It's one thing to say "people who answered this set of questions like this also answered that set of questions like that"... but it's a long trip from there to "be more 'authentic' if you want to improve your marriage". Especially when you don't really have any set of actionable instructions for how to 'be authentic'.

Frankly, I put these kinds of "studies" about on par with breathless announcements that scientists with an MRI machine have found the portion of the brain responsible for risk-taking, or liking classical music, or being easily impressed by sketchy MRI studies.

I have no illusions that I am mathematically proving anything with what I do. But that's the point. I am testing things, rather than inflating myself with a false sense of certainty. And I cannot help but notice that this discussion group was founded to discuss my work, not theirs... because theirs doesn't produce any measurable change in the world beyond padding out someone's CV and helping them get tenure.

Study: Authenticity predicts high relationship satisfaction, except for people high in trait (DT) psychopathy.

3 upvotes · 17 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's quite useful... as a helpful guide to get people to ask the hard questions of themselves, such as "am I personally happier in my life when I'm more authentic? How can I be more authentic? If not, is it possible that I have some psych issues that can be monitored by a professional?". That's something you can do with the information. That's my point.

This is completely vacuous.

Someone has come up with a subjective concept, described it subjectively, come up with some self-report questions they think measure it, then tried to relate it to another subjective concept.

Imagine for a moment that you are a Catholic counselor, operating within the church, and serving a Catholic diocese, counseling members of a Catholic congregation. You come up with a series of questions that you think measure how "godly" a relationship is, and some questions that you think measure "relationship satisfaction", then you give this questionnaire to a bunch of Catholics, and, behold, you discover that the answers to these two sets of questions are correlated in some way.

"Godly relationships are stronger!", you declare, "Checkmate, atheists!".

But all you have really done fiddle with your perceptions of your own belief system. You haven't proven that there even is a definable, measurable quality of "godliness", much less that it serves any useful purpose.

What you have done is use math to prove that some set of self-report answers is correlated with some other set of self-report answers. The math checks out, but there is no proof, mathematical or otherwise, that the questions measure what they are supposed to measure. And there cannot be, because there is no objective definition of "authentic" nor any unit of authenticity, nor any way to prove its correlation to a set of questions, nor any proof that this word describe any real-world phenomenon at all.

You're trying to measure it without even being able to prove it exists.

Sure you could ask:

"am I personally happier in my life when I'm more authentic? How can I be more authentic? If not, is it possible that I have some psych issues that can be monitored by a professional psychologist?"

but you could also ask:

"am I personally happier in my life when I'm more godly? How can I be more godly? If not, is it possible that I have some faith issues that can be monitored by a professional clergyman?"

and you could even ask:

"am I personally happier in my life when I'm more fleem? How can I be more fleem? If not, is it possible that I have some epistemological issues that can be monitored by a professional plumber?"

These statements only seem to make sense if you have already bought into their premises.

Oh ARE you?

Yes, I am.

So how do these experiments and hard internal reflections fare up against research by people who have experience?

I am the person who has experience. These people who have so much unearned respect for have taken classes and given people questionnaires.

I am working with actual people who have relationships, giving them advice, and hearing what happened on account of that advice. I am not trying to measure them.

Can you see the difference? The academics are trying to measure traits and compare them to subjective measures of happiness. I am advising specific actions, and comparing them to concrete outcomes.

The red pill isn't about having traits, it's about doing things. It specializes in actionable advice.

"Be more authentic" isn't concrete actionable advice. Neither is "be more godly", or "be more fleem".

I challenge any one of these so called experts to fix or improve an actual relationship, with a success rate better than chance, or better than the average layman.

CMV: Michael's Story proves all the negative stereotypes people have about TRPers

3 upvotes · 17 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

turn off your empathy and start being okay with deceiving and blocking chicks

Welcome to the world we live in. Kaylene has turned off her empathy. In order to deal with her without being exploited, Michael must stop whining and learn to turn off his.

Empathy is an advantage when dealing with empathic people. It is a disadvantage when dealing with sociopaths. And for young men in the sexual marketplace today, the majority of women they encounter will be the latter.

For better worse, we are a society of sociopaths now, and only sociopathy will be rewarded. Better get crackin'.

"learn game and have mutually enjoyable relationships with chicks", not "learn to narcissistically deceive chicks, fuck them, then block them".

This is your way of sugar-coating game, and it's useful for deceiving others, but do not deceive yourself.

Game is about getting what you want, regardless of whether it helps or hurts the women involved. That is their choice, not yours.

If you believe you are responsible for the welfare of women who have not submitted, and are not obedient, to you, then you will not be able to master any kind of game, not even the kinder, gentler sort of game that you describe in this piece of fan fiction, because you won't have the level of introspection to achieve the correct mindset.

Are the warlords who control Afghanistan alphas or betas?

3 upvotes · 17 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You do understand that "alpha" and "beta" are metaphors, right?

CMV: Michael's Story proves all the negative stereotypes people have about TRPers

3 upvotes · 16 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't know.

People can always find an excuse for having the emotional reaction they already wanted to have. It's easy to quote-mine TRP to support the position you already want to hold.

It's easy to notice that, when he is venting his anger to sympathetic audience, Michael can be interpreted as a bit of a jerk, if you really want to.

And it's easy not to notice, if you don't want to, that many of the people he's dealing with are downright sociopaths:

I told them you cannot have your cake and eat it too. Then I was told by Kaylene (a young thin super sexy blonde with curves in all the right places (who BTW refused to date me even though we were friends and according to her roommate had sex with almost 30 guys in one semester) she told me "Michael let me tell you something: not only am I going to have my cake eat it and eat it too. I'm going to have it with ice cream and sprinkles". All of the girls laughed and smiled in agreement.

Both of these miss the point.

Michael lives in a world of ruthless women who have zero concern for the welfare of the men they interact with, because they are too busy trying to have their cake and eat it too, with ice cream and sprinkles (and then wondering why they end up fat).

The point, for the Michaels of this world, is that they must stop trying to morally harangue the Kaylenes, because Kaylene doesn't have any moral sensibilities left to appeal to.

He must instead learn to deal with Kaylene from the same vantage that she uses to deal with him: doing whatever works with complete focus on his own self-interest. He must learn to deceive her the way she deceives other men, rather than trying to appeal to moral sensibilities she does not have.

The idea behind describing Michael as "entitled" is the idea that Kaylene does not owe him anything, even honesty or truthfulness. And this is a perfectly valid view, because it cannot be proven that she does.

What Michael needs to realize is that it cannot be proven that he owes her anything, either. And thus it is perfectly possible for him to display narcissistic levels of deception in order to get sex, then block her phone number.

We live in a post-morality sexual marketplace. Kaylene has realized this, and Michael has not. The purpose of posting this link is to wake the Michaels of the world up to this fact.

One of the most hypocrite things I've ever seen

3 upvotes · 14 August 2021 · /r/MensRights

Not only can you simply not marry a woman, you can marry a good woman.

Victim blaming.

The problem is not that abused men "stuck their dick in crazy" (as if crazy bitches wore helpful forehead labels). The problem is that the law not only allows crazy bitches to abuse men, it assists them in doing so.

Would you accept being married to any man under Islamic law, where you own nothing, can't get a divorce, and he can beat you if he wants? No? What if he was a "good" man?

The problem is not that women aren't "good" enough. It's that they are being permitted and actively incentivized to be as bad as they can imagine.

The Best Advice From Red Pill Isn't Red Pill Specific

3 upvotes · 14 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Of course I wrote the misogynistic parts. I made them extra misogynistic. I went out of my way to make them misogynistic. If I don't already have a reputation with you as a horrible misogynist, I shall have to redouble my efforts.

You don't know why I do what I do, and I'm not sure you would understand even if I did my very best to explain to you.

The Best Advice From Red Pill Isn't Red Pill Specific

3 upvotes · 14 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You are free to spend zero time learning, thinking or talking about this if that would make you happy.

That's what I don't get about you PPD oddballs. You take a bunch of brainsmoke my friends and I wrote, which was intended for dudes to go out and try out and get laid... and you analyze it like high school English teachers taking out their sexual frustrations on a Jon Steinbeck novel.

I didn't write this stuff to be a scientific theory, or a literal description of the universe. I wrote so that its effect on the reader's mindset would be such that he could go out and get laid. And because I knew what the fuck I was doing, it worked, and continues to work.

But here you are, analyzing it like it was the Rosetta Stone. It's not. It's a fucking koan.

[CMV] The Manosphere Consistently Gives Terrible Nutritional Advice and It's Hurting Men in the Long Term

3 upvotes · 13 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You are perfectly welcome to shove bagels into your face every two hours if you believe this is necessary for your survival.

CMV: the TRP adage "don't listen to women" actually shows that TRPers have too few women in their life

3 upvotes · 10 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You are missing the point. Plenty of women want to help men be more attractive. They're just bad at it.

The general level of self-awareness in the female population at large is extremely low. They cannot tell men what to do to be attractive, because they don't know. A woman generally knows if she finds a man attractive, but not why.

This leads men who listen to women's advice into a pattern of cargo-cult behaviour.

What would encourage others (men included) to go the traditional route

3 upvotes · 8 August 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Make it in their interest to do so.

R/femaledatingstrategy is a gold mine for misandry. They literally call men "scrotes". Guess we should stop existing.

3 upvotes · 2 August 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

That sounds like a you problem, dear.

Boyfriend is sending mixed signals before first trip together, and I'm lost

3 upvotes · 2 August 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

.

Interview with Whisper - WORLD EXCLUSIVE!

3 upvotes · 1 August 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

definition of sperg but that wasn't really my question

You asked the wrong question.

Spergs think that things are good and bad. Nuanced thinkers think that things are better and worse.

Spergs think that plans are possible or impossible. Nuanced thinkers think that plans are low-risk or high-risk investments.

TRP men have unicorn fallacy about Muslim girls and I am about to destroy it with reality

3 upvotes · 1 August 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

I always see USA and European guys talking about how muslim chicks are such naive angels, such perfect mothers and such pure unicorns.

Who the fuck have you been talking to?

Do they live under a rock?

Victoria's Secret and what it means to be "sexy" in the modern era.

3 upvotes · 25 July 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

How is the primary source of fuel for the brain - poison?

Please explain to me how, after having read and presumably understood all of Robert Lustig's research, as well as having passed the exam to become a certified nutritionist, you can still be confused about the difference between glucose and fructose?

The only explanation that occurs to me is that you do not want to understand.

If that's the case, then there is no point in further conversations, because evidence is not useful in talking junkies out of their addictions.

Why does this sound so fake?? Maybe I'm just overreacting, IDK.

3 upvotes · 13 July 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Ma'am, this is a Wendy's.

"Abusive men"

3 upvotes · 24 June 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

I'd never hit a woman in a relationship

I would. To say otherwise is to claim that there are no circumstances under which a woman might deserve an ass-kicking. That's not true for men, why would it be true for women?

One of the basic reasons that most men are decent to each other is that they know there are things they could do or say which would result in an expensive emergency visit to their dentist the next day.

I see no reason to exempt women from that rule.

Is the value of "Red Pill" media help or entertainment?

3 upvotes · 16 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So how exactly did you measure the increase in violence towards the self caused by exposure to red pill ideas?

And how did you measure the increase in violence towards others?

I'd like a link to your data and a description of your methods, please.

What is "red pill"?

3 upvotes · 16 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

THANK YOU for taking the time to detail this.

Welcome.

And I agree "misogyny" is the secret sauce if "misogyny" simply means taking women off of the pedestal.

That's all misogyny has ever meant. You can count the number of people who hate women for being women on the fingers of one tomato.

But women don't see it this way, because modern western middle class women are the single most privileged class of beings in the known history of the entire universe, and thus experience it as a terrible hardship and persecution whenever someone tells them that they can't have 100% of everything.

It boils down to that protective instinct. Protective instinct makes people invent new privileges for women to have, in order to correct the "sexism" of the last set of privileges they were given.

Every single thing that society does with reference to women is intended to advantage them in some way. The giant culture war between tradcons and neomarxists is just a war over who can pander to women better.

The only argument is whether it's more important to protect women from any negative consequence for anything that happens (tradcons) or more important to empower them to do whatever they want regardless of the effect on anyone else (neomarxists).

TRP is neither. It asserts that men have inherent value, and are entitled to prioritize their personal interests above those of women they encounter.

This is misogyny. Not "called" misogyny. It is misogyny. Because that's what people mean when they use the word. They mean "you are existing for yourself, not for women, and this we cannot abide".

Also I'm not exactly sure who you are, but others have said you're a founder. Does that mean you're a founding member of TRP or one of the other communities you referenced?

See, that's why I, and most other TRP readers, don't take PPD seriously.

It was created to "debate" about our stuff by people who haven't read our stuff. It's like having a great debate on the existence of god, but instead of having Sam Harris debate Norman Geisler, you're having a 14 year old off /r/atheism debate Fred Phelps.

You're under no obligation, in the abstract sense, to listen to me, but you mod a Red Pill vs Blue Pill debate subreddit. And you don't know who I am. Or, presumably, HumanSockPuppet, ArchWinger, VasilyZaitsev, Bsultan, Rollo Tomassi, IllimitableMan, and so on.

It's like you went to a university, and never set foot in any of the classes, just tried to infer what was being taught by listen to the freshmen talking in the dorms.

Yes, you have now asked this question, but it's been... what, eight years? Nine?

What was your previous username?

"Whisper".

These are the type of people that are altering our legal system

3 upvotes · 12 June 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Okay, so... don't sell sex. Problem solved.

Am I being too sensitive or... do I have a right to be upset?

3 upvotes · 11 June 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

You always have the right to be upset. Your emotions belong to you.

What you do not have the right to do is demand that others change because of how you feel.

You are vanilla, he is kinky. This is a fundamental incompatibility, and you two idiots decided to have a relationship anyway, each thinking that the other would change.

This is not a thing that happens.

You need to go find a vanilla guy, and he needs to go find one or more kinky chicks.

Husband sends me pictures of Instagram models daily, need some advice

3 upvotes · 8 June 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

So you don't like having your motives characterized based on some text that you wrote?

Well, then try imagining how /u/spazzkitty's husband might feel, to have his entire character assassinated based on selected portions of what his wife wrote.

And then imagine what would happen to her marriage, if she were foolish enough to take those knee-jerk reactions at face value.

This is not a game. SpazzKitty is a real person, with a real life, and a real marriage.

There are more important things going on in life than whether an interaction qualifies, in your mind, as "emotional abuse", because you have no skin in the game. You can say whatever you want, and fuck things up for other people, and then never even have to know, much less care.

So getting on your high horse about how a stranger's husband "should" treat her might make you feel good, but it doesn't accomplish anything else of value, and it doesn't solve one single solitary problem that she has.

This is why discussion of what "should" be are off limits here. Because they fix nothing, and they derail us from actually doing something useful.

Women yearn for the return of chaperones

3 upvotes · 6 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women have no idea what they want. They only know how they feel.

CMV: Men are still expected to honor societal contracts while women are taught full hedonism

3 upvotes · 6 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's slightly more difficult than that. But the sacrifice is merely social in nature.

The plain truth is that we live in a culture that will eat alive any man that follows its expectations. In order to prosper in it, he must be willing to look like the bad guy.

That leap is not easy to make. But once it is made, men often quickly discover that the sacrifice was not so great as they thought.

Most men aren't born ugly. They're ugly by choice. Getting called creepy has more to do with a lack of proper social etiquette, which can affect grooming, appearance, and people's first impressions.

3 upvotes · 5 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Imagine all the time she spent putting this together.

Do you think prior sexlessness is a common reason as to why some men might prefer younger women?

3 upvotes · 5 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There is one primary reason why most men prefer younger women: the traits that attract most men are characteristic of youth.

- Beauty (especially the sort of comes from health and vitality)
- Openness to experience
- Playfulness
- Cheerfulness
- Excitability
- Enthusiasm
- Energy
- High sex drive

... what does this all sound like? A teenage girl.

Not all teenage girls have these qualities, and not all older women lose with age, but that's the trend.

So what do teenage girls lack?

- Emotional stability
- Caution
- Wisdom
- Entitlement
- Toughness
- Responsibility
- Confidence

Some of these traits are positive, some are negative, some are unattractive, others are attraction-neutral. But none of them add to a girl's attractiveness.

So, men in general are going to prefer younger women unless they have some sort of fetish.

How can you tell if you're just a "practice wife/girlfriend"?

3 upvotes · 1 June 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Annnnnnnnd we have a winner.

This is precisely it.

RPW and TRP have very different "tones", but what they share in common is the idea that what happens to you is at least partially your fault, and you want to focus on that part because that's the part you can control.

All this business about "the practice wife" and men who "aren't ready for commitment" is just a way of blaming them when you haven't inspired their commitment.

All this business about men "loving the chase" and being "put off by a woman who is too easy" is just an excuse for passively waiting for whatever comes along, instead of actively choosing the man you want to be with, and inspiring him to like the idea.

About 95% of female popular "wisdom" about how to deal with men is just rationalizations for irresponsible laziness. It's easy for women in modern western civilization to get away with being irresponsible and lazy, because they are raised with the idea that they are wonderful and perfect, and the world owes them everything.

But "getting away with" this kind of attitude does not mean having a happy life. Even when others will not punish lazy, selfish, irresponsible, entitled behaviour... this behaviour will punish itself with its own inevitable consequences.

95% of the work of RPW is teaching women not to be selfish and entitled. That's not because they have a moral obligation... it's because it's better for them. Women who take responsibility for their own behaviour, and consider the experiences of others, will be treated better by men, and have happier lives.

+1

/u/LuckyLittleStar

My brother wants to LTR a 22 year old with 2 kids and two fathers

3 upvotes · 31 May 2021 · /r/askTRP

You cannot help someone without their permission.

What are your standards for your own "side?"

3 upvotes · 29 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

In my defense though I have a medical condition known as an engineering degree which causes me to have seizures when exposed to small talk.

So you lack social skills, haven't bothered to put in the effort to learn them, and are in the habit of using excuses and humor to deflect any expectation that you do better?

I'm confused- what makes women's standards unreasonable?

3 upvotes · 29 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Anyways, I thought I was going crazy reading some of the replies because nothing about her list struck me as unreasonable but obviously some disagree and me being a woman means I can't see their point of view. For those who do, why? And is this what men mean when they say women have unreasonable standards?

You're confused because you're reading her list, but you're not reading his response carefully enough.

You broads will whip up a 16 point checklist of what you deserve in a man in a couple minutes, but where are all the points for what you can offer a man?

(Emphasis mine.)

An unrealistic standard is like an unrealistic price... it is unrealistic in comparison to what value is offered in return.

A woman who makes a long bullet point list of what she wants, yet makes no mention of what she offers, is implying that the value of her merely being a woman is high enough to offset that list.

A cardiothoracic surgeon is entirely reasonable to expect a 500K salary. But when he says that, he prefaces it by pointing out that he is a cardiothoracic surgeon... and he usually has something to say about his individualized credentials as well.

The sort of women who makes this kind of bullet point list of demands tends to rely on male thirst to make the corresponding list unnecessary... and then she is deeply shocked and embittered when the males in that thirsty set turn out not to have much to offer.

Why are men in denial that feminine men do well with women?

3 upvotes · 20 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because of all the feminine men complaining to us that they don't do well with women.

Why is locker room talk a bad thing?

3 upvotes · 20 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Of course it's exclusionary. You don't belong in the men's locker room.

Have you noticed any patterns in the types of people attracted to you?

3 upvotes · 19 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Nope, Viking.

Guys' caring about a partner's sexual history is incompatible with a sexually free society. Thus, such guys should not commit, since then it doesn't matter.

3 upvotes · 19 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What's on offer isn't suitable.

Exactly. Relationships have benefits, but relationships with the sort of women who ride the cock carousel do not actually yield those benefits.

Thing is, it's not the promiscuity that makes them unsuitable... it's the unsuitability that makes them promiscuous. N-count is a trailing indicator, not a cause.

Neither the RedPill nor the FDS strategy on first dates work.

3 upvotes · 19 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Meals are a bad date idea, period. Do something together.

Rules Clarification

3 upvotes · 6 May 2021 · /r/askTRP

If we wanted people to know, we'd have told you already.

How can I begin working on myself to feel worthy of a HVM?

3 upvotes · 23 April 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Codependency is a concept invented by Alcoholics Anonymous (a rather cultlike organization) as a means of describing someone who panders to and enables another's addiction.

Hence, co-dependent. Someone who shares another dependency.

Telling you that a relationship unhealthy if you look up to a man, or enjoy serving or pleasing him, is just modern western culture's way of sub-shaming. But their expectation that you listen to and adapt their values is, in and of itself, a demand for submission.

What matters is if your relationships work for you.

So which would make you happier, believing that you were a queen and your boyfriend was a fat dumb schmuck who was lucky to have you, or believing that your boyfriend was a demigod and you can't understand how you got so lucky as to be the one he picked?

Men want to be treated awesome by someone good enough. Women want to be treated good enough by someone awesome.

Finally..... After 50 years. A black woman has broken the girl code and said what black men have known about feminism. And why black feminists and their allies HATE black men. Damn THIS IS SAD, and the mentality of ALL the women on r/blackladies and r/blackgirdiaries

3 upvotes · 18 April 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

When the institutions of science are used as an authority to sell a system of control, that doesn't legitimize the system of control. It just casts doubt on the institutions of science.

Now people are legitimately wondering how much reported research results reflect reality, and how much they reflect what the funding institutions wanted the research results to say.

And scientists have no one but themselves to blame for this.

Yes, because every boy from age 3 to 18 do this on purpose to assert "dominance". I can't believe this sub has been able to spread misinformation for this long.

3 upvotes · 16 April 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Sounds like you had a good father. Many parents lie to their children and present themselves and the adult world as being idealized people who have all the answers. This just leads to teenage rebellion when the kids figure out that's not true.

Yes, because every boy from age 3 to 18 do this on purpose to assert "dominance". I can't believe this sub has been able to spread misinformation for this long.

3 upvotes · 16 April 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Exactly. Normal, healthy adult heterosexual males are sexually attracted to girls aged 12-17.

Whether they do anything about that or not is another issue. Everyone likes money, not everyone robs banks.

However, normal, healthy adult heterosexual males are NOT attracted to toddlers. That's a mental illness. Totally different thing.

Yes, because every boy from age 3 to 18 do this on purpose to assert "dominance". I can't believe this sub has been able to spread misinformation for this long.

3 upvotes · 16 April 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Yes, the problem is that sexual attractiveness starts at puberty. Humans are evolved to use secondary sex characteristics as sexual cues.

Now, whether you want to place young, but post-puberty, people sexually off-limits to older people is a policy decision, but that's not what we are talking about here.

Being sexually attracted to children is a mental illness. Being sexually attracted to teenagers is normal. If you bundle the two together, you are suggesting that sexual attraction to children is normal, and just legally off-limits, rather than a mental health condition.

This allows pedophiles to push for inclusion in LGBTQRSWTFBBQ, or whatever it is now.

Anti-feminist not anti- woman

3 upvotes · 15 April 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

You say not all women agree with feminism.

Okay.

But your time is probably better invested telling feminists that than telling me that. Because they have the power to stop being feminists. I don't have the power to make them stop being feminists.

Feminist would put men in a "camp"

3 upvotes · 15 April 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Women would very quickly be clamouring to be let into the camp, because it would have running water, electricity, food, and shelter.

Why is a man's biological desire towards women seen as "objectifying" aside from it just being harmless sexual attraction?

3 upvotes · 13 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The appearance of victimhood empowers women. Therefore it is useful to women to construe anything they can as oppression. This will continue until the appearance of victimhood is no longer empowering for women.

A society that worships weakness will have people competing to appear weak.

literally just LTR'd a girl to fuck her now don't know what to do....help please.

3 upvotes · 8 April 2021 · /r/askTRP

Yep, that's a real classic. Winger is sorely missed.

Would still like to see /u/protocol_apollo's take, though. I'm thinking it would bring in the contrasting male perspective and why we run on respect, honor, and investment.

She wants to bring an ugly friend over

3 upvotes · 8 April 2021 · /r/askTRP

I'm just waiting for the other shoe to drop.

It's funny, because he clearly has some image in his head of who we are supposed to be, so much so that he's yelling at us about how his mental idealized version of us would disapprove of... us.

But he's missed the point. We didn't make TRP into what it is today as a seduction skills forum. That already existed... we were all on r/seduction. We did all this because r/seduction was infiltrated by the self-appointed niceness police.

TRP was literally created to be a place where you can call a fat girl fat. This eight-ball doesn't understand the value, for kids like /u/RelativeWear0, in having somewhere where he can say exactly what he means, unfiltered, and receive feedback with the same degree of honesty.

Free expression isn't just important because we like it. It's literally the foundation of the ascendancy of western civilization. I don't give a flying fuck who that sounds melodramatic to... it's the truth. We had a time period where a central authority made sure everyone expressed only the proper sentiments, which were held to morally imperative. And we now call that time "the dark ages".

This shit matters. If someone starts caring more about feelings of absent and hypothetical landwhales than about this forum is supposed to accomplish, they've lost the plot.

This guy is spouting Clown World values because he is so steeped in them that the alternative possibility doesn't even occur. The only question that remains is whether he can be cured, or must be surgically excised.

Losing interest in sex, barely maintaining boner

3 upvotes · 8 April 2021 · /r/askTRP

Okay, there's two things that can be happening here.

One, you're feeling ambivalent about her for some reason. Did she do something to piss you off or disappoint you?

Or, two, you're craving variety. Men are not really wired for monogamy, and it's harder for some than others. If you recently gave up porn (I think I recall you saying that), then the only woman you're seeing naked now is... her.

No matter how gorgeous she is, and how much you love her, that can get somewhat routine eventually.

If that's the case, then you might need to get back on the porn, or do kinkier stuff with her, or cheat once in a while.

I do not recommend dumping her, though. If a woman is worth keeping on her own merits, then she's worth keeping, period. There's no point giving up a good relationship just because you want to fuck another woman. Just fuck another woman and get it out of your system.

How do you guys set the frame when she pushes for monogamy?

3 upvotes · 5 April 2021 · /r/askTRP

tell a women you want to date other women

Why would you do that?

I don't ask women permission to do things. I just do them.

Why does this sub give better dating advice then dating advice subs?

3 upvotes · 5 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why is advice on this sub better then the dating subs?!

Because even a watered-down version of the red pill is better than mainstream alternatives.

BluePillers, what makes you still believe the bluepill? Have you gone from red/purple pill to blue pill?

3 upvotes · 3 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Exactly. Anger motivates action. That's what anger is for.

The trick behind TRP is that misogyny is a tool in this context. By focusing on the worst the women are capable of, we make young men angry.

Are you watching closely?

TradCon is RPW but RPW is not TradCon

3 upvotes · 2 April 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

com·mit·ment

1. the state or quality of being dedicated to a cause, activity, etc.
2. a pledge or undertaking.
3. an engagement or obligation that restricts freedom of action.

The goal of RPW tactics is to create #1. Wedding ceremonies are #2. Signing a marriage license is #3.

Why?

Try thinking of it this way. #1 can create #2 and #3. Neither #2 nor #3 creates #1.

BluePillers, what makes you still believe the bluepill? Have you gone from red/purple pill to blue pill?

3 upvotes · 2 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP describes the worst of women, but then generalize this to all wome

Yep.

So ask the logical next question. Why do we do this? What's the payoff?

Discussing relationship deal breakers and the adult entertainment industry

3 upvotes · 1 April 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

While the basic interaction of human mating instincts with the laws of economics make prostitution inevitable, one of the drawbacks to it is that it does tend to blur the line between the personal and the professional.

Once you've engaged in sex for money, it inevitably impacts how you engage in sex as an act of intimacy, both in how you perceive it, and how you are perceived when you do. So when any current or former prostitute has a relationship, there's always a certain amount of baggage to sort through, and it's baggage which society doesn't have any sort of premade script for how to navigate.

I truly empathize with the male struggle with having so many sexual desires

It's not necessarily a struggle. We simply have different priorities, which come from different biological priorities. We are a factory that constantly manufactures an endless supply of inexpensive sperm. There is no evolutionary downside to spreading as far and wide as possible, so we evolved the urge to do so. Any sexual continence we display is usually, then, at someone else's behest.

The "struggle" is that society's sexual mores are more or less identical to women's sexual desires. It is women who want monogamy, pair bonding, social sanctioning of relationships, and so on. And those are precisely what society endorses. Men are therefore caught between our own instincts, and the threat of social, and even legal, punishment for not conforming to women's idea of what sexuality should be.

Which brings us to this:

I actually feel mad at frustrated at myself that I'm not into poly or open relationships, cause I feel like a woman who has been in my line of work should just "get it" that most men want to be sexual with as many woman as possible.

This makes sense, and agrees with what I have seen before from others in your situation.

Women who have exchanged sex for money are going to want to draw as large and clear a distinction between sex for money and sex as part of a relationship, as they possibly can. This means they tend to want relationship sex to be as "vanilla" and "romantic" as possible... as distanced as possible from the sex they engaged in when and where they were catering to male sexual desires for money.

However, this means that the relationship sex they want to engage in tends to be very distanced from the sort of sex that men most like... and their partners are male.

At the same time, men who are willing and able to put aside jealousy enough to engage in a relationship with a prostitute (current or former) are generally expecting that there should be some compensatory efforts made in return.

This creates a mismatch of expectations.

I have told him I would like us to experience these things together (spas, strip clubs, etc) but he never seems terribly interested, which leads me to think that his desires are more about optimizing his relationship scenario (LTR + variety when he wants) as well as maintaining autonomy and freedom to do as he sexually chooses w/o having to spin plates.

It's possible that this is exactly what he wants. If so, he may be thinking this is a reasonable ask, given that you want to optimize your relationship scenario (LTR + freedom to engage in sex work). Whether you are willing to go for this deal is up to you to decide, based on your feelings, and on your options... for example, whether you think you will be able to find a man willing to be sexually faithful to you without receiving the same in return, and whether you are likely to be "madly in love" with such a man as well.

Ultimately, both men and women like sex, and both men and women like companionship, so the mating dance is not so much about whether two people want to come together (that gets decided very quickly) as about what the terms of the interaction will be, and who assumes the risk, and so forth.

Make no mistake, no matter how much you love each other, you are still negotiating. All love is conditional, and you need to know what you can and can't live with.

Is it bad to be motivated by anger and rejection?

3 upvotes · 30 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

What the hell do you think anger is for?

Where do you draw the line between girlfriend and wife duties?

3 upvotes · 27 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Okay, well, what legal expertise I possess is solely focused on American law, with a little English Common Law thrown in. So when you talk about Romania, I know only what web searches tell me.

In America, marriage is not so much a deal that is no longer worth it for men, as a deal that offers exactly nothing. A husband has no additional rights beyond what a cohabiting boyfriend has, and a number of enforceable additional responsibilities.

This is why I teach men (in TRP) that marriage is simply off the table... as in "under no circumstances".

And that generally raises the question "are the risks that bad?". But that's not the point. It doesn't matter how likely the risks are... a risk for no reward is always a bad deal, no matter how slight the risk. That's why, when you drive, you wear your seat belt... not because you think an accident is likely, but because it costs nothing to wear one, and it protects you in the unlikely event that something goes wrong.

Now, sure, women in the west still want men to marry them... that makes perfect sense. They gain legal protections and social status. But since men gain nothing, women in the west have only two options to get men to propose. First, they can try to make him happy, grateful, and protective enough that he just wants to make a romantic gesture and see her smile. Second, they can give an ultimatum... marry me or I will leave you.

Both of these can work in some cases, but western women also need to realize that some western men know all of this stuff, and may resent attempts to manipulate them into a deal with nothing in it for them.

Now, I have no problem telling women here how to get men to go for it, because I take no responsibility for men who don't listen to my advice.

Weekly Community Chat Megathread

3 upvotes · 24 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That would be absolutely hilarious:

"Hi, Neomarxists! We're a bunch of people you hate and try to silence in any way you can get away with. You did something dumb, and, in protest, we're going to shut up! If you keep doing it, we might wash your car in protest, and possibly give you a foot massage in protest!"

No, TRP is not your personal army.

I will, however, do something for you for free... because it's something I love to do, and that's explain shit so it all makes sense.

The pertinent question is "Why would reddit staff involve themselves in this sort of dramafest?"

Is it because they are secretly kiddy-touchers? Nah. It's because they are slaves to the tribal instinct.

You see, human beings are biologically hardwired to sort themselves in tribes, to trust those they see as members of their own tribe, and hate those they see as members of other tribes. What isn't hardwired is the criteria they use to do the sorting.

This is why adult human beings will come to blows over which group of overpaid adults is going to win a children's game. Hell, I think that you could make a bunch of people act hostile to each other just by giving them red or blue shirts to wear, and having them sit on opposite sides of a large room.

Reddit's staff are members of the "Neomarxist" tribe. Exactly what the Neomarxist creed is, isn't important in this case. The point is, this character they have hired is also a Neomarxist. Therefore, they believe it is innocent of all wrongdoing.

If we were instead discussing a Catholic priest, or a police officer, who was accused of this sort of thing, they would be first in line with the pitchforks and torches, because those are members of the "Tradcon" tribe.

The point isn't any sort of principle. Because neither tribe is organized on principle, they are organized on identity. Us vs Them.

If you look at the two-axis "political compass" model of US politics, you'll notice that one axis names two competing ideas (libertarian vs authoritarian), while the other has abstract names that don't refer to a set of principles at all (right vs left)... and people struggle whenever they try to precisely define them. That's because they are not ideas, they are tribes.

There are only two ways to stop a tribal conflict without wiping out one of the sides:

1. Individuals can be shaken out of tribal thinking by training them to be fully sentient. This is very, very difficult. Most human beings are not fully sentient, and I suspect the majority lack even the intellectual potential to become so. Nonetheless, if you can make a human see their own tribalism, you can sometimes get them to work against it in cases where it doesn't make sense.
2. Use tribalism against tribalism. Nothing unites like a common enemy. I trust I need not explain this point.

Of course, there is also the lurking question "Should tribalism be interrupted? Surely we evolved this instinct for a reason?"

Well, should is just a fancy way of saying "I want", but when one becomes aware of one's own tribalism, it becomes possible to notice where it is helping you (by helping you band together with your neighbors in times of crisis), and when it is hurting you (by making you hire someone who is a public relations liability and doesn't bring much to the table).

So what does TRP think of all of this?

Wrong question. TRP is not a movement or crusade, it's a study group. What individual participants think of it is up to them.

So what does Whisper think of all of this?

Whisper thinks Reddit violated the 10th Law of Power. Smart people only make smart decisions when the brain is in charge of the decision-making, which in this case clearly it isn't.

This is why becoming fully sentient is a very important move if you can do it. If and when infantile parts of your brain are running the decision-making, then being smart really doesn't help you all that much. Sometimes you may want to move along with the herd, but you always want that to be subject to a conscious cost-benefit analysis.

What else have we being lied to about?

3 upvotes · 23 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

I don't agree.

I know all these things, and I am not sad. People who don't understand the world tend to go through life wondering why bad shit keeps raining from the sky on them. They tend to try the same things over and over again and wonder why they never work.

When I became sufficiently cynical, I actually became happy again. Happier than I had ever been.

Why?

Because when all your illusions are stripped away, you realize that the default state of the universe is chaos and entropy without hope, or an instant's peace and contentment, or even life itself. Yet, here I am... alive, warm, clean, well-fed, wealthy, loved, respected, and recently sucked off by a cute little redhead.

I don't take any of that shit for granted.

Idealists compare the world as they see it to a perfect world that exists only their heads, and they get angry. They want to punish the world for not being perfect. So they sit around online whining about capitalism and listening to Linkin Park.

I compare the world to what it would be like if human beings hadn't figured out how to do all this amazing shit. Even broke angry commies are amazingly lucky and privileged, if only they realized it.

"men use children as a tool to control women..." my braincells are gone now wtf

3 upvotes · 23 March 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Well, guys, there you have it. One seriously great catch, right there. Imagine what great company she is and the fun you will have together. Imagine what a great girlfriend or wife she would make.

Okay, who wants her phone number? Line forms on the left, my dudes.

Pick-Me and Cool Girls Mega Thread

3 upvotes · 21 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Depends who you ask.

Skipmeshas hate and envy them, because they get male attention.

TRP credibility (Women of TRP)

3 upvotes · 19 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

women of TRP

Wait, what?

How many women do you think read TRP?

How not to be fat.

3 upvotes · 18 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Sadly Intermittent fasting is horrible for women who are in their reproductive years

If you expect people to believe you, you're going to have to explain the mechanism whereby it is "horrible".

But all the research has been done on men and women during menopause, there has been some small studies done on women in their reproductive years and it had the opposite effect, it's very bad for women's health.

Saying the word "research" is not a substitute for citing some.

some carbs ofc this is very very important for women's hormones, keto diets are bad for women's hormones.

Perhaps you would care to explain the steroid synthesis process in more detail?

Do girls deep down love being in a harem?

3 upvotes · 17 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

Oh, well, you won't like next week, then.

Asking Girls for Dating Advice is Unfair on THEM

3 upvotes · 17 March 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

Are we suddenly caring about what's fair to women?

Why?

Younger sister (18F) dating before me (20F)

3 upvotes · 13 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

It's not a race.

Should i divorce my serial cheating husband who is my first sexual partner and start over? I am so scared of the thoughts of me sleeping with other men.

3 upvotes · 13 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Hmmmm.

Ya know, now that you fill in that detail, I think there might be something going on here that we didn't see before.

This may be a clash of cultural expectations.

In certain traditional cultures, the responsibilities of the husband and wife are defined in terms of duties, not feelings. And, while the wife is expected to be faithful, the husband is expected to provide for, protect, help raise children, and so forth, but fidelity is not necessarily expected...so long as the husband is discrete and doesn't shame the wife by letting affairs become public, or by rubbing her nose in it.

If he's less westernized than you are, he may have thought that it didn't really matter if he had an affair, so long as he fulfilled his duties to you and kept it discrete.

But in a western style marriage, fidelity is usually expected, and, even if it's not, what is expected is emotional support and honesty. So you are very hurt by the fact that he kept this from you, but he may have been thinking he was protecting you.

Does this sound like something he may have been thinking?

Should i divorce my serial cheating husband who is my first sexual partner and start over? I am so scared of the thoughts of me sleeping with other men.

3 upvotes · 12 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

This sounds like you come from a different culture than most of the people whose responses you are upset about.

However, you are factually incorrect. The "red pill" does not define "purity" at all, because the red pill is not a set of moral standards. It's an assembly of techniques and strategic advice.

"Purity" has no objective definition. It can't be seen in a microscope or measured with a set of calipers. It's subjective, and it matters because people think it does.

That means what matters is not the objective definition of purity, because there is none. What matters is what /u/sciencehacker's options are.

She has the following choices:

- Stay with a man who has not given her sexual fidelity, and is unlikely to in the future, and whom she does not trust.
- Re-enter the dating market as a divorced single mother.

I think everyone here agrees that those are both shitty options, but those are the options she has. What's important is not which one a bunch of internet strangers think is better for her, but getting her to understand that those are her options, and what the real implications of each are.

Repairing this relationship would be incredibly difficult. So would trying to find a new mate as a single mother.

Plate made a 20 slide PowerPoint show on why I should promote her to LTR

3 upvotes · 12 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

My problem is that I can't help but feel like she's trying to manipulate me into committing.

Actually, the problem is that she's not.

She's supposed to "manipulate" you into committing, at least in the sense that she's supposed to do things that make you want it... instead of just telling you to give it to her.

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/7zaana/the_talk_is_socially_retarded_do_not_tolerate_it/

How attainable is waiting for marriage if you aren't compatible with the men who want that?

3 upvotes · 11 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Men are people, and they want things. They have goals, needs, wants, feelings, and desires of their own.

You have determined that abstinence until marriage serves your wants. But you haven't told us what, if any, thought you have given to how this interacts with what he wants.

If you want a monogamous and lifelong marriage, then you are asking a man to commit, for life, to something he hasn't actually experienced before making that decision. While it would be very easy to come up with a bunch of arguments as to why he "should" want this, most of them involving vague phrases like "strengthen my bond" and "level of intimacy", it's less easy for you to explain how this benefits him in terms of things that actually are a priority for him.

Why "rp is just a toolbox" seems to fail to defeat any moralizing argument.

3 upvotes · 8 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Nothing in TRP prohibits you from having and following a code of ethics. You're welcome to discuss why certain morals or values might exist, or their benefit in the context of strategy, however arguments that stem from morality (i.e. this is evil, therefore) are strictly prohibited.

Hi, I'm the guy who wrote these words, so I'm here to tell you what they mean. You need me to do that, since you got it totally wrong when you tried to do it yourself.

You thought I said "These actions are neither right nor wrong, since actions are tools, and tools are only as good or bad as the purpose you use them for."

Then you made an argument against that, which I won't address, because it's completely irrelevant.

What I said is:

Nothing in TRP prohibits you from having and following a code of ethics. You're welcome to discuss why certain morals or values might exist, or their benefit in the context of strategy, however arguments that stem from morality (i.e. this is evil, therefore) are strictly prohibited.

Which means that TRP doesn't concern itself with what ought to be, but with what is. You can argue about what ought to be all day if you like, but do it somewhere other than TRP or I'll kick you out.

What ought to be is a matter of opinion. What is, is a matter of fact.

I don't try to "defeat" moralizing arguments. I simply ignore them, because moralizing arguments cannot defeat, or be defeating by, anything. They are a matter of opinion.

Arguing about whether something is "right" or "wrong" is like arguing about "whether horsies are pretty".

For those where it's applicable, who hurt you and what did they do?

3 upvotes · 8 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I also realized people don't really care about me. They're just curious. Once I feed their curiosity, they couldn't care less.

This is not a you thing. This is an everyone thing. People only care when you do something to get them invested.

Why the Fuck Are You Still Playing Video Games?

3 upvotes · 7 March 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

Sperg-like typing detected.

Best martial art to learn?

3 upvotes · 5 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

I'd say it depends what you want to know how to do.

While people generally think of "martial arts" as Asian and unarmed, I would say that, out of the many I have studied, the only practical one that I know, and would use in a fight, is the more or less nameless modern martial art of pistol shooting.

The only practical combative use I would ever get out of my other skillsets is to buy me two seconds and two yards to draw and fire.

This may seem a bit like a cheating non-answer, but remember that unarmed martial arts are slave martial arts, because they were developed by slave classes that weren't allowed by their masters to carry weapons. Modern MMA and Brazilian Jiu-jitsu, while both superbly effective within their arena of conflict, are also slave martial arts... they were developed by an underclass for the purpose of competing in blood sports to entertain their social superiors.

I highly recommend both of those as a fun, healthful, and masculating exercise, but notice very carefully that the elites of our society have no problem whatsoever with you learning them. They do not, however, want you to arm yourself and learn to shoot, or even to practice Kali and learn to fuck people up with a concealed blade. They can't ban these things outright, because people would just ignore them, and start to realize how little power elites really have, but they certainly do everything they can to discourage you.

If it's good for you, and makes you harder to exploit, there's a lot of people who don't want you to do it.

PLATE CAME BACK after I nexted her

3 upvotes · 5 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

You're welcome. In general, your instincts are right on... you just need time to acquire a little bit of polish.

The general principle is to suppress your protective instinct towards women when they try to control you, or act independent, but then to let it out in a moderated fashion once she submits and acknowledges you as her master.

Which is what, reading between the lines, this girl just did.

Threatened with violence at the gym, did I lose frame or stand my ground?

3 upvotes · 4 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

"Boot-licker" is an English language metaphor for someone who sucks up to authoritarians.

What happened to this sub? It used to be about improvment

3 upvotes · 2 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

As an afterthought, I realize I am no better than the poster because I did not offer any contribution that would make things better.

To some extent. I realize that having comments (and indeed posters) deleted may seem harsh or even counterproductive, but one has to consider it from the perspective of trying to keep the group useful as a whole.

It's very hard to get women to contribute... I think perhaps women instinctively reserve their investments of time and energy for their families, while men are more geared to participating in larger projects. Regardless, the strict limitation on our resources means that the mods, and ECs, and I, have to focus our efforts on those who don't first have to be talked out of entitlement and blaming all their problems on others.

If someone shows up to the house empty-handed, asks where the cookie jar is, then sits on the couch complaining that there aren't enough gluten-free cookies (because she has an allergy), while only two or three of the women there are willing to be in the kitchen with their sleeves rolled up, baking, then I tend to have a certain urge to show her the door, and let her go find her own cookies.

This is because I know from experience that getting her to understand that metaphor, and how selfish she is being, is a slow and painful process, requires a lot of personal attention on my part, and has no better than a thirty percent chance of success. That time I would put in would be better devoted to writing articles, or giving advice to someone who is better primed to receive it.

It is especially frustrating when the non-contributors complain about male participation. While a great number of male drive-by commentators do indeed have to be shown the door (and the mod team speedily does so), a great deal of the effort that sustains the group comes from a few men, who do a lot of modding and other tasks with very little visibility or thanks, most notably /u/CrazyHorseInvincible and /u/EpicLevelCheater.

This idea that I would limit their participation based on the say-so of someone who just wandered in off the street is not only inappropriate, it's annoying. One of my most deeply held opinions is that ungrateful people are trash.

So I am willing to write a post asking women what insight they seek when they come to this site.

I would greatly appreciate that.

I started following RPW because I was married to a man who needed a lot of control in our marriage and it helped me understand his perspective. I am still learning about how men think.

It's perfectly okay to articulate your thoughts in posts even if you aren't the world's greatest expert. Each step in the understanding process is important, and if you articulate your thoughts, then others can have something to discuss. And, hell, if you're wrong about something, then maybe someone can notice that and talk you out of it.

I believe most women came to this site originally for this purpose, but now are disappointed to find it to be a handbook on how to attract an alpha trad con male and tells them the only tools they have are their looks and their virginity. I know this is not your teachings, but nevertheless it comes across that way.

Absolutely.

Especially the virginity part. A large partner count is not a cause of not being a "keeper", it's something that happened because she wasn't a "keeper". There are lots of 16-year old virgins running around at this very moment who are already unsuitable partners, and will have N-counts of 10 or so by age 20, because their behaviour is wrong.

Behaviour is the easiest thing about ourselves to change, and it produces the greatest results with the opposite sex. And this is what I try to teach.

I have, however, accepted that it is an uphill battle, and you're only going to get a few victories here and there. Messages about how to vet, and how to reject unsuitable men, are much more appealing to women than messages about how not to get vetted, and how not to be an unsuitable woman that men will reject after one night of sex.

This is why FemaleDatingStrategy is three times the size of RPW, and growing rapidly.

And that's okay. It's always been easier to get people to eat donuts and wheat thins and low-fat microwave frozen meals than fresh vegetables and grass-fed beef. Those people are gonna wind up fat, yes, but that doesn't affect the rest of us. We can still treat our bodies, our minds, our partners, and our lives in the right way, and reap the rewards.

If RPW never develops into anything more than a place where the few women who are willing to listen can meet the few women (and men) with the right knowledge to impart, then I am satisfied with that.

Imagine thinking that some of this does to men too and that only woman can be victims

3 upvotes · 28 February 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Which bit of this is the strategy?

Stop Putting Condiments on your Shit Sandwich of a Life

3 upvotes · 19 February 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

Sure you could.

Then there would be a bunch of unhappy desperate cucks standing around hating you personally, and chads in general. If you ever wonder why there are so many commies around nowadays, there's your answer.

Letting other men languish in loserdom sounds like a grand idea only so long as you see them as the competition. But your competition is someone else's potential ally... or puppet. Whom they can gather together, forge into a weapon, and point at your throat.

Making yourself ungovernable is a great way to protect yourself from authoritarians, but it's even better to make other people ungovernable, too.

This is not a zero sum game.

Exactly how mainstream are Red Pill concepts? Just saw a 2xchromosomes post about a girl's experience with Trp hit the front page.

3 upvotes · 25 January 2021 · /r/askTRP

And you care about this because?

The Most Important Thing

3 upvotes · 25 January 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

However, this perspective starts to break down when it comes to excelling in particular pursuits. I am smart enough to do anything I want decently well, and I am mostly limited by time rather than skill when it comes to collecting hobbies and becoming somewhat proficient in them. However, because I have seen real brilliance and real talent, I know that there is no amount of "courage" that will allow me to compete in the arena of excellence in many areas (including some intellectual ones!).

This isn't an article on "how to excel". It isn't even an article on "how to not suck". It's only about about "how to stop being so afraid and hopeless that you cannot move".

"How to be the best in the world at something" is an article I will never write.

I have accepted that I will never write as well as you, while you, perhaps, will never play the piano like I do. As a white, Jewish kid I will never compete in the octagon with you, while you might never match me in out-smarting the tax code.

Only those with genetic advantages can be the best in the world at something.

But I think you underestimate the role of non-genetic inheritance. You are descended from many generations of Jew bankers and intellectuals, while my ancestors were Minnesota farmers and this guy, sure. And that may be why I am a really big bastard, but beyond that, how much can we really say about what's in my basic recipe?

You were raised by people who thought outwitting the tax code was cool (hint: the tax code is written to exempt people who paid bribes to be exempted), while I like to punch people in the face. That's you hit the books while I was in the gym. I think a lot of what most people describe as "talent" is actually "enjoyment of practice". I will never play the piano as well as you do, but FunSize will, because she can't leave the damn thing alone.

And I did read the article to the end ("What's important is not to achieve great victories, but to move the needle"), so I know you kind of address this... but you don't really offer an answer.

That's because I didn't set out to answer the question the you are asking.

Is there a point where virginity/inexperience is more of a turn off than a turn on?

3 upvotes · 22 January 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

I avoid virgins... when I am looking for an easy lay.

If a girl I actually like is inexperienced, that just means I get to teach her.

Is first dealbreaker jealousy a red flag?

3 upvotes · 20 January 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Jealousy is a feeling. It's not reasonable for him to have expectations for how you feel.

However, if that jealousy provokes controlling behaviour, like telling him to stop seeing his friends, that's a different story.

Trying to socially isolate a partner is one of the common signs of an abuser. If you're doing this, he's right to be suspicious.

If all men struggling with dating were to turn gay, most would have their dating problems vanish, doesn't that suggest dating is hard cause of women ?

3 upvotes · 11 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

many men told me that iam attractive (nobody told me this before especially women)

Women do not generally tell men they are attractive. One has to infer this from their behaviour.

Pretty old but still a great response

3 upvotes · 11 January 2021 · /r/PussyPassDenied

If you think I can even remember what you were wearing yesterday, you vastly overestimate how much attention I am paying to you.

If porn is bad because it desensitizes men, then vibrators are also bad because it desensitizes women

3 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Toys and porn are scapegoats, not the problem.

So PPD in a nutshell

3 upvotes · 5 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Sure. And I understand why hanging around angry dudes might not be your cup of tea.

Thing is, you don't have to. You don't have to spend time here. You could be off using those art skills to karma farm on mainstream reddit, with funny cartoons, or pictures of cute kittens or sexy women, or whatever.

But you're seeking out things that make you mad, just like the weird race of pointy-toothed snake-men you have created for us does. So what's going on here is not so much that you've created a strawman argument in order to prove something, as that you've created a strawman as a sort of punching bag because you want to be mad.

But people don't actually want to be mad when they're not mad already.

So I kinda think that you really are already mad about something, and you're finding ways to express that anger.

You must be 6ft tall, tattooed, and have a job to provide for her kids because she's not getting a job anytime soon.

3 upvotes · 5 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And if people call me a misogynist, I just smile and ask "so what"?

Because so what if they do?

If no one hates you, you are not living your best life. Because anything you that is at all remarkable or has any passion in it is going to rub somebody the wrong way.

Truth

3 upvotes · 4 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And the definition of "Chad" is... the guy who women want.

So apparently, these horrible creatures only like things that they like. Scandalous!

r/whereareallthegood men is extremely rude and has nothing to do with women being entitled at all. It's pure misogyny

3 upvotes · 4 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And?

Hi hello

3 upvotes · 3 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

maybe 5% should be allowed to vote

Why?

Schrodinger's cat is cooming in its grave #2

3 upvotes · 3 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Is she still playing make-believe?

Can't heal from multiple broken hearts?

3 upvotes · 3 January 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

You're unable to separate the doings of an individual and instead blame an entire gender.

+1

/u/luckylittlestar

Marriage after abortion?

3 upvotes · 3 January 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

As usual, the answer isn't what you "should or shouldn't" do. There are places to discuss moral philosophy. RPW isn't one of them.

What the real issue here is how to discuss this issue between the two (three) people it actually effects, and reach a settlement that addresses everyone's needs.

You want to be a mother, and feel like you don't want to terminate.

He doesn't know if he is ready to be a parent, and may be anxious because you have all the rights in this situation and he has nothing but responsibilities.

So you are going to have to be able to address that. People don't necessarily need to get their way, but they need to feel like they are being heard and their opinions are being considered.

Yes we need more masculinity.

3 upvotes · 3 January 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

men who use violence to avenge their wounded pride

So, you choose to construct the problem of psychologically damaged men as being a problem with masculinity instead of problem with psychologically abusing men?

It's funny how when a socially protected category of men (like black men) are discussed, everyone suddenly understands how abuse, neglect, and contempt can lead to violence. But the moment the subject broadens to men in general, everyone suddenly forgets again, and it's "masculinity" that's to blame.

The problem is being very carefully interpreted this way in order to suggest that men are a sort of defective woman, and that they would be less "toxic" if they were less "masculine".

This kind of character assassination, victim blaming, and weaponized language... I wonder how people would react if we called it "toxic femininity"?

CMV: Ladies, the only reason you are single is: A - You're delusional about your mate value or B - You're insufferable

3 upvotes · 2 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Readers: behold how the agree and amplify strategy to a hostile response invokes a bantering response instead.

Now, he has an opening to say something "creepy" which isn't creepy at all because it's humorous... thus further demonstrating the theme of "I am not afraid of other people's disapproval".

This one is well played. Next, we will look at an example of one he didn't play so well.

What do y'all think of polyamory?

3 upvotes · 31 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't have to "forgive" you anything. You haven't done anything to me. Why would I be mad at you?

The person you have wronged is you.

Telling yourself your situation is hopeless may make you feel better momentarily because it's "not your fault", but it leaves you stuck in inaction. And so every day is like the last one.

And you end up spending the majority of your effort just trying to feel okay. Like, right now at this moment. You end up in a place where you don't even care that you don't have a plan for your life, because, hell, the master plan is "get through the next 24 hours".

Sound familiar?

Most (non-psychotic) mental illnesses are imposed by external factors in early life, but they exist as self-perpetuating patterns of thought.

When you can see them as existing within yourself, rather than as a problem with society, this empowers you. Because you have no power over society, but you do have some power over yourself.

What do y'all think of polyamory?

3 upvotes · 30 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

i didnt mean it in such a self-centered way.

Your intent is not malicious. But you are indulging in a narcissistic worldview, which, since it is also painful to you, does nobody any good.

its more like im a part of the "undesirables" group.

I'm pretty sure that you haven't had any bricks thrown through your window in the dead of night, and that nobody that people take seriously is calling for your race and/or sex to be exterminated. There aren't any jobs you aren't allowed to work in, your money is just as good as everyone else's, and so on.

The struggle you are having is personal. Your own brain kinda is trying to kill you. It's a software quirk that can happen sometimes. Certain patterns of thought can get started in very early childhood and become self-reinforcing very quickly.

Humans evolved high intelligence a lot more quickly than we evolved the ability to cope with its ramifications.

Why Shouldn't Women Be Hypergamous?

3 upvotes · 30 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Doesn't matter if they "should" or not. They are.

What do you do if someone disrespects your LTR?

3 upvotes · 30 December 2020 · /r/askTRP

If someone disrespects your LTR what do you personally do?

That's vague. There are two opposite poles to this.

I don't let women play "let's you and him fight" with me. I also don't let other men handle or damage my property.

Although, frankly, if someone stepped too far out of line with either of my current girls, they would probably just put a bullet or three in him, which would fix the problem.

Is a man manly by himself?

3 upvotes · 22 December 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

+1

/u/pearlsandstilettos

I feel perpetually blackmarked and branded as a low status pariah.

3 upvotes · 15 December 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

Your experience is completely standard, right down to not sharing TRP's individualistic and anti-authoritarian political beliefs.

Weak people always want others to take care of them, because they think that they cannot do so themselves. Then when they become strong, they not only do wish to take care of themselves, they are glad that others did not take responsibility for them, because it would have cheated them of the opportunity to become self-reliant and strong.

So, what extra help do you think you need?

Would you like me to:

- Discover a whole bunch of things about how to move from failure to success, on my own, with no wise and supportive community to help me?
- Get together with a bunch of friends who did the same and share our hard-won knowledge with you for free?
- Create an entire community dedicated to sharing with you what you need to know to succeed as well?
- Spend almost a decade of our lives nurturing this garden, weeding it, and protecting it from a hostile environment?
- Be personally vilified and slandered and sent death threats for doing so, and still keep going?

Would you like to do all that? Oh, wait, I already fucking did.

What the hell more do you think you need? I did all the things you think you can't do, with no TRP to help me.

I understand you're scared, and that makes you want to ask for extra help. So what? The rest of us were scared, too. Even I was scared, once. But I didn't have anyone to ask for help, and yet here I am. Turned out the help I needed was me.

What you need to understand is that only your mommy thinks you are special. To the rest of us, you are just like everybody else. And if you want what others have, do what they did to get it.

Incel, Feminism and FDS megathread

3 upvotes · 10 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm glad you liked it.

You are still allowed to read my stuff even if it's not posted here, you know.

Incel, Feminism and FDS megathread

3 upvotes · 10 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You're not wrong, but I do not think that your point is actually a counter-argument at all.

Crushing hopelessness and self-loathing, and delusions of superiority and complete entitlement, are not really opposite ends of an ego continuum. They are instead closely adjacent to each other, to the point where many individuals will vacillate between them within the span of single day, and throughout their whole lives.

To understand why this is the case, let's take a look at actual Narcissistic Personality Disorder. Per the DSM-5, the diagnostic criteria are:

- A grandiose sense of self-importance
- A preoccupation with fantasies of unlimited success, power, brilliance, beauty, or ideal love
- A belief that he or she is special and unique and can only be understood by, or should associate with, other special or high-status people or institutions
- A need for excessive admiration
- A sense of entitlement
- Interpersonally exploitive behavior
- A lack of empathy
- Envy of others or a belief that others are envious of him or her
- A demonstration of arrogant and haughty behaviors or attitudes

That certainly sounds like FDS, doesn't it?

But what this description doesn't cover is the why of NPD. Why are people this way? Are they just bad people?

No. NPD actually comes from the persistent and resilient delusion that she is inherently unlovable. Often, this comes from one or both parents being emotionally unavailable in early childhood.

So the narcissist believes that if she is known, she will be, not just neglected, but rejected with great disgust, by others. So she strives to not be known, by constructing a false persona that corresponds to her idea of perfection, which she believes will attract love so long as she is able to maintain the facade.

All of the external habits of the narcissist are an attempt to attract love and reassurance, to hide any weakness or vulnerability, and to soothe the internal pain of this core delusion. The narcissistic facade is intended not only to fool others, but to distract the sufferer from her own crippling self-doubt.

Now does it make sense how an unrealistically high self-image and an unrealistically low self-image can coexist within the same person at the same time? Does it also start to make sense that the girls of FDS would alternate between unrealistic and over entitled demands for displays of devotion from men, and displays of contempt for those same men which would realistically dispel all such devotion?

Whether you would consider them clinically NPD or not, these girls come off as hugely arrogant and needing to be taken a down a peg. But they are behaving like this because they are already down a peg... many pegs, in fact. This their way of dealing with it.

So they cannot be berated and shamed out of their attitudes, because shaming simply intensifies the pain and provokes more of the defensive response. Nor can they be loved and soothed out of it, not only because it is impossible to love such a selfish and unfeminine woman, but also because they are incapable of accepting love unless they are in total control of the source.

The reason that FDS hates men is the same reason that feminists hate men. It's not actual loathing, but combination of desperate need and dire mistrust. Both types of women are deeply submissive, and feel a strong urge act submissive in their intimate relationships with men, but they can't, because they have dire fear of exploited and hurt, either from personal experience or from being convinced of this by propaganda.

Nothing provokes hate like fear, and nothing provokes fear like absolute dependence on something or someone she simply cannot trust.

SOS. Entertaining for 14 people this weekend.

3 upvotes · 10 December 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

To minimize the load of preparation work, spread it out. Choose recipes that can be prepped in advance and just fired on the day of. Get your mise en place prepped and in the fridge the day before.

Keep it simple. A simple thing done well is better than a mediocre elaborate thing.

Stay away from recipes you haven't tried before. You want to minimize the things that can go wrong.

Don't be afraid to ask for kitchen help.

Should LVW pursue LVM or just be spinsters?

3 upvotes · 7 December 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

If someone says they "have low SMV", that's too general to give advice about.

Are they facially unattractive? Fat? Have a disfiguring skin disease? Mentally ill? Bad social skills? Disabled?

"Their ancestors went to wars" - you're disposable to the world and always have been.

3 upvotes · 4 December 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

Our ancestors did go to war, and sure you can see that as society making us expendable, but I see it as a call to being bold.

And thereby you mark yourself as one of the controllables.

If you wish to own your life, then decide what YOUR goals are, and let others set them with appeals to guilt, honour, or shame.

When feminists go surfing in feminist attire

3 upvotes · 24 November 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

I am in serious danger of running out of popcorn.

(Endgame) The Lost Boys

3 upvotes · 10 November 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

All right, fine. You want to provoke a reaction? Well, you can have one.

I'm going to use the last trick I have in my book to take a hail-mary pass at helping you. It won't work, most likely, but at least I tried.

I'm going to stop you from hanging around here whining about how you can't get younger women to look at you and everything is so difficult nowadays and successful dudes just don't understand how tough it is out there.

There is nothing I can say to you that will make you magically not a bitch, but just maybe if I take away your avenue for negative self-talk, you will try something more productive out of sheer boredom. Goodbye.

(Endgame) The Lost Boys

3 upvotes · 7 November 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

Every time I engage with you personally, and discuss your objections to red pill strategies, you nope out of the conversation, then pop up again a couple of days or weeks later with a fresh crop of excuses as to why what worked for me and a bunch of others won't work for you.

Since the truth of what people mean is discerned not by listening to what they say, but by watching what they do, I am forced to conclude that you don't want help. And that the intended audience for these excuse isn't me or anyone else on reddit, it's you.

It seems that you are more afraid of the stigma of failure than the consequences of failure, because your energies are invested in avoiding the former rather than the later.

I've run into your kind so often that I have a name for them: The Help-Resistant Complainer.

And you're absolutely right: I can't help you. Not because you are beyond help, but because any help I could give would require your active cooperation. If you refuse to give it, there's nothing I can do.

(Endgame) The Lost Boys

3 upvotes · 3 November 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

The Lost Boys are lost because they made the choice to be lost.

Well done, you found the easter egg.

Lmao they really need a reality check, these 300 pound elephants.

3 upvotes · 27 October 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

r/theredpill

How do you come to terms with men's' lack of mental monogamy?

3 upvotes · 26 October 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

It's always okay to want things.

I can want my cat to sing the lead role from Wagner's "Das Rheingold".

What, exactly, is your point, here?

Are women capable of loving men?

3 upvotes · 26 October 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

<https://www.trp.red/p/whisper/781>

All the YouTube redpill personalities except for the official channel are just chumps. Anybody else feel this way?

3 upvotes · 13 October 2020 · /r/askTRP

I don't know who "red pill coach" and "moron destiny" are, so I can't vouch for or condemn them.

But if you don't trust someone to give you good advice, don't take their advice.

Women Are For Sex – The Sexual Marketplace in ‘Current Year’

3 upvotes · 9 October 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

Is what you did in your 20s/30s, does that rampant liberalism have anything to do with why it's 10x harder for us than it was for you?

Ah, so here's the disconnect.

You're thinking "Whisper is basically Chad, and he cleaned up back in the early 90's, then picked the best ~~one~~ two, and has been living with them with threesomes on tap for 20-some-odd years, so he doesn't know just how fucked up things are out here, and moreover, he doesn't care."

I understand your objection, and I sympathize... in fact, I once dressed down Paul Elam for his send-up of "Pick Up Artists" with the argument "You have no idea what these young men are going through, they face a situation you never did, you have not done a damn thing to fix the one major problem they care about, and while you didn't personally create their problem, you're part of the generation that did, so how DARE you criticize how they choose to handle that problem themselves?".

And he printed a retraction and has shut up on the subject of PUA/TRP/etc ever since.

So, it's entirely valid that you are worried that I'm too successful to really understand that problems you face. I'm talking about solutions, and I've laid out a lot of major points for getting there, scattered through articles and comments and so forth. But what I haven't given you is hope. You don't see a realistic path from A to B, and that makes you feel like you need a more explicit set of instructions to help you along, but more importantly than that, you do not feel like if you do what I did, you'll what I got.

Basically, you're thinking that my whole case is Argumentum ad AMOG.

"Good sir – I am a sheltered, wealthy, and well-remunerated scion of The Thinking Class. I earn my daily bread with my mind, not with a wrench, hammer or plow, as if I were some feudal serf. Oh no, my station in life is so great, I am free to consider the demographic upheaval of the United States of America from the safety of my quite un-diverse neighbourhood, place of employment, and social circle.

Ah, dear friend, is immigration negatively affecting your life? Perhaps by pushing down your working class wages or rendering your formerly bland middle-class neighbourhood suddenly vibrant? I'm so sorry, but such things are quite outside my reality! What a pity that they are inside yours.

Oh I know! Why don't you just... create a bubble! Yes, that will solve all your worries, tout suite."

Does that describe your objection fairly?

Let me know, and I will strive to answer it.

Women Are For Sex – The Sexual Marketplace in 'Current Year'

3 upvotes · 8 October 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

You're still not understanding me. A "dirty screeching lib" is someone with a particular set of political opinions. But women don't have their own opinions. They have other people's opinions.

If you think of women as having opinions, and character, then you're thinking of them as adults. They're not. They're children. And when you leave children unsupervised, they run wild.

I am not, repeat NOT, telling you that you should be able to "fix" every spoiled girl out there. Someone else is holding their strings already.

What I am telling you is don't look for the ones who are trained... they are already owned by whoever trained them. Look for the ones that are trainable.

They don't realise that they are the ones ruining their own relationships. Dummies.

3 upvotes · 6 October 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

The only common element in all of your unhealthy relationships is you.

The Baby Trap

3 upvotes · 5 October 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

Okay, Vas, you just won the internet for today. Log off and go have a beer.

Thoughts/suggestions on how to recover from bad past and still find HVM/alpha

3 upvotes · 2 October 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Wrote you a whole article.

Worried I love my boyfriend more than he loves me

3 upvotes · 18 September 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

I don't know, I think it's that I'm scared to be too vulnerable you know?

Ah, there we get at your real problem.

You have difficulty trusting him (your problem), so you want the upper hand (your solution) so that you won't have to.

But that's a crappy solution. Relationships where the woman has the upper hand do not thrive, mostly because women have trouble staying attracted to men they have power over.

The question you could ask yourself instead is "WHY don't I trust him?". Is it because I have difficulty trusting? Or because I am picking up subtle indications that he is not a person I should trust?

What's with Gen Z girls posting their nudes on IG claiming women empowerment?

3 upvotes · 15 September 2020 · /r/askTRP

- Denial
- Anger <----- this one
- Bargaining
- Depression
- Acceptance

"but men cheat too! but men do 'X' too!"

3 upvotes · 11 September 2020 · /r/askTRP

"Whatever".

Don't argue with these people. Laugh at them.

Do men dislike being approached by women romantically or is that just a myth?

3 upvotes · 10 September 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Find me ten men who say they don't like being approached by women before I find you a hundred women who say men don't like being approached by women.

We are engaged!!

3 upvotes · 2 September 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

So am I! I think we've all had enough, and it's time to burn this motherfucker down. Get your rifles, and meet me at...

Oh. Engaged.

Congratulations.

Ah yes because tricking a man and then assaulting him in one of the most painful ways possible is a funny “trend” imagine if the rolls were reversed

3 upvotes · 30 August 2020 · /r/MensRights

Go ahead. Fuck around. Find out.

How do I get my successful uncle to mentor me?

3 upvotes · 22 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

It's not that our relationship has soured in any way, we are just different people with different interests.

Also doesn't help that you live thousands of miles away. Hanging out with you and /u/humansockpuppet last year was cool, though.

I am not as interested in spending the time to cultivate a harem as he is, nor do I enjoy going shooting every weekend.

Heretic.

They Have Neither Interest, Nor Input

3 upvotes · 6 August 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

The post from /u/Whisper seems also to disprove your post. You're saying women can't tell you what they want (specifically regarding a relationship) because they don't want any (particular) thing. Whisper's post says women want something specific (even if they don't consciously know) and the way they tell you is disguised. Thoughts on that?

I would describe these as two ways of looking at the same thing.

Let's try phrasing it like this:

- Women don't know in advance what they will like.
- They can only figure if they like something when they experience it.
- They know how they want to feel, but they have no idea what will make them feel that way.
- You can't wait for them to tell you what they want, they don't know and can't answer.

They Have Neither Interest, Nor Input

3 upvotes · 5 August 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/1v8cc0/a_woman_cannot_tell_you_how_you_must_proceed_she/

"Sacrificing" her career

3 upvotes · 31 July 2020 · /r/askTRP

Oh, please. I know this game. I teach this game.

"Prove to me that you are worthy" is something we teach young bros to say to girls, because it sets them up in the frame of "judge" and therefore "authority figure". Pickup 101.

This is the game you play with beta males who are looking for an authority figure to tell them they are good boys. I've watched you do this for years.

And I approve... I mean, hell, it's good tactics for nerd herding. You can get respect and material considerations without providing anything of tangible value. But when are you going to stop playing it on yourself?

You think of power in terms of causes, because causes get you followers and fellow soldiers, and you think of power in terms of groups of people working in concert to enforce their vision upon the world.

Other power paradigms just seem to confuse you.

Is there a new wave of RP guys on here who are taking things a bit differently?

3 upvotes · 31 July 2020 · /r/askTRP

Now I still get laid, but life is more about making money and achieving my goals in life than it is about how much pussy I can get.

Yeah, pussy is a satiable need. There's only so much of it that you have any use for.

Eventually, when you achieve enough basic power in life that you are reasonably certain of having all your basic universal needs handled, you start to be confronted with the question "who am I? what is important to me?".

Because that's the question that decides what you're going to do next.

"Sacrificing" her career

3 upvotes · 30 July 2020 · /r/askTRP

I understand what you are trying to tell me about yourself. I get it.

If you didn't feel like you could become a part of something bigger than yourself, and make a permanent change that "fixed" the world, you would be depressed. So you hear someone say he isn't interested in causes, and you think he must be depressed... because you would be.

I do not, however, fully understand what it is that does for you.

I don't generally advise that young men have relationships with causes, instead of people... causes don't have the capacity to understand your needs and give back.

And I don't generally advise that young men try to control the universe instead of trying to control their universe. Because not only does that lead to frustration, even those who succeed to any degree usually find that whatever it was they wanted to do to the world was merely the reflection of what they wanted in their own lives.

"High testosterone and physical fitness isn't required to get women just use cool word tricks" said Whisper in his latest article

<https://www.k5learning.com/reading-comprehension-worksheets>

I don't think you're getting anything useful out of reading philosophy if you cannot or will not distinguish between the concepts of "necessary" and "sufficient". An internet search engine might serve you better.

Truly an inspiration to the confused fatherless boys of trp 10/10

They don't need inspiration, and I'm not here to recruit them for a cause. I'm here to supply know-how to ones who already know who they are and what they want.

I've known you for some time now, and I've seen your talent for taking your discontentedness with the world and focusing on something which you have decided contains all the answers. But every two years or so, that something seems to change, perhaps because it didn't provide the answers you seek.

Maybe you're asking the wrong questions. Maybe the question isn't "how do I fix the universe?", it's "what do I, GayLubeOil, want my life to be like?"

That's the question I try to get young men to ask. Because I'd like to see them stop being useful idiots for someone else, and start being useful to themselves.

"Sacrificing" her career

3 upvotes · 30 July 2020 · /r/askTRP

I don't recall that you and I ever had a conversation about whether we were going to try and change society or not. We never had to. It was transparently obvious to both of us that the only time problems get addressed is when the people who have them, and the people who have the power to fix them... are the same people.

TRP was always intended to be precisely the alternative to rending your shirt and bemoaning the fact that you don't live in a fictional idealized version of the 1950s that exists only in your head. Not only because you don't, but because people in every society have actually do stuff in order to get what they want.

Should you really not date any single woman over 30?

3 upvotes · 17 July 2020 · /r/askTRP

There are plenty of wonderful, awesome women in their thirties. Guess what they almost all have in common?

They're off the market.

You see, at sometime in her twenties, pretty much every woman is going to have sex with a man. And if she's the sort of woman who it's pleasant to lie there in bed with afterwards, talking, and he's not scheming in his head how to gracefully reach the door, then he's going to want to do it again. And then again.

Pretty soon they're not just fucking, but hanging out.

After a while, this becomes an LTR.

Now, shit can happen. Maybe he gets hit by a bus. Maybe she discovers he's part of an armed robbery crew. Maybe he gets cancer. Whatever.

But even if that happens, the next time she goes to bed with a guy, it's going to become a regular thing again. And sooner or later, one of them isn't going to get hit by lightning and die.

So if you meet a single woman over thirty, ask yourself "Why is she single?". And if there's no good answer, then there's probably a bad one.

I'm an author, what Red Pill lessons should I include in my story?

3 upvotes · 30 June 2020 · /r/askTRP

None.

You won't be making the red pill better, you'll just be ruining fiction. If you want to send a message, try email.

A tiktok with the message "enslave all white men" gets full support from the comments.

3 upvotes · 28 June 2020 · /r/MensRights

Good luck with that, sweetie.

She Stopped Mid Blowjob & Kicked Me Out

3 upvotes · 26 June 2020 · /r/askTRP

Correct. TRP is a numbers game. We try to teach you how to maximize your odds and success rate by knowing what generally works, and, more importantly, by knowing how to figure out what works.

We do not attempt to account for the fall of every sparrow, not only because we cannot, but because we wouldn't if we could.

Some women will just have some unusual shit going on. Speculate about it only out of idle curiosity, as a form of entertainment... because you can't fix it, and will likely never even know what it is.

Do not overinvest time, thought, care, or effort into any woman who has not yet demonstrated, over time, that such investment will be worthwhile.

Why am I so content with being an underachiever?

3 upvotes · 21 May 2020 · /r/askTRP

Underachiever at what?

Food for thought.

3 upvotes · 21 May 2020 · /r/MensRights

In a similar light, women are not vending machines where you insert kindness coins until sex falls out, and men are not slot machines where you pull the sex handle until you win the commitment jackpot.

You're not a beta becoming an alpha. You're an alpha recovering from a fucking disease!

3 upvotes · 10 May 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

I suggest you include a chapter on how not to pick childish quarrels on the internet.

Here, let me give you a little time to think it over.

You're not a beta becoming an alpha. You're an alpha recovering from a fucking disease!

3 upvotes · 10 May 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

Okay, so you're going to accomplish something any day now.

What's this book about?

You're not a beta becoming an alpha. You're an alpha recovering from a fucking disease!

3 upvotes · 10 May 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

Refresh my memory, what exactly have you written lately?

Can't love women after swallowing the red pill?

3 upvotes · 9 May 2020 · /r/askTRP

It's hard to trust and love women after all the having the fantasy broken but perhaps it's the way one thinks of trust/love (with women) that needs to change.

One needs to learn how to trust and love women appropriately.

Boxing or BJJ? Also how has it changed you mentally?

3 upvotes · 4 May 2020 · /r/askTRP

Both, but don't be a beginner in both at the same time. Pick up one, then the other.

TRP was meant for Average Frustrated Chumps not Bottom Tier Omegas

3 upvotes · 3 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The OG RP dude bros just didn't quite understand what they were dealing with when they tried to save Redditors

We're not trying to save you.

We're trying to enlighten you.

You have to save yourself.

In an ideal society, what should men and women's gender roles/social expectations look like? If you could design your own society how would you socialize men and women differently?

3 upvotes · 3 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

My ideal society isn't designed. No single person (not even me) is smart enough to design an entire society that works at all, much less is optimal.

If I were to give advice for forming a society, it would be characterized not by what to do, but by what to avoid.

Do men value companionship?

3 upvotes · 3 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Thanks for being a good sport and playing along.

Female hypergamy: Do I need to shut up and settle?

3 upvotes · 2 May 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Certainly. That's each and every woman's choice to make.

To amplify this somewhat:

Women's sexual strategy is more nuanced, and therefore often harder to learn, than men's. With men, we just have to teach them to push the buttons labeled "self-improvement" and "confidence" as hard as possible. A man can be a turbo-slut for years and then still have a loving traditional family the moment he decides he wants one.

But women's sexual strategy involves choices with tradeoffs.

If you "aim too high", you risk being nothing but Chad's latest conquest... sure, you can be feminine and warm and loving in a world of women who offer sexuality and nothing else, but that's not a guarantee, just a good tactic.

If you "aim too low", you risk being in a relationship that, while easy to get, is so unsatisfying that you end up cheating on him. Sure, no one who cares about ethics wants to think of themselves as someone who would do that, but even the best of us have our breaking point.

Similarly, women can suffer if their self-esteem is too low, or if it's too high. They can fail by being too forward, or not forward enough. They can get hurt from being too sexually available, or too sexually unavailable. And so on and so on and so on.

In short, and I say this without a trace of sarcasm, women who want long-term happiness through stable relationships do have it very tough indeed, especially since (and this is the worst part for them), almost no one is willing to tell women the truth. Even the ones who aren't trying to get into your pants still don't want to look like big meanies.

And when everyone has been trying to feed you nothing but chocolate and spun sugar, then chicken, spinach, and rice can taste a lot like cruelty.

If there's one piece of good news, however, it's that even if no one can give you a detailed enough rundown so you're really sure of how to make those choices, you're still lightyears ahead simply by knowing those choices exist and that you must make them.

Narcissistic Personality Disorder Tells

3 upvotes · 1 May 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

And?

How I feel about dogs changes their capabilities not one whit. It also doesn't change where the burden of evidence lies. Could be, for example, that dogs can fly. But if you want me to believe that, you have to show me something.

And something is not a girl with a PhD in a non-related field, who got out of science years ago and is selling celebrity psychotherapy, expressing an opinion without doing any research on the topic, coincidentally to an audience that wants to hear exactly that opinion.

That's why I wrote that article... because the whole TRP project was intended not just to help men get laid. There was already a reddit group for that. TRP was created because that group strayed away from the twin values of blunt discourse and empiricism, and because of that, we knew it wouldn't stay effective, meaningful, and relevant.

Narcissistic Personality Disorder Tells

3 upvotes · 1 May 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

And how did your cat know whether you did like a girl or not, if not by reading your emotions towards the girl?

He didn't. That's the point. He had no fucking idea. How could he have? He was a cat, for fuck's sake.

He simply had a personality that matched mine (not surprising, because I picked him out as a kitten, and I raised him), and he liked the same kinds of people I liked. That's all.

If I believed in narcissism, which I don't, then I would say what they all have in common is a disability to see/perceive another person.

Oh, you wanna know how narcissism works?

Sure, everyone gets that one the fuck wrong. They even named it wrong. Most psychologists don't have a clue.

NPD is very simple, it's just backwards. NPD, at its core, is a single delusion (a delusion being a persistent false belief that is not altered by contradictory evidence). It's the patient's delusion that she is inherently unlovable.

This is almost impossible to spot because the characteristic behaviour of the narcissist is to act as if everyone must adore her, and the world revolves around her, and the sun shines out her asshole. But it's all an act. The narcissist, convinced that she cannot be loved as an ordinary human being, sets about pretending to be someone who could be, someone who is... perfect.

This is why the narcissist insists that she is perfect and amazing, tries to convince everyone to see her that way.

And she becomes very, very angry if anyone dares to see her as an ordinary, flawed, mortal human being. Why? Because deep down in places she can never talk about, she is convinced that if her mask is pierced, everyone will recoil from what is underneath as if it were a giant spider.

Why? Because she's horrifying and unlovable. Nevermind that around her every day, she sees ordinary humans being appreciate despite their imperfections. Doesn't matter. They are not horrifying and unlovable like her. Delusion, remember?

So how does someone get this way? Neglectful or abusive parents. When you're six years old, and mommy doesn't love you, you have two options... either you are a bad girl who deserves it, or mommy is crazy. And if you think about how totally dependent small children are on mommy, then it's not hard to realize that the first is the less threatening option.

Imagine, after all, if you believed in god, and thus had to decide if god was a sadist, or if human were inherently evil, and deserved all this suffering.

This is why narcissists are controlling, abusive, and can fly into a rage at seemingly innocuous things. She needs you to see her as perfect, because she's convinced anything else leads to instant perma-rejection... by everyone. If you aren't taken in by her act, she'll get mad at you for not being fooled, even if you are in the very process of trying to reassure her that the hurt and sad little girl she feels like inside is much more appealing than her normal insistence that she is the most beautiful girl in the world, or the most artistically talented, or the most pious and godly, or whatever stake she has tied her self-image to.

Dating very attractive girl with high N-Count and many male "orbiters". Seeking advice on handling jealousy.

3 upvotes · 29 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

Enjoy your turn, but accept that it will be temporary.

LTR won't send nudes because it's not exciting anymore

3 upvotes · 26 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

she didn't want to because she knows I am going to say she looks hot

So what shouldn't you do next time?

Girl says I'm full of it

3 upvotes · 25 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

This is clearly a shit test and I have no idea how to pass

I cannot help if you do not read what I write.

I feel evil for living the TRP philosophy

3 upvotes · 24 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

Why the fuck do you have a female therapist?

Why the fuck do you have a therapist at all?

How to be a Skeptical Bastard

3 upvotes · 17 April 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

Spending time writing year long essays and books about addiction, trying to find 'truth' does nothing but achieving writing year long essays.

"Truth" means "predictive power".

Done.

Relationship question

3 upvotes · 12 April 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

This is not the way to persuade her. You can't just go full-on attack on the character of someone she loves and expect her not to become defensive.

If you want to be heard, you're going to have to dial it down.

Onlyfan girls

3 upvotes · 10 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

What I don't understand is that is it that motivates beta males to pay for these things?

Why care?

Just be thankful you are not them.

Is cohabitation bad in ALL situations?

3 upvotes · 7 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

"Cohabitation bad" was always an oversimplification.

Some of us pointed out that living with a girl, especially when you haven't yet mastered game, carries certain hazards. And then a large mass of simple souls who have trouble with non-binary thinking interpreted that according to the limitations of their brains.

There are some actions that have mostly benefits, and few or no drawbacks, such as lifting weights. We recommend those.

Other actions have mostly drawbacks, and few or no benefits, like getting married. We are dead set against those.

But most things you can do have benefits AND drawbacks, and therefore it's up to you to decide how they match with your priorities. TRP deals in hypothetical imperatives, not categorical imperatives.

She attempted suicide and now im stuck....

3 upvotes · 2 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

Hard next.

Fellas, I'm struggling with fighting off black pill beliefs. I'm worried it will overcome me like my nigga Venom

3 upvotes · 31 March 2020 · /r/askTRP

I know I can improve myself by losing some weight and getting a fresh cut but I'm worried I'll still be seen as undesirable.

No, you're worried that it would be hard. And self-sabotage makes a wonderful excuse not to try.

Don't talk to me like a bitch.

Woman cheers the fact that men COVID-19 mortality rate is double that of women. Just imagine if the situation was inversed? They'll call it (justifiably) misogyny.

3 upvotes · 22 March 2020 · /r/MensRights

Learn to fix your own car, ladies.

"dont have any expectations"

3 upvotes · 9 March 2020 · /r/askTRP

Ignore what women say. Watch what they do.

Boyfriend left me :(

3 upvotes · 2 March 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Well, there's a bunch of sides to any story, so I can't know how it actually went down. But what I can do is explain his reaction, in translation from malespeak.

It says "I wish I could confide in you and trust you to support me, but I feel like I can't, because I'm concerned about receiving harsh criticism about things that are already really bothering me."

Something to understand about men is that offering them unsolicited advice is an insult. Unsolicited advice preceded by criticism, doubly so.

So whether you are acting horribly critical in ways you are unaware of, or he is anxious and ridiculously sensitive, or somewhere in between, I cannot say. But this is what he is trying to express.

I struggle to get erect with new girls

3 upvotes · 27 February 2020 · /r/askTRP

This isn't a bug, it's a feature. You want your sex with some degree of intimacy. Your dick is trying to tell you this. Listen to your dick.

Veer Clear of Female Therapists

3 upvotes · 19 February 2020 · /r/askTRP

Well put.

The important takeaway from this is that modern clinical/counseling psychology doesn't attempt to study what is healthy and influence culture accordingly. Instead, it attempts to use post-hoc rationalizations to enforce a popular and completely unscientific (in the sense of being generated by no objective research) definition of what acceptable behaviour is.

There is no qualitative difference between the modern christian cherrypicking a "bible" (which was already cherrypicked by the council of Nicaea) to generate post-hoc rationalizations for white western European tradconism, and a "psychologist" citing a DSM made of post-hoc rationalizations for globalist homogenized left-wing humanism.

In either case, the respective philosophy began not with "here are the facts, what course of action do they imply?", but with "here is the desired course of action, what facts can we find to support it?". (Which is what I mean by "post-hoc rationalization" in this context.

Example: in the DSM 2, homosexuality is called out as a "paraphilia", hence a type of mental disorder to be treated and dealt with as a mental health issue. However, in the DSM 4, it's not. It's considered a perfectly normal, sane, and healthy lifestyle and not called out at all.

Now, whether you think homosexual is a sickness or not isn't the point here. The point is that psychology, as practiced, collectively had an idea, that idea changed 180 degrees, and that change was not driven by any objective research, but rather by a change in popular opinion.

That which changes based on popular opinion, rather than objective investigation, is not a science.

Should men feel guilty for being attracted to teenage girls?

3 upvotes · 28 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Should" is just a coward's way of saying "I want".

I don't care whether men feel guilty for being attracted to teenage girls. Or whether teenage girl feel guilty over being attracted to men.

Living together before marriage- is it a good thing? Why or why not?

3 upvotes · 27 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The other day, I drove without a seatbelt and didn't die.

Ok, TRP is bad, but how do we keep the young, immature, insecure, shy men away from TRP?

3 upvotes · 26 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Bad for who?

It's super easy to keep young men away from TRP. All you have to do is offer them an alternative sexual strategy that works better.

I would say "no one can do that", but that's not fair, because the truth is that no one has even tried. Why? Because the fact that TRP is works is the very reason they hate it. TRP empowers young men is sexual interactions with young women, and that is the very thing people hate about it.

If they were to offer a viable alternative, they would be creating the very thing they hate. Anything they suggested would have to not work in order for them to find it tolerable, but it would have to work for young men to be drawn to it.

So that's why they spend all their time scolding men about vague accusations of ill-defined immorality. Because that's all they have. They can only offer the stick and never the carrot, because their whole goal is that they don't want young men to have any carrots, ever.

As i write this, there is a young woman kneeling by my chair with her forehead pressed to the floor. She's waiting for me to get done writing this comment, and give her permission to service me with her mouth. And I guarantee there are people who just read that sentence whose blood is boiling on account of it. Even though this girl is not them, has nothing to do with them, and they will never even see me, much less kneel beside my chair, they still cannot stand any man to have power over any girl, ever. That's why they are mad, and that's why TRP makes them mad.

As George Orwell put it, if you want to understand the future, picture a boot, stomping on a human face, forever. The boot will always be there to crush the face, and the face will always be there to be trodden on. The only choice men have is whether to be the boot or the face.

How can the sexual marketplace be “regulated” without basically forcing people to be intimate with those they don’t desire?

3 upvotes · 26 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They did. Then reddit banned it. Now they bother us instead.

But it's not just the incels. Some of our own students make the mistake of comparing the disney version of the 1950s (or the 1800s) with the daily reality of their own lives.

And some then think "islam" means "women are well-behaved and obedient", not "women are so cloistered and wrapped up that you never get to even see one unless you are rich enough to buy her off her dad".

Ultimately, in both feminism and tradconism, the sexuality of young women is withheld from young men in order to force them to buy it with labour. The only difference is who controls the young women's sexuality, and profits off the young men. In tradconism, it's old men, and sometimes old women. In feminism, it's old women, and sometimes young women.

TRP is different. It's about gaining access to young women's sexuality by learning to withhold things that are treated as entitlements in tradconism and feminism... male attention, guidance, and protection. Because young men are just supposed to do that for free in feminism and tradconism, they have to pay (directly or indirectly) for sex.

In TRP-land, young men learn NOT to give that away for free. And pretty soon, young women start giving them sex to get it, and counting themselves lucky to be able to make the swap. Thus, money never enters into it at all.

A much older yet influential critique of TRP on a different sub. Thoughts?

3 upvotes · 25 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Thus far, no one who objects to TRP has offered an alternative that is proven to work.

Why?

It's not because nothing else could ever work. There may be any number of other things that could work. No, it's because the fact that it works is what they object to. "Emotionally abusive" is just their dog whistle phrase for "empowers men, and I don't like that".

Anything less than totally female hegemony is interpreted as abuse.

Well, tough cookies. We don't care.

"RP works tho"

3 upvotes · 24 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

First you asked if TRP "works". But now you're asking what it's for.

If you don't know what it's for, how could you tell if it was working or not?

I'm a rpw but my boyfriend doesn't feel appreciated?

3 upvotes · 19 January 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Read her other response. They're both drunk. They are caught in an escalating pattern of fights and resentment.

My boyfriend (24m) says some concerning things and It's hurting me (19f)

3 upvotes · 6 January 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

You seem pretty bitter.

I'm told I taste okay.

Of course I'm not going to share my boyfriend. Just because men want to fuck around doesn't mean they get to.

Some of us do. Others don't.

If he doesn't want that, then he can leave. He can fuck all the girls he wants if he leaves this relationship.

Which is precisely what he is going to do.

My boyfriend (24m) says some concerning things and It's hurting me (19f)

3 upvotes · 6 January 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

I understand that not every man can sell that.

If you're not into sharing, you would probably be best served by getting out early, and finding a dude who knows how to lie about male nature better.

But I'm guessing you're probably going to stay awhile before getting upset enough to leave.

33 year old former feminist. Am I screwed?

3 upvotes · 5 January 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

It changes your goals and your timeframe.

Thirty year old women are in competition with twenty-year old women, make no mistake about that. This is because marriage cuts out the middle.

Barring a few unusual-circumstance exceptions, any man who isn't married (or in a relationship that might as well be marriage) by his mid-thirties is either so unattractive that women don't want his commitment, or so attractive that he can get enough sex to satisfy him without giving it up.

If what you wanted was kids, I would be teaching you how to settle for the first group, how not to get caught when you inevitably cheat on him, etc. But what you want is a man, and that frees you up a little so you have a shot at the second group.

Why? Well, you don't need to find him right fucking now. A woman who wants children does, because the relationship has to stabilize for a couple years before a man is going to be ready to have kids in it. If you're already over 30, you have to run that clock while your biological one is running out. So you only have time for one horse; better make damn sure you don't fall off it.

Having a little time to play with allows you to set yourself up to compete with the girls in their twenties for one of the good ones, instead of having to settle for their leavings. But what you have to do is work on yourself five times as hard as they do, because you are competing for the sort of man they will not spurn for being "too old".

33 year old former feminist. Am I screwed?

3 upvotes · 3 January 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

What you haven't said is whether you actually want to have children or not.

That particular factor changes a lot of things about how you go forward.

How to stop cheating on my LTR?

3 upvotes · 28 December 2019 · /r/askTRP

Making you not want to cheat is her responsibility, not yours.

The thing that many of us dread the most happened to me

3 upvotes · 17 December 2019 · /r/askTRP

I don't give legal advice. I'm not a lawyer.

But I will tell you some cold hard facts.

- She has lots of legal options, and lots of legal rights, and lots of laws on the books that were passed with her welfare in mind. You have none of these things.
- The system does not have a conscience, and it doesn't know the meaning of the word "fair". It will take your last dollar and then throw you in prison for being broke.
- Only DNA can prove the child is yours, and your DNA is unique to you. Anyone who cannot find where you live, work, or hang out, who can't find you... can't find your DNA.
- Whisper, a random dude who nobody in the courts or legislatures is aware of or listens to, happens to think that responsibilities come from choices, and choices come from rights, and therefore he who has no rights in a situation has no responsibilities.
- The glass ceiling for your reproductive rights is "you should have kept it in your pants". Women didn't really like it very much when they were told they should have kept their legs closed, so they took action at the ballot box to make sure their rights didn't end at sex.
- Men haven't done this, because there is no male solidarity. Men look out for women, not for other men.
- The only person looking out for you is you.

Friend of mine asks LTR to hang out one-on-one

3 upvotes · 9 December 2019 · /r/askTRP

Should I tell my friend not to ask my ltr to hang out one-on-one?

No, you don't need to mate guard. Your woman did exactly what you want your women to do... she mate guarded herself, and told you right away what happened.

The only thing you need to do is give her some pets for being a good girl.

Discussion about (why we generally don't recommend dating) red pill men?

3 upvotes · 1 December 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

What you see in TRP is the process of becoming. What you want is the end result.

Women fear an angry misogynist, and adore a happy misogynist.

Top toxic Female Dating Strategist inadvertently explains how they lose their pair bonding ability after riding the carousel.

3 upvotes · 26 November 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

'Catching a dick' is easy but not enough.

Not enough for what?

For average-looking women to have sex with the most attractive of men? No, it actually is. A female 5-6 can absolutely hook up with top-tier men if she's offering no strings attached sex and willing to get rejected now and again. (The tricky part is having social access to the places they hang out so she can meet them.)

Remember that this man fathered a child on this woman. While married to this woman.

No, what additional attractiveness (physical, behavioural, or whatever else ya got) is required for is getting something other than semen from guys. We are perfectly willing to give away our semen to any girl who's not actively repugnant (physically, behaviourally, or whatever else ya got), because sperm is cheap. We produce it all the time, and we can always make more.

Women are programmed to be pickier because they get one egg a month from a limited supply that they had with them at birth.

So advice to women on how to get laid is like advice on how to take candy from a baby. A special sort of baby that doesn't like candy very much.

All women are whores

3 upvotes · 19 November 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Ooooooh, look, this slave collar has "Jesus!" written on it! It must be soooo much more comfortable to wear!

Get that tradcon save-society nonsense the fuck out of my seduction tactics board.

I am profoundly unhappy.

3 upvotes · 17 November 2019 · /r/askTRP

1. Denial
2. Anger
3. Bargaining.
4. Depression. <----
5. Acceptance.

Apparently my life doesn't matter.

3 upvotes · 17 November 2019 · /r/MensRights

Exactly. It once made sense for the man to face the unknown threat alone, because women cannot fight without guns, period.

But guns are a thing now. If we have to check some sketchy shit out, I'm grabbing the Tavor X95... but she's grabbing the FN P90.

TRP Men after break-up go back to spinning plates, what should I, as a woman, do?

3 upvotes · 9 November 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Will take this to PM when I have time to write.

Boyfriend has semi nude pictures of an other girl on his phone

3 upvotes · 8 November 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Being jealous of jerk-off material doesn't really make sense.

https://old.reddit.com/r/RedPillWomen/comments/dnbwa0/trp_men_after_breakup_go_back_to_spinning_plates/f5fsohc/

How do I stop being bitter and get over oneitis ? I now believe every girl is a slut. Is this true ?

3 upvotes · 7 November 2019 · /r/askTRP

I see it as a form of virtue signalling... they want to believe that it's more than just pickup.

And while taking charge of your life can prove transformative in many areas, "masculinity" or "truth" or other such abstractions are not good goals because you can't measure if you are achieving them.

I can tell if women desire me or not.

Slept with older Asian women in one of my classes, she's 32 I'm 22. After we we done fucking and she was leaving my car I saw that she recording a voice memo the whole time that showed 45 min. What the fuck. Do I text her and ask her why? What the fuck.

3 upvotes · 6 November 2019 · /r/askTRP

Not gonna bet against that one. There are plenty of people out there, both male and female, who are into being cucked.

If that's what's going on, it's pretty safe to roll with compared to most married chicks. Eliminates the risk of her wanting commitment, or a jealous husband making trouble.

'An Essay for Women,' by Rollo Tomassi

3 upvotes · 4 November 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

And this is precisely what will make you vulnerable to skilled manipulators. Your desire for comfort and safety. How do you think these male dating coaches manage to sucker so many women into believing nonsense?

You are correct, but you say this as if it were a problem you propose to solve by persuading women, with words, to do something different. One of the fundamental ideas behind the red pill is that instinct cannot be changed, only redirected. You can't get women to "listen differently", any more than you can get man to be attracted to a woman's PhD instead of her ass.

There is already an instinct-driven way that women deal with the danger of con men. It's a process of requiring so much investment by the man before showing a return, that she is no longer a profitable target for someone trying to run a low-effort con. It's called "vetting".

This, of course, has risks of its own. Men, unlike women, do not experience an increase in ardour from confronting obstacles, and many a woman has played hard to get only to discover to her later dismay that she was playing hard to want.

Vetting, then, becomes a balancing act of how to drive away R-selectors without driving away K-selectors. This is complicated by the fact that "con man or not" isn't a binary condition... many men who are looking for a quick hookup and a quick exit with one woman will be more interested in investing in another.

So what we teach women is a multi-pronged strategy:

1. Make yourself as desirable for investment as possible, so as to be attractive for K-selection.
2. Refine your ability to discern, so you can vet as quickly as possible.
3. Find your targets in venues favoured by K-selectors (churches, schools, and workplaces, not nightclubs).
4. Reward small investments with small returns, rather than holding out for more investments.
5. Give small rewards up front without waiting for investment... then watch to see if they are reciprocated.

What do you consider a female equivalent to beta buxx?

3 upvotes · 4 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Saying you want to be an engineer doesn't make you one. Neither does signing up for classes. Neither does going to them, or even graduating. What makes you an engineer is doing engineer shit.

I've been doing engineer shit for eighteen years. It's how I buy steroids and ammo (also occasionally food). So what kept me doing engineer shit for eighteen years?

Well, the fact that every day I got out of bed to go do engineering shit, I didn't say "fuck this, I'm running away and joining the circus". That was a decision I made every day (even if only implicitly), and I made it the way I did because of my mental and emotional state.

If I were doing engineer shit because, oh, well, I've got the degree and the pay is okay (it's actually better than okay), then would not be very committed to engineering. I'd be looking to jump ship at the first viable alternative, because doing engineer shit is hard.

No.

I'm committed to engineering, because making shit and seeing it is so satisfying, and gives such a sense of accomplishment, that I give zero fucks how hard it is. All that does to me increase my feeling of accomplishment.

Some people get married because they have those same sorts of feelings for a particular person. Others get married because they feel like that's what they are supposed to do, or because they are afraid of being alone, or because their biological clock is ticking, or because all their friends were doing (no, I'm not kidding or exaggerating).

Commitment is level of motivation to stay, not a piece of paper you wrote promising you will.

CMV: the manosphere has become nothing but a wasteland of unmasculine tradcon men pining away for the impossible.

3 upvotes · 4 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If a man yearns for a set of restrictive rules to live his life by, and a big Sky Daddy to spank him if he's bad, then I don't really consider him to be all that masculine.

The harm porn does to women.

3 upvotes · 4 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

1: Most porn is violent. It is normalizing sexual violence against women.

When a feminist says porn is "violent", she means it's femsub bdsm.

But who is driving femsub bdsm? It's submissive heterosexual women, that's who. She's the single most common type of kinky person in the world.

Why do professional athletes get married?

3 upvotes · 1 November 2019 · /r/askTRP

Just because someone has a relatively high SMV doesn't mean they understand how human mating actually works... or know that their SMV is high.

Girl leaves date crying

3 upvotes · 29 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

Don't obsess over it. She'll either call you again, or she won't.

What would you spend $1k on?

3 upvotes · 29 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

What do you carry?

What would you spend $1k on?

3 upvotes · 29 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

Do you own a rifle?

LTR lied about fucking a guy in the past. Broke up with her. Did I do the right thing?

3 upvotes · 26 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

I think everyone in the west today has a vague sense that they are living in a society which is in decline. And certainly TRP would agree. But the question is "why?".

The tradcon answer is "we don't have morals/values anymore".

The problem with this answer is, one, it's not correct, and, two, it isn't an answer.

Everyone has values, because the word "values" just mean "what you think is important", and morals just means "what you think is wrong". Now, everyone has things they think are important, and everyone who isn't a psychopath has something they think is wrong. What tradcons really mean by "no morals" is that our morals have changed... away from strict monogamy. They would argue that strict monogamy preserves the nuclear family, and the nuclear family is the building block of society.

The problem with this is that plenty of non-monogamous societies have thrived at prospered. The Romans, at the height of their power, were at their most decadent and had their wildest orgies. It was only during the period that they cleaned up their act and became Christians that their empire collapsed. Monogamy is neither necessary nor sufficient for a functional society.

Even if the decline in "family values" could explain anything, it wouldn't be an answer, because then you would have to explain why these social mores were discarded in modern times, when previous generations had not done so. What changed? Does anyone really think that 1964 was the first year in all of human history that women ever said "hey, I think I might want to have sex with more men?".

No, the causes of societal decline are political and economic. The Roman empire collapsed because its centers of agriculture became politically separated from its centers of industry and military power.

So what are the political and economic factors in the decline of our civilization?

You interpreted me as saying that we are in decline because we gave women freedom. Not so. You cannot give women freedom, because freedom is not a thing women can have. They don't understand it, don't value it, and don't want it. If you set them free from male control, they immediately look around for someone to tell them what to do. Usually this ends up being "other women". That produces a self-reinforcing feedback loop where every woman is looking at all the other women to help them decide what to do with their lives.

But trying to make women free (and failing) doesn't really create problems for anyone other than the women themselves.

What creates problems is giving women, not freedom, but power. Over others. (The example I gave was the vote.)

This is because women don't prize or understand freedom. They don't want to be free. They want to be safe, protected, and cared for. And because of this, the first thing they try to do with power is take away everyone's freedom, in the name of making them safe, protected, and cared for. And when the men angrily object to losing freedom, the women angrily demand to know why men are taking away their right to be safe and protected.

In our particular society, the women are busily voting for more cookies, but don't understand the need for baking or earning money to buy flour, sugar, and eggs.

Do eggs go in cookies? I have no idea. I don't eat cookies.

Sex issues with my fiancé 33M

3 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Sex doesn't work that way. Nerve endings don't wear out.

About to leave my husband for the new man

3 upvotes · 18 October 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Yeah, you figured it out. I mean, my entire posting history is available to this dude with one goddamned click. Yet, here he is, asking for advice in redpillwomen.

Wtf are women looking for in r4r type subreddits while they are in a relationship?

3 upvotes · 15 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

Don't listen to what women say, watch what they do.

LTR lied about fucking a guy in the past. Broke up with her. Did I do the right thing?

3 upvotes · 14 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

And will continue to do so. DARE is for attracting women. Are you a woman?

Or are you a man? Are you patient and perceptive enough to sit still and understand an explanation of something that takes more than thirty seconds to think through... and doesn't involve selfies, drinking alcohol, or really cute shoes?

Trolls gonna troll, but for the rest of you, this is a teaching moment.

Is there always necessarily something inherently wrong with someone who can't find a romantic partner?

3 upvotes · 10 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There is only one reason that someone who wants an LTR can't find one:

They have not encountered anyone who meets their requirements and whose requirements they meet.

But there are several reasons why this could be the case:

- They are not encountering anyone.
- They are not encountering anyone who meets even the most basic of requirements.
- Their requirements are so exacting that no one meets them.
- Their requirements are exacting enough that anyone who meets them has requirements exacting enough to exclude them.

The solution to the first two is change the environment one is looking in. The solution to the third is to lower your standards. The solution to the fourth is a combination of self-improvement, and possibly also lowered standards.

Which one of these means "something is wrong" with them is a matter of opinion.

What percent of women in their 20s are living the glamorous lives of debauchery that the manosphere attributes to modern women? Isn't that what all this is about?

3 upvotes · 9 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Knowing what would make you happy, before you actually go out and get it and see, is a type of self-awareness that is not always easy to attain. Modern western white women are particularly deficient in this area.

All the money, power, privilege, favoritism, and opportunity in the world won't make you happy if you don't know what to go after with it.

What percent of women in their 20s are living the glamorous lives of debauchery that the manosphere attributes to modern women? Isn't that what all this is about?

3 upvotes · 9 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

A life of debauchery isn't glamorous or happy for girls. Make no mistake about it, most promiscuous women are miserable. They're not doing this sort of thing as an exercise in joyful hedonism, but as an unconscious attempt to soothe emotional pain that has nothing to do with sex.

Just because the modern western white woman is the most privileged creature in the history of history itself doesn't mean she's happy.

Let's "Steel-Man" Both Positions

3 upvotes · 8 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is why we stress what we call an "abundance mentality". Men especially do not prosper by treating women as if they were a scarce resource.

Of course, an abundance mentality is easier to have if one has actual abundance. But since having the mentality eventually creates the condition (and it works the opposite way, too), men need to learn to emulate it at first.

One way that I teach this is for men to cultivate the sort of pride that would rather go home alone than be rewarded for stifling themselves.

Let's "Steel-Man" Both Positions

3 upvotes · 8 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Only if they successfully do so. That's the nature of risk.

Being risk-prone in a risk-averse environment is not necessarily an advantage. But being willing to take calculated risks when surrounded by people who aren't is a huge advantage.

For example, a man who is willing to risk rejection (because the actual cost to him is very low) has a huge advantage over men who don't.

One of the biggest panty-peelers I saw, when I was figuring this stuff out, was willingness to say and do stuff that she might either hate or love. A man who is unwilling to risk blowing up a budding attraction will be unable to make it grow, because everything he says and does will be safe, unobjectionable, and bland, bland, bland.

A man who would rather go home alone or even get slapped, than keep his opinion to himself or say things he doesn't mean... will get rejected faster, but only by the women who truly don't like what he has to say. The others will be more attracted by his confidence and sense of self.

Recall that it is better for a man to be rejected nine times and wildly successful once, than it is for him to be blandly unobjectionable ten times. This is because out of ten approaches, the first man will find an average of one woman who wants to tear his pants off right there, while the second man will never get that no matter how many times he plays it safe.

6 years trying to change and be submissive and nothing turns out. I need help.....

3 upvotes · 5 October 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

I have always had the perception that I as a woman should approach a man and woo him, when it should not be so.

Why not?

Whoever gave this idea that approaching men was unfeminine? Why would it be?

Women do not typically approach men because of supply and demand dynamics, not feminine instinct.

Hung up at my school.

3 upvotes · 5 October 2019 · /r/MensRights

Did I ask for this? No, I did not.

Does the person who made it have more relevant experience? No, they are in college, and I am twice their age.

They should probably stop talking now.

Honest question for long time red pillers

3 upvotes · 5 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

I can't imagine going for an LTR in this day and time without it being one-sided polygamous for yourself, just not worth it. Maybe I'm missing something?

There are no red pill and blue pill goals, only methods. Your goals are whatever you decide they are.

Me, I like female companionship. Thus, LTRs offer to me things that hookups don't. Your experience may vary.

Honest question for long time red pillers

3 upvotes · 4 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

Redpill strategy does not preclude LTRs. If a girl is worthy of one, and you're open to one (and if have trouble "staying detached", you are), then why not?

If a girl deserves to win the prize, let her win the prize.

How to make a threesome happen?

3 upvotes · 1 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

She then goes on to tell me she's bisexual and in an open lesbian relationship.

She would not have brought that up for no reason. So she's thinking what you're thinking.

Next time you arrange to take her out, express some interest in meeting her girlfriend. Get the two of them together with you in the same room. Involve alcohol. Run game.

Shouldn't be too hard.

Thoughts on r/theredpill closing?

3 upvotes · 1 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You seem to have confused speech with coercion. Reddit is free to say whatever it wants. And others are free to say whatever they want about that.

"Libertarianism" means "we don't want the state to force you to do stuff at gunpoint". Not "we don't want people to say mean things about you if you do something they don't like".

Interesting question: do you think reddit is a publisher, or a carrier, of speech?

Should /r/TheRedPill be banned? Looks like Reddit admin think so...

3 upvotes · 1 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I just said I wasn't interested in discussing whether or not it was a good idea. Can you find someone else to talk at about that?

It looks like you accidentally discovered the whole reason I wrote all that stuff (TRP) in the first place. Because I like to talk about things that interest me.

Whether reddit can survive or not is interesting, because it deals with fundamental dynamics of psychology and economics.

Whether RPS is "crying" or not is just gossip. You obviously don't like him, how about you just tell me that? And I can file it under "things people told me today that I don't care about" for the several minutes or hours it will take me to forget it.

You seem to expect me to argue with your opinion of him as if I, or he, had some sort of need to be thought well of by you. I don't even know who you are. Why would I try to convince you to think otherwise? You own your brain, such as it is, and may store whatever you want in there.

Why WOULDN'T you want a girl to feel clingy and insecure?

3 upvotes · 1 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

"Clingy" and "contemptuous" are not the only options.

Whats with this 'warrior' thing?

3 upvotes · 25 September 2019 · /r/askTRP

A brilliant, brilliant human being. Did anyone call him an intellectual merely because he was one of the most brilliant people in the United States? No. When did he become an intellectual? When he finally spoke out concerning something he knew absolutely nothing about: the war in Vietnam. When he denounced the war in Vietnam, Chomsky put on the requisite display of utter ignorance and thereby became a leading American intellectual.

I like this guy.

An intellectual is a person knowledgeable in one field who speaks out only in others.

This describe their typical habits, but doesn't actually define them. I prefer Thomas Sowell's definition:

An intellectual is someone whose work product is ideas.

although I would expand it to say that the intellectual is one whose work product is the generation and proselytization of ideas. An intellectual doesn't merely have ideas, he seeks to persuade others of them.

But what he doesn't do is test them, the way an engineer or scientist would. The intellectual can be rational, he can be logical, but he is never empirical. And empiricism, not logic, is the engine of truth.

Western intellectuals have forgotten (often on purpose) that the role of the intellectual is to start conversations, not finish them. To point out possibilities and viewpoints, not truths. Intellectuals in the west have long envied the scientist and the engineer, because of the high esteem that they are held in compared to other cultures (especially in America; less so now in Europe). But the intellectual cannot adopt empirical methods without changing disciplines, and thus they have chosen to attempt to usurp the throne of truth by denigrating empiricism itself.

It is empiricism that is the fundamental and defining value of western civilization. It was the replacement of religious dogma with empirical investigation that led to what we now call the Age of Enlightenment, before which western civilization wasn't a thing, or at least not one worth mentioning.

Philosophers who replace empiricism with pure logic (often from faulty premises), and intellectuals who replace both with rhetoric and postmodern discourse are undermining the very things that made the west such a great, powerful, and wealthy civilization that they could actually chose to sit around coming up with abstract ideas all day and still get fed by others.

Growing Past The Red Pill: Analysis of Our Weaknesses

3 upvotes · 24 September 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

If you throw a ball, and the dog can't find it, it does no good to point to it with your finger, because dogs don't understand the concept of pointing, and it will just stand there sniffing your finger.

TRP is not for dogs.

Why do women have an aversion towards men in STEM fields?

3 upvotes · 17 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Nerds aren't attractive, because women prize social skills and don't give a shit about technical ones.

Great, you can design an iPhone. That's certainly impressive, but she can buy one for a few hundred dollars whether she sucks your dick or not.

Money doesn't attract women anymore, because they can often get their own, and if they can't, well, then Daddy Patriarchy (in the form of the government) will just take some of yours and give it to them. Or someone else will just give them some. When was the last time you saw a homeless woman?

No, the modern woman doesn't want a provider. She wants someone who makes her feel all funny inside. Nerds can't do that.

Don't fall for "natural".

3 upvotes · 13 September 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

hypergamous,

Yep.

the most responsible teenager in the house

Uh-huh

incapable of unconditional love for her man

Unconditional love doesn't exist.

and irrational (hamstering away her misbehavior)

Often.

These are considered truths. Are you saying that these traits are a biological where as femininity is not?

Femininity is by all means biological. But femininity is a positive trait that it is beneficial to emphasize and enhance, therefore we advise women to go beyond the degree of femininity that comes easily and naturally.

By the same token, I am naturally strong compared to women, because I am male, and have spent all my life internally bathed in testosterone. But do I stop there? I would certainly be strong, still, if I did.

However, I do not. I pursue strength to the point that it is unnatural. To the point that it hurts. To the point that an olympic bar bends as I drag the weight from the floor... and my vision is clouding over with grey mist. Is that natural? Of course not. It's not natural for a human male to lift as much weight as your average chimpanzee. It's a struggle. And yes, it hurts. A lot.

But I do it because it makes all moments when I not lifting... better. I am taking a positive trait associated with masculinity and dialing it up as far as I am able. A woman can pursue femininity in the same way.

Girl "wants to get to know me better" online before first date

3 upvotes · 20 August 2019 · /r/askTRP

The whole point of a date is to get to know you better.

If she has to get to know you better before getting to know you better, then she's a time waster. Doesn't matter if that's because she is excessively shy, just looking for male attention rather than anything you would be interested in, or otherwise unavailable.

Sure, you could get around this with patience and text game... but why?

There are other women.

How does a girlfriend behave differently than a wife in a relationship with a man, and how can a girlfriend be of value to him without giving away too much too soon?

3 upvotes · 31 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

To be frank, this is a frustration I share.

The majority of women are extremely risk-averse, and not only have a disproportionate fear of risk, but regard any need to take risks as a sort of injustice being actively perpetuated on them.

They keep asking me how they can secure Mr. Right into a stable marriage without any risk of being used for sex, dumped, etc. And the answer "you can't" tends to occasion much wailing and whining and damseling in general.

Life is risk. Nothing is safe, and nothing is free. The only way to be as safe as possible to be as prepared as possible for the risks you take. Avoiding risks at all costs simply guarantees the very sort of failure you were trying to avoid in the first place.

How does a girlfriend behave differently than a wife in a relationship with a man, and how can a girlfriend be of value to him without giving away too much too soon?

3 upvotes · 30 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

You are right, of course.

(Recently counseled someone through a divorce from a man about whom the most passionate thing she was able to say was "he is a really good person". Ewwwwwww.)

So many women hate risk, so they settle for Mr. Kinda-sorta-okay to avoid the risk being dumped. Then wonder what combination of dog training tricks they can use on him to make a good relationship.

Answer is, none. You can't have a good relationship with a man you aren't passionate about.

Going for betas because Chad is a "player" is like jumping off a cliff to avoid the risk of accidentally falling.

RPW was created to teach girl game, so women could actually hold onto men for whom there was some competition.

Chad, Dylan, and the Myth of "the Bad Man"

3 upvotes · 25 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Excellent question.

For a woman to change, shape, or mold a man in a relationship requires her to be in, or places her in, a leadership role, which kills attraction. However, a woman can radically change a man's behaviour in reaction to her by being radically different herself.

As a rather personal example, when I first became involved with "FunSize", she was rather confused by how catty many of my female friends were towards her. She didn't realize, at first, that I had slept with almost all of them at one point or another, and they had all tried to get commitment from me. They didn't understand why she was getting what they had long coveted. Why did she deserve it when they had known me longer and worked harder?

Had I changed suddenly from a man-slut into an ordinary dude who wanted a girlfriend and maybe a house and some kids and a dog someday?

No. What they didn't get is that I wasn't different from my old self. Instead, she was different from the other women. She didn't make demands of me, didn't act entitled to stuff. She was pleasant to be around, not just during sex, but all the time. She treated me well not because she wanted something from me, but because she wanted me to be happy.

She didn't change me into something I wasn't. (I still hate dogs, and don't want children.) I simply reacted differently to her because she was different. Our relationship goals were the same. Still are.

This is what I mean when I say that "Chad"-type dudes can and will commit. You just have to make them catch feelings. They don't stop being Chad. They just see living with you as a better dealing than gaming nightclub chicks.

The question of Billy turning into Chad, however, is entirely different. This can absolutely happen, over time. In fact, it's what TRP seeks to teach how to accomplish. However, a woman cannot be the teacher. Because the process of how this would happen would then be contradictory to the content of what was supposed to be happening.

Men have to begin, and to drive, this change on their own.

Chad, Dylan, and the Myth of "the Bad Man"

3 upvotes · 25 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'm focusing on something larger than Dylan altogether. Chad, Dylan, Alan, Tom, Dick, Harry, Alphonso, /u/Guywithgirlwithabike, and Whisper all have relationship goals.

To a woman whose relationship goals do not align with theirs, they are "bad" men, leading them down the primrose path to a life they do not want.

To a woman whose relationship goals do align with theirs, they are "good" men, and a relationship with them might or might not work out, but they are working towards goals that "consider her needs".

Now, RPW isn't for women who want a three-week fling with Dylan. Why not? Because back when RPS and I were putting this place together, we decided there was no place or need for that. No strategy is required. If all a woman wants is sex, all she has to do is not smell bad, pretty herself up a bit, not act batshit crazy, and be approachable. There's no need for a strategy forum for women to get laid any more than there is for one to teach men how to be orbiters.

So Dylan's goals don't align with those of any of the women here. It's still important to see him in terms of goal alignment rather than morality, because it's important to think in terms of goal alignment rather than morality. I've seen women practically ruin their lives trying to make a relationship work with good dudes who made them miserable. I've women in blissful relationships with absolute cads who happened to want the same kind of life they did.

1. Mutual attraction.
2. Shared values.
3. Shared goals.

That is your win/win relationship formula.

Dad trying to show power

3 upvotes · 22 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

I see no evidence of misunderstanding here.

Female manager at my job is EXTREMELY fucking anal.. how to deal with it?

3 upvotes · 19 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

Why the fuck did you take a job where you report to a woman?

Best way to tell a plate I don't like how her hair smells

3 upvotes · 17 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

What is that you're using in your hair?

Oh? Don't like the smell of it.

[23/F] I think my boyfriend (19/m) might be cheating, but am i just jumping to conclusions?

3 upvotes · 9 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Of course it matters. However, I am attempting to educate you as well as /u/AvatarFangirl95.

The important thing here isn't whether he is a "good" or "trustworthy" person in and of himself, but that she doesn't like him very much.

When you try to choose or evaluate partners by judging "how good they are", you make a critical mistake that often keeps women in bad relationships or ejects them from good ones. What you need to be judging is "how good they are for you".

[23/F] I think my boyfriend (19/m) might be cheating, but am i just jumping to conclusions?

3 upvotes · 9 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

the overall fact that he's not trustworthy

This is an opinion, not a fact.

Woman wants to open marriage to "explore her sexuality", then gets mad if husband gets laid.

3 upvotes · 8 July 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

I know plenty of chads, plenty of red-pillers, guys who spin plates, but I don't know a single one who actually has a harem of women that are faithful to him (as opposed to a bunch of informal fuck-buddies). Women today will accept quite a bit to be with an alpha, but they still have families and friends that will judge them hard for this shit.

That absolutely is a real challenge. To FunSize's parents, FanGirl is a roommate. Her sister knows the real story, but her sister thinks it's kinda hot, so no judgement there.

FanGirl accidentally let slip the knowledge of FunSize's existence and role to her family, but they are very much the sort of people who don't bring up embarrassing stuff... "Of this we do not speak".

Again, I congratulate you on your harem (non-sarcastically). Maybe I'll be at this level one day, but neither I nor anyone I know actually has this situation.

I realize that it sounds like a function of being an amazing stud, and you do have to have pretty tight game, but a lot of it is actually about certain specific things that you can do to make this happen. I talked about a few of them above. I suspect that the reason you don't see more of it is that even very chadly sorts of men don't even try, because they don't think it's possible.

/u/HumanSockPuppet, for instance, has just put together a set of his own (I've only met one of them in person yet).

I have never understood guys who have "types."

It's like having a favorite food. Just because you have a favorite doesn't mean you never want anything else. Me, I have a thing for short, curvy redheads (and there's a childhood story behind that), but a nice Asian girl doesn't go amiss. There are lots of ways of being pretty.

Woman wants to open marriage to "explore her sexuality", then gets mad if husband gets laid.

3 upvotes · 5 July 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

You don't have to fuck anyone you don't want to fuck. Women aren't allowed to rape you, either.

But why would allow a woman to make rules about what you are allowed to do with your penis, even if you have no active desire to do so? If there's something you get out of that, fine, but it's a little tiresome when you assert that this not only exists for you, but for everyone... without bothering to explain what you think it is.

Should I insist? Is chasing unattractive?

3 upvotes · 27 June 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

The prevailing opinion among women is that a man will vigorously pursue if he is at all interested. This belief is 100% dead wrong.

There are many reasons a man might not pursue, among them shyness, a plethora of options (which will focus his attention on the ones who pursue him), a highly dominant personality (which will mean he likes having the upper hand), or a knowledge of seduction techniques (he understands that playing hard to get is attractive to women).

Women who advise you to immediately next any man who doesn't chase you are women who probably don't date very attractive men.

If a man is not rebuffing you or avoiding you, then your advances are not totally unwelcome. You have a decision to make... would you rather have him, or another man, probably less attractive, who was easier to get?

Should I insist? Is chasing unattractive?

3 upvotes · 27 June 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Is chasing unattractive?

No.

I've introduced myself and he did too and seemed not bothered and pleased by my messages since I asked him if I was intrusive which he responded no. But I'm always the one who text first, compliments him and asks questions...He doesn't seem interested into knowing me and getting a conversation going.

You are dealing with a dominant personality type.

I'm starting to overthink about this situation and comparing myself to the girls he likes, I feel inferior and I don't feel like texting him again, also I think that chasing is useless.

It's not important how attractive you think you are, it's important how attractive he thinks you are.

Is "straight edge" the only way to form long lasting inner peace?

3 upvotes · 26 June 2019 · /r/askTRP

I hate to sound like a bitch. No caffeine, no CBD. Just sober as hell... i am like a scared cat. Im hypervigilant, anxious, paranoid. Simply put, i am on edge. And it is draining so this in turn makes me depressed.

You didn't get that way from "drug deficiency". So stop trying to solve it with drugs.

i'm missing something and i can't figure out WHAT.

3 upvotes · 25 June 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

You have a vision of who you want to be.

You are trying to be that person.

This places you far ahead of your peers. This kind of self-development requires years. I did not become Whisper overnight, either. Years probably seem like an eternity to you now, since you have only 15 of them, but they will pile up, and you will change. If you want it enough, and keep working.

Dealing with ghosters/flakers

3 upvotes · 3 June 2019 · /r/askTRP

Only the greatest of experts can make women wet with text alone.

You are not the greatest of experts.

Text is for setting up meets. If she won't meet with you, and just wants to keep texting, move the fuck on.

Out Alpha'ing the Alpha - strategies to help manage the uber Chad

3 upvotes · 30 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Why would you need to "manage" any other man? What's it to you if he's successful?

Fulfillment vs. Enjoyment: feeling sad!

3 upvotes · 27 May 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Yes, I get the sense that there's a specific history here which OP isn't telling us about.

This might not be something she is even consciously aware of.

Man why the fuck i cant cum?!?!

3 upvotes · 25 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Off my ship it is. Bye.

for those of you with a GF/LTR. how did yall get tell your other plates you were about to be committed?

3 upvotes · 23 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Shut up and read more.

Is there ever a reason a girl would leave you due to insecurity?

3 upvotes · 14 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

No. The effective praise is for something she has done, not something she is, and the most effective praise is for progress at something she has done at your instructions, or to please you (weight loss program, hairstyle change, etc).

I get bored and start to annoy other people for my own amusement

3 upvotes · 12 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

As comments above stated, I could be enjoying the superiority of the situation

A man who isn't afraid doesn't go hunting to prove himself "superior" to random dudes around him. Sounds like you are afraid that you're weaker than others, and this is your way of trying to prove how strong you are.

Problem is, it doesn't. Anyone can make a noise with his mouth. You're just saying shit to people, and relying on their decency or respect for the law to save you from going home minus a few teeth.

Go lift and accomplish cool shit until you stop being afraid.

I get bored and start to annoy other people for my own amusement

3 upvotes · 12 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Unprovoked aggression comes from fear, or hope of gain.

You have nothing to gain. What are you afraid of?

Mother was toxic. Feel I need women to redeem themselves to me, to make me whole.

3 upvotes · 11 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Women are first of all individuals. One woman has no obligation to make up to you the wrongs done you by another.

Women are second of all submissive by nature. This means you can mold them to treat you as you choose... but only if they desire to please you enough that they are willing to obey. Being subordinated to a strong man is an erotic experience for women, but only if they are able to trust him.

This means controlling yes, vengeful no.

You have to fix yourself, repair your issues so that you can be a strong, self-controlled man they will look up to. Then you can make them do anything you want and they will love you for it. Then you can turn women not just to slaves, but into devoted slaves who will enthusiastically serve you and be grateful for the opportunity to do so.

To fix your mommy issues, you need to spin some plates first. The difference is, you need to realize that women's treacherous nature is your fault. Women are genetically programmed to be survivors... those who enthusiastically submitted to the conquerors had long lives and many children, those who resisted out of loyalty to the dead, not so much. This means, if women aren't loyal to you... your fault. Not attractive enough, not strong enough, not brave and confident enough.

Blame yourself. When you blame yourself, you can change yourself. Improve. Be better.

Then women will be loyal to you.

The Extra Chromosome 21 Convention

3 upvotes · 8 May 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Actions not words I deeply understand and apply, yet I might not have entirely internalized the idea that feminism is an application of Marxism. I see that resources are reallocated (economical aspect) to the female from the male, not just in familial relationships, but society-wide.

You've mistaken the basic structure of what Marxism claims to be for the basic structure of what Marxism is.

Marxism claims to be about wealth redistribution, but that not actually the central modality of its operation in action.

What Marxism actually does is construct a narrative that separates humanity into an oppressed class and an oppressor class, with any individual wholly a member of one or the other. It then constructs rationalizations and calls to action for the warfare of the one against the other by any and all means available, without let or limit.

Does the claim that feminism is Marxism applied to the family make more sense now?

Girl seems uninterested then asks why I told her it won't work out

3 upvotes · 6 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Power games.

Girls try to appear disinterested to get you to chase... but if you are disinclined to do so, and wander off, they see you as more powerful.

Playing hard to get actually works on girls.

Doing it right? Possessiveness?

3 upvotes · 4 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

I disagree with "shouldn't mate guard". A man must mate guard, or not, as appropriate, and must know when to use each.

Remember that LTRs are LTRs. You demand, and receive, fidelity from them, or you are a cuck. You must not only expect fidelity, but the avoidance of any situations that might create suspicion. In this situation, you are not so much simply mate guarding, as training her to mate guard herself.

Remember that plates are plates. They are disposable, and replaceable, and if you do not treat them as such, then you are showing scarcity mentality. You must take either the attitude that you don't care if they fuck other dudes, or that, if they fuck other dudes, they have moved on and you let them go without resentment or attempts to stop them.

Simply put, if you don't want your plates fucking other dudes, then next time if they do... and speak to them as if you are just assuming that, should they next another dude, they are nexting you.

Her: "What if I kissed another guy?" You: "No big deal. You're free to move on whenever you decide you're not happy with me."

Bed logistics

3 upvotes · 4 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

A dirty futon mattress on the floor is good enough if you are attractive.

Doing it right? Possessiveness?

3 upvotes · 4 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Everyone talks about "don't mate guard!"

"Everyone" in this case is the dumbass freshmen in the back of the lecture hall. They only know Indifference Game, and their understanding of it is not very nuanced. Read my articles on Control Game.

Then understand that if you are running Indifference Game, you don't mate guard, you just make a choice between "totally don't care", and "Have fun with him, wish you the best, good luck out there". And understand that if you are running Control Game, you train your property to mate guard herself, and you expect to only need to step in if someone tries to physically force her.

Ever had a GF/LTR who made you her "everything"?

3 upvotes · 4 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Did you seriously just link to an article on the Huffington Paint?

What is the secret of ugly or broke men that get laid?

3 upvotes · 29 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

This is retarded.

Of course I know a way. I spent Sunday in bed with FunSize and FanGirl. They did get up at one point to cook me breakfast, though.

Let you in on it?

What do you want me to do?

- Spend years writing articles and comments about how women work and how to attract them? Oh, wait, I already did that.
- Recruit a bunch of other savvy dudes to do the same thing? Oh, nevermind, I already did that, too.
- Get together with some bros and start a high-traffic internet forum for men to discuss this very topic? Okay, did that.
- Set up a section of that forum where you could ask specific questions about your situation and get answers? Yep, you guessed it, we did that, too.
- Spend years moderating that forum to keep out trolls and bad advice? Check.
- Carefully vet good contributors and mark them so you could clearly identify whose advice was solid? Uh-huh.

So what the fuck else do you want? To be gently grasped by the dick and led, step by step, through the rest of your life?

There is nothing I can say to you, that will magically make you not a bitch. You have to put on your big-girl panties, take the initiative, and start practicing what you have read about.

I will happily answer specific questions about, say, how to do a freezeout to overcome LMR. But I will not design you a custom "talking to girls" workout program, because you don't need one. Do the same shit thousands of other men have done: read, try, refine, master.

P.S. FunSize thinks there's nothing wrong with your looks except "that stupid haircut", and that incel excuses are lame. FanGirl asked if perhaps you think she flew out repeatedly from another state to have sex with me because I "wrote like someone with superior facial symmetry". I just think you're fussing for special attention you don't need or deserve.

How to recognize TRP men

3 upvotes · 28 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Well, now... that didn't work out too well, did it?

Hint: If the content of what you say is contradicted by the process of how you say it, women will not be impressed.

How Do I Use This Thing?

3 upvotes · 24 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

But that would be only 0.12 standard deviations.

How Do I Use This Thing?

3 upvotes · 24 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

But men with plenty of options don't tolerate delays beyond waiting for mutual health-checks to come back clean, and younger women need more time to make a good decision.

One red pill at a time, dear.

We don't want anyone to choke.

How Do I Use This Thing?

3 upvotes · 24 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Hehehehh.

Not talkin' about Cosmo Sex Tips ("tickle his prostate with an eggbeater!"), here. Just what turns men off in your sexual history.

Fat obese fuck in my class gets more attention from the females than me. What is going on?

3 upvotes · 23 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

What argument? You haven't formed a coherent thesis. That which is not a claim cannot be refuted.

But allow me to educate you in a little more detail.

- Game is necessary (you can't get laid without some amount of it).
- Game is sufficient (game and nothing else can get you laid).
- Every other attractive thing is a force multiplier to game.
- Every other unattractive thing is a force divisor to game.
- Zero times anything is zero.
- Work on game.
- Working on game does not conflict with lifting.

- No amount of lifting will get you laid if you have no game.

Alright, i have an LTR i would like to keep, however i'm leaving the state soon.

3 upvotes · 18 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

One of the primary things we teach here is that one must exude sexual intent from the start, and constantly. Either she sees you as the sex guy, or the emotional support guy.

And what happens is that not only are you unable to properly seduce without touch and physical proximity, you're actually unable to maintain your own enthusiasm for the effort. Because... think about it. What kind of porn do men like, and what kind do girls like? Dudes like video and pictures, girls like stories, right?

So you can keep her sexual enthusiasm high for a little while... but only at the cost of a constant effort that doesn't keep your own sexual enthusiasm high. You're constantly trying to make sexy chitchat on the phone and in text, and not only is that hard to get the same effect with, it also doesn't do a damn thing for you, because you're not wired that way. This is especially true if you have other girls to go to for relief.

That's why I teach "Texting for logistics only", "no long distance for extended periods", etc.

Every single thing I tell you is a mistake is something I have tried as an experiment to make sure it really is one. I've blown up a lot of plates on purpose doing shit I knew was stupid... just to see.

For example, I once ran an experiment with three girls to see how "sharing childhood trauma" works out. Girl A I told nothing to, girl B got a story about being beaten by my parents as a kid, but I played it emotionally flat, like I'd dealt with it years ago, and girl C got the same story, but with some fake tears and a pretty convincing lib wobble.

As I expected, both girls B and C said supportive things, but girl C ghosted me soon after. There was no long term visible difference in effect between A and B, though. So now I know, and can tell other men, that it's perfectly okay to talk about bad shit that happened to you... you just can't appear to have been hurt by it.

Girls don't need to see their man as never having had any misfortunes, they just need to see him as immune to the effects of misfortune.

Anyway, I've run a couple of LDR experiments as well. And I've concluded the following:

1. You can get some momentum going at first if you have enough skill.
2. But if you're not talking dirty to each other on the phone, and if she's not sending naughty pictures, you haven't built enough.
3. Because you must cross the threshold where she's gonna fly or drive out and suck you off. If that doesn't happen soonish, you failed to build enough momentum to keep things going.
4. There is NO point in having an LDR except in the most unusual of circumstances, because there are plenty of girls right where you are, wherever you are. It's a scarcity mentality thing.

Now, this isn't to say I didn't get women to fly out from other states to fuck me (hell, I had two girls who did that because they read all my TRP shit), but that was just me showing off to my own cancerously bloated ego (look what I can do!). I could have had more sex, easier sex, and just as good sex by spending the same amount of time focusing my energy on local talent.

This raises the question of "what about oneitis?"... what if a girl is special to you? Well, mostly the answer is "don't have oneitis". But of course you have some degree of oneitis if you're in an LTR. Otherwise, what's the point?

That's OP's case in a nutshell. The answer is Under no circumstances allow your LTR to turn into an LDR. If she won't move to be with you or stay with you, then she's not making you the absolute top priority in her life.

Don't settle for anything less.

Alright, i have an LTR i would like to keep, however i'm leaving the state soon.

3 upvotes · 18 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

Either she moves with you, or it's over. LDRs don't work over any significant length of time. I ran an experiment once, to see if enough skill and experience could do it.

Can't be done.

LTR hid her location on Snapchat and showed suspicious behaviour changes. How to emotionally prepare without completely detaching?

3 upvotes · 17 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

Yeah. In your case, I would stop worrying about whether she was cheating on you or not, because it doesn't matter.

If you are feeling suspicious that she might be, then generally either she is, or she soon will be. And it doesn't make a lot of sense to obsess over which it is.

LTR hid her location on Snapchat and showed suspicious behaviour changes. How to emotionally prepare without completely detaching?

3 upvotes · 17 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

I get the feeling you guys are going to tell me she got some good dick and now she's overcompensating out of guilt or to satisfy the beta me that cares or something.

Like most people who ask questions here, you already know the answer.

You just don't want to believe it.

Discussion: the left is incapable of dealing with the current masculinity crisis.

3 upvotes · 7 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Whether they are incapable or not is irrelevant. They don't want to.

They want to get rid of white males, not because they are racists (their leaders aren't, they just cultivate it in their voters), but because white males, if you look at the demographics, are libertarian, fractious, and hard to rule... at least, much more so than other groups.

Doesn't matter why they are that way, only that they are.

White males want freedom, and freedom limits the power of the political class. Minorities, and especially women, can be bribed with their own tax money to give up their human rights. So, for the benefit of the political class, white males must be eliminated or reduced.

This is the cornerstone of left-wing policy in America... reduce the power, status, wealth, and numbers of white males by any means possible. They are, of course, aware that this will turn America into a third-world country, because white males and their libertarian values maintain the first world, and created in the first place. But they do not care about this, because when America is a third world country, their lifestyles will be the same as before, and they will wield vastly more political power than they already do.

Socialist dystopias are hellholes for the proles and Outer Party members, but they are paradise for the Inner Party.

(Everything I said about white males here also applies to the middle class in general. A strong middle class is bad news for a wannabe autocrat.)

Walking away from a man who's not ready to stop spinning plates

3 upvotes · 7 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

All the men I know who have upgraded plates to LTRs are unhappy with them. They aren't RP men making conscious choices, they are just retiring playboys who felt their age and the pressure to have kids.

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/8dqf35/indifference_and_control_why_you_dont_wanna_be/

Most women get barely any sex at all

3 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Arguing semantics is boring, so I won't.

What you are really complaining about is that you're having trouble getting off.

I get more shit from my LTR when I am more attractive? How to handle?

3 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

Like she found her own hair in my sink and asked me whose girls hair that was.

Agree and amplify. Make up an imaginary girl. Describe your sexual romp in great detail.

Is this a good or bad sign?

3 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

It's just a shit test. You passed.

You need to train her better, though. That was a pretty disrespectful shit test.

Why does TRP invoke such...PURE RAGE?

3 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

All hatred is rooted in fear.

Q4M: Are any of the users here 8/10 or higher (very attractive) ? If so, what is your sex life like?

3 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Bitches can't resist me.

The Power of the Pussy by Kara King

3 upvotes · 4 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Low value men pay prostitutes to have sex with them.

High value men pay prostitutes so that they will have sex with them and then go away without expecting anything else.

Thus, a prostitute might encounter both high and low value men, and anything in between.

But OP was a stripper. And men pay strippers for one thing only: to pretend to like them. Needless to say, high value men are not interested in paying for that service. So strippers encounter almost exclusively low value men.

This makes them tend to believe that men are useless, easily manipulated children. Which is a pretty obvious conclusion if your profession is "exploiting childish, useless men".

How to explain basic RP principles to a youngster?

3 upvotes · 4 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

Good.

Women need to do stuff which GIVES them energy and men need to do stuff which RELEASES energy - Agree?

3 upvotes · 2 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

This is vague, and not very helpful. "Energy" is a metaphor, usually for motivation to do something.

So what you are really saying, perhaps, is that men tend to initiate more plans and projects. Well, duh. Remember that 87% of all women who ever lived have descendants, versus 34% of all men. That means that men have to be roughly in the top third to successfully breed, whereas women just need to not be the worst one out of ten.

So of course women don't really do much of anything on their own initiative... they don't have to, and they are descended from a long line of women who didn't have to, either.

When men do stuff, they're not trying to "release pent up energy". They are trying to excel, because they have to... no one will love them or care about them at all if they do not.

For a woman, having people give a crap about you is the default condition (and you have to be kind of horrible to make them stop). For men, it's something they have to earn. This is why male high achievers outnumber female high achievers, and why male homeless outnumber female homeless... women are born in the middle of the scale, and they stay there. Men are born at the bottom, and either climb or don't.

NASA is unable to launch the all women spacewalk due to many technical constraints, and the only thing that matters to society is that women were barred.

3 upvotes · 29 March 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

If I were a woman who had actually accomplished something noteworthy, I'd be super pissed off at all these clowns trying to claim the credit in the name of women everywhere.

No, "women" didn't do it. One particular woman did.

Of course, we know what is behind all this.... abject terror that they really aren't as good as men. The people they are trying to prove something to is really themselves.

Do you find yourself growing more elitist as a result of TRP?

3 upvotes · 24 March 2019 · /r/askTRP

No, I came up with TRP shit as a result of my natural elitism.

Now I only want to be surrounded by people who are very driven and well put together.

Good idea. Don't hang out with losers. Failure has a splash zone.

Which Sweater Should I Wear?

3 upvotes · 15 March 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Or sometimes, just playing with the child means the world to her.

I would EC you for this if I hadn't already done so.

Yes, women are perma-children. But what do you do with children? Berate them for not being adults? No, you teach them things, and you play with them and have fun.

A child is an annoyance only if it is badly brought up. Calling someone a child is an insult only if you think poorly of children.

Would you ever wife a former pornstar?

3 upvotes · 14 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Can't turn a ho into a housewife.

Hos don't act right.

Why Do So Many Men Ignore Women's Roles?

3 upvotes · 14 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Can someone explain how some younger guys are so blind to this?

Because they haven't been taught.

When your culture insists, for ideological reasons, that there are no inherent differences between the male and female brain, then it cannot turn around and acknowledge those differences by teaching young people how men and women behave differently.

Orbiter "niceguys" are really just men who are trying to attract women by doing what would be attractive to a man. They don't know how men and women are different.

And there are a lot selfish, manipulative, slutty women out there who are just trying to attract men by doing what would be attractive to a woman.

Submissive behaviour

3 upvotes · 13 March 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

You seem to be responding more to my tone than the content of what I am saying... but you've also been able to put your finger on why:

You made a comment before that women submit to a man that they trust, not just any man for that would be blind and foolish trust. I would agree with that statement and it's sound advice, especially for young posters. And it meets the need of the man for respect and admiration who has earned her trust and it meets the need of the woman to feel safe and secure around the man she has chosen to respect.

To connect the dots here, this is the reason why it is very difficult for women to think in the abstract about submissive behaviour as a sexual strategy.

Because when one is speaking about these concepts to a woman who is not already involved with a man she deeply trusts, then the "man" she imagines is sort of an abstraction, and her brain treats "him" like a stranger. And the idea of submitting to a stranger is repugnant.

This is the reason for the strong urge to say things like "I am not a doormat", "I don't believe in power struggles", etc. It's not an assertion of independence in the abstract sense; it's a reinforcement of boundaries against indulging submissive tendencies with a man who hasn't yet earned trust.

Women who are already in the kind of male-led relationships we talk about here... well, they are much more able to discuss the idea comfortably, because they are thinking about these concepts in terms of one specific dude who has already earned their faith and loyalty.

RPW 101b: moving beyond "how hold fighting stick"

3 upvotes · 12 March 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

It's a male strategy to be attractive to "most" potential partners, because men aren't the gatekeepers of sex, and sex is part of the initial stage. Outside of religious context, no healthy attractive hetero man is going to consider giving relationship-commitment to a woman without determining her sexual value first.

Indeed.

Men are generally expected to do the approach, but wise men would know that approaching a woman who hasn't extended an "invitation" (indicator of interest) first, is unlikely to result in sex.

This has long been a staple of TRP material. While men are responsible for getting to sex, it is either the man or the woman who initiates the interaction. Women have many come-hither signals available to them.

Back when I was single and searching, I had two different "modes" ... etc, etc

You are conceptualizing attractiveness as a state of being rather than a skill set.

Vet first, seduce later.

Vetting is partially a myth. Women love to believe that they are evaluating a man's character and true internal worth during the period between meeting and screwing. Largely what is happening during that period is a tug of war between his attractiveness, and her self-protective reticence. The balance of these two forces determine how fast the rope moves. Trustworthiness has little or nothing to do with it.

How much a woman trusts a man is almost entirely determined how much she wants to jump on his penis.

That's why my advice downplays sexual delaying tactics. They are synonymous with "selecting someone you're not that into".

RPW 101b: moving beyond "how hold fighting stick"

3 upvotes · 10 March 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

But when you talk about baseline stuff, people take it like it's supposed to be "law" of sorts. Oh no you can't have male friends, your n-count will ruin you, blah blah.

Then when you say baseline stuff don't need to be strictly followed (and sometimes, not even relevant), people (especially male posters here) will get all riled up about how we're delusional AWALT or whatever.

We have the same problem with 'spergs in TRP. They interpret "Your emotional investment is a very valuable thing, never give it out except as a reward" as "never be nice to a woman or you are weak!".

Over here it's "a high n-count indicates you are probably a bad investment, and men will shun you" as "do not have sex with a man you are passionately in love with until you have gone on 57 dates, or 4 months have passed since the first date, whichever is greater, or you are a plate!".

There are always people who look for hard and fast rules to avoid having to make nuanced decisions and take responsibility for them. But neither men nor women can be truly successful in love unless they become the kind of person who is willing to make a judgement call and live with the risks and rewards.

Like many other great men, Keith Flint the frontman of The Prodigy, killed himself because of the divorce industry

3 upvotes · 7 March 2019 · /r/MensRights

Having a bad day?

Or have you just had so many bad days in a row that they've all just run together?

Is this forum filled with nerds pretending to be alpha?

3 upvotes · 26 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

a collective can usually be boiled down into a single piece of information.

It can't.

But that's not what you are asking, I think. I think what you are trying to get at is "What's the central thesis? What ties all this information together?"

That's very simple to answer: Humans' mating behaviour is controlled by their instincts, not their ideologies.

Is this forum filled with nerds pretending to be alpha?

3 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

I'm actually a very clever labrador retriever that has learned to type with its nose.

[CMV] Women like roided/unnatural men. More men are taking steroids because of this.

3 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The stage look isn't for women, it's for the judges, who are all inculcated with the niche aesthetics of the subculture. Professional bodybuilding is a closed feedback loop that is no longer correlated to mainstream aesthetics.

However, these dudes do not walk around day to day looking like they do on stage. That would be unsustainable. You could die of that. They're dehydrated as fuck, and at about 3-4% body fat... not to mention side-lit and painted orange.

Day to day, they'll run much higher body fat (8-10%) because being too low inhibits muscular gains. This produces a very different look.

Do women really hate the idea of men improving themselves?

3 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Although men kind of do the same thing - a lot of them want a girl who is a size 2 and has perfect skin but without any of the maintenance involved.

One of the things I try to teach young bros is that you want a girl who has elaborate beauty routines in her twenties rather than just "teehee, I'm just naturally like this!"

Because "the wall" a woman hits around 30 years of age is actually the point where her looks reflect her level of effort more than they do her genes. At that point, the second girl is going to get fat and dumpy real fast, which makes her a bad LTR choice if you're into that sort of thing.

Do women really hate the idea of men improving themselves?

3 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The big fear is that a self made man is a "faker" because he wasn't born that way.

Of course, nobody was. We all emerged naked, covered in slime, and screaming like a bitch. What makes the difference is what we did since then.

Girl opened me and i fucked up it

3 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

Yeah, you fucked up, but that's not necessarily evident.

Pretend you ignored the opportunity because of indifference, not lack of confidence.

Are Blue Pill cucks and not women the biggest threat to other men?

3 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

Fare thee well, Sir Knight. Good luck on your journey.

Before TRP I could feel myself falling in love and be attracted. Now I'm just not interested

3 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

Yeah. I wonder if all those guys doing "nofap" would be surprised to hear that the couple behind "your brain on porn" are a pair of feminists who are also advocating the replacement of all sex positions with a certain other one they say is less "oppressive" because it places the woman in control of the action?

The nerves on your penis don't wear out any more than the ones on your tongue.

What can happen is that you can be unable to get it up because you masturbated three times that day, or you can lose some erectile function because you're just plain getting old, or your wife can fail to turn you on anymore because she turned 40 and got fat. Or you can be bored of the same woman.

But if you think you have "porn induced erectile dysfunction", then you have something else inducing erectile dysfunction, and you're using porn to try to compensate. The source of that dysfunction can be just being tapped out (stop jerking it for two days and you'll be fine), being bored of your partner or otherwise unhappy with your sex life, or you have an actual, physical health problem.

It's all bullshit.

Before TRP I could feel myself falling in love and be attracted. Now I'm just not interested

3 upvotes · 24 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

NoFap or YourBrainonPorn

Are both the brainchild of certain specific feminists. You notice they don't go on and on about how vibrators are "desensitizing" women, do you?

Vibrators are fine. Porn is fine. Nerves do not "wear out". If you are having a problem you think is caused by porn, you're wrong... you have a problem and you are attempting to get relief with porn. (And it's probably not working.)

Negotiating for affection

3 upvotes · 24 February 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

And you're outta here. Calling in an airstrike.

Because insulting me is like pouring water on a duck. But I won't let you say vile things about her.

That Awkward Moment When You Have to Lie in the Bed You've Made

3 upvotes · 23 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Then point out how they aren't selling, and watch them try to figure out who needs to be punished for this outrage.

That Awkward Moment When You Have to Lie in the Bed You've Made

3 upvotes · 23 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

1 submitted topic in TRP. (Removed.) 15 comments in TRP. Wants to tell us all about what TRP is and isn't.
You ain't talkin' serious, son.

Let's talk about actually finding someone right for you.

3 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You know, this "becoming attractive to women isn't worth the effort" line would be a lot more convincing to me if any of the people saying it had actually done so first.

Especially since it always seems to be coupled with "that's impossible because I am genetically unfuckable, despite the fact I got all my genes from my parents, who self-evidently weren't".

Virgin women are massively overrated by Red's. Lets debate.

3 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's very difficult to discern someone's true attitude until you get them angry.

A girl can say that she doesn't care about dick size all day long, and you don't necessarily know whether she means it, or she's just trying to look like a good person. But if she starts talking about someone she doesn't like and accuses him of having a micropenis, then she obviously sees that as something to be ashamed of.

Ditto for saying men shouldn't be afraid to show their feelings, then calling men she doesn't like "crybabies", etc, etc.

In general, girls see the same things as unmasculine that men do. They just hide it until they get mad.

Are Red Pilled men the only men who truly understand and respect Women?

3 upvotes · 19 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

In general, this kind of negative incentive can have some effect... sometimes.

However, if you are the only one applying the negative incentive, and you are not already valued and thus irreplaceable, the lesson becomes not "avoid the offending behaviour", but "avoid this guy".

And you will be the only one applying the negative incentive. Human beings, both male and female, have a hardwired instinctive protectiveness towards women (and women only), to the point of shielding them from the consequences of their own actions, and rationalizing this away.

Men grow up into rational adults because we are held accountable for own actions. Women don't because they aren't, and they never will be.

So what's the solution? How do you get women to behave themselves?

Simple. Treat them like children. You don't expect children to figure out what is acceptable behaviour. You tell them. You don't expect children to monitor themselves and call themselves to account when they fail to live up to that. You hold them accountable. You don't expect children to avoid bad behaviour because of an internal sense of fairness. You punish them when they have been bad.

It doesn't matter if you find this "paternalist" or "misogynist" or "gynocentric" or whatever other adjective you like. It's effective and that's the only adjective that matters.

I've been using it for years.

Are Red Pilled men the only men who truly understand and respect Women?

3 upvotes · 18 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The word "respect" means different things to men and women.

To men, "respect" means "admire and treat with deference".

To women, "respect" means "care about the welfare of, and act with that concern in mind".

To LTR or not to LTR at 29YO

3 upvotes · 18 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

If you are deciding whether to have or seek an LTR, rather than deciding whether to promote a particular girl, you are doing it wrong.

Girls are the gatekeepers of sex, which means they decide whether sex will happen or not, but have no control over whether the men they encounter are sex-worthy.

You are the gatekeeper of relationships, which means you get to decide whether a relationship happens, but have no control over whether girls you encounter are relationship-worthy.

You can't make a ho into a housewife. Hoes don't act right.

Valentine's present

3 upvotes · 15 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

Dumb bitch thinks preselection works on men.

Tell her no hard feelings, you're happy for her, and what you had was fun while it lasted.

Then watch to see if she backs water so fast you can hear the splash.

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

3 upvotes · 14 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

In this thread, we are taking steps to ensure that automod doesn't get overzealous.

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

3 upvotes · 14 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Try this again when you have huffed slightly less glue.

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

3 upvotes · 14 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

I work in an field where we actually get shit done, so I've never reported to a woman in my life.

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

3 upvotes · 13 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Have y'all considered that women just aren't worth time, money, nor effort?

I've enjoyed myself. Sorry you didn't.

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

3 upvotes · 13 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

"Pre TRP" is a bit of a tricky preposition for me, because things I learned on my own before TRP existed became a lot of what TRP is. So in my case, it's hard for me to say what is "pre" TRP, and what is post.

That said, a lot of TRP study material is sourced off my relationship with "FunSize", which has been going for quite a number of years now.

Does creatine make a difference in your workout?

3 upvotes · 12 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

It has a real mechanism that helps, but not everyone has the proper transport chemistry to really benefit.

Try it. It may be amazing for you, or do nothing. But it's not inherently snake oil.

Gaming and plating strippers

3 upvotes · 10 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

You don't plate whores. You pay them to suck dick and go away afterwards.

The sudden "Why?" shittest

3 upvotes · 7 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

Also, tying any of her behavior to her period is a suicide mission that men better than you have undertaken and not survived.

Are you this much of a coward in life, or only on the internet?

"You're just using me for sex"

3 upvotes · 31 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

"Yep."

"Wait, I thought you were using me for sex!"

"Not just sex. I also like your foot massages."

"Wait, what was your name again?"

PMS and how to kill it?

3 upvotes · 27 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

It's not your job to fix her hormonal problems.

Tell her that she has to find a solution, or the relationship is going to fail. She will either be terrified and work like hell to sort her shit out, or angry that you would say such a thing.

If it's the latter, get out.

Why are blowjobs indicative of higher interest?

3 upvotes · 24 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

So wouldn't eating pussy be submissive too?

Could be.

Does that mean she will think less of you if you eat her out?

If she sees it that way.

Is it a red flag for a woman to have gay friends?

3 upvotes · 18 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

AWALT.

To rescue a friend or not to rescue?

3 upvotes · 11 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

Tradcon alpha types are slaves to their women.

It's all that Jesus, family, tradition, chivalry stuff. They think if they make the right moves and are a good boy, life (or possibly Jesus) will reward them with wedded bliss.

They don't understand that playing the game well doesn't help, because the game wasn't designed with their benefit in mind. They don't understand that in order to win, you have to break the rules, because they rules are designed to make you lose.

It's like gambling. Anything the casino lets you do is axiomatically not good for you. You wanna win, you gotta cheat.

They see this, they lose their shit. Start whining about how we are "contributing to the problem" and "accelerating the decline of civilization". Because they think society is ailing. They think there is something systemically wrong.

There's nothing wrong. The plan isn't going wrong. This is the plan. Society isn't sick. It just hates you.

Do you have a strong desire to be overpowered by a man?

3 upvotes · 7 January 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

So? Men in the western world cannot have sex, or indeed walk down the street, without risking jail time and social ostracism.

The solution is to learn how to make your women submit, and not screw it up.

How do I learn to control my emotions instead of them controlling me?

3 upvotes · 4 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

Just don't do the thing your out-of-control emotions urge you to do.

Change doesn't start on the inside and move out. It starts on the outside and moves in.

To change your nature, first change your actions.

Will abandoning any form of moral compass get you far in life?

3 upvotes · 17 December 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Should" is just a way of using one word to say "I want".

If we stop wanting things, then we sit and do nothing and no longer function at all. I'm not keen on that, and you probably aren't either.

However, what you can do is stop rationalizing "agreement with your wants" as "having a moral compass".

It is much more effective to realize that, if you want someone to do something, you must offer them an incentive.

Girlfriend says I'm disrespecting her by having female friends and giving female coworkers my number?

3 upvotes · 13 December 2018 · /r/askTRP

There are only two types of relationships: those where the man rules, and the woman submits. And those that are the other way around.

Which of these does yours sound like?

Hypergamy is Monogamy

3 upvotes · 11 December 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

No.

I'm saying that a woman's perception of who is competent is highly-context dependent. In a tradcon society, where women don't go out and play career, being successful enough to be a good provider would be seen by women in that society as a form of competence, and therefore attractive.

Even now, some women who date millionaires are actually direct goldiggers, but others are turned on by his success and power in the business world, which is why they insist, and sincerely believe, that they are not.

So if a woman says something like "a man's financial success is highly context-dependent, and doesn't necessarily mean he's an alpha male", then, yeah, it's literally true... but that's not why she is saying it.

She is saying it because her personal definition of male quality doesn't weigh that very heavily.

That's why TRP is a numbers game. We tell everyone to lift, not because every woman gets wet for bodybuilders, but because being muscular is a significant net positive with a lot of women, and being strong is a significant net positive with a great many as well. There is NOTHING a man can do that will make him attractive to every woman out there, but a man can become attractive to many, many women by piling up a lot of those common net positives, then adding some specialty on top of it that is his particular thing.

That's why most men who make TRP work for them are "nerds and jocks". They transform themselves into someone with a broad range of sex appeal.

Hypergamy is Monogamy

3 upvotes · 11 December 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

All girls are genetically hardwired to be attracted to winners and not losers.

But what isn't genetically hardwired is which contest a girl considers to be important, which defines how she evaluates "winner" and "loser".

If you put a professional MMA fighter, a special forces soldier with a chest full of medals, a rich and successful entrepreneur, a famous celebrity actor, a brilliant and insightful intellectual, a well-known and talented artist, and a versatile "renaissance man" who is decently good, but not great, at all of these areas, at the same dinner table, and sit a bunch of girls down at tables near them, then you'll see something interesting.

All of the men will have women attracted to them, because they all appear competent, and thus attractive, in their way.

But the women will be unable to agree on who is most attractive.

What matters is not actual competence (as if that could even be measured), but her perception of it. And that differs depending on her.

A girl who has spent all her life in NYC, dating stockbrokers, will consider wealthy and influential men attractive. But a country girl from the backwoods of Tennessee will consider these same men to be losers because they get lost without gmaps, and don't even know how to hold a rifle.

So here's the important bits:

First, unlike male attractiveness, female attractiveness is much less subjective.

While one man may like short, curvy redheads, and another might like tall, willowy asiatic girls, the triumvirate of "pretty, nice, and available" reigns supreme, and so men will agree much more on who is attractive and not than the women will.

Secondly, what a girl thinks makes a man a winner has no correlation to how attractive she herself is. The NYC girl who likes finance nerds, and the Tennessee girl who likes hawg-huntin' rednecks, are equally likely to be attractive.

What this means for men is:

- To be attractive, you don't pick a category of women you like, and try to excel at what they like... because attractive women are found in all taste categories. What you do instead is find your mission and excel at it, then pick your girls from among the attractive ones who happen to like that particular shit.
- Don't ever ask a woman how to be attractive, or what makes a man attractive. Because you're not going to get the answer, you're going to get her answer.

Why did my wife cheat on me with a younger man?

3 upvotes · 9 December 2018 · /r/askTRP

And?

How to overcome cynicism after reading The Men's Red Pill?

3 upvotes · 7 December 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

TRP has been filled with a lot of the guys who are stuck in the anger stage

Everyone is stuck until they are not.

Feminists angry that men can now have sex with sexdolls. Claim silicone dolls are women. "Make no mistake, that isn't a doll he's doing, or maybe raping, choking, or hitting — it's all those women he can't measure up to."

3 upvotes · 6 December 2018 · /r/MensRights

Make no mistake... the real goal isn't to protect women, it's to control men.

The Truth About Single Moms Who Bring Young Children To The Dating Market

3 upvotes · 6 December 2018 · /r/WhereAreAllTheGoodMen

What I did was ask a question. What you didn't do was answer it.

Why haven't we seen anyone successfully spin plates, then stop and go MGTOW?

LTR keeps bringing up other guys hitting on her

3 upvotes · 5 December 2018 · /r/askTRP

Oh, I'm so sorry, princess.

Was that explanation not explicit enough for you? Did it require some thought, effort, or experimentation on your part?

Was the free gift I made of my hard-earned experience not lavish enough for you? Did it require you to recapitulate some tiny bit of the effort I went through?

What a tragedy.

Are introverts pre-disposed to be losers?

3 upvotes · 21 November 2018 · /r/askTRP

I am an introvert.

Now you have no excuse.

My BF's parents are transferring all their assets to him to commit fraud for benefits

3 upvotes · 18 November 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

The fact of the matter is a deposit that low for low income earners, as owner occupiers (and not investors) would be considered subprime. It was your country's blatantly negligent, and predatory practices of giving out record numbers of subprime mortgages to people who simply could not afford them, and WOULD eventually default, that caused the GFC/Subprime mortgage prices. And to hear that it seems to still be going on, is wrong.

Oh, look. Someone watched "The Big Short" instead of doing their own reading, because outsourcing your research to Hollywood liberals is an excellent idea, and banks are evil and Machiavellian and stupid, all at the same time.

Making those high-risk loans wasn't "predatory" (an evil plan to not get paid back, and lose money), it was mandatory.

Suppose you're a bank, and you're having your arm twisted by the state to make more subprime loans, in the name of fighting "economic inequality", or some other rubbish. What do you do? Well, you do what they did... bundle them up in as obscuring a fashion as possible, get someone to call them prime investments, and sell them to whatever sucker will buy.

When are people going to realize that 99.9% percent of problems start with government, and 99.9% of things governments start wind up as problems?

Women who say "lets talk a bit first" in online dating. What do they mean?

3 upvotes · 17 November 2018 · /r/askTRP

"Talking a bit first" is what a date IS.

Can I win her back?

3 upvotes · 10 November 2018 · /r/askTRP

It's right on the sidebar:

<https://www.trp.red/p/mattyanon/260>

Idiot.

How do you know if a man is devoted to you for the long run?

3 upvotes · 8 November 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

So should a woman be verbally clear about seeking marriage/commitment?

In general, there are two types of communication: content (the literal meaning of the words you say), and process (the meanings implied by how you communicate).

When navigating the sexual marketplace, people generally use process communication very heavily at the beginning of any interaction. This is an innate human tendency that has several strong advantages, not the least of which is plausible deniability. It is also important to note that process communication is not always voluntary or conscious. Reading involuntary communication is an important social skill.

Only once an arrangement is established is it normal to move communication about it into the content channel. To do so sooner signals that someone is uncomfortable with process communication, and are unable to be certain of things based on it. In other words, trying to "spell things out" or "nail things down" signals "I am socially unskilled".

That's why "The Talk" is out. It's a sign of social retardation.

Never ask "are we in a relationship?". It's a sign to him that you're not the sort of person he should be in one with. You only talk openly and literally about your relationship until you are already in one.

But isn't that a paradox? How can you be in a relationship until he says you're in one?

That question precedes from the most common misconception women have about what a relationship IS. A relationship is not his declarative statement, to you or anyone else, that you are in one. That content communication is cheap and easy, anyone can say it at any time, and anyone can change his tune the next day. Instead, a relationship is his long term emotional attachment to you. This can only be seen in the process channel (learn to read involuntary communication).

So, as a plan of action:

- Never ask for, or demand, an overt verbal assurance of commitment status, as a condition of sex.
- Be skeptical of any overt verbal assurance of commitment status that is given before sex happens. Only believe it if it's backed up by solid behavioural evidence.
- Always look for behavioural evidence of how solid your relationship status is before becoming sexual.
- Balance risk and reward when deciding how much "relationship evidence" to look for before making a sexual leap.
 - Going ahead with less increases your risk of being dumped and left with a higher partner count and nothing to show for it.
 - However, waiting does not automatically get you more.
 - And the more desirable a man, the more options he has, the less he will bond before sex has happened (your competition will be giving him sex fairly quickly).
- The stronger your girl game and the greater your SMV, the greater the risks you can take, and the more desirable the men you can try for.
 - If you're a 7.5 - 9 with good femininity skills, you not only can work your way up from plate/FWB/hookup, you're going to have to... because male 8s and 9s are able to plate first, and WILL do so, unless they have religious objections.
 - If you're not in that league, don't even try it. Aim lower, and look for more real evidence of commitment first.
- Most importantly, have a realistic estimate of your SMV.
 - If your estimate is too high, you will get pumped and dumped by men who are out of your league.
 - If your estimate is too low, you will get passed over by men whose league you are in, end up with someone lower in value, then cheat on him when hypergamy kicks in.

Appropriate response to “you dont know how to treat a lady”?

3 upvotes · 4 November 2018 · /r/askTRP

"If I see one around, I'll be sure to ask her about it."

Is that unacceptable or it is just me?

3 upvotes · 28 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

Look, I write a lot of things to try to help guys like you.

But how does that do any good if you don't read them?

If you haven't read all the Vanguard's articles/posts, you haven't read the textbook. You are asking for help with the homework, and you haven't read the textbook.

The redpill seems pretty big on black and white thought and lacks nuance

3 upvotes · 20 October 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Knowing only gray, you conclude that all grays are the same shade. You mock the simplicity of the two-color view, yet you replace it with a one-color view.

How many Red Pillers had a mother who was abusive or emotionally neglectful?

3 upvotes · 20 October 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

How many modern men had a mother who was abusive or emotionally neglectful?

Status of the Appeal 10/11

3 upvotes · 15 October 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

a different discussion, not the one I was trying to have.

You're correct that we have wandered far afield.

The original point is that whether or not you think socialism might someday work (if we try enough times, and kill enough people), the current crop of socialists want anyone who reads TRP, or anyone resembling such a person, dead, enslaved, or otherwise beaten into submission... so even if you're left-leaning in abstract political ideals, you still can't support the modern left. This is simple self-preservation.

Status of the Appeal 10/11

3 upvotes · 15 October 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Heh.

Medicare alone screwed up the US healthcare system so badly that now the non-player characters are demanding more socialism to fix it.

Status of the Appeal 10/11

3 upvotes · 14 October 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

I'm glad your life is going well.

However, I'm not going to give you any credit for being charitable if you aren't doing it voluntarily with your own resources.

The basic unit of "fucks given" is the dollar.

She's a legitimate 9/9.5, do I spend $100 to maybe see her at a concert?

3 upvotes · 12 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

You have a scarcity mentality about money.

The way to make this decision is "would you spend the money if the girl wasn't there?"

I'm not able to think

3 upvotes · 12 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

This is mental masturbation.

Your thoughts do not define you. Your actions do. Go out and do something.

Girl asking for money after realizing I am fucking other girls.

3 upvotes · 10 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

Pressure flip.

"Oh, so you're starting to feel a little more serious about this? Why didn't you say something?"

Now, she's the asshole. She covertly put expectations on you without even informing you.

Girl asking for money after realizing I am fucking other girls.

3 upvotes · 10 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

She already set her price.

What happens when you lose "passion" for women?

3 upvotes · 3 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

This is the depression phase. It happens when you have gaming thots down to a science, but they're not good for anything but sex.

It will pass.

Change your focus from maximizing your notch count to spending time (sexual and otherwise) with women whose company is actually enjoyable.

How Many Women?

3 upvotes · 2 October 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

There are plenty of available sources on historical sexual practices.

The thing this article is that early-stage TRPers are gonna hate it, because it points out that their affection for monogyny is a result of their early-stage values. Makes them feel like I'm calling them losers.

Early-stage TRPers want a girlfriend, because spinning plates is hard. And they want "no cheating" because they're worried about her loyalty to them.

More experienced guys don't care, because spinning plates isn't hard for them. And they are more worried about being trapped than being abandoned.

How Many Women?

3 upvotes · 2 October 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

I've tried to refute your arguments

You haven't refuted them. You've reworded them, and agreed with every single thing I said.

Which makes me wonder what on earth you thought I was saying.

Living space affecting trp,how do i defeminize my room ?

3 upvotes · 27 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

Hey guise! How can I look like an alfalfa male with flowery curtains? Mommy says if I change them she'll spank me!

Moron.

She's just your Girlfriend, she's not your Siamese twin. She's not your partner on a mission to Mars. She doesn't control your oxygen supply. (How to do a LTR.)

3 upvotes · 26 September 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Won't be forever, brother. I'm counting the months.

I have no idea how to get in a healthy relationship- help!

3 upvotes · 25 September 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I've been at this for some time, and everything I do, I do on purpose.

That purpose might not, of course, be immediately clear to you.

Had a self defense incident, how to handle this game wise?

3 upvotes · 24 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

So to make a long story short a while ago there was an altercation and in self defense I ended up killing a couple people.

This is a surefire panty-peeler... so long as you act "reluctant to talk about it", and let it trickle slowly out.

There is some shaming that goes on and basically all the time it's from guys, like if there's a girl and a guy is around her and he knows about my case he will try to like shame me saying I'm a murder or something and it just makes a really weird vibe.

They are trying to tear you down because they have social proof they can't match and they are jealous.

Also a girls family might not like her being around me cause of this.

Also a panty-peeler.

Don't be a good boy. Be a bad boy.

However when it comes to girls I notice there are some that are kind of scared but there is also a lot of girls that seem to be interested and kind of turned on by all of this I think they find it exciting.

Duh.

When they find out they just seem really surprised and ask me a lot of questions on it... So how should I play this?

Act reluctant, but slowly let them badger you into answering.

How should I go about things with girls and how can I stop the cockblocking from guys around them and the girls family?

Don't.

It plays right into your hands.

Am I Even RedPilled?

3 upvotes · 21 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

but there is no justification for the removal of ekken_ from asktrp.

Wrong. Secure that entitled shit right now.

TRP is not a knitting circle, an elementary school, a group therapy session, or a staff meeting at a lesbian feminist bookstore in Portland, Oregon. It is a group of men, with a mission. It has leaders, and they are responsible to the mission, not to you. There is no right to contribute, because the goal isn't, and was never, to give you a soapbox to stand on and talk just because mommy thought you were special.

That mission is to make certain pieces of information and thought available to men, so they can teach themselves how to succeed sexually and form a powerful and effective masculine identity in a society which is hostile to men and their values. (And, in RPW, to make that information available to women, so they can benefit from finding and connecting with men who have that sort of masculine identity.)

The leaders are responsible for making sure the mission gets carried out. They not only have the right, but the responsibility, to remove anyone who is an impediment to that mission.

The RPW mods report to the guy who banned you. He reports to me. I report to /u/redpillschool. We work together to carry out the mission. You were determined to be dead weight, based on your behaviour.

I have the power to reverse that decision, but it's up to me. I have yet to hear you tell me why it would be a good idea to do so. Instead, you are trying to tell me I have some obligation to. I don't. And you have already wasted a lot of time I could have spent on assisting other men who aren't quite so... remedial.

As a red piller, what's the goal of pursuing a LTR if there are no unicorns?

3 upvotes · 21 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

Women love verbal commitment, and they tend to push for it, but when instructing on RPW, I try to get them to realize that it's meaningless, and that pushing for it too hard actually tends to rub men the wrong way.

The relationship isn't the verbal commitment. As a man, you know this. It's obvious to you that you could give it one day, and rescind it the next. It's useless if it's not backed by emotional investment, and it's superfluous if it is.

The girl game skill of getting from sex to LTR isn't some manipulative process where she, by social maneuvering, gets you to utter the magic words, and then she somehow has you snared. What it is instead is the things she does that change how you feel about her, so that you want to stay, so that you are invested in her, so that you care about whether she is happy or not.

Men don't give verbal commitment as some sort of boundary marker. Instead, they are usually informing her of something that has already happened inside them, because they want her to be happy.

Ditch the Resume

3 upvotes · 21 September 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

IDK dude, I think your point as it stands is mostly valid but you are going to have a hard time getting women who can think to swallow it whole

This is not unusual. Generally a single point requires several articles to get across, because the correct sugar coating must be found. Any idea that makes a woman feel bad will usually be rejected immediately as false. A key sign that this is happening is personalization: "Well, I don't do...", or "My husband isn't like that..." or "my relationship with my boyfriend didn't start with..."

It's a cheap deflection designed to be inarguable, and thus it shows that they really don't want to discuss it.

The trick to dealing with this is to let them have what they require for their comfort, just speak your peace, maybe add a little explanation, let the ones who aren't upset by it understand it, then circle back at another date with a rephrased form of the point. Some of the rest will find the new sugar coating acceptable and be able to digest, leaving you with a smaller percentage who still don't get it. You have to get through to them by stages.

The Olympic village story is great. But what it proves, is that women use accomplishment as a measure of who to fuck, and men do not. It does not prove that men do not use accomplishment as a measure of who to wife.

And going to that as a refutation without examining how it plays out for relationships is an excellent sign that someone was looking for something to object to.

Otherwise, you see, they would think about what happens if one of those fucks turns into a relationship. Imagine, for a moment, this statement:

"Yeah, we hooked up during the Winter Games. We were gonna make it an exclusive thing, but then she got eliminated in the semi-finals and it just kind of killed it for me. Still, it was fun while it lasted."

This will get a laugh out of any group of men, because they all know that none of them care whether a female athlete wins or not. And if you tell them that you just met a woman who thinks her husband married her because he was impressed by her PhD... they'll laugh themselves sick.

So long as there are no women present.

If there are, well, yes, of course I was very proud of you when you finished school, honey. I was very impressed by your achievement. Yes, it totally strengthens our marriage and makes me love and respect you more. No, I don't care if you still fit into your wedding dress, because I just love you for who you are. Hey, wanna come to the gym with me tomorrow?

Men Have Equal Responsibility?

3 upvotes · 21 September 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Sure, men needs to orgasm in order to get his partner pregnant.

Incorrect.

- Pre-ejaculate contains sperm.
- Male ejaculation and orgasm, while they usually occur together, are not synonymous.

What do you personally consider to be "a lot" in terms of N-count, and why?

3 upvotes · 19 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why?

Look at it this way... because women want relationships (or, at least, the ones who men want relationships with do), any time they have sex, that can be regarded as a "relationship attempt".

And any time she has sex with a different man after that, the relationship can be regarded as "over".

So, we can use her n-count as the number of times she's been in a relationship that has now ended (assuming she is single at the moment). And if we know the amount of time she's been active, then we know the average length of one of her relationships.

Now, do you suppose a woman whose average relationship length is 8 years is more of a "keeper" than one whose average relationship length is a month? I sure do, because if other guys didn't want to keep her, odds are I won't, either.

What is [variance]?

A math measure of the variation. Basically, there's a difference between a woman who was in five one-year relationships, one after the other, and a woman who was in a relationship that lasted nearly five years, then she went out and banged four dudes on the same night.

Girlfriend wants degrading sex...

3 upvotes · 17 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

Maybe what freaks me out is that it seems too good to be true

When you get through the practice phase and start really having this stuff internalized, it's like having cheat codes.

Relax.

Q2RP: How would you apply RP strategies with a more intellectual type of girl?

3 upvotes · 12 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

How would you ride a blue motorcycle?

Why do so many men still follow the red pill philosophy when there are so many women against that kind of thinking?

3 upvotes · 11 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Everyone believes that they are right and those who disagree are wrong. That's what the word "believe" means.

If you think it's possible to believe that you are wrong, please explain how that works.

MALE SMV DECLINE - Not as great as people make it out to be

3 upvotes · 11 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It makes very little sense to argue about the average level of something you can't measure in units.

Focus on improving your own level.

Instant Gratification

3 upvotes · 11 September 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

It is a sobering moment when you realize that the mission of modern public education is to turn children from energetic, curious, and intelligent beings into lazy, busy-worked, and obedient slobs. The elites want the dumbest and most ignorant people possible who are just barely capable of running the modern widget factory.

+1

/u/Halitenina /u/TheRedPike

Instant Gratification

3 upvotes · 7 September 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

+1

/u/EpicLevelCheater /u/CrazyHorseInvincible

I'm [27F] a live-in girlfriend to my boyfriend [29M] of three years. Am I making a mistake?

3 upvotes · 4 September 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I see some voices are recommending you give him an ultimatum.

Do you think that's wise?

It's So Hard To Get People To See Venus In Her True Light.

3 upvotes · 3 September 2018 · /r/MensRights

Take a look at this cover, then imagine, if you will, a piece on abused women with this as the graphic.

Weird, huh?

Swallowed the Red Pill, dumped my LTR, Moving to Salt Lake City, I need advice.

3 upvotes · 3 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

Careful attention, effort to absorb what he teaches, respect.

What is it about me that repels men so much?

3 upvotes · 20 August 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I can assure you that physicians are quite well aware of obesity

Exactly. Modern first world medicine in a nutshell: A+ in fixing you up when you are at death's door, D- in preventing you from getting there in the first place.

You say "fat loss", physicians think "obesity and metabolic syndrome", which have been trained to understand and treat. You say "muscle building", they think "rehabilitative physical therapy".

But unless one of them is a specialist (sports medicine, etc) or a researcher in that field, his training or experience has nothing to do with anything short of that. Austin Baraki and Jordan Feigenbaum know something about fitness, but they didn't learn it in medical school. So does Robert Lustig. And so on.

But we're not talking about them. We're talking about whether girls should listen to some GP whose job could be done by a monkey with a bottle of motrin, who has never touched a barbell in his life, about how much she should weigh, and how she should get there.

To say nothing of the collection of negligent mass murderers who brought us the food pyramid. (Here's a hint, guys. Do your ANOVA both ways, and just maybe you won't cause an obesity epidemic.)

Im trying to get with this girl but she hit me with the "not really looking for a FWB though" when i asked her to come hangout at my place. Need some guidance on how to proceed.

3 upvotes · 17 August 2018 · /r/askTRP

Ignore what women say, watch what they do.

This is normal minor-scale ASD. Just say something like "I'm not sure, either, let's just hang out and see what happens." Then run game as normal.

How do you guys handle STDs?

3 upvotes · 16 August 2018 · /r/askTRP

Thanks for saving me the trouble of digging up the exact numbers.

It's also worth noting that for each race, the male STD rate is a little over half the female rate.

Why? Well, one possible explanation is that beta males don't get laid a lot, and they especially don't get laid a lot by hoes with high n-counts.

The moral of this graph is that stereotypes exist for reasons. The "trashier" a racial group is stereotyped as, the more STDs they have. This also holds true for other stereotypes... tattoos, drug use, socioeconomic class, dress, lifestyle, criminal background, credit rating, IQ, etc. And it holds true for more than STDs.

Everyone likes to talk about how prejudice hurts hurts those who are the objects of it. But very few people are willing to acknowledge how lack of prejudice hurts those who are the practitioners of it.

Being a baizuo is not healthy or safe.

Be prejudiced. But hide your prejudices.

How do you differentiate between the advice from LARPerS vs. the guys who actually know their shit?

3 upvotes · 16 August 2018 · /r/askTRP

I'm pretty fresh to TRP, but I definitely noticed one trend - on the manosphere everyone is the most red-pilled guy on the block and the rest has no idea what the fuck they're doing. Or at least so people claim.

Doesn't matter.

You don't actually need to know if I am the baddest dude ever, or a very clever Labrador retriever typing with its nose... because I don't expect you to take anything on faith.

How do you fix a tired expression?

3 upvotes · 16 August 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I've been told that I always look tired or sad and people often ask me "are you okay?" Or "what's wrong?"

Truth is yeah I am quite tired a lot, I work 10-15 hour shifts almost everyday. I am an introvert and I have to be around other people almost constantly, this drains me a lot.

??_?

The question is, if you focus on STEM, does punctuation degrade?

3 upvotes · 13 August 2018 · /r/MensRights

You fail to understand the girl holding this sign. She would also like you to spank her and call her a "filthy whore".

Reminder- the Men's Rights Movement is NOT part of the alt-right, or connected to today's rally. We are not political in any sphere other than men's issues.

3 upvotes · 13 August 2018 · /r/MensRights

Since you have the ability to speak with the dead, perhaps you could use it to speak to some more enlightened historical figures?

Benjamin Franklin, perhaps? Or Voltaire?

How to get rid of lazy part of my brain telling me not to lift weights, & to just jerk off & surf the Internet all day?

3 upvotes · 2 August 2018 · /r/askTRP

Small victories.

Don't lift to be big and strong someday. Someday is far off. Lift to lift five more pounds next week.

Jordan Peterson, Fallacies, and the Tragic State of this Sub

3 upvotes · 1 August 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Asked and answered already.

Jordan Peterson, Fallacies, and the Tragic State of this Sub

3 upvotes · 1 August 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

At some point "fake it till you make it" just becomes "faking it" because you don't care about making it

Making what?

You've decided what you think the goal of life is. Well, you're wrong. Life doesn't have a goal. You have a goal. Life and the universe just are.

How can I turn this stuck up chick on a high horse into a slut?

3 upvotes · 30 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

No! BAD dumbass!

Go to the back of the class.

If your question starts with "there's this one girl...", you are already failing. TRP isn't for getting that one girl you have oneitis for. It's for curing your fucking oneitis and having power over girls. Plural. GirlS.

You think you don't have oneitis because you don't wuuuuuv her. You still have oneitis, because you are invested in a woman who hasn't submitted to you. You need to control her to prove some dumbass fucked-up thing to yourself about being a master manipulator.

This need makes you weak.

Oh, and you suck at manipulation, too.

LTR is demanding respect

3 upvotes · 28 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

ultimatum

I believe you meant to say ex-LTR.

Five lies you were told so other people could feel better about themselves.

3 upvotes · 28 July 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Looking at the Totem pole of American Achievement, you will see that the top three ethnic groups (Indian, Jewish, Filipino) are stringent followers of Bronze age books. What does that say?

Absolutely nothing.

Learn to distinguish between correlation and cause.

LTR letting me cheat to continue relationship

3 upvotes · 27 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

#1. Create some shared secrets just between you two. All lovers (both in the physical and in the emotional sense) develop private languages and idioms. I never try to reuse these.

You will also need to figure whether telling nothing or telling her everything about your other encounters works better.

#2. You need to prevent her social network from finding out until she has become comfortable enough with her situation that she can brush off criticism because she knows what's going on works.

#3. No. It's about getting her to be able to reject the "Disney Paradigm". She needs to be able to feel successful as a girl without relying on it, which is mostly about your ability to appear really high value in her eyes, so having feels like "winning", even if the deal is on your terms.

Am I the only one getting screwed by Coffee Meets Bagel algo

3 upvotes · 25 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

Perverse incentives.

If they match you up too well, you will stop using the application.

Newbie here, I guess I'm a plate. Now how do we turn this around?

3 upvotes · 25 July 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'd have a hard time understanding how you couldn't slightly hate the guy and gleefully cut off contact.

<https://youtu.be/VmXSfFY0CO0?t=4m40s>

Don't try to give advice to people who already have better game than you. Instead, watch and learn.

RP advice on correct perspective with losing weight

3 upvotes · 22 July 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Men are often torn between their desire for a shapely body and their desire to safeguard the feelings of a woman they care about and feel responsible for.

While TRP certainly teaches men that forthright expectations are better than kid gloves, women must deal with some men who have learned that lesson, and some that haven't and everything in between.

Unless you have vehement and unambiguous indications that he has a fetish (e.g. You sneaked a lot at this porn collection and it's 100% chubby girls), then lose the weight.

What does "You look like a sociopath" mean?

3 upvotes · 22 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

Ignore what women say.

Watch what women do.

What do their actions, not their words, tell you?

Why You Have Oneitis

3 upvotes · 12 July 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

/u/Whisper's three step process for identifying a oneitis post:

1. It mentions a particular girl you want to fuck.
2. You haven't fucked her.
3. It's more than three sentences long.

Laura Doyle's Views on Verbal Abuse in Marriage...True or Not?

3 upvotes · 12 July 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

The trick is to prevent yourself from engaging in fear-based aggression.

It's easy to understand why women fear men. We are wild animals compared to you... stronger, faster, tougher, more aggressive. You think about this, and you get scared. But the thing is, evolution "noticed" as well. So it "decided" to build in a safeguard so women don't get themselves killed. It fitted men with a very strong protective instinct towards women. Think of how you feel about children. That's how we feel about you.

So the trick is understand that, and play to that, instead of trying to fight because you're scared.

This is one of the major reason why RPW teaches submissive behaviour... it's not a moral obligation, it's a power move. He may look like a savage wild animal to you, but you have an advocate inside his skull. That is how you deal with him. What you need to do is behave in a way that strengthens that advocate's case instead of undermining it.

You don't win arguments with him. It does. Your job is just to help it.

Laura Doyle's Views on Verbal Abuse in Marriage...True or Not?

3 upvotes · 9 July 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Never try to step between two people in a high-conflict relationship. They will both turn on you in a heartbeat. There is nothing you can do for them.

Feminist favourite, Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau, learns the hard way that-even if youre a White Knight-somewhere, somehow, there'll always be an offended feminist who can take you down, as he's accused of 'groping'. Ahhh, the irony.....

3 upvotes · 7 July 2018 · /r/MensRights

This is true, but it's not primarily women's feelings that feminists have weaponized, but men's.

Human men are hardwired on a evolutionary level to protect and care for women, just as women are hardwired to defer to and obey men. But these instincts can be at least partially suppressed.

What feminism has done is fight tooth and nail to maximally suppress women's deferential behaviour while maximally exploiting male protective behaviour. In fact, in a greater sense, this is all feminism is or ever was: this tactic, applied to anything women, or a woman, happens to want.

The reason men resent this is that protectiveness of someone who won't listen to you is just as self-destructive as obedience to someone who doesn't care for you.

And this, in turn, is why the men's right movement is failing and always will unless it undergoes a sea change... because, much as it despises feminism, it has adopted portions of the feminist model; it points out and seeks to invoke sympathy and understanding for problems faced by men. This was how feminism managed to exploit the male protective instinct towards women, but there is no corresponding protective instinct towards men. Complaints or appeals for sympathy will always fall on deaf ears.

If the men's rights movement wishes to be successful, it must abandon this tactic, and instead address itself to men alone, persuading and teaching them to suppress their protective instincts and look out for themselves, instead of being vulnerable to feminist manipulation.

Too Big or Bad Technique?

3 upvotes · 7 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

Not bad technique, wrong technique.

Read the Kama Sutra, and pay attention to what it has to say about genital size matchups.

Use the positions it recommends for what it calls "very high union".

I'm desperate and need advice on how to lose my virginity.

3 upvotes · 3 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/4rqg37/there_is_nothing_i_can_say_to_you_that_will/

My God... It's Full Of... Kittens.

3 upvotes · 2 July 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

All right, I'm finished toying with it.

It has been taught what to think so much, and so often, and so continuously, that I cannot teach it how to think. Perhaps with the keisaku, but not over the internet.

Put it in read-only mode for a while. Perhaps someday it will be ready to be helped.

My God... It's Full Of... Kittens.

3 upvotes · 1 July 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

(2... 1... BOOM!)

Look, see? I can make his head explode by saying random shit.

Let's try another one:

It's no surprise that an atheist degenerate like you would spend all his time crying about national socialists. You resent the idea that some people are just better than others because you know deep down that you are weak and wouldn't be one of the ones on top.

You're probably short. And left-handed.

(4... 3... 2...)

My God... It's Full Of... Kittens.

3 upvotes · 30 June 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Look you, rolling on the grass and clutching your knee in theatrical agony, like a football player trying to draw — the penalty.

Submissives are such wacky fun.

Girlfriend going on a cruise for a month with her cousin

3 upvotes · 30 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

<https://media.giphy.com/media/SYGkVEBAhm0g0/giphy.gif>

Is MeToo turning into NotYou at small companies?

3 upvotes · 29 June 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

I said that women's behaviour is indistinguishable from narcissistic personality disorder, not that it is NPD. In fact, the underlying motivations are almost precisely the opposite.

True cases of NPD are much more common in males.

NPD's core pathology is a delusional and persistent belief on the part of the patient that he is inherently unlovable. This causes him to construct a "false self"... an image he will project of how he wishes to be seen, which he believes others will be able to love and admire. Often this image is constructed with an unrealistic focus on perfection or flawlessness.

NPD behaviour is almost entirely driven by a deep and obsessive need to be loved, respected, and admired, and often works in counterproductive ways... offending others with self-centered and attention-seeking behaviour.

The delusional core belief appears to result from a complete or near-complete lack of parental affection in childhood, whether or not it is accompanied by emotional, physical, or sexual abuse. This presents the child with two possible alternatives: either the parent is incapable of love, or the child is incapable of inspiring love. Of these two, the child chooses the later possibility because it is less threatening... he can do something about his own inadequacies, but not those of a parent.

Solipsism, such as that of women, produces some of the same kinds of behaviour, but the underlying dynamics are almost precisely the opposite. Women generally believe they are lovable, valuable, and important... often quite out of proportion to their actual merits or the feedback they receive from others.

Because they get things by persuading others, their environment is almost entirely social, and they seldom are forced to deal with the requirements of the physical universe in any kind of complex capacity. This means that they are not so much unaware of what the truth is as simply unconcerned with it, since what people believe affects their lives far more than what actually is.

Reddit hates /r/TRP because it's filled with nerds. Not because of misogyny .

3 upvotes · 21 June 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Rappers get away with saying what TRP says because the left can't stand to criticize black men.

How my dad held frame and saved himself from divorce rape

3 upvotes · 20 June 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

If you were not already an EC, I would make you one for this.

Add some detail, and rework this into an article, and I'll have it stickied.

Can't cum with condom?

3 upvotes · 20 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

They may still be too tight. I had this same problem. Couldn't feel a thing because they were squeezing me numb.

Asshole Wants To get Under my Skin. Could use some advice.

3 upvotes · 16 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

People are very good at reading each other. It's what we evolved to do.

It's obvious that he is hostile because he is afraid of you. And it's equally obvious that this bothers you because you are afraid of him. Not physically, of course, but of his potential to turn others against you.

The important question isn't what you do about him. Even if you totally botch it and humiliate yourself, it will rapidly recede in your rearview mirror as you move on to other things.

The important question is how you are going to deal with this weakness in yourself. There will always be people who want to pull you down, and if you are bothered by that, or afraid, they will be able to see that (people are very good at reading each other) and they will target it.

Plucked from AskTRP

3 upvotes · 13 June 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Because it's drawn from a lot of men's personal experiences, of course.

By this point I've lost count of the number of men who have come to me for counsel.

What's behind the shaming of "nice guys", "incels", "chuds", "neckbeards", "manchildren"...?

3 upvotes · 13 June 2018 · /r/MensRights

So there's millions of these dudes, and only two of them have become murderers?

You're not scared of them for real. You're just pretending to be, because here's what you really want:

Keep your weird ass in the back room

How many months of lifting to get in shape?

3 upvotes · 8 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

Start now. You can stop when you die.

Melinda Gates Bashes 'White Guys,' Says She'll Discriminate Against Them

3 upvotes · 6 June 2018 · /r/MensRights

The only reason she's in any position to have the public care about what she says is because she spread her legs for a white guy.

Never listen to what women say... watch what women do.

"Do you have a girlfriend?"

3 upvotes · 5 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

"Do you have a girlfriend?"

"It's complicated".

How to get used to lifting heavy shit again?

3 upvotes · 3 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

By lifting heavy shit again.

Parents won't let me go to the gym.

3 upvotes · 3 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

Okay, you are way too inexperienced to mix and match. I wish I got paid every time I have to say this, but you're not a special snowflake. You don't need tweaks to novice programs. Your muscles work like everyone else's and you strengthen them the same way.

I can't be sure without seeing you lift, of course, but even at the age of 16, if you're doing that much right after "leg day", then leg day probably isn't as hard as it should be. Remember that a five rep max is a five rep max... if you can dig deep and grind out six or seven, it was too light to begin with.

Which brings me to my next point... recovery. I don't know why you would be lifting every day. 5x5 and similar programs call for rest days for a reason. You do not get stronger by lifting. You get stronger by recovering from lifting.

The recovery is the rep.

If you short the recovery, you're missing the whole point. And if you're going to tell me you're recovered by the next day, and can lift the same weight again, then I will tell you that you are lifting too light, you didn't put an actual stress on the muscle, and no significant adaptation is going to occur.

How effective stronglifts are? Am I doing that shit wrong?

3 upvotes · 3 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

I see.

You already know what you need to do.

You're just too much of a pussy to do it.

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/7berno/good_news_no_one_gives_a_shit_about_you/

How effective stronglifts are? Am I doing that shit wrong?

3 upvotes · 3 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

I'm doing 4x5 max weight I can instead of 5x5 because I think I wanna get injured rather than lifting pathetic weights around really buff dudes lol.

What the fuck is this illiterate shit?

What does this sentence even mean? Do you talk like this, too?

You don't try to make her your girlfriend, because twenty year olds are twenty forever

3 upvotes · 1 June 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

The only decent frame for an LTR is the frame where she had to earn you, and she has to earn you every single day. Because every day she's another day older, another day uglier, and man didn't she see that hawt 19 year old at Target you've been hitting on? No? No she doesn't see it? No she wants to play the field?

+1

Learn this, guys.

Commitment is not your job. You don't owe her a relationship no matter what she did. Sex, that thing she does with her tongue, what she gave up to hook up with you, how sad she would be without you, what she expected when she sucked your dick... none of that earns her a damn thing.

The only way she gets a relationship is the same way as the only way you get sex... make the other person want it. And then she has to keep doing that. The moment she's a worse deal than what you could pull off Tinder, go do that instead.

Tears

3 upvotes · 29 May 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Women do not understand their own nature.

They are trying to get you to open up and grieve to them, because they think they're okay with that. After all, what kind of monster wouldn't?

Well, pretty much every woman, that's what kind of monster. Women say they are perfectly fine with this, because they believe they are. They are not.

Jordan Peterson wants to force you into monogamy. Jordan Peterson wants you to be a slave. He is not your friend.

3 upvotes · 21 May 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Well maybe it's not just about you and your rewards. Can you flip it around and see how you might benefit them, and how your present actions might continue to benefit them after you're swallowed by the Great Void?

I don't have children and am unsure whether I'm cut out for it, but, being raised by a single mother in Shitville, I see the value in legacy and the need for men to man up and commit instead of behaving like amorphous teenagers

You're dismissing a very deep and complex philosophical question with a knee-jerk tradcon answer.

Q4RP: What is red pill ideology all about to you?

3 upvotes · 21 May 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The reason I didn't "go ahead and just tell you" was to make you ask.

Why did I want to make you ask? Because it changes the tone and context (we call this "frame") of our conversation.

If I had come out with this is because XYZ... the context would have implied that I was giving an excuse for speaking inconsistently, and your response would be to judge whether or not it was bullshit.

Instead, by forcing you to either ask, or not ask (thereby ending the conversation), I placed you in the role of an audience (whose role is to observe something and try to understand it) rather than a judge (whose role is to evaluate the merit of something).

The important thing here is to notice that when I speak to you, I do it with some notion that your internal state will affect what you hear.

The next thing to understand is that this is how we talk to TRP's audience. The goal is not to make a literally true statement, but to impart an effective understanding. And how you talk to do that has to depend on your audience.

The way you project your light must depend upon what kind of lens it is going to pass through before being projected on the screen.

This is why we contradict ourselves when speaking to slightly different audiences. And this is why TRP makes no sense to, say, middle-aged women, or homosexuals. They are the wrong lens.

How to have sex with my oneitis

3 upvotes · 20 May 2018 · /r/askTRP

And?

I can't seem to get commitment before sex

3 upvotes · 10 May 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

You can't negotiate a feeling.

This is one of the principles that TRP has taught for years, since the beginning.

You cannot negotiate desire. Desire is not a voluntary act, so you cannot persuade someone to give it to you with bargaining.

Attempting get commitment by withholding sex is attempting to bargain for desire. It will never work, because a man couldn't force it to work even if you convinced him it was a good idea.

Saying you deserve commitment because you had sex with a man is like saying a movie deserves an Academy Award because it is in understandable English, and all of the actors are clearly visible. That is the baseline.

Women who expect commitment for sex are like those guys who hang around a woman being "nice" and eventually exploding with rage because she never responds by sleeping with him.

Women are not vending machines where you insert kindness coins until sex falls out.

Men are not slot machines where you pull the {withhold} sex handle until you win the commitment jackpot.

I can't seem to get commitment before sex

3 upvotes · 8 May 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Yes.

Right now, men are spending time with you and saying "Meh, no thanks". That means the deal isn't good enough for them. Right now, the total package of "being with you" is the cucumber. They won't accept the cucumber when they see other men getting the grape.

And this seems to happen right around the time that you give them the "no sex until commitment" talk.

So let's try an exercise in understanding what you look like from a man's perspective. How would you feel about a man who gave you the "no commitment until sex" talk?

Why or how do some red pilld men with n count of over 30 settle for one woman ?

3 upvotes · 5 May 2018 · /r/askTRP

u/whisper has many times explained why marriage or monogamy has little to no benefits for males so what is it that motivates these men to make such a decision Making binding promises makes zero sense for a man.

A relationship is not binding promise. It is not marriage or monogamy. It is an emergent thing that happens as a result of repeated decisions to spend time with this girl instead of that one, and instead of starting up Tinder and looking for something new.

Every day, a man has that choice. A man in a relationship is a man who has repeatedly made that choice a certain way.

I spend a fair amount of time in /r/RedPillWomen teaching girls how to persuade men, every day, to make that choice one way and not the other. And a fair amount of time facepalming as the stupid ones tell each other to "hold out for a relationship", as we carried a magical golden token around in our pockets, embossed with the words "entitles the bearer to one free relationship", that we could just sort of hand to them and that would be that.

All of my close friends have started telling me in private that I am an asshole

3 upvotes · 5 May 2018 · /r/askTRP

Pretty much all of humanity is selfish.

So "asshole" means either "you're doing something that I don't want you to do" or "you're not doing something which I want you to do"

Do women's vaginas generally smell unpleasant?

3 upvotes · 2 May 2018 · /r/askTRP

Every human, male or female, has a unique body chemistry with a unique set of scents, and a unique reaction to the scents of others.

Some girls will smell bad to you even if they are clean, others will smell good. It's just a thing.

The Red Pill vs. the Black Pill

3 upvotes · 2 May 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Missed the point.

You're talking about what the truth is, as if TRP were the philosophy department at some university.

But I'm not here to deal in eternal verities, as if we were somehow equipped to study and chart the map of human sexuality. I deal in gross generalizations that get dudes laid.

As such, the world can be divided into shit you can change and shit you can't change. Arguing about how much there is of each one is pointless, because you act the same either way... you deal only in shit you can change, because the other is by definition pointless to explore.

Even if the "black pill" were 97% percent true, it would be pointless to know this. Knowledge is only worthwhile when it empowers by enabling action.

Boyfriend doesn't want marriage - how can I approach the subject w him?

3 upvotes · 27 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Have you been able to get him to discuss what his reservations are?

Q4ALL: who is responsible for other partner's satisfaction/orgasm? Men? Women? Both?

3 upvotes · 17 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Lashing out. Something I said must have hurt you personally.

In fact, now that I think about it, lashing out with an accusation of sexual inadequacy... which probably means that something I said made you feel sexually inadequate.

So when you are talking about women having difficulty getting there, that includes you.

Perhaps I can help. (No, not like that, you perv.)

I recommend worrying a lot less about patience, skill, stamina, etc... and a lot more about attitude. See, the primary organ of sexual arousal is the brain. A woman reaches orgasm easily if she has the right mindset and is really into her partner. "Enthralled" is the ideal state for firing off machinegun bursts of rapidfire orgasms.

But ambivalence, fear, distrust, or even hatred of one's partner is the precise opposite.

Fearing, distrusting, or even hating men collectively is known as "feminism". It's a disease that inhibits the female orgasm by making women ambivalent about their partners, because they fear and distrust men in general, but they are still attracted to them, and try to pick out ones they like and find least threatening to have sex with.

Then, in bed, they're still conflicted. They have those psychological defenses up. They can't relax and enjoy themselves. And they experience this problem as a lack of juuuuuust the right physical stimulation, when the real problem is lack of responsiveness.

There's most likely nothing wrong with your girl parts at all. It's your attitude about men that's holding you back.

The Art of Getting Things... Without Demanding Them

3 upvotes · 16 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

This is tangential, but I'm curious if you think that submissiveness is a universally effective strategy or if it appeals to a certain type of man.

Timely question. The next article I am working on for RPW will be entitled something like "Several types of man you should avoid submitting to".

The Art of Getting Things... Without Demanding Them

3 upvotes · 14 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Pets and tummy rubs.

Redpill book recommendations for 17 year old girl?

3 upvotes · 13 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Well, you feminists have been doing your level best to silence any dissent rather than answering it for quite some time, so I really don't have a problem with the fact that you are about to be served with a dose of your own medicine.

And since you've also had the privilege of talking endlessly after you have silenced any dissent, I have no problem doing that to you, too.

So here's how the conversation went:

OP: I wish to get married young!

Whisper: Focus on older men who are ready to settle down and can afford to do so.

OP: Oh, what a fortunate coincidence that I have a thing for older men!

Whisper: In that case, go with that. Here's how.

Sudden Tone-Deaf Feminist out of Nowhere: Reeceeeeeee! How dare you tell her to get married young! How dare you tell her to marry an older man! What she thinks she wants doesn't matter, because she can't speak for herself! Feminism is supposed to speak for her and tell her what to want! And by feminism, I mean meeeeeeeeee! My emotional reaction to this conversation is more important than OP's dreams, ambitions, feelings, or indeed her entire life and future!

You, dear, are far more of a child than OP.

How I Manage My LTR

3 upvotes · 8 March 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

You're right about the scarcity mentality and insecurity.

OP is indeed insecure and nervous. He needs to fix that, but fixing it is a gradual process, and before he's gotten there, he needs to hide it. Fake it 'til you make it.

However, there is one positive to this that I think others should learn from... use of a keylogger shows the attitude that she is his property and he has the right to do what he wants with her.

This attitude, when decoupled from insecurity, is critical to LTR game.

Families and Children

3 upvotes · 5 March 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

You can not fucking read?

You wanna have kids, have kids. But be a man and own your shit. Someone tells you it's risky, say "Okay, I'm gonna do it anyway, because I want to". Don't throw a tantrum because you got some bad news.

choosing between 2 girls

3 upvotes · 3 March 2018 · /r/askTRP

Why not both?

Submissive Behaviour as Strategy

3 upvotes · 2 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

You're mixing metaphors. I'd go with the fur coat and poodle on a diamond-studded leash.

Submissive Behaviour as Strategy

3 upvotes · 1 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

To understand the male attitude about love, think about your own attitude about sex.

You don't hate sex. You're not indifferent to it. You want it. Sometimes you want it a lot. But you still have to filter out men who are not sex-worthy.

Now, let's say you move to Portland, and are surrounded all the time by nu-males with skinny pencil necks and hipster beards and tattoos of video game characters. Your sex drive isn't going to go away... but you're not going to let any of them touch you, because they can't do a thing for you.

You will simply masturbate in private and pretend total indifference in public, to keep these tofu golems from getting any ideas.

And you're probably going to be pretty cranky, because you're walking around with an itch you can't scratch.

How do you explain the guys with hot GFs who act beta? How are they keeping them?

3 upvotes · 28 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

TRP isn't for explaining things. It's for making things happen.

How to stop being so "boy obsessed"?

3 upvotes · 28 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

It's not comparing yourself to others that leads to the self-doubt that makes you fish for male praise and attention.

Ironically enough, it's the modern cult of female self-esteem.

We live in a society that is constantly trying to boost women's confidence, their self-esteem, their belief in their special wonderfulness. Hollywood spits out little besides constant messages telling us that women are magic beings made of stardust and unicorn giggles, and that anything wrong with them or their lives is the fault of men. Saying anything negative about women is verboten.

And most of all, they are told that they are special and deserve to be loved unconditionally, just for who they are.

The effect of all of this, of course, is to make women more insecure than ever before in history.

This is what has almost destroyed you.

See, if everyone tells you that you are born special, and you deserve to be loved just for that...

... well, then you start to subconsciously believe that you were born with a fixed quantity of specialness, and that determines the amount of love you will receive. You believe it's out of your control.

So what do you do when you feel unloved, or not special enough?

You don't try to become better... because you believe it's out of your control. Instead, you look around for a man, or fantasize one, who will make you feel special. This makes you into a controlling, needy, demanding clinger. How much do you think men love that? It's obnoxious to be with someone who demands you regulate her moods, instead of regulating them herself. Men are for protecting you from the dangers of the world, not from your feels. Those are your responsibility.

You inappropriately seeking soothing from outside yourself because you do not believe in self-improvement.

To cure yourself, you need to accept that women are not special, and you are not special. You are made out of meat just like everyone else. Whether you are pretty or not depends on how well you care for your face and body. Whether you are charming or not depends on how well you develop your social skills. Whether people like you or not depends on how well you treat them. Whether men want to marry you or not depends on how pleasant they think their life with you would be.

The man you want has better things to do than spend all day holding your hand and soothing you. Right now, he's in a gym somewhere, straining to stand back up with four hundred pounds of iron on his shoulders. He can hear the blood rushing in his ears, his vision is half clouded over with grey. His legs and back are screaming. He accepts the pain because he is on a mission.

What have you done lately to work on yourself?

Steam engines, washing machines and electric stove fueled hate groups.

3 upvotes · 28 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

We must teach women to have empathy for men/masculinity so that we do not take the strategies taught in RPW and use it against them.

Indeed.

But this is not simply some moral imperative not to exploit men. It's deeper than that... because feminine strategies don't work against men. They work with men. They are inherently win-win. Try to use them oppositionally, and they won't work.

The Red Pill is a manifestation of "Riding the Tiger"

3 upvotes · 27 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you expect whites not to be racist, then don't be racist against whites.

You are assuming that leftists in general are capable of discerning a relationship between their politically-motivated actions, and probable (or actual) consequences thereof.

If they had this ability, they would not be leftists.

Conservative Men: Thoughts On Housewives?

3 upvotes · 26 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

"Conservative" really isn't a unified thing. It's more of a political term for a coalition of several totally different philosophies, all unified only by their desire to stop socialism and cultural Marxism.

A "conservative" man could be anything from a Christian-with-a-capital-C, whose values regarding sex were dictated thousands of years before his birth, to a libertarian who sees nothing wrong with, and habitually engages in, all sorts of nontraditional arrangements.

Certainly both of these men would agree that the role of housewife should be an option for women and their partners who want it... but beyond that, they would agree upon very little indeed.

I need RP aware men to guide me with this

3 upvotes · 23 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

<https://www.trp.red/p/mattyanon/260>

Christian Activist: Non-"Effeminate" Men Would've Tackled the FL School Shooter -- (apparently only women are allowed to care about their own safety; "real men" have to lay down their lives for others)

3 upvotes · 23 February 2018 · /r/MensRights

I don't think any of those men was named "society", do you?

And what kind of fucked-up person thinks masculinity is "toxic", anyway?

What do you think of these metaphysical principles of reconnecting with women

3 upvotes · 22 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Hey, bro, if you have an alternate approach to the goals that TRP has, make your own group, and start teaching it. Go ahead. We can't stop you, and we wouldn't if we could.

If it works better, pretty soon you'll have more subscribers, and help more people.

Go for it. Live your dream.

Plate sends long text

3 upvotes · 20 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

That's why you dangle it just out of reach like a cat toy, instead of making an offer of it.

Intelligence is unattractive

3 upvotes · 18 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Indeed. It is not shared interests that build a strong relationship, but mutual attraction coupled with shared values.

Intelligence is unattractive

3 upvotes · 18 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They go for the football team, even though most of them are stupid.

This is a common fantasy used to prop up nerds' self-image.

When we stop making the mistake of confusing eloquence for intelligence, it quickly becomes evident that the physically strong and agile are no less intelligent than any other population which hasn't been non-randomly selected for intelligence.

While the average science PhD is smarter than the average football player, this is only because the average science PhD is smarter than the average person.

How to approach sex when dating

3 upvotes · 18 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

And men want a woman who is passionate about them; this approach you take is the opposite of that. Men will pick up on this and drop the courtship.

And even if they don't, they will remember it for as long as you are in their lives.

Why not issue ultimatums?

3 upvotes · 17 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

The response is going to be:

"I have the goal of finding a wife to have children with myself. Do you have any nice friends who aren't on the autism spectrum?"

Q4All: What are some rules of thumb for gaining and maintaining consent?

3 upvotes · 17 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Of course you are, sweetie.

Now go post it on TRP for maximum life-saving effect.

Or does that not fit in with your plans?

Keep your emotions on a leash, not in a cage.

3 upvotes · 17 February 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Apologize less. Just say.

Your writing and thinking shows promise.

+1

Q4RP: Is The Office just another Disney lie?

3 upvotes · 17 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Fiction is not an insight into the characters, because they are not real and have no motivations.

It's an insight into the author.

LTR wants me to be more emotional

3 upvotes · 16 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

The best way to make a woman miserable is to give her all the things she claims to want.

Why people choose TRP, and how you can change that

3 upvotes · 16 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But that's the fun part!

Why people choose TRP, and how you can change that

3 upvotes · 16 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Let's be clear your model actually has to work better.

Excuse me while I laugh my ass off.

They don't want a "model". They're not interesting in helping people, you silly person. They want a warm feeling of moral superiority.

Building an alternative to TRP would take actual work.

Why Men Get Accused of Rape Days After The Fact and Why Women are Right to Do This

3 upvotes · 15 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, don't worry about it so much. I'm not trying to torment you, I'm just talking to the audience.

You realize that a girl's interpretation of events depends on their emotional state later, and who gets a first crack at influencing how she thinks about it. That's why you're asking the patriarchy for some consideration for how malleable she is.

I'm okay with that. If women are a sort of perma-child, as you say, then it's important to keep that in mind, both when dealing with her in the moment, and when listening to her account of what happened to her last Tuesday.

The way that you find this notion insulting is something that you are just going to have to make peace with by yourself.

Over 60% of all Icelandic children are born out of wedlock and many moms still work. Yet, Iceland is still one of the happiest and most stable countries in the world.

3 upvotes · 15 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, hey, this game again!

I remember this game, it's called "Can You Explain It?"

It goes like this:

1. You present some allegations of fact.
2. You ask me how my model explains them.
3. I laugh at you and tell you my model isn't for explaining Iceland, it's for helping dudes get laid.
4. You pretend we never had this conversation, and go to #1.

CMV: Feminists dislike women who have casual sex and want to ban casual sex

3 upvotes · 15 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because feminists have always been against women. Feminism isn't about making other women happy.

It's about making feminists not feel bad about other women's lives being better than theirs.

Is the blueprint for TheGreenPill already spelled out by TRP?

3 upvotes · 14 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm more curious about what an uncompromising sexual strategy would look like in contrast to TRP.

Cats.

Agree & Amplify to "You are too spoiled"

3 upvotes · 14 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

"Yep."

The entire world knows about TRP and its concepts, what happens next?

3 upvotes · 12 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The entire world already does. It simply pretends not to.

The virtue of TRP does not lie in any great or unique insight, but simply in the willingness to say unpopular things.

Men talking about past relationships

3 upvotes · 12 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Well, he certainly made a mistake by being too open with you. This is not an attractive quality in men, and TRP advises against it for a reason.

However, what you are considering here is simply the classic RPW tradeoff consideration:

The more you want him, the more other women will, too.

Which means that you need to calibrate the attractiveness of the men you date to your level of jealousy and willingness to tolerate competition.

Very jealous women should date less attractive men, to avoid having to face competition, while less jealous women should date more attractive men, because they are not as bothered by the downside. How attractive a man you date is how much you are choosing to bet on the strength of your girl game.

One thing to avoid at all costs is demanding extra reassurance and promises of loyalty based on this anxiety. This is experienced by men as a headache and a burden, and produces the opposite of the intended effect.

I'm thinking about getting my girlfriend & I a vibrator

3 upvotes · 12 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

Certainly not every time. She knows better than to expect that. Kinda fun when I have time. Feels like going for the high score.

Can't take full credit, though. Girl's a prodigy.

Anyway, the Hitachi is great, but it can numb girls up after a while if they tend to go long. The Wahl doesn't have that problem.

I'm thinking about getting my girlfriend & I a vibrator

3 upvotes · 12 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

You won't regret it. Thing is a godsend for me because FunSize can orgasm continuously for 45-60 minutes, and there's no part of my body that can keep up with that.

Please help: I have 2 questions about TRP

3 upvotes · 11 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Yes.

One of the key disconnects is that while the red pill advocates submissive behaviour on the part of women, very few people seem to really get why.

It's not a moral obligation. It's a tactic. It charms men, defuses male anger, invokes protectiveness, and prompts reciprocity.

Men who come in here and say "I like X", or "All you little ladies listen up, man here", are essentially not getting it. They think that oh, these women are supposed to be submissive, so I'm going to be dominant (which he can't distinguish from pushy), and they'll do what I say.

Such men don't understand that RPW submissiveness is a tactic for women to game him with. To make him want to be nice to her. That tactic is not going to be in play from strange women who want nothing from him and have no desire to please him.

IN the same sense, what he doesn't understand about his own ideal tactics is that dominance is a tactic in the same way. It's the skill of making people want to follow when you lead, not just having the expectation that they do so.

Any man, however gormless, can address women in the imperative mood. It requires skill and character to inspire women to ask him, "Hey, I trust your opinion, what do you think I should do?"

Men talking about past relationships

3 upvotes · 11 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

If he is casually mentioning many different girls he has been with, this is good. He is not hiding past life events from you, which he is interested in some sort of emotional connection.

(And of course has slept with a lot of different girls. If you like him, odds are, other girls did too.)

If he's constantly going on about the same girl, then he's not over her. That's bad.

On unplugging all the way: You need to chew before swallowing.

3 upvotes · 9 February 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

I'm 20 years old, and read books in college! I know everything!

On unplugging all the way: You need to chew before swallowing.

3 upvotes · 8 February 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Spergs can't conceive of anyone saying anything that has more than one meaning.

Does making men wait for sex leave only desperate betas?

3 upvotes · 7 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Players ~~cannot operate without~~ create promiscuous women around.

Fixed that for ya.

What are all the strategies men can take to avoid a false rape accusation?

3 upvotes · 7 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So, you've noticed 100% of the BPD chicks you've noticed.

Cool.

How ok are men with partner sharing?

3 upvotes · 7 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Men are totally okay with sharing sluts and whores, and totally not okay with sharing a woman they emotionally invest in.

So, if men are willing to share ya, guess what?

Advise

3 upvotes · 7 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Meaning, he might not accept an apology because he believes me to still be lying.

Who the hell said he had to accept it?

It's not for getting you off the hook. It's not a plea bargain. It's a guilty plea. It's acknowledgement of what you did.

He married me to be monogamous, he did not want other people in our relationship. The deal he signed up for was a faithful, sweet wife that would stay at home and raise his kids. Since I have broken the marriage contract, now he doesn't want that anymore.

Oh.

Oh, shit.

It's even worse than I thought. You mean you never did the kinky stuff with him? You mean you just told him about it later, in confession mode, that your hookup guys got three scoops of stracciatella gelatto with blood orange syrup and chopped macadamia nuts and toffee bits, and then you served your husband vanilla?

And you wonder why he's mad? Do you not understand men at all?

Since I have broken the marriage contract, now he doesn't want that anymore.

Since he has learned you gave your best efforts to someone else, he wants you to match that with him.

And I have said, I recognize that I need further change my framework of thinking. I recognize that it's jacked up. So going back to your steps... take all the blame, ALL of it. Do everything he wants, and STFU about any feelings I may have on it. I know that sometimes the mind will follow the body, for example, first working out, you don't like it, but you force yourself, then you see results, then you enjoy it. So if I continuously put him first, the same idea might apply.

The reason I'm so angry is that he found out he was the Small Emergency Backup Guy. And you let him marry you and dedicate his life to being the Small Emergency Backup Guy.

These other men you had threesomes with, and cheated with, and gave commitment-free sex to, you didn't "STFU about your feelings" with them. You were following your feelings. Because they weren't the Small Emergency Backup Guy. They were the Main Guy.

The reason he wants you to do all this stuff is that he wants to be the Main Guy, not the Small Emergency Backup Guy.

And you somehow think because you decided you "changed", that you're not into that anymore? Like "I've decided I'm a better woman now, so I'm going to treat you worse."

It's not good enough to STFU and bear it. Because what he really wants is for you to have the same passion about him that you had about those other men.

And the reality, which is staring us both in the face, is that right now, you don't. Because you're hating the idea, not raring to go. That's why all the hoops you have jumped through so far haven't been good enough. Because you step through them grudgingly for him, when you dove through them willingly for other men.

And that is why step 3 is ...

Step #3: Do whatever the fuck he says he wants, and more.

This step is going to be mostly about sex, because sex is what you hurt him with, and sex is what he wants you to make it up to him with.

His focus on sex tells us what is going to mean caring to him right now.

But you have to not just do what he says, but show willing by taking the initiative to find ways to make it up to him. The only thing that will soothe his rage is feeling like he is getting the best you ever gave to any man.

I have some suggestions for that, which will follow in PM, because they will have to be pretty explicit.

Jordan Peterson is not your friend.

3 upvotes · 6 February 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Don't worry, we caught a mighty haul. The Eternal September will not be allowed to happen here.

Observation about girls and lifting

3 upvotes · 4 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

If you are carrying excessive fat, you are already heavily anabolic.

Don't use anything I said as an excuse to continue poor eating habits. Cut out the damn sugar. But also remember that running a heavy caloric deficit will prevent or greatly inhibit muscle gains.

Basically, skinny guys trying to add lean mass need to eat more, and fat guys trying to gain lean mass need to eat the same or a little less.

Observation about girls and lifting

3 upvotes · 4 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

Lemme guess, you're young, and you've also been getting by on less sleep for a period of a few years at least?

It is very easy to train your brain to get by on less sleep. You will even stop feeling sleepy, because the brain is in charge of that.

Your body cannot be trained to get by on less sleep. Period.

So you can put yourself in a situation where you are chronically sleep deprived, your cortisol is through the roof, you have mysterious joint pains, you're not gaining, and you don't feel tired.

If this is you, fix this now. Dim the lights before bedtime, and don't stare at glowing screens. Start seeing sleep as a responsibility, like eating right or lifting, rather than self-indulgence. Don't skip sleep to chase bitches. Don't see rising early as virtuous, sleep in as long as your body and brain want. Never use an alarm clock... fix your sleep so you naturally arise before you need to go to work.

Sleep, nutrition, lifting, testosterone. Your gainz will be limited by the weakest link of this chain. Strengthen the weakest link first.

Dropped a girl who put me in the friendzone, people hate me for it.

3 upvotes · 3 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

Sperg-like typing detected.

Why do ordinary respectable men visit prostitutes?

3 upvotes · 1 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Rich men don't pay whores to have sex. They pay them to go away afterwards.

Non-rich men don't pay whores to have sex. They pay them to pretend to want to without having to be talked into it.

CMV: Red pill men don't want traditional wives because they don't want to be traditional husbands.

3 upvotes · 31 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

First of all, WTF?

Second of all, who cares? Gene transmission is good for genes. Doesn't make a lick of difference to the people who are made of them.

After doing quite a bit of research, I can definitely relate to a lot of the Red Pill philosophy from my life and what I've seen. But is the bitter anger towards women necessary?

3 upvotes · 30 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Which actually probably gives the best PR! Often nothing beats negative publicity, esp with controversial topics as TRP

Hit pieces on us typically add a couple thousand new subscribers. Hell, if TBP didn't exist, it would have been necessary for us to invent it.

explained me sth similar once as well, but not with so many words.

Yep, you get to be a witness to my lifelong passionate love affair with the sound of my own voice.

The view on men and women differences (inherently protective/submissive) isn't a hack though.

Oh, absolutely not. That's the point.

The hacks aren't particularly clever, they're kind of obvious in fact. So what sets us apart isn't a great perspicacity of insight... it's simply the willingness to embrace that which is absolutely taboo in modern sociopolitical orthodoxy.

We say the things that even comedians, science fiction writers, and Donald Trump cannot.

So there can never be an inoffensive version of the red pill. Any version of our stuff that was tweaked to be inoffensive in our culture would also be ineffective. And any culture where our views were not held to be offensive would never have any need of us in the first place, because they would effectively be us.

After doing quite a bit of research, I can definitely relate to a lot of the Red Pill philosophy from my life and what I've seen. But is the bitter anger towards women necessary?

3 upvotes · 30 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yeah, it's all a hack, pretty much.

But we don't explain this in our defense, because giving a crap about political correctness and public opinion is the antithesis of the point. We have to teach these guys to be bold, and act, instead of worrying about PR.

But you asked politely, so there you have it.

[Quick FR] First swipe app hookup thanks to TRP

3 upvotes · 30 January 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

With great increase in readers, comes great increase in autism.

After doing quite a bit of research, I can definitely relate to a lot of the Red Pill philosophy from my life and what I've seen. But is the bitter anger towards women necessary?

3 upvotes · 29 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think Norm Macdonald had a bit on this. Everyone says women love funny guys. But I always wondered why women laughed at the least funniest people I knew. Turns out, women just like to laugh around handsome men, lol

Yep. Funny men aren't sexy, but sexy men are a laugh riot.

After doing quite a bit of research, I can definitely relate to a lot of the Red Pill philosophy from my life and what I've seen. But is the bitter anger towards women necessary?

3 upvotes · 29 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But is the bitter anger towards women necessary?

Yep.

Some RPW anxiety

3 upvotes · 26 January 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

One of the drawbacks of adopting this philosophy of life is that you are going to take a fair amount of flak from women who feel that you are "letting down the side"... as if life were supposed to be a collective battle of the sexes.

However, having consciously chosen not to lead a life of conflict with the sex that's built for conflict does not mean you need to wage the great crusade to defend men everywhere from nasty, contentious women. We can do that ourselves, we are the sex that's built for conflict.

What you can do is simply talk about what you do as a personal preference: "I prefer not to criticize my husband. If I felt he deserved to be run down behind his back, I would not have married him."

Q4Women: Would you rather have an unattractive man just for yourself or share an attractive man with others?

3 upvotes · 25 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So the answer is "These are about the same level of priority".

Will I even find one?

3 upvotes · 25 January 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I meant by waiting for them to get out of that "anger phase" before you judge who they truly are, if you insist on reading what they say in male groups.

However, targeting older men, for you, personally, is an excellent idea in its own right. They tend to be wiser, more able to lead, more able to support a family, and if promiscuity was a phase for them, they tend to have burned through it already.

[field report] To test how strong the brainwashing is, could it be possible to reverse it to turn "former sluts" into sluts again since all women are hoes whether they know it or not?

3 upvotes · 23 January 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

There is no such thing as a former slut. Slut doesn't wash off.

Question about terms (because debate needs agreed terms): what do you mean when you say 'sexualize'?

3 upvotes · 23 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

instagram hoes

Guess it didn't take long for you to start throwing other women under a bus.

Objectification okay for them, but not for you, huh?

How widespread is The Red Pill?

3 upvotes · 23 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Very.

TRP the reddit group is just one head of the hydra.

A feminist utopia

3 upvotes · 22 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It wouldn't.

If you gave feminists every single thing they say they want, they would be miserable, and their world would be a disaster, not just for everyone else, but for them, too.

There are two types of feminists: those who fear and resent men, and those who just want to fit in with other women. Neither have thought their positions through, despite the former having devoted a great deal of thought and ink to rationalizing them.

Question about terms (because debate needs agreed terms): what do you mean when you say 'sexualize'?

3 upvotes · 22 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

He physically cringed.

He was probably afraid you were going to hit him again.

Question about terms (because debate needs agreed terms): what do you mean when you say 'sexualize'?

3 upvotes · 22 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

the social contract

Where is this contract written down? When did you sign it? Did you have a chance to read it first? Did you negotiate the terms? Were you represented by counsel?

Please post a link to the social contract, so everyone can read it, and learn what you expect.

"But not everyone is like that"

3 upvotes · 21 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Arguing absolutes against a topic which does not assert an absolute

This excludes all of TBP.

feminine global shit test.

3 upvotes · 21 January 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Who's this "us"?

Are you a Palestinian? Or are you from a southwest asian country that is greatly offended by the existence of Israel, but refuses to take in Palestinian refugees?

The welfare of the Pals isn't the point. Arab nations hate Israel not for practical reasons, but because the imposition of a Jewish state by the west hurts their pride.

Of course, the west never had any choice about whom to side with. The Arab world isn't fighting Israel and the west because of real offenses or even hurt pride.

The Arab world is fighting the west because it has to fight someone. Polygynous societies cannot survive without an external enemy to fight... the ruling class needs someone at which to redirect the anger of poor young men who can't get laid, or those poor young men will rebel against the rich old men who have three wives.

Is someone "broken" if they don't associate "sex with love"?

3 upvotes · 19 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Jesus, what have you been reading?

Did you seriously think TRP was about looking for girlfriends who don't like sex?

Look, if you love a man, have fun. By all means greet him at the door wearing a schoolgirl outfit and a ball gag. Knock yourself out. No one cares who isn't a prude.

The difference between "ho" and possible girlfriend material is this:

When she's horny, and there isn't a man around she wants a relationship from, what does she solve this problem with?

Ho: Some hookup dude who isn't too ugly.

GFM: Masturbation.

Is someone "broken" if they don't associate "sex with love"?

3 upvotes · 19 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"sex creates those feelings"

It can. It can also be an expression of that.

There's the kind of girl that has sex with a man because she loves him, or thinks she might. And there's the kind of girl that has sex with a man because he's attractive enough to suit, and she wants an orgasm. Or to feel attractive. Or just some validation.

Both are fine for sex. But only the first is relationship material.

Can't turn a ho into a housewife.

Feminist hatred for "nice guys", a discussion and the reason the "nice guy" is a jerk is that he stops being friends after being rejected

3 upvotes · 19 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Niceguys aren't nice, they are weak. They think of themselves as nice, as an excuse for their weakness.

Feminists don't hate niceguys because they aren't nice. They hate them because they are weak... women always hate weak men. They think of themselves as hating them for not being nice, as an excuse for their hatred.

Powerful men control society. Why did they make it gynocentric?

3 upvotes · 19 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because

- There is no male solidarity.
- Women's votes are easier to buy with empty gestures and shiny objects.
- Women make most spending decisions for families.

Why would an attractive man need TRP? What's the purpose of it for men with ability with women?

3 upvotes · 19 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why would a strong man need barbells? It seems to follow that those who use or need them must be weak.

Should Trump step down from the presidency for the allegations of sexual assault against him?

3 upvotes · 18 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I hear the tinfoil prevents them from stealing your thoughts.

Did I handle this right?

3 upvotes · 17 January 2018 · /r/askTRP

Yes.

The people who claim that redpill only attracts low quality women and damaged women: How are they much different from niceguys saying women love assholes and badboys?

3 upvotes · 13 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Circular Argument: One of the lemmas in the argument relies on the conclusion.

"These techniques only work on psychologically damaged women".

"We know these women are psychologically damaged because these techniques work on them."

Q4All: Why do so many men have such low self esteem about their looks or personality and what can we do to fix this?

3 upvotes · 12 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So the answer to that last question would be that you claim no special expertise, then, only willingness to help.

The problem with that is that this carries the assumption that others are unwilling to help.

The major problem that I have seen in curing truly hardcase incels is getting them to accept help. Which might seem puzzling at first... after all, don't incels by definition want to get laid?

Well, don't most fat people want to be thin? Why don't they just eat less?

The answer would be "ain't that fucking easy". In order to do something about their condition, they must first accept hope, which they are often unwilling to do. Who doesn't want hope? Lots of people. Because hope comes in a container made of responsibility.

If this can be fixed, then it's their fault if they cannot fix it.

That's why /r/incels was a thing. TRP is for helping incels get laid (and beyond). /r/incels was for helping incels avoid feelings of responsibility and shame for being unable to get laid. This of course, required them to commit to taking no corrective action, which is why they hated TRP so much. Its very existence threatened to undermine their strategy for emotional stability.

Of course, willingness to take responsibility is not enough... one also needs to know what to do. And to know what to do, one needs to be able to discuss observations and results in an environment free from PR necessities.

This is why TRP was created. /r/seduction become concerned with avoiding external criticism from the peanut gallery (non-practitioners, women, etc).

We built a honed and proven machine for making incels into players. Hell, even the folks who send us death threats don't try to pretend any more that our shit doesn't work. They just find the workings of that machine disturbing to their emotional equilibrium, and would like us to stop so they can feel better.

The best thing you could do for your friends is bring them to us.

Q4All: Why do so many men have such low self esteem about their looks or personality and what can we do to fix this?

3 upvotes · 11 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

However, he knows nothing about the individual men in question, so his lengthy rambling is about nothing but his own imagination.

I don't need to speak to them to see what you are doing wrong, for the same reason that I don't need to look at the architectural plans to know that the house should not be built out of cheese.

I am more than willing for you to give me advice on how to help these men.

I've written years' worth of advice for them. Why would I write advice for how you should advise them? You add no value to this process at all. In fact, you add negative value, because the process whereby they received the lesson would contradict its content.

This is what I do.

This subreddit here exists because it rides the coattails of something me and my friends built, something wildly successful.

I helped build TRP from a few hundred subscribers to a quarter million. I've helped literally thousands of men get laid.

Who are you, again?

Is it too late to secure a real commitment from my boyfriend?

3 upvotes · 11 January 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

It is absolutely true that opinions of marriage vary.

However, this view is much more prevalent than people realize... because men do not speak openly of this, often not even around other men, and certainly never around women.

In truth, marriage has been on the ropes a long time, and it wasn't feminism that killed it. In fact, feminism may very well have been nothing but an early symptom of marriage's impending death.

I don't think anything can be done about this on a society-wide scale. However, individual women who wish to get in on the institution before it dies for good can, but they would be well-advised to have a solid plan for dispelling a man's reluctance, rather than relying on him to be ignorant of the risks, a traditionalist, or easily browbeaten.

Q4All: Why do so many men have such low self esteem about their looks or personality and what can we do to fix this?

3 upvotes · 10 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

A man can definitely teach a woman how to pick up a guy, but can he (non RP aware) teach a woman to keep a guy in a relationship? That is, after all, what men are the gate keepers of

That is indeed what I meant.

Female advice is completely useless to men in fixing their sex lives. Male advice is often highly useful to women in fixing their relationship problems.

This is because men know how men think, and what men want and respond to.

Q4All: Why do so many men have such low self esteem about their looks or personality and what can we do to fix this?

3 upvotes · 10 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Her understanding of the situation is so poor that she does not have the insight which would be required to realize that her understanding is poor. She is a poster child for the Dunning-Kruger effect.

If good intentions were all that were required to be admirable, everyone could be wonderful person with no effort at all.

Although... actually, maybe 'coincidentally passing by' on their dates, flirt a bit with the guy, be kinda 'sad' that he is with a girl? Preselection! Social proof! Might actually work if they could pull it off

Perhaps. But she doesn't know what preselection and social proof are.

In fact, it hasn't even occurred to her that, if she is unwilling to fix her friend's problem by simply having sex with him, when he is friend whom she cares about, then strangers who don't give a crap about his problems aren't going to be willing to dive on that grenade, either.

The way to fix his problem is to fix his skill set. She neither has that skill set, nor knows what it is, nor even consciously notices when it is in play.

A woman, any woman, is the single worst person in the world to teach a man how to pick up women. Curiously, the reverse is not true.

Q4All: Why do so many men have such low self esteem about their looks or personality and what can we do to fix this?

3 upvotes · 10 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Setting aside the detail that she started conversations rather than arranging dates, this is a good question.

What she does not understand is that starting a conversation is such an easy part of the problem that it cannot even be described as part of the problem. If I set out to write the great American novel, and you bring me a sharpened pencil, then, yes, technically, you have helped.

Involuntarily celibate men are not involuntarily celibate because they are never involved in a conversation with women. They are involuntarily celibate because they cannot get from conversation to attraction to sex.

Obviously, this must, at some point, be done in person, so the only way to help such a man is to teach him. Not only is she spectacularly unqualified to do this, she doesn't even understand that this is what she would need to do.

And why would she? She is female, and women fall into one of two categories: "ugly" and "not ugly". Not-ugly women are being offered sex every day, usually in a covert, socially acceptable fashion, but they are certainly aware that sex is being offered. As such, most women are unable, on a fundamental level, to understand what an involuntarily celibate man's problem is. Scarcity of sexual offers is something which are simply not equipped to imagine.

So, like Marie Antoinette, they are puzzled the peasants do not simply eat brioche.

What her friend actually is in need of is another man who is experienced at getting from conversation to sex, and, even better, at teaching others to do so, to teach him what he needs to do, how he needs to speak, what attitudes he needs to project and indeed internalize, to be able to, of his own efforts, make women attracted to him.

This is why we learn to catch fish, not from fish, who are constantly being offered hooks to bite, but from fishermen who know how to effectively bait a hook.

Can't blame her for that

I blame her for nothing. If a five year old child wants to help Daddy paint the house, one does not expect anything other than splashing about. And who can blame five year olds for wanting to feel like a big girl?

What I want is for the audience (such as you) to realize the futility of this enterprise, and not enlist five year olds to paint your house.

Q4All: Why do so many men have such low self esteem about their looks or personality and what can we do to fix this?

3 upvotes · 10 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So no.

Not your fault. I'm guessing you figured you could help these guys talk to girls because you are one.

Lots of people think that, but it turns out to not work very well at all.

Women are actually the least aware of how to do this. If you want to catch a fish, don't ask a fish. Ask a fisherman.

How do women develop sexual agency without "riding the carousel"?

3 upvotes · 9 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women are socialized to display passivity when it comes to sex

Wrong. They are evolved to display passivity when it comes to sex.

Women don't get "objectified". They were objects to begin with.

Do people view infidelity different when it is committed by a man vs a woman?

3 upvotes · 9 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Duh.

Eggs are expensive. Sperm is cheap.

The two acts are not the same.

Suggestion: Purple Pill Flair should have to be earned.

3 upvotes · 9 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

users who have demonstrated original thought

You just eliminated 99.9% of humanity.

Reddit seems more anti-men than anti-women

3 upvotes · 9 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women will always find something to fuss about. Why would they not? Fussing leads to positive attention.

What do you suggest a woman should do in the case of "alpha widowhood"

3 upvotes · 8 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

She has to find a dude she thinks is better. That's her only shot at happiness.

When a Girl Tells You Whats Wrong

3 upvotes · 8 January 2018 · /r/askTRP

Of course it's misogynistic. We talk negative shit about women all the time, focus on it.

Thing is, so what? Like the world is going to collapse if someone says mean things about these precious, beautiful flowers?

People who run around fussing about "misogyny" are slaves to the hardwired protective instinct. Automaton. They have a feeling, they obey it, they don't stop to think where it comes from, or what it means. Their conscious mind is just along for the ride.

What we are doing with all this horrible, terrible, evil, doubleplusungood misogyny is teaching men how not to be automatons. Yes, there is a natural instinct to protect, sympathize with, and value women more than men.

Duh. Eggs are expensive, sperm is cheap.

But we aren't a hominid tribe that survives by pelting zebra to death with rocks anymore. Some instagram ho's womb is not all that stands between us and extermination. The moves that once kept the tribe alive are now being used to fuck young dudes over. So we adjust their heads. Give them something to push back against those treacherous instincts with.

It's a hack. And it demonstrably works.

What do you want in a woman?

3 upvotes · 6 January 2018 · /r/askTRP

You are in the wrong place, asking the wrong question, and you will not find the answers you seek.

Because women are the gatekeepers of sex, are offered it frequently, and can accept or reject it based upon how they feel about the offer, they have had no reason to ever consciously consider the question of what makes a man sexually attractive.

Thus, if a man asks a woman what makes a man attractive, she will instead tell him what she wants an attractive man to do. Her brain is incapable of hearing and answering the actual question that was asked.

Because men are the gatekeepers of relationships, are asked for them frequently, and can accept or reject them based upon how they feel about the offer, they have had no reason to ever consciously consider the question of what makes a woman a keeper.

Thus, if a woman asks a man what makes a woman a keeper, he will instead tell her what makes a woman sexually attractive. His brain is incapable of hearing and answering the actual question that was asked.

Get over to /r/redpillwomen, where they are almost as clueless about the answer, but will at least understand the question.

I'm [26F] in a LTR with a (probably) RP'd guy [33M]

3 upvotes · 6 January 2018 · /r/askTRP

/r/redpillwomen

How can I get over my past sexual behavior?

3 upvotes · 31 December 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

You are not a jar of peanut butter. You cannot be unscrewed.

Chad is not real, and why this means that 4chan has been trolling you [CMV]

3 upvotes · 20 December 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Metaphors aren't literal! Film at eleven!

man and woman homeless experiment. the woman got food the man was told to die.

3 upvotes · 13 December 2017 · /r/MensRights

I have no idea what the fuck you're talking about.

This is abundantly clear.

To maximize your aesthetic potential, low bodyfat percentage is more important than size

3 upvotes · 9 December 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

Any time you lose weight, some part of that will be fat, and some part will be muscle.

Any time you gain weight, same thing.

You can tweak the percentages with what you do, but catabolism and anabolism, are, to a great extent, whole-body states.

On the whole, I am less than thrilled with the current visible-abs fad. It's not strength. It's just being skinny. I've seen eight-year-old girls with visible abs.

If you bench less than 300, squat less than 400, or deadlift less than 500, you have no business walking around at 10% bodyfat. All it does is make sure you never will get your lifts up to decent intermediate numbers.

Having abs doesn't even make you look good, because the moment you put your shirt on, no one can see them, and you're just another tiny dude.

Ditch the abs for a while, lift heavy, eat lots of food, and get huge shoulders, a big chest, thick arms, and tree-trunk thighs. Look like a monster even when fully clothed. Then get your abs if you still want them.

Thinking about ejecting from relationship (Master/slave dynamic)

3 upvotes · 9 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

Dude...

You suck at this.

Never be passive-aggressive to a slave. You don't have to be. You own her. Tell her exactly what you want her to do, and make her do it.

In this conversation, you are treating her like a regular Tinder slut... trying to influence her with fear of your withdrawal. You do that with Tinder sluts because that's the only hold you have over them. You don't do it with slave girls. You tell them what to do.

She isn't demanding the right to have an orgasm. She is asking, begging, you to let her give feedback without you pulling this passive aggressive bullshit.

You make the decisions for both of you. That means she needs you to be able to hear what's going on with her, so you can make informed decisions about what she will do. As her owner, it is your right to make her suffer. But she needs to be able to tell you when she is suffering, or afraid, and she needs to be able to do it without you losing your shit.

You are acting like this because you lack confidence in your ability to control her, and this will eventually cost her your respect.

"Listen, girl. I know that this will be hard for you. But you need to understand that orgasms are privilege, not a right. You are property, you do not have rights. You will have release if and when I decide. I will permit you to beg for it. I will permit you to tell me when it's hard, and I will listen. I may even decide to allow you release. But that will be based on my judgement, not yours. Your body does not belong to you, it belongs to me. If you can demonstrate your understanding of that, I will be more inclined to reward you. If not, I will have to be strict until you do understand it. You may speak freely about your feelings on this now, although for the moment I will not be withdrawing my order."

Advice on Pre-Gym Workout

3 upvotes · 8 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

Translation time:

So i've wanted a six pack for a while

I've decided to be a weak anorexic instead of getting huge and strong, because bitches think low body fat is strength.

but never really had the spirit to commit to working out

Lifting heavy hurts for brief periods of time, so I've decided to get small instead.

Before I was together with my girlfriend, she used to say things like "oh look at that six pack,,you need to get a six pack" etc.

My owner has me trained to mold myself to her personal tastes.

I currently do; 1 minute 30 second plank with arms moved a bit further forward. 15 pushups 1 minute with legs raised 15 pushups 25 crunches 30 second break 25 crunches 15 pushups 25 crunches

Here is a detailed breakdown of how I waste my time doing stupid shit that will neither remove fat nor build muscle. But lactic acid hurts, so I think I am doing something.

Stop being a lazy anorexic bitch.

Eat a lot, sleep a lot, and get under a damn barbell.

You cannot shrink and grow at the same time.

If you cannot bench 300, squat 400, and deadlift 500, you have no business having clearly visible abs.

LTR with who I live is ignoring since 3 days because of fight, advice

3 upvotes · 8 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

Bring home another girl.

Apparently to Vice news talking about men's rights is comparable to white supremacy and the Nazi's

3 upvotes · 2 December 2017 · /r/MensRights

I think when it was discovered as a thing, back in the old PUA days, it was assumed to be conscious.

Subsequent observation has established that it's instinctive behaviour, and can often be unconscious. I think if we were renaming the concept today, we would have to call it BTB (boundary testing behaviour), but I'm not about to launch the Great Sperg Terminology Crusade.

Oh, and... the burden to keep things running is always on men. If the women were in charge, we'd still be eating raw meat and sleeping under trees.

The only difference is whether we get perks enough to make it worthwhile or not.

AWALT: How to read a female post

3 upvotes · 1 December 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

Unicorns cannot be proven not to exist.

However, any woman claiming to be one, rather than demonstrating it with her actions, is not one.

Beware the tradcon trap.

Can someone explain the lil' peep / youtube youth star culture to me?

3 upvotes · 22 November 2017 · /r/askTRP

Alpha is all an illusion.

It doesn't matter who is actually tough, or powerful, or cunning, or can get shit done. For mating purposes, it just matters what a girl believes.

If she thinks you're a badass, you might as well be. If she thinks you're famous, you might as well be. If she thinks you're cool, you might as well be.

You look at him and see a wimpy junkie loser. But junkie loser girls look at him and see a fearless rule-breaker who they just know is gonna be rich and famous someday.

[cross-posted from r/asktrp] How to get over a RP ex

3 upvotes · 16 November 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3ip7vv/beating_infatuation_the_most_common_form_of/

Do I need to give up my male-dominant hobbies to get commitment?

3 upvotes · 12 November 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

If you have male friends who you see in a group of other friends, fine. Men aren't going to have a problem with that.

But one-on-one time with males is different. There is always sexual tension. And men who might date you know that.

If you expect people to take your diet plans seriously, don't have bowls of candy in every room in your house.

Does TRP make you guys truly happy?

3 upvotes · 5 November 2017 · /r/askTRP

I can only tell you the way things are.

Whether you believe that or not makes no difference.

Is moving in an apartment with an LTR ever a good idea?

3 upvotes · 4 November 2017 · /r/askTRP

1. TRP isn't an ideology.
2. This is how you spell ideology.
3. Living with an LTR is perfectly feasible.
4. This particular woman, however, threw a fit when told no, which makes her unworthy of LTR status, much less cohabitation.

Where do intelligent young women hang out?

3 upvotes · 3 November 2017 · /r/askTRP

One of my friends has a wife like this who plays the "Hehehe I'm dumb!" card all the time trying to be cute, but I internally recoil every time she does this and the last thing I think of it as is cute, in fact I feel deep pity for her that she has chosen not to use her intelligence in life.

Sperg-like typing detected.

Your insistence that everything be an intellectual exercise creates the image of a person without a iota of fun in his soul.

Many very intelligent women act like nine-year-olds, on purpose, because they are intelligent. They are intelligent enough to know when to turn it the fuck off and act cute. Because women who know when to act like little girls are fucking adorable, and they know that.

If you can't stand anyone acting silly ever, then you are a tedious neurotic.

Neckbeards are rightly despised, not because they prize intellect, but because they don't know when to turn it the fuck off and watch a sunset, play with a kitten, eat a sandwich, or dance.

Not everything is a shit test, and using the term too loosely dilutes its meaning

3 upvotes · 29 October 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

Depends whether you think of a shit test as "a test of your frame to see if you are attractive", or "a test of your frame for any reason".

It's just a metaphor. Don't fuss over it.

Balance between being a hot commodity and being loyal

3 upvotes · 29 October 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

But aren't men attracted to challenges?

Oh, dear. You've been listening to girls in their 20s, haven't you?

Listen, sweetie. Most girls in their 20s do not know shit about men. If you listen to what they say about men, you will get a told a bunch of dumb shit that is basically an excuse for what they already want to do.

They think they know about men, because they can get men in their 20s to chase them for sex. But this is because men are horny, and will screw anything that is human, female, and not ugly. What they do not realize is that these same men are dumping them three weeks later because they are so self-absorbed and clueless about men that their company is actually unpleasant, and men only hang around them to get laid.

So let's dispel some myths, shall we?

- Men do not like "challenging" women.
- Men do not love to chase.
- Confidence is not "the sexiest thing you can wear". It isn't even sexy at all.
- This: () is not "curvy". It is fat. This:) (is curvy.
- Not all sizes can be healthy.
- Men are not separated into "players" and "ready for commitment". You are either a "keeper" or, well... not.
- Couples who fight often are not passionate, hot-headed, sexy firebrands who have amazing make-up sex are the time. They are sexless and full of resentment.
- Men will not "see past your looks to your inner beauty". If you care so little about other people that you don't try to look nice for them, then you have no inner beauty.
- Consent is not sexy. Consent is legalistic and wooden. Him knowing when you just want him to do it and not ask is sexy.

We getting clear yet?

Most of what you think you know about relationships is a lie, and that's not surprising, because you have probably never tested it, watched men to see if it's true, or asked men who trusted you enough to give you a straight answer. You just repeat dumb shit like "men like a challenge" because somebody else told you, who heard it from someone else, who heard it from someone else.

The only reason silly little girls believe it is because they love to be a challenge. They want men to jump through lots of hoops pursuing them, because it flatters their egos. So they make up dumb little stories about how men "love a challenge".

If you do that, you know what? Men will jump through hoops, and pursue you... to get to your body. And once they have been inside it, and right at the moment you think you are amazing, because look what he went through to get you in bed, he will vanish. He will stop calling, he will answer your texts the next day, with two or three words, if at all, and he will ghost you.

Why?

Because you're annoying. The only thing you had going for you was lust and novelty, and they're both gone now. He's either out chasing the next novelty, or when you see him next, he will be holding hands with some little thing with doe eyes and no sexy confidence at all. And you'll want to slap her stupid face off. What does he see in her? She's not sassy, she's dressed like a nun, she didn't even play hard to get, and what's so special about her, anyway? What evil spell did she cast?

Well, it's called femininity. Kindness. Approachability. Empathy. Sweetness. Caring.

You see, sweetie, men love a challenge. They like to climb mountains. Shoot rifles at distant targets. Race motorbikes. Explore wilderness. Restore old cars. Lift massive amounts of weights. Climb in the ring and box with each other. Hunt bears. Bang two chicks at once.

But do you want to be one of those challenges?

"Yep, been there, done that, got my passport stamped. Climbed Mount Stacy. Gonna swap stories about it and high-five the other dudes who got their passports stamped, too."

"What, STAY there? Nah, man, are you crazy? She's a ho. And when you're done bangin' her, you kinda realize how demanding and obnoxious and... well, she's one annoying bitch. Right, guys?"

"Yeah, bro, but what an ass! Magnificent. Was fun tapping that. Not a keeper, though."

Or do you want to be the woman who helps him rest between challenges, and cheers for him to win that motorbike race?

Do you want to play hard to get, or do you want to play hard to quit?

Kayfabe

3 upvotes · 24 October 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

Flattering answer:

They don't give a fuck. They value getting shit done over having everyone kiss their ass. They only prize approbation from fellow experts, not the great unwashed.

Unflattering answer:

They are a bunch of hopeless nerds who wouldn't know where to start. They had no social status in school, and were picked on, and they spend their lives desperately trying to soothe that inner hurt by proving they are smartest guy in the room... and this involves criticizing all the others to anyone who will listen, guild member or not.

Real answer:

Both of the above, to varying degrees.

Kayfabe

3 upvotes · 22 October 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

I'm not sure why you think the things you said contradict the things I said.

CMV: If a woman has any difficulty discussing her sexual past, with few exceptions, it's the ultimate red flag!

3 upvotes · 22 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't. I just do a whole bunch of drugs and then say whatever pops into my head. And somehow shit keeps working.

If there's a god, he's laughing his ass off.

[PSA:] When men say "Men like women who ____", what that means is:

3 upvotes · 22 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

When a guy says he likes women who play videogames, he's not saying he wants a woman to pick up a controller like it's a prop.

He's saying he's interested in women who would naturally game.

No. He is saying he has no idea what he likes, because his choices have always been too restricted to allow him to develop real preferences. He most likely thinks girls who like video games would like him.

But they wouldn't.

Because he won't make eye contact. And he smells like unwashed laundry.

I [32F] never had a serious relationship. Will men assume I've been promiscuous?

3 upvotes · 21 October 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

You do have a problem there.

If you've never been in a serious relationship at that age, I'm probably going to assume that either you didn't want one, or that others didn't want you for one.

Red flags either way.

You'll have to dispel those misgivings, and you can't do it with words, because anyone can say anything. You will have to show your value with actions over time. Focus on men who will give you that time.

A Highly Sensitive dude with a question

3 upvotes · 17 October 2017 · /r/askTRP

There isn't one.

"Naturals" are superior to men who learn game artificially, and it has nothing to do with "watching the sausage get made."

3 upvotes · 12 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

She who claims that one brand of sausage is better than another must demonstrate the ability to tell the difference in a blind taste test.

"If you can't handle me at my worst, you don't deserve me at my best." -Marilyn Monroe

3 upvotes · 4 October 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

One thing that women who like this quote all have in common is that their best isn't all that good, and their worst is terrible.

You're not good enough, you're not smart enough, and people don't like you.

3 upvotes · 2 October 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

It has been. You're the archive.

Someday you'll say something like this to someone else. That's how it works.

You're not good enough, you're not smart enough, and people don't like you.

3 upvotes · 2 October 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

So, the question is, how do you prioritise different types of improvement?

Doesn't matter. All that matters is that you do.

Life doesn't have any inherent meaning. We're all just meatsacks who are here by accident, for a little while, and then we aren't. So you get to pick the meaning life has for you.

If you're lucky enough to be talented and driven, you might be able to do anything... but you still can't do everything. You just... choose.

You can choose one, sacrifice everything to it, be a contender... or choose several, be awesome at them, but not world class. Either one is respectable. Or you can go to sportsball games, drink beer, eat junk food, and cheer for men who are good at something, even if it's only playing a child's game with a ball. I don't think you will, though.

Everyone's telling you ways to be awesome at something, from sales to killing other men with your bare hands, to seducing Ukrainian lingerie models. And they're telling you that unless you can do that thing (which just happens to be their thing) really well, then you ain't shit.

Truth is, you get to pick. Because they're all both right and wrong. The money-making guys wouldn't be shit if they couldn't make money, because that's what they care about and work at. Same for the seducers, and the fighters, and the artists, and the thinkers, and even the sportsball players (hell, someone has to entertain the proles).

Everyone wants to tell you that their choice is the best. That makes them feel good, I suppose.

But you get to pick. The only wrong choice is nothing. Because what's important isn't the field, it's the fact of self-improvement. The act of looking at yourself, thinking of the man you want to be, noticing and admitting the difference, and then working to bridge that gap.

You're not good enough, you're not smart enough, and people don't like you.

3 upvotes · 30 September 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

I do not want to hijack u/Whisper['s] post

This subject is worth writing your own about.

You're not good enough, you're not smart enough, and people don't like you.

3 upvotes · 29 September 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

Listenin' like a sperg...

Tinder game : what do I say

3 upvotes · 27 September 2017 · /r/askTRP

20-questions-about-you game is weak as fuck.

Legal advice needed - I'm building a slut delivery system. Like Doordash but for sluts.

3 upvotes · 22 September 2017 · /r/askTRP

Step One: Go have "Don't ask Internet misogynists for legal advice" tattooed on your forehead.

Backwards.

So your dumb ass can read it when you look in the mirror.

Yes, Virginia, you do have to be an asshole.

3 upvotes · 21 September 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

Lol. Gay.

Handling when your girl ask "Is it okay if I hang out with him?"

3 upvotes · 20 September 2017 · /r/askTRP

Yes, bad response. Shows attachment without dominance.

You see, by asking your permission, she is submitting to you. Her game is most likely that if you say "no", she is moving towards commitment, and if you say "yes", she now has a free pass to develop him as a backup plan.

What you said contained the worst elements of both answers. You gave her a free pass and demonstrated commitment, without assuming the relationship dominance she gave up.

The correct response is this situation depends on context.

If she had LTR potential, then the answer would be "no", with the most light, casual, preemptive tone you can muster. Followed by no further explanation of any kind. She can't see him because you said so.

If she was plate material, invoke separation anxiety with "Yeah, whatever", coupled with a lot of dread game (get another date for that night, etc).

Do women wear revealing clothing solely for attention, or because they are begging to be approached?

3 upvotes · 6 September 2017 · /r/askTRP

Yes.

In terms of muscle mass, would this be considered really buff (relative to most women in their 20s), and do you think its common for guys to get intimidated by a girl with this physique?

3 upvotes · 29 August 2017 · /r/askTRP

"Intimidating" is the word unattractive women use to sop their self-esteem when men don't want them. How narcissistic is it too explain lack of attention from the opposite sex as "I'm too awesome, and they just feel like they can't measure up"?

However, high-achieving women, competitive women, women who are successful in masculine pursuits, will always get less male attention.

Why?

Because men are basically rational creatures. If you raise the ask without raising the offer, you'll get less takers.

A girl being muscular, or a CEO, or Harvard-educated, or rich and famous, doesn't do a damn thing to make her more desireable as a fuck. Or a partner. Or anything in between. It only raises her standards for what she expects in a man. Work harder, get the same isn't a good bargain even if you can do it.

As for your example, not specially ugly or pretty, muscles aren't super butch enough to be awful, but the tat sleeve is probably a bad sign. I'd probably pass unless her personality was a lot more feminine than her appearance.

Google memo guy Sanity Sunday

3 upvotes · 28 August 2017 · /r/MensRights

Do you mean that all lies are unethical, or that this lie is unethical?

There's No Such Thing As Personality

3 upvotes · 28 August 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

I'm an autistic 17 year old boy.

Then perhaps you might not be the best judge of how people are put together and why they behave like they do.
Yet.

everyone said: 'this is clearly you, I'm not surprised.' I'm very unhandy and there's no way I can hide it.
Personality. I have only one face, and that's my own.

The message here is that we are what we repeatedly do.

The word "personality" is used to mean "inherent nature which causes us to behave how we do". But we can't see that inherent nature. We only infer it from that behaviour. And no one can prove that it is any sort of inherent nature that makes behaviour consistent over time.

You, for instance, are physically capable of talking and acting in any way you choose. The laws of physics work just as well for you as for me. There is nothing to prevent you from spending tomorrow pretending to be Nikola Tesla, or James Brown, or an exiled African prince who has vowed to walk backwards everywhere until Luxembourg wins the World Cup.

The only reason you can't behave any way you want isn't some nebulous "nature" of your "soul". It's simply that you don't know how.

When we are confronted with something we can't do, we can either say "It is not in my nature", and be stuck unable to do it forever, or say "I do not know how to do this", and proceed to learn.

'Attention-seeking' woman who falsely accused 15 men of rape and sexual assault after claiming she was a lesbian 'and would never have sex with a man' is jailed for 10 years.

3 upvotes · 25 August 2017 · /r/MensRights

Wait a minute... you're a satire account, aren't you?

Looking for some suggestions on working out & improving my diet (I'm 14 and found TRP early)

3 upvotes · 19 August 2017 · /r/askTRP

Get a 5 rep max for deadlift, squat, bench, overhead, bent row, etc, then use a program calculator.

Everything you wanted to know but you were too afraid to ask about those evil creatures called men

3 upvotes · 7 August 2017 · /r/MensRights

I'm not trying to claim white male superiority or anything.

Why ever not? Superiority is not supremacy. It wouldn't mean white males had more rights.

It would just be an acknowledgement that white males are on top of the leader board. #1 in civilization-building. The team to beat.

White males are superior civilization-builders in the same way that Usain Bolt is a superior runner. No controversy necessary or even possible. Just go to the score sheet.

For those of you who don't like that, you are perfectly welcome to step up your civilization-building game and claim the top spot if you can.

Quick question...

3 upvotes · 27 June 2017 · /r/askTRP

I can't help feeling like I'm in the middle of a massive shit test.

Most likely it's coming from your daughter.

Can't eat, Can't Sleep, Can't focus, Can't operate.

3 upvotes · 8 March 2017 · /r/askTRP

"Space" is a euphemism for "someone else's dick".

How many people who frequent TRP are actually crushing it in life?

3 upvotes · 23 February 2017 · /r/askTRP

Who cares?

The only person here whose real-world success should matter to you is... you.

This isn't a magic pill. It's homework. You have to take it home, pull it apart, put it back together, try it out, practice it, grind the corners down some so it fits.

The red pill is not a formula for success, and silk is not a parachute.

You're still on your own. We're just here to help you get a clue.

Why is Seattle full of pussies and feminists?

3 upvotes · 28 December 2016 · /r/askTRP

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/5c4c6x/urbanism_ruralism_and_dunbars_number/

Some men can never be alphas. Their SMV will always be relatively low no matter what.

3 upvotes · 11 December 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The question is not whether Ajay can be "an alpha" or not.

It is whether Ajay is better off after working on himself than before.

Girl has humor over text but not in person

3 upvotes · 6 December 2016 · /r/askTRP

She's shy and introverted.

If you are just looking to plate, no problem, do nothing. If you want an LTR, build comfort, isolate 1on1, avoid noisy environments, speak softly.

I don't want this

3 upvotes · 28 November 2016 · /r/askTRP

Aw, muffin, did life not work out the way you wanted?

Be the change you wish to see in the world.

I want to lay on a bed as I watch snow fall outside. And I want my cute redhead there next to me nuzzling into my chest, mother fuckers.

I wanted that too, so I went and got it.

There's nothing special about you. You have to work for things just like anyone else.

Seriously, no one come in here and just tell me to "grow the fuck up, pussy". I've seen and heard that a thousand times, asshole, it isn't doing jack shit in this situation.

Because you weren't listening. You need to take responsibility for your life. When you do, then I can help you. Until you do, it is beyond my power.

And I guarantee you that if /u/fieldline is reading this, he's laughing his ass off.

How do you deal with depression/anxiety or feelings of suicide?

3 upvotes · 24 October 2016 · /r/askTRP

Don't talk to me like a bitch.

What the fuck does it matter if you are getting a late start?

You have X number of years left in your life. Do you want to spend them winning? Or losing?

Girl cheats on a guy, guy believes she can't forgive herself

3 upvotes · 22 October 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Oops. Paging /u/CrazyHorseInvincible to point this.

CMV: TheRedPill Advocates for Emotional Abuse

3 upvotes · 4 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I just made up the word "fleem". Now let's argue about what is or isn't "fleem".

Two (relatively) easy ways we can take back control of the sexual marketplace.

3 upvotes · 3 October 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Who's this "we"?

I am doing just fine. Read my articles, and those of /u/humansockpuppet, u/gaylubeoil, and /u/archwinger, and put them into practice, and you will do fine too.

Then what the fuck do you care about a bunch of people too lazy to do the same?

30% of People with a Healthy BMI are Actually Obese

3 upvotes · 3 October 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Yes, it is. Most bodybuilders have an "obese" BMI.

How to find a boyfriend in college?

3 upvotes · 7 September 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

No, I mean when should things progress to making it official. The problem I've seen is that RPW advice is to not have sex before making things official with a man, but I know many men won't commit before having sex because, like you said, you want to know if you're sexually compatible.

That's not the reason.

Men don't know if we want something long term until we are past the point of sex. Sexual desire distorts our thinking, makes us focused on that short-term goal to the exclusion of long-term goals.

In other words, there is absolutely no point asking me if I'm "committed" before you have sex with me, not just because I might lie to you, but because I don't even know the answer myself.

This is why I don't recommend women "hold out" for an explicit promise of commitment. It is either valueless, because I'll break it when I discover you're not for me, or unnecessary, because I would have stayed anyway.

Asking a man for commitment is as dumb (and counterproductive) as asking a woman's permission to kiss her.

Just as a man looking for a kiss must assess a woman's mood without asking (knowing her better than she knows herself), and work to inspire desire rather than simply looking for it, a woman looking for commitment must know the man better than he knows himself, and inspire the commitment she seeks.

Questions about Men's Rights and feminism - from a man.

3 upvotes · 28 August 2016 · /r/MensRights

while feminists demand men and society's institutions protect women, it reserves the right to call that protection condescending and paternalistic, therefore oppression.

These feminists are always such wacky fun.

Anything that disadvantages women is misogyny, and anything that advantages them insults them by implying they need an advantage, therefore misogyny. Also, anything that treats men and women exactly the same denies their special needs, therefore misogyny. And anything that treats women differently is a double standard, therefore misogyny.

It's almost as if they had some conceived conclusion they were trying to find a way to reach.

Why marry a RPer?

3 upvotes · 23 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yep, I'm unfair like that.

It's sluts' and single moms' best move to seek commitment, and men's best move to avoid giving it to them.

What character traits do men like in women for a relationship?

3 upvotes · 23 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

To be feminine is to display feminine virtues, just as to be masculine is to display masculine virtues.

What are masculine and feminine virtues? We can learn this by looking at what behaviours we instinctively despise in each sex.

- We despise men who are weak, therefore strength is a masculine virtue.
- We despise men who are cowardly, therefore courage is a masculine virtue.
- We despise a man who betrays his comrades or breaks his promises, therefore honor is a masculine virtue.
- We despise a man who cries and complains, therefore stoicism is a masculine virtue.
- We despise a man who cannot provide for himself, therefore productivity and enterprise are masculine virtues.

And so on.

So what are the feminine virtues?

- We despise a bitchy woman, therefore politeness is a feminine virtue.
- We despise a bossy woman, therefore submissiveness is a feminine virtue.
- We despise an adulterous or cheating woman, therefore loyalty is a feminine virtue.
- We despise a petty woman who gossips about others, therefore decorum is a feminine virtue.
- We despise a slovenly woman, therefore cleanliness is a feminine virtue.
- We despise a woman who is mean and spiteful, therefore kindness is a feminine virtue.
- We despise a woman who is callous and cynical, therefore empathy and warmth are feminine virtues.

You get the idea. It's easy to spot what's unfeminine, what's feminine is the opposite.

Notice that I didn't just say having feminine virtues. I said displaying them. So femininity consists not only of having those virtues, but behaving in a way that indicates you have them, as well as behaviour generally associated with people who have them. (This is why there is such a thing as feminine body language, for example.)

Shit-test: Calling our sex mediocre

3 upvotes · 15 August 2016 · /r/askTRP

Have you not read the Bitch Management Hierarchy?

Public disrespect is an automatic and permanent demotion.

One troll down...

3 upvotes · 8 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

We are strong, independent, wymyn! Smash the Patriarchy!

Help, Patriarchy! Save us from evil internet misogynists!

Thoughts On The Sigma Male

3 upvotes · 8 August 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

I concur.

You can spend all your life sorting beans into different piles... one day based on colour, the next on shape, the next on size, and so on. And at the end, what you will have accomplished amounts to... a small hill of beans.

Categories are only useful when they help you think about things, and have a useful insight that lets you do more stuff. They are just a metaphor.

Use occasionally, then discard and move on.

How come more women aren't into "polyamory"?

3 upvotes · 2 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't confuse what women want with what they say they want.

Women effectively join harems by having sex with plate spinners, Chads with wandering eyes and hands, cheaters, that dude they just met and have no idea if he has a wife, etc.

The shorthand term we use for this is a "soft harem".

Things That Keep You Beta: Revenge Fantasies

3 upvotes · 18 July 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Knew there was a reason I nominated you for an EC.

To the man of abundance, exes don't matter, unless she died of cancer or something.

Q4BP: I often see accusations of TRP encouraging emotional abuse and emotional manipulation, but I honestly can't say I've seen it. Can you please specify what part of Red Pill philosophy you mean?

3 upvotes · 14 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Not getting your dick wet" is the single most dismissive, misrepresentative, downright cruel description of what a husband goes through after years of little or no sex that I've ever read.

Very well put.

However, you are making the mistake of assuming you're talking to someone who is debating in good faith. "Not getting your dick wet" isn't something she chose to say because she doesn't realize involuntary male celibacy is intense suffering (especially when married)... it's something she chose to say because she doesn't care. And she wants to persuade others not to care.

Why?

Because lack of compassion for male suffering is built into the human genome. Men are evolved to be the high-risk, high-reward sex. They're supposed to become awesome or die trying.

And consequently, women worship the ones who successfully become awesome (because that's who they are supposed to mate with), and don't give a crap about the ones who fail (because that's part of the design of the system, and if they had compassion for these men, they would literally be sad all the time).

So what you're doing here isn't arguing with a person, but with an instinctive response, and that instinctive response isn't going to understand your counterarguments, because its intelligence is somewhere between "lizard" and "fish".

Why are poly relationships so rare among the very wealthy?

3 upvotes · 14 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Your hypothesis fails Hanlon's Razor.

Never assume the people at the top of the pyramid are smart, or have a plan. They're just as dumb and emotional as the rest of humanity, only they are meaner, greedier, and have more powerful friends.

They just follow a simple algorithm of telling the majority of people what they want to hear, and demonizing anyone who isn't fooled by that.

One of the basic requirements of power in a democratic society is that virtue signaling must supercede all principles, because a democratic society is a popularity contest, not a merit competition. So they pretend to do, be, and think whatever gives them the most popularity points.

The .0001% didn't choose feminism. They didn't choose pro-gay. They didn't choose multiculturalism. That's not their fault. It's the baby boomers' fault. They clamoured for these things, and the cultural, social, political, and even to some extent the economic elites gave it to them without a struggle, because in order to be elites in a democratic society, you have to care more about being the captain than you do about where the ship is headed.

And they'll happily drill a hole in the bottom of the boat if it'll make the crew cheer.

To marry or not to marry? An ancient perspective

3 upvotes · 14 July 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Here, he's the student.

And the lesson I am teaching is impress with your actions, not your credentials.

Leading with the resume, like a sperg, may work in academic circles (spergs), but outside there, it signals lack of faith in one's deeds or abilities (beta), and an expectation that credentials in one environment should transfer to another (sperg).

If I found myself on a crab fishing boat, I wouldn't wave my PhD around (like a sperg). I'd say "please teach me how to work the crane".

What kind of a woman wouldn't fall for dread game?

3 upvotes · 12 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

All relationships are conditional.

As you showed when you walked.

Is feminism a part of patriarchy?

3 upvotes · 11 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So why not smash the patriarchy?

Because feminism cannot function without it.

Feminism's basic paradigm is:

1. Want X.
2. Find a way to characterize not having X as unfair to women.
3. Point this out loudly until men "rescue" the women by giving them X.

Feminism doesn't work without male power to intercede between women's wants and the physical universe.

If feminists did not use or need male power, they would start their own companies instead of demanding promotion quotas, hiring quotas, board quotas, maternity leave, etc.

If feminists did not use or need male power, they would make their own video games, movies, and television instead of videos complaining about sexism in male-made games, movies, and television.

If feminists did not use or need male power, they would learn to safeguard themselves and avoid trouble instead of demanding that all men be blamed for rape (and endlessly harangued).

If feminists did not use or need male power, they would stop demanding a share of the things men built, and build their own things instead (which they would then own).

The tactic of appealing to sympathy, or the notion of fairness, requires an authority figure with the power to make things "fair". Whining to daddy requires daddy.

Need advice, in a difficult situation with my husband.

3 upvotes · 8 July 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

At this point, my common sense is tingling.

I suspect that his version of the story would sound completely different. "Don't badmouth your SO" doesn't just mean "don't say he's bad". It also means "don't embellish your story, or tell it selectively, to make him out as the bad guy".

How would he tell this story?

Guy friends are for social and emotional support. Women are for fucking.

3 upvotes · 6 July 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

You don't actually... know... where you are, do you?

Swedish Feminist Politician Says Rape Isn't As Bad When Muslims Do It

3 upvotes · 5 July 2016 · /r/MensRights

So long as I am adorable, I can lure in people with souls, and steal theirs.

The MGTOW Manifesto: Our Demands For Ending the Marriage Strike

3 upvotes · 5 July 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Presenting a list of demands like this to an individual woman would be ridiculous.

Yep.

The Demands are social and legal changes that must occur before marriage MIGHT be a viable option for SOME men.

You make this distinction. I make this distinction. Women do not make this distinction.

Any woman who does not see this list cannot be affected by it. Any woman who does see this list will conclude you are a beta, and feel free to dismiss anything you say.

Even if you were completely correct in theory, in no possible universe would your enumeration of this list have an outcome that helps achieve your stated goal.

I am trying to link the growing marriage strike with actionable achievable social and legal reforms.

No meaningful social and legal reforms are possible so long as women are

- Allowed to vote.
- Reliably protected from starvation, cold, rape, and murder by society.

A woman does not care about men's collective welfare until she needs them. A woman does not understand what men are for until she is cold, hungry, or frightened.

I understand that you're trying to articulate what a solution to the problem might look like.

But what I am trying to tell you is that half of the solution to any problem is the problem of how you are going to sell the solution. If you do not have a plan for how to get women to do all this stuff, then you don't have a solution, you just have a wish list.

And you're not going to be able to come up with a plan to get women to do all this, because women will not admit that marriage is in trouble. You're not going to convince them, because the very fact that YOU were the one to start the conversation means to them that YOU are the one who wants something, and they should hold out for something in return.

Women's basic attitude is "What will you give me in return for letting you rescue me from the quicksand?", and it will continue to be so until they figure out they're drowning and scream for help.

Never offer a solution on your own initiative. Wait until they beg you for one.

The MGTOW Manifesto: Our Demands For Ending the Marriage Strike

3 upvotes · 5 July 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Watching the world turn into a cesspool is painful to me not fun.

You have to pretend it is, anyway.

Why?

Because alphas do not negotiate with women, and women do not negotiate with betas.

The moment you negotiate with a woman, instead of simply withdrawing your attention, you signal to women that you are not an alpha. Therefore, you must be a beta. Therefore, they will not negotiate with you. They will simply demand everything that they want as a condition of their mere presence.

Presenting women with a manifesto of any sort is simply taken as a sign of weakness. This will just make them double down on shaming attempts and demands. And marriage won't get saved.

If you actually want to "save" marriage, you have to stop visibility caring... in same way that the only way to keep a woman is be ready to walk away at any moment. Men issuing manifestos still visibly care, and women will never make concessions to such men.

When the majority of men look at marriage and say not "This is unacceptable, here's how to fix it.", but "Nah. I'm good over here, thanks.", that is the only moment when marriage has even a chance of getting fixed.

It won't, of course. Marriage is doomed forever.

But that's the only moment when it would even be remotely possible.

Stop giving so many fucks. Let it go.

The greatest challenge for the 21st century woman is to find a man that adds to her quality of life.

3 upvotes · 2 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because most of them can't math.

First-world middle-to-upper class women are the safest demographic in the history of... everything we know about.

Is women's sexual freedom a positive force in society?

3 upvotes · 1 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's too vague to answer. Positive for whom?

Biggest winners from women's sexual freedom: Chads, early-twenties women, large corporations, left-wing politicians.

Biggest losers: Beta males, post-wall women, children, religious authorities, future generations.

Are most vocal incels Red Pill washouts?

3 upvotes · 30 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

When I coined the term "anger phase", it was part of larger article likening the stages of red pill awakening to the stages of grief:

- Denial
- Anger
- Bargaining

- Depression
- Acceptance

I believe I may not have been the first to make the analogy, but for whatever reason, when I made it, it stuck.

There are problems associated with being "stuck" at any of the first four phases, but inceldom in particular is most characteristic of being stuck at the denial phase.

The denial phase is characterized by the belief that nothing is wrong with sexual relationships in this culture, that being nice will charm women, and that if women shun you, you just haven't acted enough like a disney movie, haven't found the right woman, etc.

No matter how angry someone is, he is still in the denial phase, if he has not yet admitted that none of this is the case... just as if you refuse to admit you have cancer, you are still in the denial phase, no matter how angrily you demand that the oncologist reexamine your PET scans and biopsy results.

The anger phase isn't anger over not getting laid. It's anger over being lied to.

What are your personal ethical beliefs?

3 upvotes · 30 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Pure utilitarianism isn't a moral system. It's a rubric for evaluating moral systems... possibly the only one which yields any objective means for doing so.

In other words, torturing babies isn't objectively morally wrong, because nothing is.

However, a moral system that prevents widespread baby-torture is better than one that doesn't, because babies are expensive, and of high potential value. Throwing away babies by torturing them (which makes them tend to die) would cause a society to routinely be investing a lot in creating a baby, then destroying it with no compensating gain.

Thus, a society that produced babies, then tortured them to death, would be out-competed by one that prevented this behaviour, ceteris paribus. However, there are a variety of moral systems and values that would prevent this, and none of them is objectively more correct. The only thing that's measurable is how well they work in achieving some non-moral goal.

What are your personal ethical beliefs?

3 upvotes · 30 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I cannot find any reason to think that morality is not the same.

So, doubling down on the "argument from strong personal feelings", then?

Moral systems are a piece of technology. They are invented, not discovered. Their purpose is allow cooperation between members of a group, in order to more effectively pursue shared goals.

As such, there is no one "correct" morality, but some systems are objectively better than others in the sense of having more utility.

CMV: Women do not like "swole" men.

3 upvotes · 30 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Edited comment to assist you with reading comprehension.

What are your personal ethical beliefs?

3 upvotes · 29 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So your major supporting arguments are:

I cannot conceive of ...

...

seems ...

...

I also don't believe...

So, this is the "argument from strong personal feelings" style of debate?

That doesn't hold any water.

The fact that you can't even present a compelling argument that torturing babies for kicks is objectively immoral, coupled with the fact that no one else has yet been able to, either, might perhaps suggest something to you.

The simplest explanation for this is that morality is not objective. That would make it impossible to "prove" that anything is moral or immoral at all.

we also need to figure out something, since we do not live in thought experiments, but in the real world where 'moral' decisions must be made.

No, we don't. We live in the real world where decisions must be made. This is a small, but important, difference.

Could a system like in the Republic ever work?

3 upvotes · 29 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Plato's Republic isn't a designed system, it's a wish list.

It doesn't deal with any of the real traits of human nature. It just wishes them away by positing an omnipotent, omnibenevolent dictator.

Why exactly shouldn't personal freedom be prioritized over "the greater good"?

3 upvotes · 29 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Blue pill, left wing: Socialist. SJW. Feminist. Bolshevik.

Blue pill, right wing: Evangelical christian. Tradcon. ISIS. Stormfront.

Red pill, neither: PUA. Anarchocapitalist. Libertarian. TRP.

The true nature of the "Blue Pill" is that it is propaganda (usually a lie of some sort, but sometimes selectively told truth) used to get people to sacrifice their welfare for that of the collective.

While the type of "Blue Pill" we focus on is usually leftwing, feminist, socialist, etc (because it is most predominant at the moment), that is only one of many existing types of blue pill.

Traditional conservative (tradcon) doctrine is another.

Explain to me why I'm wrong: If you're not White, Japanese, or Persian you can't be Alpha, because otherwise, you are descended from a conquered people.

3 upvotes · 28 June 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Everyone is descended from a conquered people, and from the people who conquered them.

Please learn a little more about genetics.

[Mod] Wanted:Dead or Alive! Posts and comments that "make RPW a plate school." Reward!

3 upvotes · 27 June 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

To be honest, I'm not totally content with the second one.

It's not clearly written enough, and that tends to shroud the basic idea in arguments based on emotional reactions to the expression of the idea (rather than the idea itself).

If what Rollo Tomassi says

A woman who wants to fuck you will find a way to fuck you. She will fly across the country, crawl under barbed wire, climb in through your second story bedroom window etc etc etc

... is true (and almost every field test that TRPers and PUAs run seem to suggest it is), then, to prosper in the long run, red pill women must have a plan for turning that kind of crazy passion into a stable relationship rather than a summer fling.

"Don't do that" isn't useful advice, because it's like telling people not to eat so much. If it were that simple, we wouldn't be in the midst of an obesity epidemic.

Anyone notice how if a biological aspect is found in women that advantages them more than men it's an automatic sign of their superiority but if men are found with a biological advantage then it "must" be socially constructed?

3 upvotes · 26 June 2016 · /r/MensRights

Absolute crap.

(That which is asserted without evidence can be dismissed without evidence.)

How to deal with a plate that wants to hangout all the time?

3 upvotes · 23 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3zd6q3/the_bitch_management_hierarchy_study_guide/

A plate is a girl you only see for sex.

A FWB is a girl you have sex and hang with nonsexually.

The Guide will help you decide if and when to promote. If you're not promoting, don't hang out except to fuck.

My weird, confusing date with a Russian girl.

3 upvotes · 23 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

Annotated text convo

That is as thirsty as a freeze-dried camel.

Tried to escalate sexually with this, but to no avail

...

She mentioned how she'd pay for her half, because if the guy pays for you, you feel as if you owe him something. I laughed and paid her half

...

...

I said goodbye. She put out her hand to give me a handshake, I just laughed and hugged her.

You are being auditioned for "orbiter".

Next and start over.

Next time, get her attracted and excited before attempting to escalate. Otherwise, you just look thirsty.

"Until we reassess what it means to be a "real man" then men will continue to beat their wives and murder LGBT people to ease their own self-loathing."

3 upvotes · 22 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

in a culture that glorifies violence and elevates mass murderers to celebrity status.

... also known as "Islam".

Girls more likely than boys to get away with misbehaving

3 upvotes · 22 June 2016 · /r/MensRights

Still to come, results of study on bear defecation habits.

Question for redpill: How is anyone supposed to know when they've established that they're more than just plate material, and actually allow something to happen?

3 upvotes · 21 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You have to English so badly the failure, that say you what cannot I even figure out.

Safety Concern

3 upvotes · 20 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

I mean, go take boxing or MMA classes if you want

Why the fuck isn't everyone on TRP studying some form of martial art?

No you can't have my number.. but you can hit me up whenever on facebook.

3 upvotes · 20 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

"Nah."

"Until we reassess what it means to be a "real man" then men will continue to beat their wives and murder LGBT people to ease their own self-loathing."

3 upvotes · 19 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

i dont think you understand what toxic masculinity is.

No one does, because it doesn't mean one thing.

It means whatever the speaker wants it to mean. That is its whole purpose for existence. It not for communicating. It's a weapon in the form of a word.

Made hilarious mistake, insulting girlfriends body. Now she wants me to make it up to her, or no sex. How to handle and keep frame?

3 upvotes · 14 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

Ok so the girl I've been dating for three months sent me a picture of her with two other girls, all completely naked from behind in a dimly lit room.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JxsfEio0L8Y>

Plate only.

Handle "no sex until you make it up to me" with "Okay. What's the phone number of the ass I liked?"

Girlfriend fuxked a whole frat house right before we met

3 upvotes · 13 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

You misspelled "ex-girlfriend".

Who killed Marriage 1.0? (Trigger warning: dry theory)

3 upvotes · 13 June 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

That's why I suggested bottling up the gay people with other gays too aka gay marriage.

An option is not a bottle. You can't force gays to get married. You can only give them the option. To save marriage 1.0, you would need to restore bigotry against gay people, to drive them into the closet and keep them there.

I understand what you're saying though, the more possible models of family the harder it is to keep people following any particular one.

I'm saying that, but even more than that. Marriage 1.0 is especially weak to competition. Non-monogamy always beats monogamy if non-monogamy is allowed on the field.

The Jesus freaks were right all along, at least about this. Every player, every gay man, every FWB arrangement, every tinder hookup, they are all destroying marriage. Not individual, existing marriages, but the institution of marriage, as something the next generation might conceivably do.

Does TRP make any other woman feel depressed?

3 upvotes · 9 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The only question is, are you a man enough to satisfy me?

Does TRP make any other woman feel depressed?

3 upvotes · 8 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yep.

Does TRP make any other woman feel depressed?

3 upvotes · 8 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why should I avoid the truth?

By which you seem to actually mean "If it's reeeeeeeeeeeeeeally the truth, why are you telling me to avoid it?"

There's lots of truths. There are all sorts of truths about crocheting, french literature, and the history of golf that I have absolutely no interest in whatsoever.

Truth is important because it empowers us. It helps us predict what will happen as a result of our actions, and this allows us to choose our actions.

/r/TheRedPill contains information for predicting the actions of women, and how those will change depending on what men do.

This is not useful to you. You are not a man who might wish to have sex with women. Why would you look at information that might help you predict how most women will react to a man doing this or that? Why on earth would you care?

/r/TheRedPill isn't for you. Now, we don't kick women out unless they disrupt the place, but there's no real reason for most of them to be there. In general, a woman in TRP is wasting her time unless she fits into one of a few small categories:

- "I have sons and I am worried about what their lives and chances for happiness will be like."
- "I like theory and find this all fascinating rather than disturbing."
- "Yes, women DO like to be raped by dominant men. Large, muscular dominant men over and over and over very roughly sorry about no punctuation typing with one hand"

None of these women is you.

Q4All: What do you guys think about "safe spaces"? Has the world become too "Politically Correct" that we can no longer speak our minds?

3 upvotes · 8 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I am all in favour of any plan you propose to merge /r/TheRedPill with /r/TwoXChromosomes.

Let the triggerpocalypse begin!

CMV: 90% of TRP aren't actually redpill.

3 upvotes · 6 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Now I'm starting to slide a little... can we really look teenagers in the eye and claim that intentionally forsaking such a key part of the human experience is safer than playing the game actually knowing the rules?

We've discussed this before. The game is rigged. It has a house percentage. You don't win by "knowing the rules" because the rules say you lose.

Knowing the rules is what convinces you not to play.

What should scare you is the fact that so many male teenagers are all too willing to forgo what you think is a key part of the human experience. I'm starting to suspect that fatherhood may be a hell of a lot less of a key part of the human experience than motherhood is. We already know who suffers more from foregoing kids.

I use a "food vs. dessert" analogy to describe this. There are things that you must have, or you will be able to think of nothing else, and things that are nice to have if they're not too hard or troublesome to get, but if not, oh well.

Men want sex like they want food. But even the ones who want kids mostly only want kids like they want dessert.

I have no problem telling young men to never get married or have children, because I absolutely believe it's better for them that way. The few who do get baby rabies are going to ignore my advice anyway. They'll get the short end of the stick, of course, a lot of them, but I did what I could to save them.

I know that you, personally, have trouble understanding this, because marriage and kids is the primary priority in your life. But the psychological rewards that you get out of it just aren't there for most men. It's an optional extra they can take or leave... the only critical part is sex, and possibly female admiration and affection.

And so ultimately, you have to accept that you might just not be the greatest expert on what teenage males want or what will make them happiest. Telling them to "man up", marry, and become fathers is female-centric advice intended to help someone other than the recipient. We don't allow people to tell men that in TRP any more than RPW would allow some man to come in and tell women to forego relationships altogether and get good at slutting it up, which would be male-centric advice.

Your objection of "What will happen to women, kids, and society, if men stop marrying?" is a valid one. But not a relevant one. TRP is for helping men. Not women. Not kids. Not society.

It wasn't TRP that made marriage a bad deal for men. So it isn't TRP's responsibility to save society by telling men, yet again, to take up someone else's slack.

If women want men to have children, and actively involve ourselves in raising them, then they must incentivize that behaviour, rather than criticizing those who point out the lack of incentive. Men cannot be kept in ignorance forever. It worked for a while, but eventually we figured it out. And if we stopped pointing it out, someone else would.

A male's dating blog, vs. a woman's dating blog.

3 upvotes · 1 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's naive. Of course all significant processes contain cycles.

The importance of understanding whether something is a primary cause, or an effect (even if it also exacerbates the condition in a positive feedback loop), is understanding that effects cannot generally be removed without removing causes.

In other words, if TRP is an effect, it doesn't matter if it "makes the problem worse" or "makes things better", because you can't change it without changing whatever is causing it.

The distinction can be regarded as that between a dependent and independent variable.

Sex with betas is not always duty sex

3 upvotes · 1 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You're right.

Sometimes it's "I'm fat or spotty and can't get a better one" sex.

Sometimes it's "I'm tired of being pumped and dumped and treated like the whore I am, so I'm going to try to learn to enjoy this" sex.

Why be a stay at home mom nowadays?

3 upvotes · 1 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You told one of the founders of TRP what "the red pill" is. That was, honestly, just a wee bit of a gaffe.

Yes, most of the discussion there is about how to get laid. But the reason we picked the "red pill" is that it's a metaphor for seeing what's there.

So the red pill refers to the toolset, not the goal.

A "red pill" sexual strategy and pickup group discusses how to use sexual realism to get NSA sex. A "red pill" society uses sexual realism to stick families together and raise healthy children.

The distinction between "red pill" and "blue pill" is between "let's look at what's there, and use what we learn to achieve our goals" and "what are our moral imperatives, and how can we make everyone behave that way".

A red pill society is one that expects, allows and encourages its members to be aware of the realities of the sexual marketplace. A blue pill society is one uses indoctrination.

Why be a stay at home mom nowadays?

3 upvotes · 31 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes, yes, yes, we also eat our cornflakes with goat's blood, and are a secret plot run by CIA to sap and impurify your precious bodily fluids. Whatever.

Why be a stay at home mom nowadays?

3 upvotes · 31 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You have redpill confused with conservative, dear.

Why be a stay at home mom nowadays?

3 upvotes · 31 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

many people in TRP seem to be against the idea of women working in general

People's lives are affected by the structure of their society. You cannot just do your own thing, and behave as if the civilization you live in doesn't exist.

In a society where women are homemakers, and men are earners, things are structured to support that. In a society where men and women are earners, and homemakers are dishwashers, washing machines, television sets, microwave ovens, corporate-manufactured food in boxes, cleaning services paying minimum wage to brown people, brown people earning minimum wage to take care of your kids, state-run indoctrination centers, etc... well, things are structured to support that.

A bluepill society has structural and legal ways of making you act bluepill. A redpill society has structural and economic incentives for making you act redpill.

Red pill societies are structured around the family. Blue pill societies are structured around a central authority... that will be whatever entity is dispensing the blue pills. Sometimes, it's some form of religion. In other places, it's the state, usually through an ideology like fascism or communism. In America, it's a sort of oligarchy which can loosely be described as "the banks" or "wall street", although that glosses over a lot of detail.

Point is, there is no way to live the ideal redpill lifestyle in a bluepill society, because if you want a family, you won't be able to support a household on one salary, if you want financial independence, your startup business will have to pay 50% taxes on gross income and comply with six telephone books' worth of federal law, if you want a marriage, your wife will be offered half your stuff as an incentive to cheat on you, and if you want kids, you'll be arrested if you try to raise those kids yourself instead of letting the state do it.

There's also no way to live the ideal bluepill lifestyle in a redpill society. You won't be able to find a partner, the government won't babysit your kids, and there's no national endowment for the arts to support your feminist interpretive dance troupe.

What would be your reaction if 90% of men in society absolutely refused to get married?

3 upvotes · 31 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

the upper class is marrying at rates similar to those 30-40 years ago, albeit at older ages, and keeping their wealth consolidated. the working and lower class have seen their marriage and productivity rates plummet

If you have 500 million, and your d-rapist gets half, you have 250 million.

If you have 5,000 and make 50,000 a year, and your d-rapist gets half, you're in big trouble.

The poor are always affected first by socio-economic changes. Especially blacks... the black community is the canary in America's coal mine.

Question for Redpill: Do you talk about fight club?

3 upvotes · 31 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Online anonymity isn't for protecting me from my friends and family finding out. It's to protect them from you screwballs messing with them. I'm sure the murder threats are just hot air, but why would I let people bother them, even so?

Everyone who knows me well enough to care what my opinions are, knows what my opinions are.

A friend of mine sent me a video to try and explain her position on why feminism is preferable to equalism. I had to respond to the video because it is entirely illogical.

3 upvotes · 26 May 2016 · /r/MensRights

People have a right to bodily integrity

That right is not absolute.

People's right to bodily integrity prevails against the needs of random strangers, but not the needs of their own children. If it did, paternity suits would not be a thing.

March of the Freak Parade

3 upvotes · 24 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

A Nation is an area of land with a population bound by common beliefs.

A Country is an area of land with a population bound by common laws.

in a Nation an individual will fight to make the Nation's pie bigger, of course with the vast majority of that increase going to him... but the Nation's pie is bigger. In a Country, the various groups fight for a bigger slice of the Country's pie.

That's a good way to put it.

I think what's important is a sense of shared identity. Humans are genetically programmed to identify as members of a group, and be hostile to outgroups, but the important thing to realize is that they are not genetically programmed with selection criteria for those groups.

This explains many, many things, from religion to football fandom.

Race is one criterion that been used in the past, but that's not because it's the best, but because it's the easiest. Race is a weak criteria, because it leaves you unable to cherry-pick the best from elsewhere. This holds true for any immutable trait. Ideally, you want to be able to recruit from wherever you find value.

So racism isn't a good idea.

But there's a problem with anti-racism, too. And that problem is that it usually comes mixed with multiculturalism, which is the stupid idea that people can somehow identify as a group without having any shared values whatsoever.

Religion has problems of its own, also. It works as glue, but it's inflexible. Because by its very nature it insists on a single, immutable, revealed truth, it gets in the way of technological progress (can't have biotech if you don't believe in evolution), and efficient legal policy (wars and pogroms are not inherently necessary to get Henry VIII a divorce).

CMV: If a man is only with a woman for her looks, he has no right to complain about her lack of character.

3 upvotes · 24 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If he's complaining about a woman's lack of character instead of nexting her, he's not a "red pill guy".

Howb to Handle a Depressed Husband

3 upvotes · 23 May 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

I don't believe he's ever gotten his testosterone checked, but I'm guessing he would want more than just one symptom to justify paying for the test.

You can order blood tests online, without needing to see a doctor, from outfits like directlabs. They're much less expensive that way.

You're looking for total and free testosterone. I'd also check cortisol, T3, and T4, while you're at it.

If it's low, see an endocrinologist. If he won't help you, see one of those anti-aging guys. If he won't help you, see a steroid dealer.

How to deal with bipolar and histrionic women who will not succumb to you?

3 upvotes · 20 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

I do not have one-itis

You have oneitis.

A short theory about rape

3 upvotes · 17 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think that the reason men are more commonly the instigators of rape

[citation needed]

Anti-Red Pill Theory [Long post] - Not feminist.

3 upvotes · 13 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is NOT a feminist article arguing about morality but an article that argues that the sexual strategy Heartiste espouses is flawed and is bad advice based upon false premises.

Always these criticisms are launched against the reasoning of redpill material, rather than its empiricism.

If you argue that this stuff shouldn't work, you're then left to explain why it does.

How do you explain that some not very attractive women are pursued because of their interests?

3 upvotes · 12 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Attractive men look for attractive targets.

Thirsty men look for easy targets.

50% is a Failing Grade.

3 upvotes · 11 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

perhaps this is a collective insecurity of TRP's demographics.

"You are insecure if you don't" is not a benefit for the male partner of marriage or children.

Humans are social creatures and the fundamental building block of society is family.

"It's good for society" is not a benefit for the male partner of marriage or children.

We think it's fundamentally backwards to build your life based on what something as weak and spineless as Government dictates and regulations.

"You are spineless if you don't" is not a benefit for the male partner of marriage or children.

RP informs me how to manage our sexual relationship and keep inline with my and her natural tendencies.

"It won't necessarily blow up if you play your cards right" is not a benefit for the male partner of marriage or children.

My wife and I both enjoy family life and that's what we've both wanted for ourselves. Children were always in my future and we have a planned family. It's no secret that I have three daughters. My feelings about children are not based on when they appeared (although I will concede those feelings did intensify significantly at that point and I experienced a major shift of personal priorities). Before my first was born we suffered a miscarriage that devastated me. It happened early enough in the pregnancy that there wasn't anything for me to "see".

"/u/MRPCowboy likes it" is not a benefit for the male partner of marriage or children.

Unless you give a shit about government, which I fundamentally do not. I

"What's a matter? You skeeeeeeeeeeeeeer?" is not a benefit for the male partner of marriage or children.

We get it already. You wanted kids. You like kids. You haven't been served with divorce papers yet. Things are working out for you. Congratulations. We're happy for you. So what?

When we set aside all the "Argumentum ad AMOG", the one thing you have once again, for the Nth time, failed to address, is that more and more young men don't give a crap about marriage or children. Certainly they are in majority here, and out in mainstream society, they may still be a minority, but if so, they are a larger and larger one every day.

I get that, from a societal point of view, 10% is a problem, 20% is a disaster, and 30% is the apocalypse. But so what?

You hear me talking about the dangers of marriage (and I would love to hear you tell a court that "the law doesn't apply to your marriage"), and you seem to think that I'm speaking to and of a bunch of guys who want it, but are afraid of divorce rape.

I'm speaking to and of a bunch of men who couldn't care less. Marriage is women's sexual imperative, not theirs.

Name the benefits, for the male partner, of marriage and fatherhood.

I would not marry again.

3 upvotes · 10 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

And what is a man to do, abstain from procreation?

Yes.

MRP and the ProMarriage Stance- Can Someone Explain the Schism in relation to TRP?

3 upvotes · 9 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Perhaps you could then explain to me what your goal is in arguing with RPS. Perhaps then I would discover some misapprehension as to your motives.

Beta male pride day? [Brainstorming post - what are your thoughts / ideas?]

3 upvotes · 6 May 2016 · /r/MensRights

...when the fuck have Feminists used the term "Beta Male?" It's only used by PUAs and RedPillars.

Correct.

calling it "Beta Male Pride" would make the entire MRM look WORSE by associating us with TRP.

Sure, you can try to throw us under a bus to look like moderates. But what will you do when it's your turn?

They'll hold out their approval like candy, promising you legitimacy and a pat on the head if only you will "denounce the extremists". But once they get you doing their bidding, they will expand the definition of extremist until it includes you. And someone else will throw you under the bus for a the sake of a feminist pat on the head. Tomorrow. Maybe.

Good MRA. Sit!

The Viability of the Red Pill in the Future - Border Erosion

3 upvotes · 6 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Freedom comes at the cost of ostracization. But that is a price I am glad to pay for my liberty.

Well put, although the word you are looking for is "ostracism".

Hillary Quote: "I will institute gender-responsive policies in the federal prison system and encourage states to do the same ... "

3 upvotes · 5 May 2016 · /r/MensRights

Why exactly does his consistency matter if his message is horrible?

Why hasn't TRP been banned yet?

3 upvotes · 4 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If that's the route you wanna go, fine.

Just don't boil any rabbits, mmmkay?

Major beta male here...I want to leave behind my current identity and start a new life. What's the best way to go about doing this?

3 upvotes · 4 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

I just don't know where to start.

You do know where to start. You are just daunted by the size of the journey.

[Harsher realities question]- Ugly chick, no confidence, no life. She lifts, gets mad gains, makeup, becomes interesting... she always still be an ugly chick. How are we different?

3 upvotes · 4 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

Both male and female attractiveness are much more malleable than we think.

I don't understand the daily grind, it seems like mundane bullshit.

3 upvotes · 4 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

Sounds like you don't know what you want. You are simply doing what others expect of you.

You cannot achieve your goals until you have some sense of what they are.

Why hasn't TRP been banned yet?

3 upvotes · 2 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's about meme dynamics.

- Memes that make people angry spread better.
- Memes that make people angry hook up with co-memes that make people with the opposite opinion angry.
- These two meme-sets gradually develop caricature versions of each other, optimized for maximum infuriation.
- Opposing groups feed off each other forever, without actually talking to any real version of the others' opinion.

What is there to debate?

3 upvotes · 1 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

generalizations are bad

And you win the unconscious irony award for today.

Goldilocks and the Three Metabolic Pumps. (Trigger Warning: Science!)

3 upvotes · 27 April 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

It's not the calories, it's the alcohol. And the amount of alcohol is how fucked up you get, so how much you push that fructose pump is directly proportional to how fucked up you get.

Sorry, don't know of a good solution for this one. You either need to find some way around it, or have a good enough program that it can absorb that damage.

39 Things Women Will Just NEVER Understand About Being A Man

3 upvotes · 22 April 2016 · /r/MensRights

You're wrong.

Women know these things. They just don't care.

Men care about women's issues because men have a built-in instinct to protect and care for women. Women are not wired to care about any adult male who isn't their mate or a close friend or relative.

You will never change this with articles like this one, or any other form of words.

Abandon your search for pity, and inspire respect.

A Note on Plates

3 upvotes · 22 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

You're welcome.

A core idea I'm getting at here is that a lot of women talk about femininity, empathy, compassion, etc, but they seem to think they can or should reserve it for their mate.

They will talk about their man being their "Captain", but some of them talk to everyone else in a way that makes me want to ask ... "Do you kiss your husband with that mouth?"

It seems to be based on a fundamental misunderstanding of the reason for submissive behaviour.

You don't engage in submissive behaviour because it's some sort of moral obligation in a relationship. You do it because it is the best way to charm and influence men. So, while mating behaviours (anything from sex to flirting) are reserved for men you are either in a relationship with, or getting there, feminine behaviours and submissive mannerisms should be used with most, if not all, men... because they work.

In other words, obedience only to your man, submissiveness often, empathy always.

Men like the ThePifManGiveth often appear angry and bitter, and it's easy to regard them as "broken". But that anger comes from somewhere. Angry men care, or they would not be angry. A man who is furious about the absence of unicorns is a man who really wants one. Convince him you are one, and well... watch that anger flip 180 degrees very fast.

By the same token, I know that must be bold, confident, independent, stoic, and protective in my life, not just "around this particular girl".

Masculinity and femininity are virtues to be cultivated, not just behaviours targeted to that one particular special person, so you can "acquire" them, put them in your closet, and resume your old habits.

Cultivating masculine or feminine virtue is transformational, and life-long.

I am a cuckold and I need help

3 upvotes · 21 April 2016 · /r/askTRP

You will have to dump this one.

Once a woman sees you like this, there is no going back. Dump her, fix yourself, make the next one work.

22-Never had a boyfriend, and am feeling completely lost.

3 upvotes · 20 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

If you are looking specifically for an LTR, the kind of LTR that's buying-a-house-and-having-kids serious, then the older men might be the way to go, assuming one that is educated, attractive, etc.

22 year old men are most often simply not ready for that sort of arrangement. They're still enjoying the free sex party, and a lot of them might not get bored of it until 30 or even later.

Even if not, it costs to have a home and start a family. The reason people are getting married later and later is partially about needing an established career first.

Not so mention that, statistically, relationships are most stable when the man is 10 or more years older than the woman.

Q4RPMales: How do you think your wife/gf/fuckbuddy would respond to reading your RP reddit history?

3 upvotes · 20 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't hide my TRP affiliations from people in my life. I only hide my real identity from random internet loons (keep up the death threats, guys, I love ya!).

CMV: "Unicorns" (sort of) exist, but acting like TRP will not get you one, or You attract what you are.

3 upvotes · 19 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But first, let's define what I think a "unicorn" is and isn't, based on what I read on RP.

If you want to know what I mean, why don't you just ask me, instead of making stuff up?

Dick Health

3 upvotes · 19 April 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Oh, do you mean like this:

<http://www.alanaragonblog.com/2010/01/29/the-bitter-truth-about-fructose-alarmism/>

Read it.

I find his objections spurious. Mostly because that long bichem section in the middle of the video is something I am actually equipped to understand.

Aragon proceeds to construct a strawman of Lustig's arguments, and then proceeds to beat that, in some cases "refuting" them by saying some of the same things Lustig said, and then pretending he said the opposite.

I'm not an endocrinologist, but I do have enough from pre-med to understand them when they talk, and I know the difference between science, broscience, and FUD.

Is Lustig's talk alarmist? Of course... if you interpret it on an individual level. But he's talking about populations. He's looking at this thing epidemiologically.

He's not talking about whether some yogymbro like us bounces between 16 and 12 percent, and how that happens.

Because yes, fruit juice will send you 16-ward, but he doesn't give a fuck. Because that's not a crisis. 16 is healthy. 12 just looks better naked.

He's talking about our population, in America. He's talking about obesity and metabolic syndrome. And as a population, we are fucked, and the sky really is falling, chicken little. We are in the midst of a public health crisis here.

Many people who think they are redpillers HATE Lustig, because his message runs counter to "personal responsibility". He's telling fat people it's not their fault.

But the red pill isn't "personal responsibility", it's "it is what it is". If the evidence says it's not fat people's fault, then it's not their fault.

However, it is still their problem, and they need to be the ones to fix it. First step, avoid sugar.

"Token Resistance is Common"

3 upvotes · 15 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Considering how little sex it takes for humans to reproduce at a sustainable level over the course of a lifetime, that seems silly so I assume you don't mean it literally.

To certain I would have to collect statistics I have no access to.

Point is, female token resistance is part of the human mating dance. In some situations it won't manifest (relationships, groupies, prostitutes). In some situations it will be less common and less intense (dating that gets to sex slowly). In others, it will be more common and intense (nightclubs).

It's part of the terrain. You don't just tell men to ignore the terrain.

You cannot get men to pay attention to "no means no", when women frequently say "no" and mean "not quite yet", or "my roommate is in the next room", or "I have to put up some resistance, or you'll think I'm a ho".

And can't tell women to stop that and say what they mean, because they don't want to look like the town bicycle, even the ones who are.

The proof that token resistance exists is our technique for dealing with it. It's called a freeze-out and it doesn't work against real resistance.

To freeze out, you counter a woman's resistance to sex by withdrawing even further than she demands. She says "stop" when you unbutton her pants... you stop, and hand her back her bra, and start fumbling around for your shirt.

If she's not into you, that's exactly what she wanted (which almost never happens, because if she's not into you, why the hell is that bra off in the first place?). If she is into it, but wants it to look like it was your idea and your fault, and she just got carried away (most common scenario), then she thinks "Holy shit, I miscalculated, I'm going to drive him away...", and changes her tune.

Withdrawal is a self-calibrating counter, because if she doesn't want you, she doesn't care when you withdraw.

In fact, there are some men out there who think a false resistance isn't a thing, because a freeze out is their natural reaction.

A Note on Plates

3 upvotes · 15 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

the thing that keeps your example women's n-counts low is those women ended up being worth keeping around,

Finally someone got the point.

If all you have to offer is sex, then I guess withholding sex until commitment (i.e. marriage) would seem like a good strategy.

Yes... except that this doesn't work anymore, because sex is no longer a scarce commodity.

The scarce commodity is femininity.

A Note on Plates

3 upvotes · 15 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'd have to respectfully disagree. Words are words, but they act as a screening tool. Yes, you can't and shouldn't police his activity away from you - and you shouldn't assume exclusivity by default or try to control him, etc.

Certainly screening is a good idea. And listening to what he says can play into that.

Besides, not sleeping with every guy who takes you out for coffee twice is one way to keep "n count" low.

Yes. One implication of the whole idea of the "Passion" article I put up a few days ago (and I'm still working on the second part) is don't ever have sex with a man you're not passionate about.

I think the focus on delay rather than vetting is a mistake.

I once had a (mostly sexual) relationship with a beautiful Korean PhD student at my university. She'd only had one previous partner, but I never promoted her above FWB, because the way she had him creeped me out. She told me she had been about 21, and figured it was about time to lose her v-card and find out what this "sex" thing was all about. So she just picked one of her male acquaintances.

Weird.

I would have been much more willing to invest in her if she'd had three or four, but they were all men she cared about and relationships she was trying to make work.

A woman's n-count is like her credit rating. A woman's sexual history is like her credit history... there's a lot of detail there that the number doesn't capture. Two women with the same n-count can be very different in the amount of trust and investment they inspire from the same man.

What does TRP think of the book "Why men love bitches"?

3 upvotes · 13 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The whole "doormat" thing is just a strawman invented for subshaming.

No submissive woman is a doormat. Maybe they exist, but I've never met one, and I've known a lot of very submissive women.

That's because trust isn't a voluntary act. You don't just "decide" to trust someone. Trust is a state of mind, a psychological condition, that has to be built over time.

Is man wrong for not helping a woman who rejected him for a date?

3 upvotes · 12 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Gladly.

Red pill in question is:

It's not important whether a man is seen as evil, only whether he is seen as weak. Because a man's value (and hence his attractiveness) lies in his strength, not his virtue

By contrast, it's not important whether a woman is weak or not, only whether she is evil.

When you were looking for an accusation that stung, you looked for something that suggested weakness, not evil. Feminists go on at great lengths about what a man "should" do to be "woke", "sensitive", or an "ally", but when they want to hurt a man, they do the same thing other women do... they call him a pussy.

Which shows us, after we see enough examples, that feminists are the same as other women. They don't care if men are nice. They only care if men are strong.

Is man wrong for not helping a woman who rejected him for a date?

3 upvotes · 12 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

God you guys are so scared of feminism

Red Pill theory confirmed. Thanks, dear.

Please explain why this isn't superior to any pill model?

3 upvotes · 12 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Please explain why this painting of dogs playing poker isn't superior to any reciprocating saw.

I realized something about myself and apologies today. (Long)

3 upvotes · 11 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

Great news.

This is the principle of "Bring your man your problem, not your solution."

Most of the time, when I say this, I focus on the second part - Don't bring your man a canned solution you want him to enact. But the first part - Bring him your problem instead of keeping it to yourself - is just as important.

Is this an effective dating strategy for "ugly women"?

3 upvotes · 9 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

There's nothing "bitter" about it, unless buying a shiny new car is also "bitter".

Was in an LTR with a Russian Jew. Looked fine, but she confided in me one day that she never really liked her slightly "Jewish" nose. I said "So change it".

And so she did. And after about two weeks of healing, she suddenly loved mirrors.

Looking how you always wanted to look is a joyful experience... even if you didn't start out ugly. It's no more "bitter" than a man lifting weights and seeing himself get "ripped".

With all this talk about HB9's, what if I use plastic surgery to become a 'hot guy'?

3 upvotes · 5 April 2016 · /r/askTRP

Plastic surgery is great for women. I live in a rather wealthy area, and I'd say that close to a majority of women have had some work done. It's hard to say, because it's hard to spot (rich people use good surgeons, and the work of good surgeons looks totally natural), but women are totally open about having had it if you ask them.

Being ashamed of it is a middle and lower class thing.

However, for men, looking handsome is a lot less important than looking masculine and acting confident. So, yeah, sure, if you've got 20K burning a hole in your pocket, and you wanna be pretty, why not? But if that's real money to you, and you don't have a huge, glaring problem with your appearance, there are cheaper ways to become attractive.

I am a 29-year old virgin woman. Is it too late to search for a LTR?

3 upvotes · 5 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

Overall, being a virgin is a plus.

But it is an unusual situation, and anytime people see something unusual in a prospective mate, they're going to wonder if there is something that they are not seeing.

It would be good for you to be aware in advance of what men might worry about, and have plans for how to dispel each concern.

In Need of Some Advice

3 upvotes · 4 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

So your problem is:

- Fear of abandonment.
- Fear of looking "cheap", or like a "plate" in the eyes of other women?

Is that about right?

Should more straight couples try pegging?

3 upvotes · 28 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Here's what YOU should do in bed to support MY political agenda!

Good luck with that.

Who/what are Red Pill women?

3 upvotes · 28 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

That's the recommended attitude. Keeps you safe.

At the very least, men should regard any woman who wants marriage as unworthy of it. Especially after she has had the risks to the man explained to her.

Sure, plenty of women think, oh, they'd like to get married, because they never really thought about what it's like for the man, and don't know any better.

But if a woman still wants you to sign that paper after she's been told about the divorce rate, the family court system, what divorce does to men, etc, then she's selfish trash and not worth your time.

If any man wants to see what most RPW posters are really like, make a fake female account and post a comment that you wouldn't hold out for marriage, because it's a bad bargain for men, and you wouldn't do that to someone you loved.

Then sit back and eat popcorn.

The MBTI personality type is to man what an Astrological sign is to woman.

3 upvotes · 25 March 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

It's a Cosmo quiz.

In fact, it was invented by someone whose only academic credential was a bachelor's degree in political science, and based on the thoroughly discredited theories of Karl Gustav Jung.

Wife wants to support her family and siblings

3 upvotes · 24 March 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Today she told me that I have to deal with it

You are going to get divorced. This is a thing that will eventually happen.

Consult a lawyer now. Don't tell her.

Q4All: Is your relationship PC? Would reddit liberals tell your partner to dump you if he/she wrote a summary of you?

3 upvotes · 22 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I find it ironic and sad that the modern political left, grown from the counterculture movements of the 60s, has evolved its own orthodoxy, one far stricter than anything it ever was a reaction to.

Now we are surrounded by legions of PC yipdogs, sounding their shrill alarms whenever they are confronted by possibility that someone is speaking in generalities, expressing a heartfelt opinion, or having any fun.

The left has no room for the woman who would rather stay home and raise their own children than mind someone else's for twelve dollars an hour. It has no room for the woman whose ticket to Magic Orgasm Land consists of being choked, slapped, and called a "whore" by a partner who didn't ask permission before penetrating her. It has no room for a woman who believes in god, and wants to obey his rules. It has no room for a woman who prefers protectively violent first-world men to just plain violent refugees from a failed state.

Oh, if you say any of this in the abstract, they'll assure you that they are all about people being free to do whatever works for them.

But confront them with a concrete example of any of the above, and the yipping begins, alerting all others in the vicinity that a dangerous unorthodoxy is happening here.

Recently promoted gf disrespected me. Told her I didn't like her behavior. Now what?

3 upvotes · 21 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

I text her,

Text for logistics only.

"Natalie, it seemed like you were covering up your sadness tonight, and directing it towards me a bit."

WTF is this? Are you a chick? Don't talk like one.

Being hyper-concerned with her moods is a sign of weakness. They can smell that, like sharks smell blood in the water. But unlike sharks and blood, girls hate the smell of weakness.

Gender Equality in the USMC

3 upvotes · 20 March 2016 · /r/PussyPassDenied

Women fighting men isn't brave, it's stupid.

Should I give her a job opportunity, or release her back into the wild?

3 upvotes · 18 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

You are an idiot.

You are the worst kind of idiot.

You are the kind of idiot who is not stupid because he's stupid, but stupid because he has willfully turned off his perfectly adequate brain with wishful thinking.

Go re-read the Bitch Management Hierarchy.

You do not LTR a woman if she has 51% good traits vs 49% bad.

You allow women the opportunity to earn an LTR with consistent 100% good behaviour.

Inadvertent bad behaviour brings punishment and delays the reward. Deliberate bad behaviour, or repeated bad behaviour of the same type is a permanent failure.

Would you date a transsexual?

3 upvotes · 18 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There are no transsexuals. There are mentally ill people whom we assist in self-mutilation because we are a sick culture.

Why is it considered victim blaming when you suggest precautions for girls to take about not getting raped?

3 upvotes · 18 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because rape hysteria isn't about actual rape. It's a rhetorical tool to control male behaviour.

They don't want less women to be raped. They couldn't care less about women being raped. They care about their sociopolitical power.

Suggesting ways that women might avoid being raped to a feminist is like suggesting condom use to a religious pro-lifer. It supports the ostensible agenda, not the real agenda.

The pro-lifer's real agenda is to punish non-marital sex. The feminist's real agenda is to put all men, everywhere, into a supplicative state of perpetual apology.

Measures that prevent the issue from arising run counter to the real agenda.

BUZZFEED VS MEN; To all feminists, manginas and the politically correct. This new generation is your future.

3 upvotes · 18 March 2016 · /r/MensRights

I do. Most of us are going down the same path you did. The only difference is that you, as a nation, are further along it.

BUZZFEED VS MEN; To all feminists, manginas and the politically correct. This new generation is your future.

3 upvotes · 17 March 2016 · /r/MensRights

'Murica. Fuck yeah.

BUZZFEED VS MEN; To all feminists, manginas and the politically correct. This new generation is your future.

3 upvotes · 17 March 2016 · /r/MensRights

here in the UK

Or, as the rest of the world knows it, "Emasculation Land".

Women are more likely to manipulate and use an autistic guy than empathize with him.

3 upvotes · 17 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Neurotypicals are dicks to autistic people.

The reverse is also true.

The unwritten social rules that autistic people don't know about or can't follow are rules of politeness. Breaking them is considered rude.

And the ostracism and criticism that autistic people are subjected to are actually the typical channel that normal people use to subtly punish and discourage rude behaviour.

So no one is just the asshole here.

Autistics act rude because they are neurologically crippled and unable to do otherwise. Normals act rude back because they are running their typical script for discouraging rude behaviour.

College administrator, TRP changed my life. Thoughts on the sexual assault on campus etc, AMA, lets discuss.

3 upvotes · 16 March 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Your comment also reeks of victim mentality. You just fail to notice because you are having it on behalf of someone else.

Your instinct to protect women is overriding your common sense. Oh, dear, those poor helpless girls, how can we possibly expect them to deal with the occasional mentally unstable individual? Surely they need kangaroo courts to rescue them from social awkwardness!

I'm pretty sure most of the RP community is not registering the fact that only 5% of his work is falsified claims.

Do you really not understand the difference between falsified and false?

Ronda Rousey admits to having suicidal thoughts, but then looked to her man and thought "I need to have his babies. I need to stay alive." You just can't make up how true TRP is

3 upvotes · 10 March 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Just got around to watching.

That was interesting. Holly was superior at the striking game, but not by all that much. So Miesha was able to play the striking game, using the threat of a takedown, and using strikes to set up the takedown.

Once she got a takedown, we saw Holly's weakness... her ground game. She made several fundamental errors, not trying to hip escape and replace the guard, standing up when Miesha had her back, etc.

That is indeed how you fight a striker... by not charging in like a bull, heedless, Ronda-style, but by knowing how to play the striking game well enough, not to beat them at it, but to create an opening.

And how you fight a grappler is to stop them coming in with striking, but also by knowing how to play the grappling game well enough, not to beat them at it, but to stifle their takedown, and to escape back to your feet.

[AskTRP] What is the best kind of car for a red-pilled man to get?

3 upvotes · 4 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

Whatever the hell you want.

I'm not going to bend my life into a pretzel because of what it might say about me in the tiny mind of some twentysomething whose main interest is celebrity gossip.

If TRP isn't misogynistic, why are there a disproportionately large number of actual misogynists in their community?

3 upvotes · 29 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What, we're not misogynistic? Clearly, someone is not filling their quota.

Quick, lads, more misogyny!

Ronda Rousey admits to having suicidal thoughts, but then looked to her man and thought "I need to have his babies. I need to stay alive." You just can't make up how true TRP is

3 upvotes · 27 February 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

You have that backwards.

Ad hominem is the fallacy of attempting to discredit a logical or empirical argument by pointing out a trait of the source. I concluded that you were not a trained fighter because of the conclusions you drew from watching that video.

Thus, using the argument to draw a conclusion about the person, not a conclusion about the person to analyze the argument.

Obviously, I'm not going to convince you. You believe that she suddenly decided to try and slug it out, instead of closing the distance. What I saw was Holly teaching a seminar on how to shut down the grappling game.

If there is a rematch (and I think there will be if Ronda doesn't retire, the female talent pool is too small to do otherwise), then I would expect Ronda to take striking defense much more seriously in training. There was nothing she could have done that day to win that fight. That fight was lost in training, weeks, months, and years before ring time.

But time spent fixing her weak points might change that. If Holly gets complacent (which I doubt).

Ronda Rousey admits to having suicidal thoughts, but then looked to her man and thought "I need to have his babies. I need to stay alive." You just can't make up how true TRP is

3 upvotes · 26 February 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Rousey is a Judo practitioner, she should have either been in the clinch or trying to clinch up the whole fight yet in two rounds she spends 98% of the time striking... I saw Rousey attempt to strike with someone who is leagues ahead of her.

Like women who say "If a man bothers me, I'll just kick him in the balls"... you are mistaking a win condition for a strategy.

If you can successfully land a kick on the family jewels, you've won the fight.

Similarly, if you can successfully control the range, you have won the fight. That's not strategy, that's a goal. Strategy is how you plan to do that. If your strategy to control the distance is "just control the distance", then you have no strategy, and you're going to get clobbered.

Ronda had a strategy for controlling the distance. It was shut down so fast, over and over again, that it was invisible to you. But a trained fighter can see it.

Why do so many men assume that if/when a woman rejects a man, it's because she is holding out for someone with a higher SMV?

3 upvotes · 25 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Exactly.

Women don't say to themselves "he's not hot enough, I think I can do better". They say "I don't feel attracted to him, he must not be my type."

They don't consciously examine the reason.

I'm a female that learned a valuable life lesson today.

3 upvotes · 22 February 2016 · /r/askTRP

I approached a man that I rejected a couple of years ago now. I had seen him around and was astonished at how attractive he was. I didn't reject him over being unattractive, I rejected him because I wasn't looking for anyone at the time, but time has been good to him.

You rejected him over not being attractive enough.

If he had been over a certain threshold of attractiveness, "not looking" would have gone right out the window.

He had chased me for a while and I rejected him a couple of times. I decided to find him on facebook, which was easy because I am friends with one of his friends.

I messaged him, we exchanged a few lines and then I apologized for rejecting him, asked if he was single, in which he responded that he had been in a relationship for a few years now.

You do not owe him an apology. You did not wrong him. You do not owe anyone attraction, because being attracted is not a voluntary act. You cannot decide to be attracted to someone.

What you are experiencing now, you think is remorse, but it's actually regret. You missed out on someone who later turned out to be a good deal. You had an opportunity to buy a stock when it was low, you declined, and then it shot upwards. You feel bad, but apologizing to him is beside the point. You didn't hurt him by missing this opportunity, you hurt yourself.

Women's long-term happiness depends upon being able to pick a winning horse before the horse wins. (Because after the horse wins, they already taken.) Unlike men, you are unable to simply "hit it and quit it" without any long term consequences.

This means that, to be happy all her life (instead of briefly happy in her 20s and then lonely), a woman must either temper her impulses with reason and long term thinking, or be raised by a patriarchy that does this for her.

Why idolize men who essentially pay for women's company? Wouldn't it make more sense to idolize men who get a lot of female attention WITHOUT being rich?

3 upvotes · 19 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women (and feminized men) conduct themselves socially based on the traditions of the gossip culture. They _____ don't actually say things because they find this or that principle repulsive. It's more on account of who is up and who is down.

In their worldview, white male traditional masculinity is down, so they sell short. Blackness is up, and indigenous cultures are up, so they buy or hold. But they hedge that long position by shorting masculinity in general. If black male stock falls, they can cover their losses.

It's got nothing to with principles, "social justice" or anything else other than who's on top.

[CMV]: Hypergamy isn't the reason relationships fail, it's orgasms

3 upvotes · 15 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://i.imgur.com/WkNvBLr.jpg>

Has anyone here ever climbed out of the friend zone? What would you say is most effective?

3 upvotes · 13 February 2016 · /r/askTRP

Don't climb out of the friendzone.

Climb onto another girl.

Found condoms in GF cabinet

3 upvotes · 12 February 2016 · /r/askTRP

Don't be a sperg.

Yes, she might be using them on toys. Yes, ninjas might have sneaked into her bedroom and left a half-empty box of condoms as a prank. Yes, a quantum teleportation effect might have spontaneously moved your box of condoms to her bedroom.

But everyone knows what is really going on here.

Why is stating that a large portion of women sleep around with hot guys, responded with accusations of misogyny? [PLEASE READ POST]

3 upvotes · 11 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because the word "misogynist" is a weaponized meme, nothing more.

It's used to silence people without having to address what they said.

Did someone want to silence you?

Could they, by any degree of mental gymnastics, construe what you said as a negative statement about some woman, somewhere?

Well, there you go.

Discussion: Why do women constantly complain about skinny models promoting unhealthy body image, despite obesity being a far worse epidemic?

3 upvotes · 11 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because being fat is easy, and being fit requires effort.

Question for the redpill: Legalized financial abortion and single mothers. What about the children left behind?

3 upvotes · 8 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So why do so many men on Reddit want to make it easier for him to contribute absolutely nothing at all, and fuck the kid over completely?

For the same reason so many women want to make it easier to murder their child, thus really fucking the kid over completely.

Hillary Clinton suggests she isn't establishment because she's a woman - implying women are more trustworthy than men?

3 upvotes · 6 February 2016 · /r/MensRights

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Hitc8haEu_g

Red Pill Men in LTRs - How do you feel about your SO?

3 upvotes · 4 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

To summarise, the RP view seems to be that women are naturally submissive because of certain (arguably inferior) biological traits. This is a very significant difference to a lifestyle submissive in the BDSM sense, where it is accepted that she is equal as a matter of biology, but willingly submits as an exercise of her will.

Where do you get this stuff?

Drug Dealer

3 upvotes · 3 February 2016 · /r/askTRP

I have tried to throw the redpill at the poor guy but he won't listen sadly.

Then your responsibility and power over this situation have reached their limits.

RP Men: Where do you consider yourself on Kohlberg's hierarchy of moral development?

3 upvotes · 3 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Kohlberg's model is faulty.

Men who spin plates shouldn't be bothered by women who do AFBB and women who do AFBB shouldn't be bothered by men who spin plates...right?

3 upvotes · 29 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

AB isn't impossible, it's just rare.

I agree.

Here's a scenario where everyone's needs can be met. A rich alpha guy and his hot, faithful wife. Both members of the couple get what they want; the woman gets resources and commitment from an alpha guy, the man gets a beautiful woman who isn't cheating on and hasn't slept around.

Absolutely. That's why Fifty Shades of Grey is so popular with women. It's their version of perfect fantasy-fulfillment porn: a man who is exciting, sexy, dangerous, and an adventure to be with (AF), who is also willing to invest in them and stay with them (BB).

But notice one thing. In order for this to fulfill both partner's optimal sexual strategy, only the wife, not the husband, can be faithful. If the husband must be faithful, he is sacrificing his optimal sexual strategy to hers.

And if he isn't faithful, then both partners get their optimal sexual strategy, but a bunch of other women must sacrifice theirs.

And if they don't, because he has this deal with all of them, then there are other men who must sacrifice their optimal sexual strategy, because now there aren't enough women to go around.

Someone always has to give up something.

Why are people who want something different from the majority called liars?

3 upvotes · 29 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you tell me you have a marble in your pocket, I will believe you.

If you tell me you have a diamond the size of a pigeon's egg in your pocket, I will ask you to show me.

If you tell me you have an elephant in your pocket, I will call you a liar.

I might lose the girl of my dreams, I NEED HELP

3 upvotes · 28 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

There's no way for any of us to comment on what you did, because we don't know what you did.

But you have a bigger lesson you need to learn. Women are replaceable. You can be happy with just about any woman who meets a certain minimum standard, so long as you control yourself properly.

I cannot tell you how to get that girl, I can only tell you how to get a girl. And if you're stuck on a girl, you're not going to be able to follow any of my advice.

I can teach you how to run, but I cannot teach you how to run without first getting up off your knees.

CMV: A woman's past sexual behavior with previous boyfriends has nothing to do with you.

3 upvotes · 26 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

hanging out with

There's your problem.

Spend less time hanging out with women, and more time fucking them. I guarantee you will never learn anything meaningful from women about their sexual habits while you still have your clothes on.

There are only two good sources of information about female sexuality:

- Fucking a lot of women.
- Talking to men who have fucked a lot of women.

CMV: A woman's past sexual behavior with previous boyfriends has nothing to do with you.

3 upvotes · 26 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And please, don't give me the hand-wavey "actions not words" bullshit.

Don't listen to what women say, watch what they do.

My take on TRP

3 upvotes · 25 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Sperglike typing detected.

UK Police now requiring men to inform them BEFORE having sex or face jailtime. Thoughts?

3 upvotes · 25 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And wiping its ass with the Magna Carta when it's done.

XXIX. NO Freeman shall be taken or imprisoned, or be disseised of his Freehold, or Liberties, or free Customs, or be outlawed, or exiled, or any other wise destroyed; nor will We not pass upon him, nor condemn him, but by lawful judgment of his Peers, or by the Law of the land. We will sell to no man, we will not deny or defer to any man either Justice or Right.

If you believe in equal rights for men and women, does it make you a feminist?

3 upvotes · 25 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There is no textual definition of TRP.

It's just a thing that happened because a bunch of us started writing stuff in the same place.

UK Police now requiring men to inform them BEFORE having sex or face jailtime. Thoughts?

3 upvotes · 25 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The part I find hilarious is when British people try to look down on America for having the 2nd amendment.

We have it because of you, lads.

How to make her stop following me?

3 upvotes · 22 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

Don't make her stop. It's social proof. It will help you.

Women 'Improving' Men

3 upvotes · 18 January 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

The term "red pill woman" is a contradiction in terms.

All women display the sexual nature described by red pill theory.

No women admit to this unless they believe there's some tactical advantage in doing so.

The RedPillWomen sub is basically variations on the theme of "we will admit to what we want, and in exchange, men should give it to us... for making the grand concession of admitting to it instead of expecting them to figure it out".

This is not, of course, much of a concession, because we've already figured out women's nature, or, at least, the parts we need to figure out to attain our goals.

Can I still be viewed as alpha even if I don't lift?

3 upvotes · 17 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

I can't afford a gym membership

Stop making excuses. Gravity works everywhere. Heavy shit is the easiest thing in the world to find.

How can I make it clear I want nothing more than a ONS? Girls seem to get obsessed too fast

3 upvotes · 17 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

Why do you care if it's clear or not?

Fuck. Depart. Mission accomplished.

Are men less picky when it comes to finding other men attractive?

3 upvotes · 17 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

comfortable with your own sexuality

This is something that unmasculine men say to convince themselves that their unmasculinity is precisely the reverse.

I'm so comfortable with my racial egalitarianism that I march in Klan rallies! What? Are you not comfortable with that? Does that bother you? You must be a closet racist!

How would you define patriarchy?

3 upvotes · 14 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes, I am a skeptic about a great many things. Blind trust in any one source is a bad idea.

CMV: Nowadays, promiscuity in men is just as bad as it is for women

3 upvotes · 13 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You are wrong, because women themselves have decreed by their actions that it is otherwise.

Women love to have sex with promiscuous men, therefore promiscuity for men is a-ok.

Men hate to have relationships with promiscuous women, therefore promiscuity for women is verboten.

The sexual marketplace has spoken. All hail the sexual marketplace.

TRP members regularly claim "The Red Pill doesn't hate women". Well here's a conversation between a RP Vanguard and an EC. Thoughts?

3 upvotes · 13 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But you are saying that women see groups of strange men that don't like or need them and it upsets them to the point where they must define those men as weak to justify the fact that these men don't want or like her.

Yes, exactly.

Consider what it's like to be a young (12-mid 20s) girl.

The boys are faster, stronger, tougher, more determined, more ambitious. And while statistically, boys and girls have equal average intelligence, the boys around you look smarter... they know how to do more things, and they get more shit done. Anything you can do, they can do better. Now, at first this might be worrisome, but quickly you realize that, while boys can do more, everyone seems to like you better.

Maybe they keep telling you you are unique and precious, maybe they don't, but their actions do. You quickly realize that you must be a special person, because no matter what you do, or don't do, everyone seems to value you.

And you quickly start to base your notion of self-worth upon that specialness. You don't like yourself for doing this or that. You like yourself because other people like you. You are special just for who you are.

This is why little boys fantasize about doing cool shit, and little girls fantasize about being beautiful and popular.

Now, let's suppose you stumble across TRP. Maybe you were just noodling around online and saw it, maybe you found out some boy you had a crush on was into it, whatever. Here is a group of lots of boys who are telling each other you aren't special at all.

But if other people don't think you are special, then they are either right or wrong. And if they are right about that... then all your self-esteem is based on a lie, and you are worthless. (Because you don't pride yourself on anything else, just specialness.)

They are trying to take your specialness away.

Now they must be discredited. Not in the minds of others, although that would be nice, too. But in your own mind, because otherwise you are going to feel shitty about yourself.

That is what girls feel like when they discover TRP.

If we examine this actual girl's original question in light of that, we can see what's really going on. She doesn't want to prove whether we hate women or not. She wants us to argue with her, because that would indicate that we cared about her opinion. If we care about her opinion, then she is still special, and can feel good about herself.

The original accusation of evil was to get us to qualify ourselves to her. To prove to herself that we care about her.

She switched to accusations of weakness when I refused to do that, and showed instead that I didn't take her seriously and didn't care what she thought. When a man won't acknowledge her specialness, she has to prove to herself that their opinions don't matter... which means they must be weak men. Not merely evil. Evil won't do.

If she can't find an indication of weakness, she'll probably switch to "you're writing so much about me, your jimmies must be rustled"... but what this will really be is a message to herself: "they're writing so much about me, they must care about me, right? So I really am special after all, right?"

So what is wrong with the idea of specialness, anyway?

The problem isn't that women base their self-esteem on being liked. Feminine virtues are precisely the virtues which create affection and care in others. Women are supposed to want other people's approval.

The problem is that today's girls have not been taught that being liked is based on behaviour, not inherent specialness.

Unconditional love is unhealthy, and unconditional expressions of love have ruined them. They don't know how to attract love. If someone doesn't love them just for being female and smelling pretty, they don't know what to do. They panic. Because they don't know how not to be a bitch. They don't even know that they are being one.

They don't know what behaviour will attract affection. They don't even know that behaviour is what makes people like you, or not.

They are unable to abandon reliance on specialness for cultivation of femininity, because they don't know what it is, or how to get it. No one ever taught them that. Because everyone was too busy telling them they were unconditionally special.

EDIT: Going to have to make an article out of this, once I make it pithier and clearer, trim out some of the verbosity.

Assume feminism never happened. How would the dating world look like today?

3 upvotes · 12 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is a good question, but unfortunately, it's not really one we can answer straightforwardly.

You see, at a certain point, we have to understand feminism as an effect, not just as a cause of other effects.

For feminism to not have happened, the things that cause feminism would have to not have happened.

CMV: There is a general idea on TRP that feminists are holding them back from fucking young hot women

3 upvotes · 11 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm not shooting for helping "society as a whole" because one of my conditions of helping someone is that they have to want to be helped, and be willing to accept help.

I save my efforts for those who come to me and say "I could use some help". Because then they are ready to listen and put in an effort. I don't have to try to talk them into accepting the help. I just have to say "try this".

And it works, usually right away.

I get fan mail. Which I found embarrassing at first, because I felt I like I had done so little, just pontificate on the internet.

But then I realized that these younger guys... no one had ever done this for them. No one had ever been willing to sound like the bad guy in order to give them some real talk. Some advice that was actually intended to make things better for them, instead to make the speaker sound like a good person because he said the "right" things.

I had only given them a little bit, but it was the little bit they needed, and no one else had cared enough.

Feminism, and our society to the extent that it is influenced by feminism, views sex through a Marxist lens... as a relationship between an oppressed class, which is so morally superior that it can do no wrong, and an oppressor class, which is so powerful and privileged that it can suffer no wrong.

But Marx's manifesto was never more than a thought experiment, and an attempt to address a specific, economic issue. It was never intended to serve, nor can it serve, as a total model of reality.

Men are naturally tougher, more ambitious, braver, more cunning, etc, than women, and, unlike women, they can survive as adults without support systems and safe spaces and petting and sympathy. But the one thing they need is strong adult men to teach them how to do all this, when they are young boys.

By destroying the family (and that's not hyperbole, read the early works of feminists who announce this as an explicit agenda), feminists and the women who followed them attacked the one single category of men who actually are vulnerable and not tough.

Little boys.

Jessica Valenti's metaphorical mug isn't filled with adult male tears. It's filled with the tears of six year olds.

Boys need their fathers.

"My son's life is not worth food stamps" - father furious after the woman who killed his son avoids jail despite a man receiving 5 years in prison for stealing food stamps that same day

3 upvotes · 9 January 2016 · /r/MensRights

Forgot to.

I wanted to focus on the fact that women are treated specially, but some are treated more specially than others.

We have an instinct as old as humanity that says "Protect the tribe's breeding stock". Unless we can someday eradicate that with genetic engineering or something, then any society where women are "equal" will be a society where women are more equal, because courts will always favour them, and the law won't punish them.

This is why societies of previous ages placed women under the authority of first their fathers, then their husbands. Because that way they could be kept in line. The courts ruled the men, the men ruled the women.

CMV: Men who only pay attention to hot women are just as bad as women who chase chad

3 upvotes · 8 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Nah, we don't hate fat women. We are disgusted by them. A subtle but important difference.

Hillary's Blatant Sexism: 'I just think women in general are better listeners, are more collegial, more open to new ideas'

3 upvotes · 8 January 2016 · /r/MensRights

All sexes are equal. But some are more equal than others.

"If you made more money, we would have more sex"

3 upvotes · 8 January 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

my fiance

Are you retarded?

News outlets falsely accuses Men's Right Activists of trying to Boycott Star Wars: Force Awakens

3 upvotes · 7 January 2016 · /r/MensRights

My first thought was "He looks like he would fit right into a film adaption of a Jane Austen novel".

I burst out laughing right there in the theatre.

If only a verbal "yes" means sexual consent, are all nonhuman animals rapists? Were all pre-language homonids rapists?

3 upvotes · 5 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's what it's called "statutory rape". Because the word rape doesn't fit without the qualifier.

I consented in fact, but was not allowed to consent in law.

Do you believe that sex with a person who is not legally allowed to consent is morally equivalent to sex with a person who doesn't consent?

Because I do not.

Angry, Devastated and Disappointed.

3 upvotes · 4 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3zd6q3/the_bitch_management_hierarchy_study_guide/

Why Lifting (in particular)?

3 upvotes · 2 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

Lifting isn't for any gay-ass "sculpting" shit. It's getting strong. To be strong, you must work against heavy resistance. Lifting is the best available way to do this.

If you're not strong, and you're not working on getting strong, then you are not doing karate right.

Karateka knew this back before dumbasses watered it down into pajama-boxing for spoiled middle class white primary school kids.

<http://okinawangojuryukarate.com/images/chiishi.jpg>

<http://www.eastcoast.co.za/buddy/images/images/hojoun5.jpg>

http://www.iogkf.dk/sites/default/files/mediarkiv/galleri/hojo_undo.jpg
<http://broseley-gojukan.co.uk/Hojo%20Undo/Kongoken/LQ9W1329g.jpg>

Nowdays, we have barbells, and they're a little better, but whatever floats your boat:

<http://hempmedspx.com/wp-content/uploads/kettlebells.jpg>
<http://www.fitstream.com/images/club-training/indian-clubs.jpeg>
<https://www3.nd.edu/~ndsmcgym/assets/images/stronggymnast.jpg>

The important thing is that you must train strength. With high resistance, not high repetitions.

If your karate doesn't involve training strength, then it sucks, and you might as well be doing it in a strip mall.

The 20 Principles of Rogue Health

3 upvotes · 1 January 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Glad that resonated.

People think of food as fuel, like something you might put into a car. It's actually a complex amalgamation of bulk raw materials... fuel, but also building materials, trace nutrients, and so on.

You wouldn't pour oil into your gasoline tank and expect good results. You wouldn't try to replenish your windshield washer fluid by changing the oil. If your brakes are low, more coolant is not the answer.

Calorie theory is simply oversimplifying a problem in an attempt to make it tractable. It's like that physics 101 final exam question where you assume the chicken is a sphere to make the math easier.

"What I've Learned About Dating In Silicon Valley" - female columnist has a meltdown after realizing she's surrounded by betas.

3 upvotes · 1 January 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

I mean if there wasn't any intellectual accomplishments in the paleolithic era, then why can men appreciate them when women rarely can?

Because "appreciate" means two totally different things in these two contexts.

We aren't erotically excited by math skills, either.

What is The Blue Pill's advice?

3 upvotes · 28 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tNfGyIW7aHM>

TBP: If TRP is manipulative, then isn't /r/Seduction more manipulative?

3 upvotes · 26 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't think feminism is anything like that organized.

It's more like a toolkit that any woman can use to portray herself as the victim in any situation, in order to reap a larger harvest of male sympathy and help.

That's why it often contradicts itself. There is no central narrative or plan more complicated than "four legs good, two legs bad". Because different women will use the tool in vastly different situations.

- If a woman is viewed with sexual desire by a man she doesn't desire in return, the tools allow her to portray this as unfair victimization.

- If a woman is not desired by men, the tools allow her to portray this as unfair victimization.
- If woman doesn't like men sitting in postures with dominant body language, the tools allow her to portray this as unfair victimization.
- If a woman doesn't get a job she isn't qualified for, the tools allow her to portray this as unfair victimization.
- If a woman suffers the consequences of her own bad choices, the tools allow her to portray this as unfair victimization.

You get the idea. This is why feminism thinks it has different "waves" with different philosophies. They really only reflect the development of the set of rhetorical tools to apply to an ever-wider range of female whims.

So, I would rephrase your thesis as "Women often use feminist rhetoric to try to shame high value males into committing, when it is not to their benefit to do so."

Whenever a woman writes a feminist argument, you find out what her personal insecurities are. Because that's where she is applying the feminist toolkit.

Q4RP: Why is the banning policy so strong and authoritarian to defend the sub from being 'corrupted by feminist/leftist dogma' if you're all amused masters of Machiavellianism and Game?

3 upvotes · 24 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

haven't explained why men will commit to the mission but women will just obey fee fees

Because we are talking about male spaces created to support male missions.

If I were to join a web board entitled "New Mommies", which women used to exchange tips on infant care, I could only be there for a disruptive purpose, because I am not a woman, not a mother, and do not have an infant child.

Fee-fees are the only reason women would be in a male space.

And it's not being naive because I know that it'd be fucking difficult, I am just seeing whether it actually counts as a legit (shit) option 4

You don't need to ask that question. You have an example right in front of you. It's this subreddit.

Does this subreddit:

1. Raise useful questions, answer them quickly and definitively, then move on to the next one?
2. Chase its tail endlessly rehashing the same bullshit?

which is why I am wasting PPD's time on PPD and not bothering TRP. God I'd be a nightmare to have doing this on TRP..

No, it would be a short period of typing, followed by a long period of being banned.

I respect TRP enough only to try and post pragmatic stuff over there or just read.

Do you actually read TRP?

If so, you'll notice that it evolves over time. Things are figured out, and we move on to new questions. That's a major perk of being a mission-focused group that excludes saboteurs.

We argue about how to increase men's sexual power, but it's a discussion between people who share the same goal, and so it tends to be productive.

If you want to argue about whether negs work or not, TRP is the place. We want to keep out the people who argue about whether negs are ethical or not.

If you are actually trying to apply TRP material in your life, I advise avoiding PPD for a while. It's good to have your ideas challenged, but it's not good to be exposed to misunderstandings and strawmen of ideas you are still trying to understand.

Q4RP: Why is the banning policy so strong and authoritarian to defend the sub from being 'corrupted by feminist/leftist dogma' if you're all amused masters of Machiavellianism and Game?

3 upvotes · 23 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So convince women that the mission is valuable, nay necessitous to them

That's naive.

You are making the assumption that people, particularly women, will commit to a mission if you simply explain the reasons behind it to them.

Humans are not rational creatures. And there are none so irrational as the ones who insist that they are.

There are many, many people who are unwilling to accept the dictates of the mission even when they believe the mission is vital, and those dictates are explained to them. If it conflicts with their personal priorities, or hurts their fee-fees, they will insist that it isn't necessary.

In fact, you are one such person. One of the dictates of TRP's mission is that we have to keep people out who don't share a commitment to that mission. You've had this explained to you. But you are still here fussing about how TRP doesn't have open borders, because your personal priority is to have long pointless debates about whether this or that theory is valid, and possibly how many angels can dance on the head of a pin.

This is a favorite pastime of yours. But it is detrimental to TRP's mission to do it in TRP. I'm not going to stop in the middle of performing surgery to argue about medical ethics.

You do not get a group of mission-focused people by gathering a group of people and convincing them of the importance of the mission. You get it by forming the group from the people who are already committed to the mission, and only those people.

TRP's mission is to increase men's sexual power and options. Anyone who does not share that goal will be banned the instant we detect them.

CMV: The "ugly guy" who gets laid left and right with attractive women is a myth

3 upvotes · 23 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Exactly.

Women don't want to have sex with unattractive men. But physical appearance is a very small percentage of male attractiveness (while it is a very large percentage of female attractiveness).

So an ugly man can also be an attractive man if he has other stuff going for him.

The term "attractive" means "I get an emotional high from being with this person".

"Most girls don't say no either. They think you're a good guy, and should pick up on the hints, they don't want to have to say "no" and admit to themselves what's happening."

3 upvotes · 23 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why on earth would I read a slate article?

Woman perfectly describes why men should not get married

3 upvotes · 22 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I hardly think that's fair to the dick.

[Question for Red Pill] Do you reject or filter some of the common Red Pill ideologies?

3 upvotes · 21 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It that is what you took from that, you are certainly very knowledgeable about the exact mechanics of the construction of straw men, although possibly consulting you as to what is and what isn't might not produce the most useful of results.

Ultimately, anything can be called a strawman.

What interests me here is how the goalposts move.

- First, feminists will claim (as you have), that anti-feminists attack straw feminists.
- Then, when we show precise quotations to show that the people saying these things are flesh-and-blood feminists, feminists claim (as you have), that they are the fringe crazies, and "don't count".
- Then, when we attribute those quotes to show that they are in fact the leaders of the feminist movements, feminists resort (as you have) to the logical fallacy of tu coque, which is irrelevant because TRP leaders (like myself) did not originate your complaint... you did.
- Then, when we point out that feminist actions have reflected the values expression in those feminist quotes, you respond with a sort of hybrid of a word salad and some sort of script for what you would like me to have said.

So here you go:

- I am literally Hitler.
- I think women should be bought and sold like cattle.
- I worship Baal with sacrifices of fresh human baby.
- I eat my corn flakes with the blood of virgins.

If you can think of any other horrifying things you would like me to have said, let me know, and I will add them to this list.

Now that we have established that I, a TRP leader, am literally Hitler, explain how that has any relevance whatsoever to the fact that feminists say horrible things, and do horrible things with their political influence.

[Question for Red Pill] Do you reject or filter some of the common Red Pill ideologies?

3 upvotes · 21 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Of course I do.

You can say that about anyone. Difference is, about feminism, it's true.

We know that because feminism is in a position to influence public policy. This gives us unique insight into what its actual motives and goals are.

You see, whenever you just listen to a group of people talk, it's very difficult to know what they would actually do. That's because there is a distinct difference between rhetoric and goals, and between internal rhetoric and external rhetoric. Makes it very easy to propagandize. All you have to is take (for instance) the "Death to America!" stuff that Arab and Persian politicians say to score points with their own constituents, and play it back in America. Instant propaganda.

But when a movement or ideology gets political power, you get to observe their actions directly.

During the time that feminism was simply talking like the She-Woman Man-Hater's Club, you couldn't really conclude that this was serious... they might have just been making mouth noises.

But when they became the dominant paradigm, we found out that they meant it. They gave us the Duluth Model, VAWA, Title IX, and the now infamous "Dear Colleague" letter. They gave us no-fault divorce, parental "choice" for women and no-choice parental responsibility for men. Hell, even the suffragettes gave us Prohibition and the White Feather Campaign.

So we get to see through the rhetoric and find out exactly what feminists really think and really want.

And we have learned:

- Feminists hate men.
- Feminists especially hate masculine men.
- Feminists also especially hate feminist men.
- Feminists also especially hate gay men.
- Some individual feminists treat hurting men as a primary goal (ask Andy Warhol).
- However, most feminists regard hurting men as acceptable collateral damage.

In other words, feminists will countenance any amount of harm to men if it produces any amount of benefit to women.

This is how we know that the lunatics are running the asylum.

Most of the women I encounter who have feminist ideas aren't man-hating radicals. They don't even identify as "feminists" per se. They simply have absorbed this idea that women are disadvantaged and oppressed, and this makes them vote how the radicals want them to vote, and behave how the radicals want them to behave, without ever really asking why, or even exactly who came up with these ideas about what they are supposed to do with their lives.

This makes them functionally equivalent to radicals, because they are simply tools in the hands of those radicals. The problem with NAFALT is that the woman saying it only says it to non- and anti-feminists. Never to the feminists they claim not to be like.

- Moderate feminists never denounce radicals to those radicals themselves, only to outsiders.
- Moderate feminists never denounce radicals when they do or say insane shit, until they publicly embarrass the movement.
- Moderate feminists never stop politically and socially supporting any feminist cause, no matter how radical... denunciations of radicals are solely verbal.

I am attracted to a feminist. What the fuck?

3 upvotes · 21 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

You have oneitis.

Now slap yourself.

Why women mock "nice guys"

3 upvotes · 20 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Look, I get what you are trying to say, but if they felt guilt over it, that would imply that they thought they should do it.

If even you, who self-describe as having a great deal of compassion, don't think that you should give out pity sex, why would less compassionate women feel any guilt at all?

They don't. Never have I known any woman who felt guilty about not giving out pity sex.

If a woman has a sane degree of moral decency (which most modern first-world women do not have), she will feel guilty about exploiting unattractive men for resources and attention, but she won't feel guilty about not blowing them.

One of the signs that a woman has better-than-average character is if she is attractive, but has no orbiters at all. (This means she is immediately and firmly rejecting men she does not find attractive.)

Why women mock "nice guys"

3 upvotes · 20 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You wish me to see you as a compassion human being. Perhaps you are.

However, as you just said in another comment, you do not want to give unattractive men pity sex.

If a person as compassionate as you doesn't feel an obligation to go that far, then surely other women do not feel it either. Which means they do not feel guilt over not giving out pity sex.

Which means they try to tear down the "nice guy" for some other reason.

This is not to say that women feel no guilt over anything. But they do not feel guilt over this.

I can't help but think of myself as a total faggot.

3 upvotes · 18 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

There will be a period of time, after you learn to act masculine, and get some success, where you will feel like a fraud and a loser in disguise. This is because actions are quicker and easier to change than thoughts. You will have new patterns of behaviour, but remember old ones. You will compare yourself to everyone Gronk!ing away on TRP. Your standards will rise faster than your progress. Your self-image will take time to catch up to the new you.

A few month isn't enough.

When Members of TRP share their views on marriage, we have to account for sample bias and take it with an Ounce of Salt. CMV

3 upvotes · 18 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You: "Marriage is good for society."

TRP: "Marriage is bad for you."

Men Lead, Women Follow

3 upvotes · 18 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's the Hierarchy of Love:

Men love and protect women, women love and protect children.

Children respect and obey women, women respect and obey men.

Got shoved on subway. How would you handle this?

3 upvotes · 18 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

What's the prize if you fight him and win?

What's the prize if you don't fight him?

Why women mock "nice guys"

3 upvotes · 17 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Personal experience meaning you have seen it, or you have felt it?

Why women mock "nice guys"

3 upvotes · 17 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Since the only thing that would fix the pain is something she is unwilling to do, she has to get rid of the guilt somehow

No. There is no guilt.

Women have no protective instinct towards men, and feel no duty to rescue them from any pain they might experience.

What would it take to change your mind?

3 upvotes · 17 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you subscribe to TRP, what would have to happen to make you abandon the ideology?

If it stopped working.

CMV: Women Highly Overrate their own Upper Body Strength

3 upvotes · 17 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's not completely impossible for a woman to win against a rapist

And it's not completely impossible for me to turn a light switch off by throwing a quarter at it. What on earth is your point?

We are talking about anti-rape strategies here. Women beating men in a fight is so rare they write news stories about it.

So "I will get fit and/or study martial arts and fight off rapists" is not a good anti-rape strategy, because it requires a large investment of effort for something that's not likely to work.

A much more effective (and cost effective) anti-rape strategy is risk avoidance.

Does redpill believe it's better to be a mediocre PUA than a nerd with a gf?

3 upvotes · 16 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's sure a hell of a lot less work to be a mediocre PUA than a nerd with a gf.

CMV: Women Highly Overrate their own Upper Body Strength

3 upvotes · 16 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And why does it even matter that she's not as strong as a man could be in her place? All that matters is that she's strong and physically competent.

This discussion has been going so long you forgot the original point.

Someone said:

Which is why its silly that TRP's way to avoid rape is "lift bro."

To which I responded that even women who lift can't fight off men, and women should lift, but for other reasons.

The woman in that video is Doing It Right. I approve. But it's not an effective anti-rape strategy.

CMV: Women Highly Overrate their own Upper Body Strength

3 upvotes · 15 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Bro, she's deadlifting 235 lbs there.

I mean, this is a pretty cool achievement for a small woman, and she looks sexy doing it, but most men who do some form of exercise can lift at least that much the first time they ever learn to deadlift.

Is she in great shape? Yes.

Does she look good? Yes.

Did she waste her time training to do this? No.

Is she stronger than most men? No.

Will this allow her to fight off a man? No.

80/20 Rule

3 upvotes · 15 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

However, if you think promiscuity is "bad"

Ah-hah. There's your false assumption.

Sluts aren't evil. They are simply a bad choice.

Men speak angrily about sluts when someone has morally demanded they commit to them. They are angry about the moralizing demand, not the slutty behaviour.

Being a slut is to relationships like "not showering" is to sex. If you don't keep clean, I am going to react with disgust to the idea of having sex with you. If you once sucked two cocks in the same nightclub bathroom in the same evening, then I am going to react with disgust to the idea of committing to you.

In fact, not showering is probably more morally wrong than being a slut, since it will inconvenience me quite a bit if I have to stand near you, whereas being a slut bothers me not in the slightest until the moment you start badgering me for commitment.

Should women be aware of implied consent?

3 upvotes · 15 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Here's a few simple rules to avoid miscommunications:

- If you want to have sex with a man, go to his home alone with him.
- If you are trying to figure out if you want to have sex with a man, go someplace public or semi-private with him.
- If you do not want to have sex with a man, stop communicating with him.

CMV: Women Highly Overrate their own Upper Body Strength

3 upvotes · 15 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women already have some testosterone

About 20 ng/dl. By contrast, healthy men have about 500 - 900 ng/dl without supplementation.

There is a reason why there are no co-ed professional sports.

The 1 in 3 women Debate.

3 upvotes · 15 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What, only 1 in 3?

I need to get busy.

What are your thoughts on polygamy?

3 upvotes · 12 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It will.

My inbox has a tendency to spiral out of control, which means that questions that require a short response which I can fire off right away will typically get answered, while ones for which I need to find a large block of time will often get forgotten.

So let's keep it short and sweet:

Mate-guarding is inherent for males and culturally imposed for females. This is because there is no such thing as maternity fraud. Which is why polygynous cultures are common throughout history and work just fine, and polyandrous cultures are confined to a small list of competitive failures

"Divorce rape" is the most insensitive, misogynistic phrase ever uttered

3 upvotes · 12 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, that must be because I am an insensitive misogynist.

Which is because women treat insensitive misogynists far better than feminist "allies".

I only want to have sex in LTR or marriage, is there something wrong with that? Is that against RP values?

3 upvotes · 12 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

Listen to you. Michelle this, Michelle that, Michelle the other.

You have oneitis. You have one of the worst cases of oneitis I have seen.

You are not thinking straight. You don't know if you are want to be monogamous or not, and you can't know, because your head isn't screwed on straight... it's full of Michelle.

You didn't refrain from screwing other women because you want monogamy. You refrained because you have oneitis. And you won't be able to figure what you want or what you like until you cure it.

Michelle is not special. Michelle is a whore. I guarantee you that if I met Michelle at a party, I could get her lips wrapped around my cock inside a few hours. So could GLO, CisWhiteMaelstrom, HumanSockPuppet, or ArchWinger if he cared to cheat on his wife. That's not because any of us are gods or anything like that. It's because Michelle is a whore and she will suck any cock that's attached to a reasonably attractive man. Unicorns do not have partner counts that are triple that of their boyfriends. Whores do. Michelle is a whore.

If you had 2 opportunities to cheat on her, and didn't take them, I guarantee you she had 10 opportunities to cheat on you, and took 5. Not because there is anything wrong with you, but because Michelle is a whore.

Fuck 10 other whores and you will see how unspecial she is. Until then, don't tell me about how you believe in monogamy, because you don't know.

You don't have principles, you have oneitis.

Why do Red Pillers have a problem with female nature?

3 upvotes · 11 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No, sweetie, candy makes you fat.

Why do Red Pillers have a problem with female nature?

3 upvotes · 11 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You just told me you knew.

Now you're telling me you don't know?

is feminism a device for western economies to conquer developing countries?

3 upvotes · 11 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Sure.

Holy shit! You mean we can get women to compete with their own husbands, brothers and sons for jobs? And we can double the size of the available workforce without increasing demand by nearly that much?

Do you really think they'll demand to pay a bunch of strangers minimum wage to spend time with the children they love, so they can shuffle papers in an office, and call it "liberation"?

What's the catch?

What do you mean, "no catch"? All we have to do is agree when some academic tells them their own husbands, fathers, and brothers have been oppressing them all their lives?

And they'll be so busy screaming at the closest available men, the men who share their lives and lifestyles, to even notice us and all the extra dough we're rolling in?

Won't they notice that our wives don't have careers?

"Blame it on the Patriarchy!?" You must be kidding, Atticus. The peasants are stupid, yes, but surely no one could be that dumb.

Please Read!

3 upvotes · 4 December 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

And behold how the thin veneer of compassionate concern rubs right off. Couldn't bear to not be taken seriously, eh?

Sweetie, your kind is common around here that we have term for y'all. We call you "concern trolls". It means someone who attempts to police your language or behaviour for their own ends, under the pretense of concern for your welfare or image.

Now, that you've most cooperatively hung yourself with the supplied rope, allow me to show you the door, and suggest an alternative venue where you can continue your love affair with the sound of your own voice.

Toodles.

Please Read!

3 upvotes · 4 December 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Oh, wow. You're serious.

You actually think that what you have to say is worth listening to just because you're female.

TRP men: Do you think you it is important never show your feelings or any weaknesses?

3 upvotes · 4 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think this sort of behavior drives women away when they've matured past their teen years, and I think it stands in the way of ever developing a genuine connection with your partner.

You can think what you like.

If you want others to agree with you, however, you must do more than say what you think. You must talk about what that opinion is based on, and make a persuasive case. You don't supply anything. You give us no reason why we should value your off-the-cuff opinion of "do this", over our own and many other men's field-test experience that says "do that".

So we can have another useless jerk-off conversation about how many angels can dance on the the head of a pin, or what "looks mature" to some abstract theoretical being, or what women "should" like.

But ultimately, women respond the way they respond to what they respond to. You don't like that, take it up with them.

My vegetarian girlfriend is trying to force me to cut out meat

3 upvotes · 2 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

I was under the impression that a good compromise here would be to respect each other's diets.

Do not compromise with women. They are better at manipulation than you are, and you have a built-in protective instinct toward them, while they have none toward you. If you negotiate, you will lose.

Do not "convince" her of anything. You do not need her permission to eat what you want.

Continue eating meat in her presence. She can leave or stay. If she leaves, it was inevitable, and you are better off that way. If she stays, she will respect you for standing up for yourself.

Should I give up on men or continue

3 upvotes · 2 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

That's the vibe I am getting.

It's like she wants help with... something. But she's so upset about whatever it is that she can't refrain from snapping at anyone nearby, even the people she wants help and sympathy from.

Some people just aren't ready.

Why do some feminists and BPers react negatively to the idea that men are expendable?

3 upvotes · 2 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Allahu Akbar!

Amy Schumer and Hitting the Wall

3 upvotes · 2 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm probably like 160 pounds right now and I can catch a dick whenever I want, like, that's the truth. It's not a problem!

She is a comic, so she's more willing to say things that other women would clearly not say publicly. And this was a joke, to some extent. But she will also obviously know that it is true, and we all obviously know that it is true as well.

So when is she going to hit the wall? I would suggest that she will never hit the wall, or it will be at such an age that she won't even be interested in sex anyway.

Female SMV isn't measured by the ability to catch a dick. Any woman can catch a dick. It's measured by the ability to hold a man's attention.

If all a woman ever wants is to have sex with men and never see them again, then she's set until she becomes ugly. I welcome any woman who truly thinks that is all she will ever want, to go ahead and act like Amy Schummer.

Just don't ask me how to fix it if, somewhere down the road, you change your mind.

Should I give up on men or continue

3 upvotes · 2 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

I suspect that the real answer is

"No, people start conversations with you, but then you say something totally inappropriate and off-putting because you have {Asperger's Syndrome | no social skills}, and they back the fuck off."

probably going to be to ignore them, create another account, and keep trolling for validation.

Most likely. Spergs cannot be helped until they:

- Admit to themselves that they are spergs.
- Admit to themselves that this is a disability, not something special and cool about them.
- Realize that it is their responsibility to adapt to humanity, not humanity's to adapt to them.

Red Pillers, why are you trying to make it seem like we "misunderstand" responsible teenager theory?

3 upvotes · 1 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Your objection seems to be that a particular case does not prove a general rule, which is true. However, our sample sizes are necessarily limited... Do you agree that an inductive argument meeting these requirements would be sufficiently strong for our purposes?

An inductive argument is valid for the sample set it was induced from. Therefore, if we want to reason inductively about ALL women, we must sample randomly from all women. If we only care about first-world heterosexual women of a suitable age for mating (as if we were, for example, formulating sexual strategy for heterosexual males), then inducing from that population would be sufficient.

It can also give us an answer to the very literal interpretation of the RP belief in question. Do women have the mind of a teenager? No. We can look at it directly and see.

This would not be a literal interpretation, because it inserts the word "mind", then interprets the word "mind" which it just inserted as the word "brain".

A literal interpretation would be that women have the behaviour of a teenager.

I am satisfied with the structure of your argument. However, unless we know the truth of Lemma 1, we cannot be assured of Lemma 2.

No.

- Lemma 2 does not depend on Lemma 1.
- Lemma 1 is a tautology.

We shall prove the second point by reductio ad absurdum... we assume the opposite and derive a contradiction.

- Assume: Lemma 1 is not true.
- Restate as: The set {X}, consisting of all X such that X is necessary for Y, is not sufficient for Y.
- There exists a set {Z} of one or more elements, such that {Z} is disjoint from {X}, and {X} + one or more elements of {Z}, is sufficient for Y.
- An element of Z is necessary for Y.
- This element is therefore in {X}.
- {Z} is disjoint from {X}.
- This element is therefore not in {X}
- There exists an element Z¹ that is both necessary and not necessary for Y.
- Contradiction.

No matter what X is, the union of all things necessary for X is sufficient for X, because otherwise you need something else. If you need it, it's necessary.

Underling with pretty bitch syndrome

3 upvotes · 24 November 2015 · /r/askTRP

This is a shit test.

Not because you are a potential mate, but because you are nominally in charge of her. She has sensed weakness in you, and knows that she can use her attractiveness and experience at being a "queen bee" to intimidate you into not using your nominal power over her.

Her game is to target the part of you that remembers being a nerd in high school, rejected and ignored by pretty girls like her.

You need to shut that shit down right now. The good news is that girls like this turn around on dime. Make a show of strength, and she will instantly switch to ingratiation mode.

Here's an example of how this goes:

"Hey, can you do this completely standard work-related task that I'm sure you've done countless times already?"

"Why?"

"Because I told you to."

Faintly outraged squawking.

"Or, if you like, you can clock out now, go home, and look for a new job."

At which point, she will sputter about how mean you are, but she'll do it. Then, a few days later, she will make a placative gesture. At which point, you combine petting with a slightly authoritative approach, thus:

"Look, I'd rather not make it suck for you to work here. However, we have a job to do. And that means you have to do what I say. If you can do that, then I don't have to come off like a big meanie, which isn't any fun for me, either. So, can you do what I say?"

At this point, she has no choice to say "yes", or you have a justification to fire her.

When she does, you treat it as submission, and give her a few verbal pets.

Thereafter, you take the same stern tone at any hint of insubordination, but you also reward obedience with attention and calibrated faint praise.

If you do this right, you can make her want that petting, and actively work to get it. But you must first show her that you are not afraid to be forceful with her.

X-Post /r/TheBluePill: My story from normal person, to TRP fanatic, to Red Pill "victim", and back again

3 upvotes · 24 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why does RPW say to not go for hard-core alpha players?

In general, women face a trade-off when they look for a relationship.

The definition of "sexual success", for a man, is simple. Have sex with the largest number of the most attractive women possible. But for women, it involves a balancing act... secure the most attractive man that you can keep.

The more beta a man is, the easier his commitment is to secure. The more alpha a man is, the more desirable his commitment is. Now, RPW hammers their advice as "avoid those evil, bad players", because this is more ego-flattering than "don't punch above your weight class", but this tradeoff is real.

The more alpha the man, the tighter one's girl game must be in order to secure commitment, because there is more and better competition. "He is a bad, evil player" is more flattering to the self-esteem than "I can't girl well enough to hold him", but the strategic considerations are the same either way.

Girl Strategy basically goes like this:

1. Improve your girl game as much as you can.
2. Determine a target zone. The higher you aim, the greater the potential happiness, but the greater the risk.
3. Go and girl as hard as you can at men in your target region.

Girl Tactics fall into three categories:

1. Girl Game, for making oneself more attractive to ALL men.
2. Alpha-tuning tactics, for repelling beta men, or identifying them so they can be rejected. (Shit tests, high-selection)
3. Beta-tuning tactics, for repelling alpha men, or identifying them so they can be rejected. (Comfort tests, making men wait for sex)

Why would women want to beta-tune? Because getting pumped and dumped permanently reduces their SMV. If they only alpha-tune, they are going to end up spending a lot of fun weekends with men whose commitment they are not attractive enough to secure. If they only beta-tune, they are going to have a long boring life with a some embarrassing little dweeb.

So, to succeed, a girl must realistically assess her own girl game.

Guy Turns 6 Figure Down Job at Google for Girlfriend, She Dumps Him Anyway

3 upvotes · 24 November 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

If a woman says: "Don't do X or I will break up with you." in so many words, you must immediately do X.

She may break up with you for doing X. But she will break up with you for folding to an ultimatum.

Why does PPD believe that most TRP 'field reports' are exaggerated/fake?

3 upvotes · 23 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But do you even lift?

This is the dating reality that women don't (seem) to understand

3 upvotes · 19 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

... women don't seem to understand ...

Why on earth would you expect them to?

Women don't understand things. They don't need to. People just come along and give them stuff. People come along and take care of things for them.

Women are hopeless muppets, entities who cannot get anything done at all without someone's hand shoved up their ass moving them around. Women understand things when someone forces them to learn that thing, and not until.

I've just recently witnessed a woman with a professional career and a degree in mathematics literally unable to successfully glue two pieces of plastic together with super glue.

It's not that they're dumb. It's that they never have to think until and unless someone assigns them thinking as a specific task specifically assigned to them. And most people would rather do that task themselves rather expend the (actually greater) effort of prodding them into action. The vast majority of women are what Women's MMA fighter Rhonda Rousey calls "do nothing bitches".

Now, Rhonda is wrong about one thing... do nothing bitches are actually useful, because dicks aren't going to start sucking themselves. And most women have vastly more value as a sucker of dicks than as whatever lame-ass thing they pretend is their career.

That's what you don't seem to understand. Women have inherent value. Men do not. Women don't have to do anything to be valued, because until and unless they get old and ugly, they can always have value by sucking a dick, even if they have no skills at all. They have that fallback position. You don't.

So they don't have the incentive to understand anything. They don't need to. Anything they do in life is an experiment. A hobby. It's risk-free. Because she can always find some thirsty bastard with money, and suck his dick.

How far would you have gotten in life if you had an easy fallback like that? How much would you work to figure shit out? How much would you try to impress other people?

Women live their entire lives in a position of fuck you.

Does Redpill define greatness in negative terms too much

3 upvotes · 19 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If TRP seemed reasonable to you, there would be something wrong.

TRP's whole reason for existing is that certain needful things have been deemed unreasonable and crazy. That creates a necessity for a group who are willing to be deemed unreasonable and crazy, in order to say the needful things.

If and to the extend I don't sound crazy to you, I'm not doing my job.

Getting the short end of the stick: The vetting process

3 upvotes · 19 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

enjoys her life and wants to have sex

Like so many phrases that have been repeated to the point where they have lost their literal meaning, this phrase exists more as a declaration of fealty to a political camp, than as an actual statement that means anything.

Me and a couple other guys came up with TRP because we "enjoy our lives and want to have sex", also. But when we do it, that's not a glorious journey of self-discovery, liberation, and political progress, is it?

No, it's just a personal choice that others are free to judge based on their own values.

Hmmmmmmmm.

CMV: TBPillars do think that the way someone expresses themselves can invalidate what they're saying.

3 upvotes · 17 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think women should be bought and sold like cattle. I also eat babies.

Would the MRM be more effective if it used TRP principles? Using a fat fedora wearing beta such as Dean Esmay as an example!

3 upvotes · 17 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The thing MRAs do not realize is that when men talk, especially are talking to women, reason is often irrelevant.

If you appear to be a weak, low-value, or low-status male, women will generally dismiss what you say even if it is insightful and your reasoning is clear and flawless. If you are low-value, reason is useless.

If you appear strong, successful, sexy, or high-status, women will often agree with any stupid bullshit that comes out of your mouth, no matter how absurd. If you are high-value, reason is unnecessary.

Dean Esmay may have some insightful things to say, but the tone, manner, and source of his presentation more or less ensures that they will only be heard by those who either already agree, or who are unusually objective and susceptible to reasoned argument... the two groups which he least needs to reach.

Feminism's decades-long stranglehold on public discourse has created a heated men's-interests-versus-women's-desires war which pervades our social landscape. This war is not, and will not be, fought using reason and insight. It is a war not of ideas, but of people.

If Hypergamy is, as Bluepill say, a result of ancient patriarchal systems and the caste hierarchy, why are women still actively hypergamous post-feminism/post-suffrage?

3 upvotes · 13 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

- 3. TBP conclusion: We haven't wiped out enough Patriarchy yet. Feminism is like magic pixie dust. If it fails to solve any problem, that is simply evidence that you haven't used enough of it.

TRP and The Revenge Fantasy

3 upvotes · 12 November 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Well put.

The truth is:

“Right now I’m just me, but once I’m making six figures, banging models, and have the body of a god, I won’t care what those girls that turned me down in high school think.”

I don't care what any of the girls I dated in college thought then, or think now. "You'll be sorry!" is the cry of the wounded ego... and eventually, egos heal if you stop wounding them.

If you care what a girl thinks, you are not over her yet. Care instead about the opinions of those who benefit your life.

TRP victim blames men.

3 upvotes · 12 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP guidelines advise: don't worry much about culpability.

Whose "fault" a problem is usually is not a useful concept. Is it women's fault they behave badly? Is it men's fault for letting them (because women cannot be expected to self-regulate)? Is "society's" fault for making men let them (because no one can be expected to self-regulate)?

How many angels can dance on the head of a pin? Arguing about this shit is for spergs.

But whose responsibility a problem is... that is simple. It's the person who the problem hurts most. That's the person who has to make sure it gets solved, because no one else will.

The people who are hurt most by women's bad behaviour are men under 30, and women over 30. So they are responsible for finding a fix.

Now, the women over 30 won't do anything. They don't know how to solve problems except by acting helpless at the nearest male. And now that they are over 30, well, that's not totally ineffective, but it's less effective than they are used to. But TRP isn't for them.

TRP is for young men. They have to live in the world they are in. So it's their responsibility to make that work.

TRP is there to tell them how to do it, but they have to do the legwork themselves.

For RPW: Does nonsexual cuddling affect your attitude towards your partner?

3 upvotes · 12 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I saw a thread in askTRP about cuddling and was genuinely surprised to see that even men in LTRs don't recommend cuddling unless it's directly after sex.

Wait, what?

Q4TRP: How can I get men to see me as an equal?

3 upvotes · 9 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Okay, now we are getting somewhere.

Bring men your problem, not your solution.

You've had a fucked up life, and, drawing from experience, you are afraid of getting treated like crap. That's your problem.

But then you think about the problem, and you imagine a solution... "I want a man who respects me, and sees me as an equal in every way, and doesn't have any power over me, and I'm not vulnerable to him at all. Then I will be safe." That's the solution you imagined.

And instead of looking to men to help you with your problem, you tell them what the solution is going to be and demand that specific thing.

Well, that doesn't work very well. Why not?

Because men are not submissive and obedient. They don't like being told to do, especially by someone ungrateful. What men are is protective, problem solvers, leaders, and fighters. If you try to make a man do X, Y, and Z, because you think it's what you want, he will resent you, avoid you, want nothing to do with you. If you approach him with your defenses down, you will get a much more positive, protective, helpful response.

Men are stronger than you, tougher than you, more driven than you. We are born fighters. You are not. You can never be safe from us by being tough, independent, and competent, because that stuff is built into us, and we'll always have more.

You can be safe from us, you can in fact enlist our help, by not trying to stand up to or fight us. By appealing to our protective, helpful instincts instead.

Being exactly the woman you say you don't want to be seen as (immature, feminine, vulnerable, childish) is the most powerful position you can be in. Because when you get femininity right, men become your allies, not your enemies.

So you can stomp your little feet and demand to be seen as adult and mature, and men will roll their eyes and avoid you. Or you can express yourself honestly, and be vulnerable, and men will be much more forthcoming.

Because let's face it, you're not looking for an equal. An "equal" to you would be a man who's like you are: barely out of childhood, traumatized by years of violence, and with repressed sexual urges. Sound like your dream boyfriend? Didn't think so. No, you're looking for someone who is more mature than you are. Someone who has his shit together, and can help you straighten things out. But to have that, you have to be less mature than he is.

Immaturity isn't an insult, it's a gift

Is there ever a case where a woman should not be respected?

3 upvotes · 9 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

To men, the word "respect" means "look up to, admire, or take seriously".

To women, "respect" means "care about the feelings and welfare of".

Walter white, alphas and red pills

3 upvotes · 8 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

iam simply playing by red pills own rules

You mean the ones that that say:

Grounds for removing a comment or post:

One or more of:

Bad, False, or Low Quality Objective Data

Includes "red pill examples" or "field reports" from fiction as well daytime talk shows, reality tv, tabloids, or other questionable sources. "Red pill theory" posts may contain material from fiction if it is then developed beyond that example into a useful discussion of a principle, but fictional references by themselves will be removed when spotted. Fiction is not evidence. Anyone can write anything.

Would those be the rules you are talking about?

TBP always lies, example 763.

If you are depressed, maybe you should stay away from TRP.

3 upvotes · 5 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Hi, I have exactly zero experience being a man, and understand neither TRP, nor masculinity, nor how the two relate to each other.

Here's how you men should handle both.

You are not for real. You talk about shit you know nothing about.

What are your thoughts on men's ability as shown below to fuck over women's lives so easily? How would you avoid such a situation?

3 upvotes · 5 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

When a man rapes a woman, it's against the law. When a woman rapes a man, the law is the instrument she uses.

New to sub. Saw something on r/TheRedPill that concerned me.

3 upvotes · 5 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And yet it bothers you that women are seen by someone as less mature. Explain why this would upset you.

Why are smart guys not considered attractive?

3 upvotes · 4 November 2015 · /r/askTRP

CS and math aren't unattractive. They simply do not add to attraction, because bitches don't care about numbers.

And most men who do CS don't really do much of anything else. It's hard to blame them. Computers are such a deep and fascinating world, and are so instrumental in running our civilization, that they can provide all the challenge, stimulation, and empowerment a man could ever need.

What they don't do is maintain your physical body, or attract bitches.

I fucking love being a software engineer. It's like being a wizard. With a few simple tools, available everywhere, you can sit down and write magic spells that transform the world. You have the ultimate set of legos. There is nothing you cannot do with enough time. I wouldn't trade places with an astronaut, rock star, or hollywood actor.

But that part of my life does nothing to attract bitches. That's okay, I don't live for the sole purpose of attracting bitches.

When I'm talking to a bitch, I focus on other stuff.

9 Feminist Books All Men Need to Read - then proceeds to compile a list of vile misandric books including the Society for Cutting Up Men.

3 upvotes · 3 November 2015 · /r/MensRights

Feminists already understand self-entitlement.

No, they do not. They understand other-entitlement. Entitlement to the labour and property of others. From Ayn Rand, they could learn self-entitlement. Entitlement only to what one has earned for oneself.

AH, who am I kidding? Feminists don't learn.

Q4RP:you're responsible for designing a high school sex-ed program, for both boys and girls. What does it look like?

3 upvotes · 2 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It looks like parents taking responsibility for their own children's education, and not sending them to state-run warehousing facilities to be indoctrinated into the beliefs of whatever branch of political, social, and economic lunacy happens to be dominant this fortnight.

Getting f'cking tired.

3 upvotes · 1 November 2015 · /r/askTRP

Sleep, you dumbass.

Why the fuck is it that all you young idiots think that sleep is optional? Or even that missing it to get more shit done is some sort of badge of honour?

Of course you're depressed and lethargic, idiot. You're sleep-deprived. You're low on testosterone because your body is using all that cholesterol to make cortisol. Because you're not sleeping, dumbass.

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3r3fyb/if_you_dont_sleep_you_might_as_well_not_lift/

What is RP stance on strip clubs?

3 upvotes · 1 November 2015 · /r/askTRP

I know many betas here would say you're a chump

So would I. And trying to stop me by preemptively calling me "beta" isn't going to work. It's just going to show me where your insecurities are.

but I enjoy them.

Because you're a chump.

Many of the dancers are in college, single moms, so they need the money too.

Now you're rationalizing. Their needs are their problem, not yours.

wondering if i'm getting Beta Bux'd

3 upvotes · 24 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

Not bux, but you are being played.

Learn the basics.

Question for MODs, ECs and other guys on top of their shit: why do you help us?

3 upvotes · 23 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

You are most welcome.

It took me awhile to respond to this because... I didn't know how. What does one say to something like that?

If I helped you at all, that means a lot to me. Thanks for letting me know. That's what keeps me doing what I do. And I will.

Brown University student sues his alleged false accuser for defamation and University on the grounds of Title IX discrimination based on his male sex, breach of contract by the university and a denial of due process rights

3 upvotes · 21 October 2015 · /r/MensRights

Intelligence in a vacuum becomes delusional absurdity. These people may be "intelligent", but they work high on this ivory tower where none of their ideas are ever tested against the real world... against reality.

To put it a different way, intelligence only matters when the intelligence is the part steering the ship.

I'm a minor league baseball player who's 6'3" and has no idea why my Okc isn't getting much attention

3 upvotes · 15 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

No amount of situational value can overcome bad game.

And you, my friend, have bad game. Not must have bad game based on the results you are getting, but do have bad game, so much so that it's obvious from the way you wrote this post.

It doesn't matter how strong you are if you cannot hit the ball. So let's correct your swing, one mistake at a time.

The ones I have gotten to set up dates with are almost always very pro-relationship, despite me always telling them I'm looking for short term because of my job

Your are making the mistake of listening literally. Never take anything a woman says seriously.

It's not that she's deliberately lying to you... it's that what she says gets filtered through:

- Her own ignorance about her goals and desires (women don't do much introspection).
- Her emotional state at the moment.
- How she wants to appear.
- Whatever random bullshit is going on in her head.

Stop listening to women as if they were adults. When a woman tells you she's "looking for something long-term", regard that the same way you would your six-year old cousin telling you he wants a pet dinosaur. Women's whole lives are like a child's game of make-believe.

If you hear a woman say things, then take them at face value as if an adult were saying them, you're going to get nowhere, and the woman herself is going to wonder why you are so obtuse and clueless. Because even women don't take other women seriously like that.

My roommate is dragging me down

3 upvotes · 14 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

<http://48laws-of-power.blogspot.com/2011/05/law-10-infection-avoid-unhappy-and.html>

Don't hang out with losers. Attitudes and emotional states are infectious.

High School Junior, need help becoming better.

3 upvotes · 13 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

First lesson. No one owes you anything.

You are asking for help, but you posted a textwall with no whitespace at all, making it almost impossible to read.

If you want something from someone, why would you not put in a little extra effort to make it easier for them to do so?

Am I the only one that thinks caring about the # sexual partners a girl has is Bluepill behaviour

3 upvotes · 12 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

You're obviously new here.

N doesn't matter for plates. N matters for LTR material.

Why? Because high N = bad investment. But plate = no investment.

So it doesn't matter if plates are bad investments, because anything times zero is zero. But a girl with a high N count can never be anything more than a plate.

I was horrified when I first learned about this community/concept.....and then I realized you are absolutely right!

3 upvotes · 8 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3m81zs/i_gwarp_you/

TRP priorities: truth vs. utility

3 upvotes · 8 October 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Utility is truth.

The reason we humans made up this word... "truth"... is that we noticed that some statements empower us to predict the future. The law of universal gravitation is "true", because it tells us what's going to happen when we drop something. But on the quantum level, it turns out to be an approximation.

The word "truth" means "predictive power".

TRP general principles like AWALT do not have total predictive power. But they have vastly more predictive power than non-statements like "Everyone is different" and "those are sweeping generalizations", because those have no predictive power at all.

You cannot "sacrifice truth for utility". Because without utility, you have no truth.

Post-Wall former models make a documentary about how terrible it is to use young sexy women in advertising.

3 upvotes · 1 October 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

It's not the actual cocks on the cock carousel that make them look old and busted. It's everything that goes with it: the party lifestyle, drugs, alcohol, sleepless nights, bingeing and purging, etc, etc.

If feminism is about equality, why have feminists done NOTHING about the plight of the incel?

3 upvotes · 29 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And now we see why any implication that I don't think you are an adult hurts so much. Because you don't think you're an adult. You literally think that women such as yourself cannot take responsibility for so much as what they choose to put into their mouths.

You think that this guy's "shitty attitude" has the power to destroy women's lives, but that your "shitty attitude" is harmless.

Your expectations imply that you can say whatever you want, because no one will take you seriously, while he needs to watch his words, because you take him seriously, and so will everyone else.

You want to be treated like a child. You want the extra protectiveness and care and forbearance that children receive. You don't want to be taken seriously, because if you were, you'd have to start having some self-control. You just don't want me to put it that way, because you find it humiliating when I put it so bluntly.

Well, I'm not going to spare your feelings if you will not mind your manners and spare the feelings of others. I assure you he feels every bit as shitty about his sex life as those women who develop eating disorders feel about their bodies. And I do not give a rampaging fuck if he way he expresses that in a way that contains something you find politically incorrect. Put on your big-girl panties and cope.

Do women behave as they do as a result of nature, or nurture?

3 upvotes · 26 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Traits that you see in women everywhere are common to all women.

Traits that you see in women of a particular culture are cultural.

Why do TRPillers hate on the field of psychology so much ?

3 upvotes · 25 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You could argue that there is some "left wing bias" among psychologists , but why does it matter to TRPillers ?

There is nothing wrong with the idea of having a science of human behaviour, and of using that science to attempt to fix problem behaviours.

The problems with psychology are in its practice:

- Vast disconnect between research psychology and clinical/counseling psychology, to the point where the latter is no longer science.

- Strong left-wing bias on the part of the latter.
- Strong cultural Marxist bias on the part of the latter.
- Strong anti-Christian bias on the part of the latter.
- Strong anti-male bias on the part of the latter.
- Ineffective treatment methods on the part of the latter.
- Insufficiently and improperly trained practitioners.

How do you react when you get dumped ?

3 upvotes · 25 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

Polite, but distant. Firm, and as quick as possible.

- Don't worry about leaving a good impression, or trying to impress her. You are over, it no longer matters to you what she thinks.
- Don't try to get revenge. It no longer matters to you if she is happy or sad.
- Don't argue. You have made your decision. It is over.

How do you react when you get dumped ?

3 upvotes · 23 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

Fighting becomes every day habit and then she throws at you "I want some space/distance/similar" excuse. Say that you want to try for this relationship but you are not needy.

It doesn't matter what you want to try for. If she says this, the relationship is doomed. You need to focus on a clean exit now.

Of course, you will not listen to me. You're not ready to admit to yourself that it's over. But it is.

What Rights and Obligations do a Man and Woman have to and for each other in Marriage?

3 upvotes · 22 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The purpose of it legally is based on the fact that if someone sacrificed their career or sacrificed any form of potential benefit for the relationship

She wasn't entitled to that. Therefore he can withdraw it at any time, for any reason. Just like sex.

Interested in what PPD thinks of a prime bachelor (TV show) choosing a single mother his own age out of a bevy of childless, much younger beauties?

3 upvotes · 22 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes, I know it's a show and it's entertainment and it's heavily edited and blah blah

I think we're done here.

Question: Is TRP filled with a bunch of beta nerds trying to live an "alpha" lifestyle?

3 upvotes · 22 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You're asking why I no longer find such stories incredible. It is because I have experienced stories like them.

They aren't incredible to me.

If I told you some of the things I pulled off, you wouldn't believe me either.

Now, there's no way to convince you that I am telling the truth, but I'm not trying to. And TRP isn't trying to. TRP isn't for you, you see. It's for men are ready to give this stuff a try, because the alternative sucks.

We're not a crusade to convert the world. You're asking, "How do you plan to prove this?", when the answer is, "we don't". Take it or leave it. We neither require, nor even particularly want, your faith. I have no need to convince you of anything, because my goal isn't your admiration, or agreement. My goal is to help men who want to be helped, and to use this information to get my dick sucked whenever I want it to be.

Since that is working out quite nicely for me, I see no reason to twist myself into a pretzel trying to prove anything. Extraordinary claims may require extraordinary evidence, but only when the speaker desires to be believed.

What I want out of this conversation right here is something to do while 4 million lines of C++ code compile. So I'm not going to struggle to make you believe. I'm only going to tell you how to get a more complete perspective if you want it.

And you can do that by reading asktrp.

Question: Is TRP filled with a bunch of beta nerds trying to live an "alpha" lifestyle?

3 upvotes · 22 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Did they not make you take a statistics class? Or did you just not pay attention?

General population statistics can only be applied to random samples from that population. Non-random samples cannot be evaluated this way, and whether they are self-selected or "VETTED!!!!!!!!!!!!!!" isn't significant, because both processes produce a non-random sample.

Since I have very little confidence that your brain can absorb this abstract concept directly, let me give you a concrete example:

<https://www.math.upenn.edu/~deturck/m170/wk4/lecture/case1.html>

TRP is inherently a more developed worldview

3 upvotes · 21 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Y'all act as if there's some sort of secret esoteric knowledge that's only available to "men who have become successful with women"

There is.

But I can't just "tell you what it is". Not because I refuse to, but because it is a detailed body of experiential knowledge. I can't summarize it in a few sentences any more than I can summarize how to read a facial expression, or how to design a boat.

when a good part of that is just looks and life situation.

Unless you are good at picking up women (using TRP methods or not), then you lack the expertise to know what works.

found that 84% of women thought good looks was essential.

Ignore what women say. Watch what they do.

Well that's good for y'all but there are still a lot of unsuccessful men out here and it makes it harder for us when women are shamed for being "sluts".

Wrong.

I'm going to assume that you, personally, are neither in the top 20% of attractive men, nor the bottom 20%. If this is true, then slut-shaming actually helps you get sex. To understand why, let's do a thought experiment.

You are two alternate versions of yourself, age 16, in two alternate high schools, in two alternate universes. We will call these universes Hippie Free Love World, and Antislut Serial Monogamy World.

Hippie Free Love World treats sex as a recreational activity with no emotional context. You have sex to get your rocks off, with whoever you want to, and no one particularly minds or judges you for it.

Antislut Serial Monogamy World subjects women to social ridicule if they have sex with a man who does not grant them relationship status. They are seen as losers who cannot get a man to commit to them, who have no worth or self-respect. Whether it also shames men for having sex outside a committed relationship is actually unimportant, as we will soon see.

Assume you are in the 51st percentile of sexual attractiveness. Let's see what happens to you in each world.

In ASMW, the most desirable girl is able to secure a relationship with the most desirable man (Chad Thundercock, star quarterback of the varsity football team). The next most desirable girl now has a choice. She can try to pry Chad away from girl #1, get Chad to cheat with her on the sly, or pair off with the next most desirable man. The more intense the slut-shaming, the more likely she is to take the last option.

This means that male and female students mate in a roughly assortive fashion all the way down. And you personally have a girlfriend who, like you, is around the 51st percentile of desirability.

Now let's see what happens to you in HFLW. The most desirable girl has sex with Chad when she wants sex. The next most attractive girl... also has sex with Chad. Why wouldn't she? No one will shame her, the first girl won't be jealous, and Chad is not about to object to having two sexual partners. In fact, the top five or ten girls are all going to be having sex with Chad, up to the point where Chad is satiated. Only when Chad rejects the idea of having more girls will they set their sights lower.

Now, maybe these top ten girls are going to want a little variety. If so, Hank Hammerpenis, the star running back, and Sid Smoothtalker, the senior class president and trust fund kid, are in slots two and three.

Now, what do you think is going to be left by the time this sexual trickle-down economics reaches you? Probably no one. If there is someone who can't join the harem of anyone above the 51st percentile, imagine what she's going to smell like.

Now do you see? Because one man can sexually satisfy many women, "free love" is a bonanza for the very top men (because they get more women), and for all women (because they have more access to those top men), but for you, it's a desert. Because girls will be having all that "free love" with somebody else.

Feminists and other leftoids have tried to sell you on the idea of sexual freedom, based on the promise that more sluts = you getting laid more. But this promise never materializes. Not unless you fight and claw and work your way into the top 20% of men. And if you can do that, then you don't need HFLW. You'll do just fine in any world. The sexual paradise they are trying to create is a sexual paradise for women (specifically young women who don't want a family yet). It also creates a sexual paradise for Chad, which they are fine with. It's not the main goal, but if it benefits women, they can live with that.

But there is nothing in this plan for you. And they don't care. Because women, not you, are their core constituency. You, if you support them, are just their useful idiot.

Being promiscuous has a similar effect on men and women. Why is it good for men for long term but bad for women?

3 upvotes · 18 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

Does it have a similar effect on men and women? Are you so sure about that? What are you basing your opinion on?

Banned from askmrp for "You are not entitled to sex with your wife." PPD, what do you think?

3 upvotes · 11 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So, to your mind, marriage really isn't "supposed" to be anything different than living with your girlfriend. The promises, or wedding vows, are purely ceremonial, and neither one actually has the moral or legal obligation to keep them.

The idea here is that anything one partner gives the other is a gift freely given, and a gift does not become an obligation through repeated giving.

This is indeed a consistent viewpoint, but it has certain implications which you may not have thought through. You really believe what you just said only if you agree to the following propositions:

- Alimony should never exist under any circumstances. (Any money given in support is a gift, and a gift does not become an obligation through repeated giving.)
- Cheating is no longer a thing. (Sexual exclusivity is a gift, and a gift does not become an obligation through repeated giving.)
- Abandonment is no longer a thing. (Time and attention are gifts, and gift...)

And so forth.

You see, there are two models of what a wedding means. The traditional model and the liberal model.

In the traditional model, a wedding is the signing of a contract. Vows are promises, and they are spoken aloud before witnesses. The parties are then morally (sometimes legally) obligated to keep their promises.

In the liberal model, a wedding is a ceremonial recognition of an LTR. Vows are simply traditional ceremonial speech, like new Canadian citizens taking an oath of fealty to the queen of England. Things continue more or less like before, with boyfriend and girlfriend living together, but legally and morally entitled to do whatever they want, unilaterally, with regard to the relationship.

https://np.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/2d9k75/the_redefinition_of_marriage/

https://np.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/38zz33/the_redefinition_of_marriage_part_two_sex/flair:'Question for RedPill' How do you disassociate with the "anger phase"

3 upvotes · 7 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The purpose of TRP isn't self-improvement.

It's to use our evil mind control powers to rape as many impressionable young girls, trigger as many fat ugly feminist hags, and ~~deeply concern~~ scare the shit out of as many limp-wristed whiny leftoid man-boys, as possible. It's to live fast, die smiling, and leave a freakishly muscular corpse.

I don't want to disassociate from the angry phase. Of all the phases, it gives the most power... the power to free myself from the moral nitpicking of people who don't give a shit about me, the power to motivate myself to make the changes I want in my life, the power to trigger feminists for schadenfreude (that's "lulz" for you folks in the cheap seats).

In short, I am not interested in what you find off-putting about TRP. Until you demonstrate that you are more concerned for these young men than about them, they will owe you nothing... not even an explanation.

How much time do I give walking away?

3 upvotes · 6 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

Interesting.

Today is also my birthday. My girlfriend planned out something for us to do, but didn't tell me what it was, because I wanted to be surprised.

We spent the day gokart racing with my friends at a local track, then had dinner with them at a local french restaurant. Followed by returning home for a blowjob and a nap.

Usually on my birthday I make time for a threesome with her and another girl, but not this year, because my current usual side chick has a boyfriend and we are therefore in stealth mode. Maybe next year I'll be more careful to have someone lined up, or get the girlfriend to get us one of the local pros (area I live in has some classier ones).

So why am I telling you all this? Am I bragging?

Damn right I am, but there's a point to it. It shows you what is possible.

You need to begin a long project of bitch management, and become the unquestioned ruler of your relationship. There is no equality with a woman you are sexing. She is either your slave, or you are hers. It can be subtle, but one person is always the real one in control. Either she listens to you, or you listen to her.

You make make it clear that you will not be controlled. Come back acting like nothing is wrong. Ignore her and do your thing. She will try to "talk this out". Shrug, say there's nothing to discuss. You did what you decided to do. In the future, you will do what you decide to do. In the future, there is no discussion, no negotiation. You decide to do X, you do X. If you tells you "shouldn't" do that, don't argue that you "should". Just say that you will, and then do it.

There is no need to tell a woman to obey you, or try and force her. If you show her that you will not obey her even in the slightest matter, then she will gradually begin obeying you. You cannot be equals with your woman any more than you can with your dog, you are either the pack leader, or you are not. Just as a dog has no mental model for "peer" or "friend", only "pack leader" and "subordinate", so do women have no mental model for an equal relationship.

Autistic guy learning TRP

3 upvotes · 5 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

'Spergs and other people on the high end of the autism spectrum have some special obstacles when applying this material. This really breaks down into a few categories.

1. Insensitivity to feedback. Spergs are blind to microexpressions and subtle changes in posture and voice intonation that signal emotional reactions to the behaviour of others.
2. Unawareness of social expectations. Most children learn a lot about social interaction and what is expected of them very quickly. However the mechanism of teaching this is mostly the microexpressions and other subtle cues mentioned in point #1. Since spergs are blind to these, they often leave childhood with significant gaps in their knowledge of what might be expected of them.
3. Misinterpretation of their ignorance. Since most people's social abilities function unconsciously, they are unable to imagine those abilities not working. Therefore a sperg's ignorance of social expectations is interpreted as deliberate bad behaviour, since they are literally unable to hold in their minds the idea that "someone might not know that". This inability is often pervasive and total... even when told literally and directly that someone "doesn't know he's expected to do that", they are still unable to process or believe this idea, and assume malice anyway.

4. Emotional maladjustment due to unmet social needs. Spargs are not exempt from having the same social and emotional needs as other people, despite having a stunted ability to get those needs met. Year after year of this can make someone into a very angry person indeed.

(to be continued)

40+ TRP'ers, squatting and body fat %

3 upvotes · 2 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

Well, gear isn't one thing. It's a category of lots of different things. At different doses. And the dose determines the poison.

Your body naturally generates a certain amount of gear. If it didn't, you would be as weak as a woman. Obviously, that level is totally safe. And there is obviously some amount that will kill you, because some level of water will kill you.

So TRT is dosing bioidentical hormones to a high natural level. It is absolutely safe.

Going beyond that means using more and/or slightly different hormones. Obviously, just above TRT levels is pretty safe. And there's some level, somewhere, that's very dangerous.

How high you can go without hurting yourself is a matter, not only of dose, but using the proper combinations, and knowing what to do. Of knowing what the potential side effects are and how to manage them.

40+ TRP'ers, squatting and body fat %

3 upvotes · 2 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

Make sure you understand the difference between hormone replacement and hormone supplementation.

They are easy to confuse because the procedure is the same, but they are medically distinct.

Hormone replacement is introducing a bioidentical hormone to restore peak natural levels. In other words, you add enough testosterone to put you back where you were at 16. Side effects are not a huge concern here, because you already had these same hormones and dosages in you, when you were young, and you did not curl up, burst, or turn into a lizard. The function here is to stave off some of the negative effects of aging. This is testosterone replacement therapy.

Hormone supplementation is a combination of using boosting hormones to superbiological levels and using synthetic hormones with their own alternative effects and properties. This is the gear cycling that professional athletes use.

In my opinion, there are pros and cons to supplementation, and while I believe the benefits outweigh the risks and drawbacks (when used intelligently), others might disagree.

Replacement, however, is a no-brainer. Anyone who thinks it is not worth doing is simply wrong. There is no reason not to adjust hormone levels to what they are in a youthful, vigorous body, unless we don't like being youthful and vigorous.

All hormones have benefits. When you lose the hormone, you lose the benefit. When you replace the hormone, you replace the benefit.

Constantly have the feeling of wifeing the girls I'm fucking

3 upvotes · 2 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

It's possible you want to lock someone down. Lots of men naturally want LTRs.

Just don't do it with a hoe.

Vent: Party days are good, SMV is high and better than ever, but I deeply miss movie nights

3 upvotes · 1 September 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Exactly. Those following along at home should read the Classic Text of Bitch Management, and apply it.

Dom / Sub (BDSM) with TRP Experiences?

3 upvotes · 1 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

When I was helping to invent TRP, I took a lot of cues from my BDSM experience. They're not the same, but there is some crossover.

But there's a critical question you didn't answer. You roughed her up a bit, and she loved it. Great. But did you love it? Did it turn you on? Did it work for you?

If it turns you on, then you can play with this and spin her longer. PM or Skype me and I'll give you the BDSM primer.

If not, then it really doesn't change the equation any.

From a blue piller, here's some things that bother me about the blue pill and the way it has discussions here.

3 upvotes · 31 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What you are trying to recreate here is the two basic principles of debate, the Principle of Charity and the Principle of Humanity.

Basically, they boil down to:

1. Assume your opposite is sane.
2. Argue against the strongest interpretation you can find of what he said, rather than constructing strawmen.

Redpillers: If AWALT, why do you prefer non-sluts over sluts for LTR's?

3 upvotes · 31 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Hey, gun owners! If a basic rule of gun safety is "all guns are loaded", why do you bother to check that a gun is unloaded before cleaning it?

Girlfriend love me to death it seems, sex is great, but what is really going on under the hood?

3 upvotes · 30 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

Don't overthink things. Whether something is going to last for two weeks or two years or the rest of your life, your moves are the same.

Treat her the way her current behaviour warrants. She treats you good, give her attention.

AWALT means "be prepared to walk away if she does something", not "psychologically check out before anything is visibly wrong". It means "any woman can cheat", not "every woman will cheat".

You are suffering from imposter syndrome, my young friend. Second case I've run into this week. When TRP stuff starts working, it takes a lot longer to stop feeling like a loser than it takes to actually stop being one.

But to her, you are your behaviour, not the feelings you have in the privacy of your head. If it's working, keep working it.

Can feminism be categorized as a sexual strategy?

3 upvotes · 27 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Since even feminists can't agree on what feminism is, I don't think it can be easily categorized as solely any one thing.

But in many respects, feminism is indeed a sexual strategy. It's a sexual strategy for ugly women with unpleasant personalities.

- It is an attempt to overturn beauty standards, by those who cannot meet them.
- It is an attempt to substitute the state's unconditional support for the conditional support of a husband, but those too unattractive to secure one, or too psychologically damaged to want one.
- It is an attempt to forcibly transfer resources from men to women, by women who are unable to get men to volunteer those resources.

Attractive, pleasant women don't need feminism, because men already voluntarily give them anything feminism could possibly offer, and some things that it cannot.

Feminists, on the other hand, generally can't get anything from men without either moral shaming, or the threat of state violence, or both, because they are deeply unpleasant shrews. It is not by coincidence that I have never once, in a lifetime of meeting and being attracted to many, many different women, I have never, not once, met a woman, been attracted to her, and then found out she was a feminist. Feminists have always outed themselves to me as unattractive by their ugly bodies (the product of lazy entitled self-neglect) and ugly characters (the product of selfish, entitled narcissism) long before they ever outed themselves to me as feminists by expressing a political opinion.

And now I'm going to pass the ball to Janet Bloomfield.

Am I Socially Impaired?

3 upvotes · 27 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

No, you are not socially impaired, you are socially unskilled.

Like physical skills and mental skills, social skills improve with practice, and atrophy with disuse. Very few people actually have disabilities that impair their social skills. No matter where you are with your social skills, whether you are a socially unskilled virgin, or a slayer of mad pussy, the way to improve is always the same. It is the same as the way you improve any skill.

First, learn the principles of what you are supposed to do. Then practice.

The reason you feel "stuck" and unable to improve is that you are reading a board full of examples that are beyond your skill. Most people arrive at TRP with a little more practice than you have had, and they're posting questions and field reports about stuff you can't do yet. And then there's that guy posting a field report about going to a wedding and having a threesome afterwards with two of the bridesmaids, another guy whose girlfriend wears a slave collar, calls him "master", and wants to make friends with his side chicks, and other ridiculous stuff like that. It's enough to make you despair.

Don't despair.

What you need is a more basic set of practice tasks.

- Next day of class, make eye contact with, and say hello to, at least one person you don't already know. Do this every day for a week.
- Next week, start a brief conversation with one of those people.
- The following week, talk, at least briefly, to one person you don't know, every day.

... and so on. Small steps. Small victories pave the way for larger ones.

Where is this behavior actually going on?

3 upvotes · 26 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't be obtuse. We are discussing the sexual marketplace.

Your attempt to obfuscate the issue by talking about technological progress is entirely irrelevant.

What is a frame ?

3 upvotes · 26 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

<https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3iix64/frame/>

Advice on handling this shit test

3 upvotes · 25 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

You already fucked up.

What are you doing wasting time having stupid conversations on facebook with losers?

Of course single mothers are going to hit you with some variation on "Lol, u r fag!". That's what they do. They are cheap, nasty, irredeemably broken women, and they know it. So their only move is to try to drag everyone else down, too.

If you are wasting time like this, you have already lost.

The point of TRP isn't to help you win more verbal pissing contests with the pointless losers you hang out with. It's to get you to stop hanging out with pointless losers, and go make something of yourself instead.

Don't respond. Just walk away from the conversation. Who cares if she thinks she "won"? Because... what's the prize? Who cares if she thinks less of you. Because... why would anyone care what a single mother thinks?

"I become friends with all the pretty girls so that if I think a guy is hot I badmouth him and they don't take him." [LONG]

3 upvotes · 24 August 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Women create female "inner circles" to destroy and isolate high status males that refuse to conform to their standards. This is real and you need to learn how to handle it. You can ignore queen bees all you want, but they will fucking come for your blood I promise. in fact, many queen bees will attempt to "break" you, like a stallion, in attempts to corral you for their own purposes.

I'm starting to notice that the old vanguard are starting to inspire a new generation of really good and insightful writers and thinkers.

Every one of the five phases I pointed out is a tool in your toolbox, but the most important one is anger. Without anger, you cannot stand up for yourself. Bitchy "queen bee" women fear male anger, because the only power they have over a man depends upon him to flinch away and not stand up for himself. This is why they try to demonize it by pretending their fear is physical and not social.

You will have to be able to deal with queen bees, not because will be dating them or hooking up with them (never do this, they are broken, defective women), but because they will try to cut you down to size, and if they succeed, this will make even the worthwhile women within earshot lose attraction and respect for you.

There are two ways to cope with the hostile queen bee, and you will need both, because different situations call for either one.

1. Dress her down. The ability to do this comes from remaining in touch with the anger phase. Show that anger. Go ahead and make her afraid... she's not afraid you'll tear her head off, because women like this walk around in a bubble. They never think that a man is going to hit them until and unless it actually happens. Not, she's afraid because she has suddenly seen how little power she has over you, and she has already wagered by queen bee status on being able to control you.
2. Laugh her off. The ability to do this actually comes from the depression phase. That same despair you felt, the moment you realized women were children, and you that you would never be able to reason with them, that is what you need. Used correctly, it helps you to detach and not care what some silly woman thinks. They've had fifty years of not only total freedom, but increasing social dominance, and they still haven't become adults. It's safe to say they're not going to. Remember that, stop caring what they think, and laugh.

Journal Club Time; who cheats and why

3 upvotes · 24 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The fact that demographic factors were also consistent suggests little bias results from mode of data collection. Given the general comparability of the self-recorded and interview data, we turn to the analysis of infidelity reported to interviewers.

Just pointing out that their data collection methods seems to be good.

I scanned down the page, looking for the collection method, found this, and stopped reading.

I don't know what this study concludes (because I stopped reading), but whatever it concludes, it's worthless. "Interview" and "self-recorded" data are both self-reported data. Self-reported data is garbage.

If your study is not observational, it's not empirical. If it's not empirical, it's not science.

Don't listen to what humans say, watch what they do.

A girl shared this on my Facebook. I am very proud of her.

3 upvotes · 21 August 2015 · /r/MensRights

If you are hate something and are simultaneously disgusted with it, you loathe it.

If you are reluctant or unwilling to do something, then you are loath to do it. (Perhaps because you loathe it.)

Am I part of a Silent Majority?

3 upvotes · 20 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What I really don't understand is the concept of being a jerk to a woman.

Then stop yapping and test it.

Go meet two girls, separately. Be nice and sweet and compliant to one. Be a jerk to the other. See which one puts your penis in her mouth first.

Or you could sit here on reddit, sperging away about how you feeeeeeeeeeeel about what you read on TRP, as if your feelings were interesting to anyone but you. Everyone is fascinating to themselves. But unless you work at it, you're boring as shit to everyone else.

I promise you I did not wake up this morning thinking "I wonder what /u/RoyRW thinks of TRP".

The reason why the silent majority is silent is that no one wants to hear what they have to say. Not even other members of the silent majority. What they have to say is fucking boring, because it's calculated to be nice. Which means agreeing with other people, not upsetting their preconceptions, blah blah blah.

What you have to say amounts to "Derp... uh... Me, too! I agree with all those other people."

Get this through that bowl of bland oatmeal you're using for a brain: Women would rather be offended than bored. (Men, too.)

Inoffensive is white bread. It's a Honda Civic. It's elevator music. It's a MacDonald's hamburger. It's a strip mall full of discount clothing stores. It's a job as assistant manager at Starbucks. It's a Thomas Kincaid painting. It's a retirement community full of old Jewish women playing canasta and complaining about their children's spouses.

If the best thing you can say about yourself is that you are inoffensive, then you are a waste of skin.

Please, offend me if you can. Tell me that Thomas Jefferson was a fascist. Drive a custom hot rod made in the shape of an enormous steel dildo. Write an article about how we should feed our dead relatives to pigs instead of burying them in cemeteries. Launch a concerted effort to breed domesticated raccoons. Put up a kickstarter page for an expedition to carve a giant happy face onto the moon. Start the Professional Wiffle Ball Bat Combat League.

Just don't softly snore boring, bland, unimaginative drivel on me. Don't sit there telling me how you agree with what other people have said six billion times before, and expect me to care because this time it's you saying it.

When you talk to someone, you are asking for their time and attention. At least repay them by making it a memorable experience.

How to handle long distance plates?

3 upvotes · 20 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

Given that I would consider Funsized a fairly serious LTR, and my side chicks don't change too often, you're probably right.

A lot of that's because the whole condom thing doesn't really work out for me. Takes a lot of the fun out of chasing some short-term strange if you know you're not gonna enjoy the fruits of victory that much.

In general, I think younger men want to spin plates, and older guys want to stack them. We have a lot less time to chase women, and to do so, we have to explicitly go out and find them, as opposed to just bouncing off them in a social circle or college campus. If an older man wants to replace a plate, he's gotta go run daygame, or use Tinder or something, unless he wants post-wall women (and who would?). That takes time away from his other responsibilities.

The term "plate" covers a lot of ground, and there are many different approaches to spinning them. How a man gets should get sex really depends on what he has to spare that he can put into it.

For example:

- College men should usually be daygaming the hell out of women they run into on campus. College men have a LOT of spare time, but not a lot of other things, so running day game on campus is their best move.
- However, if you are an extremely wealthy and busy corporate exec, you should use whores even if you have supertight game. Why? Because the price of a premium professional is worth a lot less to you than the couple of hours you would have to spend gaming an ONS, and classy pros don't make drama.

Hmmm. I think I'll stop here and expand this into an article on the main sub.

CMV: Being a traditionalist/conservative is the only way of TRP unless you have nihilistic tendencies.

3 upvotes · 20 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

1) Giving women freedoms leads to a dysfunctional society.

Yes.

2) Giving men too much freedom (unregulated polygyny) also leads to a dysfunctional society.

Sometimes.

It depends on other factors. In societies where the male mortality rate is high (warlike), polygyny is an absolute necessity. It is also sometimes helpful to allow for high-status males (think of the all the wars that would have been averted if custom had allowed Henry VIII to have more than one wife).

3) Women are irrational, manipulative creatures.

Unless taught to be otherwise by strong fathers.

They don't truly want freedom

They don't truly understand freedom. If you "free" a woman by taking away her leader, she starts looking around at the women next to her for cues on what she should do.

I've seen so many women worriedly wondering aloud if they were being a "bad feminist" because they liked BDSM. They saw feminism as a master they were accountable to, not a philosophy that served them.

Much of the traction feminism has gained, it has gained because the vast majority of women are born followers, and men are no longer leading, so they gravitate to anything that tells them what's expected of them.

and feminism is a shit test that men have failed .

Collectively, yes.

In conclusion , I don't see how you can be a true Red Pill and not believe that human behavior/sexuality should be restricted by authoritarianism/religion

I agree that you do not see that.

And I am not surprised that a woman's go-to solution involves a strong leader imposing his will.

There are, however, other options that you are not aware of.

CMV: Being a traditionalist/conservative is the only way of TRP unless you have nihilistic tendencies.

3 upvotes · 20 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They might have some kind of scripted setup that's supposed to detect brigading.

So much for "shadowbanning is only for spammers, period". But we all knew that was bullshit the moment it left /u/spez 's keyboard.

Subs like PPD are probably prone to this kind of thing, because, unlike most other subs, PPD is designed to be brigaded. It's supposed to pull people from other, larger subs into its discussions. That's what it is for.

I think TBP probably gets hit more than TRP, because TBP links here more. TRP talks mostly about ideas, and usually just gets on with the business of doing what it does. The subset of TRP subscribers who come here are the ones who enjoy the rhetorical process. Whereas TBP was created to talk about people, not ideas. Therefore linking to what this or that person said is kind of the whole point.

CMV: The Red Pill is often "misunderstood" because of TheRedPillars themselves.

3 upvotes · 19 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I literally have no idea what point you are trying to make, or what question you are trying to ask.

Before, you didn't make enough sense to argue with. Now you are not even making enough sense to mock.

The "game" I am speaking of is called "rhetoric" and/or "dialectic" (either one will do). These are the arts of persuasion. I have no idea what you are trying to persuade me of.

How bad did I fuck up? Did I fuck up?

3 upvotes · 19 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

Dude, you played handsies with the boss's plate right in front of one of your co-workers, and you're wondering why she clammed up?

How stupid are you?

Bad behavior: what to do?

3 upvotes · 17 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

You can only discipline a woman if she is invested in you. If she isn't committed to you, your disapproval means nothing to her. Only your indifference will let you keep the upper hand.

If a woman isn't invested in you, you can only punish bad behaviour by showing more indifference to her.

Especially in the beginning, I recommend treating every parting as a potential soft next. Every time you go home, take it for granted that you might not see her again. Every text you send, take it for granted that there may be no response. Every date you set up, take it for granted that there's good odds it won't happen.

Always be making your plans for the rest of your life as if you will never see this woman again. Then, if she lets you down or disrespects you, just carry on with those plans. This makes the actual soft next easy.

In this case, here's what I would do:

- Wait 12 hours to a few days.
- Text back "NP. Made other plans."
- Soft next.
- Start working on another girl.

The last part is important. When you soft next, you look right away for your next target... that way, if she reinitiates, your brain regards her as part of the past, and it's up to her to talk her way back in.

Got my hopes up when an article headline asked why boys were trailing girls in school exams, until I read the inside headline: "Girls read more. They spend more time on homework, and usually spend less time online and playing video games. Boys think they're too cool for school"

3 upvotes · 17 August 2015 · /r/MensRights

When men outdo women, it is obviously because of systematic sexism, because women have equal abilities to men. We know this is true because anyone who says otherwise is a sexist (because he said it), and therefore what he says is false. Therefore, in turn, any inequality of outcomes is due to evil men hurting the women's performance.

When women outdo men, it is because men suck.

broke my best plate, feel like I led her on and feel bad about it

3 upvotes · 17 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

And I feel bad

This is their weapon.

for obviously having given her the impression that we are exclusive

Did you tell her that? Or did she assume?

How can I be a father AND protect myself?

3 upvotes · 16 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

How can I be a father AND protect myself?

You can't.

TRP is not a religion. It does not perform miracles. It does not have a canned answer for every question.

Excessive promiscuity often has a negative effect on a man's ability to commit

3 upvotes · 14 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm interested in what works for women in general, not you in particular.

Excessive promiscuity often has a negative effect on a man's ability to commit

3 upvotes · 14 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No. She's exclusive to me. I'm not exclusive to her.

Excessive promiscuity often has a negative effect on a man's ability to commit

3 upvotes · 14 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Can't say. My girl is quite happy with sharing so long as she gets enough.

Envy is wanting what someone else has. Jealousy is fear that someone else will take what you have.

Self-sufficiency: What is the point of women?

3 upvotes · 11 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

I feel like so much of the questions that get asked on TRP point toward the central theme of 'how to I get to fuck many women', seemingly premised on the assumption that fucking many women makes one more alpha.

Don't fuck women to prove anything.

Fuck women to satisfy your sexual urges. Fucking women is an end, not a means.

In 2010 Laura Agustin strongly attacked emerging 3rd wave Fem core value 'woman as object' in her remarks on trafficking at London's battle of Ideas

3 upvotes · 11 August 2015 · /r/MensRights

To this day - even though I'm now married for over 5 years - I can't even imagine that women really want sex. I know they do in my head - and my wife tries to assure me all the time - but still, in my heart I can't believe it.

Hi, I'm an evil redpiller, and I'd like to address this specific point.

Over in my evil place of evil misogyny, we have a lot of evil models that we use to explain and predict human sexual behaviour, for our evil purposes.

The one I'd like to direct your attention to is this notion:

Men are the gatekeepers of relationships, and women are the gatekeepers of sex.

What this means is that, while both men and women want both sex and relationships, for each of these things, there is one particular sex whose job is to put the brakes on by being selective.

- Relationships naturally represent little or no risk to a woman, since they primarily involve the transfer of material resources from the male to the female. Women therefore have little or no reason to resist entering a relationship with anyone they are willing to have sex with.
- Relationships naturally represent a great deal of risk to a man, as they represent a drain on his material resources for uncertain gains. Men therefore have a great deal of reason to be selective.
- Sex naturally represents little or no risk to a man, since it primarily involves the transfer of sperm which he can then abandon without consequence. Men therefore have little or no reason to pass up opportunities to have sex.
- Sex naturally represents a great deal of risk to a woman, since she must carry the child to term and raise it. Women therefore have a great deal of reason to be selective.

Most of this resistance takes the form of feigned reluctance, rather than lack of enjoyment. Men like relationships with worthy women. Women like sex with attractive and exciting men. But both must use the appearance of indifference to ward off the unworthy.

If women take this feigned indifference at face value, they tend form the false belief that men are separated into "players" who don't like relationships and "committers" who do. If men take this feigned indifference at face value, they to form the false belief that women are separated into "sluts" who like sex, and "good girls" who don't.

In truth, both men and women are differentiated, not by their enthusiasm, but by their selectivity.

Why are the elite, smartest college students having the least sex?

3 upvotes · 10 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I thought you might have counted that under intellectual masturbation

Let me give you a simple rubric: Money is not a meaningless thing. It is a token we use to measure fucks given. If someone is willing to pay you for something, they give a fuck about that something. If an enormous number of people give a fuck, that's pretty far from useless.

George RR Martin wrote some books that enormous numbers of people give a fuck about. So many people gave a fuck that they made one of the most popular television series of all time. And employed a lot of people doing it. Because people gave a fuck about their work, too. Add their stuff together, and that's a lot of given fucks.

There are a lot of valuable things that go beyond keeping us fed, clothed, and sheltered. What matters is that people give a fuck.

If you keep entertained with a story I barely wait to read the next installment of, I give a fuck. If you keep my car running smoothly, I give a fuck. If you can teach me more about how the stock market works, I give a fuck. If you can sell me steroids that will make me love what I see in the mirror, I give a fuck. If you are a convenient local store that sells a brand of toothpaste that doesn't taste like fucking mint, I give a fuck.

Just do something someone else will care about. That's the only real measure of what matters.

Why are the elite, smartest college students having the least sex?

3 upvotes · 10 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There's a difference between skillset and talent. Maybe you learned some things that weren't practical. But your talent isn't those things. It's the thing you used to learn them.

Smart isn't just for reading books and sitting around having long arguments about "what is truth?". Those can be fun, but if that's all you do, you are disappearing up your own asshole.

Smart is for anything you can use it for. Smart people can learn. They can figure shit out. Start a business. Learn to code. Play the stock market. Restore old cars. Write a novel.

I do not think I can think of any disability, apart from total-body paralysis, which prevents someone from doing all possible useful things.

Female strategic response to TRP & PUA

3 upvotes · 10 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't agree. There's a difference between desiring someone and actually sleeping with someone. You don't see ultraconservative Muslim women in burqas sleeping with suave PUA guys.

That's because you're not a suave PUA guy. Do you think that ultraconservative religious women are going to march by your door the next day wearing a tshirt that says "I got Thundercocked by Chad, and all I got was this lame tshirt?"

No, they're going to keep claiming to be virgins.

That's why islam, which you used as an example, works not by instilling "values" in women, but by physically keeping those women away from Chad.

It's true -- players can turn into husbands for the right woman. I know because I've turned a naturally "alpha" former player into a committed, long-term boyfriend. I dumped him because he was physically abusive. Now he's back to his old ways. But one of the reasons why I got him in the first place was by making him wait a very long time before sex. Because he liked all my other attributes AND because he was interested in a relationship, he stuck around. He told me later on that he valued me a lot more because I made him wait.

Every relationship works until it doesn't. Sometimes this is for one hour, sometimes it's for six months, sometimes it's for 37 years until he dies of cancer.

The situation you describe is the sort of thing I try to coach TRP/RPW away from; relationship as power struggle. You temporarily gain the upper hand by restricting access to sex ("making him wait a long time"), he attempts to gain control by whatever was that you called physically abusive, you retaliate by dumping him.

Coming from that background, I'm not really going to take your relationship advice too seriously. Treating a relationship as a conflict gets you relationships with a lot of conflict. A healthy relationship is not you against him, it's you and him against the world.

I assume you're not in a relationship right now, because otherwise you would have told me about that.

The list is a filter. Given the popularity of online apps nowadays, a girl can easily play the numbers game. In the end, women want quality over quantity: she only needs ONE good pick. If she goes through 500 guys, chances are that there will be at least ONE attractive man who is willing to commit

If I send 500 resumes, then chances are there will be at least ONE company that's willing to hire me as CEO!

Nope. Each company is an individual entity. It will look at me and make its own decision. And if I have no relevant track record, and no connections, then each one is going to laugh. Five hundred times zero is zero.

Tell me, what is it about you, that would make me want to invest in you emotionally? Because I'm struggling to make you understand something that I would want a relationship partner to already know: That I am a person with desires, with likes and dislikes, with ambitions. That I am a person who cares about the quality of my life. There's a functioning human mind in here, and I'm not just going to looking to give commitment away like free candy to the first comer who finds me and "makes me wait". You don't have the power to make a man wait for sex. You only have the power to make us not have sex with you. That doesn't force us to not have sex, and it doesn't force us to hang around and wait.

Your rules are written like you hold all the cards. So, either you're delusional, or there is something special about you that makes you much more desirable than any other of the many women around, all of whom also have functional girl parts.

So let's skip to the part where you tell me what that is. What do you bring to the table?

EDIT: Cricket... cricket... cricket.

Pretty much what I expected. Women put on this tough-girl act about "making men respect them" by "making them wait". Then when asked why they are worth waiting for... sputtering, or silence.

You don't increase the value by increasing the price, ladies. You just drive away smart shoppers. "Making him wait" is not a substitute for stepping up your girl game.

All Pills what is your advice to avoid being a side guy/side bitch?

3 upvotes · 9 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tNfGyIW7aHM>

Michelle Langley on Infidelity

3 upvotes · 5 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Need to bookmark this for future "patriarchy hurts men, too"/"feminism helps men, too" debates.

To the immediate point, however, if feminism doesn't give a crap about me, why would I give a crap about feminism? After all, feminism wants, in fact it needs, my cooperation... it's got a long list of things I "should" and "shouldn't" do.

But when I ask what it's going to do for me in return, all of a sudden it's "Waaaaah I'm a big crybaby and feminism doesn't benefit my penis!".

Make up your mind. Either you need me, or you don't.

What's going to happen no one commits to each other anymore and Marriage rates are 0?

3 upvotes · 4 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I imagine when we reach this point in society the cost of a fish will be so inconsequential that it'll be sustainable.

If a person has no salable skills or property at all, then their income is literally zero. At this point, it does not matter how cheaply we can manufacture goods and services, because the problem is distribution, not creation.

At this point, a welfare state becomes the only option, because when all human capabilities are commoditized, only ownership can generate income. At this point, a human who owns nothing is forever trapped in that state, because anything he can do with the body or mind he was born with can be more cheaply done by a machine. He has nothing to sell, and cannot ever get anything to sell, because he has nothing to sell.

At this point, we must give him things, because if we do not, he has no incentive to honour the system of ownership. If some provision for him is not made, he will take what he needs.

Of course, at this point, we also have a good number of other problems, not least of which is an existential crisis of sorts. What exactly do we do when we are exceeded by our tools on every conceivable scale, even those of intelligence and creativity? Do we create a sort of land of the lotus eaters, and content ourselves with exotic amusements? Do we tear down what we have built in a titanic struggle over ownership of it all? Do we turn our technologies to enhancing our own bodies and minds, merging with our tools in an attempt to become relevant once again? Do we raise AI children instead of biological ones, gradually replacing the genetic "human race" with a cultural "human race" of posthuman intelligences?

The notion of a technological singularity is naive... when you stand on a geometric curve, every place you stand looks like the flat part, with a steep peak ahead of you. However, at a certain point, technological progress will be rate-limited by our ability to grasp and understand it (some would argue that this has happened already).

There is no such thing as a post-scarcity society, ever, except from the point of view of the past. This is because the definition of scarcity is a moving target which changes position according to the productive ability of the society. We are inexorably doomed to a future of unimaginable wealth for a few, and subsistence on the dole for everyone else. However, there is some hope in the possibility that "subsistence" on that future dole may compare favourably with a comfortable modern existence.

Study showing same behaviour more likely to be seen as psychologically abusive if done by a man than if done by a woman. Implications? Interpretations?

3 upvotes · 26 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If feminism could even half care about men in my lifetime then I'd be pretty happy. Not that I expect that to happen, but half efforts from the dominant view on gender in the Western world would still do more than full efforts from a fringe group, at least in the short-term.

I don't understand why you still believe this is a possibility. Feminism has demonstrated time and time again that it is nothing but a power grab. Caring about men to any degree would run directly counter to its interests.

Feminism is not an attempt at any sort of balance of power. It uses balance-of-power rhetoric, but this is wholly disingenuous. I need not make a case for this to you, because I seen you yourself point out example after example of this. How many trees do you need to see before I can get you to say the word "forest"?

Yes, if feminist leaders had any concern at all about men's problems, many of them would vanish right away. But that's because they created many of them in the first place.

Feminism doesn't want to help solve men's problems because feminism IS men's biggest problem.

I'm not seeing how TRP is as horrible as the feminists say...

3 upvotes · 26 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Saying things like women are children and are all sluts tends to piss some people off.

Mission accomplished.

Any discussion with my father about TRP or Social Darwinism leads to my dad shutting down the conversation as "you're just bitter". Does anyone else have this experience with people IRL?

3 upvotes · 22 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't have these conversations with people who don't want to have them.

Should I apologize to a girl I haven't seen or talked to in a year?

3 upvotes · 21 July 2015 · /r/askTRP

Go get some bloodwork done.

When it comes back showing high cortisol, get more sleep and take 50mg of DHEA every morning. Then your brain will stop making up remote possibilities to be anxious about.

... And Don't Listen to Me Like a 'Sperg, Either.

3 upvotes · 21 July 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

I won't share code. She paid for it, it's hers. I also don't want to give enough detail about her dissertation to make her identifiable. My comment history even more stalkerific than usual right now because I got bestof'd, and the SJWs are out in force.

She has a husband and a kid, and she doesn't need to get 6000 emails about how some guy she hung out with ten years ago and still says hi to occasionally on IM, is an awful person for saying shit on the internet that she agreed with when we talked about it back then.

Perhaps if I have some time, I'll do a gif of the phenomenon or something.

7 month LTR - need advice

3 upvotes · 20 July 2015 · /r/askTRP

You are unable to get off because you're dissatisfied with her. You need to figure out why.

I sort of feel like a female who settled for a beta. I like a lot of things about her but she isn't the best lay I've ever had.

It's not the anal thing, or lack of sexual skill. Sexual skill is trivial. If you're really attracted to a woman, and your testosterone levels are nice and high, you're going to be able to get off easily.

You're not attracted to her. She might be not as physically attractive as you want, leading to persistent feelings of dissatisfaction. She might have an attitude or behaviour problem.

Or you might have some unscratched sexual itch or fetish that you haven't expressed with her, and that you might not even know about yourself.

Or she might just be not attractive to you, even though she is attractive. (I can't be having with tall women, for example. If she's over 5'6, she doesn't look female to me at all.)

Once you figure out what's bothering you, you need to figure out if it can be fixed, or if you need to move on. It sounds like you are reluctant to break up with her because she is well-behaved, and breaking it off feels like an undeserved punishment. While this shows that you have developed a healthy attitude of "I am the prize", which will serve you well, staying with a girl you're not into does her no favours.

And you cannot negotiate desire. Penises don't listen. You can't talk it into liking someone it doesn't.

Not everything a bitch says is subtle mind fuckery, so calm the fuck down and let go of your ego.

3 upvotes · 15 July 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

DeputyDelicious: "She was networking, she doesn't want to fuck you."

While it's important for men who are learning to embrace the principle of "assume she wants your dick until proven otherwise", this needs to be balanced with an understanding of IOIs, and the difference between fake and real resistance.

Don't Talk to Me Like a Bitch.

3 upvotes · 15 July 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

What's wrong with caring about someone's problems or feelings? Does caring about another's problems and feelings make me not a man?

It's not about should, it's about will.

Humans are hardwired to be sympathetic to women, and not to men. You and I are no different. It's not that there's some redpill "rule" about not coddling a crying man. It's that humans, me included, you included, are hardwired to feel contempt, not pity, when they see a man showing weakness.

So if a man wants help, he needs to talk like Dam Sun, not Noh Wang. He'll get the best results talking like Long Wang, of course. But if he can be Long Wang, he doesn't need too much help. But everybody can be Dam Sun instead of Noh Wang, because those two are in the same logistical position.

Dam Sun just uses man-talk to get respect, instead of woman-talk to try (and fail) to get sympathy.

First post syndrome

3 upvotes · 14 July 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Good. Gooooood. Let the hate flow through you. Let it make you strong.

Let it make you determined not to let him win. Take the hate and use it to show him you're better than him, by succeeding without any of the perks he got. Then laugh at him and call him a sissy.

Why do you believe TBPillers often attack TRP in their sub ?

3 upvotes · 11 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

To keep defective people out.

Why don't TRPillers admit that dread game works on a lot of men too ?

3 upvotes · 11 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You don't know what "works" means in this context. It doesn't mean gets results from. It means turns on.

Dread game makes women horny.

Dread game sometimes make weak men obedient, but only fetishist outlier men ever like it.

What are Red pills thoughts on ayn rand and objectivism?

3 upvotes · 9 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Ultimately, Objectivism is about what people "should" do. And the word "should" is always followed by a list of things that don't happen.

TRP is about what people will do, and how to cope with that.

I see Ayn Rand as someone who had some good ideas, but was a complete sperg about them and thereby made them useless.

What do you guys think about written, signed contract for consent?

3 upvotes · 9 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Doesn't protect you from a mattress carrier.

Why are you against the MRAs ?

3 upvotes · 9 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Most people who identify as feminist pretend they speak for all women, and that thus to speak against them is to speak against women in general.

For them, women are a sort of convenient human shield who can be used to deflect criticism, but never, never actually consulted or observed to see what they really want.

Why are you against the MRAs ?

3 upvotes · 9 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Did you actually read? What he said was that if you leave men no redress for wrongs committed against them by women other than murder, murder is what you're gonna get.

If you found out your wife was using some sort of lady game guide on you, how would you react?

3 upvotes · 6 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You are correct. Her logical fallacy is the "compound proposition".

She makes two propositions, sticks them together, and expects us to agree with both, or disagree with both. This is only two of four possible answers.

Dealing with a no sex on the first night policy

3 upvotes · 3 July 2015 · /r/askTRP

Don't take it seriously, don't engage with it.

Treat like anything else a woman says. Or like anything else a 12 year old says. Because you should be treating those two things pretty much the same.

"Yes but MY clients, actually LIKE women."

3 upvotes · 3 July 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Do you know what a dog whistle is? It's a whistle only dogs can hear. If you blow the whistle, and something hears it, you know that's a dog.

Well

"You should hold off for somebody worth it."

"Yes but my clients, actually like women."

And so on...

... are Beta Whistles. Only betas take them seriously. That's what they are for.

They are for distinguishing between Chad Thundercock, and Will Wallet. Because it's going into one of Chad's ears, and out the other. Chad knows that women just say stuff. He doesn't take the stuff they say seriously, because he's heard it come out of another woman's mouth two hours before he had a threesome with her and her sister. Then he lent her out to his frat bro the next day.

Only Will is going to engage with it. So if a man engages with it, she knows he's Will, and not Chad. And so she can treat him accordingly.

Of course it's hypocritical. The hypocrisy is the whole point. If it wasn't hypocritical, it wouldn't work.

Women will try to shame you out of just about anything you do that brings pleasure to your life, whether it's threesomes with other men's wives, or just having an occasional beer.

If you change your behaviour to please them, or get upset, or defensive, they will continue this until the sun goes nova and swallows the earth.

However, if you act amused, or like you give zero fucks, or like you don't take them seriously, they will lower the intensity to an occasional mutter, like you just as much as before if not better (usually better), and often participate with you in the very activity they tried to shame you out of.

"Don't Marry!" - Does this attitude bring success in the long term?

3 upvotes · 1 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The single 50+ guys I know are pretty lonely.

So are the divorced ones.

The dichotomy you present is between "marriage that works" and "single life where you're alone". There are other possibilities, "marriage that doesn't work", and "single life where you're not alone".

The problem with Marriage 2.0 is that it's no guarantee of anything. It's a contract between you, a woman, and the government, where

- The government may change the rules at any time.
- The woman may dissolve the contract at no penalty at any time.
- You get to live with whatever the consequences of their actions are.

No thanks.

Do RPer's really want to see women as human or beneath them?

3 upvotes · 30 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you don't like it, just make it stop working, and it will go away.

A question for the blue pillers

3 upvotes · 30 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Circular argument.

"Demonizes women" is just your way of spinning "thinks modern first world women are being dickheads".

So, Human A thinks Human B is a dickhead. And thinking that makes Human A a dickhead now?

You are assuming what you must prove. Your argument basically boils down to "humans are owed kindness, unless I personally don't like them".

A question for the blue pillers

3 upvotes · 30 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Personally offend" is just another way of saying "be a dickhead to".

Let's nail this down: Who, exactly, decides when someone is "being a dickhead", or "personally offensive", or an "asshole" or generally persona non grata?

- You have decided that most readers of TRP are this sort of person.
- TRP readers have decided that most modern first world women are this sort of person.

If you claim to the right to make the first determination, but object to the second, then you got some 'splainin to do.

A question for the blue pillers

3 upvotes · 30 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So, you are now disagreeing with point #3?

If kindness is owed to "non-dickheads", and not to "dickheads", who gets to decide who is a "dickhead"? Does each person decide for themselves? Does everyone have to agree? Is there a majority vote?

A question for the blue pillers

3 upvotes · 30 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You're drifting off-topic. Let's try to keep our eye on the ball, here.

We have established that your rules are:

1. Human A owes Human B kindness.
2. Unless Human A thinks Human B is a dickhead.
3. Human A has full freedom to decide who he thinks is a dickhead.

I have demonstrated that TRP is acting according to your rules. Amusing, huh?

A question for the blue pillers

3 upvotes · 30 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You can't guarantee all women are dickheads

I don't have to. Behold how TRP treats women who aren't dickheads.

Monkey Bars

3 upvotes · 26 June 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Every hungry man is a bandit, every hungry woman is a whore. Morals are what happens at the top of Maslow's hierarchy of needs.

Remember this, and it will never surprise you.

Confessions of a PUA

3 upvotes · 26 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

True, that's the wrong term.

But validating crazy people does prevent them from getting the help they need.

Do Red Pillers prefer girls who have had less sexual partners because they're afraid they won't be able to satisfy girls who have had more?

3 upvotes · 24 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Close. It's because I'm afraid girls who have had more won't be able to satisfy me.

CMV: Terpers have "mommy issues"

3 upvotes · 24 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, BoomFap, you crazy disingenuous diamond, you.

We all know that you're just still smarting because you got thrown out of TRP for breaking the rule against moral lectures. Have a valium and get on with your life.

Arrangement for untarnished husband

3 upvotes · 24 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I recommend comic cons, Magic The Gathering tournaments, the GamerGhazi subreddit, and so on. Good luck.

I will be 24 years old this week and I have lower testosterone than an average 85 year old with type 2 diabetes. Doctors claim 'normal'...

3 upvotes · 23 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

Go really simple and light for a first cycle.

100mg Test C twice a week for ten weeks. That will put your levels at around 1300-1500. People do much, much more than that safely, but with your current levels being what they are, you will respond dramatically even to that modest amount.

The first week you will wonder if this is doing anything.

The second you will be horny as hell.

And on the third week, you will start to feel like you forgot to pay the gravity bill.

for the rest of the cycle, lift-eat-sleep-repeat. It won't be too hard to motivate yourself... you will find yourself wanting to lift. Testosterone is motivation in lipid form.

I will be 24 years old this week and I have lower testosterone than an average 85 year old with type 2 diabetes. Doctors claim 'normal'...

3 upvotes · 23 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

I get most of my gear through a doctor who bends the rules for cash. That's one route you could go.

If you want to skip the bullshit and just get underground lab gear, then you're going to have to do a bit more digging, but /u/GayLubeOil could probably provide you some pointers. UGL test isn't as good as pharma test, but you can get more nice things that pharmas won't have for you, like tren.

A lot of men are afraid to go on gear, but with those test levels, you don't have a choice. Really, really, really don't have a choice. Because all the advice I give you, and other ECs give you, and TRP in general gives you... it's all good stuff, but it's no use unless you follow it. And you will not be able to follow it unless you have decent male hormone levels.

So you've been thrust into a situation where you have no choice but be sick all your life, or break the law. So you're going to have to break the law. As long as you're discrete about it, the cops aren't going to care. A lot of them are on gear, too, and they know the law is bullshit. So as long as they can ignore you without endangering their jobs, that's what they are going to do.

Why are tattoos attractive on men and unattractive on women?

3 upvotes · 23 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3aiqkh/innocence_and_toughness/

Men Not "Figuring It Out For Themselves"

3 upvotes · 23 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I guess the only difference is that for one reason or another, I discovered this was total BS before I was even thirteen.

The reason you figured this out is because it wasn't boys telling you this. It was your mother and other older adults.

Men don't tell girls to be tomboys because we have no use for tomboys. Girls do tell men to be niceguys, because orbiters are useful.

In order to figure out what was really up, you had to figure out that your mother was lying about boys. In order to wake up, men had to figure out that each and every girl was lying about herself, and ignore the mockery, derision, and hate directed his way for doing the things that actually are attractive.

Do people disrespect skinny people? Is lifting the only way?

3 upvotes · 22 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

Possibly, possibly not. I have no direct knowledge of Zyz's exact cocktail. I simply think "HGH" every time a bodybuilder has heart issues. It's the most frequent culprit.

Do people disrespect skinny people? Is lifting the only way?

3 upvotes · 22 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

I personally don't think this dudes body is unnatural. To me it seems quite attainable natty but I have no experience with gear.

ts;dr: I have no experience with what I am talking about, but here's my totally uninformed opinion, because mommy told me I'm a special unique snowflake and my voice is always important.

I need advice. I feel like shit.

3 upvotes · 22 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

There is literally nothing I can say that's going to stop you from feeling like shit for a while.

What you need to do is keep reminding yourself that it's temporary.

How to tell a girl you don't wanna hear about her drama

3 upvotes · 20 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

So now whenever a woman brings up a conversation I'm not comfortable with i resort to either "this seems like a conversation that should be reserved for you and your friends to have", or "I'm sorry, this isn't a conversation I'd like to have".

Too wordy.

And never apologize unless you decide, on your own, without prompting, that you did something against your principles.

I usually go with something like:

"Bored now."

Do feminists understand the difference between not understanding feminism and not liking it?

3 upvotes · 16 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The direction of the movement overall is determined by people who are women, sure. However it's not the case that a male feminist in a debate is checking back with a female handler before he makes each point.

I have literally seen this happen while debating feminist couples.

No, You Can't Get a Fucking Neck Tattoo, Jane Marie. - Inked Magazine

3 upvotes · 16 June 2015 · /r/MensRights

Seriously, who the fuck wants to be inked by someone who isn't 100% enthusiastic about the project?

What did she ever do to deserve being called a woman?

3 upvotes · 15 June 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

One point I would disagree with is that there is no room for exploration. We have mastered one little planet which is awesome, but there is a whole universe out there to explore.

Which is cool, except it presents a few practical problems.

Number one, there's the speed of light barrier. We aren't going to get around that, so travel to other star systems within a human lifespan is not a possibility.

Secondly, there's the cost of delta-v. We live at the bottom of a giant gravity pit. It costs more to reach the moon than it does to reach mars from the moon. This is not to say we can't go... but we can only send a few.

Exploring the universe is not an option for anyone but a handful of handpicked pilots and PhDs. Unless you're her. Because, you know, vagina.

Also there will always be more scientific discoveries to be made, technologies to be developed, etc.

Sure. This is indeed a real option. Creation and invention are real adventures, and entrepaneurialism is, too. These are, however, open to many fewer men than the original adventures we evolved for. Because they require intellect and education.

The role of enterprise, innovation, and adventure hasn't just completely vanished. But it is a much more narrow doorway out of a routine, mechanized life than it once was, and fewer and fewer men can pass through it.

On sluts

3 upvotes · 13 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes, we are expanding so rapidly now that it's an ongoing challenge to bring the newcomers up to speed on the material.

On sluts

3 upvotes · 13 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think a slut can be defined as a woman who has nothing to offer but her sexuality.

Congratulations, you've discovered stuff TRP covered years ago.

https://np.reddit.com/r/RedPillWomen/comments/1j0n7t/the_slut_and_how_not_to_be_one/

How to respond to "i dont think I should meet you my friend says you're shady"

3 upvotes · 12 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

"I AM shady. Your call."

How to confront LTR about texts I found?

3 upvotes · 12 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

How can I approach confronting her about it?

There's no "confront". There's nothing to argue about. Just tell her to pack her shit and get out.

Screw her first if you want, but don't throw recriminations, because you no longer care. She's out, and that's that.

Reddit Takes Down Post About Woman-on-Man Sexual Assault

3 upvotes · 12 June 2015 · /r/MensRights

You are correct in pointing that this is a nuanced issue.

However, the problem isn't Chairman Pao having strong opinions, or even having strong and really stupid opinions. It's Chairman Pao not having the professionalism to separate those opinions from her job... or creating the appearance of such.

That's what professionalism is. It's the act of suppressing certain irrelevant parts of our personal stuff, so we can make some fuckin' money.

And removing the exact same subreddits could have been done in professional manner, with a "just the facts", neutral approach.

But one of the defining characteristics of an SJW is that they cannot pass an Ideological Turing Test, which means that they are incapable of imagining a rational person holding a position other than their own.

That is why they are able to justify to themselves the act of silencing opposition to their point of view, rather than debating it. Because to them, the act of disagreeing with them in any regard is a symptom of insanity or evil, or most often both.

Every generation or so, we get a witch hunt. Witches, Communists, anarchists, satanic ritual child abusers, racists, sexists, homosexuals, homophobes, atheists, human traffickers, rapists, drug users, whatever. The enemy doesn't matter. What matters is that self-important people gain power by "protecting" us from the threat of witches, and anyone who speaks out for sanity is accused of being a witch.

How did low SMV men (and low SMV women too, I suppose) fare during the "Free Love" of the hippie movement?

3 upvotes · 8 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Man, you're off the deep end here. We passed the point of being able to (over)feed, clothe, and shelter everyone with less than 20% of the population's labor a long time ago.

The reason we can keep everyone fed, clothed, and sheltered with relatively little labour is because we have technology, industry, infrastructure, and a complex economy.

Those things need minding.

Redpillers: explain why a woman would want to be with you

3 upvotes · 8 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Rhetorical argument is what you use to argue a case when concrete evidence is unavailable.

I have concrete evidence that women find me attractive shoved in my face every day. So constructing arguments would be superfluous. It's like making up a hypothesis when you've already conducted the experiment.

A question about the psychological effects of lifting

3 upvotes · 8 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Here's how you can get an answer to your question.

Go. Lift.

Posts or Comments With Links to AVFM Will Be Auto-Removed By Reddit

3 upvotes · 5 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Nah, if you wanna propagandize, you censor the moderates, and point at the extremists.

Of course, I don't think reddit the company is consciously doing that. They're not that smart. They're just banning manosphere sites when they happen to notice them.

Blaming feminism for your problems gets you nowhere.

3 upvotes · 5 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So, I take it from your lack of an answer that you have no idea what problems I might have.

Well, I'll give you a hint. I've got 99 of them.

Blaming feminism for your problems gets you nowhere.

3 upvotes · 5 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No, specifically. Since you're telling me what won't solve them, you must know what they are.

So cough it up. I'm all ears. Who do you think I am? What do you think I want? What makes me tick? What are my hopes, dreams, and ambitions?

You claim to understand me... so have a go. Let's hear it.

(Hold on a sec, lemme make some popcorn.)

Blaming feminism for your problems gets you nowhere.

3 upvotes · 5 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Which problems?

Blue Pill refuses to recognize the monster they created.

3 upvotes · 5 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I owe strangers zero empathy for their needs.

Thanks for that motto, by the way, it's crystallized some ideas I had floating around, variations on the philosophy of Ayn Rand and other anti-collectivist thinkers. You've helped me to realize that yes, morality is a social contract, and my only obligation to others is defined by their obligation to me. So if someone says to "I owe you nothing", that's not hostile. That's good news. Because they're telling me I owe them nothing.

If they say "I don't have to solve your problems", then I don't have to solve their problems.

If they say "I don't to care about your problems", then I never have to worry on their behalf again.

If they say "I don't have to stop what I'm doing, even if it hurts you", then they've given me permission to hurt them in order to get what I want.

Far from being a repudiation, telling me that no one outside my circle of social intimates has any responsibility to me is the best news I could have received. Because now I am free.

Thank you. I now have an idea for my next article. Now other men will know that they, too, are free to use their strength for their benefit, in any way they can get away with.

Blaming feminism for your problems gets you nowhere.

3 upvotes · 5 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You're always good for a laugh.

First you tried to tell me what BP advice works for attracting women, despite never having even tried to attract a woman.

Now you're trying to tell men what will and won't solve their problems, despite never having solved or even had these problems yourself, and indeed not even having a clear idea what they are.

Is there any other subject you've never learned that you'd like to hold forth on?

Feynman's "sum over histories" model of quantum particle behaviour? Fixed point theory as applied to computational science? The use of Fourier transforms into cosine frequency domain for jpeg compression? The role of whaling in the economy of 16th century Iceland?

Perhaps you could tell us about Martian fruit exports.

At first you annoyed me. Now I think it's kind of cute. It's like we're repainting the garage, and my five-year-old niece wants to "help" like a "big girl". Sure, my sister will be furious that there's paint in her hair, and her dress is ruined, but I can easily paint over the parts she "did all by herself", so it's no skin off my nose.

Blue Pill refuses to recognize the monster they created.

3 upvotes · 5 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I owe strangers zero sympathy for their problems.

Blue Pill refuses to recognize the monster they created.

3 upvotes · 5 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Do you think you're owed sympathy from strangers for your problems?

What problems?

I'm fine. I'm gonna keep banging sluts, pumping myself full of steroids, spending my money on me, and doing what the hell I want. In facts, all of these problems you think I have went away when I realized that strangers owe me nothing, and I owe them nothing.

The red pill might as well be a big sign saying A need in you does not create an obligation in others. A need in others does not create an obligation in you.

As soon as more men start realizing that, we can all stop getting married and having children, stop supporting women emotionally and financially, and get to work on dismantling socialism and the welfare state.

Down with implied obligations to strangers!

CMV RPW are hypocrites and I'm not a troll for calling them out

3 upvotes · 5 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Safe from what?

Red Pill Men: Do you almost exclusively date age/2 + 7 for women?

3 upvotes · 2 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

My formula is

ageofconsent <= x < theWall

What are your thoughts about the 'casting couch'?

3 upvotes · 2 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It is amazing how same facts can be interpreted wildly differently based on your worldview. You assume women choose the easy path, while feminists / progressives assume women are pushed into the more passive, lower status paths. Why do people interpret the same ideas so differently?

Because facts have to be interpreted into generalizations before they are useful.

You assume women choose the easy path

No, not quite.

I think that women have three things going on:

- They choose the easy path.
- They are tempted into the easy path.
- They are not forced out of the easy path.

The first two are easy to understand. The third is something we seldom notice.

Men don't do math because they love it. They do it because if they can't do something useful that few other people can do, no one is going to give a fuck about them, and they will die alone, hungry, and unloved, in a ditch somewhere. This isn't really much of exaggeration.

Women, however, have inherent value. They can produce children. Now, that's not why we experience loving them "just for who they are", but it is why evolution programmed us to do that. A woman doesn't have to be good at anything for people to give a fuck about her.

And she can easily increase the number of fucks people give by shaking her ass, getting naked, etc. Shaking your ass may not always be 100% fun, but it's a hell of a lot less pain than learning this.

This is why there are so few women in STEM. It is because of sexism... the inherent, unchangeable sexism in favour of women which is built into the human species. Women don't go into STEM because they don't have to. They can do just fine with a degree that isn't obtained through three to eight years of self-torture, or with no degree at all.

Women earn 77 cents for a every dollar a man earns by choice. Because men will just give them the other 23 cents. Men are biologically programmed to do this.

Hamplanet ruining my SMV at work

3 upvotes · 1 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

problem started when i was running a 12 hour shift

Don't make excuses. Excuses are for the weak. You fucked up. Learn from this. Never share personal information with someone who hasn't earned your trust.

Back on subject, how do I damage control this situation as I already got a chick on my leash, yet if she was hears that I'm a virgin it might ruin the whole thing. How do I counter this rumor spreading out.

You don't. You treat it as a shit test. Agree and amplify.

Grin while agreeing that you are a virgin. Tell outrageous, obvious lies playing up how inexperienced you are.

People will wonder if you are a virgin or not, or if that's a lie, too. People will also see that you don't care about what they heard or what they think. Just about anything is survivable if you remain visibly unrattled.

And, hey, dumbass... never fuck anyone from work unless you are in a position of fuck you.

RPW are you comfortable discussing sex and sexuality? BPW are you?

3 upvotes · 31 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

DARVO.

Deny. Attack. Reverse Victim and Offender.

"A woman can never love a man the way he desires to be loved." Tell me males of Red Pill, what kind of love were you daydreaming of when female love failed you?

3 upvotes · 31 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't actually desire to be loved that way.

I don't want to be loved unconditionally. It is the conditions of love that drive me to excel. I don't want to be loved no matter what. I want to be loved because my attributes inspire it.

I don't want to be loved "just because I am me". I want to be loved because I am awesome. Unconditional love is a fantasy that would turn to nightmare if it were realized.

A question for the females. what do you find attractive in a man?

3 upvotes · 30 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't think that's precisely what she was trying to teach with all the removing-her-dress-and-backing-towards-me-on-all-fours, no...

How many sexual partners makes a female unattractive for marriage?

3 upvotes · 29 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because it demonstrates how much effort a man is willing to expend for them. One could achieve the same effect by setting fire to a stack of hundreds, except women can't wear a pile of ashes and show it off to all their friends.

Am I fucked for life?

3 upvotes · 28 May 2015 · /r/askTRP

If you learned English on your own, you can pick up a task and stick to it.

That's all you need to get started.

"On men, women and r/TheRedPill"

3 upvotes · 28 May 2015 · /r/MensRights

Standard algorithm for TRP-bashing:

1. Read some stuff.
2. Strip all the nuance and detail out.
3. Iterate the bastardized version.
4. Claim that it "overgeneralizes" (I.e., lacks nuance and detail.)

YouTube official gives in to Feminist agenda, there is now a "Leading Women" section on the PopularOnYouTube list.

3 upvotes · 28 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Exactly.

It doesn't matter what women can do, only what women will do. And what does anyone, man or women, actually do?

1. What they must.
 2. What they think they will get cookies for.
 3. What they have gotten cookies for in the past.
 4. Fuck-all else.
- Women don't need to create. There goes #1.
 - Women don't need to create to get cookies. There goes #2.
 - Because #2 is gone, #3 goes away, too.
 - What does that leave us with?

Female creators, where they exist, are the rare exception, and they are celebrated not just for what they did, but for doing it while female (because female creators are rare). For every Mary Shelley, there are dozens of Lord Byrons.

Not so surprisingly, we often find that women who achieve or create something were either ugly, or had an unhappy childhood... because if you raise a woman without free cookies (metaphor for attention or whatever), if she doesn't believe she has high inherent value, she will sometimes try to achieve some.

Nikita Coulombe on portrayal of men in the media: why there needs to be a reverse Bechdel test

3 upvotes · 28 May 2015 · /r/MensRights

Shawshank Redemption. Aliens. Spare Parts. The Prestige. Apollo 13.

There's a fair amount. Remember that the shared goal doesn't have to main plot of the movie. It can be a five minute scene where a man helps another one fix his car.

"On men, women and r/TheRedPill"

3 upvotes · 27 May 2015 · /r/MensRights

Example: when a group of men go camping, they don't organize themselves into a competitive hierarchy. No one is appointed leader or "alpha male." Agreement is reached through consensus. Individual rights are respected. Different tasks are allocated to different people based on competency. The overall tendency is toward cooperation and fairness.

Precisely.

Men only start throwing each other under a bus when women are present.

Because MRAs attempt to appeal to sympathy of the voting population at large, especially women, they are tempted to throw TRP under a bus because it will get them "woman-friendly" points. Which you then go on give an excellent example of:

I personally oppose R/P (despite agreeing with some of their overall arguments) is that they ENCOURAGE excessive competition between males. They divide males into alpha and beta based on the sexual selection criteria of modern women. That in itself is "beta" and fundamentally gynocentric.

They have chauvinistic literature on the sidebar, such as "women -- the oldest teenagers in the house." They embrace far-right wing politics, which disempower men even more than feminism. And they glamourize strict hierarchical models.

If you are really in favour of being cooperative, rather than competitive and throwing others under a bus, perhaps you might start by listening while we articulate our beliefs, instead of articulating our beliefs TO us. This is textbook character assassination... promoting the understanding of a group ONLY through the propaganda of those who oppose it.

Your reservoir of compassion and understanding for men seems to run dry very quickly indeed when it's convenient for avoiding cognitive dissonance.

"On men, women and r/TheRedPill"

3 upvotes · 27 May 2015 · /r/MensRights

I think the reason why a majority of us ended up on TRP (including myself) is because we were the beta men. We had these problems. We had bad behaviors. And we knew how it ended up treating us.

Not only that, the only thing that we have seen successfully drive men through all the barriers of fear and social shaming to become bold and assertive is shame at losing and failing.

Beta-shaming isn't mindless hate for someone weaker than us. Instead, in the same way that fat-shaming is a desperate attempt to get hamplanets to stop with the cake already, mocking beta behaviours is our last-ditch attempts to save our fellow men from a life of misery and bewilderment.

If we "accept" them the way they are, they will continue doing what they did. And many or most of us know firsthand just how awful that is for them.

Can you explain the anger phase ? (part 2)

3 upvotes · 27 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

https://np.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/35qpzl/anger_debt/

Is Blue Pill advice really bad ?

3 upvotes · 27 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, absolutely. Because I didn't bother to ask myself what your purpose was. Doesn't matter.

The moment you started talking about the whether the advice was good or not, I tuned out. Because that's the point. You have zero experience in this. You are, demographically, someone who isn't even capable of gaining that experience.

So don't bother telling me what you think. You're a blind person telling me what me what you think of Picasso's early work.

"Yes, I particularly admire the way he uses colors here."... "Yo, Ray Charles, the paintings are over here. That's the restroom door you're in front of."

What is a man's legitimate and effective defense against a mattress carrier?

3 upvotes · 27 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Write this in lipstick on your bathroom mirror and read it every day until you understand.

Human mating behaviour is instinctive. You cannot change it with laws.

Human mating behaviour is instinctive. You cannot change it with laws.

Human mating behaviour is instinctive. You cannot change it with laws.

All you can do with laws is criminalize what people are doing anyway. This does not "protect men from false accusations". It makes every false accusation true by default.

It amounts to a bill of attainder against any man who is not celibate.

So, no, we ain't gonna go for that. Take your poison cupcakes and peddle them somewhere else.

Girl I recently slept with for the first time invited me over, i agree, now she reveals shes on her period.

3 upvotes · 26 May 2015 · /r/askTRP

If she's on her period, stick it in her mouth. Or just lay down a towel if messy doesn't bother you.

Now, mind you, some women don't like period sex. Makes 'em feel gross and self-conscious. Usually, those women are just fine with blowing you, though. Allows them to give you what you want without feeling all gross.

What MRA's could (and Should) learn from Gamergate (xpost)

3 upvotes · 26 May 2015 · /r/MensRights

I believe his statement was more about the realm of possibility than it not being PC to state something. Statistically, it's impossible for all women to be psychopaths as they make up >1% of the general population, and only ~1% of the general population is a psychopath.

Semantics.

You are creating a false equivalence between "people who are diagnosed as psychopaths by professionals", and "people whom /u/_pluto_ would diagnose as a psychopath".

If /u/_pluto_ would call any women who can or won't empathize with the suffering of male strangers a psychopath, that his choice of how to define the word. This does not mean that there must be only 1% of these in the population, because a psychiatrist, making a subjective choice as to whether or not someone is a "psychopath", would not necessarily even pick up on that incapacity, much less regard it as sufficient in and of itself for a diagnosis.

I am incapable of empathizing with spiders. Does that make me a psychopath? Among the general population, no. But hardcore vegans or Jainists might consider me so.

Semantics.

All that really matters is whether women, en masse, can, with a realistic amount of effort, be persuaded to care about the suffering of male strangers who are an abstraction to them (that is, they are not personally seeing the men).

Is AWALT totally useless?

3 upvotes · 24 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If a gun is insulted that I assume it's loaded and refrain from pointing it at my head, then the sooner it is nowhere near me, the better.

Doesn't female red pill sexual strategy consist of obtaining as many beta male orbiters are possible?

3 upvotes · 23 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Depends on the female.

Women have a dual-track mating strategy. Alpha fucks, beta pays. Which track she spends more time cultivating depends on what she needs and what her priorities are.

Just as every man becomes a brigand if he is hungry enough, so too does every woman become a whore.

This Student Union Officer Could Lose Her Job After Posting "#KillAllWhiteMen" On Facebook - BuzzFeed News

3 upvotes · 22 May 2015 · /r/MensRights

Except "Diversity" doesn't mean diversity. It's leftist code for "brown people in, white people out; women in, men out; gays in, heterosexuals out".

If she's fired, it won't be for being a hateful bitch, or for "clearly not getting it". It will be for giving away the game.

And "game" is exactly what it is. These people don't literally want to kill someone. They can't imagine killing someone. They are too sheltered to even have the stomach to kill an animal they plan to eat. No, they are simply drunk with power, because they have finally succeeded in creating a society where their weakness, whining and malingering is actually a route to influence, instead of way to get cast out and shunned, as it would be in any decent civilization.

RedPillars : What should a woman do if her husband doesn't want to have sex with her ?

3 upvotes · 21 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Depends why.

Evidence of plot by 13 girls to frame boy as serial rapist: "this is going to be so much fun", "we should sacrifice him to Satan". He has been in prison for one year now

3 upvotes · 20 May 2015 · /r/MensRights

Yes, by all means, let the feminists control the discourse. Maybe if you're mind-mannered and self-effacing enough, they might call you a misogynist less often.

You might even get a treat!

Good boy!

Alright BPers! I'm open to your ideas - step up and show me what you got! :)

3 upvotes · 17 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yeah, it was pretty crazy.

There have actually been a few schisms within the group over the years, which is less surprising than one might think, if you really stop and think about it.

Take a culture that tries to kill off masculinity and almost succeeds. Then have a small group of 100 men or so get together and try to resuscitate, and in some case reinvent, it. Then have other men come flooding in by the thousands.

There have been some pretty big arguments about what men are, or should be.

Is feminism slowly dying ?

3 upvotes · 14 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The parasite only dies as quickly as the host.

So, why do you "hate" women ?

3 upvotes · 14 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You're funny.

You seem flat-out fascinated by redpill men, but you don't seem to know how to engage with us without a chip on your shoulder. It's like you only understand how to put words together by their literal meanings, and are totally oblivious to the implications and overtones of what you are saying.

You're not going to get a concise list of grievances this way. Why not?

Because the men you are talking to realize that complaining to women is, by and large, a waste of breath. There's no point in talking to someone who doesn't give a crap about your problems.

Men have, instead, chosen to respond intelligently and tactically, by not giving a crap about women's problems. There's no sense asking us for a list of demands, as if this were the start of a negotiation. We're not a torchbearing mob at your door. We are an audience that has lost interest and left the theatre.

If a torchbearing mob shows up at your door, you can ask them what you did.

If your audience leaves the theatre, you have to ask yourself what you didn't do.

Why is Feminism considered to be about equality?

3 upvotes · 13 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

As I suspected you would.

And while that dig was somewhat flippant, it reflects a public awareness of a more substantive point. To wit, feminism has lost credibility to the extent that many people no longer trust feminists to be honest or consistent about what feminism is or what its goals are.

The public is beginning to understand that feminism must be understood by observing its actions, not listening to its words.

Why I Gave Up a $95,000 Job to Move to an Island and Scoop Ice Cream

3 upvotes · 5 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Precisely. It's not women lacking intelligence, it's women lacking ambition.

This is because ambition is instilled by the knowledge that without achievement, one will be valued as nothing. Women don't have that, because they can do nothing and still be valued.

From a nerdy asian kid to...fighting teenagers and bottling people!?

3 upvotes · 1 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you didn't like his solution, you should have provided one of your own before he had to do this.

That's the thing with you blue pill types. No matter how miserable a man is, you're okay with that... until he starts fighting back.

Why should this guy give a fuck what you think, when you are only concerned about him, and never for him?

From a nerdy asian kid to...fighting teenagers and bottling people!?

3 upvotes · 1 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's because our social mores are set by women, and solely by women.

Women fear violence, and are unwilling to acknowledge that there are such things as "fighting words".

Protein World advert: Formal investigation launched into 'beach body ready' campaign, all advertising ceased.

3 upvotes · 1 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

See, people are motivated by self-interest first and foremost. There is so much money and political clout to be earned from jumping on the "Save Women" bandwagon that no sensible gladiator of the public arena dares speak against it. They'd be flayed alive in seconds if they did.

This trend will only reverse itself if someone can come up with a way to introduce male issues into the discussion that both makes them money/political clout AND which doesn't result in career suicide.

Honestly, I don't think there is such a way

There is.

This is a bubble. Sooner or later, it will burst. Someone will say "We're sick of this bullshit", and millions and millions of marginalized white heterosexual men will say "Yeah", in unison.

But the thing about bubbles is that you can't make them burst, and you can't predict when they will. You just know that it's going to happen.

That means we can't buy in (because the bubble is going to burst), but we also can't sell short (because we don't know when it will burst, and it's going to keep inflating until it does). So the move is to stay out.

As you say:

Eventually, those beggars in the crumbling world will HAVE to come to us with respect and deference instead of self-righteous sermons and banal admonitions. They'll come to us with money, and gifts, and a quiet respect for all of our hard-earned skills which they took for granted.

The only question is whether there will be anything left by the time this happens.

Is this rape?

3 upvotes · 22 April 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Of course it's rape. Everything that involves a penis is rape. Didn't you get the memo?

I Think I'm Going to Leave my Wife...

3 upvotes · 17 April 2015 · /r/askTRP

Is it bad to divorce over the phone?

Divorce isn't you talking to her. It's you talking to a divorce lawyer.

Do that first. Go along with whatever maximum hardball game plan your lawyer has.

The first she should know about this is when she gets the papers. Bitch like that, she's only going to use any sort of warning you give her to try to screw you.

You're in ambush mode now. Collect evidence, work with your lawyer, hide assets unless for some reason he thinks that's a bad idea.

Remember Briffault's Law. Once a woman no longer hopes to derive future benefit from your association, she not only no longer loves you, she is no longer your friend. She will do anything and everything she can to screw you if there is one iota of benefit in it for her.

Feminists try to make big list of the 'real' reasons people don't want to be feminists by detailing what they "really mean". They still COMPLETELY miss the mark.

3 upvotes · 10 April 2015 · /r/MensRights

Apparently "no means no" to sex, but not to feminism.

Are males who claim to support diversity believed?

3 upvotes · 9 April 2015 · /r/MensRights

War is Peace.

Freedom is Slavery.

Ignorance is Strength.

Diversity is Homogeneity of Thought.

Men in the U.S. special ops forces are skeptical that women can meet the physical and mental demands of the job; they fear lowered standards for women

3 upvotes · 8 April 2015 · /r/MensRights

Fallacy of Composition.

Question for the RP'ers. Would it be correct to say that you entire sub and a majority of its subtext is directed entirely at American's? And are you aware of what that might mean for the rest of the world that finds you here?

3 upvotes · 7 April 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Basically, women were once treated like property and slaves

Hahahahahahahaahhhhhheeeeeehheeeeeesnort.

Good one.

Oh, wait, you're serious.

Let me laugh even harder.

if this makes me a misogynist, wouldnt it also make women(majority) misandrism?

3 upvotes · 3 April 2015 · /r/MensRights

Scumbag OP:

Complains about character assassination:

Anyways it seems that every time I express these same views in other subreddits I always end up being ambushed by the annoying majority of the SJWs in this site. They give me truckloads of downvotes, hateful speeches and labeling me a misogynist.

Engages in character assassination:

Some even go as far as telling me that I spend too much time reading bullshit from /r/theredpill[2] . Like seriously, do I actually sound like I waste my time reading the ignorance coming from those virgin losers that suck at life?

The Red Pill Hamster, part Two.

3 upvotes · 26 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Please try not to speculate where you do not have evidence.

Zyzz took a whole lot of steroids, and a whole lot of party drugs, and died in precisely the sort of manner that people die who do a lot of party drugs and no steroids at all.

Do you think GLO and I wouldn't know if we were damaging our health? I have regular comprehensive bloodwork run, and since starting the roids I am healthier, much healthier, not just on this or that scale, but on every single indicator of cardiac, and metabolic health. I suspect the case is much the same with GLO.

People who think high levels of testosterone analogues will kill you are exhibiting a fear reaction to the unfamiliar and the unpopular, not making a sound judgement based on data. It slightly reminds of how in the seventies and eighties everyone thought eating fat would make you fat. So they shunned the healthy thing like the plague, and ate the poison, instead.

I'd be much more afraid for the health of someone with low testosterone than someone with unnaturally elevated levels.

Women are fake. Beauty is in the bones.

3 upvotes · 23 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Look at this, and you never even be able to find her physically attractive again.

Growing up Beta: Dealing with Disrespect from High School Friends

3 upvotes · 21 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Self-respect would be simply cutting these men out of my life. They bring nothing to the table. They have no utility to me. All they do is hold me back. I'm not man enough to straight up say to them: "I no longer want to maintain a relationship of any kind with you", nor do I think that would be a smart idea in a small town where word gets around. But this sub has made me realize to cut toxic people out of your life; both men and women. I'm thinking of doing a soft next with these two. Maybe we can be friends in the future, as equals, but right now it is clear they see me as beneath them, and there is no way to have a self-respecting relationship with someone who believes themselves to be better than you.

Very well said.

The way I put it is "Never get in a competition that doesn't have a prize for the winner". Yes, if you were some sort of ideal uber-mensch, you could hold frame, out AMOG your AMOG high school friend, and just generally be awesome.

But why? There's no prize if you win other than "not getting picked on". You can get that just by spending your time with people who make your life better, not worse.

- Just as you gain nothing from trying to lift a weight that is too heavy, people who always try to break you down are not your friends.
- Just as you gain nothing lifting a weight that is too light, people who never put any pressure on you at all are not your friends either.
- Your friends are the people who test you just enough to help you grow.

Updated Glossary of Terms and Acronyms

3 upvotes · 17 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Suggest removing AFC, it's old-stype PUA terminology, used in /r/seduction (at least the last time I read that ball of uselessness it was), but not in TRP.

Question for Redpillers - does this affiliation affect how you might think about veganism?

3 upvotes · 17 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

To be fair, we are animals (genus) but we are the rational (differentia) animal. The point being that we aren't just bags of instinct-driven, hormonally-controlled meat. We have a mind.

That forebrain drives certain human behaviours a great deal.

But the sexual ones, not at all.

BP: Given the choice between having romantic relations with someone IRL who browses r/TheRedPill or r/foreveralone, who would you choose?

3 upvotes · 17 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It did from a slightly different angle.

See, you see the average RP reader as someone who's going to ignore what you personally want, whether you tell him honestly or not, and instead assume you "really want" some boilerplate stuff he read on the internet somewhere.

That's because you are looking at this from the perspective of the woman. In other words, you are imagining one interaction, you + him.

But if you imagine it from the perspective of the man (if you can), you'd be think about many interactions with different women. And so what he is being told is two things:

1. Try things like this. We (group of experienced "players") have found that this behaviour increased the number of women who were attracted to us, and some other behaviour decreased it.
2. Don't rely on what individual women say about what they like, we have observed a great many women saying they liked a thing, and then actually responding very badly to that thing, but responding well to the exact opposite. And we have observed very few women giving accurate and explicit instructions to making them melt.

So, he goes and acts accordingly. Things don't go well, well, on to the next one. Experiment and learn.

In my experience there seems to be a very specific reason why women don't like the idea of men doing this.

Women Now Empowered By Everything A Woman Does (Satire from the onion)

3 upvotes · 17 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

You: Yes it is. Well from a distance I guess. I have better moves off the dance floor anyway.

I'm actually not crazy about this response. The intent is right (go sexual early), but it comes off as somewhat thirsty. You want to make her earn the penis, not just offer it to her.

I'd go with:

- Oh, so that's it, then? You don't have any others?
- Others too embarrassing. then? That's okay.
- Okay, then, just give me a moment to work out your final score.

or the nuclear option:

- Alright, then, step aside, you're blocking my view.

The most important two videos you will ever watch.

3 upvotes · 16 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Even if you don't, it's totally worth it. Knowing exactly how and why this happens lends a new understanding and urgency to the problem.

Tell me how to stop wasting time and energy rehashing my recent breakup over and over

3 upvotes · 9 March 2015 · /r/askTRP

Here's how oneitis happens.

What we call infatuation is a chemical pair bonding process. Its purpose is to stick a man and a woman together, not for life, but until the kid is old enough to walk, or, at the very least, until the pregnancy is over.

But oneitis isn't "infatuation with your partner". It's "infatuation with someone who isn't". Why does this happen?

Your brain is unable to tell the difference between fantasy and reality.

If you think about someone all the time, fantasizing about being with them, the same chemical process gets rolling. Except just in you, not in her, because the version of her you're in an LTR with exists only in your head. Your fantasy woman loves you, the real woman does not.

So, you must interrupt thoughts of her, or of being with her, when they occur. Interrupt them with thoughts of something else, or with thoughts of other women. Multiple other women.

Have sex with several other women if you are advanced enough to the point where you can get sex without too much of a struggle. If not, flirt with multiple other women, have sex with several different prostitutes, etc.

If you must masturbate and fantasize, be sure to do it about women different from her, and about a different woman each time.

The second most frequent cause of oneitis is onegina. (The most frequent being nogina.) Whatever stage of intimacy, physical or otherwise, you can get to with women (I am not expecting you to be a pussy slayer at this stage), get there with multiple women. Take every opportunity to show your subconscious how many different women there are in the world.

Do not keep mementoes of her. No letters, no pictures, nothing. Do not speak to her, and do not speak of her. Delete her phone number, avoid mutual friends, at least for a long while.

And seriously, dude... whores. Nothing will take that pussy off the pedestal faster than getting laid quick and easy for 50 - 200 dollars.

How does TRP explain happy feminist relationships that last?

3 upvotes · 7 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Are you willing to concede that all of TRP "field reports" and other anecdotal evidence is useless as well?

They are useless as evidence, but not as a source of hypotheses. This is an important distinction.

See, a Field Report is useless as evidence to convince you of anything. But that's not the purpose they serve to me. To me, they are reports of something that I should test myself. "Someone tried this, and it worked. I should try it, and see if it does."

The source of confusion here is that TBP subscribers think that /r/theredpill is a proselytizing group. That we want to convince you of anything. We don't, really. I'm happy to explain what I think when you ask, but I don't need you to believe it.

Because it's there for me to use in my life. That purpose does not require either your belief or your permission.

So, no, Field Reports should not convince you of anything. That's not what they are for.

I was simply seeing if you all are capable of recognizing that relationships without redpill power dynamics can lead to a couple's happiness.

The "red pill" isn't a metaphor for a set of procedures. It's a metaphor for "cynical realism about sex and mating". It means "use your eyes, without trying to be politically correct".

In this case, I can't use my eyes. Because I can't examine this thing you are telling me about. Maybe it works, maybe it doesn't. Maybe it works, but one of you is really in charge. Maybe you are a clever labrador retriever that has learned to type with its nose. I don't know.

Do I understand human sexuality entirely? No. But do I understand enough to know that I'd better not take people's word for it, especially when it agrees with the cultural zeitgeist? Yes.

The parable of the lampshade doesn't mean "you are wrong". It means "I can't comment on what I can't see".

A recent article reviewed by Science Alert claims that a "Study says that men are more narcissistic than women" and "Especially when it comes to entitlement."

3 upvotes · 6 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Did they observe behaviour, or use a questionnaire?

How does TRP explain happy feminist relationships that last?

3 upvotes · 6 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

By telling you the story of the lampshade.

Why do Redpillers tend to desire multiple casual partners as opposed to a stable long term girlfriend? Just curious

3 upvotes · 3 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women have no control over whether men around them are sex-worthy.

Men have no control over whether women around them are relationship-worthy.

Feminist perspective on tricky consent/sexual ethics issues

3 upvotes · 2 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

According to the prevailing sentiment in TRP, feminists like Halley don't exist.

TRP is a discussion group, so none of us can speak for it. But, speaking for myself, the problem isn't that "feminists like Halley don't exist". The problem is that feminists like Halley still want people like me to fuck off and die, and give zero fucks about the civil rights of me or anyone like me.

From the article:

American racial history is laced with vendetta-like scandals in which black men are accused of sexually assaulting white women that become reverse scandals when it is revealed that the accused men were not wrongdoers at all... racially exploitative evasions of responsibility by white women... Similar dynamics affect gay men, lesbians, and trans individuals: being attracted to them can so shock some people that the easiest way back to equanimity is to attack them.

She has just gone down a laundry list of the typical leftoid "good" demographics, showing sympathy for each one. Later on, she backhandedly points out just who the enemy is:

committing the legal system to supporting... white middle-class assumptions

To the extent that the campus-sexual-assault movement expresses the priorities and visions of white middle-class women, it may not be providing us with everything we need to know to make fair decisions in cases involving class, race, and other key differences.

In other words "white middle class" women need to be sensitive to the needs of "race and class" differences.

But notably absent is any remark about input from men. Not gay men, not transmen, not black men, not poor men, but just plain men.

Men are half the human race. Men are one half of any normal sexual interaction. And still there has not been word one from the feminist camp about their understandings of sexual interaction being valid, their needs being important, their perceptions being part of what we wish to normalize our sexual mores on.

Halley wishes to be more "inclusive" in whom the white female master race has to consider when unilaterally establishing sexual mores, and enforcing them with decades-old prison sentences and other permanent life-altering consequences. She wishes them to include other voices in the discussion... but the voices of other leftoid master races: "PoCs", the underclass, homosexuals, and so on. But only them.

She acknowledges that feminism has ceased to be a protest movement, and become the reigning power. But she stops short of the realization that when you are the leader, you must hear all voices. She is simply rearranging the chairs in the leftist tent, a voice in the debate of which of the core constituencies will be served.

A consistent and workable definition of what is rape and what is non-consent, and what sexual signals are to be used, will not ever be achieved until men's understanding of these topics becomes one of the major inputs to the equation.

Until feminists are willing, not just to allow that to happen, but to work to make it happen, I will oppose anything else they try to do.

Student Loan Non-Repayment

3 upvotes · 1 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

It's not about rational decisions, it's about possession of information necessary to make those decisions.

18 year olds have fully-developed cognitive faculties. There's nothing developmentally incomplete with their reasoning mechanisms. So why are they functionally so abysmally stupid? Even when they are smart?

Because we live in a culture that runs on propaganda. We systematically and deliberately lie, on a large scale, about fundamental aspects of our culture. Children believe what they are told. And when they develop into cognitive adults, which can happen as young as 13ish, or as old as 16, they are often difficult to distinguish from the child-state because their heads are packed with years worth of lies.

And not just any lies. There are relatively harmless lies, like "Jesus loves you", and there are harmful lies, like "A college degree will get you ahead in life".

Essentially, 18 year olds are vulnerable to this shit, not because they aren't adults, but because they are adults who haven't taken a red pill yet. It is only through getting burned that they detox.

The next one of you assholes to post some shit about this or that movie was redpill, bluepill, whatever... gets permabanned.

3 upvotes · 27 February 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

♂

You get it. The red pill is a metaphor for seeing reality. You don't see reality through fiction, unless you are using it to see the author.

The only motivation in fiction that it makes any sense to talk about is that of the author.

Enjoy fiction, but don't look to it for truth.

If TRP wasn't as hateful as it is, people would be more accepting of the truths.

3 upvotes · 26 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's the whole idea. TRP isn't for women. It's for men.

Yesterday, my male feminist coworker basically told me that men need to settle for ugly chicks.

3 upvotes · 22 February 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Do you have a specific problem with learning from men? Would you prefer that women be found to teach the same lessons?

Yesterday, my male feminist coworker basically told me that men need to settle for ugly chicks.

3 upvotes · 22 February 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

It's sad you think women need to be instructed on living

Wait, so women emerge from the womb able to drive cars, hold down a job, and balance a checkbook?

That must make infancy kinda boring.

A reply to misandrist posts, which you could use yourself.

3 upvotes · 16 February 2015 · /r/MensRights

Expecting crazy people to listen to reason is in itself crazy.

Older Men of TRP - What's Your Thoughts On This Situation?

3 upvotes · 3 February 2015 · /r/askTRP

Chump alert.

Why do you "owe" her for "letting" you have something she has had all along... reproductive rights?

She didn't give you anything. She threatened to make you a parent, without your permission, and then didn't carry through on her threat when you bribed her with cash and prizes.

She blackmailed you. And most insidiously of all, she did it by implication, dropping hints until you volunteered the payoff, thus leaving her with plausible deniability.

I know I'm being incredibly selfish

The only wise thing I ever heard any psychologist say was that guilt is suppressed resentment. You are subconsciously aware that she fucked you over. It just doesn't enter into your conscious mind, because you are unable to articulate how.

And you resent her for fucking you over. This free-floating resentment is what is really causing your feelings of guilt. You are angry at someone for no reason you are aware of, so you must be a bad person.

Except you aren't.

Because resenting an extortionist is perfectly reasonable.

Extortion (also called shakedown, outwrestling, and exaction) is a criminal offense of obtaining money, property, or services from a person, entity, or institution, through coercion. Refraining from doing harm is sometimes euphemistically called protection. Extortion is commonly practiced by organized crime groups. The actual obtainment of money or property is not required to commit the offense. Making a threat of violence which refers to a requirement of a payment of money or property to halt future violence is sufficient to commit the offense. Exaction refers not only to extortion or the unlawful demanding and obtaining of something through force,[1] but additionally, in its formal definition, means the infliction of something such as pain and suffering or making somebody endure something unpleasant.[2]

Extortion is distinguished from robbery. In robbery, whether armed or not, the offender takes property from the victim by the immediate use of force or fear that force will be immediately used (as in the classic line, "Your money or your life.") Extortion, which is not limited to the taking of property, involves the verbal or written instillation of fear that something will happen to the victim if they do not comply with the extortionist's will. Another key distinction is that extortion always involves a verbal or written threat, whereas robbery does not. In United States federal law, extortion can be committed with or without the use of force and with or without the use of a weapon.

Guardian: "What happened when I confronted my cruellest troll". I'm not sure I believe this story, it's all so neat and twee, and the "troll" (a man) solves his "problems" by becoming feminised.

3 upvotes · 3 February 2015 · /r/MensRights

Troll: I'm going to find out where you live, and then I'm coming to rape you.

Me: Well, shit, the kitchen's a disaster and I haven't vacuumed in weeks. Can we put this off until Friday? I should be ready for company by then.

Yep, that's Handling Shit Tests 101a: "Laugh it off", with a twist of 101b: "Agree and amplify".

Trolling is really just another shit test.

The difference between someone who is debating you, and a troll, is that the debater's contest with you is in the content of the dialogue, while the troll's contest with you is in the process of the dialogue. A troll could not possibly care less if he wins the debate, or even makes an ounce of sense, because those are content-level traits of communication. A troll wants something out of the process of communication, either legitimization via being taken seriously by you, revenge by getting you upset, making you look petty by getting you to play their childish game, whatever.

Trolls must be handled by denying them the communication process that they desire. Ignoring them, laughing at them, mocking them, satirizing them; this kills the troll. The the trick is to show them and everyone else that you do not take them seriously.

This is not only how one handles SpamhoodAcademy, but also feminists.

While I approve in principle of your work, and certainly don't wish to seem ungrateful for efforts made on my behalf, I do think that your habit of confronting feminists with facts and reason may be a tactical misstep.

Personally, I thought the heavy drinking and hysterical laughter was a big improvement.

I have seen a 33 year old Hispanic man, an Iraq war veteran who had served three tours and had become an outspoken critic of our presence there, be lectured about patriarchy by an affluent 22 year old white liberal arts college student...

3 upvotes · 30 January 2015 · /r/MensRights

The left is eating itself. Someone crack the champagne.

What are your thoughts on this TwoX post?

3 upvotes · 29 January 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

My thoughts are that I once had a lampshade next to me start mysteriously moving for no reason.

If I were a superstitious person, I might conclude that a ghost was doing it. Then I might tell this story to someone else, who was a skeptic:

"The lampshade next to me just started MOVING and NOTHING WAS TOUCHING IT. How do you explain THAT, Mr. Skeptic? Huh? Huh?"

... and my skeptical friend would have a few choices, none of them acceptable:

1. Come up with unverifiable guesses as to what else might have caused it.
2. Call me a liar, and suffer the social consequences of that accusation.
3. Submit to my underhanded rhetorical trick, and "admit" that ghosts might exist.

Since I am, myself, or a skeptical bent, I looked around for an explanation and soon found the heating vent which was causing hot air to rise and gently shake the lampshade.

But someone who was not personally there would have no chance to find that fact if I did not find it for him.

This is why hearsay is inadmissible in court, and why scientists reject anecdotal evidence.

Because a story packaged through one viewpoint is not the same as a set of facts which can be examined. This makes them useless, both singly and in aggregate, for forming conclusions. They are only useful for giving hints as to what to investigate.

If I have a hypothesis, I only have a responsibility to test it. I do not have a responsibility to defend it from anything.

And if my hypothesis passes some tests, and generates a theoretical model, then I must defend it, but only against evidence. Anecdotes are not evidence.

The word "evidence" comes from latin roots meaning "that which is seen". If I cannot examine something for myself, it's not evidence. It's just a story.

Where do you draw the line between narcissism and the normal human desire to be validated and loved?

3 upvotes · 10 January 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Narcissism" is a widely misused term. In fact, it's probably not understood by most anyone who uses it, and not used by most anyone who understands it.

Colloquial "narcissism" means nothing. It's a term that literally has no meaning. What pop psychology calls "narcissistic behaviour" is behaviour which pretty much everyone occasionally engages in.

Clinical "narcissism" is a thing, but it's actually the worst-ever name for a mental disorder since anything anywhere, because clinical "narcissism" is the exact opposite of the meaning of the term. Clinical narcissism is not excessive self-love. It is an elaborate masking behaviour engaged in by people who were emotionally abused and/or neglected in childhood, causing them to form the core belief that they are inherently unlovable. This causes them to go to great efforts to project a flawless public image, in the effort to present a fake self that they believe can be loved by others.

Of course, TBP readers, who are not generally in the habit of arguing in good faith, usually don't know whether or not they have ever met an actual case of narcissistic personality disorder, and usually don't care what it means. What they do know is that they hate having the light of cynicism shone upon love and relationships, and the word "narcissist" is just the latest weapon they have tried in an effort to bring the comforting darkness back.

Like political campaign committee in heated election, they're just trying out slurs and accusations to see what resonates with the voting public. If this one seems to work, they'll keep repeating it. Otherwise, they'll move on to something else.

Can we establish a clear objective for this sub? Are we a safe place for men to discuss marriage or should we move over to /r/trp?

3 upvotes · 23 December 2014 · /r/MarriedRedPill

Men can't TALK their way into being captain; they need to ACT.

Or, more specifically, one cannot be a leader by trying to talk people into accepting one's leadership... because this is asking permission to lead.

One must simply lead, and allow others to either follow, or get off the train.

Q & A on basic TRP premise. Everyone welcome to chime in.

3 upvotes · 22 December 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I find it very interesting that after telling me that the concept of "alpha/beta" had been scientifically debunked, you would appeal to the concept of codependence, which:

- Was pretty much invented by a religious cult (AA) with no scientific qualifications to speak of.
- Isn't even scientific enough to be false, because the concept makes no testable predictions.

Additionally, you should probably be clear that you are using the term "homeostasis" in metaphorical sense, since as a scientific term it refers to a negative feedback loop which keeps bodily chemistry (salinity, pH, etc) in balance.

Also, if you wish to measure mating success by mating stability, you should probably explain why modern first world societies, which are making great efforts to erase gender roles and make men and women act the same, have divorce rates at or around 50%. Also, why marriages where the man is ten or more years older than the woman seem to be the most stable.

Q & A on basic TRP premise. Everyone welcome to chime in.

3 upvotes · 22 December 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Your "alpha" is actually "dad".

It was a metaphor in the first place. One doesn't debunk a metaphor, because it's not something that is either true or false. It explains, by analogy, an idea that is either true or false.

The context I was asking about was not wolves but metaphors.

The whole reason people thought that wolves had socially dominant and socially submissive pack members is because they were anthropomorphizing the wolves, making the mistake of assuming they were like humans. Humans emphatically do have socially dominant and socially submissive pack members, and furthermore have behavioural scripts for each.

To summarize what the actual meaning of alpha and beta, for the consensus of longtime TRP discussion participants:

- They are really behaviours, not people. Calling a person alpha is verbal shorthand for "this person habitually engages successfully in socially dominant behaviour".
- They exist as a continuous variable, not a toggle switch.
- They are context-dependent.
- Beta is associated with being controlled by the opinions, desires, feelings or demands of others.
- Alpha is associated with our feelings, desires, opinions and demands controlling the actions of others.
- Alpha is also associated with being resistant to control by the opinions, desires, feelings or demands of others.

It is my personal opinion that this is the aspect of alpha behaviour which is most attractive to women. (Women like power players, but they also like free spirits who wield little power over others, but of whom others wield none over them.)

- Alpha behaviours generally increase attraction in females who witness them. Beta behaviours generally decrease attraction (although they can increase comfort, and successful mating often requires a little of that as well).
- The alpha/beta scale is NOT synonymous with:

active/passive violent/peaceful loquacious/taciturn

wealthy/poor

aggressive/friendly

... or whatever else you come up with. If any of these scales worked as synonyms, the alpha/beta scale would not be needed.

Q & A on basic TRP premise. Everyone welcome to chime in.

3 upvotes · 22 December 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It was originally a metaphorical shorthand for describing certain behaviours in wolves. Do you "disagree" with it in that context?

Q & A on basic TRP premise. Everyone welcome to chime in.

3 upvotes · 21 December 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

1. Why are there only two types of people, short ones and tall ones?

False dichotomy.

For the RedPiller Males only, what is your strategy when your value starts slipping?

3 upvotes · 16 December 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There's not really an advantage in women dating a celebrity either by your definition.

Kinda depends what you mean by "advantage". Frankly, there's no "advantage" in doing a lot of things that we like to do, except that it satisfied urges that are written into our genes. It is those urges of which I speak.

The fact is, people of both genders pine over unattainable celebrities, no matter what your penis feels about Mary Sue.

Not in equal measure.

Source please.

Really? You really need a source on "men age like wine, women age like milk"? Just out of curiosity, will you also ask for a source if I say that men make the majority of sexual advances, or that women prefer men who earn more than they do?

For the RedPiller Males only, what is your strategy when your value starts slipping?

3 upvotes · 16 December 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Your choice of example reveals your mistake.

What makes Kate Mara special isn't that she is pretty. There are plenty of women just as hot as Kate Mara who aren't famous. The thing about Kate Mara is that she is a celebrity. Except being a celebrity doesn't make a woman a better catch.

There is no advantage to me in dating Kate Mara over dating Mary Sue the smoking hot cashier at the corner delicatessen. In fact, Mary Sue is in some ways a better deal, because her expectations are lower.

The Kevin Spaceys of this world might not always get the Kate Maras (sometimes they do), but they sure as hell can have the Mary Sues.

Of course, you are right that men eventually deteriorate, and looks do matter in men. But we deteriorate slower, looks matter less, and we are more able to stave off the effects with rigorous exercise and other elements of a healthy lifestyle.

Seriously, who are you going to find more of: men who want sex with her or her, or women who want sex with him or him?

Time catches us all eventually. But not at the same rate.

Since there are no unicorns, I'm curious which female you would marry given the choices (see inside)?

3 upvotes · 11 December 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Under current law, men do not have children.

Women have children, or do not, as they choose. Men have precisely the level of involvement with those children that she allows, no more, and, in certain legal respects, no less either.

The only reproductive right a man has is the ability to physically prevent women from getting hold of his sperm. This is not a legal right, however, because if she manages it somehow, he's still on the hook.

So, you can't have children. You can only take of them, and pay for them. But you cannot truly be a parent. And trying is just placing yourself at someone else's mercy and hoping for the best.

Guy asks fiancée that she remains fit after marriage. She thinks this is a red flag and wants to call off the wedding. Betas agree with her.

3 upvotes · 27 November 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Pretty much the best "missionary work" we can do is to get slammed in other subreddits. Every time someone says something nasty about us, we get a rise in subscribers.

We can't get good publicity until the Overton window moves more, but we can supply the publicity and let others find the good for themselves.

Parable of the sower.

Self Improvement and Motivations

3 upvotes · 25 November 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

WBC is made up of homophobic people. It collectively undertakes action opposed to homosexual rights.

Hate or dislike is a feeling. Groups can't have feelings. Individuals have feelings.

The point may seem pedantic, but it's actually pretty important. An institution, whether is an actual organization like the WBC, and ideological movement with expressed aims like feminism, or a discussion group like TRP, cannot answer a charge of "you feel this way", because a group cannot have feelings, and cannot therefore demonstrate that its feelings are otherwise.

This is why "feminists see men as problems, not people" is an accurate generalization, but "feminism doesn't give a crap about men" is unclear.

Now, let's assume that you meant the most reasonable possible interpretation of your words:

"Most, or at least many, people who actively participate in TRP are misogynists, so I don't like the people who participate in TRP."

There's a couple of problems here:

- Condemning all for the actions or opinions of some is the very bigotry you claim to oppose.
- You cannot reasonably attribute feelings to others over their objections to the contrary without a boatload of evidence that they are lying about how they feel. What is asserted without evidence can be dismissed without evidence.
- Most importantly, who cares what you dislike? Besides you, I mean. Your feelings about someone else's alleged feelings are not really a moral entity. People are immoral based on their actions, not how you feel about what you think they feel.

Not Betas, Human Beings

3 upvotes · 21 November 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

This is why we mock beta behaviour. Not because we're looking for someone to look down on, but because maybe, just maybe, if we shame people out of it earlier in their lives, they won't end up like this guy.

Discussion: Women's love is inferior to men's love

3 upvotes · 20 November 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

That just means the standard was made up wrong.

Also, it might mean it was made up by men, since it more closely matches what men tend to think love is.

Hi there! Just a few questions from a new girl.

3 upvotes · 6 November 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

You're pretty much in the wrong place. While many readers here are also readers of r/mensrights, that is the actual subreddit you want.

/r/mensrights focuses on changing society to protect the rights of men.

/r/theredpill focuses on how to thrive in a society where men don't have all that many rights, and masculinity is not valued or respected.

Scientific American taken over by social justice warriors -- 19 pages of "not enough women in STEM" in latest issue

3 upvotes · 7 October 2014 · /r/MensRights

"Not enough women in STEM" is fine so long as it's addressed to women. As in, "How come you lazy bitches are all majoring in women's studies and art history?".

One of the most complete & comprehensive criticisms of feminism I've ever seen (x-post r/TumblrAtRest)

3 upvotes · 26 September 2014 · /r/MensRights

Not sex. Money.

Do women know how much they desire to be dominated or are they victims of feminism too?

3 upvotes · 18 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Introspection is a response to adversity.

No one says to themselves "why am I doing this" if "this" works just fine whenever they do it. No one asks themselves if they are breathing properly.

So long as men act to shield women from the negative consequences of their own actions, women will never examine those actions, or even be aware of them as discrete entities.

The "nice guy" debate: Heroes vs Antiheroes

3 upvotes · 17 September 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm not sure that's true. You could make a case that someone like Elon Musk is a hero.

Interesting that you should mention him. Here's how he behaves in relationships:

http://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/2giosh/elon_musk_i_am_the_alpha_in_this_relationship/

It's almost like you're an agent provocateur trying to help me make my case.

I think the world would be a better place if we valued Heroic action more

And I think the world would be a better place if we developed a teleportation machine, room-temperature superconductive materials, and a compact limitless energy source. And then Vishnu appeared from the sky and gave everyone a kitten.

A solution without a plan is not a solution to anything.

Regardless, I don't think heroes are particularly systematically marginalized in our society.

I'm not sure what society you live in. Perhaps scientists and engineers are mobbed by groupies there. Perhaps oncologists and transplant surgeons are famous, and film actors and rappers who sing about dealing drugs are embarrassing to be seen standing near.

Perhaps wounded combat vets receive the best of medical care. Perhaps a Lamborghini is embarrassing to be seen in, but the biggest contributors to charity have to spend hours a day fending off infatuated teenage girls. Perhaps the man who invented the integrated circuit would have a 500 million dollar fortune if he lived there, and the man who sang a little song called "99 problems and a bitch ain't one" would be paid a decent living wage and that's it.

But I live a society where people are celebrated for their power, not their decency.

Elon Musk: "I am the alpha in this relationship."

3 upvotes · 16 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

When you get to a certain level of rich and busy, high-priced whores are actually the smartest choice. Because it's actually cheaper than running game.

Elon Musk: "I am the alpha in this relationship."

3 upvotes · 16 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Nope, just an ordinary woman.

If you give a man something, he thinks you are generous.

If you give a woman something, she thinks that means she deserves it.

Father gets 6 months in jail for paying child support late

3 upvotes · 11 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Shouldn't it be DON'T HAVE CHILDREN IF YOU AREN'T GOING TO SUPPORT THEM?

Do you live in some nation where men have the right to decide if they're going to have children or not?

Top 9 Richest Women in the World (all got their wealth from men)

3 upvotes · 11 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Seriously where do those numbers come from Their feels.

The Redefinition of Parenthood

3 upvotes · 23 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Hi, welcome to TRP.

We're not soldiers. We're not a crusade. We are not here to dive on a grenade in order that our sacrifice might benefit or fix "society".

If you want that, try /r/mensrights.

We are here because:

- We have accepted that our society's plan for men is one of exploitation, rather than mutual benefit.
- We have decided to respond by not following that plan.
- We are aware we still must physically dwell within society whilst not following its plan for us.
- We wish to survive, prosper, and be happy under these conditions.

In other words, we are not in the mine-clearing business. We are in the self-preservation business.

I recommend reading the sidebar.

The Redefinition of Parenthood

3 upvotes · 21 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

This whole post is very defeatist.

I don't see stepping around a minefield as defeat.

What do you say when girl says she no longer wants to see you

3 upvotes · 7 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

What do you say when girl says she no longer wants to see you

Absolutely nothing. There's no point in talking to her again.

Oh, sure, there would be some things you could say or do that might make her come back, but why would you? A woman who wants to leave you is less attracted to you than a stranger is. You're starting from less than zero.

Women may not be totally interchangeable, but they are certainly replaceable. Get a fresh start.

Having a hard time finding a woman worth marrying? It's nothing new. Read this excerpt from the bible!

3 upvotes · 7 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Except who said anything about being religious?

If I read "The Little Prince", and find some good advice there, does that mean that I think there's a child living on an asteroid with a flower and a sheep?

Controversial Opinions of /u/RedPillSchool (TRP head mod)

3 upvotes · 22 July 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Reported for personal attack.

These points would be irrelevant even if they weren't lies.

A psychologist criticises the drive to push more girls into traditionally male-dominated subjects such as computing and science, describing it as 'a waste of time'

3 upvotes · 11 July 2014 · /r/MensRights

If my initial response offended your sensibilities

Hmmm, on second thought, you may actually bear some resemblance to a Marxist SJW. You're engaging in postmodernist dialogue.

It's not important whether an assertion is offensive or not. Only whether it is accurate and supported.

If, when people object to what you said, you think they are offended, that hints that you might not understand the rules of objective debate. People aren't downvoting you because their feelings are hurt. They're downvoting you because your argument is leaky.

You saying "biotruth" (implying falsity) is the equivalent of me calling some statement "a bunch of commie nonsense". It makes no effort whatsoever to address the evidence, or introduce any.

The bottom line is - biological differences are not prescriptive. This is the stance the author takes. Essentially, don't bother because they can't do it.

Now I despair of your reading comprehension skills. RTFA:

was a waste of time as innate differences between boys and girls meant they would always be naturally drawn to certain academic subjects and careers.

He said the nation probably needed to "give up on the idea that we will get many female engineers or male nurses".

That means "don't bother because they won't do it.

Which is precisely what we see happening. A few girls are interested in programming, and they learn it whether you try to cram it down their throats or not. A great many are not, and they won't learn it no matter what you do, because they don't want to.

They are not interested.

There is no dictation of mental ability due to differences in sex.

You have no evidence either way on this one.

Further, research into this area doesn't take into account complex behaviors that can be achieved with different methods.

Hedging your bets in case someone cites you some actual research?

This prescriptive form of "biotruth" being fallacious should be self-evident. And the fact that some discard this idea boggles my mind. My snark was based on the idea that y'all should know better.

Any time you think your position is so self-evidently correct that you are at a loss for how to argue it, then it's a good idea to check yourself.

There isn't any such thing as common sense. There is only data, or the lack thereof.

A psychologist criticises the drive to push more girls into traditionally male-dominated subjects such as computing and science, describing it as 'a waste of time'

3 upvotes · 11 July 2014 · /r/MensRights

Look, another Marxist SJW!

See how easy it is to stereotype people and dismiss their arguments without examination?

You gripe that people downvote you without counter-arguments, but you just did the same thing to the article by your use of the meaningless thought-terminating cliché, "biotruth".

Hypocrisy in the highest degree. The term "biotruth" is nothing but a weaponized meme used to avoid answering people who raise entirely valid questions about how the two sexes might be different.

Do you perhaps think that there is no biotruth? That culture is everything?

Explain why boy chimpanzees like to play with trucks, while girl chimpanzees prefer dolls. Perhaps chimpanzee culture is foisting off sexist stereotypes on them?

Once you admit that there are some biotruths (and if you don't you're either helpless in the grip or ideological zeal, or just stupid), then it's a matter of determining which assertions are biotruths and which aren't.

A matter upon which your comment sheds no light whatsoever.

Little TRP tactics

3 upvotes · 3 July 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Saying that all women have the emotional maturity of a child implies that past an age they are static

This is too simple.

What, exactly, is "maturity"? The word comes a root suggesting that it is the quality of someone who has aged into an adult.

And yet we know many adults whom we would describe as "immature", and some children whom we might describe as "mature". So it's not actually identical to the aging process... it's just something that people associate with age, and which is probably correlated with it.

But what is it? The word doesn't help us.

Examine this possibility: Suppose that the word "maturity" really means emotional repression. After all, what do mature people do? They make calm, rational decisions. They face adversity without panicking. They don't give in their desires and whims. They plan ahead, rather than acting on impulse. All of these are emotional repression.

So what if we were so say, instead, "Women are less emotionally repressed than men."? Does that make it easier to understand that it might not only be true that women are less mature than men, but that it might actually be desirable for them to be so?

Here is something written by a woman who thinks so.

Creating a complete rebuttal of feminism

3 upvotes · 21 June 2014 · /r/MensRights

Doesn't really matter what people do or don't verbally agree on.

People, and movement consisting of people, are defined by their actions, not their words.

Neither feminists nor anti-feminists get to just make some shit up and say that's what feminism is. Feminism is what emerges from the collective and aggregate actions of feminists.

AMR has some serious misconceptions about MRAs and the MRM.

3 upvotes · 16 June 2014 · /r/MensRights

Karen Straughan certainly buys into MRA concepts. However, she doesn't grow her hair long or doll herself up like you would think MRAs would expect her to.

This is odd. She seems to be confusing MRA with RedPill (probably due to disingenuity, rather than innocent ignorance).

But the hilarious part is that she's got it wrong even for TRP. While TRP idealists do embrace the idea of sex roles, and consider attractiveness to be an important thing for women to work on, she's missed the part about what TRP thinks attractiveness is important FOR.

Karen isn't writing and speaking in order to find another husband. She isn't trying to attract anyone to her personally. She's trying to get a message across that has very little to do with her as an individual at all.

Certainly, TRP heaps scorn on women who fail to make themselves desirable... if they still expect to be treated as desirable. The way that the overwhelming majority of women do want to be treated as desirable tends to make TRP leave the last part as "understood", rather than a disclaimer issued every time.

If I can speak for TRP (and I think I can), we don't care if a woman cuts her hair short. Hell, we don't care if she shaves it all off... so long as our resulting sexual disinterest is just as acceptable.

When we say "women should grow their hair out", it's not the "should" that we use to say "you shouldn't torture stray animals" (moral imperative). It's the "should" we use to say "you should tighten the lug nuts thoroughly when changing a tire" (advisable strategy).

What is your definition of Misogyny?

3 upvotes · 14 June 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So, then, would you consider misandry to be the cultural devaluation of men and masculinity, in comparison to women and femininity, or to some neutral standard? Would a misandrist be someone who participates in this devaluation? Someone who considers unemotionality or stoicism "repressive"? Some one who thinks competition or violence is inherently evil? Someone who thinks strength is inferior to socialization? Who considers rough, physical men to be dangerous and threatening, whatever?

On Studies

3 upvotes · 20 May 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That was quite a long winded way to describe "opinion", though.

You didn't read it carefully enough.

It's a subset of "opinion". An opinion which you can describe your reasons for holding is useful to talk about. Because others can understand how the reasons led to the opinion, and can examine their own opinions in the light of that relationship, comparing and contrasting.

It is only the opinions which we do not understand which are useless to share with others, except as part of an effort to understand them.

I understand this topic started because you find the "red pill" as a metaphor... "cringeworthy". Do you understand, or not understand, why you feel this way?

If you do, you can explain, and we can talk about that. If you don't, then the only thing you can do is talk in the context of trying to figure it out.

On Studies

3 upvotes · 20 May 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Unless you can define the word cringeworthy in at least a partially objective fashion, it's useless because the concept is inaccessible to anyone but the speaker.

"Stuff that makes me want to cringe" doesn't cut it, because you make yourself an "oracle" for cringeworthiness. No one else, walking around in their daily lives, can pull you out of their pocket, consult you, and determine thereby if what they have just witnessed is "cringeworthy".

"Stuff that makes you want to cringe" doesn't work, either. Because I may be able to consult myself as an oracle, but then I cannot communicate the cringeworthiness of what I just witnessed to anyone else, because if I do, it becomes the first case.

"Stuff that makes most people want to cringe" doesn't work, because it's an oracle no one has access to. We can't take an opinion poll every time we see something that bothers us.

"Stuff that probably makes most people want to cringe" doesn't work, because it's the last case, but with a mental model instead of a poll. And who is the oracle for that mental model? You? (Degenerates to the first case.) Me? (Degenerates to the second case.) Most people? (Infinite recursion.)

The word "cringeworthy" really just describes how you feel when you look at something. Which is fine. I experience the feeling myself, although probably in different circumstances. But unless you can describe the reasons you have that those feelings, which involves some self-awareness, then there's no point complaining about it to other people.

The "Friend Zone" doesn't exist. Just like Heaven.

3 upvotes · 15 May 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

The point is that the "friend zone" doesn't exist because girls don't care about guys that are their "friends". They only care about guys they are attracted to.

Not quite. They care about guys they are attracted to, and they care about their friends. They just don't care about their "friends". In other words, a man in the friendzone is not an actual friend.

Women will say that their orbiters are such great friends of theirs, and they have such fun together, but you can cut through that layer of bullshit by asking her some questions about him:

- Do you think he would sleep with you if he had the chance? They will usually say yes, because if they deceived themselves that he didn't it would hurt their ego. But a "yes" answer shows that she knows he desires her. This dismisses the "he had a hidden agenda, and I didn't know" defense
- What's his favorite color? His favorite food? His favorite movie? When is his birthday? How old is he? Where did he go to college? What's his job? How long has he worked there? What are his hopes and dreams? Friends, especially female friends, know these things about each other. If she can't answer a good amount of them, it means she's not really that interested in him.
- What are some of the things he's done for you that make him such a good friend? Now, what are some of the things you have done for him? Actual friendship is reciprocal. If she has ready answers for the first, but the answers for the second are much more vague, stuff about how he "enjoys her company", then the resources, time, and effort are flowing in one direction only.

So the friendzone isn't actual friendship. If it were, it would be a fine place to be. A man's sexual ambitions would be solely his responsibility. But it isn't friendship.

It's important to understand that "friendzoning" isn't the sole province of evil, manipulative bitches who are willing to exploit hapless betas for time, energy, and resources. It's also ordinary women who succumb to a temptation much more insidious and harder to resist... ego validation.

Being desired is compelling for women, and because women can lust after a man without suffering too much if they can't actually have him, they imagine that it isn't too harmful to keep enjoying that nice hit of implicit praise.

To understand the mindset, imagine a woman who loved you but you didn't love her back, or even care about her. She just hung around and gave you really good blowjobs whenever you wanted.

White Guys: We Suck and We're Sorry

3 upvotes · 12 May 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Every system of production and distribution that has allowed us to enjoy cheap and abundant stuff and gloriously delicious food was brought about by white men.

Well, to be pedantic, probably not every system.

But your point stands.

In fact, what I see going on is that, because it's fashionable to hate on "whites" (people of European ancestry), and fashionable to hate on men, and doubly fashionable to hate "white men", white men get subjected to a curious sort of double interpretation.

When they do, or historically did, something seen as "bad", they are identified as "white males".

When they do, or historically did, something seen as "good", they are identified as belonging to some other group, either more general (people) or more specific (Serbians, geniuses, inventors, etc.)

This allows listeners to erase positive associations from whiteness and/or maleness so they can focus on the negative ones.

In reality, the history we read is the story of white men doing both good and bad things. Because white men, being the most powerful group during the periods of history we pay the most attention to, did the most things. As these were good or bad, if you use those categories, because things just are that way.

Another over-sexualized starlet who gained her fame for her body complains of being treated like an over-sexualized starlet

3 upvotes · 27 April 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

If it's immoral for a dog to lick your steak, at what point does it become immoral to wave your steak under the dog's nose?

You see, the dog isn't going to shy away from you doing that... it likes the smell of steak. But it's still sadistic to taunt a dog with steak that you're not going to let it have.

And after a while, that dog is going to bite the steak.

And you'll punish it, because you are tuned into the immorality of the dog stealing steak that belongs to you, but unconscious of the immorality of taunting the dog with it.

And after a while of being taunted with steak and punished for biting it, that dog is going to bite you.

Teacher gives middle-schooler full contact lapdance. Article justifies whether he liked it or not because "he did slap [her] ass a few times."

3 upvotes · 26 April 2014 · /r/MensRights

Whether he liked it or not matters on the individual level, not the societal one.

If "he liked it" is a defense for adult females with underage males, then "she liked it" needs to be a defense for adult males with underage females.

Or not. Either way. But same for both.

War against boys. Are the ADHD drugs unsafe?

3 upvotes · 21 April 2014 · /r/MensRights

By this argument, the medical profession is beyond question under all circumstances.

An example of feminism done right.

3 upvotes · 18 April 2014 · /r/MensRights

This isn't false though. Many of my female friends genuinely fear for their safety. I can think of numerous occasions where they would call me at night and clearly see they are shaken. While it does happen with men it is a lot less common.

Now this fear is irrational, women are not more at risk and in fact men are victims to street violence (at least in the west) a lot more than women are... but this fear is very much real.

I have no obligation, actual or merely polite, to cater to irrational fears.

If a white woman has been raised to think that "niggers were out to rape her", does that justify shunning black men? Is the onus then on the black community to be "empathetic" to her racism?

No. If a woman wants me to care about her feelings, she must care about mine. If she treats me like a dangerous animal, she is not entitled to my empathy and protectiveness.

Morals are a social contract. I owe nothing to someone who will not recognize my humanity.

Why is TRP so anti-education?

3 upvotes · 14 April 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I disagree strongly that postmodernism is a rejection of reason and individualism, and even more strongly that it prizes tradition - this is a mis-understanding of the philosophy. It may do all those things, but crucially and fatally for your argument: only through exegesis - otherwise it'd simply be a repetition. For reference see pretty much all of Borges.

I think many postmodernists, including Borges, fail to understand is that they are largely a recapitulation of pre-enlightenment styles of thinking.

In the words of R. Scott Bakker (paraphrasing): "Postmodernists tend to regard consumers of mainstream (modern) culture as slaves kissing the stick that beats them, but they fail to acknowledge that postmodernism itself is nothing but another stick."

By concerning itself with values rather than facts, and by criticizing science by criteria which have nothing to do with science's stated goals, it returns to a style of dialogue whereby an assertion's cultural context or adherence to a moral standard is prized above its truth or usefulness. The fact that postmodernists have created their own culture to judge assertions by, rather than using a traditional one, does not signify.

As an example of this traditionalist style of thinking, we may examine George Silver's "Brief Instructions on the Paradox of Defence" as a text. In it, he criticizes many of the innovations of the Spanish and Italian schools as not being "true Englishe manners of fence". An enlightenment thinker, examining these same methods, would concern himself instead with whether the destructive parry was useful in defeating an opponent armed with a longer weapon (hint: yes, because it allows passing of the point).

In quoting Irigaray, I care not about the silliness of her statement... what I am pointing out is that her criteria of evaluation do not overlap with those of Einstein.

There can be no productive discussion between Irigaray and Einstein, because they cannot agree on what is important.

Einstein wants to talk about truth and utility and doesn't care if his formula has this or that moral or cultural context, or is privileged, or carries capitalist assumptions about what is important. He cares if his answer to the question is accurate, not about why we asked that question. It doesn't make sense to him to call his motives or values into question, because to him, the speed of light is just a thing. It is what it is. If someone makes an atomic bomb, that's not his moral failing. It's theirs. He is just describing the universe.

Irigaray wants to talk about values and morality and inclusiveness. She doesn't care if Einstein is right or not. She wants to know why we care about the speed of light in particular. And, apparently, to chide us for doing so. It doesn't make sense to her to respond that this is actually what the speed of light is about and how it works, because that doesn't impact her goals. Light will take care of itself, and move at whatever speed it moves... what's important is what humans choose to do.

That's what I am pointing out about us, right now.

You, and TBP, speak postmodern discourse. You care about whether TRP is bad, is composed of bad people, makes people do bad things. You are unconcerned with whether what TRP has to say is completely true, partially true, or total nonsense. You're thinking "does this come from sociopaths?".

I, and TRP, speak modern discourse. The questions we ask are scientific questions. Not in the sense of "oh, science has proved this", but in the sense of "the scientific method could answer these questions, if we had enough money and time for research".

That is why we are talking at cross-purposes. You are trying to discuss whether I am evil, and I am trying to discuss whether I am right.

Your reaction to my statements is that if I am indeed evil, it doesn't matter if I am speaking the truth or not, I need to stopped.

My reaction to your statements is that if I am saying facts, then I'm just a mouthpiece, a reporter if you will, and that calling me evil is shooting the messenger.

Kirsten Dunst comes out in support of traditional gender roles. Bluepilled liberals freak out.

3 upvotes · 12 April 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Yep, things you say become true because people pay you for them!

I had a realization today: MRA and TRP understand the same concepts, but MRA are the Jedi's and TRP is the Dark Side

3 upvotes · 28 March 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

MRAs think, or perhaps hope, that our society can be saved. TRPers doubt it.

MRAs are spergs, MGTOW are cynics, PUAs are manipulators. TRP kinda encompasses all three.

Our goals are the same: the survival and welfare of men, whether it be us personally, our bros, or all the men in our culture. What we disagree on is strategy.

Now, I tend to think that the MRA strategy of aping the feminist movement by the use of things like petitions, public demonstrations, raising public awareness, lobbying, etc... is doomed to failure because it runs against human hardwiring.

But I don't agree with TRPers who call MRAs "weak". "Bad strategy" + "Naieve" != "Weak".

Does anyone notice that women seem to expect to be 'in charge' in relationships?

3 upvotes · 27 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I find it interesting that a room in a house designed by a man, built by men, paid for by a man, stocked with modern technology designed and built by men...

... somehow becomes a "cave" simply because a man inhabits it.

Maybe we should stop hiring feminists?

3 upvotes · 23 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I couldn't hire her either. She's not a software engineer. No engineering experience, no CS degree. She's got a bit of helpdesk, a whole lot of "technology blogger and "evangelist", and a few sysadmin certs, which, having the taken the same tests myself, I can assure you are a complete joke.

MAYBE she could code fizzbuzz. But could she write an AVL tree from scratch? Not bloody likely.

I hire software engineers.

Male insecurity at an all time high

3 upvotes · 14 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Women think "sharing feelings" is a good thing, because it's always worked for them.

Women who are emotionally open get more love. Men who are emotionally open get less.

On the implications of powertalk and other language categories.

3 upvotes · 11 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I see no reason why one couldn't simply blacklist a regexp that matches all of reddit except certain subreddits. This actually isn't too hard, unless there are some hitches I'm not aware of.

It can certainly be done, in any case. For any regular grammar, there is a finite state machine that can produce it, and a regular expression that can parse it. And for any two finite state machines, X^1 and X^2 which produce grammars Y^1 and Y^2 there exists a finite state machine X' which produces Y' , where $Y' = Y^1 \cup Y^2$ and a finite state machine X'' which produces $Y^1 \cap Y^2$.

In other words, regular expressions are composable.

If you send me the actual regular expression(s) you are using, I'll have a crack at it.

The difference between The Red Pill and ShitRedditSays (and all other leftist, feminist garbage)

3 upvotes · 10 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

The term "circle jerk" is a thought-terminating cliché.

It's basically the implication that a whole bunch of people agreeing with each other must ipso facto be wrong.

The difference between TRP agreeing with each other and SRS agreeing with each other is that TRP readers agree about what is, and SRS readers agree about what should be.

To those who have arrived here for the first time because of the SNL sketch... Welcome. Please join the discussion.

3 upvotes · 9 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

Facts are sexist, shitlord.

To those who have arrived here for the first time because of the SNL sketch... Welcome. Please join the discussion.

3 upvotes · 9 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

I'm sorry, but Will Ferrell is ~~about as funny as~~ far less funny than a potato.

Edit: Seriously, guys, I usually get that everyone has a different sense of humor and I'm generally open minded about it, but this is Will Ferrell. I can't fathom how anyone doesn't want to peel ~~their~~ his skin off when watching him, just so they'll have ~~something to do~~ some way to take revenge.

FTFY.

A quote by Steven Pinker, explaining why Feminists, especially AMR and SRS, hate Men's Rights Activists so much.

3 upvotes · 8 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

If white knighting, orbiting, pedestalizing, or even simply being a decent, honest, hardworking, if slightly naive chap worked... then TRP would never have existed in the first place.

I'm a woman, and I want to ask you about circumcision

3 upvotes · 5 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

how can men agree to have their boys be cut?

Because they are cowards.

If they didn't do it, they would be admitting to themselves that it's mutilation/torture/abuse. Then then would have to face up to the fact that this was done to them.

They have their boys maimed because otherwise they'll feel bad about their own lives.

I have a longtime friend who just had a son, and had this done to him. Now, he's always been the good Christian man, and I've always been the promiscuous cynical cad.

But now I am no longer willing to cede the moral high ground to him. Because no matter how many girlfriends I've cheated on, no matter how many women I've seduced and abandoned, no matter how many mean things I've said, no matter how selfish I've been, no matter how many drugs I've taken, no matter how often I've lied, cheated, and stolen...

...I've never cut body parts off an infant.

If I believed in hell, I would have to believe in a special place in hell for people who do this. They're worse than people who sexually abuse children. Because at least sexual abuse can be recovered from, and at least the people doing it are mentally ill and feeling some compulsive drive.

People who have their kids cut are permanently mutilating a child just so that they don't have to face a harsh reality.

Fuck them.

Mother slaps her daughter in public, police show up and kill the innocent Father. How many more men will die because of "Predominant Aggressor" laws?

3 upvotes · 28 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Or even the ones who win, and get busted or ruin their health later. She got off while it lasted, what does she care about the fallout if she's not around for it?

Does anyone, anywhere, actually think that Mike Tyson raped that woman? If so, please call the Federal Witless Protection program.

Hang out with Conservatives. You'll get away from all those Feminazi's. Yup Yup

3 upvotes · 10 February 2014 · /r/MensRights

Liberals treat men worse than dogs.

Conservatives treat men worse than dogs, but give them the occasional biscuit.

They can both die in a fire. I'ma do my own thang.

Funny example of how fame & status make women go nuts

3 upvotes · 10 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

No, he's an Olympic athlete.

Banned from r/feminism

3 upvotes · 10 February 2014 · /r/MensRights

No, it is entirely reasonable.

But feminism and reason are incompatible. You knew this when you went to that sub in the first place. And yet still you went. You weren't trying to reason with them, because you already knew that if they could be reasoned with, they wouldn't be feminists in the first place.

Feminist suggests that famous men should be denied the right of a jury trial when accused of sexual offences.

3 upvotes · 7 February 2014 · /r/MensRights

Her brother did.

$1 million up front or 25% of an NBA star's salary for 18 years plus the fame that goes along with it

3 upvotes · 5 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

http://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/1usllz/opening_paragraph_from_mike_tysons_autobiography/celievi

Jerry Seinfeld On Diversity In Comedy: "Who Cares? Are You Making Us Laugh Or Not?"

3 upvotes · 4 February 2014 · /r/MensRights

Googled. Didn't crack a smile.

Do not let the negativity consume you

3 upvotes · 4 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

The stages of taking the red pill are pretty much the same as the stages of grieving:

1. Denial: "Women aren't like that! They're people just like everyone else! Treat them all as individuals, and you're sure to find the right one!"
2. Anger: "WTF! Bitches are all like this! They have no honour, no loyalty, and they don't really love anyone but themselves! Fucking cunts!"
3. Bargaining: "If I work real hard and learn all the pickup moves, then at least I'll get laid."
4. Depression: "Getting laid by shallow, obnoxious women has become dull and unrewarding. And there's no sense looking for a unicorn. Maybe I'll just be MGTOW for a while."
5. Acceptance: "Women aren't bad. My expectations of them were based on faulty premises. They are creatures of instinct, just like I am... but of different instincts. If I learn what those instincts are, and teach them about mine, we can develop realistic expectations of each other and get along just fine."

"If women ran the world there would be no wars."

3 upvotes · 2 February 2014 · /r/MensRights

... because grass huts and sharp rocks aren't worth fighting over.

RedPillWomen Mods AMA! ASK THEM ALMOST ANYTHING!

3 upvotes · 30 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

"Female solipsism" doesn't literally mean they think no one but themselves exists or matters.

It just means they have a hard time seeing things from someone else's point of view, since they are evolved to be primarily protective of themselves, rather than someone else.

Is being a male sexual sub something that could work with Red Pill?

3 upvotes · 29 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The reality is that sexually submissive fantasies are very common in men- so much so that sexually dominant identifying women get mobbed with attention

This doesn't show that men with sexually submissive fantasies are common. It only shows that they are more common than women with sexually dominant fantasies.

So one could as easily argue that this supports the idea that women tend to be submissive, because dominant women are so rare that submissive men have to fight over the few that are available.

But, in reality, without more studies, we can't really tell what the counts are. Although my personal experience suggests that the femsub dynamic is a hell of a lot more frequent.

Casual reading of RedPill seems to indicate a strong fixation on being dominant above all things

That's a pretty casual reading, there.

It's important to understand the difference between male social dominance and power dynamics in sex. Not that there isn't a lot of overlap, but they aren't precisely the same thing.

Let's do a thought experiment:

Imagine a dominatrix. Now, guess whether she would rather spank Brad Pitt, or a shy, broke, jobless, virginal 19 year old boy with a stuttering problem.

Usually... not always, but usually, it's going to be the former. Femdoms may like to dominate men, but the men they want to dominate are usually high-status alpha male types who are dominant over other males.

The red pill mentioned in Ask Reddit again. Brace for subscribers.

3 upvotes · 27 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Women r bad. Am I alpha, bro? Yeah, you're fucking alpha, bro. You're so alpha, bro. I know, bro. Fuckin' Alpha. You wanna go in the bathroom and touch alphas? Yeah, bro. It's not gay if we hate women.

I love how the same people who would fall all over themselves trying to prove they don't think being gay is bad still show their true colours by using the implication to insult people they don't like.

The problem with the direction TRP is headed.

3 upvotes · 27 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

OOoooooh, concern trolling with just a leeeeeettle touch of AMOGing to shame people out of calling you out on it. Nice.

We'll see how many people fall for it. Good luck, I'm rooting for you.

so what about women who defy stereotypes

3 upvotes · 24 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What specifically are you referring to?

Your ideas about TRPers fall under your own selected definition of a "stereotype".

That's what happens when you make a continuum into a binary distinction. You end up arguing about whether Jim is "short" or "tall", instead of just measuring Jim and knowing exactly how tall he is.

That's what I want to do. I want to measure Jim and see how tall he is. I don't want to generalize or stereotype. That's what I believe TRP should do. TRP should approach every woman like she's an individual with different preferences, rather than stereotyping.

"Treat everyone as an individual" is something I hear people say a lot.

It sounds nice, but that's the problem. It's a thought-terminating cliché. It doesn't do anything but sound nice.

It has no real meaning, because humans don't do that. And we wouldn't be able to function if we did.

Instead, we, not just TRPers, but all humans, understand other humans starting from their context. And it is only an understanding of their context that allows us to make sense of their behaviour.

The thing that makes us conscious, sentient, tool-using intelligences is the fact that we are capable of generalizing and seeing the forest in all these trees.

Would you like to know how what you're saying sounds to me? Here, I'll try to show you.

Y: You hate trees!

M: I... what now?

Y: You hate trees. You stereotype them all the time.

M: I do what?

Y: You keep calling them a forest.

M: Erm... that's what a forest is. A. Big. Collection. Of. Trees.

Y: Yes, but they're all different. What about this tree over here? It's a tiny sapling in a pot in someone's garden. Why doesn't your "Forest Theory" account for that? And how about this lone palm tree at an oasis in the middle of the desert? Did you forget about that one?

M: "Forest Theory"? Who said I had a theory? I'm just talking to my fellow lumberjacks about where you find trees, and how you can cut them effectively.

Y: Why must you stereotype trees? Why can't you approach them all as individuals?

M: Because they have certain things in common, and I'd have to be a retard to not react to that once I noticed it?

Y: But your statements are not universally accurate! And yet you made them without a twelve page disclaimer acknowledging that some trees may not be part of this strange "Forest" thing you made up!

M: Look, you tiresome individual. I'm a lumberjack. I'm not trying to come up with unified field theory, I'm trying to get shit done. Forests are where you find trees if you need to find a lot of them. And most trees making up any individual forest are pretty similar.

Y: I don't believe in forests. You're just looking for the specific trees that match your preconceived notions.

M: And isn't it remarkable how easy a time I have of finding them?

so what about women who defy stereotypes

3 upvotes · 24 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Actually, it's not my definition. It's a definition from Joel Charon, a sociologist. Maybe it's not the best definition, as some of those points seem repetitive and lack specifics.

That's kind of what I was keying off of with that line-by-line analysis... the lack specifics part.

It shouldn't be too hard to agree, here. Why don't we simplify. Example of a generalization: Let's say there's a representative survey that roughly 7 out of 10 aliens have a hidden dark spot in their armpit. A generalization would be "most aliens have a dark spot in their armpit."

Example of a stereotype: Roughly 7 out of 10 aliens have a hidden dark spot in their arm pit. A stereotype would be "aliens have a dark spot in their armpit." Another example of a stereotype would be approaching a random alien and assuming it had a dark spot in it's armpit.

Well, that gives me a sense of where you're going.

But I think it's still not good enough. Your quotes only differ by one word. Whether someone chooses to include that word or not is not a pure, unadulterated indicator of their thinking. It also indicates who they think their audience is, to what purpose they are speaking, how much they expect to be nitpicked, and how much they care about nitpickers.

You're taking a continuum and making it into a binary distinction.

For example, let's take Charon's definition of a stereotype and apply it to your opinions about TRP subscribers.

They pass judgement

Check.

They apply the generalization to everyone in the group

Check.

They create categories that dominate/trump all other features

Check.

They don't change, even when contrary data is presented

Partially check. From our previous encounters, you have resisted the presentation of contrary data.

They are formed by casual observation rather than empirical evidence

Check. Most of your observations appear to me to be secondhand.

They don't help people really understand their differences

Check.

... so, you see, if we were to apply the binary distinction stereotype/generalization to your opinions, this one would be a stereotype. And then, when I said that, you would argue otherwise, and we'd get nowhere.

That's what happens when you make a continuum into a binary distinction. You end up arguing about whether Jim is "short" or "tall", instead of just measuring Jim and knowing exactly how tall he is.

So, a much more fruitful question is "How nuanced, accurate, and open to new data is your understanding of TRP?" And while we can't measure that like we can height, we can at least see that the answer can take on a whole range of values. Which gives us a different kind of discussion.

And then, when we advance to that point, we can get back to the original topic.

Upon which I would say "TRPer's understanding of women is much more nuanced than TBPer's understanding of TRPers."

Western Bias?

3 upvotes · 21 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Indeed.

It's basically equivalent to saying "All these people who gathered together to discuss their shared belief... have a shared belief! They must all not be thinking for themselves!"

In most TRP subscribers, believing TRP thing predated reading TRP, finding it, or even, in many cases, its very existence.

Do Men Interpret Women's Tattoos As A Sign Of Promiscuity?

3 upvotes · 20 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Usually.

You see, a tattoo is a very permanent choice, with long-term consequences, and how that choice is made says a lot about someone's character.

If I see a woman with an "art-piece" tattoo that is beautifully done, obviously by a talented, experienced, and expensive artist, and of a creatively and tastefully chosen subject, this tells me that she is down to push the envelope, but only after careful planning, and when she has the resources to do so properly.

If I see a woman with no tattoos, this tells me that she avoids at least certain kinds of risk.

If I see a woman with a large number of cheap, cliched tattoos, blurred to the point of unintelligibility, this tells me that she is impulsive and somewhat dim.

The first and second women may be keepers. The third is probably an easy lay, but not worth keeping around.

Feminist believes that online dating is 'A Stew Of Misogynist Harassment'. Because men are never victims to cyber trolls, are they?!

3 upvotes · 19 January 2014 · /r/MensRights

I have a suggestion for how feminists could deal with misogyny.

Stop.

Inspiring.

It.

Why it's not useful to be angry at women - brought to you by Buddha himself

3 upvotes · 12 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

You know, I was puzzled why you would bother coming in here and saying this.

So I read your comment history. Interesting sort of hippie/hipster fusion thing you've got going on. But I'm not really sure I saw any credentials as a geneticist anywhere in there. So I assume you're getting this from someone(s) who is.

Perhaps you could cite your source material?

A Tale of Two Women

3 upvotes · 11 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

RPW is a mixed bag. I was awarded bestof2013 and then banned. For what amounted to the same opinion.

Is anyone else worried about the men?

3 upvotes · 10 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

In my life I try to put myself in other people's shoes. Of course, I can only imagine which is why I ask so many questions. If I believed that I can never rely fully on my spouse to continue to love me if I show hesitation, self-doubt, or emotional pain, that I must always be calm, together, and in control of myself, I would be deeply lonely. If I believed that my husband, at best, is a well-disciplined mature teenager to my adult, I would be deeply disturbed. If I believed that I must be constantly on guard against emotional games, I would be exhausted. Is this the situation, except reversed genders, you believe our grandfathers and ancestors experienced and found happiness in?

You see, that's why this hypothesis, "the sexes are basically the same", doesn't really work.

You're imagining what you would feel like in these situations, and imagining it would cause you intense pain. It probably would indeed. But then you go on to assume that it must do the same for men. And that, because that hypothetical universe would be awful, these things must only be optional in the real universe, right?

But there's some steps you're missing. First of all, TRP is not a lifestyle. It's not "oh, we like the social customs of the 1950s, or at least the image we have in our heads of it". Instead, TRP is observations about instinctive human sexual behaviour. It's "hey, people are social apes, and our sexual dynamics work pretty much like those of the other social apes."

You can't choose not to do that. You can't choose not to be a primate. You can't say "I don't like that chromosome, I'll just have these others."

So there isn't a question of "do THESE relationships make men happy or not?" because there's no "these". Women, for example, love men less when we show hesitation, self-doubt, or emotional pain. That's just the way it is. No one gets to opt out of it.

So the question "How can you live like that?" isn't the right question, because people already live like that.

Instead, the questions you should be asking are "is it better for you to know this?", and "how do you balance your human fallibility and occasional need for comfort from others, with your need to hide these things so your SO will stay attracted to you?".

To which the answers are "definitely yes", and "it's a careful balancing act".

If I were nothing but Captain Macho all the time, I'd explode. And probably drive women away long before that.

But if I wore my heart on my sleeve then women wouldn't like me very much, because women don't like men who do that, regardless of their frequent claims to the contrary.

We live in a culture where men have been taught way more emotional expression than is really good for them. Some of the advice in TRP to which you allude aims at reversing that trend.

If you'd like, we can talk about some examples of how this works in practice.

TIL: Cesar Millan's wife (The Dog Whisperer) filed for divorce in March 2010. She ended up receiving a single payment of $400,000, monthly spousal payment of $23,000 (that's $276,000 a year), AND $120,000 a year in monthly child support. Cesar Millan then attempted suicide.

3 upvotes · 9 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Sure.

Evolution is a game played by genes. The win condition of this game is to make lots of copies of themselves.

The way they play this game is to influence the behaviour of organisms in various ways. Genes try (well, they don't "try" anything, but we all understand that metaphor) to make their hosts do things that will make more copies of the gene. Win conditions benefit the gene, not necessarily the host.

Because it is genes who win or lose, and genes who make the moves, genes are the players. Because we are the ones who are moved, and the wins and losses don't always help or harm us (respectively), we are analogous to the pieces.

Just as a pawn can be sacrificed to help one side win, your genes can screw you to make you have more offspring. Or to make you do something that benefits people with genetics like yours (relatives, etc).

The pawn's goal is stay on the board and not die by the end of the game. Maybe to reach the end and get promoted. But, like good chessplayers, successful genes will happily sacrifice a pawn, knight, or rook to win the game.

People who think that having more descendents is "winning" are people who fail to recognize that their instincts can diverge from those of their genes. They are in danger of being sacrificed in a gambit to improve their player's position.

TRP and Homosexuality.

3 upvotes · 8 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I don't agree with everything written here, being a woman and everything,

No one cares what you are. This is the internet.

Is being gay and being a member of TRP mutually exclusive?

Okay, we do care that you're too lazy or dim to use the search bar. This has been asked and answered.

I'm taking a stand against peeing sitting down. From Sweden to Taiwan, there are growing calls from feminists for men to stop urinating while standing up.

3 upvotes · 7 January 2014 · /r/MensRights

The manufacturers even had their eyes on the English-speaking market. A prototype intended for American production featured a Texan drawl saying "Don't you go wetting this floor cowboy, you never know who's behind you. So sit down, get your water pistol in the bowl where it belongs. Ha, ha, ha."

What could possibly go wrong with this cunning plan?

Respect In Action

3 upvotes · 3 January 2014 · /r/RedPillWomen

An important thing, both for women as the submissive partner, and for myself as the dominant one, is having the realization that pretty much anything someone does, they do for a reason that makes sense to them.

And before taking precipitous action, it's important to know what that reason is. If you can't understand why an action made sense to the person taking it, then you are not yet qualified to judge the action.

For example:

Woman: "Here, hold my purse while I go do X."

Man: (gets angry).

Woman: (gets angry because man got angry at reasonable request).

This is typical of a fight that happens because men and women don't always understand the ways that they are different. They assume that the meaning of an action on the part of someone else is the same as the meaning would be if they took that action.

In this case, the man is angry because he has been treated with emasculating disrespect, but the woman doesn't realize that she's done anything of the sort. Here's the real story:

- Men don't know that a woman's purse is a very personal space to her, and she would only leave it with someone she likes or trusts very much.
- Men don't know that among female social circles, one is not allowed to refuse requests for minor favors.
- Women don't know that it is shaming or emasculating for a man to hold or carry anything that is seen as solely appropriate to a woman.
- Women don't know that men are highly territorial, and can mark territory temporarily in social situations by leaving personal items on it.

Thus the source of the miscommunication becomes clear. From man's point of view, he has been emasculated and claimed as property. From the woman's point of view, she has shown she cares about him, and given him an opportunity to show he cares about her, and he has angrily refused.

If we keep in mind the principle of "understand the reasoning before reacting", the man would have ask himself why she would do something like that, and conclude that she must not understand the slighting nature of the request, and the woman would have to ask herself why such a thing would cause offense, and conclude that there must be some meaning to this in male communication which is actually offensive.

This allows fights to be avoided even when understanding doesn't already exist.

Of course, a woman who speaks and understand masculine language won't hand a man her purse and say "hold my purse". She'll set it down on the seat next to him and say "I have to go for a second. Can you watch this for me, please?".

And if he's good at PUA skills, he'll neg her a bit by teasing "Why? Is it going to do a trick?"

A Question for Red Pill people who have had sex before marriage.

3 upvotes · 3 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's an interesting question.

First of all, if you never get dumped, don't leave relationships easily or take them lightly, and don't cheat, it's almost impossible to have a high partner count. So I would ask first under what circumstances you think your question describes a possible state of affairs.

That being said, we can discuss this notion anyway, out of pure interest. One of the key observations of TRP as pure sexual strategy is the awareness that people use imperfect rubrics to evaluate mate desirability. Some are genetically ingrained, others are cultural, but still highly ingrained and unconscious.

For example, women are attracted to social dominance in males because they evolved to use the social dominance of the father as a rubric for the future social dominance of his sons. If she mates with an alpha male, she will have alpha male children, who will produce a lot more children of their own, etc. But women are attracted to male status even in situations where that status couldn't possibly have anything to do with genetic fitness. Research has shown that, when a mixed-sex group was given a task to do, and one was randomly assigned to be the leader, female members of the group rated the leaders as more attractive, on average, than the other males, even when they knew that leaders were randomly selected.

This means that, while the evolutionary purpose of tropism towards alpha males is to secure better genes for their offspring, the mechanism of that tropism is an ingrained, genetic, instinctive preference for dominant males.

This is why TRP sexual strategy for males involves social behaviours which signal dominance. We can't change our genes. But the individual woman doesn't care about our genes. Only the evolutionary factors which shaped her "care" directly about our genes. She's just been shaped to care about our dominance.

In the same way, I prefer a woman with a narrow waist and flaring hips, even if you tell me directly that she is completely infertile and will bear me no children. Evolution cares about that, but I don't. I just directly like hourglass figures.

So what the relevance of all that?

Well, men's unwillingness to commit to sluts is like that. Partner count is a rubric for partner-suitability, just as I described in the linked article. But it is an ingrained rubric, so one can't just ignore it, even in cases where it doesn't measure what it evolved to measure.

Telling a man, "Yes, I have a high partner count, but I've never been dumped, and high-status men want to marry me all the time" is like telling a man, "Yes, I have a horribly burned face, but that's just from a car accident. My genetics code for pretty... just look at my sister!"

He's not going to care. In fact, he's going to want the sister. Evolution builds in rewards for following its plan, not the plan we would have come up with in its position.

A Question for Red Pill people who have had sex before marriage.

3 upvotes · 3 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

how do you feel about the fact that you are devaluing your partner by having sex with her?

Because you're not.

Partner count is the symptom, not the disease.

read this: http://www.reddit.com/r/RedPillWomen/comments/1j0n7t/the_slut_and_how_not_to_be_one/

What exactly is a Red Pill Woman?

3 upvotes · 30 December 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Well, in my experience as an aggressively promiscuous platespinner, femsub BDSM is pretty mainstream. There's a reason Fifty Shades of Grey (inaccurate portrayal of BDSM that it is) is so popular with women. You'd be surprised by the number of your peers who are turned on by a good spanking, or just plain 'ol rough sex.

But that being said, I think when people come in here talking about BDSM, they can do it for one of two main reasons:

- "I am a woman who is turned on by my submitting to powerful men, so this kinda thing already appeals to me."
- "What you strange people are doing is just a sexual fetish, so it doesn't apply to anyone else, and I can just dismiss you."

The first makes sense. Like I said, it's pretty mainstream, and probably does have something to do with hypergamy and built-in sex roles and so forth.

The second, of course, is bullshit. RP isn't a sexual fetish, and can't be, because it isn't a set of practices at all. It's an act of looking at male and female behaviour and admitting what's going on rather than lying about it to ourselves. Comparing BDSM to RP is like comparing the mating behaviour of chimpanzees to the science of primateology. They're not in the same category. The second studies the first (among many other things).

So a discussion of why Fifty Shades of Grey, or rapey romance novels, are so popular is totally red pill.

But pretending we're all doing this "because sexual fetish" is completely condescending, rude, dismissive, and, worse than that, dead wrong.

What exactly is a Red Pill Woman?

3 upvotes · 30 December 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

/u/TempestTcup has a particular horror of infidelity.

That being said, this really isn't a subreddit to argue about whether "redpill" values "work for everyone". That whole issue is kind of beside the point, and it just alienates people when you come off all "I'm not like this, so isn't all this stuff really subjective and complicated anyway? So shouldn't we just not say anything about people in general?".

The "red pill" isn't about a set of moral rules for people to follow. It's about observing how most men and women behave, noticing the differences, and drawing some inferences from that.

So whether you are a special snowflake who's way different than others, or just lying to yourself... that doesn't really matter. We're talking about populations and majorities, here. Not individuals.

Another thing that alienates people is throwing around the term "equality". It's a word that's been used as a linguistic tool to sell feminism to people who are harmed by it. Because if you aren't for "equality", then you're painted as some sort of bad person.

But what does "equality" even mean? It used to mean "equal before the law", as in "courts shouldn't like some people better than others".

But the meaning has crept, in a sort of grisly, quasi-deliberate fashion, towards meaning "men and women must be treated the same". And that's ridiculous. You can't treat men and women the same, at least not without making them very unhappy, because men and women are different and have different desires.

So when you come in here and use the word "equality", you're invoking a whole lot of bullshit propaganda that has been used to character-assassinate the very people you are talking to. It's not gonna win you any friends.

If you Don't Know Who the Asshole in Your Group is, Chances are It's You (X-Post from TrueReddit)

3 upvotes · 29 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Moreover, who says there's necessarily only one? Or that the definition of asshole is anything more than "person the speaker doesn't like"?

How do I know if I'm dealing with a player?

3 upvotes · 27 December 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Actually, I'm extremely boring, and smell funny.

But if we use this definition of a slut, we can see that sluts use sex to try to get relationships, while non-sluts use relationship value.

A woman who withholds sex until she gets promises is essentially saying "if you get the sex without making the promises, you'll have no reason to stay". This is equivalent to "sex is the only reason to stay with me".

And that's the definition I just gave of "slut".

See, speaking for most men here (and I think I can) there are some women I want to connect with, and there are some women I want for sexual reasons alone. And the difference is whether I still feel, after sex, like I want her around. I discuss that here.

It's very easy to assume that all you need to do is keep your legs closed, but that's not that case, which I talk about here.

You see, the reason that women with a high partner count are not considered desirable by men, is that they have, many times, had sex with a man who then didn't want to do so again. So they had to find a new man.

It doesn't matter how easy you were if no man ever willingly dumps you.

BDSM is “deviant” sex. Lesbian sex isn’t “deviant” these days, cheating isn’t “deviant”, divorce isn’t “deviant” to feminists...but put a man in charge and all of a sudden you’re a deviant.

3 upvotes · 27 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

They literally think that their mothers, their grandmothers, and every generation of women before them was just too weak to stand up to the oppression.

The benefits of living in Asia: Fat-shaming is real (and encouraged as a harmless past time)

3 upvotes · 23 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Ever notice how articles about fat-shaming are always accompanied by photos of the best-looking fat girls they can find?

As if the average fatty looked anything like those two girls in the picture at the top.

Masculinity is Dead

3 upvotes · 19 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I think part of this was that, with no-fault divorce, fathers became physically separated from their sons. I grew up with the children of the baby boomers, and at least half my friends had divorced parents.

Each generation is increasingly being raised solely by women, with no men around to teach their sons how to be men themselves.

The kind of oppressive comments that get you banned from r/OffMyChest these days

3 upvotes · 19 December 2013 · /r/MensRights

Inability to spot a joke even while in the midst of making one: - 15 points.

CNN: Should false rape accusers be sued?

3 upvotes · 19 December 2013 · /r/MensRights

If I fire a handgun into a crowd, "I didn't intend to hit anyone specific" isn't much of an excuse.

It's not even enough to make it second-degree murder instead of first, because I acted with intent to kill, and forethought.

Feminists call for ban on top selling book that teaches wives to be submissive

3 upvotes · 12 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

The bible?

Help me out here

3 upvotes · 9 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because TRP regulars are sick and tired of being accused of being rapists. And asking "do you think rape is bad" to these people every 27 seconds is doing that by implication.

Most black people agree that dealing drugs and murdering people is bad, but if you keep asking them whether they think that, then they are quickly going to (rightly) discern that you have an ulterior implication (that dealing drugs and murdering people has something to do with being black), and react to that.

It's what the opposite side of the political spectrum would call a "microaggression". We just call it "rudeness".

Red Pill subscribers: What exactly does taking The Red Pill mean to you?

3 upvotes · 6 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yeah, sure, and we eat our cornflakes with baby's blood. Also, we have visible horns and where we set our feet, the grass never grows again.

Sigh

Let me know when you're ready to have an adult conversation.

I want my wife to be a stay at home mom. Is this wrong according to TBP

3 upvotes · 6 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think where TRP and TBP disagree is why women tend to make that choice. Sure, there are strawmen on either side of the TRP/Feminism fence who will claim that women should want to work/stay at home, but I think that's probably not a reflection of the average member of either camp.

I think I can agree with that. "Should want" in the absence of "do want" is kinda silly.

Consider - how can we ever know that we aren't still, as a society, pushing women towards being stay-at-homes? At what point could we step back and say "on average, women are no more encouraged to be housemakers than men"?

We can ask this question, but we also have to ask several other questions:

- How do we know we aren't, as a society, pushing women out of their homes to do the same sorts of things for strangers for low wages that they would otherwise be doing to take care of their families?

- What is the tradeoff between the needs of children, and the ambitions of women? Do women ever have a moral obligation to place their children's need for parental care and attention above their own desire for career success?
- What is the aggregate economic effect of greatly increasing the size of the workforce, without increasing the overall demand for said labour very much?
- Isn't the freedom to have a career and children just for rich women, while poor ones get to have a "career" taking care of those rich women's kids as well as their own?

We also can't infer one input from one outcome, when a process has multiple inputs and outcomes. In other words, the scarcity of female engineers is not ipso facto evidence that we are doing something to keep women out of engineering.

I personally think it's likely that the difference in working rates between genders is largely a social result - based on the massive range in working rates throughout the world - but I'm not sure how falsifiable that hypothesis is.

Well, to determine if one of your beliefs is falsifiable, a good mental exercise is to come up with a hypothetical piece of evidence that would falsify it. In other words, what would you accept that would convince you that women are generally hardwired to prioritize relationships above careers?

If you have trouble thinking of one, or the only ones you can think of are really far-fetched and silly, that's a good indication that your belief may be religious rather than empirical in nature.

To make this exercise easier, I will name a few things that would help convince me that the reverse was true.

- If stay at home mothers of my personal acquaintance and in the weblog sphere suddenly stopped expressing great satisfaction with their lives, and began pining about their frustrated ambitions, instead.
- If women started taking hard, dirty, dangerous jobs like crab fishing, garbage collection, or pretty much involving putting on a hard hat and high visibility jacket, not out of occasional economic necessity, but simple desire for more cash.
- If the most beautiful and desirable of women lost interest in wealthy, powerful, confident, authoritative men, and began to date shy unemployed guys instead, willingly working long hours to support them financially.

As you can see, there are plenty of things I can name that would expect to see if women were really all that happy to defy biology and assume the traditional role of men. Neither of us expect to see those things, of course, but that's because they would be evidence of a thing that ain't so.

Ultimately, the problem with social engineering experiments like feminism is that they are not empirical. Some people imagined what they thought a fair society would like, and measure their "progress" towards fairness by measuring the distance between the culture they live in, and the one they imagined. It never occurred to them to do any actual double-blind controlled experiments to back up their rhetoric.

What IS misogyny, and what causes people to be misogynistic?

3 upvotes · 3 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You still don't understand the concept of earned respect.

The assumption is that NO ONE deserves respect. They must EARN it. That respect is a privilege, not a right, and one of the best ways to show that you haven't earned it is demand it.

When you say:

It's not that the default is "earn my respect" the default is "you don't deserve respect".

You don't realize that, in Man-speak, as opposed to Woman-speak, you're saying the same thing twice. "Earn my respect", and "You don't deserve respect" mean the same thing.

As a man, whenever I enter a new group of men, I start at bozo. Since I know the rules, I accept that, and go about proving my worth, instead of complaining about respect. If I truly have earned respect elsewhere, it's very quick and easy to do the same thing again. If I haven't, posturing and demanding just confirms my bozo status.

woman having uncommitted sex with me = good women having uncommitted sex in general = bad

3 upvotes · 2 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Try to frame your questions with neutral language. "How do you think dogs should be trained?" is a much better way to start a conversation than "Why do you kick puppies?". Give your views in the comments--don't start the thread out by attacking people. Posts that don't strictly adhere to these guidelines will be removed, and could result in the user being banned.

Reported.

The Birth of the Terminator Alpha

3 upvotes · 1 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Dunno quite why you're saying this or what you want. A pat on the head?

Introducing a male equivalent of the Bechdel test

3 upvotes · 26 November 2013 · /r/MensRights

Why did you feel you had to add in the "neither feral, sinister, nor inept"?

To filter out behaviour that is held up as an example of villainy or stupidity. Otherwise, a movie where two male villains conspire to harm a woman would pass (because it passes criteria #2 in the absence of #1).

How many less movies do you think would pass if the Bechdel test had this qualifier?

Just as many. Two women having a conversation about something than men is not portrayed as villainous behaviour.

How many more would pass your test without it?

Almost all of them. The majority of movies are about saving and protecting the woman. If we allow ANY non-woman serving behaviour to pass this test, even if the movie makes it out to be blackest evil, then we are not capturing a picture of what masculine roles films endorse.

"Who work together towards a major goal which does not involve women"

No, it wouldn't. Because "Unforgiven" would have passed, and that would be ridiculous.

We want to capture films that portray at least one example of non-woman-serving, non-society-serving behaviour which is depicted as legitimate, non-evil, and non-foolish.

A film that doesn't have this is a film which subscribes to the zeitgeist notion that men exist to serve women and society, not themselves or other men.

Curiosity may kill me but I have some questions...

3 upvotes · 22 November 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

You're talking about Temple Grandin.

I'm not sure she's actually some kind of opposite-pole autistic. I think her ability to read cattle has more to do with the way high functioning autistics have hyperfocused interests that they tend to be very good at. If I recall correctly from reading her autobiography, she has just as much trouble reading human emotions as your garden variety sperg.

However, the point you're trying to back up with this is quite sound.

There is an equivalent to autism where people can empathize very well, and can't systematize at all. But what there isn't is a name for this. Why not? Because it's considered normal and healthy. Our culture values social ease, and people's feelings over logic, mathematics, and rational discourse to the point that these people are not considered defective and no one notices there is something wrong with them.

For example:

- A sperg who will talk your ear off about the obscure Japanese video game "Shinmigame Tensei Nocturne", because her defective empathizing brain can't read microexpressions and she doesn't realize she's boring the shit out of you... she's considered socially obnoxious, and has a diagnosis of a syndrome, and we're allowed to call her things like "sperg".
- That hippie weirdo who will start blithering about auras, alien astronauts, and pyramid power, and then get very offended because he can read microexpressions and can tell you think he's an idiot, but doesn't realize he really is an idiot, because his defective systematizing brain can't examine his beliefs rationally or in terms of probability and the rules of evidence... well, he's just considered to have a quirk or two, and everybody's supposed to "tolerate" him and "respect his beliefs" for the sake of social coherence.

I think that many SJWs and SRS types are like that hippie guy in the example. They're defective at systemic thinking, and super-focused on empathizing, so naturally they focus on how people feel when they experience something, rather than what the consequences of it are.

You can't tell these people that vegetarian diets kill more animals than carnivorous ones. You can't tell them GMO foods save billions of lives each year. You can't tell them that taxing the wealthy with a heavy hand makes poor people poorer. You can't tell them that sending food aid to Africa increases famine.

You can't tell them these things because they're not equipped to understand the explanation of how this cause leads to that effect, which causes this effect, which causes this, which leads to something pretty much counterintuitive, but still true.

"Double standards"

3 upvotes · 20 November 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Precisely.

What critics of the RP/pickup intersection don't realize is that quickie sex with lots of women you never see again is second prize. It's damn good, it's worth settling for, but it's not as good as a woman who could make us want to stay.

But we have a word for women like that on TRP, we call them "unicorns". By which we mean to imply that they are so rare that the location of one cannot figure in any realistic sexual strategy for men. It doesn't matter how good your game is, you cannot attract someone you cannot find.

Women are the gatekeepers of sex, therefore getting to sex is men's responsibility, and "game" for men is about getting from "Hello" to sex.

Men are the gatekeepers of relationships, therefore being a keeper is women's responsibility, and "game" for women is about getting from sex to relationship.

When we think about it this way, we see that, however bad men's average game is in this culture, women's game is worse to the point of nonexistence.

That's why we call them unicorns. Hunting them is a waste of time, they're too rare. We cannot create them no matter how much game we have. So we have ourselves a decades-long sex party with sluts instead.

Some hilarious straw-man arguments about TRP

3 upvotes · 20 November 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I'm very unsure what the point of trp is

That's because you think TRP is a movement with goals.

It isn't. It's some ideas of an informational nature. Asking what the "point" of TRP is... that's like asking what the point of the heliocentric model of the solar system is. There isn't one. It just is.

Now, certain people have goals that they use that information to help achieve, and many of those goals are the same (such as sexual success, etc).

But the metaphorical "Red Pill" itself just represents some knowledge. Some pieces of information. That's all.

Emotional stonewalling: the core burden of masculinity

3 upvotes · 7 November 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I didn't claim it was "not a bad trade" because it doesn't hurt.

It does.

But it's a necessary trade. Someone has to keep the lights on.

But every time we talk about this issue, we get this load of dingo's kidneys:

I think emotional stonewalling is the culprit. If men are forced to kill themselves because they do not have the right to recognize their fallibility, then I don't consider that a good trade. Something has to change.

I think forcing a human to be a pressure cooker of emotions will have unseen ramifications. Men have historically held powerful positions in society, what has happened because a male leader could not properly vent his inner turmoil? I suspect that society has been plagued countless ways because we have refused to acknowledge men's mental and emotional burdens.

... as if this phenomenon didn't exist for a reason. Look, somebody has to do it, and it's going to be men. Why?

First off, because women won't. Every feminist and other variety of social engineer who ever tackled this alleged "problem" says what you just said. That men should just stop. They pressure men to soften up, as if toughness had no purpose. They don't ever pressure women to toughen up and assume responsibilities, they just look at the evidence that women don't, claim that it's the fault of evil men and their glass ceiling, and demand that we make things even easier on women.

Which of course means men have to toughen up even more. And get blamed even more for it.

Secondly, this is hardwired into the human genome. Crying women inspire compassion. Crying men inspire contempt.

Why are Blue Pillers obsessed with "negging?"

3 upvotes · 17 October 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You don't know what a neg is.

You think the purpose of a neg is to tear down someone's self-esteem, to "take them down a peg".

If that were the case, it wouldn't work. Because feeling sad or having wounded pride does not make people horny, now, does it?

As someone else pointed out, you saying you understand negs is like a redneck saying "everything I need to know about Islam I learned on 9/11", because that's the only thing he knows about Islam.

You need to understand negs from the perspective of people who use them, rather than just the people who hate them. When you understand both perspectives, then you decide who is correct.

The purpose of a neg is to show that I have leverage, social value and dominance. How does this work? Let me give you an example.

One neg I sometimes use is when taking a woman's hand, I point out that she has dirt under her fingernails. (I can obviously only do this when it's true.)

Now, what social effect does this have?

- It tells her that I am not afraid of her, in the way that many modern men are... too afraid to say anything negative to a woman, lest they "miss their chance".
- It shows her that I have enough social value and attractiveness to have standards for women that they must live up to. This suggests that I am a high-value male who can pick and choose from among women.
- It establishes a frame where I am grading/evaluating her, not vice versa. This makes her see me as a dominant or authority figure, and makes me more attractive.

A well-calibrated neg doesn't make a woman think poorly of herself so much as well of me... it makes her think I have high standards and that she must "step up her game" in order to attract me.

Other negs include telling a woman you liked her previous hairstyle better, complimenting one aspect of her appearance/behaviour while pointing out that another one needs improvement, teasing her about some bad behaviour, and so on.

Any woman who can't tolerate being told she has dirt under her fingernails isn't an adult, and shouldn't be allowed out in public alone.

In fact, a woman doesn't even need to be an adult to tolerate negs. They are equally useful for making girls respect adult male caretakers. Anyone who is good with children knows that little boys respond best to encouragement, and admiration for their exploits, while little girls like an adult who pokes fun at them, while coupling it with affection.

In fact, I would say that many of the people who hate negs also use them sometimes without even being aware of it.

What is TRP life plan for an 18 year old girl embarking on her adult life?

3 upvotes · 15 October 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

What major?

I guessed your age correctly because you show little evidence of experience at planning a budget. In case, you don't get the message, that's my diplomatic way of saying you are spoiled. S'okay, it's common for middle class kids in your age group.

But you don't have a lot of experience of the value of a dollar. You won't be making 75k right out of university, unless your major is computer science and you're pretty good. However, you won't need to pay nearly 3k a month in rent to live in nice places in California, either. In general, your numbers are just off.

"A Message to All Women" - You Are Precious Little Princesses

3 upvotes · 11 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Why am I more horrified than before?

Is the MRM about equal rights?

3 upvotes · 10 October 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That works, too. Men are allowed to do that.

What value do the majority of r/theredpill participants place on compassion, benevolence and humaneness, and why?

3 upvotes · 8 October 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

As FleetingWish put it in her response, there isn't one definitive "compassionate" course of action.

Compassion is a feeling, not an action, or a goal. The fact that someone has that feeling might make you feel warm and fuzzy about them, but it doesn't mean that they are not about to do something awful because of that feeling. Karl Marx was motivated by compassion for the working class... and look how many millions of people got killed because some dudes took him too seriously.

It isn't who people are inside that matters... it's who they are outside. What's important is not how we feel, but how others experience us. A transplant surgeon who is completely motivated by greed and vanity is still a man who saves lives every working day.

Speaking, if I can, for the red pill philosophy, I would say that it values human happiness above benevolence, improving the world above feeling compassion, and the welfare of individual people above abstract "fairness" to collective entities.

If "alphas" are at the top of the food chain why does feminism and the current state of the Western world even exist?

3 upvotes · 7 October 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well said. The answer to the second question is easy. Patriarchy doesn't exist and never did.

But the first one is more interesting, and I think it's important to answer it, even if I'm doing so completely out of the context of the debate it occurred in.

If women really prefer "alphas" then why do "betas" still exist? Why hasn't female mate selection bred them out?

Because "alpha" and "beta" aren't people, they're behaviour patterns. And the basics of both are hardwired into all men, because they both serve a purpose. Alpha is for capitalizing on power and status to attract mates and intimidate rivals. Beta is for appeasing an ascendant rival so you don't get your head stomped.

One of the reasons our feminized society encourages inappropriate beta behaviour, and the reason many women encourage it, in the sincere belief that they "like nice, kind, considerate men", is that, among women, there is a basic pattern of prosocial behaviour that involves sweetness, niceness, politeness, doing favours for other women, etc. Because beta male behaviour superficially (very superficially) resembles this, many females mistake male supplicating behaviour for female prosocial behaviour... and who doesn't want to believe that they are attracted to prosocial people of good character?

People often don't understand that because male and female urges, needs, and values are different, what can be simple niceness in women might be grovelling supplication in men, because women are perfectly willing to do some things that men loathe and must be forced into... and vice versa.

Girl leaves her provider BF to fuck her ex when he complains about his day

3 upvotes · 6 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I think the bf is absolutely not beta at all. In his 50 he's still fucking a mid 20s girl. He probably doesn't give a shit about her

I told him it was over and he begged me to stay,

You Really Can't Make This Shit Up (Part 2)

3 upvotes · 2 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I despise the lies like that.

Which lies? The ones she is telling to her boyfriend? He's only responsible for his own lies. He doesn't have mind control powers. He didn't force her to lie. We are responsible for that which we control.

The idea behind a functioning community is that it's working together. If you're doing shit like that, you're not a community.

Sounds like you have forgotten the fundamental premise.

I need feminism because men aren't subservient and deserve to be because they invented racism. (X-Post TumblrInAction)

3 upvotes · 1 October 2013 · /r/MensRights

We are a multi system which includes the body (Sheila) and six others. We will all be making our own posts about our experiences and adventures in the world!

Heh.

/r/cringepics is also a hive of feminists and whiteknights.

3 upvotes · 30 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I decided to chime in and in a mature, respectful manner, defend the basics of the redpill philosophy. Not only did that get me branded as a geek who is a loser with women, a neckbeard, a misogynist, predator etc etc, it also got me a shadow-ban, despite the fact that I didn't break a single rule of the sub. I can't even post from other accounts, so it must be IP-based too.

Never wrestle with a pig in the mud.

When you both get sufficiently dirty, no one will be able to tell the difference between you and the pig.

X-post from /r/AnythingGoesPics on gender equality

3 upvotes · 28 September 2013 · /r/MensRights

As if you needed a meme to know many women arent little angels.

The problem is that many people do.

Woman makes blog with goal to make 300 sandwiches for fiancee. Feminists call boyfriend misogynist and chauvinist pig. Woman calls on critics to "lighten up"

3 upvotes · 26 September 2013 · /r/MensRights

I object to this because I have celiac disease, and am envious of all those yummy sandwiches and the people who can eat them.

I used to fucking love sandwiches.

Woman who has lived as a man for 18 months say that being a woman "is more of a privilege"

3 upvotes · 18 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

By "them", I mean society's prejudices, not individual people.

The Castration Of The American Conservative By Emmanuel Goldstein Decline And Fall

3 upvotes · 16 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Feminists and conservatives share the same goal... to protect women. They are only arguing about methods.

Red Pill Movies!

3 upvotes · 16 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Michael Clayton.

The gendered division of labour... in the sack

3 upvotes · 12 September 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

He is a particular favorite of mine among comedians.

Particularly enjoyed this: <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=PtB1seQQTCw>

Almost a quarter of men 'admit to rape in parts of Asia'. Questions were: Have you ever had sex with your partner when you knew she didn't want to but you thought she should agree because she's your wife/ partner? How many women would be rapists if asked the same question.

3 upvotes · 10 September 2013 · /r/MensRights

I'm 6'2, 200 pounds of barbell-liftin', gun-lovin', male-dominant-relationship-havin', promiscuous, assertive martial arts expert.

Now, according to this definition, I have been raped more times than I can count, by a variety of meek, submissive, girly women, some of whom weighed less than 100 pounds.

Sounds unlikely, huh? Yeah, that's because this definition of rape is bollocks. Rape is sex without consent, not sex you don't feel like.

Sex you don't feel like happens when you want to please someone else, when you're a whore who just got paid, when they did the same for you yesterday, when you're trying to start a child and the schedule says she's ovulating this very instant... I'm sure you can think of dozens more.

In fact, sex you don't feel like often turns into sex you do feel like halfway through.

Love her or hate her, Nicki Minaj seems to get it: "I like for the boy to take control"

3 upvotes · 30 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

You notice how carefully they are talking around the issue... stammering and searching for euphemisms for male dominance.

Yet when she finally finds a way to say it, the largely female audience cheers.

Feminists at a conference whip up terror and hysteria about "online harassment" being so horrific that a woman in the audience bursts into tears at the mere prospect of being "attacked" online at some indeterminate point in the future.

3 upvotes · 30 August 2013 · /r/MensRights

Well, that's the crux of the issue, isn't it? They're not naturally or normally this upset.

It's just that on some level, they are aware that "upset woman" == "sympathy" == "power". So they whip themselves into hysteria over nothing (and it's easier in groups), because that's what has worked for them so far.

Well, if you needed any more proof that women don't feel a sense of honor the way men do... From r/askhamsters: "What's the most 'shameful' thing you've done that you're not ashamed of?"

3 upvotes · 29 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

There are a bunch of different control mechanisms in human society that stop anti-social behaviour... guilt, shame, fear of punishment, etc.

We have a word for people who feel no guilt (sociopath). We have a word for people who feel no fear (psychopath). Why do we have no word for people who feel no shame?

LDR : Chick Psych 101

3 upvotes · 26 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

The take-away from this is that relationships are physical, personal, and social. Without personal contact, they do not work.

RPW: What is your love/dating life like, and are you happy?

3 upvotes · 24 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Well, you can call it "naturally", but notice how she did work to get what she wanted.

She saw a guy she was attracted to, and flirted with him. She took the initiative to cuddle up to him. She engineered a situation where she had an excuse to spend the night. This is girl game.

And he did things, too. He did whatever he needed to do in his life to become an attractive man, whom women such as her would want to flirt with. He flirted back. He spent time with her. He noticed her advances and responded to them, rather than being too shy or nervous. He made a move, and persisted even when she gave him last minute resistance. This is man game.

So, you see, they didn't set out one morning to meet someone, no. But they did work on being attractive, and when they were attracted to someone, they did something about it.

So, you may not feel like you want to "work on finding a man". But what you should be working on is being attractive and desirable. If you do that, then you will meet someone you want, things will work out, and it will feel like it happened "naturally", even though it totally was the result of your efforts.

In other words, the harder you work, the luckier you get.

Beta's "depressed" wife of 14 years is cheats on him their entire marriage while bidding her time and preparing a marriage parachute. He, of course, blames himself. r/relationship's advice? Couples counseling, what else!

3 upvotes · 20 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Where does strength come from?

I mean, physical strength. How do people get to be physically strong?

Divorce Rates: Just 1 Reason Why Women Should Have Never Been Allowed to Vote

3 upvotes · 19 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Depends what you mean by overpopulation and carrying capacity.

I think that the planet has different levels of carrying capacity depending on what minimum quality of life you expect for each individual.

The Archetypal Modern Woman

3 upvotes · 16 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

She didn't change her ways. She just jacked up the price.

Wife not connecting reward to positive behavior, consequence to negative behavior.

3 upvotes · 14 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Okay, here's your problem.

You don't really seem to understand how to "do" dominance. It isn't just getting your way, or expecting to get your way, or making the decisions.

It's leadership.

This means that you need to give her a road map for what you expect to happen. She needs to know what's expected of her.

Me: "You've been unreliable and lazy."

This is not good leadership. She doesn't know what you mean by that. She doesn't know why you think she's that way. You need to be specific, and give her a clear understanding of exactly what it was she did or didn't do.

If she didn't do X, Y, and Z, which she promised to do, you need to talk to her about those actions, not vaguely characterize her as "lazy".

Her: "I am overwhelmed."

This is a clear sign of a submissive woman who has been given too much responsibility, and hence too much power.

Me: "Looking back, what is usually the reason that you're overwhelmed?"

Her: "That I don't have a plan in place to deal with something important."

And there it is. She's practically begging you to take the lead.

And you don't:

Me: "Do you have a plan?"

Her: "No."

Me: "Then make a plan."

No, no, no, no, no.

You are the leader. You are the boss. You make the plan for her to carry out.

You need to tell her clearly and precisely what you expect her to do. Every single time she says "I am overwhelmed", she is asking for your leadership.

Leading, being the dominant partner, does not mean saying what you want, and then fucking off to drink beer and throw darts while she works out how to do it. It means you are steering, and if you let go of the wheel, it's crash time.

She needs to know exactly what she is expected to do. She needs to know what the next step is. If she doesn't, it's you that failed.

Dominance and submission is ultimately, a deal. You get to make the final decisions, and get treated with respect and even reverence. She gets to always know what is expected of her, and to be free of responsibility for choices she doesn't know how to make.

"I feel overwhelmed" means "lead me".

What is your opinion on saving sex for marriage? Just curious.

3 upvotes · 11 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

You keep saying "within my age group".

You would be better advised to look outside your age group. The common assumption that people should mate with people the same age is of recent origin, and is another blue pill myth. While dating guys your age works well enough for the typical cock train rider, older men are a much better bet for you.

A single (never married) man in his late twenties to mid-forties would have the following advantages for a girl in your situation.

- Marriages are statistically the most stable when the male partner is ten or more years older.
- Older men are more likely to be done riding the pussy carousel, and be willing to settle down and raise kids.
- Older men are more skilled at communication and negotiation, and teach you how to sustain a relationship and avoid teenage drama.
- Older men are calmer and less reactive.
- Older men are likely to be established in their careers, giving you more flexible support when the two of you are ready to have children.
- Older men are more confident and self-assured, making them more attractive to you in the context of relationship.
- Older men are likely to desire a younger woman, but have less available to them due to the attitude that people should mate with the same age. This maximizes the SMV of your youthfulness, allowing you to get a more desirable man than you would among men your own age.

- Older men come from a time when feminism was less pervasive. They are more likely to have "red pill" attitudes, and less likely to be embittered towards women.
- Older men are better in bed, and can teach you about sex, making your inexperience less of a disadvantage.

I always hated the "False Equivalency" comic.

3 upvotes · 4 August 2013 · /r/MensRights

TRP is training wheels for something, too.

Paedophile rapist sentenced to 16 months prison, will be free in a week for time served. Yes, she's a woman.

3 upvotes · 2 August 2013 · /r/MensRights

Not a pedophile. Not a rapist.

Only problem I see here is the double standard.

What if women treated jobs like they treat marriages and other long-term relationships?

3 upvotes · 2 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

well, depending on the company, they might want entry-level, or they might want someone who has held a few jobs, but has shown a pattern of sticking to each one, and performing well.

Oooh, something else to add to "victim blaming"

3 upvotes · 2 August 2013 · /r/MensRights

You have a valid point, but in today's political climate, abortion benefits men, too, because at least we can escape from some cases of unwanted parenthood, if the woman will listen to us.

In fact, I'm not really sure how an abortion ban benefits "men, other women... and society". Perhaps you could elaborate on your thinking?

Domestic Discipline

3 upvotes · 2 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'm not really submissive or subservient to "men" in general, but rather to my partner in particular.

Duh.

Any submissive woman is going to pick a particular man to obey. Even women who are slaves are slaves to a particular man as their master.

However, you are subservient (I use term to distinguish this from submissiveness in the bedroom-only sense) to a particular man because you want a man to be subservient to, and he's the one you like best.

If he got hit by a bus, you wouldn't suddenly lose your submissive tendencies. You would grieve for a time, pick up the pieces, find another man, and be subservient to him.

Your obedience is not an artifact of this relationship alone, but of your nature. If you're not serving a man, it's because you can't find one you're comfortable serving... and you're going to wish you could, and probably be looking for one.

I must, however, confess to some puzzlement as to why any woman who likes and trusts men enough to submit to one of them would describe herself as a member of what is essentially an anti-male interest group.

Marriage fail, I need help.

3 upvotes · 2 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

His having extramarital sex will not "justify" your actions. Two wrongs do not make a right.

I agree highly with you in general, but I would qualify this particular statement. Since she spoke of an open relationship, and then cheated, if he wants a hall pass at this point, he gets one. If he wants a unilateral hall pass at this point, he gets one. Neither of those would a second wrong. Anything he needs to fix his emotional investment in the relationship is on the table as an option at this point.

I agree, however, that if he did this, it would still not justify her actions, since he would be doing it with her full knowledge, whereas she lied and went behind his back to do what she did.

Apparently bitching about other people's work is more important than the actual work. (x-post gaming)

3 upvotes · 26 July 2013 · /r/MensRights

If it were necessary to pick a single person to be named as the founder of the computer games industry, it would be John Carmack.

MBTI personalities and dating

3 upvotes · 24 July 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

The MBTI was invented by someone whose sole academic credential was a bachelor's degree... in political science. It was based on the now-thoroughly-discredited theories of Carl Gustav Jung.

Almost no one in the field of psychometrics takes it seriously.

In short, it's junk science, great at coming up with a plausible-sounding explanation for what you saw, terrible at predicting what you are going to see.

Can we talk about character?

3 upvotes · 23 July 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

I think leadership is partially about character.

Being a leader means being able to inspire loyalty and trust. With that ability, others will respect and obey someone, even if he isn't nominally in charge. Without it, they won't respect or obey him, even if he is.

Since a man cannot simply beat others into submission, he's going to need this ability to inspire others in order to be dominant.

/u/LittleOctopus asks "why can't we all just get along?" As suggested, cross-posts on /r/feminism... Post deleted within 29mins. Guess that's the answer.

3 upvotes · 21 July 2013 · /r/MensRights

Being unnecessarily lenient.

We're not going to win by amiability. We already tried that. We need to win by visibility and stubbornness.

Cosmopolitan (women's mag): How common is female on male DV?

3 upvotes · 19 July 2013 · /r/MensRights

But I need no sympathy.

Red Pill philosophy feels a bit hopeless to me...thoughts?

3 upvotes · 18 July 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Agreed.

Some people are unable to stretch their minds to imagine more than two points of view. So anything that's not one pole of the usual political spectrum must be the other.

Red Pill philosophy feels a bit hopeless to me...thoughts?

3 upvotes · 17 July 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Welcome to the universe. It's harsh. I do not know exactly what you are asking, here. To be told that TRP is a bunch of big icky meanies? That this means they are wrong?

Certainly it's a reservoir of deeply angry young men without a lot of self-control. I got banned from the sub for not loving The Jesus(tm).

However, the whole, basically sound, point of the group is that one has to confront harsh realities about the sexual marketplace. Your choices matter to other people.

Your relationship history matters to people who might get into a relationship with you. Your value to other people is what you can do for them. Your level of maturity is the behaviour you display to other people.

Right now, you're being immature.

You saw something that upset you, and instead of trying to understand the different possible interpretations of it, you went and found someone to complain to, as if there were some vast cosmic parent out there who could make unpleasant things just go away.

All the red pill offers is information, stripped of its usual sugar coating. For someone raised on too much of that sugar, the taste seems bitter. But it isn't. It's just not oversweetened. As your taste buds recover, you may change your perspective and interpretation of what you have heard.

But until then, it isn't my job to educate you until you are ready to learn.

Female cyclists start a petition to be included in Tour de France. There would have to be different start and finish lines for men and women, or streets would have to be closed for hours till women would pass.

3 upvotes · 12 July 2013 · /r/MensRights

Are women barred from the Tour de France? Why don't they just go compete with the men?

Should men be allowed to opt out of child support? Interesting article.

3 upvotes · 11 July 2013 · /r/MensRights

Summary of article:

"No, because it might inconvenience women."

Saw a thread on r/theredpill, and it got me thinking about certain alpha males that are not appropriate to date. Can you give your opinion on this?

3 upvotes · 10 July 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Precisely.

If we integrate those two ideas, we get:

- As a man who doesn't want to be friendzoned, you can either reject any woman who isn't a slut, or you can get good at seduction.
- As a woman who doesn't want to be pumped and dumped, you can either reject any man who isn't an orbiter, or you can get good at being a keeper.

New Chateau Heartiste article today on the "Back To Europe" Movement. How do you feel about it?

3 upvotes · 3 July 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

The problem is that religion is basically "tell the people a palatable lie so they'll do what we want". That's the very definition of a blue pill.

It doesn't signify that some of their practices reflect the realities of the sexual marketplace... Islam has an even better track record on that, and look what shitholes their nations are.

The red pill is about opening your eyes and seeing what's there, regardless of what you want, or what the consequences might be.

Religion ain't that, with its big-magic-dude-that-made-the-universe and its invisible-immortal-part-of-you-that-no-can-detect-in-any-way-whatsoever.

"Forced motherhood is a form of violence." What about forced fatherhood?

3 upvotes · 2 July 2013 · /r/MensRights

1. My job, my time, my money, my labour, my self, my body.
2. Liberalism doesn't get to complain about a problem it created, then use that to further its own goals.

Poor TofuTofu. I wrote this for him (and to call the bullshit)

3 upvotes · 20 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I always get a giggle when the girls I date tell me that pua stuff wouldn't work on them. Like, they blank out and intentionally forget I picked them up using the exact same tactics. "But you're not creepy Tony! You're sweet!" Yes, I am sweet. And I'm not creepy because I creaped out a thousand women to learn how to be charming. That's the price I paid.

One of the key differences between a keeper and a pump and dump is how they react when you tell them about pua techniques.

If she gets huffy and insists "that stuff wouldn't work on her", she is not self-aware. Get your rocks off, then leave a trail of smoking footprints.

If she looks at it objectively and is impressed by your understanding of human nature, or curious about the theory behind the material, or even if she disagrees about some of it, but keeps the conversation about the ideas and not about her, consider sticking around.

Network of enlightened Women - positive site for good modern feminine women

3 upvotes · 20 June 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Tradcon ideologies may be more closely aligned to the conclusions most "red pill" takers form, but Tradcon != Red Pill.

My problem with conservative traditionalism is that, while it acknowledges sexual dimorphism in humans, it divides sex roles and motivations in an unconscious way, which stems from "what used to work (when we didn't have contraceptives)" , rather than from awareness of the sexual marketplace.

This gave rise to such perversions as male disposability, chivalry, the compassion gap, and other things that I have no interest in preserving.

Feminism and conservative traditionalism share a common goal... to serve and protect the interests of women. They are merely having a disagreement as to how best to accomplish this.

The Red Pill, on the other hand, advocates nothing in particular. It simply makes people aware of sexual realpolitik, and thus allows them to serve their own (chosen or instinctive) ends more effectively.

Be Selfish

3 upvotes · 9 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Duh.

And well-put.

And...

Duh.

How any of you have subscribed to /r/Feminism?

3 upvotes · 7 June 2013 · /r/MensRights

That's not fair.

A cunt has depth. And warmth.

And capacity to give pleasure.

SRS Rages because someone pointed out that it's easier for women to get laid

3 upvotes · 3 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Duh.

Women are the gatekeepers of sex. Men are the gatekeepers of relationships.

Women can get sex easily (open the gate), and have to work to get relationships. Men have to work to get sex, but can turn sex into a relationship more or less at will (just open the gate).

"I feel like you're only allowed to be vulnerable up to a small point if you want to be with a women, and that vulnerability is preferably expressed via anger." (x-post /r/OneY)

3 upvotes · 1 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Humans cannot speak or think without generalizing.

By the mere fact of placing things in categories, and naming those categories, we generalize.

But occasionally, someone hears a generalization they do not like, and, being unable to refute it the normal, rational way, they light on the fact that it is a generalization. They point this out, waving the declaration about as if it were the ball they had just won the superbowl with.

This serves no useful purpose. All characterizations are generalizations. Some are generally useful, and predictive. Others are generally not.

Most pathetic blue-pill example I've ever seen. Telling a girl you've never met that she's "perfect"

3 upvotes · 20 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Ooooh, I'm going to steal this. It's mine now. I came up with it.

That's my story and I'm sticking to it.

A New Low For Attention Whores?

3 upvotes · 20 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Not really TRP-relevant.

Teenagers do stupid stuff sometimes, because they're trying to figure out the rules.

Men's Health - Just Confirming Beta Acceptance

3 upvotes · 17 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Because cultural Marxists think that happiness is about not having to do anything difficult ever.

Theredpill only gets a bad rap because its so true that it hurts.

3 upvotes · 9 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

The only people who dont like me are the feminists and the manginas. Why dont they love me too? Why dont they love TheRedPill? Because its very existence, and the successful nature of the men who frequent this little corner of the internet is proof positive that they are full of shit.

It pains these people to think that some of us are hard working, fit, successful people who women find unbearably attractive in some way. They need to tell eachother that we arent real. Like kids who cant sleep at night and need their parents to tell them that there is no monster under their bed. Dont worry little mangina, just be yourself and the right woman will fall in love with you

Roissy said it before, you said it here, and I'll say it again:

Feminism, gender constructivism, and the whole Harrison Bergeran movement of cultural Marxists... they are all nothing but a sulky attempt to overturn the card table by people who have been dealt a bad hand.

They complain that it is unfair that some people have worse hands, and their solution is that no one is to have any cards at all. But the deal is random. And chaos does not play favorites.

I'm sorry, I came here against you, and 2 weeks of reading has opened my eyes. A recent conversation with a feminist friend has me livid right now. (BIG fucking wall of text)

3 upvotes · 6 May 2013 · /r/MensRights

"Pregnancy is unequal because biology is unequal."

And the "right to choose" is an attempt to introduce fairness into that unequal biology. So why not attempt to give men more fairness, too?

MRA's don't want the responsibility for any children they father"

We want what women have been given, not by biology, but by the law. The right to decide whether or not we want to be a parent.

PUA/Getting laid is a worthless pursuit.

3 upvotes · 4 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Existential angst is a perennial human problem, and not really related to the red pill in any meaningful way.

Michael Moore on Twitter: "I guessed correctly. The bombings were not carried out by women."

3 upvotes · 19 April 2013 · /r/MensRights

Feminists seem to have such a seething, primal hatred for the kinds of guys who actually sympathize with them.

Wow, are you ever onto something there.

The worst term of seething contempt feminists can find for MRAs, PUAs, RedPill men, and the manosphere in general is "fat neckbeard".

And yet, when you look at what it takes to make fat and neckbearded, and what makes one clean-shaven and covered in apelike slabs of muscle, then one is likely to conclude that lifting weights and going out and talking to women is probably better than eating Hagen-Das and watching my little pony. (Yes, apparently this is a thing. Don't ask me, I cannot explain it.)

So this is another one of those "feminist accidental truths" that I so love.

The name they choose, for the followers of the philosophy they hate and fear the most, is "fat neckbeard". This shows what it is that feminists actually most despise, and is precisely the kind of man that feminism attracts and/or produces.

Blue Beta -> Seduction -> PUA -> Red Pill -> MGTOW

3 upvotes · 19 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

It depends what you consider "going one's own way" as a man.

Some people mean not following society's plan for men (no marriage, no kids, etc). By that definition, anyone who doesn't "go his own way" is probably not awake to the dangers.

Others mean shunning the company of women altogether, up to and including voluntary celibacy. While men who choose this will be safer and more prosperous than even the masters of game, it's hard to imagine them being anywhere near as happy and content.

So one is indeed tempted to wonder why any man would choose celibacy, unless it wasn't a choice.

But there are several factors in play here.

- Men have different levels of seduction skill.
- Men have different levels of sexual desire.
- The availability of truly desirable women in the first-world west is very limited.

Let's expand on that last point a little. It can hardly have escaped your attention that even the "HB9 - HB9.9..." set, while certainly easy on the eyes and skilled at making themselves presentable, often act more like men with vaginas than in any fashion that one might describe as "feminine".

One starts to notice this (or at least I did) when one develops pickup skills to the point where simply "getting the girl" is not the issue any more. One starts noticing, that the girl, when gotten, really doesn't have any notion of what behaviour men might like, or bring much of anything to the table outside of decorative appearance and sexual prowess.

I could go on about this, but this will serve, and save me a lot of typing.

So we're dealing with a calculus of many variables here... how difficult is the girl to "get", how much do we like "getting" girls, how desirable are the available options, what are the risks, how likely are those risks, etc.

And some men do the computation and come up with the answer, "nah, not worth it". It's easy to point to the first variable and say "they have no game", but the other factors are present, too.

Because the game is rigged, even if you learn to be, as they say, alpha as fuck. You are still at risk for female violence-by-proxy... this can include beatings, imprisonment, rape, or murder, whether it be carried out by the state (the ultimate beta white knight), or by a mob of beta bystanders. You still have the fruit of your labour taxed away and given to women, and to programs designed to screw you (Title IX, VAWA, WIC, etc).

Alpha behaviour gives you more power over individual women in your life, so you can make them behave more considerately, but the game is still rigged on a more global scale.

Pickup skills and sexual abundance are a good first step, but I don't want to stop at having lots of good sex while still living in a society that hates me and everything I represent.

Are Gay Men welcome here?

3 upvotes · 10 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Absolutely.

You may not have to deal on a personal level with the bullshit of women poisoned by feminism, but you still have to live in society poisoned by feminism.

Anyone who pays taxes, especially if they run/own a business, has been hurt by feminism. Anyone who is harmed by society's contempt for males has been hurt by feminism.

And of course you are affected by other bluepill trends besides feminism. By the valuation of consensus over expertise. Being nice over being right. Sharing over producing. Criticizing over creating. Feelings over facts. Central planning over free market competition.

I could go on all day like this.

While redpill's rejection of niceness policing means that we must reject certain positive messages about homosexuality (redpill truth: heteronormativity is entire appropriate because heterosexuality is the fucking default), that doesn't mean we have yet found one single shred of evidence that suggests homosexuality is detrimental to society, or to the individual, or to anything that matters.

So, while some of the information here may be of limited use to you (I have no tips for you on how to pick up sexy gay dudes), you're certainly welcome.

Hose or Marshmallows?

3 upvotes · 6 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Maybe. Maybe not.

Consider this. Women have only the power men give them.

Red Pill Music? Just realized half my fucking playlist is bullshit love songs, even some of the rap songs revolve around chasing a girl.

3 upvotes · 3 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Dude, listen to whatever the fuck sounds good.

You just know most of the dudes singing about eternal love are actually pumping and dumping groupies with reckless abandon.

Although I do have a soft spot for Hey Mister.

Why High Heels Are Attractive On Women

3 upvotes · 23 March 2013 · /r/askTRP

Overenthusiastic speculation without a proper grounding in empiricism. Of such stuff are blue pills made.

Think of what we would say about a feminist who said high heels were awful because they were "designed to make women helpless".

List of RedPill movies

3 upvotes · 21 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Not a movie, but the HBO miniseries "Rome" is great for showing a society that valued its alphas and their masculine virtues.

Is Seddit and/or many PUAs putting women on a pedestal? ("Approach Anxiety is a symptom of EXTREME selfishness and douchebaggery")

3 upvotes · 20 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

True, but I am not a big fan of using blue pills to provoke actions, even if they are the right action.

When you don't teach people the truth, but use lies to steer them in the direction they need to go, you make them dependent upon the attention, effort, and good graces of whoever is dispensing their blue pills this week.

Success Story

3 upvotes · 20 March 2013 · /r/askTRP

I kept telling myself that I must do the right thing, treat everyone with respect, compassion and empathy and that someday I'd find the right woman that would treat me right.

Exactly.

Being treated right isn't about finding the right woman. It's about teaching women to treat you right.

You get the behaviours you incentivize. Punish women for mistreating you, and reward them when they are considerate and respectful, and they will be considerate and respectful. Reward them with your kindness when they are being selfish, and they will continue to be selfish.

Do All Women Treat You the Same? It's Not THEM... it's YOU

3 upvotes · 20 March 2013 · /r/seduction

You should, because science says you're wrong.

You see human behaviour as a stream flowing in one direction, from thought to action.

Human behaviour is a loop. Thoughts cause actions, actions cause thoughts, environment causes thoughts, actions cause environment.

Being happy makes you smile. Smiling makes you happy. Things from your environment make you happy. Smiling changes your environment.

Do you see it now? Everything affects everything else. There is no starting point, no origin of the circle.

(But if you're changing something, it's best to work on changing your actions. They can be observed and measured.)

Ucas: Men are becoming 'disadvantaged group'

3 upvotes · 20 March 2013 · /r/MensRights

It's very interesting to me that some people call a dowry a "bribe to take this woman off our hands" and a bride price "selling a woman".

[Mod] Posting Rules Update 2013

3 upvotes · 12 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

So you mean "strategy" in the evolutionary sense, and "sexual strategy" you mean "plan for prospering in areas of life where my outcomes are affected by being male".

Fair enough. All that's needed is a little clarification then.

- Why must boys be taught to act like and enjoy the same things as girls?

3 upvotes · 1 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Interesting question, but certainly not Red Pill.

It's full of Jesus, the bluest pill of all.

Girl who cried Rape

3 upvotes · 27 February 2013 · /r/MensRights

We're not talking about the law. We're talking about justice. If we accept the law as written to be justice, we might as well not have a men's rights movement.

Is there anyone who thinks a 19 year old man shouldn't be having sex with a 16 year old woman? Anyone?

Genetic Celebrity (Rational Male)

3 upvotes · 23 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I see that hamsters are not female-only.

"It was an over correction" Bill Burr's controversial opinion on feminism (skip to 51:15)

3 upvotes · 22 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Yes, most certainly do skip to 51:15. Most of the rest is him getting mad at the rest of the world because he's too dumb to operate anything invented after 1980.

I was wrong — the hamster central is right here, on Reddit.

3 upvotes · 16 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

No, that's fairly accurate. Who is she writing this for? I mean, if she doesn't want to work to lose the weight or whatever, then fine.

Except look at all her posts to /r/BTFC .

This is a woman who's trying to lose fat hamsterizing either her lack of progress, or her dissatisfaction with her progress.

Young Marine Must Continue To Pay Child Support for a Child That Is Not His: Court called mother's actions "deliberately lying to Brandon about being the father of the child"

"despicable."", then finan

3 upvotes · 15 February 2013 · /r/MensRights

Sometimes I wonder if I make too big a deal of this "men's rights" thing. If I spend too much thought and time and energy on it.

And then I see news stories like this.

Article refers to men as just being "penises" in passing. Can you imagine backlash if they referred to women as "cunts"?

3 upvotes · 1 February 2013 · /r/MensRights

What read from this is not so "contempt for men" per se, as "complete and totally ignorance about what actually makes relationships work, or not work.

She thinks relationships need things like same age, same level of power, common interests, etc. These are almost totally irrelevant, and, in some cases, counterproductive.

To know what makes relationships work, you need to know what a relationship is.

A relationship is an ongoing or repeated interaction with mutual benefit. That's all. An ongoing or repeated interaction with mutual benefit.

Businesses have a relationship with satisfied repeat customers. Friends who enjoy each other's company have a relationship. I have a relationship with my roommate, with the girls I hook up with repeatedly, and with the bacteria living in my intestinal tract.

Notice that there are two clauses here. The first one is what we see, the second is why it happens. Interactions are repeated and ongoing because benefit is mutual. Interactions continue to be repeated and ongoing while benefit continues to be mutual.

That's all there is to it.

If you truly want to know which relationships will continue, figure out if benefit is mutual, and how long it seems likely to continue to be so.

For example, it is easy to see how Piggy benefits from her interactions with Kermit, but what exactly does Kermit get from her besides headaches and trouble?

On a side note, it is interesting how she describes a controlling female partner as a "ballsy go-getter", but a controlling male partner as a "disturbing controlling personality" (perhaps because she secretly craves a spanking or two and is bothered by this?).

Double standard much?

My opinion on some of the content in /r/mensrights

3 upvotes · 20 January 2013 · /r/MensRights

It has been my experience that inclusion always strengthens a group, and exclusion always weakens it.

Annnnnnnnnnd spot on again. Friendened.

My opinion on some of the content in /r/mensrights

3 upvotes · 20 January 2013 · /r/MensRights

anti-feminism is a respectable position, neither intellectually nor morally weak, and therefore nothing to hide or apologise for.

Oooh, that's a very concise way of saying something that has always taken me paragraphs. I'm going to steal this for the next time some white-knight calls me a misogynist.

Anyone else get really depressed by /r/seduction?

3 upvotes · 17 January 2013 · /r/seduction

Asking a woman for seduction advice is like asking a child for parenting advice.

AFCs became AFCs by listening to what women said they wanted. It's not that women lie on purpose about what they want. It's that they don't know. They think they know, but they don't, because their actual behaviour gives their words the lie.

Never try to figure out if a woman "likes you". She doesn't know. Never ask her if she "likes you". It's rude, because you're demanding an answer she doesn't have. She doesn't know if she wants to kiss you.

She only knows if what she's actually experiencing of your behaviour right now is a turn on, or a turn off.

If there's one big core principle to seduction, it's:

Stop trying to figure out how she feels. Do something and see if it works.

["Court not responsible for protecting men from their own intoxication"] Manhattan man who didn't check out the oversized tab at Larry Flynt's Hustler Club has to fork over $28,000 - NY Daily News

3 upvotes · 17 January 2013 · /r/MensRights

Meanwhile, women who have drunken sex are rape victims! Because the court is responsible for protecting them from their own intoxicated behaviour!

Reddit cofounder Aaron Swartz commits suicide - What needs to be done to lower suicide rates among men?

3 upvotes · 12 January 2013 · /r/MensRights

Can't restore something that never existed.

It's stuff like this that makes me sick

3 upvotes · 11 January 2013 · /r/MensRights

And it's important to draw a distinction between enjoyment and consent.

Many prostitutes are probably not having too much fun, but that doesn't mean they are being raped.

Askreddit thread asks "what's the worst thing you've ever been accused of?". Thread EXPLODES with false rape allegations.

3 upvotes · 10 January 2013 · /r/MensRights

You forgot to apologize for being:

- heterosexual
- not transgender
- able bodied
- healthy
- mostly American

Times one shouldn't approach?

3 upvotes · 11 December 2012 · /r/seduction

There is one set of circumstances under which one should not approach.

And that's if you want to be left alone right now.

College Says "Men Working" Sign is Sexist. Construction crew forced to stop work until sign is removed. (x/post from r/nottheonion)

3 upvotes · 6 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

Theoretical sexism of sign which doesn't mention, that there might hypothetically have been a woman on the construction crew, but there isn't: Noticed.

Actual sexism of fact that women don't have to do construction jobs: Unnoticed.

You wouldn't understand; You will never get pregnant

3 upvotes · 3 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

"Anything you can do by accident is not a great accomplishment."

Feminist logic in regards to MRA's

3 upvotes · 1 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

Not all truths are relevant.

NAFALT is irrelevant because people who say it only say it to defend feminism, never to correct the behaviour of the feminists they "aren't like". It's used as a response to criticism, never to the bad behaviour itself.

British journalist Toby Young on how American women objectify men: "I always found the experience of being on a date in New York extremely uncomfortable ... No man is held to possess any intrinsic value - we're all just the sum of our assets."

3 upvotes · 21 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

You clearly haven't read the material.

You are launching arguments against your surmises about what it must be... but the stuff you're talking about doesn't work.

What "pickup skills" are isn't really about a set of tricks. It starts with understanding how female attraction works. Then it continues with practice.

It just seems a little silly to me to run down something when you don't even know exactly what it is. It smacks of a belief held for emotional reasons, because you want it to be true, rather than for evidentiary ones.

Possibly the worst possible concocted evidence for male privilege.

3 upvotes · 14 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

Wow. I mean, I made up "transracial" to make fun of characters like this in a comment in /r/TeachMeToBeOffended .

I never dreamed that someone would actually think this was a thing.

Bus driver involved in incident with woman has been fired

3 upvotes · 7 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

Martial arts expert here, and you are just plain wrong.

It is incredibly hard to restrain someone without hurting them, even if they are much weaker than you.

A feminist's view of the ideal society: "all the women would share one good-looking local stud to have babies with..."

3 upvotes · 30 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Indeed. If you don't have any marketable skills, you cannot possibly be independent, and if you cannot be independent, you can't be free... at least in the sense of the word free that is used by most feminists.

So when people elect to study political ideology instead of electrical engineering, they subjugate themselves. Because someone is going to have to support them and that someone will then be their master.

Feminists could be better women's liberationists (note how that term seems archaic, now that the women's movement discovered that liberation comes with responsibility and is harder to live with than "more stuff")... by dropping the women's studies, and majoring in physics, math, or mechanical engineering instead.

Do Guys Fight For Their Friendships? (Hint: NYT says "No"; I say "Hell, Yes"! — The Good Men Project

3 upvotes · 28 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

GMP. Downvote and ignore.

I asked a girl for 3 things she's into, later another guy did the same, she pointed it out and awkwardness ensued.

3 upvotes · 19 October 2012 · /r/seduction

Agree and amplify. Tell her it's a global conspiracy, and that now the two of you are going to have to hypnotize her and erase her memory to cover the slip-up.

Then "hypnotize" her, with as much cheesy exaggeration and kino as you can work in. Use "post-hypnotic suggestion" jokes as compliance tests.

[FR] "You can be my wingwoman!"

3 upvotes · 14 October 2012 · /r/seduction

I get her a drink from my friend and end up almost grabbing someones drink by mistake. Turns out this guy is a black guy whos built like a linebacker. He goes "HEY! These are my drinks!" I retort with "Well then why aren't you drinking them, MAN!?" Shortly after that, we chest bump and I make friends with him and his buddies...turns out it's his birthday and his friends buys us all a couple rounds of shots. After exchanging numbers with him (he was a total bro)

THIS is how you handle an AMOG.

90% of the time, AMOGs don't want to cockblock you. They just want their props, their respect, to maintain their position. Treat alphas with respect without being subservient, and be friendly without showing weakness, and they will turn from your biggest obstacle into your greatest assist.

Reminder about the rules. There seems to be a lot of confusion.

3 upvotes · 1 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Because a zero-tolerance policy is a zero-intelligence policy, and a zero-discretion policy.

This explains so much: Feminists reject logic as patriarchy; elevate emotion as "women's ways of knowing."

3 upvotes · 17 September 2012 · /r/MensRights

I don't give a crap what the manhood academy is, apart from spammers. The spamming is enough to turn me off of them forever.

Why so much hating on marriage?

3 upvotes · 17 September 2012 · /r/MensRights

I'm obviously well versed with the dangers of marrying someone who will take advantage of you but why don't we all take the reddit anecdote and not "stick our dicks in crazy".

Blame the victim much?

My parents and my grandparents and 90% of my friends parents are still married and happily so.

Mistake anecdotes for statistics much?

While there are obvious risks to marriage, it works great for so many people. Think for example about driving your car. It is great and you probably enjoy it too but every time you take your car out you could be run over and killed.

Misunderstand the mathematical concept of an expected gain much?

"Women are people, not puzzle boxes."

3 upvotes · 16 September 2012 · /r/seduction

All people are puzzle boxes.

Stop white-knighting. Women can take care of themselves.

Study shows that both men and women look down on prospective partners for too many sexual encounters. "Slut-shaming" not restricted to women only.

3 upvotes · 11 September 2012 · /r/MensRights

Oh, not this shit again.

Don't you realize that this is part of the slut-shaming? Saying "I don't like PUAs, not because they're promiscuous, but because they manipulate women into sex" is like saying "I don't like promiscuous women, not because they're promiscuous, but because they are selfish, immoral, lying, backstabbing home-wreckers".

The inherent assumption that lots of sex == sociopathy IS slut-shaming in a nutshell.

You see, brother, you need another red pill.

If you read about seduction techniques and think "manipulation" rather than "going about behaving attractively in a systematic fashion", then you are falling prey to the misandrist assumption that male sexuality is unwelcome, unwanted, and unworthy, and no woman in her right mind would have anything to do with it unless the poor delicate dear were foully tricked into debasing her precious chastity by the scandalous tricks of some unworthy male cad.

Women are not pure magical creatures made of angelic starstuff. They are animals made out of the same rutting, panting, quivering meat as the rest of us.

And I can tell you from experience that women love those tricks. They don't burst into tears of regret in the cold light of day. They purr like kittens, make you breakfast, giggle at their own wickedness after they take phone calls from their boyfriend while lying next to you, still slick with coital sweat. They leave far too many phone messages.

Denying women's agency in this is the sort of thing a feminist would do, rationalizing furiously as to why we cannot hold the poor dears responsible for their own actions.

Pediatricians Decide Boys Are Better Off Circumcised Than Not : Shots - Health Blog : NPR

3 upvotes · 27 August 2012 · /r/MensRights

Boys, of course, not consulted at all.

half of students said it would sometimes be okay for a girl to hit her boyfriend, such as if he "makes his girlfriend jealous on purpose."

3 upvotes · 11 August 2012 · /r/MensRights

Today I learned that there is no sexism against men, because one is president.

I also learned that there is no racism against blacks, because one is president.

And that internet logic is easy and lots of fun for everybody.

Women of reddit: how do I know when I'm being too aggressive?

3 upvotes · 2 August 2012 · /r/seduction

1. If you don't ask children for parenting advice, if you don't ask trout for fishing advice... then don't ask women for seduction advice.
2. It is better to ask forgiveness than permission.
3. It is better to be an interesting jerk than a boring eunuch.
4. Half the species is female. Thus, a woman is not a rare opportunity, but an everyday commodity. If you turn one off, there's another one easily found nearby.
5. If you're worried about being too aggressive, that is a sign you are not being aggressive enough.
6. Making a fool of yourself is better than saying nothing.
7. Doing the wrong thing is better than doing nothing.
8. You don't need every woman to like you, so long as some of them do.

We're having an MGTOW debate over at /r/LadyMRAs and we'd appreciate various POVs from /r/MensRights.

3 upvotes · 22 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

The problem was they pushed his buttons until he raged, then interpreted anger at having his buttons pushed as hatred of women.

Literally the first thing anyone asked him was:

Do you feel like you lack respect for all women?

Implied accusation of misogyny, right there.

Feminism is not misandry

3 upvotes · 12 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

Your brain meats are pretty tasty, too.

"best first date moves for men" discussed by 6 women

3 upvotes · 11 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

The best moves for parenting, discussed by 6 children,

The best moves for fishing, discussed by 6 trout.

Don't Be a Dick: The False Virtues of the Classic Alpha Male

3 upvotes · 3 July 2012 · /r/seduction

This entire article is very little besides passive aggression. The author creates a caricature of alpha males that one would be hard-pressed to find in the world, calls it the "classic" alpha male, then presents the actual classic alpha male as if it were something he just invented.

I smell a keyboard hero.

Worse yet, I smell someone who still secretly thinks passive-aggressive betas are "nice guys".

Men obsessed with their muscles are more sexist, more likely to believe thin women are more attractive

3 upvotes · 27 June 2012 · /r/MensRights

Crossposted to /r/fitness so some of us "meatheads" can speak in our own defense.

Men obsessed with their muscles are more sexist, more likely to believe thin women are more attractive

3 upvotes · 27 June 2012 · /r/MensRights

Also, people obsessed with appearing sophisticated to others are...

'You look like you could kill someone'

3 upvotes · 14 June 2012 · /r/seduction

This.

There is no trait that a woman cannot construe positively or negatively, depending on whether she likes you or not.

Did you know, that Queen Elizabeth II is far and away the world's largest landowner?

3 upvotes · 11 June 2012 · /r/MensRights

I was unaware that the queen was particularly large.

I think it's worth clarifying what exactly it is that we do here on Seddit.

3 upvotes · 8 June 2012 · /r/seduction

Short for "traditionalist conservative".

I tell people women AND men's rights are important, and I'm told to get off my high horse.

3 upvotes · 6 June 2012 · /r/MensRights

We keep talking.

Logic, reason, proof, and other such valid arguments don't convince people because people evolved their intelligence for social interactions, not for evaluating evidence. Thus, human beings are not logical, reasonable, rational creatures.

Instead, it is social factors that carry weight in convincing social animals.

People are hardwired to accept popularity of an belief as evidence of its reasonableness, and even its correctness. So if enough of us are talking, we can have every single real piece of evidence be rejected by most listeners, but still gradually cause people to see our point of view as acceptable, then as rational, then as correct.

IAmA beautiful woman - AMA

3 upvotes · 31 May 2012 · /r/seduction

So?

You seem to think that we don't talk to beautiful women on a regular basis, and must be filled to the brim with questions we're burning to ask.

But this forum is all about skill at talking to women, and some of us are pretty good at it. So... back of the line, sweetie, just like everyone else.

Dear Guys In Clubs (Mini Rant)

3 upvotes · 18 May 2012 · /r/seduction

when I see guys doing this in clubs it just looks like Rape to me

This is a problem with you, not guys or clubs.

This blog...

3 upvotes · 17 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

Having a son is probably my worst fear. I just hate men

Radfems are so useful. They take feminism, strip away the sugar coating, and show everyone its true colours.

It's funny... reading all the comments, I don't feel angry at all.

At first I wondered why.

And then I remembered bringing a kitten home at the age of seven. While he was wandering about the kitchen, batting around a piece of uncooked pasta (still one of his favorite cat toys until the day he died), someone (I think it was me) dropped a pot holder.

For some reason, this little fluffball thought that pot holder was a demon from the burning pit of the netherworld. Back arched, hissing, spitting, raking at it with claws extended, then pausing to hiss and yowl again. The pot holder, being an inanimate piece of cloth, just sat there.

On and on it went, cat vs. pot holder. And all of my family paralyzed with laughter.

A small, cute, fuzzy kitten, newly born into this world, and unable to distinguish a real threat from a harmless part of the natural environment.

The Lonely Life of Julia: In Obama's ideal world, men are replaced by bureaucrats.

3 upvotes · 5 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

Ah, the "rising tide lifts all boats" argument.

Problem is, that can also be used to argue for tax cuts.

And a point that supports both sides of an argument isn't exactly compelling.

Can we stop trying to help foreveralone now?

3 upvotes · 7 April 2012 · /r/seduction

And yet our skillset is supposed to be precisely the ability to motivate people, is it not?

10 Unbelievably Shty Things America Does to Homeless People. (x-post AnythingGoesNews)

3 upvotes · 7 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

6 is clearly a violation of the First Ammendment. A christian or muslim could argue in court that his religion commands him to acts of charity, and that punishing him for them is a violation of his religious freedom.

so has anyone else here been told that they arn't allowed to cry ?

3 upvotes · 6 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

Of course we have been told that. We are men. All men get told that.

Huffington Post: Where Are the 'Normal' Men?

3 upvotes · 5 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

Besides, I don't care about money -- that stuff comes and goes -- but I would like someone who automatically walks on the outside of the sidewalk, in case a New York taxicab should fly over the curb and graze one of us (yes, someone who's willing to take a grazing for me). Or a man who puts his hand on the small of my back as he opens the door to a restaurant, and guides me in, like Cary Grant would do. I know where the door is, but shouldn't it be him catching swine flu, not me? Is that so horribly twentieth century of me to want these basic things?

....

Where are all the normal men?

Far, far, away from you.

V-leaks: Feminine Surrender as Emotional Dominance | GendErratic

3 upvotes · 3 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

Ah. This is a concept that I had named, in my own conversations with others, "bullying by proxy".

The basic idea is that, by pretending to more fragility than is the case, someone can get a third party to do her coercion for her.

Viewed in a certain light, the entire feminist movement can be seen as an example of this.

"Tell men not to rape"

3 upvotes · 3 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

Tell women not beat and murder children.

Can we PLEASE stop with the hate-speech directed towards Women's Rights activism?

3 upvotes · 1 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

Can we please stop the concern trolling?

Question for reddit, how should I sit without looking mad or awkward?

3 upvotes · 14 March 2012 · /r/seduction

Legs apart, arms resting on something. Slouch. Sprawl. Put your feet up, rest your head.

Nervous people and subordinates sit upright in defensive postures. Dominant males drape themselves over the furniture like a sleepy cat.

Oregon: Make a false accusation of child abuse during a divorce, ruin the other parent's (usually dad's) life, and you may face a $750 fine, if a new bill passes

3 upvotes · 14 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

Apparently, knowing making a false accusation of a felony is 50% worse than parking in the handicapped space. Who knew?

New Law Stops Injustice of "Alimony Without End".

3 upvotes · 9 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

Well-meaning posters concerned about the "tone" and "vibe" of this article in 3... 2...

XKCD has us figured out (x-post from /r/XKCD)

3 upvotes · 9 March 2012 · /r/seduction

<http://xkcdexplained.com/post/1220626882/beautiful-dream>

[FR] My first threesome, including structure (HB10+FB7)(xpost)

3 upvotes · 23 February 2012 · /r/seduction

Wait, lemme guess: they think threesomes are oppressive?

Can we please ban QuestionEveryPost?

3 upvotes · 21 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

As I said to the other poster, that short blurb was prompted by my memory of seeing someone say 13 year old girls could seduce adult men, but 13 year old boys would be victims in the same scenario.

Well, a double standard isn't a very defensible position.

I certainly don't agree with it. I think that 13 year olds of both genders can sometimes consent to sex. I certainly did when I was 13. And I'm over 30 and haven't changed my mind yet.

But it's still a claim which can be shot down by counterarguments, not bans.

All I was saying is that a lot of things get said here and are allowed that make the movement look not so great

The important distinction is not how something looks, but whether it adds value to the discourse. Relevant opinions, even repugnant ones, do. Insults don't.

Can we please ban QuestionEveryPost?

3 upvotes · 21 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Absolutely not.

He's making our case for us by being such a jackass. It's not a strawman technique if your opponents really are the ones setting up the strawmen.

A youtuber explains why women hitting men is okay.

3 upvotes · 21 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

It would be interesting to ask if this means it's okay for white people to hit black people.

So many of the things they say about men break down when you substitute "black man" for "man".

Don't reply to trolls

3 upvotes · 16 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Yeah, I know. It always makes me feel good when they link me. It's like having Jerry Falwell blame a natural disaster on you... you know you must be doing something right.

Don't reply to trolls

3 upvotes · 16 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Why bother? It's like being attacked by a duck. It's not threatening. It's just funny.

VAWA: Which Side Are You On Boys?

3 upvotes · 16 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

The enemy of my enemy is not my friend. He is my enemy's enemy, nothing more.

Had A Painful Conversation With This Girl Today

3 upvotes · 13 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

I call Ron Paul a loony Jesus-freak because he has publicly stated the Constitution of the United States is "replete with references to god".

Since no references to god occur within the document at all, I can only conclude that he has either never read it, or that his religious convictions are strong enough to override the evidence of his own eyes. This last is the very definition of a religious loon.

I wandered in here today and I'm a little hurt.

3 upvotes · 12 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

I've heard of male birth-control, but that's about it. Is this something that's currently available or will be soon?

There are two available birth control methods for men. Two.

One is condoms. We'll talk about those in a minute.

The other is a vasectomy.

It's permanent and irreversible. It's surgery. And the experience of having one... well, let's just list the experiences I've had in getting one.

First, when you say you want one, there's a 30-day waiting period, and a class you have to take, before you can sign the legal papers consenting to one. If the urologist is willing to give you one at all. (That's right, urologist.

There's no equivalent of a gynecologist, for males. No medical specialty for your bits. You get to go to the guy whose real specialty is bladder infections.)

Some refuse when they find out you don't already have any children. Get the lecture about how all surgery has risks, you could lose your testicles, etc.

Then there's the part where the doctor sticks you once with the lidocaine, and then immediately slices open your scrotum with a knife, without bothering to wait for it to work. So you get to find exactly what it feels like to have your scrotum sliced open with a knife.

It hurts.

Once you get some actual anesthesia, and the procedure is finished, you sit at home for three weeks, unable to move, with an ice pack on your testicles, and eating vicodin like popcorn. No sexual release of any kind for three weeks. If you weren't a software engineer who could work from home, or if you couldn't afford to take those three weeks off of work, then fuck you. You're out of luck.

Then, once you can move and ejaculate again, you must produce two negative samples, two weeks apart, before you're good to go. They give you a lab slip and plastic specimen jar. Bring this in to the lab in less than thirty minutes. If you live more than thirty minutes away from the lab, well, maybe they have a restroom you can use. Maybe a stall.

Oh, and by the way, the lab people hate semen samples. And they hate you. They do medicine, they don't want to deal with "man problems". This address Kaiser gave you, it's wrong, see? We don't do that here. Take this sample jar back. Bring it to this address across town. Here, let me repeat some directions to you, which you can pretend aren't wrong. Hurry, clock's ticking on that thirty minutes.

Oh, your sample came back positive. We'll do another one in a month. Be sure to keep using condoms.

Your sample came back positive.

Your sample came back positive.

Your sample came back positive.

Your sample came back positive.

Your sample came back positive. I'm ordering a full semen analysis. Drive to this lab an hour away. They say they have a stall you can use.

Your procedure must have failed. Do you, like, want to have another one?

In the followup to this post, we'll discuss the wonderful world of condoms.

I wandered in here today and I'm a little hurt.

3 upvotes · 10 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

And what have we learned from this little exercise?

Something I'd like to whine about momentarily - I despise how anyone who disagrees with Feminism is an "MRA troll".

3 upvotes · 9 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Well, I personally think the anti-male trolls should be downvoted instead of banned. There's a subthread close by where I explain why, I'm sure you can find it.

As for banning MRAs, who has he banned and why?

Women Who Want Domesticity

3 upvotes · 8 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

That's a pretty sketchy site, there. Full of racist dog whistles.

Edit: No, wait, not dog whistles. Straight-up racism out in the open.

A feminist betrays her own race by dating outside of her race

A feminist can never be White Pride

A feminist enjoys commercials that openly insult white males, and finds them humorous

It's a white supremacist site. Surely, we can find better sources for commentary than this.

Domestic violence against men is marginalized: From Tiger Woods to Phil Hartman

3 upvotes · 4 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

One reason that domestic violence against men is not taken seriously is that men on average are stronger than women. ^ There are many problems with this idea. ^ The most obvious is that men are afraid to defend themselves against women because they will be thrown in prison regardless of the actual circumstances. ^ The advantage of strength can be nullified. ^ One quick way of doing that is to pull out a gun. ^ No matter how strong a man is, he isn't going to stop a bullet. ^ Knowledge of martial arts is another.

The problem with this (apart from the unicode fail) is that reasons like this are really irrelevant.

There is one reason, and only one, why strength is irrelevant in IPV (intimate partner violence). The one reason is that the victims don't fight back.

The biggest, scariest dude in the world can be beaten to a pulp by the most feeble woman, if he doesn't defend himself.

Good Cracked article with a few scientifically-validated things to increase your attractiveness to the opposite sex.

3 upvotes · 1 February 2012 · /r/seduction

Good Cracked article

...

Cracked article

...

Cracked article

...

Good

No.

You know why /r/mensrights is so pro-free speech...

3 upvotes · 1 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Yeah, apparently to this clown, women are the measure of value, and the truth is irrelevant, because pleasing women, and not truth, is what's important.

The thing that always surprises these weaksauce male feminists the most is that this shit doesn't please women. Women don't want to be treated like unreasonable children and appeased all the time. They're much happier being held to adult standards and having things expected of them.

You know why /r/mensrights is so pro-free speech...

3 upvotes · 31 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Ad hominem fail.

Even if he were unattractive to women (which you cannot show), that would in no way make him wrong.

Future Male Birth Control May Zap Sperm With Sound Waves: "Two 15-minute tickles could be the future of male birth control. New research on rats indicates that currently available ultrasound machinery could be used to kill off sperm-growing cells, technology that could render males infertile."

3 upvotes · 30 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Some of us don't have that option.

Let's play a little game: Reframe the person above you.

3 upvotes · 28 January 2012 · /r/seduction

Yep. Male to female to male again. Just can't make up my mind.

New: I don't date broke guys; you can't afford me.

Sigh. We need to have a talk.

3 upvotes · 26 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Wait, when did anyone call her a liar? My contention that she was not raped was based on taking her statements, about what she did, at face value.

I said it wasn't rape, because she said she went along with it.

Woman, 48, sentenced to 30 YEARS in jail for having sex with boy, 13, who she was babysitting

3 upvotes · 25 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

This is too much. It would be too much for forcible rape. People get less than that for murder.

Ending the Last Minute Resistance controversy with SRS

3 upvotes · 25 January 2012 · /r/seduction

Possibly. I was under the impression they had the same mods. Not that I've looked.

But, by definition, SRSDiscussion, and the act of discussing SRS there, is giving attention to SRS. That's a bad thing, okay? You don't do it for the same reason that Richard Dawkins won't debate creationists. It just legitimizes them.

SRS is the reddit equivalent of that guy on the street corner who thinks the FBI is hiring aliens to broadcast mind-control signals into the fillings in his teeth.

You don't debate that guy. You don't try to convince others that he is crazy, either. His own behaviour will reveal that.

You just ignore him and get on with your day.

Let's play a little game: Reframe the person above you.

3 upvotes · 25 January 2012 · /r/seduction

Thought I'd give you a chance.

OR

Oh. I thought I was. Are you under 30? Really?

New: {Repeated brainless giggle, no conversational responses}

How do you gentlemen feel about /r/trollxchromosomes ... ?

3 upvotes · 24 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

It's just a combination of r/2x and r/f7u12. Nothing to do with MR or feminism really at all.

I Have Female Privilege.

3 upvotes · 21 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

You may just have a point there. Let's see what happens in the future.

mPUA Cajun's mantra to pickup is: "The secret to becoming amazing at attracting women is... to remember that you already are." - What's your mantra?

3 upvotes · 20 January 2012 · /r/seduction

I remind myself that little boys know how to attract girls (show off, act aloof, throw dead bugs at them). All I have to do is unlearn everything else.

I am a doormat.

3 upvotes · 17 January 2012 · /r/seduction

We're both in our late 30s, so it's not behavior based on immaturity

Wrong answer. Immaturity is as immaturity does.

Anyone our age who's been paying attention for the past 30-odd years knows that the thoughtless, impulsive teenagers we once were still live inside us. We'd be dead inside without them, but they can make us do the same dumb things we once did.

You are carrying the answer to your own problem. You already know what it is. You are trying not to know because you don't like it, but you know what it is.

Next her. Let her go. You can't earn love, and you can't make someone love you. She is not a character in the story of you.

Go find another woman. Go find ten. Go find some women in their twenties. They are generally hotter, and will treat you better.

The definition of insanity is doing the same thing over and over again, and expecting different results.

Deformed foot psyching me out - how do i deal?

3 upvotes · 15 January 2012 · /r/seduction

You now have a good story to tell. You are an exciting man who's had adventures, and also a brave man who can go through traumatic experiences and not be upset over it.

Friend Zone [xpost from TwoXChromosomes]

3 upvotes · 11 January 2012 · /r/seduction

Everything we do is manipulative. Yes, EVERYTHING.

So it's a term with no distinguishing power whatsoever?

Thanks for the tip.

The contradiction of Seduction and "Humble Work"

3 upvotes · 11 January 2012 · /r/seduction

Examples of "Humble Work"

Computer programmer Engineer

No. No.

Nonononononono.

The three best virtues for a software engineer to have are Arrogance, Laziness, and Impatience.

That Guy You Slept With

3 upvotes · 10 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Except that your hypothesis crashes and burns when one points out that most of us males refer to ourselves as males some of the time.

Yet MORE proof that radical feminists are out to silence all but themselves, the "ladies" at radfem hub stating that transwomen's voice's aren't welcome in feminist spaces.

3 upvotes · 3 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Just to clarify, I am most definitely not inviting another 'it is my right as a straight man to not want to fuck transwomen' discussion. That's a stupid discussion.

Yes, because it's obvious we do and should have that right.

What I was asking is do you think such discussions are supposed to make transgendered people feel welcome here?

Concede that very obvious point, and it will be over with. The reason it keeps getting brought up is the people who keep coming here insisting that we should not, must not, care in any way shape or form.

How can one possibly "agree to disagree" with someone who won't even grant you a right to a sexual preference?

Louis CK: get off the toilet fathers, you might enjoy it

3 upvotes · 1 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Just when I thought I couldn't despise that guy any more.

Improving the reputation of the MR movement by learning self control.

3 upvotes · 1 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

I don't know, and cannot impugn, your motives, but when you say this, you sound like a concern troll.

We must remember that the word "misogynist" is a distraction tactic. It is an attempt to get us to stop talking about the valid point we just made, and start defending ourselves from accusations that we just hate women.

And you want us to do this to ourselves?

No. No, no, no, no, no, no, no. I will downvote shit that doesn't make sense, and upvote worthwhile comments. I don't care how angry they are. If they have a point worth making, I'm gonna upvote them.

I think it's all silly. I'm not angry because I hate women. How could I be angry if I hated women? If I hated them, if I wanted nothing to do with them, why would I care what they said or did? I'm angry because I love them. It's the people who we love who can hurt us the most.

The cure for the anger isn't to make nice. It isn't to wait politely in the back of the bus to be heard. It's to speak, to act, to make change.

Who ever taught us that anger was bad? Who ever taught us that feelings were more important than facts? That nice was more important than honest? That justice was secondary to everyone getting along?

Push back against the feminization of society. Be angry. Act.

Speak.

The Amazing Atheist - Failure of Feminism (found it!)

3 upvotes · 30 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

Well, atheists are a community that's pre-selected for clear thinking and empiricism.

women will get what they deserve (story)

3 upvotes · 29 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

What does this have to do with being a woman?

Sounds to me like people who are mentally unstable have shitty lives.

How do videos like this make the men of MensRights feel?

3 upvotes · 18 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

A concern troll is someone who tries to stop you from achieving your goals by pretending to be a friend who is "concerned" about your well-being, or your behaviour, or your safety, or some such.

The term is usually used in an internet context, but they are not that different from the "friend" who tries to stop you from chasing your career dreams by reminding you that you have a nice stable job right now in this tricky economy, the parent who tries to prevent you from having before college sex because it's "risky" or "immoral"...

... or the feminist who shows up in an men's rights forum pretending concern that we are "hurting our movement" by not publicly showing enough concern about the oppression of the poor wimminz.

This may sound farfetched, but we get one or two in here every couple of weeks.

Kafkatrapping: Your refusal to acknowledge that you are guilty of X proves that you are guilty of X.

3 upvotes · 18 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

Like feminism, and every other kind of -ism, for that matter, liberalism must be understood not from what it says about itself, but from what it does.

Liberals can call liberalism "the belief in the importance of liberty and equal rights", but I can invent "Whisperism" and call it "everything that's good about human thought", and ask how anyone could possibly be opposed to that... as I go around setting fire to orphans.

Liberalism justifies many of its actions with the idea that races, genders, and sexual orientations have a unifying experience which is vastly more important than people's individual identity. Thus, some individuals are defined as oppressors who need to be opposed, and others as victims who need to be supported, merely because of their demographics.

The reason it does this is that it is actually a coalition of political interests along demographic lines, and has zero interest in actual justice as it pertains to actual people.

This is what liberalism is in practice. And that's why it must silence counterexamples.

Women Surpassing Men. Women Suffering For It?

3 upvotes · 17 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

more and more insecure

feel emasculated

First item from the feminist playbook. Dismiss argument by attempting to shame the speaker into silence. Suggest that he lacks masculinity. Or courage. Or attractiveness. Don't address his argument, just try to get him to shut up.

quite a few sweeping generalizations about women

Second item from feminist playbook. Talk about generalizations. Insist that a tree is not a forest, and repeat this insistence no matter how many trees you are shown. (For bonus points, continue to generalize freely and vigorously about men.)

Is this what men's rights is about?

Third item from feminist playbook. Dismiss statements based not on their level of truth or fallaciousness, but on their offensiveness or acceptability. Tell anyone who points out something unpleasant that they are "hurting their own movement". Ignore the fact that well behaved, inoffensive men have been precisely the ones getting trampled on for the past 50 years.

I'm a hetero woman who doesn't want a commitment (just casual dating) and just last night I went out to dinner with a guy.

Playbook item number 4. Refute a description of a general trend with an anecdote. Remember that personal experiences have more emotional weight than what is actually happening to the population at large. Also, personal experiences have the added benefit of being inaccessible to the person you are using them to argue against. You can say anything, put any spin on it you want. They can't argue, they weren't there.

So, let's address you in the way you just addressed us:

"You make a lot of sweeping generalizations about men, obviously it's because you secretly hate men, because you're fat and can't get a good one. You should probably shut up before you hurt feminism any more. Oh, and the reason I know you're fat and ugly is that the other night God spoke to me and told me so."

Kafkatrapping: Your refusal to acknowledge that you are guilty of X proves that you are guilty of X.

3 upvotes · 17 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

This needs to go on the sidebar.

Liberal class/race/gender theory seems to focus on techniques, not for proving its critics wrong, but simply for silencing them.

Introduction to /r/FeminismHelpingMen

3 upvotes · 17 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

So why should we expect feminists to do something for us that we aren't willing to do for them?

Precisely and only because they claim they do it.

I don't want or expect feminists to help men. I want and expect them to admit they don't. What I want is for them to back off this "MRA should be part of feminism because feminism helps everyone" bullshit.

That's what this is about.

Obama wants women to register with the selective service.

3 upvotes · 14 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

Source?

Pornography mostly exploits Men, says Feminist Firebrand

3 upvotes · 28 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

Is she willing to apply the same reasoning to "romantic comedies"?

Feminists tore up their side of the social gender contract and are desperate to keep men upholding their unbroken side of that contract.

3 upvotes · 21 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

Also, call me an idealist, but the goals and ideas ARE what matters. Actions and behaviors stem from those goals and ideas, and if I am to really hope to see an honest discourse and real solid social change, then those goals and ideas are where I need to start.

The problem with that is that anyone can say anything.

If you allow people to be judged by their goals and motivations, rather than their actions and results, and you take people at their word for what those goals and motivations are...

...well, then everyone is noble. I could come up with some examples involving nazis, but you get the point.

It's not meaningful when feminists call themselves "egalitarian", if they act in a non-egalitarian manner (preferring women over men), and work towards non-egalitarian outcomes (encouraging society to prefer women over men).

I practice what I preach, and I am quick to criticize someone who calls herself a feminist when, really, she is more of a female supremacist. There is a difference, and I am wholly against the latter.

I dislike the term "female supremacist", even when there clearly are such. It's not helpful because, unlike, say, white supremacists, female supremacists are not aware that this is what they are.

I'm not talking about your obvious, abort-male-babies, heterosexuality-betrays-movement, testosterone-cause-psychosis radical feminists. The female supremacists we have to worry about are your standard women-need-more-stuff feminists. These are the ones who are female supremacists and they don't know it. This is because they are pushing towards female supremacist outcomes and assuming they're not bigots because they don't have (or don't think they have) female supremacist goals.

So when you say your intentions are good, my reactions are twofold:

1. You expect me to take your word for this?
2. Even if I did, so what? What does it matter if your actions are harmful, and you refuse to change them?

Seduction, I have no knowledge of your ways. I'm a poor 27 year old college student, average looks and social skills. I drive a shitty car. I have sex with various women 2 to 4 times a week.

3 upvotes · 17 November 2011 · /r/seduction

It doesn't. Pickup does nothing to heal young men, or to help our culture despise men less. It does nothing to fix the pain of absent fathers, or of being raised by feminist mothers who thought little boys were toxic.

It does, however, help men with these burdens get laid despite them.

Florida judge sentenced a 26-yr-old with no criminal record, to life in prison for possessing child pornography: "Had Mr. Vilca actually molested a child," The NYTimes notes, "he might well have received a lighter sentence."

3 upvotes · 10 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

One of the key signs of a witch hunt is that anyone who defends X is accused of being X.

For X, insert selection from {witch, communist, terrorist, pedophile, Catholic, jew, heretic, atheist, muslim, person who cracks their eggs on the small end}.

what's the best course of action when a woman or a white knight plays the "misogyny" card?

3 upvotes · 10 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

Never try to refute it. That's what they want. They want to change the subject, to stop talking about the point you made and start talking about whether or not you are a misogynist.

Just point out what they are doing.

Consultation with urologist: $100. Bilateral vasectomy: $800. Never having to worry about an unplanned pregnancy: Priceless. I'm leaving for my surgery in a half hour, wish me luck. :P

3 upvotes · 3 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

Have you never had surgery of any sort? You've been sliced open. And someone has rummaged with the bits inside.

The level of soreness and swelling and just plain impairment afterwards is surprising.

RE: "Are you all incredibly angry, delusional, hateful, depressed ..."

3 upvotes · 3 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

Let me explain to you how men work.

We agree and disagree with statements, not people. When someone says a true, relevant, and insightful thing, we will agree with it. When someone says something stupid, we will disagree.

And it matters not one whit if those two someones are the same person.

Movember is upon us! Please join me in growing a Mo to support prostate cancer research, or amke a donation to your favourite Mo.

3 upvotes · 1 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

The major aerospace defense contractor I work for is actually celebrating this, but as "Novembeard".

The HPV vaccine is now approved for men 26 and under.

3 upvotes · 1 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

What is it, then, about engineers that makes so many of us subscribe to crackpot theories?

I think it has something to do with the way that we are scientifically educated, but unlike scientists, we are not regularly called on to prove or disprove things using evidence. We just have to make shit work.

Since we can test everything we do by seeing if it flies in the wind tunnel, or compiles and spits out the proper results, we're prone to making wild statements, used as we are to being secure in the knowledge that if we're wrong, we'll soon be able to correct it.

Scientists do not have that luxury.

You're perfectly free to think that $(p \rightarrow q) \rightarrow \neg(!p \rightarrow q)$, like you do above, because you're used to guessing and checking.

Domestic violence groups claim the use of logic by men is abuse

3 upvotes · 27 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

I don't begrudge her the action of advertising her services on the internet... but at the bottom of every article, well, that's too much. Too immediate.

It makes me suspect that the articles themselves are ads, not sincere expressions of an opinion.

The tasteful way to do this would be to link to her website at the bottom of each article, and leave to that website to describe whatever services she offers.

Why the word "patriarchy" is just a bigoted slur.

3 upvotes · 25 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

Indeed.

The anti-female nature of Saudi society is ugly, but this is one slice through an entire three-dimensional structure of injustice and abuse. Looking only at this would mischaracterize the problem, and suggest irrelevant and incorrect solutions.

It's important to remember that there is a difference between using the term patriarchy to mean "rulers of society are male", and using it to mean "males are rulers of society".

Paul, take Jenna off Register-her.com

3 upvotes · 25 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

she also accused anyone who left negative comments of being PEDOPHILES.

Wait, what? Where? When?

That's fucked up, dude.

How Radical Feminists Justify Cheating

3 upvotes · 25 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

Heh. Hot guy here.

What you're confused about is that while men like me will fuck you, we won't commit to you. Why would we? There are lots of attractive women out there who love and respect men. If we're looking to commit at all, they come before you, and you get the leavings. The only reason you can get hot guys to fuck you (assuming you can) is that you're sharing us with all the girls who are hotter than you (and nicer). If we decide to stop the music, you're gonna wind up without a chair.

The sexual marketplace and the partner marketplace are two different places, you see.

So around 30, when you're no longer attractive (assuming you ever were), and you're looking to settle down, all the guys you banged ain't gonna be interested. Neither are the less hot guys, since you spent so much time spitting on them.

The last effect of your attitude is that you make guys less hot... guy hotness comes from confidence, and here you are busting their chops. Not a smart move.

How Radical Feminists Justify Cheating

3 upvotes · 25 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

It can happen. I've done this maybe a handful of times in my life. But this idiot speaks as though men could do it at will, and just don't because they don't feel like it.

"I'm not attractive, I'm just me" - A woman's perspective on a mans AA

3 upvotes · 25 October 2011 · /r/seduction

All of this is true. But guys don't get AA because women are attractive. They get AA because they think they are not.

Why do you deserve to know if the woman you're fucking is trans?

3 upvotes · 14 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

What seems bizarre to me is how post-ops seem to often want to argue it both ways.

"Why should I have to tell someone? I have no way of knowing that they care about such a trivial thing!"

"I shouldn't have to tell anyone! They might murder me if they found out!"

By expressing this exaggerated fear of being killed, they are admitting that they know full well that this issue is important to people... that, to significant portion of people, it is qualitatively different than being "tomboy".

So, to then turn around and say the first statement is either an act of rank hypocrisy, or statement not that you don't know it matters to people, but a statement that it shouldn't.

But you don't get to tell other people what to care about. That's not your call.

Can we please debunk some of this?

3 upvotes · 10 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

Still you are right that those don't really qualify as proper sources.

Yeah, that was pretty much my point, especially when there's no mapping between claim and source. Which of those claims come from Amnesty International? Which from the US Census?

I wouldn't be surprised if the highly controversial ones came from "Women's Learning Partnership" (whatever that may be), and the more reputable ones simply supplied data about how many women there are, etc.

How seriously can we take a source that claims to be able to measure "how much work" people do? What are the units of work, anyway? Hours? Are they sneaking in the presumed hours that women spend raising their own children as "work"? And then implying that they should be earning income for that? And not counting the financial support they receive from their spouses as "income"?

Why are they mixing world statistics with US statistics, seemingly at random? And then adding in statistics of abortions received (by women) at a single clinic in India?

If "gender-based violence", whatever that may be, kills one in three women, yet there are six million more women than men in the world, does that mean that more women are born than men? Or that something (not "gender-based" and therefore worthy of mention) is killing off enough men (but it's still not "gender-based"!) to even out the numbers?

If 3 out of 4 fatalities of war are women and children, does that mean that of those killed in war, out of every four people killed, one is a man, one is a woman, and two are children (in other words, a family)?

If most refugees are women and children, is it because the men are already dead? If rape is consciously used as a weapon of war, are the male relatives of those women already dead?

Statistics lie in the same way that cameras lie... by omission.

I'm Ready To Man Up

3 upvotes · 6 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

All that's really required for a man to be free is to not get married or have children.

I mean, I salute this guy for doing the awesome Polish thing, but one doesn't even have to go that far. The thing about having a career and no wife or kids is that your job is not a yoke. You can walk away from it at any time. Because you have money, money that that wife and children would have spent for you. You can get ahead instead of running to stand still.

"Time to man up, real men do this, or don't do that..."

3 upvotes · 5 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

I'm not so sure I entirely agree. To a great extent, women won the war on any responsibilities they had by calling them "gender stereotypes".

I'm not sure they should have won that war. While I'm not exactly a traditionalist, the idea that there should be no gendered responsibilities can only really spring from the idea that gender is a construct, a ludicrous notion that underpins much of feminism.

Minn. Man Kills Self In His Car After Losing Job. Divorced and no job is a recipe for male suicide

3 upvotes · 4 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

No job is a pretty effective recipe for male suicide all by itself.

Side Effects of Patriarchy May Include PIV

3 upvotes · 1 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

Thus men prevented women from turning into the very thing feminists oppose the most--patriarchs.

Perhaps I'm changing the subject here, but in some ways feminism largely requires a patriarchy, or at least a something-archy, for its very existence.

It always struck me as strange that feminism exists primarily as an appeal for some notion of fairness... because an appeal requires an empowered authority. Which feminists conceive of as being male and patriarchal in nature. So if there really is this thing called a patriarchy, feminism seems to be the attempt to talk it into giving them what they want, rather than dismantling it.

If you want to dismantle a ruling system, you band together and support each to oppose it. You don't try to talk it into giving you things.

Appealing to an authority's sense of fair play is essentially a submissive attitude. Which is fine, but runs counter to feminist rhetoric that treats male authority as somehow a bad thing.

Why I laugh every time I hear about women's "oppression"

3 upvotes · 26 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

Just because two sides disagree, does not mean the actual truth is somewhere in the middle.

Tattoo

3 upvotes · 17 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

But, but... you don't understand! It's really misogyny! He called her a "bitch", twice!

That's much worse than just having your skin ripped off with a non-sterile grinding tool. (So long as that skin is male, of course.)

More feminism would fix this!

Saw this Norman Rockwell illustration and I thought: If the black eye were on the girl would the picture be considered folksy and funny?

3 upvotes · 11 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

I didn't imply that it was ok that she hit him if you look at what I wrote.

I read what you wrote. You accused men objecting to approval of relationship violence of being "unable to take a fucking punch".

But they're not unable. They're unwilling.

It's obvious you haven't thought about this very deeply. When you say foolish things like:

For a man, because I wasn't afraid of what she could do. I can see it being a lot different for a woman.

... you betray a naivete about how easy it is to damage the human body, a naivete which would be cute if it wasn't so dangerous.

Would you feel safe from Francine Hughes, Lorena Bobbit, or Catherine Kieu because you were male? Female abusers don't challenge their victim to ten rounds with the Queensbury rules in play. They murder men in their sleep.

Am I allowed to identify as both a Feminist and an MRA?

3 upvotes · 8 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

Go to Saudi Arabia and say that.

Women are overprivileged and underresponsible in America and Europe, and the like... but the world is not the same everywhere.

Is porn really affecting us?

3 upvotes · 7 September 2011 · /r/seduction

A little understanding of logic is a dangerous thing. Drink deep or taste not the Pierian spring.

I did not say "This source has an agenda, therefore its conclusion is wrong".

I said "this source has an agenda, therefore its authority is not trustworthy".

If you wish to refute my argument, you must refute the argument that I made, which was "A does not imply B". This is not, for those who like elementary logic, equivalent to "not B".

The article, if you had read it, was a classic example of the narrative fallacy... that is, the fallacy of explaining a hypothesis in detail, instead of providing evidence for it. Just because an explanation is internally consistent does not mean it is correct.

We don't do science by inventing hypotheses that sound sensible, and making rhetorical arguments for them. We do science by inventing hypothesis that make predictions and then testing those predictions.

As for what I said, the bias of a source becomes relevant when that source argues from authority, rather than from evidence.

I'm a male who was raised by an ardent feminist, and now I'm suffering for it.

3 upvotes · 25 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

Depends on your definition of "some liberty" and "rape".

One of the problems with the dialogue about rape is the feminist voices which speak loudest about it favour defining rape in the broadest possible sense, but dealing with it in the strictest.

It's a little bit like accusing my division VP of slave-trading if I don't want to go to work Monday, but do it anyway.

You interpreted that man's statement as "a man should be allowed to forcibly rape his wife". But it could as easily mean "a man has a moral right to demand regular sex from his wife, or anyone else who demands sexual fidelity from him".

In fact, according to the basic principles of debate you must interpret him to mean the latter.

Otherwise, when you respond to him, you only refute the former statement, which gets you nowhere, because what's really up for debate is the latter.

Behold: The Black Male Privilege Checklist.

3 upvotes · 14 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

You're appealing to an idea I just refuted; that any advantage is a privilege.

Privilege = Privy Lege = "private law".

This term can only be applied to social mores insofar as social mores constitute laws... a position which is arguable at best, and only even defensible when the mores in question are universal and enforced with the harshest of social sanctions.

Feminists often resort to claiming that they have been denied a right when exercising it has any negative consequences at all for them. Thus, if she is criticized for doing something, she has been "denied" a "privilege" that others have. There is no distinction drawn between the disapproving look, and police kicking in the door and beating her with truncheons.

What she fails to realize is that men are also subjected to criticism and disapproval for doing things she thinks are "male privileges". The difference is simply that men are socialized to ignore this, rather than claim it to be a denial of their rights.

What are men afraid of? Are men afraid?

3 upvotes · 12 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

What are men afraid of?

The negative opinions of others. Men have as little ability to defend themselves against character assassination (whether it be accusations of rape, of bullying, of being unmasculine, whatever) as women have to defend themselves against physical assault by men.

Crazy woman, stabs NFL player, doesn't get charged...SO fucking sick of this shit. The woman should be locked up, it's assault with a deadly weapon.

3 upvotes · 12 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

That's still a mental illness.

It's your culture's mental illness, rather than yours, but still a mental illness.

(I know it is cheap to say, and does you little good to hear, but I am sorry for your loss.)

Seddit, only you can help this poor clueless man! Feel like being a hero today?

3 upvotes · 8 August 2011 · /r/seduction

I don't think that's the help people like this need.

He's got oneitis so bad that he feels guilty for raising his value, because it makes her insecure. If you read between the lines, he's not trying to get her to exercise so she'll look better, but so that the gap between their values won't be there to make her insecure about not having leverage over him.

He literally feels guilty about being a better catch.

againstmensrights uses goodmenproject, manboobz as citations on the sidebar and have a database of r/MR users.

3 upvotes · 1 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

Cool. I'm on an "enemy list".

Barbarosaaa Transcript: Innate Misandry and Male Beauty

3 upvotes · 1 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

The male human mind; the male human thought process; male human expression has triumphed as the shining ornament of humanity. It has earned its praise, it has earned the attention and fascination it receives... every time you cross a bridge, or look at a cruise ship, or admire some other technological feat, you are reminded of it, day in, day out, and that is what male beauty is.

Brilliant.

To the US guys in here: Did she really say that? and what was the reaction in your society?

3 upvotes · 31 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

Yes, she did, and it passed without comment. Women here say stupid shit like that all the time.

"Ninety-five percent of women's experiences are about being a victim. Or about being an underdog, or having to survive...women didn't go to Vietnam and blow up things up. They are not Rambo." -Jodie Foster

Why haven't Feminists lobbied for another vote on the Equal Rights Amendment?

3 upvotes · 30 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

They don't need it.

They are already equal except when they are more equal. They already have everything it could have given them... and it could be used to take away some of the other things that they have.

Don't ever waste your time on someone who doesn't appreciate you.

3 upvotes · 25 July 2011 · /r/seduction

Hear, hear.

Just spent entirely too long pursuing someone who gave me loads of IOIs and fuck all else. Finally nexted her... next girl, first date fclose.

Some people are just selfish.

Feminism and the destruction of masculinity - Mingle City

3 upvotes · 22 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

Traditionalism is not such a good alternative to feminism. If traditional values were so stable under modern conditions, feminism would never have reared its ugly head in the first place.

"When Kloo speaks..." -- The Good Womyn Project talks about the effectiveness of the Men's Rights Movement.

3 upvotes · 21 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

It's a little weirdly stated, but the basic idea is sound.

If our contributions are not appreciated, our best option is to withdraw them.

Imagine a day without men.

Why are women so against being seen as "sluts"?

3 upvotes · 14 July 2011 · /r/seduction

First, when behavior is based on a social construct (gender roles or culture), and not on biology, it tends to only show up in certain cultures, and not cross culturally. But, when behavior has a biological origin, it shows up in nearly every culture, almost without exception.

Not quite. When a behavior has a biological origin, it must show up in every culture. If there is an exception, a culture where that behaviour does not occur, then that behaviour is not transmitted genetically.

Another reminder that gay rights are men's rights.

3 upvotes · 12 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

To be honest, if the guy was arrested because "gays are seen as pedophiles", then that is a gay rights issue.

Except they were accused of trying to lure a girl into their car. How's that scan?

Why Circumcision is a Feminist Issue

3 upvotes · 11 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

Well, that's what you think because you were cut at birth.

But really, take a step back, here. LOOK at what you are saying.

"Let's cut bits off people so they won't have to wash them."

Does that sound sane to you? Or like someone is searching for a rationalization?

Meet: The Phallic Cry-Babies. - Yup, she is mocking us.

3 upvotes · 11 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

And not a single fuck was given that day.

The Post-feminism Man (2010)

3 upvotes · 10 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

Really? Who on earth have I been having sex with, then?

The Post-feminism Man (2010)

3 upvotes · 9 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

Perhaps pleasure wasn't the best word. Add to that fun, happiness, positive emotions.

The distinction is the slut enjoys the interaction for itself, the whore does it to get something.

Don't MRAs and feminists both want gender equality? Where's the big disagreement?

3 upvotes · 4 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

Well, first let's talk about what I mean by a "construct".

A construct is anything that goes away if everyone ignores it. In other words, it has no significance in and of itself... it only becomes important when people believe it is important.

For example, the United States is a construct. It only exists because people believe it does. If they were to suddenly stop believing that, it wouldn't exist.

Gender (the physical, neurological, and behavioural differences between XX and XY chromosomed individuals) is NOT a construct. These individuals are different, and will behave differently, even when they and all observers believe that they are the same.

When two groups have different behaviours and different needs, attempting to treat them "the same" is inevitably going to be unfair to one or both groups.

Now, some differences between the genders may indeed be cultural in nature. But the notion of "dissolving" gender roles rests upon the unwarranted and dangerous assumption that all of them are.

We have no evidence of this. In fact, we have stacks of evidence to the contrary, which we are only allowed to discuss in scientific journals. Moving this knowledge into any other sphere produces accusations of sexism which are serious enough to damage careers.

Front Page of CNN: "Still, let me just say this to Mr. Strauss-Kahn or other horny men who think a quickie with someone they don't know at all seems like a good idea..."

3 upvotes · 4 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

Blame the victim much?

Am I a complete douche?

3 upvotes · 4 July 2011 · /r/seduction

No, you shouldn't have had to fake a family emergency.

You should have been able to just get rid of the girl who didn't appreciate you, and spend time with the one who did.

The fact that you feel even vaguely guilty over this is a sign that you have internalized some unhealthy things you've been taught about male sexuality, and the value of men.

Your wants and needs are just as valid and important as a woman's. If you want sex, that's important. If you want to be appreciated, that's important.

Don't MRAs and feminists both want gender equality? Where's the big disagreement?

3 upvotes · 4 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

I was under the impression that at the heart of feminism is the critique and ultimate dissolution of gender roles.

And that, in itself, is sexist. Gender is not a construct, so you can't dissolve it without mistreating at least one (and probably both) genders.

Let's take two of the biggest issues in MR: false rape claims and child custody.

No, these aren't the biggest issues. They are simply the easiest to illustrate.

The real issue is negative attitudes about men. Everything else is just a symptom of that.

A male feminist recently told me that more feminism would fix these problems.

So the solution to problems caused by feminism is more feminism? What a... unique... suggestion.

Tips for seducing a dude that just doesn't get it?

3 upvotes · 2 July 2011 · /r/seduction

I don't need to hear what you said.

You have no idea what you need. That's why you're the one asking for help.

Your mouth is robbing your ears.

I'm done here. Read, or don't. Learn, or don't. Doesn't matter to me.

Female circumcision, for real: 'The procedure in which the labia minora are completely amputated to create a "smooth" genital look known in the field as "the Barbie."'

3 upvotes · 1 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

If you find this appalling that people have this done to themselves, then you are no longer allowed to argue that "women prefer cut men".

Mod of r/seduction deletes a post because "Some asshole crossposted it to mensrights and it's just going to get worse from here."

3 upvotes · 25 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

You remind me of this guy:

http://www.reddit.com/r/seduction/comments/i8jlh/why_is_it_so_hard_to_see_the_benefits/c21s84a

[Mini-realization] Just play it cool, and sometimes her silence is not always her rejecting you. She's got other things going on in her life. You do too.

3 upvotes · 23 June 2011 · /r/seduction

"Girls are like squirrels. If you don't make enough movement, they get bored and go away. If you make really big movements, they get scared off. You've got to go 'here squirrely squirrely...' You've got to do the right amount of movement to attract them."

That's a good one.

Girls are also like cats. They really want a tummy rub, but they've also got to look cool. So they can't ask for one, and if you're chasing after them going "Here kittykittykitty!", they'll run away. You have to sit down, hold out your hand to be sniffed, and let them come to you.

What are male privileges?

3 upvotes · 22 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

To be a male privilege, a privilege must be possessed by all men, not just by some group consisting primarily of men.

Also, to be a privilege, something must be afforded by culture, not nature. (Thus, greater physical strength and agility is not a male privilege in much the same way that the ability to produce children is not a female privilege.)

When we look at it this way, we realize that there are relatively few male privileges at all.

In fact, I cannot, sitting here at my desk for thirty seconds, think of one. Doesn't mean there aren't any, just that none have sprung to mind.

MGTOW In A Post

3 upvotes · 21 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

Oh, hey, cool.

Saw a friendzone today... felt bad for the guy. Sort of messed up my game.

3 upvotes · 18 June 2011 · /r/seduction

is it normal to feel sorry for a beta-male?

Yes. Yes. A thousand times yes.

Alphas who pull this nyah-nyah bullshit and try to put others down or gloat are weaksauce. They reveal that they are unsure of their alpha status, that they are afraid of creating rivals.

That may be okay to pass through as a stage, but at a certain point it's time to move on.

A true alpha is a value giver. He delights in teaching others the lessons he has learned, and seeing them shine.

When I was teaching karate, I used to tell my students that the true measure of me wasn't how much ass I could kick, but how much ass they could kick.

Where can you get "The Blueprint Decoded" without paying $500?

3 upvotes · 16 June 2011 · /r/seduction

The trouble with buying information is that you don't know what you are buying until you're bought it.

Anyone charging $500 for a CD is obviously trying to cash in on the desperation of guys who can't get laid; a CD doesn't cost that much to make. If they aren't overly encumbered with ethical considerations, why should you be?

thepiratebay.org

A Natural's view of Game - xpost from r/self

3 upvotes · 15 June 2011 · /r/seduction

So I've never had a problem with staying thin, fit, and strong, for as far back as I can remember. It's not so much that I don't eat much, quite the opposite rather, but I've always seemed to stay fit naturally.

Which is why I'm perplexed at the exacting and rigorous routines practiced by people trying to gain muscle or lose weight.

I work 12 hour shifts with a lot of downtime and my shift relief has a copy of Starting Strength on the company laptop, so I read it the other day. It was an entertaining read, I'll give it that.

Then I popped onto r/fitness for shits and giggles and browsed a few posts and have been kicking this idea around in my head for a bit.

Everything seems so calculated and forced. Counting calories? Balancing protein and carb intake? Keeping a journal of your lifts or how many miles you ran? Then posting your results to internet boards to compare with others?

For me, exercise has always been about feeling; raw emotion of exerting yourself and rejoicing in your own physical strength. It can be as easy as a hike up Mount Whitney or as intense as deadlifting 600 pounds.

Then again, I'm an emotional person. I've based my life on feeling and intuition, rather than logic and facts.

Is that chicken done cooking on the grill? Yeah, look at it, smell it, it looks done.

What time will I arrive at said destination? Feel it out and throw out a number, which is 98% of the time accurate.

Rather than this:

Is the chicken done cooking on the grill? Well, It's been on 12 minutes at 350 degrees so yes it is done.

How long until I arrive? 18 miles @ average speed of 55 mph = 19.6 minutes.

I have a friend who does that with everything: turns it into a math or logic problem and has to solve it, has to plan and calculate every variable. And that is how he runs his life.

It takes the fun out of everything, if you ask me.

After reading this book, and taking a cursory glance at the community, I'd have to say the same thing. Where is the fun? Where is the adventure?

There is something to be said about using your intuition, your inner self, to overcome challenges and dynamics. You feel like you're on top of the world, feel like you've overcome and done something on your own, by yourself.

When you adhere to a forced, rigorous program, following a strict pattern, well, where the fuck is the fun in that?

Why don't people just get in shape by being like me, naturally strong and athletic? Then all they would have to do is exercise for the sheer joy of it, and see the big gains just roll in.

The bad behavior of young women.

3 upvotes · 15 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

But wait, according to the comments, it's the Patriarchy's fault!

Study finds that far fewer men are horrible rapists than previously thought

3 upvotes · 13 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

No, no, no. Silly male. ALL men are horrible rapists. They just haven't committed rape (err... yet).

Craigslist Classic: Woman says "Just fucking fuck me, already."

3 upvotes · 12 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

Feminism has begun to eat itself because the men it creates are not attractive even to feminists.

A Woman's guide on how you guys should 'pick' us up...

3 upvotes · 8 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

Listening to seduction advice from a woman is like listening to parenting advice from a child.

Female teacher charged in "affair" with 15-year-old; Not rape or molestation, but an affair.

3 upvotes · 7 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

I'm always a little bit conflicted when I see these stories.

I know that it's possible and often the case that young boys are tricked, lured and manipulated in sexual relations they don't enjoy by older women. But we have to admit it's often the case that they do consent.

I always want to argue, not for locking the woman up as if all sex with teenage boys was necessarily child rape, but for an admission that often the teenage girls consent, too.

The way that male sexuality is demonized is ridiculous. True justice would involve eliminating that bias, not imposing it on women as well.

IAMA recent recipient of a circumcision at the age of 22.

3 upvotes · 5 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

Glad it worked out for you.

Circumcision is, in rare cases, medically appropriate. In fact (although I'm too lazy to find the reference again), female circumcision has sometimes been performed as a means of correcting inhibited orgasm, with good results.

If I go on to state the obvious fact that this in no way is evidence that infants should routinely have bits of their genitals chopped off, I hope no one will think I am imputing a contrary position to you.

It just bears repeating, since so many educated people, who really could be expected to know better, don't seem to get it.

Hittin' the bricks.. Cya chicks!

3 upvotes · 2 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

Not quite. It's an "If I don't like it, I can leave."

My girlfriend isn't physically attracted to me. Any advice?

3 upvotes · 24 May 2011 · /r/seduction

She has some issues around the idea of sex because of an ugly history

Stop right there. You deserve better than to hang about trying to be someone's sex therapist, especially when they're not motivated to work on it.

Do not let her "ugly history" give you an ugly history of your own.

I choked again reddit..I didn't talk to the girl I wanted to talk to..:(

3 upvotes · 19 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Okay, stop.

First thing. Stop that. You are kicking your own ass. Don't do that. The world is full of ass-beatings, you don't need to provide your own.

Second, I think your confidence is so low right now that all this alpha-male, "eye of the tiger" stuff is hurting you, because you read it and say "I can't do that."

Third, you have oneitis. Decide right now that you will not talk to this girl until you have talked to ten others that you do not already know.

Fourth, break up your training.

Approaching girls is too hard for you right now. Start by approaching people. Guys. Women who are too old for you, or married. Have social interactions with strangers, practice eye contact and assertiveness.

Once you can handle that with little or no anxiety, then talk to ten girls who are not her, and see how many numbers you can get.

I'll bet once you've done that, you won't feel the same desperate, needy way about her.

She is not special. She is just pretty. There are a whole lot of those.

The chickens come home to roost: when a feminist's son is falsely accused of rape

3 upvotes · 16 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

Accepting this behavior sets up an awful precedent.

That precedent was set up millions of years ago.

Do you really want a woman who doesn't want to have to take responsibility for her choices?

We have a special word for women like that. We call them women.

The trick is not to let them get away with it. It's no good expecting a woman to play fair in sex and mating of own accord. She won't. But she also will respond positively when you call her on it and don't let her get away with it.

You're in a set. An AMOG comes in and busts your balls and everyone laughs. How do you respond?

3 upvotes · 16 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Remember that you and the AMOG have different goals. He wants to stay dominant in his social group. You want to nail your target.

So long as you keep this in mind, you can avoid having to out-alpha him, which is risky because even if you succeed, a visible conflict can really mess with your target's mood.

Unless the AMOG has been actively trying to hook your target, you can usually do better by laughing it off, or finding some way to befriend him. Also, you can approach the set with an HB in tow, and put her in the alpha's sights, or have a wingman engage him in a side conversation which allows him the dominant role.

Conflict is only inevitable if the alpha is trying for the same target. Otherwise, if you can give him his props without lowering your value, then he'll generally leave you alone.

[FR] TokyoSeddit Lords Over Shibuya & Seduces Model (Value of Social Proof and more - with pics!)

3 upvotes · 13 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Nice. Love the french fry opener. Almost (but not quite) enough to make me eat fast food.

The AMOGs are running awful game, culminating in them giving their business cards.

Business cards are apparently a Japanese cultural thing, but what a dumb move. Yeah, get her thinking about work, jobs, and money. That'll make her wet.

Challenge: Bust the "certain type of girl" myth

3 upvotes · 6 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Works the other way, too.

I'm an engineer, and I never make a play for any female engineer. They are spoiled by the ratio.

Why N-Count Matters

2 upvotes · 9 May 2022 · /r/RedPillWomen

Yes.

From a man's point of view, a girl's N-count is the number of times she has switched sexual partners (once she has sex with him, otherwise it would be N-1).

Every sexual partner swap is a failed relationship. That can be for one of three reasons:

- She didn't make an effort to keep the relationship (hookup sex falls into this category.)
- She tried to keep the relationship and failed.
- She chose to have sex with a man who was completely unsuitable for a relationship.

Now, it is near impossible for a man to know how much of each of these make up a girl's N-count. But that's doesn't matter so much, because they are all bad news.

So, if I meet a girl who is 21, and a virgin, she might still be an unsuitable relationship partner. But if she's had fifteen different dudes, she is definitely an unsuitable relationship partner. Because it didn't work out for the previous fifteen dudes. So why would I be any different?

The physical "loosening" of the vagina is a myth. It's just something made up by men who aren't very self-aware. They're just trying to explain their instinctive, natural, and healthy disgust at the idea of pair-bonding with a promiscuous woman.

"Inability to pair bond" is less of a myth, but still not quite right... because a high N-count doesn't cause inability to pair bond. It is caused by it.

Red pill spaces being quarantined and targeted

2 upvotes · 11 April 2022 · /r/RedPillWomen

Corruption is part of the life cycle of societies. In the early stages of a social order, individuals participate in institutions, build up a store of value in that institution, and are rewarded for doing so.

The store of value is both tangible (assets) and intangible (knowledge and trust).

But a successful society reaches a point where the sheer magnitude of these stores of value is so great that the winning move (in a game-theory sense) for any individual is to loot or liquidate these value stores rather than work to add to them.

This is the point we are at, in America. Every significant institution of our society, from government to the medical industry to scientific academia to publishing, has been entirely captured by those whose goal and intention is to loot their chosen institution of its store of value.

But this is a specific input to a larger and more general question, which is "If you are an individual, how do you decide which societies and institutions to interact with, and how to interact with them?". This is a little more complicated than a simple decision of which society to live in, as if one were deciding which horse to bet on at the track.

A lot of people feel "betrayed" by the institutions of western society precisely because they imagine those institutions were set up to serve them, and have covertly changed that mission. The reality, however, is that institutions are always set up to serve those who create them, and serving the public, or society, is only ever a side effect.

The trick is to recognize whether your individual interests are convergent or divergent with any given institution, and then select whether to trust, interact from a position of distrust, or to stay the hell away.

On the other hand, if they had hired 3 men instead, she would've been screaming 'misogyny'. You're damned if you do, and damned if you don't. No matter what, they'll always play the victim

2 upvotes · 31 March 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

Feminism becomes completely understandable when you grasp one simple fact: The appearance of victimhood is empowering for women.

Would women be happier if they stopped thinking about themselves/perfecting themselves for the "male gaze" or if they improved their lives to be deemed attractive by men?

2 upvotes · 20 March 2022 · /r/RedPillWomen

<https://www.trp.red/p/whisper/1556>

TRP, Late Stage Capitalism, and The monetization of sex & relationships

2 upvotes · 16 March 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, so you mean late stage regulatory capture.

You've noticed that companies tend to consolidate over time, and that, lately, small, agile competitors are failing to undermine big dinosaurs. So you mistake that for an inherent property embedded in the free market itself.

Yet, if free markets always tended to consolidate around a single player over time, all of the big corporations you are talking about would have Egyptian and Latin names, would they not? If what you are seeing is simply late stage capitalism, why have all these companies existed for less than a hundred years, when capitalism has existed since the invention of money?

Here's the piece you are missing: competition stops working when, and to the extent that, violence or the threat of violence, is used to prevent new players from entering the market.

The "free" in "free market" means "free of coercion".

So who is it in our society that is allowed to possess a monopoly on the use of force, and to deliberately interfere in the market, and to accept, under certain conditions, donations of large sums of money from established businesses?

Shower thoughts: being water

2 upvotes · 11 March 2022 · /r/RedPillWomen

Perhaps from the perspective of a society focused on individualism and capitalism this adaptability seems a less desirable trait.

Please explain how adaptability is not desirable to:

favoring freedom of action for individuals over collective or state control

or

the free and voluntary exchange of goods and services

Just posted an hour ago... this is the feminist mindset you have to deal with (and a solid MGTOW argument)... oh, she better be looking into her cat standards

2 upvotes · 8 March 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

If it's a 'them problem', why is she the one complaining about it?

Online Dating observations: Tinder's Algorithm is broken and optimizes for Dark Triad Traits (Narcissism, Machiavellianism, Psychopathy)

2 upvotes · 8 March 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The reason for this is that heterosexual online dating suffers from a case of perverse incentives. The goals of heterosexuals in using a dating website, and the goals of the owners of the site, are inherently divergent.

This means that any heterosexual dating site/app that works will go bankrupt, and any heterosexual dating site/app that is profitable will become unusable over time.

Grindr made money and satisfied its user base because Grindr was for gay men.

I wrote an anthropological master's thesis on MGTOW / Red pill

2 upvotes · 8 March 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I got to the first "Foucault" and then bailed out. It was like reading through a medical journal and then suddenly encountering a discourse on phrenology, or finding quotes from Velikovsky in an astrophysics paper.

The red pill of job hunting, a recruiter's perspective

2 upvotes · 4 March 2022 · /r/TheRedPill

Amazing. You've worked in HR for six months, and you don't know what HR's real function is.

Your job isn't recruitment. You lack the skillset and domain knowledge to properly evaluate prospective hires, or even to find them. That is the hiring manager's job.

Your job isn't payroll, 401k, time tracking, benefits, or any of the like. For all but the largest companies, that is the job of a woman named Marge, who is fifty years old, slightly overweight, speaks with a hint of a southern accent, and comes in every day at 7:30, because she has to be out the door by 3:30 to pick up her foster kids from middle school.

No, your job, in HR, is to act as a sock puppet for the C-suite, to insulate them from legal liability, bad publicity, and morale backlash. The entire reason for your existence is to have someone's hand up your ass, moving your lips, so that they don't have to take responsibility for what they make you say.

You are a net negative producer whose existence is tolerated only because you have some function as ablative armor against the world's greatest net negative producer... the government.

Guy makes a noise in workplace, she proceeds to verbally abuse the man.

2 upvotes · 4 March 2022 · /r/MensRights

I cannot help but notice how vague she is about what the provocation was.

FDS celebrating the decline of men's health. Seriously, are the people in that sub okay?

2 upvotes · 17 February 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

TRP is a means, not an end, so I don't actually care if it has a future or not. If it continues to help men, great. If some other way is found to do that, that's great, too.

I didn't put ten years of my life into "TRP". I put ten years of my life into "young men who needed my help and advice". TRP was just the place where it happened.

You cannot help "men" unless you are first willing to cool your jets and help a man. There are plenty of people who talk a big game about being "pro male", but all they have done is post snarky comments and memes about feminists on reddit and twitter.

You don't fight feminism, and tradconism, by being a keyboard warrior. You fight it by empowering other men to live free of manipulation by these twin enemies. That means they building up their understanding of real sexual dynamics, and helping them find the mental strength to withstand all the tactics that feminists and tradcons use.

Yes, TRP is indeed as simple as being about getting laid. But why is it about getting laid? It's not because "hurr durr moar pussy", because pussy is a satiable need. There's only so much sex you can have.

The real effect of male sexual empowerment is male liberation. When men have power over our own sex lives, and over women's desire for us, we no longer need to buy love, or beg for it, or capitulate to selfish demands. We can choose what to give to women, and what women to give it to, based wholly upon what we want to do.

I say this because I'm living it. My life is 100% feminism-free. Any time a feminist wants something from me, I don't have to give it to her. Any time one calls me a misogynist, I can just laugh and agree, because what she thinks of me has zero impact on my life.

And that goes for the random pack of losers who call me "selfish" or "hedonistic" because I talk to young men about what they actually care about, instead of whining to legislators about what depressed boomers care about. I don't need their good opinion, either. Paul Elam once tried that shit on me, and I schooled his boomer carcass so hard that he printed a retraction on AVFM and promised never to talk shit about PUAs again.

Most of these self-righteous handwringers don't fucking get it. Sex is important. It's not just some recreational pleasure activity that men chase because they want an orgasm. It's the engine of evolution. Civilization itself is the side effect of the efforts of men to get laid.

And no one will ever join a high-minded "men's movement" that is too arrogant and out of touch to be willing to sully itself by answering the questions men, especially young men, actually have, or to care what they actually want.

Sometimes good men give bad gifts.

2 upvotes · 14 February 2022 · /r/RedPillWomen

Almost forgot about this... PM me an email address, and I'll send it to you.

girl beats other girl til she's knocked out ... woman complains that no man stepped up to stop her ... thank your fellow females for this because helping her would be "a man touching a woman without her consent" breaking several laws ... have fun living in a world where no man will help anymore

2 upvotes · 9 February 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

What, exactly, is your goal in posting this comment?

Do you imagine that someone will read this diatribe, and suddenly agree with you? Do you not only lack the skill to persuade, but even the very basic knowledge of the fact that persuasion is a skill?

What do you do when berating and insulting people doesn't get you what you want?

Catcalled

2 upvotes · 6 February 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

Men hear variations on this story a lot. We never really see anything like it happening, but we hear it a lot.

We have no way, of course, of knowing if it's true. Because, generally, by default, we tend to assume people tell the truth, but we also know that an awful lot of women's victimhood stories are lies... told because the appearance of victimhood empowers women.

So, left unable to know, we ask the only question we can actually ask, which is... "why are you telling us this?"

Do you expect us to do something about it? Do you somehow think we are responsible for protecting you?

Because we aren't. That ship sailed sometime around 1965.

So if you want sympathy, complain to other women. If you want help, call the police. They, at least, are getting paid. I owe you nothing.

Sometimes good men give bad gifts.

2 upvotes · 29 January 2022 · /r/RedPillWomen

Message me when I'm not on my phone, and I'll give you my recipe for a pecan pie that doesn't use table sugar.

FDS at it again!

2 upvotes · 25 January 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

My new theory is that if a woman doesn't have an orgasm from thirty seconds of thrusting, it's due to vibrator-induced frigidity. Throw away your vibrators, depraved females!

Do you agree - Even if having sex with a man would literally save his life, a woman has NO moral "obligation" to do so

2 upvotes · 17 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Fair enough.

This is basically the question from the book of genesis: "Am I my brother's keeper?"

In genesis, god doesn't answer that question, because Cain is asking it disingenuously... he has actively murdered his brother, which renders the question moot.

But the question, in abstract, still has possible answers. Your answer appears to be "no". Which is a perfectly consistent attitude to have.

I owe you nothing, and I don't have to fix anything for you.

2 upvotes · 17 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I actually agree. All rights fall into two categories:

Negative (your right that I NOT do something TO you), or contractual (your right that I do something for you, because, and only because, we made a fair agreement where I promised to do it.)

This excludes positive rights (which would be you somehow having a right to demand I do something I never agreed to do).

So I actually agree that women owe men nothing.

However, I am also noticing that a lot of people get reeeeeeeal salty when one points out that the reverse is also true.

Is the only way to increase fertility rate to take away women's rights? If so, why not let fertility rate decline?

2 upvotes · 14 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That which is asserted without evidence can be dismissed without evidence.

Women who HAVE in fact dated or married a Red Pill Man, good experience/relationship or negative?

2 upvotes · 13 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So there's no biology, no feminine/masculine, and everyone is just for themselves?

Okay, I can see I've been expecting too much out of you. I apologize for that.

Good luck out there.

Women who HAVE in fact dated or married a Red Pill Man, good experience/relationship or negative?

2 upvotes · 13 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So the point is to realize that the world is shitty and one has to become shitty oneself in order to survive?

That's sort of vague.

I have no access to any definition of what you consider "shitty", and you have no access to any definition of how I actually act, so this statement is pointless.

That kinda takes away power from men who always have built societies

That's a very bizarre way of thinking about things. Any man has whatever power he has, regardless of whether you consider him "shitty" or not.

I see accepting and adapting as more feminine since that's what women always have done, and I have seen either TRP or PuA encourage men to look how women behave and emulate that behavior lol.

You can consider anything you please to be "feminine". You could decide tomorrow that eating poached eggs was "feminine". That's not going to impact how I like my breakfast.

From what I have seen, it encourages men to adapt to women way too much while at the same time denying it and lying it's about improving oneself.

Try seeing more.

Not to get women but for your own sake, except everyone knows the reason is to get women.

The real reason is whatever someone's real reason is. That's up to them.

Women who HAVE in fact dated or married a Red Pill Man, good experience/relationship or negative?

2 upvotes · 13 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Then what's the point of the ideology if it's individualistic?

It's not an ideology. Ideologies are normative. The red-pill is non-normative.

I assumed the beliefs were based on biology which cannot be individualistic since it sees men/women as groups and can therefore predict an outcome, for example.

Ah, I see. You don't understand what I mean by individualistic.

Individualistic doesn't mean the belief that individuals are beautiful unique snowflakes, and they are all born completely different and unpredictable. That belief is called "bullshit".

Individualistic means believing that every person bears responsibility for the choices they make, and the outcomes of those choices.

What this means in practical terms is that TRP is not a movement in the way that socialism or feminism or christianity is a movement. It doesn't seek to change society or the world. Instead, it equips people to change their world. But whether they want to do that, and to what end, is their choice, not TRP's.

That sounds anti-social.

I have no concern with how I sound to you. Whether that is true or not depends entirely on your definition of pro-social, which is not really relevant to how I choose to live my life.

And deterministic.

If you object to the idea that observing the past can predict the future with at least enough accuracy to be useful, then, well, your life is going to be pretty hard, I think.

Maybe you find that statement deterministic as well.

They cannot be pro self- improvement but Machiavellistic at the same time, it's just simple selfishness then.

And?

Women who HAVE in fact dated or married a Red Pill Man, good experience/relationship or negative?

2 upvotes · 13 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because relationships aren't based on outlooks.

A good relationship needs three things:

1. Mutual attraction.
2. Shared values.
3. Shared goals.

Red pill men and women will frequently have the first two, but not always the third. When RPS and I created RPW, we started from the idea that each human being, man or woman, is an individual, and is going to want to pursue their own benefit.

Anyone who is red-pilled, man or woman, is ultimately pursuing their own ideal life. If a red-pilled man, and a red-pilled woman, have a definition of their ideal life that is compatible, then they might pursue that together. But otherwise, they will not.

The red pill way of thinking is individualistic. No one is expected to sacrifice themselves for the benefit of a group, or another individual. Everyone is expected to act their own self-interest.

The women of RPW acknowledge men's right to spin plates, even if they don't want to be plates. The men of TRP acknowledge women's right to pursue husbands, even if they don't want to be husbands.

Is the only way to increase fertility rate to take away women's rights? If so, why not let fertility rate decline?

2 upvotes · 11 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

In the past, women were not allowed to be educated or to work.

Bullshit.

Alpha/beta/sigma is just astrology for straight men.

2 upvotes · 10 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yep, I was born under the sign of the Giant Black-maned Lion, with the moon in the House of the Lingam. My birthstone is the Husafell Stone, and my birth flower is the Amorphophallus titanum.

Today, I should avoid soy-based meat substitutes, women who own more than two cats, people who vote Democrat, and idiots who don't understand the concept of a "metaphor".

What are opinions you hold that would get you shamed or lambasted by The Red Pill or Blue Pill or FDS?

2 upvotes · 10 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think a person or group's values consist of what they do in practice, not what they say about themselves.

It's easy to say, for example, "we're about self-improvement", but to improve something, you need a definition of what you want to improve, a plan for improving that thing, and a way of measuring the improvement, so that you know if the plan is working or not.

Otherwise, the phrase "self-improvement" is just that... a phrase.

I don't think the man-hate is the primary problem with FDS... because if they truly were improving something that would make men treat them better, their bitterness towards men would vanish as they achieved results.

The problem, rather, is that they simply complain about the way the world is, and blame others for it, without having any concrete plan for how they, personally, are going to have a future that is different from their past.

Demanding more instead of settling for less is generally a good idea, but it gets them nothing by itself, if it isn't coupled with some improvement in what they have to offer, which will motivate men to offer them more.

FDS strategy would be good if little girls really were made of sugar and spice and everything nice, and their only flaw were that they undervalued themselves and accepted poor treatment from those stinky boys made of snakes and snails and puppy dog's tails.

But that's not the world we live in.

If we are surrounded by trash, we're probably in the garbage can. If we're constantly in the garbage can, we are probably trash ourselves.

According to TRP, every successful person is beta

2 upvotes · 10 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP define 'beta' as men that women want to be with for anything other than pure, burning desire.

Every time I get bored and open up PPD, I find that I have some new and exciting opinion that I don't remember ever saying.

I wonder if I have multiple personalities or something.

I wonder which gender do these "scientists" belong :D

2 upvotes · 7 January 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

Feminists: "We don't need men!"

Feminists, five minutes after men go on strike: "Hey, why did the power go out?"

FDS, and by extension, TRP, is a cult that traps you into alt-right thinking patterns. That's the thought terminating cliché they use to couch learning critical thinking skills.

2 upvotes · 30 December 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=LlOSdRMSG_k

Doesn't the existence of lesbians completely destroy a lot of red pill views of how women view men?

2 upvotes · 29 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Perhaps. We could certainly talk about it, although different women do it for different reasons.

What I'm sick of, here, is being asked to defend claims I never made, by clowns who have no idea what I actually write.

Doesn't the existence of lesbians completely destroy a lot of red pill views of how women view men?

2 upvotes · 29 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

For example I've heard from redpill that women only wear makeup and dress up to impress men.

Can I please see your source?

Treat yourself as if you were someone worth fighting for.

2 upvotes · 22 December 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8EwcYwax4Oo>

Lesbians, what's your take on FDS?

2 upvotes · 19 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Do you need my permission?

FDS are "pick me" women

2 upvotes · 19 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Pickme is a term invented by skipmes.

You either do what appeals to the opposite sex, or you settle for the people who aren't attractive enough to be choosy. Pick your poison.

Gender professor claims men can never truly "Like" woman. Do you Agree?

2 upvotes · 17 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This person makes a lot of claims about men. I'd like to know what experiments were designed and performed to test those claims.

If there is so few women who are fit for LTR, a tiny % of women are swamped with offers from HVM. Who are these women?

2 upvotes · 12 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

idea that there is barely any women who are fit for LTR.

Nope.

There are barely any single women who are fit for LTR.

Most relationship-worthy people are in relationships... unless they are so young that they haven't really gotten that part of their lives going yet.

WGTOW - why do some men resent this?

2 upvotes · 5 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you don't need men, why do you care what they think?

PUAs or just those who have "game" what's your go-to tactic to picking up a woman in a bar or party setting?

2 upvotes · 2 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Lol I love being compared to a fish.

Shall I compare thee to well-stocked seaway? Thou art more wet and full of life...

However knowing "what woman want" as you said is a skill a lot of men think they have but very few actually possess

Yes. It's difficult because our culture attitude towards and about women is profoundly broken, which leads to it not only failing to tell men what they need to know, but actually misleading them into all kinds of awkward mistakes.

If average men have such a hard time getting in relationships, why do men cheat far more than women?

2 upvotes · 2 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You don't know that they do.

The art of "Negging"...I unfortunately feel like it works...

2 upvotes · 2 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Okay, so you agree, in principle, that higher or lower self-esteem is not necessarily better, it just depends what effect it has on our happiness, or long-term well being, or whatever.

If you agree with that, then do you also agree with this:

Criticism, express or implied, is not necessarily detrimental.

...?

Objectively, does red pill have real life relevance? Does it "work"?

2 upvotes · 2 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

AWALT:

All women contain the same basic set of instincts. What they express of those instincts depends on their long-term life experiences, and on their immediate situation.

The phrase "AWALT" was coined to refute the idea some men have that their precious pedestalized princess would never do "that". The response is, no, ALL women are like that. Any woman is capable of X under the right circumstances.

80/20 rule:

This is not a redpillian thing at all. It's the Pareto distribution, a well-understood phenomenon.

I believe you may be confused by the way TRP writers have observed that Pareto distributions also apply to the sexual marketplace: in the hookup market, 20% of the participants have 80% of the sexual encounters.

Another thing that may have confused you into believing that TRP invented the "80/20 rule" is the observation, taken from genetics, that 87% of history's women successfully reproduced to the extent that their genes are in circulation today, while the corresponding number for men is 33%. (Studies like this have been done a number of times, and numbers vary, but only slightly.)

This means that, on the whole, throughout history, men have had to be exceptional to be sexually successful, while women have only had to not totally suck.

So what redpill conclusions do these observations lead to?

AWALT: Because all women are "like that", having successful interactions with women is not a matter of "finding/choosing the right woman", but of "learning how to successfully interact with women in general".

The 87/33 rule: Women are going to put in much less effort than you do, because society is sure to value them regardless. You, however, must distinguish yourself among men to attract the amount of sex and love you desire.

The Pareto Principle: Your success with women will not be in linear proportion to your effort. Initial improvements will yield something, but very little. However, once you reach a certain tipping point, success will come tumbling in all at once.

As you can see, you have no idea what the red pill actually is. If all you have been doing is hearing about it from people who hate it, no longer what you heard seems dumb and self-destructive.

Objectively, does red pill have real life relevance? Does it "work"?

2 upvotes · 2 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So you believe all women are the same and 80% of men will never experience mutual attraction?

Where'd you get that from?

Objectively, does red pill have real life relevance? Does it "work"?

2 upvotes · 1 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Evidence, please.

Is it really better to be red pill?

2 upvotes · 27 November 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

That brings me to a question, since the society is in a decline (majority of people), are we devolving in a sense?

No. Our society is in decline because that is a point in the lifecycle of societies.

https://old.reddit.com/r/PurplePillDebate/comments/qtctsi/what_exactly_is_the_end_game_for_redpillersmgtow/hkqpazy/

"Hes hot...but I get the vibe he wasnt born hot, so I'm weirded out by him"

2 upvotes · 21 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's a sign that women are delusional, and that, to charm them, you should feed this delusion.

They want very much to believe that there is such a thing as a "natural", which, of course, there is not. They want to believe that their vagina tingles are a magic dowsing rod that sniffs out "character" and "good genes", as opposed to a knee-jerk response to instinct, just like a man's erection.

So, when courting women, don't let them see your struggle. Don't let them know where you came from. Don't let on how hard you worked, or how much you sacrificed, to become the success that you are.

So, you should pretend it was effortless. If she should somehow find out that you weren't always awesome, she will not be impressed with your work and success, she will think you are fake, because women do not believe in real, sustained, focused, deliberate self-improvement... because they have never done any, or been expected to do any.

What are your discovered preferences?

2 upvotes · 15 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The overwhelming majority of women aren't funny.

But every woman who has ever lasted more than three months in a relationship with me is.

What exactly is the end game for red-pillers,mgtow, mra, etc?

2 upvotes · 15 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

blah blah scripture: Woman bad, Men Good blah blah blatant misogynistic blah blah expect any self-respecting woman to be okay with that?

2013 called, and it wants its arguments back.

By now, even TRP's most fervent haters have admitted that it works, and are focusing on criticizing it on moral grounds. You are a throwback to a bygone era, here.

Stats are showing men are becoming more sexless, woman are opting out of relationships all together, people are becoming more and more lonely like... there are no good results being produced here.

I'd like to see those stats... on timeline. This would help us characterize whether they are an effect of TRP... or a cause of it.

TRP certainly does have an end game, especially since some of its thought leaders are now in their 40s and 50s, and most of the rest are in their 30s, all living their best lives. So using TRP does not look like "going to nightclubs and college parties and picking up sorority girls" for the whole of a man's life.

But this is an end game for the individual, and you are complaining about "society" going down the tubes. TRP is not in the "fixing-society" game. For us to get into that game, "society" would first have to admit it needed fixing, then have to ask us to do so, then provide an incentive.

Trying to help a "society" that doesn't think it needs saving is like trying to help a drug addict who hasn't admitted to himself he has a problem. It's impossible.

Have you ever met a TRP or FDS person in real life? What were their lives like?

2 upvotes · 13 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Indeed.

Training spaces have specific purposes. When you are at the gym, you only lift weights... you do not, in any meaningful way, display your skill at cooking.

When we came up with TRP, we very deliberately and carefully designed it to interact with the things that would happen to men off TRP in order to produce a meaningful result. This is why the point is repeatedly emphasized that you cannot understand TRP's exact impact and role, unless you are a heterosexual male who actively goes out and tries this stuff.

This is because the writing on the group is one information source, which is designed to be incomplete. You're supposed to absorb it alongside other information sources.

Despite TRP's desperately wanting it to be true science shows that women aren't attracted to dark triad men.

2 upvotes · 12 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Here's a list of journal studies. These studies prove that what you experienced didn't happen. Who are going to believe, a bunch of highly respected scientists... or your own lying eyes and ears?"

Question For The Men: Would you date or marry or even consider a relationship with an FDS woman?

2 upvotes · 10 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think the sort of woman who would read FDS without being appalled would not be attractive to me.

Ironically, FDS and TRP look very much alike, if you don't look too hard and/or aren't very smart to begin with. This is because their intake end looks very much the same... losers who are unsuccessful at getting what they want from the opposite sex, and are angry at the opposite sex about it.

The difference is where they go from there. TRP teaches these angry men that their failures are due to their shortcomings, and that they needed to embark on a program of radical self-improvement. FDS teaches angry women that their failures are due to male shortcomings, and they need to embark on a program of demanding more from men, in the hopes that they will eventually, by random chance, wind up in the company of a better class of man, who will be charmed by their newly expanded self-esteem.

The problem with blaming others for your failures is that you cannot change or control others, so you are focusing on elements of the problem you cannot fix.

This leads to a whole life of being stuck in the same place.

I'm not attracted to angry women who remain stuck in the same place, and don't see any need for self-improvement.

To RP men: Do you communicate your RP views to your irl friends, family, acquaintances, etc...?

2 upvotes · 9 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I am not a TradCon but I could live quite comfortably in a TradCon world. Bloopers tend to get all worked up with any disagreement; TradCons just want me to be less of a player and finally settle down and get married.

Tradcons aren't a danger to old dudes with game. Tradcons are a danger to young, unconfident men.

Tinder Data Shows Women's Standards Are Impossible

2 upvotes · 9 November 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

https://old.reddit.com/r/antifeminists/comments/qoftxq/tinder_data_shows_womens_standards_are_impossible/hjyj0d9/

Will women really make a guy waits months for sex in order to “develop an emotional connection”?

2 upvotes · 4 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If a woman isn't willing to have sex with me, she's not making an investment in me. She's avoiding risk.

Why would I waste my time with someone who's not all in? Who doesn't believe I am special?

Nah, I'll pass.

CMV: You (men) resent today's embracing of authentic female sexuality because it's no longer being done on YOUR terms and in ways that are convenient for you.

2 upvotes · 4 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Let's go back into time. Until recently, every single thing marketed to women was created by and controlled by men. Women's clothes and accessories were designed by men. Make up was designed by men. All products designed and marketed to women (think mens razors with pink plastic) were a male creation. Romcoms were written and produced by men and romance novels were published by publishing houses owned by men. Even our underwear was designed and sold by men. Meaning that for women older than the zoomer gen, we've spent most of our lives being told by men what we want and being forced to settle for their control over our purchasing decisions.

That is a very long winded way of saying "we have always preferred having stuff done for us to putting in an effort ourselves".

Wtf has fragile masculinity to do with anger

2 upvotes · 3 November 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

I assure you that brain cancer in children is anything but imaginary.

If you think that there is no good, psychologically sound reason to ever punch a hole in a wall, then you are incredibly privileged, and live in a metaphorical ivory tower so whitewashed that it cannot be looked at in direct sunlight.

I feel sexual attraction towards older high power women. I wonder if this is partially how women work with sexual attraction

2 upvotes · 1 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You are sexually submissive.

How many of RP men have literally no other hobbies, ambitions other than attracting female attention?

2 upvotes · 1 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

they consider themselves a failure in life (not just a failure in that regard but in life) if they are unable to have lots of mates.

You do not understand Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs.

Why Buy the Cow When He Can Get the Milk For Free...? Right...?

2 upvotes · 30 October 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Going "all in" is risky, but it really pays off if you correctly spotted a good investment.

Thus, when we look, in hindsight, at a woman who went all in, and had it work, we can definitely say she has good game.

However, this doesn't mean we can always uniformly advise women to go "all in", without knowing whether they picked a good investment, or are good at spotting investments.

A practical guide to self discipline by a former army ranger

2 upvotes · 18 October 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

I recommend you dig a little deeper into the philosophy of science, as opposed to just getting it from the customs of the modern institution.

Ask yourself whether, and why, you should find an alternative hypothesis unsettling.

Why do feminists get annoyed when male victims are brought up?

2 upvotes · 11 October 2021 · /r/MensRights

Because feminism is Marxism applied to the family.

The distinguishing characteristic of Marxism is the act of replacing any nuanced and complex description of life with an oversimplified, one-dimensional narrative of oppressors, who are wholly evil, and oppressed, who are wholly good.

When you apply Marxism to the economy, you get communism. When you apply Marxism to ethnography, you get critical race theory. And when you apply Marxism to the family, you get feminism.

Marxists react angrily, and often violently, to any attempt to introduce a more complex or nuanced model of human interaction, because it contradicts their model, and, by contradicting their model, interferes with what they are attempting to do.

The end goal of Marxism to justify violence, and the means is to dehumanize a group by characterizing them as oppressors.

When you apply Marxism to economics, and get communism, the method is to characterize investors, land owners, and entrepreneurs as oppressors, to justify taking their valuables.

When you apply Marxism to race, and get critical race theory, the method is to characterize the dominant ethnic group as oppressors, to justify taking their territory.

And when you apply marxism to the family, and get feminism, the method is to characterize men as oppressors, to justify excluding them from the family unit, and redefining the family to as a woman and her children.

Update on my previous post about Oneitis

2 upvotes · 7 October 2021 · /r/askMRP

You're overthinking this.

Any woman who rejects you is dead to you. Not because you hate her, but because any moment you spend thinking about her or talking to her is a moment you could have spent on a woman who does want you.

Who gives a shit why she won't just say "no"? Figuring that out is a game with no prize if you win. The moment a women rejects your advances, ghost her and invest your time in something else.

Husband sleeps in till late on weekends, even if we've got daytime plans?

2 upvotes · 3 October 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

He works hard during the week and deserves to sleep in... He will stay in bed until the very last minute.. Sometimes he will be late, and other times I have to wake him myself. We don't have plans that often so it would be 1-2 days a month... He will proceed to play video games till all hours, and stay in bed.

He hates his job, and he's depressed.

zhang yong knows whats up

2 upvotes · 1 October 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

I don't actually care about Mr. Zhang's sex life. Only what he has to say.

If your man told you he needed sexual variety and wants to sleep with other women, but still being dedicated to you, would you be okay with it?

2 upvotes · 28 September 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

The reason that two-way monogamy has been a cultural norm since the advent of love marriages is because 99% of women will suffer emotionally by infidelity must all our requests have a logical basis?

Incorrect.

If you don't know why you're doing things, you won't be able to get them right.

The purpose of introspection is not justification, but insight.

"Why the f--- am I single bro?" Thoughts on Crystal Lizaola's viral Tik Tok video

2 upvotes · 27 September 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

I can't imagine being able to spend two continuous hours with this woman without having some sort of argument.

Change My View: the "Female Dating Strategy" reddit-verse posters often exhibit behavior as bad or worse than that of the men they criticize (and allow zero discussion, at all).

2 upvotes · 26 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

.

Maybe I don't deserve a high-quality man after all

2 upvotes · 24 September 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

It doesn't matter if you are worthy. It only matters if you are wanted.

And that is his decision, not yours.

For the Old Ladies: Laura Doyle is not real life

2 upvotes · 24 September 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

The current SMP is practically making vetting impossible.

Yes.

But... so what?

Wanting to go back to a kinder (to women) and gentler (to women) time, where men had more obligations and assumed more risk, is pointless without a plan to make it happen. And for any plan to work, it needs to contain incentives for everyone whose cooperation is required.

Think about it this way. Why would I, a man, want to make the world better for women by waiting longer for sex? It doesn't get me anything. I'm currently in two relationships, one with a woman who slept with me on the second date, the other with a woman who performed oral sex on me within six hours of meeting me in person for the first time. They were selected out of all the women I've slept with for being the ones who treated me the best, and most worshiped the ground I walk on.

I know this is going to come across as harsh, but... really think about it. I'm not here to make the world better for you; I'm here to tell you the unvarnished truth. And the truth is that I am over in TRP telling men that if a woman doesn't put out in 3 to 5 dates, they should ghost her and move on.

Why?

Because it's a man's best strategy.

Women who make you wait longer don't have a higher RMV than women who don't. In fact, their RMV is generally lower, because they are more willing to shift risk from them to you. Playing zero-sum games with potential partners is not a marker of submissiveness, high empathy, or high altruism, all of which are RMV traits in women.

This is the "why" of Tomassi's third rule:

[With] any woman who makes you wait for sex, or by her actions implies she is making you wait for sex; the sex is NEVER worth the wait.

To understand this, you have to understand male strategy from his perspective.

If he wants a relationship with the highest RMV woman possible, he has to sleep with as many potentially high-RMV women in as short a time as possible, so he can vet them. Male vetting occurs mostly after sex has happened, and can't be completed in the absence of sex.

So he can sleep with women who make him wait longer, or women who make him wait less. If he focuses on the later, he can vet more women per unit time, and thus has a better chance of finding the highest RMV possible, since the average RMV of both pools is equal at best, and typically not even that.

Not only that, if he wastes his time vetting sex-delayers, he'll be selecting from women who aren't willing to have sex with him yet, and might never be, instead of from women who are pre-filtered for having a high level of desire for him.

Waiting for sex is a sub-optimal move from a man's perspective, and it only makes sense if his SMV is too low to be able to next women who make him wait.

Would it, theoretically, be worth it to wait for a woman whose RMV was really really high? Absolutely yes. A man can always bang sluts in the interim. But the problem with this idea is that your RMV isn't displayed on your forehead in big glowing numbers. If you are delaying sex, then you look to him like all the other sex-delayers... a time-waster who's not that into him.

Oh shit they figured out our resilience method of identity (re)construction. "undertheorizing is the communicative construction of resilience in precarious and problematic spaces online"

2 upvotes · 14 September 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

I'm down for it.

(To All My Struggling Guys) Stop Overthinking it. This is Game in a Nutshell.

2 upvotes · 13 September 2021 · /r/seduction

You're asking me to provide you an answer for EVERY possible outcome.

No, he's asking to not provide vague generalizations you pretend are answers. No asked you to provide an answer for everything.

I've been doing this for ten years now, and I still can't distill everything down to one post. Don't pretend that you can, then serve us water and call it soup.

It's okay to just address one question at a time.

One logical question, and they melt like a block of cheese in an oven ?

2 upvotes · 11 September 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

So, does that mean that feminists will leave me alone and stop talking to me?

Because I'd really like that.

Why do men push the Older Man/Younger woman dynamic?

2 upvotes · 10 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Most younger women generally aren't attracted to older men

What is your source for this conclusion?

Age gap relationships are a divorce risk with a bigger age gap being associated with a higher chance of divorcing

What is your source for this conclusion?

Q4Red-Pillars: What are your thoughts on modern-day sexual consent laws?

2 upvotes · 10 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The simple reality of human mating instinct is that the female of the species is hardwired to act as a gatekeeper on sex.

If any indication of resistance, followed by intercourse, is held to be rape regardless of what occurs between these two events, then the only sex that isn't rape is sex where no resistance has ever occurred. Apart from groupies having sex with celebrities, and prostitutes having sex for money, this is not really the sort of thing you can expect to have happen all that often.

To define rape overenthusiastically is not only to criminalize normal behaviour, but to criminalize instinctive behaviour, and indeed to criminalize behaviour that is acceptable to both parties.

Persuasion is not force, seduction is not rape, salesmanship is not robbery. End of discussion.

Why do men take such interest in avoiding child support, but so little interest in avoiding pregnancy?

2 upvotes · 6 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because men don't complain about being "oppressed" every time the laws of physics or biology have inconvenient consequences for us?

Women are justified in being reluctant to give men compliments.

2 upvotes · 4 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Are men also entitled to not engage in behaviours they don't want to engage in simply because it's not worth it?

Redpill ideology: what is it's moral stance on sexuality?

2 upvotes · 1 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Should" means one of two things.

The Categorical Imperative: "You should take care of your kids."

The Hypothetical Imperative: "You should turn that bolt to the left (since you want to loosen it)."

Categorical imperatives are banned from TRP:

Nothing in TRP prohibits you from having and following a code of ethics. You're welcome to discuss why certain morals or values might exist, or their benefit in the context of strategy, however arguments that stem from morality (i.e. this is evil, therefore) are strictly prohibited.

I wrote that rule myself, and appointed a bunch of mods to enforce it. If you see any categorical imperatives on TRP, it's only because the mods missed them.

Healthy eating and portions when cooking for a man

2 upvotes · 31 August 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Glad that helped.

One of my girlfriends once told me a hilarious story of an accidental duel between her Southern father and her Russian maternal grandmother.

In Southern culture, when you are a guest, it is polite to clean your plate. In Russian culture, a guest with an empty plate is still hungry. You can well imagine the consequences.

Psych studies (I don't remember the exact ones, but if you need a source, it shouldn't be too hard to find) do seem to show that plate size has an effect on how much people eat. This leads me to think that a good way to regulate eating for health is a small plate, refilled as necessary.

Explains everything...

2 upvotes · 30 August 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

I dismissed his argument, because it was nonsense.

CS Lewis was a skilled writer, and clearly rather intelligent. But intelligence does not armour a person against self-deception in any meaningful way. In fact, intelligence is often pressed into service for the goal of constructing more elaborate rationalizations for the conclusion they already wanted to reach.

There is a shining example of this here. Lewis's argument that Jesus must be divine apes the form of a logical argument, but it rests upon several undischarged premises, and makes several errors in logical reasoning.

In general, I think it is very risky to give too much weight to rational thought, or rhetorical discourse. Just because I tell you a story makes sense, and explains what we see, doesn't mean that story is true. We cannot know what is true until we make predictions and test them.

So, to get back to the original question:

How can we test if mankind has a "spiritual nature"? What experiment can we run?

Anyone who makes this assertion is obliged to explain this, because that which cannot be tested is that which has no observable consequences; it is not even wrong.

How to get over the fact that your guy has casually hooked up with other people before you?

2 upvotes · 28 August 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

You don't get it yet.

I am pointing at the horizon, and you are staring at my finger. Stop staring at the finger and follow what it is pointing to. Even cats understand pointing.

My moral argument was obtuse. Your moral argument was obtuse. That's the whole point.

If we have a screaming argument where you say that I have lied and deceived you, and exposed you to STDs, and I say that you are petty and vindictive and are willing to destroy our family and traumatize our children for the sake of petty revenge... we are both being disingenuous.

All moral arguments are disingenuous. They are nothing more than people attempting to get what they want by pretending that the universe, or an abstract principle, or an invisible sky wizard, want the exact same thing.

Every moral argument you ever made was just you trying to get what you wanted from someone else. Every moral argument you ever heard was just someone else trying to get what they wanted from you.

That's all it is.

Men want to fuck every woman who meets a minimum threshold, up to the point where they are sated. Women want to prevent their men from fucking the competition. It's all just self-interest.

The red pill here is not "men are selfish bags of protoplasm", it's "everyone is selfish bag of protoplasm, including you".

And once you accept this, then of course you will still make moral arguments. Why wouldn't you? They sometimes work. That's good for you.

But it is never good for you to believe moral arguments, even your own.

(Most of) TRP and men who want a traditional submissive partner don't really know what they are asking for.

2 upvotes · 26 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

RP also advocates for dread which only works for anxiously attached types.

I'd be interested to hear about your results from trying it on other types.

Where did the "Men only want sex and women only want attention" come from and why is it repeated so much?

2 upvotes · 25 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Both men and women want both sex and attention.

But women are the gatekeepers of sex, so they must decline it sometimes, and pretend indifference sometimes. And since men are the gatekeepers of attention, a similar principle applies.

Additionally, a result of this, men tend to be thirstier for sex, and women for attention, because they do not control the supply.

Similarly, women who do not gatekeep sex, and men who do not gatekeep attention, invite the contempt of their peers.

Women have lost big on feminism, men have won big, everyone is in denial about this

2 upvotes · 25 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Men have more access to sexual entertainment than at any time in the past 2000 years.

The odds are good, but the goods are odd.

TRP post: Ever suddenly become repulsed by a partner despite nothing obviously wrong happening?

2 upvotes · 24 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Poster is jumping to conclusions. The only thing it is evidence of is that women aren't aware of what they are attracted to.

Women and "icks": A confirmation of alpha/beta dichotomy

2 upvotes · 24 August 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

This once-again confirms alpha/beta dichotomy.

Don't jump to conclusions. It only confirms that women do not understand what they find attractive or unattractive.

How do we explain all the happy couples in their 20s and 30s on social media and in real life?

2 upvotes · 24 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP isn't there to explain every interaction. It's there to give you enough of a handle on human behaviour so you can have positive results from some of your interactions.

Sure, we're doing better social science than the social scientists, but that is an extremely low bar to clear. Give a giant research grant, a whole bunch of assistants, and a guaranteed salary from a position spending six hours a week giving lectures, and I'll happily come up with an actual verifiable model of human mating in the rest of my time.

Until then, I'm gonna have to confine myself to handing out pro-tips.

So, no, I won't tell you why every girl did what she did. I'll only tell you how to get some of them to do what you want.

Someone being a "strong and independent woman" is a major red flag for most man

2 upvotes · 20 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm not going to argue with you, because you have a point.

As Shakespeare put it, "Bright are angels, though the brightest fell, and all things foul would wear the brows of grace, yet still grace must look so."

For example, I'm certainly not going to go around saying that I am a moron, unless I'm doing it for effect. There is, however, a certain qualitative difference between people acknowledging their strengths, and people who are trying to pretend to virtues they not only do not possess, but are not working to build.

In TRP, we tell people to "fake it until you make it".

The idea behind this is not "tell people fake deadlift numbers" or "say you're wealthy when you are not".

Instead, we mean it in the sense that Kurt Vonnegut spoke of in "Player Piano", when he said "we are what we pretend to be, so we ought to be careful what we pretend to be".

There is no "authentic self". What people think of as their immutable personality is simply a collection of highly ingrained habits. If you wish to be someone different than you are, you must act as that person would act... and gradually the pretense will become the reality.

Fifteen or twenty years ago, while I was first coming up with some of the stuff that would later become TRP, "Whisper" was a character. I invented him in my imagination. I imagined him a certain way, and pictured how he would behave and what he would do.

Now, in 2021, there's no character anymore. How I represent myself here, and to my audience, is very much who I am in my daily life.

This is a technique I recommend to anyone who wants to make a radical change in who they are. Discard the useless and crippling idea of the "personality" or the "authentic self", and create a character who is who you want to be. Picture him vividly, so that you can imagine how he would act in situations you encounter. Then act like him.

If you want to be an alpha male, don't just run around telling people how alpha you are, because that just tells them you are insecure and delusional. Instead, picture an alpha male. Create a detailed image in your head. If you can, base it on real people who have the qualities you think are "alpha". Then, in the situations you find yourself in, do what he would do.

What We Saw In Afghanistan Today is Proof That Men Don't Even Protect Submissive Women

2 upvotes · 18 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

When you were confronted with an answer to your specific question, your response was... rather uninspiring.

Study: Authenticity predicts high relationship satisfaction, except for people high in trait (DT) psychopathy.

2 upvotes · 18 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I am a research psychologist

And yet you demand faith like a priest.

who teaches a research design class, so you're going to have a hard time bullshitting your way through these topics with me.

And that would matter if we were in your class.

But we're in mine. And we use different standards of evidence around here. Specifically, we know what the word "evidence" means. It means "that which is seen".

Let's examine what you have shown us:

- Hi, I'm here to tell you that a guy came up with a bunch of questions which he thinks measure something he calls "authenticity".
- Then he came up with some questions he thinks measure something called "psychopathy".
- Then he came up with some questions he thinks measure something called something called "relationship satisfaction".

What were these questions?

- We won't tell you unless you pay us some money.

.

- Then he asked a bunch of people whose questions.

Who were these people?

- We won't tell you unless you pay us some money.

.

- And he found that people who answered this way on the first set of questions tended to answer that way on the third set of questions, unless they answered this other way on the second set of questions.

Annnnnnd...?

- So if you want a good relationship, you should be AUTHENTIC, and if that doesn't work for you, you're a psychopath.

So have you tried giving this advice to bunch of people in relationships and seeing what happened for them?

- No. But we have some really neat mathematical models in our study.

Will you show us the study?

- We won't do that unless you pay us some money.

This whole thing sounds fishy.

- You are anti-science.

The hell you say. What does it even mean to "be authentic"?

- It's a technical term we made up. If you don't know what it means, then you don't have an advanced degree in psychology and should go educate yourself. We're just the guys whose job it is to explain things, therefore we're not responsible for making sure you understand. It's your job to explain it to yourself.

I don't buy any of this.

- Then you need to go educate yourself even harder. We're just the guys whose job it is to prove things, therefore we're not responsible for convincing you. It's your job to convince yourself.

So, you are recommending advice where you haven't tried giving it to anyone and seeing what happened, because you asked people a bunch of questions and ran the answers through Statistica. And you won't show us the questions, or how people answered, or who the people were, or your exact methodology, unless we pay you. And if we don't buy all this based on what you've told us so far, we are a bunch of Neandertals who communicate by grunting.

- Yes, now you get it.

Well, I'm not very impressed by you. It seems your main qualification is the ability to impress people who were educated exactly like you and agree with all your initial premises.

I actually counsel people. Not just dudes trying to get laid, but anything from them to women trying to save their marriages. Or find a good one.

And if I told them "be more authentic", I wouldn't have had any success, and we wouldn't be here having a discussion in a group with 85,000 subscribers which is dedicated to discussing the stuff I came up with while doing this.

Why?

Because I never would have gotten anywhere with "be authentic". It's not just that "be authentic" is wrong. It's not even wrong, because it's not actionable. You can't try it. You can't tell someone to do it. They just stare at you in confusion.

That's why nobody cares about these papers outside your academic circle. It's only convincing to people whose profession is playing this game. You can't take it outside the lab and do anything with it that matters to anyone with an actual problem to solve.

The only result your lot ever achieves is a stamp of approval from people who already agree with your entire worldview. I'm not interested in your game. I don't need you for anything. What you have to say doesn't help me, and it doesn't help the people who come to me for help.

I may be a self-taught, seat of the pants practitioner who's been winging it for ten years, but at least I am not an over-credentialed quack.

Study: Authenticity predicts high relationship satisfaction, except for people high in trait (DT) psychopathy.

2 upvotes · 17 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But I think it's common knowledge that, in the fields of psychology and sociology, questionnaires are quantified into a numerical scheme based on expert-level experience.

I am familiar with this, it's precisely what makes me dismiss social psychology as pseudoscience.

Self-report data is completely unreliable and invalid, and we all know the psychologists collect it because it's easy to collect, rather than because it is useful.

Are you happiest when you're actually living your values and being authentic?

That's kind of irrelevant. I'm not talking about what I do in my own life, or even what I think works, or how being "authentic" differs from being honest, which I could get into, believe you me.

We're talking about the piece of alleged evidence that has been presented to us. I am pointing out that it is not evidence, because the word "evidence" means "that which is seen", and we can't. So, the question of "what kind of communication makes for the best relationship?" is just as open as it was before we were showed this nonsense.

Of course, I being who I am with respect to TRP and RPW, it's a less open question for me. I am a far better expert on this question than the publishers of this paper, because while my experiments are not meticulously reported, or adequately controlled, or well quantified, or peer reviewed, I am at least doing experiments at all.

Someone being a "strong and independent woman" is a major red flag for most man

2 upvotes · 17 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'd go with "most".

Some women are too damaged and distrustful to allow themselves to be psychologically vulnerable to pretty much anyone. Those would be a corner case, however.

Study: Authenticity predicts high relationship satisfaction, except for people high in trait (DT) psychopathy.

2 upvotes · 17 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I am highly skeptical of how one measures "psychopathy", "authenticity" and "well-being", what the units of measurement of each one are, and what instruments are used to measure them.

CMV: Michael's Story proves all the negative stereotypes people have about TRPers

2 upvotes · 17 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It would be very interesting to know how many people (especially men) TRP had effect on to the point of action, change. The scope of TRP in general; how many people are or have been actively reading it?

This is a slightly different thing, which I do know about.

I don't have a precise headcount, but before reddit quarantined us, we had about four hundred thousand subscribers, and got about a million unique visitors each month. (Once you are quarantined, you don't get those statistics any more.)

I also have personally interacted with and counseled a great many men over the years, and heard them talk about how this knowledge and insight had changed their lives. It is a strange sensation to have someone you never met before tell you that without you, without what you wrote, he would have killed himself.

It is, in an odd way, a humbling experience to be someone's hero. You cannot help but ask yourself if you are really anything like as good as they imagine you to be. You cannot help but wonder if you can live up to how others see you.

And then, at certain point, you realize that it does not matter if you are worthy. It only matters that you are needed. If what you said helped, then it was better than silence, no matter who you are. If what you did helped, then it was better than inaction, no matter who you are.

For this reason, I do not concern myself with the opinions of bluepillers about my work. They have scanned it for thirty seconds, seen what they wanted to see, and had the emotional reaction that they wanted to have. Then they have chosen to stand at the foot of the mountain of achievements and contributions that I sit on top of, and yell petty criticisms of how I have chosen to help people that they never tried to help, and do not care about... all because I said some really mean things about the single most privileged class of human being in the known history of everything, in a place to which they are not obliged to go and read.

If that does not constitute evidence that human beings are hardwired to be more protective of, and sympathetic to, women, then you might as well stop listening, because nothing would.

I limit my concerns to the welfare of men who listen to my advice and counsel. Not because they are the only men I would help, but because they are the only men I can help. I am not going to spend my life shouting at brick walls when there is more work to do with my willing audience than I could ever accomplish in a lifetime.

The red pill does not proselytize. We are not going to knock on your door at 7am on a Saturday to ask you if you have heard the good news about your Lord and Saviour, Masculinity and Basic Self-Respect. We are not a movement, and we are not trying to change the world, defeat feminism, or alter society in any significant way.

We are trying to teach the men who willing come to us, ready to listen, how to live happier, healthier, fuller lives, with the premise that they are not what their society thinks they are, merely second class human beings who exist to be a means to achieving the goals of others), but that their welfare inherently matters for their own sake.

And I am not going to do anything to appease people who wish to stand in the way of that goal.

Are today's men dropping below even a reasonable woman's attraction floor?

2 upvotes · 16 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

To answer this question, you would first have to locate a reasonable woman.

Might be the only group in history that can simultaneously be so oppressed by a society while also being so offended and surprised they have to pay for their own food.

2 upvotes · 14 August 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

That sounds like a you problem.

The Best Advice From Red Pill Isn't Red Pill Specific

2 upvotes · 14 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The most interesting story villains are the ones who have a point. The least interesting ones are completely unintelligible, vaguely communist, and wear face masks.

Change My View: the "Female Dating Strategy" reddit-verse posters often exhibit behavior as bad or worse than that of the men they criticize (and allow zero discussion, at all).

2 upvotes · 13 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, yes.

As I explained in the "giant heads" article, human sexual dimorphism has imbued the entire species with a powerful protective instinct towards women.

The idea that women are oppressed and disadvantaged, rather than protected and privileged is simply a manifestation of this instinct. People are more upset and disturbed by a slight or theoretical inconvenience to women than by the actual suffering or even death of men. When people who are slaves to this instinct see sexual equality, or even not enough inequality to suit them, it looks like oppression.

Change My View: the "Female Dating Strategy" reddit-verse posters often exhibit behavior as bad or worse than that of the men they criticize (and allow zero discussion, at all).

2 upvotes · 11 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't allow yourself to become distracted by language you find upsetting. TRP is hardly looking at FDS as a potential dating pool.

The point is the giant baby heads forced proto-humans to adapt their psychology in certain ways, with the result being that men are to women as women are to children.

Specifically, men are instinctively protective of women, and women are instinctively submissive towards men. And that female humans are more risk-averse in mating than, say, female cats, because their risk investment is greater.

Everything about sex can be understood in terms of microeconomics. That's why there's no point getting all mad once you understand it. RPW tactics are simply a high-reward game style for risk-tolerant women, while FDS is a lower-reward model for women who are less risk-tolerant.

(TRP teaches multiple game strategies in a bimodal distribution.)

The pickmes want to maximize gains, and the skipmes want to avoid losses. And as I pointed out, the skipme strategy group hasn't been around long enough for us to see if skipme strategies result in increased satisfaction, and decreased anger, for the skipme demographic.

We know that the pickmes report and display a good deal of satisfaction with their outcomes, but they are a non-random sample of the population, so we don't know that this is true for everyone.

FDS, at this point, is a petri dish, and it will be interesting to see what grows there.

Change My View: the "Female Dating Strategy" reddit-verse posters often exhibit behavior as bad or worse than that of the men they criticize (and allow zero discussion, at all).

2 upvotes · 10 August 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No, there is advice. The advice is mainly on vetting.

That's the kind of advice that feels good to hear, yes.

women are naturally more selective

Old news. We went over this years ago. Eggs are expensive, and sperm is cheap. This is because human babies have giant heads.

Women grow up with endless resources in their communities and in the media telling them how to be attractive and behave acceptably.

The fact that this information is largely incorrect, misleading, and counterproductive has probably impacted outcomes a great deal.

educating women on respecting their own standards and boundaries

How that is working out for them will be observable as a function of how many FDS readers exit the anger phase. It is worth noting that the conduit into the anger phase is found online, but the conduit out of the anger phase is offline and individual. People exit the anger phase when their strategy starts working, and they experience more positive results in their lives.

It would be a little bit premature to conclude that FDS is a failure just because it is currently a seething mass of nothing but anger phase. After all, it has only existed about 2 years or so, which is more than enough time for men to get out of the anger phase by becoming able to get satisfying sex at will, but perhaps not enough time for women to get satisfying relationships, because LTRs move on a slower clock.

If it's still all anger phase in two more years, this would probably demonstrate that "demanding more out of relationships" is incomplete without the accompanying self-improvement that places a girl in a bargaining position to get those demands met.

Detained by police for "Man with child"

2 upvotes · 2 August 2021 · /r/MensRights

Lawyer up.

Is it just me or are websites like only fans just super depressing?

2 upvotes · 2 August 2021 · /r/MensRights

Just wait.

The market price of pussy is still stabilizing.

How do I find/date men who actually care about me?

2 upvotes · 31 July 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

You don't find men who care about you.

You create them.

Victoria's Secret and what it means to be "sexy" in the modern era.

2 upvotes · 31 July 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

What do you mean by calories don't exist?

A calorie is a unit of measure, not a substance.

Also is the poisonous substance that you're talking about sugar?

Fructose, which is a particular type of sugar. The white stuff you know as "sugar" contains it, but not all sugars do.

Why are uneducated men threatened by educated women?

2 upvotes · 24 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Nah, it's alarming about your future.

The only implication it has is that you are going to have trouble finding what you want, which is apparently a man who doesn't just like you, but likes you for your education.

If I were on a quest to find a woman who liked me for my collection of rifles, and my ability to mimic James Earl Jones as Darth Vader, or other shit women don't care about, I suppose I would be frustrated, too.

But I am not, because I don't try to tell women to find qualities that already have attractive. Instead, I present qualities that they already find attractive.

Go to college because you want something that's there, not because you expect it to give me an erection.

RIP itiswr1tten

2 upvotes · 23 June 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

Any loose association like TRP generally requires a few people who are useful, but limited, and thus unaware of their true function.

RIP itiswr1tten

2 upvotes · 19 June 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

Maybe we should just create another subreddit for them, invite only, and make out that it's some kind of VIP lounge for the smartest and cunning of debaters.

The TRP Master Debater area.

Then we promote all the Master Debaters by giving them exclusive access, and they can go there, Master Debate the other Master Debaters, and expel shining white streams of Pure Rationally Derived Truth, without any empirical observation or experience to get in the way.

Then, fifteen minutes after the sun goes nova and swallows the earth, they will be ready to emerge and tell us morlocks just how many angels can dance on the head of a pin.

RIP itiswr1tten

2 upvotes · 18 June 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

Strike one.

Let's try this question a different way.

Which past eras have you personally lived through?

Hypergamy frequency and cause: Potential theories

2 upvotes · 16 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Hypergamy is an understood phenomenon and a solved question. None of 1-12 describe it correctly.

Hypergamy is monogamy expressed as instinct.

Is the value of "Red Pill" media help or entertainment?

2 upvotes · 16 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm not aware of any material on YouTube, beyond /u/realjoedee's podcasts, that I would consider "red pill".

All I see is hucksters emulating our label, but not our empirical methods.

Avoid taking advice from someone who gives advice for a living.

Experiment where women rate men in a lineup, then explain their reasoning.

2 upvotes · 14 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The point of the patriarchy is that its locus is unidentifiable, yet all-powerful.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZaD5mAC3P2s>

What are RPer's view of body positivity?

2 upvotes · 12 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There is no body positivity.

There is only female body positivity.

This is because the whole idea springs from the human race's hardwired protective instinct towards females of the species.

The Reason the Redpill and FDS Types Don't Post Physique

2 upvotes · 12 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If they're hot, then their beliefs are 100% right?

In fact, if we are super hot, then our methods are called into question, because we might be successful just because we are super hot, rather than because our methods work.

In reality, it doesn't matter what has happened to us. What matters is what will happen to those who follow our advice. And since our advice is free, any heterosexual male can test this for himself.

There is no point in arguing about that which can be resolved by experiment.

Am I being too sensitive or... do I have a right to be upset?

2 upvotes · 11 June 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

+1

This is exactly the right call. No handwringing about how kinky men are evil, no fetching the fainting couch, just pointing out the fundamental incompatibility between someone who is kinky and someone who is not.

Women yearn for the return of chaperones

2 upvotes · 11 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you don't want me to do anything about the number of women who you think get "raped", then why did you fly in out of nowhere, and start a conversation with me to tell me all about it?

I said that women don't know what they want, and instead of agreeing or disagreeing with that point, you joined the conversation and launched this total non-sequitur of "yeah, well, some men are rapists".

That has nothing to do with anything I said, and it's not my problem.

And if you don't expect me to care, why tell me? Because I didn't ask. So I made the logical conclusion that you expect me to care.

And thus I explained to you that I don't, and why I don't.

Women yearn for the return of chaperones

2 upvotes · 10 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You say that 1 out of 5 women have been "raped". You have no way of knowing that, and I don't know how you define "rape" to make that even remotely make sense.

Moreover, whatever is happening that you don't like is a you problem, not a me problem. I'm not your unpaid bodyguard. So why the fuck are you even complaining to me about stuff?

What is it that you want me to do, and how do you plan to incentivize me to do it, other than trying to appeal to guilt, honor, or shame... which I will ignore?

Appeals to guilt, honor and shame are a typical way that women try to get men to unpaid labour. I ain't gonna do shit to protect you, and I ain't gonna do shit to tell other men not to harm you, because you haven't done shit for me.

Is that clear enough for you?

Seems like men are wanting a woman with a low N count who will sleep with him on the second date...wait, what?

2 upvotes · 10 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So what you are asking is "How do I use this thing?".

Women yearn for the return of chaperones

2 upvotes · 10 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Many women have been using the word "society" to mean "my opinion" for some time now. Ain't fooled no more.

Sure, you can pull some numbers out of your ass, and by "your ass", I mean "a feminist social pseudo-scientist with an extremely flexible definition of words like 'rape' and an over-reliance on self-report data when it can be massaged to say what she wants to hear".

Ain't fooled by that no more, either.

But neither of these answers the question "why exactly should Whisper give a fuck?".

What incentive have you given me to protect your simultaneously strong/independent and fragile/victim self against dangers real or imagined?

A moralizing harangue?

Ain't buyin' it. You don't get to define my moral responsibilities for me. I have my own sense of right and wrong and I do not need, nor have I asked, to borrow yours.

Especially since so far all have seen of it are some implications about what you think you are entitled to.

Which leads me to conclude that you still have no idea what you want even out of this conversation. You just know that what I said made you feel bad, and so you lashed out with something completely irrelevant.

If you want different behaviour from men in general, incentivize it. Otherwise, you're just making mouth noises.

Women yearn for the return of chaperones

2 upvotes · 10 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Everything someone does is a behaviour. It's impossible to not behave.

You just mean we don't obey you and behave the way you want us to.

"If he really wanted me, he would approach me" Do y'all really believe this ?

2 upvotes · 7 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And, to my readers, in a third installment:

Here we see Briffault's Law in its more blatant form. She is quite comfortable acknowledging that she is using him, because she feels that her ability to "win" has been called into question. Were she instead being challenged on the morality of her behaviour, she would not acknowledge this, but argue the opposite.

The moral of this story is, never extend value to a woman in the hopes that she will reciprocate. She will not.

Instead, you must demand that SHE extend value in the hopes that YOU will reciprocate. You must show evidence that you can give her something she wants, of course, but if you don't make pay for it up front, she will never repay what you have done.

What she will give to you is solely predicated, not on what you have done for her in the past, but what she hopes you will do for her in the future.

Is Going to the Gym "Too Much" a Thing?

2 upvotes · 7 June 2021 · /r/askTRP

Do your joints hurt a lot?

No?

Then you aren't lifting too much.

AWALT is a feature, not a bug.

2 upvotes · 6 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Alright, now that we have definitions out of the way, I believe this is a feature of women, not a bug. With this knowledge in hand, you know how to deal romantically with the women in your life, rather than randomly guessing how they are. It's, frankly, a good thing.

I'm wondering who it is you believe is saying otherwise.

Older men using their experience as an unfair advantage over younger women is an extreme exaggeration

2 upvotes · 6 June 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's not an exaggeration.

It's a complete fabrication ex nihilo.

The description of an experienced partner having an "unfair advantage over" an inexperienced one reveals our culture's underlying attitude that relationships are oppositional in nature.

This is pathological.

It was also inevitable the moment we, collectively, insisted on putting two people in a relationship where they are expected to have no separate areas of responsibility, to wield precisely equal power, and to make all decisions jointly.

This is not just a recipe for conflict, it is the recipe for conflict.

Hypergamy/polygamy is the fantasy, assortative mating is the reality

2 upvotes · 29 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP claims that through the right behaviors you can rise above your station in the SMP and plate hotties

What exactly is "your station"? How is it assigned?

Yet almost all the red pill coaches and red pillers I know have one girlfriend/wife

You don't know any of us.

MGTOW and Red Pill should only be followed by men who have totally failed at the dating market.

2 upvotes · 25 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

we don't want to discourage otherwise potentially successful men from getting married

Who's "we"?

What most women want in a man

2 upvotes · 25 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Let me understand the red pill man? Is this the right winged man or the man that refuses to commit?

This paragraph doesn't make any sense until I substitute a period for the first question mark. Even then the phrasing is strange and unclear. I'm going to assume that your meaning is:

Help me understand the red pill man. Is he defined by being right wing, or by declining to engage in long term romantic relationships with women?

No.

"Red pill" is a metaphor we borrowed from a popular film for the choice to see the world as it is, rather than as others would like it to be, or like us to believe it is. Therefore, to "take the red pill", or as it is also sometimes put "to be red-pillled" is to accept truths which go against the popular narrative, but which are nonetheless true.

What someone does about that knowledge is entirely up to him.

If you hang out in trashy bars, you'll only find trashy women.. Some blue collar type places are like that unfortunately..

{ skipping over more leftoid white collar snobbery }

This sentence positive drips with typical leftoid contempt for the working class. I'm old enough to remember when the left used to at least imagine itself the champion of the working class... but in recent decades, the left has discovered that the working class really isn't all that enamoured with socialism, and instead of listening to what it does want, or even trying to persuade it otherwise, it has focused on attempting to mock and denigrate it so its opinions are ignored.

Blue collar people are not, on the whole, less intelligent than white collar people (although IQ tests have a white collar bias). Neither are they less educated, if you interpret "educated" to mean "actually having learned shit".

These are the people who feed you. Show some respect. Ungrateful people are trash.

As far as psychology, I understand why it's subjective

This statement amounts to agreement that psychology is not a science.

That would be fine. There are many useful and/or beautiful things that are not sciences.

Had this article been presented by its author as an opinion piece, or a hypothesis, that would be fine. Had it been presented as a study on what women say they want, that would have been fine, too... if slightly irrelevant.

But dress it up in the fancy academic robe of a scientific result, and it is nothing but an act of fraud.

Like every other institution of the modern west... government, business, art, culture... academia is rotten to the core, eaten away from within by corruption and lies. Western civilization has fallen from its core values of free thought, individualism, free markets, and empiricism. It has imported voters and thinkers from failed cultures without insisting they first abandon the toxic values that destroyed their former homes.

To be "red-pilled" is to be able to see this rather than relying on the popular view that everything is fine and we should all Vote Biden™ and Consume Product™.

But as far as why we pick who we do.. I think personality has a lot to do with it.. When I was a younger woman.. early 20s my taste and attitude was completely different than it is now..

Yeeessss, but that doesn't mean that you can simply tell us who you will be attracted to and why, anymore than you can tell us exactly how you catch a thrown object.

Are men too sexually aggressive, or not aggressive enough?: Contradictory narratives on male sexuality

2 upvotes · 23 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Both.

Is there such a thing as Vagina Envy?

2 upvotes · 20 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Of course I envy women's genitalia. Watch a woman have rapid-fire orgasms for half an hour, and see if you don't feel envious.

Neither the RedPill nor the FDS strategy on first dates work.

2 upvotes · 19 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Starting a conversation with the deliberate intent of "getting to know someone" is spergy and sterile and can fall into a "job interview" dynamic. Not fun.

Here's a few pointers I give to students about how to set up a good date. It's not necessary to hit all of these points, but a good plan will incorporate at least some.

- Shared tasks provide something to interact about, and a sense of camaraderie.
- New experiences that take people out of their comfort zone make them more apt to associate emotions with the experience.
- Moving from venue to venue gives people a chance to see each other in different situations, and creates a sense of having known each other longer.
- A succession of different stimuli prevents interactions from bogging down.
- A creatively and unpredictably planned evening makes you look exciting and in control of your life.
- Activities that she is unfamiliar with require her to look to you for knowledge and guidance.
- Activities that she needs you to help her with build trust.

Dating over 30+

2 upvotes · 19 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What is the problem in having these standards?

The problem is that women over 30 feel entitled to your attention, so they pretend they are just trying to "protect" younger women from you.

This makes zero sense, of course, because if you are toxic to a 19 year old, you'll be toxic to a 35 year old, too.

Do what you want. Just don't expect women to listen to reason and stop whining, because they ain't gonna. Just ignore the noise. You don't want or need their approval anyway.

Men and women are alike. Posit #1.

2 upvotes · 19 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

She might care, she might not.

That's up to her. If you don't go and talk to her, she doesn't get to make that choice.

So why would you not give her that choice?

Guys' caring about a partner's sexual history is incompatible with a sexually free society. Thus, such guys should not commit, since then it doesn't matter.

2 upvotes · 19 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It seems to me that such a guy will have to work to genuinely change his perspective if he is going to commit to a woman in a sexually free society

Where is his incentive to do that?

women's high standards is mens fault.

2 upvotes · 17 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Dude, we already know that women have no agency, can't be expected to police their own behaviour, and anything they do is therefore men's fault for letting them get away with it.

You don't need to tell us.

There is no such thing as a "High Value Woman (HVW)"

2 upvotes · 10 May 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No.

Women want to be treated good enough by someone awesome, men want to be treated awesome by someone good enough.

For this reason, a man with high value (as a mate) has a baseline of "nice enough" with as much awesome as possible heaped on top, and a woman with high value has a baseline of "awesome enough" with as much niceness as possible heaped on top of that.

My girlfriend was banging her landlord in college and he still lives in our town.

2 upvotes · 6 May 2021 · /r/askTRP

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=s7n3oXKwwuA>

Katie is at it again with this time saying that Men being nice and holding the door open for a women is sexiest

2 upvotes · 3 May 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

How the fuck did I end up in this shit hole subreddit.

Isn't that the question I started out by asking you?

You could do anything, absolutely anything you wanted, and you chose to look at things you hate, and be angry.

Katie is at it again with this time saying that Men being nice and holding the door open for a women is sexiest

2 upvotes · 3 May 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

So, out of curiosity, you devote pieces of your limited lifespan to reading stuff that makes you upset because...

Katie is at it again with this time saying that Men being nice and holding the door open for a women is sexiest

2 upvotes · 3 May 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Out of curiosity, you are here because...

Why We Avoid 50/50 "Men."

2 upvotes · 2 May 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

So all I have to do to avoid FDS readers is split the bill?

Awesome.

An Upton Sinclair quote for the Manosphere

2 upvotes · 23 April 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

Yes.

Dying, however, is only a moment. All the moments before that are called "living". And we don't have to live alone. But we do have to live with the consequences of our life choices.

Finally..... After 50 years. A black woman has broken the girl code and said what black men have known about feminism. And why black feminists and their allies HATE black men. Damn THIS IS SAD, and the mentality of ALL the women on r/blackladies and r/blackgirdiaries

2 upvotes · 19 April 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

The difference between a priest and a scientist is what they do when you don't believe them.

When you don't believe a scientist, he responds with a deluge of words, which he will patiently produce for as long as you will sit still and listen... words intended to explain, in great detail, why he believes what he does. This is of course intended to persuade you, to make your thinking follow the same path as his thinking, but he isn't angry.

When you don't believe a priest, he gets mad at you. Now, this can result in anything from being called a nasty word to being burned at the stake, depending on how much power he has, but the motivation is the same. Your disbelief upsets him.

Someone who is angered by skepticism is doing religion, not science.

And what happens if I say "I don't think global warming is an existential threat to humanity", or "I think the measures taken to stop the spread of covid-19 do more harm than covid-19 ever could"... then what happens?

Do scientists then corner me, delighted at the opportunity to explain the topic they love, and the research they are proud of, in great detail?

No. Instead, people with no research to cite, and no understanding of what they believe, other than that someone told it to them, start calling me a "denialist", and an "anti-intellectual", and telling me to "believe the science" or I am killing grandma.

Now, I may not understand epidemiology beyond the basics from that couple of years I spent in medical school, but I do understand human behaviour. I know that when people get mad at me, it's not because I am wrong, it's because I am thwarting them. They have a plan, I'm in the way.

I'd like to know what that plan is.

I'd also like to see the fucking science, because it's hard to "believe the science" when I haven't been shown any. Here is why I shouldn't eat sugar. Where is the equivalent explanation of why I should wear a mask?

Anti-feminist not anti- woman

2 upvotes · 15 April 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

What would being "anti-woman" even mean? Pretty sure they're not going away anytime soon.

Feminist would put men in a "camp"

2 upvotes · 15 April 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

How would a society of feminists even have guns?

I've love to see these bitches try to figure out how to machine a rifling button. Hell, that would be way more entertaining than most of the wokeist crap that Hollywood is pissing out nowadays.

Are Misandry and Mysogyny becoming more common?

2 upvotes · 13 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Although deliberately framed as if it were a law of nature or of mathematics," Godwin wrote, "its purpose has always been rhetorical and pedagogical: I wanted folks who glibly compared someone else to Hitler to think a bit harder about the Holocaust."

Are Misandry and Mysogyny becoming more common?

2 upvotes · 13 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I didn't ask what he did.

I didn't even ask what his supporters did.

I asked what they did to you. Saying a mean thing about John McCain (who, for the record, was pond scum and brain cancer did us all a huge favour, on both sides of the aisle) is not something he did to you.

Neither is tradcons having their own biased news networks just like you have CNN, the New York Times, the Washington Post, etc.

What did Trump supporters do to you, personally?

Are Misandry and Mysogyny becoming more common?

2 upvotes · 13 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Every intolerant group makes the same argument: "Our enemies don't deserve tolerance!"

But what did Trumpists actually do to you?

They made fun of you. That's it. That's all. Hell, they didn't even make fun of you. They made fun of wokesters, and you got caught in the splash zone because you vote Democrat.

If you don't like being hit by snowballs, maybe you would be better served by not standing next to someone who's in the middle of a snowball fight.

Losing interest in sex, barely maintaining boner

2 upvotes · 8 April 2021 · /r/askTRP

I don't know how other men manage it... I've cheated in every relationship I have ever been in. Eventually I just picked a woman whose level of jealousy was less than zero.

That worked out very well indeed for me.

I don't know how jealous your girl is by nature, but if you are so strongly tuned to variety that you are getting limp dick after two years, you're going to have to find some way to scratch that itch so you can have a relationship at all.

Women don't really understand that a man can love them intensely, and still cheat on them with someone less attractive who he doesn't care about at all, simply because she looks different.

literally just LTR'd a girl to fuck her now don't know what to do....help please.

2 upvotes · 8 April 2021 · /r/askTRP

That's because you are thinking like a guy. You believe in a credit system. You accrue credit so for future use; you can take something out of the bank.

Girls don't.

They believe in cash system. You pay now for what you want. The future will be the same, you will have to pay whatever to afford what you want. There's no credit system.

This needs to be an article.

Losing interest in sex, barely maintaining boner

2 upvotes · 8 April 2021 · /r/askTRP

And are you losing interest in sex, or losing interest in sex with your girlfriend?

CMV: Red pill is just mostly scammers who are trying to take advantage of down on luck men

2 upvotes · 5 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Whatever, bro.

Am I being stupid?

2 upvotes · 5 April 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Online long distance relationship initiation is very difficult because no personal contact can occur until someone travels, which is a great deal of investment... but investment is difficult to do without the kind of assessment and bonding that only happens with in-person contract.

Chicken and egg problem.

Consider this carefully.

CMV: Red pill is just mostly scammers who are trying to take advantage of down on luck men

2 upvotes · 5 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Nah, brah, we need to sell magic testosterone-increasing soap, and phone consultations, and merch! We could totally get rich targeting broke 19 year old boys as our sole income stream!

CMV: Red pill is just mostly scammers who are trying to take advantage of down on luck men

2 upvotes · 5 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So, there at the beginning, but role largely ceremonial? Sounds about right.

He's the only one of the names you mentioned I ever heard of. We can't stop hucksters from cherry-picking our work for shiny objects they can sell to suckers. There's always going to be some broke bitch who needs to hustle this stuff because he has no other source of income. No point play whack-a-mole with them.

Default masculinity is attracted to vulnerability (hunter mindset). Default femininity is repulsed by vulnerability (choosy mindset). This dichotomy is cyclical, and the source of most gender based issues.

2 upvotes · 3 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Eggs are expensive, sperm is cheap.

That's because humans have giant heads.

BluePillers, what makes you still believe the bluepill? Have you gone from red/purple pill to blue pill?

2 upvotes · 2 April 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Blue pill is technically everything that isn't red pill, so that's a pretty big net.

You are correct.

What TRP means by "the blue pill" is "the cultural zeitgeist regarding human mating behaviour" (held to be false and misleading). What TBP means is "a slightly sarcastic way of asserting that TRP is morally bad".

These are two totally different things.

People who hate and loathe TRP don't necessarily subscribe to the beliefs of the "blue pill". They simply don't like our alternative.

Forcing yourself to be the dancing bear forever because you can't emotionally connect with anyone sounds exhausting. Basing your identity around things you can't control instead of learning who you are as a person sounds exhausting.

That is indeed one of the common objections. It's based on the assumption that humans are born with a certain "personality", which constitutes an immutable core identity that cannot be altered, only suppressed with continuous effort.

TRP has a different idea about identity, which we borrowed from Vonnegut and Aristotle. It goes like this: we are what we repeatedly do. In other words, most things that people hold to be immutable definitions of self are in fact merely habits, and can be changed by the disciplined application of the sort of things people do to change habits.

In practice, this works out particularly well, to the point where the assertion that one is "pretending to be what you are not" ends up sounding slightly ridiculous.

Imagine if someone told you that you are were "faking your way through life pretending to be a manual driver", because you learned on an automatic transmission. That no matter how good you got at shifting gears, no matter how unconscious the process became, no matter how you could actually forget which type of car you were currently driving, because your right hand and left foot just did their thing... they still kept telling you that you were a fake manual driver, and you should stop lying to the car and go back to driving a slushbox.

You would wonder if these people were insane.

But then you would realize that they all shared something in common. They had all learned to drive on a automatic transmission, and never learned to drive a manual.

Ahhah, you would think. They simply don't believe in the possibility of improvement or change. No wonder they think you are lying when you write up a description of your best lap at Willow Springs. They believe that people who happened to learn to drive on a manual transmission are "naturals" who were born different from them, a different species whom they can never become with any amount of work.

Man gets banned from r/feminism for being a man

2 upvotes · 30 March 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

You can never appease neomarxists by being an "ally". They will turn on you the moment they are done getting rid of the people they need your help getting rid of.

Where do you draw the line between girlfriend and wife duties?

2 upvotes · 27 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

I can't.

It wasn't feminism or other neomarxist ideologies that killed marriage, it was economics and technology.

Where do you draw the line between girlfriend and wife duties?

2 upvotes · 27 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Well, anyone is free to impose any conditions on a relationship that they like, because the other person can always say "no thanks" and leave.

However, that still isn't an answer.

The question wasn't "why would a man agree to sign the papers?", is was "is there any advantage to a man in signing the papers?".

In seven or eight years of working on all this redpill material, I have been unable to discover one. I'm still open on hearing suggestions, but nobody else has been able to give me one that checks out, either.

Weekly Community Chat Megathread

2 upvotes · 24 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Maybe we should you know, not jump immediately to Nazi conspiracy theories when a corporation does a bad

Thank you for stepping in give me such a pithy example of the exact kind of tribalistic thinking I was talking about.

The moment I said "Neomarxism", you appear to have activated the "oppose enemy tribe" reflex, and gone looking for a source to discredit the idea you disliked, and thus found an excuse to describe it as a "Nazi conspiracy theory".

But the interesting thing to note is that neither "Nazi", nor "conspiracy theory" are synonyms for "incorrect"... they are simply snarl words which describe an opinion as belonging to an "enemy" tribe.

You thought you were saying I was wrong, but actually never bothered to. I suspect this is because you are so lost to the tribal instinct that your brain no longer draws a distinction between "right-wing" and "nazi", and between "right-wing" and "incorrect".

You didn't, of course, bother to ask what I meant by "Neomarxism", because you are not thinking about me as an individual, but as a member of some tribe you perceive as the enemy.

This, of course, is not only irrelevant, but dead wrong. Both your tribes hate me, and both incorrectly identify me as belonging to the other.

And I consider both to be not worth hating, because there is no sentience to hate, just a bundle of reflexes and social programming. The lights are on, but no one is home. The concept of an NPC or philosophical zombie could probably also be used as a relevant metaphor.

Weekly Community Chat Megathread

2 upvotes · 24 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

operationally captured

Hadn't heard that phrase used to describe this phenomenon, but I like it. Its meaning is immediately obvious, it's pithy, and it has nice descriptive power.

I am assuming it means the same thing as "regulatory capture", but in a non-governmental context?

It's inconceivable that her background as a politician and activist was not known to HR.

It does seem highly unlikely that some people would get background checks and others wouldn't. Either something like this is not within the scope of reddit's diligence on anyone, or they knew.

If they confine themselves to a very mechanistic records check, it's maaaaybe possible this was missed, since my understanding is that this person does not (yet) have a criminal record related to this.

But I'm also under the impression that this was some sort of large and recent scandal in Britain... which makes it a bit hard to imagine a scenario where they all had no idea.

What else have we being lied to about?

2 upvotes · 22 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

This is not evidence.

First of all, you are not a researcher or even a physician, because if you were, you would have said so. Secondly, even if you were, that wouldn't be evidence either. The opinions and beliefs of scientists are not, in themselves, scientific results.

What's happened is that you are hanging around with a bunch of people who are medical professionals, and those people think they work, so you are mistaking consensus for evidence.

Would you stay friends with your friend if he decided to transition to female?

2 upvotes · 22 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

It is cheesy as hell, but brainstems are really stupid.

The way that I like to think of it is that emotional reaction, and cognition, are systems that can talk to each other, but are separate. Cognition becomes an adult when you do, but emotional reaction never matures beyond childhood. Thus, you are always going to emotionally react to things with much less sophistication than you actually understand them.

Articulations like this can close the gap by communicating information from the bit that thinks to the bit that feels.

FDS misandry

2 upvotes · 22 March 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Any man who thinks "pick me girls" are desperate is a low value man who has never been approached/courted/chased by a woman with options.

No, we want you to have a 30 inch slim waist, really firm chest and bottoms. Must be beautiful without makeup. Must be at least 5'10 (I am a 6'4 guy) I wanna date women, not girls. Oh, also don't f* with my wage, get your own money, I am not sharing my privileged payroll.

2 upvotes · 22 March 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

If a woman has a 30" waist, she's fat unless she's about six feet tall.

Why do Red Pillers demonize and make fun of independent, careerist women and "Free spirits"? Aren't these women compatible with their vision of anti-marriage, pro-casual sex, pro-hedonism life?

2 upvotes · 20 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Instead TRPillers seem to be pedestalizing tradcon, virgin women

What?

Have you ever actually read TRP?

Flip side of the women are wonder effect, the women are terrible effect

2 upvotes · 19 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Every society seems to have a preferred gender. In ancient Greece, it was men. In modern America, it's women.

Do girls deep down love being in a harem?

2 upvotes · 18 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

We figured out the basics in Yosemite.

Plate wants an apology?

2 upvotes · 17 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

Never apologize to a woman unless you think you did something wrong.

Women aren't accountable because men don't care

2 upvotes · 15 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

What exactly is it that you want men to like?

Should i divorce my serial cheating husband who is my first sexual partner and start over? I am so scared of the thoughts of me sleeping with other men.

2 upvotes · 13 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Okay, that suggests to me that this relationship maaaaaaaay be salvageable, which would certainly be nice in that it would help you avoid being a single mother on the dating market. I've been asked for guidance by enough of those to get a front row seat to the misery.

However, that doesn't mean you "must" (morally speaking) salvage the relationship, only that it might be possible to do so.

In cases where there is a mismatch of expectations, then sometimes a compromise can be reached, and sometimes it can't. But reaching a compromise always requires clear two-way communications about what your expectations are.

It sounds like you two may not have done that, which isn't surprising in a situation where traditional culture is clashing with westernized culture... because traditional cultures don't negotiate expectations. They have one set of rules for every relationship, and people from those cultures aren't often very aware that there might be other ways to be, or that others might have totally different expectations.

It's very hard to tell someone else what you expect out of a relationship if you don't know that different people expect different things.

It sounds like he assumed that what you needed and wanted from him was material support and family leadership. And while you may have wanted these things, you also very much expected him to not have sex with other women, and not keep secrets from you.

If he actually didn't understand this, then the two of you have had no chance to negotiate or compromise between the things that you and he wanted out of the relationship?

And if you didn't really understand why he was having sex with someone else, then you most likely came up with explanations of your own (he doesn't love me, he is a narcissistic sociopath, etc). Which may or may not have anything to do with what's going on in his head.

In order for this relationship to survive, you both need to be honest with each other about what you want even if that makes you look like jerks.

That's the conversation you both need to have... one that's centered around "what do you actually want?" , not "how could you do this to me?" ("this" being infidelity and divorce papers, respectively).

And then you need to have a negotiation about how to reconcile those, without using either western or traditional cultural norms to bludgeon each other about what is "right" or "wrong".

Since you don't have a common set of cultural expectations, you can't rely on culture to define your relationship. You have to work out an individual deal between the two of you.

How not to be fat.

2 upvotes · 13 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

This study used a pattern that IF experts call "16/8" (16 hours fasting and 8 of eating). This pattern is not considered sufficient for reversing obesity in patients with metabolic syndrome. It is, in fact, mostly used to get patients physically and psychologically used to fasting so the real work can begin.

16/8 is, however, often enough to prevent fat gain if sugar and other processed foods are avoided. Remember that the basic principle here is that two things matter: when you eat and what you eat.

With an inadequate modification to when obese patients eat and no modification to what obese patients eat, one would expect a small amount of progress, which is exactly what the study showed. It is noteworthy that the TRE group showed some significant progress, but the CMT group showed none.

This supports an important point I made above: that CMT is often sufficient to prevent obesity and metabolic syndrome, but TRE may be needed to reverse it (assuming both are combined with eliminating sugar and other processed foods from the diet, which I can't find any note that this study actually did).

If you would like to delve further into this, there's a couple related issues to look at:

- The insulin/glucagon dynamic I explain above.
- The balance of leptin and ghrelin, and how they are affected by different foods.
- The work of Dr Robert Lustig with regard to fructose metabolism in the liver.
- The effect of hepatic and pancreatic fat upon the insulin system.
- The role soluble and insoluble fiber in regulating absorption and feeding the gut biome.
- The political history of US federal government corn subsidies.
- The pattern of diet vs obesity by country on the global stage.

There's more interesting stuff you'll run into, like insulin injection site lipomas, some of the open questions about autophagy, mTor, and rapamycin, and so forth, but those seven bullet points are really the keys to understanding the obesity epidemic.

You can drill down pretty deep into this if you're willing to take the time. The problem is how to get from the stuff that's convincing to people who are fluent in biochemistry, to an explanation that's convincing to people who have been told that CICO is "common sense" for the past fifty years.

That's tricky. Very few people are aware that the words "common sense" actually mean "I have no evidence", because when people have evidence, they present it, or point others to it. If they have to appeal to "common sense", what this means is that they have a consistent story, which explains all the facts they are aware of, but they haven't bothered to test if that is actually what is going on.

What does the RPW community think about enneagram?

2 upvotes · 13 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

There are a bunch of things like this, from enneagram to Meyers-Briggs to star signs.

They seem to work by something called the "Barnum–Forer effect". It's a psychological phenomenon whereby individuals give high accuracy ratings to descriptions of their personality that supposedly are tailored specifically to them, yet which are in fact vague and general enough to apply to a wide range of people.

The thing to ask is whether a model has predictive power. If I know your MTBI type or that you are a "type 9w1", does it help me predict your behaviour in any meaningful way?

How attainable is waiting for marriage if you aren't compatible with the men who want that?

2 upvotes · 12 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

That makes a certain amount of sense.

However, one of the problems that you are going to encounter, if you present yourself to men this way, is that men also do notice things, and they're going to notice that this approach shifts 100% of sexual risk from you to him.

Deeply religious men tend to put up with this, as you pointed out. And this is partially due to the way that, to them, this is command coming from god, not you.

But men who don't believe that there is a god, or who simply don't believe that god cares what he does with his penis, may just model things differently.

See, everybody likes good sex, and everybody likes to have a good emotional bond, but getting there involves risk, so it requires more than mutual consent.

The risk for women is that sex will happen without commitment ensuing, and a repeated pattern of this makes her less attractive to other men, thus worsening the odds of securing commitment. The risk for men is that he will be committed to a relationship that doesn't satisfy him sexually, and he will be left with the choice of being unfulfilled for life, or paying the high cost to get out.

Dating between men and women often involves a covert negotiation about who is going to assume what portion of that risk.

When a girl says "I am saving it for marriage", this means that she wants the man to assume 100% of the risk. If a man says, "let's hook up first and see if we click", that means he wants her to assume 100% of the risk.

Naturally, each sex takes a dim view of this, although sometimes people are willing to take that risk to have a chance at a desirable enough mate.

So let me ask you this: are you really a 10/10 smoke job with a heart of gold who always fun to be with? Are you enough of a catch that men, desirable men, not just desperate ones, will assume all the risk for a chance at you? If so, I can give you some recommendations for how to pitch this... but if not, you are setting yourself up for disappointment.

How to choose a wife according to the Red Pill?

2 upvotes · 10 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

God i hate even saying that using your language.

That's okay, it's not actually a contract at all. Contracts have terms that are specified in advance, and can't be unilaterally altered. This is more of a "signed blank check".

How do you deal with your SO's annoying habits?

2 upvotes · 9 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

You bring him your problem, not your solution.

Why were women mostly restricted to the lowest pay jobs?

2 upvotes · 9 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why did a giant Star Goat devour the moon?

How to choose a wife according to the Red Pill?

2 upvotes · 9 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Most of us eventually want children.

I was unaware that sperm don't work without a church ceremony and contract with the government.

I was screwing two sisters behind each other's back, got caught, they both blew up on me, and yet both decided to still stay in touch with me. What should I do?

2 upvotes · 9 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

Girls are big on tacitly accepting what they would throw a fit about if you asked for. Screw each of them again, without talking about it. Just act like nothing happened. They may go through a few more tantrums before they settle into sharing you.

Just act super chill about the whole thing.

I don't even get how someone comes to this comparison, a woman without a man is not fucking able to reproduce

2 upvotes · 8 March 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

If a woman needs a man like a fish needs a bicycle, then a man needs a woman like a bicycle needs a fish.

Q4W: Do most men care about being good in bed?

2 upvotes · 8 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Since most women have not slept with all men, or with men sampled in a truly random fashion, how could they possibly know?

It's the role of friends to help teach you how to date not your parents

2 upvotes · 8 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If your friends are your own age, they have your approximate level of experience. How the hell are they supposed to know better than you do?

[Q4All]How/where do you think women should be getting their dating advice from?

2 upvotes · 8 March 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's not harmful to men. It's harmful to the women themselves.

But I don't try to stand between people and their chosen means of self-harm, so please ignore me and carry on.

Best martial art to learn?

2 upvotes · 7 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

The problem you have articulated is not solvable given the constraints of what you are willing to do.

When I said...

unarmed martial arts are slave martial arts, because they were developed by slave classes that weren't allowed by their masters to carry weapons.

and then you told me...

I live in Europe, so no guns for me

... what do you think that means you are?

That's right. Throughout history, no slave population has been armed, and no armed population has been slaves. The condition of liberty, and the possession of arms, are one and the same.

Slave martial arts are good for several things: exercise, bodily conditioning, an adjunct to real martial arts, a sporting contest, entertainment, etc. None of these things is "self-defense against a person determined to hurt you", because a person determined to hurt you will use a firearm, bladed weapon, or club, and they will bring friends, and slave martial arts do not, cannot, have an answer to any of these.

Fighting is not a game, and it is not a laughing matter. Many young men are deceived in this because their experience of "fighting" comes from schoolyard dustups and watching UFC. Neither of these are fighting. They are duels, and a duel takes place with an agreement, explicit or implicit, between the participants. Using dueling methods in a fight will get you killed.

Don't get me wrong. I am trained in dueling as well as in fighting, and I enjoy practicing both. I highly recommend learning dueling to any man, as the ancillary benefits are considerable. I still practice unarmed martial arts, and will do so until age renders me physically unable.

But I do not labour under any illusion that they are useful for self-defense. And, strictly speaking, no one actually needs to learn to defend himself in a duel, because duels are voluntary on the part of both participants. Anything that a stranger involves you in against your will is a fight, not a duel, and you should treat it as such.

To be more explicit, if a stranger jumped me on the street, I would not use karate, or muay thai, or brazilian jiu jitsu, to disable him. I would attempt to distance myself from him, and if I could not, or if he pursued and attempted to continue the attack, or I was accompanied by others who I could not abandon to danger, then I would use a weapon on him until he was physically unable to continue his attack, and I would not care if he died in the process, because the safety of people who try to harm me or my friends is not a priority.

I'm afraid this isn't the answer you wanted, but it's the answer to the question you asked. Unarmed people are always at the mercy of armed people. So, you have only two choices: arm yourself, or hope you get through life without anyone wanting to hurt you.

Should i break up with a blue pilld boyfriend?

2 upvotes · 6 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

This is a very difficult question. It is completely valid to want to be with man who displays leadership qualities, or at least the self-possession to be in charge of his own life.

However, the real question is whether he will develop these qualities in the fullness of time, or not.

PLATE CAME BACK after I nexted her

2 upvotes · 5 March 2021 · /r/askTRP

Decent content, way too many words.

It's better to communicate in the process channel where possible. I'd have said "Come over at X:XX, and we'll talk about it".

Then proceed with screwing, and show a decent amount of real affection. This makes it clear that she's allowed to be with you, she's just not allowed to set rules for you.

What happened to this sub? It used to be about improvment

2 upvotes · 1 March 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

You liked some of what you found here, but you show no gratitude to the people who created it.

You want changes, but you are unwilling to contribute effort.

You want other to take criticism gracefully, but you are unwilling to do so yourself.

You want politeness, but you practice none.

It is much easier for me to show you the door than to talk you out of your sense of entitlement. Additionally, the group loses nothing from your absence, because you are a net negative producer. You contribute nothing, and set a poor example for others.

You ask "why would we participate?".

Answer: you wouldn't. Your participation adds nothing. Goodbye.

My husband is wonderful, but I'm having a hard time seeing past my flaws and being the happy wife he deserves

2 upvotes · 24 February 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Yeah, basically you are one of many victims of history's greatest mass poisoning... which has been perpetuated against western civilization since the 1970s.

Here's what was done to you:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dBnniua6-oM>

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jpNU72dny2s>

How to fix it is more complicated. But for someone as fat as you, I would combine several strategies:

- Intermittent fasting.
- A ketogenic diet.
- Strength training.

You'll need to do a lot of web searching and reading, but the information is out there... far too much to summarize. You have a lot of reading to do. But there's hope. This works. And you can actually do it.

Cutting calories doesn't work, because almost no one can stick to it. This, people can.

My husband is wonderful, but I'm having a hard time seeing past my flaws and being the happy wife he deserves

2 upvotes · 23 February 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

This is very complicated way of expressing a very simple problem. You are morbidly obese.

Here's what you need to know:

<https://www.trp.red/p/whisper/1442>

Die in Comfort, or Live in Challenge

2 upvotes · 23 February 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

In my writing, I like to break things down and explain how they work. But each explanation is a bit like a lego structure... it's built out of smaller units that you must have to build the whole.

The fact that you didn't understand my last sentence probably means that you dropped one of those legos on the carpet, and you should probably pick it up before you step on it at 2am in the morning when you are going to take a piss.

Here are the legos you might be missing:

- The concept of an ideal level. This is the idea that something isn't "always bad" (more is worse), and it isn't "always good" (more is better), but that there an ideal level of that thing, and therefore you might possibly have too much OR too little.
- The concept of correlation. This is the idea that the amount of two things can be related absolutely (if you know the amount of one, you know the amount of the other), not at all (you can't predict one from the other), or somewhat (knowing the amount of one gives you some indication of the amount of the other, but you can't be certain).

- The concept of causation, and how it has a direction. If A causes B, then that doesn't mean that B causes A, or that if you have B, there must be some A around here somewhere.

If you cannot understand all of those concepts, you're going to wind up generating irrelevant responses, much in the manner that you just did, because you do not actually know the meaning of what you are responding to.

If they all make sense to you as I wrote them here, then, with enough re-reading of the original comment, you will probably get it. If not... well, good luck out there.

What are your thoughts on "pick me" women?

2 upvotes · 19 February 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If someone uses the words "pick me girl", there's about a 95% chance she is a "skip me girl".

If it doesn't bother you then why did you make this and body positivity is for medical issues.btw you never had throne sweetie

2 upvotes · 15 February 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Less poetry, more intermittent fasting.

This sub was WAY ahead of it's time

2 upvotes · 14 February 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

At this point this this place is a beta male farm, which in a strange way is incredibly useful because beta males are always wrong. So if a beta male disagrees with you, by definition you are right.

This kind of thinking is how we get Jordan Peterson. "He disagrees with feminists, so he must be right!"

The most dangerous blue pill is the second.

This Article Will Infuriate You

2 upvotes · 8 February 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

I've done most of the different systems and they all work well enough for a nice 10 pound cut, the trick is to keep the garbage you eat to a minimum and not starve yourself or overeat, your good gut bacteria will start to survive, the bad ones will die off, and you'll stop craving bullshit and start noticing carrots are sweet.

One of my BJJ instructors once pointed out that there were two ways to produce a pack of students who are really good fighters.

The first is the Green Beret/MIT way: Test a whole bunch of people and pick the most elite badass ones for your program, then subject them to any sort of bullshit training regime that you think up, and take credit for how badass they were to begin with.

The second is his way: train everyone who comes to you the best you can, because the people who are the least apt at what you are teaching are the ones who need it the most.

Calorie-restricted diets have about a 98-99% failure rate, if you define success as a year-over-year reduction in overall body fat percentage. The way people get around noticing this is that if you only count your successes, your success rate can only be 100%.

It's easy to say that the 98-99% who wound up just as fat or fatter are "at fault" for "not sticking to the diet". But the universe doesn't care whose "fault" failure is, it only cares about results. A tool that fails the vast majority of the time is, by definition, a flawed tool.

If calorie restricting works for you, good. In fact, great... it probably means you have kept your metabolism healthy enough that almost any program would work. People who are in this condition tend to say things like "Just about any weight loss system works", because, for them... it does.

Remember that people of the early to mid 20th century didn't tend to do lots of multi-day fasts. They didn't need to. They simply ate at meal times and not in between, and didn't eat lots of sugar. When your metabolism is already healthy, that's enough to keep it that way.

But I am not interested, in this context, in those people, because they do not need any additional help.

Last night a girl that rejected me some weeks back showed up drunk at my door

2 upvotes · 8 February 2021 · /r/askTRP

You came off as too thirsty the first time. But she still had some underlying interest, so when the inhibitions came down, she decided to hit it.

What to do now is tease her mercilessly about chasing you and being a stalker. "What kind of gouirol do hyou think ah AM?", etc.

Then you'll get laid when she's sober.

Suzanne Venker alpha woman quiz wont calculate results?

2 upvotes · 6 February 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Another way to look at it: women don't operate on a hierarchical ladder. They work in circles of inclusion/exclusion. So these tests are waste of your brain space.

These tests are doubly a waste of your brain space, because men do not operate on a hierarchical ladder either.

This Article Will Infuriate You

2 upvotes · 5 February 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

u/Whisper, you could argue, and I in fact would argue, that virtue and knowledge are effectively synonymous.

That would be a really interesting article and I would love to read it.

This Article Will Infuriate You

2 upvotes · 5 February 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

The names you want are Dr. Robert Lustig and Dr. Jason Fung.

Guns equal feminism

2 upvotes · 2 February 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

you still do not have the right to take somebody life just because he attacked you.

Did you mean to type that?

Should we accept a womens sexual past?

2 upvotes · 1 February 2021 · /r/askTRP

She fucked 60+ guys and not one of those turned into a relationship.

Ask. Yourself. Why.

Well..yeah, it's actually kinda gross. Natural, yes, but gross, same with sweat.

2 upvotes · 25 January 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

If I had blood on my hands from any source, I'd wash it out. Blood is supposed to be on the inside. If it's outside, it's no good anymore, throw it away.

So PPD in a nutshell

2 upvotes · 11 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I definitely agree. I think emotions themselves aren't "good" or "bad", they are amoral, and it's about whether we choose to channel them in a healthy way or not.

You have this fortuitous way of setting up my next point.

One of the reasons that I worked to set TRP up the way it is, was to leverage male anger in a way that has positive outcomes for them. Generally, when guys first wash up on the beaches of TRP, they are pretty pissed off and frustrated. They've done everything that they were told was what they were supposed to do, they got exactly the opposite of what it was supposed to get them, and when they expressed any objection to this, they were told "nobody owes you love".

Of course, they never believed anyone did. They were simply upset about the fact that they had been given instructions for finding it which were completely and deliberately wrong.

First-world western cultural messages about how males should court are intended to flatter the female ego, rather than help the male who carries them out. The reason for this is that good advice would be profoundly sexist (which there is no way around because nature is sexist) and we as a culture now perceive sexism as harm to women, regardless of whether it actually has any demonstrable negative outcome for women or not.

This is where what you said about "channeling" emotions comes in. But it's not about channeling them in a "healthy" way, because what does that even mean? It's about channeling them in a productive way, in a way that motivates actions, which the sort of responses from the environment which dispel the source of that anger.

So, as someone who taken on the job of solving these problems, I have to do two things: I have to fuel, stoke, and legitimize that anger (misogyny), and I have to give it an action plan which actually works (sexism).

Female anger is also seen as "bad" (although probably less threatening) because women are sort of expected to be pleasant to be around and kind all the time, at least where I'm from Where's that?

As we touched on before, sexist cultural attitudes are often rooted in sound advice, because they come from effective ways to deal with and use nature's inherent sexism.

So PPD in a nutshell

2 upvotes · 11 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Fair enough. I wouldn't silence anyone even if I could. That's not how I roll.

But male anger is often inappropriately suppressed, and part of my job is to prevent that where I can... not only because that anger is "fair" or "understandable", but also because that anger is important and necessary.

People consider anger to be a "negative" emotion because it feels bad, and often makes you say or do things that make others feel bad, too. But it has a critical purpose... to make you avoid a repetition of what made you mad.

For example, if you hadn't had the capacity to be angry, instead of just sad, about your partner's infidelity, you wouldn't have had the impetus to end the relationship and find something that worked for you.

How to look more womanly?

2 upvotes · 10 January 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Lots of repetitions with light weights is good for getting tendonitis. Few reps with heavy weights is good for shaping muscle.

What you want is the same weight lifting routine that men use, just with different weight. Learn to squat.

Yes, I know you don't have access to a gym. That doesn't magically change how your body works. Start out doing reps with a sandbag.

Sign of decadency: Inversion of sexual value and fracturing of the family

2 upvotes · 9 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I was unaware that we were in the presence of the final authority on what is meaningful in life.

Perhaps you could lay some wisdom on us?

Dafuq this supposed to mean sometimes, I just can't comprehend the other side

2 upvotes · 9 January 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

That's how they talk, but it helps to understand what that group is actually for.

It's not for strategy, and its goal isn't success. It's for emotional support, and its goal is comfort.

Women who have been unlucky in love (and who have very often created their own bad luck) don't just want to do better later, they also want to feel better right now.

Doing better involves blaming yourself, and finding the things you can improve about yourself to get different results.

But blaming men, and reassuring themselves and each other that men who disappoint them are "low-value", and that they can get "high-value" without having to "settle"... it soothes their immediate emotional pain.

Do men in these modern times want to be breadwinners?

2 upvotes · 8 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The traditional bargain between men and women was very bad for men, which is why the Boomer men were willing to kick over the remains of Tradcon society for the largely unrealized promise of some unshaven free-love yeti snatch.

Since the pussy cartel is now well and truly shattered, women, even "traditionally feminine women" simply don't have the leverage to demand lifelong free stuff anymore.

Sorry, girls, you.... well, you didn't even play yourselves. Your mothers and grandmothers played you. You have a right to be angry at them, but that is not going to put the toothpaste back in the tube.

[Question] How would you define a Low Value Female

2 upvotes · 6 January 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

Considering how FDS likes to define what a LVM is

Why do you care?

FDS is basically emotional support for women who are unlucky in love. They sit about telling each other than men are rubbish, and that they have super high standards, so they can feel good about themselves despite their lack of success.

That's why it's all memes and griping about men, instead of analysis and field reports. Because FDS is about about feeling better, not doing better.

So my question for you is: do you really want to be attractive to the sort of woman who focuses on self-soothing rather than self-improvement?

Personally, I hope the women of FDS think I am super-low-value. That way, I'll never accidentally go on a date with one of them (which surely must be a grisly experience indeed). The women whose approval I want are the ones who already think men are pretty cool.

So PPD in a nutshell

2 upvotes · 5 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I am not mad currently, a bit sad but I'm not mad. Either way, I don't understand why creating art or memes for any sort of cathartic purposes is bad according to you,

Ah, there's where you misunderstand me. It's not bad at all. I'm not pointing it out to get you to stop being mad. If you're mad, you're mad about something, you're mad for a reason, and that's important.

In fact, I just cheated and checked your submission history and saw it. And it makes sense. It's okay to be mad. We evolved "mad" for a reason.

You see criticism where none was intended, because, on some level, you expected to be criticized. To some degree, you expected me to be one of your snake-men.

What I wanted you to see, is that your snake-men are your impression of very real men who are also angry. About stuff that happened to them. And then maybe see that, from their perspective, you are the same sort of snake-woman.

And that they might draw cartoons where they are reasonable cartoonist avatar, and you are the pointy-toothed snake-woman screaming "I am silly!".

This situation looks the same from both ends, with each group portraying the other as a sort of snake-person caricature, when all you really have are people who have been hurt, and often go on to spread their unhappiness around with a big shovel.

TRP encourages the "men are wonderful" narrative

2 upvotes · 4 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

True, of course. PPD is basically here for people who don't have a goal, they just like to jaw about this stuff.

It's certainly no longer for debating whether TRP methods work or not (that ship sailed years ago), or even, any more, for arguing whether it is moral or not (it's been around for long enough now that it is no longer edgy and shocking).

However, lately I've been finding that even pointless people can be useful if they bring out the value in you.

Arguing with idiots is a waste of breath if you are trying to induce a positive change in the idiot. But sometimes it's useful for working on yourself.

For example, I've been talking to some early twenties neomarxist lately about why her life sucks. Of course, she thinks it's because she's oppressed (more than other people), rather than simply because she's a loser who blames her problems on other people.

What I'm focusing on, however, in my own mind, is not her, because I have no control over whether she takes responsibility for her life or not. I'm focusing how I talk to losers who don't do that. See, this has something to do with something GLO said to me a while back. He said that just because someone is able to understand the truth doesn't mean that they aren't too cowardly to face it.

Of course, this is correct, but it also simply invokes, without really understanding, some age-old social tropes.

What, exactly, does it mean to be a coward? Why do some people face hard truths, or hard challenges, while others try to bury their heads in the sand? Sure, we can say that "some people are braver than others", or that some people have more willpower than others"... but that's not understanding this ... that's just pasting a label on it.

TRP basically deals with two problems. The second is "what do you do once you've taken responsibility for fixing your own problems?", which is certainly involved and what we talk a lot about. But that's actually the easy one. The hard one is the first one ... "How do you reach the stage of being willing to take responsibility for your problems, and start making plans for how to solve them?"

I say that's the hard one because it's what trips most people up. They never reach the stage of how to get better. They just hang about, whining, blaming others, praying to Jesus, voting for Bernie Sanders, wanting the government or society or other people to save them.

So what is it about losers that makes them losers? Why does one man freeze in place and fuss, while another, who has it just as bad, sets about learning and working?

So I'm working on understanding how losers think.

Males of the human race, i bid you farewell

2 upvotes · 4 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So why are you still talking?

Why Monogamy? Sounds boring to me...

2 upvotes · 3 January 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Before anyone can tell you anything useful about how to get what you want, you need a better understanding of what, exactly, it is that you want.

There are many possible reason you might be considering non-monogamy, and you need to understand which are motivating you?

1. Are you fearful of the responsibility for carrying another person's emotional needs alone?
2. Are you thinking that catering to male sexual desires will make you a better catch and allow you access to a more desirable man than you otherwise would?
3. Do you have a sexual fetish, and find the idea of your mate having sex with other women exciting?
4. Are you drawn to the idea of a social family unit with more adult "sister-wives" for you to have supportive and positive relationships with?
5. Do you see sex as a physical urge alone that doesn't serve as significant emotional bonding, and you don't care how your man gets his itches scratched as long as he treats you well?

6. Are you asexual or very low sex drive, and you want a romantic partner without the responsibility for his sexual needs?
7. Are you simply just totally not prone to jealousy at all, and feel like if this arrangement will make a man happier, it's no skin off your nose?
8. Did you have a very positive example of adult poly relationships that you witnessed as a child, which make you want to emulate it?
9. Have you seen many, or an important, relationship torn apart by male cheating and the desire for variety, and you feel that "all men cheat if they can", and you might as well get out in front of it?
10. Some other reason I have not thought of?

What do y'all think of polyamory?

2 upvotes · 3 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So you've made your personal happiness dependent upon whether some political figure is thrown in prison... something you have no control over.

No wonder you're unhappy. You have made your happiness dependent on the behaviour of other people. And not just some other people, but every other person.

The distinguishing feature of neurotics is that they have ever more and more precise conditions that they need in order to be okay, until eventually they are furious at the world all the time, for not wearing the chicken suit and beating the Great Drum at the rising of Nomo... or whatever their insane priorities are.

So, I told you what the universe is like, and you're telling me you're going to change that by rising up and overthrowing society. Not only wouldn't this work (because different society, same universe, same laws of physics, biology, economics, etc), but if fixing your own life is too difficult for you, overthrowing your entire social order is not going to be any easier.

That's why stable societies are stable. Because anyone talented and accomplished enough to be useful to a revolution can make their way in a stable, wealthy, and free society just fine. It is only in crapsack commie dictatorships and third world favelas that smart and hardworking people can't get ahead unless they blow shit up. That's why Hezb'allah is smart and organized, and the IDF takes them seriously, while Antifa is a bunch of pastel-haired losers, who couldn't punch OR buy their way out a wet paper bag.

Societies where losers want a revolution because losers aren't getting enough free stuff for contributing nothing... these are societies that work, and no one with their shit together wants to change them except by persuasion.

Societies where smart, organized, and goal-oriented people can't get ahead... those societies have revolutions.

The only question to ask about you is:

- Are you permanently a loser, because you're either too dumb or too insane to do anything useful?
- Or are you just a loser because you're in your early twenties, and consequently naive and confidently wrong about everything, leading to you blaming all your personal problems on SocietyTM?

I think it's the second. You don't seem like you have an IQ of 85, or believe aliens live in your nasal passages, or anything like that. You're only doing and saying stupid shit because you believe stupid shit.

It's okay, I believed stupid shit when I was 20, also.

Before you decide how the world "should" work, learn how it does.

women.jpeg

2 upvotes · 3 January 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And I want to have NSA sex with random women, and then a relationship with women who haven't had NSA sex.
And who gets what they want is determined by who has leverage. Societies come and go, the Great Game is eternal.

How to deal with anxiety of dating HVM

2 upvotes · 3 January 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

The most valuable personal relationships, in abstract, are like the most valuable business relationships.... deals where each party gives something that they don't value very much, but the other party values a great deal. In this situation, each party experiences themselves as getting much more than they give.

What do y'all think of polyamory?

2 upvotes · 30 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

i just feel like society doesnt want me to exist

You are much less important than you think you are. "Society" is way too large and busy to know you exist, much less have a collective opinion about you.

If you want people to care about you in a positive way, that doesn't just happen. You have to do something that makes it happen.

what are your opinions on Jordan Peterson?

2 upvotes · 29 December 2020 · /r/askTRP

He's a tradcon.

Tradcons and neomarxists are fighting a war over who gets to exploit you. Neither side gives a single solitary fuck about you or your quality of life.

Interviews - Who do you want to see next?

2 upvotes · 26 December 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

This weekend is for my family. Next weekend, I have some stuff, but we can most likely work around it. PM me a contact email, and we'll figure something out.

New to red pill, still trying to figure it out, can I even be a red pill wife?

2 upvotes · 22 December 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

So you've been working for 6 years?

When she says "let's just be friends" it's really over, isn't it?

2 upvotes · 19 December 2020 · /r/askTRP

The correct response to LJBF is "nah".

What, some of you clowns are actually MAD about OnlyFans?

2 upvotes · 16 December 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

Why are you calling the poster in reference a butt-hurt retard

Why are tying a live duck to your ankle?

Are women actually better off in the modern sexual marketplace than men?

2 upvotes · 12 December 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Depends what they want. If they want praise and attention, all they have to do is take their shirt off on the internet. If they want intimacy and trust, they are fucked.

Do you believe everyone has a soulmate?

2 upvotes · 10 December 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

This group is predicated on the idea that good relationships do not happen by magic, but instead require us to do things to make them happen.

Made a Fake Tinder Profile as a Woman

2 upvotes · 9 December 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

If you haven't this already, get a move on. I keep telling y'all that you have to investigate and learn things for yourselves... this is the kind of thing I mean.

To seduce women, you have to understand what the world looks like from their perspective.

Reddit tried to stop the spread of hateful material. Users turn to self-moderating platforms "an even more dangerous place." These self-righteous clowns believe themselves god, should have a say over what you think and say.

2 upvotes · 4 December 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

If you aren't paying, you aren't the customer. You are most likely the product.

Think for a moment. Who do you suppose reddit's customers are?

Last fight with bf he became very aggressive and violent.

2 upvotes · 30 November 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

In general, only you are in a position to judge whether your partner is physically abusive or a serious risk to become so.

But if you believe you are in danger, then whether you are or not, it's probably time to seek a relationship with someone else who inspires your trust instead.

I cannot let my anger go despite 3 years in trp

2 upvotes · 28 November 2020 · /r/askTRP

You may be starting to get it.

Women do not treat you according to how you treat them, they treat you according to how awesome they think you are, and how much they think you can benefit them.

This is why, if you make yourself into the right kind of man, and set things up right, you can treat them like trash with zero consequences. Donald Trump's "grab them by the pussy" comment was a simple statement of fact... if women think of you as an HVM, you can do pretty much anything you want, and they'll still love you, because their worship is not determined by good treatment.

The reason men have trouble understanding this is that we are the opposite. There's no such thing as an HVF, because women only differ on two axes... how attractive their physical self is, and how well they treat you.

Mature/older redpillers, how many real friends do you have which you can trust?

2 upvotes · 19 November 2020 · /r/askTRP

This is because younger people usually don't have real friends, just people they hang out with.

I'm confused about how trp works and I have some questions...

2 upvotes · 7 November 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

The red pill isn't an ideology, it's a set of observations about human nature. People with different goals use them differently to achieve those goals.

What is the best position a man can hold in a woman's life/mind?

2 upvotes · 2 November 2020 · /r/askTRP

What is the best position a man can hold in a woman's life/mind?

"Master".

“You’re so cute I’m sorry” does this really mean what it would at face value?

2 upvotes · 1 November 2020 · /r/askTRP

So I'm Snapchatting with a girl and we're going back and forth

When you're in the stupid box, only stupid will fit. Text is for logistics only.

TRP has an End Game

2 upvotes · 25 October 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

Just out of curiosity, you are here in TRP because...

Women Are For Sex – The Sexual Marketplace in ‘Current Year’

2 upvotes · 8 October 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

Oh, how I wish you were out there in 2020 trying this.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=XZbVLvT7qBU>

The answer is always "your" fault.

Of course.

When I have a problem, I always look for the part that's my fault... because that's the part I can change. Looking for the part that's someone else's fault is an excuse for inaction.

To a degree this was correct...but not now. It's seriously bad out there, man.

Dude, do you think you're the only young man I've spoken to or coached in the last ten years? Of course it's bad out there. That's why I am here trying to train you. Now, do you want to learn how to make the best of a bad situation, or do you want to pour handfuls of dirt over your head and sulk?

I have a terrible habit of overly reaching out to people, quadruple texting, answering in two seconds when they've taken hours. Can you ladies please give me tips and advice on how to nix this?

2 upvotes · 8 October 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

What exactly is it that you imagine to be the problem here?

Do not be beholden to your parents after you marry your husband!

2 upvotes · 4 October 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

+1 /u/LuckyLittleStar

Is anyone else annoyed by how reddit constantly recommends therapy/couple's therapy for every minor thing?

2 upvotes · 26 September 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Psychology, as a practice, exists to enforce our culture's ethos, not guide it.

One girl sent me a picture of her and another friend of hers (also a girl) and asked me to choose one. Best answer?

2 upvotes · 17 September 2020 · /r/askTRP

"Not until after the test drive."

What's with Gen Z girls posting their nudes on IG claiming women empowerment?

2 upvotes · 15 September 2020 · /r/askTRP

Or is my dream of having a good solid family childish and unrealistic?

Pick it apart. What is it about that which you actually want?

Anyone get bored of sex?

2 upvotes · 15 September 2020 · /r/askTRP

Sex is a satiable need.

GF found all my Redpill literature

2 upvotes · 2 September 2020 · /r/askTRP

FunSize reads everything I post on reddit. I sometimes comment on /r/IllegallySmolCats or /r/redpandas simply because she makes the cutest squealing noises when she comes across the comment and sees the picture.

FanGirl was literally a fan girl who saw my articles and wrote me fanmail.

Non-monogamist relationship structures (i.e. Polyamory) are as valid as monogamy.

2 upvotes · 2 September 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is "argument from personal incredulity".

Guess who's back?

2 upvotes · 26 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

Hey guiz, which books by Bronze Age shepherders and nineteenth century unemployed alcoholic virgins should I read to become super duper redpilled? I don't want to talk to any girls until I become an Ascended Redpill Master, because then it won't be as scary as it is now.

Failed a shit test with a chick at gym.

2 upvotes · 24 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

<https://www.trp.red/p/whisper/772>

Feminist claims all women are afraid of men

2 upvotes · 22 August 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

I must have missed the part where any of this is my problem.

After getting with multiple 'unicorns', I've noticed that no matter what, when you get to truly know their personalities, they are literally all the same.... so how do some guys stay with an LTR for so long, don't you get bored?

2 upvotes · 19 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

It was a little easier for me because I have a nerd fetish. And since I look jockish, I tend to have to shoulder through a fair amount of this to get some time alone with that.

Grit your teeth and go hang out with nerds doing nerd stuff. You'll find that some of the female ones are actually pretty hot, not to mention starved for real masculinity.

I found Women who was Match maker. She quit because she could not handle female clients.

2 upvotes · 18 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Ultimately though, the goal isn't to make it harder for a future husband/partner to leave you, but to make life so good for the both of you that the thought never even crosses his mind, biological imperatives be damned.

+1

/u/luckylittlestar

I found Women who was Match maker. She quit because she could not handle female clients.

2 upvotes · 18 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

This is why we tout vetting at RPW

Who's "we"?

I found Women who was Match maker. She quit because she could not handle female clients.

2 upvotes · 18 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Or...since he's the founder, and its his ideology

It's not an ideology at all.

Ideologies tell people what they "should" do, because it's "morally right". I don't give a shit what's morally right. I tell people how to get what they want. Which changes depending on who they are.

I can't even-----

2 upvotes · 15 August 2020 · /r/AntiFeminists

Every bitch is a feminist until she's cold, hungry, or scared.

I recently found myself in a dangerous situation and am now agonizing about carrying a gun.

Do any of you ladies conceal carry?

2 upvotes · 13 August 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

You're going to need to predicate what you carry on how you carry it. The concealed carry equation tends to be a lot more difficult for women to solve, because you tend to be of smaller stature, and want to wear lighter, tighter clothing in a greater variety of styles. I just strap a holster to my belt, put on a loose outer shirt, and I'm done. I can easily conceal a Sphinx SDP, Ruger 57, or even a full size Arex Zero. But you're going to need think a bit about this.

If you are going inside-waistband, you're going to want something narrow, which means single stack. Wearing a hip bag or fanny pack style holster will allow you to carry something wider, so long as the grip or slide isn't too long.

Double action trigger pulls may be too heavy for female hands.

Make sure you get something with a rail under the frame... over 50% of violent encounters are in low, altered, or failing light, so weapon mounted flashlights are a must. No, night sights are not good enough; they do not show you what you are shooting at.

Firearms to consider:

- Springfield XDE
- Smith & Wesson 9ez
- Glock 19
- H&K VP9SK
- H&K P30SK (the v1 model with the LEM trigger)
- Arex Delta

New girlfriend (22) is incredibly private about our relationship. Has no social media.

2 upvotes · 12 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

Either she doesn't USE social media, and might be LTR material, or she's keeping you away from her social media, and you are side dick.

Why get into an LTR?

2 upvotes · 9 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

All love is conditional.

Why get into an LTR?

2 upvotes · 9 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

There's a lot of it scattered throughout my articles. Try starting with "Tears" and "Why you don't wanna be Chad".

Why the fuck isn't a clean diet one of the core principles of TRP?

2 upvotes · 9 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

Seems selfish to me.

That's because you haven't quite grasped my point about what we are doing here. This isn't just about nutrition. Or lifting. Or even self-respect.

The point of TRP isn't to take care of men. It's to be a source of information, know-how, technology if you will, for men to take care of themselves with. An article about how to lift for best results is a good article. An article about why lifting this or that way gives the best results is an even better article. But an article telling TO lift is a BAD article.

Why?

Because the whole point, the very thing, that you need as a man... is responsibility for yourself. And if I tell you, step by step, how to do that, then the content of that message is contradicted by the process of how I deliver it. There's no set of step-by-step instructions for being the sort of person who doesn't need step-by-step instructions.

TRP isn't a machine to get you laid, make you rich, or save your butt. It's a junkyard full of machine parts. With a bunch of old codgers in rocking chairs sitting around talking about how they built their machines.

So, an article about what isn't good for you, and why, would be great. "Eat right, you retards!" is just meaningless noise. Because anyone who's not already taking responsibility for what he puts into his own goddamned mouth isn't worth your time.

TRP is not the sort of thing we can play "here comes the airplane" with. Not only is that a poor use of my time and yours, it simply doesn't work. All it does is cultivate a horde of retarded suckups who can't make a decision without Dear Leader to tell them what to do and think. And that kind of shit is how we got here in the first place.

This is what the "address the community properly" rule means, and this is why I wrote it this way. If I wanted a herd of beta suckups, I'd tell people what to do, because that's how you get beta suckups. Instead, I want to tell people how things work, and why, so that they can think, not just obey.

Proctor & Gamble loses $8 Billion, decides maybe war on men was a bad idea...

2 upvotes · 6 August 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

It's a persuasion tool for use against pattern seeking primates

It's a operational tool for deriving implications in formal context-free grammars.

Trying to do logic in any natural language is just aping that process. Sometimes it works, sometimes it does not. Philosophy nerds love to overuse this process, and try to tell everyone they can derive the state of the universe by sitting in their office thinking about it.

It doesn't work that way, not because logic doesn't work, but because you can't do real logic outside of a formal system.

The real objective truth finder is experiment and observation. Logic-in-natural-language is only useful for generating hypotheses than can then be checked empirically.

Proctor & Gamble loses $8 Billion, decides maybe war on men was a bad idea...

2 upvotes · 6 August 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

No, logic is about preserving the truth-value of the premises. An imperative statement has no truth value.

You can't do logic about what you "should" do, only about what is.

My confidence is fake

2 upvotes · 6 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

Don't fall into the trap of narcissistic paranoia where you think everyone is looking at you. Most people are focused on their own stuff.

LTR wants to get married ... I do not

2 upvotes · 5 August 2020 · /r/askTRP

She tells me to "man up" and just do it

How widespread is the notion of shaming women and girls for their femininity?

2 upvotes · 31 July 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Children are blank slates and what you put in you often get out.

Except that turns out not to be the case. Children are anything but blank slates, and culture has nothing to do with it. If you give a bunch of toys to baby chimpanzees, the girl chimps play with the dolls, and the boy chimps play with the trucks. Hint: this isn't due to sexism in chimp culture.

Oh, I understand your reasoning, here. You don't want to be shamed into behaviours you don't feel safe engaging in.

You could, however, have considered the context, given the space that you wandered into. No one here is being shamed into anything. They're concerned about being shamed for what they want to do. And then here's you, telling them that they were just programmed like robots to want that.

Bit tone-deaf, don'tcha think?

"Sacrificing" her career

2 upvotes · 30 July 2020 · /r/askTRP

No, the double negative made sense as written. Simply seemed outside your writing style.

I play around with that style a lot. Because figuring shit out is very easy compared to how hard it is to turn an idea round and round until it fits into people's heads. That's the hard part about writing, and the more nuanced the idea, the harder it is to get people to understand it.

As for the rest, there's a certain amount of determinism I'm willing to accept. Biological, to an extent.

You wrote about Control Game, after all. Don't you see the conflict?

Insisting that there is no way to alter the human condition is dogmatic at best.

The key word here is "condition". You can alter the behaviour of people by understanding their instincts and knowing how to push the buttons. That's what control game is. But those instincts are hardwired in, and when people cross the line between "thinking that you can sometimes persuade some people of some things" and "thinking human beings are perfectible", then you've crossed the line into magical thinking.

Control game isn't about controlling the universe, it's about controlling your universe.

You can learn to push people's buttons and get better treatment from those around you, but don't think that you are going to change how votes are counted, or the movements of little green pieces of paper, and people are suddenly going to stop being the same bags of selfish goo that we have always been.

So, if I can boil this down to a few words of advice:

The anger phase is important. The usefulness of anger is that it motivates action. But to be useful, it isn't enough for anger to motivate action, it has to motivate useful action.

When you think are angry about how the world is, you are really just angry about how the world is affecting you. Instead of wasting your precious anger by spraying it all over, trying to change everything, focus it with laser intensity on how the world is affecting you personally, and accumulate the power to change that.

And if you are altruistic and don't want to just save your own butt, then the best way you can help others is by helping yourself, then teaching those others how you did that.

That's what I'm trying to do now. I used to be angry. Now I'm happy. What I'm telling you right is a description of how I went from angry to happy.

"Sacrificing" her career

2 upvotes · 29 July 2020 · /r/askTRP

The entire purpose of society is to provide political solutions to human instincts.

That's where you're wrong. You think society has a purpose. You think it's a machine, which somebody designed, in order to do something.

It's not. Nobody designed society. Society is the word we used to describe the result of a whole bunch of people doing a whole bunch of stuff to pursue their own individual goals. The fact that it sometimes helps you is just a side effect of other people building shit for themselves that you happen to be able to use.

If you have a beef with "society", you are arguing with an emergent property.

Why doesn't RP talk about gammas? Why is it all alpha and beta?

2 upvotes · 22 July 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The term "incel" was coined as a contraction of "involuntary celibate", which is pretty common. Hell, everyone, male or female, has been involuntarily celibate at some point, even if only for a brief period.

But the term has come to imply much more than that. It is now generally used to describe not simply those who have sexual problems, but who have become help-resistant complainers about them.

So, if you want to ask me why I don't try to help help-resistant complainers, the answer is in the name. I have my hands full, and more than full, helping those who have asked for my help, and are actively trying to cooperate with me helping them. The number of those people vastly exceeds the amount of time and attention I am willing to dedicate to teaching.

I have a fulltime job, a bunch of hobbies, an exercise schedule, a bunch of friends, two significant others, and a healthy appreciation for the recuperative benefits of regular non-productive time. I can't even help everyone who wants it. Why would I waste my time on those who have ceased trying to better their situation and are simply looking for a good excuse?

TRP isn't a religion with a mission to convince everyone of the gospel. Not is it a movement that seeks to change society. I was just as happy when there were 300 of us as when there were a million. Frankly, most of the audience isn't sophisticated enough to hear anything more nuanced than "bitches ain't nothin' but hoes and tricks", and for that there's no need for me, because Dr. Dre will suffice.

So, incels are off our radar for the same reason that gay men are, not because they don't exist, but because we have nothing to say to each other. Our goals are non-overlapping.

What Would A World Where Women Are Just As Horny As Men Look Like?

2 upvotes · 22 July 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women ARE as horny as men. They just have other factors to consider as well.

How the hell do some of you lift so hard?

2 upvotes · 22 July 2020 · /r/askTRP

2xBW is over 400 lbs unless you are a manlet.

Why aren't Rollo Tomassi, Donovan Sharpe and Rich Cooper spinning early 20 year old plates?

2 upvotes · 21 July 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So examine the possibility that other, older RP guys have a similar endgame.

I have two girlfriends who live with me, both a little over thirty now, and I have no plans to replace them, or to spend great effort seeking out 18-24s to fuck.

This is not to say that I spurn those who fall into my lap, but as you get older your priorities change. Most old people lose sight of that and try to shame younger people for what they want, but I'm not into that, either. To every thing, there is a season.

So I tell young guys how to bang tindersluts because that's what they want, not because it's what I want. It's all based on the same basic understanding of female psychology.

Why aren't Rollo Tomassi, Donovan Sharpe and Rich Cooper spinning early 20 year old plates?

2 upvotes · 21 July 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So what are you going to do when you are in your forties and your girlfriend is in her thirties? You have two options:

1. Dump her and replace her with a twentysomething.
2. Laugh it off when people assume you "can't" date twentysomethings because your game isn't tight enough.

The first approach implies the question of why you were with someone so replaceable to begin with, let alone for a decade.

The second forces you to accept that old age happens to everyone, and will happen not only to her but to you, and that even Arnold Schwarzenegger isn't all that ripped anymore.

Eventually, time stops giving you things and starts taking them away. The only relevant question is if you are better off decaying from a position of having worked on yourself and continuing to do so, or from a position of just doing whatever because you think it all boils down to money and status?

I don't have to convince myself that the universe is fair (hah ahahahah), or that all effort and knowledge pays off equally, to know you are better off if you hear my advice than if you don't. But it's no skin off my back if you don't agree. I'm not selling seminars.

Does anyone actually enjoy spending time with their LTRs?

2 upvotes · 3 July 2020 · /r/askTRP

That's pretty much the size of it. I didn't choose FunSize or FanGirl because they were the best cock suckers of all the boring and annoying bitches who have ever sucked my cock.

They're fun to be with. If yours aren't, dump them.

As a man you will live and die alone

2 upvotes · 1 July 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

What you're thinking about here is something I have dissected in some detail, and will continue to write about in the future. Instead of becoming bogged down in the semantics of the word "demand", try looking at it this way:

There are two types of game: Indifference Game, and Control Game.

In the first, you invest little to nothing in her and what she does, leave it up to her to act on her own initiative to earn your attention, and punish misbehaviour by withdrawal. In the second, you make expectations clear to her, and she must meet them or answer to you.

TRP talks mostly about the first, because it's the one you play first, and it gets you to sex. The second is for managing LTRs.

I just learned about Hypergamy

2 upvotes · 11 June 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

I want to thank everyone for the great responses. It actually helped me relax about it a little bit. What fucks with my head is the fact that I'm still living in my mom's basement and have no financial independence yet.

<https://imgur.com/B4yLlol>

Just got a knife pulled on me

2 upvotes · 10 June 2020 · /r/askTRP

Every man who is legally allowed to should own at least one firearm.

Fixed that for you.

It's better to be caught with it than caught without it.

Just got a knife pulled on me

2 upvotes · 10 June 2020 · /r/askTRP

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3q2yd8/startin_shit/

The prize for winning that fight would be "you get to walk away with the same number of holes you arrived with".

The prize for not having that fight was "you get to walk away with the same number of holes you arrived with".

Your goal, when faced with a force multiplier you don't have, is to survive. You survived. Good show. Best possible outcome.

What would I have done? I'd filled him full of 5.7mm or 9mm holes, depending on what I was carrying that day. I may have a couple of black belt ranks and a winning fight record, but the reason I win fights is that I don't voluntarily enter them without a tactical advantage.

You did only 2 things wrong:

- Be out and about in public without a weapon on your person.
- Be unaware enough to let him get close to you.

What are your thoughts on what this woman is saying in this video?

2 upvotes · 8 June 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

This is just "The Rules" again.

You're never going to get anywhere if you start with the assumption that your ideal man is an idiot.

I've been on TRP for a few years now. I feel like I should be having more success with attractive women than I am. Is there something I'm missing?

2 upvotes · 25 May 2020 · /r/askTRP

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/8pz9m3/go_out_and_test_it/

Infertility Is The Goal Of Feminism

2 upvotes · 22 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't deport him because he's funny, and he gets people talking.

See, unlike the domain of pussified post-modernism that surrounds us, we at TRP don't actually care if someone is outrageous, or a demagogue, or offends someone else's delicate sensibilities. We don't NEED everyone around us to agree with us about anything.

GLO is good for herding beta males, which he does by berating them and encouraging their feelings of inadequacy. This makes them crave his approval as a sort of substitute daddy.

But you know what? It gets the little fuckers lifting.

And it accomplishes something I don't wanna have to do. I hate it when men act submissive towards me. It feels creepy and slightly gay. And like I need to take two showers afterwards. So I don't wanna be a father figure to someone who's desperate for one. I hate fawning behaviour.

Hell, I don't even like dogs. Because they have no dignity. No sense of self worth.

But somebody's got to play drill sergeant, because these guys do NOT come to us ready to be free men. To be their own father figures, and their own leaders. That happens later.

So, you're right about him. But also wrong. Because none of the shit you're right about actually matters.

Do you hold contempt against women who reject you at your worst but want you at your best?

2 upvotes · 20 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No.

I reject them at their worst and want them at their best.

People who want to be accepted just as they are end up with people who want to be accepted just as they are. And people who strive to be better end up with people who strive to be better.

Choose.

Lady Karren everyone

2 upvotes · 4 May 2020 · /r/MensRights

Cool, I've always wanted to bake banana bread over a charcoal fire while women try to figure out how a nuclear plant works.

TRP was meant for Average Frustrated Chumps not Bottom Tier Omegas

2 upvotes · 4 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I enjoyed every step of the process.

Why?

Precisely because I never held myself responsible for saving you. I know that I cannot help you without your active participation. So I don't try.

I offer you what I know. I enjoy the process of learning it, I enjoy the process of explaining it, and I don't sweat about whether you get it or not. That part is up to you.

Because I don't hold myself responsible for that, because I don't have to worry about that, the whole process is stress-free and I can simply enjoy writing. I don't have to kick myself over every self-pitying whiner who would rather have an excuse for failure than a chance at happiness.

If you're not religious/believe in an afterlife, why do you care about not being "degenerate" or whatever?

2 upvotes · 3 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Anyone less kinky than me is prudish and boring. Anyone more kinky than me is degenerate.

Should hypergamy be something that a woman is ashamed of?

2 upvotes · 3 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Hypergamy is monogamy.

Do men value companionship?

2 upvotes · 2 May 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Then it bothered me when someone wrote this:

"Women's effort into a relationship is similar to the effort that women put into a friendship. I mean, what do they do? They breath? They put clothes on? They pretend like they are interested in what the other person is doing. That's basically how you start a friendship."

No. How about going beyond to help them with their problems? For example, I drove to the opposite end

I had a friend in high school who had a little joke he liked to play... he would stand in the middle of a crowded room and say to you, as if in conversation, but loudly:

"The trouble with women is that they take everything personally."

I never saw him do this without at least one woman angrily pointing out to him that SHE didn't do that.

Narcissistic Personality Disorder Tells

2 upvotes · 2 May 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

I get where you're coming from, but I don't think you've quite realized what I'm on about, here.

What you're dealing with isn't my hatred of dogs. It's my hatred of something else entirely... something even worse than dogs.

Indoctrination. Faith. Believing things because they make a good story or seem to make sense. Believing things because other people believe them. In short, credulousness.

Believing silly things about dogs without any evidence might be trivial, but this sort of thing in another field is precisely what I poured so much of myself into TRP to oppose. We made this place because "seddit" kowtowed to public opinion and consensus over the evidence of their eyes and ears.

Now we have someone quoting a fake expert who hasn't done any experiments, to say something that most people like hearing because it makes them feel good.

What do you suppose is going to happen?

Narcissistic Personality Disorder Tells

2 upvotes · 29 April 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

So, basically, "the website for animal people" interviewed a non-expert, who opined that this is so.

I seem to recall having had something to say about stuff like this.

Narcissistic Personality Disorder Tells

2 upvotes · 29 April 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

Bullshit.

Is this a redpill mindset?

2 upvotes · 26 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

But idk, it feels kinda shitty that people only now care that I am adding value

You see adding value as something external to you. A bribe to get people to like you.

That's your internal self-image. Learn to accept your added value as part of your identity.

Is it ever okay to open up/show a little emotion to females?

2 upvotes · 25 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

If you have to ask this question, you are not ready.

I'm successful/get laid lots by being nice. I'm literally just kind to girls, honest and straightforward. Then I bang, and move on. Is this allowed? What am I missing out on with this approach?

2 upvotes · 24 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

So you alluded to the fact that anger is an important part of human biology in that last post. It is, very much so. You teaching men to express anger is important. People - men and women - should express frustration. But we should do so in useful ways.

No, not where I'm going with this. If you were capable of anticipating my thought process, you wouldn't need to talk to me at all.

Try just answering the question. Why do you think humans have the capacity for anger?

Why do you think masculinity is under attack by the mainstream?

2 upvotes · 23 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

A good way to reduce the socioeconomic power of white males is to brainwash them into Lolbertarianism.

Whether or not you think libertarianism is cool is irrelevant.

The trouble is while he's plowing his energy is siphoned off to feed other groups which he can't see

And collectivism was the method used to set up this scheme. Every tax increase, every federalization, every new policy was sold in terms of "the common good". So, to come at them with more "sacrifice for the common good" rhetoric is not going to have much traction with those who are paying careful attention. What's the difference this time? That you pinky-swear your intentions are wholly altruistic?

Historically White Males were the strongest when they were in collectives.

I don't agree.

If you think about it casually, it's easy to see strength in terms of regimented masses of men, all marching in the same direction at the behest of the Dear Leader. But if you think about it, these strong-appearing societies (the Third Reich, the Soviet Union, the British Empire, etc) ultimately failed, and they did so not by abandoning their principles, but because their social model was inadequate for coping with the circumstances they found themselves in.

White Europeans did indeed have a period where they were entirely united in beliefs and ideology. It was called "the Dark Ages". It was only when they started arguing amongst themselves about what was true, and what was to be done that they finally stopped being a backwater full of ignorant hayseeds and became the center of the civilized world.

You see strength in terms of numbers, centralized control, and unification of purpose. That is because you see humans as units of labour.

I see power in terms of innovation and correct application of knowledge. That is because I see humans as units of computation.

If we envision optimal states as maxima on an N-dimensional error surface in a configuration space of dimension N-1, then this can simply be understood as the difference between single-thread hill-climbing search and massively parallelized simulated annealing. Free minds are simply the latter approach applied over the noosphere, while free markets are an equivalent economic approach.

More philosophical question, why are men "hated"?

2 upvotes · 17 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

One thing you seem to be really good at that I've been trying to learn is how to pick up on the insecurities of others.

It's very simple, really. Most people trip up on the first step, because they look to try and see if a person is insecure.

That right there is the fundamental misunderstanding. There's no "if", there only "how". Every single human being is beset by varying levels of self-doubt, simply as an effect of being born as small meat robot accidentally thrust into a giant and indifferent universe.

No, the trick is to assume that fears exist, because they always do, and to simply set about assessing what they are.

You can learn to do this by realizing that many, possibly even most, people use many, possibly even most, of their words to adjust their own emotional state. So when someone voices an opinion, don't ask yourself first if it's true, but why they need you to believe it.

That's how I did this: <https://www.trp.red/p/whisper/1088>

I listened to what she said, and treated it, not as what she believed, but what she wanted me to believe. And over the course of a long conversation, I put her back in touch with her own desires.

(It was, in fact, a much longer conversation than the article gives an impression of. Oops. I'm a good writer, but not a perfect one.)

An important thing to understand is that "insecurities" aren't personality flaws... they're valid. The weakness only comes in how we handle them.

This girl I wrote the article about... I like her. I cuddled her back, because I actually wanted to comfort her.

She arrived at feminism because she had a shitty uninvolved father, and was surrounded in childhood, and later young adulthood, by coarse dumbasses who wanted to be treated as patriarchs but couldn't walk the walk. Her hostility to men was entirely the product of her deep desire to submit, coupled with her entirely rational fear of being let down or exploited. Yeah, she's self-centered, and adopting feminism in response to personal hurts was a dumb idea, but at least with some prodding, she was able to own it.

If someone says "should" instead of "I want", if someone says "everyone knows" instead of "I think", if someone says they doing this for the children, or the underprivileged, or the brown people, instead of identifying their personal motive, that's a sign of where their insecurities lie.

Do people actually see the red pill as an ideology?

2 upvotes · 12 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

You have a couple of undischarged premises.

One of the lovely things about Lacanian theory is that it is very simple to ID someone who hasn't read or understood it: ask for a straight definition. Anyone providing a definition is automatically wrong

The first undischarged premise here is that anyone who had read Lacan would respond in a Lacanian fashion. He might have read Lacan, understood Lacan, and thought every word to be a load of rubbish.

This is essentially the philosopher's shiboleth: "My reasoning is compelling to me, therefore my reasoning is compelling, therefore anyone who understands my reasoning must agree, therefore anyone who does not agree has not understood."

We've talked here about female solipsism... well, this is philosopher's solipsism.

The second undischarged premise is merely implied rather than stated. It is implied equivalence between "hasn't read Lacan" and "is wrong about the subjects Lacan speaks on".

This is the assumption that ignorance == incorrectness; that someone can only be right if they are familiar with every opinion anyone has ever had on the topic at hand. Well, Richard Feynman once said that the universe doesn't care who is smart, it only cares who is right... to this I would add that the universe doesn't care who is well-read, either.

It's true that I haven't read Lacan... neither have I read the work of Gene Ray the Time Cube Guy.

Now, you could easily object... "How can you possibly refute the work of Lacan if you have not read it?", which is, in fact, the attitude that underlies the philosopher's affected contempt for the non-philosopher.

The fundamental error of thinking in this attitude is that it shifts the burden of proof to where that burden does not belong. I am no more obligated to disprove Lacan's thinking than I am Gene Ray's. That which is asserted without evidence can be dismissed without evidence.

It is not my job to disprove Lacan, it is Lacan's job to prove things to me. The assertion that I haven't read Lacan is to be properly understood as a criticism of Lacan, not me. He has failed in his job.

But Whiiiiiiiiisssssssssppper, how can Lacan prove anything to you if you won't read his work?

Well, to those who have been paying attention, I have already answered this question a year ago. Lacan is a bucket.

Remember that, as I just got done describing, truth is that which empowers through prediction. If Lacan possesses truths that I do not, he will be able to demonstrate power that I cannot duplicate. Otherwise, he's just a guy with a bucket on his head.

Do people actually see the red pill as an ideology?

2 upvotes · 11 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

This is an argument I've heard before, but it's an interesting one.

It's essentially the metaphor of "ideology" as a box, which traps one, but can be stepped outside of, with the proper insights. (Although perhaps into another box.)

This raises the question of whether there is an "outside", especially if, as Zizek contends, ideologies come at least sometimes from an inherent human tendency to generate them, rather than outside imposition.

Try slicing the question a different way:

There are about four things that can be parceled into this sense of the word "ideology":

1. Beliefs: what a person thinks is true.
2. Values: what a person thinks is important.
3. Morals: what a person thinks is categorically imperative.
4. Methods: what a person thinks is useful.

#3 is the only one that a person can be without... everyone has ideas about what the universe is really like (or they could not act), everyone cares about something (or they would not act), and everyone has to pick an action somehow, when they act.

So, if someone's definition of "ideology" doesn't include #3 as a necessary element, then every point of view is an ideology, and every person has their own, some aligned, some not.

If an "ideology" does require #3, then a great many sets of beliefs and practices are not ideologies (science, math, etc).

Thus, if we define ideology in the first sense, then there is no "outside the box". If we define it in the second, there could be.

RPW Episode 6: Leftism Is A Luxury

2 upvotes · 9 April 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

No one should be nostalgic for the "1950s ideal" of Dad returning to a freshly baked dinner and freshly washed children

If this annoys you, try remembering that "should" just means "I want".

And not only "I want", but "I want and don't know how to incentivize", because no one who knows how to motivate you has to harangue you with "should".

Do people actually see the red pill as an ideology?

2 upvotes · 8 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

Okay, let me construct the teacup-ride version.

I am not a cat. The young men who look to me for guidance are not cats. I am not going to let you use the word "degeneracy" as a laser pointer that you shine on whatever you want them to attack.

They have been exploited enough already. I am not going to collude in recruiting them for yet another unpaid quest.

I am not training them to be soldiers in your war. I am training them to be mercenaries who demand half in advance.

Why Did She Smell So Good?

2 upvotes · 2 April 2020 · /r/askTRP

"We have not successfully isolated anything that we would call a human pheromone" $\neq$ "we are 100% certain humans have no chemical signalling mechanisms".

Humans have a vomeronasal organ. The jury is still out on whether it is vestigial.

Do you let your plates have other guys?

2 upvotes · 31 March 2020 · /r/askTRP

And I, along with some of my friends, made TRP what it is, and continue to determine what it is. So if you think I'm lying, why are you even here?

Anxiety as I get older following TRP

2 upvotes · 31 March 2020 · /r/askTRP

No matter how old I get, college girls are still 18-22.

Do you let your plates have other guys?

2 upvotes · 31 March 2020 · /r/askTRP

Hi, my name is Whisper. You may have heard of me. And, apparently, the parallel dimension I live in.

Back to school, son.

Feminists are always inventing new slurs for men. Introducing 'Straight Man Cancer'

2 upvotes · 31 March 2020 · /r/MensRights

Fortunately, we don't actually need to interact with feminists for anything.

but if we say we don't wanna date fat women we the bad ones

2 upvotes · 27 March 2020 · /r/MensRights

What fat girls think they look like.

What fat girls look like.

How real is this statement?

2 upvotes · 12 March 2020 · /r/askTRP

In the exact particulars, not very much. Women get attention differently than men get sex, they treat it differently, etc, etc.

But as a reminder to yourself to reserve your attention as a reward, not give it away in the hopes of one, it helps you.

Should I message him?

2 upvotes · 10 March 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

You keep asking "what should I do?". No doubt a simple list of instructions is comforting for the inherently submissive.

But the first thing on that list would have to be "understand what's going on here".

What I am attempting to do is not help you hook up with this dude, or to avoid that. What I am attempting to help you do is fix your mindset.

You see, you want something. And you are asking whether to reach out for it, or wait for the universe to give it to you.

But what you need to understand is that the universe doesn't give a crap about you. And it's certainly not in the business of reading your mind, figuring out what you want, and arranging to make that happen. You are the one who has the desire, so you have to act.

And that action can take the form of contacting this dude, or of deciding that reconnecting with him would be a bad idea after, and not contacting him. Either is okay. But there is no "wait for him to contact you". He won't, because he can't read your mind.

So waiting for him to contact you is in effect a decision to not reconnect with him.

Anything you want in life, you must work to get. If you don't do something, you get what chance gives you, not what you choose for yourself.

Should I message him?

2 upvotes · 10 March 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

RPW is not a democracy. It is designed for women to receive expert advice, predicated on a certain set of ideas which those who founded it believe leads to advice being helpful. It is led and moderated by whatever means will serve that end.

Through participation here and observation elsewhere, I have seen that women, when they are in an all-female group that has a sense of unity and purpose, are not shy about speaking up to give their opinion even if they don't know much about the topic, and have only participated a little while. And other women treat those opinions with respect whether they deserve them or not.

While this sense of fair play is commendable in many situations, it's counterproductive here. Women who come to this corner of the internet are looking for advice that comes from a particular point of view (after all, that's what it says on the label). But when they receive advice from others who have just arrived, and don't know the theory, they are unable to distinguish between what they signed up for, and what some other random girls just kinda want to say.

It's tough to learn anything at college when the format doesn't allow you to distinguish between the professor and the incoming freshman, because it's all text and you can't see who's behind the lectern, and who's at the back of the class.

So I had a moderator delete those comments not on general principles, but for the protection of /u/mamita9 .

How to handle female friend who has been really irritating me the last couple of months?

2 upvotes · 9 March 2020 · /r/RedPillWomen

Friend not friendly. Replace friend.

LJBF situation

2 upvotes · 29 February 2020 · /r/askTRP

Never underestimate the power of

"Nah."

Veer Clear of Female Therapists

2 upvotes · 18 February 2020 · /r/askTRP

Steer clear of female therapists.

FTFY.

How to NOT argue with feminists.

2 upvotes · 12 February 2020 · /r/TheRedPill

Do they still exist? Have they not gotten bored yet?

Living together before marriage- is it a good thing? Why or why not?

2 upvotes · 28 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It can't be that you need the information anymore.

I was never there because I needed the information. When I needed the information, there was no TRP. For me, TRP was always a place to write down what I figured out for myself.

Living together before marriage- is it a good thing? Why or why not?

2 upvotes · 27 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I have 3 great children and the ACTUAL value is high

Oh. I was unaware that a signed marriage certificate was required for women to conceive. What a great relief it will be to young and frisky unmarried girls everywhere.

I assess children as I assess my wife, not as a set of statistical patterns, but as the individuals that they are.

Certainly, I am a cold and calculating bastard, therefore my reasoning is invalid. Only good people can be correct.

But it just seems to me when you do that you are admitting you aren't bringing anything to the table worth having.

If only everyone in the ~~schoolyard~~ world were as awesome as you, they would all be just fine. Surely, anyone who disagrees with you in any way is admitting to how much of a loser they are.

Do women actually like sex with alphas, or the validation that comes with being able to attract him?

2 upvotes · 27 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes.

A much older yet influential critique of TRP on a different sub. Thoughts?

2 upvotes · 25 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Sure.

First off, TRP is pretty much whatever I say it is. Because the whole group started as me and about 10 to 20 of my friends writing down what we thought and experienced. And we all kinda say the same things. So if what you think TRP is differs from what we think it is, then you're just plain wrong.

Pretty much all of those guys who I am still in touch with are currently in long terms relationships. I happen to be in two long term relationships right now. I've written various articles for TRP on how to manage long term relationships, which you haven't read.

Instead, you most likely skimmed over the frontpage of TRP a few times, read some randomly selected comments, maybe read more of what the debate-club nerds over here say about it, and you kinda figured, hey, I've got this all worked out.

But if you go onto a university campus for a day, and wander around listening to snippets of conversation at random, you're not going to hear what the university teaches, because you're listening to students and not professors. You may not even be able to clearly discern what subjects the university teaches, much less what it has to say about them.

If you haven't read /u/humansockpuppet's "Bitch Management Hierarchy", or my articles on "Indifference Game" vs. "Control Game", you have no idea what TRP teaches with regard to long term relationships at all, or even how we define one... as in, what distinguishes an LTR from something else.

And the fact that you don't get it is not unique. What you are doing is arguing about the merits of "Tying a Duck to Your Ankle". And if that phrase seems bizarre to you, and you suddenly don't know what I am talking about, then there's another article you haven't read.

CMV: Current divorce laws in the US are generally fair.

2 upvotes · 25 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Answer the question, or get ignored.

Why do so many men believe they deserve what Chad gets?

2 upvotes · 24 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Deserve" is a myth.

People don't get what they deserve. They get what they get.

"Deserve" is a entirely theoretical construct.

"RP works tho"

2 upvotes · 24 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Does it?

If you have to ask the question, you haven't tried it.

If you haven't tried it, you'll never know.

Did the red pill solve poverty all of a sudden?

2 upvotes · 22 January 2020 · /r/askTRP

How to GET RICH OVERNIGHT with this one simple trick (Employers hate it!)

So everyone knows that a guy being short, fat, bald or having a small penis is unattractive, what's the female equivalent?

2 upvotes · 14 January 2020 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I dunno, I think a woman who is bald, fat, or has a small penis is pretty unattractive, too.

A woman is taken from me again - suicide... how to deal with harsh reality?

2 upvotes · 5 January 2020 · /r/askTRP

Not that I haven't ever envied gay men their ability to just go out and pick up someone who not only shares their priorities, but isn't completely and totally batshit insane... however, telling someone not to stick their dick in crazy is victim blaming.

There are no other options. It's crazy all the way down. We have to learn to handle the crazy, and distinguish different types. That's not always easy, and some failures can be expected along the way.

A woman is taken from me again - suicide... how to deal with harsh reality?

2 upvotes · 5 January 2020 · /r/askTRP

even tho i told myself to never get attached again to a woman, even if she seemed perfect

I never taught you that. I only taught you to save your love and protectiveness for someone who proved her worth.

To love is to expose oneself to loss... but, since time takes everything from us in the end, the only way to never lose is to never have.

You had. You lost. Grieve. Then find something new and live.

Does hooking up with low value women lowers my value?

2 upvotes · 4 January 2020 · /r/askTRP

No, sperm is cheap. You don't lose value by giving it away.

Cross post I posted "Ask Men" asking for tips on how to get back in the dating game. A kind man dm'd me to suggest to ask you guys. All tips & advice are/is appreciated.

2 upvotes · 28 December 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Understand men.

They are people, and they aren't here just to provide what you want. Instead, they have wants and needs of their own... and the more you appeal to those wants and needs, the more they will desire you, and thus the more options you will have to choose between for who you want to be with.

female dating advice is repackaged redpill?

2 upvotes · 25 December 2019 · /r/askTRP

You'd be surprised what effort people will go to to be told what they want to hear.

This, of course, is the key difference. TRP tells men things they don't want to hear, at least not at first. They don't want to be ruthless. They don't want to believe that women are selfish and must be handled, rather than relied upon.

Women, however, love hearing that women are amazing and men are trash. That's why advertisers and politicians constantly say it. They don't hate men... they can just profit by pandering to women's petty resentments.

It's the same as how all adults in children's movies are either villains or incompetent buffoons. Children are helpless and adults are better at everything. So they want to see films where they get to be the competent powerful ones.

Women, in general, like to be pandered to at the expense of men for the same reason. Most of them aren't all that good at anything, because they've never had to be. People will care about them even if they are basic and think that liking dogs, "The Office", and pumpkin spice gatorade is a personality.

Me? I don't sort out the pandering. TXC, FDS, SSC, it's all just a bunch of hens clucking. Remember, don't listen to what women say... watch what they do.

The Consequences of Pornography

2 upvotes · 12 December 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

My point is that when we created TRP, we did so in order to have a place where we could openly and honestly discuss what we learned, without a whole bunch of "what people want to believe" getting in the way.

Porn may or may not have this or that effect, but if you want to include this idea in the redpill lexicon, you had better be able to support it with something more substantial than "It is known, Khalessi".

According to FemaleDatingStrategy, women have inherent value, men don't.

2 upvotes · 8 December 2019 · /r/MensRights

Women do indeed have inherent value where men do not.

However, men have achieved value. And an HVM ("High Value Male") is a man whose achieved value is much higher than a woman's inherent value. So any woman who wants one had better bring more to the party than vagina.

In fact, among the things she had better bring to the party are kindness, femininity and grace.

A High Value Woman, even one who knows the literal truth of the gap in inherent value, would not point it out in such confrontational terms. Because that would bespeak a lack of social graces not consistent with her high value.

Only a woman with no achieved value would be proud of her inherent value.

A great rebuttal to "toxic masculinity is the fault of men"

2 upvotes · 7 December 2019 · /r/MensRights

We don't need to know why to know what. We know this is true, not because we reasoned from assumptions about evolution, but because we observed it happening over and over again.

Discussion about (why we generally don't recommend dating) red pill men?

2 upvotes · 1 December 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

An angry misogynist regards women as dangerous foes.

A happy misogynist regards women as silly children.

Rant: Being an Alpha Widow is not cool or interesting

2 upvotes · 1 December 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

An Alpha Widow is a woman (with low SMV) who has a relationship with a high SMV man.

Correction:

An "alpha widow" is a woman who has had sex with a man whose SMV is much higher than hers, and cannot help comparing the men she has a chance at a relationship with to the man she could only have sex with.

Her only hope is to improve her SMV to the point where she can actually get a relationship with someone is the same league as the original man.

Top toxic Female Dating Strategist inadvertently explains how they lose their pair bonding ability after riding the carousel.

2 upvotes · 26 November 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Depends what you mean by "toxic".

If you mean evil, then no. Never ascribe to malice what can be adequately explained by incompetence.

If you mean "having bad effect", sure. Like feminism, this shit has the potential to draw naive young girls in and ruin their lives.

But you're not going to get any traction by telling people that. People's behaviour is controlled by self-interest, not thoughts of the damage they are doing to others. Women are made from the same selfish goo that men are, and they're not going to stop something that feels good until they see how it hurts them.

TRP Men after break-up go back to spinning plates, what should I, as a woman, do?

2 upvotes · 25 November 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Sorry, that's a bit ambiguous. What did you want to know?

Girls who can't fuck for long

2 upvotes · 24 November 2019 · /r/askTRP

Are you on the large side?

If you are, and she's not used to it, then any amount of natural lubrication might not be enough.

Why are women so triggered by sexually unsucess*cel*ful men?

2 upvotes · 21 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm not asking you to prove anything to me. Using words like "collective toxicity" tells me enough relevant data about your mindset, and further inquiry isn't strictly necessary.

CMV: "Sex is a need, like food. If you can't quell it, it should be taken care of. It's cruel not to"

2 upvotes · 21 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The point of sex being a right is about legalizing prostitution and helping some people getting access to it, not forcing sex.

Then what people have isn't a right to receive sex, but a right to pursue it.

CMV: "Sex is a need, like food. If you can't quell it, it should be taken care of. It's cruel not to"

2 upvotes · 21 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I do wish the people who are arguing that medical care is a right were able to parse this line of thought.

Why are women so triggered by sexually unsucess*cel*ful men?

2 upvotes · 21 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Considering how many incels I've fucked and relationship coached, I'd say I'm not condescending so much as empathetic. I highly empathize with incels.

Vaginas, do not actually have telepathic powers. Have sex with someone does not mean you understand him.

Similarly, coaching someone means talking at them, but it doesn't necessarily imply listening to them, much less understanding what is being said.

It's incel spaces I do not have the patience for. I do not empathize with the collective toxicity of men abusing each other to the extent that they become unable to function in society.

You are upset about the kind of things that marginalized men talk about when they congregate, but you are not necessarily able to understand why they say what they do. This is why you believe that they are qualitatively different in aggregate than singly.

Your recommended web search keyword for today: "Martin Seligman"

CMV: TRP is a MGTOW factory due to its refusal to address LTRs

2 upvotes · 21 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

but then TRP turns around and says "love doesn't exist if you do an LTR she'll cheat"

Wrong.

If you want to know what a university teaches, listen to the professors, not the freshman talking in the back of the class.

For the Rage: stupidslutsclub

2 upvotes · 19 November 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

+1

/u/theredpike /u/EpicLevelCheater /u/Halitenina

The redpill is NOT about women

2 upvotes · 10 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The core of TRP at its inception was not directly about women, it was about men becoming the best version of themselves and live their own life manifesting their utmost potential. Women, were a side note, since a majority of women would be attracted to such men and hence interchanges of fluids would occur; but again, that was an accessory to TRP and not its main purpose.

When I and a few of my friends created TRP, I don't remember seeing you there.

Ultimately, this all sounds nice, but it's a bunch of horseshit. You can only improve what you can first measure. I can lift a barbell and know how much it weighs. I can step on a scale and know how much I weigh. I can talk to girls and see if they decide to have sex with me or not. I can read my bank account balance. I can step in the ring and see if I win or lose. I can shoot at a target and see if I hit or miss. I can tell if the people I speak to view me with respect or contempt.

I cannot measure some abstract concept of "self-improvement". If I am to get better, I must get better at something, and I must be able to tell the difference between better and worse at that something.

TRP is nothing but a bunch of men sharing tips on how to achieve the sorts of things men want... mostly sex, but also money, love, respect, health, etc.

We not a movement. We are not trying to "save society", because society hasn't even decided it needs saving, much less asked us to do so.

TRP Men after break-up go back to spinning plates, what should I, as a woman, do?

2 upvotes · 9 November 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

I guess I'm just curious about your dynamic? Not to apply to myself necessarily, but I'm curious about non-vanilla/monogamish instances of RP relationships, and you're the first person I've seen to mention something other than monogamy.

Well, on TRP you'll see a fair amount of dudes who have multiple sexual partners. Less so in relationships, though.

Me? I'm living with my two girlfriends, "FunSize" and "FanGirl". I am occasionally imitate with other girls as well.

My LTR boyfriend and myself have explored playing with others, and that's central to our shared sexual interests, however I can't say that I've seen any sort of RP discussion or advice (although to be fair, I've only been browsing for a relatively short time period) that touches on anything but the traditional look at it.

That sounds like the idea turns you on sexually, but you worry about what it would do to your relationship emotionally?

A wise concern. It's been fairly trouble-free for me, but I had to make it that way... there are some ways to manage this. Can go into greater detail if you wish.

Do your women cum often?

2 upvotes · 5 November 2019 · /r/askTRP

Hehehe.

'An Essay for Women,' by Rollo Tomassi

2 upvotes · 4 November 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Try going over this one more time:

Men listen to the content of what is being said to decide if they should trust the speaker. Women ponder whether they trust the speaker to decide if they should listen to the content.

This isn't about women needing trust and men not needing it. It's about how men and women decide whether and how much to trust.

Men will listen to the message, evaluate its content, and use that to decide how much trust to extend.

Women will not listen, period, full stop, except to someone who already has some measure of trust.

In other words, for men, listening and considering is a vetting process. For women, listening and considering is an act of trust in and of itself.

What do you consider a female equivalent to beta buxx?

2 upvotes · 4 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No. They're not even on the same track. Commitment is an emotional state. Marriage is a legal status. Having marriage doesn't mean you have commitment.

Hell, I've lost count of all the married women I've banged.

To what extent do you care about a woman's income? (additional Qs too)

2 upvotes · 4 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't want a bankroll a woman. So long as she's not a drain on my finances, I don't care.

What do you consider a female equivalent to beta buxx?

2 upvotes · 4 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You seem to have confused marriage with commitment.

Honestly, I'm horrified by what MGTOW says about women, anyone else?

2 upvotes · 4 November 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

MGTOW is what happens when men experience the anger phase without redpill know-how.

What would you spend $1k on?

2 upvotes · 29 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

Heh. Now I actually know where you are from context clues.

Makes sense. I always carry, however, because I carry as a matter of principle. When your rights are questioned, exercising them becomes important.

Anyway, 1K is enough to do a pretty decent AR build from an 80 percent lower.

What would you spend $1k on?

2 upvotes · 29 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

Might be something to look into.

r/femaledatingstratigy is horrible and filed with anti men stuff.

2 upvotes · 28 October 2019 · /r/MensRights

This is good news. All we have to do to avoid any reader of that sub is not chase. Then we will never date them by accident.

How to respond if a girl disrespects your dick?

2 upvotes · 26 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

Why would you need a cheeky response?

Once it's over with a girl, the trick is to no longer care what she thinks. If you want a cheeky response to make yourself look good, or her feel bad, then you are still invested.

LTR lied about fucking a guy in the past. Broke up with her. Did I do the right thing?

2 upvotes · 25 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

So, you're going to try to persuade me I don't believe what I think I believe?

Why don't you instead try a humbler goal, like trying to change my mind?

Was this girl flirting with me?

2 upvotes · 21 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

I notice she's playing with my hair while she's standing behind me and talking.

<https://i.imgur.com/B4yLlol.jpg>

Question for red pillers, do you hate "degeneracy"

2 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't recall ever running into you in TRP.

I don't even know what "degeneracy" means. Everyone seems to have their own definition, among those who think it's a thing at all. And whatever it might be, I certainly didn't come up with TRP in order to oppose it.

And I don't agree that it necessarily has negative consequences (which is what I assume you imply by "consequences", because everything has some sort of consequence). That's a tradcon perspective, not a red pill perspective.

Some acts have negative consequences, of course (female promiscuity, male laziness, etc), but lumping some of them under "degeneracy" isn't helpful, if you can define the term... because specific types of acts connect to specific types of consequences, and each type needs to be understood in order to have a strategy that works.

"Degeneracy" isn't a helpful concept. It doesn't help us predict anything, or empower us to do anything.

Leave it to the tradcons.

All of the positive effects of TRP are just riding on the coattails of improving physical looks. This supports both the Black and Blue pills.

2 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't give each one a trial. Give each one many. Talk to lots of different women. See what happens as your game and physique improve at different rates.

Women have the best of both worlds - they are treated on par with men (because of feminism/equal rights), but they can still revert to acting like a woman (being vulnerable, submissive, a victim, no responsibility, the man taking charge)

2 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes.

And?

TRP talk about fertility when they aren't interested in being parents

2 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

When you ask it that way, it's a tautology. We evolved to gravitate towards mates who show visible symptoms of health and fertility.

We call this "attractiveness".

So what you asked actually translates to "why are attractive people attractive?", which is like asking why $4 = 4$.

But that's not what you're wondering about. What you're trying to get at is why, for example, men who have no desire for children still like big curvy feminine hips, which evolved to deliver babies.

So the question you should have asked is "Why don't our personal goals impact our mating instincts much?".

The answer of course, is that instincts are not routed through logic. We're not programmed to think about who might be fertile, and then be attracted based on the decision we made. We are instead hardwired to find certain traits attractive.

An analogy to help you understand is that we don't eat because we know we need fuel... we eat because we are hungry.

Q4W: What advantage does a "sexually experienced" "educated" "it's in the past more mature" woman in her late 20s to early 30s have over an 18 year old virgin for marriage?

2 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Correction: you don't care.

Other women, specifically the ones who happen to be over 30 and single, do.

That's why he is asking the question.

Imagine a world without male thirst

2 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Imagine a world without male thirst

We'd still be eating raw meat, sleeping under trees, and making fire by rubbing sticks together.

Sex issues with my fiancé 33M

2 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Also check cortisol.

Anyone else feel like you can't start a family because your's was bad?

2 upvotes · 20 October 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

I know it's evil, but I don't know how to feel about children.

What? Why would that be evil?

On Alpha and Beta

2 upvotes · 19 October 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Dear sir, your article is both useful and original. Alas, the parts that are useful are not original, and the parts that are original are not useful.

On Alpha and Beta

2 upvotes · 19 October 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Quantities like the number "2" may be invented, but their effects are not when we apply them consistently according to a system of rules (which we call mathematics).

Mathematics has predictive power that is consistent and not up to interpretation. It's ability to begin with truth and then preserve that truth over a series of logical steps can be verified.

The word "truth", if you think about it, actually means "predictive power". We call statements "true" if they predict what will happen, and ideas "true" if they help us predict what will happen.

Indeed, in order to be "true", something has to be an abstraction, an idea, a symbolic representation of something else, rather than having a concrete physical existence. Is a cat true? Meaningless question.

The personality does not have concrete physical existence, but is it true?

What that question really means is "how consistent is a person's behaviour across different inputs?", but also could be "how consistent must a person's behaviour be across different inputs?".

If we think about these, then we start to realize that the words "personality" and "habit" are close to synonymous.

Women should have more empathy. Also: loyalty, charm, etiquette, fashion, decorum, better taste in music, ability to not dance (or dance) like a slut, knowledge of the NATO-standard phonetic alphabet, should not have experimented with drugs, sex, or fun, and they could probably also lose some weight

2 upvotes · 18 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What you can get away with asking for is entirely dependent on what you have to offer.

We are told that looks don't matter, so how come women are now admitting that they in fact do matter after all? See links below for proof.

2 upvotes · 18 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't listen to what women say. Watch what they do.

The fact that the most offensive thing you could ask a woman about is her age inevitably proves that women are aware of the wall itself

2 upvotes · 12 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The most offensive thing?

Sure, some women don't like to tell, but don't you think they get more upset if asked about weight or sexual history?

Why would a woman like this not lie about her past?

2 upvotes · 12 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women expect whatever they are used to, and they get used to whatever they can get away with. If men don't like that, then they need to grow a spine.

Water takes the shape of whatever container you pour it into.

LTR and trip to vegas. First red flag in 1.5 years

2 upvotes · 11 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

Why don't you just TRUST her, you misogynist?

Have there been any studies showing that more attractive people have more sex?

2 upvotes · 10 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

More sex, more partners, and more desirable partners are three different things.

Discussion; What brings you to Purple Pill ? How does that affect what counts as evidence and what is important?

2 upvotes · 10 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Debate (modern discourse) is pointless... you cannot reason someone out of a belief that they did not reason themselves into.

Argument (postmodern discourse) is pointless... shouting matches do not determine whose ideas will claim the greater mindshare.

However, articulating one's views to hostile audience can help sharpen one's own thinking and catalyze ideas.

Monetizing The Red Pill

2 upvotes · 9 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, yes, Anthony and his soap. Hilarious, but we kicked him off TRP anyway, because we're technically not a humor subreddit.

Let's "Steel-Man" Both Positions

2 upvotes · 7 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Men are the gatekeepers of sex, women are the gatekeepers of relationships.

Is that enough context, or would you like a long treatise?

Let's "Steel-Man" Both Positions

2 upvotes · 7 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why should a woman do anything for me?

Because she wants you to do something for her?

Should women pursue men?

2 upvotes · 7 October 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Is it ok to message guys on dating apps or make some kind of move to talk to him first in real life?

Why would it not be?

Hung up at my school.

2 upvotes · 5 October 2019 · /r/MensRights

Men are to women as women are to children; men have an instinct to protect and care for women, and women have an instinct to defer to and obey men.

Men's instinct of care causes them to compulsively try to teach women. This is why we feel compelled to step in and explain stuff. And ~95% percent of the time they've never heard it before and are learning. And ~95% of the time they are cool with that.

But during this process, they feel submissive. That's the female instinct. Now, many women don't have a problem with this; they don't find it shameful at all. And some are vaguely uncomfortable, but say nothing. But a few, for philosophical reasons, believe that women submitting to men is wrong. And they're angry about it.

And what do angry people do? They project.

"I'm not feeling submissive and hating it. No, it's you. You are expecting me to be submissive, you big jerk."

And the man has no idea what's going on. Because he is the grips of his own (protective) instinct, and is simply trying to help (he feels a compulsive urge to do so).

Honest question for long time red pillers

2 upvotes · 4 October 2019 · /r/askTRP

It's not beginner advice, but it's necessary.

Have you read my stuff on Indifference Game vs. Control Game?

What should men's strategy be with women, once they are fully red pilld and aware of female sexual strategy?

2 upvotes · 4 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There's not really a viable strategy as far as I see it.

Then there isn't one for you. Losers strive until they reach the point where they have a good excuse to give up. Winners strive until they have what they wanted.

I am not famous or really high status (outside of reddit), and, while my looks are above average and I'm certainly quite muscular, I'm not about to get offered a modelling gig anytime soon. Yet I still successfully spun plates for years, and now live with my two girlfriends. And occasionally get some on the side with them raising no objections.

How? What's the difference between us? Well, I am a winner, and you are a loser. That means I worked on myself and my life until I had what I wanted, while you write PPD posts about how everything is too hard.

"What women are attracted to" is knowable and understandable, not some mysterious riddle that you have no hope of solving, or infinitely variable from woman to woman. First you know and understand it, then you display those qualities, and what seemed impossible becomes possible.

Or you could continue to fuss online. Up to you, really.

(CMV) You can't judge a woman by how she has acted with other men

2 upvotes · 2 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Of course I can. I can judge her by any criterion I choose. Who could possibly stop me?

Thoughts on r/theredpill closing?

2 upvotes · 1 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't have any boys. The only child that I am aware of is a daughter who doesn't know she's mine, and I don't think mom is all that eager to tell her and husband the truth.

If someone who professes to be a libertarian is calling for state seizure of reddit, you are welcome to point out that inconsistency to them. I don't know why you are complaining to me about it, because I am not your daddy.

(Unless you are the daughter in question, which is possible but extremely unlikely.)

Should /r/TheRedPill be banned? Looks like Reddit admin think so...

2 upvotes · 1 October 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Lol I have less than zero interest in arguing with you about anything.

What's keeping you, then?

Me making a comment to the automod about RPS does not in any way mean "please whisper drop into this conversation"

The conversation between you and.... the automod?

Do TRPillers and other neoreactionaries not understand the problems that come with economic dependence and submission?

2 upvotes · 19 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP is not neoreactionary, so the rest of your question makes no sense.

Is it inevitable that a woman will lose sexual interest in a man when she's in an LTR/marriage with him, or can this be prevented?

2 upvotes · 18 September 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

it's usual for sex to be intense, passionate and frequent at the beginning, then over time the frequency and intensity dies down.

Don't mistake usual for healthy.

There are some very simple formulas for evoking passion in the opposite sex. They don't rely on novelty to work.

However, most people in our culture are not taught them.

Being good is weakness?

2 upvotes · 15 September 2019 · /r/askTRP

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/71eqa0/yes_virginia_you_do_have_to_be_an_asshole/

She paid for everything on the first date

2 upvotes · 28 August 2019 · /r/askTRP

Why should it?

Marcie Bianco: NBC News Columnist Marcie Bianco Suggests 'Heterosexuality' Isn't Working And Men Are Evil

2 upvotes · 26 August 2019 · /r/MensRights

Sorry, I thought you were in academia yourself, and would require only a reminder, not an explanation.

Academia practices a star system that makes Hollywood and Washington DC look like Egalitarian Socialist Orgy Night at the Greater Krishna Consciousness Ashram in Pasadena, California. Fail to get the right people on your side, and your experiments don't get published, you don't get funded, and you don't get tenure.

Now add to that the fact that you need the state's permission to be a university at all, and you can start to understand how a system which was theoretically set up to immunize intellectuals and speculative thinkers from retaliation from outside or by their peers... actually ended up as the exact opposite.

If that is your wish, that only hard "facts" be taught

Did I say that?

I didn't say that.

I said that all teaching of opinions, or allegations of fact which are not universally accepted, can be regarded as "indoctrination", or as "education", depending on whether you like the curriculum or not. All teaching institutions indoctrinate, that is what they are for.

The more salient question in our case is whether our teaching institutions teach values that strengthen our society, and are generally accepted by it, or those that run against the rest of society, or are destructive to it.

Is it justified for me to leave my LTR?

2 upvotes · 22 August 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

"Justified" is the wrong question.

Relationships are not moral obligations.

Which, if any, parts of TRP do you consider to be morally wrong or using the wrong tone, yet factually correct or efficient?

2 upvotes · 4 August 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I can't speak to your reasons for commenting on a sub whose entire purpose for existence is to argue about stuff my friends and I scribbled on some corner of the internet, but I'm truly, deeply, sincerely sorry that I haven't shown up in person to talk to you instead of simply expressing my perspective to all and sundry.

Please realize that you are still important to the people in your life, even if I in particular haven't given you enough attention.

However, even in the absence of a special invitation to respond, you perhaps try contradicting articles you disagree with by writing one of your own, and posting it somewhere.

Help with really embarrassing problem (NSFW)

2 upvotes · 30 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Purpose-formulated sexual lubricants are a thing. Hell, I use them every time.

Chad, Dylan, and the Myth of "the Bad Man"

2 upvotes · 25 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Don't get too hung up on Dylan.

(He wouldn't want you to, anyway. He cares deeply about the welfare of all women, and wants to make sure he leaves them better off than he found them, after they have bathed in the healing light of his cock.)

The point here is that your writing sparked an idea in my head... gave me the words to express a thought I'd been chewing on for some time. This notion of "good" or "bad" men troubled me... it seemed insufficiently nuanced to be able to be a source of advice about vetting.

RPW, collectively, is quite vehement about the necessity of vetting, but can't ever seem to agree on exactly what "vetting" means, both in the sense of how it is done, and in the sense of what it looks for.

While the how still needs much discussion, reading about Dylan (and his implied wickedness) in the post and comments gave me an idea about what language could be used to express the what.

Vetting is the process of making sure a man's relationship goals match yours.

In order to do this, it's necessary to discard (vigourously) both the delusion that the vagina is a magic dowsing rod for moral worth, and the delusion that moral worth plays any inherent part whatsoever in wise mate selection.

This is a difficult point to get across to women, because morals are a major part of their habitual language. It can be difficult to see when thinking in those terms is harmful to the thinker, not just the subject.

What can I do if my IQ is 75 ?

2 upvotes · 24 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

You won't get smarter. Smart is something you are born with.

But smart is not the same as wise.

Smart is understanding stuff easily. Wise is making good decisions.

Take your time making decisions. Surround yourself with smart and wise people. Ask lots of questions.

Eye contact - How to change your instincts

2 upvotes · 22 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

Just steel yourself and hold eye contact.

It will look robotic and creepy as fuck at first, because you won't be relaxed. That's okay. The immediate goal is for you to get used to doing it, not to be super suave from day one.

Female manager at my job is EXTREMELY fucking anal.. how to deal with it?

2 upvotes · 19 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

What's 7K divided by 52 weeks (in a year)?

Female manager at my job is EXTREMELY fucking anal.. how to deal with it?

2 upvotes · 19 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

How much do you spend on alcohol in a week?

Female manager at my job is EXTREMELY fucking anal.. how to deal with it?

2 upvotes · 19 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

Not badly handled in the moment.

But in the long term, you need to work on your career skills so you don't have to take shitty jobs with female managers.

Plate asking if she can go to a party?

2 upvotes · 19 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

It's not a shit test, you noodle. It's submission.

How many times a week do you see your girlfriend?

2 upvotes · 17 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

I live with both my girlfriends. If I want to be left alone I shut the door of my room.

Point is, be with her when you want, when you don't, do something else.

How to continue this convo with tinder girl?

2 upvotes · 17 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

Don't.

There are women out there without crappy unfeminine attitudes.

Friends calling me a whore.

2 upvotes · 16 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TreNV_8LysY

Can calisthenics replace weight lifting?

2 upvotes · 11 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

They do if they want to win.

Can calisthenics replace weight lifting?

2 upvotes · 10 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

No.

Where do I go from here? 44 yo, 5'3", $1.6M, in NYC

2 upvotes · 9 July 2019 · /r/askTRP

Why exactly are you here whining for your hand to be held?

Learn game.

Woman wants to open marriage to "explore her sexuality", then gets mad if husband gets laid.

2 upvotes · 8 July 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

I live with both FunSize and FanGirl, so that might make it seem slightly less weird.

Anyway, without going into too much detail, they have thoroughly forfeited the right to have an opinion.

Woman wants to open marriage to "explore her sexuality", then gets mad if husband gets laid.

2 upvotes · 8 July 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

How do you come up with good nicknames for your girls?

Sometimes I have a few false starts. "FanGirl" may have been a mistake in retrospect, because I assumed I would only ever bang one reddit groupie. Oops. She was just the first.

I'm actually struggling a bit with a name for this Aussie girl I was calling "Outback". Decided it wasn't feminine enough. Back to the drawing board.

Some were easier, though, and there's usually a story behind it... FunSize, Kitten, Peaches, Sneaky, etc. If I sit down to try and come up with someth8ing, it never works. Inspiration has to strike me.

Woman wants to open marriage to "explore her sexuality", then gets mad if husband gets laid.

2 upvotes · 7 July 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

I know what he's on about. I am challenging his assumption that you must offer fidelity to get fidelity.

Very few women will actually agree ...

Women are water. They take the shape of the vessel they are poured into. It is not impossibly hard to secure this kind of arrangement if your game is strong enough.

Women do not instinctively prize male fidelity. Sperm is cheap, remember? They simply fear abandonment. If you can detach those two concepts, it's easy to do the rest... because it's no longer about getting them to reluctantly accept sharing as condition of having you at all. It just becomes normal stuff.

FunSize had no problem with my plates once she realized that they weren't going to make me lose interest in her. That made her perfectly open to making friends with FanGirl when she came along. And they both, in turn, have no problem with my other admirers. (Although FunSize didn't know what to make of it when one of them started lusting after her as well.)

I'm convinced that the female desire for fidelity in a partner is entirely a cultural phenomenon, and can be trained out. Even Kitten, who experienced severe jealousy of FunSize, always feared not being able to hold my attention because of her. The sex just wasn't the issue.

See, women are actually instinctively monogamous (if not always in the way you might want), and they have trouble understanding that men are not. Thus, they tend to think that we, too, can only be interested in one mate at once, and they believe that if we develop interest in another woman, we are losing interest in them... because that's how women work, which makes women think that that's how humans work.

But men can be attracted to, care for, or even be passionately in love with, three or four women at once... or however many we have time for. Once a woman is cured of the fallacious assumption that sex with some other girl means she is being replaced, she simply stops caring. Sperm is cheap, and endlessly renewable.

Men are constantly sacrificing their sexual imperative, and promising fidelity, because they, too, get sucked into the delusion that the mind of the opposite sex is like theirs. They think women want fidelity for its own sake, the way men do.

Once this delusion is cleared up on both sides, girls don't give a whole lot of fucks where else you spill your cheap and disposable sperm.

Woman wants to open marriage to "explore her sexuality", then gets mad if husband gets laid.

2 upvotes · 5 July 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

One is the rule, the other is how you get them to follow it.

Should I insist? Is chasing unattractive?

2 upvotes · 1 July 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'm somewhat puzzled. It is answered in the comment it replies to.

However, in case more clarity is needed... it's immaterial whether this man would chase some woman, somewhere, because OP is not that woman.

So she has to decide which is more important to her:

1. Landing this particular man, even that means she has to do some legwork.
2. Being chased by some man.

... that's a question that only she can decide. The salient point here is that "He's not chasing me, so he must not be into me" is a fallacy. What any woman does about a man not chasing her is still up to her.

In general, most commenters on RPW, being neither highly trained in girl game, nor highly confident in theirs, recommend conservative approaches that are suitable for landing a "top-tier beta" male... a man who is as attractive as possible while still being risk-free to get because he has few options.

While this is a safe course, and secures a better partner than "no strategy at all", it's not really an application of RPW technique at all, it's an application of something else, which is intended for another purpose. There's not really much to be said about how to "manage" a relationship with a man whose commitment is a sure thing.

While I refuse to decide for internet strangers how much risk they should tolerate, this kind of "greater beta" strategy seems to me to be a bit like trying out for the olympics with dreams of bronze.

Consequently, I generally recommend pursuing men who are worth pursuing... just don't use sex as bait. Such men can get sex anytime, anywhere. You need to offer up a scarcer commodity... that elusive quality referred to as "being a keeper", "femininity", or, here in RPW, "girl game". (To distinguish it from male game, which is just called "game" because men got there first.)

Since RPW is about "how to girl game", not "how to be safe since you suck at girl game and aren't going to get better", men who require chasing are definitely on the menu.

What marriage advice would you give?

2 upvotes · 21 June 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Your marriage changed nothing. Marriages don't change things. They simply are a statement that both of you want to stay. You still have to do the legwork to make that happen. Just the same as if you hadn't done it.

How to best deal with a feminist (future) mother-in-law

2 upvotes · 15 June 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

And?

How to best deal with a feminist (future) mother-in-law

2 upvotes · 15 June 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

One time, while my boyfriend was next to us, she told me about how I should not think about a relationship as something permanent, but that it's normal to just casually switch partners at some point in your life. I politely told her that I very much plan to stay with her son and absolutely do not want to break up my family in the future for a different partner.

There's no reason to argue or fight unless there's a prize for doing so. You don't really need anything from her except civility when you are unavoidably thrown together.

If she says something about what you "should" do, remember that "should" is just a one-word synonym for "I want". So don't give reason why you "should" do something else, because that gives her permission to say opinions about something that is none of her business, and starts a debate that you can't get anything useful out of.

Try something like:

"I realize you are concerned for my welfare, but I would prefer not to receive advice I did not ask for. Thanks."

I thought I wanted a unicorn.

2 upvotes · 15 June 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Depends how he manages it, I think. This is not, of course, to say that it wouldn't require a certain amount of skill.

My ltr wants to watch me with another girl

2 upvotes · 13 June 2019 · /r/askTRP

Content and tone.

You have to be able to say demeaning stuff in a tone of voice like you mean every word.

Comes down to voice acting and properly choosing the stuff you say according to the girl.

Also consider how mean you need to get. With some girls, there is such a thing as too much, but others need extremely cruel.

What to do when a girl is throwing herself at you?

2 upvotes · 7 June 2019 · /r/askTRP

You are correct sir.

One Way Open-Relationship: LTR's Idea

2 upvotes · 7 June 2019 · /r/askTRP

Most of the prolific writers around here have nicknames for their regular girls.

FunSize is called that because she's 4'11 tall. FanGirl is called that because she met me by stalking me on reddit, then emailing, then we met in person... and now I'm at my desk typing this, while she's sitting on the bed behind me, doing a job interview over skype.

Anyway, you get the idea. I'm in multiple LTRs, but I had to spin plates first to have the skills to manage them.

I'm not saying "get out", because this is:

She says she's okay with a one-sided open relationship (completely her idea & took me by surprise)

... a good sign. But you're going to need to get spun up quick. Read my articles on LTR basics and control game.

I am getting black pilld.

2 upvotes · 2 June 2019 · /r/askTRP

Check out this asshole. He hasn't even tried lifting for a year, and he's ready to conclude that self-improvement is impossible.

Former plate told crazy brothers that I used her . How should I proceed ?

2 upvotes · 28 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Not going to let you evade the issue that easily.

Once again, when you blame the tool, you excuse the person. That's not how we roll around here.

Former plate told crazy brothers that I used her . How should I proceed ?

2 upvotes · 28 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

What the fuck kind of cucked shit is this?

Hold people responsible for their actions. Don't make excuses for them.

Unicorn LTR said I love you, I don't love her, should I breakup with her?

2 upvotes · 27 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

"I love you."

"I know."

Cohabitation

2 upvotes · 25 May 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Excellent. Now we have an opportunity to examine your actual feminine communication skills.

You have chosen to regard an innocuous statement as criticism, patronized one of the key people in a space you have just entered, and picked a needless squabble rather than working toward an understanding.

Unlearning these sorts of habits and replacing them with a better toolset will assist you, not only with negotiating who does the dishes, but in any interaction with a man.

How long should I wait to give it LTR status?

2 upvotes · 24 May 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

No.

What I am saying is that you need to change your approach to seeking intimacy. If you just try the same thing again with the next man, you will get the same results.

Cohabitation

2 upvotes · 24 May 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

I just don't think it's fair

That's that place down the road where they sell fried things on sticks, right?

for those of you with a GF/LTR. how did yall get tell your other plates you were about to be committed?

2 upvotes · 23 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Hit the report button and help clean up instead of grousing.

Why is lying about your past frowned upon in the RPW community?

2 upvotes · 22 May 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Today, I saw this. And I am proud of you.

Amusedly Agree And Absurdly Amplify vs Self Deprecation

2 upvotes · 22 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Yes, emphatically.

Best response to " my body wants it but my mind is saying no" ?

2 upvotes · 21 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

This is ASD.

She has literally told you what you did wrong. You need to get her out of her mind, and into her body. Girls say no with their thoughts... when they say yes, it's from their feelings.

If I'm an alpha in a relationship

2 upvotes · 19 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

<https://i.imgur.com/B4yLlol.jpg>

Would a slut still have a low RMV if she sexually satisfies a guy?

2 upvotes · 14 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I have no objection to fucking sluts.

I won't emotionally invest in them.

CMV: Only a tiny number of cheaters experience any form of karmic retribution or enduring feelings of guilt.

2 upvotes · 14 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Most women who cheat, cheat because their relationship is, in effect, already over.

Male cheating doesn't matter.

How to respond to this?

2 upvotes · 14 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

She's nervous that you are mad at her or losing attraction.

Don't reassure just because she's nervous, but do reward successful efforts to please you.

Q4Men Do you find women who love sex to be disgusting sluts?

2 upvotes · 13 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, looks like I beat you to it.

Q4Men Do you find women who love sex to be disgusting sluts?

2 upvotes · 13 May 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Would you wife up a kinky, sexual girl who only has sex within a monogamous relationship?

That's not a slut.

How do you have the IDGAF attitude in a relationship?

2 upvotes · 12 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

You're either indifferent or in control. By the time you stop being indifferent, you must be visibly in control.

I feel I can never ever share true affection and love with women now because TRP and experience taught me it only drives them away. What to do?

2 upvotes · 8 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

LTR stuff, while important, is only relevant for guys who can spin plates, not because I claim that "spinning plates" is a prerequisite to an LTR, like the other stupid shit I've seen about "being at least 25", but because only someone who can spin plates is able to hold down an LTR.

As I have said.

Whisper, I know you and what you're trying to achieve with your girls, so I understand the subtext of why you have been more vocal about FunSize these last couple of months. It's all part of the game. But while I, personally, am interested in reading about LTR game, I don't think it is wise to generally "spread the love" in asktrp when guys are looking for dating advice. Perhaps I am a little out of line here, but I don't appreciate that the personal game you are running on your girls is getting in the way of telling guys what they need to hear when they ask for help.

Watch the hands, not the patter. Then you'll understand better what I am doing.

In this past few months, I have talked more and more about Control Game. Now I am visibly playing with my toys in public, but also visibly expressing affection for them. All of this coincides with the quarantine of TRP, and maybe a few other trends in askTRP.

Connect the dots. What am I trying to teach?

Why does it need to be taught now?

For anyone else reading this, understand: /u/FieldLine's game is tight, and he is an excellent writer and thinker. And now he is taking the next step after learning to do... learning to teach.

I feel I can never ever share true affection and love with women now because TRP and experience taught me it only drives them away. What to do?

2 upvotes · 8 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Hey, FunSize. I know you're reading this. I love you.

There, see how easy that was? You think she's going to lose respect for me now?

You're a very foolish young man who has taken my advice too simply and literally. You were never being told to become an autistic robot, robotically producing countermoves from a bag of tricks.

You were told how to make girls look up to you, so they would love you back.

(Little off topic) Which underwear do you buy? Is Ck worth it?

2 upvotes · 6 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Not sure if he can rock those... he might not have your hips.

Is this what frame is?

2 upvotes · 6 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Yes.

I might have to say goodbye to the gym. Can anyone relate? what now?

2 upvotes · 6 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=mdwj5ORPmX0>

Whats your gym fuel?

2 upvotes · 6 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Every time I go to the gym I meditate on these sorts of things and channel every ounce of energy into new personal bests... one more rep, one more set.

This is not what you need.

The discipline that makes you strong is not the surging berserk energy that makes you attempt one more rep, one more set, ten more pounds.

It is the consistent, slow persistence that makes you show up for every day of your training cycle and do what you need to do... day after day, month after month, year after year. Forever.

Don't try to eat things bigger than your head. Don't burn hot and then burn out. Instead, stack your progress every damn day. Patience, not fire, is the key to achievement.

Why do girls always bring up their boyfriends/husbands in conversations to me?

2 upvotes · 4 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

Usually an IOD.

Boyfriends or husbands can sometimes be a shit test, but if they bring him up persistently, you ain't getting none, move on to greener fields.

How to avoid catching feelings?

2 upvotes · 3 May 2019 · /r/askTRP

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3ip7vv/beating_infatuation_the_most_common_form_of/Article: Where Are the Socially Conservative Women in This Fight?

2 upvotes · 2 May 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

You don't know what nihilism is.

I'm not a conservative.

And I haven't been defeated, because I'm not in the fight you think I'm in.

I am, however, in serious danger of running out of popcorn.

Is his anger and upset justified

2 upvotes · 29 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Had to call in an airstrike on a lot of answers, because this question cannot be answered with the information you have given.

You told one story. Of one incident. That feels carefully selected to make you look like the innocent victim of a monster.

Did you come here looking for helpful advice? Or just sympathy?

Because we can't help you if you don't make a full disclosure.

Couples don't fight about going to the grocery store. They don't fight about mowing the lawn. They don't fight about how big of a tip to leave, or who didn't pick up his dirty socks.

They fight about deep seated and long standing built up resentment and mistrust.

Which manifests as disproportionate annoyance over trivial shit.

If I could observe you in person, I could tell what the real issues were, given time. But since I cannot, you're going to have to put on your big-girl panties and tell me. Because the quality of the advice I give you can never be better than the quality of the information you give me. And you just did a shit job of that.

How Do I Use This Thing?

2 upvotes · 25 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Thought that was the other way round.

But you do raise a good question. "How make self-control?"

The answer is "Avoid social contact with attractive, but inappropriate, men." Even the sexiest guy needs a little time and privacy to work his magic. If he ticks the wrong boxes, avoid before you get all hot and bothered.

It's always going to be at least a little bit of a gamble, though.

How Do I Use This Thing?

2 upvotes · 24 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Attraction * anxiety = ?

Ohhh, right... predictability.

Is she selfish if she submits but never initiates?

2 upvotes · 18 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

Would she not readily follow another guy just as easily?

That depends how well you lead.

These are all great but i feel like i have to define every boundary and every little expectation.

Oh, no! My girl does exactly what I want! It's terrible!

You're upset that she doesn't take the initiative... but you haven't fucking trained her. She needs a leader to follow. She needs the confidence of having a good owner she feels secure and safe with, in order to start trying stuff on her own initiative that might please you.

Where to even begin... /u/fleetingwish, help me out here. Explain it to this coconut.

How does the game change post sex?

2 upvotes · 17 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/83ah8u/ltr_the_bare_minimum_you_need_to_know/

How does the game change post sex?

2 upvotes · 17 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

Many TRP tips seem to focus on what to do to get the girl to have sex with you, but little emphasize is made on "relationship management" - what to do keep a girl around for repeats

Check my article history for some posts on control game.

The Power of the Pussy by Kara King

2 upvotes · 17 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Haha, I remembered that, and I hoped you wouldn't take offense (why was I even worried?)

Because you are deliberately training yourself to be kind, considerate, empathetic, and understanding. So of course you hesitated a moment, considering "Will I give offense?", and then went ahead, because you understood me and realized you wouldn't.

I think there are some traits, like stoicism, that are never not attractive, but I try to push back against the term "high value man" when I see it here because I think it had a tendency to turn into a meme that borders on a Cosmo list of things a "real man" does.

It can be a struggle to make people understand that a Porsche, a successful business, a 600lb deadlift, etc, are not "high value", but symptoms of high value. The things that are universally attractive in a man are the things that get him that stuff: Stoicism, self-discipline, courage, persistence, resourcefulness, cleverness, wisdom, self-control, energy, enthusiasm, etc.

This is why, for example, while gold-diggers do exist (and often become strippers), there are many women who are attracted to wealthy men, but fiercely and rightly resent being dismissed as gold-diggers. They are attracted to the power, and to the behavioural traits that got a man his wealth.

Girls who go on about what kind of vehicle a man owns have simply mistaken the map for the territory. This is easy for women to do, because unlike high sexual value in a girl, which can simply be measured by passive observation, high sexual value in a man must be actively tested for, or inferred from its results.

Men sometimes have trouble understanding this, and wonder why women create so much drama in dating. The simple answer is "your attractiveness is behavioural, she cannot see it directly, so she must create situations where your behaviour and habits reveal themselves".

Thank you for existing RPW.

2 upvotes · 15 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

I cannot supply details of things that were told to me in confidence.

However, I can say that there's no meaningful statistical data on "alpha" versus "beta" males in rape, because alpha and beta are metaphors, and the statistics don't and cannot measure for them even if they were trying, which they aren't.

I would, of course, be wary of any set of anecdotes, and equally wary of statistics whose manner of collection you don't know the details of.

Thank you for existing RPW.

2 upvotes · 13 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

It depends on the man.

If you read between the lines, carefully, of various accounts of rape, what you find is beta males. Men who women do not find attractive. Men for whom sexual attention from women is scarce.

Most women who are raped are raped by someone they know. Often what happens is that an unattractive male thinks he has an opportunity (due either to wishful thinking, a misinterpreted signal, or being led on for some other purpose), then tries to seal the deal, is declined, and cannot bear to see his "chance" slip away. He is tempted to think he can still seal the deal if he only pushes harder.

The stereotype of the rapist is the self-centered, entitled, privileged fratboy dudebro... but this is the exact opposite of the case. Because women, like it or not, find self-centered, entitled, privileged men attractive, and men like that have options.

Such men can extract sex simply with the implied threat of withdrawing their attention. They don't have to strongarm anyone.

If you want to avoid rapists, beware of thirsty nerds, not dudebros.

Advice: My (31/M) baby mother (28/F) who I was on a break with is now pregnant by her boyfriend and tells me she has no money for an abortion after he dumped her.

2 upvotes · 11 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

<https://imgur.com/B4yLlol>

The best thing a 'top tier' man can do for society is to find a quality woman and engage in monogamy.

2 upvotes · 9 April 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why exactly would TRP care what he can do for society?

TRP is about what a man can do for himself.

How to stop changing my behavior(approval seeking) when attractive women are around?

2 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

You're doing what would be attractive to YOU.

You haven't internalized the fact that women are different.

Can Sluts feel tight?

2 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

You're a special kind of stupid, aren't you?

How do you keep your RMV in social situations when other women want to take you down aka see you as a threat?

2 upvotes · 6 April 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'm not so sure you need to do anything.

Remember that cattiness is extremely repulsive to men. If other women are targeting you with it, typically all you have to do is make sure they do it where the men can see... and those men will end up thinking less of them and more of you.

Woman advice

2 upvotes · 4 April 2019 · /r/askTRP

Don't compliment women. Tease them.

Why do girls throw themselves at you when you are cocky?

2 upvotes · 28 March 2019 · /r/askTRP

No. This comment is going away, because I'm not letting you give advice that will get people killed.

Assuming that a fight you are in is a just a saturday night dust up where everyone goes home with their marbles at the end of the night... that's a good way to suddenly discover you've brought a fist to an actual fight.

While it's not legally defensible to use deadly force against someone who isn't actually a threat to you or someone else, there are legal standards for that and you are responsible for knowing them, whether you carry a weapon, or are a peasant.

The fantasy of a manly world where tough muscular guys who have studied boxing, MMA, or karate settle their differences with their fists, and the best man always wins.... is just that. A fantasy. Any time you're in a fight, you're in danger, and can die from sheer bad luck.

There is a time to fight. Never assume Queensbury rules.

Men mentally reject women for height just as much, if not more than woman.

2 upvotes · 17 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Men mentally reject women for height just as much, if not more than woman.

This is not a question.

[Nsfw] having a serious talk about sex without criticizing?

2 upvotes · 17 March 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Ya know, this is one of the few things that I cannot adequately explain.

For some girls, orgasms become a form of torture after a certain point. For others, more is always better, and they are perfectly happy to go off until they are out of ammunition.

I've been with lots of examples of both, but I cannot explain why the distinction exists. It may be purely physiological.

[Nsfw] having a serious talk about sex without criticizing?

2 upvotes · 15 March 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Okay, so we are working towards an understanding of what is going on here.

You can reach orgasm with the right rituals. There's something you want out of sex that you are not getting, however, which you haven't been able to adequately explain to me, much less him.

It does not help when you say things like:

trying to inspire him to care about my pleasure and work as hard as I do for him.

This is a particularly poor way of describing this. You are not a mind reader. You do not have direct access to what he thinks or how he feels.

Instead, you have created, in your own head, an idea of how he feels or thinks, based on what he is, or isn't doing. What you have not done is adequately explained that in physical, concrete terms, in a way that can be understood.

If you want something, you have to be able to precisely describe what it is before you can get it.

If your problem is that you don't feel cared about during sex, and you are unable to describe it more precisely than that, you will need to be able to work through the process, alone or with him, of figuring out why you feel this way.

Confusion over an aspect of the idea of 'redpillwomen'

2 upvotes · 14 March 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

I know the idea is that having a partner with large amounts of work/school success is not coveted in a partner for a male, but is it repellent?

Absolutely not.

The only reason it can sometimes come off that way is that some women demand that men find it attractive... and demands like that are repellent, not to mention impossible. We do not choose what we are attracted to.

You're perfectly free to pursue other goals in life in addition to attracting a man you like and having a good relationship. Just don't expect those other goals to automatically matter to him either way.

On Sluts

2 upvotes · 14 March 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

The word "love" means a lot of different things. I love FunSize. I also love bacon.

When a man says he "loves" sluts, he generally means it in the same sense that he loves bacon.

Bacon is intensely pleasing to him. But he doesn't consider its welfare before he makes major life decisions, or ask its opinions on things, or care about its feelings.

He eats it.

Insecurity claim is so overused

2 upvotes · 14 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I disagree.

I think it's underused. The more it gets used, the more people will start to notice that it's simply a way of asserting that up is down, black is white, night is day, etc.

I could, for example, say that I am so secure in my morality that I can pour lighter fluid on babies and set them on fire. You don't set babies on fire? You must be insecure about being a good person... therefore I am morally superior to you.

I can say I am so secure about my heterosexuality that I only ever have sex with men. You don't have sex with men? You must be secretly gay, and insecure about it.

I can say that I am so secure in wealth that I choose to be jobless and live on the streets. You own your own home? What are you compensating for, you broke-ass poor person?

Up is down, black is white, night is day.

RPW 101b: moving beyond "how hold fighting stick"

2 upvotes · 10 March 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

I think the unwillingness to spread theory is more of a self-protection mechanism. I am loosening up here a bit because of positive feedback, but have had threats and hate mail and just plain bullying comments on other sites before.

They say that he who tells the truth should have one foot in the stirrup. I've become a connoisseur of the online death threat... I get about one a week or so, although it's slowed down lately. Hell, I had a couple of folks try (unsuccessfully) to figure out who and where I was so they could hunt me down. One wonders if they truly understand that life is not a movie about them and they are not wearing plot armour that prevents them from being shot while assaulting people.

Even when I write a piece on cleaning habits here, I am pre-emptively flinching for the replies about me being obsessed or not having a life

Women's world is primarily social, rather than physical, in the sense that most challenges you face require persuading others rather than overcoming physical obstacles. Because of this, women are both socialized and hardwired to be much more sensitive to the disapproval of a crowd.

But the effective group IQ of a crowd is always very low, because crowds do not communicate as rapidly and gracefully as neurons do. Crowds can only collectively hold simple ideas. True understanding requires individual thought... which is what you are trying to do.

I worry about the feelings I have hurt, even knowing that the info will be beneficial to them in the longer run. I can't always say what needs saying in a nice way and it stings me as well as them.

That's difficult as well. Being "mean" is as stigmatizing for women as being "weak" is for men, and it can be difficult to differentiate between that and the actual sort of "tough care and straight talk" that most of our culture's women need before they can stop mismanaging their lives and being unhappy.

The truth is that there's no way get back to truth-based life management without looking mean to someone, because we're in the middle of a feel-good bullshit epidemic.

It's probably easier for the men not to give a fuck if people disagree and get personal. They probably enjoy it.

Not for everyone. But one of the key transformations that TRP teaches is that a man can never be loved unless he is willing to risk being hated. Every hero is a villain to the other team.

So, yes, by this point the hate mail does give me a warm feeling inside. And I don't necessarily think that women need to, or even should, get to that place. But you can learn to regard it as coming from an ignorant person who deserves your pity, rather than an equal whose opinion deserves your serious consideration.

MIA: The Liberal Men We Love (men becoming self aware)

2 upvotes · 7 March 2019 · /r/MensRights

Liberal women: not even once.

Are we becoming more traditional about sex?

2 upvotes · 6 March 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This has nothing to do with porn. It's about establishing a precedent for control over the internet.

There is no threat to the ruling class so great as the peasants being able to freely and anonymously talk to each other.

Discussion: Do you want children? What is the best way to have children?

2 upvotes · 5 March 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

A secondary goal is "how", a primary goal is "why".

Secondary goals are things you don't want for themselves, you want them in order to accomplish a primary goal.

A primary goal is something you just want.

Discussion: Do you want children? What is the best way to have children?

2 upvotes · 5 March 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

As if I would ever send any child of mine to Loser Indoctrination Camp.

Discussion: Do you want children? What is the best way to have children?

2 upvotes · 5 March 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

I said "primary", not primal.

And, no.

There are plenty of people out there who have basic urges that are absent from others.

I find it so difficult to make a man fall in love with me.....because I can not control my sexual urges.

2 upvotes · 3 March 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

That's too big to cover in a comment or indeed an article. But understand this:

- Desiring you sexually makes a man approach you, date you, try to seduce you.
- Sexual desire is necessary for him to want a relationship with you, but it isn't sufficient.
- A relationship is what happens if he gets to sex with you and discovers that he still wants you around afterwards. Repeatedly. On an ongoing basis.
- For that, his non-sexual experience of you has to be not just "not annoying", but fulfilling enough for him to want it to continue.
- Want it to continue in preference to other options, in fact.

Make his moments with you enjoyable. Do not get so caught up in what you want from him that his experience of you is being badgered. Instead, make him happy, and after a while he will want to make you happy.

Plate wants double date

2 upvotes · 1 March 2019 · /r/askTRP

She wants commitment?

Correct.

She's trying to get more social time with you, and to establish you and her as a couple in the eyes of others.

Is it ever ok to open up to Women?

2 upvotes · 28 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

You can talk abstractly about things that sucked (but you handled them like a boss, because you are awesome).

Always hide pain.

Any tips for maintaining a healthy relationship?

2 upvotes · 28 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/83ah8u/ltr_the_bare_minimum_you_need_to_know/

When starting an LTR (yes, I know this is ill-advised), how do you explain it to your plates in a way that maximizes your chances of getting them back after the LTR ends?

2 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

I understood that.

Plate is fussing because you're dropping her. But why drop her just because you LTRed someone else?

When starting an LTR (yes, I know this is ill-advised), how do you explain it to your plates in a way that maximizes your chances of getting them back after the LTR ends?

2 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

When starting an LTR (yes, I know this is ill-advised)

Who told you that? I've been in an LTR for years, and I wrote huge amounts of TRP.

In fact, I was in an LTR when I wrote huge amounts of TRP.

But you have a problem:

I told one of my plates, and at first she was like "thanks for he honesty, let's keep in touch." An hour later she texted "actually, I'm a little offended and don't want to be anyone's second option. Let's part ways, but best of luck to you."

Why would you automatically drop plates when you LTR someone? It's okay for her to want exclusivity, but make her ask for it. Because she becomes consciously aware that this is a concession, and she is asking for it, and she has to make it worth your while.

And don't let her get away with saying that "it's only fair" because she is exclusive to you. Being exclusive to a man is not a surrender of any of her sexual imperatives. Women have no instinctive desire for variety. Being monogamous is not a concession on her part.

And it is on yours. So if you're going to do it, make her ask for it, and extract something for it.

(Personally, fuck that. I'm not someone's territory... and maybe someday you'll rediscover your balls and decide that you aren't, either.)

[CMV] Women like roided/unnatural men. More men are taking steroids because of this.

2 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You'll get no argument from me on that score. Trying to build a lot of muscle while maintaining very low body fat is insanely difficult, even with steroids.

Subcutaneous body fat may not be everyone's aesthetic cup of tea, but it's actually healthy, and up to a certain point, more is better. It's actually visceral fat (the kind that's under your abdominal muscles and next to your organs) that is bad for you... very, very bad.

Trying to diet to look strong is both falling for and exploiting the tendency of humans to accidentally reason backwards. Yes, fit, strong people tend to have lower body fat... but lowering your body fat does not make you fitter or stronger. It just makes you look stronger to people who have this false belief.

If I could get young dudes to listen to me about lifting and eating as well as they listen to me about women, I would tell them, eat a sandwich, get your fat up to 15% or so, just where your abs are barely visible when you flex. Then you will suddenly find that it's not all that hard to build a massive chest, muscular thighs, a thick, strong neck, broad shoulders, etc.

Guys who just want to be strong have it much easier than bodybuilders... Lift for an hour or so every other day, consistently and without fail, use a small amount of roids, eat somewhat large amounts of foods, but not too much starch or sugar. Done.

And they'd still be lean. Just not bodybuilder-lean.

I'm ranting. Sorry. Irritates me.

[CMV] Women like roided/unnatural men. More men are taking steroids because of this.

2 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It sounds a bit like you're more turned off by the culture than the bodies themselves. Makes sense. Male attractiveness is mostly behavioural.

Frankly, I have my own issues about bodybuilding... it makes my life harder because it instills a lot of stupid habits in young men I am trying to teach.

One of the biggest ones is that they want to be "cut", not strong. It's almost impossible to get these guys to eat something so they can build muscle. They are terrified of losing their "abs". So they stay small and weak because they refuse to fuel the changes their body is trying to make. But they have "abs"! Eyeroll

I just want to shake them and scream "Get your bench up to 300! Then you can go on diet if you want!".

Authoritarian patriarchy vs. Liberal feminism

2 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's well known that trps have authoritarian patriarchy way up on a pedestal

Where do you get this stuff?

Do you just sit around and drink wine and make shit up?

That Awkward Moment When You Have to Lie in the Bed You've Made

2 upvotes · 25 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

The real problem is that feminists don't respect men's liberty

Women don't respect men's liberty.

This is because women don't respect liberty. They don't want to be free. They only care about being safe, happy, and comfortable. And thus they do not understand why anyone else wants to be free.

They think of men who want to be free as selfish, because they are voting to save the cute puppies from being sad. Don't you want to save the cute puppies? We only want to put the telescreen in your house to see if puppies are being abused. Why do you object? Do you have something to hide? Are you a puppy abuser?

Women will happily consent to any sort of violation of their autonomy, privacy, or dignity so long as it doesn't inconvenience them. And they will be perfectly happy to consent for others as well, because totalitarianism is the only thing they understand.

Negotiating for affection

2 upvotes · 24 February 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

This is a strategy subreddit.

Opinions about what men "should" do is not a strategy. Because it doesn't matter what they should do. It only matters what they will do.

"Inspire feelings of commitment in a man" is something a woman can do.

"Men should keep their agreements" is not something a woman can do. Therefore it is useless as advice or strategy.

Negotiating for affection

2 upvotes · 24 February 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

Acknowledging that places your implied criticism in context.

In general, if you wish to say that I am untrustworthy, and will give advice intended to benefit someone other than the recipient, to further some personal goal of mine which you haven't really explained, then use your words like a big girl and say that. I don't have the inclination to respond to passive aggression in kind.

Your objection is of course irrelevant, because you are talking about relationships, and I am talking about commitment. Commitment cannot be negotiated for because, like attraction, is a feeling and a motivation someone has, and thus it is not voluntary.

A man can make a conscious decision to give you a relationship, because that involves deliberate action.

But he can no more deliberately give you commitment than you can deliberately decide to want sex. Both are desires, not actions, and thus they must be inspired, not negotiated for.

Negotiating for affection

2 upvotes · 24 February 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

With all due respect

Is that just an idiom, or is there some specific respect you think I am due?

If so, what things have I accomplished that would entitle me to that respect?

How the red pill's rampant misogyny causes them to completely miss the obvious good advice and stunt their own users growth

2 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Your invitation is pleasing to Us, and perhaps We shall accept it from time to time.

Let's talk about actually finding someone right for you.

2 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because testing is how you learn things.

Anyone can look at something, and come up with a plausible story that explains all the things he has observed. Thing is, you ask ten different people to do this, you get ten different stories.

They can't all be right.

If you something that explains everything you saw, we call a hypothesis. In order to call it truth, you need to take an additional step... use it to predict something you haven't observed yet.

The word "truth" actually means "predictive power". That's why we care about it. Because it empowers us by enabling us to predict what will happen. If you can't predict, and control outcomes by the power of prediction, you have... nothing.

Men who strike out with women are fat or weird. But refuse to date chicks who are also fat or weird

2 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Decent A&A. But if I wanted to shit test ya, I'd have put on some lipstick first.

Anyway, point is, it's not "hypocrisy" for fat ugly men not to want fat ugly women, or vice versa. Everyone is attracted to attractive people, because that's what attractive means.

Men who strike out with women are fat or weird. But refuse to date chicks who are also fat or weird

2 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I read the title. How much more of my time do you want?

Men who strike out with women are fat or weird. But refuse to date chicks who are also fat or weird

2 upvotes · 22 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No one wants to date unattractive people. Not even other unattractive people.

So become attractive.

when is physically too late to build muscle? I read online that by 25 your body stops producing testosterone Also, could any of you critique my workout plan?

2 upvotes · 21 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

Okay, so you're not just inexperienced, you're also a poster child for the Dunning-Kreuger Effect.

(I'm not writing this next section for you. You are too arrogant to learn. I'm writing it for the people who follow my comments.)

Muscles only do two things... they pull, and they relax. They have no directional control at all.

This means that your skeleton is strung up like the world's most complicated marionette, and your equally sophisticated nervous system must play all those strings like a concert pianist to make your body move with precision and power.

Every muscle that pulls is braced by the bones it attaches to, which in turn are stabilized by other muscles, attached to other bones, etc. Strength is a function of your body as a system, not of isolated muscles.

So how do you decide how much to develop each muscle? How do you decide how to optimize those ratios for strength and performance?

You don't. You do compound lifts, and let the results of millions upon millions of years of evolution work it out for you. Your body already knows how to balance muscles to lift and move stuff, to drag things, to run and leap, to hit things with a club, to throw things, etc.

Optimized functional strength and power come from progressing each compound lift as fast as it will progress. If that makes you build giant thighs, then great, because you need giant thighs to effectively use your upper body strength.

when is physically too late to build muscle? I read online that by 25 your body stops producing testosterone Also, could any of you critique my workout plan?

2 upvotes · 21 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

Stop making dumb excuses based on bullshit you read online.

Stop doing dumb workouts you pulled out of your ass and do SL5x5 like everyone else.

[FIELD REPORT] 1st time "shotgun" cold approaching at huge outlet mall. Lots of revelations. Got 2 #'s out of 20+ approaches.

2 upvotes · 19 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

You're doing fine.

The approach-to-number ratio never gets very good. At the height of my cold approach game (I don't cold approach any more), I never batted more than about 33%.

However, the number-to-date, and date-to-blowjob ratios are much easier to improve. Make no mistake, if a girl gives you her number, she is saying "At some point in the future, I might want to touch this man's penis".

Most of your hard "no"s are weeded out at the first stage. After that, it's up to you to escalate without dropping the ball; this can be learned.

Why did my girlfriend post suggestive pics on her story ?

2 upvotes · 19 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=oIVODIQKB44>

'Lady' by Roosh V - Opinions?

2 upvotes · 19 February 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

That's a good question.

The answer is that evolution is a game played by genes, not people... and you are a move on the board, not a player. There is no real benefit to you if, in seven generations, there are a bunch of people running around who got 1/128th of their genes from you.

But that's not why people have kids, of course. Having children appears to be a primary drive; you don't have kids to accomplish something else, you have kids to have kids. And people either have this urge, or they don't.

People who have this urge don't seem to understand that others do not, and conclude that they are "failing" to settle down and start a family. People who don't have it, don't understand those who do, and conclude that they are wasting time and money on making their lives worse out of sheer cultural inertia.

For those whose lifestyle doesn't include having children, that was clearly never a priority in the first place.

Who Does Negging Work On?

2 upvotes · 19 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There are very few things that it is impossible to do wrong.

What, exactly, do you think that a neg is?

Who Does Negging Work On?

2 upvotes · 18 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Who does negging work on?

Women.

"can you believe he tried to pick me up with this backhanded insult?"

If she says that, you did it wrong.

My date asked what is my age and I responded with "Old enough to fuck".

2 upvotes · 15 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

Bringing up sex directly makes you look thirsty.

You should have said "Old enough to get us in trouble and young enough to get us back out."

"Trouble" implies sexuality without saying it.

And she's going to thinking about that for a bit, because she'll be trying to parse out that sentence... which will be difficult, because it doesn't actually make any sense, it only sounds like it does.

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

2 upvotes · 14 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

In order to understand why TRP is full of imperatives, but not a movement, you need to understand the difference between a hypothetical and a categorical imperative.

Feminism alleges categorical imperatives.

TRP alleges hypothetical imperatives.

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

2 upvotes · 14 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

I don't hate anyone.

Help-resistant complainers can, however, be somewhat annoying.

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

2 upvotes · 14 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Okay, I just checked your submission history.

Hoooooly shit, was I ever right. Why the fuck do I ever, ever doubt myself even for a moment, when I am always so fucking right all the goddamn time?

You're not ugly. You're mentally ill. You are caught in the same pattern that make anorexic girls starve themselves to death because they think all their problems are because of "being too fat".

You're above average. Oh, there are some things you could tweak, get even better results, but your problem is not on the outside.

You have a mental block, and your brain is trying to find something concrete to pin it on. Your brain is treacherous that way. Brains like to tell themselves stories, tales that tie everything together, even if that tale is total bullshit.

You. Have. Rejection. Phobia.

Not. Ugliness.

That is why showing you an ugly dude slaying mad pussy would not help you at all. Because that is not your problem.

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

2 upvotes · 13 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

Marriage is a contract between two people. I am not either of those people.

THE LIONS DEN - OFFICIAL NO-BAN FREE-FOR-ALL MODS-ASLEEP AMA-TRP DAY

2 upvotes · 13 February 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

So, you don't have a question to ask, you just want to ask a question. Why do you suppose that is?

Someone hit me with some real talk and convince me to delete social media.

2 upvotes · 13 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

If you know you need something, and still need a spanking from daddy to get you to do it, you have bigger problems than facetube.

Or you're a chick.

How do you deal with annoying plates

2 upvotes · 12 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

I don't.

Tinder girls who are 'bitchy' or stand offish

2 upvotes · 12 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

She's not bitchy.

She's just bitchy to you, because you reek of thirst and desperation.

Can someone with experience explain why eventually you have to quit drugs/alcohol

2 upvotes · 12 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

Okay.

Lay it on us. If ingesting a simple chemical compound that contains no information encoding scheme somehow enabled your brain to grasp profound wisdom, then tell us what you learned.

You see, humans have this thing called "language", which allows us to share insights once we have them. Not only does this allow us to benefit from the experiences of others, it also us to know when others are crazy enough to think that the feelings they have are wisdom.

Personally, I doubt you can tell me shit that isn't either obvious or wrong. The human brain is fine-tuned by billions of years of natural selection to be pretty good at figuring shit out. If improving it were as simple as adding a chemical, your body would most likely be producing that chemical itself from the pituitary gland.

Drugging up your brain in the attempt to make it work better is like putting one of those shitty grapefruit-shooter exhausts on a Porsche. You're not outsmarting hundreds of German engineers whose one job it was to make the thing run like a scalded cat. You're just ruining shit and probably making a lot of noise that makes everyone think you're a dumbass.

If you claim to have "esoteric knowledge"... put up or shut up.

The sudden "Why?" shittest

2 upvotes · 7 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

Hi, welcome to the Red Pill Network. Read the sidebar. It has lots of good information you really need.

If you hang around long enough, study the material, and test it out for yourself (this involves going outside), you will come to understand that women are not really all that sexually attracted to men who are afraid of them.

If women are "beating" you (metaphorically or literally) for saying the "wrong" thing, then the real reason is that they don't respect you, aren't attracted to you, and don't consider you to be much of a man. I cannot help but reflect that if you are indeed in a relationship, it must not be a very pleasant experience, if you are forever walking on eggshells, afraid lest you inadvertently speak the truth and be punished for it by your mistress.

What you need to learn to do, my young apprentice, is learn to say the most horrific and vulgar thing possible, with the biggest impudent grin you can muster.

See, you think you are being punished for going too far. You're not. You're being despised for not going far enough.

is jerking off to porn (2-3 times a week) really so bad?

2 upvotes · 7 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

Well, what's truly important is to get someone else to tell you what the rules are.

Q4 People in relationships in this sub, how do you feel your interests in gender relations affects your relationship?

2 upvotes · 7 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That did not escape my attention. He still needs to stop caring whether someone does, though.

In this life, there are always people who want you to do things, and who want you not to do things. The difference between them is how they try to incentivize that. Arguments fall into one of several broad categories:

- Do this, because it's good for you.
- Do this, and I will give you something in exchange.
- Do this, because it is a moral imperative.
- Do this, or I will harm you or your reputation.

Obviously, allowing yourself to be moved by the second two arguments is not good for you. You want to be as immune to them as possible, so people will have to use the first two (and then you can benefit).

There is no use of the word "misogynist" that I can think of which is compatible with the first two arguments.

CMV: Too many manospherians conflate femininity with cultural decadence

2 upvotes · 7 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

We did not create TRP to convince you of anything.

We did not create TRP to explain anything to you.

If you want us to convince you of something, or explain something to you, that is a request you have of us, not a thing we set out to do. Why would I, or the other founders, be interested in changing TRP to accommodate that request?

Q4 People in relationships in this sub, how do you feel your interests in gender relations affects your relationship?

2 upvotes · 7 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

A word of advice, here.

The word "misogyny" is a power game. People who use it are trying to create in you a need for them to stop saying that, because the balance of power is the inverse of need.

If you try to convince them you are "not a misogynist", you are giving them leverage over you that they have not earned in more useful ways (e.g. by offering something of value).

Instead, I recommend contemplating the obvious truth that the universe is pretty much the same before and after they called you a misogynist. How they choose to label things has no effect upon reality whatsoever, therefore you do not need them to stop.

CMV: Women need to start approaching or stop complaining, and here's why

2 upvotes · 6 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women don't "need" to do anything. They can continue being passive and complaining about not getting what they want. That will work just as well as it always did.

What you need to do to improve your life is stop taking what women say seriously.

What are some things you wish women understood about men/the male experience?

2 upvotes · 6 February 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why would I need them to understand anything?

I am responsible for expressing my needs, and motivating others to fulfill them. I am fully capable of doing so, as is any man who has learned what I have to teach.

Women are not required to understand anything. They can make the effort to learn if they choose.

Why are women silent on what they actually want in a man?

2 upvotes · 6 February 2019 · /r/askTRP

What conceivable benefit would they derive from being honest?

It can only hurt them. It would be a stupid thing to do.

True Purplepillers, what do you find problematic with each pill's respective ideology?

2 upvotes · 30 January 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I find feminism troubling because it's essentially become a mask for communism.

Feminism was only ever a mask for communism... or, rather, for the larger thing that communism is a part of. The great sociopolitical clash of the early 21st century is collectivism vs individualism.

True Purplepillers, what do you find problematic with each pill's respective ideology?

2 upvotes · 30 January 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The reason people think TRP is a narrow minded bubble is that its function is not to even-handedly describe all aspects of the universe, but to shine a light on particular categories of data that have been neglected elsewhere.

People unfamiliar with TRP tend to think it is supposed to be science... a sort of unified field theory of human mating behaviour. It's not. It's supposed to be engineering... a set of algorithms with which young men may unfuck their lives and get success.

If a man leaves the seat up and a woman falls in, who is responsible?

2 upvotes · 30 January 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Jesus.

Why do women have a tendency to "learn" that they don't like Chads and "fuckboys" at around the same age?

2 upvotes · 28 January 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why is it that, regardless of the number of chaotic realationships, do women seem to simultaneously "get it" right around the magical ages of 27-33?

They don't "get it". They just aren't able to pull Chad anymore.

So they make up a bunch of shit about how they've matured. If Chad-with-a-milf-fetish came along, they'd be on his dick in a few hours, and assure you the next day, that, no, this one is different.

Is there a reason why men in the manosphere are obsessed with masculinity/being masculine?

2 upvotes · 27 January 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

People who live in deserts care deeply about water.

The Unknowability of Beta Turd

2 upvotes · 26 January 2019 · /r/TheRedPill

It always amuses me just how many modern people believe in magic. Most of them don't know that they do.

The ancient Egyptians had the interesting habit of erecting great monuments covered in text praising their victories... before those victories actually happened. It's not that they were bullshitting. They simply believed in magic. They believed that the symbol had the power to influence the symbolized. That believed that if they wrote about victory, it would happen.

I always think of this when I see someone so urgently writing, over and over again, that things are this way or that way, when this or that is clearly the thing they urgently desire. I say to myself, here is little Aleister Crowley Junior, attempting to cast a spell.

Unfortunately for you, it's not going to work. No matter how many times you write the letters t, r, and e (twice), a big wooden thing is not going to spring out of the ground at your bidding, and no matter how many times you tell this man he feels an emotion you describe with 's', 'h', 'a', 'm', and 'e', you're not going to make him feel it. Magic doesn't work.

Why do people try, then?

Well, people who try to do magic are of course, grasping after power. They might think that words are power, or that belief is power, or that persuasion is power. Nope. Power is power. Everything else is just a tool to grasp it. And what tool you need depends upon the situation.

So let's examine the power dynamic, here. You want this man to do something. Or to stop doing something. That's why you are arguing with him. He has no particular incentive to do it, and you have none you can provide him, other than "If you do what I say, I will stop saying things."

So who's going to win this argument? He is, of course. No matter how cunning or dull either of you is, he will win. Because he holds all the cards. For you to win, you must make him behave as you desire. For him to win, all he has to do is... nothing.

Can you see now, how you have a bad strategy, and no tactics, because you do not understand power? You set up a game that has no victory condition for you. If you were wiser, you would have seen that, and approached your goals differently.

Fortunately for you, wisdom, unlike intelligence, can be learned. Are you paying attention?

Why are blowjobs indicative of higher interest?

2 upvotes · 24 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

I'm not trying to teach guys about you in particular, I'm trying to teach them about how to appeal to women. Like, the vast majority of them.

So, your personal preferences are relevant to your sex life, and you should probably share them with whatever men you are going to blow. But that doesn't include us, so we don't need to know.

How to date in the modern world?

2 upvotes · 23 January 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

+1

/u/LuckyLittleStar

What does it mean when a girl cries after sex?

2 upvotes · 20 January 2019 · /r/askTRP i just can't figure out why she started crying. I couldn't understand her, but it sounded like she was saying that she hated herself and she said some pretty hurtful things to me. Something about how ugly my body was and it will haunt her forever.

You're out of shape, but have decent game, and game rules everything.

She's used to fucking athletic guys, and was ashamed once the orgasm wore off.

Go find a woman who's not such a selfish cunt. And hit the gym.

Is it a red flag for a woman to have gay friends?

2 upvotes · 17 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

Hehehhehehheh.

Oh, wait. You're serious.

Let me laugh even harder.

Is it a red flag for a woman to have gay friends?

2 upvotes · 17 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

Gay people are about 1% of the population. If 1% of her friends are gay, that's normal.

If it's much higher than that, she's probably a liberal, which is a huge red flag.

Cheaters deserve to get divorced

2 upvotes · 16 January 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Who gives a shit what people deserve?

People don't get what they deserve. They get what they get. Arguing about what people deserve is just a fancy way of talking about the way you want the world to be.

Why are women so underrepresented in art?

2 upvotes · 16 January 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Under what?

The number of women you would expect to see?

Well, that depends on why you expect to see that number, I suppose.

To rescue a friend or not to rescue?

2 upvotes · 11 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

Still gotta figure out how to get them to slave over me haha, it's just mutually agreed upon fun right now. SMV needs a raise probably but I'm getting on a tangent, thanks for the info.

It's not just about SMV. There's a way to go about this. If you're following my articles, I've talked a little bit already about Indifference Game vs. Control Game.

I plan to expand on this a great deal in the future, but, in short, Indifference Game is characterized by outcome independence, visibly not caring, and the mantra "she's not yours, it's just your turn". This is suitable for gaming new girls, hookups, etc... you maintain the upper hand by SMV and indifference, motivating her to desire you, and act on her own initiative to please you, lest she lose you to another girl who is more forthcoming. Attempts to tell her what to do, at this stage, would appear overly invested, thirsty, and creepy.

Control Game is what you do when you can no longer refrain from investing or hide your investment. Girls are childish, not stupid. If you've been spending every weekend together for six months or a year, she's going to know you're not indifferent. Control game is when you establish yourself as her master by cultivating the motivation to please you. Then you can, and indeed must, tell her what to do. This is relationship game. Relationships do indeed work, but they must be based on her habitual obedience to you out of an earnest desire to please.

TRP overwhelmingly teaches Indifference Game not because that's the only thing we believe in, but because 90% of our audience is rank beginners and that's what they need. Frankly, if you're satisfied with a steady diet of tindrslut (and that's not so bad, really), then you never need to know this stuff. But if you enter into an LTR without it, you're on thin ice.

To rescue a friend or not to rescue?

2 upvotes · 11 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

It's short for "traditional conservative". A lot of people think the red pill is trying to bring some idealized version of the 1950s back, but those bring-back-the-1950s guys get fucked if wifey decides to misbehave.

You can't negotiate girls out of their inherent nature. You can only exploit their nature to make them into slaves and make sure they behave themselves. If you treat them like equal partners, they will make you pay dearly for that mistake.

Q4All: Does Mackensie Bezos (wife of Jeff Bezos) 'deserve' half of 'his' wealth now that they are divorcing? Why or why not?

2 upvotes · 11 January 2019 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You're almost correct.

That's what marriage was by design. But a contract has a couple of attributes.

- It has fixed terms.
- Those terms are known in advance by both parties.
- Those terms do not change without renegotiation and mutual agreement.
- Those terms are agreed to, usually before witnesses.
- Those terms are enforced upon both parties.

Some more reading.

To rescue a friend or not to rescue?

2 upvotes · 11 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

Never try to save a man who doesn't know he needs saving. He will turn on you in a heartbeat.

I want to bulk and train strongman again, but I can't snap out of the mindset of "abs=girls". I know this is gay as fuck. But can I have advice pls.

2 upvotes · 8 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

Lift heavy, and your forearms will improve. Wrist thickness is mostly a function of genetics, but if you look at a man just below the elbows, that almost always tells the real story of how strong he actually is.

If yours are skinny, you probably still have work to do.

I want to bulk and train strongman again, but I can't snap out of the mindset of "abs=girls". I know this is gay as fuck. But can I have advice pls.

2 upvotes · 7 January 2019 · /r/askTRP

Abs are a fad. They have nothing to do with strength. They are made in the kitchen, not the gym.

They aren't even that important for getting laid. Girls may like them when they see them, but, while I don't know about you, I usually have my shirt on when talking to a girl I just met.

Develop a massive chest and shoulders, and forearms like a bundle of steel cables, and don't worry so much about it.

What's the logic behind completely handing over our finances to our husbands?

2 upvotes · 7 January 2019 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'm talking about the advice Doyle gives in "The Surrendered Wife" (widely considered the bible of RP women)

Whaaaaaat?

Who have you been talking to?

Hello TRP, Any advise for 33 year old Virgin. Its like burning volcano in my mind.

2 upvotes · 17 December 2018 · /r/askTRP

The fact that you are 33 doesn't make what you need to do any different than anyone else.

Read, learn, practice.

An ugly personality will make the hottest person ugly

2 upvotes · 17 December 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Of course being pleasing to others matters. But don't mistake being pleasing to others for character, or character for being pleasing to others.

Hypergamy is Monogamy

2 upvotes · 11 December 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Your answer seems to then beg the question: were humans ever supposed to monogamous to begin with?

Supposed by whom?

Human being weren't designed, they evolved. And evolution doesn't have a goal, it just chases immediate optimizations.

Without marriage, relationships would be volatile for all but the top SMV men/women with women constantly jumping to a higher tree branch.

Try reading this... it may help organize your thoughts about this some.

I wonder if this would mean that the desire for marriage/monogamy indicates a low-value man.

Early-stage TRPers, still infused with the values of low-tier males, find monogyny appealing. They do not wish to face competition from high-tier males, and are very concerned with maintaining loyalty in their women.

Late-stage TRPers don't like tradcon or its monogynous values. They are unconcerned with maintaining loyalty in their women, because their high desirability does this for them, and disloyal women are easily replaced if it doesn't. They are also unconcerned with competition, since the amount of it that can beat them is less than the supply of attractive women. Instead, they wish to maximize their available options, and their ability to mate multiple women in parallel.

Fucking commies

2 upvotes · 10 December 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Thank you.

It never gets old, because it's not just praise and ego-stroking. It's feedback. It lets me know if and when I'm doing something right.

No one is ever smart enough to just figure shit out in their head without having to test their theories. I have theories about how men can make women desire, love, and worship them. I tested them. They work.

But I also have theories about how to teach other men how to do that. And I need to test those, too. So I need to hear, "hey, you're reaching me", or "hey, I don't get it".

A4ALL: Why aren't single dads bashed as hard as single moms?

2 upvotes · 10 December 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because men aren't looking for a provider.

"I want to sleep with you, but i think you will never call me again" Proper response?

2 upvotes · 3 December 2018 · /r/askTRP

"Depends how good you are in bed."

Psychiatrist said I should take a break from trp, as I'm overthinking and complicating things in a sense.

2 upvotes · 28 November 2018 · /r/askTRP

Psychiatrist told you what to do.

How about you tell you what to do? Do you want to take a break? Do you think you would prosper more if you did that, or less?

That's the only bit that matters.

I'm not here to tell you what to do... only what I think. If this head shrinker is worth anything, he'll say the same of himself.

Finally saw an instance of TRP theory proven untrue, and this is a big one. I'm completely blown away

2 upvotes · 26 November 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

The key element here is that she had been through the same experience. Therefore she couldn't see it as weakness without seeing herself as flawed too.

Couple that with a little tortured artist game and you're good to go.

Every girl I soft next ends up hating me

2 upvotes · 24 November 2018 · /r/askTRP

I don't know who the fuck "black dragon" is.

Soft next is when you don't initiate contact with a woman, and allow the interaction to die out unless she reaches out or pursues.

Hard next is when you ignore any such attempt.

Why cheating, even unprovoked cheating, makes sense to women. [Theory]

2 upvotes · 19 November 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

This sort of thing is interesting, and worth exploring, but needs to be taken with a grain of salt.

One of the most dangerous things about mathematical or computer models of human behaviour is that getting humans into a formal representation system in the first place requires so many simplifying assumptions that your resulting conclusions, while absolutely empirical for your special assume-the-chicken-is-a-sphere-to-make-the-math-easier model humans, do not have much predictive power for real humans, especially for the kind of outlier that actively practicing red pill men aspire to become.

In other words: make models like this, think about them, learn from them, but don't regard them as conclusive.

Every girl I soft next ends up hating me

2 upvotes · 14 November 2018 · /r/askTRP

You don't know what "soft next" means.

The other side of 'toxic masculinity' in California shooting

2 upvotes · 9 November 2018 · /r/MensRights

I'm actually a very clever Labrador retriever who has learned to type with his nose. Nice catch.

The other side of 'toxic masculinity' in California shooting

2 upvotes · 9 November 2018 · /r/MensRights

Now, think what would have happened if those brave men had been armed properly.

How fast would this have been over?

How do you know if a man is devoted to you for the long run?

2 upvotes · 7 November 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Not sex.

Feminine behavior and good treatment in general.

Sex may or may not be part of that, depending on circumstances. Remember that sex by itself should never be enough to secure commitment. (If it is, run !)

How do I approach my Captain about exploring some new weird sexual adventures?

2 upvotes · 28 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Probably the best way to bring this up to him is the way you brought it up to us.

Men are full of testosterone... we understand about sexual urges, and about kinky sexual urges. And if he's at all redpill oriented, he most likely has a dominant streak of his own.

Men are, however, very protective of women who are important to us, so if he's not already bringing this stuff up with you on his own initiative, then while you may be able to tell him you want it really rough right off, you may need to take getting him to actually play rough by stages.

He'll most likely be sympathetic, though. It's a lot easier to hear "I want you to play rough with me" than "I want to play rough with you."

CMV: Men do not like insecure women. They just wish their oneitis was liked them enough to be clingy.

2 upvotes · 20 October 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Men who stalk women don't do it because of what the women are like... they do it because of what they are like.

Am I doing this red pill thing right?

2 upvotes · 14 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

What????

Oh god why.

Formerly super alpha stud forced into beta hood. Help finding my way

2 upvotes · 14 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

Lemme guess, you're in sales, had a gift for gab?

Your confidence was based on fucking bitches. The instant you hit a cold streak, bam, that was it.

You don't realize that pussy is just pussy. You base your self-worth on it because you're hollow. What have you done with your life that you are proud of, apart from "fuck bad bitches"?

If the opinions of twentysomething club hoes whose interests include "selfies", "cute shoes", and "having fun" is all that your self-worth is based on, you're in a sad situation son, because you'll be thirsty no matter how high your count is... thirsty not for pussy, but for approval. For validation. For attention.

Kind of like a bitch.

Spend less effort on getting laid, and have a mission in life.

Status of the Appeal 10/11

2 upvotes · 13 October 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Only the weak can't give.

What, am I supposed to fall all over myself now trying to prove I'm "stronk"?

My god, it's like "baby's first verbal fencing lesson" in here. If you're gonna shit test me, at least shave your legs and put on a skirt.

Son, if you wanna give, give. No one is stopping you. It's your money. Prove to yourself how strong you are.

Giving other people's money proves nothing. Any asshole can vote for more cake.

Infamous N-Count

2 upvotes · 9 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

Women don't always lie. But you should always assume they might be.

What the fuck do you care? 20, 50, 100...

know anything that you can share that will make pornography unappealing?

2 upvotes · 9 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

Solving the wrong problem.

Porn isn't keeping you away from women. It's filling the gap left by your reluctance to do the legwork.

Staring to feel unattractive because of his disinterest. What's a girl to do?

2 upvotes · 5 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Depends how invested she is. Personally, I wouldn't recommend blowing up a two-year relationship (and increasing n-count for the next guy) because you're too proud to pass on a simple suggestion.

Anyone can say "I shouldn't have to do that", and thereby imply that they are a superior person who can discard lovers on a whim because they are easily replaced with a better model. That may even be true... for the top percentage of men.

But for women, discarding and starting again with a higher n-count and worse track record isn't a win. It's easy for other women to recommend, because those other women don't have to personally suffer the associated damage, but men and women have different consequences for writing a relationship off.

Therefore, men should discard relationships when a new woman would be more pleasing than trying to fix things. Women should discard relationships when they decide that things cannot be fixed.

If the matter is as simple as a blood test and some medical intervention, that hardly rises to the threshold.

Staring to feel unattractive because of his disinterest. What's a girl to do?

2 upvotes · 5 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Obviously, one can't say this "never" happens, because you can't examine everyone in the world.

But what I frequently run into is a case where a problem presents, some people hear "porn", and say "Ah-hah! There's your problem!"... but when I engage with OP and dig a little deeper, there's something else going on.

In this case:

Recently, he told me he just "hasn't been feeling very masculine".

Is a real fire alarm. Men don't just jerk off to a bunch of porn and say that. For a man to say that... something's badly off.

I'd get the testosterone levels checked first, but also pick up thyroid, cortisol, and so on. Then I'd look at sleep and stress.

Frequently, bioproblems or stress that inhibit sexual energy and drive will lead to porn use... a man will still have an itch, but lack the energy and enthusiasm to go to the trouble to scratch it with a partner.

Why is it a woman's fault if she's alpha widowed?

2 upvotes · 4 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I see where you are going with this.

However, something I have noticed is that women will often process badly failed relationships with a great deal of post-hoc analysis. Perhaps our culture's reliance on the pseudoscience of psychotherapy has given people the strange notion that deconstructing a trauma and understanding it will somehow cure its effects.

But that's not really the way memory works. A "neural net" structure, like the brain, doesn't really have a distinction between processing things (thinking about them) and storing things (memory).

What this means is that a memory can be altered in subtle ways every time it is accessed... this is how people can sometimes acquire entirely false memories of rape or trauma that never happened. Not only that, a memory is strengthened and reinforced by repeated access; the more you think about a memory, the more easily you will remember it (possibly in an altered form), and the more it will effect other thoughts.

This can produce a cascading effect until your entire life is about the worst thing that ever happened to you.

Overall, I see post-hoc analysis as having a net negative effect. What does seem to help, if it can be arranged, is a radical change in lifestyle or circumstances which produces a host of new and vivid memories that tend to drown out the old ones.

What do men want? - positive masculinity in relationships

2 upvotes · 4 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Yes. At one point we did have an issue with the mod team being rather heavily weighted towards tradcons who didn't want to let other girls participate, and had developed a heavy "mean girls" vibe. But the TRP leadership stepped in and dealt with that problem when we became aware of it.

If you are taking moral criticism for any lifestyle choices, hit that report button, and our mod team will deal with it.

What do men want? - positive masculinity in relationships

2 upvotes · 4 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

The whole reason we created TRP was that fear of being criticized on moral grounds ruined /r/seduction as an effective forum for discussing what worked. ("Misogyny!", etc).

So TRP came into being as "moral-free zone", where no discussion of moral imperatives was allowed. This extends to RPW.

That doesn't mean you don't have morals, of course. It simply means that discussion here happens from a tactical standpoint, not a moral one. RPW endorses submissive behaviour because it is the best way to get treated well by men, not because it is right, or good, or what some religion demands. All of those might or might not be true, but what's definitely true is that it works better.

However, the thing about tactics, or what we call "game", is that it works regardless of your motives. You can treat your husband well because you want him to treat you well, because it's what you think god wants, or because you love him and you just want him to be happy. Your motives are your business and your business alone... the same actions will produce the same results regardless.

This policy also allows some very different people with very different values to focus here on the subset of those values that they share, and to get along. This is how you can have harmonious and productive discussions here between very, very religious tradcon women, and hardcore BDSM girls, and everything in between. What they all share is not a lifestyle, a set of values, or a worldview, but a way of relating to men.

Too lazy to workout at 100% effort at the gym

2 upvotes · 4 October 2018 · /r/askTRP

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3r3fyb/if_you_dont_sleep_you_might_as_well_not_lift/

You are doing only one of the three things you need to do.

Why is it a woman's fault if she's alpha widowed?

2 upvotes · 4 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

You would not believe the number of times I've heard this before.

"I'm not obsessed with him, I'm just trying to understand what happened!"

I swear I should make a set of Alpha Widow Bingo Cards.

Riely J. Dennis says Ford is Braver than any Marine.

2 upvotes · 3 October 2018 · /r/MensRights

What the fuck is wrong with you?

Field Report: My unethical way of fucking models - I'm eventually going to hell

2 upvotes · 2 October 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

+1

How Many Women?

2 upvotes · 2 October 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

<https://www.sciencedirect.com/science/article/pii/S016230959290009S>

You're confusing monogamy with monogyny.

Why is it a woman's fault if she's alpha widowed?

2 upvotes · 1 October 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

The word "baggage" in this context generally refers to a psychological problem from a past relationship that interferes with current ones. Being an alpha widow is precisely that.

However, when you ask specifically how, I must confess to being somewhat puzzled. I'm not really sure how this isn't obvious.

Have you ever been on a date with a man who would not shut up about his ex? An alpha widow is exactly like this. People obsessed with their exes cannot form a satisfying bond with their current partner, because someone else occupies their thoughts.

Alpha widows are especially to be avoided because the prospects for recovery are grim at best. Out of all the alpha widows I have ever seen, both of others' making and my own, I have only ever seen one single solitary case of cure.

And while I do mostly understand how this happened, I'm not really sure the process is repeatable.

300,000 Subscribers. The Reddit Administration Tacitly Endorses Male Abuse and Denies its Victims

2 upvotes · 30 September 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Wasn't really a suggestion.

There's a rule we have about something we call concern trolling. I'm pretty familiar with it. Mostly because I wrote it. Some of your comments in this thread are gonna go away in a sec, here.

See, when you say "Free speech", what you are trying, inarticulately and imprecisely, to appeal to is the principle of free expression... the uniquely western notion that people ought to be allowed to express their ideas, regardless of whether others like those ideas or not, so that people who want to hear them can hear them, and anything can be discussed without fear of retribution.

That's a fine idea, and in fact, it's the reason we created this place. (That's a personal we, meaning "me and about 14 other dudes".)

See, once upon a time, there was a thriving group called /r/seduction. It was dedicated to PUA material... early stuff, ya know, primitive, not TRP core material, but this was early days, we were still learning a lot of what we have now learned.

Then someone came along, and said the magic word, "misogyny". And the whole group basically... capitulated. All of a sudden, there were things you couldn't say, entire subjects you couldn't talk about, because... "misogyny". That didn't sit well with some of us. You can't chase two rabbits at once. Either you're trying to figure out real shit about how sex and attraction work, or you're trying not to hurt women's fee-fees. Can't do both.

So we founded TRP. And the idea behind it was to do what r/seduction did, except it wouldn't have to stop doing it every time some clam got her panties in a bunch.

That means we are here for anything you might have to say about how to seduce women... and we are not here for anything you might say to try to police or control other people's attempts to do that.

Which is precisely what grousing about "misogyny" is. You can easily say "free speech" and pretend to mean it.

But that's not the side you're actually on. You're arguing the other side. You wanna shut people up.

So, I'm gonna give you a little time-out so you can experience firsthand what that feels like, and why it might not be a good idea to try to shut others up, or worse yet, try to make them worried so they start to shut themselves up.

Would you fuck a girl who wouldn't put out but fucked a co-worker or totally avoid her?

2 upvotes · 25 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

Each time you try to give her tingles and fail, the next time gets exponentially harder.

You are not yet a master of this stuff. Go find fresh prey.

How long does a 46 year old sexy cougar have until she loses her sex drive due to age?

2 upvotes · 25 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

Who cares?

Just ditch her when it starts to happen.

I can't sleep properly with my girlfriend next to me.

2 upvotes · 24 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

I think I will buy a dog collar so I can zap her when she pisses me off

Don't do this to help you sleep. Do this because it's kinky, and sexy, and she sounds like she's into that.

You need to set boundaries and make expectations clear. Remember that you are the boss, and she is not, and this is the natural dynamic of healthy relationships.

So you need to

- Tell her exactly what is going on with being angry or defensive
- Tell her exactly what the two of you are going to do about that. (I recommend "sleep in separate beds").
- Ask her if she understands, and what, if any, problems this creates for her. Listen.
- Explain that, while your instructions are not up for negotiation, you will address what she has to say in alternate ways. (If she wants a certain amount of cuddle time, okay, but it must happen during your waking hours.)
- Be firm, but be calm. Do not complain. Do not argue. Do not be upset. Do not be apologetic. This is the way things will be.

Men Have Equal Responsibility?

2 upvotes · 23 September 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

+1

Am I Even RedPilled?

2 upvotes · 22 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

From the sidebar:

Men: RedPillWomen is a female space where you're best off not posting. If you post and cause trouble there, it will follow you back here.

It has.

Ditch the Resume

2 upvotes · 21 September 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

You don't want to be Kennedy or the housekeeper. Neither has good game. The former got cheated on with some rando, the latter was a plate, and stayed a plate.

But no man in his right mind would NOT care, that she was an Olympic athlete.

Then you actually think that no man is in his right mind. Because no man does care. What he cares about is something related to that, but subtly and importantly different.

Let's have a look at what we are talking about.

Obviously fit and attractive, and not just coincidentally, but because of all the work she put in.

But if I was suddenly told, "You made a mistake with your image search. She's not an Olympian, that's just some girl who does crossfit.", then she would be no less attractive to me or any other man. Men don't care about your achievements. They care about your appearance, character, and behaviour. And they don't measure those through your achievements, but directly, by looking at you and talking to you.

I don't need to know what athletic competitions a woman has won to know that she is fit, has made fitness a lifestyle, and can set goals and stick to them. I can tell that from interacting with her.

I don't need to know what academic degrees a woman has earned to know if she is intelligent, well-informed, and insightful. I can tell that from interacting with her.

Men don't trust credentials. They want to evaluate for themselves.

How to deal with rude entitled feminist bitch?

2 upvotes · 21 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

The verbal fencing used to outmaneuver your detractors and leave them humiliated and discredited is an entire martial art. I cannot teach it to you in the answer to one question.

It is based on three foundations:

1. A strong, confident, self-image.
2. Frame control skills.
3. A non-reactive attitude.

Ditch the Resume

2 upvotes · 19 September 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'm finishing law school. I'm currently working for the public defender, have worked for personal injury and bankruptcy attorneys and am slated to work at my city attorney's office.

I give zero fucks about a woman's education, and am actually turned off by women who talk about how smart they are or try to list their accomplishments. As a friend I say "wow that's amazing", but I actually avoid dating any girls at my law school.

Yeah, pretty much.

This point isn't going to get much traction, however, until I figure out the best way to make the airplane noise, because some women really do not like the idea that their master's degree in business won't make their husband love them more.

What do you personally consider to be "a lot" in terms of N-count, and why?

2 upvotes · 19 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Her N-count does not reflect "relationship-attempts," because sometimes it was just an ONS and sometimes it wasn't.

Whether she intended to get pumped and dumped or didn't matters to her, but we're talking about the viewpoint of a man who is considering her for a relationship, because that's who cares about n-counts. From his perspective, an accidental ONS and a purposeful one are pretty much the same in terms of their effect on her desirability.

If the details are bogging you down, think of it this way: an n-count is like a credit rating, and a sexual history is like a credit report. You can have good credit, bad credit, no credit, and reading the report can make the rating look better or worse.

The important thing to understand is that men care about sexual history if a woman wants him to invest in her. If he's just going to dump a load of sperm in her and leave, he's pretty much indifferent unless it's so bad he's worried about catching something.

Dr. Jordan Peterson's detailed response to the question "What is it precisely that makes men desirable to women?"

2 upvotes · 19 September 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

You could've just said "Principle of Charity", but why use 3 words when half a page will do?

Fantasy vs Reality

2 upvotes · 19 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Should men be allowed to ~~have fantasies(openly) of power and dominance perhaps even rape, if they are never going to act on them in a real environment.~~ control their own thoughts?

How do you plan to stop them?

are women with rape fantasies damaged goods

If all goods are damaged, none are.

Linus Torvalds apologizes for twenty years of being insensitive

2 upvotes · 17 September 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

I have referred to this before, a compartmentalized narcissism. It's a very useful skill, gives others confidence (personality as a sales pitch) in you in your role, allows you to eat shit with a smile, should it benefit you in the long run (be nice to cheating while while you prep for a divorce r.g.) etc.

You're correct about this of course, but in this case it's not even about eating shit and smiling. It's about not throwing your plate at the waiter's head if your steak is medium instead of medium-rare.

These people who Linus has historically not been able to get along with are other kernel developers... people who share his interests, goals, a great many of his personality traits, and probably values as well... the very people he needs as allies if he wishes to accomplish his goals.

Now, the degree of adulation he is held in probably makes people put up with him to some extent, because, after all, he still manages to be quite effective at getting shit built. But one wonders what he would be able to accomplish if he was able to send his steak back without all the plate-hurling.

Should I take steroids to be more attractive?

2 upvotes · 16 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

The biggest problem that prevents men from gaining is anorexia.

Betcha 10 to 1 odds this dude has visible abs, and won't eat enough, because he doesn't want to lose them. So he stays small and weak.

Abs are a fad. I've seen eight year old girls with abs. If you want them anyway, get rid of them, bulk, get your bench somewhere near 300, and your squat to 400 or so, then do a cut and get them back.

How to not pay for stuff on dates?

2 upvotes · 16 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

I refuse to admit that chivalry is dead, because then I would have to stop kicking it. And I'm having far too much fun.

He Asked Permission to Touch, but Not to Ghost

2 upvotes · 14 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women will always demand things when they are unhappy.

But the things they demand are not the things that will make them happy again.

So if you give them what they demand, they will never stop demanding things.

And being unhappy.

RP Theories and Pair Bonding

2 upvotes · 14 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You are mistaken about who is the gatekeeper of relationships.

Red Pill is Just As Useless For Isolated Men As Feminism

2 upvotes · 14 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The funny thing though is that rather than thinking, "fuck it, I'm going home - I'll look for women in coffeeshops or something tomorrow" which would have been the stronger decision, I ironically took your advice which was to stick around and told myself "no, I can be like this guy who pulls hot bitchy chicks in night clubs and thrives on that type of environment".

You know what, I was going to explain this shit point by point to you, but then I read this line and said "fuck it".

Red Pill is Just As Useless For Isolated Men As Feminism

2 upvotes · 13 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm not going to give a neuroscience lecture, but there are certain things we need to understand about the brain to proceed further.

I shall try to make these as general as possible, and we shall both endeavour to ignore any tiresome neurotics who butt in to shout "oversimplification" on the grounds that they object to anything that doesn't cater to their autism.

1. There is a region of the brain that does not participate in consciousness. It excels at certain tasks, for example memory and facial recognition, but it lacks the capacity to generalize, to classify, or to reason abstractly. It is not self-aware precisely because self-awareness requires these three capabilities. We shall call this Brain #1.
2. There is another part of the brain which is good at generalizing, classification, abstract thought, and pattern recognition. Because of this, it is self-aware, and it is what we experience as being "us". We shall call this Brain #2.
3. There are patterns of activity in the brain which result in behaviours of the whole organism. We shall call them decisions.
4. Decisions can occur in Brain #1, Brain #2, or between both.
5. When a decision originates in Brain #1, Brain #2 constructs a false narrative which explains how the decision came from Brain #2. It is good at constructing narratives, and fitting sensory data into coherent stories.

All these five points are related to specific pieces of neuroscience research.

Now, let's answer your question:

Surely they both need to happen together: strength of will to effect change on the outside and openness to be impacted by what you have learned from interacting with the world.

Have you ever seen a coherent plan for changing your thoughts by thinking? I'm sure you've seen many admonitions to do, usually embroidered on pillows or superimposed upon black and white pictures of athletes. But have you ever seen a precise procedure for doing so, including quantifiable ways of measuring your progress?

The answer is no. Plans for "thinking yourself different" exist on the level of bad junior varsity high school football coaching. ("CATCH THE GODDAMN BALL, SCHOENFIELD!" "Why, thank you, coach, I hadn't thought of that. I'll just figure out for myself how to do that, then, shall I?")

There's a reason for this. Referring to the five points above, we quickly see that the brain is spectacularly ill-suited to operating on itself, especially where decision making is concerned... Only one part is readable to us, only one part is writable to us, it flat out lies to us as often as not about where decisions are happening, and no aspect of its operation can be concretely measured without sophisticated medical equipment. Not only that, we can't even control what is going on in the part we are aware of. If you don't believe me, just take a moment and don't think about a blue eyed polar bear.

Pretty much the only thing we can do with the small part of our brain we can even experience is make a decision and do something with our body.

So if we wish to control our brain, that is the tool we use. We do not "become more confident" or "become more wise" by just "being more confident", or "thinking more carefully", any more than we become stronger by "becoming stronger". That's an end result, not a process.

The process whereby we become stronger is to lift heavy things. The process whereby we become a different person is to act like that person.

Regardless of what sort of person we wish to be, we can never describe how that person thinks, or feels, and make ourselves think or feel that way. We can describe what that person does. And we can do those things. And we can concretely observe how much and well we did them. To change yourself, use the three steps of learning: education, practice, training.

If you wish to be the sort of person who crushes shit tests, educate yourself on how they are crushed, practice crushing them, then train. When you have mastered this, you will, by definition, be the sort of person who crushes shit tests.

Or you could sit in the gym and think about strength, waiting to become strong so that you can pick up a barbell without "being inauthentic" and "pretending to be something you're not".

Red Pill is Just As Useless For Isolated Men As Feminism

2 upvotes · 13 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Ah, I see what we have here. Not a new objection at all, but a tired old one.

You labour under the misapprehension that a man is defined by his thoughts, and that he therefore has a philosophical if not moral obligation that his actions must reflect his thoughts at every moment, lest he be "inauthentic", apparently a grave sin indeed. And so if a man wishes to change himself, he must sit quietly in a dark room and concentrate upon his thoughts alone, willing them to change. Only then is he permitted to act as he chooses.

A man is not defined by his thoughts. Only he can experience his thoughts. He is defined by how others experience him... by his actions.

We are what we repeatedly do.

A man who wishes to change inside must begin by changing outside.

Red Pill is Just As Useless For Isolated Men As Feminism

2 upvotes · 12 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There is literally no one with more experience devising, applying, teaching, and observing the results of TRP's methods than I. That's what evidence I have, and that's why I am a primary source. I, along with RPS, HSP, and a few others, am the primary source.

What have you got? An attempt to change the subject, that's what you have.

This is, of course, the next stage of the progressive crumbling of the anti-TRP narrative:

1. "It doesn't work!"
2. "Okay, but it only works on club sluts and tinder hoers."
3. "Okay, but it doesn't work on women with self-respect who know their own value."
4. "Okay, but it doesn't work on women who know the techniques."
5. "Okay, but it only works for men who are already attractive."
6. "Okay, but it only works for men who are already Dark Triad." <----- You are here.

So I don't actually blame you. It takes a while to embrace a position that is radically different than your previous worldview, and it happens in stages.

Ltr is cool with me fucking other women and I have a few questions

2 upvotes · 12 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

how do I manage something like this?

I plan to write an article on this soon. Stay tuned.

Is tinder my best option? I've been monogamous for 2 years so it's been a while since I've been out there

In brief:

Be aware that you will have more difficulty picking up than when you are single (unless you lie/omit, which is an option). Plenty of girls would rather have part of an alpha's attention than all of a beta's, but having to admit that to themselves at the outset can trigger heavy ASD.

Restrict the side girls to being casual hookup stuff until you get your feet wet.

If you decide you want to promote another girl, that's where you really need high-master level game. Girl number one has had plenty of time to get used to the idea, and is typically fine if your control game is good. Girl number two, however, is gonna be a huge handful, because of all the fear, jealousy, envy, guilt, shame, etc.

[Discussion] Why men should pay for dates

2 upvotes · 12 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Should" just means "I want".

Why do so many men still follow the red pill philosophy when there are so many women against that kind of thinking?

2 upvotes · 12 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

How many legs does a cat have?

Why do so many men still follow the red pill philosophy when there are so many women against that kind of thinking?

2 upvotes · 11 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Wish I couldn't. Having to hold yourself up sucks.

What are your thoughts on long distance relationships?

2 upvotes · 11 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Should" is just a way of saying "I want" without taking responsibility for it. There is no "should" in nature.

What I am saying is that the relationship isn't going to work out unless she does. They have to be close to bond, have sex, etc.

And him moving to be with her inverts the power dynamic which makes relationships work. Ditto if he proposes before she moves.

Never fall in love?

2 upvotes · 11 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

With the term "AWALT". Does this mean that all women are the same and are evil deep inside and will fuck you over at the end?

Female nature is present in every woman. Which parts of it she expresses depend upon her history, and upon how you interact with her.

I don't know what "evil" is, but I do know that the term is meaningless if it applies to no one... or to everyone. Women are as women are. If you cannot deal with that, it's your fault.

Is any girl special if they are all the same?

The answer to this is to unask the question.

Does this also mean that you should never be attached to any girl and ALWAYS be willing to walk away so you don't ever get fucked over?

How can I help you if you don't read my goddamn articles?

Not having children vs. not having grand children

2 upvotes · 11 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The kids/no kids debate is never going to produce any meaningful results, because being broody, like being horny, or hungry, or bored, is a basic drive. An end, not a means to an end.

You either have that drive, or you don't.

If you do, you don't understand how anyone could deny themselves the joy of making a human and raising him into an adult. They are missing out on the whole purpose of life!!

If you don't, then you don't understand what the hell people think is so wonderful about some bacon golem that people are willing to sacrifice everything to create one. What broody people don't understand is that life is not a Spielberg movie. Dudes who are uninterested in kids do not suddenly discover the magic of fatherhood and the special wonder of children if life forces them to play the part.

You probably were a crappy stepmother, and I don't blame you... the kid was just the price of some dick you liked, not a perk.

Frankly, it wouldn't do anyone any good for a certain dude in Arizona to learn that his daughter is actually my daughter. Neither he, nor she, nor I, would be better off. Some people just aren't parents.

Who/what exactly are red pill women?

2 upvotes · 9 September 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, I'm sure you know what is good for those poor deluded little waifs better than they do themselves, unlike those nasty controlling brutish men.

If you want to stay safe don't interact men at all.

2 upvotes · 9 September 2018 · /r/MensRights

Because they don't work that way.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Drug_facilitated_sexual_assault#Crime_reports,_prosecution,_and_statistics

Made a bet that i would fuck and the girl found out

2 upvotes · 9 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

Don't be concerned. TRP is not a democracy. We don't care what the majority thinks. Shit advice will vanish.

Made a bet that i would fuck and the girl found out

2 upvotes · 8 September 2018 · /r/askTRP

Nope. Terrible. Tryhard.

Accepting TRP Will Make You Unhappy: Your Choice if That's Permanent

2 upvotes · 25 August 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Acceptance.

What is trp opinion on women who are still want to go party after ltr/ married status?

2 upvotes · 25 August 2018 · /r/askTRP

She's going with a friend

<https://media.tenor.co/images/7a017ae4e0c34a3c40c0f38b9a4f0d9b/raw>

Do Men Actually Like Nice Girls or Not?

2 upvotes · 1 August 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

As much as TRP promotes the idea that women should date “beta males” because they’re boring and stop looking for guys who provide “tingles”

On two occasions I have been asked, 'Pray, Mr. Babbage, if you put into the machine wrong figures, will the right answers come out?' I am not able rightly to apprehend the kind of confusion of ideas that could provoke such a question.

- Charles Babbage

What are your favorite feminine hobbies that aren't "basic"?

2 upvotes · 30 July 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I suspect I've never had issues with my exes wanting to commit/marry me because I easily fit into their lives like water taking the shape of its container.

+1

(/u/CrazyHorseInvincible)

Laura Doyle's Views on Verbal Abuse in Marriage...True or Not?

2 upvotes · 25 July 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

That sounds like progress.

The trick isn't to forgive, it's to forget. Most people have had someone in their past who hurt them. Those who go on to recover and have good relationships are those who reach a state where they seldom think about that person anymore.

That's really all I have to say. If you've started deleting stuff, that's a start, but most importantly, it means you've realized that you still have some letting go to do.

Once you've done it, relationships will be about you and the man who is there with you, not anyone else.

Whenever I workout super fucking hard for a few days, I want to fuck a tranny

2 upvotes · 25 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

No one who matters really gives a shit if you are bisexual or whatever.

TRP can't give you advice on how to pick up dudes, though.

What does "You look like a sociopath" mean?

2 upvotes · 22 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

I sent a picture of my face/upper body to a friend and he showed it to her gf who showed it to her colleagues.

They all said I look like an "sociopath" and when i sent a video they said i have a resting bitch face.

So a whole bunch of girls are staring at your picture and analyzing it?

Act nonchalant. Agree and amplify.

Lesbian girl wants to hangout

2 upvotes · 20 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

LUG.

Laura Doyle's Views on Verbal Abuse in Marriage...True or Not?

2 upvotes · 20 July 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

If one can call "hate/contempt" being obsessed, then probably yes.

Precisely.

Hate isn't the opposite of love. The opposite of love is indifference. Love and hate are just slightly different ways of giving numerous fucks about someone.

Would you say that a man who got divorce-raped is not allowed to mourn and be angry about his ex-wife? So why is it a bad thing that I still have some pain and anger about the exploit that I hadn't processed, yet?

Allowed by whom? In case you haven't noticed, the universe doesn't have a complaints department.

Until you stop hating this dude, and thinking about him, and dwelling on the past, you're not going to be able to connect with other men. This is gonna take as long as it takes. There's no skipping that by meeting a "better guy", because if you haven't reached that stage yet, any man with options is going to get gradually more annoyed with your baggage, and the whole thing will end up fizzling or exploding.

And don't try to tell me again that you're over him. You've done nothing this whole conversation but go on about what he did to you, about what an asshole he was, about how you despise him, and about how you are so totally over him, really, I totally mean it, honest, you have to believe me.

Eyeroll

You need to have the courage to look in the mirror and realize you're still damaged.

Then you need to stop talking about him, stop thinking about him, stop trying analyze what happened, and stop looking for answers in the past. The past contains no answers. It just contains all the shit that happened.

If you do what you always did, you're gonna get what you always got.

Want different? Act different.

She Behaved Badly - So I Stopped The Date & Took Her Home

2 upvotes · 16 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

Why not just ask her what she didn't like about it? Part of being ~~adult~~ autistic is doing away with the games and just being honest.

Fixed that for you.

What Happens When Your Wife/GF Catches On to TRP?

2 upvotes · 16 July 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I am wondering what's going to happen when OP catches on to TRP.

Divorced because of cancer with a child.

2 upvotes · 13 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

Ooooh.

TRP doesn't have a magic wish-granting djinni. There is no set of perfect game skills that will make a fucked up court system, or a fucked up culture, not apply to you.

For everyone else reading: THIS IS WHY YOU DON'T GET MARRIED, DUMBASS.

For you: you need legal help, not our help. The only thing WE can tell you is don't be afraid to be as ruthless as the law allows. Women will CUT you and never shed a tear. If you are fighting one, don't hold back.

Laura Doyle's Views on Verbal Abuse in Marriage...True or Not?

2 upvotes · 12 July 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Would you say that this is also applicable if it is not fear of aggression but fear of being used/exploited?

Absolutely.

Remember that aggression, while it usually takes the form of an attempt to harm, is really an attempt to control something. And all fear, while it often takes the form of fear of being controlled, is fear of being harmed.

Women with a high degree of innate submissiveness will often be very aggressive and controlling, or cold and avoidant, towards men if their trust is low, precisely because they know that their innate submissive behaviour will make them vulnerable.

Just as men have an innate urge to shelter and protect women, women have an innate urge to defer to and obey men. These instincts balance each other... and in a healthy relationship, they are expressed highly and in balance, rather than suppressed. He submits to her totally and obeys, and he places her welfare as one of his top priorities.

The expression of each of these instincts, done correctly, will feed the other.

I have autism, not like bad. But bad enough to get me struggling. Advice.

2 upvotes · 10 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

Good. One more:

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/4rqg37/there_is_nothing_i_can_say_to_you_that_will/

I have autism, not like bad. But bad enough to get me struggling. Advice.

2 upvotes · 10 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

That's progress.

Flirt back until you make some autistic mistake and screw it up. Then learn from that and don't repeat the mistake with the next one... make some other mistake instead. Then don't repeat that.

And so on.

Also might help to read this:

https://old.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3dwokl/and_dont_listen_to_me_like_a_sperg_either/

I have autism, not like bad. But bad enough to get me struggling. Advice.

2 upvotes · 10 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

What that means, then, is that you do not need special advice, because the combination of what you already know about autism and what is here for you to read about seduction are the only things you need.

You're going to screw up a lot more, though. Learn from each screwup.

I have autism, not like bad. But bad enough to get me struggling. Advice.

2 upvotes · 10 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

The rules of the game do not change just because you are bad at it.

You have to learn the same social skills as everyone else, it's just going to be harder for you.

UPDATE: Me (22/F) and my bf (31/M) broke up due to my past affair with his married best friend

2 upvotes · 10 July 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

How receptive do you think he would be right now to the statement "Technically I didn't cheat on you!" ?

Q4All: What would happen to humanity if women were as disposable as men?

2 upvotes · 7 July 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What would happen to the human race if women had the same burdens as men

Extinction.

Dating Strategy:- To care or not to care?

2 upvotes · 4 July 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

https://old.reddit.com/r/RedPillWomen/comments/8w5sfx/a_field_guide_to_retarded_bullshit/

1st year anniversary...who plans and what do?

2 upvotes · 4 July 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

+1

u/luckylittlestar

What to do if plate develops oneitis for you?

2 upvotes · 4 July 2018 · /r/askTRP

Wrong.

My God... It's Full Of... Kittens.

2 upvotes · 2 July 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

I'm average height

Yeah, keep telling yourself that, shorty. Still, maybe you can be a camp guard when we start exterminating the left-handed devils. And the clowns. And the Amish.

Still, looks like you're going to stay a virgin for a while, either way.

You're being insufferable.

Getting warmer again. Why am I doing this? Am I just insane? Do I get sexual pleasure out of confusing you?

Do dogs have a Buddha-nature? Does the Buddha have a dog nature?

Do I hate Jews? (If you say yes, I will mock you for missing the point, and ban you. If you say no, I will mock you for missing the point, and ban you. What will you say?)

Are you a man, or a collection of reflexes? Does anyone hear a dinner bell?

My God... It's Full Of... Kittens.

2 upvotes · 1 July 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Do you understand how pretentious it is to treat every interaction with other people as you "teaching them a lesson"?

I only seem pretentious because I am wiser, smarter, stronger, handsomer, richer, more skillful, and in every way just plain better than you.

(... 4... 3... 2...)

I don't understand why you're defending antisemitism.

Let me give you a hint, since you're clearly lost. If you had accused GLO of being "Islamophobic" instead, he would have made jokes about the goyim instead.

So what's he up to? And what does it have to do with TRP?

Very specific issue: How to deal with male/female differences when hiking (or exercising together in general)?

2 upvotes · 26 June 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I thought you said you met while hiking? Doesn't that kind of mean that he hiked a fair amount before he met you?

It sounds to me as if doing this activity with you is making him set a pace much slower than what he is used to or comfortable with. He may see this as a disruption of a cherished activity, and therefore experience your presence as a burdensome obligation rather than a pleasure.

The physical capacity gap between men and women is huge. If men wish to push themselves, and test their physical limits, no woman can possibly compete with them or even keep up.

That means that whether men and women can do physical activities together depends on both those activities and how the man feels about them.

I am quite willing to hike with my girls, because I do not hike to compete or push myself. I hike to enjoy being out in nature. I push myself in boxing and weight lifting, and I do not allow girls to limit me in those activities.

So, while hiking is not necessarily something you will never be able to do with your husband, he may well need to do much of it alone or with other men, so that he can engage in the competition and/or self-testing that is critical to male health and happiness.

On the Use of Hearing Protection in Loud Environments

2 upvotes · 26 June 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

I never leave home without:

- A handgun.
- A multitool.

- An LED flashlight.
- Something to write with.
- Some means of making fire.
- My in-ear hearing protection.

My relationship lasts an average of 3 months, what am I doing wrong?

2 upvotes · 26 June 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I would like to believe I can never be abusive to anyone.

And I would like to believe that all kittens go to heaven.

My relationships don't last more than 3 months is because I bail when the guy cannot commit to me.

Inspiring commitment is your responsibility. If you can't do it, then blame the man, you are basically the girl version of /r/incels.

'Consent' is not an issue when you're high value and can steal hearts. But be prepared.

2 upvotes · 26 June 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

It is not clear what point you are attempting to make.

Is there any common TRP advice that would hurt a guys chance of getting laid?

2 upvotes · 21 June 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Both of them?

On the Importance of this Sub

2 upvotes · 21 June 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://youtu.be/FI1yIlg4GKv8?t=1m20s>

Do you ever discuss your hate for 3rd wave feminism among your peers?

2 upvotes · 20 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

"Consensus" doesn't mean shit on TRP. TRP is 95% novices and 5% experienced.

Talk to the experienced guys, and you'll find that the answer is the same for this as for most other things.

"Sometimes you do, sometimes you don't."

How strong am I for my age?

2 upvotes · 20 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

Having a squat and deadlift that are close to each other is the sign of an experienced lifter. How? Why?

Because they are essentially the same lift (raise hips against resistance).

So they move the load in much the same way (not exactly, but similar), but they brace that load in different ways, because the load transfers differently from a different position. Essentially, the squat is less than the deadlift because of the additional requirements imposed by bracing the load with the muscles of the torso and back.

As lifters gain experience, they develop both skill at bracing this load, and strength in those core muscles. This makes the squat start to catch up to the deadlift. Whether it will ever break even depends on a lot of things, including height, so it's not very informative to compare between lifters, but comparing a lifter with himself, over time, should show this progress.

The problem with ATG is not the risk of injury per se, but the way that going too deep deloads the hamstrings. Not only does this reduce the amount you can lift, it changes the load balance between the muscles in ways that are not optimal for development.

If you are afraid of developing a shallow squat, then develop your sense of proprioception in the squat by doing box squats with a touch-and-go movement. Get a box of the right height, and don't sit on it at the bottom. Just use the feel of it touching your butt as a cue that you're parallel. After a while, you won't need it.

Overall, you're doing fine, and are quite strong for your age. That deadlift number indicates you have good potential. You're just going to need more time to bring those other lifts up.

What does this body language cue mean?

2 upvotes · 17 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

Playing with hair is a subconscious attempt to self-groom and become more beautiful. IOI.

Dress adjusting can be self-grooming (IOI) or defensive, depending on what is being done.

The tricky thing is that defensive dress adjusting can be IOI (because your presence is generating high sexual tension which makes her nervous) or IOD (because you're creepy).

To determine which, you have to find other context clues. Are they seeking you out, finding excuses to talk to you, accidentally brushing up against you. Are their pupils dilated when they speak to you? Do they break eye contact by shifting their eyes downward... or away to one side?

[Q4M] what are the ways "YOU" can tell a woman is riding the cc heavily

2 upvotes · 16 June 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The thousand cock stare is real.

Girl gets spit roasted and tries to make bf feel bad for it

2 upvotes · 14 June 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

This is why you don't get married.

She engaged in multiple behaviours that would result in being instantly dumped, if she were a girlfriend. But he can't dump her that easy, because he has voluntarily made the state the arbiter of their romantic disputes.

Now she doesn't have to make an excuse he will believe. She only has to make an excuse an employee of the state will believe, or won't dare disbelieve.

And what family court judge would disbelieve a woman who said was raped? Even if she privately thought the story was suspicious as fuck, she'd never say so. It's a huge career risk for no gain at all.

How to explain bite marks

2 upvotes · 13 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

Yeah, you should almost never lead with a straight answer.

Make some off the cuff crack first. Then, if a straight answer really would make sense to give, let her wheedle it out of you.

And never hide other women. To do so suggests monogamy is the default state, not a concession they must ask for and earn (or not).

Plucked from AskTRP

2 upvotes · 13 June 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

He's far more patient than I would have been.

But expressions of sexual desire, even coupled with bluntly honest excuses about needing to vet more, will in most cases take you much farther than pretensions of indifference.

What to do when you can't go along with the fetish?

2 upvotes · 12 June 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

If he's bringing it up every time, then it's a deal breaker for him.

If you aren't even willing to try it once, then it's a deal breaker for you.

What's behind the shaming of "nice guys", "incels", "chuds", "neckbeards", "manchildren"...?

2 upvotes · 11 June 2018 · /r/MensRights

There is a discernible difference.

What's behind the shaming of "nice guys", "incels", "chuds", "neckbeards", "manchildren"...?

2 upvotes · 11 June 2018 · /r/MensRights

And what would all that be to you? Even if all of this were 100% true, what exactly would make you to one to give it them?

If I see a person whose problems are their own fault, my immediate impulse isn't "here, let me give them more problems".

If it were, observers would rightly conclude that I wanted to give problems to others, and was finding a convenient excuse.

RP truths vs Feminism -- I need some encouragement!

2 upvotes · 11 June 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

So, if you allow yourself to act or feel submissive, you feel guilty about not obeying feminism?

That sounds pretty submissive, too.

Given TRP why would any guy fake a vulnerability?

2 upvotes · 11 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

Try it yourself.

Try lots of different things. Put on a new personality like a ghillie suit with each new girl.

Go 100% balls to the wall douchebag selfish one day, and mix in 20% caring daddy the next.

Stop regarding every interaction with a girl as a measurement of your worth, and start treating it like a poker game for monopoly money.

Go Out and Test It.

2 upvotes · 10 June 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Thank you for reminding me of a bullet point I forgot to include.

Theory on Threesomes ?

2 upvotes · 6 June 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Before the post I was really uncertain and at 50-50, I am still not sure but am like 90-10 thinking its a bad idea in general and 100-0 a bad idea to do it myself.

This is still making the decision without consulting him. Seeing as this is his fantasy, a lot of the major "pro" arguments are most likely gong to come from him.

You need to tell him what's going on in your head.

How effective stronglifts are? Am I doing that shit wrong?

2 upvotes · 3 June 2018 · /r/askTRP

Right, but I literally cannot tell what you are trying to say. Try again.

Do you see any way to simultaneously be able to live a committed Christian life and get married, but avoiding a situation where you become the classic pussywhipped husband?

2 upvotes · 30 May 2018 · /r/askTRP

Seeing as religious women come generally in 2 flavours, hysterical dogmatic zealot that will make your life a permanent trial, and hypocritical fake religious thot (using religion to legitimize her own sense of ego and good girl delusion while having the same whorish nature of all others), I'd like to ask you today: Is there any hope in the prospect of finding a wife that will allow me to be as kind as I'd like to be, while still being ready to be helpful enough, playful enough and loyal?

You just answered your own question.

TRP is about what works. We didn't select the material based on conformance to any ideological preconceptions, or preconceived notions. We simply followed where our observations led.

If that clashes with your preconceived notions, that is your own problem.

When you start testing things in the real world to see what works, all of your beliefs, all of them, are immediately on the firing line. You don't get to pick and choose.

Tears

2 upvotes · 28 May 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Grieve to male friends, not to your women.

Tears

2 upvotes · 28 May 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

I feel honestly sad for you.

I honestly don't think about you at all.

But here's a free hint: Do not treat women how you would want to be treated. Their needs are different.

Don't forget what it is that motivates you.

2 upvotes · 28 May 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Weed makes nothing to do, something to do. So you'll never be proactive and never progress in life (wether it's financially, academically, financially, sexually... etc) if you are constantly stoned.

Well put.

Activities engaged in for pleasure are worthwhile, but it's never a good idea to let them get in the way of activities engaged in for gain.

Q4RP: What is red pill ideology all about to you?

2 upvotes · 20 May 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But then I see people with red flair completely contradicting these same principles they claim are the gospel.

Don't you get it yet?

Not only does TRP contradict itself all the time, individual TRP leaders contradict ourselves all the time.

On purpose.

Why do you suppose that might be?

Innate personality vs TRP

2 upvotes · 14 May 2018 · /r/askTRP

Good.

What this means in concrete terms is "go out and do what you need to do".

It doesn't matter if you're dying inside. Just don't show it. Hold the fucking line.

White knuckle through it, and it will get easier. And one day, you'll find that your thoughts and emotions have changed to suit your actions, and you are a different person.

You can act in any way you choose. You could spend tomorrow pretending you were an African prince who has to drive everywhere backwards or the mafia will steal his asshole. You could put on a different persona for every girl you talk to. (That's lots of fun.) You don't have to "stay in your lane". Who the fuck ever told you that lane was yours, anyway?

Go try wacky shit. Spend a day trying to get rejected as many times as possible. Try to recruit customers for a business that doesn't exist. Pick a random crazy theory and go around trying to convince people you believe it. Tell people you're from a country that doesn't exist, and see how many of them pretend to have heard of it. Pretend to be gay, and see if you can get girls to convince you to "try it the other way".

Tomorrow is just a period of time. You don't owe it anything. It makes no demands of you. You don't have to give to it what you gave to today, or yesterday. You can do anything you're prepared to accept the consequences of... and so few of the things you are afraid of doing actually have lasting consequences.

Should I Have Talked To Her.

2 upvotes · 13 May 2018 · /r/askTRP

Wrong mindset.

Always be running game, even when you're not trying to pick up. If she's off-limits for whatever reason, create attraction, then just hold there.

It gets you in the habit, and gives you social proof.

Why are most of the muscular men right wing?

2 upvotes · 5 May 2018 · /r/askTRP

Because building muscle requires taking personal responsibility for the state of your body.

From BP to RP: unconscious incompetence to unconscious competence

2 upvotes · 27 April 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

I believe there is no avoiding it unless you are constantly away, traveling.

You're wrong.

We need to talk more about control game.

If getting married is fucking insane due to her one day taking half your shit. Would getting married with a prenup outlining that in the event of divorce she gets absolutely nothing of yours be perfect?

2 upvotes · 27 April 2018 · /r/askTRP

Prenups are great. Family court judges love a good laugh before they take your stuff and your kids.

"Men are intimidated by intelligence in women"

2 upvotes · 23 April 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Intelligence is neither attractive nor unattractive to men.

Therefore it adds no value.

Intelligent women are more difficult to impress, therefore they require more value.

Therefore, intelligence in a woman requires more value, but provides none.

A junior Disaster Area accountant, visiting the shipyard where this ship was being constructed, had demanded to know of the works foreman why the hell they were fitting an extremely expensive teleport into a ship which only had one important journey to make, and that unmanned. The foreman had explained that the teleport was available at a ten per cent discount and the accountant had explained that this was immaterial; the foreman had explained that it was the finest, most powerful and sophisticated teleport that money could buy and the accountant had explained that the money did not wish to buy it

Men should always invest a lot more into Women than vice versa because the risk vs rewards of sex aren't equal.

2 upvotes · 21 April 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Should" is just a one-word synonym for "I want".

CMV: The Growth Of T/MRP Is Due To A Lack Of Compelling Counter-narrative For Men

2 upvotes · 4 April 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

These are all things that "remove the thorns" yet they don't seem to be a positive from their perspective.

The thorns are an essential part of the process.

Any number of well-meaning, but naive, blue-pilled men have asked why we cannot have TRP with the good advice, but without the misogyny. Some of them have even tried to create such alternatives, and failed both miserably and with spectacular rapidity.

They did not understand that misogyny is not a bug. It's not even a feature. It's the secret sauce that makes the whole thing work.

If it were to become mainstream, then we would be mainstream. If it is to remain unthinkable, then we'll be unthinkable. I don't much care which, so long as the young men we right for get the message they need to hear: that bitches ain't shit but hoes and tricks.

Femininity isn't superficial

2 upvotes · 2 April 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Taking this kind of advice -- eliminating drinking, refusing to swear, and only wearing dresses -- and expecting to become truly feminine is the equivalent of putting on a white coat and expecting to become a doctor.

I believe the concept you are looking for is cargo cult.

can you compromise on marriage?

2 upvotes · 29 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

If a woman could somehow put aside the "need" for a husband who is the Avatar of Tingles, she could be happy with a more-beta-than-alpha man, because such men are more keen on the roles of husbands and fathers.

And if men could suddenly get turned on by fat chicks, they'd get a lot more blowjobs. And if two plus two were five, I would be the Pope.

What do YOU think RP is?

2 upvotes · 20 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yep.

Q4ALL: who is responsible for other partner's satisfaction/orgasm? Men? Women? Both?

2 upvotes · 18 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You couldn't whiff this in your wildest dreams.

I'm mildly surprised it took me several tries to provoke you to say that. I was expecting the first one to work.

So now we know a few things about your problem:

1. You don't trust men very much or possibly at all.
2. You have difficulty getting off.
3. But you want them to desire you, and you feel hurt when they don't.

All of this, we can agree on.

But you are simply confused about how these things relate to each other.

You think like this:

1. I have difficulty getting off.

2. The men I am with must not really love or desire me that much, because if they did, they'd find a way.
3. If they don't love or desire me enough to do that, they must be selfish.
4. In fact, since this happens with pretty much every man I am with, they must all be selfish.
5. So I refuse to love, trust, or appreciate any man.

What hasn't occurred to you is that the only common element in all of your dysfunctional relationships is you.

Here you are, fighting a one twentysomething-girl crusade, trying to convince all the men in the world that they are selfish and they need to work harder, just so you can feel like it's not your fault.

But what if it were? Would that be terrible? Or would it be the best news you could possibly get?

If it's your fault, you have the power to fix it.

Try running that list of five things... backwards.

Q4ALL: who is responsible for other partner's satisfaction/orgasm? Men? Women? Both?

2 upvotes · 18 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You really are obsessed with whether or not I can get you off, aren't you? Look, when I said I wouldn't be personally helping you out with this, I meant it. For one thing, you probably live over a thousand miles away, and, more importantly, we wouldn't get on.

I mean, there's only so much I could do to keep the mood light and flirtatious while you were droning on about the patriarchy this and misogyny that and microaggressions the other thing.

You're a buzzkill, dear. That's why you can't get off. Because girls get off when they are in their happy place, and you don't have one.

Is it any wonder that inhibited female orgasm is common in an age of feminism? I realize you want this to be men's fault, because you don't want to feel like you're broken, what would you rather have... a grievance? Or an orgasm?

The skill a man would need in order to get you off isn't hitting that narrow target of the precisely correct stimulation below the waistline. It's dealing with the stuff above the neckline that's holding you back. If you, or he, or both of you, could unwind the knots that your emotions are tied in, you'd find that suddenly and mysteriously it was a lot easier to get you going.

I don't know how you lost the ability to love men, but if you want those toe-curling orgasms you keep hearing about, you're going to have to try to regain it.

Too big? Too muscular? Eww! Too veiny?

2 upvotes · 17 March 2018 · /r/askTRP

Why are you listening to what women say instead of watching what they do?

Q4ALL: who is responsible for other partner's satisfaction/orgasm? Men? Women? Both?

2 upvotes · 17 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Probably somewhere like "having difficulty reaching orgasm, and thinking that this must just be the way that women are".

[Q] how come its fine if a guy had sex and have high n count but if women have a high n count they got shame about it?

2 upvotes · 16 March 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Lol whisper just loves educating the little ladies.

It's a tough job, but someone's gotta do it.

If you don't fuck quickly you're not into him, if you do fuck quickly you're a whore.

Exactly. Scylla and Charybdis.

But here's the secret sauce: if you don't fuck him quickly, you're not into him, if you fuck someone else quickly, you're a whore.

Leveraging that subjectivity is key to female strategy.

Bulletproofing shoulders. Keep yourself in the gym and off the sideline.

2 upvotes · 16 March 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

+1

The Art of Getting Things... Without Demanding Them

2 upvotes · 14 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I feel like I have a pretty good understanding of where OP's SO was going with that.

The alignment between selfishness and alpha-male dominance is much stronger in TRP praxeology than it inherently is, because we live in an age of emasculated nu-males being browbeaten into stuff... hence TRP must teach resistance.

This is why showing up with flowers was fine 100 years ago, but equivalent to wearing a collar and leash today.

However, it also gives a key insight into when submissiveness as a strategy is actually working, because the same such men will start relaxing some of these restrictions for individual girls whose behaviour merits it.

GF showed tits to boss and he grabbed them

2 upvotes · 13 March 2018 · /r/askTRP

Stack it on the lawn.

GF showed tits to boss and he grabbed them

2 upvotes · 13 March 2018 · /r/askTRP

What, you don't have a plan with text messaging, or something?

GF showed tits to boss and he grabbed them

2 upvotes · 13 March 2018 · /r/askTRP

You misspelled "ex-GF".

Redpill book recommendations for 17 year old girl?

2 upvotes · 13 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

There's very little point in continuing this conversation, because you're about to get banned.

Next time you wander into a new group, read the rules.

Redpill book recommendations for 17 year old girl?

2 upvotes · 13 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Your ruffled feathers are not an argument.

How I Manage My LTR

2 upvotes · 9 March 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

No, it's only his turn.

This is the key difference between plate spinning and LTR game. Assuming you have thoroughly studied the Bitch Management Hierarchy, you know that LTR is the level of emotional investment.

Where there is investment, there is ownership. When you LTR a girl, you are saying, in effect, that it's no longer just your turn... that she is in fact yours.

If you can't maintain that control, you should not be granting LTR status.

Families and Children

2 upvotes · 7 March 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Surely you know I won't be the one doing the poking :p

Indeed.

Dangling something forbidden didn't work so well for God in his little Eden project, after all.

Why do they always compare me to God?

I'm just saying people would be less receptive to your advice because of it.

Could be. I don't refuse to talk about it if asked. I just don't write it up.

On the whole, parable of the sower. I have enough to do with people who are listening. I don't spend much time with people who want me to persuade them I have something to offer. Ain't selling anything.

Families and Children

2 upvotes · 6 March 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

And just how far do you think being a brat will get you?

The Great Trad Con, and How Not to Get Conned.

2 upvotes · 3 March 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

It mitigates some risks, but it doesn't add an upside.

Submissive Behaviour as Strategy

2 upvotes · 2 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

to the point where men would play "dominant" according to the directions given by his supposed "submissive".

Ew.

I think I need to go take a shower now. Possibly two.

How to reply to nudes/cleavage pics on Snapchat?

2 upvotes · 2 March 2018 · /r/askTRP

Comment on the lighting and composition.

Submissive Behaviour as Strategy

2 upvotes · 1 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

There are two "win conditions" for men. This is one, a good relationship with a submissive, feminine woman is the other.

While some men will have a preference for one or the other, almost every man in existence has some desire for both. Which he will choose in his life tends to depend almost entirely on what he thinks the details of each experience will be like.

Almost no man is such a player that he will dump a perfect "keeper" for the sake of more variety... and almost no man is so devoted that he can't be lured away from a disrespectful girlfriend or wife by sluts.

Submissive Behaviour as Strategy

2 upvotes · 1 March 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

In response to your earlier question, I think /u/girlwithabike nailed it: BDSM is an outgrowth of the frustrated urge for male-led relationships.

Where male dominance is plentiful... conservative religious communities, etc (although see what Dalrock has to say about the feminization of the church), BDSM tends to be less frequent, less intense, and more closeted.

In liberal areas packed with soyboys who can't choose a restaurant without help, much less lead a relationship, women begin to fetishize the male leadership and power they have been deprived of... and sexual fetishes tend to be a self-reinforcing process, because their fulfillment carries a Pavlovian reward. Pretty soon it's not enough for a man to lead the relationship... he must practice (or feign) overt domination or even cruelty to emphasize his power and make it visible.

Historically, RPW as a group has always been extremely reluctant to talk about BDSM (especially on the part of tradcon or religious RPWs), for fear of the entire group being publicly taken for "just a sexual fetish thing".

But if we understand the practice in this context, we see that the reverse is true... femsub BDSM is, in fact, an expression of the nature described by RPW principles. It doesn't drive the belief in those principles, it is driven by the truth of those principles.

It's not for everyone, of course, and there is quite a distinction between those who kinda like it, and those who cannot be satisfied without it, but men who have very high partner count can testify to the truth of the observation that the vast majority of their "conquests" will respond positively to overt gestures of dominance in the bedroom.

The Red Pill is a manifestation of "Riding the Tiger"

2 upvotes · 27 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

As white males fare, so fares civilization.

The Red Pill is a manifestation of "Riding the Tiger"

2 upvotes · 27 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I should certainly hope so.

If the actual readership of TRP isn't more than half losers, then we are failing to reach the people who most need our help.

Send us your neckbeards, your adult anime-watchers, your highschool poetry writers, your scruffy college Marxists, etc, etc.

My gym doesn't have a squat rack. I want to use free weights, not the fucking smith machine. How to I get the bar in squat position from the ground? (At higher weight)

2 upvotes · 25 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

Join an actual gym.

Or build a squat rack and put it in your garage.

Caught husband doing drugs

2 upvotes · 25 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

That's good.

On a practical note, you might want also ask him if would consider doing a heart ultrasound twice a year. One of the risks of high-dose steroids is heart muscle enlargement, since the heart doesn't have anywhere to grow into, and it tends to get constricted if this happens.

I do this occasionally myself, and I'm not running anywhere near as much gear as he is.

Overall, it looks like you approached in right once you calmed down. Men react very poorly to being given orders, but we tend to be much more accommodating if approached with emotional openness and a submissive attitude.

My boyfriend treats me like his mom

2 upvotes · 25 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

The fact that you are so vague about what you want shows me just how uncomfortable you are talking about sex.

It's pretty clear, reading between the lines, that you want rougher and more dominant, maybe try some BDSMish stuff... that's fine, but he's not a mind reader. You're going to have to be able to communicate what you're into.

How much are you currently able to talk about sex with him?

CMV: Much of TRP has some of the most beta mindsets and have underlying flaws in their "self improvement" tactics.

2 upvotes · 24 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, since you weren't even aware of the first, I'm sure your idea of the second will be somewhat risible.

Christian Activist: Non-"Effeminate" Men Would've Tackled the FL School Shooter -- (apparently only women are allowed to care about their own safety; "real men" have to lay down their lives for others)

2 upvotes · 23 February 2018 · /r/MensRights

If we didn't have an effeminate society, those men would have been armed, and could simply have shot him.

It seems to me like plating is just an excuse for men who can't manage being reasonably alpha 24/7

2 upvotes · 22 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Perfect 10s for mental gymnastics... except from the Russian judge.

Seriously, fuck that guy.

Plate sends long text

2 upvotes · 21 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

Brofist.

Going forward, remember that commitment is not your job. You don't owe her commitment any more than she owes you sex. She can no more earn commitment than you can earn sex.

In order to get commitment, she has to do what you do to get sex: Make the other person want it.

You have no responsibilities at all in this area. You don't need to stop her from doing that, nor do you need to provide one iota of help or results. Never promote a woman unless she makes you want to promote her.

How much does going to the gym improve male attractiveness?

2 upvotes · 19 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Of course he can.

By eating food.

To get stronger, he needs to put on weight.

How do I make friends, I like to be a lone wolf but..

2 upvotes · 19 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

I just thought the facts would be needed to get a more accurate picture of me.

I'm trying to help you adopt alpha male speech patterns. Providing unnecessary context is a supplicating and defensive habit.

For example that I don't really enjoy being with people. People are just boring, I'd rather spend that time studying and listening, and reading.

Yes, you are an introvert. That's fine. But one of the reasons you find people distasteful is that you're not good with them, and don't frequently get good results, just as drawing wouldn't be fun if you sucked at it.

But social skills are not optional. Stick it out, and it'll get more interesting as you get better.

How much does going to the gym improve male attractiveness?

2 upvotes · 18 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You have an eating disorder.

Go to 15% bodyfat. Then your lift numbers will improve, you will gain muscle mass, and women will want to have sex with you.

Q4All: What are some rules of thumb for gaining and maintaining consent?

2 upvotes · 17 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Spergs love rules. And lists.

250,000 Subscribers

2 upvotes · 17 February 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

No.

Forward to something else of our own choosing.

Feminists Arnt Radical Enough

2 upvotes · 16 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's an interesting idea, and it could work (is working) for votes.

However, I think you're being a little optimistic about children. People don't usually make personal life decisions for political reasons.

They're not going to have children to "save the white race" or "save western civilization" or "because they are better than soyboys". They're going to have children if they want children. And increasingly, your TRP type of iconoclast "alpha" male just... doesn't.

I've remarked before that men have two win conditions in the SMP: Patriarch, and Libertine, and that which is preferred tends to be whichever is most respected. These days, dudes just get a lot more props for banging two chicks at once and avoiding entanglements than for supporting a wife and some sons and daughters.

Trying to restore respect for fathers as the head of the family, so that man will embrace that model's myriad burdens and responsibilities, is basically the tradcon thing.

There's a couple of related reasons why the tradcons are going nowhere on the social level, however much the conservative side wins political victories.

First, religion isn't going to revive itself. It just has too many factual clashes with science, which can demonstrate concrete results and prove religion wrong.

Second, it wasn't feminism that killed marriage, it was technology. I've written about this one before.

Third, tradcon was already weak when feminism came along... why else would Boomer men have kicked everything over for the (mostly false) promise of some hairy free-love snatch?

Basically, what these all have in common is that tradcon stopped working because it couldn't adapt to changing technological conditions. Feminism is just one of the vultures chewing on its corpse. Killing the vultures doesn't bring the corpse back to life.

I understand what your goals are: close the borders, breed at replacement levels at least, and be willing to unleash the war machine on the uruk-hai if their radicals get violent. All of this would be nice, but there's no viable plan on the table to incentivize this on the individual level. Men who are having children right now are doing so because of cultural inertia, or to appease women.

I'm not saying I want you to fail. I'm saying you're missing a critical piece without which you will fail, and without which I'm not willing to sign on.

Why Men Get Accused of Rape Days After The Fact and Why Women are Right to Do This

2 upvotes · 15 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"How Women Are Children and Have No Agency, Part 3"

Why are TERPERS supporting rape as a sexual strategy?

2 upvotes · 15 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Did you miss the "impotent" part of the moral outrage?

Right now I'm getting my kicks out of pointing out how feminists have implicitly admitted that women are children who don't know what they want.

Could this be why women like to be degraded only during sex?

2 upvotes · 15 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This OP is not capable of writing a ~~thesis~~ sentence

Could this be why women like to be degraded only during sex?

2 upvotes · 15 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Dude, there are some brands of decaf that are just as good as regular coffee.

The manosphere is just a reaction to the massive female privilege

2 upvotes · 14 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yep.

We are a bunch of guys who discovered that bitchy entitled behaviour is attractive to women. And not just the bitchy entitled ones.

When we got over our surprise, we told some other dudes about it. Five years later, here we are.

If red pill is, as you say, abusive, and doesn't work long term, how do you explain the millions of women who stay with abusive partners?

2 upvotes · 13 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think that if you buy into TRP

I kinda wrote it in the first place.

you might have internalized some pretty shitty stereotypes about men yourself

Meh, everyone thinks their attitude is healthy. Except feminists, who think their attitude is healthy at any size.

Something I've noticed about TRPs....

2 upvotes · 13 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The only thing TRP is trying to sell to women is 24 minutes of penis ride.

I got into a fight with my boyfriend and he threatened to leave me

2 upvotes · 13 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

How can we communicate better to avoid this?

There are some extremely silly comments here telling you he is not a good communicator. This might indeed be the case, but how exactly is that helpful to you? Ignore those comments.

Also ignore comments telling you to "dump him". There are one or two of those in every post, usually by the remedial crowd.

In your case, you are pregnant, so dumping him is no longer the best of any reasonable set of options.

Which means that, yes, he is probably a poor communicator, but you still have to be the one to fix it. Just because something isn't your fault doesn't mean it isn't your problem.

So you must get the communication ball rolling by explaining to him that you don't understand or pick up the signals he used to communicate a desire for sex, that you are probably missing them quite often, and could he please explain them to you?

American men are NOT Beta cucks.

2 upvotes · 12 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Priding oneself on moral virtue is a sop to the egos of those who have no abilities or achievements worth speaking of.

No one cares if you are a nice guy who wouldn't cheat on his wife, especially since most guys who say they "wouldn't" cheat on their wives really just couldn't cheat on their wives.

Misfits and Leftovers

2 upvotes · 12 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Being older amplifies the signal on a man's attractiveness.

If a man is above a certain level of attractiveness, he becomes even more so as he ages. If he is below, he becomes even less so as he ages.

I'm thinking about getting my girlfriend & I a vibrator

2 upvotes · 12 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

I recommend adding a Whal coil vibrator to the mix. If the Hitachi is a carpet bombing campaign, this thing is a Barrett 50 cal. Puts down vibration exactly where you want it.

Thirty seconds or so of that, and pretty much any girl will be pleading for permission to come.

How do I maintain frame when I'm not a well liked person?

2 upvotes · 11 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

I got a sense that we were dealing with something cross-cultural here.

It sounds like a lot of the social signals your new environment expects are not those that your old environment trained you in. Since Africa is not some homogenous mass, I can't tell you precisely what those might be.

Observation of others is a key part of taking the pill. Start carefully watching men who are socially dominant in your new environment. What do they do? Why?

Please help: I have 2 questions about TRP

2 upvotes · 11 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

This is why it's a very fine line to walk. Visible sources of validating male attention have to be excluded without excluding inside perspectives into male mindsets and desires.

Unlike men, who can go out and seduce a whole lot of women and figure what appeals to them, women don't have a broad pool of test subjects to develop ideas with. Which means they have to be more sophisticated about gathering information... can't just watch what men do, because a successful woman only has one test subject.

Please help: I have 2 questions about TRP

2 upvotes · 11 February 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Because sometimes the big strong terpy men like to come over here and teach us little ladies a thing or two about what's what, and god forbid we show the back bone to call bullshit on their comments.

And most often it's men whom their fellows at TRP are not particularly impressed with, trying to be a big fish in a smaller pond.

TRP teaches how to talk to women in a way that gets a positive response. These men are spotted and objected to precisely because they do not have that skill, and, in fact, on many occasions, they are trying to hang out in RPW because they think that will free them of the necessity for developing it.

The reverse is of course true, since RPW is focused on teaching women to understand human dynamics for use in their own strategy.

This means they generally have an easier time spotting some froot loop who thinks that "men should be dominant" is a description of what he should get, rather than of the skills he should develop.

On unplugging all the way: You need to chew before swallowing.

2 upvotes · 9 February 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

I feel like you are advocating for fence-sitting, that anybody who "takes a side" in politics or religion is a plugged-in sheep.

Having an opinion is different than taking a side, and both are different from following an ideology.

The enemy of your enemy is not necessarily your friend. Neither is the man who agrees with you on an issue.

On unplugging all the way: You need to chew before swallowing.

2 upvotes · 8 February 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

"We're all individuals!"

On unplugging all the way: You need to chew before swallowing.

2 upvotes · 8 February 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

even when talking about such taboo thinkers as Jung(who is hated as the rebellious Goyim)

Blue Pill Peterson

2 upvotes · 8 February 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

There is no messiah. Eliminate the empty socket in your head labeled "insert messiah here".

Why do non red pilld folks believe all of the red pill is made up of only undesirable, socially stunted rejects who don't lift?

2 upvotes · 7 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because they need to.

It's so much easier to assimilate than accommodate.

How the fuck do some of you manage to lift everyday?

2 upvotes · 7 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

Anyone can lift everyday. All that have to do is lift light shit that's easy to lift.

No stress = no need for recovery.

Jordan Peterson is not your friend.

2 upvotes · 6 February 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

banning too many people.

Ya know, all of those words are English, and have clear meanings, but when you put them together in that order, I have no idea what you are talking about.

Jordan Peterson is not your friend.

2 upvotes · 6 February 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Stay here long enough, and we'll make a mod of you.

Then you will.

(Mwwhahahahahahha. Ha. Ha.)

Observation about girls and lifting

2 upvotes · 4 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

- Eat for the body you want, not the body you have.
- Sleep a LOT. No, even more than that.
- Lift HEAVY. Volume is not a substitute for load.
- Periodization.
- Persistence.
- Roids.

Observation about girls and lifting

2 upvotes · 4 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

You don't look like an androgynous gay anime character anymore, and you don't look like a man yet.

Stop trying to be jacked, eat something, and get big. Adult males weigh over 200 pounds.

Any chance left to save this LTR?

2 upvotes · 3 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

If you have to ask the question, you know the answer.

How attractive do you have to be?

2 upvotes · 3 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

I am ~~incapable of understanding~~ unwilling to understand the nuances of intergender communication... So I would prefer it very much if this whole process could be reduced to an equation.

FTFY.

Male attraction vs. Female attraction: a trans perspective

2 upvotes · 3 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Welcome to Upside Down Clown World, where inferences drawn from the mentally form theories for diagnosing the healthy.

Old acquaintances wanting to reconnect

2 upvotes · 1 February 2018 · /r/askTRP

Why do you feel that you owe them your time?

Differences between real Alpha and fake Alpha

2 upvotes · 1 February 2018 · /r/TheRedPill

Be more of a jackass.

How do men avoid the kind of women the redpill talks about?

2 upvotes · 1 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Become gay.

What's with the casual sex obsession?

2 upvotes · 1 February 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

do most guys really want to be a modern Genghis khan and have sex with as many women as possible?

What a terrible fate that would be.

Blue Pill/feminism has failed in it's response to broken lost men who need a father figure - hence Cernovich, J Petersen ETC

2 upvotes · 31 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I wasn't the one who selected those words.

Read some of the older feminist manifestos. Stuff from the 70s. Groups are always more open about their wish list when they are not mainstream.

After doing quite a bit of research, I can definitely relate to a lot of the Red Pill philosophy from my life and what I've seen. But is the bitter anger towards women necessary?

2 upvotes · 30 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They need it for fuel.

Would you enter a relationship with a single parent?

2 upvotes · 29 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So... one?

CMV: Captain/first mate ideology is just a polite way of saying I can't be happy in a relationship unless I have my way 100% of the time.

2 upvotes · 26 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I love this, and I'm stealing it, and it's mine now.

Does the imperical evidence suggest that, overwhelmingly, AWALT? What evidence suggests NAWALT?

2 upvotes · 26 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The appeal to consequences fallacy is "believe this, or something bad will happen", so not quite.

Serious question - Are many RedPillers mentally ill?

2 upvotes · 26 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

When something upsets you, you got three options: learn to live with it, get rid of it, or avoid it.

Since you don't want to do the one, and don't have the persuasion skills to do the other, the third is indeed probably your best bet.

However, in order to do that, the first step not to carry it around in your own head, rent free. Which means your post, or indeed this conversation, are probably not a good place to start.

Q4Women: Would you rather have an unattractive man just for yourself or share an attractive man with others?

2 upvotes · 25 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

OP is not exactly a paragon of communication skill, that's why.

However, since you clearly have the communication skill to figure out what the intended question was, why not address it as such?

CMV: Captain/first mate ideology is just a polite way of saying I can't be happy in a relationship unless I have my way 100% of the time.

2 upvotes · 25 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

RPW talks about "Captain/First Mate" constantly.

TRP almost never uses the phrase.

Explain.

Serious question - Are many RedPillars mentally ill?

2 upvotes · 25 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I feel like I should hand in my man card

Go ahead.

Why can't women just tell guys what they want?

2 upvotes · 25 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why on earth would they do that?

Women have no incentive to be direct.

Why do even very attractive men choose to be monogamous?

2 upvotes · 23 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No.

That's the most common reason, but the more attractive the man, the less it works... because the balance of power in the relationship shifts to the man. The absolute top men don't worry about losing their girl; their girl is worried about losing them.

So there are other reasons. Some would be:

1. Protectiveness towards the feelings of the girl they are with.
2. Social pressure from other males (depends on culture).
3. Preferability of the girl they are with.

This last one needs some exposition. The more ability a man has to talk girls into bed, the more ability he also has to make girls conform to his desires over time. Hot random chicks are good for variety, but his girl will wear the nun costume and say the rosary as he spansks her butt with a ruler.

Question about terms (because debate needs agreed terms): what do you mean when you say 'sexualize'?

2 upvotes · 22 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think it's very telling that he cringed instead of laughing.

Laughter is the appropriate response to that which we find ridiculous.

Cringing is a fear response.

Hmmmmm...

Does Stoicism work for feminine women the way it usually does for masculine men? + On the inability to be vulnerable even with loved ones

2 upvotes · 22 January 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

Overthinking is one hell of a drug.

Do women not want to be treated like objects? If not, then why do they act like them?

2 upvotes · 22 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women aren't objectified, because women are objects.

The subject of a sentence acts. The object is acted upon.

That which is "objectified" is acted upon to make it an object. If women weren't objects already, you couldn't objectify them.

Should girls be brought up to be sweet, submissive pleasers or independent, assertive achievers?

2 upvotes · 21 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If women were independent, assertive achievers, you wouldn't have to bring them up to be that way. You wouldn't be able to stop them.

Is every single woman into a D/s relationship?

2 upvotes · 21 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Femsub BDSM is pretty much mainstream. It's just a question of how far you take it. Women start wanting to take it farther when they are in a society filled with weak, feminized men... large numbers of them begin to crave more and more extreme examples of the opposite.

Meditate. Estrogen supplements. A vegan diet. Penis chastity.

2 upvotes · 21 January 2018 · /r/MensRights

That would indeed be funny, but I think the best advertisement for steak is probably... steak.

Is someone "broken" if they don't associate "sex with love"?

2 upvotes · 19 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't know what you mean by "perverse" in this context.

The natural state of man is that most men are undesirable absent some social or economic reason to fuck them

2 upvotes · 19 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is equivalent to saying that women only desire the top small fraction of males.

Which is what TRP has been saying for years now.

Men haven't completely considered the Consequences of true Female sexual Agency.

2 upvotes · 19 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is why rape is a female fantasy. Not because all that many women would actually enjoy it, but because almost every woman fantasizes about being so urgently desired.

The truth is, various kinks absent, most men would vastly prefer a willing partner. And most women aren't nearly hot enough to be worth the trouble.

Should Trump step down from the presidency for the allegations of sexual assault against him?

2 upvotes · 18 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think you're most likely safe anyway.

Men haven't completely considered the Consequences of true Female sexual Agency.

2 upvotes · 18 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

OP: "Men are lurking everywhere, waiting to RAPE ME! RAPE! ME!"

Men everywhere: "No thanks, we're good."

How to go from incel to chad

2 upvotes · 17 January 2018 · /r/askTRP

Read. Learn. And then try stuff out yourself.

Practice talking to girls. Talk to them every day. Just say "hi" to girls you don't know. Practice your eye contact.

Keep working on basic stuff. Do not let discomfort stop you.

What is your and your captain's opinions on navel piercings?

2 upvotes · 17 January 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

This is the exact advice I give to men on TRP:

Having preexisting body modifications is generally an indication that a woman is not LTR material. The more permanent, and the more counter to cultural norms, the modification is, the stronger the indicator of LTR unsuitability.

If she has unusual piercings, especially facial, or tattoos, especially large ones or many of them, she will generally be easier to get sex from, but you will tire of her bullshit faster.

There are two reasons a woman modifies her body... to get attention from men, or to please A man. The latter is actually an indicator of good LTR value, but you don't care about that, because such women are off the market, and LESS likely to cheat with you. The former is a red flag. While all women want attention from men, and this is normal, we have found from simple experience that there's something special about body modification as opposed to general beautification efforts.

Such woman are, to put it simply, trouble. The more tattoos and piercings, the more trouble. While we know this empirically, rather than having a strong theory, our best guess is that it is an indicator of poor impulse control. This gels with the observation that such women tend to have more volatile tempers, use drugs more, make worse life decisions, and cheat more.

Verdict: Pierced ears are fine. One other discrete piercing is borderline, but okay. More than that, or facial piercings, or tattoos, ONS or plate only.

Does dread game work on men?

2 upvotes · 17 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If they have oneitis, or lack abundance mentality, sure.

Is there any evidence that spermjacking is common? It's something MRAs and TRPers bring up a lot but I haven't seen any evidence to confirm that it is at all widespread.

2 upvotes · 17 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's probably pretty common... "Oops, I'm pregnant! Teeheee!"

The fact that it is not a crime, and does not release a man from liability, is a symptom of something.

Legalizing prostitution?

2 upvotes · 17 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The vast majority of prostitutes aren't slaves. Remember that the left is very clever at thought control using weasel words.

They say "sex trafficking" meaning the trade in sex.

Then they say "human trafficking" meaning slavery.

Then they say "trafficking", hoping you will mistake the trade in sex for the trade in slaves.

Ever notice how the one sex act the left wants to keep illegal (while legitimizing promiscuity, gay sex, sex with kids, sex with animals, etc) is prostitution? It's because unlike these others, prostitution works against their anti-family agenda.

As they have defeated tradcon values (which were against prostitution), they needed an another ideological foil to use against the libertarian argument of "let women sell sex if they want".

So they came up with "trafficking", which basically says "no woman wants to sell sex. Eeeeeevil men are forcing them into it". They pretended a minor problem is the entire industry.

Should girls be brought up to be sweet, submissive pleasers or independent, assertive achievers?

2 upvotes · 17 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Should" is just a one-word synonym for "I want".

Thoughts on talking about sex openly to a prospective hookup?

2 upvotes · 16 January 2018 · /r/askTRP

Are you finished salving your wounded ego?

Good.

Now let's focus on this bit:

I have brought up sex before directly and it's worked, both in person and in text. I got the impression it wasn't optimal, that she was fucking me because she was attracted to other aspects of me that were strong enough to overcome this hole in my game. So it's worked worked before but I have my doubts it'll work on average,

So, you already knew this was a bad idea which doesn't work, and that, at best, you can get away with it by overcoming it with other stuff.

So ask yourself why the hell you are attached to doing that which you know is less effective.

The most likely answer is that content communication (where you literally say exactly what you mean, in the content of what you say) is vastly more comfortable for you than process communication (where your message is contained in the way you say things).

This is a symptom of literal Asperger's Syndrome. Not grieving-people-by-calling-them-sperg-Asperger's-Syndrome (if you call someone a sperg, this is process communication for "You are acting, in this instance, like you are autistic. Stop that."), but literally the thing itself.

AS is not a death sentence for your sex life... plenty of AS dudes learn to hide it, act normal, and get laid. But overcoming AS means going outside your comfort zone, because AS puts your comfort zone in the wrong place for getting laid.

You asked the question you asked because you already knew this.

Learning how to speak skillfully/gracefully?

2 upvotes · 16 January 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

You cannot control whether you have it, and having it without expressing it is useless.

The trick is track the cause of the belief far enough back to find common ground.

Thoughts on talking about sex openly to a prospective hookup?

2 upvotes · 15 January 2018 · /r/askTRP

I'm very averse to manipulation, performing, lying, etc.

No one gives a shit. Least of all women.

it would seem natural to suggest having sex directly

It seems natural to you. Because you have Asperger's Syndrome.

What are the negatives to this approach?

1. It doesn't work.
2. It doesn't work.
3. It doesn't work.

What would be the negatives of introducing the idea of sex via text?

1. It doesn't work.
2. She now knows you have Asperger's Syndrome.
3. You get to read about yourself on /r/creepyPMs

I've only done this when it was mutually obvious that we'd end up fucking.

... so long as you didn't make a bonehead socially retarded move like this, you mean.

I'm think of floating the idea but I don't want to fuck it up.

You have Asperger's Syndrome.

Go read up on it. Hide it, it is a disability, not a badge of honour.

And learn to talk like other human beings.

Should career women look for more feminine men to settle down with ?

2 upvotes · 14 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Masculine women are not attracted to feminine men.

Encouraging men to be more open about their feelings

2 upvotes · 14 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Following women's advice on how to be a man isn't going to end well.

Just look at the men who did.

The people who claim that redpill only attracts low quality women and damaged women: How are they much different from niceguys saying women love assholes and badboys?

2 upvotes · 14 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes.

Intelligent, well-adjusted women can be better for relationships, but they aren't any better (or worse) for sex.

And I don't just wander around wanting relationships. I want them when a particular woman makes me want them, in much the same way that women don't just wander around wanting sex, but want it when a man makes them want it with him.

So, what this claim essentially says is "Your sex-getting technique works mostly on women who might not make good wives."

That's why it's a sex-getting technique, not a wife-getting technique.

(Of course, the claim is wrong, this stuff works just fine on girls from trailer parks to PhD programs. And in fact, the most mentally stable women of all are the ones who can read TRP and not feel hurt or insulted.)

Why do people think women are being tricked/manipulated into casual sex?

2 upvotes · 13 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

She is an adult who can make her own decisions

Nope.

Women are not adults. They are like children who never grow up.

Liberals and feminists and other whack jobs of a similar stripe are forever insisting that women are mature and wise and competent and powerful (in a somewhat shrill and desperate tone), but their insistence on "protecting" them from being "influenced" or "pressured" reveals that even they don't really believe it.

But they are really, really trying not to think about that, because the implications horrify them.

Q4ALL: Should marriage be made illegal?

2 upvotes · 13 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Doesn't matter. It's been made irrelevant. I'd give it about three generations.

Unless the Democrats win more elections. In which case the third world, and its values, will cover the globe.

The people who claim that redpill only attracts low quality women and damaged women: How are they much different from niceguys saying women love assholes and badboys?

2 upvotes · 13 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If this were true, so what?

Psychologically damaged and/or stupid women can be just as good in bed, and just as pretty to look at.

Red Pillers do you realize that women are not the reason why the free market declined?

2 upvotes · 13 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I would recommend you to read this book.

Iván Tibor Berend (commonly known as Iván T. Berend; born 11 December 1930) is a Hungarian historian and teacher who served as President of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences from 1985 until 1990. He was a member of Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party's Central Committee between 1988 and 1989. Since 1990 he has been living in Los Angeles and teaching at UCLA. In 2015, he was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

I think we're done here.

Why do people take issue with being in a relationship?

2 upvotes · 13 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Men who think relationships are universally to be avoided have had shitty relationships.

Men who think relationships are desirable at all costs have shitty seduction skills.

QForMen: What are females suppose to call males "creepy" or "creep" for?

2 upvotes · 13 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't know what people "should" mean, because "should" is just a way to use one word to say "I want".

I know what it really means. It means "this man is unattractive and I am afraid I will not be able to get him to go away".

This fear can be of something as serious as rape and murder, or of something as trivial as social awkwardness.

Why is "blue pill" so obsessed with trying to avoid "red pill" guys?

2 upvotes · 13 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't really care. Sure hope they succeed, though.

Waist Trainers

2 upvotes · 12 January 2018 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'm a powerlifter, and I've found my waist has taken on a bit more of a boxy shape

Perhaps you just need to do a cut phase?

How do i break up with my gf?

2 upvotes · 12 January 2018 · /r/askTRP

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ABXtWqmArUU>

What the hell am I doing??? Worst case of oneitis ever.

2 upvotes · 11 January 2018 · /r/askTRP

Well at first I was open to the freedom that came with that as well. The idea of some random after years of monogamy was appealing.

There has to be a double standard for this.

Why? Because many men are capable of desiring, and even loving, two different women at once. Or more.

A woman is generally only attracted to whatever man she currently feels the most love for.

A man can have an affair and still love his wife. A woman who has an affair does not love her husband... in fact, she would not have had the affair had she not first ceased to love her husband.

She would never have brought this up had she still loved you.

A man must be able to walk away from any relationship when he perceives that she no longer loves him. No matter how much he is dying on the inside. Loving a woman who does not love you back is slavery, and unlike the slavery of a woman to a man, it is not tempered by any sort of protective instinct.

Woman who do not love you back would happily see you burn.

Your relationship was over the moment she brought it up. If she still loved you, but was okay with you getting some strange, she would have said that. But a woman only wants some strange if she doesn't love you anymore.

What the hell am I doing??? Worst case of oneitis ever.

2 upvotes · 11 January 2018 · /r/askTRP

This is when my wife told me she wants an open relationship. I agreed to it, and went through 3 years of her fucking new dudes every week or month. Multiple times she said she would never be monogamous with me.

I stopped reading here.

What the fuck do you expect me to tell you?

You already know what I am going to tell you.

And you're going to ignore it, because if you weren't, you would already have done what you need to do.

Once a woman has had sex with you, and then had sex with someone else afterwards, it's over. She no longer respects you. It's not fixable.

At least you will know how and why you ruined your life.

Q4All: Why do so many men have such low self esteem about their looks or personality and what can we do to fix this?

2 upvotes · 10 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, I see what you were doing now. You were starting up conversations for your male friends, then becoming puzzled when they didn't follow up, meet her in person, and seal the deal.

Well, worry not. You did your best, and that's all that matters.

Q4All: Why do so many men have such low self esteem about their looks or personality and what can we do to fix this?

2 upvotes · 10 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't know what "partially" means. Have you gotten anyone laid?

Suggestion: Purple Pill Flair should have to be earned.

2 upvotes · 9 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Human intelligence didn't evolve for the purpose of having original thoughts. It evolved in a self-reinforcing spiral with increasing complex hominid social networks, for the purpose of navigating those networks.

Original thought is an accidental byproduct. Most humans don't have it, and even fewer need it. In fact, it can be a career-limiting and even dangerous hobby. Other humans would much rather be told something they already believe than something they haven't thought of yet.

How are men taught entitlement to women and sex?

2 upvotes · 8 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They aren't.

The reason we think that they are, is that they aren't. And the reason that we don't think women feel entitled to sex, is because they do.

People do not notice things that are normal, they notice things that aren't.

RP IN LOVE

2 upvotes · 8 January 2018 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You don't stop loving women because you are aware of their essential nature, you silly person.

You just stop projecting dumb ideals onto them.

When a Girl Tells You Whats Wrong

2 upvotes · 31 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

Women instinctively submit to, and obey, men.

Men instinctively protect women.

But neither of these instincts is all-powerful. Modern women have used social pressure on each other to suppress this instinct. This places men at a disadvantage, because men are still trying to play fair while women are trying to win.

TRP uses misogynistic social conditioning to suppress the male protective instinct and level the playing field again, albeit with a more cutthroat form of the game.

That's the whole secret of what we really are. And I can give it away right here, because no one who hates TRP will believe me.

"You look like Ed Sheeran"

2 upvotes · 20 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

"Shhhhhhh... I'm ducking the paparazzi" (Agree and amplify)

"Who?" {Make them explain in exhaustive detail who the hell this guy is, whether his music is any good, etc.}
(Pressure flip)

How women getting passes for crimes can truly destroy people's lives: what it was like being raised by a convicted sexual offender

2 upvotes · 17 December 2017 · /r/MensRights

Could be a bad example. I'm not an expert on Saudi Arabia.

Point still stands. People are quicker to see what they expect than what is there.

Evaluating cases on their individual circumstances requires a level of mental sophistication and abstract thought that most humans are simply not capable of mustering on demand.

GF got preg, she is keeping kid, all of my frame is slipping

2 upvotes · 15 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

It's not yours.

18m/ i just shaved my head because of balding, and shit tests are FLYING in

2 upvotes · 15 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

Shit tests are often IOIs. Remember that girls who aren't considering mating with you have no need to test your fitness as a mate.

Am I doing something to make these girls lose interest?

2 upvotes · 12 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

The more of a ho a girl is, the more apt she is to mistake enthusiasm for neediness, and kindness for weakness.

Try being a bit more aloof.

Shittest? Doubt its her actual boyfriend

2 upvotes · 12 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

Not enough info to see what's really going on.

Chick is probably trouble.

Respond "Cool story bro" and see what happens. For the lulz.

Soon to turn 18 years old, don't like my body, want to make a change. Advice? (pics included)

2 upvotes · 12 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

Bulk.

Advice on Pre-Gym Workout

2 upvotes · 8 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

Do sets of 25 "Sea Lions" (stand on a Pilates ball, balancing a 5lbs kettlebell on your nose, clapping your hands, while barking like a seal).

Or, alternatively, search "Mark Rippetoe" on youtube.

How does TRP handle the situation where their girl looks "down," or "different"

2 upvotes · 8 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

Depends on her Bitch Management Hierarchy level.

How do you deal with mildly sociopathic/low self-esteem men

2 upvotes · 4 December 2017 · /r/askTRP

That's not a sociopath.

That's just garden variety envy. Not worth your time to even address.

Mens Rights Is a Hate Movement Apparently

2 upvotes · 2 December 2017 · /r/MensRights

Fire her, and don't see any more female psychologists.

Q4All: When TRP says "blue pill" do they mean liberal?

2 upvotes · 26 November 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This whole post is predicated on the idea that "conservative" is a political position.

It is not. It is a political coalition... an alliance of several different groups whose only common agenda is stopping the authoritarian left.

Is Calling Out Toxic Femininity Misogynistic?

2 upvotes · 26 November 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Misogynist used to mean someone who doesn't like women.

Now it means someone who some woman doesn't like.

Interpret accordingly.

I am 23 and and want a REAL MAN (I like older men) but they are impatient and just want sex?

2 upvotes · 23 November 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

Well, I'm certain that all the REAL men will just be lining up for a chance at a woman who views them and their desires in such a positive light.

Think of all the fun they could have being criticized, denigrated, and viewed with suspicion.

New to RPW! Advice for young disabled women please!

2 upvotes · 11 November 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

Okay, so you really don't have a clear mental picture of what men want.

So far you have just tried to make yourself pretty, and tried fake random shit with your social presentation to make them see you as "more adult".

So the first thing you need to work on is understanding men, and treating their wants and needs with respect.

For example, this is the second time I've seen you insult men in general, without even being aware that you are doing it.

Education, Profession, and the RP woman

2 upvotes · 11 November 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

High value guys (especially the typical RP guy that isn't looking for an LTR anyway) are not going to care about those if her other attributes are not on point.

A RPW should avoid players and men that do not want a LTR or marriage.

While this is not entirely without merit, it promotes a dangerous attitude.

The word "player" is a very easy trap to fall into, one that is not unlike a drunken man at a bar calling a woman a "lesbian" because she rejected his fumbling advances. He salves his own wounded ego by implying she would have rejected every man, because doesn't want sex with men at all.

Similarly, a woman who dismisses a man as a "player" is insinuating that his lack of desire for a relationship with her has nothing to do with her, but is simply because he isn't open to a relationship at all.

Since men do not have ticking biological clocks, most men do not look for relationships unless sex is scarce enough for them that they "put up with" one simply to have available sexual release on lockdown. They are simply open to one, some more so, some less.

Men are the gatekeepers of relationships, and it is the woman's job to pass that gate.

Now, some gates may be so well defended that they are not worth the effort of assailing, given the appearance of the city inside. Such men may rightly be dismissed as not worth the trouble, and best left to women who don't know slutty behaviour is bad for them.

But the use of the word "player" encourages women not to learn, and to repeat their mistakes. After all, if the problem was all him, there's nothing you can do but hope the next man is better.

If the fault is partially yours, you can change what you do in the hopes of better results.

New to RPW! Advice for young disabled women please!

2 upvotes · 11 November 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

Also, I agree high school boys are dumb so silly and immature but hopefully that will change once I leave.

Well, I cannot for the life of me understand why those boys aren't lining up to date you.

Who wouldn't want to get in on some of that "scathing contempt" action?

New to RPW! Advice for young disabled women please!

2 upvotes · 11 November 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

You're asking for "advice" prematurely. Advice is "what to do to get what I want".

But all that advice has to be informed by how men will react, which comes from what men want and how men see things.

So if you want men to consider you as a possibility, you have to understand what they want before any ideas about what to do can help you.

So, let's start with your current understanding. What do you think it is that men want that they don't believe you offer?

[Discussion] Is "Would you like to practice getting sexually assaulted?" a good pickup line?

2 upvotes · 8 November 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The TRP answer would be "try it and see, then tell the rest of us in a field report".

what is wrong with women sleeping around during their 20's.

2 upvotes · 8 November 2017 · /r/askTRP

Is it bad for society if women sleep around during their 20's

I don't know what "society" is. I only see a bunch of people.

Hot Girl [verified] wants to see my dick - we send nudes - I invite her over - then she never talks to me again?

2 upvotes · 7 November 2017 · /r/askTRP

This shit happens all the time.

Women do all sorts of things, for all sorts of reasons. Stop wondering why. Stop caring. Replace woman.

Am I being a little bitch?

2 upvotes · 7 November 2017 · /r/askTRP

Yes, you absolutely are being a bitch.

Hammer this through your tiny brain:

Women are inherently submissive.

She can only love if you if she respects you. If she respects you, she will want to please you, and she will do as you say.

But you must say.

Women will not take the initiative and figure out what you want. They want you to be happy, but they are waiting for you to tell them how.

All you would have had to do was say "Your turn." Or simply take her head and guide it down.

If you dominate and train her properly, a woman will put endless effort into pleasing you. But she will not put in thought and initiative. You must provide that.

Balance between being a hot commodity and being loyal

2 upvotes · 29 October 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

Your problem is how you feel, and what you are afraid of.

"Talking to you more" is just an idea you had for what you want him to do about it. If you demand he give you more time or attention, then, even if he does, it will feel like a chore to him. Not gonna make things better.

You see, relationship building is not about "making a man do what you want". It's about making him want you around, and want you to be happy.

You don't want to make him do something, you want to make him feel something.

If you can make him feel a certain way, you still have no control over his actions... but you won't need any, because if whatever he decides to do comes from the right emotional state, you're pretty much guaranteed to like it.

So you don't say "I want you to pay more attention to me" (controlling), or even "I am sad because you are spending less time with me." (implied suggestion).

Instead, you might try something like "I'm scared you're losing interest in me. I am doing something to annoy you? Or is there something you want that I'm not doing? Or are you just busy?"

Notice you are deliberately suggesting that you are to blame, here. Why? Because that takes him off the defensive. Now it's not him having to explain his actions. It's him having the opportunity to talk about what's on his mind, or tell you what he wants you to do.

It turns what you said from a demand into an offer.

Remember that you don't want or need to control him. Or have the upper hand. Or the moral high ground. Or to win an argument. Or to get him to do anything. Or look good.

All you need to make him do is feel something. Even you come off looking like a stupid insecure silly childish girl, if he likes you better at the end of the conversation than at the beginning, then you have won the prize you were after.

How far does the idea of "Red Pill didn't invent the concept of BLANK" go?

2 upvotes · 29 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

As far as you can get people to listen, I suppose.

Balance between being a hot commodity and being loyal

2 upvotes · 29 October 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

if your partner is too sure about your loyalty, then there's no reason for him to make an effort

Unless you want your partner to be happy about your relationship, instead of simply "physically present".

How do I let men know that I'm interested?

2 upvotes · 29 October 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

Well that's confusing considering the men on the main sub reddit for TRP are literally only looking for women to have sex with.

Getting to sex is their job. Getting from sex to relationship is your job.

Any woman can catch a dick. The trick is not to drop it afterwards.

For me personally, if you aren't sleeping with a large number of guys then what's the harm in sleeping with someone? They enjoy it, I enjoy it, doesn't seem so bad.

Around now, 35 year old you wants to punch 19 year old you right in the mouth.

Do you believe that "Misogyny" is necessary in order for human evolution to occur?

2 upvotes · 27 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't mistake evolution for something that has a coherent direction.

Afraid of being alone forever...

2 upvotes · 26 October 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

I don't like how people jump to conclusions about how I've wasted my best years.

I'm not here to make you make you comfortable. I'm here to get your head screwed on straight.

Right now, I'm hearing a lot of excuses about how nothing is your fault. About how you were just the kindest, sweetest, most perfect little angel, and big bad mean men took advantage of you.

But we're not just listening to what you say. We're watching how you say it. If your problem was really that you were too docile, kind, submissive, trusting, and wonderful in every way, you would be having trouble not blaming yourself... not trying desperately to convince everyone that it wasn't your fault.

I'm beginning to suspect you are unteachable. But I'll tell you a secret.

Blame == power.

Anything that is your fault, you have the power to change. Anything that isn't, you don't.

So if you can't find anything that's your fault, if you are a feather on the wind, blown wherever it takes you, then you will never be able to change your life, you will be stuck getting, over and over again, what you got the last time.

Q4all: Are you dark triad?

2 upvotes · 23 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, agent Starling... you think you can dissect me with this blunt little tool?

You're so ambitious, aren't you?

You know what you look like to me, with your good bag and your cheap shoes? You look like a rube. A well scrubbed, hustling rube with a little taste. Good nutrition's given you some length of bone, but you're not more than one generation from poor white trash, are you, Agent Starling? And that accent you've tried so desperately to shed: pure West Virginia. What is your father, dear? Is he a coal miner? Does he stink of the lamp? You know how quickly the boys found you... all those tedious sticky fumblings in the back seats of cars... while you could only dream of getting out. Getting anywhere. Getting all the way to the FBI.

CMV: Evo-psych needs to be based on facts and not on feelings.

2 upvotes · 23 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Your analysis of TRP needs to be based on facts and not feelings.

What does it even mean when TRP claims to be "amoral"?

2 upvotes · 23 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Nope. He was using what he thought was a highly moral strategy, in fact, a moral imperative.

Selfish people can be assholes, but it takes someone filled with great moral certainty to commit an atrocity.

Q4RP: Quote a Shit Test

2 upvotes · 22 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

To give a complete picture, it has also gone from meaning "someone who dislikes racial minorities" to "someone who racial minorities dislike". Just as misogynist now means "male who a woman is angry at".

America is prone to witch-hunts, all throughout its history, from the literal witch hunts in pre-Revolution Salem, through communists in the 50s, to racists, sexists, homophobes, etc, today.

The basic mechanic is that an "evil" group is identified, whether it be a serious threat (communist), an everpresent problem (pedo), a harmless eccentricity (racist), or something that doesn't exist at all (witch).

Just what it is is not important. What's important is that once some poor sucker gets targeted, everyone else throws stones as hard as they can, not because they give a shit, but because if they don't, they are on the short list for next target.

Even when the underlying problem is something serious when real (communist), rather than something fictitious (witch), it really doesn't matter, because whether someone is targeted actually only bears the faintest relationship to whether they are guilty, and the intensity of the persecution bears no relationship at all to the intensity of the offense.

A communist witchhunt will, for example, treat unworldly and bespectacled undergraduate Marxist sympathizers almost as harshly as the Symbionese Liberation Army.

What distinguishes a witch hunt from criminal justice, or from a culture defending itself from degeneration, is several common points.

- Witch hunts use crowdsourcing both for determination of guilt, and application of punishment, rather than an defined process with a single responsible entity controlling it.
- Witch hunts dispense with the notion of individual guilt for individual harm, instead holding all members of the target group responsible for all negative effects, real or imagined, of the target behaviour.
- Witch hunts deliberately and openly dispense with the idea of any sort of due process to avoid false positives, by alleging that such things carry the risk of false negatives, which are held to be far more dangerous.
- Witch hunts focus on thoughts, speech, or association, rather than on specific actions. Association with a target, or sometimes even membership in the same demographic group, is sufficient to identify the next target.

"Approved" Red Pill alternative? The BlackDragon Blog?

2 upvotes · 22 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

To elaborate: anything noteworthy or interesting you do will cause someone to hate you.

If no one hates you, you are the human equivalent of a puffed rice cake... boring, utterly inoffensive, tastes like cardboard. If you cannot stand to be hated, you are stuck doing only things which would keep you in this state.

The less fucks you give about impressing people you don't know, the more shit you will get done.

When discussing "average" looks, how should we control for age?

2 upvotes · 22 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why should we control for age?

"Approved" Red Pill alternative? The BlackDragon Blog?

2 upvotes · 22 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But I quite like like Blackdragon as an alternative that has red pill stuff, but I can read with a clear conscience.

So long as you are worried about your conscience, nothing you read is gonna help.

You will never get ahead, accomplish anything noteworthy, or even attain long term happiness until you are willing to be hated.

I [32F] never had a serious relationship. Will men assume I've been promiscuous?

2 upvotes · 22 October 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

What exactly does that have to do with anything, even if it were true?

We are talking about how she will be perceived. Anything that is unusual makes people wonder why. If she is unable to demonstrate an innocuous reason, men will imagine less innocuous ones.

Fucking ugly girls?? Full of regret

2 upvotes · 20 October 2017 · /r/askTRP

You're a man. You don't get fucked, you fuck. It doesn't rub off.

Feminist author Alice Randall now opposes To Kill A Mockingbird in schools because "the text encourages boys and girls to believe women lie about being raped."

2 upvotes · 19 October 2017 · /r/MensRights

Next up, reinstatement of lynch mobs.

So in Red Pill standards, once you're in the friendzone you can't get out?

2 upvotes · 16 October 2017 · /r/askTRP

Once you are in the friendzone, it's not worth getting out.

Your shared history counts against you rather than for you. It's easier to move on to the next girl.

People come here to debate the differences between the Red and Blue Pills, but..... does debating it actually prove anything?

2 upvotes · 13 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Debating doesn't prove anything because bloopers' objection to TRP isn't an allegation of fact, it's an allegation of moral imperative.

"This is wicked, and you must stop" is about as provable as "horses are pretty".

Q4MEN: How do you expect your wife to contribute financially?

2 upvotes · 12 October 2017 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Wife"?

Heh.

No. Marriage isn't a contract now. It's a signed sheet of blank paper onto which terms are written by a third party, on dissolution.

No thank you.

How to be good in the bedroom without much experience?

2 upvotes · 9 October 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

So I've heard.

Sounds like you're mostly just nervous.

Article in the WSJ "Cheap Sex and the Decline of Marriage"

2 upvotes · 4 October 2017 · /r/RedPillWomen

As usual, tradcons (traditional conservatives) confuse cause and effect when looking at social trends.

Marriage isn't declining because sex is becoming cheaper.

Sex is becoming cheaper because marriage is declining.

Why You Should Join A Fraternity In College

2 upvotes · 4 September 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

Obviously social retards won't be the general manager of a McDonald's; they'll be the one's innovating modern medicine, engineering spacecraft, and actually making a difference in the world.

This is a nerd fantasy. Most successful, well known technologists and innovators are not social retards. They have technological prowess and at least a moderate amount of social skills. Also, they are generally at least moderately physically fit, and have other talents as well.

Losers will often kid themselves with this sort of false equivalence...

"I watch anime, therefore I am a nerd. Bill Gates is a nerd. Therefore I am Bill Gates."

Just like any other group, technologists and nerds have losers and winners. The winners win because they improve their skills instead of denying the importance of doing so.

I've been sex goddess widowed

2 upvotes · 29 August 2017 · /r/askTRP

All women are kinky. All women are huge sluts unless properly managed.

LTR wants sex constantly, but doesn't take care of herself.

2 upvotes · 28 August 2017 · /r/askTRP

Use your words like a big boy.

How can she know what you want if you don't tell her?

The Unknowability of Beta Turd

2 upvotes · 28 August 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

Paul Elam spent years writing articles discussing masculinity and the uncaring manipulative nature of women. Then one day a pretty blond girl named Cassie Jay gave Paul Elam a call about a Red Pill Movie. Next thing you know, Paul Elam has thrown masculinity out the window and is crying on camera begging women to sympathize with his problems. So the question is: Who really is Paul Elam? What does he really believe? Does he think that women are manipulative whores incapable of empathy? Or does he believe that women should empathize with men's issues? He's taken both positions. Which one does he actually believe? Does he even know?

I'll tell you who he is.

He is a hurt little boy who wants women to love him for who he is.

When he doesn't think they will, he is angry and bitter and says mean things about them. When he thinks they might, he cries to them like he used to cry to mommy, in the hopes that they will kiss it better.

This is who Paul Elam is.

He wants women to love like men love, handle shit like men handle shit, take responsibility like men take responsibility. And maybe if he berates them enough, and starts a "movement" to mirror feminism, that will somehow happen.

The one thing that is absolutely unwilling to consider is the not-nice thought that maybe the those vicious irresponsible PUA psychopaths are right, and patriarchy is nature's plan for the human species. That women are evolved to be led and controlled by men, and that they go off the rails and crash whenever that's not happening.

It's not about not agreeing to that idea. It's about a refusal to even consider it, because it is not-nice, and to entertain a not-nice idea is to abandon the hope of the moral high ground and the approval of others.

This is the defining characteristic of the beta male... the inability to survive without sources of external approval.

How can I stop my sister from being a slut?

2 upvotes · 28 August 2017 · /r/askTRP

You don't.

'Attention-seeking' woman who falsely accused 15 men of rape and sexual assault after claiming she was a lesbian 'and would never have sex with a man' is jailed for 10 years.

2 upvotes · 25 August 2017 · /r/MensRights

Don't be silly. You're a communist, you don't even believe in hell.

Although, metaphorically speaking, you could change that by visiting Cuba. Or Venezuela. Or North Korea.

Or perhaps the resentment you are stewing in right now would do as a reasonable, albeit watered-down, substitute.

Looking for some suggestions on working out & improving my diet (I'm 14 and found TRP early)

2 upvotes · 19 August 2017 · /r/askTRP

You're 14. You can eat anything that's not sugar, so long as you are lifting heavy.

Stronglifts 5x5. Lots of meat and vegetables. No further detail required.

Can I gain 50 pounds in under a year?

2 upvotes · 17 August 2017 · /r/askTRP

Found the guy with zero experience. Listen, snowflake, your opinion isn't special just because it's yours.

Add some value or shut up.

Everything you wanted to know but you were too afraid to ask about those evil creatures called men

2 upvotes · 7 August 2017 · /r/MensRights

"Lesbian" until graduation.

Video Games

2 upvotes · 4 August 2017 · /r/askTRP

The problem isn't video games, or porn, or masturbation, or drugs, or alcohol, or whatever.

The problem is overindulgence.

Control your habits. Do not allow your habits to control you.

"I like you and I'm sorry, I know you probably don't feel the same way"

2 upvotes · 29 June 2017 · /r/askTRP

"I do feel the same way"

Now wait just long enough for her to get her hopes up...

"I like me, too."

What are some signs that you're an orbiter?

2 upvotes · 28 June 2017 · /r/askTRP

You're asking this question.

"LTR" said either stop talking to her or im not talking to you anymore.

2 upvotes · 27 June 2017 · /r/askTRP

Never allow your woman to dominate you.

A woman can forgive a man who beats her, rapes her, cheats on her, steals her money, gets her hooked on drugs, abandons her, fucks her little sister, wrecks her car, rats her out to the police for something he did, or all of the above.

But she will never, never forgive a man who submits to her.

How are some of you able to "next" people so easily?

2 upvotes · 27 June 2017 · /r/askTRP

Opportunities are not jewels, scarce and precious, to be snatched when seen, because who knows when you might chance on another one?

No, opportunities are water in a river. They flow copiously or in a trickle, but the faster they pass you by, the faster the next one replaces them.

Every moment you spend talking to a girl who doesn't like you is a moment you are not finding, talking to, and then having wild passionate sex with one who does.

You're a dude. You're literally a man.

2 upvotes · 14 May 2017 · /r/MensRights

Like, OMG.

She can't even.

Why do so many women think by saying "We can still be friends" will make every all better after rejecting you?

2 upvotes · 13 May 2017 · /r/askTRP

They don't think it will make anything better. That's not what they are trying to do.

What they are trying to do is not look unkind.

Last night, broke up with LTR girlfriend of 6 years. She isn't mad, just sad. What should I expect and how to proceed?

2 upvotes · 12 April 2017 · /r/askTRP

There is no expect... nothing is going to happen. There is no proceed... there is nothing you need to do.

Just behave as if she never existed.

Heartbroken, been a year. I've fucked other women need help.

2 upvotes · 4 April 2017 · /r/askTRP

I think I'm depressed, I check her social media about once a week and I still fantasize about her though I know I could never take her back as she left me for someone else.

Brainstems don't know the difference between fantasy and reality.

"Would you still date me if I was fat?" -- Squashing one of the biggest shit tests

2 upvotes · 21 March 2017 · /r/TheRedPill

The correct response is "I wouldn't have said 'hello' to you if you were fat."

At what point after lifting weights do girls just start giving YOU attention?

2 upvotes · 7 February 2017 · /r/askTRP

When you stop asking that question and lift because you want to be stronger.

You're a failed Asian.

2 upvotes · 5 December 2016 · /r/askTRP

This was the gentlest of shit tests.

You teased her, she teased back, both with appropriate intensity.

You should have agreed and amplified by faking a ludicrously exaggerated Japanese accent and saying that you had "broughtu greato shame on famiry".

Instead, you froze, probably bristled, and revealed your insecurities.

Is it true that promiscuous women have trouble bonding with their partners?

2 upvotes · 5 December 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP hasn't proven

To whom? To you?

Why would we spend any time trying to prove anything to you?

There is no prize if we succeed.

Is it true that promiscuous women have trouble bonding with their partners?

2 upvotes · 5 December 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Wait, what is it you want me to "prove"? Who are you, anyway?

Q4All, What fictional character do you think represents the traits of an Alpha or Beta the most and why?

2 upvotes · 30 November 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think fictional characters represent the ideas of their authors. These may or may not correspond to reality.

Waking Up Early Will Change Your Life

2 upvotes · 28 November 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

This is an excellent tutorial on how to use sales techniques to pitch broscience.

Watch it carefully to learn how to bullshit people.

Just don't fall for it yourself.

What if i want a kid?

2 upvotes · 28 November 2016 · /r/askTRP

What if I want to fly like a bird?

You can't have a kid. You don't have a uterus.

Why Colleges Should Stop Teaching "Toxic Masculinity"

2 upvotes · 18 November 2016 · /r/MensRights

Stop trying to reason with these people.

Need woman advice.

2 upvotes · 16 November 2016 · /r/askTRP

Every once in a while she will ask me if it bothers me, if I want her to stop talking to him. I totally do want her to knock that shit off but the problem is, I need her to think it is her own idea.

No, you don't.

Why do girls at clubs show enough interest to dance and make out with you, let you buy them drinks, and then dissappear into the bathroom with their friends all night and/or sneak out of the club?

2 upvotes · 6 November 2016 · /r/askTRP

Because you bought them drinks, idiot.

I have submissive fetishes, I don't want them, I want to be dominant in bed.

2 upvotes · 23 October 2016 · /r/askTRP

Dick size, unless you are absurdly tiny, makes no difference whatsoever. I am huge and the only benefit I derive from this is never having dick size insecurity.

Everything else is a drawback. Anal? Forget about it. It's not even comfortable for you. Wearing condoms? Good luck, there, tripod... they don't sell them in your size. Quickies? Nope, extensive foreplay is the universal rule. Oh, and you better have a bottle of lube near to hand at all times. And god help you if she's a virgin.

So long as you are big enough not to be embarrassed, you are the perfect size. Never worry about it.

If I want children, should I still not get married?

2 upvotes · 22 October 2016 · /r/askTRP

No.

When you have children, you have oneitis. Because you will love them no matter what (unless you really are an actual psychopath), and you cannot "next" them (obviously).

You must decide for yourself whether you wish to be childless, or place yourself at the mercy of a woman and the state.

What is this madness happening in the Western world?

2 upvotes · 21 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Someone discovered that they could sell newspapers and pageviews with outrage porn.

Soon, entire schools of thought sprung up based on worldviews which were solely informed by a steady diet of outrage porn.

Then these group become socially and politically powerful, and set about creating conditions which were just as outrageous, but real.

Then other groups formed as a backlash to these real world conditions, and their anger was indistinguishable in degree from the original outrage porn-fed groups.

Can we have a moratorium on "more alpha than TRP" posts too?

2 upvotes · 19 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I disagree. A very large portion of what we miscall "personality" is indeed genetic. But what we loosely call "alphaness" is largely independent of personality.

Let's Talk about Trump

2 upvotes · 19 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, if you ever get a chance, have a look.

On beaches with stones of different sizes, and consistent wave action, you will often find the stones arranged in layers, with a neat relationship between distance from the surf, and size.

The waves don't act differently on the stones. The stones respond differently to the waves. Those that are lighter are more effected.

So what the hell am I on about?

Well, I have a close relative who is a professional athlete. If you follow a certain sport at all, you know his name. And his celebrity effects different women differently. Like the waves on the stones, yes? Those who are most effected by it fight hardest to get close to him.

So, can he grab any woman's anatomy and be well received? Hell, no. There are plenty of women in the world who don't give a shit that he's X, and plays Y. But those women don't seek him out. They don't try to get close to him. And thus he is closely surrounded by women who do. So, from his perspective, the environment is full of women who hang like fruit for the picking, so long as he stays off the ones who are near him for other reasons (have to work with him in professional capacity, etc).

This is what it means that "women will let you do anything". Not every woman. Just enough of them to make no difference.

Asked A Girl Out, She Said "maybe". Do I stop trying?

2 upvotes · 17 October 2016 · /r/askTRP

Anything other than "hell yes" is not worth your time.

Do you want to date a woman who would see you like a RPer sees women?

2 upvotes · 4 October 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'll try to be charitable but realistic in my representation of RPer.

Failed.

"Why aren't you married?"

2 upvotes · 3 October 2016 · /r/askTRP

"Because I'm a free spirit."

"Because I am smart."

"Because one vessel cannot contain me."

"Haven't found one I like enough."

[Rant/Venting]White Knights are fucking cancer

2 upvotes · 29 August 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

The first rule of self-defense is don't do stupid things, go to stupid places, or stand near stupid people.

There are people who know how to fight, and will do so when it's necessary. These are the friends you want.

There are also people who get physical because they lose control of their emotions. These people are more dangerous to their friends than they are to their enemies.

In other words, you LTRed a trashy woman. Regard this as a lesson on choosing a bit more wisely.

What TRP rules and principles don't apply to all people, but only to women?

2 upvotes · 23 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You're being dishonest.

No, I'm quite serious. I'm not bisexual. It'd be fun if I was, but I'm not.

The point of TRP is that men are very different from women.

Nope. The point of TRP is that women are very different from men. (Therefore stop assuming they are like you, and pay attention what they are actually like if you want to get laid.)

What's so special about what they say is no that AWALT, but OWALT (only women are like that). That's what's heavily implied, at least.

I take no responsibility for what you think I mean.

One they really do notice that an observation applies to men too, they usually let OP know, and tell him to come back with something more profound.

Yep. Analyzing what men are like is not useful for getting tail unless you are bisexual or gay. It's not even useful to women, because any woman can catch a dick. (The trick is to get to the end zone without fumbling it.)

You can't absolve people of moral agency because it's "their nature"

2 upvotes · 23 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Whether it's women or anyone else you can't really pretend morality plays no role in this world, because "nature".

And yet I just did. And will continue to do so.

Morality is invented, not discovered.

It's not a law of the universe. It's a strategy for tribes. It helps them stick together and cooperate. Good moral systems are ones that work efficiently to produce the desired result. Bad moral systems are those that don't.

Moral systems that try to blame women for "bad" behaviour are crappy moral systems, because they don't work. Women don't come with a built-in sense of responsibility to men or society.

Moral systems that justify controlling women to produce prosocial behaviour from them are better moral systems, because they do work. Women respond to authority, clear boundaries, enforced rules, and spankings, not appeals to reason or morality.

What TRP rules and principles don't apply to all people, but only to women?

2 upvotes · 23 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

When I become bisexual and want to attract men, I'll start caring about that.

CMV: Terps and Terfs share an uncanny degree of similarity

2 upvotes · 22 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women have a choice. They can object to men being superior at stuff, work hard, and get good... or they can rely on their inherent value as women.

Why would I care? My life is perfect.

Exactly. Women don't need to be good at anything. So why would they?

My boyfriend is superior over all men (especially you) and it's grand.

Exactly. Women don't want to win. They want a winner. That's why all the winners are men. Women just wait at the finish line hoping to jump on a winner as he runs by.

Men are superior because women like it that way.

CMV: TRPs generalizations are proof that it doesn't work on mature women

2 upvotes · 22 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If TRP material doesn't work for picking up saggy old chicks, that sounds like a win to me.

Why marry a RPer?

2 upvotes · 22 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why marry a RPer?

No one asked you to.

CMV: Terps and Terfs share an uncanny degree of similarity

2 upvotes · 22 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Terrible examples with low upvote scores, but let's address what you were trying to find examples of.

You were trying to find examples of how TRP thinks men are "better".

I suspect you must be either female, or raised by a single mother, because this displays a profound lack of understanding of the masculine worldview.

Men don't really understand the notion of someone being just inherently "better". We really only understand "better at". This is because men do not have inherent value on the sexual marketplace, the way women do. All of our value must be achieved by accomplishments or capabilities.

Almost all of history's women successfully produced offspring. About 1/3 of history's men did so. Eggs are valuable. Sperm is cheap.

Because sperm is cheap, men have always had to work, practice, study, and risk in order to achieve other types of value. Because otherwise, no nookie. This is the way human beings are designed.

And that's men are "better at" almost everything, from invention to athletics to combat to chess. Not because we "inherently are", but because we have to be. That's men who have no strength, no skills, no accomplishments are mocked as "not real men". What this actually means is "you have not achieved value, and therefore are not worthy of mating privileges".

Women suck at most things, from math to stand up comedy, not because they have no capability, but because they have no incentive. A woman can find love, have an income, live a comfortable and happy life, while being mediocre or worse at every single thing she does.

Men do not have that option. That's what men being superior at stuff means. Men achieve more value, because we have no inherent value, and are driven by necessity to excel.

CMV: Terps and Terfs share an uncanny degree of similarity

2 upvotes · 20 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Okay, I'll try to make it simpler for you.

You claim that TRP readers believe men are "superior".

I ask "superior at what?"

CMV: Terps and Terfs share an uncanny degree of similarity

2 upvotes · 20 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Superior at what?

For a philosophy about reasserting masculinity, why is TRP such a big pussy when it comes to dissent?

2 upvotes · 19 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

How exactly would letting you say whatever you want in TRP help the subscribers?

What value do you add?

Questions about NoFap/NoPorn.. 30 days in so far.

2 upvotes · 15 August 2016 · /r/askTRP

Nofap is a bunch of spergs who heard that it was possible to jerk off too much (it is), and decided to not do it at all, because they are fucking spergs and have no sense of proportion.

Science: Male feminization is evolutionary, it isn't the result of feminist conspiracy

2 upvotes · 15 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

These increasingly "feminine" features indicate a reduction in testosterone, a male hormone also associated with aggression and antisocial behavior.

And I think we are done here.

CMV: TRP attracts the wrong type of women

2 upvotes · 3 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Very well, oh master judge of women, what shall we do with these "wrong" women?

Deportation? Re-education camps? Sterilization?

'We don't hate women' wtf is all this then?

2 upvotes · 2 August 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

He keeps saying these awful things, but I just can't stop reading! Whatever could that mean?

Female friends are a worthy asset - RP should change its stance

2 upvotes · 29 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's not about being a "counterpoint" in the general sense.

It's about keeping single men the hell away from single mothers. The problem is that many young single men are thirsty, and single mothers are easy.

That's bait for a dangerous trap. We describe the trap in lurid detail to protect these young guys until they can develop some game and have other options.

Guys 40 and over, how much harder is it now to get the 18-23 college aged girls compared to your 20's and 30's?

2 upvotes · 28 July 2016 · /r/askTRP

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fLrpBLDWyCI>

CMV: a high n-count doesn't mean that a women has no self control or can't think future oriented

2 upvotes · 18 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Just because you care about her n-count doesn't mean that she does so as well.

You're right. She might have very poor judgment rather than no self control.

Either way, I am not committing to her.

If women are happier in a patriarchy why does a form of feminism often rise eventually, even in ancient societies?

2 upvotes · 15 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because women, like most volatile substances, are unstable, and tend to collapse to lower energy state.

[Mod] What to do if you're approached by a reporter for an interview about The Red Pill

2 upvotes · 15 July 2016 · /r/askTRP

It was RPS.

Why are poly relationships so rare among the very wealthy?

2 upvotes · 14 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes. Unfortunately the conclusion that people aren't exactly rational all the time dawned on me long ago.

True. But irrational and stupid aren't quite the same thing.

Most people, even the ones who are objectively pretty stupid, are surprisingly intelligent about the things they have experience with and do every day. But when they have to think about things they don't have a lot of direct trial-and-error feedback from, all sorts of wishful thinking, cognitive biases, and so forth pop right up.

Why?

Well, what we call a "person" is really a very small part of the human brain... the frontal cortex. It's the only part of the brain that we think of as "us", because it's not only part that is conscious, because conscious is another word for "self-aware", and it is the only part of the brain with the capacity to notice itself.

Why?

Well, the biological brain is roughly equivalent to a processing model we call a "neural network", consisting a series of layer of connected nodes with different "strength" connections between them. (I'm glossing over a lot of detail here). And they can be arranged in various ways, but one way in which they vary is sparsely connected vs. widely connected (again, glossing over). Sparsely connected networks tend to "learn" very fast, but are very poor at generalizing, while widely connected networks require many repetitions of a data set to "train", but they are very, very good at deriving general rules from specific cases.

In the human brain (ludicrously simplified explanation follows), there is a system composed of the frontal cortex, a wide connected network, connected to the hippocampus, a sparsely connected network. The hippocampus learns things quickly, but what it learns are literal memories... it is incapable of generalizing from them. What it does with them is make them available for replay to the frontal cortex, which connects different memories together, and makes generalizations from them.

Since self-awareness is a generalization, only the frontal cortex is capable of it. Thus, it constitutes what we would consider "a person".

So why does this make people think sloppily?

Well, the cortex is a generalizing engine. It makes rules, principles, cause-and-effect stories... out of observations and events. That's what it does. That is its entire purpose in existence. (Consciousness is a side effect of this process.)

So this makes us very good at figuring out the universe. But it also makes us prone to telling ourselves cause-and-effect stories even when they don't actually exist. Often random shit is just random shit, but the cortex derives a correlation, rule, principle, or story from it anyway.

This is called "overfit" by AI developers and researchers. It refers to the way neural nets make false causal deductions based on correlations that randomly occur in their training datasets.

My favorite story of this involves a DoD project which was training a neural net to recognize tank profiles. The team got some tanks and drivers on loan from the army, took them out the the woods one day, and took a shitload of pictures of treelines with tanks hidden in them. The next day they went back without the tanks, and took a shitload of pictures of treelines with no tanks.

Then they started training the neural nets on this dataset. Rapidly, most prototypes shot to 95+% accuracy. Great success. It was only when they started field-testing with real tanks that a problem was revealed. On the testing data, the software was insanely accurate... even better than humans. On real tanks... it sucked. It literally was no better than flipping a coin.

Eventually, the problem was discovered... it was overcast on the first day they took pictures. The neural nets spotted an entirely spurious correlation between cloudy conditions and tanks, and zeroed in that as its diagnostic criterion. They inferred that clouds caused tanks.

So the team turned out to have spent millions of dollars developing an AI that could look outside and tell you what the weather was like.

Funny stuff, but the point is that the frontal cortex is like that. It can't distinguish between transient features of its dataset, and real causal relationships.

So when people have experiential access to a lot of good, relevant, data, through personal experience, their judgment is laser-sharp. But when they are working with cherry-picked, non-representative, or second-hand data, all sort of gremlins creep in, and they end up believing all kinds of nonsensical things.

Why are poly relationships so rare among the very wealthy?

2 upvotes · 14 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's not a bad piece of writing.

The way I look at it (which is pretty much a different way of saying almost the same thing) is that equality of opportunity and reward for merit can only coexist for a single generation.

Because people want their children to inherit their success. If you tell them they cannot give their children a head start in life, they will riot and vote you out of office. Or hang you from the nearest lamppost.

But if you tell them they they can't have equal opportunities because someone else's parents succeeded, and gave their children a head start, they will riot and vote you out of office. Or hang you from the nearest lamppost.

It occurs to almost no one that these two wants are incompatible.

Why are poly relationships so rare among the very wealthy?

2 upvotes · 14 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes. If we interpret what you wrote as describing an emergent, rather than a planned, behaviour, then I agree with you.

Q4RP: why does TRP look to so many people to be misogynistic and emotionally abusive?

2 upvotes · 14 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's why I can talk about it openly.

That's why I can say that half the stuff we say about women is exaggerated and hyperbolic, intended not to give a well-rounded picture, but to produce a mindset in young men that leads to sexual success.

That's why I can say that I lie all the time.

That's why I can give away the con.

Because anyone who will believe me is already in on the joke. The people that the joke is actually on are super easy to fool, because they want to be fooled. They'll read this and say, "That's just a threadbare excuse for being a horrible misogynist"... because they will never, never, be able to swallow the idea that this is exactly what we want them to think.

do women underestimate male sexuality?

2 upvotes · 13 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Ah, here's the original comment, so I can answer the original question.

In a lot of the materials I've read about marital sex, there is a lot of description about how the wife not wanting sex is deeply hurtful to the husband - she is rejecting him, his body, his love, etc. That sex is a major way that he communicates and shows feelings.

No, no, no.

Men do not express any feeling with sex, other than "lust". However, men know that women express feelings with sex.

Sex is how men receive love, not how they show it, because men and women are different, and men know that.

And yet you all are the same gender that can fuck anything under 200lbs, right?

Yes, exactly.

If you want to know how men express love, look at what a man does with his wife on their wedding night, then subtract what he did the night before with the whore at his bachelor party. What's left is how men show love.

Married woman, "you're trying to fuck me"

2 upvotes · 13 July 2016 · /r/askTRP

Ms F at one point stopped Blondie from ordering anything strong anymore...

This is very typical. Women don't admit to it, but women know that they are very prone to impulsive decision-making based on their current emotional state.

So female friends will police each other and keep "tempting threats" away. This is why it is logistically critical to either win the friends over, or isolate quickly.

Married woman, "you're trying to fuck me"

2 upvotes · 13 July 2016 · /r/askTRP

Anyways Blondie as soon as we order beers orders a mixed drink and jokes to me that I'm just trying to get her drunk, but she won't fuck me, she's married and loves her guy.

If a woman says "no sex", when you haven't brought up sex, guess what she is thinking about.

Actual Gawker quote: "If men actually count as people".

2 upvotes · 13 July 2016 · /r/MensRights

This actually makes sense.

There are only three types of people who read Gawker articles:

- Radical left-wing man-hating feminists.
- Cucks.
- People drawn there by rage bait.

Saying that men are not people draws pageviews from all three. Why would they not be provocative in precisely this way?

If you pay assholes to asshole, assholes gonna asshole.

Who cares?

The meaning of sex for men

2 upvotes · 12 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Men have a dual-track sex instinct. I'm mildly surprised this never occurred to you.

what jobs are women actually better than men at?

2 upvotes · 9 July 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

We're talking about it because we need to reclaim a fair model rather than the unfair one due to women's nature to seek out a man that is better than her.

I don't. I focus on what helps me teach young men to get laid.

You might, but that's just because you are mentally weak, and therefore cannot stand looking like the bad guy.

Why do guys post in RedPillWoman?

2 upvotes · 9 July 2016 · /r/askTRP

Women are going to know what's best for women

What?

Should sex education cover false rape accusations?

2 upvotes · 1 July 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No man is sexually desirable on a primal, genetic level. Genetics isn't enough.

There are a lot more men with good genes than Chads. What makes a Chad is decent genetics, but, more importantly, growing up in an environment that is full of the right lessons.

Are incels a proof of the universal attraction for Alpha men?

2 upvotes · 29 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The question would be what can make a man unattractive to every woman, in a way that every other man isn't.

I think "almost every woman" would be sufficient for a man to be an incel, since a man cannot meet/speak to literally every woman.

But, yes, put that way, it becomes a real question.

Rather, the important question would be:

Is male attractiveness universal enough so that some men could be attractive to almost no woman anywhere, or is male attractiveness only a matter of taste, and all men will have a subset of women to whom they are attractive, regardless of what they are like?

In that case, I would say the answer is almost certainly the former.

There are some traits which are attractive to all women, some traits which are attractive to some women and unattractive to others, and some traits which are unattractive to all women.

Are incels a proof of the universal attraction for Alpha men?

2 upvotes · 29 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Circular argument.

Incel is defined as a man whom no woman is attracted to. You just asked why women aren't attracted to men they aren't attracted to.

Why the heck would anyone want to be a woman?

2 upvotes · 29 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why the heck would anyone want to be a woman?

Because they are full of estrogen, a hormone that makes you like girl stuff.

If they were full of testosterone, they would want to do man stuff.

The brain is part of the body.

Why exactly shouldn't personal freedom be prioritized over "the greater good"?

2 upvotes · 29 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Maybe it's because every time you see a female scientist or soldier the Redpillers shit all over her.

Awesome. It's working.

I'll have to pop the champagne at our next Sееееееkrit Patriarchy Meeting. Who knew it would be so easy to stop women from fulfilling their potential?

Back to the kitchen with you!

What are your personal ethical beliefs?

2 upvotes · 28 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It seems obvious that there are unambiguously immoral acts

Anytime someone says "seems obvious", it means "I cannot actually articulate a reason for this, but I'm hoping you won't notice that, because most people agree with me".

Get a dog. Seriously.

2 upvotes · 26 June 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Fluffy does not love you. You feed Fluffy.

Hey TRP, nonregular checking in with a useful dating tip. Tldr consider the shooting range for a first destination.

2 upvotes · 25 June 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

LARPing is to fencing what being a foodie is to being able to cook.

Plate trying to dread game me. Pfff

2 upvotes · 24 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

do you ever call women out on their shit like that and put them in their place? Or is it always agree and amplify?

The key question is... does this woman respect you and desire your good opinion?

If so, you can correct her behaviour. If not, use a tactic (agree and amplify, pressure flip, etc) for mild stuff, next for serious bad-attitude stuff.

Question for redpill: How is anyone supposed to know when they've established that they're more than just plate material, and actually allow something to happen?

2 upvotes · 24 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Lampshade effect.

Explanation about rape fantasies

2 upvotes · 23 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Killing people sounds like a power fantasy.

Explanation about rape fantasies

2 upvotes · 23 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Sounds like the opposite to me.

Question for redpill: How is anyone supposed to know when they've established that they're more than just plate material, and actually allow something to happen?

2 upvotes · 23 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Low-ranked members of either sex will often adopt the other's goal as a means of preserving self-esteem.

Women who must give away sex easily will brag (internally or externally) that "all these men find them desirable"... but most men find most women desirable, so all that this really means is that she's not ugly.

Men who must give away time, attention, and resources easily will brag (internally or externally) that they are "hanging out with beautiful women", but women will accept gifts (tangible or intangible) from almost anyone, who all this means is that he is not actively creepy.

These are both very low bars to clear, but people with low desirability pretend they are higher. Helps them sleep at night.

Another trick that low-ranked people do is pretend that sex roles are inverted. Slutty women like to use terms like "fuckboi" to pretend that they are exploiting men for sex, instead of being sluts... and our "let's pretend men and women are the same" culture plays into that.

But no one is fooled. Because other men don't want to commit to a woman with a high N-count, no matter how dismissively she speaks of the last guy in the saddle, and women don't want to fuck orbiters, period.

This trust only telegraphed my low self-appraisal, even when I did my best to hide my lack of confidence?

What telegraphed your low self-appraisal was the fact that you were seeking commitment, rather than testing women to see if they were worthy of it.

And since sex is a marketplace where similar values pair up, you were hooking up with women whose low self-appraisal was signaled by the fact that they were seeking sex, rather carefully selecting between males offering it.

Is a girl being into BDSM a red flag?

2 upvotes · 22 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

Femsub BDSM is mainstream. A majority of women are into it to some degree.

Do men and women even have common mutual interests?

2 upvotes · 21 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So you openly admit to having had no prior knowledge of the most fundamental writings of the group you are trying to disagree with?

[CMV] Incels do not try hard enough.

2 upvotes · 21 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Enough for what?

Do men and women even have common mutual interests?

2 upvotes · 20 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Highly successful males appear to take this for granted, and consciously alter their behavior to mime the women they're courting.

No, a highly successful male has women altering their behaviour to suit him.

Mismatched couples where the woman is more attractive...

2 upvotes · 17 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes.

The whole "n-count" thing is really a rubric (often unconscious or instinctive), for "how many times has a man nexted her after sexing her?".

It's the "dump" part of pump and dump that makes a woman a slut. If she's with the same man for seven years, and he gets hit by a train, then she's 25 with an N-count of 1. Doesn't matter if she slept with him four hours after meeting him, or four days, or four weeks. If he stayed, she's doing it right. If he left, she's doing it wrong.

What matters is not the interval between meeting a man and having sex with him, but the interval between having sex with a man, and the relationship failing. The longer the better... because if HE wanted to hang around for a long time, then odds are you will, too, and if HE wanted out the door the instant he came, odds are you will, too.

The N-count is a track record of success, or of failure.

Why doesn't TRP go further and expose Leftism?

2 upvotes · 17 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

Because TRP is for saving yourself, not "society".

"Saving society" always involves self-sacrifice. And it is unwise in the extreme to sacrifice to "save" someone from a problem they don't know they have. They will not be grateful.

Dealing with an Ideologue.

2 upvotes · 14 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

Do not waste your valuable time arguing with pointless people.

It's not winning if there is no prize.

For those who claim the redpill predicts human behavior, how do you explain these results?

2 upvotes · 13 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

if men are the deeper, more mature ones, why do so many obsess over looks, over all other factors, when it comes to a marriage?

Translation:

If I define "maturity" as "having women's tastes", why do men look less "mature"?

Answer:

Because you set the question up that way.

Who killed Marriage 1.0? (Trigger warning: dry theory)

2 upvotes · 13 June 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

How did gay marriage destroy marriage 1.0? Being gay isn't a choice, therefore allowing gays to get married isn't a risk because to heterosexuals, marriage was still the only game in town.

Because it brings the gays out of the closet.

It's not actually the gay marriage that's damaging per se. Gays getting married is just part of the uncloseting process. Keeping gays closeted is critical to preserving marriage.

Why? Well, like I said, marriage can't survive the presence of alternatives (other than celibacy). Being gay is not a choice, so homosexuality isn't a direct alternative (except for men who go both ways), but if it's visible, straight men start to get ideas...

"Why do I have to have only one woman, when Milo Yiannopoulos has been boarded by more dudes than a C17 Globemaster?"

You can't keep straight people bottled up if they can look over the fence and see gay people having all the fun.

Who killed Marriage 1.0? (Trigger warning: dry theory)

2 upvotes · 13 June 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

If it had stayed 18-20, marriage probably could have mostly survived that. But it inevitably wasn't going to, because technological progress is a positive feedback loop...each advance enables the next, and it goes more and more quickly.

Now, not all of the delay we actually have in economic adulthood is inevitable. We waste a lot of young people's time. K-12 + college is slower than it needs to be, because we, as a society, don't understand that this delay has consequences.

But there is some element of it that's inherent. Tweens can do farm labour. They can't write production software.

Does TRP make any other woman feel depressed?

2 upvotes · 10 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<http://www.k5learning.com/reading-comprehension-worksheets>

"Consent to", "desire", and "enjoy" are three different verbs. The first defines rape. The second two do not.

Does TRP make any other woman feel depressed?

2 upvotes · 8 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

First, most everyone, and especially women, cannot listen objectively and learn when they are upset and defensive.

Second, even if you could, different audiences require different tone, emphasis, and presentation. What men get out of TRP is not what you get out of it. The same words and phrases literally mean different things to different people. TRP language is carefully selected so that the truth will emerge when that language is filtered through the male brain.

What it emerges as when filtered through your mentally ill female brain, I can't even be entirely certain of... and I certainly can't vouch for it being the same as the actual intended message payload.

TRP is a boot camp. I'm a drill instructor. And when I scream "Listen up you maggots!" at a bunch of boots, I don't have time to discuss my use of that term with a seven year old child, an entomology professor, a Catholic priest, and Pablo Picasso on acid, all whom happen to be on the sidelines, listening.

Commitment or GTFO! Guide for men considering posting in Red Pill Women.

2 upvotes · 8 June 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

Go to this sub.. read and figure out where to find these women in the wild.

While this is good advice for any man who's not totally uninterested in the possibility of any sort of LTR, I think we can agree that the societal problems with marriage are deeper than "picked the wrong woman", and that "picking the right woman" is not a total solution.

What do you think about people who don't want kids?

2 upvotes · 3 June 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Evolution is not a game you play. It's a game that plays you.

LTR is showing extreme jealousy over my actual sister, is it time to next her?

2 upvotes · 3 June 2016 · /r/askTRP

Sleeping in the same bed with an opposite-sex sibling does have incestuous undertones in this culture, and that's probably what your GF is reacting to. I don't think she's so much "jealous" as "weirded out".

And, be honest, you're not doing this to save heating costs. You're doing it because you both want to.

That being said, it's not necessarily a sexual thing. It could simply be a continuation of a close relationship in childhood.

Either way, it's not totally insane for your GF to be a little uncomfortable. You should only be concerned if she doesn't calm down, get used to it, and relax over time.

How common are incels?

2 upvotes · 27 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes, I agree that it seems that way to you.

Am I a sociopath, or just an asshole?

2 upvotes · 26 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

You are trying to make a silk purse out of a sow's ear. You are trying to cook corned beef hash into wagyu filet. You are trying to build a highrise office building out of tin cans.

A woman who tries to manipulate you with tantrums is not LTR material.

You say she is pretty decent, good attitude most of the time, sex on demand, cooks cleans and is generally submissive, supports/defends me when others talk to her about me and I am not present. All around a pretty decent human being.

That's when she's getting what she wants. Look what happened when you told her no.

I physically withdraw from her and it feels like second nature to not want to engage her sexually when she cries, its like I'm actively repulsed by her tears, am I a sociopath, or just an asshole?

You react with revulsion when she fundamentally betrays your trust by trying to emotionally blackmail you.

You must discard this idea that feeling guilty means you did something wrong. Guilt is women's weapon. Feeling guilty just means she got to you.

Do you think this is a healthy, positive outlook for a kid? Why does he believe in these things?

2 upvotes · 24 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

A woman who spews this much hatred against men doesn't get a talking to, she gets a masters degree.

Well put.

Any accusation of "pathological attitude" is predicated upon our culture's notion of what a healthy attitude is. Can't gauge a straight mile with a bent yardstick.

March of the Freak Parade

2 upvotes · 24 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

TRP is not your personal army.

Donald Trump and the Men's Rights Movement: It's Complicated

2 upvotes · 20 May 2016 · /r/MensRights

Don't be fooled. They are just prioritizing targets. They are more afraid of Trump than you.

Donald Trump and the Men's Rights Movement: It's Complicated

2 upvotes · 20 May 2016 · /r/MensRights

All this shows is that Mother Jones is more afraid of a Trump Presidency than of MRAs. So they'll offer you a pat on the head, and pretend to be fair, to get you to behave the way they want.

Then watch what happens when they no longer have Trump to be scared of.

Lifting on a Budget of $0.00 - A Guide for the Complete Failure

2 upvotes · 20 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dBnniua6-oM>

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/353buo/eating_101_fork_use_for_dummies/

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/4gkqec/goldilocks_and_the_three_metabolic_pumps_trigger/

Car sex?

2 upvotes · 18 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

Don't be a fucking sperg.

If the logistics aren't there, don't waste your time. You're just going to look thirsty.

50% is a Failing Grade.

2 upvotes · 14 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

I think we have debated to what is either a point of agreement or an impasse, depending on how you look at it.

To you, marriage and children are a primary goal. Therefore any attempt to persuade you that it's not a good idea for you will fail. That's probably why no such attempt has been made.

I will continue to tell young single men not to get married, and why. Some will have your priorities, and ignore me. Many will not.

How do you prevent boredom during your exercise routine?

2 upvotes · 13 May 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

The trick is find a type of exercise whose goal is meaningful to you.

I'm a large macho male, so I lift weights and practice martial arts. Being able to fight is relevant to my self-image and goals. So all that sweat and pain feel purposeful. I'm not just exercising, I'm becoming tougher.

But most women couldn't care less about being able to fight, so a gymnastics or dance oriented program might feel more relevant. Or running, or cycling, or... whatever.

The idea is that boredom is your brain's way of saying "this activity does not advance my goals".

Find an exercise program that does something, instead of just being exercise.

Why do girls act like they don't like fit guys?

2 upvotes · 12 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

If you want to know what women like a man to look like, don't ask them. Find out who the most women are attracted to, and look at those men.

Or just look at the cover of any romance novel ever.

RP men what would you assume if a woman didn't respond to red pill tactics?

2 upvotes · 12 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Meh, s'okay, my point is made.

Just about every woman thinks "that won't work on me", in the same way that almost everyone thinks they would never join a cult, be taken in by a con man, or die in a Darwin-Award style accident.

Everybody thinks they're above average. Makes you wonder where all these average people are.

Introducing Married Red Pill Flair

2 upvotes · 12 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

I do not think you are a coward.

They got to you when you were a child. It's fucking hard to shake that shit off, and to do so spontaneously on your own... nah.

Look, you need to realize that you have lived all your life in a high caliber brainwashing machine. They have deliberately primed you to be hyper-susceptible to guilt. The red pill isn't some new way for you to feel guilty. It's about living for you, and apologizing to no one. Not your parents, not some freak in a stupid hat and beard, not /u/chimneytop, and not me.

Yeah, we have different definitions of success right now. Yours is getting out from under all that shit. It's gonna take years. Accept that. It's worth the trip.

If the big guy upstairs is so sensitive that he cries if you have a cheeseburger, fuck him.

You are not born a slave. You are born a free man. Don't worship any god who wants slaves instead of free men.

(Tag team, /u/humansockpuppet. Help a young brother out.)

50% is a Failing Grade.

2 upvotes · 12 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Good luck for us with the destruction of the family.

You mean "good luck for someone else's children".

Why do BP men attack the ideas of RP?

2 upvotes · 11 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

Why do BP men protect at all costs the ideas that women are prizes, men trading dignity for a chance with a woman is normal, and that any man who doesn't comply with these ideas should be given the cold shoulder? They have nothing to gain by perpetuating these thoughts and they act as though anyone who thinks differently should be discredited or ostracized.

What they gain is ego defense.

If groveling to women is the natural state of man, then they are just ordinary average dudes doing ordinary average things. If it's unattractive and craven, then they are unattractive cowards.

If being a player is immature and morally wrong, then they are better than players. If being a player is a desirable status requiring nerve and skill, then they are worse than players.

8 Months in, still can't cope with alot of things regarding hate towards women, could really use advice on ONS, I'm just really fucking angry.

2 upvotes · 11 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

Whisper, since you said there are no good women (which I fully agree), do you believe there are any faithful loyal women?

You're asking me what women's nature is. Women's nature isn't good or bad... it is submissive.

Women are sheep. They go where they are herded.

If you want a faithful, loyal woman, you don't look for a faithful loyal woman. You look for one who hasn't yet been ruined by bad influences, gain her obedience, and teach her to behave how you want her to behave.

You will always be disappointed if you expect a woman to figure out on her own what to do. Women can't tell good influences from bad ones. They don't have the foresight. They don't know they are sabotaging their long-term happiness when they listen to bad advice.

Stop looking for good women, and look instead for controllable ones. Then, make them good. Unicorns are made, not found.

MRP and the ProMarriage Stance- Can Someone Explain the Schism in relation to TRP?

2 upvotes · 10 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

fragile feelings

And that, my friend, is why you will never be a leader, unless you grow up. You know only how to ridicule, and not how to inspire. Confronted with resistance to your ideas, you resort to "Whatsa matter, aren't you a maaaaaaaaaaaaaaan enough?"... a schoolyard taunt directed at one hundred and fifty thousand people.

All of your self-styled maturity comes to this? Tch. No wonder you can't get TRP to listen to you. That's all you seem to have in your persuasive arsenal is taunts. No carrot. Only stick.

Well, TRP isn't afraid of the stick. What'cha gonna do now?

You could choose to have an adult conversation with me. I'm not holding my breath, though. Because you still seem to think that thousands upon thousands of people will be so afraid of you calling them "fragile", that they'll start listening to you.

You can't "internet tough guy" this. If you want young men to listen to you, you have to earn their trust. That's why they listen to me and not you. If you demonstrate some sort of willingness to acknowledge that people under 30 are sane, and have a point, then a conversation can begin. So far, I haven't seen that.

This is not an issue of issues. This is an issue of trust. The young bros do not trust that you are speaking in good faith.

Another story of beta jealousy

2 upvotes · 9 May 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

You'll note that in another comment to the OP I make mention of the fact that if he'd gone into his marriage with the understanding that she was not to expect monogamy from him, I wouldn't say he was hamstering. Clearly, that's not the case.

I agree with that. Marriage is expected to be a contract. For a contract to be valid, it has to have terms, both parties have to understand what the terms are, and agree to them.

For the sake of this argument I don't think the broader possibility of non-monogamous marriage applies, otherwise deception and covert actions would not feature so heavily in this post.

Also agreed. Deceptive cheating in an explicitly monogamous relationship is bad frame control... if you don't want to be monogamous, establish that up-front.

Now, if you haven't explicitly agreed to be monogamous, but she just assumed you would be, that's another situation entirely.

CMV: Sex is an extremely extroverted activity, and thus any introverts will have a huge disadvantage getting sexual opportunities.

2 upvotes · 9 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And how did introvert men breed a thousand years ago? Ten thousand? A hundred?

Unlike "alpha" or "beta" behaviour, which is mostly training (because every man has genetic programming for both), introversion vs extroversion is pretty clearly genetic. Heritability studies rate it pretty high.

Ideal Body? 6'2 at 70KG/155lbs.

2 upvotes · 6 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

That's very skinny. I'd recommend a long hard bulk. Don't worry to much about staying cut, it'll only slow your accumulation of muscle mass. So long as you stay below 20% you should be fine.

Should I keep the red pill to myself? Because no one understands it.

2 upvotes · 6 May 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

If you are a minor, you don't really have any civil rights to speak of, so it's wise to keep any sort of non-conformity well-hidden.

What's your take on Neil deGrasse Tyson's answer to a question about why there aren't more women in science? (from 2015, so not recent, but video is circulating on social media (again))

2 upvotes · 5 May 2016 · /r/MensRights

Just lost a lot of respect for him, that's what.

You would think scientists wouldn't be quite so prone to confirmation bias.

Who created TRP?

2 upvotes · 5 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

/u/pk_atheist.

Would the expansion and/or strengthening of Covenant Marriage be a good thing?

2 upvotes · 5 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I can't imagine not being able to take his name. Its... belonging to him. Sharing a name with my kids. A marquee sign that we are a family. So, that is a status issue

That makes sense.

Seems like the problem is that what women really want (acknowledgement of family status from their tribe) has been shackled to something certain people want to help women with, but which actually hurt women because they make men refuse the deal (family courts, no-fault divorce, default female custody, draconian alimony and child support, VAWA and "predominant aggressor" policies, etc).

Only a few men are standing up on a soapbox saying "no marriage", but many, many men are ambivalent, avoiding, and dragging their feet.

The takeaway point is that there's no inherent conflict between women's desire to form stable families, and men's desire not to be subordinated, humiliated, and reduced to second-class citizens. The conflict was created by white knights who are either genuinely stupid and unable to see the consequences, or cynically courting the female vote.

, or maybe a "someone has to eat shit here and you love him so much you'll submit and eat it yourself."

Again, an artefact of the system. We all know that submissive behaviour is attractive in women, and unattractive in men. So if someone has to submit...

But submissive behaviour involves trust, and when we speak of it in the abstract, women often picture themselves asked to submit to an unknown, generic, imaginary "man". Hard to have a trust response to that.

The most convincing thing for the RPS anti marriage stance is not divorce rape/restraining order/she'll cheat. All that is overblown.

I'm not quite sure a 50%ish divorce rate is quite so negligible as all that.

t is that the power is in my hands. I don't want it, I shouldn't have it, it is insane that women can devote themselves to being a Biblical (or secular submissive) wife and yet husbands are still constantly undermined structurally.

Yes, this is still the larger problem. It breaks our whole dynamic. One of the most basic observations of the red pill is that male-dominant dynamics increase attraction for most women, and most men. It works. But we live in a femdom society, and it's gotten to the point where the law is starting to enforce this, both in practice, and as black-letter law. (Expect to see more of this in the future.)

Thank you for the thoughtful posts. Sometimes it takes reading a male centered principle multiple times in multiple ways for it to really sink in.

You're welcome.

Would the expansion and/or strengthening of Covenant Marriage be a good thing?

2 upvotes · 4 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Part Two:

So what do we (men), do? What do we (everybody) do?

The answer to the first question is that these two things are orthogonal. How men treat their partners need have nothing to do with what contracts they make or don't make with the government.

Buy a house, have kids, get a dog, hell, have a big church party if you want. Just don't sign the papers.

The second question is the interesting part.

No, I would not restore the traditional arrangement. Why not? Because it's no longer viable. It wasn't killed by feminism. It was killed by technology.

"Get married a virgin, and spend your life with one partner" is totally doable in an agrarian society when people are getting married at 15. But nowadays people can't get married at 15, because you can get married when you can afford a home and a family. 15 year olds these days can't afford to feed themselves, much less start a family.

What's different isn't the 15 year olds, it's our economy. Nowadays, people don't economically "launch" until about 25 or so. Different skill sets. Oh, we could push that back a little by scaling back the useless college degrees, but not by a lot.

And you can't really expect people to wait until 25. Most of the people I know were virgins at 15. I don't know anyone who was a virgin at 25.

So we can't just stuff the djinni back in the bottle. What's done is done.

So, a new stable system would have to be created, and it would most likely be a radical departure from anything we are familiar with.

What can I do to softly introduce RP concepts to children/pre-teens?

2 upvotes · 4 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

Challenge him to do new things, explore, and solve his own problems. Praise or express admiration when he is bold and tries something. Express a regard of failure as a temporary state.

Q4A: Is paying for sex pathetic?

2 upvotes · 3 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Poor men pay whores to fuck them.

Rich men pay whores to go away afterwards.

There is a certain point of wealth above which committing to a woman becomes dangerous, not only to your fortune, but to the many people whose jobs depend on that fortune.

Tiger Woods' former wife is a baby sitter with three-quarters of a billion dollars. How much do you think that comes to per sex act?

If they did it twice a day, every day, for ten years, that's over 100,000 dollar per.

Whores are a rich man's best option.

If I actually want an LTR, is it okay to let the girl know?

2 upvotes · 2 May 2016 · /r/askTRP

You want a relationship, but you don't necessarily want a relationship with her. Convincing you of that last part is her job.

Can a plate earn commitment? What must they do to get the upgrade?

2 upvotes · 2 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Can a plate earn commitment?

All commitment must be earned.

What must they do to get the upgrade?

Inspire men to want it.

And why is the good sexual chemistry/connection something to count against a future partner?

It isn't.

A woman with a long sexual history isn't a bad choice because she had sex. She's a bad choice because none of those men ever kept her, and it's probably because they know something you don't.

Q4RP: What do you think about gay people?

2 upvotes · 2 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I've seen plenty of gay hate on the TRP sub.

It's probably from black guys. They all hate gays.

What is there to debate?

2 upvotes · 2 May 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Is TPB not a group you consider yourself part of, then?

Took girl home, met with resistance when trying to take clothes off (even the tshirt)

2 upvotes · 30 April 2016 · /r/askTRP

Do you have Asperger's Syndrome or something?

This is not ASD. This is you completely and totally failing to sexually arouse her in any way, shape, or form.

You've been reading, you think "dominance is attractive, I shall keep pushing", and you do stupid shit like this.

You're not coming off as dominant, you're coming off as the thirstiest man alive.

Just cut it the fuck out. Dial that shit way back.

/r/TRP is too black and white

2 upvotes · 29 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Too black and white for what?

Is nature really so cruel?

2 upvotes · 29 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The grand point is not just to "survive and replicate". The end-goal is perfection. Nature wants to preserve life until there is no more struggle to do so, and life can be harmonious and the struggles can end.

Idealist twaddle. "Nature" is a construct, a metaphor, and it wants nothing and has no goals.

Female aware of TRP

2 upvotes · 28 April 2016 · /r/askTRP

It sounds like what you are trying to do is open some of sort of dialogue.

Essentially:

Okay, women generally do X, Y, and Z. And you guys use that to attract women. But what does it mean for me? What would I do with this knowledge?

It's just knowledge. What you do with it is up to you. And that has to depend on what you want.

askTRP isn't for you, it's specifically for men to get advice. TRP can give you knowledge, but not advice. RedPillWomen is for you, but a consensus hasn't really emerged there, so expect a lot of theories and countertheories.

Female aware of TRP

2 upvotes · 28 April 2016 · /r/askTRP

Why exactly would you want to not be that way? What's the goal, here?

Goldilocks and the Three Metabolic Pumps. (Trigger Warning: Science!)

2 upvotes · 27 April 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

No. The fructose and starch pumps churn out fat, not muscle. To gain muscle you have to run the weak pump hard, and lift heavy.

Have any of you had a LTR where you had an agreement to see other women but she only saw you? (not just a plate, like the mother of your kids serious)

2 upvotes · 26 April 2016 · /r/askTRP

Male jealousy is inherent, female jealousy is cultural (because there is no such thing as maternity fraud).

This means that this sort of thing can work... but usually in either a very male-dominant culture (Islamic, etc), or a very male-dominant relationship. If the woman perceives the side chick(s) as "not a threat", jealousy can very quickly vanish.

You need tight game, though, because other women will explode in fury (they don't want their own men getting ideas), and try to shame her into putting a leash on you. So she has to care way more about what you think than what other women think.

Also, it will not last if you're using high SMV to leverage it on her. She may put up with it for a while to keep you, but eventually she'll break down crying in the parking lot one day, and then over and over again until she's gone. You have to actually get her buy-in.

If you actually do get that buy-in, though, women are perfectly capable of being happy with that.

Male jealousy is the fear that someone else will fuck your girl.

Female jealousy is the fear that the other girl he's fucking will steal him from you.

Question on how to fuck MILFs

2 upvotes · 25 April 2016 · /r/askTRP

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3ii8vd/infatuation_is_not_the_only_form_of_oneitis/

Yahoo: a shining example of female leadership running a company into the ground.

2 upvotes · 23 April 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

I've said it several times... there is a certain threshold of net worth above which a relationship becomes very, very dangerous, and only prostitutes make financial sense. A poor man pays prostitutes so that they will have sex with him. A rich man pays prostitutes so that they will go away afterwards.

Were one of my small ventures to take off and leave me sitting on a fortune of say, 100 million US dollars, I would be sure to pay any woman I had sex with, put on a retainer any woman I had repeated, ongoing sex with, and to never have just one of those (always either none, or at least two).

This would protect me from the possibility of any woman arguing in court that:

- She was my romantic partner.
- Therefore she was my partner.
- Therefore she was my full and equal business partner.
- Therefore she contributed 50% to my success.
- Therefore gib her dat.

The problem isn't even women getting things they didn't contribute to. The problem is that when a woman has an asset large enough to require management rather than simple ownership, she doesn't know how to do that, and doesn't know that she doesn't know. Sometimes, she learns, but usually, she destroys its value.

Michaelia Cash's message to men - "take lower paid jobs"

2 upvotes · 22 April 2016 · /r/MensRights

So, sort of an unemployment minister, then.

"Token Resistance is Common"

2 upvotes · 21 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, put away the fainting couch. What are you, the love child of Jack Thompson and Tipper Gore?

I just told you precisely how and why no one was getting hurt.

And I just told you precisely why it bothers you so much.

I find no diversion in having a debate with a reflex. It's like talking to someone's patella. Sympathy and empathy are not required, nor asked, but it sure would be nice if you could master your emotions and think.

Womens death brigade' poster subtextually threatens genital mutilation as punishment for 'manspreading' (found on a train in Portsmouth).

2 upvotes · 19 April 2016 · /r/MensRights

Really, this kind of thing is as meaningless as the "Species War Small Rodent Death Brigade" going around threatening cats and dogs.

The reason they can post this shit is that everyone knows women are small, weak, and helpless, and the notion of them physically attacking a man who's fighting back is a joke.

I hope this gets left up. So that men can sit right under with their knees three feet apart, reminding everyone how useless and pathetic feminists are.

The purple-haired fatties who put this up are just trying to soothe their own wounded egos. Because they're not attractive or feminine enough to use male power to their own advantage, and not tough or masculine enough to oppose it. They're just repulsive wastes of skin who hate femininity because they can't do it, and hate masculinity because they can't appeal to it.

So let them sit at home and fantasize about castrating men. The closest they will ever come is taking their latest cat to the vet.

"Token Resistance is Common"

2 upvotes · 19 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yep. Socially, these guys have training wheels on and RP is putting them in a position where they can potentially hurt someone and fuck up their lives while pretending to be Chad.

I get why you might think that.

But what's going on is that you're just kind of looking at all this stuff, thinking about it a bit, and saying "here's what I think might happen".

And I see that through the lens of the actual experience of working with other men, both here and in person, for years, and seeing what works and what doesn't.

To be honest, the struggle isn't to keep these guys from doing something crazy. The struggle is to make them do something bold. So I get why you're holding that fire extinguisher... but you don't get that we are all hip-deep in water, it's raining like Thor tore the sky open, and the levee just broke.

Don't worry so much. You'll just make yourself sad.

Dick Health

2 upvotes · 19 April 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Chemicals you touch and eat every day that is "poisonous"? Surely they all have different levels of effects but this guy makes it sound like if you eat sugar you'll kill all your systems and you're fucked.

Ooooooh, I see.

This is about the word "poison".

When most people say "poison", they mean acute toxin. Something that damages you with just one small dose.

Cyanide. Arsenic. Ricin. Snake venom.

When biochemist says "poison", he means acute OR chronic toxin. Something where exposure causes damage, and damage can build up over time. Alcohol is a poison. So is meth. So is sugar.

So:

- If you want heart disease, diabetes, high blood pressure, no energy, weak muscles, and a flabby physique, eat what typical westerners eat.
- If you want to be 16% body fat, don't eat prepackaged foods with added sugar/HFCS. Don't drink soda.
- If you want to be 12% body fat, don't drink juice. Don't eat desserts except on the occasional cheat day.
- If you want to be 10% body fat, be the sugar nazi.

I assume that most TRP men do not wish to be mediocre.

The Guardian does a whole article on TRP calling it "the heart of modern misogyny." Thoughts?

2 upvotes · 15 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I couldn't be more pleased.

We knew from the beginning that this was going to be a hit piece. We talked about this. We planned for this.

These SJW knuckleheads do not understand that every time they do this, they are playing right into our hands.

A Note on Plates

2 upvotes · 14 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

I'd also say that not having sex until you're explicitly exclusive would be a workable solution....

Except it's not. First of all, explicitly exclusive is just a promise. It's not an emotional bond. You can be explicitly exclusive one week and dumped the next.

It's the bond that keeps you together that is the relationship, not some words. Words are nothing. If all you have is words, guess what you have.

Second of all, a lot of men ain't gonna go for that. Why? Because men don't like that. They only ever went for it as part of a compromise. Now that this compromise is broken, men aren't going to keep holding up their end of it.

If you want men to do something, you have to provide them with an incentive. This is about getting what you want by doing that. Not about sitting around and deciding what you want and just expecting men to give it to you, regardless of whether it is in their best interest or not.

The cornerstone of female sexual strategy cannot be the assumption that men are stupid. Because not all of them are.

SMV on paper vs real life

2 upvotes · 14 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

I love this term, and I am going to steal it.

A Note on Plates

2 upvotes · 14 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

I think that's arguing semantics.

Point is, there is some period of time, whether people plan it that way or not, when a couple has had sexual contact, but just hasn't put in the time for a breakup to be really emotionally difficult.

So, sex, but with low emotional investment on his part. "Plate" may not be the word people like, but it carries the same hazards.

The only other option is to try to get a man to emotionally invest before sex. That's probably not realistic nowadays, when sex is so cheap and easy.

Sure, one can hold out for a promise, but that's not emotional investment. That's just something he says. Men lie, too. And also change their minds. A relationship is when he really doesn't want to lose you, for reasons other than sex... in other words, when bonding has occurred.

Q4Feminists: What feminist writings do you wish that RPer would read?

2 upvotes · 14 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's not so much the conversations that it kills, as it is trust... the sort of ordinary baseline trust that one generally has in others that they are speaking honestly, and communicating in good faith, until proven otherwise.

Many women who call themselves feminists do so because they just sort of took the movement's word for what it said about itself. And so they are puzzled when they are confronted by a white-hot resentment from men whenever the word is brought up.

This is because they have absolutely no clue how the men on the street experiences feminism... what he hears it saying about him, what he sees its influence doing to his legal rights, his reputation, and his life.

And this is not because men aren't saying it, it's because any man who says it is immediately dismissed as a crazy radical... despite the fact that the majority of men actually agree with him, but are simply too scared to say anything out loud.

So he also experiences feminism as a sort of listening disorder resulting in a severe malfunction of the ears. Which, of course, makes him more vehement. Why moderate the tone if only men are going to listen anyway?

So what happens is that feminists try to come to the bargaining table with "cut out all the misogyny, and then we can talk", when the reality is that men aren't interested in talking anymore, because women aren't listening, and we don't really need them for anything besides sex.

Passion

2 upvotes · 13 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

Parable of the sower. Keep in mind that I don't really have any particular need for this or that woman to learn anything.

That's up to them.

They can either learn what men like, and have husbands, or rationalize and have cats.

I'm just here to say what I have to say, and it don't make no nevermind to me.

If you're a 5'8" autistic guy, pursuing women in the traditional PUA/TRP sense is a statistically useless venture.

2 upvotes · 12 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Did you test this?

Balding at 19 and can't get over it

2 upvotes · 12 April 2016 · /r/askTRP

When pushed, pull. When pulled, push.

When balding, shave head.

Better to, or not to, tell boyfriend about best friend hitting on me?

2 upvotes · 11 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

with that in mind, it seems like the opinions on how to address this are still split. I'm hoping someone can give me actual redpill reasoning to help me devise a plan. thanks again!

"Commitment" is a mental state, not a set of promises or declarations.

It means how invested you are in your mate, and, more importantly (because men are the gatekeepers of commitment) how invested he is in you.

So, assuming commitment is something you wish to maximize (duh), there's only one question to ponder:

Will your mate's commitment to you be increased or decreased, by telling him?

Possibilities are:

- You don't tell, and he doesn't find out. No change.
- You don't tell and he does find out. Highly reduced commitment due to damaged trust.
- You tell.

The last case is more complicated. It is effectively "dread game", because it shows you having other options. However, it also shows you "mate guarding" yourself, which is a very trust-increasing move. You didn't have to tell him. But you did.

On the whole, I would say that telling is not only the safest course, but also has potential positive results. It shows your mate that you are "all in" with him, and not hedging bets, keeping secrets, or looking for other options.

I recommend not only telling him, but doing so immediately, and avoiding contact with this other man at least until your mate returns.

Your concerns about damaging their friendship are laudable, but that's not your call to make. It is your mate decision, not yours, what he wishes to do about what his friend did. You didn't instigate this. The "friend" did. It makes no sense to drive a wedge into your own relationship in order to shelter him from possible consequences of his own actions.

Reddit Has a New & Improved Block User Feature.

2 upvotes · 6 April 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Personally, I would love to be blocked by blue pillers, so I don't have to listen to their fatuous objections to some caricature of my thinking.

I would hate being blocked by some of the more thoughtful fence-sitting types in this subreddit, because they ask intelligent questions, raise objections I think are good and worth talking about even when they are wrong, and generally help me hone my thinking.

Seduction in One Picture.

2 upvotes · 6 April 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

So I can conclude that in the end it boils down to getting over that fear of rejection, in other words having the willingness to do it?

Yes. And that starts with being aware that if you tease women and give them a hard time, they will like you more, not less.

Once you start trying this, you will learn through practice what's "too mean", "not mean enough", and "just right".

I am a 29-year old virgin woman. Is it too late to search for a LTR?

2 upvotes · 5 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

Is it too late for a 29-year-old virgin woman to find love?

At what point in the future will you be younger?

Trying carries the risk of failure, but giving up carries a certainty of it. The only thing giving up gives you is an excuse.

Do you want love, or an excuse?

What's a RPW to do when she suspects chemistry/mutual attraction, but knows he can't pursue because of professional reasons

2 upvotes · 4 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

I think you have to walk a middle path here.

You don't want to overtly pursue him right now, because you could get him in trouble... or make avoid you to prevent such.

By the same token, you need to make your contact with him personal enough that it can naturally continue after you are no longer his student. He obviously cannot initiate if you are no longer around him.

From what you say, it sounds like he is indeed attracted to you. That's good, but the act of contacting a former student without a few subtle "come-hither" signals is quite a step, and not every man is going to do that.

I would recommend that you find something that makes it dead obvious to him that you are interested, while remaining plausibly deniable to others. Baking something for him is actually a pretty good idea.

Also, it occurs to me that if you can make it not seem too forced, you could borrow a book from him (all professors have shelves and piles of book in their offices). This gives you an excuse to see him again, and something to talk about when you do.

In Need of Some Advice

2 upvotes · 4 April 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

After lurking TRP and RPW for a long time, I've come to realize that I am what they would call a "plate".

I'm not so sure. The way we use the term "plate" in TRP, it means "a woman you only see for sex".

I am 26 now and I see my friend's around me getting married and I'm starting to wonder "why not me?"

My Bf says that he loves me and is "committed" to me, but that he will NEVER marry me

In TRP, I advise men to avoid marriage (under current laws) under any circumstances. I've written a great deal on why it carries only risks with no rewards. But, for you marriage does have some real advantages, and it makes sense for you to want it.

Your SO obviously has a hard-line position (perhaps he's been reading my stuff). In order for you both to be happy, there's going to have to be some sort of negotiation.

The first step is to figure out why you want marriage, in the sense of what it is about marriage that you want. You see friends getting married, think "why not me"... but what exactly, what part of the deal they are getting, is important to you?

One of the principles that is tossed about here is bring your man your problem, not your solution.

"Let's get married" is a solution. A plan. We've already established that he doesn't like that plan, so even if you manage to railroad him into accepting it, he'll be resentful and suspicious. Not good.

However, if you can figure out the problem that marriage is supposed to solve for you, then you can tell him about that directly, which opens up the following possibilities:

- He can decide on his own to give you marriage, because he now understands why it's important to you. I would of course advise against HIM against that, but you might get him to ignore me.
- He can come up with some alternate way to give you the thing you actually want out of marriage (social status as his confirmed mate, public acknowledgement that you are more than just a "plate", children, the big fancy wedding party you always dreamed of, whatever), without actually entering into a legal agreement which I have told him (in TRP) will make him into a second-class citizen (which I believe).
- The two of you can talk about why he feels marriage is not an option, and you can discover that once you understand better why he's not okay with this, you're comfortable going along with his way.
- Or, if he's unable to find a plan that works for the two of you, you can at least make an informed decision about whether you want the kind of relationship you desire with a man that isn't your first choice, or a kind of relationship that isn't your first choice with a man who is.

So, when you feel bad about your friends getting married when you aren't, what exactly is it that you envy?

How do I tell my human sexuality prof. that using evolutionary psychology to get laid is not immoral?

2 upvotes · 4 April 2016 · /r/askTRP

Don't argue about this stuff with randoms from your local area.

Who/what are Red Pill women?

2 upvotes · 1 April 2016 · /r/askTRP

Glad to hear it.

I admit even though I may want kids one day, I'm not confident enough in myself that I think I'd be able to get a quality women to settle down and have kids with me without a ring.

Hang out here a while. There's no quick and easy way to learn to be attractive, but we do have tricks to deprogram bad habits and misunderstandings of female psychology that block you.

What do you ladies do for fitness? What are your opinions on weight lifting and pole fitness?

2 upvotes · 30 March 2016 · /r/RedPillWomen

Are girls who lift weights attractive to guys? Or is it offputting?

Yes, because who would want to look like this hideous troll?

asked my gf for a bj she said "help yourself out", what is the appropriate response?

2 upvotes · 28 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

She's earned her spot as an ltr

That means she is level 2 in the Bitch Management Hierarchy.

I always feel a bit guilty when I treat her like an upgraded plate

An LTR is an upgraded plate.

Remember what the reward is for being promoted? It is greater and greater degrees of involvement and direction from you.

This means that you have a responsibility to correct her bad behaviour, and reward her good behaviour. You're in charge, and you can no more allow her to do whatever than you can allow your dog to run wild, tipping over people's garbage. Rewarding and punishing her is not only something you can do, it's something you must do. It's your job.

The fact that she's earned her way to LTR means she gets corrected instead of nexted.

"The Blue Pill is designed to destroy the family and it's a success." Then those who are spinning plates are actually embracing Blue Pill game?

2 upvotes · 28 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Your logical fallacy is:

Converse Error.

Who/what are Red Pill women?

2 upvotes · 28 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

There are no "red pill women". The "red pill" is about sexual strategy for men.

There's a subreddit calling itself that. But I could call myself a square circle if I wanted. It wouldn't mean I was suddenly an impossible shape with both four and zero corners.

Is pegging considered gay ?

2 upvotes · 28 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

Yeah, sort of. But don't obsess over what women mean by this or that.

Learn to regard them as children. And learn to expect that, just like children, they will sometimes just say weird stuff.

If she wants to do something you're not into, just don't do it.

Women of PPD: straight forward question: what are you angry at (in the context of the discussions on PPD)?

2 upvotes · 25 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You do realize that not caring whether you are "offended" is part of the lesson, right?

When you say "That's unfair, and I'm offended", you are really saying "Stop that, or I will criticize you, say you are a big meanie, etc".

But social disapproval has stopped being effective against a lot of young men due to overuse. Blue pillers are essentially The Girl Who Cried Sociopath. Young men can no longer distinguish your voices from feminists talking about "mansplaining", "manspreading", "manslamming", "stare rape", etc.

In essence, your mainstream definition of "fairness" is a weapon that is only ever wielded against them, never on their behalf. It's become nothing but a con game. So they opt out.

Go ahead. Be angry. Say so. Talk about it endlessly. You won't make them stop. They'll never stop until people start worrying for them as much as they worry about them.

And I'm not holding my breath.

Women of PPD: straight forward question: what are you angry at (in the context of the discussions on PPD)?

2 upvotes · 25 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't think that it's fair to say (and in TRP it's often 100% serious and not just venting) that all women are x, y, and z

Of course it's not fair. That's the whole point. Why would they bother to be fair, when women aren't fair, and no one is calling them out on that?

Men lose the mating game because they try to be fair, while women are just looking out for number one.

In TRP, we teach men how to stop losing, by not playing fair with people who don't play fair with them.

It works.

Women of PPD: straight forward question: what are you angry at (in the context of the discussions on PPD)?

2 upvotes · 25 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I had a childhood friend who liked to play a little trick at parties. He would say, as if in conversation, but in a louder voice than usual: "The trouble with women is that they take everything personally."

Usually at least two or three women would get angry at him, thereby proving his point.

These men you are talking about are expressing their frustration with the fact that most or all of the women in their lives, women they have to deal with, have zero accountability, zero personal responsibility, and are defended, vigorously, against any effort to make them take responsibility for any thing, by people, who, like you, are offended.

So instead of getting mad at these guys, trying getting mad at the hordes of women who are tarnishing your reputation.

Because who do you really want to stand with? People who believe accountability and responsibility are things, or people who don't, but have the same genitals?

Q4BP: What's one consistent thing about TRP that frustrates or annoys you and makes you wish you could just get across to RPer that it's false/untrue?

2 upvotes · 25 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think you've lost track of the ball, here.

In order for men to stop hiding emotions, it not men who would have to change. It is women.

Even if that were possible (it isn't... sexual attraction is not a choice), why would women do it? They have no incentive. Their attractions create problems for men, not for themselves.

So even if they could change, they wouldn't.

You cannot go against nature
Because when you do
Go against nature
It's part of nature too

If your question is "there is this one girl", you're doing it wrong.

2 upvotes · 25 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

/u/CrazyHorseInvincible, paging: Please add flair point for OP.

Is every man's dream woman a woman with the sex drive of a man?

2 upvotes · 23 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No.

Male and female sex drives aren't just different sizes. They are different shapes.

Men's sex drive is mostly driven by scarcity and opportunity. A man becomes libidinous when he hasn't had an outlet in a while, or when he sees a visual cue for sexual arousal.

A girl's sex drive is most reactive. She becomes libidinous when stimulated in a fashion she likes. Sometimes, this has to do with thoughts or visual cues, but more often with associative memory, or the sensation of being touched.

Q4BP: What's one consistent thing about TRP that frustrates or annoys you and makes you wish you could just get across to RPer that it's false/untrue?

2 upvotes · 23 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

it amazes me that you would take these experiences and conclude that men should hide their emotions from women instead of concluding that society should change

Your mistake is that thinking this comes from "society". It doesn't. It comes from instinct, and thus is beyond our power to change. Therefore, we must adapt to it.

Q4BP: What's one consistent thing about TRP that frustrates or annoys you and makes you wish you could just get across to RPer that it's false/untrue?

2 upvotes · 23 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There's a difference between "not being at your best", and "being completely and totally vulnerable".

The former is something you can get away with every now and then. The latter is an instant love-killer.

Seduction in One Picture.

2 upvotes · 23 March 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

You're still thinking there's some special magic.

There's no magic. Just the willingness to do it.

Do you know how to tease someone?

Q4RP: Why do you think TBP exists?

2 upvotes · 23 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<http://www.spectator.co.uk/2015/04/hating-the-daily-mail-is-a-substitute-for-doing-good/>

[CMV] The only way to defeat obesity in the U.S. is to reject "fat acceptance" and treat it like smoking - ridicule, shame, and treat with contempt those who partake.

2 upvotes · 22 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because your definition of "bad guy" always includes the most logical route.

How does observing anything toxic about the main redpill subreddit count as trolling by the bluepill?

2 upvotes · 21 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

We have a very good reason to be worried about all the people feeding on each other's anger over there.

Which you have thus far neglected to articulate.

Gender Equality in the USMC

2 upvotes · 21 March 2016 · /r/PussyPassDenied

She is asking for a pussy pass merely by standing there.

she was NOT merely "standing there". her response was poorly executed

You misunderstand. I meant she is asking for a pussy pass by standing in the ring with a man. In fact, she is asking for a pussy pass by putting on that uniform.

A bit of perspective on how TRP movement might have come about

2 upvotes · 20 March 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

I don't need to speculate, I was there. Where were you?

Gender Equality in the USMC

2 upvotes · 20 March 2016 · /r/PussyPassDenied

She is asking for a pussy pass merely by standing there.

That's the part you haven't understood. Soldiers don't practice self-defense. They practice combat.

When you put on workout clothing, and practice what I assume is some sort of self-defense oriented, mostly unarmed martial art, you are saying I am ready to make my best effort to survive, should I be so unfortunate as to be attacked by a man.

But when she puts on a uniform, she is saying I am ready to fight men. Soldiers fight other soldiers.

Gender Equality in the USMC

2 upvotes · 20 March 2016 · /r/PussyPassDenied

That's all they have experienced.

It may not be an essential trait of women, but remember that these guys are young, in their early twenties. They have never experienced any other kind of woman.

Gender Equality in the USMC

2 upvotes · 20 March 2016 · /r/PussyPassDenied

This is what happens when girls watch too many Joss Whedon movies.

"Im sorry, I'm not really looking for someone right now"

2 upvotes · 18 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

"I'm not looking for someone right now" == "I'm not attracted to you".

Reporter who spread vile false rape story is quickly condemned--the alleged rapists were Muslims

2 upvotes · 18 March 2016 · /r/MensRights

This could be a great proselytizing tool.

"Convert to Islam, white men, and get your civil rights back!"

Mentally insane girl fucking my head please help

2 upvotes · 18 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

Girl defective. Replace girl.

[CMV] Submissiveness in relationships is an expression of low self-worth and isn't a trait inherit of women

2 upvotes · 17 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm not trying to insult you

So try... not insulting her.

Which business would succeed more. One with all staff female the other all staff male?

2 upvotes · 17 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Is your business a brothel or an aerospace company?

Why do ForeverAlone men fail with women: bad luck or lack of effort?

2 upvotes · 16 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But our desire to cure emotional instability with our magical vaginas is a defining feature of romantic idealism.

This is true.

It is, however, limited to the kinds of emotional instability other than "help-seeking". Tortured artistic geniuses and volatile tattooed bikers don't try to appeal for sympathy in the same way that a damseling woman does. They simply act crazy while being attractive. They don't ask for help... women simply decide for themselves that he needs to bathe in the healing light of her girl parts.

Damseling is attractive in women, and repulsive in men.

Having sex problems - slowly destroying my relationships with women. Investigating further, but what can I do in the meantime for damage control, a temporary fix?

2 upvotes · 15 March 2016 · /r/askTRP

Well, if it's a "she", definitely get rid of her. What the fuck is a woman doing trying to tell you what level of testosterone you should have?

AN endocrinologist might be better, but, failing that, the term you are looking for is "anti-aging clinic" and "bioidentical hormone replacement therapy".

Failing that, buy some bitcoins, and trade them for some testosterone cypionate.

maybe the progressive alienation between men and women isn't that bad if sexbots will be a thing

2 upvotes · 15 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This actually gets interesting, because it depends on how you make your intelligence.

If you have to do it by a very random sort of process, then what motivations your AI will have is hard to say. However, if you can design its motivations, either by direct programming or through guided evolution, then the problem of freedom and rights is easily sidestepped.

You simply make an AI that really, really wants to do whatever you made it for.

A robot can be smarter than its human masters and still happy to clean floors all day if it really really loves cleaning floors. Such a robot wouldn't even see human beings as masters, but as a kind of symbiote that makes floors for it to clean.

The robot apocalypse isn't an uprising. It's the economic obsolescence of the human being; it is the moment when there is nothing a human can do that a robot cannot do faster, better, and cheaper.

Is nerdiness or being a nerd a sexual turn off for women?

2 upvotes · 14 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So, is there something about nerdiness, or nerd culture, that is a sexual turn off? Is there something about it that parches sexual desire, or diminishes it?

Yes. Nerdhood in males is associated with low status, inability to compete socially or physically, and physical unattractiveness.

Demonstrate that none of these apply to you and women won't give a crap about your IT job or your video games.

Many TRP men actually think there are no good women out there.

2 upvotes · 14 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Who cares if they are "out there" somewhere?

What matters to young men is whether they are thick enough on the ground to have reasonable odds of locating one.

Young men are electing for a series of short-term encounters over a longer-term investment because that's what you do when the odds are good, but the goods are bad.

How do you think that Patriarchy hurts me?

2 upvotes · 11 March 2016 · /r/MensRights

I'm horrified and disgusted that hawkcycle is, apparently, enrolled at an institution of "higher learning", and that his participation here is part of an assignment for his gender studies class.

Education is one of our society's sacred cows, and while, in abstract, learning is indeed a fine thing, many people seem to have failed to grasp the difference between the abstract notion of learning, and the concrete formulation of what we, as a culture, call "education".

The point of knowing things is to be able to do things. What does gender studies enable one to do? The question is never asked.

My sister is claiming I'm sexist.

2 upvotes · 11 March 2016 · /r/MensRights

Heh.

Can't you MRAs spot a shit test when one bites you on the ass?

Agree and amplify.

25% of girls' first sex is forced? (last paragraph) Isn't that 1 in 4? It's worse than the 1 in 5 stat!

2 upvotes · 10 March 2016 · /r/MensRights

It seems we have very few actual "journalists" these days; most seem to be activists pushing an agenda. any reputable journalist would have been much more careful with the facts.

Hanlon's Razor: "Do not attribute malice to that which can be adequately explained by incompetence".

Journalists aren't mostly propagandists... they are just lazy and credulous. They take feminists (who are malicious) at their word.

However, one must also keep in mind Grey's Law:

"Any sufficient degree of incompetence is indistinguishable from sabotage."

Swedens Liberal Youth Party suggests men should be able to denounce fatherhood for as long as women can have an abortion

2 upvotes · 6 March 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

So the rights of the child trump the rights of the parent, but if the mother decides to kill it, it's no longer a child, so it doesn't have any rights.

Your mental gymnastics are truly a wondrous thing to behold.

Swedens Liberal Youth Party suggests men should be able to denounce fatherhood for as long as women can have an abortion

2 upvotes · 5 March 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

It should be about what's best for the child, not what's best for mummies and daddies

So how long should a woman's prison sentence be if she has an abortion?

Bisexual women: N Count and wife material?

2 upvotes · 1 March 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No woman is wife material.

Marriage has been redefined into a deal no one could possibly be worthy of.

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/2d9k75/the_redefinition_of_marriage/

Went no contact with a girl I was dating because she was disrespectful. 2 months later she sends me this. What does she want help me decipher these texts trp.

2 upvotes · 29 February 2016 · /r/askTRP

It's an apology, but it talks only about her. Not about you, not about how whatever she did affected you.

It's a good example of what I call "narcissistic remorse". She is unable to empathize with your feelings, and doesn't care about you, but she regrets how her actions made her look, and how they affected her.

CMV: Inexperienced guys should NOT be going for the hot blondes

2 upvotes · 29 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Dye your hair black. Problem solved.

If TRP is amoral why don't they advocate doing drugs?

2 upvotes · 29 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because TRP is about strategy for success, not strategy for self-destruction.

Take steroids, avoid marijuana.

Since TRP will never do it, what helpful piece of advice would YOU guys give to Asian or brown guys in the USA that want to have some luck with the hot blonde types?

2 upvotes · 29 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh gods, it's the Indian race troll again.

"Are you gay?" Shit test answers please

2 upvotes · 28 February 2016 · /r/askTRP

My boyfriend says I am, but I'm not so sure.

NEW Dark Triad Article: Understanding Narcissism - learn about abusive personalities - also discusses sadism and psychopathy.

2 upvotes · 27 February 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Pretty much.

Ronda Rousey admits to having suicidal thoughts, but then looked to her man and thought "I need to have his babies. I need to stay alive." You just can't make up how true TRP is

2 upvotes · 26 February 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Okay, let me explain what you saw there, then.

In the past, you've seen Ronda pounce very quickly, get the fight to the floor, and finish it. Sometimes, repeated pounces were required, but always, they happened.

Here, you saw something different. Or, at least, that's what it looked like.

But the truth is, Ronda was doing the same thing. It looked different because of what Holly was doing. In this fight, Ronda was unable to just charge through that threat zone, the way she has in the past. She kept trying, and Holly made her eat fist every time.

Up against a striker with real power, you have to be able to play their game or you will not be able to close the distance without getting knocked down. And Ronda's punching game is crap. Just watch any video of her punching. Watch it in slo-mo. She raises her shoulders and flares her elbows out. Without having a credible counterthreat in her arsenal, she can't get through striking range reliably and in a good position.

Ronda had no answer to a skilled power hitter because she had never faced one.

Ronda Rousey admits to having suicidal thoughts, but then looked to her man and thought "I need to have his babies. I need to stay alive." You just can't make up how true TRP is

2 upvotes · 25 February 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Do you train in some kind of martial art yourself, or mostly just watch?

Are red pillers what women truly want?

2 upvotes · 23 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP is not and never will be some magical formula that will let you be sexually successful with absolutely any woman.

I see that you are agreeing with us.

We get a lot of young guys who wander in and ask "how can I be successful with this one girl in my English class?".

We tell them, you can't. When you are focused on trying to get one particular woman, like she's special, we call that "oneitis".

You can only be successful with some of the girls you meet. Why? Because it's a game of odds. There is no man who is attractive to every woman. There are only men who are attractive to most, men who are attractive to some, and men who are attractive to very few or none.

The vast majority of men fall into the third category, which mean that if you reach the second, your sexual needs are pretty much taken care of.

Poll: post here if you are a man who can't get sex or affection and who thinks its OK and not a big deal.

2 upvotes · 17 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Then this question does not apply to you.

He said "can't get sex". Not "doesn't get sex".

The term we use on TRP is incel. It's short for involuntary celibate. You, as a voluntary celibate, would be excluded, as would monks, etc.

Is This Man Alpha?

2 upvotes · 17 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Fictional characters have only the thought processes and motivations assigned to them by the author.

Question for TRP: Would you rather date a crazy, fun, hot girl or a stable, nice, but boring average girl?

2 upvotes · 15 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You can't say neither.

Yes, I can.

Neither.

Female prison guard rapes male inmate and the "legalization" of the rape of men by women.

2 upvotes · 14 February 2016 · /r/MensRights

Don't get distracted by orthogonal issues.

The point is that we remember children's needs when comparing them to men's, but forget them when comparing them to women's.

RPers, are there aspects of TRP you would like to see change? Feminists, are there aspects of feminism you'd like to see change?

2 upvotes · 13 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you can explain something without being offensive or derogatory, and relate the same exact information, why wouldn't you do it?

Well, let's see if you can answer your own question in the next sentence.

It drives so many people away.

Nailed it.

Next victim!

How is "women bring nothing to the table" not misogynistic?

2 upvotes · 11 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

How is denying Papal Infallibility not heresy?

CMV: No one needs sex

2 upvotes · 11 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No one needs anything.

On the use of the word 'faggot'

2 upvotes · 8 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<http://www.breitbart.com/tech/2015/12/11/dear-straight-people-im-officially-giving-you-permission-to-say-gay-faggot-and-queer/>

Need some quick help.

2 upvotes · 8 February 2016 · /r/askTRP

Text for logistics only.

Yahoo sued over male discrimination

2 upvotes · 6 February 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

My major is cs - out of curiosity, can you elaborate a little more? I'm interested to hear what flags turned you away

The rule here is "don't board a sinking ship".

Large companies don't have a granular enough view to fire/punish underperforming individuals. So who gets laid off? The most recent hires on underperforming teams, that's who.

And poorly managed teams always underperform, either because lack of leadership is a roadblock to progress, because what passes for "leadership" is a roadblock to progress, or because the mission parameters are impossible in the first place.

Engineers, technical leadership, and middle management in these cases are always going to suffer. Oh, the executives that made the bad decisions suffer in the end. But the people trying to support those bad decisions suffer throughout the process.

Never board a sinking ship.

Why does TRP preach not to move in together with an LTR? Just curious as to the reasons.

2 upvotes · 3 February 2016 · /r/askTRP

Why does TRP what now?

Why is there little to no RP discussion of "poly" or MFF relationships/households?

2 upvotes · 2 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

History called. I think it wants to have a little chat.

Why is there little to no RP discussion of "poly" or MFF relationships/households?

2 upvotes · 2 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

These are two different types of problem.

Polyandry has problems on an individual level. Polygyny has problems only on a societal level.

Common RP Arguments: One BP's Responses

2 upvotes · 2 February 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There are no "waves" of feminism.

Feminism isn't really a school of thought or even a movement. It is a rhetorical algorithm for exploiting male protective instinct to secure more gimmedats.

1. Identify a problem you have, or something you want.
2. Construct a narrative in which the problem, or not having the thing, is a result of cruelty by men towards all women.
3. Tell this narrative to men over and over.
4. Wait for a certain percentage of men to fall victim to their protective instincts and give you what you want.

There has been no change in feminism at all. It just gets applied to new gimmedats as the old gimmedats are secured.

I chose to leave my girlfriend who I love so I can improve, build a business, and meet other woman and have more experiences in life before 35/40... Now for last 3 months I've achieved nothing but fear fear and beta behavior

2 upvotes · 2 February 2016 · /r/askTRP

Concur.

If you want to fuck another woman, go fuck another woman.

Don't dump your girlfriend unless she does something to deserve it.

Men who spin plates shouldn't be bothered by women who do AFBB and women who do AFBB shouldn't be bothered by men who spin plates...right?

2 upvotes · 31 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But is it truly the man's optimal sexual strategy to be unfaithful? What is the point of getting other women pregnant and not supporting them? In nature, those children would have likely died, anyway, so genes would not have been passed on that way.

Was that a joke?

What's the closest thing to a unicorn?

2 upvotes · 30 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

Reins and spurs.

Can no-sex be enough of a reason to make men depressed?

2 upvotes · 30 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

Yes.

Q4Men: Are you okay with women using toys during or after sex?

2 upvotes · 28 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Indeed. There is huge difference between a vibrator as a tool for one partner to use on another, and a vibrator as an alternative to a partner.

A vibrator used instead of a man is essentially a sexbot for legbeards.

A vibrator used by a man on a woman is just another way of getting off.

The same old PIV in the missionary position all the time is boring and kinky. It needs to be varied with things like blowjobs, bending her over the kitchen counter (with spanking and hairpulling), and handcuffing her to the bedposts, then using a vibrator on her and not letting her come until she begs prettily enough.

Remember that women are at their kinkiest with the men they are attracted to the most.

Men who spin plates shouldn't be bothered by women who do AFBB and women who do AFBB shouldn't be bothered by men who spin plates...right?

2 upvotes · 28 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because men who spin plates are AF to women who AFBB.

And women who AFBB are plates to men who spin them.

They inevitably overlap.

What is asktrp's opinion on masturbation as a tool to calm oneself or suppress libido?

2 upvotes · 28 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

"Addiction" is a term with a specific, medical meaning. And I highly doubt that masturbation is addictive in the same sense that alcohol, cigarettes, and sucrose are.

While there are certainly men who jerk it too much, I find that, like too much video games, or too much television, such people are running from something, not running too something.

A man who masturbates to porn as a crutch to avoid social interaction is not going to have his social anxiety removed by swearing an oath to stop anesthetizing himself.

CMV: A woman's past sexual behavior with previous boyfriends has nothing to do with you.

2 upvotes · 26 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I understand your frustration.

But TRP sprang into existence because men noticed that what women say they want has absolutely nothing to do with what they do, or what they respond to. Most of the involuntary celibates we help were that way because they took what women say at face value.

So, if we take women at their word, we are already in fantasyland, with no connection to the real world, and any discussion we have is pointless. Worse than pointless, in fact, because it misleads.

Here's the reality of it. Women have varying levels of kink, but they are always at their kinkiest with the man they desire the most.

RP Men, Gender Choice

2 upvotes · 26 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Nonsense question.

If I were a woman, "I" would not be who I am, therefore "I" would not be a woman, a woman would be a woman.

Is racism a neuromasculine trait?

2 upvotes · 25 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Neomasculine?

Isn't that that Roosh thing? I dunno if he's a racist or not. You'd have to ask him. I don't pay much attention to him.

He doesn't even lift.

Are you offended by Trump's comment implying men are rapists?

2 upvotes · 25 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I see it as illustrative of Donald Trump's character.

He is a realist rather than an idealist.

Idealists think when something bad happens, it's because someone did something wrong, and there should be a law to prevent it from ever happening again.

Realists think that anything that can happen eventually will happen, and the more likely it is to happen, the sooner you can expect that to be.

Q4RP: Construct this scenario

2 upvotes · 25 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Has anyone really been far as decided to use even go want to do look more like?

You've got to be kidding me. I've been further even more decided to use even go need to do look more as anyone can. Can you really be far even as decided half as much to use go wish for that? My guess is that when one really been far even as decided once to use even go want, it is then that he has really been far even as decided to use even go want to do look more like.

It's just common sense.

[CMV] TBP is (self claimed) satire and trying to shame TRP, because TBP don't actually have a rebuttal to the hypergamy claims of TRP theories.

2 upvotes · 22 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because of this they need an outlet. They need intellectual porn. The Red Pill and The Alt Right is that porn . Its exciting, its forbidden and that's exacte why Bloopies can't look away. They need us. Because without us, all they have are other politically correct faggots and that's boring as fuck.

EngSoc cannot exist without an Emmanuel Goldstein for their Fifteen Minutes of Hate.

Because the Fifteen Minutes of Hate is the whole point.

We are the pure and chosen few
And all the rest are damned
There's room enough in hell for you
We don't want heaven crammed.

Is AWALT Due To Heredity Or Environment?

2 upvotes · 21 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Who cares?

TRP's job isn't "explain everything". It's "advise strategy for the state men currently find themselves in".

How effective would this dating strategy be for a man?

2 upvotes · 21 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Nah.

"Treat a 10 like a 5" isn't lesson one, but it's one of the first things we teach. Gotta treat a princess like a whore. Women go bad quick when you give 'em praise or benefits that they didn't have to earn with work.

Yes, AWALT, But Is It Nature Or Nurture?

2 upvotes · 21 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

Who cares?

TRP isn't here to explain the universe. It's here to teach you how to deal with the situation you find yourself in.

Are women unfunny?

2 upvotes · 19 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I know only one woman who can make me laugh. And she's not a comedian.

Women aren't funny.

Girlfriend just left to study abroad, how to handle?

2 upvotes · 17 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

You fucked up LTRing her in first place.

Women are the gatekeepers of sex. YOU are the gatekeeper of commitment.

And "she's reassured me 100 times that she'll come back when its over"?

That's some funny shit. If you weren't the bitch in this relationship, she would be asking you to reassure her 100 times that you would be there to come back to.

In fact, if you weren't the bitch in this relationship, she wouldn't be going.

Dump her and be single until you are able to have a relationship without becoming a thirsty little bitch.

Constant reading of trashy bitchy articles and its effect on one's social perceptions. Hey guys: 30 Reasons Your Tinder Profile Sucks Too

2 upvotes · 17 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I asked them, so you are only all round attracted to 0.2% of men, onlt 0.2% of men women encounter are are LTR material, intimacy and love worthy? 1 in 500 men are worthy of plain Janes?! Can we not form a hierarchy of attractiveness based off this? To which they said, ye but Women are people, we're all different, end of. Then they contacted a moderstor to flag my wuestion so it would get limited distribution.

Why are you trying to reason with a woman?

Don't you get it yet?

They sometimes know what's reasonable, and they sometimes don't, but under no circumstances do they care. They are interested in whatever they can get away with.

If you try to reason with them, they win. Because you are asking them to see things from your point of view. Which they will never do.

If you laugh at them and dismiss their nonsense with scorn, you win. Because they cannot force you to act according to the insane worldview they are trying to sell.

Women have only the power men give to them.

Why does everything have to be a competition?

2 upvotes · 16 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why does everything have to be a competition?

Because you didn't notice it was a competition until the chicks stopped winning.

Is this what a RP divorce looks like?

2 upvotes · 15 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dMiAVYYdDA8>

TRP members regularly claim "The Red Pill doesn't hate women". Well here's a conversation between a RP Vanguard and an EC. Thoughts?

2 upvotes · 15 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Same tactic again?

I think you will do this for a very long time, so long as I keep poking you. Since it's actually yielding some useful hypotheses about female psychology...

Poke.

Social Skills, Dating and Failure

2 upvotes · 14 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

In order to be an involuntary celibate, a man doesn't have to be a loser. All he has to be is not exceptional.

What does TRP think of people who think more with logic than with biological roles?

2 upvotes · 14 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Everyone believes they "think more with logic".

Christian Atheism

2 upvotes · 14 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You have a good point there.

But I think the problem there has not to do with sexual continence, but the fact that this sexual continence was taught through a religious lens.

In my experience, what leads to bad sex is not lack of experience, but lack of passion and enthusiasm. The primary center of sexual excitement is the brain. Inexperienced people who are really into it, and have a good understanding of basic sexual education, can get along just fine.

But what happens when you try to teach sexual continence via religious moralizing is that the sex act itself becomes an occasion of shame and guilt. Religious teaching is unable to make a fine enough distinction to discourage sluttiness without painting sex itself as evil and polluting.

So you end up with a religious view that looks like this:

- more partners: bad
- less attachment to partners: bad
- sexual desire: bad
- more frequent sex: bad
- kinkier sex: bad
- birth control techniques: bad
- sexual pleasure: bad
- sex as a cementing factor in a relationship: shallow and bad

When what you actually want is:

- more partners: bad in women
- less attachment to partners: bad in women
- sexual desire: good
- more frequent sex: good
- kinkier sex: good
- birth control techniques: good

- sexual pleasure: good
- sex as a cementing factor in a relationship: good and vitally necessary

I don't advocate teaching Red Pill values via religion. Religions get the details wrong, don't include the real reasons, and tend to collapse when people realize there's no invisible wizard in charge of the universe.

How would you define patriarchy?

2 upvotes · 14 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I have something against assuming an idea is correct simply because one learned it in a classroom.

Classrooms, like newspapers and television, tend to lend a false air of reliability to statements.

How would you define patriarchy?

2 upvotes · 14 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

My formal education is a lie apparently.

What, you mean someone can just get up in front of a classroom and present their crazy opinions as facts? Surely that's impossible!

How would you define patriarchy?

2 upvotes · 14 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Patriarchy: A paranoid conspiracy theory invented by feminists.

patriarchy: Civilization.

To put the 'wall' into perspective for some guys

2 upvotes · 13 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So, your argument is, if I get my legs blown off, I will be unhappy, because sex roles.

Therefore, I should pretend that sex roles don't real, so I can be okay with having my legs blown off.

TRP members regularly claim "The Red Pill doesn't hate women". Well here's a conversation between a RP Vanguard and an EC. Thoughts?

2 upvotes · 13 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Not quite just that.

You see, the major source of self-esteem and self-image for younger women is the approval of others. Young men like to have that too, but they don't need it if they go accomplish something cool.

But to young women, accomplishing cool stuff feels hollow and unimportant if others don't like them. Their fantasy isn't "being a rock star" or "starting a multimillion dollar company", its "being the prettiest, most popular girl in her high school".

This is why actually reading TRP horrifies these girls so much. Here are hordes and hordes of men who seem to disapprove of them very much.

This stings.

You see, when a man disapproves of a woman, she doesn't need to hate him. Because even if she hates him, his disapproval still hurts... unless she can hold him in contempt. Unless she can prove to herself that the disapproval is the bitterness of a weak man, not the judgement of a strong one.

Girls who take TRP personally aren't trying to discredit it out of hate, but to sustain their own emotional equilibrium.

TRP members regularly claim "The Red Pill doesn't hate women". Well here's a conversation between a RP Vanguard and an EC. Thoughts?

2 upvotes · 12 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Okay, now we get to the payload.

For those of you following along at home, it's clearly obvious that this has become, almost right away, a series of attempts at oneupsmanship, rather than an attempt to settle any particular issue (which it never really was, because the initial question was a gotcha question).

What's important isn't that she is attempting to feel vindicated... it's how she is attempting to feel vindicated. Notice how the initial accusation is that TRP "hates women", but the instant she becomes riled, the instant she feels hurt and is trying to lash out, the accusations change from "you hate women", to "you are emotionally unstable and therefore weak".

This is an implicit admission of the correctness of Red Pill's model of female thought.

When she wants to hurt someone male, she calls him weak, not evil. The admission here is that it doesn't matter if a man is mean or not, what matters is whether he is weak or not.

This is why I can admit to being evil, and show off my evilness in a non-satirical way, over and over and over again, but she still doesn't feel like she has "won", even though that was the original accusation, and she must keep responding. Because evilness doesn't matter. Only weakness.

I actually am kind of a jerk. And I teach other men to be jerks. On purpose. Because being a jerk doesn't matter. The world will not punish them for being jerks. It will only punish them for insecurity.

Our test subject for today knows this. That's why the focus on insecurity. And she knows it's different for women, because revealing her own insecurities bothers her not at all... she knows that's okay for women.

Men can appear to be an awful person, so long as they do not appear to be a weak one.

Women can appear to be a weak person, so long as they do not appear to be an awful one.

This is the red pill.

Is marriage a bad choice for a young woman?

2 upvotes · 12 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, I'm not getting married, for one thing.

Women hate that when they find out. They not only try to have vague and incoherent arguments with me as to why I should (despite not being able to come up with a single concrete reason why it's in my interest to do so), but they have a go at my girlfriend as well.

Typically call her a whore or a "plate" if they are up on the terminology.

By contrast, the last wedding I was at, when it was time for the garter toss, all the single men tried to hide in the crowd. They had to be half-chivied and half dragged up to the front by the bride.

The women were elbowing each other out of the way to catch the bouquet.

So, I don't think we need to make elaborate social arguments at each other. We just have to look at who is trying to get who to participate in this custom... and we will know whose interests it is in.

But I wouldn't worry. There always plenty of thirsty, gullible, naive men out there. They might not be the sexiest guys around, but that's what cheating and no-fault divorce are for.

CMV: There is a general idea on TRP that feminists are holding them back from fucking young hot women

2 upvotes · 10 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Precisely. There's been so much static in this area because the signal was disrupted in the service of some vague notion of "progress" which was never really defined.

One way to understand TRP is that it is the reinvention of masculinity out of sheer necessity. Because nothing else works.

And that required some pretty extensive re-engineering, because most young men today have only ever heard about masculinity through the mouths of those seeking to discredit it.

People have no idea what the 1950s, or Imperial Rome, or the nineteenth century, were like, especially regarding their guidelines for male behaviour, because our popular layman's notion of history is told to us by those whose goal is to convince us that the entire past consisted of Orwell's image (from 1984) of a boot stomping on a human face.

We cannot look to the past, because the past has been erased. Great and world-shaking events remain, but the realities of daily life have faded and distorted past interpretation.

So the word reinvention is the key here. It's a process of taking the general stereotype, exploring that area, and discovering what happens, in detail, if you start behaving in various permutations of that stereotype.

Make Someone Happy

2 upvotes · 10 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I do not control other people's emotions.

One Thing Red-Pillers Lack:- LOVE

2 upvotes · 10 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

/u/HumanSockPuppet's Bitch Management Hierarchy is basic RP material.

Don't knock physics if you haven't finished reading the introductory textbook yet.

CMV: There is a general idea on TRP that feminists are holding them back from fucking young hot women

2 upvotes · 10 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There is, however, another side to this story.

Feminism does prevent men from getting laid, but not via its effect on women. Instead, it does so via its effect on men directly.

You see, one of the core tenets of feminism is that stereotypical sex roles are

- Unnatural.
- Externally imposed.
- Morally bad.

Thus, it tends to bombard men with (largely unsolicited) behaviour advice whose primary goal is to make them act less masculine. And it doesn't really care what effect this has on those men's lives.

Men who listen to this become the equivalent of someone with no money at all... it doesn't matter that the food is cheaper at MacDonald's, they still don't get to eat. Feminist advice to males creates a man that not even sluts will have sex with.

So feminism has several effects on the sexual marketplace:

- It frees young women up to have as much sex as they want.
- It prevents old women from having non-feline companionship (because of what they did as young women).
- It supplies non-feminist-influenced men with an abundance of low-quality pussy.
- It prevents feminist-influenced men from having sex very often, if at all.
- It reduces the supply of relationship-worthy women for all men.

So a man who is gaining sexual attractiveness moves through three stages:

1. Hurt by feminism (because it keeps him in a state of sexual deprivation).
2. Helped by feminism (because it supplies him with sluts).
3. Hurt by feminism (because it turns the quality women he would like to focus on into low-value sluts).

CMV: There is a general idea on TRP that feminists are holding them back from fucking young hot women

2 upvotes · 10 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It depends on who you are.

Some men want to have sex with as many different women as possible. Some men want to develop intimacy with one woman (or a few women) who are as close to their ideal mate as possible.

We really get both types in TRP. Now, the variety seekers are more visible, so often men will post questions wondering if the other style is endorsed or recommended:

"Help, I can't get it up unless I actually like a girl. "

"Sluts turn me off."

"But what if I want a relationship???"

"I've learned the basic material, and I get go out and get sex without much difficulty. But it's all started to feel so... empty."

Men who say things like this want a relationship (and sometimes they know they do, and sometimes that hasn't hit them yet).

What we teach them is that TRP isn't about what your goals should be, it's about how to achieve them. The same techniques work for building a relationship.

Now, there's some additional advice we have to give this second category of men... and that comes back to the original topic.

In an environment heavily influenced by feminism, there are far fewer relationship-worthy women. (Because feminism characterizes the traits that make a woman relationship-worthy as flaws if not oppressive brainwashing.)

This means that men who want a relationship have a much harder road ahead of them. Because they can make themselves attractive, but they cannot make the women around them relationship-worthy. They have to find that quality rather than creating it.

Feminism is to sex what MacDonald's is to food. It's cheap, and you won't starve, but the quality available leaves a lot to be desired.

Thoughts on #wastehistime2016

2 upvotes · 10 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you follow twitter, you end up listening to a lot of twits.

Question for Blue Pill women; Would you have casual sex with a man you KNEW was Red Pill if you sincerely thought you would enjoy it or were enjoying it? Or would his beliefs deter you?

2 upvotes · 10 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why are you asking this?

Never accept what women say... watch what they do.

Don't trust advice from a computer screen

2 upvotes · 10 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Hmmm. Here's your Unconscious Irony Award.

CMV: Men who only pay attention to hot women are just as bad as women who chase chad

2 upvotes · 7 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Morally bad?

Or unskilled?

If only a verbal "yes" means sexual consent, are all nonhuman animals rapists? Were all pre-language homonids rapists?

2 upvotes · 5 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So the legal definition of rape is the only one? Nothing is rape if there is no law?

Okay, then, my question is answered.

Pre-language homonids were not rapists no matter what they did, because there were no laws back then. And animals cannot be rapists because they are not actors under law.

If only a verbal "yes" means sexual consent, are all nonhuman animals rapists? Were all pre-language homonids rapists?

2 upvotes · 5 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The original question was for bluepillers. They use the two senses of the word interchangeably and do not draw a distinction.

If only a verbal "yes" means sexual consent, are all nonhuman animals rapists? Were all pre-language homonids rapists?

2 upvotes · 5 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Not willing wade through that cesspit to find it for you, but here is what set them barking.

Debate: Is it beneficial for a man to be masculine?

2 upvotes · 4 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes, it is.

Debate: Is it beneficial for a man to be masculine?

2 upvotes · 4 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Beneficial to whom?

[CMV] RP is Anti-Feminist Activism

2 upvotes · 4 January 2016 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because everyone should get a fair chance to look in the mirror, even you.

Should you ever AMOG a guy that has way more influence than you and may even afford you some social support in the future?

2 upvotes · 4 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

What do you get out of it?

TRP Saved me, Whats next?

2 upvotes · 4 January 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

I think we're hung up on the semantics of the word "commitment" here.

What, exactly, I am seeing as a beta trait is making a woman relationship-oriented promises. Promising to stay with her, promising to be monogamous, etc.

A woman must earn those things from you every day with her behaviour, not expect them as part of the deal.

How do you stay physically attracted to the same girl after 5+ years?

2 upvotes · 4 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

There is a difference between being bored of someone, and being starved for variety.

Try cheating on her. If this reignites your desire for her, then you're a perfectly normal and healthy male... most of us need a little strange now and again.

If you're excited by the new girl, but still not by her, there's a problem which you haven't consciously realized yet.

TRP Saved me, Whats next?

2 upvotes · 3 January 2016 · /r/TheRedPill

Commitment isn't beta, it's committing to a shitty woman or on a woman's terms that is.

Commitment is beta. LTRs are not.

I think the whole "if you're not fucking and chucking chicks, you're a beta" mantra is unenlightened teenage bullshit.

It's a stage, like a rebellious Mormon teenager leaving the church and getting drunk off his ass every night. Only once he is used to the taste of freedom will he be able to know what he wants out of life.

Why Lifting (in particular)?

2 upvotes · 2 January 2016 · /r/askTRP

Yeah, everybody's "heard" it about karate, because everybody's repeating what everyone else told them.

Karate's good if you're training hard, sucks if you aren't, just like everything else. It's the training regime, not the curriculum, that matters, because any set of techniques that isn't totally stupid will work just fine if you train seriously, and no set of techniques will work if you don't.

It's like people are taking stupid pills.

Everyone's trying to find the secret set of techniques that are "most effective" in a "real fight", and it's like they're arguing over what colour of car is the fastest.

They just go through fads. First it was judo, then it was karate, then it was jeet kun do, then bjj, thai boxing, mma, in ten years it'll be something else.

There's only one constant through all of this: if you work hard with a bunch of tough guys, you'll learn something. If you play gently with people who can't punch their way out of a paper bag, you won't.

Find a good group to train with, and stop worrying about colours.

Q4RP: If you apply a moralistic lens to TRP, would you agree that TBP has a point?

2 upvotes · 27 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP exists solely for the purpose for viewing things through something other than a moralistic lens.

Because the moralistic lens was stifling discovery and honest discourse.

I have zero interest in the regressive step of viewing TRP through a moralistic lens.

Do TRPers agree with BenGunnSilver - are women ONLY attracted to perfection an nothing else?

2 upvotes · 26 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

/u/user_history_bot BenGunnSilver

Is TRP groupthink?

2 upvotes · 23 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The word "groupthink" can be applied to any group that assembles because of shared ideas.

The correct is question to ask is:

"Do TRP readers read TRP because they agree with it, or they agree with it because they read it?"

Q4RP: Why is the banning policy so strong and authoritarian to defend the sub from being 'corrupted by feminist/leftist dogma' if you're all amused masters of Machiavellianism and Game?

2 upvotes · 23 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If being the god of a space full of useless people who accomplish nothing excites you, then you are welcome to it.

The question you should be asking is "What is the process whereby women destroy male territory if they are not kept out?"

- Men create a space. It is focused on a mission.
- Other men request admission to the space.
- They are required to demonstrate commitment to the mission. If they can, they are admitted.
- Women request entry to the space.

- They cannot demonstrate commitment to the mission, because they have none. They just think the space looks like fun, and contains lots of potential male attention.
- Men refuse them admission to the space, because they have not demonstrated commitment to the mission.
- Women accuse the men of excluding them on account of their sex, and launch accusations of "sexism".
- The men cave in, and admit the women.
- The space now has a significant percentage of women with no commitment to the mission.
- The women now begin to demand changes to the space to make them comfortable or fit their priorities.
- These changes will destroy the mission.
- The women do not care, because they have no commitment to the mission.
- Men who object are silenced with accusations of sexism. If they were not weak to accusations of sexism, they would not have admitted the women in the first place.
- The effectiveness of the space for accomplishment of the mission is destroyed.
- Men who brought mission-related value to the space leave to create a new space.
- Women begin eyeing the new space, because the old space is no longer full of fun and male attention.

This is the cycle of spaces. Men create them, women hop on for the ride, and gradually destroy whatever value was there.

There are several ways to interrupt this:

- Make the space so hostile to women that they do not want to enter it (best, but not always compatible with the mission)
- Refuse women entrance by ignoring accusations of sexism (good, but difficult)
- Don't allow women who have entered it to vote or propose changes (tricky and risky)

CMV: The most attractive men don't want to "spin plates"

2 upvotes · 23 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The strongest men don't want to "lift weights". They are just naturally strong, so they never had to make this big thing out of "lifting". Men who "lift weights" are just bitter because they are weak.

What do you think of this?

2 upvotes · 23 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's funny, and there are (a lot of) women like that, but it could very well have been staged.

Is TRP groupthink?

2 upvotes · 23 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It benefits the mentors, and is bad for the students.

It benefits the mentors because figuring out how to argue TRP concepts to people who don't get it and hate it is a good exercise for learning to better explain them to the students.

It is bad for the students, because they are trying to open their eyes to sexual realpolitik, and they may be vulnerable to being shamed away from information that could help them. Worse yet, resentment at the manipulative and underhanded behaviour of TBP and other haters could drive them in the other direction, leaving them stuck in the anger phase.

So I am not here to convince anyone of anything. I am here to practice rhetoric and dialectic, and to continually revisit the experience of seeing TRP through the eyes of an outsider.

Do redpillers apply different dating tactics depending on a woman's race?

2 upvotes · 23 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No.

Washington Post Calls for 'Feminist Approved' Version of 'Baby It's Cold Outside'

2 upvotes · 22 December 2015 · /r/MensRights

This is the sound of a moderate feminist.

I am attracted to a feminist. What the fuck?

2 upvotes · 21 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

Any time a man comes on here and says "it's not oneitis" in his intro, it's always oneitis.

Why? Because he's saying it's not oneitis... before anyone else spoke up and said it was.

That means he is already thinking it.

Reading statistics is not the same as understanding - a red pill interpretation of behaviour

2 upvotes · 20 December 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

this is a similar effect to what you observe in gender distributions in STEM areas: the richer the country, the less there are.

From experience, this last point is quite valid.

There were much less women pursuing comp sci degrees, but they were not utterly absent. There are far fewer female software engineers, but they are not utterly absent.

You know who is utterly absent?

White women.

Why do so many Redpillers believe that there is no such thing as gender inequality in Western society but believe men are being oppressed by feminists?

2 upvotes · 20 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why do so many Redpillers believe that there is no such thing as gender inequality in Western society

<https://media.giphy.com/media/sRb7yNtTJAtZS/giphy.gif>

I'm an idiot

2 upvotes · 19 December 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Wait, how are you even typing this? Is there a computer in the kitchen now?

So long as you're here, though, quotes are made like this:

> The thing you want to say,
even if it is multiple lines.

----->

The thing you want to say,
even if it is multiple lines.

I'm an idiot

2 upvotes · 19 December 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Nice girls aren't above playing you, because being nice has nothing to do with it.

Playing you is instinctive girl behaviour. So nice has nothing to do with it. Girls will play you if you don't know how to control them. They don't even know they're doing it, a lot of the time.

They don't plan. They just feel things, and then they do stuff.

How to suggest her to lose few kilos?

2 upvotes · 19 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

"Lose a few kilos."

I think Red Pill oversimplifies cheating. CMV

2 upvotes · 18 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you'd like me to quit my job, and devote myself to running in-depth psychological studies, pay me.

Until then, I will continue to serve remedies that have proven effective, even I cannot prove exactly why.

I think Red Pill oversimplifies cheating. CMV

2 upvotes · 18 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If lack of antibiotics doesn't cause infections, then infections cannot be prevented by antibiotics.

When Members of TRP share their views on marriage, we have to account for sample bias and take it with an Ounce of Salt. CMV

2 upvotes · 18 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Okay.

So given that context, TRP's message regarding marriage can be summarized:

Marriage is good for women, and good for society. But don't do it, because it's not good for you.

In order for a society to function in a stable, self-sustaining fashion, it has to incentivize anything it requires.

- If women want you to marry them, they need to make marriage beneficial to you as well as them.
- If society wants you to get married, it needs to make marriage beneficial to you as well as it.

Women and society have both failed to do this. They take you for granted. Do not get married.

I can't help but think of myself as a total faggot.

2 upvotes · 18 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3mwbv3/change_your_actions_and_your_thoughts_will_follow/

Men Lead, Women Follow

2 upvotes · 18 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

In certain ways, yes.

On a genetic/evolutionary level, women's job is to take care of the children, and men's job is to take care of the women.

This means that women need to have an ingrained nurturing/protective instinct towards children. And men need to the same towards women.

This is balanced by reflexive respect and obedience that runs in the opposite direction.

Why women mock "nice guys"

2 upvotes · 18 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If a woman is very small, and she has trouble reaching, I just pick her up. This is fun for everyone involved.

30 year old alpha bachelor in the real world vs 20 year old alpha in college, who is going to have an easier time having sex with tons of attractive women and why?

2 upvotes · 18 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The 30 year old is more attractive in the absolute sense, but the 20 year old is most likely going to get more action. He's around more suitable young women, and he's got more time to chase tail.

How should women react when a man likes her, but she doesn't like him?

2 upvotes · 18 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't philosophize about women "should" do.

Never advocate what you cannot incentivize.

I tell men what they should do to avoid being friendzoned.

Blue Pill Women/Feminist Women are actually MORE susceptible to sleeping with a Red Piller than a Red Pill Woman, and heres why

2 upvotes · 17 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Most women prefer to have fun instead of wage ideological war

Interestingly enough, that's my exact go-to if someone asks that.

"I prefer to have fun, instead of waging ideological war."

CMV: When Red Pillers show their true beta side some months into the relationship and get dumped the problem isn't that they are beta, the problem is that they got into the relationship under false premises.

2 upvotes · 17 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm not denying that people can work on their attractiveness or improve their confidence and self-esteem. You can be yourself even if you improve yourself. You can be the best version of yourself.

So what you're saying is that you have two mental lists, accessible only to you.

One is the list of things you think are changeable, and don't "define who you are". The other is the list of things you think are fixed and immutable, and "define who they are".

If you see someone change their behaviour in any aspect, you simply consult the lists. If what they are changing is on the first list, you're fine with it. If it's on the second list, you're upset because they must be faking it.

When I ask "Where did you get these lists?", I'm fully aware that the answer is your metaphorical rectum.

The problem here was that those guys are clearly guys that want to show compassion, gift her things and shower her with love

Yes, because pornographic movies and other forms of distilled male wish-fulfillment fantasy are so focused on romantic gestures and buying women expensive shit. Do you even think about this stuff before you write it?

Truth is, you are happy to look at any amount of blue pill conditioning imposed from outside and call it someone's "personality", but the moment someone, of his own free will, on his own initiative, tries to condition himself with some red pill material, you're all sincerely concerned that it isn't "natural" to his "personality".

What you really don't like is the nature of the material. "Artificiality" is just something you latched onto when you were casting about for a legitimate-sounding objection.

I say again, your view is "Alphas are born, not made. I am upset that men are not born attractive are becoming that way. Just accept your fate."

And so I ask again, how do you plan to incentivize that?

Would you rather..?

2 upvotes · 16 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

To be fair, men did a good job without feminism making women feel like human fleshlights or walking holes.

Awesome. Good to see we're keeping standards up.

You see, you think your ability to give us an erection is distracting us from seeing you as useful, accomplished, amazing people. In reality, it's distracting us from the fact that most of you are useless chucklefucks with no other redeeming qualities.

A woman who feels valued only as a walking fleshlight is a woman who hasn't put in the work to have some other value. I can't notice what's not there.

Women who have some other value don't whine about being "objectified", because they have other shit going on in their lives.

80/20 Rule

2 upvotes · 16 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I said "if you think promiscuity is bad", which you do

Sticking a fork in a light socket is bad, because it's bad for the person doing it.

Being promiscuous is bad for women, and harmless for me.

Men speak angrily about "sluts" because they feel entitled to women's attention.

DARVO.

CMV: Women Highly Overrate their own Upper Body Strength

2 upvotes · 15 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I do not think that the average woman wishes to inject herself with testosterone in order to be less susceptible to rape.

Oh, it would definitely work. After half a year of 200+ mg of test-c per week, women won't even be attractive enough to have sex with, much less rape.

(Both pills) Does anyone have any idea how to get over "approach anxiety"?

2 upvotes · 13 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Confidence is the merely expectation of success.

Correction: confidence is absence of the fear of failure.

Why does it seem like all women are blamed for the actions of a few?

2 upvotes · 11 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Seem to whom?

I talk and think like a bitch. I have an inferiority complex, and when I bring it to the surface I go full anti-social. I want to learn how to deal with this.

2 upvotes · 11 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3dalxv/dont_talk_to_me_like_a_bitch/

Why do Red Pillers have a problem with female nature?

2 upvotes · 11 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Immature, not mature, you're spiltin' hairs.

You know the answer to this one.

We all know that men like teenage girls more than older women. We all know that the most responsible teenager in the house is a hell of a lot sexier than a tough grrrrl act.

So, you gotta ask yourself... what the fuck are they mad about? Any ideas?

Would you like a hint?

Why do Red Pillers have a problem with female nature?

2 upvotes · 11 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

My point was that when most Red Pillers say that women are children they mean it in a negative way.

You think that because they mad.

But riddle me this... what is it you think they want in a woman? Mature? Or girlish?

Sleeping with a 4/10 to build abundance?

2 upvotes · 10 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

"Abundance" in abundance mentality means abundance of opportunities, not sex.

is feminism a device for western economies to conquer developing countries?

2 upvotes · 10 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Feminism is a device for the super-wealthy to conquer people who work for a living.

I only want to have sex in LTR or marriage, is there something wrong with that? Is that against RP values?

2 upvotes · 10 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

The fundamental mistake you are making is the idea that the same standards apply to your behaviour and women's behaviour.

Men and women are different.

You are able to do certain things that women can't get away with. Women are able to do certain things that you can't get away with.

It is perfectly okay for you not only to have sex outside a relationship, but to have sex outside your relationship. Virginity, monogamy, and fidelity are concepts that are only important for women. You have no obligations in this regard because it doesn't fucking matter.

Each sex's roles are defined by the collective desires of the opposite sex.

Women have to be sexuality continent because men find sluts undesirable for relationships. Men have to be stoic and emotionally repressed because women find male tears unsexy.

It is just as okay for you to expect your girlfriend to be strictly monogamous (while you have a little piece on the side now and again), as it is for her to expect you never to cry on her shoulder (while she dampens yours with some regularity).

Women are allowed to be immature, unstable, and passive. You are allowed to be promiscuous, bossy, and uncommunicative. Because the traits you have to stay away from are the unsexy ones.

Should you ever admit you're a virgin?

2 upvotes · 5 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

I believe she was in her early twenties.

Which type of rich man are women more attracted to? An old money rich or a self made rich?

2 upvotes · 4 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Whoever has the most swagger and confidence.

RPers, tell me about your relationships. Has identifying as RP hindered your relationship success, and/or has keeping that identity a secret worsened the experience at all?

2 upvotes · 3 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I know that there are some RPers in long-term relationships (though I think some have been in those relationships since before they became 'red')

I never became red. I'm a founder. Red became me.

Given the backlash towards the RP, I find it quite difficult to imagine that RPers aren't going to have serious trouble finding a good relationship when so many women seem to utterly despise TRP.

Seem is the operative word. They don't actually despise TRP, they just seem to.

Lotsa people like sausage. Fewer people want to watch the meat grinder in action.

Should I give up on men or continue

2 upvotes · 3 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

It's not for you to say what's necessary or too much. Our house, our rules.

You didn't realize it, but the way you started out was rude, disrespectful, and unfeminine. No one here is going to reward you for that. You behave badly, you get punished. You be nice, you get treated better.

You're already starting to figure out that maybe pushing our buttons or trying to fight men is a bad idea. Just level with us. You obviously feel pretty awful. Tell me that. Tell me why and how. Humble yourself and ask for help, instead of looking for ways to blame your problems on others.

So, we're on the idea that you use male attention and validation, especially white male attention and validation, to stave off shitty feelings that have been eating you for a long time.

If you're ready to talk about that, I'll listen.

Should I give up on men or continue

2 upvotes · 3 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

Ah. Now I see what's eating you.

You're not a 'sperg. You're a junkie. Of the "self-medicating" variety.

Being black made you feel ugly and possibly even inferior, and I'd give 50/50 odds that you have a thing for white men, which would only make it worse.

And your strategy for fighting off this demon was male attention and validation. If the boys were hitting on you, you couldn't possibly be as ugly as you felt inside, right? So that's become your drug of choice.

And it worked pretty well, long enough to make you feel like you'd beaten this thing.

Except now you're in a new situation, and your mojo isn't, for whatever reason, quite working. So the demons are back. And you came asking us for how to get your supply of painkillers flowing again. But you also angled for praise and attention in ways you thought were subtle, because that's become a habit for you. (Which is what 'Winger picked up on.)

You came here because you wanted help. Vulnerability may help you get that. Combativeness assuredly will not.

Are you ready to behave yourself?

Should I give up on men or continue

2 upvotes · 2 December 2015 · /r/askTRP

Now you idiots are accusing me of Asperger's Syndrome?

Yep, we used to give out helpful advice on how to live with it, but now we punish it with belt spankings. How do you plead? Guilty or not?

I would rather be touted as an angry and bitter black female--which is actually the truth

Yes, as I said, you are clearly upset about something. But your writing is so disjointed that I cannot tell what. Or what you are hoping to find here.

Want help? Gotta be nice, or no one will want to help you. And gotta explain yourself clearly, or no one will be able to help you.

Why do some feminists and BPers react negatively to the idea that men are expendable?

2 upvotes · 2 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yeah, say what you want about crazy religious ragheads, but say that they sure as fuck can sing.

Why do some feminists and BPers react negatively to the idea that men are expendable?

2 upvotes · 2 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What if I'm both?

CMV: Unless you are an Alpha Bucks, women have total control over both SMP and RMP at all times. The only logical choice for betas and omegas is MGTOW

2 upvotes · 2 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Never have I had a set of memes on the Internet make me lose a girlfriend and friend of 7 years, need anti-anxiety medication and have to take sick leave for a year to figure out how not to get emotionally and financially used or hurt by half of the world's population. Gratz bro, you got Riku by the balls.

"Why do my eyes hurt?"

"Because you have never used them."

Red Pillers, why are you trying to make it seem like we "misunderstand" responsible teenager theory?

2 upvotes · 2 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It is a literal interpretation of the statement 'women have the mind of a teenager' if you consider the mind and brain synonymous like I do.

Women have the behaviour of a teenager. Mind is a metaphor. Brain is probably different.

Let $\{X\}$ be the set of all elements necessary for WARM. Let $\{W\}$ be the set of elements such that most women in first world countries possess $\{W\}$. If $\{X\} \subset \{W\}$, then $\{W\}$ is sufficient for $\{WARM\}$ If $\{X\} \not\subset \{W\}$, then $\{W\}$ is not sufficient for $\{WARM\}$

Works if we interpret "possess" broadly enough, because some of these factors may be external influences.

If I had to guess, I would say that "held accountable for actions consistently enough to induce learning" is in $\{X\}$, but not in $\{W\}$.

Red Pillers, why are you trying to make it seem like we "misunderstand" responsible teenager theory?

2 upvotes · 1 December 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I like that you are using logic, so let's play with this. Call maturity M and adult brain connectivity B . B is necessary for M to occur, but is not sufficient. X is some other variable(s) required for M to occur. In other words,

If B and X , then M .

Yes, absolutely. Except let's call it $\{X\}$, to make it completely clear that we are dealing with a set, that might consist of one or more things, any or all which might be necessary or sufficient for WARM (wisdom-accountability-responsibility-maturity).

So our next question would be, what is X?

Or, rather, what are the members of {X}?

From my understanding of brain development... the prefrontal cortex is the last area of the brain to finish this process, and this is also the area of the brain that is responsible for behaviors we would call mature (good impulse and emotional control, good decision making and planning). This is why a teenager, whose prefrontal cortex has not yet developed, seems to be so bad at these behaviors.

This is so. However, if you point an FMRI at a teenage brain, and see less connectivity than 25 year old brain, you don't get to say "People don't finish developing by 16". Because you are not clear on whether this is a trait of all 16 year olds, that particular 16 year old, or the population of 16 year olds you are looking at.

FMRI's don't tell you why.

When we look at WARM through behaviour and physical brain traits through scans, we may be looking at two totally different things, two related things, or two representations of the same thing. It is hard to know.

This is why I am not very impressed with FMRI's. We can say "something is going on here", but we have no capability to translate between that "something" and any sort of behaviour we actually care about.

So what is {X}?

Well, TRP doesn't really answer that question, because it doesn't have to, and answering it would serve none of its purposes. It sufficient for TRP to note:

- Let {X} be the set of all elements necessary for WARM. Let {W} be the set of elements such that most women in first world countries possess {W}, and $\{W\} \subset \{X\}$.
- Lemma 1: {X} is sufficient for WARM.
- Lemma 2: {W} is not sufficient for WARM.

In other words, we don't have an "official" explanation of why women are not adults. We simply base this contention upon empirical observation of their behaviour.

Why is RP so Afraid of Feminists?

2 upvotes · 30 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Feminists by themselves are harmless.

Feminists combined with white knights are dangerous. Because white knights, misguided as they are, are actually capable of getting shit done.

Red Pillers, why are you trying to make it seem like we "misunderstand" responsible teenager theory?

2 upvotes · 30 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The idea is that brain connectivity development and behavioral development are connected.

"Connected" is a weasel word in this context.

Brain connectivity development is necessary for maturity (responsibility/accountability/wisdom), but not sufficient. Therefore you cannot prove maturity exists by showing that brain connectivity above a certain level exists.

You can only show that it is absent by showing that this level of connectivity does not exist.

Hence, you can use an FMRI scanner to show that children are childish. Which is not a surprise.

Brain scans are a way we can objectively measure maturity on a behavioral level.

As I have just explained, no, they are not.

A "positively correlated cofactor" and a "useful metric" are not the same thing. White people have a higher IQ mean and median than black people. This does not mean we can measure individual IQ by sampling skin melanin levels

Any advice on how to handle nosy, likely miserable, and confrontational American women?

2 upvotes · 25 November 2015 · /r/askTRP

Don't argue with women, children, or pets.

X-Post /r/TheBluePill: My story from normal person, to TRP fanatic, to Red Pillar "victim", and back again

2 upvotes · 25 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What if a girl just wants a no-strings night of sex? Not enough times that she would be called a slut, maybe just a couple times.

That's the worst.

One night of casual sex damages a girl's relationship-worthiness more than years of relationship sex.

Does RPW believe AWALT, in regards to the same basic stuff RP says that about (so I'm not asking about anything specific that makes AWALT, just in general)? Or are there any RP concepts that RPW, or enough members of RPW to make it notable, disagree with?

Don't know, don't care. Ask them.

Janet Bloomfield has an important message for women on IMD -- and no, this isn't a joke

2 upvotes · 23 November 2015 · /r/MensRights

Overwhelmingly, the majority of bisexual women I encounter have a particular profile: They are always strictly submissive with men, although they may be dominant with other women, submissive with them, or switch between the two.

Let's face it: equality isn't fun in the bedroom. And I imagine it would be even worse when people tried to make sex into a political act.

Sex isn't political. It is intensely personal, and people's sexual instincts do not care about political idealism. They would rather be politically incorrect, or even very actually oppressed, than sacrifice their personal happiness and emotional well being.

Why do people find Red Pill women to be bad?

2 upvotes · 20 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

To be fair, this is completely confined to sexual encounters for many women. It is not extrapolated into an entire overly submissive lifestyle.

Indeed this is the case. However, a lot of them would be happier if it were.

They don't always so much experience themselves as wanting to be led, controlled, dominated, etc, so much as they keep their overt submission in the bedroom, and tacitly defer to their boyfriend or husband in their everyday lives, because they think overt submission would be embarrassing or mean they were "sick".

They are not usually repulsed by the idea of submission, but they are repulsed by the idea of the social embarrassment, by the idea of what others would think, and by the fear that those others might be right that there was something "wrong" with them.

As a result, the ones who overtly submit are the ones whose submissive urges are so strong that that they can't ignore them, or suppress them. All healthy women like this, but some of them need it like they need love, or oxygen.

The funny thing is, after you've slept with enough women, and had them really open up to you, you get a really sad picture... imagine female society as a group of women, sitting around in a circle, all agreeing in loud voices over and over again they hate ice cream, and that people who love it are sick deviants. Then they go home, have two scoops of rocky road, and cry... because they are so ashamed, and what would the others think? Meanwhile, the others are doing the exact same thing.

Yes, TRP and RPW are a bit BDSM-ish. But that's because BDSM is the fetishization of a healthy, normal relationship, in a culture where healthy, normal relationships are discouraged.

Women deprived of a slow, steady drip feed of male leadership and control will often build up a "hunger" which leads them to binge on fast doses of super-intense male domination. While this isn't inherently unhealthy (unless she goes so far as push men to physically injure her), she'd probably be better off submitting in her everyday life, even if this didn't make the desire for beatings or humiliation go away (because then they would simply be a sexual enhancement, rather than a deep inner need).

One of the hardest parts of the red pill for people to get past is the notion that women are instinctively submissive to men, and that it is right, natural, healthy for them to be so. The evidence of this is all around us, and anyone can see it, but they are terrified of the implications. They've been convinced that submission == weakness, control == abuse, and to dominate == to hold in contempt.

None of these is true. Feminists invented this idea of "the Patriarchy" (capital P) to explain the embarrassing fact that women spent all of human history submitting to men. So they told themselves this fairy tale where they were the first generation with the courage to stand up to the evil overpowering control machine. This, of course, is bullshit. Women submitted because they liked it... both in the kinky-sex sense, and in the makes-my-life-a-lot-easier sense.

The originators of feminism weren't the first generation tough enough to stand up to men... they were the first generation dumb enough to mistake their fur-lined sex-shoppe handcuffs for southern-road-gang leg irons.

I have one such fantasy that I think might end my relationship if it actually happened....

Unless it's physically impossible or actually fatal, I think you'd be surprised. People are a good deal kinkier than they let on.

Comparison of Ancient Roman law vs Modern American Laws for Gender Relations: Did ancient Rome hold TRP view (as did every other powerful empire in recorded history) ?

2 upvotes · 19 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Calling a simple explanation "too simple" while not providing a more nuanced alternative is a cheap and easy way to look erudite while providing no actual insight whatsoever.

You object to his black-and-white view, calling it too simple... but you propose to replace it with a single shade of grey.

Does Redpill define greatness in negative terms too much

2 upvotes · 19 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Okay. But since you said so, exactly what part of that was supposed to sound crazy?

To you? I don't know. Who the hell are you?

Why are Blue Pillers so paranoid of coming across a "Terper" in real life?

2 upvotes · 19 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why are Blue Pillers so paranoid of interacting with/dating/being around someone who reads TRP?

They're not.

The Threat Narrative™ is an effective propaganda weapon, that's all.

Visceral reaction to Obamacare Boy

2 upvotes · 19 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Ok, that is a genuinely creepy way to respond.

Are you triggered now?

To what extent is couples counselling a trap for a man in a dead bedrooms scenario or with other relationship difficulties?

2 upvotes · 18 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Look at it this way: how many people with an understanding of masculine values choose "marriage counseling" as a career?

Visceral reaction to Obamacare Boy

2 upvotes · 18 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I get that you derive confidence from the part of your self-image that tells you that you are a "real man".

Ah, no, Agent Starling... you were doing so well.

If you pick a definition of "masculinity" that is incompatible with things valued by progressives

DARVO.

If "progressives" pick a definition of "progress" that is incompatible with masculinity, naturally they will come to the conclusion that I am against progress. Who really began this little circle of yours, Clarisse?

Outliers are the majority.

2 upvotes · 18 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

100 - 7.5 = 92.5

CMV: TBPillars do think that the way someone expresses themselves can invalidate what they're saying.

2 upvotes · 18 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

For that specific question, the answer is still much broader.

Let's put it in some historical context.

Looking at voting from a historical perspective to our modern situation, we can argue the surprising conclusion that only women have the legal right to vote. For men, voting is a privilege, not a right. It is earned in exchange for registering for the military draft. Men who do not do so are not legally allowed to vote.

You see, originally, only men who owned property (land/households) could vote. This seems awful to the modern casual thinker, but people of that era saw the basic unit of society to be, not the individual, but the family. The head of the family cast the family's vote. Young men living under their fathers' roof, apprentices, drifters and migrant workers, etc... didn't vote either.

Around the time press gangs and emptying the prisons began to get replaced by an organized draft, someone said, hey, if these guys who aren't heads of households can sacrifice their lives for our society, then they are invested in it. This means they should be voting. After a while, the idea got some traction, and men got a voting privilege in exchange for registering.

When the feminists came along (they called them "sufferagettes" back then). And as is usual for feminists, they coveted men's rewards, but not the responsibilities they undertook to earn them. (Some of them, for example, exploited the female exemption from income tax to have their husbands thrown in jail. See the writing of /u/girlwriteswhat for details of how that worked.)

They wanted to vote, but they didn't want to risk being shot at, which was what men did to earn the vote. So they pretended that men voting was a right, instead of an earned reward, and complained that it wasn't fair that they didn't just "have" it as well. Now, men would have been wise to treat this as a shit test, and laugh it off. Women did not have experience handling responsibility, the way heads of households, and war veterans, do. But they caved (so much for feminist "patriarchy theory").

And what did women voters immediately give us? Prohibition. 'nuff said. Like children, or other people not used to handling responsibility, they assumed the world was simple, and that if you didn't like something, you can just pass a law and it will go away. The naive are usually idealists.

So is women voting a problem? Yes, but it's not the problem.

The problem is that what we call "democracy", meaning everyone-gets-one-vote, is inherently unstable. It lasts until people realize that they can vote themselves dividends out of the public treasury, and then, when that treasury runs dry, they can vote for tax increases on someone else, fiat currency, and massive government borrowing, to keep the gravy train going a while longer.

The problem with democracy is that the votes of the foolish, the newcomer, the uninvested, the non-contributor, are equal to the votes of the wise, the tenured, the committed, the pillar of civilization. The word "patriarchy" doesn't mean "rule by men". It means rule by fathers. Men with families are the most invested in the future of society.

Women do this more, so stopping them from voting would slow the bleeding, but it wouldn't make the system stable.

How do you build a stable society? Well, in practice this may not be possible, but in theory one could do it by having a set of societies with no votes but a zero-cost exit or entry. Thus, voting happens with the feet.

Kind of like subreddits. TRP is free to be a semi-dictatorship where power is proportional to tenure and contribution, because no one is forced to stay there. In fact, it's a very successful dictatorship, because the small set of dictators can share a common vision, work towards it, and anyone who doesn't like that vision isn't dragged along for the ride. The rate of increase in our readership shows that many people agree with our vision.

How would this work in a physical country? Probably not very well. Exit from one of those has a considerable cost even if there are no legal barriers whatsoever. The universe is not obliged to only give us problems that have an acceptable solution. But this does not change the fact that democracy doesn't really work that well.

So, do I think women vote responsibly? Hell, no. They vote for people who pander to them, tell them it's a "war on womenTM ", if someone doesn't want to pay for their birth control pills. (I'll just send my boss 'round to buy me a pack of condoms, shall I?) I think that women vote more irresponsibly than men. But taking the vote away from women wouldn't fix society, because there's an awful lot of men who don't vote responsibly, either.

Asking what my ideal society would look like is a bit much for right now, but I will say that in it, voting would be a privilege that required a great deal of effort to earn, and that, like most things that cost dearly, it would be valued and taken seriously by those who possessed it.

CMV: TBPillars do think that the way someone expresses themselves can invalidate what they're saying.

2 upvotes · 18 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's the thing about modern discourse. You not only can't have it with modernists, you can't have it in front of an audience of postmodernists.

When you're hated, demonized, relentlessly quotemined, it actually does something good for you. It makes you stop caring about what strangers think. Everyone wants to be liked, but when you take a public, consistent stand for an unpopular position, you learn to want to be liked by your friends and people you respect, not just anyone.

So, in general, this puts us at a sort of three-way impasse... Redpillians, SJWs, and neutral-but-interested parties like I suspect you are:

- SJWs who have no interest in the truth, see every conversation as a struggle for moral ascendancy, and squash any rational discussion they can, because it is the actual enemy they are organized against.
- Redpillians who love rational discourse, but know that they must treat 99% of their conversations as a struggle for social dominance.
- Neutrals who just want to hear straight talk, but no one will speak it to them.

The closest you're going to get to straight talk is to read a lot of the red pill sidebar, then follow the conversations for a while and get a sense of who we are and what helps us live our lives. That's a lot of reading and a lot of effort, but there's a good reason why there is no Cliff's notes version.

That's because the Red Pill is not just a lot of neutral, bite-size chunks of information. Instead, it is a sort of satori... a profound psychological transformation coming from a series of closely related epiphanies.

I can't condense that for you, even if I do believe you are listening honestly. I could type paragraph after paragraph (and have) about the basic psychology of men and women, about how our society is structured, and about how a healthy one would be, but it wouldn't really tell you what you are trying to understand, which is why I think these things.

To know what I know, you have to see what I've seen.

I'm not saying "take the red pill, and you'll understand me". That's a copout. What I am saying is "the act of taking the red pill, and the realization of what I am talking about, would be one and the same thing".

The most I can do for you, absent all that legwork, is to ask a question:

What would you do if, going about your daily life, you started seeing things that made you realize that one of your culture's most deeply held, most cherished, beliefs was a lie? Not just mistaken, but a self-serving lie.

What if you suddenly realized that the earth wasn't a disk on back of a huge tortoise? That Jewish people didn't drink the blood of Christian children? That the pope wasn't imbued by Jesus Christ with the power to heal the sick? That marijuana didn't turn you into a serial rapist and murderer? That the people from North Malden were not soulless abominations bent on destruction, but just people like the people in South Malden? That diseases were caused by bacteria, not evil spirits? That beating drums at the rising of Nomo made no difference whatsoever in the number of hurricanes? That there was no good reason at all to rub blue mud into your belly button on Zeebsday? That having sex with a virgin didn't cure STDs?

What would you do?

- Would you say nothing, and continue to live the lie?
- Would you say nothing, and use the knowledge for your own benefit wherever you could?
- Would you try to convince the others around you, knowing you would be seen as a lunatic... or a heretic?
- Would you band together with others who have had the same epiphany, knowing you would be seen as a pack of dangerous subversives?

You would be free to choose any of these, but you would be forced to make the choice. There is no way, short of serious brain damage, to un-realize something.

I could write you a manifesto, but I won't. Because the only purpose in that would be to submit to your moral judgement... and while I certainly do not consider you an "enemy", you are not someone has earned the right to judge me. And I'm not much for submitting.

If you really want to understand me, walk a mile in my footsteps. Read the pages and pages of stuff I've written, and really think about it. It is all easily available to you.

Instead of just asking for the Cliff's Notes version.

What's wrong with polyamory?

2 upvotes · 17 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRPillers fear it so much

Yep, terrified of it. I check my closet every night before I go to bed, in case there's some polyamory hiding in there.

The moment when sexual misconduct leaflet is sexually discriminatory! (no resources for men?)

2 upvotes · 14 November 2015 · /r/MensRights

What do we do if not pointing out the inconsistencies? Withdraw? Quit?

Change tactics.

Pointing out the logical flaws and inconsistencies in someone's argument is what you do when you are debating someone well-intentioned, but wrong. Feminists are not such people.

Feminists are sociopaths. You don't use the same tactics with a sociopath.

What should this kid have done?

2 upvotes · 14 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There are certain situations where "what would you do?" is the wrong question, because the correct answer is "don't get into that situation".

If people feel free to walk up and mess with you, then you need to work on establishing a physical presence, and losing the victim body language. Practice martial arts. Lift. Look people in the eye.

Indian Girls

2 upvotes · 13 November 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Read my article on the lifecycle of cultures.

In a Sperg-dominant culture, the most productive Spergs are the Alphas, and Manipulators are lynched by Sperg mobs as soon as a Cynic points them out. Sperg culture is what you would call "Beta Fucks", because when productivity and contribution are respected, Beta are Alphas.

In a Manipulator-dominant culture, "Beta Fucks" doesn't work for shit.

Does RPW reflect more bluepill values or than red pill values?

2 upvotes · 13 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

As I've followed this eternal war between Red and Blue pills, I've struggled to figure out what makes RedPillWomen, "Red."

Answer: nothing.

RPW is a tradcon subreddit that has branded itself "Red Pill" because the term's social stock is rapidly rising.

They endorse a sexual strategy for women that is specifically incompatible with TRP's advice to men.

Specifically:

- Making men wait for sex.
- No sex before commitment. If possible, no sex before marriage.
- Insistence on strict male monogamy.
- Avoidance of men who spin plates as "bad" men who aren't interested in commitment, as opposed to men who are satisfying their sexual needs in the absence of worthy women.

Can you picture a TRP EC, or any man who has spun plates for a while, putting up with that?

RPW's target male is the "greater beta", a male who projects strength and confidence, and has self-respect, but is still domesticated and controllable. This is definitely a valid mating strategy for women, but that's not the kind of man that men dream of being.

CMV: Veteran members on TRP who claim to be Machiavellian or Dark Triad are in reality wrong or deluded.

2 upvotes · 12 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm both.

I'm simultaneously a narcissistic sociopath who gets off on praise and adulation, and an altruistic father figure who loves helping younger man and making their lives better.

You sort it out.

Characterizations are just that. They don't matter in the end. The only thing that matters is what I do.

CMV: Most promiscuous women are not after commitment.

2 upvotes · 12 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Most younger women who are promiscuous do so because they crave male sexual attention, and the way it makes them feel desired/validated. They really enjoy the feeling of being desired by guys they find sexy and attractive. To maximize that feeling, they are promiscuous and find many opportunities for this to happen. There is a feeling of sexual power and ego-lifting that comes from being promiscuous. The party life-style, AKA hard drinking and drugs, also goes along with this.

You are absolutely correct, but you left out one thing.

Women confuse their sexual market value with their relationship market value. They think that the caliber of man they can get into their bed tells them the caliber of man who will "wife them up" when they are ready.

Since a reasonably pretty girl can have almost any man she wants for a night, this leads to a certain complacency. They believe they can enjoy a vast variety of male sexual attention without consequences.

Seven or eight years ago, when I was naive enough to try reasoning with women, every once in a while this sort of thing would come up in conversation. When I asked what they would do when they were thirty, and the response was always the same. That's not an exaggeration... it was always exactly the same, with only slight variation in the wording.

They said "When I am thirty, I will be married to a great, sexy guy who adores the hell out of me".

They couldn't imagine scarcity because they had never experienced it.

What are some things TRPillers say that don't match with your personal experiences?

2 upvotes · 11 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Only collectively. Presumably you vote?

Socialism is an inherently bad idea, because it separates the payer from the spending decision. Anyone can be profligate with someone else's money. Socialist governments are like children with dad's credit card. They buy stupid things because they don't have to pay the bill.

What are some things TRPillers say that don't match with your personal experiences?

2 upvotes · 11 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

My experiences: I might be biased here because in my country there are universities where you can go for free, if you pass certain tests. You don't have to pay for anything, not even the books.

There is no such thing as a free lunch. Someone is paying for your useless degree.

And that useless degree has an opportunity cost on all ends. The money that paid for it could have paid for something else. The people who teach it could be doing something else. And you could have been doing something else with the four years you spent getting it.

That's the problem with most government spending. It pays smart people to do useless things.

My experiences: I don't live in the US but the most radically leftist people I have met, have been men. I'm talking about anarcho-communists, stalinists and whatever radical ideology you can imagine. I have met very few women who are actually radicals. Even feminism is supported by many men. If you say that women shouldn't vote because they vote for the liberals, you can also say that all liberal people shouldn't vote and that doesn't make sense because that's not how democracy works. Most women nowadays work and pay taxes. They contribute to the system themselves so I don't see why they shouldn't vote.

I am so tired of people thinking they are smart because they haven't figured out how statistics work.

Unless a man has a lot of money, he is definitely not more attractive in his late 30s than he was in his 20s. I would even say that the average woman in her 30s might have more sexual options than the average man in his 30s.

Women almost always have more sexual options than men. Point is, men have more sexual options in their 30s than they do in their 20s, and the reverse is true for women.

Roosh V says that women should be controlled by men. What do you think?

2 upvotes · 11 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is off topic. Roosh has nothing to do with TBP or TRP.

The Hypocrisy of Kevin Powell

2 upvotes · 10 November 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

This is true. And religion has, in some instances, been a useful tool for enforcing both basic morality, and social mores which promote order and stability.

The problem, however, is that it is a blue pill, even when it is used to sell red pill based values... there isn't really a god, and everyone who has really open their eyes knows that. Now, dispensing blue pills is sometimes a good strategy, but when you hold your society together with blue pills, it collapses when people start taking the red ones.

For example, if you tell your teenage daughters, "don't be a concert groupie and suck off rock musicians, because the baby Jesus will cry", then sooner or later, someone is going to ask "who is this 'Jesus' person, anyway, and why the hell does he care whose dick I suck?".

But if you say "no man with self-respect will marry you, and you'll die alone in your second-floor apartment and be partially eaten by your seven cats before the smell alerts the neighbors"... then it doesn't collapse when people scrutinize it.

Now, I'm sure some eight-ball is gonna jump in here and sing that tired tune of "People are stupid. They can't handle the red pill. You have to tell them a simple fairy tale that gets them to do the right thing."

Bullshit. People believe anything that you tell them over and over from different sources, and that can as easily be the truth as a lie.

We believe the universe as we know it started with a singularity explosion. But almost no one here has seen the evidence personally. We just take the word of the researchers who have. They could have told us anything. If they had sold us a fairy tale, it would hold up until we chose to look at the evidence. When they tell the truth, it holds up even when we look at the evidence ourselves.

Values are what you teach your children. Do you want to feed them blue pills?

What's your opinion on The Safe Campus Act?

2 upvotes · 5 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Many oppose this bill because it doesn't give survivors a "choice" in the handling of their case.

Someone stole my laptop the other day. I'd like the investigation handled by the NKVD.

Getting my boyfriend to swallow?

2 upvotes · 5 November 2015 · /r/askTRP

You cannot lead someone into being a leader. The process contradicts the message.

A gentleman's guide to Rape Culture

2 upvotes · 5 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

A Lady's Guide to Martian Fruit Exports.

A Tree Sloth's Guide to Magic Winged Unicorns.

A Left-handed Plumber's Guide to Perpetual Motion Machines.

Oh, sorry, I thought we were playing a game of name some shit that doesn't exist.

CMV: Most men don't care about their partner's N count, and some men find a high N attractive.

2 upvotes · 4 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Selection_bias

I have the opportunity to buy a convertible Mercedes- but I have feeling that it will only attract gold diggers and make my life generally harder.

2 upvotes · 2 November 2015 · /r/askTRP

You are correct, sir. Cayman S.

RPers: when you hear women say they "only have eyes for their man", how do you interpret that?

2 upvotes · 2 November 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

RPers: when you hear women say they "only have eyes for their man", how do you interpret that?

The same way I interpret everything else she says.

By ignoring it and watching what she does instead.

How to talk/ extrovertize: A Guide for Gammas and Omegas

2 upvotes · 30 October 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Indeed, but that is only one of two possible meanings for "you are overthinking this".

The other means "You are putting too much computation time into an analysis with very little long-term effect. This is a waste of your time."

Are women are trying to take over gaming and nerd culture?

2 upvotes · 30 October 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The tower is not a literal building.

It represents abstraction for anything men might build, from something as concrete as a tower, to something as abstract as a subculture (like "gaming and nerd culture", from the title).

You committed the fallacy of reification when you assumed that I meant solely a literal market entity.

What if someone really wants to have a family?

2 upvotes · 26 October 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

some men are willing to take the risk

Some men are idiots.

You engage in risks to get rewards. Marriage has no rewards. It gives men nothing.

Getting married is as stupid as driving without a seat belt. It carries a non-zero risk of being destroyed, and gives you nothing in return for taking that risk.

Anyone who plays Russian roulette is an idiot, even if only one chamber is loaded.

What if someone really wants to have a family?

2 upvotes · 26 October 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

sometimes it is worth it to take the risk if you really want a family

How would you know? Are you a man in disguise?

What if someone really wants to have a family?

2 upvotes · 26 October 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

However , a lot of men and women truly want to have families and kids.

And I really want to be King of the Galaxy and wear a shiny hat. So what?

In our current legal realpolitik, men cannot have children. You can get a woman pregnant, but that doesn't make it your child. It is her child, and you have precisely the level of interaction with it that she permits, for as long as she permits.

The only legal connection a man has to his child, in actual legal practice, is the ironclad obligation to give money to its mother. He can pretend it's being spent on the child, but there's no oversight whatsoever.

Anything else, forget it. Family courts famously favour the mother, and even where custody is shared, I have been unable to find a single case in US history where a court has enforced a custody order which was violated by a woman.

So, if you are a man, you can't have children. Doesn't matter what you want.

CMV: TRP is so hated because women hate beta guys trying to act alpha.

2 upvotes · 26 October 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

it's clear to me despite the image TRP portrays itself as "We are dark triads, we're alpha males, we're leaders among men" that there is this dissonance of the idealized person redpillers want to become and the person that others see that leads to strawman and mockery "they're just bitter neckbeards"

This is the part you got wrong.

No one thinks that all 135K readers of TRP are supermen who just stepped out of a Nazi propaganda poster. And anyone who thinks all 135K of us are losers is talking themselves into what they want to believe.

The truth is, TRP teaches a path. From "where you are now" to "doing better than that". If we were all neckbeards, that would mean the path didn't lead upwards. But if we were all Batman, then TRP would also be a failure, because it would mean we weren't reaching those who needed us most.

In truth, TRP isn't about being gods and gloating about it. Or about pretending to be gods and trying to convince others.

It's about being men. About restoring masculinity, reclaiming the right to define it and practice it from the feminists and the feminized society which usurped it. In healthy societies, old men teach young men how to be men, and how to succeed and prosper as men. Then the young men become old men and teach others.

Our society deliberately broke that chain. We are reforging it.

What is the TRP view on masturbation?

2 upvotes · 24 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

Like anything else, it makes a good servant, and a bad master.

Virulent New Strain of Stupid Seems to Have No Cure

2 upvotes · 23 October 2015 · /r/MensRights

Oh dear God ... "the orgasm gap"

Oh, I wouldn't mind that so much.

In fact, in the spirit of feminist tactics, I could compare myself with the most orgasmic woman in existence, and then declare myself oppressed if my orgasms are any less numerous, frequent, or intense.

As it so, happens, I know this woman. Let's call her "Funsized". She can come for 45 minutes straight. Yes, you read that right. Yes, I know you don't believe me. I wouldn't believe me either if I hadn't seen it.

But there it is. So how about it, feminists?

Close the Orgasm Gap! I demand my 45-minute orgasm! Equality demands that women do anything and everything that is necessary to make me have one, regardless of the cost to themselves!

Sometimes she doesn't "feel like sucking" my dick.

2 upvotes · 22 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

Then she has a specific issue, and you need to find out what's going on.

Do this when it's not actually happening (i.e. you both have your clothes on). Don't debate or argue or "discuss". Just find out what's going on.

Sometimes she doesn't "feel like sucking" my dick.

2 upvotes · 22 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

Okay, so she's generally obedient, but has odd blank "freezing" episodes specifically connected with giving blowjobs... but only sometimes.

Correct?

Still feeling rejection.

2 upvotes · 21 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

This is a common problem. Almost everyone experiences it at some point.

The issue is that you have the lingering feeling that women are adults, and their judgements matter. The very reason TRP keeps repeating the mantra that women are perpetual children, and you need to treat them like children, is that it's hard to overcome a lifetime of training. So the truth has to not just be told, but hammered into your own skull.

You don't feel like shit when you're rejected because you didn't get the girl. You know there are other girls. There will always be more girls.

You feel like shit because some part of you thinks that rejection says something about you. That you are not attractive enough. That your game isn't good enough.

The truth is, any individual bitches' opinion about your value matters about as much her opinion about most anything else... jack shit. The average twentysomething girl's interests are limited to:

- Herself
- Getting likes on TwitterBookGram
- Cute shoes
- Kinds of alcohol she likes to drink.

Does that sound like someone who is qualified to evaluate you?

Women stop maturing mentally when they finish puberty. By that point, they can babysit kids, and sneak up on a leaf, which is pretty much all evolution asks of them. No woman's rejection should ever hurt you more than a child's tantrum, and if it does, ask yourself:

"Why, and in what way, am I taking this woman too seriously?"

Rapid Rise in Teacher/student scandals? Symptom of mental issues or normal AWALT behavior?

2 upvotes · 15 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

It's not really that mysterious.

Women crave validation.

{Validation level} = {amount/intensity of attention} * {scarcity/value of attention}

Women are attracted to aloof men (men of abundance) because their attention is scarcer, and hence has higher value (at least in their minds).

But at a certain point, it can also pay to increase amount of attention. Teenage boys are easy to enthrall.

Women aren't generally super-attracted to teenage boys themselves. But attention is like a drug to them.

My critique of Red Pill Men and Red Pill Women

2 upvotes · 15 October 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm not going to let you go down this rabbit hole and avoid the main topic.

You said:

I disagree that lifting weights can improve a person's ambition and motivation.

Do you wish to retract this statement, yes or no?

Do you believe that lifting weights never improves a person's ambition or motivation?

My critique of Red Pill Men and Red Pill Women

2 upvotes · 14 October 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You keep trying to make up definitions of "an Alpha", so you can argue he's "not one". Alpha is a set of behaviours, and whether he displays them or not is beside the point, and in fact an attempt to change the subject, just you accuse him of doing.

So, to stick with the topic:

I disagree that lifting weights can improve a person's ambition and motivation.

which means

I say that it is NOT TRUE that lifting weights can improve a person's ambition and motivation.

which means:

I say that lifting weights CANNOT improve a person's ambition and motivation.

Are you quite sure that this is the hill you choose to die on?

High School Junior, need help becoming better.

2 upvotes · 13 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

I won't read what you wrote unless you edit it so my eyes don't just bounce off it.

But there is a more general lesson here.

You are a man. Unlike women, men have no inherent value. You cannot bear children. You do not excite sexual desire just by being present. No one is going to give you jack shit unless you give them an incentive. This is your greatest weakness if you let it be, and your greatest strength if you rise to the challenge.

Women are stuck with whatever inherent value they have, because no matter what they try to do with their lives, there will always be a beginning period where they suck at it, and can get much more attention by batting their eyelashes or taking their shirts off. Being a woman trying to achieve value is like trying to go on a diet at a pastry-chef's convention. Very few women have the inner strength to do actual work when all that attention and sympathy is available for free.

But you are a man, which means no one automatically likes you or cares about you. No one.

It means that you will work, because you have no choice. But first you need to understand that you must work.

It would have taken 30 seconds longer to post in a readable format. You didn't bother. If you won't use up 30 of your seconds to save 30 of mine, when you are the one asking for help, then no one is going to give you shit.

So here is your only free lesson:

If you want something, ask yourself "what work do I have to do?". Because you will always have to work.

TRP priorities: truth vs. utility

2 upvotes · 9 October 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Utility has a strong connection to truth, but they're definitely not the same thing.

The first sentence was not intended to be literal.

Truth is predictive power. Truth and predictive power are the same thing.

Utility and predictive power are closely related, but they are not quite the same thing.

Is that clear now?

TRP priorities: truth vs. utility

2 upvotes · 8 October 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Believing in homeopathy has 'utility' through the placebo effect. That doesn't make it a great idea.

...

Your problem is that you're asserting that with utility, you necessarily have truth. While that describes how the term 'truth' is actually used - including by deliberate liars - my way has far greater scalability and power.

You're unclear on what I mean by utility.

Read this sentence again:

The word "truth" means "predictive power".

Now do you get it?

The idea of homeopathy has no predictive power. Therefore it has no utility.

"Power" doesn't mean "benefit". It means control. Some rare types of false beliefs may benefit you (most don't), but they do not give you control by empowering you to predict outcomes.

Is There a female-equivalent of Redpill vs Bluepill?

2 upvotes · 7 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

I am aware of the existence of redpillwomen, but the theory behind that seems to be contingent on appealing to those men who practice redpill theory.

RedPillWomen isn't a subreddit for redpill women. That's because there is no such thing as a distinct group of red pill women. What would that even mean?

If "being redpill" means aware of the truths that TRP teaches, then every woman is "redpill".

If "being redpill" means practicing redpill techniques, then no woman is "redpill". How could a woman even practice redpill techniques? What would that mean? Redpill techniques are sexual strategy for men. What would a "redpill woman" do?

RedPillWomen is a group for conservative women who see "I am strong independent womyn!" as a less effective strategy for them than "I am a delicate feminine flower, please do the heavy lifting for me". They're probably right, but they're not going to have the same theories, beliefs, and practices that we do. They're going to do what's good for them, not what's good for us... what the hell else would you expect?

There are no redpill women or bluepill women. There are only feminine women, and unfeminine women.

"Fake it until you make it". Does it work?

2 upvotes · 7 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

Read it again.

You have no "real" self, and no "fake" self. At any moment, what you are doing at that moment is what you are.

Is anyone here on finasteride/propecia?

2 upvotes · 4 October 2015 · /r/askTRP

He who cannot cast away a treasure at need is in chains.

Shave your head.

Had threesome implementing RP. It was awkward. Now I feel more beta than ever.

2 upvotes · 29 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/3mwbv3/change_your_actions_and_your_thoughts_will_follow/

For TRPERS: Should Women be allowed to vote? If no, why?

2 upvotes · 28 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Why on earth would you think voting has any effect at all?

If feminism is about equality, why have feminists done NOTHING about the plight of the incel?

2 upvotes · 25 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think I've got everything I need to know.

Really?

I don't. I'm constantly learning new things.

I highly recommend that approach to life.

I am woman, too emotional and stupid to defend myself.

So.... you're going to throw a tantrum because I am not treating you like an adult? That seems somewhat counterintuitive.

Look, I'm sorry your feelings are hurt. But spitting sarcasm and venom is not helping your cause, and it's not even hurting the people you're angry at. It's just hurting you. Perhaps it's time for a different approach. Because I can keep this up all day.

Do you think that intentionally giving false hopes to someone about a relationship is a horrible thing to do?

2 upvotes · 25 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I think that people playing the game of love (or war) would be well advised to play with the same level of ruthlessness that they experience from the opposite party.

If feminism is about equality, why have feminists done NOTHING about the plight of the incel?

2 upvotes · 24 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Jesus Christ, you're just as helpful as I am in this situation. He's a stranger on the internet, none of us can help him

Sure I can. I'm one of the founders of TRP. I've helped lots of incels stop being incels. They have to do the legwork, but they've always been willing to do that. They just need to know how.

I know you think you are a honorable good sir but dude, the guy doesn't have a problem. Not getting laid is not a travesty.

I think we're done here.

You don't even respect him enough to believe him when he tells you what his problems are. You don't care what he says causes him suffering. You only care that he doesn't say something slightly insensitive on an internet forum.

And yet here you are, trying to tell him what is and isn't a male problem. Why the fuck are you trying to tell him what it's like to have a dick? You have no idea.

You are a shitty person, you are seriously lacking in empathy and compassion, and any friends you have could probably do much better. Go find someone else to pick on.

A Neckbeard Manifesto - my thoughts as a neckbeard as a response to that one incel thread.

2 upvotes · 24 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I recommend a blood test to see where you are at.

If were simply a matter of low sex drive, and you were happy being free of the tyranny of sexual desire, it wouldn't be an issue.

But low testosterone is dangerous to your health in many other ways.

If feminism is about equality, why have feminists done NOTHING about the plight of the incel?

2 upvotes · 24 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Quod erat demonstratum.

Are "I hate you" and "You are an asshole" two manifestations of the same shit test?

2 upvotes · 23 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

If a woman hates you, she will avoid you as much as possible, and speak to you as little as possible.

If she tells you she hates you, or that you are an asshole, you fascinate and frustrate her. It's a short step from there to sex, if you know how to make that happen.

If she is smiling or laughing when she says it, that is the checkered flag. Next stop is her panties hanging from your bedpost.

The key is not to defend yourself, but to agree that you are indeed a jerk, while seeming totally unconcerned about it.

RP: If a woman says she thinks muscles are gross and only likes scrawny nerds, what do you think of her?

2 upvotes · 22 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Don't listen to what women say. Watch what they do.

What if someone doesn't care about partner counts , age etc?

2 upvotes · 22 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Most men DO care about age and partner counts. TRP aims its rhetoric at mentally freeing men so they are willing to express this choice.

If someone has a milf fetish or something, he can go ahead.

9 Assumptions People Make About Single Women That Are Totally True (but this hamster rationalizes as bullshit)

2 upvotes · 21 September 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Meow means meow, not yes!

Respect and male social hierarchies.

2 upvotes · 19 September 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Left out a word. Fixed.

CMV: TRP is not just a sexual strategy , it promotes a certain political mindset.

2 upvotes · 15 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP does not have a political agenda or philosophy. It is, however, incompatible with certain political agendas and philosophies.

My boyfriend is insecure for no reason.

2 upvotes · 9 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

Go to RedPillWomen and create a post entitled "How do I earn trust?".

It's not that you aren't allowed here. It's that this group not really ideally situated to help you.

I don't really enjoy sex/flirting, but rather prefer the validation I receive from them. How to fix this?

2 upvotes · 8 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

Not enjoying seduction is normal. Girls are boring... mostly because they have never had to be interesting to get laid.

However, if you are not enjoying sex, something is wrong. Your body is hardwired for sex to feel incredibly good. This could be physical (low testosterone, especially bad circumcision) or psychological (ambivalence about girl/situation, religious guilt, stress).

Without more details I couldn't guess what's going on, but something is.

IDEA: Lets create TRP2: Red pill after the anger phase

2 upvotes · 7 September 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You can try creating an alternate TRP, cleansed, disneyified, lobotomized, pacified, and safe for feels everywhere. In fact, it's been done several times before. But hey, maybe attempt number six will work out for you.

Good luck, boys. Have fun storming the castle. Don't forget to write.

40+ TRP'ers, squatting and body fat %

2 upvotes · 3 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

Look for personal physicians who describe themselves using the phrase "anti-aging medicine".

If you google it, you're going to see a lot of FUD articles designed to scare you away. Such articles are the 21st century equivalent of "Reefer Madness"

The way to think about this is that hormones cannot be patented. That means that no one will pay for studies to prove that they are "safe". It's left to silly people to assume that hormones are safe to put in our bodies, just because our bodies put them in our bodies.

But for those of us who wish to foolishly assume that evolution is wiser than than the US government, the process involves taking a hell of a lot of blood out of you, running all sorts of tests on it, and then doing a variety of things to adjust the levels found towards what seems to be an optimal range.

Typically this means dietary changes, vitamin and mineral suppliments, and hormones. Usually testosterone. Sometimes IGF-1. Never HGH. Thyroid if you're low. DHEA if your cortisol is too high.

Target levels for testosterone are about 1200-1500 or so. This is high, but not so high that it doesn't naturally occur in teenagers. Now, there are no studies to "prove" this is "safe", because no one will sponsor them, because no one owns testosterone. However, we can infer safety from the fact that it doesn't do teenagers any harm when it occurs naturally, and it doesn't do bodybuilders any harm when they take much, much more than that.

It's not cheap, but not horrifically expensive, either. The hormones themselves are cheap (no one owns testosterone), but the insurance won't pay for the physicians' services, which usually involves a flat fee for annual services. It's pretty good for the money, though.

What are the hazards?

- Your blood pressure will rise slightly. Testosterone does this. If you do not already have blood pressure problems, you should be fine, especially since testosterone reduces many of the other causes of high blood pressure (like being fat and stressed out).
- Your cholesterol profile will worsen slightly. Testosterone does this... LDL up, HDL down. Does this in teenagers, too. If your profile is healthy, not a huge cause for concern. There are many things you can do to counteract this if it's a problem. To be extra careful, I recommend having a carotid ultrasound once a year to spot any potential buildup.
- You balls will stop producing natural testosterone. They'll start back up again if you go off the injections, but if you supplement for prolonged periods, some atrophy can occur. A little HCG or HMG every so often can keep them in fighting trim.
- You might go bald faster. Increased testosterone means increased DHT, which contributes to baldness in some (genetically prone) men. If it happens, either cut back, use rogaïne, or (my personal recommendation), just shave your head and give less fucks.
- You might get some acne. This isn't really that common, and it usually goes away again. If not, cut back, use some kind of treatment, or give less fucks.
- You can get a limp dick if your increased testosterone gets aromatized into too much estrogen/estradiol. This can be dealt with the same way bodybuilders do... with a simple pill. One needs to play with dosing a little bit, because estrogen that's too low can also have the same effect, and everyone's a little bit different as to where that is. But this is dead easy to handle.
- If your estrogen gets really high, you can get breast development. This won't happen. It just won't. Not at TRT levels. And if you're an unusual case, and you start getting early symptoms, the same simple pill, taken for a little while, makes that stop.

So, in summary, anti-aging is the keyword for this. The medical community doesn't like it, but it works. And the hazards are known and manageable.

I know it's early, but I have a question. Why do men get such little support in life? Why do we have to live on hard mode while women get it much easier?

2 upvotes · 2 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

No, it's not support you're talking about - you're talking about validation.

Facebook likes, shares, retweets, they're all just validation. They're a pat on the head from someone else saying they like what you're doing.

A core tenet of TRP is learning to live without validation from others

Paging /u/CrazyHorseInvincible or /u/EpicLevelCheater : please point this guy on the main sub.

40+ TRP'ers, squatting and body fat %

2 upvotes · 2 September 2015 · /r/askTRP

That's exactly what it helps most with.

Your back and your knees hurt because you're older, your T levels are lower, and you don't heal as well. Young people lift with shitty form and get stronger. Old people lift with less than perfect form and hurt themselves. They are able to work out less often, and get less results from each one.

Why?

Low hormone levels. You don't get lose hormones because you get old, you get old because you lose hormones.

"I'm not at my natural limits" is an excuse. Your "natural limits" are rushing downwards to meet you coming the other way. And they're moving a lot faster than your progress.

You don't know very much about what happens when you add extra testosterone, what it does, what it feels like. You're not dismissing it out of knowledge. You're dismissing it because you are afraid. Afraid of change. Afraid of the unknown.

I can't teach you how to get different results doing the same thing you have always been doing. If you do what you did, you'll get what you got. More aching joints. More loss of energy. More limping because you worked out last night. More knee bandages. More missed workouts. More tired. More sore.

You've reached the point in your life where time stops giving things to you and starts taking them away. Do you want to sit there and let it? Because needles are too scary? Because other, equally ignorant, people have told you fables about horrific side effects? Because you just don't want to face the unknown?

Comfort is the enemy of excellence.

In any case, if I am able to have abs , defined muscles and a good V shape at my age I could give a shit about looking like some juiced Viagra commercial stand-in.

I've heard this as an excuse for not lifting. I don't see a lot of difference.

You see many male-to-female sex changes but relatively few female-to-male sex changes. Why do you think that is?

2 upvotes · 2 September 2015 · /r/MensRights

Insert needle in vial of testosterone cypionate. Insert testosterone cypionate in needle. Insert needle in leg. Insert testosterone cypionate in leg. Insert protein in face. Insert barbell in hands.

Do you (in general) support Roosh/Return of Kings' articles?

2 upvotes · 31 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't know, because I don't read them.

Roosh is not really about the same thing TRP is about. He's more of a pickup technique guy. TRP is more about fundamentals and reclaiming masculinity.

He doesn't even lift.

CMV it is impossible to conclude that any TRP tenant is wrong by misusing it.

2 upvotes · 27 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't debate TBPers to convince them of anything. Their real reasons for believing what they do are completely different from their ostensible reasons, so arguing against the latter is useless.

To me, the typical TBPers is not an opponent, but a wooden dummy.

Virgins are boring. The cons of inexperience from Eastern Europe

2 upvotes · 27 August 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

actually entering a relationship with someone who's had no one but you is like accepting to adopt a child and to teach it everything about relationships and sex.

First of all, there is hardly any dread or validation for you.

Second of all, they are like having a child. Lots of work and responsibility.

You have to watch what you say and teach them how to act.

Sounds like you don't like being a leader. If so, less innocent and more independent (and sluttier) women may be easier for you to deal with, until they swing to the next branch.

I don't expect that most men here would share that preference, though.

Where is this behavior actually going on?

2 upvotes · 26 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because among my circle of mostly Gen X upper-middle class college-educated professionals in California I'm just not seeing it.

Duh.

Look, I get it. You live in a bubble.

That's not a bad place to live, but try talking to people outside of it. Gen X had it worse than our parents (how is it that the greatest generation gave birth to the worst?), but Gen Y and the millennials have it even worse. We are a society in social decay, and the sexual marketplace is worse and more ruthless for each generation as compared to the previous one.

"Marry a man who loves you more than you love him"-RP theory in the wild. Pill's response to this meme?

2 upvotes · 26 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No, she's trying to play the male RP game. That's not RP, that's the exact opposite.

Now, if you mean "she is a textbook example of what TRP points out women doing", then, yes, of course, I agree.

But RP strategy for women is more like:

- Carefully develop girl game.
- Only have sex with a man if you want him to be an LTR and hopefully a permanent one.
- Choose carefully. Punching above your weight class carries the risk of being dumped. Punching below your weight class carries the risk of permanent discontent, leading to breakup.
- Entice commitment rather than demanding it. Desirable men cannot be forced with a pussy embargo.

... and so on.

Suffice to say RPW would not endorse this woman's tactics.

Thoughts on passive orbiting

2 upvotes · 26 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

Yes.

The idea of chasing hot ones a little harder isn't a problem. (Eventually, if you develop enough abundance mentality, you won't, but if you're doing it now, that's fine.) The problem is chasing someone who you have a beta history with.

If you want her because you want a 9/10, there are plenty of 9s and 10s you don't have history with. Go find one.

If you are reluctant to do that, you are attached to her because of your history. Whether it's the usual sort of oneitis, or "having something to prove", it's still oneitis.

Kill the oneitis and move on. I promise you that you will begin to believe in your success even without going back and demonstrating in the faces of the people you were beta around. It just takes time and practice.

Thoughts on passive orbiting

2 upvotes · 26 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

It's not an issue that primarily occurs among women, it's an issue that is primary found among women. Because when it occurs in men, no one notices or gives a crap.

Can you imagine a man saying he feels like he doesn't deserve his success and is "faking it"? People wouldn't rush to reassure him, as they do with women. They'd stop seeing him as successful. It would be a self-fulfilling prophecy.

Just be aware that you're going to keep feeling like a loser for some time after you stop being one. In fact, you've probably already stopped being one. The habits of thought linger for a while even after the behaviour has changed.

This woman is a problem, though. You are making excuses for why this is okay. That's a danger sign.

I mean, so many keyboard alpha TRP'ers would say they'd diss Jessica Alba if she so much as have a single shit test, but common sense tells you that there are some girls hot enough to put up with a bit more from.

It's not about her being hot. It's about you having a past with her. Never try to tap the one that got away. Even if you succeed, all it does is hold you back.

Thoughts on passive orbiting

2 upvotes · 25 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

It's not about pining and jumping through hoops. Nor is about the ideal "passive game" where you're so dialed in that women come to you. It's about trying to prove something to yourself.

I see this a lot. Men who have stepped up their game, taken the pill, can walk the walk... but inside they still feel like losers. And for this reason, they want to go back and tap the same ass they missed. Or show up the ex-girlfriend. Or look ultra-cool and successful at their high school reunion.

It's an attachment that interferes with outcome independence. Not are women unable to tell the difference between "desperate to get laid" and "trying to prove something", but it also focuses you on prior, negative, self-defeating thought patterns.

The man who has truly arrived doesn't care who remembers him as a loser, because he's happy now. He doesn't care that he never got to tap that, because a sequence of equally satisfactory "that" can be found elsewhere. He doesn't want to go back and redo the past. He's living in the present, and planning for the future.

Feeling like a loser often lingers for a long time after you become awesome.

Thoughts on passive orbiting

2 upvotes · 25 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

It depends on the amount of effort you are really investing, and why she's not biting the hook.

If you are expending effort to see her, with a sexual motive and not progressing towards sex, you're an orbiter.

If you are spending time around her in some other way (no effort because you move in the same social circle, have other legitimate reasons to spend time together, etc), then there's nothing wrong with playing the long game.

I once spent a year hanging around a girl before I slept with her... however, she was a client, and I was earning money off the time I spent with her.

Science Fiction writer attacks the work of peers for a decade, "sees the light", apologises for her ways after being called on it. Holding frame is not just a rationalisation for men seeking casual sex.

2 upvotes · 24 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You still don't understand the term.

Winning an argument is conversational dominance, which is not necessarily frame control.

Example:

- Lose Frame, Lose Argument

Larry Summers: There may be some inherent difference in mathematical ability between male and female populations.

Horde of Angry Feminists: Misogynist!

Larry Summers: I'm sorry I'm sorry I'm sorry I'm sorry (resigns post).

- Lose Frame, Win Argument

MRA Larry Summers: There may be some inherent difference in mathematical ability between male and female populations.

Horde of Angry Feminists: Misogynist!

MRA Larry Summers: How dare you call me a misogynist? Here is my track of promoting female employees, donating to women's charities, promoting breast cancer research, etc, etc, etc.

Horde of Sheepish Feminists: Oops.

- Control Frame

TRP Larry Summers: There may be some inherent difference in mathematical ability between male and female populations.

Horde of Angry Feminists: Misogynist!

TRP Larry Summers: We're talking about mathematical ability, not your feels about whatever you think my feels are. Do you have anything useful to add to this the discussion of mathematical ability, or are you just going to squawk like a wet chicken?

You see, in the second example, MRA Larry Summers has won a battle, but lost the war, because he has won the battle that his enemy picked for him to fight. The point he was trying to make it forgotten, because the feminists successfully derailed the conversation into a discussion of Larry Summers' feelings and implied moral worth. They have successfully avoided the question of whether men and women differ in mathematical ability.

TRP Larry Summers displays frame control. He refuses to be drawn into the discussion that the feminists want to have. He is having the discussion he wants to have.

TRP is not a cult. I know what they are now more than ever, and TRP isn't it. Toxic Religion is.

2 upvotes · 24 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I get it being the devil's influence, I was just curious what they believe witches do/are capable of. If I were a chronic weed smoker and told one of them about how I fly on a magic broom every time I smoke weed, would they call bullshit?

Depends.

They believe such things are possible. Whether they believe you did it or not is an individual question, but they believe in magic. To them, magic is simply the power of the devil, lent to humans as a prize to tempt them away from god.

That's why they raise a big stink about, for example, the Harry Potter books. Not because they are stupid trashy books, but because they depict the use of magic as morally acceptable.

Now, Harry Potter novels are read by nerdy kids who don't believe in god or magic, but, being nerdy kids, they like to fantasize about a world where their ability to learn science stuff would directly translate into ultimate cosmic power, or at least enough to stop the jocks from picking on them.

That's the disconnect. To the religious fundamentalist loon, the magician is a priest, who asks a supernatural power for the result he wants. To the nerdy atheist kid, the (fictional) magician is an engineer, who compels the result he wants via understanding and employing the "scientific" principles of magic.

If you are an atheist, you probably don't believe in magic. But if you are a theist, you must believe in magic. The absurdities you find in religious fundamentalism are nothing more than the logical consequences of a belief in magic.

Journal Club Time; who cheats and why

2 upvotes · 24 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Field reports are observational. I don't know what you're on about.

Is it BP to refuse to hit a woman back if she hits you first?

2 upvotes · 24 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

I realize that the whole "women hit men because they know men can't hit back" is a totally unfair game that they pull, but I still feel personally like this does not make it OK to actually respond with violence when attacked by a woman.

Phase 1. Denial.

Call me when you're ready to wake the fuck up.

How hard is it to realistically create a lifestyle that involves you having sex with a lot of good looking women?

2 upvotes · 24 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Even for post wall women?

To some extent.

The wall can't be that bad then.

The Wall isn't what you think it is.

There's no supernatural point where a woman suddenly becomes ugly overnight, and unable to get sex from anyone but toothless vagabonds.

No. The Wall is peak ego.

You see, at a certain point, the rate at which a woman can mine attention stops increasing and starts to decrease. This precipitates a crisis, because the attention-dependent woman has been building tolerance for some time, so the demand is still steadily increasing.

The Wall, then, is the beginning point of a steadily increasing gap between the attention demand and the attention supply.

What do you say when she refuses?

2 upvotes · 22 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

Suppose I asked a girl out, she told me she's not interested, the message is clear. How do I treat her after that?

Don't treat her after that.

Not every woman is going to be into you. There is no one man in the world who would be attractive to every woman. So sometimes, you're just going to run into women who aren't into you and never will be.

Don't spend time on them. Go find another woman. Extract yourself from the conversation politely, but as quickly as possible, then find your next target.

RedPill, I get that it works, but do you have to hate women? Can't you do it without the misogyny?

2 upvotes · 22 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Can't you do it without the misogyny?

"Misogynist" used to mean someone who hates women. Now it means someone whom a woman hates.

How hard is it to realistically create a lifestyle that involves you having sex with a lot of good looking women?

2 upvotes · 21 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Much harder than:

- it is for a woman to create a lifestyle that involves having sex with a lot of good looking men
- Having a high paying career.
- Getting in really good shape.
- Most women think it is for men.

Not as hard as:

- Most men think it is.

Thought: TRP is essentially Hypergamy and Orbiters for Men

2 upvotes · 20 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yep.

Greybeards, what to do?

2 upvotes · 20 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

But I am concerned that if I am talking to younger women 35-40 it could be a turnoff for them.

It could. But it could also be a turn on.

I've been told flat out by several different plates, "I don't like it when you shave your mustache... it makes you look younger."

Personally, I'd rather focus my attention on the very large segment of girls in their 20s who have a thing for older men.

CMV: Being a traditionalist/conservative is the only way of TRP unless you have nihilistic tendencies.

2 upvotes · 20 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Pretty much every hunter-gatherer society in existence, both now, and way back when they were common. Also herding societies, and any other society with a traditional culture.

China until the very recent past. Japan until the very recent past. India.

You get the idea. Using social mores to restrict sexual behaviour works a hell of a lot better than religion.

CMV: Being a traditionalist/conservative is the only way of TRP unless you have nihilistic tendencies.

2 upvotes · 20 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Ad hominem is a logical fallacy which takes the specific form "Do not believe X's argument, because X has property Y".

It attempts to refute argument by referring the speaker.

This:

And I am not surprised that a woman's go-to solution involves a strong leader imposing his will.

Refers to a property of the speaker, but is not an attempt to refute the argument. Thus, no ad hominem.

Are you kidding me ? What other options ?

Look around you. Not every society which constrains human sexuality does so using either the state or religion. In fact, many societies that have successfully channeled human sexuality have actually had neither (although you can define "religion" broadly enough to include almost anything).

There are many, many ways of preventing human beings from doing this or that. And to have a civilization, you have to one at least one.

Because you cannot have a civilization without preventing certain behaviours. Arson, murder, robbery, etc. Now, what behaviours you need to prevent, and how you are going to prevent them is totally up for discussion. But there's nothing special about constraining sexual behaviours that requires a different mechanism of control than you might use to control child murder, or talking in movie theatres.

Now, bear in mind, some behaviours cannot be constrained effectively by any social means (Breathing). And some behaviours can only be restrained so far (if you don't give young men a sexual outlet, they will make one).

And this is up for discussion as well. But the issues of what to put a stop to, and how to put a stop to it, are separate issues.

How to handle long distance plates?

2 upvotes · 20 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

That's why I said "not 100% correct" instead of "flat wrong".

Both patterns work. Which one a man selects depends on what he wants and who he's selecting.

It's very hard to enforce fidelity in plates if you pick slutty plates. But less slutty women are harder to find, harder to plate, and generally require more tending and effort. So it's a tradeoff.

If your goal in plating women is short-term, no-hassle lays, then I recommend not trying to enforce fidelity. Just dump 'em and replace if they see other men. If you like more of a "soft harem" with slower rotation, then you need to put more effort into each one, but you can enforce fidelity a bit better.

I favour the latter approach, you might like the former. I think /u/[deleted] might want a little more of soft harem, given he's willing to continue a connection at a long distance.

You're still my hero. Just so you know.

Don't apologize for disagreeing with me. We speak man-speak here. What kind of bitch would I be if I got my feels hurt because we had different opinions?

In your opinion, why are today's men worth commitment?

2 upvotes · 19 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

What about them?

I can't explain why women want commitment any more than women can explain why men want sex.

TRP on Marriage

2 upvotes · 19 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

what TRP's take on marriage is

NO.

TRPers: what's your reaction when you see a talented woman?

2 upvotes · 18 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

do you react objecting that she should rather be spending her time growing children because that's her natural role or are you positively impressed?

Neither.

See, you're confused about the word "should". It has two totally different meanings.

1. You should be kind to children.
2. You should look both ways before crossing the street.

The first is a moral demand. The second is a goal-oriented "howto" instruction (with the unspoken assumption that the listener does not wish to be struck by a speeding limo).

You have heard TRP writers using the second "should", and mistaken it for the first.

I'm a true feminist

2 upvotes · 17 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/No_true_Scotsman

Some remedial reading for you.

Positive vs Toxic RP

2 upvotes · 17 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The fringe is defined by the men who can be helped. We define our size by the men we can reach.

What type of women do Redpill tactics work on?

2 upvotes · 17 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Basically, when you make an assumption, and argue something based on that, you have to go back and show your assumption was correct. Otherwise you're assuming something which is logically equivalent to what you are trying to show.

That's called "begging the question", and it's a logical fallacy.

You assumed that the seduction techniques taught in TRP only work on a "certain type of woman". You acknowledged that TRP subscribers wouldn't agree.

And then you asked them a question that assumed your premise was correct.

Your question took the form:

1. Horse breeders, I know some of you will say that all horses have four legs.
2. But I think only some breeds of horses have four legs.
3. Horse breeders, what breeds of horses have four legs?

Prenups can be overturned. Don't get married.

2 upvotes · 16 August 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

This cannot be repeated enough.

A prenup can be tossed out for being "unfair". And your society's definition of "unfair" is "woman suffers negative consequences from her actions".

If your prenup actually protects you, it will be tossed out because it actually protects you.

Your only protection is not to enter into the deal in the first place.

"I would like to settle down with a guy like you"

2 upvotes · 14 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

Thanks.

CMV: the fact that TheRedPill is right is what makes people so uncomfortable

2 upvotes · 13 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is actually a pretty good example of how unilaterally abusive relationships escalate and destabilize at the same time.

Hopefully, at some point, a therapist discussed the cycle of abuse with you, but, for the benefit of others who may be reading, it works like this:

Most abusive relationships are bidirectional... the abuse flows in both directions. But the ones that aren't tend to follow a cycle.

It starts with fear of abandonment. For whatever reason, family history, poor self image, whatever, certain people tend to fear being abandoned.

1. Fear of abandonment leads to
2. Attempts to control the other (so as to make them unable to leave) by various means (criticism to damage self-image, gaslighting, isolation, violence, etc). This leads to
3. Alienation of affection (Control attempts are not universally effective. Especially when they escalate, they can push the other away. Even if they don't, they do little or nothing to address the underlying pathology, which is the fear of abandonment.) This causes withdrawal, either physical, or emotional, or merely the fear of it.
4. Courtship.... where incidents of abuse create this disconnect (increasing abandonment anxiety), the abuser will switch to an alternate strategy. This usually involves courting behaviours, exaggerated kindness, displays of affection, displays of remorse (often quite sincere), etc.
5. If this behaviour is effective, the relationship returns to normal, but the period in which it was under threat has now increased fear of abandonment. This causes the cycle to run again, but more intensely.

This cycle repeats until it destroys the relationship, either by driving the passive partner away, creating behaviour so extreme that others intervene, killing the passive partner, or killing the active partner (whether in self defense or revenge). During step 4, the passive and active roles can actually switch, with the former abused partner becoming physically or emotionally abusive to their temporarily repentant abuser.

Thus we see that abusive relationships are unstable and eventually blow up (usually after great harm and turmoil), because while controlling behaviour can be quite effective in the short term, it has the opposite effect in the long term, especially as it escalates.

Most of the young men who come to TRP bear certain similarities to the pattern for the passive partner in an abusive relationship. But they have been caught in a slightly different cycle:

1. They have been persuaded (and gradually have come to persuade themselves) that they are unworthy of love, and that women are more desirable than they are, merely by reason of being female. This is partially rooted in our culture's ingrained preference for women over men, but it can also have to do with their individual histories.
2. They have developed a pattern of paying, performing, and pursuing, while the succession of women they encounter sit idle judging their efforts.
3. This becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy. Because these women witness how hard they are trying, witness that low self-valuation, and conclude that these men must indeed be unattractive. They then treat the men as unattractive, which reinforces that negative self-belief.
4. The cycle repeats with gradually escalating effort on the men's part, increasing contempt on the women's, and increasingly cringeworthy behaviour.

This causes misery just as the cycle of abuse does, but unlike the cycle of abuse, it is much more stable, because there is no one abusive partner to get away from. Instead, the man is behaving in a fashion that provokes emotional abuse from most any woman he encounters, and so there is no one for him to "get away" from.

He must change his thinking and behaviour.

The cure is to take women down off the pedestal, and to cultivate valuation of himself. When he is capable of regarding himself, rather than the woman, as the prize, he is able to have sex and relationships without being afraid of rejection. Thus he can limit his efforts to what is sane, what is healthy, and most of all, what is reciprocated.

Side plate hit me after I teased her, went no contact, now she wants to talk. How to proceed?

2 upvotes · 11 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

Hard next.

That level of disrespect is a deal breaker.

Why are the elite, smartest college students having the least sex?

2 upvotes · 10 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

...could someone out there not perhaps enjoy pointless analyses on "what is truth"?

Philosophy PhDs need universities to subsidize them by forcing reluctant twentysomethings into their classes because otherwise no degree for you. Comp. Sci. PhDs are courted by universities to keep private industry from stealing them away.

Stop quibbling and do something useful.

Female strategic response to TRP & PUA

2 upvotes · 10 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Most of my points are ways for women to: 1. filter out guys who aren't interested in relationships/want to play the field for time being

You're projecting chick thinking onto men. Girls want "a relationship". Men aren't "interested in a relationship/not interested in a relationship", because, for us, a "relationship" isn't a thing. The only thing that exists for us is "a relationship with", as in, being with a specific person.

The only reason a man ever thinks "I want a girlfriend" is that he's a position where he won't get regular sex otherwise.

1. increase the guy's emotional investment

Which of your numbered tips do you think does this?

1. signal that they are picky with sexual partners and aren't sluts

Most men are well aware that women don't have one set level of pickiness that gets applied to everyone. If a woman wants to "take it slow", I'm just going to assume she's not that into me, and I'll go spend time with a woman who shows more enthusiasm. My attention will gradually be dispensed in smaller doses with longer delays between them, until I vanish completely.

You see, before I came up with this "red-pill" stuff, I believed as you do, that there were "sluts" and "good girls", "players" and "relationship men".

But I've seen a woman take a phone call from her boyfriend, whom she had been in "relationship" with for four months, and hadn't yet had sex with... while she was sitting in my lap with my penis inside her, all the while striving not to giggle. I've been felled by a Mormon girl six days before her wedding. I could go on like this.

There is such a thing as punching above your weight class, and some people are pickier than others, but that doesn't change the fact that all women are sluts for the right man, and all players are husbands for the right woman.

If you want a man who is less of a player, realize that it is because you want to set yourself an easier task in securing his commitment. You pretty much have to make a tradeoff between "attractiveness of man" and "commitment chance". Reach too high, and you're in danger of getting plated or pumped and dumped. Reach too low, and you're in danger of winding up cheating a lot... on your boring, unsexy husband.

Was I a full beta?

2 upvotes · 7 August 2015 · /r/askTRP

So my question is how much of a beta was I?

It doesn't matter. What matters is what you do tomorrow.

Stable lesbian relationships: What gives?

2 upvotes · 3 August 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I get it, abuse and divorce happen amongst lesbians, sometimes even in higher (reported) proportions. That's not the question at hand.

<https://i.imgur.com/0zC7gQw.jpg>

Reddit Front Page: Ronda Rousey on "Do Nothing Bitches"

2 upvotes · 2 August 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

The single greatest female Muay Thai fighter ever, undefeated in pro Boxing (and ducked by Laila Ali throughout her entire career)...and she gets wrecked by an average male journeyman the moment she tries to stay in the pocket and trade with him.

Let the ignoramuses believe that Ronda could, in fact, beat Werdum because she's so great. Werdum will go along with it, because he doesn't have a choice. There's no glory to be had in arguing or fighting with women/kids.

Indeed. Also illustrative is the last few seconds of the video. Notice what is said to her, what is handed to her, how she is treated.

Is there a meaningful difference between hating a gender and having a really negative opinion of them?

2 upvotes · 28 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Depends what you mean by "hate". People use hate to mean, interchangeably, "strongly dislike", and "wish harm upon".

if red pill is so wrong where's the blue pill guide to fulfilment, relationships and workplace success? where are all the people saying they owe their successes in life to blue-pillism?

2 upvotes · 24 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Under the link "Why are we here". It's a link to something /u/Whisper said 2 years ago.

I never knew they had linked this. I'm not surprised. It has always been the habit of certain people to argue the basics of their viewpoint, by rolling their eyes and saying "Well.... duuuuhh! It's obvious!".

Many things are obvious. And many obvious things, ain't actually so. I don't believe in common sense. I believe in data. I believe in empirical observations. I believe in guessing and then testing.

If you can't explain why something is wrong, but have to point at it, and make noises like "well, duh!" and "I can't even", then you don't really know it, no matter how obvious it seems to you. Feelings of certainty are utterly unrelated to accuracy of beliefs.

On being cynical... How to get past RP realizations?

2 upvotes · 24 July 2015 · /r/askTRP

Awww, does you have a sad?

I'm sorry, princess. This must be so much more painful for you than for the other hundred and twenty thousand guys who read the exact same things. Surely you need to make a post so you can get special help and advice, rather than just reading about the five stages and realizing you're going to go through them like everyone else.

I'm not here for your feels. There is no comfort to be had in anything but success. Get to work.

Fitness Motivator Goes in on obese people; mixed reactions follow.

2 upvotes · 23 July 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Obesity is caused by poor impulse control.

Time for another red pill, stat.

What causes poor impulse control?

People loooooove this idea that with enough "willpower" we have total control over our behaviour. They love this idea because it makes them think that they alone are in charge of their destinies, and nothing bad could ever happen to them unless they deserved it by being "weak".

This is the just-universe fallacy, and it is the very essence of the blue pill. I invite anyone who thinks they are in total control of their behaviour to hold his breath until he passes out. Post video proof.

We are not the master and commander of a ship that is our body. We riding an ape, that is riding a lizard, that is riding a fish. And steering requires not massive amounts of "willpower", but a good understanding of the ape, lizard, and fish.

If your insulin and leptin levels are screwed up, you will eat, and all the willpower in the world will not stop you. You cannot ignore hormones in your bloodstream any more than you can ignore blood alcohol and chose not to be drunk. Too much insulin, you'll get fat. Leptin insensitive, you'll eat too much. More testosterone, more muscle, more adventurousness. More estrogen, more bodyfat, more tears.

We are made of chemicals.

Some people can't accept that because they think it goes against the message of self-improvement and personal responsibility. It does not. Self-improvement and personal responsibility means you must be the one to solve your problem, because no one else will. How you solve that problem is by understanding it, not by trying to white-knuckle your way through life.

A gram of forethought and planning + a gram of the right information > three tons of willpower.

NY Mag Article: "Feminist" Men Should be Okay with Wives Having Sex with Others

2 upvotes · 23 July 2015 · /r/MensRights

Feel better now?

Shit tested by a dude..when is enough, enough?

2 upvotes · 22 July 2015 · /r/askTRP

Jealous betas attempting to cockblock you is some of the best social proof there is.

Just smile and agree.

Am I too easily offended by /r/TwoXChromosomes?

2 upvotes · 22 July 2015 · /r/MensRights

Yes, you are. Stop taking women so seriously.

Relationships from my Pre-RP Daze

2 upvotes · 21 July 2015 · /r/askTRP

At this point, should I just axe everyone from the pre-RP out of my life completely?

You don't have to. But don't let people hold you back.

And absolutely do not try to get with any women you knew before your transformation. Their image of you has been tarnished forever.

Swimming as a workout, and other fitness questions

2 upvotes · 21 July 2015 · /r/askTRP

https://www.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/353buo/eating_101_fork_use_for_dummies/

Swimming as a workout, and other fitness questions

2 upvotes · 20 July 2015 · /r/askTRP

a lot of meatheads parrot

Fatty excuse machine detected.

When you say "meathead", you're talking about people fitter than you. And you're pretending they're dumber than you to make yourself feel better. In truth, they're no more likely to be stupid than you are. In fact, they're likely to be smarter, because they made better choices.

Stop making excuses, wipe the potato chip grease off your pudgy fingers, then go to the refrigerator (you should be familiar with that journey) and

- Throw away everything inside that has sugar in it, and isn't a fruit or vegetable.
- Now go to the pantry and throw away all your bread and pasta.
- Now open the freezer and throw away everything in a box or package with microwaving instructions on it.
- Then throw away anything that someone could call "dessert" with a straight face.
- Then pour all your soda and fruit juice down the sink.

Until you do that, you'll never be able to outrun a fatty, because a fatty is riding around on top of your legs.

... And Don't Listen to Me Like a 'Sperg, Either.

2 upvotes · 20 July 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

<http://www.urbandictionary.com/define.php?term=aspergers>

... And Don't Listen to Me Like a 'Sperg, Either.

2 upvotes · 20 July 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Nah, that's not her shtick. Not a feminist. Bit of a sperg, kinda masculine mannerisms. Frankly, I don't think she'd care if I took it and published. After all, I'm the one who actually discovered it.

As near as I recall, my exact words were, "Hey, {Chick'sName}, come here a sec. I've found something weird."

We still talk occasionally. She got married, had a kid, works for some government bureaucracy or other.

The most common problem between TRP and TBP?

2 upvotes · 16 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Old news.

tl;dr:

- TRP argues about what is true, TBP argues about what is right.
- TRP argues to reach consensus, TBP argues to establish moral ascendancy.
- TRP believes a debate is between ideas, TBP believes a debate is between people.

Don't Talk to Me Like a Bitch.

2 upvotes · 15 July 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Being a sperg is like being short. It's an obstacle, it makes things more difficult, it makes progress slower, but it's only an insurmountable roadblock if it becomes an excuse for not trying.

I've known plenty of spergs. Hell, I fucked one. And I did feel extremely sorry for her. If you think male spergs have it tough...

They can be awesome people once they acquire enough social skills to not be annoying. But some of them use spergness as an excuse, and start insisting other adapt to them, rather than vice versa. That way lies stagnation, and being forever surrounded by people who can't stand them, because they are constantly being socially obnoxious.

TRP is a very good place for spergs to learn. Because it's full of straight, literal talk about the things they need to know that no one else will tell them straight-up. Sometimes it takes them a little while to acquire a sense of proportion about the whole thing, get calibrated, but it's better than the rest of the world, which just drops hints and expects them to magically get it.

Ideology infecting other subreddits

2 upvotes · 13 July 2015 · /r/MensRights

Left wingers seem to be foaming at the mouth with authoritarianism lately.

What do you mean, "lately"?

RPillars : Do you believe men and women should be treated equally by the law or not ?

2 upvotes · 13 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is not possible.

- Judges and juries are human beings.
- Human beings of both sexes display a strong preference for directing sympathy and understanding towards women rather than men.
- Conviction and sentencing are subjective decisions.
- Subjective decisions are affected by sympathy and understanding towards the subject.

Women are incapable of personal responsibility because personal responsibility is learned, not automatic. People learn personal responsibility by being held accountable.

Right now, women are not held accountable for most anything, because the dominant paradigm, feminism, has discovered how weaponize that increased sympathy against any attempt to hold women accountable for pretty much anything at all. Try to hold a woman accountable for her actions, you're a "misogynist", end of discussion.

So we have a plague of child-women running about, with all the powers and privileges our culture grants to adults, who have never learned personal responsibility, and who are not held accountable for the consequences of their actions.

TRP's solution to this, in our personal lives, is to abandon women for bad behaviour. Since the law prohibits us from imposing consequences directly, what we do is remove ourselves from the equation and leave women alone with the natural consequences of their actions, whether that be spinsterhood after 30 for slutting it up, or poverty for bad career and financial decisions, etc.

This leaves them with no one to call a misogynist. There are certainly arguments being made by feminists that men need to "man up" and start rescuing women again, but these are not nearly as effective because they can't be directed at any specific target.

Do you believe that women have ruined society ?

2 upvotes · 9 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's like asking whether puppies are too blame for ruining the carpet.

Puppies pee on the carpet. That's what they do. If you want different behaviour, you have to train them to do something different.

Ex-Blue Pill, Ex Red Pill. You're as wrong as each other.

2 upvotes · 9 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Stop saying it's about "self improvement". It may turn into self improvement for many, but 90% of new recruits are there for the promise of pussy.

The purpose of self-improvement is quality of life improvement. So when you're short of pussy, that means more pussy. So?

It teaches people how to be an asshole, because being an asshole gets you laid. You're still an asshole though.

And I'm getting laid. Again, so?

(More specifically, the harder you follow TRP the more you're going to alienate yourself from friends and family).

No, not really. My friends are assholes, too. We're not assholes to each other. We're just assholes to people who come along as total strangers, having earned no gratitude or loyalty from us, who say "gimme". Those people deserve all the asshole we can muster.

TRP has some good ideas, work out, self improve etc. Yet you guys can't help but turning up to 11 and saying "oh if you don't lift 5 times a day and spin 12 plates at once YOUR LIFE SUCKS.

If you lift 5 times a day, either you will overtrain and get weak, or you are not lifting heavy enough.

If you are spinning 12 plates, you have no time to work on your career, make money, have hobbies, or... lift.

Take your exaggerated bullshit home.

How do I figure out if I'm being cuckold?

2 upvotes · 5 July 2015 · /r/askTRP

GLO needs to stick to giving lifting advice. This would be a huge waste of your time. Passwords don't travel unencrypted across the wire unless someone fucked up colossally.

What you need is a keylogger.

I have frowned upon the Red Pill before. I yield. I need help.

2 upvotes · 5 July 2015 · /r/askTRP

So this is a problem.

Once you've been a woman's orbiter, it is almost impossible to get anything more than mediocre duty-sex from her.

Find another woman. One who lives close by.

Need some outside perspective on this.

2 upvotes · 2 July 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

She really is a disgusting excuse for human being but at the same time her son just killed himself. but this case is stretching my powers of empathy to their structural limits. half of me is like karma a bitch the other half is deeply sorry for her loss regardless.

Save your sympathy for the real victim here... her son. He was the one who was in such pain that oblivion seemed like a good alternative. Probably being raised by a radical feminist had a lot to do with that.

So fuck her. She needs my sympathy like a fish needs a bicycle.

How to "convince" your GF that you will also sleep with other girls but won't accept if she sleeps with a guy?

2 upvotes · 30 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

Eventually in my life I want to settle down and marry (yes I know against TRP teachings :))

"I'm going to ignore your advice. Please give me advice on how to ignore your advice."

Moron.

So do male feminists actually get much sex out of it?

2 upvotes · 30 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women wouldn't prefer either, because they both write like spergs.

A question for the blue pillers

2 upvotes · 30 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

At this point, I'm simply attempting to clarify what it is that you believe.

So, we've established that you think A owes B kindness, unless A thinks B acts like a dickhead.

This doesn't really sound too far-fetched. An anti-collectivist person (like myself) might argue that nothing is owed, and kindness must earned, and a highly collectivist person (imagine a vegetarian hippie Buddhist) might argue that kindness is owed even to people we think are dickheads. But many people would find your belief non-controversial.

So, here's the part you might find eye-opening.

Many of the men of TRP got there by taking a long hard look at the behaviour of modern first-world women, and said to themselves "Hey, most of these women are dickheads!"

If they have indeed decided that, then, according to your own principles (which we just clearly established), most women would not be worthy of kindness, and men would not owe kindness to those women.

Now, you're going to immediately think, "Hey, most women aren't dickheads." But that's the thing... who gets to decide? If you get to decide when someone has been a dickhead to you, or is a dickhead in general, then men also get to decide who has been a dickhead to them, or is a dickhead in general.

ITT: post your SMP related problem(s). BP and RP give their advice, and compare and contrast.

2 upvotes · 29 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You don't owe a man sex, and he doesn't owe you friendship.

Getting to sex is men's responsibility, and getting to emotional investment (relationship, friendship, etc) is women's. Thus, if he wants to get you naked, ~~making you want that too~~ viciously manipulating you into that with mind control powers is his job, not yours. If he chooses to hang around, hoping, that weakness is his failure, not yours.

Now, how much you chose to take advantage of the weaknesses of others is a moral choice, and thus, TRP has no advice on it. Moral choices are entirely personal.

If you believe that using the weakness of others to your advantage is exploitation and morally wrong, then you "should" sever contact when you realize that a man's goals are sexual.

If you believe that using the weakness of others to your advantage is an inevitable side-effect of allowing them the freedom to chose weak actions, then you "should" pursue what you want, and leave it up to him to decide what to do about what he wants.

It all boils down to how responsibility you think you have for others.

ITT: post your SMP related problem(s). BP and RP give their advice, and compare and contrast.

2 upvotes · 29 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Let's suppose I have a resource pool class:

```
template<class N> class Pool { // implementation here }
```

... and I want to parallelize resource allocation on SMP machines.

I can either implement allocation information as a boolean array or `std::bitset`, or I can maintain two data structures, one of pointers to free objects, and one of pointers to allocated objects.

However, a simple approach to these structures forces me to use a single mutex or scoped guard lock to control access to the whole allocation mechanism, thus creating a bottleneck.

However, using a synchronization primitive per object forces me to select the first free object, attempt to acquire the mutex, then check if the object is still free (because it might have been allocated while some other thread held the mutex), and if it is not, I must re-enter the selection code and try again.

This, too, creates a bottleneck, which is not severe in low-saturation scenarios, but gets worse the more frequently objects are acquired or released.

What guidelines are there for selecting between these strategies without the necessity for profiling in each case?

What do you think a world run by women would look like?

2 upvotes · 29 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Paleolithic.

"Sexual strategy is amoral"

2 upvotes · 27 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Morality is a set of obligations that you have to follow regardless of circumstances.

That is the most perfect concise statement of the common mistake about morals. Thank you. That's actually useful.

Every culture, subculture, and group has a different set of morals... and they all think that theirs are the true ones, and that they are just lucky enough to have born in the one society in history that wasn't ever wrong about anything.

It's absurd.

But when we realize morals are sets of agreements, then we realize that there are lots of different "sets of agreements" that work just fine. Along with lots that don't.

Thinking about morals then becomes a very complex equation, but at least it becomes possible to get an answer. Simplistic, absolutist thinking just plain doesn't work.

So, let's run an example:

Picture it. You're Whisper. (Stop staring down your shorts, yes, it really is that big.) You're me.

What do you tell that young man with the testosterone deficiency?

A. Do you tell him to obey the law, and live out his life in the precise misery he's in now?

B. Do you tell him to break the rules, and commit a felony to get the medicine he needs?

This is the dichotomy, and it's not a false one. He either breaks the law, or he doesn't.

What do you tell him?

TL;DR Testosterone I/O?

2 upvotes · 26 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

- Put syringe in vial of testosterone
- Put testosterone in syringe
- Put syringe in thigh muscle
- Put testosterone in thigh muscle.

It's the wheel and not the hamster.

2 upvotes · 25 June 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

DUH. Thank you, Captain Obvious. What would we do without you?

Of course monogamy isn't "natural". Why do you think societies had to spend so much trouble enforcing it?

But what if I told you that "natural" and "a good idea" aren't the same thing? What then?

Female monogamy has been imposed by every successful society, because societies that didn't impose female monogamy weren't successful. Without female monogamy, men don't financially support children. This is fine if you are hunters and gatherers. Not so fine if you have a civilization and things like money and specialization and an economy.

When women stop being monogamous, men stop committing to them. When men don't commit to women, men don't raise children. When men don't raise children, you don't have a civilization anymore.

Our instincts don't account for this, because our genes don't care about civilization. We, however, do. We can prove this because every time one of the few remaining hunter-gatherer cultures is exposed to civilization, it vanishes after a few generations. Monogamy may suck for super alpha dudes, because we have less sluts to fuck and sire bastards on, but even super alpha dudes like having grocery stores full of food, cars to get from place to place, an internet, and so on.

Are video games a good hobby?

2 upvotes · 25 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They.[2] Get.[3] Harassed.[4] To.[5] Hell.[6]

See, if I wasn't already familiar with this story, I might have believed you.

Even the Catholic Church, once a stalwart bastion of the strong nuclear family, is now throwing in with the feminists and is encouraging divorce and man shaming

2 upvotes · 25 June 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Then we are probably defining the word differently. Socialism is centralized redistribution of wealth.

Norway is like a man who found a chest of gold buried in his yard, and is now convinced he is a financial genius. Even stupid ideas can sometimes look effective if you win the lottery while having them.

Thoughts on Man's "Feminine Side"?

2 upvotes · 24 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Carl Jung was not a research scientist. He was a nutjob who wrote down whatever sounded good to him.

something better than sex?

2 upvotes · 24 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Self-respect.

getting a male partner

2 upvotes · 24 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yeah, you do.

You earn less, spend more, and have higher average net worth. You do the math. Even what you earn is fake. 9 out of 10 of you have fake little jobs we gave you so you can play career.

What happens if all the women call in sick tomorrow? My floor is dirty and I have to answer my own phone, that's what.

If you want me to believe you're good for more than that, answer my question. Tell me what part of an industrial robot, you, personally, are able to make. Or just tell me what you can do that I need, other than blowjobs.

What do you do for your salary?

If all non-alpha men on the planet disappeared

2 upvotes · 23 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No, we all starve or freeze to death.

How does TRP explain a lot of women being attracted to acoustic guitar players (nice guys who write love songs) and/or poetic, idealistic song artists? Wouldn't their pussies dry up if women truly were repulsed by niceness and chivalry? What about chick flicks where there's idealistic romance?

2 upvotes · 23 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Romantic moves aren't directly repulsive. They are indirectly repulsive.

They don't turn girls off in and of themselves. They turn girls off because they make the man seem needy or unconfident.

If a man does this a bit, but has enough status and power that he doesn't come off as needy while doing it, it's fine.

So, in summary:

- Play guitar and sing sappy love song on stage in front of thousands of screaming fangirls --> Sexy.
- Play guitar and sing sappy love song at party to show off skill to a bunch of girls --> Okay.

- Play guitar and sing sappy love song outside girl's window to court her --> Ewww Ick Creepy.

What is one rule/policy change that would make the main TRP subreddit better?

2 upvotes · 22 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

A sermon is not a debate.

First date post RP. I'd really appreciate feedback.

2 upvotes · 19 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

Hmmmm, that's a tough one.

"Sweet" is usually the kiss of death if you don't put a stop to that shit right away. When she says "sweet", you're probably in the red.

Now, it's possible to get out of the red, but there's no good reason to. It's easier to start fresh with a new woman. If you don't want to because you'd be losing an "opportunity", then you have scarcity mentality. If you don't want to because you want her, then you have oneitis.

I'd soft next, then, if she reinitiates, plate her like this:

"Is this gonna a fun date like the first one, or a boring date like the second one?"

She'll demur a bit, accuse you of just wanting her for sex.

"Sex is where it starts. We'll see if you can get me interested in more."

This probably won't work. It's a high risk of coming off as butthurt. But it costs you nothing to try.

- Always be willing to walk away.
- Never let her de-escalate sexually. What she does on meetup number X, she does on X+1, X+2... unless you don't feel like it, or it's blocked by logistics.
- When in doubt, it's a shit test. Mistaking a comfort test for a shit test is something you can get away with a few times. Mistaking a shit test for a comfort test will get you nexted.
- Always prune disobedience early. Impose a consequence any time she fails a compliance test.

Our mission statement

2 upvotes · 19 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's a bit of modern addendum. It might interest you learn to that "Rhetoric" was once a subject category in education. It was the theory and practice of how to construct a rational argument.

Regardless, if we use the modern definition, pretty much every comment is going to language designed to have a persuasive or impressive effect on its audience so if you wish to object to "rhetoric", you must do so on the grounds of regarded as lacking in sincerity or meaningful content

Now, that's a highly subjective judgment call... by which I mean it changes a lot depending on who's making it.

PPD is a bit of an interesting mutant in that respect. It's essentially a BP-owned space (no RP mods), with a predominantly RP crowd (because RP is bigger). However, it's actually BP that's interested in having PPD at all. TRP has very little interest in debating, because the existence of a bluepill world is our constant environment, it doesn't bother us, we don't wish to stamp it out, any urge we may have even to persuade people is altruistic (for their health and happiness, not ours). TBP wants to talk, because it wants TRP not to exist, and is trying to figure out how to make that happen.

So TBP controls the medium of conversation, but can't exercise that control without defeating their goal. It's starting to sound to me like you want to tone police us, but you can't, because you can only make us leave, you can't control what we say.

Can we discuss about female solipsism ?

2 upvotes · 19 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is fascinating. I've spent a lot of time in different communities with wildly different world-views (including communism, anarchism, Christianity, white nationalism, free-market libertarianism, feminism, and TRP) and the one constant between them is that almost everyone thinks they're seeing the world objectively as it is, while it's everyone else that's confused or misguided by subjectivity and their own biases.

That's not quite the point of the passage you quoted.

Solipsism: women operate in a world where objective truth does not exist. Only subjective truth. If they believe it, or if something "feels" a certain way, they will believe that it's true. These beliefs are not founded in objectivity, only subjectivity, so they are fluid. Often changing to match what the man they parasitically attach themselves to believes.

What this means is that men, who are evolved, and trained, to deal with things, generally believe that there is one objective truth, and it's important what that truth is. They have ideas about what it is, and those can be right or wrong, but they almost all agree that truth is a thing.

But women exist in an environment that consists a lot less of things and a lot more of other people. So the notion of an absolute truth is much less relevant to her than the notion of what people believe, and what they can be made to believe.

Women, therefore, are nature's liars. Because to them, asking how "true" a statement is... that's like asking how "green" a statement is. It doesn't really make sense to them. To a woman, "truth" means "what people agree on", not "the way things are in the universe whether we like it or not".

Can we create a coherent list of red pill beliefs?

2 upvotes · 19 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No, we can't.

TRP is a discussion group. The consensus evolves and changes constantly.

Our mission statement

2 upvotes · 19 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Every single comment and post should offer something beyond rhetoric.

You use that word a lot. I do not think it means what you think it means.

Rhetoric is simply of act of making an argument intended to be persuasive.

Hostility is anything that a reasonable person would consider a personal attack.

Whose definition of a reasonable person? The whole reason PPD exists is that people cannot agree on a unified definition of "reasonable person".

RP would say that a reasonable person is someone who doesn't allow his feelings to cloud his judgement. BP would say a reasonable person is someone who doesn't allow his opinions to make him act outside social mores.

CMV: the opinions of /r/TheRedPill moderators, Endorsed Contributors, and Vanguards can and should be seen as being in line with the overall /r/TRP thought.

2 upvotes · 18 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yep. I speak for all of TRP. Whatever I say, 120,000 people think.

No one man should have all that power.

Please let me know what offends you the most so I can do more of it.

How do you calculate someone's n-count?

2 upvotes · 18 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

On that axis, yes. That's not considering how she smells, and so on.

How important is sex/relationships to you?

2 upvotes · 18 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What I am talking about is, in the example that started this, when I state that I'd rather be single than adopt RPW mannerisms. And someone tells me how I won't even find a good man unless I become a RPW.

Dunno what people actually say to you, but if that's what you heard, more nuanced thinking is required.

RPW behaviours have the following traits:

- Appeal to men.
- Can only be demanded by men who have a lot of mating options, thus adopting them greatly increases odds of attracting such a man.
- Inspire emotional attachment in men, and thus greatly improve not only relationship choices, but relationship investment by men.
- Inspire behaviours in men which women like.
- Actually make women happy just doing them.

Now, it goes without saying that you believe none of this. But not having actual experience with this, that's your guesswork. You can say that red pillers have had bad luck in relationships.

and that they've never had a relationship that works under BP rules. But you have never had a relationship under RP rules at all. So the person with less direct experience here is you.

Getting back to my main point. Why would a red piller come here if they aren't willing to consider blue pill points? Even if they are thinking "not this shit again", why not just not come here?

Most of us don't. This sub is about 4% the size of TRP.

As for the ones who do, I can only answer for myself. As a debate sub, it's useless. No one is going to convince anyone, because RP have already been BP, and there's nothing new there to change their minds. BP aren't going to be convinced by debate, because taking the red pill has to happen through experience, not being told about it.

I am here because I am TRP's resident scholar of the origins of BP thinking. To me, you are a rat in maze, not a fellow scientist. And debate makes as good of a maze as any other. I say things to see how you will react, then I write an article on TRP. The article, not any effect on you, is the end product. I had my anger phase, yes, but I had it before TRP existed. In fact, TRP exists because some dudes like RPS and IllimitableMan and HumanSockPuppet and I went through this process and wrote about it. And thus a group formed, because others read it and said "Hey, this. This makes sense. And I tried it, and it worked."

But now I'm in the acceptance phase. I accept that you not believing any of this shit is part of the whole mechanism. How could I be angry at behaviour which my own theories predict in the first place? You just haven't had proper guidance.

If Blue Pill is not evolutionarily "fit", how are people who are bluepill still around?

2 upvotes · 18 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And I'm an anti-statist, anti-feminist, anti-multiculturalist child of two leftoids.

What's your point?

Is it our "duty" to have children ?

2 upvotes · 18 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Duty to whom?

If Blue Pill is not evolutionarily "fit", how are people who are bluepill still around?

2 upvotes · 18 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Because beliefs aren't inherited.

How do you rate this woman?

2 upvotes · 17 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

My image consulting services are not free.

Red Pillers; how critical are you of authority?

2 upvotes · 17 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Treason never prospers. What the reason?

If it prospers, none dare call it treason.

How important is sex/relationships to you?

2 upvotes · 17 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's when red pillers suggest I should become a RPW in order to attract a good man

Afraid you might do it? Or just afraid we might be right? Or afraid we might persuade everyone else, and you'll be the minority?

Hate is always made partially of fear. No one rages at the powerless.

It's not anger. It's not hate. It's pain.

2 upvotes · 17 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Funny they would use that expression, given that men are dehumanized as an entire group of people in the first instance.

Human dehumanization is part of the plan.

It's not anger. It's not hate. It's pain.

2 upvotes · 16 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Good thing he knew that no doesn't always mean no. And how to push through resistance.

How long now?

Omegas vs Betas (No diss)

2 upvotes · 16 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The way to read these terms is to think of them like BMI (body mass index). It's not a precise way to classify individual people (BMI routinely misclassifies athletes and bodybuilders as "obese"), but a quick and dirty way of talking about population trends.

UN Women are endorsing anti-male discrimination

2 upvotes · 16 June 2015 · /r/MensRights

will produce no books by men... to beat gender bias...

My sides.

CMV: If women are like children, men are like retired old men

2 upvotes · 16 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

And which one do you want running your society?

Is Islamic culture misogynist? What are your views on it?

2 upvotes · 15 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It would be to be a religion practiced mostly by brown people. Because they're all too ready to have a go at christianity.

How can thebluepill get away with calling itself a satire sub with humor?

2 upvotes · 15 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It describes any group who has come together because of a shared sociopolitical opinion.

What you did was snip out the part about disingenuously pretending to be humor.

Breakup after first argument...please advise

2 upvotes · 12 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

I know I made a few mistakes

Holy shit. Every single thing you did, you did wrong. Not just wrong, but the precise opposite of right. I think my testosterone levels are down about 100 ng/dl just from reading that mess.

what I did was it fair for her to Fair? Fair?

You expect fairness from a woman? Don't be a chump. Women aren't fair. Women are children. Women will dump you for not liking their new hairstyle, in the same as a child telling mommy they "hate her" because she won't let them have a cookie.

Anything a woman says, you treat it like it's coming from the mouth of a middle schooler.

You're not ready to be in an LTR. Hell, you're not even ready to spin plates. You were this woman's little toy, which is why she was willing to next you the moment you inconvenienced her.

You need to go read the main sub sidebar.

What do you do if a girl on Tinder asks: 'how do I know your're not a creep?'

2 upvotes · 12 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

Shit Tests, 101.

- Agree and amplify: "Well, you could ask the cheerleaders in my basement."
- Hold frame: "You don't."
- Reverse Frame: "Hey, if you're not into creeps, I'm out of here."

Men, even TRP men, love women very much.

2 upvotes · 12 June 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

I disliked the first one, and liked the second two.

/pitchforks

/torches

Question for RPer: Why do you put so much emphasis on careers?

2 upvotes · 11 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I've never understood this. You guys give so much importance to being a man, and being a leader but at the same time go on and on about why you need to have a career. Surely 95% of the time (probably more) you're wasting your life doing some bullshit job, for someone else so that they can profit, deciding when you work and for how long.

Nah.

That's what happens when you don't work on your career. The more in demand you are more power you have. And the more money you get.

And if you're smart, you start turning that money into power and independence by investing smartly, starting your business, etc.

Sure, dropping out of the money game may be one way to be free, but it substitutes the constraint of being a broke-ass motherfucker for the constraint of reporting to someone else.

The other way to be free is to win the game. The more people need you, the more power you have.

Why is TRP so taken by the happenings of the media?

2 upvotes · 11 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

Because you don't hit the "report" button often enough.

Stop complaining about the heaps of shit, and grab a shovel.

Both Pills: would you rather be an unattractive male or an unattractive female?

2 upvotes · 9 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Sex is inherent.

I'm not capable of wanting to be female, because my brain (the thing I want things with) is evolved to reinforce a male identity. I am programmed to see myself as inherently male, and it is not possible to tamper with that programming by thinking.

Your thoughts about LASIK?

2 upvotes · 9 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

I had PRK instead, which I recommend. The LASIK flap can sometimes have some issues.

Has TRP ruined music for you?

2 upvotes · 8 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1IWJXDG2i0A>

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ml7C-WfL8f8>

Blue Pill refuses to recognize the monster they created.

2 upvotes · 8 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Actually, I'm a fetus. I have a special keyboard and screen that allow me to use the internet while still in womb. It works pretty well, but frankly the insertion process isn't exactly everyone's cup of tea.

One of the funny things I've noticed about liberals, the left wing, collectivists, that whole ideological cluster is their general contempt for teenagers, especially teenage boys. It's like they don't know how to talk to or deal with them (or anyone else with high levels of testosterone), so they create this worldview where "teenagers are wrong" is a basic axiom, and having a dialogue with them doesn't even make sense.

One wonders how they propose to teach the next generation anything at all.

I find teenagers very interesting because they are old enough to care about the adult world, but not old enough to have learned what you are not allowed to say. Often their rebellious attitudes come from the dawning realization that their society is full of lies which everyone knows are lies, but everyone tells (and must tell) anyway.

They haven't yet comprehended how these lies are an absolutely necessary social lubricant, and without some version of them, people can't get along with each other.

However, at the time when one actually decides that we actually need to talk, literally and explicitly, about our culture's values, and whether they are actually good for us or our civilization, then, like the teenagers, we must literally and explicitly call into question people's cherished beliefs.

This is why you mad, bro. I caused cognitive dissonance, which is painful to you. If I make you experience a negative emotion, the easiest thing in the world is to call me a big meanie. Or, with similar meaning, a brutish, testosterone-addled youngster (as if testosterone addled things).

Your feelings, however, are my problem to the precise extent that mine are yours. Which, you have already agreed, means "not at all".

CMV RPW are hypocrites and I'm not a troll for calling them out

2 upvotes · 5 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Who made the sidebar of ... TRP the "official list of the grand high panjandrums of RP".

I'd have to go with "lots of people voting with their feet".

I mean, go have your subreddit. Knock yourselves out. But putting a "red pill" sticker on your forehead doesn't automatically make me endorse or otherwise agree with you. That's gonna be about the content of what you say.

women who make more than their man are more faithfull

2 upvotes · 5 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Being financially dependent on your SO makes you more likely to cheat.

[citation needed]

Opinions on roids?

2 upvotes · 4 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

It's true that

(roids + couch) > (no roids + lift)

... if it's your first cycle.

But you're not ready for that. Not because you haven't "hit your genetic limit" (people who advise you to wait for this do not know what they are talking about), but because you haven't educated yourself yet.

You need to learn more before you will be ready.

Opinions on roids?

2 upvotes · 4 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

Roids only make the recovery process faster, and breaks your genetic limits,

Wrong.

you still have to work your ass off.

Partially correct.

If you go on roids, never stop, because basically you're shutting down your own hormone production to avoid hormonal balance, coming off and rehabbing your hormone production will be awful as fuck, if you're even able to recover it.

Wrong.

Opinions on roids?

2 upvotes · 4 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

That being said, if you want to dive into roids, try some peptides first to keep it more natural.

I can't even begin to describe how wrong this whole sentence is. Individual letters of the English language are now slightly more inaccurate for having been used in it.

Calling Bruce Jenner a Woman Is an Insult to Women (And Men)

2 upvotes · 3 June 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

TRP has no consensus.

Some are staunchly religious, others think that you haven't taken the red pill if you still believe in fairy tales.

What are your thoughts about the 'casting couch'?

2 upvotes · 3 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Oh, so that's why I keep crashing into invisible things every time I walk through a crowd! I had been wondering.

Seriously, though, you're right that only a very small percentage of women make it on to my radar as potential mates. Only the best will do, and even they don't get a pussy pass from me. However, I am not everyone. The value of sex appeal, and the percentage of men it works on, varies from woman to woman, but it doesn't actually converge to zero until you get to the very bottom of the scale.

Is it outdated to think I could find a girl who would want to be a stay-at-home mom?

2 upvotes · 1 June 2015 · /r/askTRP

The point about calling them "unicorns" is not "they don't exist", it's "they might or might not, but there's no point looking for them".

Looking for a unicorn as a sexual strategy is like buying lottery tickets as a retirement plan. Sure, someone wins, somewhere, but the odds are against you.

Women only abandon the dual-track mating strategy and go all-in with one man if they were raised by a patriarch. The reason we characterize them as impossibly rare is because that rarity simply reflects the rarity of patriarchs.

If you absolutely must find a unicorn, then find where patriarchs are.

If lifting raises testosterone, would it be a bad choice for a red pill man to LTR a woman who squats?

2 upvotes · 1 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's easy to tell which women are using AAS.

- Is she a masculine-looking freak who is stronger than most men, but horrifyingly unattractive? Using.
- Is she weaker than most men, but far stronger than most women, and incredibly hot? Not using, just lifting.

Women can get laid more easily than men. How do you think society would differ if the genders were reversed?

2 upvotes · 1 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This isn't possible. You might as well ask what would happen if 5 was not equal to 5.

It's not just something that isn't the case, it's something that cannot be the case. The sex that gets pregnant is by definition female. And the sex that can get pregnant is by definition investing more biological resources in each child. And the greater investor is by definition more selective.

Nothing you can do will change this.

How does the TRP explain this female-male friendship?

2 upvotes · 1 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You have an orbiter. The reason he hasn't made a move is because he's afraid to.

Anglo American women are terrible investments for marriage

2 upvotes · 1 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Marriage is a terrible investment.

How effective is amoging?

2 upvotes · 1 June 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

There is only the actual real definition of a word

Wrong. Languages exist only by consensus. They evolve and change constantly.

Unless perhaps you think Chaucer spoke the same "English" we do?

Why are men and women unable to be friends?

2 upvotes · 1 June 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Men and women are unable to be friends , not in the same sense that I am unable to travel backwards in time, but in the same sense that I am unable to tear down a cathedral with a spoon.

It's not physically impossible. It's just incredibly difficult.

How to stop smoking weed

2 upvotes · 30 May 2015 · /r/askTRP

Don't buy any. Then you won't have any to smoke.

A question for the females. what do you find attractive in a man?

2 upvotes · 29 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Well, no, not really. She doesn't seem to understand that I'm not really attracted to humans.

Woof means no, okay?

How many sexual partners makes a female unattractive for marriage?

2 upvotes · 29 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But getting legally tied to a girl ~~who isn't conservative~~ is fucking stupid

FTFY

Victims, Victims Everywhere: Trigger Warnings, Liberty, and the Academy [is this the new femininity?]

2 upvotes · 29 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's because we are.

You can't have a left without feminism. Feminism is merely socialism applied to sexual policy.

It has the same philosophy, an absolute division of people into oppressor and oppressed, the same method, forcible wealth and power redistribution, and the same goal, placing the former "oppressed" in absolute power, while still allowing them to claim victimhood.

You don't have to be right-wing (in reality, there is no right wing), but if you are an antifeminist, then the left has no room for you.

"On men, women and r/TheRedPill"

2 upvotes · 29 May 2015 · /r/MensRights

I don't see anything stopping someone from both promoting institutional equality while making RP choices for their own lives.

Certainly not. People can do as they chose.

I don't have any great problem with MRAs, I simply think that they are making a mistake in trying to appeal to a compassion that they will never successfully provoke. Women get better treatment by inspiring compassion, but men must get it by inspiring respect.

Remember no society has ever given a crap about men's suffering... and yet some societies have managed to treat men just fine anyway. It because those societies hadn't forgotten that without the constant labour of men, we all freeze or starve to death.

No lights no power no roads no internet no banking industry no shipping no food... well I don't need to belabour the point. You get it.

No one will ever care about a man as a human being with feelings and an inner life except that man and his relatives and friends. But we can make them respect his strength as a vitally necessary component of their own survival and prosperity.

"On men, women and r/TheRedPill"

2 upvotes · 29 May 2015 · /r/MensRights

Most people in power are men

That depends what you mean by power. To me "power" does not mean "who acts" but "who decides".

Being a visible leader is a position of responsibility, but those visible leaders are not necessarily free to do anything they want. They must serve the desires of those who put them there and keep them there. This means both dollars and votes.

For example, in the US, visible political leadership is split between Democrats, who are busily trying to loot everyone else's income in order to find more ways to give women free cookies, and the Republicans, who are on the defensive, having been tarred as misogynist for daring to suggest that maybe women should only have some free cookies at men's expense.

Neither of these parties is going to listen to the MRM, because they have a vested interest in not doing so. Democrats win elections solely on the strength of the female vote. They are not going to take the free cookies away. And Republicans lose elections every time they even try to slow down the rate at which new free cookies are given.

None of them want to allow the real question to be asked: Who's baking all these cookies, anyway?

if we want any institutional change we have to appeal to them, too.

That's where you, and the MRM, make your big tactical mistake. The mistake is hidden in that word "appeal".

You will never get anything for men by appealing for it. That worked for feminists because they are women. It does not work for men. It will never work for men. Undisputed scientific results have clearly demonstrated that both male and female test subjects display a clear, strong, and consistent bias in favor of women.

The only way you ever get men to favour a man over a woman is if that man is himself.

This is why TRP acts on personal level. It is the only level where results can be achieved. The only way that men can stop the flow of free cookies is to stop baking cookies for other people to take away. Because men will happily give women other men's cookies all day long.

Extreme Red Pillers are no better than extreme feminists, they both need to stop.

2 upvotes · 29 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I believe in men's rights, but all the red pill is doing is fueling the fire, it's supposed to be about male empowerment and self improvement and how to effectively date and pick up women not regularly belittling an entire gender, it's pointless, nothing is gained from it. These misogynistic posts and view points are only giving extreme feminists more reason to spread hate for towards men, the same goes for them.

There's a reason we're bigger than /r/mensrights now. It's because we offer solutions for individual men, in their own lives. That's what we made it for.

Not your feels.

The only calibration I will perform on TRP is "what works".

TRP is not here to please you or make you comfortable. It is not here to save society, or settle things, or fix the shit feminists fucked up. It is here to help individual men, in their individual lives. That's all.

When you say it is doing more "harm" than "good", you are, as is usual, measuring the harm and good to everyone but individual men. Your definitions of "good" and "harm" could use a little tweaking, because until you start caring about them, they are going not going to care about you and your reactions.

You have put zero effort into helping them, you get zero input into how they help themselves.

Both Pills: Is requiring that a girl have a low partner count too much to ask for in today's hook up culture?

2 upvotes · 29 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Acting like a virgin is going to be a firecracker in the sack is generally not realistic.

Heh.

This might be true if sex were a mechanical skill instead of a social interaction. But, as some groups are very fond of reminding us all, people are all different and have different needs.

Frankly, I've been with a lot of virgins and a lot of sluts. The sluts aren't better in bed, and even if they were, who wants to grant a slut girlfriend status just to save yourself a few months worth of teaching "this is what I like" to a girl who still retains the ability to pair-bond?

What is wrong with us?

2 upvotes · 28 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Evolution is a game played by your genes, not you.

Win the games where you are a player, not a pawn.

Just a short reminder to be wary of statistics. One statistical "error" which is ignored ever so often (by both sides) is the Simpson's Paradox.

2 upvotes · 27 May 2015 · /r/MensRights

Simpson's Paradox actually isn't a paradox at all.

It's just pointing out the fallacy of division.

The logical error here is that "Berkeley" as a whole does not have an admissions rate. Instead it is a bunch of departments, each with their own admissions rates.

When you aggregate a bunch of things that have nothing to do with each other together into a made-up thing that doesn't exist, and then attribute qualities to that made-up thing, anything is possible.

CMV it takes more self confidence to form genuine emotionally open relationship.

2 upvotes · 27 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You know what takes even more courage than that? Sticking your hand in the garbage disposal and turning it on.

Can't Commit To Any Self-Improvement After A Year And A Half.

2 upvotes · 26 May 2015 · /r/askTRP

Reading TRP only helps one problem men have: ignorance of they need to do.

Do you know what you need to do? Yes? Then stop reading TRP and do it. Seriously, leave it alone. Lift, go keto, work on your career.

Get your T levels checked. Consider steroids.

I can't tell anything that's going to make it easy to get moving. If it were easy, there would be no TRP.

What MRA's could (and Should) learn from Gamergate (xpost)

2 upvotes · 26 May 2015 · /r/MensRights

They basically want TRP to absorb MRM. They say it themselves, they see the MRM as nothing be a recruitment center for those that are the most embittered to join their ranks.

That's an interesting notion.

But it's a bit slippery to speak of TRP in terms of "they want", because we're not really a movement with an agenda. We're more of discussion and self-help group. So we don't have a unified plan, or an official leader who issues marching orders.

Some of us see MRAs as big whiny babies. Some of us identify as members of both groups. Some of us think you are allies with a bad plan for achieving your goals. Some of us think we should absorb you (we're bigger now, despite being far newer, and we are growing faster, so this isn't out of the question). Others of us think that we are actually useful to your fight (playing "bad cop" to your "good cop"). Still others think you are untrustworthy psuedo-friends who are too weak-willed not to throw us under a bus to purchase some mainstream cred.

The strategy, it seems, is to teach men to simply stop caring about what women think of us and to just be "men", and the rest should sort itself out because women will naturally follow the strongest and most confident men, as is their nature...

Using the word "strategy" in this context is slippery, too. We are not a crusade. We are about teaching men how to get by in a society that has a lot of problems for men, and doesn't really care about men's quality of life.

We are not here to change society. We have no plan. Preparedness, resources, and personal development are our plans. This makes men better able to survive whatever changes the mutable social zeitgeist throws at us.

One common hope is that the withdrawal of men from being pushovers and walking ATMs will make women appreciate men more, and take men for granted less, but that's not our plan, it's just a best-case scenario. We're about survival, happiness, and prosperity on the individual level.

Do the red pill tactics work on women who are aware of them ?

2 upvotes · 26 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You.

Do the red pill tactics work on women who are aware of them ?

2 upvotes · 26 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You really are just fascinated with red pill guys, aren't you?

Can women increase their SMV with personal development and skill-building?

2 upvotes · 23 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

But surely, for LTRs there must be more to a woman's SMV than looks?

Looks get a man into your bed.

Behaviour gets a man into a relationship.

Fork Use 102: Building Muscle

2 upvotes · 21 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Okay, so your citations were weak, and you realize that.

Now you've abandoned that tack, and taken a sharp left into argument from authority. Well, that's not really relevant either.

You do as like. But don't try to tell other men here, trying to improve themselves, to avoid an important tool to do it with, just because you think it's riskier than you are comfortable with.

Does dread game work on men too ?

2 upvotes · 21 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Does dread game work on men too ?

Nope. Has the opposite effect.

Is This a Toxic Relationship?

2 upvotes · 20 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Burden of proof's on you guys. You're the ones trying to character assassinate him.

Is abortion wrong?

2 upvotes · 18 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Anything follows from a false premise. If two and two are five, then I am the Pope.

Man got raped, after this his girlfriend not attracted to him anymore, he doesn't go to police or counseling, says he's fine, but he is not. Is it embarrassing for men to seek help? Why?

2 upvotes · 18 May 2015 · /r/MensRights

AWALT. Do not confide weaknesses.

Alright BPer! I'm open to your ideas - step up and show me what you got! :)

2 upvotes · 17 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Sort of, but not quite in the way you are thinking.

The red pill now spans multiple subreddits, and some of those were created by RP mods to separate topics, while others were created on account of a fundamental disagreement as to the proper focus of the group. And some have started in one category and moved to the other. Almost all of these have some degree of reader overlap, but that degree varies.

Examples:

- /r/DarkEnlightenment: created by redpill readers who felt that TRP's lack of focus on conservative politics, and outright removal of racist posts and comments left important topics undiscussed. TRP doesn't really endorse these guys in general.
- /r/RedPillWomen: created by TRP mods specifically as a place for women to discuss women's concerns, the groups have drifted very far apart in what they consider advisable (I, for example, am banned from there for endorsing polygyny.) However, the two groups maintain friendly attitudes toward each other.
- /r/altTRP: founded by TRP mods for gay men to discuss RP issues relevant to them. Never really launched, because it turns gay men don't need the red pill... they already know. The experiences of being gay woke them up long ago, and since they don't need anything from women, and don't have to deal with them, there isn't much to talk about.
- /r/marriedredpill: started out as an area to discuss sexual strategy as it relates to marriage. No longer really endorsed by TRP because of an ideological schism between the single guys who thought getting married was a bad move and young men should be told not to do it, and the married guys who thought they were gurus playing the game on hard mode.

TRP readership blurs at the borders, because the group is a discussion group, not a movement. Thus the ideas it agrees on are a consensus, not an ideology.

At any rate, the reason I was kicked out for a while was that someone accidentally let in a mod who was actually a tradcon. Started banning people who didn't love Jesus. The removal of several notable names led to puzzlement, then attention, then uproar, then the problem getting fixed.

Alright BPer! I'm open to your ideas - step up and show me what you got! :)

2 upvotes · 16 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Just what it sounds like.

If you want the whole story, buy me a drink.

Is it safe to assume the red pillers are just plain smarter than blue pillers?

2 upvotes · 15 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They don't want to understand.

In fact, they want to not understand. Their reaction to TRP is an emotional one, and it demands that they oppose this thing. Therefore they read seeking, not understanding, but ammunition.

It does not matter what intellectual resources they do or do not possess, if none of them are assigned to the goal of understanding.

What can a man offers me besides his looks and peen peen?

2 upvotes · 14 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Absolutely nothing. You need me like a fish needs a bicycle. Go. Run. Be free. Be happy. Feed your cats.

Just don't ask me for anything.

RP, what BP beliefs do you have?

2 upvotes · 14 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Nobody agrees with an ideology 100%.

They do if they came up with it.

Old greeks meet the new greeks

2 upvotes · 13 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So you're telling us that one group of people you know nothing about is precisely the same as another group of people you know nothing about.

Thanks for your input, we will give it all the consideration it deserves.

Old greeks meet the new greeks

2 upvotes · 13 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You seem to regard yourself as a great authority on the thoughts and habits of the ancient Greeks. I'm sure you will have no trouble providing us with some scholarly sources for your assertions.

Why is Feminism considered to be about equality?

2 upvotes · 13 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You haven't shown that you have enough understanding of the manosphere, its readership, or its leading thinkers to have any idea what they do or do not understand.

No, you simply assume that they must not understand, because they do not agree. What a catastrophic failure of imagination, to actually be unable to picture someone reaching different conclusions from the same pieces of information.

Include something more than unsupported ipse dixit in your next response, or we are done, here.

Plastic Surgery as a Sexual Strategy

2 upvotes · 13 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Not gonna have kids? Don't care.

I take steroids. The muscles I build that way are real. They have surgery. The facial features they have are real.

Results are what matter.

TRP and the rain dance

2 upvotes · 13 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You've described a logical fallacy (post hoc ergo prompter hoc), but in your description, you committed another.

It is called the "narrative fallacy".

Just because your hypothesis has an explanation for what you see doesn't mean it is correct. The "narrative fallacy" refers to the mistake of confusing a plausible story with what's actually going on.

Maybe TRP readers are committing the post hoc ergo prompter hoc fallacy. Maybe they aren't. You don't know. You have provided no evidence of any sort. Just a facile sounding story.

TRP's thoughts on improved SMV and dealing with those that ridiculed you when you were a beta male.

2 upvotes · 11 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

There are two reasons why men torment other men for acting beta:

- To make themselves feel better by contrast.
- As a last desperate attempt to make them rediscover their testicles.

The first type are weak themselves, and only appear strong by reason of being slightly less weak than their victims. A former victim, having rediscovered his testicles, has little to fear from them. They will pick easier targets.

The second type are not enemies at all, even if their attempts to help might be tactless and ill-advised.

Double standards [x-post /r/TumblrInAction, u/ArtGamer]

2 upvotes · 11 May 2015 · /r/MensRights

I understand precisely.

I am just at a loss as to how to show you your own unexamined assumptions so that you can actually see them. When you say things like "prejudice against", "generalizing", and "sexist", you are caught in a trap. Someone else has designed symbols for you to think with, and given them specific meanings. This someone else has an agenda.

The Lego blocks that you build your thoughts out of were chosen for you. If you don't examine them and pick them apart, then this preselection will continue to control what you can and cannot think.

For example, you use the word "sexist" a lot. This word was invented by feminists, and you were taught to use it. It means all of the following things simultaneously:

- Belief that the sexes behave differently.
- Belief that the sexes should behave differently.
- Belief that one sex is superior to the other.
- Belief that one sex should have different rights or treatment than the other.
- Belief that the sexes have different capabilities
- Being wrong
- Being evil

Because feminists have created a term "sexist" which glues all these concepts together, you are agreeing with their agenda (in this respect), every time you use the word.

This is why you assume that to prove someone wrong, you need only prove them "sexist". Because your Legos are glued together.

Pry them apart. Examine each proposition individually. This is what I am asking you to do.

Double standards [x-post /r/TumblrInAction, u/ArtGamer]

2 upvotes · 9 May 2015 · /r/MensRights

Let's face it, GLO is sexist.

What exactly does that mean? What defines a sexist? Are all sexists the same? If not, what else do we need to know about him to know who and what he is?

It's strange to me that you can just post this label on someone, and expect me to accept that as axiomatically refuting his beliefs. What specific idea do you disagree with, and why?

Do you believe women should be lead by men?

2 upvotes · 8 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Dude, she's agreeing with you, not arguing with you.

IVF with stem cells turns back the clock on woman's eggs

2 upvotes · 7 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That doesn't make it free. If something costs 50k per try, that means that a hell of a lot of time and energy from a lot of people goes into making it happen.

That's not a sustainable large-scale solution, especially to a non-problem that you can solve just by having kids earlier.

You wanna go to college? Fine. Have kids first. Then go to college. You're just as capable of learning at 30 as you are at 18. The same is not true of having children.

Eating 101: Fork use for Dummies

2 upvotes · 6 May 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

its quite obvious to me that the human body was not evolved to digest these things in high quantity

You do know what those two things on the front of a woman are actually for, right?

No, there is no problem with dairy unless you are specifically lactose intolerant. If you are, take lactaid and eat your milk, cheese, and yogurt anyway. Because, like meat, it's great for adding lean mass.

RedPillers : How would you describe TRP theory in a few sentences.

2 upvotes · 4 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP is the reconstruction of masculine values, created out of necessity in the midst of a culture busily trying to kill them off.

Let's say, hypothetically speaking, the "Dad Body" did actually become what women craved from a raw, visceral, and sexual standpoint. How, if at all, would this change the idea that /r/theredpill "just gives women what they truly want"?

2 upvotes · 4 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If two plus two is five, then I am the Pope.

Anything follows from a false premise.

Why is it vile to "demand" sex but okay to "demand" a relationship?

2 upvotes · 4 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Human beings of both sexes are hardwired to be more sympathetic to women.

The Red Pill is a Martial Arts (self-defense) style of the male mind.

2 upvotes · 4 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If a new beta (let's call him Bob) from a wealthy family comes in the picture, suddenly the same college girl may try to LTR him rather than make him a fuckbuddy like the rest of the males she's been with. This is blatant disrespect to Bob, it shows that although the standard rate for access to Cindy's vagina has already been established by her behavior as 3 units in the commodity known as "time", for the beta the exact same access is much much more expensive.

Not quite.

What she is saying is that Bob's time is worth less than Chad Thundercock's time. If she demands 30 hours of Bob's time over the space of some weeks or months, for what Chad got in three, then she is just establishing how much she values Bob's time as related to Chad's.

The sneaky part here is that Bob doesn't know this, and that she and most of the women in her culture have conspired to prevent Bob from knowing this.

If Bob knew this, and he spent the time anyway, he would be agreeing that his value is 0.1 Chads.

But Cindy knows Bob is unlikely to agree that some frat bro who wears baseball caps backwards is worth ten of him. So she engages in price-fixing collusions with other women. This takes the form of the following lies:

- "Chad who?"
- "We don't like Chad, he's a self-centered asshole."
- "I never fucked Chad"
- "Honey, I chose you over Chad!"
- "Chad was a mistake that I regret."
- "Only trashy sluts ever fucked Chad."

... and so on.

This is why women hate TRP, but love what TRP turns men into.

Because TRP itself tears the veil off the price-fixing scheme, and gives real price information to the low-value players in the market. Women hate that.

But when these low-value players acquire real pricing information, they can use that feedback to increase their value. Women love that.

Women have a two-track mating strategy. Both tracks benefit women. Only one benefits men. TRP attempts to move men from the "profit" track to the "fun" track.

Discussion: Is TRP a Gymnasium ? What part of the gymnasium do you stop and listen in ?

2 upvotes · 4 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is all well put, but why are you bothering to say it?

People who are looking for something to be offended by, are going to find it. And it doesn't matter who gets offended by what.

why do redpillers shame hypergamy?

2 upvotes · 1 May 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

http://np.reddit.com/r/TheRedPill/comments/2ddrkh/ruining_virgins_for_everyone_else_another_case_of/

Been talking to a few girls that are down for 3 ways and...

2 upvotes · 17 April 2015 · /r/askTRP

You dun fuckt up, son.

Gonna have to next her and do better with the next one. You totally let her control the frame.

When bitches start talking about what's "only fair", you have to suppress that shit right away. Because they can justify anything in the name of "equality".

You are not making any deals or tradeoffs with her. You are an opportunity she can take or leave, exactly as it is.

Here's how you handle this:

Bitch: "What's something you're not comfortable with?"

You: "Sheets with a low thread count. Scratchy." (Never give a bitch a straight answer if you can help it.)

Bitch: What about MMF?

You: Nah. (Your answer was cowardly stalling for time. Bitches can smell fear.)

Bitch: It's only fair blah blah blah motormouth

You: I don't do guys.

Bitch: But if willing to blahblahblahblah morebitchspeak

You: Do it or don't. I don't do guys. (Don't argue. TELL.)

After this, the conversation probably won't go well. Sometimes she will submit immediately, but usually she won't. Usually she will batter herself against your stubbornness for a while, trying to draw you into an argument about fairness. She wants you to argue, because arguing is bitches' home turf. Once they have you arguing, they have already won. Don't argue.

Then the conversation will wind down.

After that, one of two things will happen. Either she is in progesterone mode, and looking for an orbiter, and you will never hear from her again. Bullet dodged. Or she is in estrogen mode, and will call or text in a couple of days apologizing for being bitchy or crabby. This is submission to your frame.

In which case, have your MFF threesome, then dump that bitch, because a bitch who even wants an MMF is not worthy of plate status.

"Robots designed for sex can't say no, therefore having sex with one should be considered rape." - Jincey Lumpkin(TED)

2 upvotes · 16 April 2015 · /r/MensRights

Does that include vibrators?

Lifting Basics for TRP (aka what to know if you don't worship the gym but lift regularly)

2 upvotes · 15 April 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

What the fuck does that have to do with anything?

You don't build muscles out of steroids. Eat your damn steak.

Obtaining the "perfect" body

2 upvotes · 15 April 2015 · /r/askTRP

Oh, yes, more fat.

It turns out the food pyramid was dead wrong, you see. Fat is good for you (with the exception of trans-fats, and we as a society have been pretty good about eliminating those as soon as we found out).

Turns out that what makes you fat is the same thing that makes your cells fat. (Not surprising, you are made of cells.)

And that is high insulin levels.

And how do you get high insulin levels? By raising your blood sugar quickly and sharply.

And that comes from sugar. The easier to digest, the worse, because it hits your bloodstream quicker and harder.

Absolute worst? Fruit juice and soda. Very Bad? Most desserts. Bad? White rice, bread, pasta, beans, potatoes and other starchy roots. Not so bad? High fiber fruit, vegetables that grow above ground.

Good? Butter, cheese, whole milk, almost any kind of meat, leafy vegetables, eggs, nuts.

Why isn't there a subreddit or forum for female sexual strategy if it's supposedly just as hard for women to get sex as it is for men? Is it because all women have to do is look as attractive as possible and screen all the men who come to them then select the best available option?

2 upvotes · 15 April 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There was one. It was called /r/fpua. It still limps along as a sort of ghost town of about 4k subscribers.

Which kinda proves your point.

Some things are hard for women. Finding a mate is not one of them.

what does the average "red pill" look like to you?

2 upvotes · 15 April 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I see.

So this video game serves as sort of a set Rorschach cards for you to project your prejudices upon.

It strikes me as interesting that one of the four, you picked by process of elimination. That suggests to me that you might not have a mental picture of what a RPW is all about. Which isn't surprising, if your basic idea of a RPM is "someone whom no one can stand to be around", then of course you cannot imagine a woman who prefers RP men.

Which in turns suggests to me that perhaps RPM and RPM, as well as BPM and BPW, are also Rorschach cards, to you.

Perhaps the "growing up" that you need to do is not playing less video games, but to stop laying simple metaphors over complex realities.

Obtaining the "perfect" body

2 upvotes · 15 April 2015 · /r/askTRP

Eat less sugar and starch, eat more fat and protein.

I was a "competitive" powerlifter (1 comp). I never got all these miraculous benefits from lifting that are promised.

2 upvotes · 9 April 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Lifting by itself isn't enough. If it was, there would be no need for a discussion subreddit.

Women and men in chess. Chess is often divided into men's chess and women's chess. The classification is quite relative, since women can participate in tournaments for men, while men can't take part in women's events.

2 upvotes · 9 April 2015 · /r/MensRights

what about the women who are passionate about the sport, but would get absolutely decimated when playing men?

What about all those short guys who never got a chance to feel the joy of playing in the NBA?

Pretend to be a salesman and sell TRP/TBP to recently graduated college men and women.

2 upvotes · 8 April 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I wouldn't.

We are not selling anything. I could not care less if you choose to wake up or not.

TRP and the family unit

2 upvotes · 8 April 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Ok, so lots of posts on TRP are dedicated to spinning plates and gaming women. I'm just curious about what you TRPers think about the family unit? Do you not think it is important to have a family?

you talk about how there aren't many good male role models, which I agree with, but the only way in which this would be solved would be to have start your own family and be a good role model and set a good example for your kids and lead them on the right path.

You don't get it, do you?

We are not here to fix society by self-sacrifice. That time has passed.

We are here because society demanded too much of us and gave too little... and you think we should solve this problem by giving more?

Do you really think children benefit from having a older dad who can't participate in sporting activites with them and have enough energy to run around? Ultimately, dont children benefit from having younger parents (20s and 30s) rather than parents in their 40s?

So now you want me to sacrifice myself some more for the benefit of some hypothetical children?

Why? What's in it for me?

Not women. Not children. Not you. Not society.

Me.

Because if no one else is going to look out for me, then I will.

Men in the U.S. special ops forces are skeptical that women can meet the physical and mental demands of the job; they fear lowered standards for women

2 upvotes · 8 April 2015 · /r/MensRights

A lot of people simply do not realize how brutal men's tasks can be, when the constraints of those tasks are imposed by physical reality.

Ranger school.

Surgical residency.

Engineering school.

Firefighter training.

Commercial fishing.

We could name shit all day. But find anything women are "underrepresented in", poke at it enough, and you'll find somewhere where the going gets tough.

Women are just not as tough as men. Never have been. Never will be. And no amount of crying, quotas, or calling me a misogynist will change that.

Quick recommendations for building an aesthetic male body

2 upvotes · 7 April 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Interesting.

Equestrians in training aren't really noted for emitting strong aromas, but if they sip that much, they might. What do they do to inhibit unpleasant aromas?

Personally, I have a doctor who is happy to take my cash to help me get straight C's on my legal and pharmaceutical tests. But that isn't so much of a growth industry as it used to be, and I am considering taking up playing the trenbone, if I can find a music store I trust.

Red Pill, what do you think of a woman if she has a low sex drive? Or just doesn't want to have sex?

2 upvotes · 2 April 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You thought wrong.

You heard "low partner count" and thought "withholds sex". But someone with a low partner count is someone whom men tend not to dump.

It's not the short delay between "hello" and sex that makes a slut... it's the short delay between sex and "goodbye".

The Root Cause of the Anger Phase.

2 upvotes · 29 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

I do see the purpose (insofar as an evolved behaviour can be said to have purpose) of anger as enhancing behaviours and making them more effective. I see it as something which serves to motivate useful behaviours that we otherwise would not perform at all.

Cults, Internet Marketers, and The Red Pill

2 upvotes · 27 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Okay, now I've had a chance to read the whole thing.

Pretty much exactly what I thought. You spend many paragraphs kicking internet shysters... and who can disagree with that?

But then you start associating this with the red pill.

Yeah, manosphere audiences have money, and want things. And that attracts shysters. But that's where the connection ends. I never heard of any of this crap until you linked to it, and then associated it with the red pill. The thing to do with these insects is ignore them or laugh at them, not grant them dignity they don't deserve with a writeup.

A fool and his money will always be soon parted. And whenever there is a fool with money, there will be a huckster with a lie. And since the best liars are the ones who believe their own lies, these hucksters will often get taken by other hucksters, and so.

The manosphere isn't a big ship for you to steer, or throw the rats off of. It's a conversation. It's a spreading infection of ideas. You can't purge it of this or that. All you can do is spread your own competing ideas.

I don't read Return of Kings. Not because it's selling shit, but because most of the writers are twenty-four year olds whose heads have never been violated by an original idea. Every tank has bottom feeders.

Redpill definitions- WORDS WHAT DO THEY MEAN? PPD podcast #3

2 upvotes · 25 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

My reasoning about engaging with these people is an idea I nicked from Richard Dawkins talking about creationists.

He refuses to debate creationists because, no matter how much he made them look like fools, they would still gain credibility by being taken seriously by a respected biologist. If you take the podium, real or metaphorical, across from someone, you are saying that they are sane enough to be worth arguing with. After all, no one debates Gene Ray the Time Cube Guy.

Well, non-casual feminists, not to mention social justice warriors, cultural marxists, and other leftoids, are talking insanity. It's a bad tactical move to act as if they are worth talking to, because that makes them look saner than their own words do.

Our weapons against them are not rhetoric, logic, and evidence, because they are largely immune to these. They simply start using postmodern discourse, drag the debate into the realm of characterization and moralizing, and then you have no chance, because a man engaging in a public sympathy contest with a woman (much less the abstract concept of all women) has as little chance as a woman does against him in a fist fight.

No, our weapons against them are laughter to point out how insane they are, and reaching the neutral population to make them nothing but a small and vocal minority, which makes them look more insane.

Remember when all the BP types were arguing that redpill techniques didn't work on anyone but drunk stupid sluts, and men should be nice and considerate instead of being cocky and lifting weights? Now they have abandoned that position, and are pretending as hard as they can that they never said that.

Why? Because we convinced them?

No, because we convinced a whole bunch of men. Not just the >100,000 TRP subscribers, but other men as well. Checked out /r/Askmen lately? Red pill truths dropping left and right. Hell, /r/MensRights is starting to use redpill terminology (hamster, hypergamy, ASD, etc) with the expectation that other readers are going to understand them already.

And the manosphere of the wider internet, well... just take a look.

Men are starting to experience the truth of what we say in their daily lives. They hear other men say it, they try a bit of it, it works. Then they try more.

Now the leftosphere can't call it delusional anymore. Because hordes of men with personal experience will laugh them to silence. So they've retreated to a position of "the basics work, but the other stuff is crazy, and that's always been our position", combined with "It works, but it's eeeevil".

Consensus and laughter will destroy those positions, too, in time.

Wife seeks more alimony over ex's new lookalike girlfriend

2 upvotes · 24 March 2015 · /r/MensRights

Yes, nature is frequently cruel and dehumanizing.

You are arguing with an emergent property.

The invention of the male contraceptive pill will change everything.

2 upvotes · 23 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Before you even begin to start shouting the 'use a condom' argument, I am going to quickly shut you down. Even with the use of a condom, you are never guaranteed complete safety.

Not to mention that 1 in 20 men is too large for the largest size of condom that's legal in the US.

Imagine if any bra cup size larger than D were banned by the federal government.

[Discussion] If gender is purely a construct, how do we account for transgender people and other extreme outliers of their sex?

2 upvotes · 23 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Sorry but we already know the answer to this. Testosterone does not lead to aggression or risk-taking behaviour. Teens (and menstruating women, and roid-raging bodybuilders, ect...) go through these phases because of a change in hormone level, not because of the characteristics of one sex hormone or another.

[Citation needed].

Hell, I can tell how my levels are from day to day by how fast I drive. (Intramuscular injections can be absorbed at variable rates.)

If it's too low, I hit myself with a little HCG to smooth things out.

PSA regarding new guidelines, courtesy of your new mod

2 upvotes · 21 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

I was expecting them to switch up the homosexual rave music for something masculine when they switched to Putin's workout.

No black iron, but notice how Putin smiles when his muscles are giving out on the last few reps. When T levels are high a challenge feels good, not daunting.

BP: Given the choice between having romantic relations with someone IRL who browses r/TheRedPill or r/foreveralone, who would you choose?

2 upvotes · 18 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

For the benefit for any audience there may be:

Solipsism - In Red Pill, solipsism (e.g. female solipsism) refers to the female's tendency to frame everything she experiences or witnesses in terms of herself and her own needs - personalizing it - even when such personalization would not make contextual sense.

Notice how she switches back and forth fluidly between talking about her personal emotional reaction to something, and women's general reactions to related things, as if she is unable or unwilling to understand or talk about the difference between personal self, and all women: e.g. "I am saying I dislike what I just saw, therefore I have proved that your entire model is repugnant to women."

BP: Given the choice between having romantic relations with someone IRL who browses r/TheRedPill or r/foreveralone, who would you choose?

2 upvotes · 17 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Your stomach is not proof of anything. If you have a point, make it instead of pearl-clutching.

BP: Given the choice between having romantic relations with someone IRL who browses r/TheRedPill or r/foreveralone, who would you choose?

2 upvotes · 17 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP isn't an engine. It's a toolbox. You can use it for one night stands or mutli-year relationships. In fact, which one happens is not really up to the guy.

The way I see it, men are responsible for "getting to sex". Women are responsible for "getting to relationship".

You don't have control over whether I am attractive or not. You just have to respond accordingly, rejecting my advances if I am unattractive, and responding to them if I am attractive.

In the same vein, I don't have control over whether you are a "keeper" or not. I just have to respond according, beating a hasty retreat after sex and never calling again if you are not relationship-worthy, and hanging around to cuddle and talk, and calling to see you again the following weekend if you are.

Personally, I actually think that most men eventually want some sort of intimacy, and men who have woken up and learned how to be attractive are often consoling themselves with a series of lays, because the relationships they desire are simply not available, not because they can't attract women (obviously), but because women can't attract them.

They are reacting to the way that women in the First World have become, by and large, unworthy of relationships. Having a girlfriend, given the options available, has become a chore and not a pleasure.

And they can't make the women around them relationship-worthy any more than women can make men sexy.

In a very real sense, women created TRP. Because if you throw a heavy object up in the air, it has to land somewhere.

Wow. I know the red pill can be hard to swallow, but I was not expecting THIS level of push back from people.

2 upvotes · 15 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Sorry, should of clarified. I'm 16 btw. So if you're going to down this, do it because I'm only 16, not because I'm a creepy fuck browsing /r/teenagers.

Welcome aboard. No one here is going to call you "creepy", because here we explore the hows and whys of human sexual behaviour, and so we know what the word "creepy" really means.

It means "sexual situation with a male I think is unworthy". There is almost no behaviour that is considered creepy no matter who does it. Things are "creepy" because the man doing isn't seen as attractive/high-status/worthy enough.

35 year old hardware store employee reading /r/teenagers ? Creepy. 35 year old rock star actually sleeping with awestruck teenage groupie? Yawn. Nobody cares. Not creepy. Because rock star. Slap his wrist firmly. Make a few jokes. Then forget about it.

So learn to be attractive, and you won't be called creepy, whether you're 16 or 40.

GASP* An Internet Article That Actually Values Nice Guys?

2 upvotes · 7 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

A probable comparison would be what's commonly referred to as internalized misogyny.

Could you please give us a definition and example of "internalized misandry"?

Thank you.

Is the Fat-Acceptance Movement damaging to a Society as a whole for women?

2 upvotes · 5 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dBnniua6-oM>

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ceFyF9px20Y>

How would redpillers react if there were a sexual/life strategy sub run by women using the same methodology as TRP?

2 upvotes · 5 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

TRP men don't give a shit about having the kind of relationship you think is healthy. They just want happiness and well-being in their own lives.

And you don't give a shit about TRP men's experience of life, whether they are happy and healthy, whether they sink or swim. You just want them to stop saying things that hurt your feels.

So here we are, not giving a shit about each other. That's what we're really talking about. Well, how did we get here?

At a certain point, first-world women collectively decided "Fuck you, patriarchal oppressors. We owe you nothing. From now on we give zero fucks about how your life goes."

And a handful of decades later, men said "Okay, well, then we give zero fucks about you, too. Bring on the misogyny and hoes."

Now you're fussing about it. And I just don't care.

I'm curios what everyone RP/BP and in between, thinks about this conversation I'm having with someone who supports TRP

2 upvotes · 3 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm trying to reply to people here, but you're all downvoting (censoring) me and making me wait 10 minutes between replies. If you don't like what I'm saying, please comment on it rather than censoring me.

Oh, you poor thing!

Were the mean people treating you like an adult? Quick, someone lay her on the couch, get some smelling salts, and fan her fevered brow!

Charlie Harper. Eric Cartman. Barney Stinson. Don Draper. What do they all have in common? Single Mothers.

2 upvotes · 3 March 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Art is allegation, observation is evidence.

Is /r/PurplePillDebate totally heteronormative?

2 upvotes · 2 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

what about pansexual people? and genderqueer people?

These two terms are specific to leftoid (cultural marxist) sociopolitical doctrine. They are specifically weaponized memes designed to push a particular point of view on those who speak them, in the same way that "heretic" might be a weaponized meme used by medieval catholics.

This is not to say that there is no real phenomenon there, but those of us who ain't leftoids might have a very different understanding of that phenomenon. Thus, I would be forced to revisit the terms before engaging with the statement, much in the same way that I would have to pick apart the term "heretic", rather than simply answer the question "Are we then to tolerate the presence of heretics in a godly nation?".

But we can have a partial moratorium on that sort of issue for now by simply pointing out that TRP is about heterosexuality. Heterosexuality is the normal mode of human sexual interaction, and it is the mode that is in crisis in the first world due to short-sighted attempts at social engineering, and their unintended consequences.

TRP is no more about how to have a homosexual relationship than it is about how to carve fine wooden furniture, or clean a chimney, or bake pies. It is a resource for heterosexual men, because heterosexual men are the ones who have been locked out of the social dialogue for several decades now. If homosexuals or "pansexuals" or people with other abnormal orientations wish to make resources of the same type for themselves, then let them make those resources themselves, just like the heterosexual men of TRP did.

What would you tell an Omega Male?

2 upvotes · 1 March 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The problem with this question is that the biggest problem that Omegas have is not all the obstacles between them and attractiveness.

It's their refusal to ask this question. I can tell a guy how to help himself. But he will only reset me for it unless and until he admits to himself that he needs help, and asks someone for that help.

You see, I know a guy like this. Let's call him "Nathan", so we don't have to use his real name. We're not friends, but since we have a friend or two in common, I occasionally find myself in the same room with him.

The thing about Nathan is that each of his problems is compounded by his refusal to admit that it is a problem. He instead, in every case, chooses to comfort himself by taking refuge in the SJW excuse that it is other peoples' fault, usually for their lack of tolerance.

- I think his problem is that he weighs 300+ pounds. He thinks that his problem is fat-shaming.
- I think his problem is that he is unemployed and on the public dole. He thinks that his problem is that people aren't sympathetic to his fake-ass disability.
- I think that his problem is that he watches "my little pony" and is over the age of six. He thinks his problem is outdated standards of masculinity.
- I think his problem is that he tries to please women by championing feminism, which they see right through for the thirsty supplication that it is. He thinks his problem is that steroidal asshole brosephs like me have given all the women Stockholm Syndrome and made them unable to appreciate him.

- I think his problem is that he is a giant pussy. He thinks his problem is that it is unfair to expect men to be tough and courageous.

You see, everything I think is his problem is fixable, at least to some degree. But not without his buy-in to the idea that they are problems. I cannot save him from himself.

So your question is unimportant. Because the difficulty of the problem, "How could Nathan fix himself?" is miniscule compared to the problem of "How can Nathan admit to himself that he needs fixing?".

Do BPers unknowingly measure men by the same scale as TRPers?

2 upvotes · 23 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

On RP etc, guys lament white women de valuing them and prefer the asian women that ignore them.

You are aware that this is a bannable offense, right? First time, no warning?

Yesterday, my male feminist coworker basically told me that men need to settle for ugly chicks.

2 upvotes · 22 February 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Hello, and welcome to /r/theredpill. It's a pleasure to meet you.

I'm afraid you're in for a bit of a shock. You see, we're pretty much all sexists here. Yeah, out in the open and on purpose.

Why? Well, things have gotten bad enough for young dudes nowadays that's it's really started to make sense.

Are we a backlash from feminism? Perhaps. Not entirely that simple, though. Feminism has forced us to think about alternatives, and in thinking about alternatives, many guys have come to certain realizations. Those who have, have congregated here.

So "equality" is not our thing.

Why not?

Well, striving for "equality" is kinda like fighting a "war on terror". Your enemy is an abstract concept, and you have no defined goal state. No goalposts for victory. So it's pretty much an excuse to go and do anything you want.

In reality, the sexes are very different, have different strengths and weaknesses, and different needs and desires. So it makes sense to focus on what those are and how to deal with them, no matter where that investigation leads.

So, yes, in a healthy relationship between a man and a woman, he is the leader. People knew this thousands of years ago. It's only recently that certain people decided this should somehow be humiliating to women, because... uh... reasons, and started trying to make everything that pointed to it go away.

And they've been failing for about a hundred years. So the plug is beginning to be pulled on that little experiment.

Socialism, Feminism, Marxism, and the Four Basic Types of Human Interaction.

2 upvotes · 21 February 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

That is the redpill realism that actually makes the world turn: you give something, you receive something. You stop giving something, you stop receiving something.

Indeed. And this is Trust level 3, the reciprocal relationship. Marriages could, of course, become more characterized by Trust level 4 over time... there is nothing in the level 3 contract to prevent this. The level 3 contract was present as a baseline to inhibit bad actors.

Capitalism and traditional marriage do require a certain amount of trust. That's why they are level 3. At level 3, individual bad actors can be punished, but the system for doing so cannot survive a large influx of bad actors.

In other words, for a free market to work, most people have to cooperate to exchange goods for money, or money for goods, rather than trying to rob each other with guns, refusing to accept currency, refusing to pay debts, etc.

A purely level 4 system can be poisoned by a single bad actor. A level 3 system can survive some amount of bad actors, and root out bad actors with some success, but collapses in the presence of large numbers (or smaller numbers if they are very powerful bad actors).

"Morality" is not something that is external to this system. Instead, notions of morality are one of the tools that societies use to reduce bad actors and try to move up the trust scale. Indoctrination is part of the process.

This is why the red pill is amoral. In order to truly understand human behaviour, we must stop seeing morals as an external scale to judge everything by, and start looking at the role of moral systems as internal forces within a particular society.

How do you feel about Lena Dunham? Do you look up to her?

2 upvotes · 20 February 2015 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I saw the worst minds of my generation destroyed by self-regard, raving hysterical naked, screaming into the megaphones of television networks at prime time, searching desperately for a drug, some balm to numb the aching of the ego, swollen-ripe and vine-rotted, some oblivion for the absence of the soul.

You don't deserve her.

2 upvotes · 12 February 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

I sensed that.

But "you are the prize" is one of the hardest lessons to really absorb. "You need to work" is an important lesson, but I think it can be taught in a way that doesn't do quite so much damage to "you are the prize" as a developing mindset.

Don't let people AMOG you... even if they claim to be dispensing red pills.

2 upvotes · 2 February 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

You may be on to something there. There are few people easier to make a buck off of than somebody who's trying to convince people he's a bigshot by showing off how much money he has.

Red Pill guides for High-end careers

2 upvotes · 31 January 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

I consider many of the responses and downvotes against the posts here to be emotionally driven.

Oh, great, this shit again. What's it been, almost five minutes?

Well, for the benefit of the newbs, here goes. People will come in here, read a little bit, think "Hey, this alpha thing appears to be the coin of the realm, so let me establish myself by giving a bunch of shitty or cliché advice in a patronizing tone, then tell anyone who disagrees that they are just being 'beta'."

Do not allow anyone to play on your insecurities to prevent you from disagreeing with them.

Worrying about whether you are "alpha" or not, "emotionally driven" or not, "insecure" or not is, in itself part of the problem. A man who succeeds is a man on a mission. Do not let others impede your mission by getting you worrying about how your mission looks, or whether you are "alpha enough" right now... especially if they use such tactics to shut down disagreement.

Salesmen bullshit for a living. They are all about frame control. Do not submit to their frame. Instead of listening to what they say, watch what they do. Just like with women. In fact, salesmen and women bear certain similarities, because they both succeed by shaping others' perceptions, rather than dealing with the limitations imposed by physical reality, and this causes them to have some similar values, and to behave in similar ways.

Now, in a highly-feminized society, such skills are well-rewarded. Learn them. But you must learn them by watching, not by listening.

Silly Girl, Car Rides Are For Bros!

2 upvotes · 24 January 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

An interesting set of contentions.

The problem is that they do not stand up under even casual scrutiny.

Your allegations fall into a couple of categories:

- "Not true"
- "If true, so what?"

"Homosexuals are pedophiles" is in the first category. Sex with teenagers may be illegal, and may be undesirable to let people do, but it ain't pedophilia. Actual pedophilia seems to occur in equal proportion in gay and straight people.

The second category is mostly filled with your stuff about the health and happiness risks of homosexuality. Even if it were true, and even if it were and not caused by people's general hatred of gays, so what?

Since I am not a homosexual, it makes no difference to me if it is a good choice, a bad choice, or not a choice at all.

Why should I care who is gay, and who isn't? What's in it for me?

Case sends "clear message that domestic abuse is wrong, . . . and that male victims must be viewed and treated equally to female victims."

2 upvotes · 24 January 2015 · /r/MensRights

You don't understand abuse.

Size and strength don't matter because the victims of abuse don't fight back. They never do. It's part of the dynamic.

Case sends "clear message that domestic abuse is wrong, . . . and that male victims must be viewed and treated equally to female victims."

2 upvotes · 24 January 2015 · /r/MensRights

No, women who abuse their partners are, on average, not sentenced at all.

If you consider only the ones who are, then you can present a vastly skewed picture. But do you really want to do that?

On the absolute necessity of patriarchy for women's long term welfare.

2 upvotes · 12 January 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Hi, welcome /r/theredpill.

Irrelevant mudslinging like "you are a misogynist" is not cruise control for winning debates here. Please read the sidebar material before and lurk more before commenting.

On the absolute necessity of patriarchy for women's long term welfare.

2 upvotes · 11 January 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Brevity is the soul of clarity.

You could have just said, "Yes, I believe that men's desire for women who have blown less strangers in nightclub restrooms is entirely cultural. "

To which I would say I disagree.

If you wish to contend that something is cultural, a good start would be to show an example of a culture that does not have that thing. Can you think of a culture where a woman's partner count doesn't  matter?

Or is that only true of the hypothetical far-left culture you evidently wish to create?

World class idiot Tanya Cohen wants to outlaw anti-feminist speech (and almost every other kind of speech).

2 upvotes · 11 January 2015 · /r/MensRights

"When you tear out a man's tongue, you do not prove him a liar. You only tell the world that you fear what he has to say." - Tyrion Lannister

Help me stop a circumcision

2 upvotes · 9 January 2015 · /r/MensRights

It's very hard to prevent a father who has been subjected to infant genital mutilation from having the same done to his son.

You see, no matter what argument you use that IGM is a bad thing, accepting that argument requires the father to accept that his parents did an irreversible bad thing to him. This is challenging the rationalization hamster on its own turf, armed with nothing but the truth.

That's a fight you are not likely to win.

It may be possible to find arguments, instead, that emphasize choice and freedom. "Shouldn't he be allowed to choose, himself, when he's old enough?".

How women's "feels" view a Pre-nup.

2 upvotes · 7 January 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Look at all you guys, thinking a prenup will protect you.

It's so gosh-darned adorable.

It's hard to lift when you're content.

2 upvotes · 2 January 2015 · /r/TheRedPill

Speak for yourself.

Your workout fuel is anger. Mine is joy. Exultation in the feeling of strength, and the exertion of power.

Pissed off isn't the only form of pumped up.

Since there are no unicorns, I'm curious which female you would marry given the choices (see inside)?

2 upvotes · 12 December 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

"Law" can mean two different things, what is written down, and what is enforced. It is the second that actually matters.

Woman raped 14yo boy - pedophilic Guardian describes it as "starting a sexual relationship". She also brutalized children, but portrayed as victim. The crimes committed by men? Well that was "abuse" n

2 upvotes · 6 December 2014 · /r/MensRights

Let's try to have an adult conversation about this, shall we?

We do not keep teenagers from having sex with older people to protect them from the dangers of sex. That's the disingenuous bullshit reason.

This is obvious because we do allow teenagers to have sex with each other. Yeah, like it's unsafe to let them have sex with an older person, but all those dangers magically go away when they pair up with another person who's "not mature enough"? Please.

Our real motivations as a culture are much less noble.

Of naturals and high-value betas

2 upvotes · 2 December 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

"The universe doesn't care about who is smart, only about who is right." - Richard Feymann

Why get angry and frustrated if a woman doesn't present herself the way you want her to?

2 upvotes · 26 November 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They're having this discussion in a locker room, so it has to be understood in that context.

What you're seeing is a lot of displaced and general anger.

Imagine you hate tofu. (Not a big stretch there. Stuff's disgusting.) Now imagine that people keep offering it to you no matter where you go. Now imagine that people get offended when you say "no thanks". Now imagine that meat is hard to find because many people think you should eat tofu instead. Now imagine tofu producers regularly post long internet rants about how you are a bad person for eating meat, and how you should be socialized, forcibly if necessary, to eat tofu instead, because you are personally starving their children by not buying lots of tofu.

Now imagine you're at a table in a semi-private dining area of a restaurant, with a bunch of other meat-eaters. You just might say some choice things to each other about what you think of tofu, and how fucking disgusting it is.

And then someone comes along and says "Hey! What do you have against tofu? What harm does it do if other people want to manufacture it?"

Why get angry and frustrated if a woman doesn't present herself the way you want her to?

2 upvotes · 25 November 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't get frustrated when I see her.

I get frustrated when she posts to /r/askmen, saying "Why don't men approach me?", and I respond saying "You have made unattractive style choices", and she calls me an asshole.

Being fat, having short hair, getting six facial piercings, these are style choices. They don't bother me unless someone is so hideous it's painful to look at them (which, from this list, really only happens with gross obesity).

But my innate lack of attraction to these things is then characterized as a character flaw by women who have made these style choices. When the results of someone else's bad choices are blamed on me, I get annoyed.

My girlfriend has only been with three guys before me but two of them were about 9.5" big...not sure how to feel about this?

2 upvotes · 19 November 2014 · /r/askTRP

First off, I can promise you she DOES like yours more than 9" because I'm at about 8 and for most girls I cant go all out because it DOES cause them pain.

Same problem here.

Piece of advice... Smaller. Women.

Seriously, the pain is mostly due to fear. That thing is made to pass an infant. Women who can relax can take it.

Smaller women are used to being stretched. They're not afraid of it. They know they will relax, and things will be fine. And so they do.

Teenage girl suffers accident and experiences how it is to hit the wall prematurely

2 upvotes · 30 October 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

The problem with this idea of enjoying it when we see women getting treated like a man is that they lack the fundamental faculties to deal with being treated like a man.

This is so, but the reason that men of our generation enjoy it is that is that these men have been raised to lack the fundamental faculties to deal with being treated like a man, and are expected, in fact *demand*ed to behave in ways that are incompatible with dealing with being treated like a man.

That's why TRP exists now and not before. Because before, men had a path before them. Yes, the journey is both hard and rewarding, but men of previous generations had a map. This generation is socialized against walking.

And this doesn't just happen for adult men, who can presumably have agency and can do what they need to anyway, but for little boys, who are too young to defend themselves, and who then grow into young men who can't.

Being expected to create your own value instead of just having it, is a natural burden of men, would they should and can carry. Being given no guidance on how to do so, or even a hint that they must, isn't.

In order to survive being treated like a man, one must act like a man. Men deprived in their boyhood of guidance in how to do this are every bit as fucked as this girl.

And this is why they have no sympathy.

A quick primer of being more physically attractive

2 upvotes · 29 October 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Let me guess... you live in NYC? Or on the east coast?

In, NYC, if you're not wearing a tailored suit, you're garbage and you don't matter. In LA, if you're wearing a suit of any description, you're a tool.

Moral is that you can judge people's social skills, not by what they wear, but by whether what they wear is well selected for the environment they are in.

Awesome piece of advice my roommate's extremely successful father gave to me last night.

2 upvotes · 23 October 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Looks aren't much of an asset for men. You can count the number of men getting by on their looks on the fingers of one tomato.

"7th Heaven" dad admits to child molestation; wife reveals secret recording during bitter divorce

2 upvotes · 7 October 2014 · /r/MensRights

This is under case law.

Basically, a therapist has a duty to specific individuals threatened by a patient. Thus, privilege yields to the duty to warn individuals whom the patient has revealed plans to harm.

However, privilege does NOT yield to society's interest in punishing perpetrators of prior bad acts (that is, in fact, what privilege IS).

Thus, if a patient reveals plans to commit murder, the therapist must warn others. If the patient reveals that he HAS committed a murder, the therapist has no legal obligation to come forward, and anything resulting from that conversation is inadmissible in court.

"7th Heaven" dad admits to child molestation; wife reveals secret recording during bitter divorce

2 upvotes · 7 October 2014 · /r/MensRights

That's privileged as well. Doctor-patient.

Girlfriend wanted to go through my phone, I didn't let her and that's led to tension. What steps to take now?

2 upvotes · 25 September 2014 · /r/askTRP

Arguing with a woman is a fail if she is shit testing you.

Here's what you did wrong.

- You asked "why?", thus implying that this was a subject for discussion.
- You said you had nothing to hide, thus implying that if you behaved in certain ways, you might have to hide it.
- You gave a reason why you wouldn't unlock it for her, thus implying that you had to justify your decision.
- You then unlocked it for her, showing her your decisions are not final, and can be reversed with a pout.

You not only failed, you failed like a little bitch. 0/10.

The way to approach a shit test is to act at every moment as if you are perfectly willing to break up in the next ten seconds.

Here's how this should have gone down:

Her: "Can you unlock this for me?"

You: "No." (No softening. No hedging your bets. No justification.)

Her: "Why?"

You: "I'm sexting about six other women, and I promised not to let anyone else see their pictures." (Agree and amplify with her implied statement. Imply notion of you having options other than her. Undermine her efforts to snoop by imply that might hurt other women.)

Her: "No, I'm serious, why?"

You: "Just kidding. It's only five other women. Number six is a dude." (Showing you DGAF.)

Her: "Just unlock it."

You: "Already told ya no. Discussion over."

Her: {babbles estrogenic nonsense for however long she's going to do that}

You: {dead silence, no acknowledgment, no scowl, you DGAF}

Later she apologizes for trying to snoop, because she now respects you. Also sex happens.

Women look to their surroundings to define what is acceptable. You must either be that definition, or she will try to be it for you. Stop having discussions with 25 year old girls as if they were adults that could be reasoned with.

This is currently on the front page of /r/feminism; what do the masses here think of it?

2 upvotes · 24 September 2014 · /r/MensRights

Women can drink if they want to. But alcohol is not a magic potion that absolves women (and only women) from responsibility for what they do under the influence.

Barbara Kay: Janay Rice confounds feminists by failing to conform to their theories

2 upvotes · 19 September 2014 · /r/MensRights

can be heard shouting obscenities at each other, and [Janay] appears to spit in the face of the three-time Pro Bowl running back

Choose any NFL running back. Go scream obscenities at him and spit in his face. See what happens.

Surely everyone carrying out circumcisions should be registered? No! As the law currently stands, anyone can carry out surgery on a baby boy's penis without qualification, training or regulation.

2 upvotes · 18 September 2014 · /r/MensRights

And someone who has not had to qualify or be certified cannot usually be held legally responsible for incompetence.

So it's pretty much legal to castrate infant boys, so long as you can convince people you didn't mean to.

Jessica Valenti thinks no one will use Vasalgel, because various anti-male reasons.

2 upvotes · 17 September 2014 · /r/MensRights

Well said, but you forgot the part where large sized condoms are illegal in the US.

The "nice guy" debate: Heroes vs Antiheroes

2 upvotes · 17 September 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Being a "hero" works in societies where heroes are respected and rewarded.

In society, "hero" is a synonym for "chump".

Sheryl Sandberg wants to dramatically increase the gender diversity among Facebook's employees: "I want half and half, half across the board. 50%"

2 upvotes · 16 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I guess Christopher Hitchens was dead wrong when he said that women aren't funny.

Because this shit is hilarious.

"We're not going to have sex every day any more."

2 upvotes · 16 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

We had sex that night.

And the night after that.

And the next night, and the next night, and the next night.

Turns out, what she was really saying was "We're not going to have sex every day any more... unless you want to."

No.

What she really said was "you're not making me want sex every day, and it's going to stop unless you make me want to".

By standing up to her, you gained her respect, and then she wanted to. Dread game doesn't pressure women into sex. It makes them respect you, which makes them want sex.

IQ distribution plotted by degree type vs % of female students in each

2 upvotes · 16 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I feel for you, but trust me, the habits you are building by having to study will take you much further in life than being a prodigy would.

I have a 170, and it almost destroyed me.

Blue Pill saved my life!

2 upvotes · 14 September 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

That is another one of my issues. I find it so very odd that "TRP" isn't the natural mode of a man over 12 or 13...

In a healthy society, it would be. But we have to play the hand we're dealt.

In my mind, most posts that are valid equate to someone posting " $1+1=2$ " and everyone going about like it's some great epiphany

Sure. But if you live a society that insists $1 + 1 = 3$, or "an egg", or "green", or "whatever the woman says it is", then $1 + 1 = 2$ can be a great epiphany, and even when it isn't, saying so out loud and unashamedly can be a vital act of rebellion.

In the end the Party would announce that two and two made five, and you would have to believe it. It was inevitable that they should make that claim sooner or later: the logic of their position demanded it.

Not merely the validity of experience, but the very existence of external reality, was tacitly denied by their philosophy. The heresy of heresies was common sense. And what was terrifying was not that they would kill you for thinking otherwise, but that they might be right. For, after all, how do we know that two and two make four? Or that the force of gravity works? Or that the past is unchangeable? If both the past and the external world exist only in the mind, and if the mind itself is controllable — what then?

- George Orwell, 1984

10% of US men cannot legally purchase correctly sized condoms.

2 upvotes · 10 September 2014 · /r/MensRights

One of the problems is that we often either ignore the risk of breakage, or outright teach people it doesn't exist. "Hey, you can stretch it over your arm, I don't think your penis is as big as my arm, lol." But, this totally ignores the fact that sex generally involves pressure and friction.

It's not just about breakage.

It's about the whole point of sex in the first place. Take a rubber band. Put it around your penis. Double it over. Now double it over again.

Repeat until it turns purple.

Can you feel anything? Well, yes, you can. What you can feel is pain.

Thunderf00t explores why Joss Whedon's support for Anita Sarkeesian is contradictory to his own works.

2 upvotes · 4 September 2014 · /r/MensRights

Read more carefully.

Joss Whedon's female characters are empowered in a way that other female characters are not.

An independent female character would take care of herself and ask for nothing from men that she does not repay. But Joss Whedon isn't interested in independent female characters... he is interested in dominant female characters, who use men's abilities to serve their own ends.

If a female character doesn't need anything from men, men cannot serve her, and she cannot be the dominatrix of Joss Whedon's dreams.

This is why he places female characters in situations of peril... so that males can serve them.

The moral barometer of Joss Whedon's universe (and all his stuff is heavily moralistic) is how one treats women. A man can cheerfully kick another man into a running jet intake in the course of robbing him, and still be a protagonist, not because the JH's universe is amoral (it is anything but), but because only injuries to a woman matter.

So the male servitude to female power which Joss depicts is twofold... first, males serving female interests. And second, the very existence of men is portrayed not as an end in itself, but as a means to serve women's needs.

Now, like most male submissives, JH has a denial-ridden and conflicted relationship with the obvious fact of male physical superiority. And thus he alternates between denial of its existence (skinny models with matchstick arms beating up fit young men) and moral condemnation of it (any man who uses physical force on a woman is villainous, and almost all villainous men are shown hurting women).

Fat = Curvy. Bitchy = Sarcastic (How bluepillers re-negotiate and confront the reality of the sexual marketplace)

2 upvotes · 28 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Many people, including me, genuinely do not find submissiveness attractive. I have been with submissive girls and girls who are more opinionated and interesting. I would choose the latter any day.

You're repeating the pattern OP pointed out... you put a negative spin on "submissive", by implying that unsubmitive women are more "interesting" and are the only ones who have opinions.

Neither of these is true.

Generally, I find that men who don't like to date submissive women are men who are uncomfortable providing leadership... they tend to feel the responsibility as a heavy burden. This can result from broken confidence, low T levels, general anxiety brought on by a psychological disorder or by lack of sleep, or a sexual fetish for being submissive themselves.

Now, this opens up the discussion of "Is Whisper not doing the same thing, here? Spinning an absence of leadership qualities/desires as a defective or unattractive trait?"

Well, to answer that, we can jump to the real question: "What is naturally attractive, and what is only attractive to people when you do something to change them (cultural or biological)?"

That's too big a question to answer all at once, but if we focus JUST on leadership, dominance, and assertiveness, we can state, definitively, with scientific certainty, that men with higher testosterone are more assertive, dominant, and have a greater desire to lead. We also know that men with these qualities are more likely to have high testosterone. Additionally, we know that raising testosterone levels increases the expression of these traits, and that training the expression of these traits tends to increase testosterone levels.

So leader->high T and high T->leader.

But is that healthy and natural? Well, let's look at what else we know. Men with high T are stronger. They are healthier. They have longer life expectancies. They die less from pretty much everything. They have less heart disease, less cancer, less diabetes, less autoimmune diseases, less psychological disorders, even.

So there are demonstrable links between high T, health, and dominance in males.

This makes it pretty safe to argue that women are gonna naturally find this cluster more attractive, and, also, more to the point, that the preferences of a man with this cluster are the preferences of a healthy man.

To show that we aren't extremists, can we publicly denounce /r/theredpill and other associated websites?

2 upvotes · 27 August 2014 · /r/MensRights

Scumbag redditor:

Says "let's denounce TRP to avoid being misrepresented and character-assassinated".

Misrepresents and character-assassinates TRP.

Advice to a beta buddy

2 upvotes · 26 August 2014 · /r/askTRP

Never let your woman travel without you unless she has family traveling with her.

Women's (limited) ingrained resistance to cheating evolved not to protect them from cheating, but from getting caught, shamed, and shunned by their community. Women are therefore more likely to cheat with men from outside their community, and much more likely to cheat when outside their community.

Now, it's possible to be dominant enough in the relationship that a woman traveling without you is still unlikely to cheat (more likely, but still unlikely). But guys in that situation don't need advice. They already know.

If you are not in control enough that she is asking permission before going on the trip, then her odds of cheating are entirely dependent on the attractiveness (game) of the guys she meets on her trip.

That's a bad gamble.

But there is a bigger problem. Any relationship where she tells you she is going to Spain, instead of asking if she can go to Spain, is doomed in the long run.

I recommend immediate dread game. I think that's where you were going with recommending:

"Sarah, I understand you're confused about us at the moment. I am still planning on going to Thailand. I would love it if you joined me. If not, I think we need to reevaluate our relationship. Have fun in Spain"

... but this is too conciliatory. Women don't fear male anger or male desire the way they fear male indifference.

I'd cut out the "I understand" bit, and the "would love it if you joined me" bit, and go with something like Okay, looks like we're breaking up, then. I'm still going to Thailand. Have fun in Spain.

Now, this isn't the best dread game out there. The best dread game out there is obvious interest from other women. But not every guy can produce that on demand. So the next best thing is apparent willingness to abandon the relationship without any emotional upset whatsoever.

Saying "we need to reevaluate our relationship" or "we need to talk" demonstrates continued emotional investment. What you want to demonstrate is being at the point of saying "fuck it". You want "let's save the relationship" to be her idea.

This sort of move can backfire, but that's not a bad thing. If it backfires, then the relationship was doomed anyway... it's a bit like folding a bad hand of cards. Sacrifice your ante and wait for the next deal.

Why does lack of empathy, a characteristic of psychopaths, makes someone attractive?

2 upvotes · 20 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Understanding and empathy are different.

Understanding is knowing what's going on. Empathy is feeling what someone else feels.

A plate of mine put it this way "Our emotions are a tornado sometimes. Sometimes we need you to just be there and be calm."

You can understand women all you want. Just don't empathize with them. They don't want that. They have girlfriends for that. They want you to protect and lead them, and that requires emotional detachment.

LTR / married men: Don't ever be that "separate bedrooms" guy...

2 upvotes · 14 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Yeah, I tried to find a way to work in that joke, but it wouldn't come.

In reality, your advice is good in situations where you have less overt control. If you're not the king, but must persuade, then you need to maximize opportunities and eliminate logistical hurdles. If you are the king, then you can be overt, and just say "Come here, you".

The Redefinition of Marriage.

2 upvotes · 12 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Yes. When stakes are high, being better than your opponent at a game or not playing it (ie., not marrying) isn't a "general solution for everyone" or super saintly sage wisdom of any kind - it's common fucking sense.

And you're saying "beat the pros", while I'm saying "don't play".

What's the big prize that I win if I beat a divorce lawyer at his own game? I get to keep what I already had. Most of it.

I can get that prize automatically by not playing.

The Redefinition of Marriage.

2 upvotes · 12 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

So your general solution, for everyone to apply, is "be better at safeguarding assets than people who do this for a living are at getting to them"?

[FR] Yes, all women are like that, and they should all be spun. Plates and Frame Control

2 upvotes · 12 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Frame control is what happens when two people's wants come into conflict, and each must make a stand for their desired outcome. Whoever gets their way wins the frame control battle.

Your specific point is correct, but this definition is off.

Frame control is control over what the ground rules for that interaction are. It is control over the context in which an interaction takes place.

Every conversation, every interaction, between two humans doesn't just consist of what goes on between them, but also of the context, the expectations that each party brings to the table. When two people talk, those expectations align.

And the person whose expectations, whose context, wins out, is the person who has won the frame control battle. It's not about arguing about outcomes. It's about the nonverbal contest over the precursors to the discussion.

Facebook friend posts Women's Rights comic, I try to have a conversation and it all goes to shit.

2 upvotes · 11 August 2014 · /r/MensRights

Can someone advise me as to how this went downhill?

Stop expecting women poisoned by feminism to behave like adults.

They do not have a moral code. They simply invent moral rationalizations as a tool to try to browbeat men into doing what they want. You are attempting to have a sincere discussion with a sociopath, or a child. Same inability to see the world from another's point of view, same selfishness, same manipulative behaviour.

The way to deal with feminists is that the instant they say or do something that identifies them as such, replace your mental model of them with a picture of a twelve year old girl.

You wouldn't debate a twelve year old, would you? No. Not even if she said something really callow and stupid. You would laugh at her and tell her to grow up.

Do not sleep in the same bed as a woman - if you are not being sexual.

2 upvotes · 1 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Do it after sex, then. Or before. Or both.

Do not sleep in the same bed as a woman - if you are not being sexual.

2 upvotes · 1 August 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

The sole exception to this is if A: You're already fucking her regularly, and B: you're both just plain exhausted and would rather sleep.

But that's a niggling little exception. Your actual point is spot-on.

A psychologist criticises the drive to push more girls into traditionally male-dominated subjects such as computing and science, describing it as 'a waste of time'

2 upvotes · 12 July 2014 · /r/MensRights

Hmmm...you know what? You're right. I got hung up on the term "always" and made a bad implication.

Courageously conceded.

My own notion in this issue is pretty much the same... it does not matter if women are, in general, as good at math or logic or programming as men. Because I'm pretty certain that, overall, they like them a hell of a lot less, and will not discover whatever aptitudes they have, or don't, for these things, because they'll be busy doing something they like better.

In other words, if you build it, they will not come... so why build it?

But I'd like to talk a little about debate. Now, you admit you made a bad characterization of the position you were trying to refute, and I don't want to dwell on that, but I would like to point out that one of the rules of modern discourse (as opposed to postmodern discourse) is that one must select the strongest possible interpretation of an opponent's argument in order to refute it properly.

When we get in the habit of doing that, then our debates actually start to illuminate, rather than just being pointless shouting matches.

Related concepts:

- Modern vs. Postmodern discourse
- Principle of Charity
- Principle of Humanity
- Ethics of Discourse

What is your definition of Misogyny?

2 upvotes · 16 June 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I can see from this little tap-dance routine that flipping the gender of what you wrote makes you uncomfortable, even though I asked you for nothing but an abstract definition of misandry.

I didn't even have any preconceived notion that you practiced it, although I'm certainly seeing some in your response.

The sentence that really helps us understand your attitude is this one:

I believe that there is a crisis of masculinity in this culture, but I come at it from a feminist and gender-critical perspective.

This is the standard feminist line on masculinity, which contains several misconceptions:

- Feminism believes it "owns" the issue of gender politics. It "settles", within its own ranks, issues that involve both sexes, when one of those sexes has not only not been invited to the table, but has actually been driven away from the table, and it's not even feminism's table in the first place.
- Feminists believe that they have the right to define or question masculinity, not only unilaterally, but without contradiction. That's like me writing a book called "The Third Trimester and what to Expect".
- Feminists think that they can make sexual dimorphism go away with ideology. They fail to realize that men like masculinity, that it is an expression of our natures. And they fail to realize this mostly because they do not have, and will not permit, representatives of that point of view amongst their ranks.
- Feminists try to dictate policy that affects men, without consulting men. No one ever asked me if masculinity was "forced" on me. No one ever asked me if it was toxic and hurt me. They just decided it was, in a discussion I not only wasn't invited to, but wasn't even informed was happening.

You are too arrogant by several halves. Am I supposed to trust people to fairly represent my interests and views, when they don't even know what they are, dismiss them as "misogyny" when I try to express them, but can't even bear to use the word "misandry", as if hating masculinity weren't a thing?

But of course they can't bear to say it. Because they hate masculinity. They open call it "toxic" and try to "redefine" it, because they hate it the way it is.

@TRP: Do Fat Women Complain About Rape More, And What Does That Have To Do With TRP?

2 upvotes · 30 May 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

we can conclude that being physically unattractive does not preclude being raped

Oh, sorry. When you said:

Rapists generally don't give a fuck how physically attractive their victims are

... I assumed you meant

"Rapists generally don't give a fuck how physically attractive their victims are."

not

"Sometimes unattractive people get raped anyway."

Guy Puts Tabasco in Used Condom. Girl pays out $367,000 settlement in counter-suit.

2 upvotes · 28 May 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Unsourced. I am skeptical.

Official "MRAs blamed for UCSD mass murder" thread.

2 upvotes · 27 May 2014 · /r/MensRights

While I know several members of TRP (Demonspawn, Whisper, a few others) who comment here because they share an interest in what we perceive as "the problem" (or part of "the problem"), again, they take a different approach regarding solutions than r/mr.

I'm not entirely sure one can blithely talk about what "approach to solutions" /r/MensRights has, because the subscribers are a vastly different bunch of individual people, and unlike, say, the feminist movement, there is no official or emergent dogma.

Mensrights subscribers, and indeed commenters, are united not by the actions we advocate, but by the problems we are concerned with.

On Studies

2 upvotes · 20 May 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So it's not about the idea, or the metaphor used to describe it. It's about your notion of the people behind the idea.

You have a particular mental image, or stereotype, of them as mentally or emotionally unstable, and believe that the ideas they have, they have in order to comfort themselves with feelings of superiority over people who "don't know".

There's two core concepts in that idea.

The first of is the idea of defectiveness.

All people are not created equal. Some are better than others. We all know this, although some ideologies don't admit to it. Even those which espouse equality and embrace notions of the brotherhood of mankind, still tacitly admit to it by treating certain individuals (usually those who don't agree with the ideology) as defective.

Now, no one wants to be defective, no one wants to be seen as defective, and no one wants to think of themselves as defective. And ideologies vary as to whether the state of defectiveness is permanent and irrevocable, or a temporary, mutable condition.

The second is the idea of rationalization.

The conscious part of the human brain is a rationalizing engine. It's evolved to spot patterns, systems, and relationships. In fact, it is so efficient at this, that it often spots them where they do not exist. In the lingo of neural nets, we call this "overfit".

So, when a human has a hypothesis that has explanations for a lot of things, that human often displays the tendency to both accept the explanatory power of the hypothesis as evidence of its truth (narrative fallacy), and to find ways to use that hypothesis to explain other things, whether or not it actually applies.

If I had to guess, I would say that your "cringe" reaction, which is essentially revulsion, comes from ideas about the first, not the second. After all, everyone rationalizes, and everyone overfits to some degree. Feminists talking "the Patriarchy", Christians talking about "their relationship with god", people talking personalities using the Myers-Briggs Type Inventory, people sorting themselves into right vs. left-wing political views, and so on, and so on. While this process can lead to flawed thinking in many cases indeed, it doesn't really cause revulsion under normal circumstances. We do not recoil in horror from people who believe in god.

So you're most likely, on some level, repulsed by the metaphor of a "red pill" because using that particular metaphor suggests to you that the speaker is mentally or genetically defective, and you need to get the hell away (because it's dangerous to hang out with losers).

Your use of the words "desperate", "cool", "edgy", "special", and "misplaced arrogance" seem to suggest this. It's not about the metaphor at all. It's about triggering your preconceived rationalization that TRP advocates are defectives.

The important questions then become, "Where does this rationalization come from?", and "Is it a true rationalization, or a case of projection or overfit?".

That, then, is what is worth discussing, not this or that piece of terminology.

With me so far?

The mainstream may not yet accept our answers... but they are starting to ask our questions.

2 upvotes · 2 May 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Indeed. And desire is the death of pity.

That is why women no sympathy whatsoever for any problem a man might have. Because they want us to be invulnerable. It's not just a demand... it is an urgent hope.

Alpha Fucks Beta Bucks, Clippers Edition

2 upvotes · 30 April 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Why am I in this country? Technologically superior Europeans kidnapped, raped and murdered Africans.

Sorry, can't let you get away with that one. It's just not accurate in its implications.

Every black man who was a slave to a white man, and wasn't born a slave... was at some point sold to a white man by another black man.

Why were all the American and English slaves black? Because of an interesting historical coincidence. You see, because the English didn't really practice slavery at all since the collapse of the roman empire (although certain economic circumstances were close), England and its colonies were in a funny legal territory where there was no legal provision for enslaving anyone... but slavery wasn't actually against the law, because it wasn't a thing.

Therefore slaves could only enter the system when some other culture had made slaves of them.

Turned out they could buy them in Africa.

So, curiously enough, American slavery wasn't caused by racial bias. In fact, quite the reverse. Narratives of "negro inferiority" were invented as a justification for the institution when it came under attack by other Americans who found it morally repugnant.

That's why Shakespeare wrote a play that was far too "progressive" for 1950. Back then, anti-black racism wasn't really that much of a thing.

This popped up on my feed "6 Things Men Will Literally Never Get"

2 upvotes · 26 April 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

It exactly matches the colour of the dorito dust on my shirt, and the whole ensemble is perfectly set off by my neckbeard.

Dear Nice Guy, I Wasn't Ready For You Before — But I Am Now - by Isable Chalmers. And then Janet Bloomfield takes a straight razor to her.

2 upvotes · 23 April 2014 · /r/MensRights

In this thread... lots of /r/MensRights readers who are ready for a red pill.

Female Marine fails grueling test. Not her fault though...

2 upvotes · 21 April 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Santangelo is one of 14 female Marines to have attempted -- and failed -- the grueling course since the ban against women in ground combat was lifted last year. Passing the course is a requirement for any Marine looking to become an infantry officer; and the reality that no woman to date has been able to pass is just one of many challenges the military is facing in fully implementing the ban's repeal by the 2016 deadline.

So let me get this straight.

After all that sound and fury over repealing the ban, only 14 women have even attempted to join combat roles (03 MOS), and not one single woman has made the cut?

"I got to a point throughout the test that my body just couldn't perform anymore," she said. "And I wasn't able to complete the task that I needed to be able to complete; and you know, I couldn't continue past that point. So, myself and 26 other men all failed at this point. So, it was a tough realization. I really wanted to believe I had a shot of making it through."

And there you have it.

Academic paper suggests that getting laid really IS that hard.

2 upvotes · 20 April 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's not quite how the science game is played.

In scientific terms, "speculation" is called a hypothesis. You have to do it before you can do research. I am asking what your hypothesis is.

Would the number of women propositioned for sex who said "yes" be zero, a few, or many? Would the number be less than, roughly equal to, or greater than the number of men who said "yes"?

Academic paper suggests that getting laid really IS that hard.

2 upvotes · 20 April 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So, do you believe that if this study were done today, some of the women approached by a male experimenter, with a invitation for sex, would say "yes" ?

What percentage do you think it would be?

What percentage of males do you think would say "yes" to a female experimenter?

Did we create the STEM gender gap in the USA by lowering expectations for females with the simple idea that males are better at it?

2 upvotes · 20 April 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

why is the gender gap unusually wide in the USA? A place where it's normally assumed that people are treated MORE equally than almost anywhere else in the world

Because in the USA, people are more free to do what they want.

The more you free people from external pressure (social or financial) to do this or that thing, the more their natural preferences will express themselves.

It doesn't matter whether women are as good at math and science as men, because what's really going on is that they don't enjoy them as much.

Why do feminists ignore the plight of women under foreign patriarchies?

2 upvotes · 16 April 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Because feminism is just a power grab by rich white western women. They couldn't care less what happens to anyone else.

If I am going to get married years from now, I am seriously considering secretly gathering video & audio recordings right from the start

2 upvotes · 14 April 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

how do we get kids without marrying?

You can't have children with or without marrying.

Our society is well along the process of abolishing fatherhood. Our laws are evolving towards the point where the children are the mother's, and only the mother's. The only connection the father has to them is the legal obligation to pay, plus whatever contact the mother decides to allow.

Remember that child support orders are enforced. Visitation orders are not.

Why is TRP so anti-education?

2 upvotes · 13 April 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I do better than explain. I can give an example.

This:

http://www.reddit.com/r/AskMenOver30/comments/1llmmu/men_of_reddit_approximately_30_years_old_what_is/

... is a female doctoral candidate asking AskMen why she cannot get dates.

This:

http://www.reddit.com/r/AskMenOver30/comments/1llmmu/men_of_reddit_approximately_30_years_old_what_is/cc1kfs8

... is my answer.

Notice that she asked for mating advice. Not career advice.

Why is TRP so anti-education?

2 upvotes · 12 April 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Are you saying that education does nothing for a woman's appearance and thus is pointless?

Are you saying that the only point to women is their appearance? That's kinda misogynistic.

Rates of marriage are down across the western world. Elephant in the room: are men refusing to marry because of sense of entitlement?

2 upvotes · 12 April 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What is the incentive for a man to enter the modern version of marriage?

What do you think of the consensual cuckolding fetish?

2 upvotes · 31 March 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

No matter what it is, if it exists, it's someone's fetish.

I know a woman who once confessed to masturbating to an academic paper detailing infibulation, the most extreme form of female circumcision.

Just because one particular someone is turned on by a horrible thing happening to them (or the idea of it), doesn't mean that it isn't a horrible thing for anyone else to have happen to them.

Whoa: 4 questions socially engineered to confuse and garner a certain answer.

2 upvotes · 23 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

But that would detach sexual aggression from the concept of masculinity, and feminists would screech their brains out if we tried to do that.

Because they are secretly masturbating to it.

Resolved: Red Pill Isn't About Left or Right

2 upvotes · 21 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I don't see how an endless stream of users was a bad thing, for the internet, for the world, or even for culture. Maybe you could give me a bit more context on this one.

The wikipedia article is awful, and was probably written by someone who didn't understand the phenomenon at all.

The whole point of the term "Eternal September" is to describe how a community loses its values when it grows too quickly.

In the pre-1993 world, Usenet was a thriving community with social mores. Each September, it would get an influx of newcomers (new college students got access through campus networks) who didn't know the rules, didn't know how they were expected to behave, but by October or November, they had learned the rules, because there were plenty of established community members to give an example, and to chide them for any infractions.

So Usenet was a mess only in September.

Then, in September 1993, AOL gave its users Usenet access. The influx of new users was like any other September... except now the newcomers, who didn't know the rules and social mores, outnumbered the established community. As a minority, the regulars couldn't enforce Usenet's mores.

September 1993 never ended, in the sense that Usenet was a mess forever. Usenet is now defunct. Dead. Nothing but a mass of spam where it even still exists.

It was a victim of its own rapid growth.

Analogously, if we, the United States, or we, the western world, accept immigrants from the third world or other failed states slowly, these people will learn our values. They will learn English, get educations, stop mutilating infants' genitals, abandon religious law, etc. They'll keep their music and food, and English will get a few new words, but we won't lose our core values.

But if we accept more of them faster, they form their own ethnic enclaves, don't learn English, and are cut off from the economic and social life of the culture they have moved to. "Little Saigon"s and "Little Mexico"s may be charming districts for outsiders, but they can form socioeconomic traps for the people born in them.

And if we accept still more, even faster... Eternal September. Sharia law in Europe. Whatever.

We must remember that these people come from failed states. That's why they bothered to come. If everything were awesome back home, they'd have stayed there. And they bring with them ideas from those failed states.

Some of them good, but some of them the very same bad ideas that caused those states to fail. If you let them in a controlled rate, you give yourself time to sort the bad ideas from the good.

If you open the borders, your culture is committing suicide. And culture matters.

How to make my boyfriend a little more redpill?

2 upvotes · 20 March 2014 · /r/askTRP

if he wasn't 6'5 and built, i'm not even sure I'd be with him. But breaking up with him would hurt him, and myself. I do really care for him and love him, I just don't know if I can be with someone who doesn't love or believe in himself. I've shown him trp and he just thinks it's crap. I've even tried speaking to him about all this, but maybe I'm not going about it the right way.

I got this dog at the pet store, but it doesn't purr! Can someone please help me teach my dog to purr?

You choose poorly. You thought that physically imposing meant dominant.

Resolved: Red Pill Isn't About Left or Right

2 upvotes · 19 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Well, to answer your argument, nazis were about genetics, not culture. That's an important distinction. Societies are their values.

I don't care what skin colour the next generation has. I do care that they are indoctrinated with western values like free markets, education, the scientific method, freedom of inquiry and speech, jury trials, popular representation in government, and so on.

There is a problem with opening your borders too fast, and it has nothing to do with genetics.

Resolved: Red Pill Isn't About Left or Right

2 upvotes · 18 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Godwin'd.

Female philosophy student receives a college job offer, responds with requests for outrageous concessions, then blames the menz when her requests cause the college to rescind their offer.

2 upvotes · 18 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

There's nothing wrong with negotiating for more money, but throwing out a specific number is bad. Especially since at a small school like Nazareth, the salary is probably somewhere in the $50k range.

Depends on the context.

In my field, throwing a specific-number counteroffer is expected.

In my opinion, she doesn't understand two things. First of all, that 65k is a starting salary for an hot-talent engineer, not a philosophy professor at a tier 2 school. Secondly, salary negotiation numbers come from other offers and/or your salary history. Not thin air.

All of this has nothing to do directly with being a woman, but indirectly, it does. It happened because she listened when idiots told her that women needed to be more aggressive and demanding, and when idiots told her that women were underpaid. And she bullrushed in with no understanding of the nuances of salary negotiation. This caused them to flag her as a potential problem personality... and they were right to do so.

Man deploys, wife weighs 260 lbs. Wife says "fuck this" and loses 110 lbs. Husband returns to a big surprise! (X-posted to /r/RPW)

2 upvotes · 18 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Notice the different facial expressions the man has in the before and after pictures.

5 Things Women Need To Do In Their 20's (Or Else The Suffragists Died For Nothing)

2 upvotes · 17 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

What's hilarious is that I followed that link, and didn't realize it was a randomly generated paper until I got to the bottom.

Postmodernism is the blithering of those who feel compelled to speak, not merely despite having no meaningful thing to say, but precisely because they resent the fact that others do.

Is it enough to have a "good" waist hip ratio, or is it "the more extreme, the better"?

2 upvotes · 14 March 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Asking me how a woman should dress is like asking an expert art critic about how to hold a brush, and what strokes to use.

In other words, I'm not totally in the dark, but I'm also not the authoritative expert. So I'm not going to answer. Instead, I will forward this to a girl I know who IS the expert... and see if we can get her in here to give you some useful advice.

For those of you watching, this is how the red pill works. You look at reality, see what's there, and try to get the best result you can working with it. You don't look at reality, obsess over what you think SHOULD be there, and insult anyone who points out the difference between the two.

In other words, blue pillers would tell this women she is perfect and beautiful, and that anyone who doesn't think that is a big jerk meanie. They would also say this if she weighed 190 lbs and looked like a concrete block.

And red pillers would tell her she isn't perfect, and how she might improve. If she weighed 190 lbs, our advice would be "cut out the sugar and exercise like your life depends on it". For her as she is, it's "dress differently".

Whether she is a 5 or a 10 isn't quite as important in this context as what she could do to improve. Because the red pill is about improvement. In the long run, honest-self criticism is better for us and makes us happier than well-intentioned flattery.

Is it enough to have a "good" waist hip ratio, or is it "the more extreme, the better"?

2 upvotes · 14 March 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't know just how low that ratio can be before you cease to look human or attractive, but as a connoisseur of female beauty, I think you're barking up the wrong tree.

You're looking at yourself and not feeling "curvy" enough, despite having a 24" waist and 36" hips (which are good numbers).

The reason that you don't look "curvy" isn't your ratio.

It's that you have a long torso. This stretches the hourglass vertically, de-emphasizing the ratio.

So you're going to want to dress in a way that counteracts that. And how attractive you are will vary widely based on presentation.

I find photo #4 sexy, photo #3 unattractive, and the other two somewhere in between.

Judgy Bitch -- Pay attention, young ladies. Your older sisters have a plan, and it involves you, crushed under a bus.

2 upvotes · 13 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

You do not quite understand PUA theory as well as you think you do.

The idea is that women are attracted to men they respect. Whether he's a decent, honest, hard-working middle class guy or a drug-dealing one-percenter is irrelevant. What matters is that she sees him as strong.

But, since we now live in a culture that does not reward men who contribute to society, women have become aware that any man who is still a decent, honest, hardworking contributor is not strong, he's a sucker. They can't respect him.

This is why PUA tactics teach us to emulate cads. Not because only cads are attractive, but because we live in a culture where only cads and women are respected. In order to be respected, we must be cads, but it is the respect that matters.

JudgyBitch is part of a small number of women who are fighting a lonely culture war to restore respect for masculine men, not just the ones who are cads, but all of them.

Fat ass is mad that her liberating photo shoot was used as a "Before" pic for a diet ad.

2 upvotes · 13 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I find it hard to imagine anyone above her weight.

We're gaining steam.

2 upvotes · 11 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

SRS is annoying as shit but you don't see me trying to shut them down. Why? Because I know they're miserable little trolls and I don't care what they talk about as long as they stay the fuck away from me.

I must confess I don't even want them to stay away. Their hate makes me strong. Their tears are sweet and refreshing.

Can we cut down on our daily broscience intake?

2 upvotes · 9 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Complaining about posts adds no content. Post what you wish to see. Report what adds nothing to the discussion.

What IS the Red Pill (an explanation accessible to those who have not taken it).

2 upvotes · 5 March 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I mean rules like Newton's Third Law. Not rules like "keep off the grass".

Male power fantasy, uh huh

2 upvotes · 5 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

The games I've made are simulations for the military. Also libraries and tools for game creation. So kinda exactly that, and kinda totally not.

Tell me, are you complaining about something you don't see in the world, and wish you did?

Better writing?

By whose definition of "better"? Yours? Mine? Men's? Women's? Feminists'? Anita Sarkesian's?

What if it's simply that there are some really good things in the world that are currently kept out of AAA games?

Then put them in. Game making is not zero-sum.

You're simply threatened because you want to keep them out.

Ah, there's another page from the feminist manual of underhanded debating tactics. When a man doesn't like something, say he is "threatened" by it, thus implying that he is a coward unless he agrees with you. Because sex roles and stereotypes are super-awesome if they help feminist rhetoric, right?

Next you'll be telling me to "man up".

But your safe space won't last...

Because male-only spaces are icky and discriminatory and backward and bad, and female-only safe spaces are cool and progressive and forward-thinking and super awesome. Riiiiight.

Look, make whatever you want. Don't tell others not to make what they want. End of story.

Male power fantasy, uh huh

2 upvotes · 1 March 2014 · /r/MensRights

Your ability to be oppressed reminds me of men's soccer for some reason.

Aaaaaaaaaaaaaand there it is. We've done Deny and Attack, so now we reach the stage where you Reverse Victim and Offender.

Men aren't demanding anything. They are making the video games they want to play. And then, along comes you, weeping copiously about how females are portrayed in those games, demanding change.

Well, I'll tell you what. Instead of coming along and telling me what to do with my computer science degree and hard-won software engineering skills, how about you go get some of your own?

Then you, like men, can make the games you wish to play.

You seem to think games fall like rain from heaven, or are the product of some leftoid vision of utopia, a racially and sexually diverse coalition of soft-spoken egalitarians from the 22nd century who look like the cast of one of the more modern Star Trek tv series.

No. Games are the product of the passion, hard work, and sleep deprivation of white and asian men in their twenties and thirties.

They make the games they wish to make, and the games they wish to play. Other people buy them.

This is why we often say games are art, in a way that films often are not. Because games are not designed by committee. They are not a product of market research. They are the vision of singular small groups of dedicated dudes.

When you complain about what those dudes produce, without offering an alternative, you're trying to tell them what to make with their creative energy.

"Fiancee leaves me to fuck other guys for 4 years, now wants to get back together. Should I take her back?" Comments are a mixed bag.

2 upvotes · 24 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Also, Red Pill: women look for the best possible mate from the viewpoint of their genes, not themselves.

Cesar Millan's wife (The Dog Whisperer) filed for divorce in March 2010. She ended up receiving a single payment of $400,000, monthly spousal payment of $23,000 (that's $276,000 a year), AND $120,000 a year in monthly child support. Cesar Millan then attempted suicide.

2 upvotes · 21 February 2014 · /r/MensRights

And to think I wasted all this time career building.

Epic response by "CEO" of JPMorgan

2 upvotes · 20 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I will eat my hat if this was actually written by the CEO of JP Morgan Chase, but the point is sound even if badly sourced.

Never bankroll a woman. Let her make her own money, and support her damn self.

Chivalry is dead! Quick, resuscitate it.

2 upvotes · 18 February 2014 · /r/MensRights

I refuse to admit that chivalry is dead. Because I haven't finished kicking it yet.

Let's talk about implied social contracts, rules, obligations, responsibilities, and duties.

2 upvotes · 12 February 2014 · /r/AlreadyRed

Okay, so you're operating from your own private definition of the word "sociopath", which I have no access to.

If you'd like to discuss the DSM definition, we can have this conversation. Otherwise, carry on without me.

Got banned from /r/trapmuzik (of all places?) because of my 'affiliation' with /r/theredpill.

2 upvotes · 10 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Trevor is going to bust a cap in your ass for saying that. If his mom will let him borrow the car.

The Five Stages of Red Pill, and how to read r/TRP textposts.

2 upvotes · 5 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

My navel is full of enlightened beings?

Cool!

"You are weird"

2 upvotes · 3 February 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

"Weird" is a shit test.

My go-to response is an unconcerned "yep.".

[Mod] Posting Rules 2014 Update

2 upvotes · 31 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Were you banned? Were your comments removed?

You're free to disagree as you wish (so long as you are not actively trying to disrupt the sub), but everyone else is free to disagree with you.

Here, we tend to err on the side of free and open expression, rather than niceness. I think that is as it should be.

Anybody who gives you a belief system is your enemy

2 upvotes · 31 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There's something to be said for the attitude of "I don't like -isms". Becoming a member of a religious group is seldom beneficial.

But I think one needs to be cautious about what one labels an "ism". Societies give names to beliefs that they find unusual or novel. Religious societies invent the name "atheism" for "not believing in a god". Societies without a good, accurate cosmology invent the name "heliocentrism" for believing the earth orbits the sun.

Then, once these beliefs become mainstream, the labels die, for the same reason we don't have a special name for people who have two eyes, breathe oxygen, or can walk. It's the default, it doesn't need a name.

Thus, saying that you automatically don't agree with any group that has a label basically means "I agree with my culture's mainstream about everything".

To which I would answer "Weren't you lucky, then, to be born into the one society in the history of the world that got every single thing right?".

The creator of xkcd doesn't want /r/xkcd associated with /r/mensrights.

2 upvotes · 27 January 2014 · /r/MensRights

/r/theredpill[10] have dubious histories of racism, misogyny, antisemitism, and holocaust denial, and I could understand not wanting to be associated with them (especially since I am a jew)

Your ideas about /r/TheRedPill are about as accurate as this guy's ideas about /r/MensRights.

First post regarding attraction to dominance (for tbp women)

2 upvotes · 24 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It seems that this is very much a non-satire version of /r/thebluepill[1] but with slightly more tolerance to red pill ideas.

Not really tolerance, but enforced politeness. Basically, the TBP types here can't be too insulting, or they get banned. (Except /u/soulcakeduck, who seems to have carte blanche to say whatever.)

Yet many red pill men and women I see down voted and many simple "they are misogynist" comments up voted.

You have to understand that the major difference between the red and blue pills comes from the difference between modern and postmodern discourse.

Modern discourse is about a cooperative effort to get at the truth. Debaters are seen as detached from their positions, advocating this or that viewpoint not out of allegiance, but as part of the process of testing ideas by subjecting them to criticism.

Postmodern discourse is about getting what you want. Debaters are passionately attached to their positions, and their goal in arguing is not to inspire learning or discover facts, but to get their way.

Thus, chanting "misogynist misogynist misogynist misogynist misogynist misogynist misogynist misogynist misogynist" seems like a perfectly valid tactic to postmodern disputants. Because it shuts people up, tarnishes their reputations, and generally makes them less likely to be heard. It doesn't matter to them that "misogynist" is a thought-terminating cliché. Because thought isn't the point.

To modern disputants, calling someone a misogynist makes no sense in a debate. It's totally irrelevant, because it has nothing to do with the truth or falsity of what he said. It's a complete non sequitur.

So don't come here hoping to convince anyone. In postmodern discourse, no one convinces anyone of anything. No one ever changes their mind, because it's basically a shouting contest. It is about force of personality, level of interest, and amount of free time, not about soundness of ideas. It's a contest. One person wins, the other person loses, and the loser doesn't change their mind, they just slink off in a huff. Nor should they change their mind, because their ideas have not been defeated. They have.

What you should come here for is to test the strength of your ideas against those few nuggets of accidental modernism in the torrent of postmodern, feelings-oriented, subjective-truthiness tantrums. Remember that the red pill isn't about being right, it's about being aware of what is, and that means that any allegedly red-pill idea must be exposed to vehement criticism and empirical tests to prove itself.

Guys that should (probably) not approach women.

2 upvotes · 22 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

- You are just getting over a divorce/bad breakup.

Sure, you can still pull. But that's not what you need to be doing right now. Find your own identity, and reclaim your masculine pride, first. There are things more important than pussy.

Hostility to Submissive women. Is it acceptable?

2 upvotes · 22 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Only an adherent of postmodern discourse would think that matters.

What does PPD think about "Plausible Deniability"?

2 upvotes · 21 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women "police" each other a lot. I don't think the average man really understands how unfree the average woman is, because he doesn't realize

- how important women's social circles are to them
- how judgemental women are about other women
- how easily, and for how minor an "offense" a woman can be ostracised

A lot of novice seducers think of "plausible deniability" tactics like LMR and ASD as being silly female peccadilloes. What they don't realize is that if a woman's "friends" find out about her one night stand, they will flock together to bully her, despite secretly knowing they've all done the same thing.

Deniability isn't a quirk, it's serious business.

A Tales of Two Pills: Alpha mentors and beta nerds by some random basement dweller.

2 upvotes · 21 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Reported for:

- Insulting language.
- Not being useful for sparking productive debate.
- Having no clear question.

- Sounding like Gene Ray the Time Cube Guy.

Are there any libertarians and anarcho-capitalists at The Red Pill?

2 upvotes · 19 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

I'm not sure I'd give myself a label.

Here's what I think about economics:

1. Don't take my stuff for something that doesn't benefit me.
2. I'll decide what benefits me.
3. If I do something that benefits you, I expect to be rewarded.
4. If I am not rewarded, I will stop.

I don't really know what an ideal economy should look like, and I don't think anyone else does either, not socialists, not capitalists, not "experts" in economics. But I do know that if I don't insist on being treated fairly, no one else is going to look out for me.

Leykis 101 -- Rules for Men

2 upvotes · 19 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Don't ask a women what she wants to do.

I would amend this to "don't ask it as an open-ended question". When I want to know what a woman would prefer, I tend to ask "Do you want X, Y, or Z?" This not only allows me to constrain her to options I would enjoy, but I find that women are a lot happier picking an option from a list than trying to come up with things on a blank page.

Never spend more than 40 bucks on a date. (Have a big meal before the date, then when you get there just have a salad. She won't want to eat more than you.)

My rule is "never spend money on a woman until after you've had sex".

No spooning, no cuddling, no staying over. Get in, get out!

Some guys actually like some cuddle time after sex. I often do. My rule is "never cuddle unless you feel like it, too".

Never be in a committed relationship UNTIL you are 25 or really ready to settle down (or better yet, when you have achieved your professional dream.)

Never volunteer monogamy. Make her ask for it, and make it clear that it's a concession she wants. So she better make it worth your while. (As a general rule. Personally, I don't do monogamy at all.)

Don't let a chick get chatty on her cell phone during a date.

Don't let her answer the phone during a date.

Chart says ideal penis size for modern women is at least 7+ inches. I'd say in my experience this is pretty accurate, thoughts?

2 upvotes · 19 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

This doesn't seem to be sourced at all. Is it from a self-report survey, or what?

I'm calling BS. Not because the numbers don't look right, but because there's no supporting evidence.

[Mod] RedPillWomen Mods AMA Jan 29th at 4PM EST

2 upvotes · 17 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

How will this be moderated: according to TRP's standards, or RPW's?

So, the BPers have spoken, so I'll ask the opposite question - RPer, how was your sex life with people who were non-RP and how did it differ from your RP partners?

2 upvotes · 15 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

all I can do is cite my personal experience, which is useless to you.

Sure, but remember that the context of this conversation is:

I'll clarify - how has your sex life differed between people who generally follow the guidelines set down by RP (for their respective genders and whether they know it or not), and people who did not generally follow the guidelines (for their respective genders, whether they know it or not).

In other words, the question at hand was "what has your experience been?". I think I have answered that. And we've sort of moved on to "what do you believe?", and I've kind of answered that as well.

So, if we want to move on to a slightly different subject, we can do that. But if it's to be "can you prove any of this?", we should probably reach it by way of "and why is it that you believe this?", first.

That's because we're not in a court of law, here, where I might be obliged to prove some contention in the face of opposition. We are instead having a conversation about what might and might not be true, and attempting to find things which might illuminate that question.

Thus far I think we have reached a point where you at least understand where I am coming from, and can see that it's internally consistent, makes sense, and explains some things. That doesn't, of course, prove that it is true, but it does give us a starting point.

So why do I think what I think?

Well, a large part of it is my personal experience, which is of course useless to you. But let's remember that truth is that which predicts the future. That's the scientific definition. Something is "true" in science if you can make a prediction based on it, test that prediction, and see what you predicted actually happen. And we do science because the ability to predict the future, or that which we have not yet observed, empowers us.

And so I call these red pill principles "truths" because they enable me to predict female behaviour, and empower me to get positive sexual responses from women.

And when I say "get better sexual responses from women", I put it that way deliberately. Because I'm not just talking about "more pussy". I'm talking about more passion on the part of the women I am with. They're happier, they like me better, and they're more responsive.

Have you ever seen a woman have an orgasm that lasted half an hour? I have.

Ultimately, I have reached the surprising place that I did by repeating what worked, and discontinuing what didn't. Would surprise you to learn that women who like to be slapped, spanked, or choked during sex are the majority? Sure as hell boggled me. Still does sometimes. But it is no longer any mystery to me why "Fifty Shades of Grey" is so popular.

See, that's the surprising part. All that "misogynistic" and "patronizing" and "disrespectful" stuff? I learned it from women. Because they kept rewarding me for doing it. The more of that I did, the more they loved me. At first it was like stepping into bizarro-universe. The evolutionary explanations came later, as a way for me to try to understand why the world was this crazy.

So trust me, if all this stuff seems weird to you, I understand. I remember when it was weird to me, too. I had to go through a lot of "holy shit, I can't believe that actually worked" before it all really sank in.

But now when I see a study that says that boy chimpanzees like to play with trucks, and girl chimpanzees like to play with dolls, I'm not surprised. I've already been shown that men and women are just different.

When I see a study that shows that female study participants described experiment group "leaders" as significantly more attractive, even when they had seen those leaders being randomly selected for the role, I'm not surprised at all. They're hardwired to prefer socially dominant men, without stopping to reason where that dominance came from.

A lot of men think women are foolish, or crazy. I don't think that anymore. Pretty much everything they do makes perfect sense, once you understand their internal genetic imperatives. Studies of the human genome have shown that close to 90% of the women who ever lived successfully reproduced, and are now part of the gene pool. And that this is true of some 25% of the men.

This means that the biggest evolutionary risk to women wasn't failing to mate or have children. That was pretty much guaranteed. The biggest risk was bearing the children of a loser. So women are evolved to ruthlessly test for signs of weakness. And many men today fail those tests, not because they are losers (they are, after all, descended from the 25% of men who passed those tests), but because they have been taught wrong, and don't know that it's weakness that they are being tested for.

Learning to spot those tests has made all the difference.

Sleep with sluts, but do NOT get into a LTR with a slut (?).

2 upvotes · 14 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

An LTR isn't just a thing floating in space. An LTR is an LTR with someone. The question is... "who?".

Feminists already scared of the mere concept of "sex robots"

2 upvotes · 14 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

You're living in a world where you can't get a robot of any kind that will do your dishes or your laundry or vacuum your entire house

Your conceptual problem here is that you are stuck with an unexamined concept of what a "robot" is.

You certainly have a machine that does your laundry. And one that does your dishes. You just don't think of them as robots.

The way dishes and laundry will get done in the future will not come from some machine that does dishes the way a human does them. It will come from expanding capabilities of the dishwasher.

Similarly, if you remove the limiting concept of "robot" from your thought-question, and ask yourself instead "how, in the future, will the satisfaction of male sexual needs be moved from a female social monopoly to a money making industry?", then you don't have to ask when in the future it will happen, because you can see the

the process is gradual and ongoing, has been happening for a while, and will continue to happen.

So, the BPers have spoken, so I'll ask the opposite question - RPer, how was your sex life with people who were non-RP and how did it differ from your RP partners?

2 upvotes · 13 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

When I was young, I listened (not knowing better) to what my elders told me about attracting love. Be sincere. Express your feelings. Be nice to her. It's all about meeting the right person. Take her seriously. Treat men and women equally (the same). You'll meet the right person when you least expect it. Just be yourself. Just act natural.

So, for me, sex and love were just like they are for most modern men... a big, stressful mystery. Read /r/AskMen , /r/AskWomen , /r/relationships , and so on, if you want to see examples of what I mean. Dates were like job interviews. Meeting someone I was into was a stressful process of trying to "find out" if she was, too.

Sex was hard to get to, and when I got there, it was kinda mediocre. Like the women could take it or leave it. They were mostly very selfish in bed.

Now, I'm not saying I was some kind of hopeless neckbeard. In fact, I got more female attention than most men I knew. But it just seemed like this was really difficult for pretty much male, all the time, except for a few guys who seemed to have some magic sort of charisma... for whom women would just fall at their feet for after a short conversation.

So, somewhere around the midpoint of my college years, I decided, having consciously thought about it, that something wasn't quite right here. Obviously, attracting women was hard for most men. Equally obviously, it wasn't inherently hard, because some guys could do it with a flick of the wrist.

Most men must be doing something wrong.

Since most men were following their culture's advice on how to attract women, that advice must be either unhelpful, or flat-out wrong. But since there were men who knew how to do this, there must be some advice that would be helpful if only it were given. It wasn't anything inherent about these men who succeeded with ease. They weren't handsomer, buffer, richer, taller, smarter, or any other discernible trait which might be inherent.

So I set out to learn it. Now, mind you, this didn't consume my life or anything. I just made a conscious realization that I had been misled, and the decision to try to watch and figure out the truth.

I didn't start by asking women. I already had experienced the way women's advice consisted of exactly what society said about attracting women. In fact, maybe it was society that echoed whatever advice women gave. Either way, not useful.

Instead, I started by asking the men who were good at it. Surprisingly, they were no wiser. They simply said unhelpful things like "just talk to them", "it's easy", and "flirt". And I realized that they didn't know either. Everyone was stumbling in a darkened maze. They just happened to be the ones who stumbled on the right path.

So my eyes would be my only teachers. And gradually, as I watched women and what they responded to, it came to light that not only was the advice our culture gives not true, it was, in fact, the exact opposite of the truth. Women don't want to hear about your feelings. Women adore selfish men. "Compatibility" has nothing to do with attraction... people can become completely infatuated with someone they can't even have a conversation with.

Now, right about then, I experienced what we call the "anger phase" of taking the red pill. This is what we call it when men are new to TRP, and discover that they've been lied to all these years, in ways that caused them quite a bit of pain, just so people could avoid saying unflattering things about women. And that women's nature, far from being the angelic shining light of goodness and innocence that most people make it out to be, is just as selfish and nasty as anyone else's, in fact, it's often worse because they are used to getting away with it.

But even during the anger phase, when I behaved in the ways that I had observed women to respond to, they loved me for it, even when I was furious at their whole sex inside. The more demanding I was, the more they respected me. The more selfish I was, the more they gave instead of just taking all the time. The more I dominated them, the more I turned them on. The less I respected them, the more they loved me.

And, then, when the anger died down, I realized that what was making me angry was not women, but my pathological expectations of women. Why should I expect them to be honest about their motivations, or even self-aware enough to know about them? They have no incentive to. They can get by just fine without. Men and women, I had discovered, were naturally different, and expecting them to be the same, or for women to act like men, just produces frustration.

Since that realization, it's simply been a matter of learning about what's really attractive to women, and applying it. It's so absurdly simple to understand that it's like having cheat codes. Now, sometimes it's hard to steel yourself to put it into practice, but at least I know what to do. And I am steadily improving.

Now, women who never would have given me the time of day will flirt, and slip me little notes with their phone numbers. I have a small group of women I regularly have sex with, they all adore me, and they all know about the others and they don't care. The thing about basic attraction triggers is, it's not like some deceptive "trick" that works for one drunken night and she wakes up in the morning hating herself for having sex with that bastard. If you're still using the same principles in the morning, then she still likes you.

Stimulus - response.

Human beings are much simpler creatures than most people think. Most men are already aware of this about themselves and other men. Hourglass figure, youthful appearance, taut, clear skin, large breasts, vulnerable body language, submissive behaviour, etc. What we like is simple. We know this. Everyone knows this.

The secret is that women are like that, too. Aloof, demanding behaviour. Social confidence. Other women showing attraction. Other people deferring or showing respect. Aggressive, direct, conversation. Unflappable calm. An air of amused superiority. Treating them like little girls. These are the equivalent of large breasts and a slender figure.

It's not complex, and it has nothing to do with character or even personality.

Now, I understand why people HATE to hear about this. No one wants to hear that they are just a chimp in pants. But that's what you are, and that's okay, because I am, too, and so is everyone else. When we understand our animal nature, we know which behaviours work for us and which do not.

And the sex is great.

A Tale of Two Women

2 upvotes · 11 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

http://www.reddit.com/r/RedPillWomen/comments/1j0n7t/the_slut_and_how_not_to_be_one/

The basic idea is, you don't magically become a keeper by closing your legs. You have to cultivate femininity and relationship value so the next man you bed doesn't want to leave.

The reason sluts have high partner counts is not that they gave it up too easy, but that their partners move on afterwards, meaning that the next time they sleep with someone, it increases their partner count again.

In one sentence, what has been your biggest takeaway from being exposed to the red pill?

2 upvotes · 10 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Humans are much like other members of the ape family, and much of our behaviour is motivated by the same simple social and sexual dynamics we have observed in chimps and baboons.

Is anyone else worried about the men?

2 upvotes · 10 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It seems unbelievably sad for so many men to believe that women are incapable of being equal romantic partners

Hold a sec.

The reason that seems sad to you is that you most likely have been sold messages of equality and sameness so often that in your brain, "equal relationship" is shorthand for "happy, loving relationship".

But if you examine what you are implying by that, it means you don't think love, happiness, or one as the result of the other can exist in any other time and culture than the modern west.

It also means that parents cannot love their children, nor children their parents, because parents and children certainly are not "equal" by any definition of the term we're using here.

The gist of what you have to say, here is that you cannot imagine being happy without feminism. Well, women were happy before feminism, and will be happy after it. During it, well, that's more difficult.

Frankly, I'm much happier after swallowing that pill than before. Sure, it taught me a lot of grimdark things about human nature, but those things were already there. The only change is that now I can understand why what happens happens. And I can do something about it.

The red pill doesn't change the universe. It just equips you to better handle it.

So, the BPers have spoken, so I'll ask the opposite question - RPer, how was your sex life with people who were non-RP and how did it differ from your RP partners?

2 upvotes · 10 January 2014 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't know quite what you mean by "people who aren't RP".

The whole point of TRP is to understand people's sexual behaviour as it really, naturally, instinctively is. If there were a whole of people out there who didn't work according the model, the model would have to be changed, otherwise it would be inaccurate.

TRP isn't a lifestyle. It's about not lying to yourself about what people really do, and why they really do it.

So it doesn't make a whole lot of sense to talk about "people who don't prefer RP".

In other words, in my experience, feminists like dominant, high-status, direct, forceful, unapologetic, selfish men just as much as other women do. And it turns them on just as much to be spanked by those men. They just rationalize about it a lot more afterwards.

TIL: Cesar Millan's wife (The Dog Whisperer) filed for divorce in March 2010. She ended up receiving a single payment of $400,000, monthly spousal payment of $23,000 (that's $276,000 a year), AND $120,000 a year in monthly child support. Cesar Millan then attempted suicide.

2 upvotes · 8 January 2014 · /r/TheRedPill

Life has no purpose. It's here by accident.

Your purpose is whatever you decide it is.

Positive pregnancy tests for sale - so you can trick your man into marrying you! And then fake a miscarriage.

2 upvotes · 6 January 2014 · /r/MensRights

You're confusing civil and criminal law.

What exactly is a Red Pill Woman?

2 upvotes · 30 December 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Well, "equality" is a hard thing to get away from. If we don't think about it very hard, we fall into the assumption that "of course men and women should be treated equally!".

Everyone wants to think of themselves as fair.

But when we look at women's behaviour towards men (and we call it the red pill because it's all about seeing what's actually there), we see a phenomenon called "hypergamy".

I believe, from the latin roots, it means something like "mating up".

What it means is that:

- Women wish to mate with the highest status male they can.
- Women are unhappy with mates who are not of higher social status than they are.

(To show that we all know this to be true, let's do a simple thought experiment: would you rather date Chris Pine or a garbage collector who looks exactly like him? Now, do you think I would rather have sex with Taylor Swift, or a waitress who looks exactly like her?)

Hypergamy is why we cannot have equality. You see, equality doesn't work because women won't accept it. It makes them unhappy, because if woman is her husband's equal, then by definition, she cannot have successfully "married up", and will be unhappy in her relationship.

What exactly is a Red Pill Woman?

2 upvotes · 30 December 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Believe me, I understand. One gets so tired of repeating the same basic stuff over and over again.

But we have to remember that it's new to each one of these people. And they're not bad people or even stupid people. They're people who have been taught wrong things.

We're not besieged by assholes, here. We're simply living a society that has developed a tradition of the collaborative lie, saying things that make people feel good, but don't help people deal with reality (which is notably immune to persuasion).

So we're here trying to detox ourselves, and people who are ready to hear it, one by one, as they wander in. It's repetitive work, and sometimes we burn out. Happens to me, too.

I deal with it by stepping back and letting someone else answer the newbs, until I'm once again ready to be patient with people.

The massive flaw in TRP's methodology

2 upvotes · 30 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So, averages don't exist?

Mathematics is over here, and it would like a word with you.

Single mom turns down a successful handsome guy, gets upset when he goes on a date with a younger more attractive woman.

2 upvotes · 30 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I don't see this as hamstering, because upset in this case means "sad and disappointed", not "angry and blaming him for the universe not being fair".

Is TRP ready to divorce itself from RoK?

2 upvotes · 27 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Which of these conclusions from the article do you find unreasonable?

1. A false accuser [should be] given the same penalty as the accused might have received.
2. Women and men under the influence of alcohol should be held to the same standards of behaviour as everyone else.
3. If a person doesn't want to have sex, they must say "No" firmly and clearly. Men cannot be expected to know if a girl is feeling uncomfortable, or if her tone of voice suggests that her "Yes" isn't really a Yes.
4. Make a judgement based on the evidence, and the characters of both accuser and accused.

Please give numbers, 1, 2, 3, 4 or any or all of them.

BDSM is "deviant" sex. Lesbian sex isn't "deviant" these days, cheating isn't "deviant", divorce isn't "deviant" to feminists...but put a man in charge and all of a sudden you're a deviant.

2 upvotes · 27 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

A true Dom would never act on emotions (out of anger or betrayal), and would always seek the consent of his partner (including limits, boundaries, and safe words).

Whenever I read that phrase, I always hear it in the voice of the priest from "The Princess Bride":

Twwuuuuooooo Dom...

You are, of course, being incredibly silly. BDSM is a sexual taste or turnon, not a community, or an elaborate set of rules designed to make you comfortable.

Whether other people use things like safewords is no business of yours at all.

33 year-old doctor slammed into the wall. Won't date any men who make less than top 1% of men. Can't figure out why men won't date her.

2 upvotes · 27 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I met a guy who is just now wrapping up his residency -- He's 500k in debt!

Holy fuck indeed.

I went to engineering school, came out owing about 30k, and make as much as that poor woman.

I guess being a physician isn't as good a deal as I thought.

Dear UN: Please Add Men & Boys to Your Human Trafficking Definition

2 upvotes · 25 December 2013 · /r/MensRights

gmp;dr

I hate sex with my girlfriend

2 upvotes · 24 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Fake.

Slimmer Women's Waist is Associated with Better Erectile Function in Men Independent of Age

2 upvotes · 23 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

A regular partner of mine has gone from somewhat chubby to Christina Hendricks-esque to hourglass over the past year. The quality and ease of my erections with her has tracked this progress exactly.

The kind of oppressive comments that get you banned from r/OffMyChest these days

2 upvotes · 19 December 2013 · /r/MensRights

Nah, can't be.

Designing a working vibrating motor that small would require a male engineer.

I want my wife to be a stay at home mom. Is this wrong according to TBP

2 upvotes · 12 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You'll have to indulge the late and sketchy response. I am well enough to sit up and type again, but only just. So, to be brief, we are talking at cross-purposes. You ask...

Is something right merely because it's natural?

... and concealed within this question is a rather large assumption. Specifically, that there is one objectively correct moral code, woven into the fabric of the universe, which can be discovered.

I do not stipulate this basic assumption.

I would argue that moral systems are pieces of thought-technology, invented by civilizations because it helps them (or individuals within them) to survive and prosper. This means that things can be good or bad within a particular moral system, but moral systems can only be good or bad for a particular purpose.

In other words, the universe doesn't have any notion of "should". "Should" is just a word humans use to say "I want".

Though denying a loved one sex can cause harm, it is not comparable to murder, warfare, or rape, and this harm does not obligate anyone to provide sex.

2 upvotes · 11 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Contrast that with withholding food

We don't eat to avoid starvation. If we did, no one would be fat.

We eat because we are driven by hunger.

Red Pill subscribers: What exactly does taking The Red Pill mean to you?

2 upvotes · 9 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Hurk. So this is what it feels to be on the receiving end of a good theory.

Okay, but let's not get ahead of ourselves. Just because something is internally consistent doesn't mean it matches external reality.

For me to support my case, I must be able to make predictions using my hypothesis which turn out to be true. Or at least draw parallels to observations in other areas (given that I cannot perform double-blind controlled studies myself without changing careers).

I think where we disagree is that you believe infatuation does indeed end at some point - either with failure (breaking up) or connection. Whatever happens, infatuation inevitably ends, period. I disagree. I don't think infatuation has to end, and I don't believe I'm confusing this emotion with connection.

I'm telling you I have personally experienced sustained infatuation well past the time it would take an infant to walk. It's possible.

I am utterly uninterested in anecdotal reports of your own life. That's simply citing a study with a subject count of one, with data collected via self-report, by the subject... from memory.

If you want an example of how useless these kinds of personal anecdote are... I saw Elvis the other night. He was riding a unicorn. Now prove me wrong.

I would predict that endorphin response to the presence of a specific other decays with some geometric function over time, until it approximates a baseline. I would predict that it might never quite reach that baseline, but approximates it quickly (single-digit years).

In fact I believe infatuation and connection can be entwined in a way, like a braid. Or perhaps both emotions/neurological phenomena leap-frog off of one another in an ideal relationship. I'm saying that when one has a strong connection with someone one is attracted to (regardless of said connection), infatuation can sustain itself.

At this point, we're arguing semantics.

My point in drawing the distinction between infatuation and commitment was to talk about how one of the main things that makes people uncomfortable with TRP is the way that it encourages a pragmatic approach to matters of the heart. Objections vary from frivolous character assassination ("that's misogynous!") to vague response to tone ("that's very cynical, you must be bitter") to the actually worth talking about ("won't a take-no-prisoners approach to mating be harmful to partners who are less pragmatic?").

To last of these, I would say, that's the whole point.

Over the past five decades or so, romance has indeed general been a concerto for cutthroat pragmatist and trusting romantic. But it's the females who have been the cutthroat pragmatists. If we look at the actual research, we see that women play the game of love quite ruthlessly, and they play to win. And in a society like ours, where setting social mores has been left more or less completely to females, males are often unaware that they are even on an oppositional playing field.

Males, you see, tend to take statements at face value, listening to the content of what is said, rather than the process of how the message is delivered. Among females, actually telling the truth in the literal meaning of your words is a social gaffe, a party foul. It's a sign of bad social skills... because it tells other women that you cannot sort out the nonverbal, tone, and process cues that are actually used to communicate the real message.

The red pill is an attempt to do for men what the vanished masculine traditions and male spaces would once have done for young men... teach them what they need to know to survive and prosper, especially in affairs of the heart (and, let us be direct, the genitals).

Craving the approval of women

2 upvotes · 6 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Anyway, if you get your approval by getting sexual attention from women, the fact remains that you are still dependent on women.

Of course we're dependent on women.

Just like women are dependent on men. Just like we're all dependent on farmers, and the farmers are dependent on machine manufacturers, who depend on software engineers, who depend on electrical engineers, who depend on metallurgists, and around and around it goes.

We're a herd animal, and an interdependent civilization. That's just fine. We need women. It's okay to need women. It's just not okay to need one particular woman.

One woman doesn't like you or approve of you, go find one who does. If a woman stops appreciating you, go find one who will. Just because people are unique doesn't mean they are irreplaceable.

When talking to an attractive woman, of course her attractiveness will affect you. If it didn't, you wouldn't be able to enjoy it. It is, after all, there to please you... that's the whole reason she looks like that, is because men like you like it.

Just remember she's not the ONLY attractive woman there is. If things go badly, another one will be along shortly.

I'm too arrogant-what gives?

2 upvotes · 6 December 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

If someone tells you are too arrogant, they are telling you they find you humbling and intimidating.

Why? Because if you sucked and thought you were awesome, then they would first talk about how you suck, and then about your unjustified high self-opinion. If they skip right to the part where you're too arrogant, that means they cannot find something else wrong with you. Which means your arrogance is justified.

Now, sometimes it's good to tone that arrogance, but only for tactical reasons, and when it is tactically appropriate. This is usually when you're dealing with other men of junior status or experience, whom you want to mentor and make allies of.

It's almost never a good idea with women.

Women will love you for the most outrageous acts of self-regard, so long you as don't pussy out and backpedal, qualify your statement, or otherwise hedge your bets.

It's like driving one of those formula one cars that depends on aerodynamic downforce for grip... if you go around a corner at 145 mph, you'll be fine. Take that same corner at 95 mph, and you're gonna die.

woman having uncommitted sex with me = good women having uncommitted sex in general = bad

2 upvotes · 3 December 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's an adequate reason for leaving the thread in place. But it provides no reason why OP should not be banned.

TRP and Redpill advice - What value does it offer women?

2 upvotes · 2 December 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Except in her case, not so much.

Just as RP women want neither timid, spineless betas nor violent, abusive brutes, RP men do not want jaded whores but also do not want vinegary, abstemious prudes.

Can you imagine coming home to that constant complaining and negativity?

Rape, part 3. This is the question I was building towards.

2 upvotes · 26 November 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Soooo... I can't buy a car while drunk unless it's stolen?

New Warning: Morning-After Pill Doesn't Work for Women Over 176 Pounds | Mother Jones

2 upvotes · 25 November 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

The average american woman weighs 166 pounds?????!!?

Is this really true? That's horrifying.

Some hilarious straw-man arguments about TRP

2 upvotes · 21 November 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Too far in what direction?

The whole point of a discussion group that encourages rational examination of the politically incorrect is to rationally examine the politically incorrect. If we say "that's too provocative, don't say that", we defeat the purpose.

The limit on what one can say in rational discourse (as opposed to postmodern discourse) is not someone else's feelings. It's contradictory evidence. And presentation of that happens within the discussion, not by disallowing the discussion.

If we think of a hateful thing I could possibly say about, for example, John Cleese, then it makes sense. If I say "John Cleese is a drug-addicted child molester", and you say "You ought not to say hateful things about John Cleese", then you've missed the point.

If it's true, then I ought to be saying it, no matter how much it hurts John Cleese's feelings or reputation, and your objection is irrelevant.

If it's not true, then my statement needs to be dismissed, but not because it is hurtful. Instead, it needs to be dismissed because it is false. Which means that, while my statement is objectionable, your specific objection is the wrong objection.

On Gaslighting

2 upvotes · 14 November 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm not entirely sure they think these accusations are ever false.

I'm pretty sure that if they ever do think they're false, they don't really care.

I don't know if this is the right sub, but I can't handle the role I've been put into.

2 upvotes · 7 November 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

If I were, I would be smart enough to know it would be best not to go on about it, and concentrate instead on showing how likeable I was.

It's not the smart that's the problem, it's the arrogance.

Why You Can't Find a Man

2 upvotes · 5 November 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

I think you're softly trolling, danabanana it's insane just to abandon your life and run away to another state (especially a crappy one like ND) on the off chance that there may be a man there willing to marry you.

But it's not insane to move to another state to get a job ?

Why is a job more important than a relationship?

Feminists: always making life worse for women and children.

2 upvotes · 1 November 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

FleetingWish is from California. Most of the lower class there are Mexican and South or Central American immigrants, so there is a heavy catholic influence in the culture of poverty there.

Need marriage advice for my sister

2 upvotes · 29 October 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

When someone says "he is emotionally abusive" I always think "there is another side to this story".

Also, "they both probably have poor conflict resolution skills".

Dove Self-Esteem Project aims to "make girls unstoppable" using "self-esteem programming" cause there is "beauty anxiety" in 8 year old girls

2 upvotes · 27 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Unstoppable 8 year old girls. What a wonderful idea.

25 Ways To Communicate Respect To Your Man... Without Ever Saying A Word

2 upvotes · 25 October 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Dom here.

This is infuriating. My girl is mine. MY property. Not any random idiot's, if he takes the notion he might enjoy being bossy.

Touch or disrespect what's mine, without my permission, and you'll regret it.

Self-proclaimed "small" woman comes to Korea from Canada and is upset that she is no longer complimented for being the only skinny girl around. Instead of praising the culture for valuing a healthy weight, she criticizes it

2 upvotes · 22 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Well, that's over ten pounds, and logically, there has to be some weight that's not healthy, but ten more pounds would be.

She was nowhere near that, however. One glance at her face in the pictures tells us that.

What is TRP life plan for an 18 year old girl embarking on her adult life?

2 upvotes · 17 October 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

I don't think of myself as spoiled because I don't care what our house/ apartment looks like as long as it is near the best schools and is in one of the safest places. I would rather pay higher rent and be able to go for a walk alone at night then save money and have to be afraid if I cross the street after sunset.

You are not spoiled in the manner of a rich child, who is bought nice things and takes that for granted. You are spoiled in the manner of a child, who has her money given to her instead of having to earn it, and takes that for granted.

Because you do not have the experience of having to be the source of every dollar you spend, you don't know how to budget efficiently, and are assuming you need much more than you actually do. This is a common state of affairs for teenagers... I was the same way when I was your age.

It's important to understand the difference between earning power and knowing how to spend efficiently. My personal income handily exceeds the highest numbers you mentioned, and I am quite single, so one might think that I am not in a position to talk. But having worked my way up the career ladder, I've made it on quite a bit less in the past, and I know that I could make a family of a wife and two kids quite comfortable on 75k, and get by on 50.

As for what you say about rent, I don't know where in California you are talking about. There aren't many places outside of urban Los Angeles which are really unsafe, especially since you are a woman, and thus much less likely to be targeted for violence.

The kind of rents you describe are typical of, or even higher than, the pricier areas of southern Orange county, and some of the nicer parts of the Bay area, or north county San Diego. These are nice places to live, yes, and I wouldn't leave to save a few bucks, but I quite comfortably could if I had to. There are cheap rents in decent places in Cali, so long as you're willing to live away from the ocean. No Sausalito, no Laguna Beach, no Carlsbad.

You're asking the right kinds of budgeting questions. But your inexperience at making these kinds of decisions is giving you a distorted view of what the answers have to be.

What is TRP life plan for an 18 year old girl embarking on her adult life?

2 upvotes · 15 October 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Let me guess. You're in your early twenties and haven't ever had a job, paid rent, or lived away from your parents' home?

"A Message to All Women" - You Are Precious Little Princesses

2 upvotes · 11 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Yeah.

Any boys or men out there who were sexually assaulted by women?

2 upvotes · 10 October 2013 · /r/MensRights

Yeah, but I'm not interested in talking to reporters about it. Journalism on men's rights tends to take the form of a hit piece, and I don't wish to be a part of that.

Is feminism about equal rights?

2 upvotes · 9 October 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You can't assert things unless they've rigorously be subjected to the scientific process.

So you don't believe in the Patriarchy, then?

Girl leaves her provider BF to fuck her ex when he complains about his day

2 upvotes · 8 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Before people jump in on saying this was a weak move, I understand it wasn't my proudest moment but I was going through some things and she was the only person I had.

No need. Your only mistake was having that moment in front of a woman. You need a shoulder to cry on, go to a male friend. Men have been there. We know the difference between "I had a bad day, and then I totalled my car" (suck it up and deal), and "my youngest child has inoperable cancer" (cry like you mean it).

Women just don't seem to factor in circumstances. All they see is strength or weakness. They don't consider how heavy the weight is, possibly because they've mostly never lifted a heavy weight, and if anyone ever expected them to, there would be a national outcry, collections would be taken up, the President would give speeches, an Awareness month would be declared, football teams would have to wear armbands in some humiliating pastel colour.

If your father dies, or you fail at your lifelong dream, many women will simply equate those tears to the ones she sheds when her boss is mean to her, or she and her BFF have a fight, or she fails a test. And she'll think, "that's no good, he's just as emotional as I am". Respect goes, and love follows.

I sent her one text. It read, "hey I know you have plans tomorrow but I really need to see you. Can you be available tomorrow at 4. I'll make it up to you." ... When we broke up she said that I was begging her to spend time with me.

She's doing the thing women do, where they experience the world through their feelings about it. If she felt like you were begging her, then that's her truth, and it's much more important to her than whatever might have actually happened.

What is TRP life plan for an 18 year old girl embarking on her adult life?

2 upvotes · 8 October 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

There is a tradeoff between taking an active role in raising children, and having an active and demanding career.

You get one or the other.

Does the red pill mean that women should accept men will not take an active role in child raising?

It means that if they are attracted to men with career success and social status that comes with it, they are implicitly accepting that. You don't get to have your cake and eat it, too.

If "alphas" are at the top of the food chain why does feminism and the current state of the Western world even exist?

2 upvotes · 7 October 2013 · /r/PurplePillDebate

among women, there is a basic pattern of prosocial behaviour

really?

You cut off the end of the sentence, and changed its meaning.

Among women, the expected pattern for prosocial behaviour involves sweetness, niceness, politeness, doing favours for other women, etc.

My point is that women who claim they are attracted to nice, kind, considerate men think they are saying they are attracted to men of character. Because among women, that's how character manifests itself. Since women are socially permitted to be inconsiderate and selfish, one isn't, even though she can get away with it, is showing character.

But since men are heavily socially censured for acts of selfishness, how "nice" and unselfish he appears to be is not a measure of his character at all, because cowardly men can be bullied or pressured into this behaviour. A "nice guy" might be nice... or weak. You don't know without reading him very close. But a nice women is nice, not weak, because our culture doesn't pressure women to be nice.

What is TRP life plan for an 18 year old girl embarking on her adult life?

2 upvotes · 7 October 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Why can't women have it all?

Because they have to share.

The components in the above list: career, kids, family, and education are all standard in the life of a man.

No. A tradeoff between those components is standard in the life of men.

Feminists says all non-consensual touching is "sexual assault"

2 upvotes · 2 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Red Pill lady writing from a Christian conservative perspective

Jumbo shrimp. Civil war. Military intelligence. Microsoft works. Living dead. Boxing ring. Bigger half. Buffalo wings. Casual chic.

Feminists says all non-consensual touching is "sexual assault"

2 upvotes · 2 October 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

And for the men – you think hard monogamy doesn't benefit you? Well, how about a rape charge; would that benefit you? When I wrote a post on campus sexual assault, I had more than one man come forward and describe being falsely accused of rape or sexual assault. One man ended up spending tens of thousands of dollars to fight the charges. If you have sex with a woman to whom you are not married, you are risking an assault charge. It's as simple as that.

Now this is just silly. First of all, marriage is no defense against a rape charge. Second, marriage is a much more serious risk of being raped yourself (metaphorically speaking) by a family court.

If 50% of marriages end in divorce, and they do, then what percentage of non-marital sex results in a rape charge? Frankly, I couldn't say exactly how the numbers play out, but I know for certain that a one-night stand is now a lot safer than a wedding, when you consider the potential of each to fuck up your life.

So, while I understand the hurt that he caused her, was this the appropriate response? When does emotional hurt equate to giving away ALL of a persons possessions? FB Find

2 upvotes · 26 September 2013 · /r/MensRights

How dare he get a message from another woman?

An Open Letter to the Author of 'How Circumcision Broke the Internet'

2 upvotes · 24 September 2013 · /r/MensRights

gmp;dr

This deplorable article appeared in today's Irish Times "Telling women to be careful gets men off the hook"

2 upvotes · 24 September 2013 · /r/MensRights

We aren't on the hook to begin with.

I have no obligation to be an unpaid bodyguard for women everywhere. I don't commit violent crimes. That's where my responsibility ends.

Meet Britain's worst wife - and she's proud of it: Kate won't cook, won't clean and only makes love to her husband

2 upvotes · 19 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Just because someone is submissive, and they are being dominated, does not mean that they are happy. Sexual dominance is a skill, and thus it can be done poorly or well. It is also an interpersonal interaction, and thus it can be done with an eye to the submissive's needs, or with none such.

Now, it's not my responsibility, yours, or anyone else's, to rescue subs who chose a dom poorly. But I am inclined to think that a female sub whose male dom made her earn most of the money, take care of the kids, take care of the home, wait upon him hand and foot, and who only allowed her sexual release once a decade... well, there would certainly be a lot of concern directed her way, and outrage on her behalf.

Even women who are literally considered property generally get treated better.

Business Insider Doesn't like the Red Pill

2 upvotes · 16 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

The author of this article is 27 years old. When I was 27, I certainly had a few silly ideas myself. Cut him some slack. He'll grow up eventually.

Woman in love with a Dark Triad asshole can't change him, goes on national TV to try make it happen.

2 upvotes · 13 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

This is an excellent training video.

Look at how he is immune to attempts to shame him. Listen to what he says, and how he presents himself, as if he couldn't care less.

Watch how the women in the audience boo him... but smile and lick their lips unconsciously.

She calls life with him "hell"... but she doesn't leave him.

Help! I am new, am I here for the right thing?

2 upvotes · 11 September 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

You're right, my words were poorly chosen.

I said "refusing to listen" when I meant "refusing to accept".

Point is something is either true or false, to a variety of degrees, and how it makes you feel doesn't change that.

Now, some people in TRP think women are inherently immature, others think women are immature because our culture places no demands or obstacles in their path, and FleetingWish goes as far as to say that people are only as mature as they have to be, and that female immaturity has benefits.

These are all different interpretations of the basic observation that women around us act immature.

The basic idea behind the red pill, and the reason we use that metaphor, is that the core idea is seeing what's there, instead of what's acceptable, nice, or popular. How we interpret what we see is something we can debate about. But not if we allow "this is offensive" to get confused with "this is false".

Avoid Women With Horses

2 upvotes · 11 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

One horse = two dogs = ten cats.

Thank a Feminist! I'm sure we can think of many things to thank them for.

2 upvotes · 10 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Okay, please make us a list of the societies that were truly ~~Seottish~~ christian, so we can evaluate whether being a true ~~Seotsman~~ christian is liable to "work out well" for civilization.

I'll help you out with a few questions:

Was Europe truly ~~Seottish~~ christian during the dark ages when it was essentially ruled by the catholic church?

Was Ireland truly ~~Seottish~~ christian during the "troubles"? If so, which side... the catholics or the protestants? Or both?

Were that ~~Seotsmen~~ catholics responsible for the St. Bartholomew's Day massacre truly ~~Seottish~~ christian? How about the ~~Seottish~~ Huguenot victims?

Were the ~~Seotsmen~~ Nazis truly ~~Seottish~~ christian?

Or is it just possible that christian societies have been both good and evil, both stable and unstable, both prosperous and poor, according to other factors that actually have something to do with outcomes?

It doesn't matter what religion we are, or whether we have a religion at all. What matters is whether we are pragmatic and results-oriented, use empiricism to choose our factual beliefs, or not.

Thank a Feminist! I'm sure we can think of many things to thank them for.

2 upvotes · 10 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Hopefully we can be just like ancient Rome just before the fall.

What, you mean christian?

Beta goes on live streamed date, gets destroyed by girl.

2 upvotes · 8 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Is this real or satire?

What does TRP think of escorts?

2 upvotes · 8 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

It depends on how valuable your time is, and how good at game you are.

~~Eseorts~~ Whores cost money. Running game costs time. The better at game you are the less time you have to invest per lay. The more money your time is worth, the less sense it makes to spend time instead of money.

This is why whores are for both men with no game, and men with money and no time.

Want to hear an angry feminista warrior rant about how twerking is wrong because men should have to earn sex with marriage "put a ring on it"?

2 upvotes · 4 September 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

It's interesting how much the feminists are starting to sound like christian fundamentalists.

Fact is, men are not generally stupid.

We know when a woman is sexually attractive, we know when a woman is a good relationship partner, we know when a woman is both, and we know when a woman is neither.

If no one puts a ring on it, it isn't because you shook that ass. It's because you didn't do anything else.

Is there any hope for the lady-bros?

2 upvotes · 2 September 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

More seriously, I think the "yolo" attitude is becoming sadly common.

The problem is that it's inverted. "You only live once" means, you only get one shot at this. Don't screw it up.

Why there cannot be equality

2 upvotes · 1 September 2013 · /r/askTRP

You mistake me.

Using the word "fair" isn't the same as wanting the universe to be fair, and wanting the universe to be fair isn't the same as thinking that it is.

The notion of justice is a piece of social and mental technology, one of the oldest we have. It is in fact, so old that it is ingrained in hominds... studies show that chimps and spider monkeys will forego a personal reward to deny one to others who have behaved "unfairly".

Without this notion of fairness, we do not have a model for incentivizing the behaviours we desire in others.

This not the same as believing the universe is just.

In more concrete terms, what I mean by fairness to both women and men is that both women and men have different needs, and are suited to make different contributions to others, individually or collectively. But if we expect them to do so, we must match incentives to contributions, and the nature of those incentives to needs. Neither men nor women will participate in your "society" if it does not give to them at least as much value as it extracts from them.

Why you all need feminism (in pics)

2 upvotes · 30 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

What is this technology that comes only in pink?

It's not how you look that's important but how you make a man feel.

2 upvotes · 29 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Both are necessary.

A man cannot be happy to be with you if he is ashamed to be seen with you in public, if he is secretly disappointed every time he looks at you, or if he is unable to feel sexually attracted to you.

A man cannot be happy while he is with you if you are bitchy, emasculating, morose, or volatile.

The two also overlap. No fat woman who is in a relationship can call herself a nice person, now matter how she acts. Oh, she may pretend to be nice, but it's because she has to. If she were truly considerate of her partner's happiness and desires, she would not go through life with a body that says "I care about high fructose corn syrup more than I care about my partner's happiness."

Feigning consideration cannot make up for a lack of self-care, because real consideration would motivate that self-care. It's inconsiderate to walk around being ugly. Other people have to look at you.

How would you ladies handle this?

2 upvotes · 29 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

http://www.reddit.com/r/fPUA/comments/1f8fhm/coining_new_fpua_terminology_the_srg_and_how_to/

Posted in asktrp about my overly-controlling mother. Diehard bluepill messages me with "advice." So much cringe.

2 upvotes · 26 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

If individual behaviour was completely uncorrelated to group behaviour, there would be no group behaviour. Stereotypes exist for a reason.

Or perhaps you think Minnesotans are enormously rude? Japanese people are rugged individualists? Rastafarians smoke little tiny joints?

What's important is not to let stereotypes get out of hand, and get to the point where we are unable to spot exceptions.

If you don't like Skyler White, you're a misogynist. (some sanity to be found in comments)

2 upvotes · 25 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

You will like who we tell you to like. You will hate who we will you to hate. You will believe what we want you to believe. You will say what we want you to say.

Resistance is futile. You will be assimilated.

[Mod] Discussing RP ideas with our detractors.

2 upvotes · 24 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Debating with cultural Marxists is like playing chess with a pigeon. It doesn't understand the rules of the game, so you can't even get far enough in for the pigeon to lose.

However, there's a lot of people, mostly women, who call themselves "feminists" more because they are afraid not to than because they believe in patriarchy theory. They've been taught that you're a feminist or a woman-hater, and those are the only two options, and they believed that.

Engaging with them can be productive. I've found that if they are exposed to an anti-feminist view of the world that actually contains some incentives for women, then they see a viable alternative to paying lip service to feminism, and some of them just stop.

I won't even touch the debate subs, though. Those are just bait for people looking for a fight, not an understanding.

[Mod] Discussing RP ideas with our detractors.

2 upvotes · 24 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Sounds like you've never had a cat.

The problem with cat ladies is the ladies, not the cats. Ordinary people with cats understand that cats, like dogs, are animals. They're capable of affection and other emotions, but ultimately, they are not people. So you keep them around because they are entertaining or relaxing to have about, regard them as possessions and not peers, and get rid of them when they get old and have some expensive health problem or other.

But to crazy cat ladies, cats are their babies. They treat them like people, lavish time and care on them even if they cease to provide anything in return, and would never consider having one put down unless it were terminally ill.

In other words, if you're laughing at the antics of your Abyssinian as it tries to catch a laser pointer, you're a cat owner. If you're mixing three different cat foods with two medications to keep life going in some mangy ball of noisy Siamese fur that is old enough to vote if it were a person, you're a crazy cat lady.

Interestingly enough, I've actually run into a few omega males who were crazy dog guys.

[Mod] Discussing RP ideas with our detractors.

2 upvotes · 24 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I think a good rule of thumb is "debate until your adversary starts using dishonest debating tactics. Then mock or ignore."

For example, this is a productive exchange. Notice his dead silence at the end. That might just be the sound of seeds growing.

Now, there's no point arguing with the fractally wrong, and we certainly don't want the place crowded with trolls.

However, I strongly object to the phrase "red pill network", because to me it rings of the SRS "fempire". Yes, we have unpopular ideas. But creating a walled garden to protect those ideas from dissent is repugnant to the notion of free inquiry in pursuit of truth, which is what the notion of a red pill is supposed to be about.

Sure, this is our clubhouse, and anyone who wants to argue with us can and should be pitched out if they don't act civilized and follow the rules of debate. But just as men are forged and tempered in the fires of competition, so must our ideas be forged and refined in the fires of conflict.

This applies, however, to debaters in here, and to those with other views in reddit in general, however. There's no point in engaging with thebluepill, SRS, radfems, etc.

Divorce Rates: Just 1 Reason Why Women Should Have Never Been Allowed to Vote

2 upvotes · 20 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

It's highly likely that Louis CK is quite redpill but he puts on a bluepill act because he knows his audience.

That is possible of anyone who isn't being visibly hurt by apparent blue pill toxicity. I have a personal suspicion that Barack Obama is a red pill atheist who has ruthlessly but sensibly chosen to throw his entire sex under the bus for his own personal benefit.

And while one can hardly call Hugo Schwyzer unharmed by his extended affair with the role of feminist uncle tom, still I cannot help but think it was much more about Hugo Schwyzer's career than any real conviction.

And obvious red pill choosers like Roosh have also chosen, on occasion, to resort to feminist-like shaming tactics so that the manosphere can remain what is good for Roosh, at the expense of what is good for men in general.

Point is, taking the red pill does not make someone any more honest than they were before. We always must be aware of the gap between what someone says, and what they believe. Their beliefs, and values are revealed by watching their actions, not listening to their words.

In fact, their beliefs and values only matter because these are revealed in their actions.

Can The Red Pill Subreddit Survive?

2 upvotes · 18 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Now this is weird. A few days ago he was characterizing /r/Mensrights as a bunch of worthless cowardly whiners. Now he's talking like they've been adulterated, a tacit admission there was something to adulterate.

The basic point is sound, however. The fact that reddit's administration seems to have certain cultural Marxist leanings, coupled with the fact that our ideas are sociopolitical dynamite, does raise some concern. The threat of simple removal is real.

But I disagree about trolls and blue pill talking points. I think we need opposition, because opposition builds strength. I think we need tourists, because tourists become students. I am not made uncomfortable by blue pill talking points. They are a chance to teach and correct, and if that teaching and correction is rejected with invective, they are a chance to defeat and humiliate, to insert the righteous blade of shame to the hilt in another defective aberration of cultural Marxism.

Yes, there are threats to our survival, but the proper response to a threat is oppose it and grow strong, not lock one's self away in a walled garden.

The Commando's Prayer

Give me, my God, what you still have;
give me what no one asks for.
I do not ask for wealth, nor success,
nor even health.

People ask you so often, God, for all that,
that you cannot have any left.
Give me, my God, what you still have. Give me what people refuse to accept from you.
I want insecurity and disquietude;
I want turmoil and brawl.

And if you should give them to me,
my God, once and for all,
let me be sure to have them always,
for I will not always have the courage to ask for them.

"Year 2060 – The end of feminism due to fem-bots and artificial uteri." It's kind of an interesting read/perspective. BUT, the comments at the end by angry feminists are FULL of hilarious irony. The responses by men, pointing out the irony, is pretty amusing.

2 upvotes · 16 August 2013 · /r/MensRights

Good point, but the women fantasizing about a men-free society are not necessarily the same ones commenting here.

However, I'd happily wager quite a bit that the women commenting here didn't go to the feminist blogs fantasizing about a men-free society and have the same sort of temper tantrum.

Red pill ladies, help! Is my boyfriend wasting my time?

2 upvotes · 15 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Insisting that you get 'better' treatment is not living in reality.

No, the reality is that people don't do things without incentives.

You can stand around and pretend that women can just say "take it or leave it", and men will be forced to take it. But that's your hamster talking, busily spinning out the assumption that marriage has to somehow happen, and that if you just bluff hard enough, we'll have to fold.

But you can't bluff without any cards. Men don't have to get married, because there's nothing left in marriage that we need. Sure, we need and want things, but marriage no longer guarantees them as part of the contract.

So, the only thing left for women to do is threaten to leave a relationship unless the man agrees to sign that slave contract. Men with options will laugh. Men without options will capitulate.

And the men who still willingly get married, well, they are the ones who are unaware of the realities of the situation.

Sure, I may get too old to chase college girls someday, but then I'll just be single and alone, instead of divorced and alone. And single and alone is a whole lot richer... which is the only real security anyone can have.

I mentioned on an earlier thread (not to you) that whenever I see 'submit' here I just map it to cooperate.

Hey, whatever keeps your hamster happy.

Red pill ladies, help! Is my boyfriend wasting my time?

2 upvotes · 14 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Since we discuss reality here - life is often not fair.

And beta males accept this with a "Thank you, ma'am, may I have another?".

Alphas insist that they're going to get better treatment out of life.

Unless, of course, you consider any man willing to get married as not worthy.

Yeah, pretty much.

Any man who accepts Marriage 2.0 is either ignorant of its pitfalls, or he is a chump.

Tell me, what is ANY man's incentive to enter into Marriage 2.0 with you, as opposed to an LTR without signing any papers? What does it give him?

Nothing.

So why would he accept it? Just because you want it? If he does that, he is submitting to you.

Real men have curves!

2 upvotes · 14 August 2013 · /r/MensRights

It's an interesting idea, but it doesn't actually address the real situation of fat people.

A man who looks like that, then gets fat, still has all those muscles underneath. Which is going to make it much easier to lose that fat.

There's fat and strong, and then there's fat and weak. They may look alike from the outside, but there's a hell of a difference.

Attitudes to successful women?

2 upvotes · 12 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

I would have posted this in r/theredpill but as well as men who simply seem to believe in the Red Pill theory, there also seemed to be a lot of men who, due to whatever reason, seem to look down on or dislike women as a whole so I didn't know if I would get a sensible answer there.

2_2

Also I wasn't sure if I am allowed to post there as a female.

2_2

What happens if a woman happens to be a smart, highly educated (BSc) successful woman pulling a high salary and isn't sure or is certain she doesn't not want children?

What do you mean, "what happens"? She goes on working on her career, and puts off having children. Then she hits 30-35, and one of two things happens. She either decides she wanted children after all, in which case she's out of luck. This is the most common scenario, but it's not universal. Or she doesn't change her mind, and things go on as before.

As she gets older in general, she can't get hookup sex with the caliber of guy she's used to. This isn't a problem if she's married, but she's less likely to be married if she a career woman with no interest in kids. The latter she waits to marry, the less attractive her choices will be. She may not be able to marry at all.

She might be okay with all of this. Or not.

Admittedly I don't know much about TRP but from reading a lot of what is posted on r/theredpill everything is based on the fact men will be providing for the woman.

I'm sorry, you seem to be lost. This is r/TRP, not /r/religiousfundamentalistconservative. We don't advocate a lifestyle here. We don't advocate anything, really. We just have some information about the realities of the sexual marketplace, which implies that some actions might have consequences that, you, personally, might not like.

Some principles:

- Women's happiness tends to come from relationships, not achievements. Women who sacrifice relationships to careers tend to not end up happy.
- A woman can have a career at any time, but securing a good marriage/LTR becomes much more difficult later in life. Having a child becomes absurdly more difficult late in life. It might not make sense to do the thing you can do at any time before the thing with the fast approaching deadline. It's like cleaning your house from top to bottom the day before your final exams.
- Men are human beings with wants, needs, desires, and dreams, who cannot be taken for granted. Women who assume that a suitable man, or even a man at all, will be available at any point in her life, and that he will fulfill his traditional responsibilities whether she does or not... those woman are likely to be disappointed when it's too late to do anything about it.

Can you see how none of these says what you should do, just that some actions may have consequences you do not like?

The difference between submissive and obedient.

2 upvotes · 11 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

The word "manipulative" is really just a word we use to put negative spin on persuasion we don't like.

"Deputy Beats Up Dad After Discovering Sick Family Love Triangle"

2 upvotes · 10 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

My first read of this headline: "Deputy Beats Up Dad After Discovering Sick Family Love Triangle".

My reaction: "Why the fuck is this beta motherfucker beating people up for having group sex?"

My second read: "Deputy Beats Up HIS Dad After Discovering Sick Family Love Triangle"

My reaction: "Whoa. That's messed up, dude."

Relax. Your ex probably isn't swallowing alpha cum.

2 upvotes · 10 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Why should I care if my ex is gargling alpha semen, beta semen, the semen of a vet clinic full of dogs, or no semen at all?

What are your favorite RedPill / Manosphere / Game, or related blogs? Here are some of mine.

2 upvotes · 10 August 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Martial arts instructor here.

Don't do this unless you have logistics ready to go for hiding a body. Blood chokes are fairly safe when performed occasionally under controlled conditions by an expert.

A novice is asking for trouble.

It's also not a good idea to do this to someone regularly.

Wind chokes are safe, though.

Is it too late?

2 upvotes · 6 August 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

http://www.reddit.com/r/RedPillWomen/comments/1j9tg3/too_concrete_too_literal_take_a_step_back/

I always hated the "False Equivalency" comic.

2 upvotes · 4 August 2013 · /r/MensRights

True that.

Subreddit moderation is for keeping a subreddit cleared of trolls, off-topic posts, and other noise. Not for creating a movement, enforcing an agenda, or for avenging your wounded ego.

I always hated the "False Equivalency" comic.

2 upvotes · 4 August 2013 · /r/MensRights

He showed up, unbanned me, then vanished again the moment original mod rebanned me.

None of them are on the same page, or even in the same book.

I always hated the "False Equivalency" comic.

2 upvotes · 4 August 2013 · /r/MensRights

Didn't "50 Shades of Grey" prove the general (not universal, but predominant) female attraction to powerful, dominant men?

Careful, pretty soon you'll be sounding like those horrible, evil misogynists over the attheredpill.

National Post | How could a movement mandated to serve women's best interests get it so wrong? : TheRedPill

2 upvotes · 31 July 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Where does an uneducated 18 year old go about meeting financially successful 30 year olds in who are okay with them having children in the next 5 years, staying home the next 5, and then probably not contributing any meaningful income for another 5? 15 years of 100% support is a LOT to ask of a guy, financially and emotionally.

Well spotted. There's a couple of problems here.

First of all, as professional jobs require more and more education on average, 30 is increasingly becoming too young to afford a housewife, because it takes still more time to get ahead. These days, women of 18 would be better served looking for men in their 40s to be their husband and the father of their children.

Secondly, women of 18 are heavily discouraged from mating with older men. It's not that young women don't find older men attractive. But they are told that they must develop relationships with men of their own age group, and that any older man who shows interest must be a "creepy pervert". In casual conversation, the term pedophile has been redefined from its correct meaning of "one with a pathological exclusive sexual attraction to prepubescent children" to "anyone over 18 showing any sexual interest in anyone younger than 18", and is showing signs of gradually turning into "anyone who shows sexual interest in someone younger than themselves by more than 15 years".

Worse yet, this contempt for age-differential relationships is starting to enter the law. The age of consent has been ludicrously high for some time (stripping it of any relationship with the age of sexual maturity, the age of greatest female sex drive, and the age of greatest female fertility), but now "Romeo and Juliet" laws give an explicit exception to allow underage girls to date men... but only the youngest of younger men, who have no careers, no money, no maturity, wisdom, and guidance to offer, and even no interest in settling down to raise children for many years yet. Young men have little or nothing to offer young women, and given what women really find attractive (confidence, status, game), they can only compete for young women's attention if older men are kept off their radar (something our culture largely succeeds in doing).

Third, marriages take time to settle on. Any sensible man must know a woman for a year or two before making the final choice of her as his mate and the mother of his children. So if a woman of 18 is to marry a man in 30s or 40s, a girl of 16 must be allowed to date one. Can you imagine the pitchforks and torches?

Fourth, Marriage 2.0 is untenable, and becomes more untenable the more mercurial and less trustworthy the woman is, since she wields all the legal power. Therefore to marry an 18 year old is a great risk for a man in his 30s or 40s... he risks losing everything he spent decades building, not to mention his children, based upon the whims of a teenager.

Since this is a place to discuss strategy, what does RPW think of my situation? 22F, has had two sexual partners, sterilized in June.

2 upvotes · 30 July 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

Much of the things I've read about TRP involve women wanting to have children. I think you can see where I could get confused about what to do. Does this make me a strange outlier?

http://www.reddit.com/r/RedPillWomen/comments/1j9tg3/too_concrete_too_literal_take_a_step_back/

Saw this on /r/cringepics. It just bothers me people actually act like that.

2 upvotes · 21 July 2013 · /r/MensRights

So what?

If a woman thinks men are nothing but a problem, let her go live without them. I guarantee she will need something from a man at some point, and I guarantee I will never need anything from her.

It's Time to End Feminism — But Only in the Western World

2 upvotes · 21 July 2013 · /r/MensRights

No. Some parts of the world need women's right activism. No part of the world needs feminism.

a GREAT argument for men's rights (by a woman)

2 upvotes · 20 July 2013 · /r/MensRights

True, but I don't mind that. I want someone fighting for me to use any weapon at her disposal.

I'm a redpill woman that just got married, but my husband wants to give his ex-wife his sperm. Am I being selfish for thinking this is weird?

2 upvotes · 20 July 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

This is not only weird, it's dangerous.

It doesn't matter if she swears she doesn't need money. It doesn't matter if she swears she will never ask for money. It doesn't matter if she signs a witnessed document swearing she will never take money.

If she ever changes her mind, a family court judge will wipe his ass with that document. There is no way to get out of child support except going on the lam. There are male victims of rape out there who are paying child support to their rapists. Some of them were underage victims of statutory rape. Doesn't matter.

Legally, there is no "Man's right to choose". Only women are allowed to have reproductive rights.

Read this: http://www.reddit.com/r/science/comments/7x78v/what_do_modern_men_want_in_women/c07omtc

Cosmopolitan (women's mag): How common is female on male DV?

2 upvotes · 19 July 2013 · /r/MensRights

So just how prevalent is domestic violence against a male partner? Many people are of the opinion that men "can't be physically abused" the way men "can't be raped," because men are generally stronger than and can subsequently overpower women. Incidentally, neither of these are true.

Awesome.

But it bears repeating just why this is true.

The size and strength of a victim of DV is irrelevant because victims of DV don't fight back. If they did, it wouldn't be happening. It doesn't matter how well you can fight if you don't actually do it.

what men are really attracted to...it's not just curves, it's having a "tight" body profile... which on a deeper level reveals a cultural "fear of chaos".

2 upvotes · 17 July 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

So we don't like fat women because of Plato?

I don't buy it. How do you explain the way that this preference is found in pretty much all human cultures?

Attraction isn't cultural. It's mostly genetic.

Why do you think women need to take the Red Pill?

2 upvotes · 15 July 2013 · /r/RedPillWomen

From your point of view, from my point of view, or from society's point of view? Because these are three very different answers.

Double Standards

2 upvotes · 14 July 2013 · /r/MensRights

... and when she evaluates you according to your wealth and success, she's not objectifying you at all. She's just attracted to ambitious, competent men.

"Even if I did have a bf, he was a famous celebrity and it was intensely sexual and hot"

2 upvotes · 24 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Do we know this? How do we know this?

"As a man, I want to say that not all men are like this. I and other friends of mine don't understand this kind of thinking."

2 upvotes · 17 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

People who like promiscuity tend to not stop liking it just because you put on a wedding.

Exactly.

Sluthood is about partner-switching, not sexual adventurousness. A woman who fucks lots of people in rapid succession will continue to do so in a long term relationship. A woman who has lots and lots of enthusiastic kinky sex with whoever her current male partner is will continue to do so in a long term relationship. A woman who has little interest in sex will continue to do so in a long term relationship.

'So I said. "No, it hurts." And he said "I'm going to count to three and then I'm going to go all the way in. I'm going to push it right into you. OK?"' - A feminist discusses one her favourite sexual experiences.

2 upvotes · 10 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

"I'm not sexually submissive! I'm a strong, independent feminist woman! Really! Why are you laughing?"

Men: you don't dislike plastic surgery because it looks weird. You dislike it because you hate old women and plastic surgery makes it harder to figure out who to hate.

2 upvotes · 7 June 2013 · /r/MensRights

No, I hate plastic surgery when I notice it, because if it's done properly, I don't.

Does anyone here have experience with MKP.org?

2 upvotes · 4 June 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

How Much Does It Cost To Attend?

NWTA tuition varies from location to location based on local facility costs and cost of living. The widest price variance in 2009 was in the US with the average cost a little over $650 and a range from $575 to $750. In Canada the price was CAD$650, In French-Speaking Europe € 520, In Australia AUD$985, in South Africa ZAR3800, in German-Speaking Europe € 530, In New Zealand NZD$795 and in the United Kingdom £595. These prices are not guaranteed, but sure to find out the exact current price for the specific NWTA you are interested in, visit the Communities Page and find the contact listing for the host community you've selected to attend the NWTA with. The representative you speak with will have the most current data.

...

Mature Masculinity defines itself apart from the old ways of being a man; the rugged go-it-alone cowboy, the dominating macho man, the overly rational cold calculating thinker, the little boy in a man's body, the overly sensitive man who uses his emotions to manipulate those around him, the morally bankrupt soldier of fortune. We recognize these aspects of ourselves as men, we all carry some of these shadows. We also realize that in order to truly succeed in our culture, these old ways are no longer effective or productive. We need a more integrated approach to our lives that does not abuse ourselves or others, and recognizes that we are a global culture with problems that will not be solved by the next block-buster cartoon hero or charismatic leader. We need men of strength, dedication and integrity, working together with women to solve the problems of our time.

...

Accountability – We do what we say we will do, and don't do what we say we will not do. We take responsibility for our actions, our thoughts and our feelings.

Authenticity – We tell the truth about who we are. We strive to be our best selves.

Compassion – We empathize, connecting to the suffering of others, and we act with love in the world.

Generosity – We recognize that giving of ourselves from our abundance brings more for all. We take on missions of service in the world and work together to make a positive difference. Integrity – We live our values. We seek wholeness.

Leadership – We step forward in our lives to offer compassionate leadership, seeking understanding and community rather than domination or oppression.

Multicultural Awareness – We recognize that in our world it is imperative that we be able to live in harmony with people who are different than ourselves. We strive to understand ourselves and others and to celebrate our differences.

Respect – We pay attention to the impacts of our actions on others and we treat others with honor.

...

What if I decide to leave? How will I get home?

When you arrive at the training site you will be asked if you are willing to do everything necessary to get what you came for. If you decide you want to leave, one of the weekend leaders is likely to challenge you to stay by reminding you of this commitment.

Many men experience a time on the weekend when they no longer want to be there. Some ask to leave, and then decide to stay. The vast majority are glad they did. This is part of the process; we expect it to happen, just as many of us experience days when we would rather leave our jobs, leave our relationships, run away from our responsibilities. We will ask you if this is one of those times that staying might serve you more than leaving. And then, if you decide to leave, we will help you do that. If you decide to leave the training, we will either return your keys to you if you drove, help you make phone calls to arrange transportation, or have a staff member drive you home. You are free to go, and we will ask you if it's what you really want for yourself.

...

Why animal names?

In all cultures throughout the world, animals represent distinct archetypal symbols and ideas. The American Bald Eagle, the rattlesnake, the loyal dog. In many cultures, men and women adopted (or received through a ritual) a 'spirit' animal or a 'totem' that represented a companion, a helper and a reflection of who they are in the world. Men who attend the New Warrior Training choose an animal to represent and reinforce the learning that they receive from the process. For some men these animals serve as a reminder of what they aspire to in the world. For some men the animal names mean very little, but are fun. Often they change with time as men continue to grow.

<http://i0.kym-cdn.com/photos/images/original/000/201/508/221435NothingtodoHereGifMadethiscuzIwas2479d82822723.gif>

Sir Patrick Stewart: it is never the woman's fault in domestic violence

2 upvotes · 31 May 2013 · /r/MensRights

He didn't say "the victim is never at fault". He said "the woman is never at fault".

Sexism in comics

2 upvotes · 31 May 2013 · /r/MensRights

https://encyclopedia.dramatica.se/I_am_silly!

Alpha Game: Nihilists vs Civilizationists

2 upvotes · 28 May 2013 · /r/askTRP

MGTOWs cannot bring society down by "withdrawing their services, their seed, their paternal support, and their economic surplus" because they can and will be replaced by technological alternatives.

Who is going to design, build, program, maintain, and repair these technological alternatives?

You are eerily echoing lesbian separatist fedfem platforms, here (except they are saying "should" where you say "will"). Every fadfem agenda or explicit platform I read seems to contain these two sneaky little words:

Total automation.

What does that mean? It means "build your robot replacements, men, then quietly become extinct". It is a tacit admission that women cannot, will not, fend for themselves, ever. Quite an eye-opening thing for a radfem to admit.

But this future the radfems desire and you loathe, but fear as well, cannot come to pass. Because only non-engineers could ever conceive of it.

People who design, build, and maintain technology know that automation is a tool, not a worker. As society becomes more and more automated, male physical labour becomes less necessary, but male work becomes more necessary, because women are even worse at programming than they are at heavy lifting. They can become "Rosie the Riveter" at need, but they won't become "Rosie the Electrical Engineer".

Pardon me if already asked and answered, but can women be Red Pill? What are the characteristics? Does it manifest as enhanced femininity without the bullshit damseling and pearl clutching crap? How can you spot one?

2 upvotes · 28 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

http://www.reddit.com/r/fPUA/comments/1e9fz1/attracting_alphas_why_do_men_hate_us/

The Keynesian Sexual Marketplace - "First off, I would like to point out that the common definitions of 'Alpha' and 'Beta' are wrong. This is put forth by the game community to mask the fact that most who consider themselves 'Alpha' are actually Omegas."

2 upvotes · 28 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

to me, alpha and beta describe traits, behaviors, actions. at any time anyone can be/do/have any of these traits, the trick is obviously pick the right one at the right time.

Precisely.

Think of them as pieces of software that exist in all our brains which we can run a lot, a little, or not at all. They all evolved for a reason.

Alpha is for capitalizing on existing social dominance. It's the way you behave when you have the money, the power, and the hottest girl. It's for being the boss.

Omega is for securing social dominance. It's the way you behave when you have little or nothing, but you're going to take risks and upset the social order to get the money, the power, the hottest girl. It's for starting revolutions.

Beta is sucking up to Alphas or Omegas . It's for persuading someone successfully running Alpha or Omega that you are useful and should be cut in for a share of the pie in return for your support of his regime.

Zeta is submission. It's for persuading someone successfully running Alpha or Omega not to stomp on your neck and take your woman, your home, and your life.

Marriage isn't bad...

2 upvotes · 25 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Yeah. Couldn't risk it.

I Need Feminism Because...

2 upvotes · 24 May 2013 · /r/MensRights

Hi, SRS.

Do you really expect to waltz in here, tell us we hate women, and expect us to take your word on what our feelings are over... our feelings of what our feelings are?

Isn't this something that you fine folks, in your habitual terminology, would describe as derailing and tone policing?

Most pathetic blue-pill example I've ever seen. Telling a girl you've never met that she's "perfect"

2 upvotes · 20 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Watch how the girl struggles to get him to see how this looks from her point of view, and he just isn't listening.

Men's Health - Just Confirming Beta Acceptance

2 upvotes · 17 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

And Darwin wasn't a social Darwinist. Your point?

Odds are that this subreddit is undergoing this as well. So much for Reddit being a site for discussion and debate.

2 upvotes · 17 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

True.

However, just because the scientific is not politically correct does not mean that being politically incorrect makes you scientific.

I used to work on a site called Cluster Mag. They just unveiled their most recent issue: Not-Men. I thought /r/mensrights would(n't) appreciate it.

2 upvotes · 16 May 2013 · /r/MensRights

There's a certain thing that post-modernists and other cultural Marxists do.

By combining maximum vagueness with maximum pretentiousness, they hope to silence critics by making them too afraid to speak, lest they appear stupid by having failed to understand something profound.

But there is no profundity in cultural Marxism, and even if there were, the onus of making communication understandable rests upon the speaker, not the audience. If you are too cunning to be understood, then you suck and deserve derision.

UW student activist Meg Lanker-Simons' Facebook rape threat was a hoax to frame conservatives

2 upvotes · 14 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Well, if he changed that awful haircut, yeah. Then he'd have to develop some game.

And, in fact, she would look alright if she put down her ~~fork~~ shovel and lost about 100 lbs. Then she would have to lose the bitchy, entitled, toxic attitude.

The horrible thing here is not two ugly people... it's two people who have been made ugly by an ideology when they weren't already and didn't have to be. They can claim it's their choice, but we all know she'd much rather have this, and he'd much rather have that.

It's not the genetic rejects who wanted to overthrow the standards of beauty, attractiveness, and relationship happiness that make me sad. It's the perfectly ordinary, non-defective normals they managed to drag down with them.

Should I be honorable with women?

2 upvotes · 13 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Human beings cannot talk or even think without generalizing. The very act of abstract thinking, of using one symbol to represent many things, is an act of generalization.

Pointing out that a statement is a generalization is therefore fatuous, especially when it's done in an attempt to refute a statement that aims to predict the behaviour of a whole class of things.

If I said that tables are flat, you not argue that we are unable to manufacture perfectly flat surfaces, or that some tables have recessed areas, etc. If you did so, you would most likely be denounced as a tiresome quibbler by anyone listening, because you clearly were looking for even trivial excuses to argue with someone's premises and thus prevent him from expressing a point whose basic truth you could not refute?

If men lacked all ability to see things from others' point of view, I would not have been able to explain women's point of view in the post above. You do really assume I am so much of a moron as to not have spotted this?

Nevertheless, my point stands, because it has great power to predict the behaviour of men and women, which is what the word "truth" is really all about.

Many Asian men date pretty white girls. Don't believe the hype. A few honest tips.

2 upvotes · 13 May 2013 · /r/seduction

"You can overcome racial handicaps with good game."

No nothing new here. Nothing we don't already know.

Discussion Thread: The Red Pill and other "unacceptable ideas"... Voting.

2 upvotes · 10 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I don't happen to subscribe to racist ideologies myself, but I feel like, having taken the red pill, I can no longer dismiss such ideas out of hand as evil, but have to use evidence to refute them as wrong.

Sour grapes and ad hominem abound as Abercrombie & Fitch CEO explains why he doesn't cater to fat chicks

2 upvotes · 8 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Your dimensions are slightly off, but I take your point.

One of my karate training partners some years ago was a six foot woman. Weighed about 185 pounds. While she wasn't precisely to my personal sexual taste (I like 'em short), she was certainly quite aesthetically pleasing to look at.

She just looked like a scaled-up version of a pretty girl.

Beta Disambiguation

2 upvotes · 8 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

The State is the Ultimate Alpha male.

Endlessly provides and never gets anything back?

Ultimate beta male orbiter.

Feminist fakes her own rape threat, caught.

2 upvotes · 2 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

It works both ways. You make a claim that I'm wrong, EG: Denial of my claim. It's still a claim, a counter-claim if you will. I've always felt it's a shitty way of doing things, as you're making a claim the same as I am. But oh well. Who cares?

Sigh.

What are they teaching in schools these days? Have you never learned the scientific method?

That's not a rhetorical question. Please tell me whether you have ever learned the scientific method or not.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Null_hypothesis

This doesn't even make sense. You can be put onto the sex offender list for being seen through your own home's window. You can be put onto the sex offender list for urinating or defecating in a forest.

Exactly my point... the people who dreamed up such a thing have zero credibility. And they are the same people who are telling us that rape is about violence and power, not sex.

Doesn't it strike you as a little inconsistent that someone will insist that rape isn't about sex, and then turn around and insist on putting rapists on the sex offender list?

Does that not give you a vague feeling of unease? Anyone? Anyone? Bueller?

Feminist fakes her own rape threat, caught.

2 upvotes · 2 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Quote a reasonable amount of credible research to disprove it, then.

Here, read this. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Philosophical_burden_of_proof

You made the claim. I denied the claim. You have to provide evidence. I don't have to provide jack shit. That's how it works.

Repetitiousness alone isn't credible enough

Glad you at least admit that.

but when most therapists and law enforcement officials I've met, personally or through proxy, say that it's violence/control that they get off to, not the sex itself, then I'm more inclined to believe them than some random off the internet with zero qualifications.

Except that this is not how science is done. If those experts possess any scientific qualifications, they know this. No PhD is required to be allowed to say "Prove it" or "citation needed".

And law enforcement officials and therapists are not scientists. They're just repeating what they've been told.

But why are you trying so damn hard to say I'm wrong without actually providing anything credible?

I don't have to provide anything credible. I don't have to provide anything at all. See "burden of proof", above.

It's like you have to validate yourself. "I must be correct!"

Correct? I'm not asserting anything other than the null hypothesis. Have you never had a science course?

The whole idea behind taking a red pill is that you want to see the world as it is, rather than as everybody tells you. That means you have to be skeptical.

So if someone tells me that the universe was made in seven days by a big invisible magic dude, I take a red pill and say, "Bullshit. Prove it."

And if someone tells me that there is a systematic effort by men to oppress all women everywhere, and this is the only thing that makes men and women different, I take a red pill and say, "Bullshit. Prove it."

And if people tell me that something is a "sex crime", and that offenders should be placed on the "sex offender list", and that it can only happen to people of one particular "sex", and then those same people tell me it's "has nothing to do with sex", I take a red pill.

And I say...

"Bullshit."

"Prove it."

Dem resolution warns climate change could push women to 'transactional sex'

2 upvotes · 2 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

They could always just do farm labour like the men would be doing. How do they think the men would be getting those resources they would be trading to the women for sex?

Let's face it, if a woman can do anything a man can do, then a poor woman has all the options a poor man has, plus one.

And if poor women keep choosing sex for money over work for money, then the conclusion we are driven toward is that whorin' beats workin'.

This dissappeared over night, too important to lose, timeline of SRS

2 upvotes · 2 May 2013 · /r/MensRights

The difference is that mensrights is a discussion group, full of people with varying opinions, and SRS is a cult. Cultists do what they are told to. It's easy to get them all marching in the same direction.

What I discovered after two weeks in America...

2 upvotes · 1 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Yes, I believe it literally means "tuna". It's the quality of just lying there like a dead fish.

What I discovered after two weeks in America...

2 upvotes · 1 May 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Yes, apparently some j-dudes don't like it when chicks know how to work a pole. I imagine their thinking goes along the lines of, "WTF! You're a slut! Oh no, how can my beta ass keep up with this?"

Either that or they are terrified of not being the man in this interaction that any movement on her part invokes his worries that he isn't really in charge. Perhaps.

Here's something that I bet you've never heard about Japanese girls though: they will all suck your dick. I have yet to meet a single woman who expressed even the slightest hesitation in slobbering on my knob.

Is that so rare here? I pretty much consider blowjobs to completion to be par for the course. I consider myself easygoing because I don't mind if she spits instead of swallowing.

No blowjobs would be an instant deal-breaker.

But perhaps you are saying more than that. Perhaps you are also saying they are all enthusiastic cocksuckers?

Richard Dawkins on Feminism Invading Science

2 upvotes · 24 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

You make some cute arguments about chess, using this as a supposed analogy for ... something. It is not entirely clear what, which does make my job a bit difficult.

Perhaps an analogy to an abstraction which could represent any formal representational system or process was a bit abstract for you to follow. Let's focus on science, then, as one thing which postmodernists attempt to deconstruct, to which chess might be an analogy.

In academic fields all is fair game. There should be nothing that is sacred.

Just because something isn't immune to criticism doesn't mean certain criticisms aren't stupid. Postmodernists are certainly free to criticize science for "privileging empiricism". And we are free to point and laugh.

Which comes back to my statement about how criticism of science needs to be relevant to the reason we do science. This is true for the same reason that this:

Critiques need not speak to motives. It could, instead, point to a flaw in the game.

... is dead wrong. A thing cannot have a flaw unless it has a purpose. A thing cannot have a purpose unless it possesses or is imbued with a motivation.

Chess can only be "flawed" to the extent that it fails in the purposes for which we play chess. Science can only be flawed to the extent that it fails in the purposes for which we engage in science.

When we say "flaw", what we really mean is that something isn't optimized for whatever purpose we are assigning to it.

Which brings us here:

so far, postmodernist critiques of things like rational discourse, empirical verification, the scientific method, deductive reasoning, didactic debate, and the like... have not addressed themselves to the reasons why people do these things. They poke at the concept of truth, and our methods for getting at it, which is okay, but they're poking it with the wrong stick.

Can you offer a real argument as to why this is the wrong stick? And why one shouldn't question the concept of "truth."

Truth is a word we invented. When we start talking about what it means, we are talking about what we meant. The proper question to be asking is not "How can anyone show that there is such a thing as 'truth'?", it's "why did we invent the word 'truth', and what does that concept do for us?"

This is why I talk about motivations being of primary importance. The word truth is an encoding of the motive for which we do science... Power.

We do science to get control over our universe. We say we do science to get at truth. This suggests that "truth" means "power".

And it does. The word truth actually means "predictive power". A "true" statement is one that has the power to predict future observations. And with truth comes the control that we desire over our environment. Cars drive, planes fly, satellites communicate, your computer displays these words. All because we have statements with the predictive power to tell us that these things will happen if we do this, this and this.

So arguing about whether truth exists is poking science with the wrong stick. Of course there are statements with predictive power. Of course we have a systematic, reliable way of generating them. Duh.

So what would be the right stick to poke science with? A criticism that's relevant to the purpose for which we do science. Power. "Science doesn't empower us as much as it could because it fails to generate truth in the most efficient manner we can. I propose an alternate system which does X, Y, and Z..." would be a legitimate criticism.

All you would have to do is design something better than science.

Why aren't other criticisms valid? Because they are pointless. They do not help us improve science, nor do they suggest something better for the purpose, with which we might replace it. So far as I can tell, the only purpose postmodernism has accomplished to advance the careers of postmodernists.

Richard Dawkins on Feminism Invading Science

2 upvotes · 22 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

To understand why debating postmodernists is a waste of time, let's first explain what an ad hominem argument actually is, and what it is not. It is not simply an insult, or unflattering characterization. It is a logical argument of the form "proposition X is not true, because the proponent of X has trait Y". This is a logical fallacy because the universe of logical discourse does not include proponents and their traits, only propositions.

For example, the statement "Whisper is a misogynist, so there's no need to listen to his nonsense." is an ad hominem logical fallacy. "Whisper is spouting misogynist nonsense." isn't... but it's the closely related logical fallacy of characterization.

"Arguing with postmodernist is like playing chess with a pigeon." does not take the form "proposition X is not true, because the proponent of X has trait Y". It is not a statement about truth-value at all. It is a statement about advisability. To wit, it is the observation that engaging in rational debate with postmodernists is fruitless, because postmodernists are unwilling or unable to play by the rules of rational debate, much like pigeons at a chessboard.

One cannot even defeat a pigeon at chess, because the rules of chess require one's opponent to make a valid move before the game can continue. A pigeon is unable to do this. If one were to sit down at a chessboard with a pigeon, and move one's white king's pawn two spaces forward, the pigeon would respond by cooing, or pecking about the board at discarded breadcrumbs, or whatever else it is that pigeons do. The game could not continue, because the pigeon could not make a move. Pigeons not only lack the chessplaying skill needed to win, they lack the chessplaying skill needed to lose.

Similarly, if one were to sit down at a chessboard with a human being, and that human being were to respond to "king's pawn to king's fourth" by attempting to deconstruct chess, arguing that chess was racist because white moves first, or male-centric because it implies a competition with one winner, or that it privileged the frame of Cartesian square coordinate systems over concentric circles, or whatever else he might think of to say about how chess could be different, then, as a chessplayer, he would be no different than a pigeon. The game would not continue, and he would lack the even the necessary prowess to successfully lose.

About this time you are perhaps objecting that this man did not necessarily show up to play a game of chess. But then why is he bothering people who did? If he wants chessplayers to sit up and take notice of his deconstruction of chess, he needs to say something relevant to their motives for playing.

And so far, postmodernist critiques of things like rational discourse, empirical verification, the scientific method, deductive reasoning, didactic debate, and the like... have not addressed themselves to the reasons why people do these things. They poke at the concept of truth, and our methods for getting at it, which is okay, but they're poking it with the wrong stick.

Until they understand, accept, and work within the real reasons people care about truth, talking to them is pretty much a waste of time.

Natural Red pill guy refuses to commit, grll powa! (tm) explosion in the comments

2 upvotes · 21 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Oooh. Popcorn. Who's bringing the popcorn?

How to rebuild patriarchy in two easy steps

2 upvotes · 17 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I'd like to see you really dismantle this if you disagree, not just dismiss it.

I'll do it for him.

Children are not property. Even if they were, they would no longer be property when they are adults.

As such, your college-age children have the same rights, freedoms (and accompanying responsibilities) that you do. This means:

- If you have the right to choose your religion (or lack thereof) and values, so do they.
- If you have the right to hear any information or opinions you want in the process of making that choice, so do they.
- If you have the right to listen, or not listen, to what you choose, so do they.

Ultimately, censorship is a tool of blue pill enforcement. Since true ideas always win against false ones, when evidence is compared (this is the definition of a true idea), only false ideas can benefit from censorship.

So professors can say what they want to students. Yes, this includes nonsense like "women's studies/feminism". The evil of women's studies programs is not that they express their incorrect and harmful opinions, but that they suppress dissenting opinions.

In any conflict between two opposing ideas, look for the one which tries to censor its opponent, and you will have found the side that is misbehaving and needs to be stopped.

In the sexual politics debate, this side is feminism.

In religion, it's christianity.

The Straw That Broke The Camel's Back

2 upvotes · 11 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Women who don't like "guys who do pickup" are like guys who like "women who don't wear makeup".

All the women they do think are "pretty without makeup" are good enough at applying the stuff so he doesn't consciously notice.

Is there a point to subscribing to TRP?

2 upvotes · 10 April 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

But I find that coming back here frequently really does not benefit me in any way. It just makes me more bitter about women.

Anger and bitterness is a temporary side effect of redpill consumption.

You see, when you get angry about women being selfish bags of goo, rather than sweet Disney princesses made of stardust and angel feathers, it's because you are still expecting better of them.

The problem isn't women, it's the way your expectations of women have been inflated by the bluepill world.

The women around us, here in the first world, are spoiled brats. No matter how old they get, they are still not, in the colloquial sense of the word, adults, because they have been sheltered from harsh realities, sequestered from demands and expectations, and had their whims overmuch catered to.

They've been told over and over they are special just for existing.

What else can one reasonably think is going to happen? If men were treated like that, we'd be big babies, too.

The solution is to stop expecting women to be adults already, and start training the salvageable ones in the principles of adulthood.

Feminist says "man flu" (a term used to mock males who admit symptoms) is actually misogyny, because women (who are allowed to have symptoms) look weak by comparison.

2 upvotes · 3 April 2013 · /r/MensRights

I love these accidental truths that feminists say when they are talking about something else:

Nor am I suggesting that "man flu" is an idea which wicked feminists dreamed up in order to mock men. (Apart from anything else, you hear the term used by both men and women.)

See? The term can't be a feminist term because men say it, too.

Oops, did she just deflate the whole facade of "feminism being for both genders"?

The difference between what you really believe, and what you say to sell your story, is that when you really believe something, you don't have to think about it consciously in order to avoid saying the exact opposite.

Perfect example of what happens when you allow yourself to become beta in a relationship

2 upvotes · 29 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Pretty good, but you could have inserted something about how the patriarchy was to blame.

Fierce Fatties: a case study in hamster logic

2 upvotes · 27 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Some people are born with mental illnesses. And we discriminate against them. It was not their "lifestyle choice" to get sick, they carried the demon into the world in their very genetic code. And we discriminate against them.

Yeah, but so what? If they are not in control of their behaviour, then I am not in control of mine.

They may very well suffer from compulsive cake-eating. But then I suffer from compulsive fat-shaming. I can no more control my instinctive revulsion at their appearance than they can control their instinctive greed and sloth. I can no more control my expression of that revulsion than they can control their expression of that greed and sloth.

I reject the notion that they have no agency when they eat and eat and eat, but that I have agency when I react to their appearance.

Man has rape conviction quashed as wedding footage shows alleged victim playfully touching the accused

2 upvotes · 27 March 2013 · /r/MensRights

This is true, but the publicity of a trial is an essential safeguard in our court system.

Men being "fake" by using game, vs women being fake by using make-up.

2 upvotes · 27 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Hahahahahahahahahahahahaahahahahaaaa

Feminism goes full retard: "The Sexual Politics of Eating Meat".

2 upvotes · 23 March 2013 · /r/MensRights

Eating meat is associated with male power in its most vile and repugnant forms.

Isn't it interesting how, every once in a while, while talking about something else, feminists accidentally tip their hands?

Because she is so busy talking about meat, she accidentally said out loud that "male power" is a bad thing.

Because she envisions herself as talking to an audience that takes feminism as a given, she accidentally gave away the real game plan... males aren't supposed to have any power.

Men, Stop Being Assholes...Analyze

2 upvotes · 20 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

There's no content here. It's just an attempt to shame men into doing what's good for her, instead of what's good for them.

There's nothing to analyze.

It's a fish telling the fisherman to dump the bait bucket in the water and walk away.

Hypergamy bit her in the ass so hard it's sad.

2 upvotes · 14 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I'll have to agree with you about all those points. I think my 'old mind' sees the carousel as the problem for some reason (probably because I wasn't a part of it, being the nice guy).

And I am biased to like the carousel, because my cock is one of the horses on it. And I have to watch out for how that bias might colour my thinking.

But the major problem women have after riding the carousel is that they are discontented with the partner they end up with.

Many critics of hypergamy think that this is because he not better than any other man she ever had. But we have to remember that hypergamy is instinctive behaviour. If partner discontent is a result of hypergamy alone, then women are evolved to be miserable with any relationship they can secure.

Where is the evolutionary advantage that would provide selection pressure for that?

My hypothesis is that a woman like this is discontented not because her partner is not the best she ever had, but because he is not better than she is.

Thus, it was easy for a woman to be content in a relationship when men occupied a social position of more respect than women. But the more feminists succeed in making women at least as powerful and respected as men (and often more so), the less happy women can be in the relationships they can get.

This whole "don't ride the cock carousel, revive chastity, let's pretend social conservatism is red pill" thing is a massive red herring. Even a virgin bride who marries beneath her station would start eying that no-fault divorce around the ten-year mark if not before. We just don't often see it because virgins don't marry down or even across. They marry up.

Why? Because a woman exits the cock carousel under two circumstances: when she can marry up, or when her uterus is nearing its expiration date.

Thus the difference is not between who ride the cock carousel and those who don't. It's between women who exit early (because they are marrying up), and women who exit at the last possible moment (because they cannot successfully marry up).

- Why must boys be taught to act like and enjoy the same things as girls?

2 upvotes · 12 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Do you agree that women find anti-social activity and displays of power to be attractive?

Repetition of assumption #5, that alpha behaviour is anti-social.

Do you agree that single mother households raise children more apt to crime and antisocial behavior?

So, taken with your last point, you are arguing that children of single mothers are more attractive?

Do you think that if women find power and status of men over other men to be attractive, that all men can harness this?

Behaviour trumps everything.

Do you feel traditional morals have been arbitrary, or just related to birth?

Morals are nothing but endorsements of a set of actions. Plans are chosen based on outcomes. Outcomes change based on circumstances. Circumstances change based on technology.

Men abolished marriage the moment we invented contraceptives. It's just taking a while to happen.

Never Listen to a Woman...what about mom?

2 upvotes · 11 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

You didn't read the whole article, did you?

The point is that you value opinions that come from someone's field of expertise.

Everything else is just talk. Now, shooting the breeze has its place, but never make the mistake of assigning it the weight of an expertise. If I talk about physics, I'm just jawing. If tell you how to write good software, shut the fuck up and take notes.

The second point is that most modern women of datable age have no relevant fields of expertise.

They don't know how to do anything important. They don't know how to tell you anything you don't already know. They go to college, but they emerge from it not knowing how to do anything they couldn't already do when they got in.

Women like this, anything they say is small talk. It's shooting the breeze. It's conversation engaged in for the purpose of what women are really good for, what they are genetically good at: creating comfort, ease, joy, happiness, laughter, and fun.

Interacting with a woman is not for learning things unless she's Sheila Greibach or Helen Thomas or someone like that. Interacting with a woman is for enjoying yourself.

The takeaway from all this is don't take a woman seriously until she proves to you that you should.

Now, do you understand where your mommy fits into all of this?

- Why must boys be taught to act like and enjoy the same things as girls?

2 upvotes · 5 March 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I thought on this for a very long time before answering.

Not because I agree with anything you say, but because my model of how our culture can be saved is so different from yours that I was at a loss as to how to make you understand it.

So I'm going to point out some of the assumptions that you base your argument on, but haven't supported. When you understand that I disagree with them, and why I do so, then we may get somewhere.

So here are your assumptions:

1. That what you call society is a struggle against our basic primate nature, rather than an expression of it.
2. That culturally transmitted values are fixed and determine our behaviour, rather than simply being society's hamsterization of its members' reactions to market forces.
3. That anarchy is the natural state of mankind.
4. That attractiveness is a zero sum game, and only a fixed percentage of the top men can trigger a woman's instinctive response to an alpha.
5. That alpha males are parasites and betas are pillars of society.
6. That we can make the changes we need in society by somehow persuading women to change, as opposed to by changing our strategies for living.
7. That marriage was ever a good deal for men.
8. That technology doesn't impact morality, and that the djinn of cheap, reliable contraception can, or even should, be put back in the bottle.
9. That we, as men, have a responsibility to come up with, and implement, a plan for fixing society all by ourselves, as opposed to simply providing motivation for change.

When you understand how and why I disagree with each one of these, you will understand the error of your assumption that I have no thoughts about society and am simply content to enjoy the pretty fire as burns.

How I think it could be improved... well, that's complicated. Suffice to say that nostalgia and idealism are not our friends in dealing with a future where our expectations, and more importantly our capabilities, are fundamentally new and different.

Girl who cried Rape

2 upvotes · 28 February 2013 · /r/MensRights

Well, I think if it's unprotected sex and he has HIV, then it'd probably be a bad idea.

It's also bad for them to have sex in front of an oncoming train. Or in a burning building. Or while being shot at by invading communist paratroopers.

Surprisingly enough, things that are dangerous when you're over 18 are equally dangerous when you're under 18.

It's almost as if 18 was some arbitrarily selected legal standard, instead of a milestone graven into our DNA.

Jezebel: I'm bad at exercise because of genetics, not because I habitually avoid it!

2 upvotes · 20 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Who cares if it's uncomfortable?

And frankly, it's not that fucking uncomfortable.

All you have to do is exercise and keep at it. You don't have to go to the gym and lift huge barbells until you throw up. All you have to do is play tennis a couple of times a week, and stop eating all that fucking sugar.

It's amazing to me how many women walk around looking like hambeasts simply because they have no patience and no ability to stick to a long term goal.

They want to feel better now. Self-deception may not work very well, but it's quick. Hard work works very well indeed, but it isn't.

Sex as a weapon...losing interest

2 upvotes · 18 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

While what you have quoted, and what you have said, is certainly true, and not in any way crazy, it cannot be the only part of the equation if we expect men to prosper.

Women are overgrown children... when and because they are raised that way. If we come to expect them to be, assume they will be, and demand nothing more of them, they will continue to be so.

The women of today, raised in a responsibility-free, consequence-free, expectation-free, unconditional-self-esteem-support bubble, are several generations of spoiled children. And we must deal with them from the knowledge that the overwhelming majority are indeed like that, and we must protect ourselves from their selfishness.

But if we start to think that this is their very nature, rather than their upbringing, we give the women of this generation, and all generations to follow, a free pass to be as spoiled, selfish, and childish as they want.

I'm not talking about "OMG mithogineeeee!" here. Either women are selfish, spoiled and dim by nature, or they are not. Question of fact either way. Not important whether it's hateful. Important whether it's true.

What I am talking about is that we must defend ourselves, but we don't want to lower the bar just so that women can clear it.

We need to expect women to behave like adults, even as we anticipate that many will not, and prepare ourselves for that eventuality.

Men not marrying? How deep does "the problem" go?

2 upvotes · 15 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

I almost feel like marriage was created by blue pill men.

Not quite.

Monogamy was invented by betas as an attempt to avoid competing with alphas for women.

Hypergamy

2 upvotes · 4 February 2013 · /r/TheRedPill

Can you go bring him one, please?

I did the last one.

Does anyone else feel like some of the better known PUAs are a little bit full of shit?

2 upvotes · 25 January 2013 · /r/seduction

Yes.

We gotta remember that the better known PUAs are better known because they are selling something. Someone could be the best PUA in the world, and if he's just out there getting laid and not trying to teach others to get laid, then we'd never have heard of him.

So what happens when PUAs try to turn their skill into a means of making money?

Well, what are they used to doing? Running game.

And they have something to sell.

They usually end up unwilling to resist the temptation to run game on their customers. After all, this stuff works. Go watch the real social dynamics videos. It's pretty much just hour after hour of Owen Cook running game on a roomful of guys.

Now, the difference between running game on a woman you're trying to attract, and running game on a guy you're trying to sell something to, is that, while it works in both cases, only the first case does the other person get what they want.

If you run game on a woman who's in the market for an attractive man, and make yourself attractive to her, then you really are attractive to her. She gets what she wants, which is an attractive man... because if she thinks you're attractive, you are.

If you run game on a man who's in the market for ways to make himself more attractive, then he thinks you're successful and wise and dominant and amazing and attractive to women. But does it make him any of those things? No, it does not. Some men might learn on their own to imitate his example. But there is a real difference between teaching your skill, and practicing it on your students.

The same skills that make him a genuinely awesome guy to the women he picks up, make him a giant douche to his customers.

'Not every opinion is valid:' Carleton University free speech wall torn down within hours

2 upvotes · 23 January 2013 · /r/MensRights

In organizing the 'free speech wall,' the Students for Liberty have forgotten that liberty requires liberation, and this liberation is prevented by providing space ... for the expression of hate,"

War is Peace.

Freedom is Slavery.

Ignorance is Strength.

I'm a proud MRA. I thought my wife was, but it appears like she's the exact opposite. Looks like I might be getting a divorce.

2 upvotes · 14 January 2013 · /r/MensRights

1. SRS is being SRS. Why read it?
2. If the only way you can think of give men reproductive rights is to require abortions, then you're not thinking hard enough, probably on purpose (because you don't want to come up with a palatable answer).

I've been reading seddit for 1+ yr. I'm a girl. Some Insights

2 upvotes · 12 January 2013 · /r/seduction

I personally would change the word neggin to teasing, i use it all the time.

I wouldn't. Changing our terminology because someone whines at us that we are being big meanies is failing a collective shit test. So is endlessly explaining that we're not really mean at all.

Either one is letting our critics control the frame.

"The End of Men and the Rise of Women." This is not gender equality! This is sexism!

2 upvotes · 31 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

Did you completely bypass my second argument about how men face the same thing?

That part wasn't as interesting. It just loops us back into the old argument that gender "roles" are the problem, and that if we just started treating men and women exactly the same, they would behave exactly the same and be exactly the same.

I've heard it before, and I am not convinced.

How is society too kind and too nice to women? ... Acting like women are fragile little beings because society is "too kind" to us is complete bullshit.

I understand your mode of thinking.

Your basic approach to every gender issue is shaped by your belief that "society" (our society, other societies, any society, you seem to talk about them all interchangeably) hates or despises women.

You come to this conclusion because you look around you and see a whole bunch of gender-based injustice against women. So when I come along and say that our society in particular is protective and sympathetic towards women to a degree that actually stunts their personal growth, it's confusing. It's incompatible with your belief that we collectively hate women.

But it is that belief which is untrue. So why does it look that way to you?

Because most gender-based injustice towards men is invisible to you. The only ones you notice are the ones that also affect women, because you are already aware of them in that context.

Unable as you are to see the ways in which society mistreats men, you are forced to conclude that women are the only ones society makes trouble for in this way, and thus, no matter how small the issues you find, you still conclude that women not only have it worse, but are the only ones who have "it" at all.

Now, around this time you're feeling skeptical. How could men possibly be more oppressed than women? What is this guy smoking?

Fortunately, you've been kind enough to supply me with two very strong examples of precisely how discrimination against males is invisible to you. Two of the areas that you complained of discrimination against women are precisely two of the areas where women of our society have the most privilege as compared to men. But you don't realize that because discrimination against men is invisible to you. You're not being malicious. You actually cannot see it.

Let's look at these examples:

Number one, bodily integrity. You complain that female genital mutilation is a reflection of society's hatred of women. Yet it isn't practiced in our society. You know, the one that reflects our values, and that we control. In fact, it was made illegal the moment it was brought to our legislators' attention that this was a thing. Meanwhile male genital mutilation is not only legal in our society, it's actually the norm.

Because male genital mutilation is normal in your society, and thus invisible to you, you are unable to compare the two and see that FGM is regarded as a barbaric practice, and is being vigorously opposed, while MGM is business as usual.

So who does our society hate more? The people whose genitals we protect with laws, or the people whose genitals we cut with knives? (Oh, by the way, we also don't use anesthesia. And we also started doing it to diminish male sexual pleasure... although we have a host of less blatant excuses now.)

Number two, reproductive rights. You complain that women sometimes have trouble getting access to birth control and abortion, and thus face some obstacles in making reproductive choices. Denied, as you say, that right to have control over their bodies. But what obstacles do men face in exercising their reproductive rights?

Oh, wait, they don't have any. In our culture, as a matter of law, a man's control over his reproductive destiny stops at ejaculation, while a woman's doesn't even stop at birth. There is no "man's right to choose".

And birth control? We call it a "War on Women!!!!!!!" when certain religious employers don't want to pay for women birth control pills. But who pays for men's birth control pills? Oh, right, they aren't any, because no one's even bothered to come up with one.

You are complain that women sometimes have limited access to something that men are never allowed to have at all.

Discrimination against men, in these and other areas, escapes your notice, because you see it as normal. And when you see something as normal, it's easy to come up with rationalizations as to why that's not really an injustice... I'm sure you have a host of them that you're eager to type. "Male genital mutilation is hygienic!" "Carrying a child for nine months is a bodily violation, but working to support one for 18 years isn't." But when you get right down to it, that's what they are.

Rationalizations.

Not reasons.

When women have a problem, our society cares. When they complain, they are listened to and helped. That's why things like birth control pills exist.

"The End of Men and the Rise of Women." This is not gender equality! This is sexism!

2 upvotes · 30 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

You're making it seem like my argument was that women aren't allowed to work certain jobs. That's not what I'm saying. We grow up being taught that as women, working construction is for men because we're not strong enough, that we can't be engineers because we're not smart enough, etc.

This experience is not unique to women. One of the characteristic of a hard career is that as you are training for it, or even as you are considering it, people constantly tell you you're not good enough, you're not smart enough, you're too lazy, you're not strong enough, you can't can't.

The guys who don't wash out are the ones who persevered. If I can keep you out of medical school just by telling you you're stupid, then you don't belong there. Because dealing with negativity and criticism is the lowest hurdle you're gonna face.

Am I saying men are inherently more stoic than women? No. Men are more stoic because they have to be.

And here we come to the real way that our society cheats women and hurts them... too much kindness, too much niceness, too much solicitation, not enough pressure to achieve.

It is hardships that make us strong. By being too eager to rescue women from their hardships, we have cheated them of the opportunity to rescue themselves. By being too understanding and forgiving of women who take the easy path, we cheat them of that shove down that hard path which would have made them stronger and better in the long run.

Women need more responsibility thrust on them. More obstacles and less hand-holding. Then you'll see more female engineers.

I would love to see more female engineers. I would love to see more female construction workers. I'm currently having my bathroom torn out and rebuilt because of water damage from leaky pipes on the third floor, which we discovered as the central air conditioning was being replaced. In the past week, I've up to my ears in restoration workers, HVAC guys, plumbers, electricians, industrial hygienists, structural engineers, and other assorted burly, pot-bellied men who caution me to keep the plastic sealed up and don't go in there because of all the mold and crap in the air... before they blithely stride in work in there all day tearing out rotten wood, or fixing pipes.

The only woman I ever saw was one insurance claims adjuster in a skirt and heels, with painted nails.

I would love to see some women mucking along with the dudes. It would mean than women were taking the responsibility to earn, instead of just taking from men. (Remember earning isn't a privilege, spending is).

But I get kinda shirty when someone tells that the women aren't in there getting their hands dirty because we are too mean to them.

It's because we aren't mean enough.

"The End of Men and the Rise of Women." This is not gender equality! This is sexism!

2 upvotes · 30 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

I am heartily sick of this excuse.

You'd think from the way people go on that we had barricaded the doors of the engineering department and were attacking women with pointed sticks to keep them out.

The reality is that the few women who were willing to enter were welcomed with open arms, not to mention extra grant money and lots of praise. The only special problem they had was lots of pathetic nerds begging them for dates. But there were only a few women who were interested.

Why? Well, this shit is hard. People don't do it unless they are pressured into it, whether that be overtly through expectations, or covertly by making them have expectations of themselves. Why do you think engineers and surgeons are paid more than psychologists and journalists? You don't have to pay people more to get them to do something fun. You have to pay them more to get them to do something hard.

Women aren't being kept out or the doors with sharp sticks. They just aren't being driven in with sharp sticks, the way men are.

The problem you feminists have with understanding shit like this is that you keep doing mental gymnastics to construe male burdens as privileges. You think being an engineer, or a surgeon, or a CEO, is a privilege? It isn't. That's why you have to pay them more.

Because you see it as a privilege, you keep looking for ways that women are being pressured out, and what you manage to come up with is pretty vague and slim, because you're not finding any. If you understood (or rather, admitted) that these things are burdens, not privileges, you could look for the ways that women aren't being pressured in, and you'd see them. But right now you can't find those, because you're not looking.

Working hard isn't a privilege. Hardly working is.

Doing difficult things isn't a privilege. Doing easy things is.

Earning lots of money isn't a privilege. Spending lots of money is.

Doing the work that preserves civilization isn't a privilege. Having that work done for you by others is.

I don't need feminism.

2 upvotes · 15 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

I do not need anyone else to speak for me.

Exactly.

Women are adults. If we handle them with kid gloves and exaggerated sympathy and protection, they will become soft, weak, spoiled and childlike.

If we draw boundaries for them, put pressure on them, and have expectations of them, just like we would for a dude, they will rise to meet the challenge and become capable, responsible, and unafraid.

The best thing we can do for women is to stop coddling them.

[Diagram] An attempt at visualizing the -ism's involved with (wo)(mens) rights

2 upvotes · 3 December 2012 · /r/MensRights

Your logical fallacy is:

Middle Ground Fallacy.

I don't like this whole notion of "gender equality", because no one has bothered to define what "equality" means.

Equality before the law? Treating everyone the same? Equal opportunities? Equal outcomes?

I can't get behind a movement demanding something it hasn't bothered to explain.

What disturbs me even more is the assumption that all aspects of gender roles can usefully be done away with. It seems to be based on a feminist-like assumption that the sexes are purely a construct, that there are no essential gender differences.

That's just silly. We may not have a clear idea which ones, but if there were no essential ones, the constructed ones never would have been constructed.

We need to measure before cutting. Is it really fair to treat men and women the same? I don't think so.

How would an alpha confront the guy your girl cheated on you with? Advice from Seddit?

2 upvotes · 23 November 2012 · /r/seduction

how would an alpha confront that situation?

Thank him. Thank him for showing you what a lying, conniving whore you were in a relationship with.

Then dump the lying, conniving whore.

She broke her agreement with you. It's her fault. He didn't break an agreement with you, because he didn't have one to break. Monogamy is a contract between two people, and she broke it.

Wife has problem, husband suggests solution, wife attacks husband. But wait, I thought domestic violence was male aggression? Someone please explain to me how this is the patriarchy's fault!

2 upvotes · 21 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

Relax. I was asking sarcastically. You answered sarcastically. I answered sarcastically again.

I get that. We're on the same page, here.

Wife has problem, husband suggests solution, wife attacks husband. But wait, I thought domestic violence was male aggression? Someone please explain to me how this is the patriarchy's fault!

2 upvotes · 21 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

but she's likely looking for comfort rather than someone to give her a solution (at least at that moment).

Oh, I see. Yeah, of course, if he didn't figure out what she wanted without being told, and do it right away, she had to hit him. Her feelings were hurt by his failure to obey her expectations. Violence was the only option.

After all, if there is a female style of communication, and a set of social expectations that women have, our job is to learn them and act precisely that way.

{ Closed Caption for the Sarcasm-Impaired: Holy fucking shit, how do these people think? Yes, I know that women complain to get sympathy and pets, not solutions. If they want sympathy and pets, they need to go to another woman. Not scream and attack men in frustration at our failure to be women. }

British journalist Toby Young on how American women objectify men: "I always found the experience of being on a date in New York extremely uncomfortable ... No man is held to possess any intrinsic value - we're all just the sum of our assets."

2 upvotes · 21 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

It was weird since all they would focus on is girls.

This is absolutely true of far too many of them. This is why they need to shed their inaccurate stereotype of MRAs as "whiny losers who can't get women", and come to /r/mensrights and start reading the fucking material.

They may be able to avoid grovelling for pussy by cracking the "woman code", but so long as they measure their manhood by this ability, they will not be free of many of the other traps our culture lays for men.

Exhibit A in why I as a gay dude do NOT support feminists and increasingly identify with the MRM. These hateful FEMEN idiots don't give a fuck about gay rights, they're just appropriating our cause for their sick anti-male attention whoring purposes.

2 upvotes · 20 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

Oh, is that all it takes? Can I get one too, then?

"Women" are not a monolithic block (work experience)

2 upvotes · 16 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

you are one in a line of 'Concern for the community' posts that have been rampant

The term you're looking for is "concern trolling".

I'm fine in a low-key environment, in a bar the conversation struggles. What's going on?

2 upvotes · 5 November 2012 · /r/seduction

Absolutely not.

You're just going to be comfortable in different venues.

Loud clubs and concerts make introverts feel as if their brains are being battered out of shape. They cannot concentrate, or think, much less relax and enjoy.

Quiet, peaceful settings and deep, complex, one-on-one conversations make extroverts feel as if they are entombed in clay. Without loud noises, flashing lights, or lots of people, they cannot sustain the emotional energy to connect with others, much less shine and draw attention.

'Tell me that men don't judge each other by penis size.'

2 upvotes · 1 November 2012 · /r/MensRights

I always judge people by the colour of their left kidney.

i'd like to hear you guys say something good about women or at least funny today. lets be constructive!

2 upvotes · 28 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Don't drink and submit rambling, incoherent self-links, please.

Controversial Claim. Still true if you replace "racist" with "misogynist".

2 upvotes · 25 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

conservatives have their own host of thought-defeating cliches to use in place of reason

Yep.

A look at the "Scholarly Publishing's Gender Gap"

2 upvotes · 23 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Yet another example of trying to infer opportunities from outcomes.

A handy quotation by Noam Chomsky for those who call you a misogynist for speaking out for the issues of men

2 upvotes · 19 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

A worthwhile point.

But then we'd have to ask what left wing values are.

Just like we don't let feminists get away with saying that feminism is about "equal political, economic, and social rights for women", when their action show differently, we can't simply ask left-wing proponents what their values are, and take that as a definition.

In truth, both the political left and right wings represent fellowships of interest, not a belief in principles. Which is fine, but if those groups' interests run counter to ours as men, we would be wise not to support them.

The modern left represents forces in favour of wealth redistribution by government forces. As long as men are, and continue to be, the major producers of wealth, redistribution is bad for us. This goes not only for wealthy men (who stand to lose their wealth), but also poor men (who have often been displaced altogether by the government serving as a "substitute husband").

Apparently mothers deserve the same pay as soldiers

2 upvotes · 14 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

I'm not sure that the children can afford that, though.

Anyone else think this is misandry disguised as humor? Why does watching hentai or owning an anime pillow make you a pervert?

2 upvotes · 13 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

What exactly is your objection, other than the fact that you find it weird?

I'm sure that the Japanese are disgusted by your habit of eating decayed milk products, and your appalling rudeness by saying "no" directly in conversations.

Oh I'm sorry to hear that. - Best thing to say jokingly.

2 upvotes · 11 October 2012 · /r/seduction

Aaaaaaaaaaaaaand you just tried to get his approval for your lack of need to get his approval.

Go, you.

A handy quotation by Noam Chomsky for those who call you a misogynist for speaking out for the issues of men

2 upvotes · 9 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

You have no idea how much i wish right-wingers weren't in bed with their own families

Next time you are complaining about how the right wing is hateful and engages in low, personal attacks... remember this special little moment.

A handy quotation by Noam Chomsky for those who call you a misogynist for speaking out for the issues of men

2 upvotes · 9 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

Sorry i've heard the 'Leftists are Feminists' line one too many times to give a shit

That's not precisely how I'd describe the problem.

The problem is that feminism has managed to hitch its cart to the socialist horse, and that horse is pulling hard. It's not that every leftist agrees with every feminist bullet point, but it's become a plank in the platform, and they all vote the platform.

Stop! You're Oppressing our rights! [x-post from r/atheism]

2 upvotes · 8 October 2012 · /r/MensRights

I was thinking of Einstein, Feynman, Russell, Dawkins, Tarski, Poincaré, and so on.

I would not, however, include people who think atheists only exist on reddit.

What are some common hoops to present women?

2 upvotes · 5 October 2012 · /r/seduction

"Hmmm.... Only because you said please."

Too compliant for my taste.

I'd replace this with "No."

And then when the inevitable objection surfaces: "If it wasn't a request, why'd you say 'please'?"

Study shows that both men and women look down on prospective partners for too many sexual encounters. "Slut-shaming" not restricted to women only.

2 upvotes · 10 September 2012 · /r/MensRights

[citation needed]

Becoming misogynist? (LONG POST)

2 upvotes · 30 August 2012 · /r/MensRights

Anger != hatred.

Anger at women who behave badly != belief that women are inherently bad.

In a radical feminist world, there is no transphobia (anyone wanna comment on this ?)

2 upvotes · 25 August 2012 · /r/MensRights

In a radical feminist world, there would be no transphobia.

This is because there would be no transsexuals.

This is because there would be no surgery.

This is because there would be no medicine.

This is because there would be no technology.

This is because there would be no civilization.

How important is it to have muscle mass in order to gain physical attraction?

2 upvotes · 23 August 2012 · /r/seduction

Not very.

It is important to have muscle mass in order to be fit and healthy and have lots of energy.

Social skills for getting girls, black iron plates for being healthy and feeling good.

Try it. Seriously. Once you get over the initial self-consciousness and uncertainty, you'll be glad you did.

Gents, women ARE NOT the root of all happiness. They ARE merely a perk that comes from leading a fulfilling, interesting life.

2 upvotes · 28 July 2012 · /r/seduction

Not only are they not the root of happiness, they are not the measure of your worth as a man.

putting the alleged suicide of a fucked up downright evil person into context .

2 upvotes · 25 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

By this definition, no one is evil. Ever.

putting the alleged suicide of a fucked up downright evil person into context .

2 upvotes · 25 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

The one thing that makes me think that this isn't all a setup is the way she repudiates herself as a selfish, hateful, narcissistic ass in her last blog post.

If it were a setup, that would defeat the purpose.

It doesn't, however, prove that the author actually killed herself.

how i found r/mensrights:

2 upvotes · 20 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

You know what? You're absolutely right.

Despite knowing that men get raped all the time, I still fell into the trap of reading the word "rape" and thinking "male-on-female" rape. Just goes to show how insidious it is when a whole culture starts chanting the same propaganda.

Of course a rape victim can then be falsely accused of being the rapist... if he's male.

"To learn who rules over you, simply find out who you are not allowed to criticize." ~Voltaire

2 upvotes · 20 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

It's not just a strawman, of which term I am aware. A strawman is a misrepresentation of the opponent's position.

"I am silly" is a misrepresentation of an opponent's position, behaviour, and feelings. It's sort of a super-enhanced mega-strawman.

Now, I am an atheist, an anti-theist, a gay rights supporter, etc... and I pretty much think christianity is one of the most awful things to ever infect the human race.

BUT that's no excuse for using dishonest arguments.

I just thought I'd let you guys know that according to a poster from the same group that shames people who generalize aspies (SRS). My aspergers has lead me to be indoctrinated by you guys.

2 upvotes · 15 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

Hear we sea Whisper locked in a life or death struggle whiff sin tax erosion from internet exposure.

I just thought I'd let you guys know that according to a poster from the same group that shames people who generalize aspies (SRS). My aspergers has lead me to be indoctrinated by you guys.

2 upvotes · 15 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

Hear we see HumanSockPuppet locked in a life or death struggle with a simile that has gotten away from him and is running rampant.

I want to apologize to you guys

2 upvotes · 15 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

I'm puzzled as to why you insist on the name "feminist", then.

I realize you're feeling a lot of hostility in here, but it's because you are doing something extremely hostile. What you've done is walk into an NAACP meeting wearing a white sheet and peaked hood, and insisting you "don't mean anything by it".

Yes, technically you just might be the one person who doesn't mean anything by it. Maybe you really do just find those robes to be really comfortable. But it's insensitive and inflammatory, and you cannot reasonably expect people not to react with hostility.

Make no mistake, you are not just talking to people with abstract philosophical concerns. You are talking to men who have had their children taken away, men who have had their homes taken away, men who have had their incomes taken away. You are talking to innocent men who have done hard time in prison, and to men who have been physically abused and then arrested when they attempted to seek help.

You see, you are confused as to why this harmless term "feminist" is generating so much ire.

But you are assuming that the term is indeed harmless, and the men here don't understand... instead of considering the possibility that you are the one who doesn't understand, and the term is not so harmless after all.

In other words, you jest at scars, who never felt a wound.

I want to apologize to you guys

2 upvotes · 14 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

Indeed.

Also, you are judged by whom you choose to associate with, which is why is it both useful and correct to judge the feminist movement for failing to reign in its own bigots.

So the Reddit PC police think I deserve scorn for thinking rape jokes can be funny. I'm a rape victim.

2 upvotes · 13 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

If only we could put an end to all this male privilege that allows 5-year-old boys to rape their babysitters!

Men Going Their Own Way - YouTube (Addressing budding radicalism in the MRM)

2 upvotes · 5 July 2012 · /r/MensRights

Because I was skipping through the video trying to find the meat of it.

He is long-winded and tedious.

So exactly, how willing are most women to having sex the same night?

2 upvotes · 29 June 2012 · /r/seduction

Lemme tell you something truly mind blowing:

Women don't know in advance what they want.

I know, I know, it sounds horrible, doesn't it? But it's not the awful, insulting statement it sounds like. It doesn't mean that women are incapable of running their own lives.

What it means is that there's no sense trying to figure out if a woman wants to have sex with you, because she doesn't know until you make a move, and she either likes it or doesn't.

It's like being offered a new flavour of ice cream. How do you know you like it or don't until you taste it and know how it tastes?

For women, men are like that ice cream. There's the flavours you know you'll hate, because you hate something that goes into them (I don't like pistachios.) But the majority of flavours, you don't know if you like until you taste a spoonful.

She doesn't know if she wants you to kiss her. She only knows if she likes it or not, when you actually go for the kiss.

Can you see how your question makes no sense, now?

r/MensRights: I can't comprehend your arguments on domestic violence.

2 upvotes · 16 June 2012 · /r/MensRights

in the years I have worked there only two men so far as I can recall have used our service, while thousands of women who have been beaten (including being hospitalised close to death) have come in for help for themselves and/or their similarly abused children. I know the situation is the same at other similar services we work with; hospitals report similar percentages of those hospitalised due to spousal abuse.

This is why scientists use random samples. I know you're educated in law, but you must have studied the scientific method at some point, no?

You run what is most likely, for all intents and purposes, a DV shelter service for women. Think of how cases reach you. You know how victims have to be encouraged to speak up. Do you think men are reached out to in the same way?

The truth is, no one can really be certain who perpetrates the most abuse. But you don't know, either, because your selectively collected experiences are not evidence.

'You look like you could kill someone'

2 upvotes · 14 June 2012 · /r/seduction

"Creepy" isn't a thing.

It's just a word women use when something makes them uncomfortable for some reason. But it doesn't say anything about why.

Gay shaming has to stop

2 upvotes · 12 June 2012 · /r/MensRights

I don't have a problem with all of them. I even SAID that not all the techniques are bad, just some.

Then why are you talking about them as a group, instead of judging them as individuals, the way non-bigots do?

If you said "I don't have a problem with all left-handed people, just the ones who rape children", we would wonder, rightly enough, if you had some kind of weird bias, because otherwise you would never have brought up left-handed people in that context at all.

Next, watch while he tries to argue that PUAs are more likely to engage in misogynistic behaviour than a randomly selected control group, fails to present any evidence, fails even to define what he means by misogynistic behaviour, and simultaneously insists he's not biased!

Oh, wait, he already did:

PUAs aren't the only guys who sleep around a lot, they're just famous (and not baselessly, even if it is a generalization) for harboring misogynists.

If you don't understand how slut-shaming happens, take a long, hard look in the mirror. People aren't aware they just hate sluts (of a particular gender, or not). They always think they are just condemning immoral behaviour.

It never occurs to them that the direction of their moral compass is pulled around the dial by a magnet called "bigotry".

Gonna marry a girl with $300,000 debt. Don't wanna get burned. Advice?

2 upvotes · 25 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

I am going to load this handgun, cock it, switch the safety off, point it at my foot, and squeeze the trigger. I don't want to bleed. Advice?

Dating: Men vs. Women. While this is obviously a joke, it still hits home.

2 upvotes · 16 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

Only if you let it.

Feminists adamantly opposed male contraception

2 upvotes · 15 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

Please do try to read more carefully. I was commenting on the viewpoint under discussion, not the total collection of all Freidan's viewpoints.

To do that, I'd have to read her work, and reading the work of most any feminist is annoying and useless, because the faulty premises come at the very beginning, and after that it's all fractally wrong.

Feminists adamantly opposed male contraception

2 upvotes · 15 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

And who the hell says men don't love their children?

How to deal with "Will you guys stop flirting with each other?"

2 upvotes · 13 May 2012 · /r/seduction

"Man, will you guys stop flirting?"

"I doubt it."

Oh dear...

2 upvotes · 7 May 2012 · /r/seduction

<http://xkcdexplained.com/post/316911294/we-get-it>

The Lonely Life of Julia: In Obama's ideal world, men are replaced by bureaucrats.

2 upvotes · 5 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

EVERYBODY benefits from all of the programs outlined ... Either you use them directly ... or you benefit from them indirectly but significantly

Ah, the "rising tides lifts all boats" argument.

The problem with this argument is that it is also used in support of tax cuts and less income redistribution. An argument which supports both sides isn't really an argument.

In our society, everybody pays taxes. Everybody who buys anything ever pays taxes.

Sales taxes are state taxes, and are not being used to support these programs.

You have the right to be a libertarian if you want to

It always amuses me that conservatives think I am a liberal and liberals think I am a conservative.

What's important to me, here, is the principle that each individual act of public spending needs to be judged on its merits. Is it a legitimate part of the role of government? Does it make sense in terms of cost vs. benefit? Does it safeguard the commons? But conservatives treat the markets, and liberals treat government redistribution, like fairy dust... the solution to every problem, and if it didn't work, you just didn't use enough.

Proponents of these programs don't even seem ready to admit that they have a cost. They're just being hailed as free money out of the air. But everything has a cost, and invisible costs are more dangerous than any other kind... because you don't know what you've lost.

The Lonely Life of Julia: In Obama's ideal world, men are replaced by bureaucrats.

2 upvotes · 5 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

Oh, it was anti-male.

It just wasn't deliberately anti-male. You see, male feminists and white knights like Obama and his administration don't consciously hate men in the same way that radfems do.

What they do instead is not even consider them. You see, some of these programs may, accidentally, be available to Julio as well, but they are intended for Julia. And in the real world, where men earn more (and thus pay more taxes), but women spend more and have a higher net worth (and thus have more actual wealth), it's going to be men who pay for these programs.

A policy doesn't have to be consciously aimed at harming men to be sexist. All it has to do is exclude them. Which modern government has done over and over again.

The Lonely Life of Julia: In Obama's ideal world, men are replaced by bureaucrats.

2 upvotes · 4 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

You're switching arguments in midstream. First you said "this benefits everyone".

Now you say "taxpayers have always paid for some things, so now they should pay for other things" and "At least taxpayers aren't actually being directly killed. Isn't that enough?".

I don't think I need to refute either of these directly, because they do not pass the laugh test.

You know what I like about this subreddit?

2 upvotes · 2 May 2012 · /r/MensRights

No.

Your definition of feminism is drawn from the words of feminists themselves. No movement is allowed to self-define, and then expect that this definition be uncritically accepted by others.

I do not accept that feminism is about equal rights, and will not until you show me some convincing evidence. A definition is not evidence. It's just someone's assertion.

If we want to be taken seriously, we need to start banning accounts that are clearly misogynistic.

2 upvotes · 30 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

Your logical fallacy is...

Tip: Had a girls interest but lost it? Just go away.

2 upvotes · 22 April 2012 · /r/seduction

Why does this work?

Doesn't matter if it works. If it works, it works. If it doesn't, you are away from someone who doesn't appreciate you, and have your time freed up for someone who does.

Don't go away to make her change her mind. Just go away to go away.

An article about Modern Women's Sexual Fantasies. I think a discussion about this would be unique and valuable on reddit.

2 upvotes · 16 April 2012 · /r/seduction

I'm not sure what the point of this article is. The general idea seems to be "Oh, noes! Some people like BDSM! Everyone panic!"

Ways Fascist Feminists Are Ruining America's Women

2 upvotes · 14 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

Can we stop posting articles by female supremacists just because they happen to be anti-feminist?

Feminism is not the only form of female supremacism. Traditionalists like this writer are simply female supremacists of a slightly different stripe.

XPost from TwoX. Thought you guys would like this.

2 upvotes · 14 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

Fuck everything about this.

"There good men out there... but a man with his own wants, needs, priorities and views is a bad man. "

Heads I Win, Tails You Lose (Part 1)

2 upvotes · 11 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

Let me introduce you to something that will make your life much less annoying.

Jezebel: Punch Annoying Frat Boys

2 upvotes · 7 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

This isn't feminism

Oh, isn't it?

self-entitled narcissists using feminism to justify their self-centered world view.

So it is feminism, then? Because that's pretty much what feminism is.

The "This has nothing to do with Men's Rights!" phenomena from non-MRA's.

2 upvotes · 7 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

What you're saying is, we have to post here for months, maybe even years before we're allowed to point out flaws in the argument?

No, you have to be an MRA before you can use the term "we" and help plan our strategy.

Concern trolls don't say "this is incorrect, here's why". They say "we shouldn't focus on this, it might put people off".

But they aren't part of "we". You, for example, have been a redditor for ten days, yet the majority of your posting history appears to be you telling us to rearrange the furniture in the clubhouse.

I do not trust your sincerity or your motives. And don't start whining about time periods.

Because what you are asking for is trust. And trust is inspired. Not demanded or owed.

Huffington Post: Where Are the 'Normal' Men?

2 upvotes · 7 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

She is infinitely superior to you, since she is made of sugar and spice and everything nice, and you should thank her for the privilege of being allowed to jump through her hoops!

female conservative columnists rails against feminists for wanting the government to take care of them. she also claims women are the smarter sex.

2 upvotes · 5 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

Isn't this that same woman who pretends to be an atheist so she can bash them with impunity?

My lamA was removed at +381 upvotes. What the fuck do I do now?

2 upvotes · 5 April 2012 · /r/MensRights

I guess i still have problems beleiving that a man could hate his masculinity so much that he would destroy discussions about his own rights.

Have you looked around lately?

Basic female advice from a girl

2 upvotes · 4 April 2012 · /r/seduction

FRs from Norah Vincent.

<http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2006/mar/18/gender.bookextracts>

Circumcised or Uncircumcised: Does It Matter in Sex?

2 upvotes · 28 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

You sound either like a concern troll or just incredibly foolish.

We're talking about unnecessary, involuntary surgery, performed without anesthesia, to permanently and irreversibly remove a healthy, functioning part of the body of an infant.

And your biggest problem with all this is that you don't want me to call it "mutilation" because it might hurt someone's feeeeeeeeeeeelings?

Or do you just want us to have our little social-change movement without challenging anyone's preconceptions? You know, without all that pesky "change" stuff.

Man charged with disorderly conduct for offering two teenage girls a ride during a snowstorm.

2 upvotes · 17 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

Let me be the first to say it...

If that dude really looks like that picture, I'll bet those girls wished he would engage in some "disorderly conduct".

(See what I did there?)

My marxist-feminist rhetoric brings all the boys to the yard

2 upvotes · 12 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

Post-modernism is the static which is spewed by small minds, not only despite the fact that they nothing to say, but precisely because they resent the way that others do.

Just an XX here to show support

2 upvotes · 11 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

I do not know how intelligent you are.

I only know how intelligently you behave.

Dick Feynman was once asked by a student how he had the courage to disagree with brilliant minds like Einstein. Dick (admittedly no slouch in the intelligence department himself) responded :

"The universe doesn't care who's smart. It only cares who's right."

This was very wise. Smart is only useful because, and when, it helps us to be right. That means that, for our intelligence to be useful to us, we have to engage it, even in the analysis of things we don't like.

But that's the problem I have. You saw this woman write something you didn't like, and you stopped using your intelligence to figure what she actually meant and respond to that. Instead, you picked the most objectionable possible interpretation, and responded to that, because it was easiest to respond to.

I can't tell whether you did this on purpose, or whether you have problems with reading comprehension, which is why I say that I don't know if you are dumb. All I know that your arguments are dumb.

I always read what you write, mostly because it gives me a little warm feeling to think "Is that all you got, misandrists? Is that your best shot?"... but I can't help feeling a little letdown, a frisson of disappointment, if you will, that I can't actually have a full-on debate about this stuff, because the only contradicting voices are trolls making dumb arguments.

Why won't you step up your game? Instead of pretending to think men don't want to support their children, why don't you actually present us with some reasons why men shouldn't be allowed to see their children, or have relationships with them?

If you truly want to be refuted, then say something on point.

Just an XX here to show support

2 upvotes · 10 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

Welcome to the subreddit.

Please don't feel like an outsider, or like you aren't a "full member" because you're female. It doesn't work like that. This isn't a movement "for men", its for people who care about men, whether they be male or female.

One of the biggest missteps the feminist movement made was excluding male voices from the their discussions. We don't want to make a mistake like that here.

Please make yourself at home.

The SPLC is getting some push back from Reason Magazine and Business Insider:"A Civil Rights Group Is Now Criticizing Random Jerks For Not Calling Women Back After Sex"

2 upvotes · 10 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

You.

You've gone too far this time.

You have neither reason nor rhyme.

To try to take this soul which is so rightfully mine.

"Mad Men" | A men's rights group has been stirring up controversy on Arizona State campus.

2 upvotes · 9 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

What did they do?

Exist?

What do Men Want in a Wife, and Why Won't Wives Oblige?

2 upvotes · 6 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

Author is right about what men want from women, but I don't agree with his diagnosis. I think it's simpler than that.

I think that women are no longer pleasant to men because no one expects them to be. Simply courtesy, let alone considerate kindness, to males, has been tarred with the brush of subservience and archaic values.

Women have been taught that they must strong and independent, and many have learned aggression and mistook it for assertiveness.

We've heard much about how strong assertive businesswomen are "stereotyped" as "cold-hearted bitches" if they try to compete in a "man's world". But no seems to have examined the possibility that they actually are cold-hearted bitches, because the social pressure to be nice to people (still present for males) has been removed for them.

In short kindness or courtesy to a man, whether in the home or the workplace, is no longer seen as a virtue.

Objections to Reauthorizing the Violence Against Women Act: A conservative woman debates two feminists

2 upvotes · 6 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

Conservatives debating feminists about how to govern society is like arsonists debating insurance scammers about how to keep property values high.

Can we change the title of /r/mensrights to something less angry?

2 upvotes · 4 March 2012 · /r/MensRights

No.

Girl insistently asks "are you seeing other people?"

2 upvotes · 28 February 2012 · /r/seduction

Uh, it sounds like you're in one.

No, he's not. No one is bound by a contract they didn't sign.

Girl insistently asks "are you seeing other people?"

2 upvotes · 28 February 2012 · /r/seduction

"No, I keep bumping into them because they're invisible. It's really embarrassing."

I've reached the point...

2 upvotes · 21 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Remember that the point isn't to get upvotes. The point is to say things.

Humans are not, by and large, rational creatures. They do not believe things because of evidence. They believe things because other people believe them. They define "reasonable" to mean "popular". If lots of people believe a thing, they think it must be sensible.

A belief which is popular must, in their eyes, be sensible, otherwise they would be forced to confront the fact that the vast majority of humans are delusional, actually insane, and this would be far too threatening.

This means we don't need to convince anyone by presenting an argument that they believe. All we have to do is be visible in increasing numbers, and that alone will somehow, in their twisted values, be evidence that we are right.

Barbara Kay: It takes two to raise a child

2 upvotes · 15 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Biology is a science, not some sacred idol you can invoke to back up any nonsense you choose to make up.

The way science works is that if you say something, you have to test it to provide evidence to back it up.

Where's your evidence?

To straight, male MRAs in relationships: Has your stance on men's rights had any impact on your relationship? How does your wife/girlfriend view your opinions?

2 upvotes · 14 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Define troll, because we seem to have different definitions, and yours seems to be "anyone whose opinion I don't agree with".

You haven't been here long, have you?

There is a small, but vocal minority of people whose sole purpose in life appears to be to come in here and insult us. I'm not talking about people who come in here to argue. I'm not even talking about people who come in to argue and make groundless accusations.

I'm talking about people who just chant gutter insults, over and over.

The alleged person to which you refer is one such. He shows up in nearly every thread to serve irrelevant and inflammatory ad hominem, redolent with the scent of his own nagging fear.

We tolerate these hob-goblins in a way that no other subreddit would, since we do not wish to set a precedent for banning dissenting voices, even when they add no value, and indeed cannot form a coherent argument.

But that doesn't mean we can't express our contempt on a personal level, for contributions about as weighty as a puff of warm hydrogen, by hitting that blue arrow.

I wandered in here today and I'm a little hurt.

2 upvotes · 12 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

I would like to hear more about this one because this isn't an issue that I've thought much about until now.

When a man rapes a woman, it is against the law. When a woman rapes a man, the law is the instrument she uses

LPS

I've heard of male birth-control, but that's about it.

Separate response to follow.

Would you propose to make prenuptials customary?

Prenups don't help when courts invalidate or simply ignore them. The gender bias of the family court system needs to be eliminated. And we need to stop incentivizing ridiculous awards by eliminating the practice whereby the system gets a cut of payments.

Agreed. I actually had a male friend in this predicament. The girl didn't want to admit she cheated on her boyfriend willingly (which she told me later). He's lucky she didn't press charges. The whole thing was disgusting.

Not only are false accusations of rape a real issue, there are things that are legally defined as rape, which aren't. Drunken sex, for example. As a matter of black letter law, if a drunk man and a drunk woman have sex, then it's rape. Because she's drunk and "can't consent", but he's still responsible for his actions.

In general, when talking about penalties for rape, feminists want us to imagine the most severe circumstances (forcible rape by a stranger), but when talking about what is rape, they want us to include even the mildest forms of pressure as coercion (getting someone aroused while they're half asleep, seducing a drunk woman, or the guy who didn't stop when his wife told him to, six seconds before ejaculation. Yes, he was convicted. You can't make this shit up.)

I was once accused of rape by a woman who, the night before, had torn the buttons off my shirt in her eagerness to get it off me. (The next day, she was ashamed of betraying her boyfriend.) Fortunately, this accusation was made to me, not to the police. But what the actual fuck? Not everyone who cries rape is telling the truth, and not everything feminists call rape is actually rape, or even a big deal.

But dare to say that, and everyone loses their minds.

What is a Relationship? (hint: you've been lied to)

2 upvotes · 11 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

This message has been brought to you by the Institute For Slowly And Painfully Working Out The Glaringly Obvious.

I wandered in here today and I'm a little hurt.

2 upvotes · 11 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

You just made me think of... nasal spray.

No, I'm serious. You know that moment when your sinuses actually open, and the stuffiness starts to go away, and you can breathe again? That's how reading this made me feel. Thanks for that.

We would love to discuss these issues, with women in general, or even with feminists. We would love to take our place at the table, and negotiate some kind of compromise. Settle gender politics issues with everyone's needs considered and represented.

And when women, even feminists, like you come in here and actually listen, you often come to the same conclusion. That we actually have something to say worth hearing.

And if we could do that, you'd find that, while, yes, we are incredibly white-hot angry, what we want isn't a rollback of what you spent fifty years getting... what we want is for you to take up the responsibilities that go with it, so we can have some rights, too.

- We don't want to take away a woman's right to choose. We want a man's right to choose, so that we can opt out of being a parent if she chooses to bear the child.
- We don't want women to get less pay for equal work. We just want them to actually do equal work. (And then they will get equal pay.)

- We don't want to burn down Planned Parenthood clinics. We just want real male options for birth control, and for them to dispense these, instead of sanctimonious lectures about how we are bad people if we don't want to put on a rubber penis-crushing device before sex.
- We don't want to women to be unable to leave an unhappy marriage, we just want to keep the money we earned when she does.
- We want to see our children.
- We don't want to reduce or eliminate penalties for actual rape, we just don't want the definition of rape expanded to include having sex with drunk women, or sex that a woman latter decides she regrets. (You think MRAs are bitter and angry? You should see some of the hate mail I got for saying this.)
- We want you to do equal time for equal crimes.

Okay, I'm going to stop now. You get the idea. None of these are unreasonable, and there's a lot of reasonable women out there who would be more than willing to go there. Who may be self-described feminists, but don't understand that they are effectively part of a highly successful female supremacy movement.

So this discussion would be productive. But feminist leaders (or, as you say, gatekeepers) don't want to have it. Perhaps we just have to wait for women like you to wander in here, equipped with decency and courage and an open mind.

I don't expect that you will suddenly agree with us on everything, but welcome to the discussion.

Documentary asks if all men are pedophiles. What are your thoughts?

2 upvotes · 11 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

I'm just sharing my opinions and asking questions.

Is your mother a whore?

Are you the top distributor of heroin and child pornography in the western hemisphere?

Have you stopped cheating on your taxes?

... Hey, I'm just asking questions, here.

Something I'd like to whine about momentarily - I despise how anyone who disagrees with Feminism is an "MRA troll".

2 upvotes · 8 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Yes, it's true that every thread seems to have at least a couple feminist trolls... not feminist disputants, people who hate everything we stand for and are making arguments against it, but trolls who just spew insults and accusations.

But to ban or not to ban is a choice that runs deeper than that. Are insults really so hurtful to us that we are willing to give up an open forum to get rid of them? We hold the moral high ground by virtue of the way that we get rid of nonsense with arguments, laughter, and downvotes, not bans and censorship. Do we want to give that up to spare our feelings?

I think we're tougher than that. Frankly, when someone comes in here and calls me a neckbeard who can't get laid, I feel... vindicated. Because that's all they could come up with. It proves their shit is weak. Because if they had anything better, they would've used it.

And I trust people who wander in here for the first time to be able to spot trolls for what they are. Desperate people trying to hold onto their irrational beliefs despite increasing cognitive dissonance. It's always the least secure beliefs that create the greatest heat when scrutiny is applied.

Something I'd like to whine about momentarily - I despise how anyone who disagrees with Feminism is an "MRA troll".

2 upvotes · 8 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

What exactly do you mean, "encourages" them?

We don't really ban people here, even if their views are utterly pernicious. So are we talking about a lack of bans, or something else?

Why are atheists so religious? PZ Myers and the religion of feminism

2 upvotes · 7 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Yeah, you know who's another big fat flock of hypocrites?

Vegetarians, that's who. All the time I see them refusing to eat chickens, pigs, cows, like real, moral, patriotic Americans should. I have never seen a single one refuse to eat humans! Or dolphins! Or yeti!

They must not be real vegetarians at all. They just hate chicken, beef, and pork.

What I don't understand is why they can't just keep their vegetarianism to themselves, eat chicken, beef, and pork in public, like the rest of us, fit in, and then they can be vegetarians in the privacy of their own homes where it won't offend us meat-eaters.

It deeply upsets me when I see someone not eating chicken, beef, and pork. This makes me feel bad. They are making me feel bad. They must be big arrogant bully meanies. Someone make them stop hurting my feelings!

A two-year-old boy with "three parents" - his lesbian mother, her partner and a gay father - is at the centre of an Appeal Court test case on the status of "alternative" families.

2 upvotes · 7 February 2012 · /r/MensRights government interfering with marriage then look to Ron Paul.

You do know that this guy is against the separation of church and state, right?

Why are atheists so religious? PZ Myers and the religion of feminism

2 upvotes · 7 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

Would that be the same UK with an official state religion that people are taxed to support?

Why men need marriage- Washington Post

2 upvotes · 4 February 2012 · /r/MensRights

You know what's missing from this article? One single, solitary reason why men need marriage.

Future Male Birth Control May Zap Sperm With Sound Waves: "Two 15-minute tickles could be the future of male birth control. New research on rats indicates that currently available ultrasound machinery could be used to kill off sperm-growing cells, technology that could render males infertile."

2 upvotes · 30 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

I am too large.

Do rape victims have a moral responsibility to report their rape?

2 upvotes · 28 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

No, they do not.

If victim A is raped, and does not report it, there is indeed the potential for victim B to be raped as well because the rapist was not stopped.

But to hold A responsible for this is to blame A for the actions of the rapist. That's not sensible.

Let's play a little game: Reframe the person above you.

2 upvotes · 28 January 2012 · /r/seduction

Well, I tried going up to people and talking to them in German, but it turns out... I don't speak German.

New: You're too pushy.

On Privilege

2 upvotes · 24 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

This seems to be posted on some weird racist site.

Anyway, according to leftists, privilege doesn't mean you've had an easy life (because they say that profoundly disadvantaged people can still have privilege), and it doesn't mean you've done something wrong (because even they are not crazy enough to think they can get away with calling being male or white an offense).

So what does it mean?

It means "shut up, the real victims are talking". It means that some opinions are more valuable than others. It means that some people speak first, others speak later, and some should not be allowed to speak at all.

It means that able-bodied, heterosexual white males are "designated listeners" who should be gagged wherever possible.

What the f just happened?

2 upvotes · 21 January 2012 · /r/seduction

And bait-and-switch is bait-and-switch.

There are certain behaviours that are both "legal", and "kind of an asshole thing to do".

What the f just happened?

2 upvotes · 21 January 2012 · /r/seduction

See the sidebar on overcoming LMR.

Why can't "nice" feminists admit that their movement has a dark side to it?

2 upvotes · 15 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Because they don't care.

They only care when the crazy (-er) feminists embarrass the movement. Not when they harm men, children, society, and even other women.

[FR] God Mode Unlocked: Beating the 10 year friendzone

2 upvotes · 15 January 2012 · /r/seduction

Yeah.

But if she's worried about being a slut, or looking like a slut, or being ridiculed or criticized for being a slut... then she must be thinking about doing something that would come off that way.

If your best friend's wife needs to vent about her father's latest alcoholic binge, she will not have the slightest reservation about leading you into her room, and shutting the door so you can talk in private. And she won't care who sees you come in.

A single woman who wants you to fuck her brains out will worry a lot about the fact that her roommates are in the apartment and will see you come in.

Women do not try to hide the evidence, unless it is actually evidence of something they want to hide.

[FR] God Mode Unlocked: Beating the 10 year friendzone

2 upvotes · 15 January 2012 · /r/seduction

I'm torn between several responses:

The belligerent "Their tears make excellent lube", and the slightly classier, "Their tears are sweet to me, like fine wine."

Really the concern troll brigade at SRS kinda annoyed me when I learned of their existence, but actually being linked by them feels good.

Surprisingly so, in fact.

When you get a bunch of bigots who cannot even see that they are bigots, who are so intolerant and hateful that they cannot even pause to seriously consider the views of those they disagree with... it kind of feels good to be misunderstood and hated by them, because it shows you that they're hopeless, that you don't have to undertake the impossible task of getting them in touch with reality.

You can just ignore them, and talk to people who live the real world. And eventually history will just pass them by.

8 Reasons Young Americans Don't Fight Back: How the US Crushed Youth Resistance

2 upvotes · 9 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

9. Liberalism.

The majority of your "resistance" are, and would have to be, young white males. You know, the same group your movement has been calling privileged little shits.

So what you are saying is essentially, "No, noes! The people we have been calling The Great Enemy refuse to join us in overcoming The Great Enemy!"

Yet MORE proof that radical feminists are out to silence all but themselves, the "ladies" at radfem hub stating that transwomens voice's arent welcome in feminist spaces.

2 upvotes · 3 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

Because that's what the conversation devolves into every time.

There's this pernicious idea that "You are a bigot if your personal sexual preference makes a distinction between postop transsexuals and XX females."

No one seems willing to discuss anything else until we surrender autonomy over our own sex lives. Since we cannot do so, coming from the position that we are human beings with the same rights as anyone else, there's no way to get past this.

We end up arguing endlessly about whether or not we are bigots.

[FR] My New Year Party kiss turned bad

2 upvotes · 2 January 2012 · /r/seduction

This was LMR, not a fail.

She wanted to do what she was going to do, but then, out of the mood-elevating atmosphere of the party, she realized that other women (her roommates) would know what she did, and ASD kicked in.

Overcoming ASD in a private bedroom is pretty easy. Overcoming ASD on a cold public street is hard, and would be a tough challenge for even the best of us.

But once she has entertained the idea of sexing you, the resistance gets weaker. Take another run. Be sure to act a little aloof and miffed about being bait-and-switched, but not so much so that you look desperate.

"Fine, see ya" was probably the best thing you could have said.

Improving the reputation of the MR movement by learning self control.

2 upvotes · 1 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

some people need to hang out in a place like /r/philosophy for a while. You cannot convince people to your way of thinking by being a jerk to them.

Dude, less philosophy, more psychology.

You don't convince people by being mean or nice to them.

You convince people by standing up and being counted. People find popular opinions reasonable. Our goal isn't to persuade feminists of anything. They aren't listening, and don't care.

Our goal is to show how many of us there are, to give men who have been living in silent resentment the courage, the legitimacy, to add their voice to ours.

Tell me, how will running scared from accusations of "being a big ol' MEANY" help us do that?

Improving the reputation of the MR movement by learning self control.

2 upvotes · 1 January 2012 · /r/MensRights

-Satirizes stereotyping and gender hatred.

-By stereotyping redditors and saying hateful things about them.

I just realized that in the 17 years that I've been sexually active, not one woman respected my wishes when I declined sex.

2 upvotes · 24 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

You hate feminists so much you kind of come across as being angry with all women.

We have to say this a lot in here, about once for every new person who comes in... "feminist" and "woman" are not synonyms. The feminist movement has been presuming to speak for all women for some decades now. But if we were to be angry with women just because we are angry with feminists, that would be agreeing with that presumption. We do not.

People, being pack animals, tend to confuse "normal" with "healthy" and "sane". So it is that you see hate when I say: "Women have been taught by feminism to view us with contempt", but you do not see feminism as a hate movement, when it says that all men are rapists, or that we are inherently violent and abusive, or that our population should be reduced.

We are, in point of fact, a counter-hate movement. We are intolerant of intolerance... which seems a radical position when, and only when, intolerance has become the mainstream. Pointing out the hatefulness and hypocrisy of feminists seems petty precisely because that hatefulness is so ubiquitous as to be invisible. Other people just don't notice the implications of phrases like "testosterone poisoning". They don't notice Homer Simpson. They don't notice Hillary Clinton saying that women are the primary victims of war.

To say that feminism is a hate movement sounds... strange. But it sounds strange because it is unfamiliar. When one begins to understand the links between feminism and misandry, one starts to understand that calling feminism a gender equality movement or a women's rights movement is like calling the KKK a racial equality movement or a white rights movement.

Pointing out these links sounds strange and unfamiliar, and it's a short step from there to assuming that it's hateful and crazy.

But the real craziness is for an "-ism", a single political doctrine, to presume to speak for an entire gender.

well its official boys now have less worth than animals , to avoid hurting animals a research facility is using donated foreskins instead (i dont know how a baby can donate part of its body but eh ..)

2 upvotes · 22 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

If someone cuts off my finger, and it's sent to a lab for research, cutting my finger off was obviously a bad thing, but the lab itself isn't doing anything wrong.

Everyone who is currently in prison for receiving stolen goods will be grateful to hear that.

Porn and Masturbation Abstinence

2 upvotes · 22 December 2011 · /r/seduction

Check your fucking sources:

Marnia Robinson is a former corporate attorney with degrees from Brown and Yale who writes books about the unwelcome effects of evolutionary biology on intimate relationships and the striking parallels between recent scientific discoveries and traditional sacred-sex texts. Her cross-disciplinary perspective incorporates the insights of psychologists, psychiatrists, neuroscientists, evolutionary biologists, anthropologists and even ancient sages. With her husband Gary Wilson, who taught anatomy and physiology for years and is a neuroscience enthusiast, she writes articles for publications as diverse as The Evolutionary Review and the award-winning anthology Toward 2012: Perspectives on the Next Age. With Gary's help, she also blogs on "The Huffington Post" and "The Good Men Project." Cupid is available on Kindle and has been published in German.

The Huffington Post? The Good Men Project?

You're posting propaganda from a feminist talking head.

How do videos like this make the men of MensRights feel?

2 upvotes · 19 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

It's not a big deal if you bring up matters like this when you're genuinely asking a question. We're just a little bit prone to suspect people's motives, because we get lots of people coming in here trying to sabotage us in various ways.

I know that last sentence sounds crazy. It would sound crazy to me, too, if I hadn't seen it happen. There's people out there who hate r/mensrights and everything it stands for, with a passion that simply has to be seen to be believed.

We have not one but two subreddits (r/shitredditsays, and r/againstmensrights) devoted to opposing us in any way they can, underhanded or not. And this is what they are like when we're just getting together online to talk about this stuff. Among ourselves. We haven't even gotten to the protest-march stage yet, much less the overturning-laws stage.

Now, the fact that we create such fear doesn't prove that we're right.

But it does mean that these people have some explaining to do.

An open letter to NOW President Kim Gandy

2 upvotes · 19 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

Cricket cricket cricket cricket

How do videos like this make the men of MensRights feel?

2 upvotes · 18 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

Well, what does "medical reasons" mean?

In this case, it means "we have two or three deeply flawed studies, performed in Africa many years ago, where we managed to get the numbers to suggest that circumcised men had slightly less STDs. And we're afraid to repeat these studies because we might not get the same results."

Circumcision to men was invented, and has been re-introduced many times, for the same purpose as it is to women: to discourage masturbation and diminish sexual pleasure.

Now, many modern genital mutilators of both genders would be appalled to hear that, arguing vigorously that they are not in any way against masturbation or sexual pleasure. Even if true, this is irrelevant, because they are continuing the customs and practices of those who were. Their own motives may be resistance to change, or simple profit (Yep, infant foreskins are big business... incredible, but true. Look it up.), but the practice they continue was designed to mess up sex.

One of the identifying characteristics of rationalizations as opposed to reasons is that rationalizers typically find a number of totally unrelated reasons to do things that just happen to coincide. It's always the same people saying that

- "We've always done it."

- "It's no big deal."

- "It looks better."

- "It's... uh... cleaner."

- "I once heard something about a study that said it prevents STDs."

- "Women prefer it."

They scrape together as many threadbare excuses as they can, but no amount of threadbare excuses add up to one reason.

Anyway, this is one of the major reasons why we believe there is a men's rights problem in this country. No one here would dream of cutting bits off baby girls. In fact, it's a crime to do so. It's even a crime to take them out of the country for the purpose of having it done somewhere where it isn't illegal.

But when it's happening to little boys, people just don't care, and they call us crazy, whackos, nutjobs, for caring.

Did that video seem right to you? Did it seem okay? No, of course. You're a decent human being, you saw it for what it was. The torture of an infant.

Then people come along with videos like the one you posted, and ask us "Don't you care about this?". And the answer is, if I saw a little girl being raped, I'd be appalled. But to come to me with a story about how it happens somewhere in the third world, when I can't see the evidence for myself, when I've come to a place that is here for men to gather and talk about men's rights, it seems not so much like an act of concern for little girls, and more an attempt to get me to stop focusing my attention on concern for little boys.

Because male circumcision is relevant to us here, in a way that little Kikuyu girls getting married at 13 isn't. Because all we have to do to stop male circumcision is stop fucking doing it. What are we supposed to do about the Kikuyu? Invade them and forcibly restructure their whole culture? Or just give them moral lectures? That would be pretty funny to them, I think... a moral lecture coming from a culture that butchered and enslaved millions of them.

First world European-derived societies have this stupid tendency to give other cultures moral lectures while conveniently forgetting all the shit we did ten years ago, all the shit we are doing right now which doesn't make the papers, and all the shit we are doing in our own society.

Kafkatrapping: Your refusal to acknowledge that you are guilty of X proves that you are guilty of X.

2 upvotes · 18 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

Success breeds liberalism, liberalism breeds taking from the successful, taking from the successful breeds the destruction of the society.

Not quite.

Incomplete picture. Liberalism and conservatism are twin diseases that feed on each other and grow together.

You see, when successful societies get started, they work together to increase the size of the pie. But when they become wealthy, they stop focusing on that, and begin fighting over how large a slice each segment of society gets.

-Liberalism is the rallying banner of the have-nots, who are fighting to take away as much pie as they can from the haves.

-Conservatism is the rallying banner of the haves, who are fighting to keep as much pie as they can, and be allowed free rein to use their power to grab more pie from the have-nots, or anyone else who's got some.

This destroys society in two ways.

-First, with no one working on the size of the pie anymore, it gradually dwindles to nothing. As the pie dwindles, each slice gets smaller, so each camp fights harder to grab the other faction's share of the pie.

-Second, both camps are fighting against the middle class. Liberals try to take from the wealthy and the middle class, and give to the poor. Conservatives try to take from the poor and the middle class to give to the wealthy. The middle class shrinks, and as anyone who is paying attention knows, that's the fastest route to joining the third world.

All the so-called "philosophies" of both camps are nothing but bullshit rationalizations for naked self-interest.

My wife just came back from Child Protective Services mediation training and told me that they teach that the man is ALWAYS the aggressor.

2 upvotes · 15 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

The Power and Control Wheel was developed from the experience of battered women in Duluth who had been abused by their male partners.

So apparently, not only are women never abusers, but there's never any abuse or violence in gay relationships, either.

This new learning amazes me, Sir Bedivere. Do explain again how sheep's bladders may be used to prevent earthquakes.

Debunking Myths about Gender and Mathematics Performance [PDF]

2 upvotes · 14 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

I don't know if women are actually worse at math, and I don't care. It's not important. What I do know is that you can't find discrimination by comparing what the results are to what you think they should be.

Because you don't know what they should be. You can't. That's not how science works.

On a totally unrelated note, what is an oncologist doing publishing this? It seems totally outside her field.

feminazi attacks Reddit: "Reddit contain so much anti-feminist sentiment that they even have active communities such as r/mensrights." An attempt to smear and censor us, and to force admins to shutdown this subreddit???

2 upvotes · 13 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

Not accountable? I heard that in US of A it's pretty easy to have CPS called upon her ass if you happen not to be white and affluent.

You heard wrong.

(Used to work for a drug rehab clinic.)

Would Mandatory Paternity Tests Protect Children?

2 upvotes · 13 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

Interesting how the two questions are "would it protect children?" and "would it unfairly punish women?".

Gee, which group is missing from all this concern?

How does inequality hurt men, and how can we feminists help you men fight that inequality? Your thoughts are appreciated!

2 upvotes · 12 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

Hmm, I didn't realize patriarchy was such a debated topic.

Feminists often do not. It's easy to not notice that you're only talking to other feminists, because, as I said, it's the areas that these discussions take place in which exclude dissent. Thus, individual feminists don't have to consciously exclude anyone.

As an amateur historian (and not just as a feminist), I came to the patriarchy conclusion just from studying various societies throughout history.

It's very easy to do history like creationists do biology... to say "here is the theory, what facts can be found to support it?". But science doesn't work like that. One must say "here are the facts, what conclusions do they imply?".

This becomes even more critical when the facts are unclear, and more critical still when one must rely on secondary sources, all of whom have their own viewpoints and agendas.

One should be very, very wary indeed, when one looks at what one thinks are the facts, and gets told exactly what one wants or expects to hear.

I suppose we could argue whether or not patriarchy still exists

First we would have to look at the question of whether such a thing has ever existed. For your edification, I cover an alternate hypothesis in a second reply to this comment, as soon as I can spare the time to write it.

But that's not what I'm interested in now. I don't want to come to your page just to argue.

Then you shouldn't have brought it up. Doing so poisons the discussion. You cannot reasonably expect me to start from the premise:

"The world, your nation, and all your social groups were built for you, by people who like you, who had your best interests at heart."

and then move directly to:

"Now tell me what your complaints are."

The single word "Patriarchy" is shorthand for a host of ideas that imply that I have no legitimate complaints whatsoever. Men's rights and the notion of a "Patriarchy" cannot coexist.

tl;dr: Explaining your grievances to someone is an act of trust, trust that you will be listened to and taken seriously. Use of anti-male rhetorical constructs in the question destroys that trust before it has even begun to form.

girlwriteswhat on Legal Paternal Surrender

2 upvotes · 9 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

I'd love to see #2 come into effect, just for the looks of horror on so many people's faces.

Might be fun to try legally. Have your DNA sequenced, then patent it. Then when somebody "forgets" her birth control, you can not only sue her, she's also a criminal (DMCA).

girlwriteswhat on Legal Paternal Surrender

2 upvotes · 8 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

The problem is that a huge number of people do not believe it is irrelevant. This is because if a man played any part at all--even if it was to leave a used condom where a woman could get it--he's seen to have a level of responsibility equal to hers.

Yep, people are often kinda dumb. I don't necessarily think it's a good idea to indulge that by refuting their irrelevant argument, rather than pointing out irrelevance. Leaves you open to infinite variations on the "chewbacca defense".

I'm starting to be of the opinion that, unless a man agrees in advance to have a child with someone, any semen that comes into her possession from him (whether in her vagina or her trash bin) is now HER property, not his. He's no longer responsible for it. He can't control what is done with it once it leaves his body, so it doesn't belong to him anymore.

That's a good argument. We can construct an even stronger one by using it as one half of a reasoning-by-cases argument.

His sperm, once it leaves his body, either becomes her property, or remains his.

1. If it becomes her property, she bears legal and financial responsibility for what she does with it.
2. If it remains his property, then she has used it without his permission, and created a derivative work from it, in violation of his intellectual property rights. She therefore bears tort liability to him for any personal or financial harm he suffers as a result.

girlwriteswhat on Legal Paternal Surrender

2 upvotes · 8 December 2011 · /r/MensRights

Sure, but think about it this way:

What if men really were 50% responsible for preventing unwanted conception? What if we really had half the power?

We would still be entitled to the same amount of control over whether or not to be parent as women have. Women can abort. They can abandon a child to adoptive parents.

So who carries the responsibility for prevent pregnancy is irrelevant, and should be treated as such.

Relevant (x-post from f7u12)

2 upvotes · 27 November 2011 · /r/MensRights

I should say, however, that I also see your point as well... we cannot simply focus on any criticism of a man as criticism of men, or characterize any double standard as unjust (we are not foolish enough to be gender constructivists).

There's a certain risk of seeming petty, if we start focusing on individual cases of male-bashing, or misandry. But at the same time, I think we can't duck the responsibility to look at a bunch of trees, and point out that, yes, that is indeed a forest.

The HPV vaccine is now approved for men 26 and under.

2 upvotes · 28 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

Citation needed to prove that Gardasil does not harm people.

You cannot prove a negative.

Domestic violence groups claim the use of logic by men is abuse

2 upvotes · 27 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

I generally like this woman's writing, but I find it disturbing to read this:

Dr Tara J. Palmatier provides confidential, fee-for-service, consultation/coaching services to help both men and women work through their relationship issues via telephone and/or Skype chat. Her practice combines practical advice, support, reality testing and goal-oriented outcomes. Please visit the Shrink4Men Services page for professional inquiries.

... at the bottom of each article. Feels like the psychological equivalent of chasing ambulances.

Female sexism at OWS - courtesy of Asmaa Mahfouz, who shamed men into getting killed in Egypt, now claims women stronger than men.

2 upvotes · 26 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

They have babies, deal with it.

Motherhood, the hardest job in the universe. Also, something that you can do by accident. But it's the hardest job in the universe. Really.

Circumcised men have a 4.5 times greater chance of suffering from erectile dysfunction than intact men - study by International Journal of Men's Health

2 upvotes · 25 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

Okay, this guy is a troll, and fractally wrong, but for the benefit of anyone else who's following along, we do need to consider the third case (the second is obviously stupid).

One possibility that occurs to me is that X could be age. People born earlier were more likely to be circumcised, and older people are more likely to have trouble getting it up.

It's unlikely that that someone studying ED would be naive enough to fail to control for age, but stranger things have happened.

Circumcised men have a 4.5 times greater chance of suffering from erectile dysfunction than intact men - study by International Journal of Men's Health

2 upvotes · 25 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

You were asleep in every science class you ever took, weren't you?

If A is correlated to B, there are 3 possibilities.

A causes B.

B causes A.

X causes A and B.

If none of these is true, then there is no actual correlation, and your sample was off. Or you did your ANOVA wrong. Whatever.

The saying "correlation does not imply causality" (which I believe you were trying to refer to, despite getting it all wrong) means finding a correlation does not establish the causal relationship, not that it doesn't show that one exists.

Establishing a correlation means that you have established that two elements are connected. Establishing causality means you have shown what that relationship is.

We Are the 99%, Too: Creating a Feminist Space Within Occupy Wall Street

2 upvotes · 17 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

Now I know you're a parody, a nice subtle one.

I talk about how I rejected liberalism because it always talked and never listened, always explained and never empathized...

... and you link me to a harangue.

While I appreciate you serving as the perfect example of what I am talking about, we don't really need agents provocateur. There are enough people out there who are really like this.

ill just leave this repost from /r/reddit.com here

2 upvotes · 12 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

"... and throughout of all this, he refuses to invade China and reestablish me as theocratic dictator over a nation of serfs. So I have to run around pretending to be a good guy while taking money from the CIA."

Can we please debunk some of this?

2 upvotes · 10 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

That was just a suggested possibility. We have no way of getting at the actual numbers.

A favorite tactic of feminists when they play games with statistics is use the phrase "women and children", thereby using male children to pad out the number of implied females.

I would like to know the number of males (of any age) compared to the number of females (of any age) who die in war. That would be interesting to know.

"Nearly 3 out of 4 of the women surveyed said that name calling or put-downs on a regular basis constituted domestic violence and 44% suggested that even occasional harsh words counted as domestic violence."

2 upvotes · 10 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

That seems a bit hard on the poor cats.

Can we please debunk some of this?

2 upvotes · 10 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

There's no need to. All of these are just assertions without any supplied evidence. The burden of proof rests on the person who makes an assertion.

Go to gay bars - sounds stupid but I know for a fact it works [X-post from funny]

2 upvotes · 8 October 2011 · /r/seduction

Apparently, it takes the average gay guy exactly 4.3 seconds to determine you're not a target. Maybe your jeans aren't skinny enough, maybe your hair isn't moussed enough — whatever it is, they know semi-instantly.

Uh, no.

I get hit on by gay men all the time. And I have to tell them.

Maybe it's because I'm a dead ringer for Freddie Mercury.

Why men are in trouble (Why it's time for men to man up) - CNN.com

2 upvotes · 4 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

False dichotomy.

MGTOW aren't always men who don't want marriage and children under any circumstances. They are simply those who reject the bad deal they are being offered.

Tell me this isn't true?: Refusing to have sex with a woman whilst she is on her periods now makes you a misogynist.

2 upvotes · 3 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

I thought we just heard that penis-in-vagina sex was a side effect of The Patriarchy(tm).

How feminist men emotionally disable women

2 upvotes · 1 October 2011 · /r/MensRights

There aren't really any ones or zeroes. We just use high and low voltages to represent them.

How being in a relationship has made me less of a man

2 upvotes · 30 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

Testosterone is only responsible for the hair on his back....the rest is a very poorly constructed lie.

Not true. Testosterone does influence behaviour, we know that. Just as other hormones do.

The misandry lies in the belief that this different behaviour is inherently "bad", as opposed to "sometimes disruptive, but often civilization-building".

Male-assigned-at-birth people are conditioned from birth to be misogynists

2 upvotes · 30 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

it really isn't against the principles of anarchy to have voluntary rule-based organizations.

And then those organizations have some territory, be it a virtual space or actual land. And then they get big enough that you need someone whose job it is to enforce the rules, or vote on them. And then someone breaks the rules, or disagrees about their interpretation. And doesn't want to leave. And you have to force them out.

And you look around, and suddenly realize that you have a state. With a government. And laws. Backed up by force. Meet the new boss. Same as the old boss.

Anarchy doesn't work because it's inherently unstable. Our brains are hardwired for small tribes. Anything bigger than that, we need rules for. Because our brains just can't handle it.

Male-assigned-at-birth people are conditioned from birth to be misogynists

2 upvotes · 29 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

A place for discussions on bans, changes and whatnot of /r/anarchism by its active anarchists

Hahahahaahahahahahaaaaaahaahaahaahhhhaaa.

They can't even run an internet forum about anarchy, according to anarchist principles. Epic fail.

Title Change for /r/Mensrights

2 upvotes · 28 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

That way we don't exclude potential feminist allies...reminded me of the women's spaces that automatically discount the opinions of men

For the nth time, "woman" and "feminist" are not synonyms.

The Fine Line Between Marriage and Divorce

2 upvotes · 26 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

Divorce is largely free of tangible negative consequences for women. Of course that option is going to be on the table.

Sandra Day O'Connor - first woman appointed to Supreme Court: "When the NY Times asked if she considered herself a feminist, she replied, "I don't call myself that.""

2 upvotes · 25 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

Or, to be pedantic, it might equally be true that personal success is a predictor of the belief that internal factors influence success.

Arturo Gatti's childhood friend painted a disturbing picture of the welterweight champion's last few months as a battered husband.

2 upvotes · 19 September 2011 · /r/MensRights

Not at all.

This idea that physical skill at violence is even relevant to relationship abuse is a myth sprung from the notion that abuse only happens to women.

Sure, women can't fight men. But doesn't matter. Because victims of abuse don't fight back.

[FR1] 08/27, k-close, not so fast buddy

2 upvotes · 3 September 2011 · /r/seduction

I can't speak for all girlhood, but head-grabbing is a dealbreaker.

Guys, she means well, but don't take this at face value. From someone she was into, the forceful approach would have been "sexy".

He really lost her interest on the pier, by qualifying himself too much.

The real takeaway from the story is: don't talk about how awesome you are. Instead, show her how awesome you are. One good way to do this is by not needing her to think you're awesome.

Epic rejection by text message. What the heck happened?

2 upvotes · 15 August 2011 · /r/seduction

She, being a self-proclaimed alpha female, wants guys to supplicate to her.

Pretty much. Seduction isn't just about whether sex will happen, it's also about negotiating the power balance under which it will happen.

She gave you compliance tests, you didn't comply. So you were obedient and subordinate enough for her, and she nexted you.

Unless you're into dominatrixes, I'd say you dodged a bullet.

HuffPo columnist thinks women deserve lifetime alimony

2 upvotes · 15 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

It's the old "some of a job is all of a job" fallacy.

If I once put up some shelves, it doesn't make me a carpenter. If I occasionally fix a computer or two, it doesn't entitle me to an IT salary in addition to what I am already paid.

Pretending that taking care of a home and (possibly) children is a full-time job (much less a 24/7 job where you presumably never sleep) is ignoring what really liberated women... labour-saving devices invented, designed, and built by men.

Tales of a sexually liberated woman: hypergamy, affairs, broken marriages, divorce, suicide, and kid in the psych ward. This story's got it all!

2 upvotes · 14 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

So can monogamy.

The balance of male/female power in a society is largely orthogonal to the amount of sexual freedom.

The amount of freedom and justice in a society, however, is not.

Throughout history, totalitarians, dictators, and tyrants, regardless of their ideology, have almost always attempted to suppress or channel sexual behaviour. This is simply because sex is a private good... it only benefits the participants.

Authoritarians are not interested in allowing people to benefit themselves. They want people to spend their lives benefiting the authoritarian. And there is much to be gained by an authoritarian by controlling who is allowed to have sex, and how, and when.

If, for example, you can promote a religion and culture that prevents young men from having contact with women or even seeing them, then they will be willing to blow themselves up for a promise of 72 virgins in the afterlife.

Thus, the hijab is not merely an instrument for the oppression of women... it is an instrument for the oppression of men.

"Shift the paradigm - something should have to prove it's not misogynist"... And feminists claim they don't believe in guilty until proven innocent.

2 upvotes · 14 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

If you want to be a part of someone else's community then you should have to be sensitive to how that community operates.

The lack of self-awareness and sense of irony it requires to post this in a community devoted to men's rights is truly staggering.

Female Masculinist on Self-Control

2 upvotes · 9 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

no matter how I reason one through, someone is going to end up very very screwed, whether it's the mother, the father or the kid.

And right now, our culture's priority list goes Woman > Child > Man.

But just because you cannot think of something to do about this, does not mean that nothing can be done.

If we narrow the scope of the discussion to abortion specifically, you can think about it this way:

Pregnancy has two effects on a woman:

1. She has a child in her body for nine months, and then has to push it out.
2. She is a parent for the rest of her life, with those (limited) parental responsibilities that our society ascribes to a woman.

A woman's pregnancy has one effect on a man:

1. He is a parent for the rest of his life, with the (far greater) parental responsibilities that our society ascribes to a man. The child may or may not be his.

So we see that a woman can "opt out" of one or both of these effects, or not, as she chooses. She can have any combination she wants.

A man cannot opt out of anything. He gets whatever the woman chooses for him.

Now, whether or not a woman carries a pregnancy to term is about her body. But it's not relevant to him. It doesn't affect him. What effects him is what happens afterward.

So there's no need for him to interfere with whether or not she has an abortion, so long as he has the option to opt out of fatherhood, the way she can opt out of motherhood.

In other words, he doesn't have to sign the birth certificate. If a woman has the right to disown or kill her child, then a man deserves at least the right to disown his.

Female Masculinist on Self-Control

2 upvotes · 8 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

But asserting that no one has ever suggested that women keep their legs closed is silly.

Sure. Traditionalists. Religious conservatives.

But MRAs are not answerable for people saying that, because traditionalists, and religious conservatives are not MRAs. They have nothing to do with each other.

Traditionalists want no one to have any rights to self-determination and freedom.

Feminists want women to have total self-determination and freedom, and men to take up any slack or burden this imposes on men or society as a whole.

MRAs want male and female self-determination to exist, and be balanced against the burdens they impose on others.

So a traditionalist who says "Keep your legs together", and a feminist who says "I have total control over when and how sex happens, or it's rape"... these are pretty much the same thing from a man's viewpoint, because either way, it's someone else controlling the whether, when, and how of his sexual life.

Female Masculinist on Self-Control

2 upvotes · 8 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

It's an argument used by morons against men, but god forbid you should ever suggest a woman do it instead of having an abortion or dumping their child.

It always comes up in arguments when MRA's advocate for a form of 'rights, responsibilities and financial' abortion for men who don't want to become fathers. Something to even out the inequalities in parental options without impinging on the woman's rights over her own body.

We want to be very careful, however, to make it clear that we are arguing for a male right to voluntary parenthood, NOT for an abortion ban.

A retreat into traditionalism does nothing for men's rights, since it is almost as anti-male as feminism is.

How to Attract Women - Humorous advice from a man long out of the game

2 upvotes · 2 August 2011 · /r/seduction

40 years out of date advice is 40 years out of date.

I'm tired of MensRights and feminism acting like they are at war, so I created a reddit for us all to talk about issues of gender equality.

2 upvotes · 1 August 2011 · /r/MensRights

The very act of speaking to someone is an act of trust. It is an act of trust that the person you are speaking to is reasonable, will listen, wants to understand, and will respond honestly.

This trust, in the case of feminists, is in a broken state. Because it's not "bad feminists" that give feminism a bad name. It's feminism. It's the poisonous ideology itself.

Talking with a feminist about gender issues is every bit as much as waste of your breath as trying to argue with a fundamentalist about the existence of god.

Our goals will be achieved, not by convincing feminists of anything, but repeatedly and undeniably demonstrating our existence, so that our goals and values enter the public consciousness. Once that happens, we will no longer we dismissed as unreasonable simply because what we say is unfamiliar, and disagrees with the familiar.

In other words, there is no point in talking to feminists, because they aren't listening.

PSA: Fellow MRAs, please do not make generalizations or prejudiced remarks.

2 upvotes · 30 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

Concern troll is very concerned.

Study Of Role Of The Mainstream Media Against Male Rights: TheGoodMenProject

2 upvotes · 27 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

it doesn't seem unreasonable to me to say that women have been oppressed on a level men have not

Are you trying to qualify for the Oppression Olympics? Unless one injustice somehow wipes out another, "who is more oppressed" is irrelevant.

that an organization for men and organizations for feminism are mutually exclusive.

An organization for men's rights and an organization for women's rights are not mutually exclusive.

An organization for men's rights and an organization for feminism are .

This is because feminism has shown itself to be categorically opposed to men's rights.

Sedit; I have a hair trigger on my erectile response. What can I do about it?

2 upvotes · 27 July 2011 · /r/seduction

Be thankful, that's what you should do about it.

It's not a problem, it's the whole point. There are many people with a slow trigger instead, they are the ones with the problem.

What you need to fix is your attitude. The penis is not a shameful thing. Male sexuality is not predatory or an unwelcome imposition. An erection is not something to be ashamed of.

What's the deal with /r/MensRights vs /r/Feminisms?

2 upvotes · 26 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

If I want to advocate for Men's Rights, why should I not apply the label 'feminist'?

Concern troll is irony-resistant.

Thinks that somehow "equality" is supposed to happen in an environment where men's issues can't even have a label, much less a movement.

Douche Bag of Epic Proportions (the_kitten, et al)

2 upvotes · 26 July 2011 · /r/seduction

I am sorry that you are so afraid of being hurt or taken advantage of. Perhaps in time you will realize that men, also, are human beings, and can feel pain, can have needs, and might even deserve a little respect.

We are not here to please you.

The flow of the stream is shaped by the curve of the hill. If you wish men to be honest with you, you must treat them best when they are most honest. And here you have found your way into one of the last safe places for men to be honest, and are attempting to punish that honesty.

If you want to see the who has made men this way, look over the sink in your bathroom.

Sigh. I feel like crawling into a hole...

2 upvotes · 21 July 2011 · /r/seduction

Not a huge problem, we're mostly guys here, so being harsh with each other to teach is something we do, and we should do, cause it works.

It's just that sometimes someone is being self-indulgent, and needs a kick to get him on his feet, and sometimes he's down because he's really taken a hard hit, or just has no fuel left, and he needs a boost up instead.

If this guy (and I hope he's reading this) is stuck in his head all the time, and can't get the little feelings of acceptance and connection and fellowship that people normally get through social interaction, then he's living his life fueled by sheer willpower and perseverance, and he's eventually going to run dry and become a very sad panda.

And, yes, he might start treating others with contempt. Angry people do that. He needs to realize that his disdain for others is harming him and them, that what they offer him isn't "nothing" but "something other than the intellectual".

Think of your mother. (Very few individuals are so unfortunate as not to have been loved by their mother.) She offers you no great insights, most of the time, doesn't regale you with vast swathes of deep and meaningful conversational content. But the process of talking to her is important nonetheless.

Small talk isn't about content, it's about process.

Sigh. I feel like crawling into a hole...

2 upvotes · 21 July 2011 · /r/seduction

I think the reason he's finding small talk "pointless" is that he's not experiencing the emotional connection that most people get from it.

While he's definitely missing the point, I don't think it's helpful to castigate him for not being enthusiastic about something that doesn't bring him pleasure. He's already feeling pretty bad, and part of that might be due to the way that he isn't tuned into those pleasant feelings of familiarity and connection and approval that one gets from other people.

A girl game player?

2 upvotes · 20 July 2011 · /r/seduction

Now I know this is probably sacrilege on reddit

Nope. Pretty much every week, we get girl or two popping in to ask for tips.

r/fpua

What is MR after? I always thought it was gender equality, but lately I have seen comments with upvotes supporting gender roles.

2 upvotes · 17 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

Equality is not the same as fairness.

Men and women are inherently different. We can try to deny it all we like, but we know that. To treat different people with different needs as the same is unfair to at least some of them, and probably all of them.

Feminism's beliefs and the policies it endorses, are based upon the notion that gender is what they call a "construct"... something not real. Something we create in our heads.

That just isn't true.

How do we treat people fairly when they are different? Well, I don't have one magic-bullet answer. It's a difficult problem. But I know we have to try. I know we have to start treating everyone, not just the people everyone thinks are "less privileged", as human beings with valid opinions and important needs.

We can no longer base our society's social structure on an idea that is only transparently false, but laughable.

It's time for us to step up and say that the Emperor is naked.

Guy and I hit it off really well, we had sex, he's stopped talking to me

2 upvotes · 16 July 2011 · /r/seduction

Young guys will sometimes avoid situations that they don't know how to deal with.

If he has been ducking you (and if you think he has, he probably has), then there's probably an issue he's got that's he's afraid to bring up.

Maybe he doesn't want a "relationship", but assumes you will because you're a girl.

Maybe he thinks you're "too easy" and must have low standards. Watch this youtube video.

If he's got this bizarre hangup, you have to move on. Guys have to cure themselves of this. Don't worry, more perceptive guys (especially older ones) realize that women have as much right to be enthusiastic about sex as men do.

Maybe he's got a girlfriend and he's racked with guilt.

In any case, it's okay to say to a guy "what's going on?". That doesn't turn us off the way it turns women off. But it's going to be tough to get a straight answer out of him. Men are not used to being allowed to be honest with women. You'll have to do some work to convince him that you want the truth, and you're not going to freak.

"Men and women play games with each other because men are operating under an irrational paradigm that says to men, 'you're not good enough for any woman, so you must pretend to be better than you are.'" - Johnny Sopporno

2 upvotes · 15 July 2011 · /r/seduction

http://www.reddit.com/r/seduction/comments/iht3z/interesting_and_wellwritten_article_arguing/c2407qc

http://www.reddit.com/r/seduction/comments/i8j1h/why_is_it_so_hard_to_see_the_benefits/c21rmf4

Why Women Think That 80% of Men are "Below Average"

2 upvotes · 15 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

No, you don't get to do that.

Nowhere did I say "generalization". I said "stereotype". If you don't understand the difference, we don't have a basis for conversation.

A generalization is "talking about two or more distinct objects".

A stereotype is a pre-conceived notion about a class of objects that resists contradictory evidence for a member of that class, or for the class in general.

Secondly, what women tend to lack in the area of attraction is not complexity, but self-monitoring behaviour. My evidence for this is the testimony of the goldmine of expertise that I linked to.

Women in this culture are not in any way simple creatures, but, existing as they do in an environment which sets their value artificially high compared to men (not reflecting market realities), they have little to no demand placed upon to self-monitor in this area.

Why are women so against being seen as "sluts"?

2 upvotes · 15 July 2011 · /r/seduction

Unless there are circumstances specific to that culture/environment that would curb that behavior. Just like the incidence of homosexuality is relatively similar cross culturally, except for in cultures that murder homosexuals.

Not so.

If you kill homosexuals, you don't get less people being born homosexual. You do get less homosexuals, but only because you killed some of them. Not because they somehow "suppressed" their instincts.

Culture suppressing instinct is a visible and acrimonious struggle. The absence of something in a culture doesn't therefore mean it is suppressed, it means it is simply absent.

If I had to guess (and bear in mind that this is only a guess), I would say that monogamy and male involvement in child-rearing came in with the agricultural revolution.

Hey r/mensrights, check your privilege [PDF]

2 upvotes · 10 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

ITT, somebody who doesn't understand the latin roots of the word "privilege" posts a PDF by some other people who don't understand the latin roots of the word "privilege".

tl;dr: none of those are examples of privilege.

The Post-feminism Man (2010)

2 upvotes · 10 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

Exactly.

We need to ask "what is the problem with wanting someone for sex? Why is what women are stereotypically assumed to want (companionship, love, support) is assumed to be mature and positive and adult, while what men are stereotypically assumed to want (sex, fun, excitement) is assumed to be childish and self-indulgent and immature?

To argue "That's a negative bias! Men don't only want sex!" is to be a tacit accessory in the greater bigotry... the notion that there's something wrong with wanting sex.

Since circumcision is debated so much here, I thought you guys (and gals) would like to see a video of the procedure. Turn down your volume as the screams of pain are pretty loud.

2 upvotes · 9 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=U93ZiR692l4&feature=related>

I am thinking about wearing a wedding ring to the next company I work for to help further my career.

2 upvotes · 7 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

I could see the argument that each of those categories isn't necessarily 20%, but at the same time, I think a relatively uniform distribution is a fair assumption.

No, it's not.

Your argument is crap. We can't make assumptions like that, we need to look at the numbers.

You're right to say that it's not so certain that single men are promoted less (and even if they were, it wouldn't necessarily indicate bias), but we need to look at the numbers, and the inputs.

Not screw around mistaking the cardinality of a set for its distribution.

Interesting and well-written article arguing against the PUA industry (please don't downvote, would rather like to hear Seddit's rebuttal against this article.)

2 upvotes · 6 July 2011 · /r/seduction

While there are some generalizations, oversimplifications, and false dichotomies, he's largely right.

There is a tendency in PUA to regard the culture as a background and not think about it too much (as "Tyler Durden" says, "don't judge the terrain"), but one has to, sooner or later, ask the question:

Why is PUA/seduction just being explored now?

In other words, humans have been around for perhaps half a million years, and have had civilization for about ten thousand. Was everyone just clueless before that time?

If we think about this question, we are compelled to conclude that the terrain has changed, and that PUA is a response to that change.

In other words, there's a reason why men in the western world are suddenly having to read books by misfits in fuzzy top hats in order to get laid.

Now, it's understandable why PUAs are afraid to go down that road. Judging society carries a risk of looking weak or whiny, and certainly doesn't get you results in any short timeframe.

But by regarding the woman as "terrain", one makes a commitment to adapt to women, and raises no corresponding expectation that women must adapt to men. It makes the woman, no matter how childish and unreasonable, the measure of our success and value.

In short, successful PUA is, in some ways, bad inner game.

What he's trying to point out here, although in some respects he fails to see it himself, is that PUA is part of a larger issue.

Women in the first world have come to undervalue men.

That's why we have to work so hard on this stuff. Because of the perception in their minds that we come to the bargaining table with nothing. That we must start from zero, when they have value just by being women.

This leads to two conclusions:

1. In the short run, we must learn to work around this "terrain", tilted as it is, in order to get results.
2. In the long run, we must not simply accept and adapt to this as the "terrain", because that is beta, and bad inner game, and weak, and pathetic, and makes the problem worse.

Any thoughts on good responses to what I call the "embarrassing observer" situation....?

2 upvotes · 6 July 2011 · /r/seduction

The best response I can think of at the moment would be to move his process communication into the content channel in precisely the same fashion.

"Oh, I'm sorry, was I making you jealous? I can wait five minutes if you'd like to make a pass at her."

"According to the 1971 census, they report, 68% of 25-to 29-year-old university graduates were male. Ten years later, 54% were male and by 1991, the number was down to 51%. By 2001, only 42% of university graduates were male."

2 upvotes · 5 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

well, a few millenia of male dominance hasn't really worked out all that well for us.

Really? You're really going to say that civilization is bad? On the internet? Accessed from your computer? From the comfort of your air-conditioned home?

Really?

Don't MRAs and feminists both want gender equality? Where's the big disagreement?

2 upvotes · 3 July 2011 · /r/MensRights

This known as the "right to choose". Women have had it since 1973.

Stuff like this women.

2 upvotes · 30 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

If one is hit by "lightening" enough times, does one float away?

Megan Meier suicide

2 upvotes · 20 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

I'm confused. What does this have to do with men's rights?

What DO you want from women?

2 upvotes · 19 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

some jerk turns them completely irreversibly cynical.

Yep, always a man's fault.

Am I being sexist toward my own gender?

2 upvotes · 17 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

Okay, well, the first question you have to settle is, do you desire this woman?

In other words, are you making rationalizations about "protecting" her from the sexuality of other men, for the real reason that you want her yourself?

Now, this can be a difficult thing to admit. She might be quite a bit younger than you. But you must realize that this being difficult to admit, or embarrassing, is also a negative stereotyping of male sexuality. The only reason your desires, if you have them, would be inappropriate, unacceptable, or bad is if male sexuality is somehow inappropriate, unacceptable or bad.

We must not, we can not, we do not accept this premise.

If "cougar" women being attracted to younger men are acceptable, then so is the reverse. And what happens because of that can vary. Young people's priorities are just as important, just as acceptable, just as worthy, as older people's priorities. If a young person doesn't want sexual attention from someone else, regardless of their age, it is up to them and no one else to say "no, thanks". And if they want to say "yes, thanks", they it is no one's right to gainsay that decision.

If you desire this woman, stop being ashamed of it. That's a sexist attitude.

If you desire this woman, either make a move, or don't. That's entirely your decision.

If you make a move, whether she is interested or not is entirely her decision. No third party has the right to play "mother knows best" with her life.

If you don't make a move (because it would just be too weird), or she says "no, thanks", then you have no right to try to keep her from other men, because that is bigotry against her and them. Move on and find someone who appreciates you.

Something I've noticed about r/MensRights...

2 upvotes · 12 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

Something I've noticed at r/MensRights is that the idea of 'gender roles' is very much encouraged. There are links to studies that underscore the notion of genetic differences between male and female toy preferences, for example.

Don't you guys want to make it so that gender is not a barrier to men pursuing the fields they want to pursue?

What you are saying here typifies a belief which is almost universal among feminists, although it is certainly not limited to them. It is fact, common to every stripe of would-be social engineer, from christian fundamentalists to Marxists.

It is the unspoken assumption that opinions somehow control facts. That if all just believed something, we could somehow make it true.

This is primitive, magical, thinking.

It is unimportant whether I want the genders to be inherently different or not. The fact is that they are. No amount of wishing is going to change this.

Thus, there are two options open to me.

1. Live in a world where the genders are different, but everyone pretends they are the same.

2. Live in a world where the genders are different, and we acknowledge and deal with this.

There is no third option.

Why Feminists don't understand the Men's Rights Movement.

2 upvotes · 12 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

A very typical response to any man's complaint is to try to shame him into silence by calling him weak.

But nothing could be so weak as to suffer injustice without a word.

Why Feminists don't understand the Men's Rights Movement.

2 upvotes · 12 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

It's amusing how people who spout left-wing talking points without troubling to question them always consider themselves so much more open-minded than people who spout right-wing talking points without troubling to question them.

You congratulate yourself on your bigotry, and call it tolerance, because it is not one of the few forms of bigotry that you can actually recognize.

Yes, feminists do care about false rape accusations

2 upvotes · 10 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

I also don't think it's a coincidence that so many men's rights groups take up the cause of false rape accusations with great gusto, but that their enthusiasm for seeking justice through the law rarely extends to victims of sexual assault.

And I don't think it's a coincidence that so many feminist groups take up the cause of rape accusers with great gusto, but that their enthusiasm for seeking justice through the law rarely extends to victims of false accusation.

Female teacher charged in "affair" with 15-year-old; Not rape or molestation, but an affair.

2 upvotes · 9 June 2011 · /r/MensRights

In that case, in this instance, we have a problem.

Which is my whole point. Consent, and capacity to consent, varies from person to person. These cases need to be weighed on their individual merits.

Is wealth really a workable solution?

2 upvotes · 5 June 2011 · /r/seduction

I'm talking about being wealthy. Not "making 60k".

Is wealth really a workable solution?

2 upvotes · 5 June 2011 · /r/seduction

No.

You are fixating on wealth because you don't have much. You're believing the grass is greener over there.

It's not. I was poor as a younger man, and have become wealthy. I do alright, but becoming wealthy hasn't made me do any more "alright" than I did before.

Success fear

2 upvotes · 3 June 2011 · /r/seduction

You might be afraid of leaving that initial state where you have nothing to lose.

Once things go well, you have something invested.

I'm dancing with disaster...

2 upvotes · 27 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Indeed. Love and oneitis are different things.

Think about it, people. You love your dog. But you aren't afraid your dog will leave you. You don't get jealous when other people pet your dog. You don't try to buy your dog's affection with treats. You don't worry about saying the wrong thing to your dog. And you aren't afraid to smack your dog with a rolled-up magazine if he chews up your hiking boots.

"Ugly beds" stacked in gyms, tiny cages for suicidal prisoners—these photos helped convince Supreme Court justices to downsize California's overcrowded lockups.

2 upvotes · 25 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

But you don't understand! These people had a plant!

Ask Seddit: What's your best comeback for "Why are you staring at my tits?" (or the declarative variant: "You're staring at my chest.")

2 upvotes · 23 May 2011 · /r/seduction

"Why, yes. Yes, I am."

"You can thank me later. What's your name?"

"They're probably your best feature."

"That's what they're for."

Basically, don't deny it, don't be defensive, don't accept or even acknowledge the implicit assumption that there's something wrong with that.

Ridiculous relationship inequality (and I don't like my wife's friends)

2 upvotes · 20 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

Stop. Go directly to r/seduction. Do not pass Go. Do not collect $200. Go directly to r/seduction. Read everything, starting with the sidebar.

No, it's not just about how to pick up women. It's about understanding how women work, and what makes them attracted, or not.

And just from what I read, you are suffering from the the lack of this knowledge. Rather than correct your misunderstandings, I will direct you to the source.

Go there. Read. Do NOT assume it's just tricks for manipulative college kids. It's psychological realpolitik, and right now, that is what you need. Arm yourself with knowledge.

Go.

What do I do with a girl when I'm broke?

2 upvotes · 20 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Wait, did I just say that was fifteen years later? Fuck me I'm old.

Old-ass sedditors, unite!

This stuff is useful throughout life.

How does one go about oneitis?

2 upvotes · 20 May 2011 · /r/seduction

If you are afraid of losing her, it's oneitis.

So here's the deal...

2 upvotes · 19 May 2011 · /r/seduction

What's weird is that I've noticed that even though she lets me lay on her while watching stuff, lets me put my hand around her waist, shoulders, give her back/neck rubs, hold her hand, she doesn't reciprocate. But she doesn't withdraw either, which is hella confusing.

This may be a cultural thing, and/or indicate a higher level of submissiveness.

When you finish a backrub, turn your back, and say "My turn".

Jenna Mourey (JennaMarbles on youtube) on girls that piss her, and likely, most sedditors, off.

2 upvotes · 19 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Do not want.

Agree with most everything she's saying, but... That... Voice. Uuuuggggghhh.

You have to approach. [True story]

2 upvotes · 19 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Yep, even saying something stupid is better than saying nothing at all.

Feeling disillusioned with Seduction

2 upvotes · 18 May 2011 · /r/seduction

The problem with your question is that you assume most / all males need to be attractive to women in order for the species to survive. You ignore the fact that one male can mate with a very large number of females in a short timespan.

No, I don't. I assume that all males are the children of those who successfully reproduced.

5th date with a girl and things went very well. Today she doesn't call me or respond to my text. What should I do?

2 upvotes · 17 May 2011 · /r/seduction

What should I do?

Absolutely nothing. If you have set the hook well, she'll be back. The most important thing is not to look desperate.

Amanda Marcotte: Liberal Head, Bigoted Heart

2 upvotes · 17 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

Look good to who? Attractive to who? Serious question. Is the idea to look good in a way that other males will admire/envy, but in a way that is not gay?

As I keep fucking saying, who cares if it's gay? That accusation only matters if it's false.

But, to answer your somewhat unlettered question anyway, it is "not gay" in the same way that women who dress and preen to compete with other women are "not lesbians". So some of the same reasons apply. But it is also about attracting women.

I just don't get it. If The Situation is trying to appear attractive to me, he's failing.

Um, what situation? What does this sentence even mean?

The chickens come home to roost: when a feminist's son is falsely accused of rape

2 upvotes · 17 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

We're talking about social dynamics, here.

In this context, "resist" doesn't mean "physically struggle against". It means resist socially. Pretend indifference to a desired man. Say "no" to see he'll persist, when the eventual intention is to say "yes" if he does. Hold out for more effort from him.

The "physically struggle" thing? Yeah, many, possibly most, women have fantasized about that at some point. But that's not the kind of resistance they "always" do.

[FR] Simple F-Close

2 upvotes · 16 May 2011 · /r/seduction

I just told the girl I won't have sex with her until she begged me for it. In her mind she's like "hah fuck him, I'm not going to beg". Long story short, she winds up naked and begging for sex. In fact, I let girls know just how busy I am (because I am) and how little time I have for bullshit and dealing with LMR. The girl in fact apologized the following day for wasting too much of my time before sleeping with me (let me repeat that this is the first time we met for drinks).

Thanks for that.

You just helped me realize why I am here. Lightbulb moment.

I am older, and not into the bar/club scene, don't want the kind of women who go there, and do just fine on my own (been over ten years since the last time I went a week without sex)...

...but I felt there was something missing.

I want to be chased. I have always resented the way men have to do all the work in hooking up, while women feel like all they have to do is show up. I feel like I'm pretty damn awesome, and deserve some attention for it. I want them to meet me halfway. Actually, no, I want some payback. I want them to meet me more than halfway.

This is where "AFCs" come from.

2 upvotes · 16 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Well, it does strike me as a bit whiny sometimes.

But at least they are starting to experience dissatisfaction, rather than simply taking it like a bitch, without complaint. Being silent is even weaker than whining.

Let me be clear, women: you have changed the arrangement so that there is NOTHING in it for me.

2 upvotes · 16 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

Sure, it has some rules for building a civilization. It has a set of rules that are distinctly inferior to those of other civilizations of the time.

Amanda Marcotte: Liberal Head, Bigoted Heart

2 upvotes · 16 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

No, so what?

In other words, so what if it were gay? As feminists ostensibly have no problem with gays, it would be a silly thing for Marcotte to point out... if she believed it.

But she doesn't. Like most feminists, she feels threatened by portrayal of strong males. A thick-muscled, masculine man is not an acceptable ideal to them, so they must try to shame men away from being or pursuing this ideal, by calling it "gay", or "self-absorbed".

The fact is that I, and I think I speak for many men, would rather be as queer as a leather-goods store in the Tenderloin than be one of the sensitive, submissive, emasculated wimps that feminists try to sell as "the new man".

Brazil votes to criminalize homophobia. Political correctness threatens freedom of expression & research. Religious parties and churches oppose the law, because priests preaching against homosexuality would face arrest for the crime of homophobia.

2 upvotes · 15 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

Free speech is not an absolute. There are things you are not allowed to say. Kiddie pron is one example.

What is it about child pornography that makes it into the mantra of people who want to take away freedom?

Rhetorical question. The answer is obvious. They've discovered it's a magic word that they can use to make people give up their civil rights.

"Let us wiretap you without any legal process whatsoever."

"No, that's crazy."

"Child pornography! Let us wiretap you without any legal process whatsoever."

"Durr.... okay."

It's ludicrous, and I will not fall for it. I refuse to let revulsion overcome reason. Those who surrender liberty for safety deserve neither.

I mean, this reddit is full of examples of how anti-male speech hurts men. How come when something is done about anti-other-minority speech, you are all on the side of free speech?

Are you truly that dim, or are you deliberately deceitful?

Here, we counter poorly-used free speech in the correct way. That is, with more free speech. We do not ban or censor. We mock and censure. If we don't like an idea, we point out how stupid it is. We do not throw the speaker in prison.

Another way of saying "Healthy Heterosexual Male"

2 upvotes · 15 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

Today, you learned that people do not fuck with their brains.

You are still stuck in some unquestioned assumptions about what maturity is, how important it is, what "adult" means, and what a sexual encounter "should" be about.

Until you think about this on deeper level than "it's nasty", or fluffy non-statements about "the same level", then you're not really equipped to contribute to the conversation.

A girl I like tried playing a joke on me with the assistance of two others in my class. The joke didn't affect me and the girl gave me a good 2 minute long hug. Do I talk to her more on Monday or just ignore it?

2 upvotes · 14 May 2011 · /r/seduction

It's both an IOI and a test.

It gives her an excuse to touch, play-fight, and be close to you. That's the IOI.

But it also tests if you will just let her hit you. Never let a woman playfully hit you without retaliation. If you do nothing, she will know that she can walk all over you.

You must overpower her without hurting her (too much... a little discomfort or even a bruise or two is okay). Show her that you have the self-respect to defend yourself, and the strength to dominate her. Let her feel that strength as you take the wrist she's swinging at you, pull her towards you so she stumbles, then catch her.

If she complains to others, you frightened her. Don't apologize, remind her that she choose who to get busy with.

If she pouts to you about how rough you were, or shows you a bruise and complains, then she is yours. Because by appealing to your sympathy, and your sense of fairness, she is submitting to you.

If she does this, tease her for being a "wimp" or a "sissy". If she shows you a bruise, mockingly ask if she wants you to "kiss it better" (go through with this if she plays along with the joke).

This will show that you do not fear displeasing her, but that she has your full attention, and while these would be fighting words to a man, to her they will barely be insults at all... because she is a girl.

And you have reminded her of this. This is frame control. You are a big strong man. She is a delicate cute girl. Once this is established, you are both in the proper frame of mind, and sparks must begin to fly.

Should Menstruating Women Use the Internet?

2 upvotes · 14 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

This would be hilarious if you posted it to r/atheism. Here, it's just kinda creepy.

Damn.. AA !

2 upvotes · 14 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Sorry but if you are waiting for me to talk to you, it won't happen.

Delivered with confidence, this would be an excellent opener.

Yeah you look too good of a girl for me.

Annnnnnnnnnnnd crash and burn.

No one is too good for you. No. One. If they want you, then you are what they want.

Now make them want you.

My response to "I have a boyfriend"

2 upvotes · 14 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Smooth. I like it.

I would have gone with "And yet, here you are, giving me your phone number."

I'm starting the DJ Forums Pickup Bootcamp this week. 8 weeks of self-guided exercises assembled in a PDF by one of the forum's members.

2 upvotes · 12 May 2011 · /r/seduction

That just sounds creepy to me.

That's why it sounds like an excellent exercise. One has to find a way to make it not creepy.

What occurs to me offhand is:

1. Offbeat, casual attitude, coupled with direct approach, lots of eye contact, etc.
2. Serious-looking camera. (Someone snapping people with a disposable is stalkerish. Someone taking street shots with serious equipment is an artist.)
3. Shooting lots of different types of people, not just young women.

Just had a mental breakthrough.

2 upvotes · 11 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Not at all.

Because not having fear is the goal, the end state. No man is afraid when he is doing what he has trained to do, and knows each move to make.

But we are often afraid, because we have not achieved that goal yet. And there, courage can help us. But to be proud of that courage is to cling to the state where seduction isn't a routine, rote, mundane practice.

And to imagine our success in seduction as a measure of our worth is to load that task with undeserved anxiety.

I don't know about everyone else, but I don't see a lot of difference between having your self-worth determined by the vaginal wetness of twenty-somethings, and having your self-worth determined by the values of feminists. In either case, we'd be letting women be the yardstick of us.

We don't do this to feel good about ourselves. We do it because we like sex, and we don't wish to be controlled.

Hey seddit, let's get to know each other!

2 upvotes · 9 May 2011 · /r/seduction

Defense sector software engineer, changing to the private sector right now 'cause I'm sick of the DoD's bullshit. I'm top talent, and tech recruiters fall all over me in the way that I'd like to get women to.

I like to work out, love my career (not just for the loads of money I make), enjoy cooking and am quite the armchair psychologist. I don't consider myself a nerd, but I get on famously with them, and running tabletop RPGs is a bit of a guilty pleasure for me.

I'm here because the one drawback of being an engineer is that you just don't run into a lot of women in your everyday life, so if you don't start making an effort, well, you don't have a lot of options. I've been using multiple FWBs for sex for years, and I'm a bit sick of that... wanna get some actual sparks flying.

Should a 'Trans-girl' let you know that she used to be a man before sex? Not according to the folk of /r/transphobiaproject.

2 upvotes · 8 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

If a man went to jail for some terrible crime, started a new life, and met a nice girl, would he be obligated to let her in on all of the awful things he used to be?

What do you want to bet that most women would answer that question "yes"?

So I was raised feminist in Sweden. I've read all the FAQs and I've been lurking for some months. But for the life of me I can't figure out how third wave feminism is different from the MRM.

2 upvotes · 6 May 2011 · /r/MensRights

If we agree on everything

I suspect we don't.

but we are divided by labels

You're the one who can't allow a label with men's name on it, so you must think that labels matter.

Try me, see what we disagree on.

Here's something we don't agree on. Trust. Integrity. Respect. You won't listen to my concerns, before arguing with me about what I should call myself.

You don't respect me. And now you want me to trust you.

Is Will Smith the personification of the modern or future man?

1 upvotes · 31 March 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

- At 94th Academy awards, Chris Rock mocks Will Smith's wife for having alopecia.
- Will Smith slaps Chris Rock.
- No charges will be filed.
- Social media is hit with sudden wave of discussion about alopecia.
- Pfizer is coming out with new drug for alopecia.
- Pfizer is sponsoring 94th Academy Awards.
- People start to draw conclusions.
- News is suddenly flooded with articles dismissing "crazy conspiracy theory" with no quotes, rebuttals, or contradictory evidence, other than the vague notion that "they wouldn't do that" because it's too "bizarre".

Don't assume anything you see on television is real.

Facepalm. Coerce: persuade (an unwilling person) to do something by using force or threats.

1 upvotes · 28 March 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

Wait, so if I'm paid to work, I must not be willing to work, therefore slavery?

Interested to hear some anti fem opinions. Thought I could gain some new perspective. I am a feminist and major in cultural anthropology. This is an experiment through discourse.

1 upvotes · 21 March 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

Do your own homework.

Shower thoughts: being water

1 upvotes · 15 March 2022 · /r/RedPillWomen

I just don't like you.

And I don't like mint, dogs, or jazz music.

So what?

TRP, Late Stage Capitalism, and The monetization of sex & relationships

1 upvotes · 15 March 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Late Stage Capitalism

Please explain how the unrestricted and voluntary exchange of good services has stages.

Shower thoughts: being water

1 upvotes · 12 March 2022 · /r/RedPillWomen

Just for women, but only for women who are willing to accept every thing you say as truth, or at least keep their mouths shut when they disagree with your ideas.

Damseling again.

This is indeed a red pill subreddit. If you don't agree with the red pill, why are you here?

I was just angry because her response to your questions was incoherent and made it seem like she was unable to put her ideas into words when ordinarily she is fluent and spot on in her writing.

So, in other words, you didn't trust her to articulate her own case, and to organize her thoughts and articulate them.

But, not only that... you didn't even attempt to help her organize those thoughts. You instead attempt to stop somewhat else from pointing out what you yourself just said... that those thoughts were presented in a disorganized and unclear fashion.

So, clearly, you don't object to /u/girlwithasidecar's words being critiqued... because you just did so. You object to them being critiqued by a man.

You believe that possession of a vagina gives you some special privileges with respect to /u/girlwithasidecar such that you are allowed to interact with her in ways that others are not, without ever having received any such permission from her.

Which brings us back to the whole "believing in the red pill" thing. If we look carefully at this, we can see that it is not yet possible for you to believe in the basic premise of RPW, because you don't yet understand what it is.

So I'll tell you.

The basic premise of RPW is that it is in women's best interest to work with men, and create mutually beneficial interactions, rather than treating men as a hostile player in a zero-sum game.

When you attempt to "defend" a woman against a man, for no other reason than because she is a woman, you are creating, in your own mind if nowhere else, Team Woman™. When you create Team Woman™, you have already made a game, or indeed a war, with the only other team there can be under this definition... Team Man™.

A war between the sexes is the very antithesis of what this group is all about. RPW is preventing such a war, and about diffusing it and making peace if and where it has already started.

If you want to fight a war on men, you already know which reddit group you can go to.

In this case, the simple fact is that the relationship between /u/girlwithasidecar and I is a lot closer than the relationship between her and you. Because we have known each other for years, while the only thing you have in common is "mutual vagina possession", which really doesn't leave you with much to talk about.

If you persist in viewing men as the "opposite team", and assuming interactions with them to be hostile by default, then not only are you missing out on the whole point and benefit of RPW, you're also going to find that this belief can and does become a self-fulfilling prophecy.

not my story but a typical case os the ds

1 upvotes · 10 March 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

Please work on your reading comprehension.

If you are passed out drunk, you are passed out. You don't do anything. There is no behaviour.

Someone else having sex with you while you are passed out is their behaviour, not yours.

"racism vs activism"

1 upvotes · 9 March 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

So don't eat an entire handful of men.

Is Love even fckin real?

1 upvotes · 8 March 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Wrong question.

The question is not whether love is real, but how many totally different phenomena get lumped together under the name "love".

The way some women here on PPD describes their S/O is so unflattering and insulting that if they read it they'd break up with them on the spot

1 upvotes · 8 March 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Bold of you to assume that men who date the women of PPD have any self-respect.

Why do PUA coaches and Manosphere Gurus bash each other so much, is it because they are fighting for money?

1 upvotes · 8 March 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Pickup teaches theory, yes, but PUAs tend to be highly pragmatic and only focuses on a specific theory if it benefits you infield.

Exactly.

PUA game is outer game: "What can I do right now, in this very moment, taking who I am as a given, in order to make this woman, who is front of me right now, desire me sexually?"

TRP game is inner game: "What can I do, over a period of months or years, to shape myself into a man who more women will sexually desire?"

Of course, there is a good deal of overlap, but generally PUA is focused on tactics and TRP is focused on strategy.

TRP is wrong about 35+ being a man's prime

1 upvotes · 6 March 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I feel like it's disingenuous for the red pill to preach to guys that age doesn't matter for guys and as long as you put your head down and grind out your money and status, you will attain "high value" and be rewarded in the future.

Quack.

Wtf. Feminism continues to encourage this.

1 upvotes · 23 February 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

Wealthy men don't care if you use their money...

Tell me you haven't met wealthy men without telling me you haven't met wealthy men.

Truly wealthy men, who made their money through investments rather than hitting the professional sports or rap star lottery, understand how to manage money and are often quite frugal in their personal habits.

They also want to be valued for themselves and not their money, so they frequently will hide their wealth when dating.

Above all, they are not interested in gold-digging whores. Plenty of women will fuck them because they're looking for a payday, and they are not only sick of that shit, it's dangerous. Does anyone think professional football and basketball stars really rape women, when they have groupies eager to fuck them? Of course not, it's a cash grab. One that can land you in prison. Just ask Mike Tyson.

No, when wealthy men are looking for sex, they will often go to professionals. Not because they couldn't get sex without paying a dime (typically they are charismatic and could), but because whores will go away afterwards without expecting anything but their fee.

When wealthy men want a girlfriend, this is very, very, difficult for them to accomplish without their wealth getting in the way. They don't want to end up like Jeff Bezos writing billion-dollar checks to some housewife who never did anything more strenuous than pick out art for the foyer. So they will hide their money if they can, and act very vigilant if they can't.

If some random girl should be lucky enough to find herself in the position of being vetted this way, here's how to turn it into a relationship:

- Don't ask him for anything material.
- Don't talk about his money.
- Don't act impressed with his wealth. Focus on other things about him.
- If he gives you a gift, accept it, but act impressed with his choice rather than its value. Accept inexpensive, but well-chosen, gifts with as much grace as pricey ones.
- If he buys you something hugely expensive, refuse it. Tell him he cannot buy you. Only accept if he cajoles you and insists there are no strings attached.

- Don't sleep with him as bait, or earlier than you would otherwise be comfortable with.
- Be nice, sweet, empathetic, and feminine, of course, but treat him as if his wealth didn't matter.
- Remember, you are playing the long game. A lifetime of participation in a billionaire's lifestyle as his wife is worth a lot more than some pricey gifts and vacations, followed by a fight and a breakup.
- Read RedPillWomen, not FDS.

Starting to become afraid of having kids, because I'll be an older mom (30F)

1 upvotes · 23 February 2022 · /r/RedPillWomen

I have not studied the hormonal contraceptive pill in detail (both my girls have copper IUDs), and I cannot comment on "Grimhood" because I've never heard of him.

However, I can weigh in on the general idea that you are trying to express to /u/_Pumpkin_Muffin... the notion that the expertise of the medical community is no longer trustworthy because it has been subjected to institutional capture.

If you don't know what "institutional capture" is by this point in the game, you're in trouble. What you don't know can hurt you, but, hey, that's just the way the cookie gets stomped on and completely obliterated.

At this point, no institution in western culture can be trusted without personal investigation into its messages, actions, and incentives. Anyone who doesn't realize this is going to wonder why their lives seem to constantly be full of misfortune and pain.

Medicine, in particular, has discovered that it is much less profitable and empowering to prevent people from becoming sick than it is to treat them once they are, and much less profitable to cure them than it is to keep treating them forever.

This effect is invisible to most people because those they have contact with (individual physicians and nurses) are more dupes of this corruption than perpetrators of it. They simply have been educated wrong. Thus, claims that we should trust them because of their expertise are not relevant, because what they are expert in is usually either irrelevant or wrong.

If you get hit by a bus, or have cancer, modern medical science knows exactly what to do. However, if you want to avoid chronic illness, stay in shape, live a healthy, fulfilled life, and avoid getting sick in the first place, you would be far better off with the medicine of seventy-five years ago than the medicine of today.

Our culture has collectively forgotten much of what it used to know about preventive medicine.

Until feminine attributes are no longer connected with inferiority and being under a man, more women are going to reject traditional femininity

1 upvotes · 17 February 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Precisely. Feminism's collective attitudes and actions seem nonsensical up until you have the realization that the appearance of victimhood empowers women.

FDS celebrating the decline of men's health. Seriously, are the people in that sub okay?

1 upvotes · 14 February 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists will ruin the lives of men if they follow this advice

Who exactly are you? And your accomplishments in this arena are what exactly?

FDS celebrating the decline of men's health. Seriously, are the people in that sub okay?

1 upvotes · 14 February 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

But the MRAs and TRP have gained nothing. All i'm saying that will the TRP ever be able bring any change in our society?

You mistake the purpose of TRP.

TRP is not a crusade to "change society". It is a toolbox for individual men to unfuck their lives with. As such, it has been wildly successful in the lives of many men. Which is not a surprise, because its basic framework is "shit I wrote on and about my transformation from angry frustrated dude to jacked member of the 1% with two girlfriends and as much side action as I want".

Yes, this way of putting it focuses on nookie, but it has broader implications. Think of it this way... A woman can never nag me. She can ever get me to give her stuff, or try to defend her, or save her from herself... because any hormonal leverage that would give her the ability to do that is simply sucked out of me by girls who come running when I snap my fingers.

No matter how pretty or desirable a woman is, I can deal with her from a non-needy stance of perfect indifference. And this serves as a litmus test for female character... some women love that. Others explode in rage when they realize they cannot move me by dangling bait, or just by existing.

But the best part of all this is, this isn't a talent. It's a craft. I don't live my life this way because I'm Chad who was born Chad, descended from a long line of Chads. I'm this way because the brain is a construct, and constructs can be hacked. I can teach others to get what I got.

This is a step in the liberation of men from slavery to women and society. Not the only step, but an important one.

Interesting: Female logic 101. A complete failure.

1 upvotes · 4 February 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

You don't understand. You're supposed to know what and who she wants, and give it to her without her having to speak it aloud and thereby take responsibility for it.

Also, women are fully functional mature adults, and if you say otherwise, they'll cry and ask daddy patriarchy to punish you for being a big meanie.

20 pictures of women who don't need feminism

1 upvotes · 2 February 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

I do want to point out, though, that most seem very young and didn't live through the days when date rape wasn't considered 'real rape,' when a woman's sexual history was used against her in her rape trial, and when men were systematically passed over for promotions and they were given to lesser candidates because they were men. They are able to live the life they have because of the earlier feminist movement.

To establish context: how old are you?

Sometimes good men give bad gifts.

1 upvotes · 30 January 2022 · /r/RedPillWomen

For OP to still be acting like this, when she's old enough to be going on important business trips, is pretty unseemly.

That's because, ironically, FDS doesn't know how to vet.

They're thinking of vetting wrong. They think of vetting as "eliminating low-value males from consideration". But it's super easy to do that... just reject everyone. Foolproof.

The real purpose of vetting is to identify men who have a robust reciprocal response. That's all. It's not about his morals or whether you like him, or want to be with him. It's about "Will he repay kindness freely given?".

Then, from the pool of men you have vetted for this one trait, you date the ones you're most attracted to and most want to be with, until something clicks.

But in order to see if a man will repay a kindness freely given, you have to be willing to freely give a kindness. FDS reader typically are too damaged to do that... it feels too much like vulnerability, rather than a test, and they are not willing to be vulnerable.

If I had to make an educated guess, would this be FunSize, who've you've been with for much longer?

Yes, but it's not because I've been with her longer. It's because FunSize has a special talent... a sort hyper-empathy of overdeveloped mirror neurons. Do not play any game with her that involves bluffing or deception. You will lose, badly, every time.

you don't just find someone who can finish your sentences and know you so well that they can read you like an open book. You only get there after years and years of interaction, bonding, and intimacy.

I talk about this somewhat on the male side.

When you're picking up girls for sex, then you want to look like "Chad", the guy who has lots of girls chasing him, and is indifferent to whether any one of them does what he wants or not, because any one of them isn't fun... just spend saturday night with someone else.

But when you're in a relationship, you have to be able to say what you want. Because otherwise, your only way to get it is to end the relationship, and choose randomly from the pile again, hoping you'll hit closer to your ideal mark.

Which doesn't work, of course. Optimization is a feedback process.

If the mascot villain for the black pill/incels is The Joker, and the mascot villain for the red pill is Tyler Durden, who is the mascot villain for the blue pill?

1 upvotes · 24 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Use of fiction or other controlled narratives (reality tv, etc) should only be used as an example of the author's psychology, not the character's.

If the mascot villain for the black pill/incels is The Joker, and the mascot villain for the red pill is Tyler Durden, who is the mascot villain for the blue pill?

1 upvotes · 24 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Tyler Durden

Rule #6: No examples from fiction or lyrics.

Is it moral to have hook-up, one night stands but withhold sex from guys which are relationship material.

1 upvotes · 24 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There's a distinction between moral, fair, and a good idea. Which are you asking about?

US dating market if prostitution was totally legal

1 upvotes · 24 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Not a lot different except at the top and bottom of the market.

We should boycott this guy. He respects women boooooooooo!

1 upvotes · 21 January 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

Respect is earned.

Would you guys still marry a female if you found out she was a feminist?

1 upvotes · 21 January 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

Breathing.

RedPilled men: What qualities in a woman would it take for you to agree in good faith to an exclusive relationship with a girl.

1 upvotes · 18 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If you want a meaningful answer, you're going to have to rephrase your scenario, because the way you wrote this character is already a red flag.

Both sexual attraction and emotional commitment are feelings, they cannot be negotiated, but must be inspired. If a woman were to try to negotiate for my commitment instead of inspiring it, I would take that as a sign she didn't understand this, and as a cue to move on.

If you're having trouble understanding how this plays out, imagine going on a date with a woman and, halfway through, having an "honest person to person conversation" telling her you were "looking for sex".

You can easily understand that this would be an extremely neckbeardy move.

Q4Men: what is a high value man?

1 upvotes · 16 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

High value to whom?

To women? Or to themselves?

Confused about date invite

1 upvotes · 16 January 2022 · /r/RedPillWomen

Perhaps we should consider sidebarring this?

Is crying a turnoff for you?

1 upvotes · 14 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Do you understand the difference between "control" and "control for"?

Is the only way to increase fertility rate to take away women's rights? If so, why not let fertility rate decline?

1 upvotes · 14 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It's one word. I don't know how to make that any simpler for you.

If everyone has insecurities , then why don't women like men with insecurities?

1 upvotes · 11 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women like men who hide their insecurities very well.

Does TRP take into account all of the ways that women describe other women's behavior, in particular FDS or are all women just one homogenous type?

1 upvotes · 11 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

In the dark, all cats are grey.

Polygamy is inherently harmful.

1 upvotes · 11 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

There's no need to feel bad.

Lemme tell you some more secrets of the male worldview and social structure. Unlike among women, mockery among men isn't always intended to hurt. Sometimes it's intended to instruct.

This young man is pontificating about what an ideal world looks like, when he should instead be playing the role of a sponge, absorbing information from the world as it is, and trying to learn wisdom.

By mocking him instead of taking him seriously, I am attempting to awaken him to the ridiculousness of his own behaviour. In male social circles, men will shame other men for pretending to wisdom or expertise they do not possess. This serves a useful social function.

/u/ClearDepth3217 really has no business trying to tell other people what love is supposed to be when he hasn't experienced it, or how a family is supposed to work when he hasn't formed one. He's not a bad kid, but he's a poster child for the Dunning-Kruger Effect, and he's not going to get better until he realizes the extent of his own ignorance.

No one can learn until they realize that there is something they don't already know.

That's why we are having this conversation over the internet despite being in adjacent rooms. Because others might need to hear this.

BTW, the Stroganoff was quite good, but I think you could probably go a little heavier on the sauce.

Polygamy is inherently harmful.

1 upvotes · 11 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yes, I suppose so.

But who could possibly doubt the wisdom of this guy?

Polygamy is inherently harmful.

1 upvotes · 11 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Lastly, true love must be one-on-one between two peers who respect and care for each other.

Hey, FunSize, FanGirl... sorry. It's over. We've been living a lie. A love-starved twentysomething virgin has written on the internet that we don't truly love each other. We must now cancel our sham of a family, because we have failed to match his theoretical ideal.

Start packing your stuff.

What are opinions you hold that would get you shamed or lambasted by The Red Pill or Blue Pill or FDS?

1 upvotes · 10 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I can understand being interested in the subject and wanting to talk about it.

But which of their ideas did you think might be good?

What are opinions you hold that would get you shamed or lambasted by The Red Pill or Blue Pill or FDS?

1 upvotes · 10 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Out of curiosity, why were you there in the first place? Curiosity? Or did you feel like they might have something to offer you?

For those who asked about a male calculator like the female delusion calculator...

1 upvotes · 9 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Doesn't create a real equivalence. Men don't give a shit about income, almost none care about height, and most don't care about race.

Why is acknowledging the fact that most men are not physically attractive to women seen as massively controversial and even TRP'rs are in denial about it?

1 upvotes · 9 January 2022 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Male attractiveness is mostly behavioural.

Why Mastering Stoicism Will Make You Emotionally Unbreakable And Is A Must For Every Man to Practice?

1 upvotes · 9 January 2022 · /r/TheRedPill

<https://www.trp.red/p/whisper/1556>

I wonder which gender do these "scientists" belong :D

1 upvotes · 7 January 2022 · /r/AntiFeminists

I'm in my 40s.

I've been here since before there were subreddits and comment karma, both of which I was against.

Is the dating game easier in a small town or big city?

1 upvotes · 29 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Higher population density ==> Easier to get NSA sex, harder to find a suitable relationship partner.

Q4Men how many women have personally told you they regret making an Only Fans due to its effect on their dating or work lives?

1 upvotes · 28 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Zero because I don't hang out with whores.

TRP or FDS: Which side deals in absolutes more often and has the most bitter followers?

1 upvotes · 19 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I certainly hope TRP holds more appeal for bitter people.

FDS are "pick me" women

1 upvotes · 19 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They are nice. That's the point. They get men by being nice. Niceness works on most men.

Any man who niceness doesn't work on is psychologically broken, and needs to fix himself before trying to date.

The "You did this with prior exes but won't do it with me" is not about the acts done or not done. It's about the attitude toward the current man.

1 upvotes · 12 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

It 100% depends on the reasoning.

I once had a woman tell me, flat out, that she was into anal sex now, but if we were to hook up again, she would refuse to do it with me. The reason she gave was "your dick is too big".

Emotionally, I didn't feel bothered at all. We did not, however, hook up again.

41% of women would go on a date with someone who voted for the opposing candidate, compared to 67% of men. Why do you think this is? How will this affect relationships when a majority of men are republicans and a majority of women are democrats?

1 upvotes · 12 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Republicans understand Democrats a lot better than Democrats understand Republicans.

Follow on from "angry at the truth" post. Do some men virtue signal about "greater good" when its actually just sexual frustration?

1 upvotes · 12 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Where do you get this idea that people need "justify" their feelings?

People can do whatever they want with their feelings.

Can vetting go wrong?

1 upvotes · 8 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If your partner cheats on you or hurts you in some way it's your fault for "picking wrong." But this only seems to go one way and one way only.

Okay, if you're going to keep going on about "TRP says" this and that and the other, you're going to need to show me where "TRP" says it.

Otherwise, I'll be forced to conclude that you are arguing with phantoms that inhabit the interior of your own skull.

Can vetting go wrong?

1 upvotes · 8 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I'm puzzled as to what you mean by "fault" in this context.

Like, someone did something morally wrong? If that's what you mean, please link me to the TRP article that discusses this, because that article would violate the "no moralizing" rule, and I'd need to fix that.

Can vetting go wrong?

1 upvotes · 8 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

This is vague.

If what goes wrong? Goes wrong how? Held against her by who? With what consequences?

Perhaps if you gave me an example, it would be more clear what you mean.

Can vetting go wrong?

1 upvotes · 8 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Puzzling.

Since "shit isn't perfect" is one of the basic premises of TRP, I wonder what it is that you've got in your head, and are arguing against.

Perhaps you could link me to some articles by ECs that would make it clear what you are attempting to respond to?

Can vetting go wrong?

1 upvotes · 8 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Will you also be surprised if I say that seat belts will not make you invulnerable to car accidents?

41% of women would go on a date with someone who voted for the opposing candidate, compared to 67% of men. Why do you think this is? How will this affect relationships when a majority of men are republicans and a majority of women are democrats?

1 upvotes · 8 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Self-report studies are worthless.

This has to be the most hateful and predatory thing I've seen in a good minute... (she's a lesbian btw)

1 upvotes · 8 December 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

"Pickme" is a term used by "skipmes".

"Men are MEANT to be expendable. Women are not." J Walters for Congress on Twitter

1 upvotes · 6 December 2021 · /r/MensRights

Meant by whom?

TRP advocates for working on your fitness, money and status, but basically preaches against taking the women who appreciate those "qualities" seriously.

1 upvotes · 2 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Women love it when you take them seriously as a partner

Partner?

Woah, woah, slow your roll, there, kiddo. We haven't even been introduced yet.

TRP advocates for working on your fitness, money and status, but basically preaches against taking the women who appreciate those "qualities" seriously.

1 upvotes · 2 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

We advocate against taking any woman seriously.

Women hate it when you take them seriously.

PUAs or just those who have “game” what’s your go-to tactic to picking up a woman in a bar or party setting?

1 upvotes · 2 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Talk to her... while equipped with an understanding of what women want, how they feel, and what they think.

The art of “Negging”...I unfortunately feel like it works...

1 upvotes · 2 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Yeah, that's actually most of the reason why it works.

When I take a girl's hand and point out to her that she has dirt under her fingernails, it doesn't just make her want to qualify herself because she feels bad. It also tells her I am not afraid to just talk to her like an ordinary human being.

You're welcome. Good luck out there, and stop being ashamed of your instincts! They evolved for a reason.

Objectively, does red pill have real life relevance? Does it "work"?

1 upvotes · 2 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

.

Objectively, does red pill have real life relevance? Does it "work"?

1 upvotes · 2 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Cool.

Objectively, does red pill have real life relevance? Does it "work"?

1 upvotes · 2 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

So you don't have anything besides "Because I, a random person, say so". I thought not.

That which is asserted without evidence can be dismissed without evidence.

Objectively, does red pill have real life relevance? Does it "work"?

1 upvotes · 2 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That's not evidence, either. That's a request for contradictory data, which I could provide... if that was what we were talking about.

But we're not. You made two claims. I am giving you an opportunity to back them up.

If you cannot, you effectively admit you were speculating about something of which you have zero actual experience.

Objectively, does red pill have real life relevance? Does it "work"?

1 upvotes · 1 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

That is not evidence.

You made two assertions:

1. "If you believe AWALT, AF/BB and/or the 80/20 [rule], then you are doing damage to your ability to ... have a ... relationship."
2. "TRP ... harms the people who believe it."

Back those assertions up with something. Anything that is actually evidence... not a "just-so" story.

The art of “Negging”...I unfortunately feel like it works...

1 upvotes · 1 December 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Before I can answer that, I need to understand one of your preconceptions.

Do you think the most healthy level of self-esteem is the maximum possible level of self-esteem?

Quality time love language tips?

1 upvotes · 1 December 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

I finally went and checked out this test, because I keep hearing people talk about it.

I think the basic idea that people send and receive affection on different channels is sound, but I have my doubts about the actual test. It's made of self-report questions, doesn't weight answers, and is probably influenced as much by current state as by personality.

If you have something that you feel is clearly your "love language", run with that. If the quiz tells you something, take it with a grain of salt.

Benedict being an actual Cumberbitch - simps about how “men need to shut up and listen”

1 upvotes · 25 November 2021 · /r/MensRights

Quick, someone get Ja Rule on the phone!

Most Red Pill Influencers have likely suffered some sort of trauma

1 upvotes · 20 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Red Pill YouTubers like Fresh and Fit, FITXFEARLESS, AMS

Bwahahahahahahahahahahheheheheeehheeeesnort.

Does women give bad advices about dating and relationships to men?

1 upvotes · 14 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

You think women do this intentionally?

Nope, they're just clueless. No one understands women less well than women.

The Red Pill isn't hateful

1 upvotes · 14 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

People on TRP have said that if not for sex, women would be hunted for sport.

Nonsense. Hunting women would be no challenge at all.

Be honest, do you really think women are more attracted to celebrities than non-elite men? And if so, if you were a woman for example, would you also find said men attractive?

1 upvotes · 13 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

The question is meaningless. If "I" were someone else, then "I" would not be "I". If pigs were seagulls, then those would be seagulls, not pigs being seagulls.

CMV: Red Pill advice would be perfect if all the women in the world had Borderline Personality

Disorder

1 upvotes · 13 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

What do you mean, "if"?

QFW: Does penis size is taken into account for judging a man to be HVM or not?

1 upvotes · 12 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Happy to help ya out. Let me know if there are any other obvious things you need explained to you.

How is someone supposed to have a low N-count and be happy, if they have a bad time at finding lasting relationships ?

1 upvotes · 10 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

She might just not be interested in having relationships with those men and were just hooking up for fun.

True. But this is also a reason why she would not be desirable as a relationship partner, so there's no need to try to parse out which of these is the case.

How is someone supposed to have a low N-count and be happy, if they have a bad time at finding lasting relationships ?

1 upvotes · 10 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

They're not supposed to have a bad time at finding lasting relationships.

The real reason a high N-count is unattractive to women is that a woman with a high N-count has been dumped a lot. This means "other men didn't want to stay with her, so odds are you won't, either".

A woman's N-count doesn't tell you how easy she is, it tells you how long partners stay.

Question For The Men: Would you date or marry or even consider a relationship with an FDS woman?

1 upvotes · 10 November 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

I don't need you to tell me what FDS is, I can and have read it for myself, and see no reason to insert you as some sort of filter between me and direct raw data.

What you are useful for is telling me how you experience FDS.

Hey antifeminist pick-me choose me petty babes

1 upvotes · 9 November 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

This is a gaslighting tactic called "forced teaming".

We are not a "team". We are not "in this together". We do not share the same goals. I have my goals, and you have yours, and they are not the same.

If you are telling me to change my goal so we can "work together", then you are not my friend. You are a predator who is trying to hijack my efforts.

If you truly want to be my friend, then help me achieve my chosen goals, in exchange for me helping you achieve yours.

Wtf has fragile masculinity to do with anger

1 upvotes · 3 November 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

Your obsession with the genitalia of totally strangers is kinda creepy.

Wtf has fragile masculinity to do with anger

1 upvotes · 3 November 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

There's nothing strong about breaking down and punching a wall in an impotent shitfit. That's some weak ass toddler bullshit.

He just got a call with the scan results, and his five year old daughter has inoperable brain cancer.

Why Buy the Cow When He Can Get the Milk For Free...? Right...?

1 upvotes · 30 October 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Here's how I see it:

1. I, personally, as a modern, sexually successful, not to mention highly oversexed, male, will not buy a cow if I can get the milk for free.
2. Since I can get milk for free, I will not buy a cow, even if THAT cow is selling milk at a premium price, because milk is milk, and it's all the same unless it's sour.
3. Therefore, I will not, in any circumstances, buy a cow in order to get milk.
4. This only needs to matter to you if you are a cow. And have nothing but milk to offer.

Books for MEN?

1 upvotes · 30 October 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

I got the data points that I was looking for deliberately pushing buttons.

...

I rather thought as much. But, rather than be unfair to you by making that accusation, I chose to say something that would elicit a confession.

That particular tool isn't useful here, or actually allowed at all.

Your pride is how you wield it is perhaps justified, but no tool is appropriate to all situations, and I often find myself wishing that someday you will evolve from a man with a tool, to a man with a toolbox.

I'm afraid I'm going to have to show you to the door, at least for a while, in the same way that I did Rollo Tomassi. Red pill women may be "red pill", but it's also "women", and a lot of hard-won progress can be undone if some prominent male writer steps in here and doesn't change his style at all.

Books for MEN?

1 upvotes · 29 October 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

I don't recommend it, and am I not huge JP fan. (Not that he doesn't have some useful things to say now and again.

Let's look at these rules.

"Stand up straight with your shoulders back."

If you could do this, it would be because your serotonin levels were already high enough not to be your problem.

"Treat yourself like you are someone you are responsible for helping."

Yes, absolutely.

"Make friends with people who want the best for you."

No. Because some of those people believe they know, better than you do, what is best for you. Instead, make friends with people who approve of the sort of person you want to be, and want to help you become that person.

"Compare yourself to who you were yesterday, not to who someone else is today."

Yes, at first. But eventually compare yourself to others, or you will never know where your greatest strengths lie.

"Do not let your children do anything that makes you dislike them."

That depends who you are and what you dislike.

"Set your house in perfect order before you criticize the world."

Wrong, wrong, wrong, wrong. No one's house is ever in perfect order. We still need to be able to clearly perceive problems in the world.

The correct version of this advice is "When and where you cannot control the universe, control your universe instead".

"Pursue what is meaningful (not what is expedient)."

Meaningful is subjective, but yes.

"Tell the truth — or, at least, don't lie."

No. Humans are evolved to lie. If we didn't lie, we'd kill each other.

The correct version of this advice is "do not refrain out of fear from telling truths you need to tell"

"Assume that the person you are listening to might know something you don't."

I would say "be open to the possibility", but yes.

"Be precise in your speech."

I am unable to disagree or agree with this one, because Mr. Peterson's description of what he means by "be precise" is extremely vague, to the point where it relies, in some places, on poetry.

"Do not bother children when they are skate-boarding."

If we interpret this as "do not needlessly interfere with others or try to run their lives", then yes. But this can clash with "Do not let your children do anything that makes you dislike them."

"Pet a cat when you encounter one on the street."

What he writes about this is entirely incoherent.

Books for MEN?

1 upvotes · 29 October 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Did you write this whole thread while you were high? Or do you just not understand who the audience is in here?

RPW is a bunch of tradcon-adjacent chicks who realize that the sexual revolution was a bad thing for them, and they would like to please catch the last train out of clusterfuckistan before the institution of marriage dies altogether.

And here you are trying to lecture them about globalism and Zizek and whose daughter gets "cum-blasted". They don't give a shit about Zizek. Of course, no one does, but they extra don't, with sprinkles on top. Your personal parasocial relationship with him does not change that.

Women reserve their emotional investment for themselves and those connected to them personally. Sociopolitical abstractions need not apply. Please tell me that you are aware of this and just momentarily forgot, and you are not actually entirely clueless about how to talk to women.

If you want them to understand that Jordan Peterson is not their friend, then you need to focus on something relevant. To wit, what effect listening to his advice will have on them, and those they care about, and why.

Everything else is just a non-sequitur.

A practical guide to self discipline by a former army ranger

1 upvotes · 19 October 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

Not all science is bad just because it came from a modern institution.

No one anywhere near this thread has made any such claim. You are arguing with phantoms who occupy the inside of your own head.

The alternative you suggest is to take word from you which is not backed by any factual research, just anecdotal examples.

Do you understand the meaning of the word "hypothesis"?

College student "scared" that workers who installed radiators in "Female and Transgender Collective" housing were all "cisgender men."

1 upvotes · 18 October 2021 · /r/MensRights

Imagine spending your life terrified of the very group of people you are utterly dependent on.

A practical guide to self discipline by a former army ranger

1 upvotes · 15 October 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

That's the common definition of these terms. I don't agree.

Notions like "self-discipline" and "motivation" are arbitrary terms people invented to describe the observable fact that some people put off gratification and do work, and others don't. But there's no real evidence that these two things are in any way distinct. In fact, there's no real evidence that either of them is a thing at all.

"Motivation" and "self-discipline" are treated like health bars or strength bars in a video game. You have X amount of some mysterious thing, and when you spend a certain amount of time left-clicking on cartoon monsters, they go up.

But life is not a video game, and people don't have health bars.

Brains are collections of loosely connected neural nets. And ultimately neural nets only do one thing... store and retrieve information. Which means that any behaviour one brain has, which another brain doesn't have, has to be something that can be mapped back to stored information.

We are what we know.

So how do we model the gap between action and inaction as a matter of knowledge? Well, I have a hypothesis about that.

A practical guide to self discipline by a former army ranger

1 upvotes · 15 October 2021 · /r/TheRedPill

people become self-disciplined

You are proposing the existence of entities for which you have no evidence.

There are plenty of people who believe that there is such a thing as "general" self-discipline, which is applicable to any task, and can be developed on one task, then transferred seamlessly to another. However, these people tend to believe that because there are plenty of people who already believe it, and they believe it because there are plenty of people who already believe it, and they believe it because there are plenty of people who already believe it, and they believe it because there are plenty of people who already believe it, and they believe it because there are plenty of people who already believe it, and they believe it because there are plenty of people who already believe it, and they believe it because there are plenty of people who already believe it, and they believe it because there are plenty of people who already believe it.

Nowhere in this process has anyone demonstrated that self-discipline exists as something distinct from being motivated to do a task.

Some additional shower thoughts about sex and marriage and dating (oh my)

1 upvotes · 11 October 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

I don't think there is an ultimate fix to every sex question in a Judeo-Christian culture, because Abrahamic religions transmit, and sometimes are predicated on, a profoundly unhealthy attitude about sex.

The socioreligious structures of other cultures, mostly ancient cultures, did not have this problem. Sex was accepted as a simple biological imperative, rather than being sequestered behind a barrier of guilt and shame.

When elements of our culture seek solutions to sexual imperatives, they do so, they can only do so, within the framework of certain assumptions about sex that have been integrated into our culture largely by historical accidents such as climate change in Southwest Asia during the Bronze Age, the environmental impact of kosher laws, and the political conflict between Hebrew tribes and the Roman empire.

Our culture is simply not capable of dealing with sexual problems and needs without radically breaking its own sexual mores and traditions.

Is it unrealistic to expect a guy to want to marry me and stay a virgin until he does? Is it too old school?🤔

1 upvotes · 9 October 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Yes.

For the Old Ladies: Laura Doyle is not real life

1 upvotes · 25 September 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

Are you saying that I'm not old and wise?

I have no idea how old you are.

Married or un - I've long believed that it's more important to understand the trade offs than to have a strict set of guidelines.

Yeah, one of our perpetual struggles in TRP is to teach people to stop sperging out and inventing lists of rules or "the seven essential traits of an Alfa™ male".

No matter what it's the guy's fault. They treat women like children and get mad when people treat women like children

1 upvotes · 24 September 2021 · /r/AntiFeminists

So, you don't know how to say no to a request, but you want to be treated like full adults.

I don't know how to do that.

Study: Authenticity predicts high relationship satisfaction, except for people high in trait (DT) psychopathy.

1 upvotes · 13 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=eKmRkS1os7k>

Back to Basics September: Male Attraction v Female Attraction

1 upvotes · 12 September 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

three people who get along well enough to make this work? [doffs hat]

I appreciate the sentiment... but you are still harbouring a fundamental misconception that will cause you more pain until you learn to set the millstone down.

You said "people who get along".

That is the symptom of a misconception so fundamental that most people can't disbelieve it... because they can't imagine any other possibility.

This shibboleth is called "compatibility". You're thinking of us as three people who "fit" together in some special way, like puzzle pieces. When you think of it like that, it sounds rare. But people aren't puzzle pieces. We're very simple oblong shapes, all similar... all driven by the same basic mating instincts from the same evolutionary process.

That's what all this "red pill" stuff is about. When we admit that we are just chimps that have figured out tool use really well, then we can understand our behaviour in terms of chimp mating instincts, and act in a way that leverages those instincts.

What's "special" about the three of us isn't that we are exceptional human beings, or even exceptionally well-matched. We just have information that others do not.

It's as simple as "here's how to act". A relatively simple set of actions are the key that every lock, with little variation, because the locks were crafted by our evolution as a species, and thus relatively the same.

The first context we discovered this in was the seduction of women. It was like having cheat codes. The "worse" we treated women, the more they not only desired us, but actually loved us.

Then later we discovered there was an equivalent set of actions that worked on us. And they didn't stop working on us even when we understood what the actions were. We were having our own buttons pushed in the same way we had done to women.

And we discovered we didn't care. Girl game worked on us even when we understood girl game. And we realized the same was true of women. Weren't fooling their frontal lobes at all. We were fooling their temporal lobes. And this was why redpill tricks worked so well. They work even when the frontal lobe sees right through them... because the frontal lobe likes it when you fool the temporal lobe that way.

It's behavioural makeup. Men know perfectly well that you are smearing pigment on your faces to trick our temporal lobes into thinking you are young, stuffed with estrogen, super healthy, and perpetually sexually aroused. We just don't care that it's a trick, because "we" is our frontal lobes, and the temporal lobes, which are being defrauded, we do not experience as "us", but as part of the environment.

So, while my girls feel pretty special to me, I know intellectually that they're not. They just push the right buttons. If you, or SunshineSundress, or pretty much any woman who knew those tricks, had come along instead, then that's who I'd be a relationship with now.

This is why I think that arranged marriages probably worked much better than most modern western societies think. If every man knew the correct actions for a husband, and every woman the correct actions for a wife, then a high percentage (not all, but lots) of random pairings would probably result in a loving couple (or, in some cases, triple, or whatever). With just a little matchmaking on the front end, the success rate would be very high indeed.

Back to Basics September: Male Attraction v Female Attraction

1 upvotes · 12 September 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

You are welcome.

Why do men push the Older Man/Younger woman dynamic?

1 upvotes · 10 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

LOL so women SECRETLY love older men, they just don't actual go for them?

Point to the place where I said women desire older men at all.

I didn't.

Quit trying to change the subject. Your science is junk. I have pointed that your science is junk.

What else might be true is not under discussion here.

Why do men push the Older Man/Younger woman dynamic?

1 upvotes · 10 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

If women were just dying to be with older guys, there would be a lot more.

That's not how the science game is played. You have to look at what you want to study, instead of at other things that are only connected by a "just-so story".

We are talking about who women desire, and you are looking at statistics about who women end up with.

<https://dianegenders.co.uk/figures-show-correlation-between-age-gap-and-rates-of-divorce/>

<https://lovin.ie/news/this-is-the-perfect-age-gap-in-a-relationship-according-to-a-new-study>

Neither of those links an actual study, so that means both that it's not evidence, but also that I cannot definitively say that "X is exactly how this study is flawed".

One question I would have, however, is whether these studies commit the common error of not examining which sex is older.

If you mash up relationships where the man is ten years older with relationships where the woman is ten years older, and then try to get meaningful measurements, you're going to end up very confused.

Also, I would want to know how the gap between marriage satisfaction and divorce was controlled for. If a woman marries an older, wealthier man, the incentive structure for divorce is different than if she marries a twenty-something.

In general, if you want to look at marriage happiness, look at marriage happiness, not marriage rate or divorce rate.

Did I have sex too soon?

1 upvotes · 6 September 2021 · /r/RedPillWomen

You have that rule because you do not understand that men and women are different.

Change My View: the "Female Dating Strategy" reddit-verse posters often exhibit behavior as bad or worse than that of the men they criticize (and allow zero discussion, at all).

1 upvotes · 6 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

A problem for whom?

Anyone who doesn't like it doesn't have to read it. Anyone who chooses to read it, and is damaged thereby, is just hurting themselves, and could have done so anywhere.

FDS is a symptom, not the disease.

Change My View: the "Female Dating Strategy" reddit-verse posters often exhibit behavior as bad or worse than that of the men they criticize (and allow zero discussion, at all).

1 upvotes · 6 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

.

When purely looking at things in terms of maximal sexual success, are men better off listening to women or ignoring them?

1 upvotes · 2 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Neither. They are better off watching them and deciphering their behaviour.

(Most of) TRP and men who want a traditional submissive partner don't really know what they are asking for.

1 upvotes · 2 September 2021 · /r/PurplePillDebate

Traditional submissive

Choose one.

