banter, I don't consider her a sexual option. This time she couldn't handle it. She's dark triad, she drops shit tests like a talking cluster bomb.

if you're trying to be sexual with her.

Nah I dont shit where I eat. Already told her as much.

Then you try to neg her, not in a teasing manner but an abusive manner

You're wrong. Those negs were defensive considering the minor fact this crazy bitch was gaslighting and blowing up. Being abusive would be gaslighting back but that's not how I play. Once a womans in her emotional state even trying that is just feeding into it. Gaslighting about serious things is immoral/evil, I don't do it.

You're retarded.

I thought the same judging you from your crap analysis.

No, not "they", you. Just you. In that special snowflake kind of way, only you.

Every single one of your posts has contained provocation. You are a manipulator and showing extremely bad character by trying to beat me in some internet argument so you can reconcile your damaged ego with what you've read here. I tell you something now - making me look silly on an internet forum will not change the fact that your ways are unattractive to men, if you refuse to change you will have to feel unattractive, be unattractive and deal with that.

It is not feminine in the slightest to behave how you have and you're lucky that such a high value man even gives you the time of day. Shit, you're lucky I even reply to you, if this weren't a learning environment where others can take value from our discourse, I certainly wouldn't bother with your hostile antagonistic approach, I'd just laugh at you.

If your man really kept you in check you wouldn't play these silly mind games me with over the internet, there's definitely more to this than you're letting on, that's of course if he isn't fictional to begin with.

This has got to be one of the funniest shit tests I've ever heard of. Other than that, sounds like mate guarding. Trying to signal to the other women near you that you're taken. If you take the picture frame off your desk "WHY DID YOU DO THAT???!?!?!?!?" and an argument occurs. What would I do? Put the frame down so it faces the desk. When she sees it say "Ah, the gravity in your old face must have caused the frame to topple" then chuckle. Expect indignation, a light slap, punch in the arm, etc. Follow-up with a botox joke if need be. I would just keep this amused frame, personally. There are however multiple ways to deal with this.

I think the best relationships have the men in a position of dominance. Men want to provide and dominate, and look after but at the same time be respected for that, they crave and need the leadership whilst women tend to crave the idea of being cared for and feeling special, to let herself go and be vulnerable without that vulnerability being exploited. That is the yin-yang relationship between masculinity and femininity in the natural form, a female does not need dominance to fulfill her romantic urges whilst a man does, in fact a woman will be most happy when her man is "taking charge" as it's less for her to worry about.

Men have alleviated many of women's problems through their positions of leadership, but feminists have contorted that and spun it into one light, that this power was only ever abused, but not used to help. Fact of the matter is, if the patriarchy was a real thing, they'd never have let women get the vote to begin with. The only reason women ever got the vote was because men in power at the time wanted it to happen, if they didn't, it would never have happened. We only have men to blame for modern day feminism because it was on their watch that this ideology was allowed to gain any sort of prominence and it wasn't immediately quashed. I guess nobody saw how after civil rights the ideology would just go on a total slippery slope into radicalist bigoted misandrist chaos.

Treating a man like an equal, in a way, is almost disrespectful to him and his natural desires. It says "you're the same as me" when really, that's bullshit, he wants/needs things that you don't and vice versa, and by having an equal relationship you ignore these differences for the sake of cultural marxism, the notion that no relationship is healthy unless a semblance of equality is found. Luckily big business doesn't work like that or the worlds economies would be divorcing themselves from their workforces as much as couples are today. Sure egalitarianism can work with people who are ignorant and from privileged backgrounds that are programmed to perceive the world in an idealistic academic manner far removed from reality, but for the most part it is not workable.

Women are undoubtedly more attracted to masculine men like Hugh Jackman or Jason Statham than some guy who "treats them like an equal" masculinity is sexy to women and part of masculinity is taking control. Ironically, this means both parties are happiest in their natural roles. The idea that a lack of equality necessitates oppression is insane, if you pick your partner well and form a loving bond, you can trust them to not abuse their dominance over you and in my opinion, that's what all relationships between a man and a woman should be like.

The worst thing about equality is the underlying assumption that it is a good thing, an assumption which is completely unsubstantiated by any source anywhere. Women don't need to be equal to men to be happy, feminism became pointless once women were awarded civil rights. I honestly do not believe there is anything wrong with the typically less logical and emotionally prone gender to have less power than the typically more aggressive and rational gender, however cultural marxists want to have us all believe that we're all the same and we should abandon a system that has supported the growth of civilization for thousands of years in favour of the notion that treating everyone as equals is the answer to all our problems. Quite simply, feminism is the communism of gender and we all know what happened to communism.

Homosexuality is not a choice any more than skin color or sex is.

Not proven, just asserted by the liberal left.

but gays can still be considered second class citizens by law and often by social norms and practices

In the UK you get protection for being gay that straight men don't get. You can "play the gay card". Like race card/gender card etc.

Don't have a problem with gays, have a huge problem with the bullshit surrounding a flamboyant culture based on sexual preference.

By all comparison revenge porn has not got shit on divorce which is a fucking revenge nuke that women pull all the time, but has been normalised to the point where it has no shock value, unlike revenge porn.

Tbh I think every man should have an arsenal of revenge porn he can unleash on a bitch just incase she wants to betray his ass. If you have shit on her she will think fucking twice before she betrays you/accuses you falsely of rape or otherwise makes your life a living hell because hey, when women get upset and angry they're fucking demonic "a woman scorned" and all that shit, never forget that proverb.

You fight crazy with crazy boys. Revenge porn until your hearts content, recording your liaisons could get you off a false rape charge and hey you get to build up your own personal wank bank, two birds with one stone eh? :)

Edit: By reasonable comparison men kill themselves over what is commonly a form of female revenge (but not always done out of revenge), divorce, too. I'm feeling no iotas of giving a fuck for these silly women.

I don't think it falls on me.

Your lack of logic just imploded the internet. You essentially hold an interview where people can ask you questions and you don't think the burden of responsibility is on you to make your position clear when you're asked a question you don't like the frame of.

Your lack of logic is a fine example of why men don't want to commit to women anymore, you're hell to deal with, you're not honest or candid, everything is inference, emotion and bullshit.
